Magnet program polarizes parents, schools

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer

Charging that the program is invalid, uses outdated testing methods and is discriminatory, a group of parents on Monday night asked the Grosse Pointe school board to consider eliminating the Magnet program for gifted and talented students.

Since its implementation in 1991, the program has generated heated debate and controversy, dividing those who favor separating students into ability groups and those who feel the program is too narrowly focused, neglecting a large portion of the school population.

South frosh conquers Mt. Rainier

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Write

Paul Banicki said the most memorable moment of his summer vacation was the morning he scaled the peak of Mount Rainier.

"It took about a day to hike to the base camp and the next. day we made it to the top," said Banicki, 14, a City of Grosse Pointe resident and freshman at Grosse Pointe South High School. He said there were 34 teenagers in his hiking group. He was the second youngest. Eleven did not make it to the top

Pointers question details of Engler's school reform plan

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer

A small group of Grosse Pointe school administrators, PTO presidents and parents gathered in a conference room Tuesday afternoon to hear Gov. John Engler's education reform proposal.

The one thing everyone in attendance agreed on is that something needs to be done to improve Michigan's education system. But no one walked away from the governor's speech with a clear sense of his proposed solution.

Engler's plan, based on four basic principles -- empowerment of children with a worldclass education, empowerment of families to choose where their children attend school, empowerment of teachers not to be in a union and empowerment of taxpayers to have relief from high property taxes prompted numerous questions.

How will the proposed plan affect the state? How will it af-fect Grosse Pointe? People wanted to know: Is Grosse Pointe on the list of 35 school districts that will be able to seek additional mills to raise per-pupil spending to its 1993-94 level - $8,165 for Grosse Pointe public schools? Will Grosse Pointe have to open its doors to outside students? Will it have the money to pay for the additional enrollment? Will it be punished if it chooses to close its doors to outsiders?

"That is going to be a critical issue in the Legislature," said superintendent Ed Shine. "Why are some districts allowed to raise additional funds and others not allowed?"

"The thing that keeps occurring to me is it is hard enough to pass millages as it is," said Martha Hutting, Monteith PTO president. "If students come here with a foundation grant of $4,500, are the local taxpayers going to have to make up the difference?"

Hutting also wondered how Grosse Pointe would pay the additional costs if a special education student from another district wished to attend Grosse Pointe schools.

Shine said a rough estimate of the governor's numbers would indicate that at a base foundation grant of $4,500 per pupil guaranteed by the state for all districts and Grosse Pointe's present enrollment of 7,800 students, the district could generate $33 million under Engler's plan. The district presently generates about $60

A regular meeting of the school board will be held at 8 p.m. in South's Wicking Library. Topics to be discussed include the infrastructure update; educational budget and planning, the district library update and textbooks recommended for adoption.

Airport expansion foes renew opposition to project

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

John L. King, chairman of the Detroit City Airport Study Committee, said that the committee's analysis of reports issued by city airport officials proves that airport expansion would not be economically viable.

"Our outside consultant's (Leeper, Cambridge & Campbell) report states that the Detroit planning commission's economic forecast won't stand up to scrutiny," said King. "Remember, our report was based on Southwest Airlines continuing to use the airport. As you know, they have started flying out of Metro Airport."

King said the committee has always maintained that city airport expansion was not a good idea. The committee's report cited several problems with the city proposal, including funding problems, unrealistic traffic forecasts and competition from Metro's expansion.

The report noted that the FAA has recently approved a $185 million grant to help expand Metro Airport over a 10year period. King noted that Metro is only 25 miles away from City. The grant is part of a $1 billion modernization project for the airport.

King also said that Flint's

As for financing, the report expressed strong doubts that the federal gvoernment, especially in these times, will pay for the majority of expansion funding. Generally the FAA pays for about 25 percent of a project.

The committee's report challenges the city's airport use forecasts. Detroit officials in 1988 predicted airport traffic would increase between 1988 and 1993.

Figures from Southwest Airlines indicated that the air-1991. Traffic again declined 11 percent between 1991 and 1992, King said.

King's report states, "Detroit used outdated and misleading 1988 statistical data on which to base its forecasts and assumptions.'

"Our report took several months to write," King said. "Our consultants had to review the city's orginal request for a 7,200-foot runway. They have since modified their request to build a 6,000-foot runway, and we haven't had the chance to carefully examine the modified reguest.

"But, most of the factors working against a 7,200-foot runway work against a 6,000foot runway. We have also yet to see the city's environmental impact statement, so we can't comment on that."

King also has a copy of a letter dated April 1992, and written by Ernest Gubry of FAA's airport district office based at Willow Run. The letter states the "new runway, although technically supported, has not been shown to be financially feasible at this time."

"The evidence shows that there just isn't the demand for an airport expansion that will cost $175 million," King said. The disruption to surrounding areas will be too great, and the return will be too little."

problems and those students who fall in between.

Magnet classes are taught at Richard, Defer and Ferry elementary schools.

Most of the parents in the Grosse Pointe Alliance for Educational Excellence do not have children in the Magnet program. Some of their children have been tested as Magnet-eligible but opted not to participate in the program.

Parent Kathy Alvarez said the group is concerned about school funding dollars being channeled toward the program and away from the mainstream. Rather than a Magnet program for a select few, she said there should be a Magnet program for all students.

As a way to look at some of the concerns that have been expressed in the past months, the district has formed a Gifted and Talented Advisory Council which is charged with finding an impartial, qualified outsider to evaluate the Magnet program and its testing methods. The group has met twice since September.

Superintendent Ed Shine said the school district has always had an informal advisory group for the gifted program, but because of parental doubts the group was formalized to address the specific concerns.

'We have gone over and over (the issue of testing)," Shine said. "The testing is appropriate based on the criteria we have. But we are certainly willing to look at that. The idea of testing is contentious, at best, and there are a lot of points of view and different philosophies on testing and its use."

Shine said the program generated some different points of view from parents when it began in 1991. But for the first two years, there appeared to be a great deal of satisfaction and it appeared the program had integrated nicely at Ferry and Defer schools, he said.

"I guess whenever you are trying to make changes and improvements, there will be different points of view," he said. "My hope is that in the long run all of our students will be doing significantly better on what people would consider a high standard of achievement."

Shine said the district will begin gathering more information and answering questions in order to help the school board better understand the issue and to make some solid recommendations for the future of the program.

"Change is never easy," he said. "We have been trying since 1990. Our view is that change should bring about improvement, but there will always be people along the way who will not agree with that.'

dence and a sense of teamwork.

"At one point, right at the second rest stop, I didn't think I was going to make it," he said. "But I told myself it wasn't that much farther. I forced myself to keep going.'

Banicki also credited his group members with giving him an extra boost when he needed it. He, in turn, coached others along when their spirits withered.

The trip was part of a program designed especially for teenagers called Wilderness Venture. Although similar to Outward Bound, the program does not push a participant beyond his or her perceived limits, said Wilderness Venture assistant director Luke Kellam.

The experience is designed to foster teamwork and appreciation of the remaining wilderness preserves in the United States, Kellam said.

Banicki participated in the northwest expedition. The students hiked and camped in selected areas of Wyoming, Oregon and Washington. The format consisted of six days in the wilderness, then the group would return to civilization to restock supplies, wash clothes and then travel to the next location for six more days in the wilds.

Highlights of Banicki's adventure were hiking at the base of the Grand Tetons in Wyoming; backpacking through the Three Sisters Wilderness in the Cascades in Oregon; whitewater rafting down the Deschutes River in Washington; and hiking along the Olympic Peninsula in the north Cascades range in Washington.

Banicki's parents learned of the program while their son was a student at the Grosse Pointe Academy and thought it would be a good way to help him adjust to the transition from a small, private school to a larger, public high school.

"He came back with a whole new self-confidence,' said his mother, Dee.

While his climb to the top of Mount Rainier was the most exciting part of his adventure, Banicki said he came home with many other memories.

He marveled at the seestraight-to-the-bottom lakes, the pollution-free air, being able to get within 25 feet of seals sunning themselves on a beach in Washington and seeing bald eagles flying overhead. He also had the experience of watching one of his group members get sent home for disobeying strict rules while in the wilderness.

"There are rules about getting into relationships and there are rules about bringing candy into the wilderness, which attracts bears," he said. "This one person wasn't following the rules and he got sent home. It kind of ruined things for the rest of us. It lowered our morale because everyone liked him and we didn't expect that to happen."

The incident taught the group a lesson. Banicki said he also learned how to cook and wash his clothes and how to use a compass and read a map.

"It's the only time in my life I have ever camped. I had a pretty good time and I'd like to do it more often. It's less hassle, there's no pollution and you always have time for yourself," he said.

Vermont ice cream tycoon inspects Pointe's Village Market

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

Jerry Greenfield, one-half of the famous ice cream duo of Ben and Jerry, visited the Village Food Market last Thursday to check on the store and see how it displays his product.

Now people may ask what is a famous ice cream man doing in Grosse Pointe. The answer is deliciously simple: He attended the U of M football game and combined business and pleasure.

"I'm here to visit a good friend of mine who went to U of M," Greenfield said. "I've been doing this for the past few years, but this is the first time I've visited grocery stores."

Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream is made in Vermont, and is known for combining dessert with environmental and human concerns. Greenfield cites, as an example, the company's new and coconut almond fudge chip. "We buy the brownies for our fudge brownie ice cream run by a religous community, and they help teach skills to the homeless. We buy the apple pie from a bakery in New Jersey that helps fund programs for substance abusers.

The point, Greenfield said, is to integrate sound business practices with human concerns. Many companies might give away a percentage of profits to charity, which is a good thing, he said, but Greenfield believes that by doing business in a way that benefits the most people, not just customers and employees, he can do the most good.

"Ben and I did not start out to be big businessmen," Greenfield said. "We like to do things in a non-traditional corporate manner. We have to have fun some way. We try to run things flavors, apple pie frozen yogurt and coconut almond fudge chip. "We buy the brownies for

Retailers in line for refunds as a result of luxury tax repeal

Some Michigan taxpayers who purchased furs, jewelry, or certain other items in 1993 may be entitled to refunds from merchants," said IRS district director John Hummel.

"The new tax laws retroactive repeal of luxury taxes on boats, planes, furs, and jewelry has put retailers of these items in line for refunds of taxes on sales occurring in 1993. Customers who paid luxury tax as a part of the purchase price of such items should contact the retailer for their refunds. And merchants, who file the luxury tax returns and pay the tax due, should file refund claims with the IRS. Any consumer who paid the tax directly, for example, someone who imported a luxury article for per-

directly from the IRS."

Hummel said merchants the IRS, must be refunded to must file Form 843, Claim for the customers who paid it." Refund and Request for Abatement, to receive luxury tax refunds.

"Retailers must certify that they have refunded the tax to the consumer, or that they did not include the tax in the selling price, nor collect it from the ported a luxury article for per-sonal use, may claim a refund any luxury taxes collected from customers, but not yet paid to

The IRS said that retailers must file refund claims within three years after the due date of the original return, or two years after the tax is paid, whichever is later. Grosse Pointe Woods makes bid to expand parking on Mack

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods, after months of study, has begun work on the first of what is hoped will be three new parking areas along the Mack shopping district.

Woods officials worked out an agreement Monday with shopowners along a specially created assessment district on Mack which encompasses businesses from 19849 Mack to 19875 Mack and is about a block away from Ghesquiere Park

The Woods plan calls for turning a section of the park between the Woods public safety building and the stores on Mack into a parking area. Officials hope to create 28 or 29 new parking places.

The city would pay 60 percent of the cost of the lot, and building owners would pay the remaining 40 percent. The cost of construction, which would begin by the end of October, is

Park woman shot in store hold-up

A 68-year-old Grosse Pointe Park woman was listed in temporary serious condition this week at St. John Hospital after being shot in a botched robbery attempt at a Detroit party store on Sept. 29.

A Detroit police information officer said it was not immediately known if the victim was a store employee or a customer. The victim was shot in the stomach by one of two men who entered the Somber Party Store on East Jefferson at Newport. Police said the robbers announced a hold-up and when the woman told the men she didn't have a lot of money, one of the men shot her.

Farms man pleads guilty in tax fraud

Grosse Pointe Farms businessman John Kenneth George, 51, pleaded guilty last week in federal court to one count of failing to file a federal income tax return

George was charged with failing to file income tax returns on more than $252,032 in taxable income for 1986, 1987 and 1988. Following an investigation made by special agents of the Internal Revenue Services's criminal investigation division, a criminal report was filed on Aug. 4.

George entered a plea agreement with the U.S. Attorney's office and pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court on Sept. 30 to one count for the 1987 year.

"This charge was part of our enforcement initiative targeting non-filers," said Benjamin R. McMakin, chief of the IRS criminal investigation division in Detroit. "Every year we lose over $7 billion in tax revenue due to individuals who do not file income tax returns.

"It is our policy not to recommend prosecution against nonfilers who voluntarily come forward, make a true disclosure, and file an accurate return," he said. "At the same time, we will continue to make it a priority to investigate and prosecute those individuals, like Mr. George, who willfully and deliberately refuse to comply with the tax laws.

A sentencing date has yet to be scheduled.

George's attorney, M. Susan Murnane of Troy, took exception to the statement made by McMakin.

"He was charged on a technicality," Murnane said. "He didn't file by April 15 and he has always intended to pay. No one has charged him with tax evasion."

Murnane said a breakdown of the amount owed is $17,000 in 1986, $15,000 in 1987 and $2,000 in 1988.

"It sounds like a lot of money," she explained. "But like many people, if you miss a year and if your income starts to fall and you can't pay, it becomes difficult to file after that. I don't think this case would have been prosecuted at all if the government had not been on a campaign with its amnesty program to scare non-filers." The maximum penalty for non-payment of taxes is a $100,000 fine and one year in prison for each year of nonpayment, said Elcy Maccani, IRS public affairs specialist.

In George's case, the plea agreement will make him submonths in prison and a fine to be determined by a magistrate at his sentencing. – Shirley A. McShane

Pointes, Harper Woods earn award

Grosse Pointe Woods received an Award of Excellence for top performances in both pedestrian safety records and pedestrian program activities.

In determining awards, a panel of traffic safety judges considered pedestrian death and injury rates, legislation, enforcement efforts, traffic engineering, school and traffic safety programs, public information and education.

The entrants were categorized by population. Ceremonies were held at AAA Michigan headquarters in Dearborn.

Safranek seeks Park council seat nounced his bid for a position on the Grosse Pointe Park City Council.

Professor Safranek teaches at the University of Detroit School of Law in the areas of constitutional law, civil procedure and jurisprudence. Before joining the law faculty, he clerked for a federal judge and worked with one of the top legal firms in the country, Latham & Watkins.

Currently, Safranek is an authority on the issue of term limits, such as the measure which was overwhelmingly passed by the citizens of Michigan in 1992. He has been asked to write a brief as a friend of the court in a pending case on term limits in the state of Washington. He has also been asked to speak on national and local radio and television regarding constitutional issues. Safranek has contributed a monthly column to the Michigan Bar Journal for the past three years as well as other legal journals. He has Stephen J. Safranek has an- also written editorials for The Detroit News.

> Safranek seeks a position on the Council because he wants to ensure that our tax dollars are watched closely and our property values protected. He has already contacted officials in Lansing about the need for local control over our schools. Nevertheless, he thinks that city government must scrutinize expenditures to ensure that the citizens are not being overtaxed. Any expenditures beyond the rate of inflation should automatically undergo special review.

Recreational fee for larger boats goes into effect By Chip Chapman displayed on each side of the powered barges, houseboats or sides of the boat not more than

Staff Writer

If you own a boat 37 feet long or longer and plan on using it between now and Dec. 31 in U.S. waters, you need a U.S. Recreational Vessel Fee sticker displayed on your craft.

Mandated by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, the fee was signed into law last November and it went into effect on Oct. 1, 1993.

Boats at least 37 feet long but less than 40 feet long must pay a fee of $50. Upon payment of the fee owners in this category will receive orange stickers with the letter "C" to be boat.

Boats 40 feet or longer must pay $100 and will receive orange stickers marked with the letter "D."

Non-profit organizations which own recreational vessels 37 feet or longer may apply for green stickers marked with the letter "E.'

Boats exempt from the fee are: boats less than 37 feet long; boats owned by local, state, federal or foreign governments; vessels powered by oars, paddles or poles; foreign vessels in U.S. waters less than 30 days a year or under a U.S. Customs Cruising Permit; un-self-propelled and are normally used while tied to a dock or other type of mooring; boats owned exclusively by non-profit charitable organizations which use the vessel primarily for training youths in boating and navigation skills; and passenger-carrying, research, public and commercial vessels. Charter boats which are also used for recreational purposes must have a sticker. Noncompliance with the budget act may result in a civil 1993, a new sticker will be repenalty not to exceed $5,000.

Ever had an out-of-town friend or relative act surprised upon seeing black squirrels in Grosse Pointe?

"I've never seen them anywhere else," some people have said.

It's conceivable to go through life without ever catching a glimpse of a black squirrel, especially if one lives in the South, but these rodents are not just found in Grosse Pointe, said Peter Squibb, a farm, urban and wildlife specialist with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources

"Black squirrels are very common," Squibb said. "They are the same as a gray squirrel, just with a different color phase.'

The gray squirrel and the fox squirrel are two different species. The gray squirrel is found brought them down state and primarily in the northeastern released them. United States, mostly in the northern hardwood forests.

Fox squirrels live mostly in open, rural areas.

As farmland dwindled, fox squirrels moved into urban areas and the gray squirrels were driven farther north. But how did the black variety of gray squirrel get here?

"About 30 or 40 years ago, people, for some reason, brought them down from up north," Squibb said. "I guess they just wanted to see black squirrels.'

Squibb said that people in southern Michigan who had cottages in the northern part of the state liked seeing black squirrels so they trapped them,

As time passed, black squirrels made the adjustment to city life. Although fox squirrels live here, too, "black squirrels usually make out better in cities," Squibb said.

Black and gray squirrels can come from the same litter, but in urban and suburban Michigan the black squirrel has become more prevalent.

"The black squirrels seem to breed truer in some areas of the western fringe (of which Michigan is a part)," Squibb said. "It's basically genetic."

Gray squirrels and fox squirrels do not interbreed, even though they live in the same area. They rarely fight except when food is scarce.

Both species of squirrels eat nuts, buds, fruit, seeds and tree bark when the other types of food cannot be found.

News October 7, 1993 Grosse Pointe News Zebra mussels, clear water bittersweet for Lake St. Clair Lake St. Clair has become a scuba diver's mecca, thanks to the filtering of the water by the voracious zebra mussels.

18A

But the freshwater mollusks, introduced into the Great Lakes accidentally via the dumping of ballast water from an Eastern Europe freighter, may have a long-term negative impact on native aquatic life. The food chain may be threatened from the bottom up. With zebra mussels encrusting virtually everything along the lake bottom, divers such as Leon Schoyan of Grosse Pointe Shores fear one of their favorite pastimes, artifact hunting, will become nearly impossible.

Another problem created by the mussels is blockage of water intakes, such as the Grosse Pointe Farms inlet off Pier Park. While the Farms hasn't experienced problems as severe as the downriver communities, such as Monroe, Sehoyan and fellow divers Mark Dupuis of Grosse Pointe Shores, Marty Roy of St. Clair Shores and master diver Mike Wrubel of Harper Woods, owner of Advanced Aquatics Diving Inc. of St. Clair Shores, went diving in the lake recently to take a look.

The divers brought back excellent photos made possible by the lake's clarity, where the bottom can be seen easily at a 15-foot depth.

One of the pleasures of diving is finding artifacts along the bottom, such as the century-old bottle Leon Sehoyan discovered. Divers should note, however, that the objects in the lake belong to the state and are not to be removed without permission.

1.7

mussels, but there appeared to be no immediate danger of blockage.

Zebra mussels blanket the lake bottom off the Grosse Pointes. The sharp-edged mussels are dangerous to swimmers' bare feet. They also make finding artifacts along the bottom difficult.

Engler stakes his future on school reform

Gov. John Engler Tuesday staked his political future and that of the Republican Party on a complicated school financing plan that promptly came under fire from critics.

His program, however, went far beyond school financing to cover proposals for improving quality, authorizing charter public schools, giving all public school teachers the right to choose not to join a teachers union, and, in general, setting a goal of achieving a world class education for Michigan's children.

Speaking at a joint legislative session, Engler asked the lawmakers for approval of an assortment of taxes headed by a 2cent hike in the sales tax to help replace the $6.5 billion to $7 billion in revenue lost by recent repeal of the property tax as a source of school financing.

He called for a vote next Feb. 8 on a referendum on the sales tax increase which would expire in the year 2000 unless renewed. That may be a questionable goal, however.

Recent attempts to hike the sales tax have failed, and Democrats would prefer an income tax hike. Unlike the sales tax, the income tax payments would be deductible from federal income taxes and the tax could be boosted by legislators without a referendum.

The governor's speech opened the serious debate over the new means of raising school revenues that must be found before Jan. 1 to avoid the necessity of a two-thirds vote of approval after that date.

In addition to the sales tax hike from 4 to 6 cents on the dollar, other major items in Engler's funding program include a 4percent tax on real estate sales, a 50-cent per pack boost in the cigarette tax with other tobacco taxes also hiked, and a 16mill property tax on commercial and industrial property, second homes and homes owned by out-of-state residents.

Basic to the governor's proposal is a foundation grant of $4,500 a year behind each public school child. Schools that now provide less support would be given additional state aid to reach the $4,500 figure.

Schools that now provide more than $4,500 and up to $6,500 would get smaller state aid increases, while those providing more than $6,500 would be permitted to levy additional millage to maintain spending at their 1993-94 levels.

The Grosse Pointe School District apparently would fall into this category since it was spending $8,165 per pupil as of the recent fourth Friday in September count.

This provision, however, might cap spending at this year's level regardless of the need for future increases for salaries, supplies and other expenses. If that is the case, it would soon work a hardship in the local district.

In addition, if Pointes' property owners voted to raise local property taxes, they would be unlikely to share in the $300 million net tax savings that the governor hailed.

The early Democratic reaction was predictable. House Co-Speaker Curtis Hertel contended that his party would not support a plan that failed to include an alternative to the sales tax boost should it fail to win the necessary approval in the required referendeum.

Another Democrat, Rep. Robert Emerson of Flint, contended the proposed shift of up to $700 million in state revenue sharing for cities, counties and townships to public school financing would "devastate" cities such as Flint and Detroit.

Some public school supporters feared 5 that diversion of public school funds for 5 charter schools would reduce the money 5 available for present public schools.

Some critics also see the governor's enthusiasm for broadening school choice options as the start of an effort to gain state support now denied to private and parochial schools.

Overall, however, the school funding problem and the other state education changes the governor called for would, if approved as proposed, have a major impact on the quality and form of education that Michigan would provide for many years into the future.

Whether the governor's plan would improve the state's current educational system and better prepare its greatest resource - its children - to meet the challenges of a changing future is, however, already a matter of dispute.

On the political front, his program, which he himself said was a risky one to embark on, is likely to determine whether he will be re-elected and whether he also will be able to attain his goal of capturing GOP control of the state House and holding onto a GOP Senate.

A shift to politicize education?

Ov. John Engler's proposal to shift the authority for appointing the state Superintendent of Public Instruction from the state Board of Education to his own office ran into an immediate political buzzsaw.

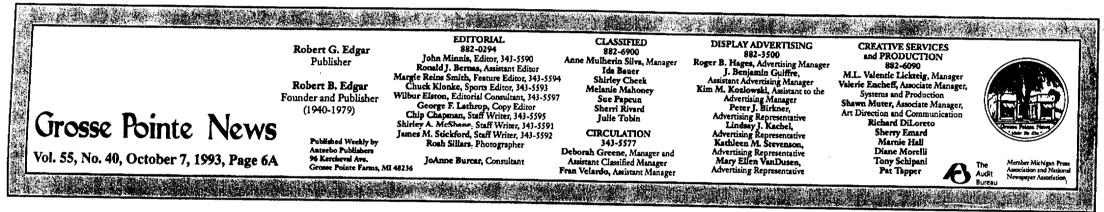

Dorothy Beardmore, treasurer of the state board, told the Detroit Free Press that allowing the governor to pick the state superintendent would "politicize education to a greater extent" than it currently is.

The governor also would have the eight state board members elected by regions rather than statewide, presumably to give wider representation to the rural and less populated areas that the governor often seeks to benefit.

Another Engler proposal that won greater support was his plan to create a commission to study ways to consolidate districts in order to cut costs.

Some local districts fear loss of control under consolidation but such a study ought to be able to find ways to satisfy even smaller districts through careful consolidations which could save money.

Hillary stars on health care

Which a family one-two punch, the Clintons last week won bipartisan praise for their presentations in support of their proposed new health care program.

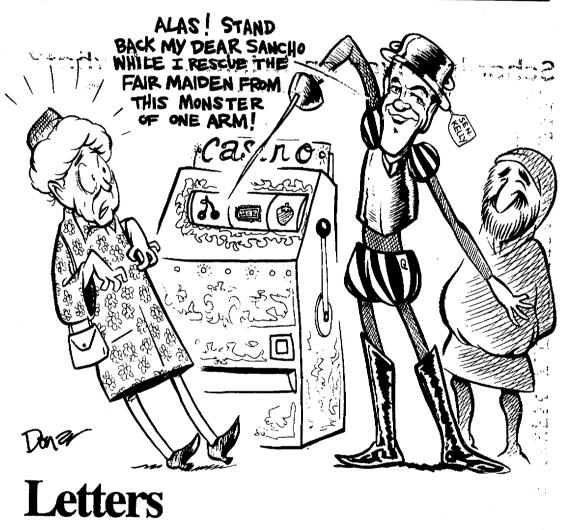

Following up the president's excellent outline to a joint session of Congress and the nation, Hillary Rodham Clinton won high marks for her appearances before five congressional committees.

New and important opposition also appeared with the American Medical Association asking its members to campaign against some facets of the plan. The big pharmaceutical companies and many small private businesses also expressed concern, chiefly about costs of the universal coverage proposed.

litical sense as well as an excellent grasp of the subject in her many hours of testimony on Capitol Hill.

Appearing before the House Energy and Commerce Committee, headed by Michigan Rep. John Dingell, she began her testimony with what New York Times reporter Maureen Doud described as "a paean" to Dingell's father. As a member of Congress in 1943, he had authored the first attempt to pass national health care legislation.

"The chairman's father understood the importance of health care," she said. "You both proved to be men ahead of your time." It was no wonder the chairman's eyes misted over.

Yet 57 percent of Michiganians in a new poll reported this week said Congress should adopt the president's health care reform as is. Most state residents also backed an increased sales tax or sin taxes to help pay for the program.

The president's wife showed superb po-

Whether the Clintons won many new congressional supporters — in addition to the Vermont GOP senator who offered to co-sponsor the legislation — is still open to question.

But it's generally recognized that a formidable, knowledgeable and persuasive team is in charge of the campaign for a national health care program.

Riegle makes correct decision

Democratic Sen. Donald W. Riegle finally has done something we can commend by announcing he would not seek re-election.

Since he always has been a realist as well as an opportunist, we suspect his own polls emphasized the many obstacles to his re-election and finally persuaded him to announce his retirement.

If as he said his family reponsibilities played an important role in his decision, so much the better. However, we remain skeptical in view of his lack of considera-

Kelly moving up?

State Sen. John F. Kelly of Grosse Pointe Woods is now planning to Seek the Democratic nomination for Donald W. Riegle's U.S. Senate seat in 1994, he said this week.

Kelly has twice run for Congress, his most recent race being in 1992 when he unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for the 15th District seat occupied by Rep. Barbara-Rose Collins.

While Kelly may be too independent for Democratic leaders, no clear favorites to succeed Riegle have as yet appeared on the scene.

Chief among the prominent Democrats being mentioned as possible candidates is former Michigan Gov. James Blanchard. The newly named ambassador to Canada says, however, he's satisfied to stay there.

But is he?

tion for those responsibilities in the past.

Yet the major cause of his retirement is generally regarded as his loss of reputation in Michigan and of political standing in Washington in the wake of his involvement in the S&L scandals.

As one of the "Keating five," he was rebuked by the U.S. Senate for conduct that "gave the appearance of being improper and was certainly attended by insensitivity and poor judgment."

Thus Riegle bows out of what had become a 28-year career in Congress. First elected as a Republican and re-elected as a Democrat since 1973, Riegle has been regarded as a liberal maverick by both parties.

However, under the Senate's seniority system, he did acquire considerable political clout. He became chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, a post that involved him in the S&L disasters, but also headed the Senate Finance Subcommittee on health. That will enable him to play an important role in support of President Clinton's health care plan.

Unfortunately, he also has said he will continue his opposition to the North America Free Trade Agreement. Here, too, he had shown his maverick spirit by inviting Ross Perot to join him in a Lansing rally against NAFTA last month.

Under the circumstances, he made the right decision in stepping down but the Michigan voters might well have made the same one had he sought re-election.

New 'improved' Halloween

To the Editor:

Yes, Virginia, there is still a Halloween in Grosse Pointe Park, but a new improved version. We have managed to grapple with its elusive dark spirit, to chain it, concentrate it, bless it, and carefully release its government-sanctioned form for exclusive consumption by certified resident children behind the closed gates of Windmill Park.

I propose that a medal of honor ceremony be concocted for the wise adults who devised the safely sterile scheme of "Halloween in the Park." Artfully timed (5:30 to 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 31) to conflict with the traditional trickor-treat ritual which so dangerously takes place in our neighborhoods and streets, it should establish a new tradition to drive out old-fashioned Halloween within a few brief years. "Halloween in the Park" will consist of 20 areas within Windmill Park where our children, for a modest admission fee of $2 in advance or $3 at the door, will trick or treat behind bars. The city encourages "residents or neighborhood blocks" to band together to decorate trickor-treat "stations" and set up Halloween scenes.

Why depend on individual neighbors to decorate their own yards and homes as they see fit? To avoid unreliable neighbors who may not always choose the ideal treat, the candy in the improved version of Halloween will be provided by the department of parks and recreation at each of the "stations."

We may just be ahead of the curve: who is to say that Food and Drug Administration regulations may not soon demand such self-contained Halloween happenings to protect against psychopaths trying to poison kids.

But, on the other hand, if you think traditional Halloween is fine as it has been — the most compelling holiday in the eyes of our kids — you may want to boycott "Halloween in the Park" and urge your friends and neighbors with children to do the same.

Surely the spirit of Halloween is not meant to be shackled within the confines of Windmill Park. It wants to roam our streets, and yards and homes, mysterious and magnetic for one night of the year. The 8 p.m. cutoff has proved a useful deterrent to obnoxious behavior by older children and insured a focus on younger children.

If there are significant ' safety and vandalism is sues involved in this sabo tage of tradition, I am to tally unaware of them despite having accompa-

Miami alumni, current students are sought

University of Miami (Florida) alumni and students are being sought to join the Michigan chapter of the university's alumni/student organization, the "Circle."

The local chapter is being organized by former Grosse Pointer Anne Wrigley Molesky, a Miami and University Liggett School graduate.

The group will host gatherings of former and current students during the Christmas break and in August for freshmen, transfer students and parents, Molesky said.

Circle members will also represent the university at college nights, including the one scheduled at Grosse Pointe North from 7 to 9:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 13, for all Grosse Pointe public and private junior and senior high school students.

For more information or to join the Circle, call Molesky at 313-552-9635 (home) or 313-336-0988 (work).

The thesis of this letter to Pointe public schools have The letter was prepared in a found that educational success is attributable to a locally supported system of good schools that directly infuse value, identity and meaning into classrooms on a closely monitored, cost-effective basis. The letter is an attempt to share some of the ways that our district is able to do this.

Dear Gov. Engler:

Establishing a reasonable plan for financial support of education is providing Michigan residents the same breathtaking experience as holding on to the tail end of a roller coaster: For everyone involved, the situation is precarious. Educational reform, however, is all about reliability — in school efficiencies and effectiveness. The new realities of our state's changing technologies and current financial struggles make stable leadership and clear goals more valuable than ever. Please be assured that improvement of students' learning continues to be the top priority in the Grosse Pointe Public School System. This priority is reflected in the numerous improvement efforts that we would like to share with state leaders.

The Grosse Pointe Public School System, which began 71 years ago as Michigan Rural Agricultural School District No. 1, has flourished in a local context of strong community values, widespread parent involvement, and definitive neighborhood identity. Some of the improvements that the Grosse Pointe schools have implemented in the past few years are models of how education can reform itself in systematic, cost-effective, choice-oriented ways. Some of the most noteworthy improvements are:

1) Systematic Program Evaluation, a plan to determine the performance effectiveness of the board of education, the superintendent, school administration, curriculum, instructional materials, programs, and teaching alone and in concert with each other as measured by student learning results. The systematic plan includes an annual audit which reviews all results and sets a renewed direction of improvement and efficiency for the following school year.

2) A local-state-national framework of learning assessment which includes criterionreferenced assessments of growth in students' knowledge and skills of reading, writing, math, science, physical education, and library-media. In the next few years, similar assessments are planned in art, music, social studies and foreign languages. The tests provide information: They help teachers, students, parents, and administrators make decisions about instructional needs, learning strengths, and program effectiveness relative to quality standards. The touchstone of all evaluation is a clear definition of an educated person at the end of grade 12.

್ಯಾ - ಅವರು ತನ್ನೊಂದಿಗೆ ಎಂದು ಹೊಂದಿ ಎಂದಿ ಮಾ

3) A K-8 plan for personalizing teaching and learning called Differentiated Programming. The program addresses all students and includes a high ability component called Magnet. It has been the subject of an intensive program evaluation and related improvement planning for two years.

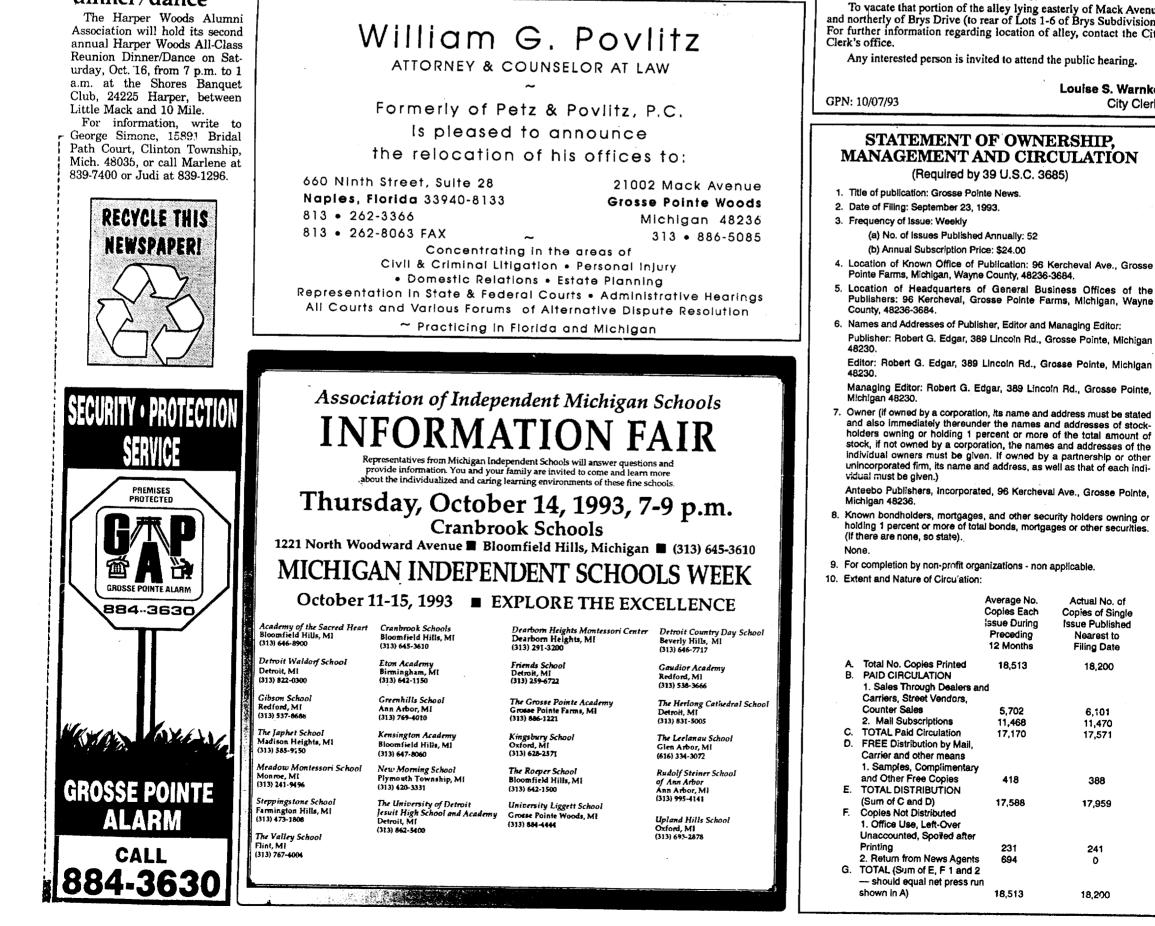

4) An early adolescent-centered middle school program for grades 6-7-8 which was planned to incorporate the recommendations of the Carnegie Foundation, Turning Points. The program is organized by learning teams and includes exploratory electives and an advisory component.

5) A recently developed set of 15 important principles which should guide renewal of a traditional high school. The principles were developed after exhaustive study and discussion among teachers, parents, students and administrators from a broad, local K-12 representation.

6) A well-established sitebudgeting process that has been in place for three years and evaluated thoroughly. The process is augmented by a new Systemic Thinking framework that examines costs, benefits, and system priorities.

7) A strong district Strategic Plan which has been unfolding for the past three years along a five-year timeline. The plan mirrors the state's goals for technology improvement in schools and a rigorous, ongoing evaluation of students' learning K-12.

Improve yourself , —I'll pass

Visit my house on any Saturday or Sunday morning and you'll be certain to find the television on and tuned to one of those home improvement shows.

My favorite is the one that features the fresh-faced young couple who never stop smiling as they talk about and demonstrate how they knocked out a back wall and built an airy new kitchen complete with skylights and an indoor herb garden.

Neither of the couples ever has a coiffed hair out of place, a bandaged thumb from a misdirected hammer or saw, or a work shirt spackled with drywall caulk.

The happy twosome merrily pound away at nails, rip out old insulation and install plumbing fixtures while little birds chirp in trees outside and the sunshine dances on the walls - freshly stuccoed to perfection only hours earlier.

"It's a snap when you have the right tools," one of the perky pair will remind the viewer.

Once - and it was so obvious the episode was staged - the couple had a tiff about the placement of a picture window. "Honey, I told you I wanted Pointe get riled over the schools, you know there's a problem.

In other communities, it's old hat to hear wails about tax rates, overpaid teachers, union featherbedding, and topheavy administration.

In fact, the old hat is so wellworn that in one northern Macomb school district, a letter to the local paper complained of too many administrators when in fact there is one princibal for each school (no assistants) and one superintendent, who answers his own phone when the secretary goes to lunch.

the schools (and I think it does, though it can't be measured dollar for dollar - and even vast amounts of money can't assure quality if certain other factors like commitment and parental support are missing), if we believe funding and quality are related, then we should worry whether the current climate will go too far.

districts are permitted to levy income or sales taxes to replace some lost revenue. School choice, in my view, is a red herring. If the state provides the transportation needed to implement cross-district choice, the cost will sink the entire reform. If the state doesn't pay for busing, then the actual number of students attending schools outside their districts will be minuscule. But what is really needed is the ability to kick misbehaving students right out of school. The public schools have no alternative to keeping disrupters in class. Set up alternative schools and give kids some incentives for staying straight. What is really needed is to stop turning universal education into teaching down to the lowest common denominator. Tracking is under attack as elitist, but what we have now is dumbing down, with the result that not even the brightest kids are learning much. We should all weep at the surveys that show much of our adult population can't read a bus schedule. Along with higher expectations and some viable alternatives (tracking and serious vocational options), what is really needed is incentives or requirements for parental involvement in homework and academic achievement. With parents involved and some real choices available, we wouldn't just be sticking nonachievers somewhere out of the way. All of these already exist in Grosse Pointe. Parental support, commitment and high expectations combine to mean that few kids need to be expelled. A clear connection exists between education and future achievement. But we're talking statewide reform now. Society at large does not have the advantages of Grosse Pointe - and I'm not just talking material advantages If the reform package can't find a way to bring young people and their parents to the understanding that their future depends upon what they do with their education now, in 20 years people still won't be able to read a bus schedule and we'll be going through this exercise again.

But you don't expect that here.

I don't know for sure what set off the spate of complaints over the last couple of months, but if I had to put money on it, I'd bet on the June Forbes Magazine article that called the teachers' union extortionists.

Of course, this year is an anomaly: the last year of a failing system, hovering on the brink of an as-yet unshaped replacement. Teachers, parents, Haxpayers are all feeling a bit queasy.

You can see it in the headlines:

 Teacher contract negotiations don't work out. It's only the beginning of October, and already a state mediator has failed to find common ground and a factfinder is working on a proposed solution. Some years, the teachers would have walked out, but this year, they'd be walking on jello.

 School board holds line on taxes. They could have raised the rate by almost 3 percent, but considering the mood of the populace, they didn't. The only board dissenter wanted to actually lower the rate.

But holding the line wasn't enough to satisfy a number of residents, who took turns reminding the board that even Grosse Pointe needs a leaner system. The argument that soaring school taxes provide an enviable system and maintain the Pointes' high property values is falling on deaf ears this time around.

If anybody believes that the amount of money spent has a relationship with the quality of

Although there's plenty of truth in the lean machine argument, there are also limits to it. And if it's this serious in Grosse Pointe, it's hip-deep everywhere else.

All of the state taxpayer organizations have banded together to influence the school reform and funding package the state will ultimately put together. And I don't hear any words about quality.

"Now that we have achieved significant property tax relief for 1994, we decided that we should help shape the form of education reform and also the reduction in size of the educational bureaucracy and state government," the taxpayers' association's Mike Sessa is quoted as saying. Sessa is a pit bull no legislator will want attached to his heel.

It would be merely interesting to watch legislators wrangle over taxes — if we didn't have so much invested in it. Tax relief aside, today's schoolkids are tomorrow's taxpayers, workers and leaders. Shortchange them, and we're in for some trouble (as if we didn't have enough already).

My guess is that we will end up with a statewide millage and state-established teacher salaries and some form of choice within the public schools.

The first two will help control costs and may not be too unfair to the Grosse Pointes and Birminghams -if (as Rep. Bill Bryant is proposing) local

What to look for

It's something one out of every ten women will discover about themselves. And for those who do, the sooner the better. Because there's no better defense for breast cancer than early detection. If breast cancer is detected in its earliest form, 90% of the cases can be treated successfully. That's why we're offering women a free seminar to learn more about prevention and treatment.

What we'll teach you

Unfortunately, all women are at risk when it comes to breast cancer. Not just those with a history of it in their families. That's why it's important to learn about what's covered in our seminar.

- Results of recent studies on breast cancer
- How to perform a monthly breast self-exam
- Methods for the treatment of breast cancer

Where to turn

To help women learn more about breast cancer and what they can do to reduce their risk, we're offering a free seminar on October 12th. It's something all women can benefit from, and hopefully set them on their way to finding nothing at all.

To attend our class, or set up a medical appointment, call our Physician Referral and Information Service at 1-800-237-5646. This information was provided by oncologists on staff at St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

Teacher pay: No raises

To the Editor:

Regarding the Grosse Pointe teachers' current contract negotiations, no raises should be granted.

According to your paper of Aug. 26, the teachers have received raises in excess of 40 percent in the past six years. Comparing their salaries with the salaries listed in the Detroit Free Press of Aug. 30, they are $4,000 to $5,000 above Ann Arbor, Bloomfield Hills, Center Line and Warren school districts.

Enough is enough.

If the teachers are doing such a super job as they and the MEA would like us to believe, then why do they refuse to be evaluated on their performance and to be accountable for their results?

It is a fact that dollars do not guarantee quality teaching and results. Many private schools with much lower salaries produce better results.

If the Grosse Pointe school board approves any raises during this contract, its members should be recalled.

Salvation automatic? To the Editor:

The Pastor's Corner column (Sept. 16 issue) was written by John Corrado, our local Unitarian/Universalist (U/U) preacher.

Corrado once again ascended the pulpit to promote the benefits of U/U and secular humanism as the answer for mankind's salvation.

In comparison, he subtly attacked the Christian church's teaching of eternal life in heaven versus sin, eternal death and hell for the unbelievers.

He wrote, "Universal salvation means that each and every child comes into the world unique, precious and without the need to be 'saved' by some religious conversion or rite." This in-fers that the Christian sacrament of baptism is useless; that Jesus Christ was a failure and died in vain because there never was/is such a thing as sin. The centuries of missionary efforts by the Christian church to proclaim the Gospel to the lost and forsaken were useless. If there was no sin, there was no need for forgiveness. All moral laws are void.

Now, if you think that you are really "good" (you being the judge) and if you really promise to love your neighbor, then you can do your own thing. There is no law to prevent you from going along to getting along to that great humanist void of somewhere.

If Corrado is correct in his U/U theology, than Christian piety is a pity. If Corrado is wrong, then eternity is a long time for the misplaced hope.

Julian F. Maire Jr. Grosse Pointe Woods

Sister lauds father piece To the Editor:

The "I Say" column by James M. Stickford in the Sept. 30 Grosse Pointe News was a source of joy and comfort to the family of deceased U. of D. High School English teacher, the Rev. Richard Polokowski.

Columnist Stickford is one gifted writer. Numerous students appreciate their teachers, especially after they become adults, but are not gifted in expressing themselves. Stickford is.

Stickford's use of the nickname "Polo" for Father Polokowski summarizes his value and influence as a teacher as well as priest.

It does me good to think about Polo, and the time in my life in which I read and talked about great ideas and how these ideas applied to me and my life. Thanks, Polo, you made a difference in one life," Stickford wrote.

I phoned the priest's brother, Edward Polokowski, and his wife. Shirley, who are good friends of mine. They subscribe to the Grosse Pointe News and were overjoyed at the emphasis on father's talent as a teacher. They plan to share copies with friends and relatives who in turn will share.

James M. Stickford is a good example of Father Polokowski's dedication to teaching.

Jesuit admirer To the Editor:

Jim Stickford's Sept. 30 "I Say" piece, "To Father with Love," I found to be tender, enlightening, inspiring and memorable. His admiring and appreciative regard for his hero, Father Polokowski, would bring memories of their own experiences in Jesuit institutions to other "old Jebbie Boys" and their own "Father Polos" whom they, too, admired, appreciated and remembered.

Stickford performed another service in opening the eyes of many to the nature and goals of Jesuit teaching. As he said, "We were being taught so that we could go out and make a difference in the world."

Again reflecting on the quality of his education, Jim Stickford writes, "A great deal of time was spent in teaching us to think. To think about God, our responsibilities to God, and to each other."

I'd say that's about as high-minded and Christian as education gets.

Thinking about religion in education brings to mind an aphorism I heard quoted often in my days as a student at Marquette University. It was attrib-uted to Father Charles. Fox, onetime president of the university; it was, simply: "The soul of education is the education of the soul."

Two photography classes will be taught this month through Grosse Pointe Community Education at Barnes school, 20090 Morningside in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Classes will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursdays. Both classes are designed to help owners of single lens reflex (SLR) cameras learn how to use their equipment and take better pictures. Mechanical and electronic models will be discussed.

The Oct. 14 beginner's class will focus on the built-in controls of the camera. Learn how to set the best combination of shutter speed and aperture setting to effectively record your subject on film. Discussions and demonstrations will include the types of film to use, functions of different focal lengths of lenses and flash techniques. Bring camera and operator's manual.

On Oct. 21, the advanced class will explore the versatility of the SLR camera and how to utilize depth-of-field technique and use of filters. Students must complete the beginner's class before attending. Again, bring camera and operator's manual.

Classes will be taught by prize-winning photographer Conrad Toth. Call 343-2178 for more information.

Post-war car maker Kaiser was on a roll before going stale

War II were military men and political leaders, but one industrialist who became a hero was Henry J. Kaiser, who turned out Liberty Ships faster than German U-boats could sink them.

14A

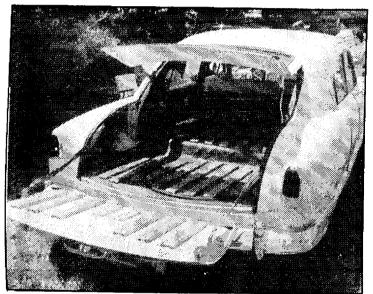

After the war, he decided to take on Detroit. His new partner, Joseph Frazer, had worked for General Motors, Chrysler Corp. and Willys-Overland before picking up the failing Gra-ham-Paige just before the United States entered World War II. They leased the giant Willow Run bomber plant that Ford had built as part of Detroit's "arsenal of democracy" and the team hired Howard "Red" Darrin to design a car.

Darrin, who had made his reputation designing custom Packards in the '30s, jumped at the chance to design a volume production car and came up with a futuristic and quite beautiful design. Darrin was disappointed with changes in his design to make it easier to produce. The fenders were straightened, giving the car a flat slab side, the roof was raised and a conventional twopiece windshield replaced the single curved windshield he had put in his design.

But the public liked the unusual look of the Kaiser and Frazer cars and the new auto makers jumped off to early successes. The cars were very conventional, but they had a dramatic postwar look with their slab sides and sold well.

Not all was rosy, though. The cars were overpriced and competed with the Oldsmobile-Buick-DeSoto market segment instead of the Ford-Chevy-Plymouth volume market. And all they had was a six-cylinder engine which cost a lot more than the Ford V-8 and as much as the hot new Olds Rocket 88 introduced in 1949.

sible again. He had taken a seat in Detroit's high-stakes game. Or so it seemed for a while. But sales began to decline in 1949 and by 1950, Kaiser-Frazer had slipped behind Studebaker and Nash (and Ford Motor Co. had pulled ahead of Chrysler Corp. to stay) and top people at the company began to see the handwriting on the wall, although it was not yet clear what it said.

ern with its tiny, jet-nose grille and sleek sides with sliding doors

A '53 Kaiser Darrin sports car, owned by Judy Belovicz of Bloomfield Hills, was on display at the Councours d'. Elegance at Meadow Brook in August.

The gleaming white Kaiser Darrin sat in a circle with some other rare examples of '50s automotive art, including an unusual wood-paneled '56 Lincoln Sportsman, owned by Bernard Glieberman, a '48 Chrysler Town and Country convertible with real wood doors and trunk lid, owned by Bob Porter, and a white, turquoise and black '56 Packard Caribbean period piece owned by David Marold.

"I own it because I love it," said Belovicz. "I think it is a very beautiful car and I love to drive it. It is very rare. Only about 450 were made and only about 250 to 350 still survive today."

A Kaiser Darrin sold at auction recently for $34,000.

The Kaiser Darrin was the most unusual of the flurry of spectacular 1952-54 models with which Kaiser tried desperately to stave off the imminent doom which came in 1955.

The Kaiser Darrin was in regular production only for '54, although a number of pre-production Kaiser Darrins were built during 1953. It had a fiberglass body which included doors that slid forward into the front fender to open. It also had a unique three-position convertible top.

Kaiser and Frazer were not the only men with dreams of glory in that postwar automotive era when anything sold. There was William Stout and his Scarab, Gary Davis and his three-wheel Davis, Earl "Madman" Muntz and his Muntz sports car. They did not make

And there was Preston Tucker. His Tucker Torpedo was long and low, with an aluminum, air-cooled engine and a cyclops-like centered headlamp which turned with the front wheels.

Tucker raised about $25 million through the sale of stock and dealer franchises. It didn't last long. He built about 50 prototypes before his company collapsed, under attack from Drew Pearson on the radio and under investigation by the SEC.

Tucker went down even though Ed Cole, General Motors' premier engineer, said he thought Tucker's car was "wellconceived." But Tucker found that $25 million was not enough to get in the game.

It didn't matter much what it looked like — anything sold after the war. Studebaker introduced the first post-war design in 1946, a radical, streamlined car with fenders integrated into the body and a distinctive wraparound rear window on its Starlite Coupe. Comedians made fun of it, claiming you could not tell if it was coming or going. But it sold well. Twenty years later, Studebaker dropped out of Detroit's very tough game.

The Frazer was taken out of production after the '50 model run. By 1955, the Kaiser was gone, too.

"We were not surprised that we had to toss $50 million into the automotive pool," Kaiser said later. "We were surprised that it disappeared without a ripple.'

Incisions that can be covered with a tiny adhesive bandage might look like a small reason, but it makes a big difference. In fact, it's one of the major reasons laparoscopic laser gallbladder surgery is fast becoming the preferred alternative to long hospital stays and soaring medical bills.

Conventional gallbladder surgery frequently requires an incision up to five inches long. Those extra inches can represent extra days that you spend recovering from surgery. And, of course, added hospital days can mean added cost and increased post-operative pain.

Unlike other new gallbladder treatments, this is a permanent cure because the gallbladder is removed without need for costly stone-dissolving medications. In some cases, the surgery can even be performed on an outpatient basis. And many laser patients return to work or resume their normal activities within a week of surgery. Conventional surgery may require a recovery period of six weeks or more.

If you'd like to find out more about laparoscopic laser gallbladder surgery, call the hospital where more have been performed than any other hospital in the young or the elderly, is a fact of life and so repugnant that we turn out thoughts away when it occurs.

12A

Yet it is impossible to ignore when hardly a day goes by that we aren't confronted with a story of child abuse in the newspaper, with details so revolting that we can't bear to finish reading the article.

Less publicized is the abuse of elderly people, but it exists.

Statistics show that the majority of abused elderly persons are females over the age of 75; the frail elderly with physical or mental disabilities and those who are unable to provide for their personal needs, including their own protection.

The majority of the abused live with those who are mistreating them, and they are frequently reluctant or unwilling to report the situation.

Frequently, the elder abuse is financial and is difficult to detect because elderly persons often give money to their children willingly or offer assistance when their children have financial problems.

Also, many elderly people make informal arrangements allowing their caregivers to handle the banking and other financial matters.

A survey found financial abuse was reported in 40 percent of the cases studied.

If you are concerned this might be happening to someone you care about, there are signs to look for, such as depletion of an elderly person's retirement savings.

Other indications are the cashing of pension checks without prior authorization by the elderly person, an overdrawn

Psychological abuse is harder to pinpoint. Symptoms may include withdrawal, depression, anxiety and fear of family members, friends or caregivers.

What can you do if you suspec. elder abuse is happening to someone you know?

First, it is not necessary to have proof of mistreatment before seeking help. Counselors can try to resolve an abuse situation without laying blame.

Assault, theft, fraud, forgery, rape, forcible confinement and refusing to provide necessities are crimes and should be reported to the police.

If you suspect neglect of any sort, you can help by getting in touch with the appropriate agencies to find out what services are available and then telling the senior.

Seniors have a right to refuse help when it is offered. They may be unwilling or unable to speak out against those who abuse them. In such situations, keep in touch with the senior. who may need your help later.

Many people believe that what happens in someone else's family is none of their business. Only you can decide whether you care enough for your neighbor to get the help that he or she needs.

age of 83, I now know that to some this is not true. No longer is public welfare the priority of the American government. Instead, money has become our country's main concern.

I worked hard all my life at a tool and die shop to attain the home of my dreams. Whenever the noise at the shop would become too loud, or the stench of burned metal would become too strong, I would think of the bricks I would be able to buy with the money I earned from my job. Stone by stone I built my house, the house of my dreams.

My house is on a beautiful canal. But instead of waking each morning to the fragrant scent of flowers and freshly cut grass, the human waste which floated past my home in-vaded my nostrils. The City of St. Clair Shores has turned my dream home into a sewer.

It pains me that my grandchildren have not once been able to go for a cool swim on a hot day in the water behind my house. In fact, no one can swim in that water because the fear of infection is too great. Worse yet, I have watched for 20 years as the city did nothing to clean up its own mess.

Today the same city that refused to remove toxic dirt they dug up from the bottom of my canal would like a pat on the back for its attempts to clean up Milk River. It's about time is all I can say. I have to question that if it were a private citizen using the canal as a sewer it would be overlooked for so long; I don't believe it would be.

Flasher caught at memorial site

A Grosse Pointe Woods woman reported to police on Oct. 3 that she saw a man in his 30s exposing himself in front of the veteran's memorial on Vernier west of Mack.

Woods officers went to the memorial and found a man matching the description given by the woman and asked the man to identify himself.

The man told officers who he was and what he was doing. Woods officers learned the man had a mental illness and was wanted by Detroit police on several warrants.

The man apparently wandered away from his supervised living environment in Detroit. Woods officers turned him over to Detroit police.

Pierce student robbed of bicycle

A 12-year-old boy at Pierce Middle School on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Park was or-dered to get off his bicycle Sept. 29 by an older boy.

The boy complied with the other boy's request and the suspect was last seen riding west on St. Paul toward Detroit. The suspect is described as black, between 15 and 18 years old and wearing a green downfilled coat with a hood.

Murder suspect to stand trial

A Detroit man charged with the shooting death of a Grosse Pointe News employee has been ordered to stand trial in Detroit Recorder's Court following a Sept. 28 preliminary hearing in 36th District Court.

Letters

Following testimony at the hearing, District Judge Willie Lipscomb Jr. bound over for trial 19-year-old Richard Baldwin on charges of first-degree murder, assault with intent to rob and use of a firearm in the commission of a felony.

Baldwin is being held in Wayne County Jail, without bond, in connection with the Sept. 9 attempted robbery and shooting death of Robert Coe, 47, who was employed as a typesetter for the Grosse Pointe News.

Coe and his brother were summoned at 2:30 a.m. by another brother whose car had broken down at Alter and Lozier, one block north of Mack in Detroit. When Coe and his brother arrived to help, they were approached by a gunman who demanded money and jewelry. When Coe intervened, he was shot in the neck and pronounced dead on arrival at St. John Hospital.

Detroit police arrested Baldwin on Sept. 12 based on information provided by an anonymous tipster who believed Baldwin resembleda police composite drawing of the suspect broadcast on a local television station.

Time capsule dedicated this weekend

A ceremony to dedicate the City and Farms centennial time capsule will take place at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 10, at the foot of Fisher at Lakeshore, where the two communities meet.

10A

A time capsule containing contemporary items was buried at the site last Monday.

Among the things buried were the centennial promotion material, maps of Grosse Pointe, a local phone book, the video tape of Willard Scott on the "Today" show wishing a happy 100th birthday to the City and Farms, a video tape of the centennial parade, cigarettes, gum and issues of the Grosse Pointe News.

In 2093, City and Farms residents will unearth these 1993 items.

Fugitive arrested in Woods bank

Grosse Pointe Woods police assisted the Michigan State Police and the St. Clair County Sheriff's Department Sept. 29 in arresting a man wanted in connection with a Sept. 26 kidnapping and sexual assault in St. Clair County.

Woods officers were alerted by the security department of the Standard Federal Bank that a fugitive was inside the bank attempting to close his accounts. Bank personnel had previously been instructed by investigating officers from St. Clair County to alert police and detain the man until police arrived at the branch office on Mack.

Following a brief struggle in the lobby, Thomas Alan O'-Brien, 34, of Detroit and Emmett Township, was arrested and transported to St. Clair County.

O'Brien was arraigned the same day in 72nd District, Court on 10 counts of kidnapping and criminal sexual conduct. He pleaded not guilty and is being held in the St. Clair County Jail until his preliminary hearing scheduled for today, Oct. 7.

St. Clair Sheriff's deputy detective Bill Herpel said his department, with the aid of the Michigan State Police fugitive unit, had been looking for O'-Brien in connection with the kidnapping and sexual assault of a St. Clair County woman.

Herpel said O'Brien allegedly stopped on I-69 around 1 a.m. Sept. 26 to help two young women get their car out of a ditch. After removing the car, O'Brien allegedly threatened the women.

One managed to escape while the other was allegedly hand-cuffed by O'Brien and taken to his Emmett Township home, where she was allegedly tied up and sexually assaulted.

The woman who escaped gave police a description of O'-Brien and his vehicle. Police later caught a glimpse of the suspect's vehicle hidden among shrubbery near a house.

When police approached the house, they heard a woman yelling for help. O'Brien allegedly had fled out out the back door, Herpel said.

Peter Bologna and Kathy Neumann stand behind the centennial time capsule that was buried on Tuesday, Oct. 4, at the foot of Fisher, where the City and Farms meet.

The time capsule was buried three feet down and covered with cement. A rock, with a commemorative plaque, will be placed over the time capsule to mark the site and discourage anyone from sneaking a peak before 2093.

Daniel K. Couvreur

Funeral services were held Monday, Sept. 27, in Utah for Daniel K. Couvreur, who died Thursday, Sept. 23, 1993. He was 33.

Born in Detroit, Mr. Couvreur was a former resident of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Mr. Couvreur was a graduate of the University of Michigan. He came to Utah on assignment with the U.S. Air Force in 1977. He was honorably discharged in 1982, and continued to work in a civilian capacity with the Air Force.

He was an avid sportsman. He loved to hunt, fish and fly. He was a member of the Experimental Aircraft Association.

Mr. Couvreur is survived by his wife, Holly; two daughters, Margan Lee and Taylor Jean (T.J.); his parents, Kenneth and Joan Couvreur; and a brother, Eric Couvreur.

Henry Gajewczyk

Services were held Friday, Oct. 1, at the Eppens-Van Deweghe Funeral Home in Detroit for Henry Gajewczyk, 84, of Grosse Pointe Farms, who died Tuesday, Sept. 28, 1993, at Bon Secours Hospital in the City Grosse Pointe.

Born in Detroit, Mr. Gajewczyk was a manufacturer's representative in the packaging industry.

He was a lieutenant commander in the U.S. Navy. He also was a member of Detroit Elks Lodge No. 34 and the Essex Golf & Country Club.

Mr. Gajewczyk is survived by his wife, Marion, and a sister. Interment is at Forest Lawn Cemetery in Detroit.

Richard D. Bracken

Richard D. Bracken, formerly of Grosse Pointe Shores, died Sunday, Sept. 26, 1993, in Chicago following an extended illness. He was 55.

Mr. Bracken graduated from St. Paul High School and attended Loyola University. He was a talented musician, who enjoyed reading good books and playing golf. Mr. Bracken devoted his life to helping others through his continuing involvement with Alcoholics Anonymous.

"My brother was a gentle, warm, creative individual with a wonderful sense of humor," said his brother, Bruce. "He will be greatly missed by both his family and friends."

Mr. Bracken is survived by two brothers, Bruce and James; seven nephews; and four nieces. Following cremation, a private memorial Mass will be offered in his memory.

The family would appreciate by the pope as protonotary apostolic, making him the highest ranking monsignor in Michigan.; In 1951, he was named pastor of St. Mary's of Redford, a position he held until his retirement as an active priest in 1969.

In 1967, he was named official historian of the City of Detroit. He was considered an authority on the life of Detroit pioneer Father Gabriel Richard.

Following his retirement he continued to reside at St. Mary's, living in the bell tower apartment. It was his custom to rise at 4 a.m., open the church and hold 5 a.m. services.

Monsignor Hickey was an avid art collector and became a dealer, primarily in religious art, in the 1960s. His gallery, The Cloisters, was well known to collectors. All profits from the gallery were given to the poor. When it closed in the 1980s, the proceeds from the sale were given to the Archdiocese of Detroit.

Monsignor Hickey is survived by a niece, Eileen Hickey King; two nephews, William C. Roney Jr. and Joseph L. Hickey Jr.; and many grandnieces and grandnephews. He was predeceased by his sister, Helen Hickey Roney; and two brothers, Fr. Frederick Hickey O.P. and Joseph L. Hickey. Memorial contributions may be made to Lourdes Nursing Home, 23000 Watkins Lake Road, Waterford, Mich. 48238.

Mary Jean Reniger Baxter

Services will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, Oct. 8, at All Saints Episcopal Church in East Lansing for Mary Jean Reniger Baxter, 67, of Grosse Pointe Park, who died Friday, Oct. 1, 1993, at her residence.

Born in Lansing, Mrs. Baxter attended Christian College in Missouri and graduated from Michigan State College, remaining active in the Alumae Club.

She was involved with the Boy Scouts of America, Big Brothers/Big Sisters and the Lansing YMCA, where she was on the Mystic Lake board of directors for six years. She was also a member of the Junior League of Lansing.

Her retail career flourished in the 25 years she spent at Jacobson's in East Lansing. She received many recognitions for her department's successes.

In 1988, she became a certified docent with the Michigan Historical Museum in Lansing and a member of the charter group of volunteers who have served since the museum opened.

She was a longtime member of All Saints Episcopal Church. She is survived by four sons, Robert, David, Eric and James; three grandchildren; and a 59 what his family described as brother, Thomas.

Memorial contributions may be made to Cottage Hospice, 159 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

William McGraw

A funeral Mass will be held at 10:30 a.m. today, Thursday, Oct. 7, at St. Clare of Montefalco Catholic Church in Grosse Pointe Park for William Mc-Graw, 78, who died Monday, Oct. 4, 1993, of lung cancer at the St. John-Bon Secours Nursing Home in Detroit.

Born in Detroit, Mr. McGraw was a resident of Grosse Pointe. While attending Annunciation High School in Detroit, he took a job in a drug store to help support his family after his father died.

Mr. McGraw served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He worked most of his life for Detroit Edison, exchanging light bulbs and selling appliances in Edison's neighborhood stores.

He was a devoted family man. In 1974 his wife, Margaret, suffered a brain aneurysm. After undergoing surgery, she became partially paralyzed and spent the next 12 years in and out of the hospital until her death. Mr. Mc-Graw took early retirement to care for her, becoming at age 59 what his family described as "a house husband."

He helped his wife bathe and dress. He cooked dinner and kept house. He did everything he could to help his wife enjoy life.

During much of that time, he also cared for his next-door neighbor, an elderly widow with no family. Just as he had done for his own mother and aunt, Mr. McGraw cashed the women's checks, mowed the lawn and ran errands.

In recent years, Mr. McGraw was a volunteer at Bon Secours Hospital in the City of Grosse Pointe.

He is survived by two sons, Tom and Bill; and three grandchildren.

Monsignor. Edward J. Hickey

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. today, Thursday, Oct. 7, at St. Mary's of Redford of Detroit for Monsignor Edward J. Hickey, 99, who died Friday, Oct. 1, 1993.

Born in Detroit, Monsignor Hickey was believed to have been the oldest living Catholic priest in the state before his death.

Monsignor Hickey's father, Edward J. Hickey, was the first vice president and general manager of J.L. Hudson Co. and was the founder of Hickey's mens clothing stores in Detroit and Grosse Pointe.

Monsignor Hickey graduated from the University of Detroit and earned a master's in business administration from Harvard University. He studied for the priesthood at St. Paul Seminary in Minnesota and was ordained in 1919 in Detroit by Bishop Gallagher. He later studied at the Sorbonne in Paris and Catholic University of America, where he received a doctorate in philosophy.

He was a pastor of Sacred Heart Church in Grosse Ile from 1931-38. In 1938, he was appointed chancellor of the Archdiocese of Detroit, serving until 1951.

Tennis takes ULS coach into hall of fame

Sports Editor

Sarah Mayer was born to be a tennis player.

When she was a youngster growing up in Grosse Pointe Park, she'd watch her older sisters Mary Beth and Margaret and her parents Thomas and Nancy Mayer play tennis at the Wimbledon Racquet Club. By the time she was 4, she was playing in a Pee Wee league at the club.

with a laugh. "We'd wear these little shirts with elephants on them.

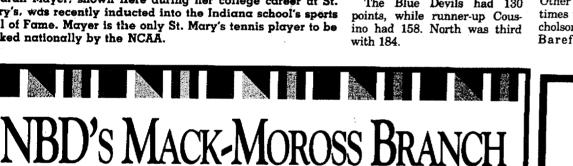

From those beginnings,

Mayer became the best tennis and doubles her last two years player in the history of St. Mary's College in South Bend, Ind., and was a member of that school's first sports hall of fame class which was inducted earlier this year.

"That was a wonderful experience," said Mayer, who is the girls tennis coach at University Liggett School and also teaches kindergarten at ULS. "I remember when my college coach called to tell me about it. I "It was so cute," Mayer said never expected it. I thought she was just calling to tell me one of the girls on the team was getting married."

Mayer played No. 1 singles

"My adviser said I should visit a fourth school, so coming from a big Catholic family, my dad suggested St. Mary's,"

Mayer said. "Plus he liked the to learn from, beginning with idea I could get Notre Dame David Kamisar, Gary Bodenfootball tickets. I visited St. Mary's and had a wonderful weekend. I had a great four years there, but the time went so fast.'

Mayer, who was Chuck Wright's assistant coach at ULS last year, is enjoying her first season as head coach of the Lady Knights.

"I'm learning something new every day, but I have a great bunch of girls," Mayer said. "I'm not that much older than they are, so I can relate to the problems they're having, both in school and out."

Mayer has two main requirements for her players.

"I want them to display good sportsmanship, win or lose. That was the first thing I stressed when I met with the team. Another thing I expect is for them to do their best every day," she said.

"I had a lot of great coaches miller and Robert Smith, who taught me at Wimbledon. I also learned a lot from my coaches in high school and college and from Chuck Wright."

Mayer hopes to continue coaching for several years.

"I really enjoy the experi-ence," she said. "One of the best parts is getting to play in practice. I do it almost every day. The game is still so much fun for me."

One of Mayer's biggest adjustments to coaching the Lady Knights was talking with teenagers after spending her day with 3-to 5-year-olds.

"One day at practice I called the girls together and had them sit in a circle and said, 'Now this is our sharing time.' They all started laughing," she said. "But I love working with the little children, too. I couldn't be happier with what I'm doing."

Ben Butler finished second in the junior varsity race in 17:43. Other JV runners posting best times were Joe Suski, John Nicholson, Matt Lariscy, Brandon (20:17), Aimee Vasse (20:27), Barefield, Gabe Slimko, Laura Stuckey (21:08), Eileen

"Our biggest concern up to this point had been the spacing between our top runners," said coach Steve Zaranek. "We really closed down the gaps at Center Line and made tremendous improvement. Our best teams have always been able to run well as a pack and we are now starting to develop that style."

Meathe, who rushed for 191 yards two weeks ago in North's win over L'Anse Creuse, has scored 12 touchdowns this season with four games remaining. He has a shot at breaking the school record of 20 set by Duane Johnson in 1971.

"Steve's been getting the ball more the last couple games," Sumbera said. "We've doubled his carries. We've been working the ball inside out instead of outside in and it's been working.

Meathe had an even heavier workload in the second half because tailback Eric Peters, who had several long runs in the first half, was unable to play because of a 15-stitch cut in his hand. Peters received the gash when he hit a Roseville player's helmet. It's doubtful he'll be able to play in Saturday's home game against L'Anse Creuse North.

The Norsemen completely dominated the Roseville game.

North's second unit was in the game early in the fourth quarter. Roseville had only two yards as the North secondary - and the Panthers weren't

"That was about as well as a defensive lineman can play,' Sumbera said. Brandon Hacias, who also had an interception, led in tackles with 10, two more than Wayne Ford collected. Defensive end Dan Vormelker also did a good job of pressuring the quarterback.

North scored on its first possession, with Peters going 11 yards for the touchdown. Mark Brewster added the first of his four extra points.

Meathe gave the Norsemen a 14-0 lead with a one-yard run with 42 seconds left in the first quarter. The 53-yard drive started with a 17-yard pass from Emmett DeGuvera to tight end Rob Dallaire and Pe-

South dominated the JV race. Rebecca Padilla, Kate Hempstead, Kyle Murphy, Megan Steele, Emily Black and Nicole Pettit each posted times under 23 minutes.

North's boys had several excellent performances, topped by Bill Stevenson's 12th place finish in 16:45.

"That was the best time of his life by 40 seconds," said coach Pat Wilson. "I'm really happy for him because he's worked hard and was anxious to break 17 minutes. It usually takes a month to see a big drop in times.

North's other runners also posted personal-best times as Bob Stevenson (17:31), Marty Bogen (17:42) and sophomores Kevin Grant (17:48) and Jeff Hansen (17:49) followed Bill Stevenson across the finish line.

"Our top five really ran well," Wilson said. "Only 18 seconds separated our second through fifth men. Defense lifts Lady Norsemen

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

Defense is still the name of the game at Grosse Pointe North

The Lady Norsemen tightened the clamps on Macomb Area Conference White Division girls basketball rivals Grosse Pointe South and Utica last week and started league play with a pair of victories.

"At some point in every game, the defense is going to have an effect," said coach Gary Bennett. "In the Utica game, especially, our pressure just got to them. We'd steal an in-bounds pass or we'd force the ballhandler to make a turnover. Fortunately, we've been able to score off of those plays."

Grosse Pointe North's varsity girls cross country team is off to a strong start with a 4-0 record in the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division.

Among its league victories were a 15-50 win over Warren Woods-Tower with Vinnie Lap-iana leading the way and a 20-41 triumph against L'Anse Creuse.

North also finished sixth in the Algonac Invitational as Julie Crociata led the Lady Norsemen.

"L'Anse Creuse was supposed to be our main competition and we beat them," said North coach Scott Cooper. beat them.'

North's best performers have Colaluca, Katie Daniels, Katie Donahue, Carolyn Pruitt and Molly Thompson.

"We have 27 girls and only four have run before," Cooper said. "We're inexperiend, so we're really not expected to do much, but we're doing a lot."

Tennis

North's varsity girls tennis team defeated Sterling Heights 8-0 in what coach Karen Cooksey said "was our easiest match all year.'

The Lady Norsemen lost a scrimmage against Farmington Mercy but bounced back to defeat Chippewa Valley 8-0. Sophomore Anne Corona has played well for North.

North's transition game can turn a contest around quickly. The Lady Norsemen held a 34-33 lead over Utica with a little more than a minute to play in the third quarter and by the end of the period, North had a nine-point advantage.

One of the ringleaders in North's pressure defense is "Sue has a great touch Maureen Zolik, who had five around the basket," Bennett steals against the Chieftains and four in the South game.

"She's a great defensive the ball," Bennett said. "And she really finishes off the plays well."

Zolik had 20 points against Utica and 10 against the Lady Devils. She also had three assists in each game.

Another North junior who is asserting herself is Sue Karber, who combined for 33 points in the two games last week. She had 14 rebounds and three steals to go with her 17 points against Utica and had five steals in the South contest.

North held a 16-8 halftime lead in the South game as the Lady Norsemen beat their crosstown rivals for the first time in three seasons.

There was no letdown against Utica as North jumped out to an 18-4 lead. The Chieftains stormed back to go ahead 25-24 midway through the third quarter. North quickly regained the lead and maintained a slim edge until the defense shut Utica down completely.

Ryan Messacar scored South's first goal after taking a crossing pass from Tim Reynaert.

The Blue Devils made it 2-0 on a goal by Pete McDonald from a goalmouth scramble off corner kick.

South exerted some heavy pressure in hopes of putting the game away, but the Tars cut the lead to 2-1 with about 20 minutes remaining on a long shot that South goalkeeper Jeff Goudie didn't see until it was too late.

"I always tell the kids that the third goal is the most im-portant," Christensen said. "If we'd gone ahead 3-0 the game would have been over. When Anchor Bay scored it, they started playing well, like they have been all season.'

Goudie came up with a clutch save late in the game to preserve South's lead. Earlier, South dropped a 4-0 non-league decision to Troy Athens, which is ranked No. 2 in the state Class A poll.

The Redhawks scored all their goals during a 15-minute flurry in the first half.

"I pulled my seniors when we fell behind 3-0 and put in the younger kids and they competed well," Christensen said. Athens pulled their starters in meet. the first half, but they went back into the game at the start of the second half."

They both ner in the 200 IM and Nancy, swam on the 200 medley and Nill in the 100 breaststroke.

> Earlier, North opened the MAC American season with a 143-43 romp over Sterling Heights. Warner won the 200 IM and 100 butterfly and swam on the winning 400 freestyle relay team.

Melissa Masouras (100 backstroke), Jamerino (50 freestyle) and Jeanine Taylor (200 freestyle) each won an individual event and swam on a winning relay team. Cornillie swam on two winning relay teams.

Reynolds won the diving with 132.55 points.

O'Toole, Emery and Erin Peacock each had best times.

North dropped a 97-83 nonleague decision to Dearborn despite firsts from Jamerino in the 200 IM and 100 backstroke. Her winning time of 2:14.87 in the 200 IM was a state qualifier.

Nasapolli also made the state out in the 500 freestyle with a 5:26.83

The Grosse Pointe Soccer As-GPSA Phantoms sociation Dragons made it about as exciting as possible in

The Grosse Pointe Soccer Association Under-12 Phantoms won their first two games at the Marriott Soccer Classic.

Dragons breathe fire in tourney

The Phantoms opened the tournament with a 2-0 victory over the Birmingham Blazers, the runner-up in the Under-11 division last year. Eric Krauss posted the shutout, while Ken Potenga and Jason Coffman scored the goals.

Brad Drummy, Michael Tymrak and Coffman scored the Phantoms' goals in a 3-0 victory over the Rochester Panthers. Mark Gotfredson and Steve Buhalis had assists.

Second-half goals by Gotfredson and Coffman gave the Phantoms the lead, but the Kelly Krajewski scored the Ann Arbor Arsenal scored twice late in the game to forge a 2-2 tie. Excellent goaltending a 2-1 victory over Sport Club by the Phantoms' Matt Lapish 24. Jenny Sigler scored from preserved the tie and sent the rosse Pointe team semifinals. The semifinal against the Fraser Strikers was tied 1-1 after regulation, but the Fraser squad won a shootout 4-3. Coffman scored the only goal for the Phantoms, who missed a penalty shot that would have won the game. The Strikers dropped a 1-0 decision to Vardar III in the championship game.

fullbacks Aaron Campbell, Blake Ellis, Buhalis and Justin Schoenherr. Halfbacks Nick Rotondo, Adam Budday, Beth Howson and Tymrak controlled the midfield. Lapish and Krauss again provided solid play in the field and in goal as they alternated between the two positions.

Amy Allen tallied on a penalty kick. Jennifer Petrone and Krajewski provided strong goaltending.

Jenny Kitzman and Diana Mager each scored two goals and Diane Messing had a goal and an assist in the Dragons' 7-0 victory over the Rochester Rockettes. Katie Myers and Nicole Wilski also scored for the Dragons, who received shutout goaltending from Krajewski and Norris.

Sigler, Harrison, Messing, Myers and Allen were the scorers in the Dragons' 5-0 triumph over the Bloomfield Force. Mager and Norris had assists. Petrone and Kitzman combined for the shutout.

Allen scored both goals in the Dragons' 2-0 semifinal win over the Pointe Girls Soccer Association Mustangs. Krajewski earned the shutout.

GPSA Pacers

The Grosse Pointe Soccer Association Pacers fell one goal short of reaching the semifinals in the boys under-11 division of the Marriott Soccer Classic.

Troy Otto scored the only goal in the Pacers' 2-1 loss to the Troy Silver Nights in the tournament opener. Lou Ciotti was outstanding in goal for Grosse Pointe, while Brian Berschback, Mike Wolking and Andrew Byron also played well.

Otto and Nate Damren tallied for the Pacers in a 2-1 victory over Cleveland United. Goalkeeper Paul Loredo had an excellent game for Grosse Pointe.

Scott Berschback scored on a pass from Nick DiLoreto as the Pacers played a 1-1 tie. Nate Minnick, Ryan Michaels, Ryan McKenzie and G.J. Kordas had strong games for the Grosse Pointe squad.

The Phantoms were sparked by the outstanding defensive play of sweeper Drummy and Robyn Scofield, a Denison University freshman from Grosse Pointe Farms, earned all-North Coast Athletic Conference recognition for her performance with the school's women's track and field team.

The 1992 Grosse Pointe South grad competed in the sprints and jumping events for Denison and was a member of the 1,600-meter relay team that placed third in the conference meet with a time of 4:13.25.

South tradition lives

Grosse Pointe South's girls tennis team is rebuilding under new coach Mark Sobieralski, but the Lady Devils are continuing their winning tradition at the same time.

South won five of its first six dual matches and is ranked 10th in the state in Class A.

The Lady Devils lost eight of their top 10 players from last year's squad and this year's team is very young with only one senior - Sarah Brenner at No. 1 doubles. There are three juniors, five sophomores and three freshmen in the starting lineup

South's victories have come against Troy, Chippewa Valley, Stevenson, Grosse Pointe North and Ann Arbor Huron. The only setback was against Port Huron Northern, which is ranked ninth in Class A.

Sobieralski, who made several changes in the lineup after observing the team in competition, is confident the switches will help South beat PHN in the Macomb Area Conference Red Division tournament.

The No. 4 doubles team of freshman Tracy Summers and sophomore Katie Pine won its flights in the Ann Arbor Pioneer and Grosse Pointe North invitationals. Summers' overall record is 11-4, while Pine is 8-1. Sophomore Robin Wheeler leads the team with a 12-4 record. Missy Kordas, Brenner, Christy Schumacher, Ann Mc-Carthy and Dana Mertz each have posted 11 wins. Kordas and Wheeler won the No. 2 doubles flight at North's invitational, defeating three of the top 10 teams in the state. Junior Amanda Hanley has posted a 3-0 record while filling in at No. 4 singles. She defeated her Grosse Pointe North opponent in a four-hour match that required the lights to be turned on at Elworthy courts. Freshman Ann Richard, the starter at fourth singles, is 8-4.

Courtney Elrod and Lindsay Youngblood have won three of their four matches since teaming at No. 2 doubles.

Junior Lauren Kordas, who is playing first singles, has made a strong showing in recent matches. One of her top performances was a three-set victory over Huron's Carey Bollinger.

The Neighborhood Club Thrift Shop: It's a gigantic rummage sale that's run amok

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor

Looking for a nearly new Chanel suit? A natty navy blazer for a teenage boy whose arms grow a quarter inch each week? A mink jacket? An oilon-black-velvet painting of a bullfighter? A couple of dozen gently used Christmas tree ornaments? Some brand-new hiphigh rubber boots? A teakettle? An off-white silk blouse with a Peter Pan collar? Baby clothes? A Yahtzee game?

Browse through the Neighborhood Club Thrift Shop. You might find some of the items today — or tomorrow — or next month. It depends.

"We never know what we're going to have," said Penny Donald, Thrift Shop manager. "Somebody could call and ask, "Do you have a red and white polka dot dress in a size 12?' And we might have it." "It's unpredictable," said Peggy Heidt," head marker for the shop. "Every day is different."

The Neighborhood Club Thrift Shop is located behind the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo in the City of Grosse Pointe. The club was founded in 1911 by a group of local women, headed by Mrs. Russell A. Alger, to provide educational and recreational opportunities for Grosse Pointe's growing middle class.

In the late 20s, the board held a modest little rummage sale to raise a few hundred dollars for some of the club's most popular programs.

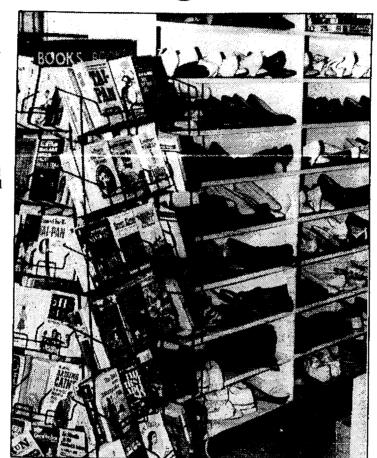

"The rummage sale was so successful, they continued it," Donald said, referring to the thrift shop that evolved from that unassuming little fundraiser.

"We see thousands of items every year," Donald said. "Our clientele is local people; some dealers; some pickers; and our volunteers."

As Donald spoke, one of the shop's regular volunteers checked out for the day with her purchases — two shopping bags full of matching towels and several like-new bathroom rugs.

"I'm furnishing a condo," she said with a smile.

About 60.70 volunteers are regular workers at the thrift shop each week. They take in donations, which must be sorted, marked, placed on racks or tables, and sold. One of the volunteers is an 84-year old Grosse Pointe Farms woman who wants to be anonymous. She started volunteering at the Neighborhood Club Thrift Shop in 1933 and still works one day a week. She remembers some wealthy Grosse Pointe matrons of the 1930s and 1940s who regularly donated their discarded clothing and household items.

"One day a big chauffeured car drove up," she said. "Out jumped the lady. She roared into the shop. 'I sent my old corset over here last week and I can't stand this new one. It hurts,' she said. 'Can I get my old one back?" "We had corsets and lingerie stacked all together in a big box. She went through every item in the box until she found her old corset. She was delighted.

"Another time, I was working marking items," she said. "We had a bunch of cigarette lighters — sterling silver ones, inexpensive ones, all kinds. I put them all together in a box on the front table with a sign: 50 cents each.

"I was in the back room when I heard a man rummaging through the box mumbling, talking to himself. 'Hmmm. Carter,' he said. 'This isn't a lighter, it's a watch. I'll take

"By the time I made it out to the front table he had paid for his Cartier watch and departed," she said. "What a bargain."

"The most unusual item we ever had donated," Donald said, "was probably the bulletproof vest."

Heidt and Donald recalled unusual donations: boxes of uncut jewels, Hummel figures, designer suits and dresses, a crystal chandelier; and thousands of the usual donations: socks, books, shoes, women's and men's separates, household items like casserole dishes and coffee pots and bud vases.

Heidt remembers a black pearl Tiffany earring a volunteer discovered in a donated purse. "We called the person who donated the purse," she said. "She was delighted to find her earring."

Donald admitted that sometimes staff members walk a fine, diplomatic line. They don't want to discourage donations. But items must be saleable. They discourage donations of broken or damaged goods.

"We can't sell items that are left over from garage sales," Heidt said.

"Our clients are not destitute or homeless," Donald said. "They're local people. Some come in every day; some twice a day. Often they're here to socialize, too. They'll go have coffee, then come back. Most people know what they're looking for." The Neighborhood Club Thrift Shop takes donations only on Mondays from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The brisk turnover of hard goods such as knickknacks, dishes, pots and pans, etc., makes these items nearly always welcome. The store also sells a lot of clothing and shoes.

A small number of consignment items (higher value clothing, furs, accessories, fine jewelry, silver and antiques) are placed in the French Room and consignees are paid a portion of the selling price -50 percent for items that sell for $10 to $49; 60 percent for items that sell for $50 to $149; and 75 percent for items that sell for $150 or more.

All the proceeds from the thrift shop go to the Neighborhood Club and, in fact, make up about 18 to 20 percent of its income. Anything that can't be sold is donated to charity.

The Neighborhood Club's sales room is open from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays; and from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturdays.

Austin goes bats

Every once in a while you see a community which has managed to convert a negative into a positive. Such is the case with Austin, Texas, and its community of Mexican freetailed bats.

Yes, bats.

8B

In fact, not only have the bats been accepted, they have become a major attraction for visitors and are regarded as a city treasure. That was not always so.

About a decade ago, the deck on the Congress Avenue Bridge, which goes over the Colorado River, near the center of town was reconstructed. The new expansion joints - crevices an inch wide and 16 inches deep - turned out to be perfect homes for the bats, which migrate each year for the summer months.

Each March, some 750,000 bats, mostly female, arrive from central Mexico for the express purpose of raising their young under the bridge. By June, each bat will have given birth to a single pup, which she breast feeds. The rest of the season is spent nurturing the pups until they are strong enough to make the trip back south in November.

To this end, every night, almost by clockwork, the bats fly out en masse from under the bridge to begin their nightly forays for insects. By August, the new pups are big enough to join the feeding trips.

And each evening hundreds of spectators crowd any number of vantage points along the river to watch the bats leave the bridge.

We were fortunate enough to have a balcony view from the Four Seasons Hotel, so we only had to step outside to watch the phenomenon.

The first time we saw the bats in Austin we weren't exactly sure what they were. We had noticed a pamphlet entitled "Why Save Bats?" in our hotel room published by an organization called Bat Conservation International, but weren't sure of its significance. But we had heard about the bats and the bridge.

Suddenly my 17-year-old daughter called to me, "Mom, come here. You've got to see this.

"This" turned out to be the sight of thousands of bats flying out from under the bridge, moving upward in ever enlarging spirals, soaring ever higher. And they kept coming, for almost 15 minutes.

"I can't believe they all fit under there!" my daughter exclaimed. With 1.5 million of them by now, they did take a while to complete their exodus.

From a distance it was hard to tell they were bats. The sun's rays slant during the early evening hours, so its light bounced off the bat wings and they looked almost as if they were swarms of gnats or flocks of tiny birds.

It is, quite truly, a sight to see. And it happens every evening just about sunset. That is, unless there is a drought.

In late August, Austin had not had rain since July 1. No rain meant fewer insects, so the bats were having trouble finding enough to eat. The colony consumes up to 30,000 pounds of insects each night; one bat can eat 600 mosquitoes in an hour.

The situation was serious enough to warrant a front page story in the Austin American-Statesman newspaper that was headlined: "Drought changing bat times, bat rations." The story reports that the bats were being forced to leave earlier each evening because they had to fly farther and longer to find enough to eat. Therefore, those folks who showed up for the show at dusk discovered they had missed it.

Austin's bats now are recognized as the largest urban bat colony in North America. The largest colony in the world is 70 miles south, in San Antonio's Bracken Cave, where millions of Mexican free-tails reside. So it is that Texas can boast that it has the greatest number of bats of any state and is home to 33 of 43 known species in the United States.

That might be considered a dubious distinction but the folks here take it quite seriously. Each evening a kiosk in front of the Four Seasons, along the bike/walking path, is manned by members of Bat Conservation International who answer questions and provide information. Often, they bring a live bat to show people these animals are not harmful. They try to dispel such myths as the belief that bats are rodents, spread rabies and are blind and become entangled in people's hair.

In fact, they are mammals, seldom have rabies and navigate by using sophisticated ultrasonic signals far more reliable than sight. They are valuable for insect control, medical research and seed and pollen dispersal. Yet just 10 years ago some Austinites were circulating petitions to poison them.

The fact that the Congress Avenue bridge is located in one of the prettiest parts of Austin only makes the bats a greater lure to visitors. The area is about a mile from the state capitol and the University of on the Colorado River form a lake in the area, known appropriately as Town Lake.

This placid pond attracts rowers, kayakers and canoers who give wide berth to the local swans. Its bike path is popular for walking and jogging as well. The best vantage points for observing the bats are in front of the Four Seasons or Hyatt hotels, both on the river; from the parking lot of the American-Statesman, across the river to the south; from a patio table at the Shoreline Grill restaurant; or aboard one of the many boats that offer "bat-sighting" cruises.

Community groups meet to weigh forming an arts council

By Kathleen Ryan Special Writer

Representatives from local arts groups met last week to study the feasibility of forming a Grosse Pointe Council of the Arts to promote recognition of the arts within the community.

Leo Salvaggio and Carol LaChiusa of the Grosse Pointe Artists Association organized the Wednesday night meeting.

"We saw a need to get the message out about the various programs Grosse Pointe has," Salvaggio said. "People don't know that a number of these groups even exist."

"We want to develop both an awareness and a recognition of the arts in Grosse Pointe," LaChiusa said. "We have so much to offer here in art, theater, dance, and music.

"We feel that a council of the arts would be the way to coordinate and promote all of these activities."

Lawrence LaGore, president of the Grosse Pointe Symphony and the Grosse Pointe Chamber Music Society, agreed.

"The idea of an arts council is very exciting to me," he said. "The symphony and Chamber

Despite a few slips, 'Banana Ridge' is cracking good fun

By Ronald J. Bernas Assistant Editor

While watching "Banana Ridge," a farce which opened last weekend at Wayne State University's Hilberry Theatre, one couldn't help but be reminded of the legendary British comedy troupe Monty Python.

World War I - and after getting her son a good education and a little money, she needs a job for him.

So she shows up at the house of Digby Pound (Peter Toran) whose assistant, Willoughby Pink (David Young), has just as good a chance of being the father.

The reason Jones (Dwight Tolar) needs a job is that he is constantly being fired because he's irresistible to women especially married, middle-aged women. But he falls in love with Cora Pound (Roxanne Wellington), a girl who might be his half sister, so her father ships him off to Bukit Pisang, an estate in Malaysia, hoping that a separation will cool the passion.

The overly stilted dialogue is, for the most part, handled re-

LaChiusa said a major focus of the council would be to recognize and reward talented young people from the community, an idea which was well-received by Grosse Pointe school representatives.

'We don't know what is going to happen to the schools with the new funding from Lansing," said Mary Martin of Grosse Pointe South's theater department. "But I'm afraid the arts will be cut. This would be a way to show the schools that there is community support for the arts.'

Salvaggio suggested that a starting point for the council could be the expansion of the Artists Association's annual fall Art Fair to a Festival of the Arts, which would feature displays and performances by the many Grosse Pointe arts groups

"I have a summer stock program for college students home for the summer," Martin said. "I know they would be thrilled to work on a project like this one over the summer." Salvaggio said initial plans call for the festival to be held Sept. 10 and 11, 1994, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. While painters display their works on the lawn, strolling musicians would entertain, dancers would take the stage, and theater productions would be offered in the auditorium.

"There are limitless possibilities with all the talent in this community," noted Patty Ville-gas of the Grosse Pointe Theatre.

Another focus of an arts council would be to advertise more of the arts programs offered in Grosse Pointe, a need identified by the Grosse Pointe Futuring Committee.

"We looked at the arts and saw how good so many of them were," said Pearl Warn of the futuring committee. "Unfortunately, the community does not know all that we have here. And people must know that they are welcome. Sometimes the arts are viewed as a closed society. That shouldn't be the case.

Additional information on the proposed arts council can be obtained from Carol LaChiusa at 885-2368.

DSO report: Violinist blends technical, lyrical in dramatic concert

By Alex Suczek Special Writer

The rich sonorities and unique harmonies of Russian Composer Sergei Rachmaninoff came across loud and clear in the orchestration of his "Variations on a Theme of Corelli" last weekend.

It opened the DSO program for the four concert set by Neeme Jarvi and the DSO on a lush note as our maestro and the orchestra extracted every bit of mystery and enchantment in this moody Russian work.

Yet as excellent as the performance was, in memory, the power and subtlety of the original piano version still seem to remain unmatched.

performance of four of the six tone poems that make up Smetana's great patriotic cycle about Czechoslovakia, titled "My Fatherland."

Having just released two of these lovely pieces on a CD, Jarvi chose to present the less familiar other four with an eye to recording them as well. They make a rich and rewarding addition to the repertory and judging by the very moving performance, they will be an outstanding addition to Jarvi and the DSO's discography.

There's heavy drama in Sarka, the story of a woman's vengeance for male infidelity. There's a symphonic landscape as beautiful as Smetana's familiar tone poem "The Moldau" (one of the two segments previously recorded) in "From Bohemia's Woods and Field." And of special interest, there are "Tabor" and "Blanic" which use a Czech hymn theme to honor the struggle of the Hussites who led the reformation movement in their country. Once again, Jarvi's programming has enriched his audience with rarely performed music that is highly worthwhile. He also returned to normal with only one encore to wind up the evening. It was "Melody in F" by Anton Rubinstein which is so familiar that Jarvi only an-nounced, "You'll recognize it." This weekend's concert series begins tomorrow morning with a coffee concert (10:45 a.m.) performance of the World Premiere of a new orchestration of Rachmaninoff's "Trio Elegiaque." Originally composed in homage to the memory of Tchaikovsky shortly after his death, it has been rarely heard in its chamber music form. Completing the program is Tchaikovsky's 6th Symphony, "Pathetique." The concert repeats Friday and Saturday evening. For tickets, call 833-3700.

The wordy, actionless script written in 1938 by Ben Travers, is peopled with characters that Python made into household stereotypes - the blowhard, the repressed wife, the wild daughter and her uptight father.

The story puts these types into a wonderful situation. The lives of several men are shaken up when a long lost paramour shows up with her 25-year-old son and tells them that one of them is his father.

Apparently she's been doing this ever since her son, named Jones, was born — she was the darling of a batallion during markably well, perhaps because the actors are all of a generation weaned on Monty Python's humor. For decades, Python has shown how to perfectly deliver lines like "you're off your pecker" and "we had an absolutely crackling cuddle."

The only thing missing from the actors was an overall sense of style. A stylish comedy like this needs a complete troupe of stylish actors. Some of the actors (particularly Toran, Young and Lynnae Lehfeldt as Sue Long, Jones' mother) have style in spades; others are a few cards short.

From left, David Young, Dwight Tolar and Jinny Pierce appear in "Banana Ridge" by Ben Travers at the Hilberry Theatre Oct. 1-Dec. 2. For tickets, call 577-2972.

The attempts at physical comedy work only intermittently, perhaps because they aren't grandiose, as the characters are and the writing is.

And then there's the pacing problem - a farce has to find its own rhythm, and it will as it ages and the actors learn what bits to milk and which don't work.

It runs through Dec. 2. Call 577-2972 for tickets and showdates.

Irish 'West' is won with charm and love

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

the lovely and fanciful film, "Into the West."

It begins in an inner city housing project in Dublin where two brothers, 12-year-old Tito (Rory Conroy) and 8-yearold Ozzie (Ciaran Fitzgerald) live with their father, Papa Riley (Gabriel Byrne). When their mother was alive, the family was a part of the caravan and Papa Riley was king of the wanderers who called themselves the "Travelers" but were more often referred to as gypsies and sometimes Tinkers.

After their mother's death, Papa Riley brought the boys to the city where he drowned his grief in drink, leaving the brothers to survive on their own

When their grandfather The mists and mystique of (David Kelly), who never gave Ireland cast a poetic aura over up the lure of the open road, visits the family, he brings with him a splendid white horse, Tir na nog, whose name means "Land of the Sea" or 'Land of Eternal Youth."

The horse forms an immediate bond with Ozzie.

Before he leaves, the grandfather, who is steeped in Irish folklore, gathers the people from the housing project around and in a wonderful scene relates the legend of Oisin and his discovery of the land of eternal youth. It is beautifully told and the group listens in rapt attention, as does the audience. The grandfather gives the horse to Ozzie, but the boy is forced to sell him when they can't find a place to keep him.

how much the horse means to Ozzie, Tito helps steal the animal back and they are off to the west to try to find their grandfather and the caravan.

It is a long and perilous journey with cops close on their trail determined to retrieve the animal for a wealthy man who bought the horse from an unscrupulous policeman who tricked Papa Riley into signing away the title.

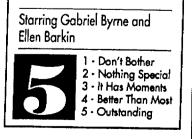

Filled with remorse, Papa Riley seeks out the Travelers to help him find his children. A friend, Kathleen (Ellen Barker) and a tracker agree to help him.

In the meantime, the boys are having a time eluding the police cars that are always close on their tail. They hide in dense woods, mountain caves, under waterfalls and in one sequence they find shelter from the rain in a movie theater.

The final scene is one you won't forget. It is tense with action and suspense and fulfills the premise of the power of the Gripping cinematography by Tom Sigel captures the beauty of Ireland's West.

Mike Newell ("Enchanted April") extends his reputation as a creative director in "Into the West and Jim Sheridan ("My Left Foot"), who wrote the screenplay, once again scores as a great Irish story teller. Accenting the mood is the beautiful Irish music.

"Into the West" has an enchanting power that will send you away singing its praises.

It provided a particularly good opportunity, however, to watch Jarvi's highly efficient conducting technique as he controlled every hesitation and modulation of the orchestra from the podium. Working to shape the rich score without flamboyance, he made every twitch of the finger count, signalling tempos, pauses and dynamics with amazing economy of movement and excellent effect.

Soloist for the evening was violinist Nadja Salerno-Sonnenberg with the Bruch Violin Concerto No. 1, a work generally counted as one of the great 19th century concerti.

It is more interesting melodically and technically than its harmonic development, however, and deserves attention to both qualities in its delivery.

Salerno-Sonnenberg concentrated more on the histrionics, giving a performance that was dazzling in its highly accented presentation of the work's many spectacular virtuoso qualities, even extracting considerable drama while displaying her tremendous technique. While this distracted from the lack of lyrical feeling, it also emphasized the work's less than profound character.

The Pastor's Corner

The nature of love

By the Rev. David H. Wick Grosse Pointe Baptist Church

4B

Charlie McCarthy, Edgar Bergen's famous wooden boy, once complained to Edgar that he was troubled because "I don't think Mr. Fields loves me."

You may not see the humor in this unless you remember the permanent state of siege that characterized Charlie's and W.C. Fields' relationship. (Charlie: "Mr. Fields, are you eating a tomato, or is that your nose?" W.C.: "Charles, I want you to come home with me and fill the terrible vacancy in my life." Charlie: "Where is that, Mr. Fields? In your heart?" W.C.: "No. In my fireplace.")

Anyway, W.C. overheard Charlie's complaint, and went ballistic.

"That does it!" he seethed; "I've been a gentleman up until now. He's not going to tell me I don't love him! I'll slice him up into slats and turn him into a Venetian blind." (To which Charlie replied, "Ooooo, that

I understand something of W.C. Fields' anger when I read in this very column a few weeks ago a statement to the effect that there are churches which say, "We'll love you, as long as you aren't a homosexual."

As W.C. Fields' anger illustrates, telling someone else who they love or don't love is risky business. The characterization of churches, like mine, that maintain a biblically based standard of morality as therefore being unloving toward those who violate those standards, is at best a profound misunderstanding, and at worst a lie.

The misunderstanding involves the nature of love. God loves unconditionally: "But God demonstrates His own love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." (Romans 5:8.)

Yet God's love does not abrogate His wrath against sin: "No immoral person or impure person or covetous man, who is an idolater, has an inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and God. Let no one deceive you with empty words, for because of these things the . wrath of God comes upon the sons of disobedience." (Ephesians 5:5-6.)

The love of God, manifesting itself in the offer to mankind of salvation by grace through faith in Jesus Christ, has never been a license to sin. "How shall we who died in sin still live in it?" (Romans 6:2.)

God's love involves a "free pass" to salvation, and liberty from the law, but not a license to indulge the flesh. God's love frees from compulsion, heals and transforms: "For the love of Christ controls us." (II Corinthians 5:14.)

Evangelical Christians typically describe themselves as "hating the sin, but loving the sinner." Certainly evangelicals have been guilty of hypocrisy at times in being selective in the kinds of sin they have hated, since they are not exempt from the universal human weakness to condemn the pet sins of others while excusing their own.

As a believer in the total depravity of man, I am not prepared to defend the sinlessness of evangelicals, my church and myself included. But I do not think we can be blamed for the hurt feelings of sinners who feel condemned by the standards we believe and uphold. We are all of us condemned by those same standards. There is none righteous. No, not one. The only way for any of us to be saved is through the grace of God in Christ.

Those who would excoriate the evangelical tradition for its supposed lack of love need to look more closely at what evangelicals actually do to be instruments of God's love for sinners. For instance, I know of no rescue missions run by atheists or secular humanists or homosexuals. Historically, it has been the evangelicals who have loved enough to work with the disenfranchised and hopeless cases - loving those whom the world has discarded. I believe evangelicals love sinners and people who are hurting. They love them enough to tell them the truth about themselves that will set them free; love them enough not to "affirm" the very behaviors and choices that will lead to their destruction.

A student asked me recently if a 10 trick win in a three no trump covenant would be considered a satisfactory result with 29 points in the combined hands? That depends upon the declarer, I replied, but if that's all he knows how to gather and he's satisfied, then I'd say that's enough.

My friend and spirited adventurer at the card table, the ever-pleasant and discernible Judge Charles Kaufman of Plymouth, has never been satisfied with 7 or 8 or 10, and for that matter even 12 if there were more. Some call it the competitive edge, the will to explore for more.

And if he's in doubt about his achievement, Charles is the first to ask for advice.

Charles' bridge beginning is "sui generis." While he played at least once before the war, it was during that age in our history when he became almost a daily contestant. It was his fate to be stripped of his liberty and constrained to a prison camp in the early stages. At first, it was all he and his fellow faithful could manage surviving the hardships of a diet of rice and living in a subservient way. In time they found some time for play and that's when the challenge of the game struck his inquisitiveness. Someone had an old shredded deck and bridge became their game for many more months than it's pleasant to remember.

Since his freedom 48 years ago, the honorable justice has kept his interest in the game, but has had little time to play — until recently, when he relinquished many of his major duties in the Wayne County courts and now there is the time and the tenacity to play bridge. He is the first to realize that to play the modern game he will need training and dedication. I'm enthusiastic about his changes.

Recently we played at Joy Balsar's fine Tuesday even-

Chas 1D Both Vulnerable

While some N/S were in five hearts, a better match point result if successful, that contract has no play. There's always a spade loser and declarer can't effectively reduce East's holding to a three card trump ending throw-in, which would achieve the 11 trick contract.

As it is, five diamonds is in jeopardy if West switches to a heart at trick (2). Fortunately, he didn't.

At trick (2), Charles won the club switch in his hand and played two rounds of trumps ending in his hand. At trick (5) the club ace and a club ruff eliminated either opponents' ability to get out safely after winning a heart. At trick (7) a small heart toward the jack and as the cards are, East must win and is now very uncomfortable. A spade gives declarer a sluff and a ruff and a heart is a give up.

You be the judge. Did Charles play the hand perfectly for 11? I'd say so!

Dishwasher helps you save on monthly bills

There's more to the cost of a dishwasher than just the price listed on the sticker. The most efficient machines pay for themselves in a few years by saving lots of water, detergent and electricity.

When choosing a dishwasher, here are some savings to look for:

• Water savings — Dishwashers with the most efficient pump and filtration systems can conserve up to 2,600 gallons a year, based on using your dishwasher once a day. While some models use as much as 12.5 gallons for a single load, the best water-saving dishwashers, including Asko's four full-size models, use only about 5 gallons in a normal wash cycle — and less than 4 gallons on a delicate cycle setting. It's actually cheaper to run a full load than to wash the same dishes by hand.

• Energy savings — Using less water also saves electricity, because less water has to be heated. Rather than draw water from the home hot-water tank, Asko's energy-efficient models use an internal heating coil. Dual pumps and motors also save energy. Most dishwashers use only one pump and motor for pumping water in and out. This wastes a lot of electricity. The most energy-efficient models, from Asko, use dual pumps and motors, and require 65-percent less electricity than average.

•Less detergent — Many dishwashers reuse dirty water from previous cycles. By using less water that's always kept clean, Asko's triple filtration system uses only about half as much detergent.

interize pools correctly for safety and savings

Joe Peters, swimming pool safety and maintenance expert, warns swimming pool owners that preparing the pool for winter can be a matter of life or death.

Almost all drowning accidents involving children or pets which occur off-season can be avoided if proper procedures are followed, he said

Peters, former owner of a leading Florida pool maintenance company, said correct winterizing procedures will also save hundreds of dollars in repairs

He recently used his knowledge and experience to create two videos, "Keeping Your Heads Above Water: Safety and Rescue" and "Pool Maintenance."

These are his do's and don'ts for winterizing pools.

1. Do protect children and pets by buying a pool cover which meets the standards of the American Society of Testing Materials.

2. Don't leave entrances to the pool unlocked. Remember, even in cold weather, youngsters are attracted to pools.

3. Do buy anti-freeze made only for pools. Anti-freeze made for cars is toxic and when the pool is used again, it will still be in the water. Anyone swallowing the water could become ill.

4. Don't guess about how to drain heaters. Procedures vary for different models. Contact the manufacturer or a licensed or insured pool maintenance professional for accurate information.

5. Do follow instructions. When Roses generally are a hardy lot, but the repeated freezes and thaws that are common in cold winter regions tend to weaken and damage plants. Gardeners can easily prevent this damage with a few simple steps that will protect prize plants. The gardener's first job in readying roses for winter is to discourage new growth and further bloom, according to experts at All-American Rose Selections Inc. (AARS), an association of rose growers.

Hybrid teas and their cousins grandifloras and floribundas - simply don't know when the party is over and when they should prepare for their long winter's nap. This reluctance to go dormant exposes tender new growth to harsh, drying winter winds, sudden freezes, and even spells of sub-zero weather.

Pruning and feeding encourages growth and flowering, so stop these activities immedately after the flush of fall flowering. However, keep watering because roses need lots of moisture, especially in autumn as the bushes get ready for the dry winter season.

closing the pool, test the water before adding pool chemicals. Remember, more is not better. Use only the recommended amounts of the prescribed chemical. Proper treatment discourages algae during the warm spells that occur during the off season.

6. Don't buy more pool chemicals than you need. At season's end, pool chemicals go on sale, but they're no bargain if you buy more than you need. When stored, liquid chemicals weaken. Safely dispose of all containers by following manufacturer's instructions.

7. Don't allow excessive debris to accumulate in the water on the pool cover. It stagnates and gives off an offensive odor.

8. Do drain any PVC plumbing above the frost line to prevent cracking. The frostline is the point below ground where soil no longer freezes.

Peters cautions that without enough water in the pool, it can "pop" out of the ground. This also occurs when water is drained too close to the pool. Additional underpressure is produced when the ground already is saturated from winter rain or snow. Peters advises that no matter what the time of year, excess water should be drained at least 75 feet away from the pool.

Peters is a consultant and writer for a series of videos based on his pool maintenance experience. The "user friendly" pool maintenance tape provides a comprehensive guide for pool owners - where they

Preparing roses for winter is simple

If you live in an area where winter means extended periods of subfreezing weather (and especially if your thermometer ever dips below zero), your roses probably need winter covering. This step should be taken after the ground freezes solid, which is generally after several nights of below 20-degree temperatures.

A covering of leaf mulch or bark works well, but the best insulating cover is good black dirt mounded up around the base of each rose bush to a depth of about 12 inches. Don't use soil already in the garden, because this risks unearthing the rose's roots and exposing them to the elements. By bringing in fresh earth, you also are top-dressing the plants for next spring.

Styrofoam rose cones also offer good protection, but make sure they are well ventilated to discourage disease growth. Secure cones with a heavy rock or brick on top and a handful or two of dirt around the base for an extra measure of protection.

AAA teaches fire safety at school

By far, more chidren under 10 perished in Michigan fires last year than in any other age group, a tragic statistic confronted by AAA Michigan as it gears up for yet another season of school fire safety programs.

In conjunction with national Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 3-9, the fire marshal's division of the Michigan State Police reports that of 218 state fire victims in 1992, 48 were children under 10. The next closest bracket was 22 each in the 20 to 29 and 30 to 39 age groups.

"The tragedy is that many of these children could have been spared with the proper installation of smoke detectors, a rehearsed escape plan from a burning home and window bars that can be released during emergencies," said Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan community safety services manager.

To help reduce the number of child victims, AAA Michigan again this year will conduct between 250 and 300 school safety programs reaching some 90,000 kindergarten cord stores or by phoning 800-277 POOL. The price for both the maintenance and safety videos is $29.95.

through sixth-grade students statewide.

instructional sessions by The AAA Michigan safety consultants feature a smoke chamber demonstration to teach youngsters how to react to sounding smoke detectors, along with other exhibits, fire safety brochures and hands-on practice.

"Family planning for fire emer-gencies is the goal of this public service program," Basch said. The students also will learn:

• How to escape quickly from a burning home with emphasis on the need to review and practice escape routes.

• To "stop, drop to the ground and roll" if clothing catches fire. "Planning for Home Fire Emergencies," a brochure prepared by AAA Michigan and provided at school programs and for community groups, spells out, among other things, the major causes of house fires, how to develop an escape plan and the proper use of smoke detec-tors. It is available free to the public by calling 1-800-646-4AAA.

Air cleaners: value and convenience

As concern about indoor air pollution increases, Americans increasingly are turning to whole-house media air cleaners as the solution that offers both convenience and value.

Media air cleaners use high-technology fibers to trap up to 98 percent of airborne irritants as small as 1/25,400th of an inch. That includes pollen and mold spores, as well as microscopic particles so small they go right through ordinary furnace filters and even your vacuum cleaner.

To pack a large amount of efficiency into a small space, high-efficiency media air cleaners use a deep-pleated design. One brand, Space-Gard* by the maker of Aprilaire* humidifiers, is only 20 inches square, but it contains more than 78 square feet of dust-trapping media. That's enough to cover the wall of a small room!

Because whole-house media air cleaners don't require electricity and have no moving parts, a qualified heating contractor can easily install one on your forced-air heating system without having to make any electrical connections. When shopping for an air cleaner,

When shopping for an air cleaner, make sure you are really getting a high-efficiency model that is effective against very small particles. If you are in doubt about the efficiency of an air cleaner you are considering, ask to see a chart showing how well it performs on particles down to one micron (1/25,400th of an inch) in size.

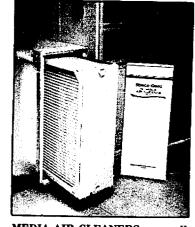

After you have determined that an air cleaner is truly highly efficient, also consider such factors as maintenance requirements, warranty and whether it produces ozone.

Some types of air cleaners need to be washed every 30 to 60 days to maintain their efficiency. Most media air cleaners need no maintenance between annual media changes.

Reputable manufacturers offer some kind of written warranty. One brand, Space-Gard, has a lifetime limited warranty.

Media air cleaners produce no ozone. Ozone in the upper atmosphere is good but, in the air we breathe, it creates an odor that most people find irritating. It can also aggravate asthma and allergies in some cases.

MEDIA AIR CLEANERS are well suited to today's busy lifestyles because they need to be serviced only once a year. And because they cost considerably less than electronic air cleaners, they offer the kind of value homeowners appreciate in these economic times.

Pella cuts to the core of window shopping

Windows are not just windows anymore. Energy-saving inert gas fills the gap between panes, special coatings let in light but not heat.

"If energy savings are important, don't stop with how a window looks," advises Patrick Bushey, territory sales manager for Pella Window & Door Co. "The decision should include the frame material.

"Because most window performance characteristics depend on the frame to work properly, it's a critical place to start. The greatest difference in windows is still the product they are made of — solid wood, vinyl plastic or hollow metal."

Wood and vinyl frames dominate the window market, in large part due to the energy-efficiency problems of aluminum frames. Wood, a natural insulator, has more than 1,500 times the thermal resistance of metal.

"Quality wood is the preferred choice when durability, construction and natural beauty are in question," Bushey said. "While some vinyl can insulate, even the insulating properties are often compromised by common mechanical problems."

Air infiltration, the measured rate of air leakage per minute per lineal foot (cfm/ft), may be sacrificed by loosely connected or weak corners, especially as vinyl frames are exposed to harsh weather conditions. Bushey said today's quality wood windows are specially treated to repel water, protect against decay and insects and remain virtually maintenance free.

"In addition, wood building products have clear environmental advantages," Bushey said. "In environmental impact alone, which compares raw materials used vs. the energy needed to manufacture them, wood uses only 4 percent of total manufacturing energy to produce 47 percent of the raw materials. That compares to steel's use of 48 percent energy to 23 percent production and aluminum's use of 8 percent energy to 2 percent production."

The course will be held on Saturdays, beginning Oct. 16, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Lake Shore High School, 22980 13 Mile.

Classes cover the home-building process from start to finish. Subjects include buying property, site planning, zoning questions, financing and building codes and permits. Participants also learn basics of concrete, masonry and wood frame construction, roofing, plumbing, electrical, insulation and ventilation, dealing with subcontractors and more. The course helps people als, including a course textbook and sample test questions.

Pre-registration is required no later than Thursday, Oct. 14, to Grosse Pointe Community Education. Call the school at 343-2178 to register during office hours.

The instructor is a licensed builder with extensive experience teaching builder's pre-licensing classes. He can answer questions related to all facets of home building. NIV loans help self-employed get home loans

By Doug Stranahan Regional Director

Century 21 of the Great Lakes

Securing a good home mortgage from a lender can prove difficult, at best. Buyers are typically asked by loan officers to gather detailed statements of their financial history, including earnings and credit. For many, bad credit ratings can block quick mortgage approvals, even if the money is there to cover monthly payments. Others have a hard time verifying income that is necessary to carry out the mortgage.

But what if you are successfully self-employed, in good credit standing, yet have trouble showing a steady income as a result of a couple of slow business years? It may be harder to get a mortgage loan approved.

That's why in these tough eco-nomic times "no income verifica-tion" (NIV) loans are making a comeback. Gaining national prominence over a decade ago, NIV loans helped many self-employed business people land a solid home loan when business times were bad. As long as the applicant can exhibit a longstanding ability to carry monthly payments, the origin of Overhaul needed in flood insurance A major overhaul is necessary to revive the federal flood insurance program, according to Pat Campbell-White, vice chairman of the public policy committee of the National Association of Realtors, who testified before a U.S. Senate panel recently.

"One of the biggest problems is only a small percentage of eligible property owners carry flood insurance," Campbell White said. "Especially in areas with infrequent flooding, many owners don't insure against flooding or they allow their policies to lapse.

In testimony before the Senate Subcommittee on Housing and Urban Affairs, Campbell-White said NAR supports the National Flood Insurance Reform Act of 1993 (S. 1405) because it would increase participation while preserving property rights of individual owners. In addition, it would discourage overbuilding in high-risk areas.

Under the bill, flood insurance would not be available for nonmovable residential construction in 30- and 60-year erosion zones determined by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), in consultation with state and local governments.

'However, property owners would have the right to build at their own risk or obtain private insurance, whether it's in a coastal erosion zone or an inland flood-cash is considered irrelevant in the eyes of NIV mortgage lenders. However, applicants must show a spotless retail credit record and put a 30 percent down payment on their home to qualify. Retail credit considered department store charge cards, gas cards, credit cards and bank loans secured by car titles or homes.

An average NIV loan today is a solid 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage at 8 percent interest. Origination fees generally run around three points.

As part of the application process, lenders will ask to see year-todate pay stubs and bank statements from the last three months. However, tax returns are not required.

Large loans - usually $200,000 and up - are easier to secure with the NIV format. Paying the steep up-front costs associated with these loans usually convinces a lender that you can cover payments. Retail credit ratings that show prompt payment within the last 12 months are essential for approval.

NIV or "no-documentation" loans became notorious in the 1980s because of a high default rate. Suffering from sloppy applications and risky qualifiers, a large number of NIV holders failed to meet their loan obligations during the 80's. However, the new breed of "nodocumentation" mortgages carries tougher requirements than years past. They also remain a logical alternative for those who have sufficient capital and a perfect retail credit rating, but have difficulty proving steady income over the last two years.

If you're used to paying everything in cash and carry no credit history, don't waste your time with an NIV loan. Proof of credit performance is essential to landing a nohassle mortgage.

NIV loans are also available for second or vacation homes and refinancing your current mortgage at a lower interest rate. The same down payment and credit restrictions apply.

are in the best position to determine the wisest allowable uses for property within their jurisdictions, so it's important for FEMA to work with these communities," she said.

Property owners in some lowerrisk areas pay the same federal insurance premiums as people in high-risk erosion zones for comparable coverage.

Stenciling Adds Hand- Painted Touch To Home

Many design options are available ranging from faux Greek moldings to dainty spring flowers. Once you've chosen the theme for your room, try a few designs on a piece of paper to sharpen your skills, saving your practice round for use as a measuring guide.

Check your existing paint or wallpaper before the project begins. Most surfaces are perfect for stenciling as long as the finish is not overly glossy.

The most critical step in stenciling is to map out the design across the wall to determine how the pattern will meet the corner. Start by making a chalk line directly in the center of the wall. Now place the center of the stencil on the line and walk it along the wall to determine how the design will fit.

If the pattern will wrap in the corners as desired, you're ready to begin. Tape the stencil on the right and left sides, not the top and bottom, which could cause the stencil to buckle. Rub the brush into the paint with a brisk, circular stroke, working the brush until it is saturated.

Hold the brush at a perpendicular angle to the wall and apply with a very light, circular motion, making sure to hold the stencil flush with the wall. Brush a little longer and with a bit more pressure for darker shades.

Most kits contain two different stencils to avoid brushing one color into another. After using the first stencil all the way across, go back to the center of the wall and continue with the second. Before applying the second color, clean the brush with mineral spirits then dry completely with a hairdryer.

When the repetition of the design is fifteen inches or less, begin stenciling at the most prominent corner of the room and work back to a door or window. If the repeat is fifteen inches or more, or on very short walls, use your mapping design from the center of the wall.

During the final one-third of the wall you might have to stretch or squeeze the design a quarter to a half an inch to make sure the dominant part of the design is not directly in the corner. And use a light feathering or sweeping stroke so the design fades out as it moves into the corner. Do not try to dab or pounce paint into the crevice.

Don't limit stencil art to ceiling borders. Patterns can also add a decorator touch around baseboards, on floors, fabrics, lamps, accessories, shutters or even chair rails. Shorter segments can also accent a doorway, picture or even a fireplace hearth. Gently draped ivy and rows of hearts bubbling across walls and mantles bring home the traditional charm of a dedicated homeowner. Stenciling provides just the touch in less time than painting an entire room.

Plan Before You Plant Arbors & Trellises For All Seasons And Forever

Have you had to replace an arbor or trellis after your plants have matured? Have you experienced the nightmare of trying to paint that flaking, rotten wooden arbor? Plan ahead for an easier gardening life.

Maintenance-free arbors and trellises are available for today's gardener. Some of the best are made by a company called Bufftech. Theirs are made from a high-grade vinyl, compound. This high-quality material never requires any type of painting, and stays amazingly clean. They are ultraviolet (UV) stabilized so the white color never fades or turns yellow. The manufacturer, Bufftech, includes a written twenty-year warranty with each product.

Two sizes of round-top arbors are available in addition to several wall trellis designs. Each product also includes their own ground stakes for easier installation. Made from the same durable material, these stakes will never rot in the ground!

Another unique feature of Bufftech's products is the fact that there is no visible hardware on the arbors and trellises. No staples, no screw heads, no nails...nothing! Each stainless steel screw is covered by its own snap-on cap that really stays on. The screws are invisible, making the arbors more pleasant to garden visitors.

You will find Bufftech products at garden centers, nurseries and home centers. If your favorite store does not stock Bufftech products, call toll free 800 333 0569, or write Bufftech, Inc., 2525 Walden Avenue, Buffalo, New York 14225, Attn: Garden Dept., for a local referral.

Home features vaulted family room with balcony

By W.D. Farmer

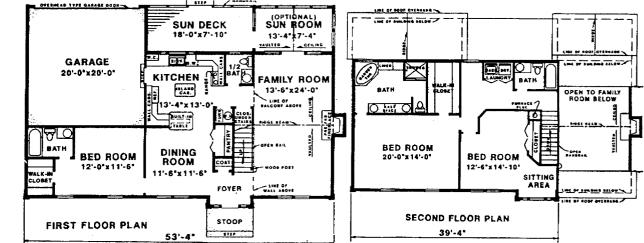

The quiet foyer leads you either to the dining room or the large family room. The family room is vaulted and includes a fireplace and access to an optional sun room, and a secluded sun deck. A half bath for guests and daytime use is centrally located. Garage access is from the kitchen for ease in unloading groceries. The kitchen contains an island cabinet and a built in table at the end of one of the counters adjacent to the formal dining room.

An isolated bedroom for guests, an in-law or invalid is located to the front of the garage. It includes a private full bath and a walk-in closet.

Two large bedrooms and two full baths are upstairs. The master suite is 14 by 20 feet and includes a deep walk-in closet. The master bath consists of a double vanity with knee space, corner garden tub, linen cabinet and separate shower. The remaining upstairs bedroom includes a small sitting area, which is located above the foyer. A half bath services this bedroom and the laundry area is located here as well. The plan is No. 2078, and includes 2,080 square feet of heated space. The exterior of the home is stucco with a gable over the entry area. The arch top window on the front of the home adds distinction.

For further information on 2078 and a computer-generated plan drawn in accordance with FHA and VA regulations, write to W.D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, Ga. 30345.

Are Americans becoming more energy conscious

Recently, three well-known national foundations contributed $20 million to establish the Energy Foundation, whose primary purpose is to promote effective energy policy and practices. The gesture seems to signify the emergence of a more energy conscious society in the United States.

It's not surprising Americans are beginning to become more energy efficient. The American Council for an Energy Efficient Economy estimates the average household spends more than $1,000 a year to heat and cool their home and operate household appliances. This kind of expense during tough economic times can quickly catch a person's attention.

So what can people do to become more energy efficient? According to Patrick Bushey, territory sales manager, Pella Window Store, a logical place to begin is in the home.

'Kidproof' your walls at Hallmark

A new product that will give parents relief from worry about kids' crayon marks, fingerprints, stains and smudges on the walls has recently been introduced by Hallmark Wallpaper and Paint stores.

"Kidproof" Acrylic Wall Paint a tough, scrubbable, stain-resistant finish — is now available at the Grosse Pointe Woods Hallmark store.

"Kidproof paint is ideal not only for kids' bedrooms, but for family rooms, game rooms, playrooms, and any area of the house that is subject to wear and tear," said Hallmark Wallpaper and Paint president Denis Gornick.

Parents will like the paint's durability, said Gornick, but they will also notice another unique quality about Kidproof paint.

"Kidproof dries to a low-luster eggshell sheen, which really gives your rooms a decorator finish," Gornick said. "In the past, to get this kind of scrubbability and stain resistance, families were forced to use a semi-gloss or satin enamel paint. These glossier paints make a room appear smaller, highlight surface imperfections, and produce unwanted glare. With this new lowluster paint, parents don't have to compromise on appearance to get the extra durability they need." The paint, marketed under the "Majic" brand name, is available in

"Majic" brand name, is available in white and tint bases, making it ideal for custom colors.

"Replacing outdated windows and doors with energy efficient models will help retain heat in the winter and reflect heat in the summer. That will mean savings in energy and monthly energy bills," he said.

"Recent technologies have brought energy efficiency to a new level. For instance, one recent development relating to windows is the low emissivity (low-E) coating. This clear coating changes the way a window reflects radiant heat into a room. High quality windows are available with low-E surface coatings."

When shopping for energy-efficient doors, the customer may want to consider a wood entry door. Specially laminated wood doors are available that stay straight and weather-tight year after year. Natural wood frames also can be made water-repellent.

SLIP SLIDIN' AWAY - While making a batch of cookies for my family, I accidentally discovered a helpful tip. I used a cup to measure the oil for the recipe. After adding the oil to the other ingredients, I used the same cup to measure the honey, and it just slipped right out without sticking. Since then, I've found that if I rub a little oil in my measuring cup, sticky liquids such as honey, molasses and corn syrup slip out easily. Lydia C., Myrtle Beach, S.C.

place systems can be installed in any home, and one gas-fueled fireplace doesn't even require a chimney. The Golden Warm, a direct-vent fireplace, requires only a small vent to the outside and can be installed on any exterior wall. Homeowners can have a fireplace in locations, such as under a window or in a basement family room, that would not be possible with traditional units.

New technology also permits the homeowner to improve the efficiency of an existing open fireplace. Recent studies have documented the extreme ineffiency of open fireplaces. They exhaust huge quanties of air up the flue, resulting in drafts that pull additional heat out of the home. These studies place the efficiency of an open fireplace at only 5 to 6 percent. The homeowner can dramatically increase the efficiency of an existing open fireplace by installing a gas-fueled or wood-burning fireplace insert. Inserts fill the existing fireplace open-ing and connect to the existing flue.

Wood-burning fireplace inserts use a catalytic combustion system, ensuring clean burning and 78-percent efficiency. A fan provides natural convection heating and a thermostatic control ensures steady, even heat. Gas-fueled inserts offer the added convenience of a remote control for the ultimate in hassle-free fireplace enjoyment.

Redecorate For Less With Do-It-Yourself Framing

Using a handy magnetic display board, choose the perfect combination of mat and frame for the art.

ssemble your frame on The Great Frame Up's patented workbench system while a technician cuts the glass and mats.

After the technician sets the glass in your frame, clean the glass and insert the mats and the print.

Apply the finishing touchesscrew in eyelets, and attach hanging wire-and the piece is complete.

For people redecorating their homes on a limited hudget, do-ityourself picture framing is a cost-effective and fun way to breathe new life into an old decor.

"Art you frame yourself is a re-markably inexpensive way to change the look and feel of a room," according to David Klitzky, president of The Great Frame Up, a nationwide system of do-it-yourself and custom framing stores. "Instead of buying new furniture, carpet, drapes, etc., and spend-ing thousands of dollars, many of our customers transform their homes with art they frame themselves at a fraction of the cost."

"An inexpensive piece of furniture will always look inexpensive," said Klitzky, "but an inexpensive art print can be framed to look like a masterpiece. With a few simple guidelines, do-it-yourself framers can create wonderful works of art and save up to 30 percent off custom framing prices." Klitzky recommends the following tips for do-it-yourselfers: Frame for the art, not its surroundings. "Trying too hard to match your home's decor can make the art look mediocre. If your framing treatment complements the art, it will look good anywhere. Mats should highlight colors or textures in the art without drawing attention to themselves.

Don't let the frame or the mats overwhelm the art. "Use a simple frame for delicate art, and a larger, more complex one for bolder prints. Make mats about twice the width of your frame." Keep space between the art and the glass. "Contact with glass can cause mildew to form on the print. Use mats or spacers to keep at least 1/4 inch between the art and the glass.

Frame to preserve. "If the art will be hung in a sunny room, use ultraviolet-blocking glass if you want to preserve valuable art. Consider plexiglass if the art will hang in a child's room or a well-trafficked area. If cost is a factor, regular glass will do the job too."

Your local Great Frame Up can give you more practical tips for fram-ing your own art. "With a little help," said David Klitzky, "anyone can be-come a 'part of the art' by framing it themselves."

A Kitchen Recycling Center With Pizzazz!

Recycling is fast becoming a way of life for families concerned about the environment. And to help the process, Whirlpool home economists suggest installing a simple home recycling center. Since most household trash is generated in the kitchen, this is probably the most logical and convenient location for separation and storage of recyclables. Including a trash compactor to compress and store both recyclable and non-recyclable household waste is another good idea. It saves space and time, hides unsightly stored trash, and makes transporting trash—to the curb or the local collection site—a whole lot easier and cleaner.

Do you remember when the 3-Rs stood for reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic? Not anymore. In the 1990s, they refer to reduce, reuse and recycle. Waste reduction, planned reuse of items and recycling have become a way of life for many families who are concerned about the environment.

"But, today, few homes have a planned space for recycling, so it requires some creativity to install the needed storage bins," comment home economists from Whirlpool Corporation. They point out that most household trash is generated in the kitchen, making it the most logical and convenient spot for separation and storage of recyclables.

Here are their suggestions for finding kitchen space to add a recycling center: extend an existing counter and cabinet area; remove a little-used cabinet: if the kitchen is wide enough, add a peninsula or install an island.

Once you've made space, decide what should be in your recycling center—and how to incorporate it with style and pizzazz.

Whirlpool home economists suggest using a bin that has three or four separate compartments (such as the Rev-A-Shelf Company design shown in the photo) and fit it into a base cabinet. Use the bin compartments for sorting materials—typically glass, plastics, paper or aluminum—being recycled in your local area. Because most storage bins have limited capacity, Whirlpool home economists suggest including a trash compactor in the recycling center.

Throughout the week, the compactor compresses and stores household waste that is not recyclable, resulting in only one disposable bag of trash for a typical family of four. Also, use the compactor to reduce the bulk of cans, food cartons and plastic jugs, before storing them, to increase bin capacity.

Whirlpool trash compactors also offer optional reusable bins that can be used to sort and compact recyclables. These are especially handy for materials such as glass, which can't be handled easily after compacting. After removing the compactor bag that collects non-recyclable trash, put the reusable bin into the compactor drawer. Run the appliance to crush the container's contents, then return the bin to the storage center to collect additional material. When the container is full, transfer compacted recyclables into a bag or empty the reusable bin at the recycling center.

"There's little question that a family is more motivated to separate trash for recycling when it's made convenient for them. In addition, having a recycling center right where trash is generated is a reminder not to throw away items that can be recovered and recycled," conclude Whirlpool home economists.

Is your house lucky or unlucky?

If you're feeling low, under the weather or plain miserable, maybe you should blame it on the house. The Chinese believe that where we live affects us much more than we realize.

Mr. Lau Chi-leung is one of a dwindling number of experts who advise everyone—from small homeowners to large corporations—on the dying art of geomancy.

Feng-shui, as the Chinese call it, is followed all over the Far East, and practitioners are even flown to Europe and America for consultations.

They work on an old belief that energy flowing through the earth can affect your health and prosperity depending on which way your home faces, how you arrange your furniture, and even the color you paint the walls.

In the West it is dismissed as superstition. In Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia and Taiwan, banks, department stores and skyscrapers are carefully sited to ensure good feng-shui.

Sharp-eyed visitors to Hong Kong ask, for instance, why rows of hexagonal mirrors hang in the windows of the Government Legal Department. They have been put there by clerks, lawyers and administrators to bounce back bad feng-shui beamed from the mirror glass of the American Consulate across the road.

Feng-shui—literally, wind-water—is taken very seriously. When the giant Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank underwent redevelopment, the board took no chances that good fortune might slip by and sent for a feng-shui man to supervise the removal of two huge bronze lions flanking the main entrance.

There were even stories blaming the mysterious death of martial arts movie star Bruce Lee on bad feng-shui. Gossip arose when the mirror a feng-shui man advised him to hang from a tree was blown down on the night of his death.

All the Chinese emperors' palaces, the Great Wall and imperial buildings like many of today's high-rise blocks were built to harmonize with the earth's hidden energy flow.

"Socially, my colleagues dismiss it as old-fashioned nonsense," says a Kowloon property developer. "Privately, they would think twice before inviting bad luck."

One of the principles of good fengshui is never to have the front and back doors of a building in line with each other. Feng-shui is also supposed to circulate freely round each room, without sharp-cornered furniture to block its path.

A huge council block of high-rise apartments in Singapore had to be altered, at enormous cost, because front doors faced each other across the landings. Graves, especially, have to be sited properly. Until the right plot becomes vacant, hundreds of bodies in Hong Kong are temporarily stored in the House of the Dead, run by a local hospital.

Living in the right place at the right time means balancing the Yin and Yang forces. Picking a good site to build is rather like an acupuncturist selecting the correct energy spot on the body with his needle.

When there is any doubt, the fengshui expert, with his wooden box compass marked with 34 concentric circles, is called to survey the site.

A company may find that business is bad, but moving premises is out of the question. In such cases, rearranging the furniture or moving the doors is often the answer.

Visitors to Hong Kong Television have to use a side door because the main entrance was sealed by a fengshui consultant.

Hills, streams, woods and fields all have a bearing on good fortune, they claim. Colors are important, too--red for happiness and prosperity, yellow for joy, green for peace and quiet. And, because you can be affected for good or bad wherever you live, geomancers have found their services required all over the world.

Ancient wisdom, or old-fashioned nonsense—millions have sworn by it for centuries.

Ideally, a house should be built according to certain rules to ensure health and prosperity:

Good Luck

The living room should be in the center of the house, with the kitchen facing east or south.

There should be a main road to the west and, if possible, an open space to the south.

Build on high ground with trees to the northwest to ensure family happiness. Hilly or high land to the north wards off bad influences. The house itself should face south, preferably with open views toward a stream or the sea.

Bad Luck

Avoid living south of a graveyard, at the end of a narrow street, on a Yshaped road junction, or in a valley.

A big tree directly in front of the main door will block the entry of wealth. A pool or garden pond on the west side of the house may have a similar effect.

A back door in line with the front door means that good fortune does not remain for long.

Try fine lattice for airy elegance

Probably the easiest way to add a touch of elegance, a note of class, a decorative feeling to any yard or outdoor living area, is to use some lattice.

With its airy classic look, lattice provides the ideal background for foliage and flowers and for summer living, whether you are entertaining or just relaxing with the family. And it is so adaptable. Painted in the traditional white or in soft colors, it lends a formal atmosphere to a traditional garden or terrace. Left unpainted to weather to a silver gray, or stained in light transparent tones, it fits the mood of more casual or rustic settings. Given assertive shapes and bold, decorative colors, it brings sharp geometric accents to contemporary decks and patios.

But lattice is not merely a decorative material. For all its lightness and elegance, it is both strong and practical. It provides one of the most effective screens against both wind and harsh sunlight. It offers a highly effective measure of privacy while avoiding the unneighborly barrier of a solid fence or wall. It provides attractive support for flowering vines, climbing roses and floral boxes and baskets.

Little wonder, then, that lattice is enjoying a resurgence of popularity. Even ten years ago, if you wanted to install some lattice in your home or yard, you had to have it made or build it yourself from strips of lath. Now machine-made lattice is available at building material dealers and home centers in every part of the country.

Many homeowners, however, have been greatly frustrated when they went out to buy lattice for their home project. Much of the commercial lattice advertised as a weekend special, at a bargain price, is completely unsuitable for use where a good finished appearance is required and long service desired. It has been made down to a price using low-grade wood, with open knots and splits, poorly fastened and flimsy. It might be acceptable where it will be mostly concealed or where appearance is not a factor, but not where there is any pride in the home or yard.

A good-looking lattice project demands well made lattice, built from quality lumber with no structural defects, cut into clean, uniform lath, carefully and accurately assembled. Good lattice is precisely fastened at every intersection and the entire assembly reinforced with double fastenings around the perimeter and adhesive throughout the panel area. Building lattice would be a forbidding task for most homeowners. There are very few manufacturers

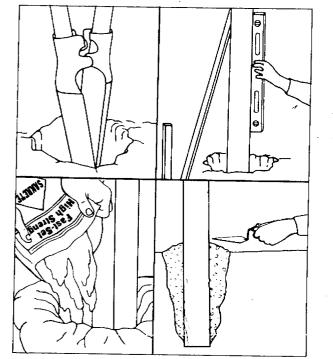

There are very few manufacturers of lattice who devote much time or attention to high-quality wood lattice. A major exception is an Oregon company which manufactures fine wood lattice in western red cedar, redwood, pine and treated softwood, in a variety of sizes, thickness and styles. Sold in most regions of the country, this Woodway brand lattice is made from carefully graded lumber to exacting production standards and is the choice of better builders and contractors everywhere.

tors everywhere. Woodway lattice is made for use in those places in the home, garden or outdoor living area where good finished appearance is important and durability a concern. It is available in two grades: the highest grade uses clear, almost unblemished wood; the other uses a mixture of clear lath with other that have small, tight knots and other minor imperfections.

Each sheet is assembled on precision equipment, with weather-resistant glues applied in strips down the length and a heavy rust-resisting staple at each intersection, driven diagonally for maximum holding power. The lath joints around all sides of the sheet are double-stapled to minimize possibility of damage in handling. The completed sheet of lattice is surprisingly rigid and can be cut anywhere without danger of lath breakage or separation. Each Woodway lattice is labeled as a mark of quality, and is better built than even that made by a skilled carpenter.

The manufacturers of this fine lattice, the LWO Corporation of Portland, Oregon, offer their top grades in both diagonal and square patterns, in both privacy (1½ in.) or open (2½ in.) spacing, and in two thicknesses.

For dressing up the edges of the lattice panels, or helping to connect them or install them in framed assemblies, Woodway labeled cap and divider mouldings, in several dimensions, are generally available where the lattice is sold. They are precision machined from the same high grade of woods, to assure a truly fine finished project.

Erecting a basketball goal is easier than you may think. To make sure the goal will withstand many seasons of play, keep these tips in mind. First, make sure the hole is deep and wide enough for the post, that is two to three feet deep and six inches wider than the post. Use a level to check the positioning of the post and a fast-setting quality concrete like Sakrete Fast-Set High Strength Concrete to achieve optimum results. Finally, make a mound of concrete around the post to prevent the collection of water.

It's the season to enjoy the great outdoors—and what better way to do that than "shooting a few hoops" in your own backyard. A new basketball goal can provide year-round entertainment and exercise for you and the kids. And putting a goal up is a lot easier than you may think. To make sure the goal can withstand even the toughest Michael Jordan dunks and the ravages of the elements, here are a few tips to keep in mind.

When securing the backboard support post, there are two things you should pay close attention to: one, that you place the post exactly where you want it; and two, that the anchoring will adequately support your post. (Heavy anchoring is needed to crect basketball backboard posts, swing sets and similar projects. Light anchoring is recommended for mail boxes and fences. The difference between heavy and light anchoring is the depth of the hole and the amount of concrete used to secure the post.) It is also important to choose a concrete mix that is strong and durable like those made by Sakrete.

When you're ready to get started, first mark the spot where the post will be placed. Use the width of the post to determine the size of the hole. For heavy anchoring projects like this, the hole should be at least two feet deep and six inches wider than the post. For example, if the post is four inches wide, the hole should be two to three feet deep and 10 inches wide. Use post diggers to prepare the hole, taking As you pour the concrete, make a mound around your post to prevent the collection of water. Your post should be completely set within three hours. The set time can be regulated by using hot or cold water, cold water for slower setting, hot for faster results.

Do-it-yourself projects like this are easier today because manufacturers are providing top-quality products that can be used quickly and easily. Keep this in mind when choosing your concrete mix. For example, Sakrete Fast-Set requires no pre-mixing. Just pour the water directly into the hole then follow with the mix (check package for exact amounts.)

With the convenience and strength of products like this, a project that used to take a whole weekend can be done better in one day. With just a few hours of work this morning, you could he practicing for the NBA this afternoon.

care not to disturb any underground power of telephone cables. Place the post in the hole and use a level to check placement.

Once you've placed the post, fill in the hole with concrete. Use a fast-setting concrete such as Sakrete Fast-Set High Strength Concrete from American Stone-Mix for optimum results. Sakrete Fast-Set begins to set within five minutes so there is no need to brace your post. This fast action also gives more precision to the placement of your post and allows for same day use.

There's More To It Than PAINTAND BRUSH

Radio Show (NU)—Painting really has been revolutionized in recent years. It's more than brushes and tinted paint—

By Jeff Keller

and some of the newer entries have taken environmental issues into consideration.

Traditional kinds of brushes are still around, but there's an addition to the group, the 3M NewStroke snap-off brush. It comes in a multi-pack, and you snap off each brush as you need it. The entire handle is made from recycled materials, eliminating the plastic/wood/metal found on conventional brushes. Each brush also performs as a "better" quality brush at a reasonable price.

Rollers include the conventional as well as a V-shaped item for corners. A companion roller to the above-mentioned brush can be used on all surfaces. When you're using latex, you can clean this roller thoroughly in less than one minute with less than three gallons of water. Power painting tools include hand pumps and electronic models (which are noisy). There are two kinds of spray-painting tools. One uses compressed air to project paint onto a surface. The other is an airless sprayer that pumps liquid paint through a spray gun at high pressure to create a denser, more directed mist.

In the bucket, probably the most interesting new entry is the Glidden Spred 2000. According to the company, this is the first conventional interior latex paint in the United States that does not contain petroleum-based solvents.

Petroleum-based solvents in most conventional latex and oil-based paints contribute to the strong odor usually associated with painting. The odor of Glidden's product is virtually non-existent.

Finally, if you are looking to take paint off instead of put it on, Safest Stripper paint and varnish remover is water-based. This formula successfully eliminates methylene chloride, a suspected human carcinogen, and solvents.

(NU)—Which paint should I use to paint the outside of my house latex or oil?

I've heard that question often and have these tips:

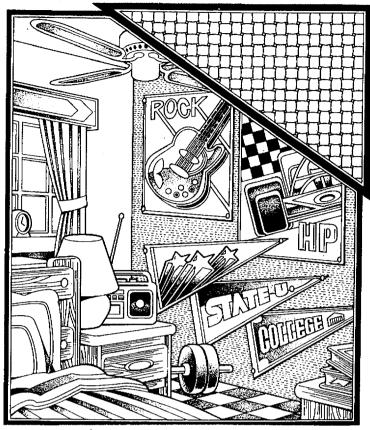

- New home—not previously painted. Coat of exterior latex primer, top coated with a quality latex-based house paint. The blister-resistant properties of a latex make it ideal for this application.
- Previously painted surface, where the surface is free of peeling, cracking, flaking or mildew. One or two coats of a quality latex or oilbased paint.
- Previously painted surfaces, especially on older houses, showing the following surface , conditions, require special treatment:

Cracking and flaking is caused by stress in paint film that is greater than film strength. This develops by expansion and contraction. Larger cracks result in eventual flaking. When you begin to work on these surfaces, remove all flaking paint. Sand areas smooth with quality sandpaper. 3M is one of the best choices. Also use proper cye protection and re-pirators when preparing the surface and painting. 3M also has these items for the do-it-yourselfer.

Peeling is caused by excess moisture buildup that moves to the surface when heated by the sun. Find sources of excess moisture and correct before painting. Scrape all peeling paint, then sand the surface. Apply a latex primer. Finish with a top coat of quality latex or oil.

Checking and crumbling are caused by temperature changes. Checking occurs when paint in upper coats shows fine breaks without penetrating to the wood. Crumbling results when moisture penetrates into the tiny cracks, causing small particles of the coating to lose adhesion and fall away. Remove damaged paint. Sand smooth. Apply one coat of latex primer followed by one top coat of quality latex or oil.

Sometimes these conditions require masking to protect windows and other surfaces. Use a quality painter's masking tape. Scotch brand is one that is often recommended by professional painters.

Tackable wall panels give kids something to hang onto

As kids pay tribute to their favorite rock, movie and sports stars, moms and dads watch as the walls of their children's bedrooms become inundated with signs of adoration. Today's stars quickly become yesterday's heroes. Old posters are torn down and replaced with newer memorabilia, leaving unsightly marks, chipped paint and damaged walls.

An easy and environmentally friendly solution to this home improvement dilemma is tackable Burlap Panels by the Homasote Company. These decorative panels, composed of natural, heavyweight jute fabric laminated to Homasote fiber board, can be painted to match any decor. Burlap Panels can be used on one wall as an accent or on multiple walls, providing kids with a tackable surface to put up and take down as many posters and photographs as they want without damaging dad's paint job. Burlap Panels are also suitable for family rooms, finished basements and home offices.

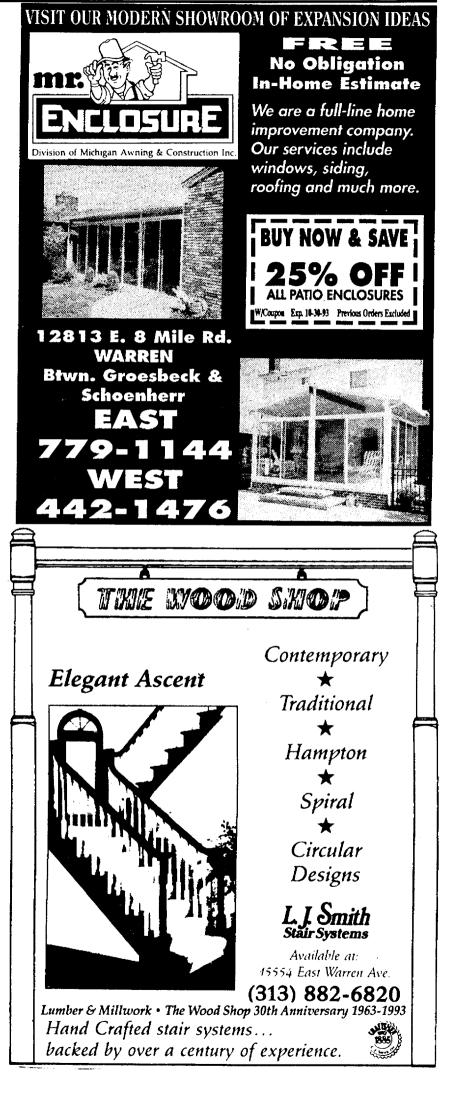

Manufactured using 100 percent post-consumer newsprint, Homasote fiber board is environmentally safe, free of asbestos and formaldehyde additives. And since kids rank the environment as the issue that matters most to them, according to Newsweek, they'll be happy to know, with Burlap Panels on their walls, they are contributing to a better environment.

tributing to a better environment. These 4x8 Burlap Panels are available at most local lumber yards. Any do-ityourselfer who is comfortable installing paneling will find this an easy project. For those who do not consider themselves handy, however, it's a good idea to consult a reputable home improvement contractor for installation help.

Extend the life of Oriental rugs with the right padding

Homeowners often invest thousands of dollars in original Oriental rugs, only to lay them on budget carpet pads.

"The result — the wrong padding can make the most valuable Oriental rug feel like the cheapest broadloom carpeting underfoot and does not adequately protect the rug from wear," says Gregory Hites, consumer advisor with Arthur T. "Most people think of padding for its slip-resistance, but quality padding holds up in high-traffic areas to prevent friction between rug fibers and floor, allows air to circulate and enhances the luxurious feeling that comes only from walking barefoot on the natural wool fibers of an Oriental rug," says Hites, a second-generation Oriental rug professional. "It is a mistake to use wall-to-wall carpet padding with an Oriental rug.

(NU)—If you want more living space in your house, one of the least expensive ways to add a room is building a redwood deck.

A well-designed deck can be a cozy living room, a sunny breakfast spot or a play area for the kids, suggests the California Redwood Association.

The trick is in the design.

First, decide on the basic features. If you're a sun lover, you'll want plenty of open space, preferably exposed to the southern sky. If you want privacy, you may want to use trees and shrubs or a redwood screen.

Safety should be a top priority, especially when children will be using the deck. Rails that a child cannot slip through and gates at the tops of stairways are essential.

Next, consider the best ways to make the deck blend with the architecture of your home and the surrounding landscape. A simple design may fit best with a modern building, while more ornate features may be better for an older structure.

In either case, redwood can do the job admirably. Its cinnamon-red color has a natural beauty that will enhance the atmosphere of your new outdoor room. Redwood is one of the most stable woods. It is easy to work with and highly resistant to decay and insects. Its open-cell structure holds a finish well.

Be Creative Once you've selected the basics for your deck, it's time to move on to the amenities. This is where you can put your imagination to work, says the association. Here are some ideas:

Photograph courtesy of News USA

- Give a deck an exotic feeling with redwood planters, lattices and screens surrounded by greenery and flowers. Overhead trellises further add to the comfort and coziness.
- Use split levels to make the deck flow and create the sense of having several rooms. One area can be a children's playroom, one a dining area and another a family room.
- Build a table and benches right into the deck, then add a barbecue grill, cabinet and window to the kitchen.
- Install a hot tub. Add subtle lighting for nighttime use and a plastic or canvas roof to provide protection from the elements.

When you're finished creating and building your deck, you might be a candidate for the redwood deck design contest sponsored annually by the association and Home Mechanix magazine. Winners receive cash prizes and have photos of their decks published.

Contesi entry blanks are free. Write California Redwood Association, Dept. NU, 405 Enfrente Drive, Suite 200, Novato, CA 94949. Or call 1-415-382-0662.

Matching Doors To Decor

Homeowners, designers and decorators are learning that the doors of a home are an integral part of the total decorating scheme. Today, doors are much more than just functional.

They enhance the appearance and style of a home and, at the same time, they help increase the home's value. Through every room in the home, doors are highly visible and a reflection of the owner's taste.

They create an impression. They can add to the look of a room or, for that matter, the entire house. This suggests that wise homeowners may want to choose a doorway with the same care and thought that goes into the purchase of a piece of fine furniture.

Keep in mind that you do not replace doors very often. So you will want to make the right choice when you do.

The average home has upwards of 20 interior doors. Obviously, they deserve attention and planning in their
