

Detroit police chief addresses Pointe Rotary, vows safe city

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

"She must have the same sense of humor I do," said Detroit police chief Isaiah "Ike" McKinnon, recalling his interview with a smiling Nancy Kerrigan after the assault against her at Cobo Arena in January.

McKinnon told the Sunrise chapter of the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club Tuesday morning that being shot at eight times during the 1967 Detroit riots tested his sense of humor.

"I thought that I could be doing something else," he said, "but it was also a test of sticking to something."

McKinnon joined the police force in 1965. Among the Detroit officers he served under were current Park police chief Richard Caretti and current City police chief Bruce Kennedy. In 1968, McKinnon chased a car theft suspect into an apartment, which happened to be the headquarters of Detroit's Black Panthers. His voice cracked as he pointed his gun at the armed Black Panthers and led the suspect out of the apartment.

"I thought I was going to be shot," he said. "The Black Panthers had killed a police oflicer a month earlier." McKinnon began to laugh as he led the suspect away.

"I was just happy to be alive," he said.

McKinnon eventually left the force to pursue graduate work at Michigan State University. He was teaching at Wayne State University and then the University of Detroit when then-candidate Dennis Archer asked him to head the security force for Archer's mayoral campaign.

"As we went around the city during the campaign, the underlying theme was crime," McKinnon said. "We needed to make Detroit safe, for the citizens and those who visit the city."

There will be about 400 more officers on patrol, McKinnon estimates.

"The attitude is beginning to change," he said. "People will probably give us until this summer to notice the change."

He cited the videotaped incident in front of the Omni Hotel during the 1991 fireworks that hurt Detroit's image, but McKinnon also mentioned the acclaim the police force has received in the handling of the Kerrigan beating.

"It was a good test to show what we have," he said.

Vernier school doomed

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Despite two alumni on the council, the Village of Grosse Pointe Shores voted unanimously last week to resolve a 30-year dilemma and raze the Vernier school.

"It is not with pleasure that this vote was taken," said village president John Huetteman III, a former student at the school.

The vote came two weeks after the deadline expired for any group to raise nearly $2 million for the renovation and maintenance of the 78-year-old building.

"People around this table have had to make tough decisions," said councilmember Barbara Willett, chairman of the municipal buildings committee. "I commend the historical society for raising consciousness about the school, but tonight is the night to make a decision."

Last October, the Shores set conditions and gave the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, or any other group, until Feb. 1 to come up with the funds and a proposed use for the Albert Kahn-designed building, which has remained largely unused for the past 30 years.

"There's so little left in Grosse Pointe of a historical nature," said Mason Ferry, vice president of preservation for the historical society. "We would like to see all of the Pointes do a 180-degree turn and assist in preservation. (Saving the Vernier school) could be a monument to foresight in the future."

Historical society member Mary Ann LaHood asked the Shores council for more time.

"I'm asking for your patience," she said. "Funds are available. It just takes time."

"We've taken a lot of time and money and searched out every conceivable way to preserve this building," Huetteman responded. "The building hasn't been taken care of, and we're not proud of that. But we would be fiscally irresponsible to spend $1.5 million of our taxpayers' money restoring it."

The historical society called the conditions set by the Shores too restrictive.

"There could be historical grants to help preserve it if we had control or a long-term agreement," Ferry said.

Demolition costs are estimated at $85,000, with an additional $12,000 outlay for asbestos removal. The target date to complete demolition is June 30.

Council member James Wright said that when he was a member of the Shores planning commission in 1960, bids were sought to see if the school could be put on rollers and attached to the village's administrative building.

The Shores hopes to save some of the tiling and brick — to be used in other municipal buildings in the community — as well as salvaging the school's bell.

The Shores plans to leave the property vacant.

Pointers weigh impact of pay to play athletics

By Kathleen Ryan
Staff Writer

Reforms in school financing have forced many school districts to take a close look at budget appropriations.

And the programs that usually come under the closest scrutiny and are usually the ones to feel the first cuts are sports and other extracurricular programs.

In order to avoid eliminating these activities, some school districts have gone to a pay to play system, which simply means if a student wants to play, a student must pay a fee to do so.

Chris Fenton, assistant school superintendent for business affairs for the Grosse Pointe public schools, said that out of 701 school districts in the state, 119 have some form of pay to play, and the number is growing.

With those figures in mind, the Grosse Pointe South Mothers' Club and Booster Club hosted a joint meeting to discuss the ramifications of pay to play on high school athletic programs in Grosse Pointe.

Booster Club president Tom Recht does not foresee a fee for sports in the immediate future, but remains cautious.

"We don't know what is happening down the road with school financing," he said. "But

Board of education meetings will be broadcast on cable

By Kathleen Ryan
Staff Writer

There's a new addition to the Tuesday evening TV line-up.

Tapes of the Monday night meetings of the Grosse Pointe board of education will be broadcast by Grosse Pointe Cable, Channel 20, on Tuesdays from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

"This has been a long time coming," said Cindy Pangborn of Grosse Pointe Farms and long-time advocate of broadcasting board meetings. "I've been after the board for three years."

The board of education had been discussing the possibility of broadcasting the meetings live, but had not been able to work through some technical difficulties, such as equipment and lighting problems.

Pangborn arranged for a

Wayne State University student to tape the meetings, at no cost, utilizing the sound equipment already in place for the board meetings, which are held in the Wicking Library at Grosse Pointe South High School.

School superintendent Ed Shine said the school system had been investigating the possibility of broadcasting the meetings live for some time.

"Our preference would be to have live broadcasts," Shine said. "But we didn't have money budgeted for this, and would have to take money from fund equity in order to purchase camera equipment."

Estimates of the cost of camera equipment have run from $60,000 to $80,000, depending on the number of cameras purchased, Shine said.

Pointers to get some good news on assessments

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

In the next few days Grosse Pointers will be receiving their 1994 property assessments, and for the most part they should be pleased with the outcome.

This year's assessments compare very favorably with last year's, which was the first levy in two years, several Pointe assessors said.

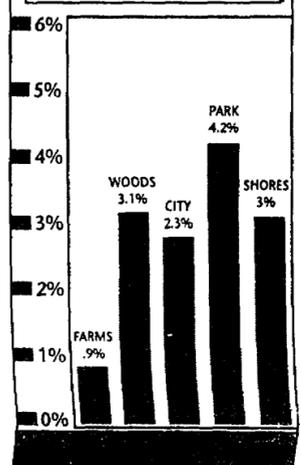

"Last year's assessment was the first one after a two-year freeze in property assessments," said Woods assessor Bill Knapp. "So for two years, people's assessments didn't go up. What people forget is that after a freeze comes a thaw. So in 1993, Grosse Pointers saw unusually large assessment increases. In the Woods it was about 6.8 percent on average. This year, Woods residents can expect an increase of about 3 percent."

That 3 percent is considerably smaller than the 4.26 percent increase reported by the Detroit Free Press, Knapp said. The Free Press incorrectly overestimated the rates of increase in assessments for the Farms as well, said Wayne County assessor Tim O'Donnell, who filled in in the Farms because their assessor left government service and the city could not hire another one in time for the 1994 assessments.

"The figures reported for the Farms were the most inaccurate ones I saw in last week's Free Press article," said O'Donnell. "When Farms residents learn the true change in their assessments this year, they should be very pleased. The Free Press reported that Farms assessments went up on average by 4.17 percent. That's not true. Farms assessments went up by less than 1 percent on average. Some residents might even see their assessments go down. People by the lake might see assessments rise by about 4 percent, but that's very few houses when compared to the rest of the city."

Grosse Pointe Shores assessments, which were reported to have gone up by 4.22 percent, went up only about 3 percent overall, O'Donnell said. The Shores does not have a regular assessor, so the job falls to O'Donnell.

PROPERTY ASSESSMENT INCREASE 1994

"I can't say where the Free Press got its numbers," said O'Donnell. "My guess is that they received a preliminary report of assessments. But to the best of my knowledge, the figures reported for the Farms were the most inaccurate ones in the article."

City of Grosse Pointe manager Tom Kressbach said that according to figures left by vacationing city assessor Dennis Foran, City residents can expect their assessments to rise on an average of under 3 percent, which is what the Free Press reported. Park city manager Dale Krajniak also said that the Free Press figure of 4.22 percent is accurate.

Knapp said that the figures are a reflection of the marketplace. In the case of the Woods, the smaller, less-expensive homes have been selling well, while the larger, more expensive homes haven't been moving.

Assessments

"From what I've been able to determine, interest rates, which have been the lowest in years, have attracted a lot of first-time buyers to the housing market," Knapp said. "First-time buyers tend to start with the smaller houses."

O'Donnell agreed with Knapp's assessment and added that while metro Detroit's economy has begun to pick up, the past few years have been hard on house sales.

"Corporate belt tightening has been big news for quite a while," O'Donnell said. "When people feel insecure about their jobs, they don't 'trade up' in terms of homes. They tend to stay where they are. That means larger homes may stay on the market longer."

There is a limited market for expensive homes and the economy has really had an effect on that market, said O'Donnell.

The new assessments mean good news for taxpayers, said Grosse Pointe real estate agent Robert Edgar.

"I think it's good news for taxpayers anytime they see that their tax burden isn't going to increase a great deal," said Edgar. "Grosse Pointe's property values haven't gone down like those in California and New York. Grosse Pointe's stable home ownership doesn't always make it easy for assessors to get accurate market information."

"In the past, the assessed value of Grosse Pointe homes hasn't always been equal to half the true market value as it's supposed to be. I think Pointers will be very pleased with this year's assessments."

Connie Ausherman of Grosse Pointe Park won the Sanders Valentine's Day SWEETstakes.

Sweet reward for Park woman

"I just can't believe it" and "I can't get over this" are the words Connie Ausherman uttered again and again as she was presented Feb. 14 with the grand prize package from Sanders' Valentine's Day SWEETstakes at her home in Grosse Pointe Park.

Ausherman, a proud grandmother of 10 and longtime Sanders fan, just happened to enter her name for the SWEETstakes drawing last week while picking up a supply of fresh baked goods from the Sanders store located on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe.

"I didn't really even read the sign or know what I was registering for. I just filled out a form and dropped it in the box," said Ausherman. She was overjoyed when two employees from Utica-based Sanders Systems Inc. showed up at her door on Valentine's Day with a ruby and diamond necklace, a dozen long-stemmed roses and a heart-shaped box, made of chocolate and filled with Sanders' famous Meadownilk chocolate collection.

"You know, I once won a big chocolate bunny from the same Sanders store. I guess I'm just lucky," said Ausherman, blushing. "Maybe I should buy a lottery ticket!"

we felt it was important to discuss the issue and know what we could be facing."

Fenton told the audience that athletics accounts for 1.3 percent of the total school system budget.

"This year's budget for sports is $845,000," Fenton said. "But next year we are looking at an increase of $70,000 for state-mandated FICA costs."

Over 50 percent of students at both high schools participate in at least one sports program.

The high school athletic directors do not look forward to a pay to play system.

"Pay to play is probably better than the demise of an entire program," said Tom Gauerke, athletic director at Grosse Pointe North High School. "But not much."

Jo Lake, Gaurke's counterpart at South, agrees.

"In order to avoid a pay to play program, some districts have eliminated ninth-grade and junior varsity sports programs," Lake said. "Then the only students that play are on the varsity team. That drastically cuts into the number of students allowed to participate in sports."

Actually, the phrase "pay to play" is a misnomer, Lake said.

"Districts that had gone to pay to play programs soon ran into problems," she said. "Parents who had paid the fees demanded to know why the coaches weren't playing their child."

Many districts now offer a pay to participate program, where parents and students sign an actual contract that stipulates that there is no guarantee a child will be allowed to play.

And while that eliminates some problems, any kind of a fee option opens up a virtual Pandora's box of problems for athletic directors.

"Of course the most obvious question is what to charge in the first place," Lake said. "Do you charge more for a football player than a cross country runner?"

Gauerke also pointed out that most families already pay some costs for their student athlete.

"Any parent can tell you they already pay for their child to participate," he said. "The kids always need shoes, and there are always sweatsuits to buy and other incidentals. Most parents are paying considerable sums already."

Not only do parents pick up the tab for some equipment costs, they also must pay to watch their child play. Admission fees average about $3 per person. Gate receipts average about $65,000 per year, with that money going to the schools' general fund.

Booster clubs at both North and South raise funds for capital projects associated with the schools' sports programs.

For example, North Boosters recently contributed funds to improve the drainage system for the soccer field and installed a sprinkling system for the baseball infield.

The fundraising projects for both clubs are ongoing.

An annual swim-a-thon each March provides major funding for the North sports programs, said Terry Kasiborski, president of the North High Athletic Booster Club.

"Our student athletes collect pledges for each lap they swim," Kasiborski said. "Half of what each athlete collects goes to the Booster Club, the other half to the sport the athlete participates in. This is money the coach for that sport can use at his or her discretion, be it to buy sweats or use for tournament fees."

South Boosters' main fundraising event is the annual

The FYI item about German Olympic skater Jennifer Goolsbee, daughter of Roland and Rosemarie Goolsbee of Grosse Pointe Woods, should have said she graduated from Grosse Pointe North High School, then competed in many foreign countries and is 9th-ranked after European competition. To skate in the Olympics with here German partner, Hendryk Schamberger, she had to give up her U.S. citizenship. Only Schamberger is attending medical school in Germany, while Goolsbee plans to return to the United States and attend Wayne State University after the Olympics.

Cable show seeks to bring art to inner-city youths

An interview with John Prost, of Grosse Pointe Cable, and Gerald Levin, Orchards Children's Services CEO, regarding the need for the expansion of the arts community in the city of Detroit airs this week on Grosse Pointe Cable.

Orchards Children's Services is a non-profit, non-sectarian child welfare agency that has been providing new beginnings to children for more than 30 years through foster care placement services, adoption services, in-home services, residential treatment programs, and community outreach programs.

Orchards recognizes a growing need for the arts community to become more involved with the youth of Detroit. Inner city youth need exposure to all forms of art — dance, music, theater and sculpture — as a form of education and self expression.

Bringing the arts community to Detroit would help bring beauty into a child's life who has only known poverty and despair. Abused, abandoned, and neglected children often cannot benefit from traditional therapeutic interventions. These children almost always have negative feelings about their bodies and their abilities to succeed.

Orchards believes providing these children with the opportunities to dance, to act, and to create, can reverse the trend of these children becoming abusive adults.

Young Clothes: Tradition finds new home in Village

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Young Clothes, a Grosse Pointe shopping tradition on the Hill since the 1940s, has found new life in the store's Village site in the City of Grosse Pointe.

"We had the chance to move to the Village," said co-owner Mary Craparotta, explaining why the popular children's clothing shop was relocated. "The store here has more space, better parking and more retail stores in the area, so in October of 1992, we moved here from the Hill. I miss the Hill sometimes, though. It's more quaint and the Hill Days were a lot of fun."

Craparotta, her brother Joe and their mother Mary, have owned Young Clothes for the past four years. The store has been in the Pointes since the 1940s, and enjoys a loyal following among generations of Pointers.

However, the Young in Young Clothes refers to the age of the clientele, not the name of the store's original owner, Craparotta said.

"We are now getting a lot of business from the west side of town," said Craparotta. "I think the reason is that we have traditional 'nice' clothes that Grosse Pointers prefer. There aren't a lot of stores on that side of town that sell nice children's clothes, and the demand is there for it. We also sell fun play clothes that west-siders like."

Since her family purchased the store, they have broadened the inventory to meet the changing tastes of today's parents and youths. The day of children wearing their Sunday best a lot is gone, Craparotta said.

There are still occasions where little girls will get to wear dresses and little boys will put on their blazers, Craparotta added, but no store can stay in business selling just those kinds of clothes.

"The trend in children's clothing has been toward making clothes more fun," Craparotta said. "Take for example boy's clothing. For years boy's clothing was almost written off by manufacturers. Not much variety, and not much color, but now that has changed. Boy's clothing is very different now when compared with earlier generations."

Getting kids to come shopping isn't the chore it used to be either, said Craparotta. She has videos for kids to watch while their parents look around, and toys for them to play with.

"I have some little boys come in just to play with the toys," Craparotta said with a laugh. "I've noticed that the kids don't request our 'Barney' tapes as much as they used to, so that makes me think that Barney is on the way out. The new Disney dog character Spot seems to be getting very popular. He might be the next Barney."

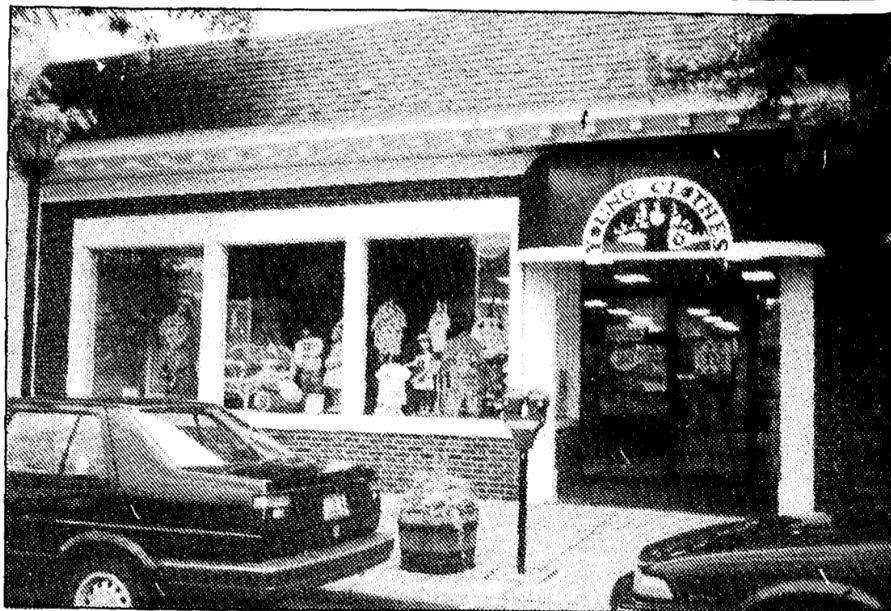

Another reason the store has remained successful for so long is that it has always maintained high levels of customer service. Customers get free gift wrapping for purchases over $10. The store makes free deliveries in the Pointes and Harper Woods.

They special order items and use UPS to deliver clothes all over the country. In a community with as many grandparents as Grosse Pointe, that's just good business, she said.

"Pointers don't want the most expensive or hippest clothes," Craparotta said. "They want good service and good clothes at a good price. They want clothes that will last a long time."

The store has girl's clothes up to pre-teen. Boys clothes go from infants to size 7. The average 6 year-old is a size 7, Craparotta said.

"It seems like a lot of babies are being born in Grosse Pointe," said Craparotta. "That means we expect to be busy for quite some time."

Young Clothes, long a tradition on the Hill, has found a home in the Village.

Investors have options to cut taxes

THE NEW TAX LAW AT A GLANCE

AREA AFFECTED	NEW LAW	INVESTMENT STRATEGY
Individual Income Tax Rates	Two new tax rates created: 36% for individuals with taxable income exceeding $115,000 ($140,000 if married); 39.6% after a 10% surtax on taxable income of more than $250,000 (individuals and couples) Effective Jan. 1, '93	Municipal bonds Tax-free mutual funds and unit trusts
Capital Gains	Maximum rate remains 28% on long-term gains; higher ordinary income tax rates make gains more attractive Effective Jan. 1, '93	Adjust portfolio to include long-term growth vehicles, such as stocks and annuities
Social Security Benefits	Portion of benefits potentially subject to tax increased to 85%, from 50%. Increase in maximum taxation thresholds from $25,000 for singles and $32,000 for couples to $34,000 for singles and $44,000 for couples Effective Jan. 1, '94	Move some investment dollars into tax-deferred investments, such as annuities
Retirement Plan Contributions	Compensation ceiling used to calculate employee's benefit decreased to $150,000 from $235,840 in 1993 Effective Jan. 1, '94	Supplement retirement savings with investments outside of plan: • Annuities • IRAs
Estates and Trusts	Maximum estate tax rate reinstated to 55%. Income from estates and trusts subject to higher rates of tax at lower levels of income Effective Jan. 1, '93	Gift appreciating assets to family members Establish an irrevocable life insurance trust or charitable remainder trust

Source: A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc.

"An investor who is in the 36 percent tax bracket with a municipal bond yielding 5 percent would have to find a taxable bond with a yield of 7.8 percent for an equivalent yield," O'Donoghue said. "Tax-free investments become a more important advantage to investors in higher tax brackets as tax rates rise."

Capital gains favor investing for growth

O'Donoghue also advises investors in the higher tax brackets to take advantage of the long-term capital gains rate by adjusting their investment strategies to include more long-term growth vehicles, such as stocks.

Since the maximum long-term capital gains tax is still 28 percent, such investors can reduce their tax burdens by taking advantage of the disparity between the long-term capital gains tax rate and the higher personal income tax rates.

"It's important to look not only at the investment's current income, but total return," O'Donoghue said.

With growth investments, investors may receive some current income and look for growth in the value of the investment over time. Since many growth companies pay little or no dividend and reinvest their profits in the company, investors may receive greater growth in value than in current income. When the investment is sold, the part of the investment that is subject to the capital gains tax is the growth portion. Investment interest and dividends are taxed at ordinary income tax rates.

"By including more growth investments in a portfolio rather than income-producing investments, the investor may benefit from long-term capital gains that will be taxed at a lower rate than the ordinary income tax rate," O'Donoghue said.

Since a long-term gain is considered a gain from the sale of capital assets (stocks, bonds, etc.) held for longer than one year, investors can benefit from the lower rate of a capital gain only if they hold the stock for longer than one year.

Maintain or increase your retirement contributions

Higher taxes always make tax-deferred investment vehicles more attractive to investors who need to reduce their tax burdens. Contributing to retirement plans such as profit-sharing, 401(k)s or simplified employee pensions (SEPs) provides investors with current tax benefits combined with the advantage of tax-deferred compounding.

Some upper-income earners affected by the new law will find that less may be contributed to their companies' retirement plans beginning in 1994. The new law caps the amount of an employee's earnings that can be taken into account when computing the individual's retirement plan contribution at $150,000, reduced from 1993's limit of $235,840.

"Even with the lower compensation limit, business owners should maximize retirement plan contributions as much as possible," Dow said. With any additional funds that can be put aside for retirement, Dow believes individuals should consider systematic investing outside their retirement plan through tax-deferred investments such as annuities.

"The most important thing is to maintain or increase the amount you invest for retirement," Dow said. "Don't just forego investing for retirement because you can't do all of it through a retirement plan."

Higher estate taxes increase benefits of lifetime gifting

The changes in the new law also mean an increase in the amount of tax imposed on certain estates.

"The reinstatement of a higher bracket for the taxation of estates means lifetime giving continues to be the simplest and most effective estate reduction technique," O'Donoghue said.

With lifetime giving, individuals may give away up to $10,000 (or $20,000 in conjunction with a spouse) per person per year to any number of individuals without being taxed on the amount given.

"The key is to know which assets to give away and which to hold," O'Donoghue said.

According to Dow, investors should give away rapidly appreciating securities to avoid paying estate taxes on future growth down the road. Hold on to securities that have already appreciated so that their cost bases for tax purposes is "stepped-up" to fair market value for your heirs.

"Although tax considerations are important, especially with the new law going into effect, it's only one factor that should be considered when deciding which investments make sense," O'Donoghue said. O'Donoghue advises investors to consider the investment's merit, the amount of risk the investor is comfortable with and how the investment fits into the investor's overall long-term financial plan.

Further discussion of strategies investors can use to combat the effects of the new tax law are outlined in a special issue of "Tax Saver," a publication of tax-saving strategies and investment advice published by A.G. Edwards & Sons. "Tax Saver" is available at no charge from the Detroit A.G. Edwards & Sons office, (313) 962-5525.

Grosse Pointe Dems meet their candidates

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

November may seem far away to most people, but not to the candidates who spoke at the Grosse Pointe Democratic Club meeting last week in the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church.

Senate candidate Carl Marlinga and 14th District congressional candidates Melvin Hollowell and Marie Farrell Donaldson spoke to the assembled Pointe Democrats about the need for change.

Hollowell, a Palmer Park resident, said that he was not satisfied with the condition of the 14th District, which includes parts of Detroit and about half of Grosse Pointe.

Hollowell spoke of the need of public officials, like 14th District Rep. John Conyers, to listen to constituents, and the need for coalitions that cross traditional race, sex and political lines.

"A politician today can't be a lone wolf and expect to get anything done," said Hollowell.

Donaldson talked of her 20 years of government service in the city of Detroit, and her expertise in providing constituent service.

"I will be there for you in Congress," Donaldson told the audience. "I will be the voice of the people in the district."

Marlinga, the evening's main speaker and a candidate to replace retiring Sen. Don Riegle, was late and admitted to going to the wrong church. But the crowd didn't seem to mind at they heard Marlinga's views on crime.

As Macomb County prosecutor for the past decade, Marlinga said he realized the seriousness of crime and the need to be tough with criminals. But he also told the crowd that he felt the best way to deal with crime was to provide programs like Headstart, programs that give the children of today the skills they need to participate fully in society.

It's the children who grow up without the social and academic skills that become criminals, he said, and by acting now, crime in the future can be reduced.

The Democratic primary which will determine who represents the party in November's senate and house races, will be held in August.

Woods alters city retirement plan

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

In an effort to bring the city's pension program in line with most private and public programs, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council last week, unanimously approved a change that would make it easier for those who have worked for the city to collect a pension.

"Under the old system, if someone worked for the city for a lot of years, but left the city before the age of 50, then that person lost his pension," said Woods comptroller Clifford Maison. "We have an employee who has worked for the city

since he was 19. He's now 43, and if he had to go to Iowa to take care of his sick parents, his 24 years would count for nothing. That's not how it is in the private sector, and that's why we changed it."

The old system was a real problem for workers, Maison said. It forced them to stay at their jobs, and give up better opportunities elsewhere. He was quick to point out that after 10 years, an employee is still not eligible for a full pension, only a partial pension. Workers must still put in the same number of years as they do now to collect a full pension.

Under the new system, any employee who works for the city for 10 years will be vested in the pension plan, Maison said. That means when they reach the age of 60, they will collect some part of their pension. Workers are fully vested in the plan when they reach age 50 and have 25 years of service.

"The cost to implement the change in the system is less than miniscule," said Maison. "The city's pension system is currently funded at a level of about 126 percent, and contains $22 million. The cost of this change is about $2,000 a year. That's nothing."

Public safety reports

Park police assist Detroit

Suspects wanted by Detroit police for several armed robberies were arrested Feb. 12 by Grosse Pointe Park police.

Park officers, monitoring Detroit police radio reports of suspects wanted for firing a gun and who were last seen going eastbound on Mack, spotted the suspects' car at 7:40 p.m. going southbound on Alter from Mack. They stopped the car at Kercheval and Alter, arrested the suspects without incident and turned them over to Detroit police. A revolver with six spent rounds was found in the car.

Farms teen cited for beer party

When police arrived at the home at 10:30 p.m., several teens were leaving the flat and beer cans littered the lawn. Inside the flat, several teens were drinking beer and many tried to flee when officers arrived.

The youth said his father was in Florida and that he couldn't prevent the other youths from entering his home and partying. Police said the youth had been warned about such parties in the past and was cited for violating the city's Open House Party ordinance.

Home burgled

A Grosse Pointe Park home in the 1200 block of Maryland was broken into sometime between 7:25 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Feb. 12 and many tools and a snowblower were stolen.

The thieves broke out a basement window and crawled into the house. A cordless drill and a large tool box were among the items taken.

Truck burgled for 4th time

A resident in the 1100 block of Wayburn reported his truck had been broken into sometime between 2 and 8 a.m. Feb. 14 — the fourth time the vehicle had been reported burglarized in recent months.

Young Clothes: Tradition finds new home in Village

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Young Clothes, a Grosse Pointe shopping tradition on the Hill since the 1940s, has found new life in the store's Village site in the City of Grosse Pointe.

"We had the chance to move to the Village," said co-owner Mary Craparotta, explaining why the popular children's clothing shop was relocated. "The store here has more space, better parking and more retail stores in the area, so in October of 1992, we moved here from the Hill. I miss the Hill sometimes, though. It's more quaint and the Hill Days were a lot of fun."

Craparotta, her brother Joe and their mother Mary, have owned Young Clothes for the past four years. The store has been in the Pointes since the 1940s, and enjoys a loyal following among generations of Pointers.

However, the Young in Young Clothes refers to the age of the clientele, not the name of the store's original owner, Craparotta said.

"We are now getting a lot of business from the west side of town," said Craparotta. "I think the reason is that we have traditional 'nice' clothes that Grosse Pointers prefer. There aren't a lot of stores on that side of town that sell nice children's clothes, and the demand is there for it. We also sell fun play clothes that west-siders like."

Since her family purchased the store, they have broadened the inventory to meet the changing tastes of today's parents and youths. The day of children wearing their Sunday best a lot is gone, Craparotta said.

There are still occasions where little girls will get to wear dresses and little boys will put on their blazers. Craparotta added, but no store can stay in business selling just those kinds of clothes.

"The trend in children's clothing has been toward making clothes more fun," Craparotta said. "Take for example boy's clothing. For years boy's clothing was almost written off by manufacturers. Not much variety, and not much color, but now that has changed. Boy's clothing is very different now when compared with earlier generations."

Getting kids to come shopping isn't the chore it used to be either, said Craparotta. She has videos for kids to watch while their parents look around, and toys for them to play with.

"I have some little boys come in just to play with the toys," Craparotta said with a laugh. "I've noticed that the kids don't request our 'Barney' tapes as much as they used to, so that makes me think that Barney is on the way out. The new Disney dog character Spot seems to be getting very popular. He might be the next Barney."

Another reason the store has remained successful for so long is that it has always maintained high levels of customer service. Customers get free gift wrapping for purchases over $10. The store makes free deliveries in the Pointes and Harper Woods.

They special order items and use UPS to deliver clothes all over the country. In a community with as many grandparents as Grosse Pointe, that's just good business, she said.

"Pointers don't want the most expensive or hippest clothes," Craparotta said. "They want good service and good clothes at a good price. They want clothes that will last a long time."

The store has girl's clothes up to pre-teen. Boys clothes go from infants to size 7. The average 6 year-old is a size 7, Craparotta said.

"It seems like a lot of babies are being born in Grosse Pointe," said Craparotta. "That means we expect to be busy for quite some time."

Young Clothes, long a tradition on the Hill, has found a home in the Village.

Investors have options to cut taxes

THE NEW TAX LAW AT A GLANCE

AREA AFFECTED	NEW LAW	INVESTMENT STRATEGY
Individual Income Tax Rates	Two new tax rates created: 36% for individuals with taxable income exceeding $115,000 ($140,000 if married); 39.6% after a 10% surtax on taxable income of more than $250,000 (individuals and couples) Effective Jan. 1, '93	Municipal bonds Tax-free mutual funds and unit trusts
Capital Gains	Maximum rate remains 28% on long-term gains; higher ordinary income tax rates make gains more attractive Effective Jan. 1, '93	Adjust portfolio to include long-term growth vehicles, such as stocks and annuities
Social Security Benefits	Portion of benefits potentially subject to tax increased to 85%, from 50%. Increase in maximum taxation thresholds from $25,000 for singles and $32,000 for couples to $34,000 for singles and $44,000 for couples Effective Jan. 1, '94	Move some investment dollars into tax-deferred investments, such as annuities
Retirement Plan Contributions	Compensation ceiling used to calculate employee's benefit decreased to $150,000 from $235,840 in 1993 Effective Jan. 1, '94	Supplement retirement savings with investments outside of plan: • Annuities • IRAs
Estates and Trusts	Maximum estate tax rate reinstated to 55%. Income from estates and trusts subject to higher rates of tax at lower levels of income Effective Jan. 1, '93	Gift appreciating assets to family members Establish an irrevocable life insurance trust or charitable remainder trust

Source: A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc.

"An investor who is in the 36 percent tax bracket with a municipal bond yielding 5 percent would have to find a taxable bond with a yield of 7.8 percent for an equivalent yield," O'Donoghue said. "Tax-free investments become a more important advantage to investors in higher tax brackets as tax rates rise."

Capital gains favor investing for growth

O'Donoghue also advises investors in the higher tax brackets to take advantage of the long-term capital gains rate by adjusting their investment strategies to include more long-term growth vehicles, such as stocks.

Since the maximum long-term capital gains tax is still 28 percent, such investors can reduce their tax burdens by taking advantage of the disparity between the long-term capital gains tax rate and the higher personal income tax rates.

"It's important to look not only at the investment's current income, but total return," O'Donoghue said.

With growth investments, investors may receive some current income and look for growth in the value of the investment over time. Since many growth companies pay little or no dividend and reinvest their profits in the company, investors may receive greater growth in value than in current income. When the investment is sold, the part of the investment that is subject to the capital gains tax is the growth portion. Investment interest and dividends are taxed at ordinary income tax rates.

"By including more growth investments in a portfolio rather than income-producing investments, the investor may benefit from long-term capital gains that will be taxed at a lower rate than the ordinary income tax rate," O'Donoghue said.

Since a long-term gain is considered a gain from the sale of capital assets (stocks, bonds, etc.) held for longer than one year, investors can benefit from the lower rate of a capital gain only if they hold the stock for longer than one year.

Maintain or increase your retirement contributions

Higher taxes always make tax-deferred investment vehicles more attractive to investors who need to reduce their tax burdens. Contributing to retirement plans such as profit-sharing, 401(k)s or simplified employee pensions (SEPs) provides investors with current tax benefits combined with the advantage of tax-deferred compounding.

Some upper-income earners affected by the new law will find that less may be contributed to their companies' retirement plans beginning in 1994. The new law caps the amount of an employee's earnings that can be taken into account when computing the individual's retirement plan contribution at $150,000, reduced from 1993's limit of $235,840.

"Even with the lower compensation limit, business owners should maximize retirement plan contributions as much as possible," Dow said. With any additional funds that can be put aside for retirement, Dow believes individuals should consider systematic investing outside their retirement plan through tax-deferred investments such as annuities.

"The most important thing is to maintain or increase the amount you invest for retirement," Dow said. "Don't just forego investing for retirement because you can't do all of it through a retirement plan."

Higher estate taxes increase benefits of lifetime gifting

The changes in the new law also mean an increase in the amount of tax imposed on certain estates.

"The reinstatement of a higher bracket for the taxation of estates means lifetime giving continues to be the simplest and most effective estate reduction technique," O'Donoghue said.

With lifetime giving, individuals may give away up to $10,000 (or $20,000 in conjunction with a spouse) per person per year to any number of individuals without being taxed on the amount given.

"The key is to know which assets to give away and which to hold," O'Donoghue said.

According to Dow, investors should give away rapidly appreciating securities to avoid paying estate taxes on future growth down the road. Hold on to securities that have already appreciated so that their cost bases for tax purposes is "stepped-up" to fair market value for your heirs.

"Although tax considerations are important, especially with the new law going into effect, it's only one factor that should be considered when deciding which investments make sense," O'Donoghue said. O'Donoghue advises investors to consider the investment's merit, the amount of risk the investor is comfortable with and how the investment fits into the investor's overall long-term financial plan.

Further discussion of strategies investors can use to combat the effects of the new tax law are outlined in a special issue of "Tax Saver," a publication of tax-saving strategies and investment advice published by A.G. Edwards & Sons. "Tax Saver" is available at no charge from the Detroit A.G. Edwards & Sons office, (313) 962-5525.

Grosse Pointe Dems meet their candidates

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

November may seem far away to most people, but not to the candidates who spoke at the Grosse Pointe Democratic Club meeting last week in the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church.

Senate candidate Carl Marlinga and 14th District congressional candidates Melvin Hollowell and Marie Farrell Donaldson spoke to the assembled Pointe Democrats about the need for change.

Hollowell, a Palmer Park resident, said that he was not satisfied with the condition of the 14th District, which includes parts of Detroit and about half of Grosse Pointe.

Hollowell spoke of the need of public officials, like 14th District Rep. John Conyers, to listen to constituents, and the need for coalitions that cross traditional race, sex and political lines.

"A politician today can't be a lone wolf and expect to get anything done," said Hollowell.

Donaldson talked of her 20 years of government service in the city of Detroit, and her expertise in providing constituent service.

Marlinga, the evening's main speaker and a candidate to replace retiring Sen. Don Riegler, was late and admitted to going to the wrong church. But the crowd didn't seem to mind at they heard Marlinga's views on crime.

As Macomb County prosecutor for the past decade, Marlinga said he realized the seriousness of crime and the need to be tough with criminals. But he also told the crowd that he felt the best way to deal with crime was to provide programs like Headstart, programs that give the children of today the skills they need to participate fully in society.

It's the children who grow up without the social and academic skills that become criminals, he said, and by acting now, crime in the future can be reduced.

The Democratic primary which will determine who represents the party in November's senate and house races, will be held in August.

Woods alters city retirement plan

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

In an effort to bring the city's pension program in line with most private and public programs, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council last week, unanimously approved a change that would make it easier for those who have worked for the city to collect a pension.

"Under the old system, if someone worked for the city for a lot of years, but left the city before the age of 50, then that person lost his pension," said Woods comptroller Clifford Maison. "We have an employee who has worked for the city

since he was 19. He's now 43, and if he had to go to Iowa to take care of his sick parents, his 24 years would count for nothing. That's not how it is in the private sector, and that's why we changed it."

The old system was a real problem for workers, Maison said. It forced them to stay at their jobs, and give up better opportunities elsewhere. He was quick to point out that after 10 years, an employee is still not eligible for a full pension, only a partial pension. Workers must still put in the same number of years as they do now to collect a full pension.

Under the new system, any employee who works for the city for 10 years will be vested in the pension plan, Maison said. That means when they reach the age of 60, they will collect some part of their pension. Workers are fully vested in the plan when they reach age 50 and have 25 years of service.

"The cost to implement the change in the system is less than miniscule," said Maison. "The city's pension system is currently funded at a level of about 126 percent, and contains $22 million. The cost of this change is about $2,000 a year. That's nothing."

Public safety reports

Park police assist Detroit

Suspects wanted by Detroit police for several armed robberies were arrested Feb. 12 by Grosse Pointe Park police.

Park officers, monitoring Detroit police radio reports of suspects wanted for firing a gun and who were last seen going eastbound on Mack, spotted the suspects' car at 7:40 p.m. going southbound on Alter from Mack. They stopped the car at Kercheval and Alter, arrested the suspects without incident and turned them over to Detroit police. A revolver with six spent rounds was found in the car.

Farms teen cited for beer party

When police arrived at the home at 10:30 p.m., several teens were leaving the flat and beer cans littered the lawn. Inside the flat, several teens were drinking beer and many tried to flee when officers arrived.

The youth said his father was in Florida and that he couldn't prevent the other youths from entering his home and partying. Police said the youth had been warned about such parties in the past and was cited for violating the city's Open House Party ordinance.

Home burgled

A Grosse Pointe Park home in the 1200 block of Maryland was broken into sometime between 7:25 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Feb. 12 and many tools and a snowblower were stolen.

The thieves broke out a basement window and crawled into the house. A cordless drill and a large tool box were among the items taken.

Truck burgled for 4th time

A resident in the 1100 block of Wayburn reported his truck had been broken into sometime between 2 and 8 a.m. Feb. 14 — the fourth time the vehicle had been reported burglarized in recent months.

The truck's rear cab window was smashed to gain entry. An assortment of tools was taken.

Grosse Pointe's historic Cadieux farmhouse gets TLC

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

A sense of responsibility was part of the deal when Doug Boehmer purchased the historic Cadieux farmhouse more than a year ago.

The house, probably the oldest frame dwelling in the five Grosse Pointes, faces Jefferson at the foot of Notre Dame in the City of Grosse Pointe. It was probably built in the mid-1850s.

On Labor Day 1992, Boehmer was looking for a house to buy in the Park, City or Farms. He had a list of some 30 houses. He drove around to check them out.

"I drove by all these places. I was disappointed," he said. "There wasn't a single house I wanted to go inside."

The next day, a friend mentioned that the Cadieux farmhouse was for sale.

"I drove by. Went through it," Boehmer said. "Within five minutes I said 'this is it.'"

Within 30 days, the deal was done.

Boehmer grew up near Grosse Pointe; graduated from Austin High School; attended Michigan State University; then went to work for his father. By 1982, he had founded his own direct mail advertising company, Technicom Graphics Inc., based in a 65,000 square foot building in Detroit's Rivertown. Clients include NBD, the Founders Society of the DIA, several hospitals and the Michigan Republican Party.

He is vice president of the Rivertown Business Association and serves on the board of the City of Grosse Pointe Foundation and as vice president of community affairs for the Grosse Pointe Historical Society.

He learned about historic preservation in general and the Cadieux House in particular as he settled in to make it his home.

The Cadieux House originally stood at the foot of today's Bishop Road. It was built by Isadore Cadieux, one of the descendants of a French family that came to Detroit in 1701 with Cadillac.

"This house was constructed in Detroit, placed on a barge and floated up the river to the site at the foot of Bishop. It was moved to its present location about 1870," Boehmer said.

"I've bonded with this house," he said. "The house likes me. It's very quiet. There's a sense of privacy here, even though it faces Jefferson. There's a sense of intimacy and comfort."

In 1803, 20-year-old Michael Cadieux came to the Detroit area from Bordeaux, France, to join the Cadieuxes who were already here. Michael eventually married Archange, a woman 26 years younger than he was. They had 12 children. Three brothers survived: Charles, Isadore and Richard.

Isadore built the Cadieux house, but apparently all three brothers owned it.

The late Eugene Cadieux, great-grandson of Richard Cadieux and former president of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, said that the original Cadieux property near Bishop was a strip farm purchased with money earned by his great-great-grandfather, who got a contract from the U.S. government for the first mail route between Detroit and Fort Dearborn (a.k.a. Chicago).

The late Mrs. Cyril H. Moore, who owned the house from 1945 until her death in the mid-80s, remembered the Cadieux family.

Most of the old bubbly glass window panes on the first floor are original. One pane in a living room window bears the name "Ida Cadieux" scratched into the surface. Ida Cadieux was a daughter of Isadore Cadieux and his first wife.

POINTER OF INTEREST

Moore said Ida Cadieux told her she scratched her name on the glass with her engagement ring to see if diamonds really would cut glass.

Preservation of the historic farmhouse was an on-again off-again affair after Moore's death. At times, the Cadieux House flirted with the wrecking ball.

Some subsequent owners had plans for restoration and some repairs were begun. One of the later owners wanted to tear it down.

In May 1991, Grosse Pointer Elaine Hartman and a half dozen preservation-minded citizens rescued the historic home by forming a corporation, the Cadieux House Restoration Corp., and purchasing the house.

By October 1991 it was completely restored. The investors rebuilt basement walls, dug a new foundation under the living room, replaced the roof, updated sewer and electric lines, put in a new kitchen, re-landscaped the grounds and added a brand-new master suite, laundry room and garage.

"I compliment Elaine Hartman," Boehmer said. "She did so much. She put so much into this, and did everything so well. She told me that on the day of my house closing, she came over and sat in the house for an hour, alone," he said. "She said she cried."

The best of the original house was preserved, including the narrow front stairway with its old hand-turned balusters and newel post, the Michigan pine floors, most of the old glass window panes with their bubbled imperfections, some woodwork and the old fireplace.

"All the floors are original," Boehmer said. "None are level. You can't put a marble on the floor anyplace and expect it to stay put."

Boehmer hoped some ghosts would come along with the house. So far, he hasn't seen any.

"I wish these walls could talk," he said. "I can't say there's not a ghost. The house makes funny noises. I have the sense of a presence here, but it's nothing threatening. I have a very warm sense about this place.

"A certain amount of celebrity comes with the Cadieux House. When I say I live in the Cadieux farmhouse, people say they know it. A lot of people like it. It's flattering."

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society awarded one of its historic plaques to the Cadieux House last year and it also earned a beautification award from the City of Grosse Pointe.

Boehmer has furnished the house with a mixture of antiques and reproductions and plans to add finishing touches like wall decorations and accent pieces as he finds things that catch his fancy. He wants to build a jacuzzi on the deck beside the master suite; furnish the vacant upstairs bedroom and perhaps add some personalized Pewabic tiles to the fireplace.

In his spare time, he plays racquetball, walks, bikes, and skis downhill and cross country.

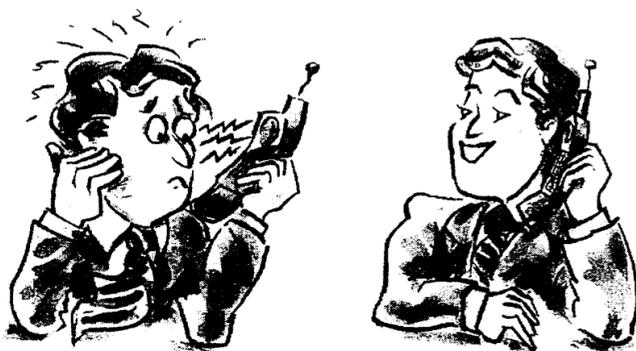

Now that he's into historic preservation, Boehmer plans to seek designation as a Michigan historic site for the Cadieux House. It's one of the responsibilities of ownership.

Grosse Pointe's historic Cadieux farmhouse gets TLC

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

A sense of responsibility was part of the deal when Doug Boehmer purchased the historic Cadieux farmhouse more than a year ago.

The house, probably the oldest frame dwelling in the five Grosse Pointes, faces Jefferson at the foot of Notre Dame in the City of Grosse Pointe. It was probably built in the mid-1850s.

On Labor Day 1992, Boehmer was looking for a house to buy in the Park, City or Farms. He had a list of some 30 houses. He drove around to check them out.

"I drove by all these places. I was disappointed," he said. "There wasn't a single house I wanted to go inside."

The next day, a friend mentioned that the Cadieux farmhouse was for sale.

"I drove by. Went through it," Boehmer said. "Within five minutes I said 'this is it.'"

Within 30 days, the deal was done.

Boehmer grew up near Grosse Pointe; graduated from Austin High School; attended Michigan State University; then went to work for his father. By 1982, he had founded his own direct mail advertising company, Technicom Graphics Inc., based in a 65,000 square foot building in Detroit's Rivertown. Clients include NBD, the Founders Society of the DIA, several hospitals and the Michigan Republican Party.

He is vice president of the Rivertown Business Association and serves on the board of the City of Grosse Pointe Foundation and as vice president of community affairs for the Grosse Pointe Historical Society.

He learned about historic preservation in general and the Cadieux House in particular as he settled in to make it his home.

The Cadieux House originally stood at the foot of today's Bishop Road. It was built by Isadore Cadieux, one of the descendents of a French family that came to Detroit in 1701 with Cadillac.

"This house was constructed in Detroit, placed on a barge and floated up the river to the site at the foot of Bishop. It was moved to its present location about 1870," Boehmer said.

"I've bonded with this house," he said. "The house likes me. It's very quiet. There's a sense of privacy here, even though it faces Jefferson. There's a sense of intimacy and comfort."

In 1803, 20-year-old Michael Cadieux came to the Detroit area from Bordeaux, France, to join the Cadieuxes who were already here. Michael eventually married Archange, a woman 26 years younger than he was. They had 12 children. Three brothers survived: Charles, Isadore and Richard. Isadore built the Cadieux house, but apparently all three brothers owned it.

The late Eugene Cadieux, great-grandson of Richard Cadieux and former president of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, said that the original Cadieux property near Bishop was a strip farm purchased with money earned by his great-great-grandfather, who got a contract from the U.S. government for the first mail route between Detroit and Fort Dearborn (a.k.a. Chicago).

The late Mrs. Cyril H. Moore, who owned the house from 1945 until her death in the mid-80s, remembered the Cadieux family.

Most of the old bubbly glass window panes on the first floor are original. One pane in a living room window bears the name "Ida Cadieux" scratched into the surface. Ida Cadieux was a daughter of Isadore Cadieux and his first wife.

POINTER OF INTEREST

Moore said Ida Cadieux told her she scratched her name on the glass with her engagement ring to see if diamonds really would cut glass.

Preservation of the historic farmhouse was an on-again off-again affair after Moore's death. At times, the Cadieux House flirted with the wrecking ball.

Some subsequent owners had plans for restoration and some repairs were begun. One of the later owners wanted to tear it down.

In May 1991, Grosse Pointer Elaine Hartman and a half dozen preservation-minded citizens rescued the historic home by forming a corporation, the Cadieux House Restoration Corp., and purchasing the house.

By October 1991 it was completely restored. The investors rebuilt basement walls, dug a new foundation under the living room, replaced the roof, updated sewer and electric lines, put in a new kitchen, re-landscaped the grounds and added a brand-new master suite, laundry room and garage.

"I compliment Elaine Hartman," Boehmer said. "She did so much. She put so much into this, and did everything so well. She told me that on the day of my house closing, she came over and sat in the house for an hour, alone," he said. "She said she cried."

The best of the original house was preserved, including the narrow front stairway with its old hand-turned balusters and newel post, the Michigan pine floors, most of the old glass window panes with their bubbled imperfections, some woodwork and the old fireplace.

"All the floors are original," Boehmer said. "None are level. You can't put a marble on the floor anyplace and expect it to stay put."

Boehmer hoped some ghosts would come along with the house. So far, he hasn't seen any.

"I wish these walls could talk," he said. "I can't say there's not a ghost. The house makes funny noises. I have the sense of a presence here, but it's nothing threatening. I have a very warm sense about this place.

"A certain amount of celebrity comes with the Cadieux House. When I say I live in the Cadieux farmhouse, people say they know it. A lot of people like it. It's flattering."

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society awarded one of its historic plaques to the Cadieux House last year and it also earned a beautification award from the City of Grosse Pointe.

Boehmer has furnished the house with a mixture of antiques and reproductions and plans to add finishing touches like wall decorations and accent pieces as he finds things that catch his fancy. He wants to build a jacuzzi on the deck beside the master suite; furnish the vacant upstairs bedroom and perhaps add some personalized Pewabic tiles to the fireplace.

In his spare time, he plays raquetball, walks, bikes, and skis downhill and cross country.

Now that he's into historic preservation, Boehmer plans to seek designation as a Michigan historic site for the Cadieux House. It's one of the responsibilities of ownership.

Grosse Pointe's historic Cadieux farmhouse gets TLC

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

A sense of responsibility was part of the deal when Doug Boehmer purchased the historic Cadieux farmhouse more than a year ago.

The house, probably the oldest frame dwelling in the five Grosse Pointes, faces Jefferson at the foot of Notre Dame in the City of Grosse Pointe. It was probably built in the mid-1850s.

On Labor Day 1992, Boehmer was looking for a house to buy in the Park, City or Farms. He had a list of some 30 houses. He drove around to check them out.

"I drove by all these places. I was disappointed," he said. "There wasn't a single house I wanted to go inside."

The next day, a friend mentioned that the Cadieux farmhouse was for sale.

"I drove by. Went through it," Boehmer said. "Within five minutes I said 'this is it.'"

Within 30 days, the deal was done.

Boehmer grew up near Grosse Pointe; graduated from Austin High School; attended Michigan State University; then went to work for his father. By 1982, he had founded his own direct mail advertising company, Technicom Graphics Inc., based in a 65,000 square foot building in Detroit's Rivertown. Clients include NBD, the Founders Society of the DIA, several hospitals and the Michigan Republican Party.

He is vice president of the Rivertown Business Association and serves on the board of the City of Grosse Pointe Foundation and as vice president of community affairs for the Grosse Pointe Historical Society.

He learned about historic preservation in general and the Cadieux House in particular as he settled in to make it his home.

The Cadieux House originally stood at the foot of today's Bishop Road. It was built by Isadore Cadieux, one of the descendants of a French family that came to Detroit in 1701 with Cadillac.

"This house was constructed in Detroit, placed on a barge and floated up the river to the site at the foot of Bishop. It was moved to its present location about 1870," Boehmer said.

"I've bonded with this house," he said. "The house likes me. It's very quiet. There's a sense of privacy here, even though it faces Jefferson. There's a sense of intimacy and comfort."

In 1803, 20-year-old Michael Cadieux came to the Detroit area from Bordeaux, France, to join the Cadieuxes who were already here. Michael eventually married Archange, a woman 26 years younger than he was. They had 12 children. Three brothers survived: Charles, Isadore and Richard.

Isadore built the Cadieux house, but apparently all three brothers owned it.

The late Eugene Cadieux, great-grandson of Richard Cadieux and former president of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, said that the original Cadieux property near Bishop was a strip farm purchased with money earned by his great-great-grandfather, who got a contract from the U.S. government for the first mail route between Detroit and Fort Dearborn (a.k.a. Chicago).

The late Mrs. Cyril H. Moore, who owned the house from 1945 until her death in the mid-80s, remembered the Cadieux family.

Most of the old bubbly glass window panes on the first floor are original. One pane in a living room window bears the name "Ida Cadieux" scratched into the surface. Ida Cadieux was a daughter of Isadore Cadieux and his first wife.

POINTER OF INTEREST

Moore said Ida Cadieux told her she scratched her name on the glass with her engagement ring to see if diamonds really would cut glass.

Preservation of the historic farmhouse was an on-again off-again affair after Moore's death. At times, the Cadieux House flirted with the wrecking ball.

Some subsequent owners had plans for restoration and some repairs were begun. One of the later owners wanted to tear it down.

In May 1991, Grosse Pointer Elaine Hartman and a half dozen preservation-minded citizens rescued the historic home by forming a corporation, the Cadieux House Restoration Corp., and purchasing the house.

By October 1991 it was completely restored. The investors rebuilt basement walls, dug a new foundation under the living room, replaced the roof, updated sewer and electric lines, put in a new kitchen, re-landscaped the grounds and added a brand-new master suite, laundry room and garage.

"I compliment Elaine Hartman," Boehmer said. "She did so much. She put so much into this, and did everything so well. She told me that on the day of my house closing, she came over and sat in the house for an hour, alone," he said. "She said she cried."

The best of the original house was preserved, including the narrow front stairway with its old hand-turned balusters and newel post, the Michigan pine floors, most of the old glass window panes with their bubbled imperfections, some woodwork and the old fireplace.

"All the floors are original," Boehmer said. "None are level. You can't put a marble on the floor anyplace and expect it to stay put."

Boehmer hoped some ghosts would come along with the house. So far, he hasn't seen any.

"I wish these walls could talk," he said. "I can't say there's not a ghost. The house makes funny noises. I have the sense of a presence here, but it's nothing threatening. I have a very warm sense about this place.

"A certain amount of celebrity comes with the Cadieux House. When I say I live in the Cadieux farmhouse, people say they know it. A lot of people like it. It's flattering."

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society awarded one of its historic plaques to the Cadieux House last year and it also earned a beautification award from the City of Grosse Pointe.

Boehmer has furnished the house with a mixture of antiques and reproductions and plans to add finishing touches like wall decorations and accent pieces as he finds things that catch his fancy. He wants to build a jacuzzi on the deck beside the master suite; furnish the vacant upstairs bedroom and perhaps add some personalized Pewabic tiles to the fireplace.

In his spare time, he plays racquetball, walks, bikes, and skis downhill and cross country.

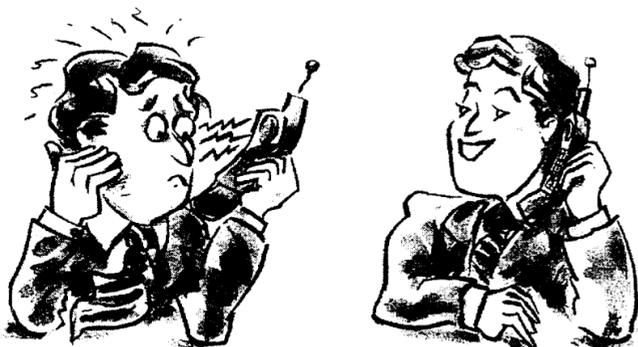

Now that he's into historic preservation, Boehmer plans to seek designation as a Michigan historic site for the Cadieux House. It's one of the responsibilities of ownership.

It's terrible to feel worthless, but many millions do

I have written elsewhere about Karolina, who was the cook at Egeberg, the family farm in Norway, where I lived for several years.

She was like a shadow, never smiled, just worked, fed 12 or 15 people every day, and nobody could get her to talk. My grandfather told me that when she was 15 her father and mother told her one day that their home was no longer her home; they didn't have room for her and couldn't afford to feed her.

She wandered from farm to farm and after a while had arrived at Egeberg. Grandfather talked with her and when he heard her story had said, "Egeberg is now your home. We will find something for you to do." And she became the cook.

Once while I was collecting eggs in the barn near the pig sty, I overheard Karolina, who was feeding the pigs with scraps from the table. She was talking to each one in an affectionate tone, and they were orderly and seemed to wait their turn to be fed. These were her friends.

All at Egeberg tried to be friends with Karolina, but she never felt as if she were a part of Egeberg. She was an outcast from her own home and had been a beggar. She did her work, which meant long hours, but she held no better opinion of herself than she had when her family turned her out. She had no self-esteem.

This is a terrible thing, but it happens millions of times in this country. Some of the stories may be less traumatic than Karolina's experience but some are worse. Children may not be appreciated and may not feel loved. Their opinions may not be valued, and they may be given no responsibility in a household. They may be treated cruelly, physically or mentally, day after day. Like Karolina, those children have been hurt, and the feelings they have of their own worth can be very low, indeed.

With no sense of your own worth, with no self-esteem, what do you look forward to when you wake up in the morning? Consciously or subconsciously, you may have in the back of your mind the idea: "Well, I don't amount to much, so what does it matter what I do today?"

In that mood, several things can happen. You look for companionship where you feel you have some worth, someone who appreciates you. If you're lucky it may be an older person — a teacher, an uncle, or a grandparent. In the other direction, you may join a gang, and by following its rules you find you have some worth.

If you join a gang, as we think of gangs, you've done worse than Karolina did, for your outlet is apt to be harmful to others and to yourself — physically and mentally. Karolina had found some beings (the pigs) for whom she had a meaning. It was a good meaning. Most gangs have very little good meaning to counter their destructive aspects.

California, through its Legislature, following six years of dogged effort by Democratic Assemblyman John Vasconcelos came to the conclusion that lack of self-esteem was not only a tragedy for the person lacking it but also a tragedy and a loss to society. They decided that if one could learn more about the meaning of self-esteem, how it was affected and what might be done to improve it, they would have a basis for creating a healthier society in California. The Legislature was persuaded that with self-esteem comes a sense of responsibility to do something — something good, something worthwhile, something useful.

So, in 1986, the Legislature created a task force of prestigious people to study this question. It was called the California Task Force to Promote Self-Esteem and Personal and Social Responsibility. The task force adopted the following as its official definition of self-esteem:

"Appreciating my own worth and importance and having the character to be accountable for myself and to act responsibly toward others." They set down four key principles, which included appreciating our worth and importance, appreciating the worth and importance of others, affirming accountability for ourselves, and affirming our responsibility toward others.

The task force further stated that the family is the most crucial ingredient in nurturing the sense of self-esteem that persons carry with them into life. Following the family, schools that deliberately encourage self-esteem are next in importance. In addition, they stated that low self-esteem is a significant contributing factor to the development of substance abuse. They also found that being a welfare recipient can be destructive to self-esteem and encourages a "learned helplessness."

Men's club welcomes Red Wings PR chief

Bill Jamieson, public relations director of the Detroit Red Wings, will be guest speaker at the Men's Breakfast Club on Wednesday, March 2, at 7:15 a.m., at the Assumption Cultural Center, 21800 Marter Road in St. Clair Shores.

Jamieson, married for 20 years and the father of six daughters, was ordained in 1993 as a deacon in the Roman Catholic Church. Deacons assist priests during the Mass, give sermons, baptize babies, counsel engaged couples, lead wake services and read the gospel aloud at Masses. The growing diaconate movement has become a way for men to get seminary training and perform sacramental duties — and then return home to their wives and children.

For Jamieson, a chief attraction of the diaconate is the chance to work alongside his wife, Rose, in church ministries at their parish, St. Paul on the Lake. He studied for the diaconate for seven years.

Known for his professional integrity, Jamieson has been named top National Hockey League public relations director six times. Hockey and religion may seem strange companions, but he says the mix works for him. He finds the experience of ordination to be humbling, in which the Greek translation of the word deacon — "servant or waiter" — becomes a challenge. "We're not ordained for our own sake," Jamieson says, "but for the sake of the community."

The public is invited to the Men's Breakfast Club meetings which are held the first Wednesday of each month from 7:15 to 8:15 a.m. The breakfasts are complimentary, provided by Assumption's caterer, William Marchiori. Call 779-6111 for further information.

Home inspection offered for seniors

Calvary Center's chore department has a program to identify safety hazards in the homes of older adults.

Qualified home-repair staff will complete a 16-point checklist and correct any identified hazards. Checklist items include security items, such as window locks, fire items, such as frayed cords, and miscellaneous items, such as wobbly furniture. The checklist can be completed in 30 minutes and is free.

To qualify, you must be 60 or older and live within the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods, or the Finney/Denby areas of Detroit. Call 881-3374 for more information or to sign up.

Georgian East seeks volunteers

Georgian East, an 80-bed skilled nursing facility, seeks a volunteer who enjoys working with the geriatric population.

Duties will include sorting and distributing resident mail and occasionally reading mail to those who are unable to do so for themselves.

Afternoon hours will be flexible Monday through Friday.

Those interested should contact Bruce Ogilvy at 778-0800.

AARP to meet

Grosse Pointe AARP Chapter 2151 will meet on Monday, Feb. 28, at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, located at 16 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms. The meeting will begin at 1 p.m.

The featured speaker will be Karen Belluomo, executive director of the Ronald McDonald House of Detroit, located near the Children's Hospital. Belluomo will have videotapes explaining what is done for parents who stay at the facility while their children are patients in the hospital.

On March 28 the speaker will be Tony Thomas, Community Affairs Representative with Blue Cross-Blue Shield. He will show a movie on proper nutrition. Milton Berle is in this film. Thomas will bring 64-page cookbooks on nutrition for seniors.

Refreshments will be served and all in attendance will have an opportunity to have their blood pressure checked by volunteers from Bon Secours Hospital

Fallback plan is better for our schools?

As the March 15 date of the school financing referendum nears, the Engler administration and its supporters are seeking to drown the opposition to Proposal A in a deluge of press releases.

Their intent is clear. It is to try to prove that the support for the Proposal A package is so strong that people would waste their votes by rejecting Proposal A and seeking to put the fallback plan into effect.

In fact, results of the most recent public opinion poll indicate the campaign has been successful to date. It showed that 60 percent of the respondents supported Proposal A, 20 percent voted no and 20 percent were undecided.

It is true that most of the state's major business organizations favor Proposal A, and, in fact, top executives of four major state corporations — all of whom are Grosse Pointers — reiterate their support in a letter to the editor in today's issue of the Grosse Pointe News.

But several independent organizations and labor unions and a number of state leaders do favor the alternative plan that calls for a 6 percent income tax — a 30 percent increase — as the major component of the fallback school financing plan.

It is true that many businessmen see Proposal A's 2-cent boost in the sales tax — which amounts to a 50 percent increase — as more favorable to their interests than the alternative plan.

Overall, they believe Proposal A would improve the state's economic climate, whereas boosting the state income tax from 4.6 percent to 6 percent and hiking the single business tax by 0.4 percent to 2.75 percent would work to Michigan's disadvantage in attracting or retaining jobs.

We respect that legitimate business viewpoint but the question is whether Proposal A is equally beneficial for all the other segments of society in Michigan, including the public schools.

As the administration and its supporters point out, some of the sales tax increase would be paid by tourists, but in fact most of the burden of that 50 percent hike would be borne by the state's families.

While food and prescription drugs will still be exempt from the sales tax, as will be the increase in residential energy bills, the rest of the average family's cost of living needs — including big ticket items — will be subjected to the 2 percentage point sales tax boost.

If Proposal A passes, it would take a constitutional amendment to change it in the future. On the other hand, the Legislature retains the power to revise the state income tax without such an amendment.

And while state income tax payments are deductible from federal income taxes, sales taxes are not. That means the federal government would capture a substantial additional amount of taxes from Michigan citizens who itemize their deductions if the sales tax hike is approved.

Many Grosse Pointers apparently will get a property tax saving under either plan, but it's true that residential property owners would benefit from larger savings under Proposal A than under the fallback plan.

However, considering all of the other tax and reform plans, the total tax loads imposed by each are similar although questions have been raised about the viability of some of Proposal A's tax sources, such as the inauguration of a new keno gambling game expected to net $100 million for the state.

Most GOP office holders back the Engler administration's plan, but Rep. William R. Bryant Jr. of Grosse Pointe Farms, as co-chairman of the House Education Committee, helped draft the fallback plan that was put together by a bipartisan committee.

Bryant believes that for the Grosse Pointe school district the fallback plan is superior to Proposal A because its flexibility will assure the Grosse Pointe schools and its library system better financing over the long haul.

This newspaper agrees with that verdict, as we have said earlier, even though we're aware that for many Grosse Pointers the March 15 vote will not be an easy choice.

In our view, they should consider two important questions in making that choice:

Would Proposal A or the statutory alternative be of greater benefit to their own economic future and that of the state?

Which plan holds better promise to protect and improve the excellent caliber of public education offered to Grosse Pointe young people?

As they consider the choices, Grosse Pointe voters also should remember that the excellent quality of the Grosse Pointe public school system has served another major purpose: helping to maintain and improve the community's property values over the years.

Tiny assessment hike coming

Increases in 1994 average property assessments for the five Grosse Pointe communities are not likely to increase more than about 1 percent, despite a Detroit Free Press recent report that listed higher hikes for the Pointes.

A Free Press story last week reported that, assessments in four of the Pointe municipalities will rise more than 4 percent except in Grosse Pointe City where they will go up 2.3 percent.

That report alarmed some Pointe residents who complained that the 4 percent level would be higher than the cost of living increase, even though the assessment increase covered a two-year period during which residential sales were soft even in the Pointes.

However, city manager Richard G. Solak of the Farms said he had been assured by Wayne County officials that assessments in his city would rise less than 1 percent — and perhaps be as low as 0.6 or 0.7 percent.

He was also told the figures had not yet been determined last week for the Pointes or, apparently, for other Wayne County communities.

The Free Press story was accurate about one aspect of the 1994 assessments, however. The assessments will be lower, on the average, than the 1993 assessments which reached the double-digit mark in several Pointe communities and in many other municipalities.

None of the tax rates, however, will be set until after the March 15 state referendum because the municipalities will fare differently with respect to state revenue sharing under the two choices, Proposal A and the fallback plan.

Residents should not get their hopes up prematurely for a city tax cut since all cities will lose some revenue from parts of the two tax packages. Faced with continuing costs and declining state revenues, cities must either trim programs or raise taxes locally to finance even current activities.

Keeping an eye on the figures

We are among those who concede that neither side in the school funding controversy has all the answers.

The media have concentrated on the sales tax and income tax increases involved in the alternative plans but the other taxes and revenue-producing schemes range from a 0.4 percent hike in the single business tax in the fallback plan to the start-up of a new keno game in Proposal A.

Nor are explanations of changes always specific enough to inform the taxpaying public.

Proposal A would hike the sales tax only 2 cents on the dollar — but that 6-cent total would amount to a 50 percent increase over the current 4-cent sales tax.

On the other hand, the fallback alternative plan calls for a 1.4 percentage point income tax boost to a 6 percent rate, a 30 percent increase for most Michigan residents.

However, Detroit residents who are now paying a total of 7.6 percent in income taxes — 3 percent city and 4.6 percent state — would pay 9 percent under the fallback plan.

But that 1.4 percentage point state income tax hike would mean an increase in Detroit of only about 18 percent because the base there is larger to start with.

Yet the fallback plan also would hike the current $2,100 personal income tax exemption to $3,000 and to $3,900 for senior citizens. Those increased personal exemptions would eliminate the necessity of filing for some people and reduce payments for others.

So all of us need to keep an eye on the figures — and our arithmetic — as we prepare to vote March 15.

Kelly deserves better press

Sen. John Kelly of Grosse Pointe Woods, who announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for U.S. senator last week, deserved better press treatment than he got from the Detroit dailies.

It may be true that any publicity is good publicity for a candidate seeking a statewide elective berth for the first time but in our view Hugh McDiarmid, Detroit Free Press political columnist, went beyond the pale.

In a column-long piece devoted to Kelly, McDiarmid sought to ridicule him by recalling some of his verbal histrionics but then contended that he still liked having him in the race as "comic relief."

In our view, that conclusion is a slur not only on a senator who has been elected and re-elected, but on the constituency that has kept him in his office in a district that includes the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods and part of the city of Detroit.

We agree that Kelly often has been a loose cannon in the Democratic Party but his constituency also values his independence and his willingness to take on political windbags who usually need to be deflated.

The columnist fails to even mention the serious work Kelly frequently does in Lansing for the people of his district and the state, such as his contributions to the recent legislative debate over school financing and reform.

Kelly may be an underdog in his campaign to move up to the U.S. Senate but we wish him well.

Letters

Local CEOs endorse ballot tax proposal

To the Editor:

A lot has been written recently about the choice voters must make on March 15 regarding the best way to fund schools. Unfortunately, much of the debate is rooted in partisan politics and emotion relating to future school funding and very little consideration is being given to the enormous impact of the decision on Michigan's economy and jobs.

As Grosse Pointe residents and heads of businesses whose companies employ thousands of Michiganders, we have concluded, along with virtually every other business leader in the state, that the ballot proposal which would increase the state sales tax to 6 percent is far better for Michigan than the statutory alternative of raising the state income tax 30 percent and the Single Business Tax 17 percent.

The reasons for our position are:

1) If the ballot proposal fails, the increase in the state income tax rate to 6 percent from 4.6 percent would raise Michigan's state income tax to the ninth highest in the nation and make it the highest flat-rate tax among all states — a terrible disadvantage for attracting or retaining jobs to our state.

2) Furthermore, the City of Detroit's combined state and city tax would increase to 9 percent for residents and 7.5 percent for non-residents, making Detroit the highest taxed city of the 30 largest in the United States — a formula for economic disaster. This compares with 3 percent for Chicago, 5 percent for Baltimore and Denver, and 4 percent for Phoenix and Los Angeles.

3) Failure of the ballot proposal would also raise Michigan's Single Business Tax by 17 percent, again making state taxes on business among the highest in the nation.

4) By contrast, passing the ballot proposal would bring Michigan's tax structure in line with other states. Since Michigan's sales tax is currently 33 percent below the national average, an increase to 6 percent would only put Michigan at the national average. Also, a significant part of Michigan's sales tax (about $250 million) would be paid by visitors and tourists and thus the increase would not be fully paid by Michigan residents.

5) Finally, from a taxpayer's point of view, the ballot proposal caps assessment increases and requires a three-quarters' vote of the legislature to increase the homestead millage.

Clearly, from the standpoint of attracting and retaining business in Michigan and in Detroit, a vote for the ballot proposal is a vote for business expansion, a better economy, job growth and tax restraint. If the ballot proposal fails,

Program Advisory Committees widen ranks to include residents without kids in school

By Kathleen Ryan
Staff Writer
PACs.

They're not just for parents anymore.

Program Advisory Committees (PACs) were first established by the Grosse Pointe board of education in 1985 to provide broader input for schools involved in the site budgeting process. Teachers, administrators, and parents typically made up the committee, which determined how funds would be allocated within individual schools.

But this year the committees have been expanded to include members of the community who do not have children enrolled in the schools, with a special emphasis on involving senior citizens.

"As the site budget process evolved over the years, we found it was easy to get parents to volunteer to serve on the PAC," said school board president Tim Howlett. "But we saw a large segment of the community that wasn't involved, and should have been."

Trudee Munro, a member of the Kerby Elementary School Program Advisory Committee, agrees.

"I think it's very good that community members have become involved," she said. "After all, it's their tax dollars that are paying for these school programs."

She welcomes the change from the time her daughter was in school.

"We were financing the schools, but we weren't sure exactly how our money was being spent."

Munro brought a working knowledge of Kerby to her committee work. She has been a volunteer at Kerby for nine years, assisting first grade teacher Regina Gersch with numerous classroom activities.

Dick Cooper, a member of...

the North High School PAC, also has years of involvement with North to bring to the committee process.

Even though the last of his three children graduated from North in 1983, Cooper, 62, returns to photograph musical and athletic events.

"I obviously still have an interest in the school system," Cooper said, "and I was pleased when I was asked to serve on the committee."

Cooper brings his expertise as an independent businessman to the committee.

"As a business person I know that the basics of reading, writing, and arithmetic are important and are what should be stressed by the schools," Cooper said.

"But most business people will tell you that they look for a well-rounded person when they look for employees. They want someone who has been involved in extracurricular activities as well as someone who has done well in academics."

"That's why it's important for schools to maintain sports and bands and club programs."

It had been many years since Park resident Vaughn Adams, 61, had been in Trombly Elementary School—the school his children had attended.

"I met Trombly's principal Jean Rusing and mentioned that my two children had attended Trombly," Adams said. "I'm also a strong believer in neighborhood schools, and I was pleased when I was asked to serve on the committee."

Adams, a professor of philosophy at the University of Detroit-Mercy, believes community members are able to see schools differently than parents and staff.

"I'm able to see children in an abstract sense," Adams said. "I don't have the immediate concern of what's best for my child. I'm able to look at the total school.

"Then as a committee, we meld our points of view. We can bounce ideas off of each other and finally determine what's best for Trombly."

Adams would like to expand the duties of the PACs to include long-range planning.

"There are things we should be looking at in the future to make education more exciting," Adams said. "For example, what if we had less teachers, but more assistants who were specially trained in things like foreign languages. They could get children actively involved in the world around them."

"These are things we should be looking at in the future."

Chris Schlitt, 43, brings 21 years of business expertise to the Pierce Middle School PAC.

"Not having any children, I was in the dark about the way schools were operated," she said. "I was pleased they asked community members to serve on the PACs, because we also have a stake in the schools by way of our property values."

Most community members who are serving on PAC's regret that teachers have chosen not to participate this year due to the lack of a new contract.

"It's too bad the teachers aren't involved," Munro said. "They're closer to the educational process than anyone else."

But all share Cooper's view on the importance of community involvement.

"It's important for us to educate and inform the rest of the community, especially senior citizens, on what's happening in our schools," he said. "This community has gotten older and their vote (senior citizens) could be the deciding one on many issues. They can't just say that because their kids are finished with school, they can't support them anymore."

Mason spelling bee

Mason Elementary School fifth-graders recently participated in a spelling bee to determine the school representative to the Detroit News-Lawrence Technological University regional spelling bee to be held in March.

After many rounds, Ryan Michael came out on top, with Dan Priebe as runner-up.

Apply now for scholarships

Students in the Grosse Pointe South High School class of 1994 are reminded that the deadline to apply for scholarships administered by the Mothers' Club is Friday, March 11.

To be considered for a scholarship, a student must have a demonstrated financial need, at least a C average, participation in extra-curricular activities and/or work experience, and plans to attend a public or private college or vocational school in the fall of 1994.

Last year the Mothers' Club awarded scholarships totaling more than $27,000.

Scholarship applications are available in the school's career resource center.

Response to Bryant column

To the Editor:
Regarding state Rep. William R. Bryant Jr.'s article in your paper of Feb. 10, he speaks like a true politician. Nowhere in his article does he even hint that the solution to any of his concerns could or should be controlling costs (i.e., have teachers' pay part of their medical insurance and other cost cutting measures).

He may also be surprised, but he shouldn't be, to learn that it is not only shore property that has experienced double-digit tax increases.

Regarding stability under the statutory plan, which he favors, a 6 percent income tax, the highest flat rate tax in the country, plus an increase in the single business tax would surely drive both business and residents from Michigan and could double our unemployment. If the increased income tax is the primary support of schools and many people lose their jobs due to the high income and single business taxes, just how stable is it?

One thing his article should do is to convince people in his district not to re-elect him.

Editorial unfair to school critics

To the Editor:
An editorial appearing in the Jan. 27 Grosse Pointe News expressed disapproval of the critics of the Grosse Pointe school system and stated that "we doubt that the critics express majority views in the Pointes."

The only evidence they offer of this is the results of recent elections, although I question what recent elections they are referring to and how those results would validate this conclusion.

The editor also states that it is "true that those who believe the system is one of the best in the state have seldom spoken up publically or even in letters to the editor to defend it." Finally, the results stated that the critics should cite specific facts rather than relying on generalities and unsupported allegations.

Unfortunately, the Grosse Pointe News' own editorial ends up relying on generalities and unsupported allegations.

Many of the letters to the editor by the critics, as well as independent information and memorandums provided by various critics to the board and administration, have been very specific and well researched in their allegations. The majority of the responses of the board and the administration to these inquiries have been the ones that have been comprised of vague generalities and unsupported allegations.

Additionally, in attempting to obtain information to adequately research various budget proposals with the Grosse Pointe Public School System, I know many individuals have been denied the information and have been required to resort to Freedom of Information Act requests to obtain the information, a number of which requests have not yet been fulfilled.

Although I am sure a number of residents of the Pointes fully support the school system and assume it is one of the best, many of these same people are not fully informed and when given the facts on the budget and some of the other programs in the Pointes are appalled.

I can hardly condemn critics, as the Grosse Pointe News has, for being passionate about their children's education.

Carole M. Gibbons

At the core of school budgets

To the Editor:
In a recent board meeting, superintendent Dr. Shine has stated that he wants to keep any budget cuts as far away from the children as possible. Additionally, in his meeting with the site based budget committees, Dr. Shine has told them to be creative in cutting costs and coming up with new ideas.

The administration's own central budget, however, does not appear to adhere to either of these guidelines. The initial budget proposal by the administration defined what expenses were "core" expenses and therefore could not be cut, and those which were designated as "non-core" expenses and subject to being cut.

The administrative budget, which makes up 9 percent of the total budget, was designated as 96 percent core and the building and maintenance budget, which makes up 23 percent of the total budget, was designated as 100 percent core. The budget for the materials for the students which comprises only 1 percent of the budget, was only designated as 33 percent core, meaning that two-thirds of this budget was subject to being cut.

I believe the administration means well, but I would suggest that the administration become creative and find ways to cut the administrative and maintenance budgets, and at the same time keep the cuts as far away from the children and increase the budget for the materials that are directly used by the students.

What about FEHBP?

To the Editor:
If the Clinton health plan is so wonderful, why does the legislation, as presented to Congress last month, exempt about 9,000,000 people who have coverage through FEHBP (Federal Employees Health Benefits Program) until January 1998, by which time the rest of the population is scheduled to be under the Clinton program?

FEHBP covers the administration, White House staff, Congress, its staff and family members and other federal employees and retirees and their families. There is no reason to think that Congress will not continue to exempt persons covered under FEHBP, which offers its members a choice of several different plans. Congress could wait until 1997, after the 1996 election, and then pass legislation to continue health care coverage under FEHBP if its members decide the Clinton program is not good enough for them, our governing elite.

Professor questions Magnet program

The following letter from a Michigan State University professor is in response to a query from the Grosse Pointe Alliance for Educational Excellence seeking his advice on the Grosse Pointe schools' Magnet program for gifted students. It is reprinted here at the Alliance's request and with the letter writer's permission.

I have read all the extensive material you sent me and I shall try to respond to your concerns. My comments may not answer all your questions precisely because my observations will make some of them irrelevant.

First, I think the entire practice of tracking or any differentiating and sorting of students on the basis of presumed ability, particularly in the elementary school years, is entirely unwise and harmful to those students that are not identified as "superior," "gifted," or otherwise identified as superior to the others. There is little evidence that such differentiation significantly effects the outcomes for those in the superior programs.

Bob Slavin's paper which you included summarized the appropriate position on this very well. As I indicated on the telephone, the fact that Slavin has come to this conclusion after his own research (which was intended to prove the contrary) and a careful review of other research is a significant event. He was formerly a special education specialist who actively criticized me and my equal high quality education for all position. His change is based on sound research and educational philosophy.

As far as I could tell, the administration has implemented the board policy as they saw. I presume Dr.

Allan and Dr. Shine or other administrators developed the policy and urged the board to adopt it. Certainly Dr. Allan's paper expresses her strong bias. In any case, it is a bad policy and practice and particularly so in a district like Grosse Pointe.

The selection process for gifted based on "ability" tests is inappropriate. All intelligence, ability, aptitude, or achievement tests are devices designed to determine whether or not the respondents have acquired the knowledge and/or skills sampled (or covered) in the test. They vary only in the sample covered and the responses (scores) vary as the students acquire the knowledge and skills. The IQ or ability tests presumably measure a constant, fixed ability to learn, but that is not the case. A few years ago we studied a class of Lansing students over a four-year period. The correlation between the eighth grade IQ ability, and the 11th grade IQ ability of 800 students was less than .70. This means that you could predict less than 50 percent of the 11th grade IQ scores from the eighth grade scores. This is hardly evidence of a fixed ability. As I told you, my late colleague and former chief executive of the Iowa Testing Service, Dr. Robert Ebel, repeatedly stated "one should never predict what a student will learn on the basis of present test scores."

In light of the above, no process of selecting gifted known today is valid. Of course, some were excluded.

Right car for the Mrs.

I've been suffering greatly this past month.

No, I haven't been in labor, nor have I undergone root canal surgery.

But both of those conditions pale in comparison to what I have been going through.

I've been trying to buy a car.

And not just any car. A sports car.

Now you and I both know that this is 1994 and women have had the vote for some time now, but some car salespeople haven't heard that it is permissible in our society for a woman to buy a car all by herself.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not a card-carrying member of the National Organization for Women, but it has always irritated me when salespeople ask me if there is a Mr. Ryan.

"There are thousands of them," I reply. "Especially in Ireland."

There is, in reality, only one Mr. Ryan for me. He's the love of my life and a greater guy you'll never find.

But he knows squat about cars and likes shopping for one even less than I do.

I'm faced with the reality of having to buy a new car because I had leased my other car and the lease is rapidly coming to an end. Talk about pressure.

"You have to start thinking about a new car," my husband said a few weeks ago.

"Would you buy it for me, my sweet babboo," I said lovingly.

glass," he responded.

For years I firmly believed that a car was merely an object one used to get from point A to point B, stopping occasionally to pay massive repair bills. These were the same years that point A was usually the pediatrician's office and point B was the next stop for the soccer car pool. At one time I had three child car seats lined up across the back seat.

And I used to marvel at the fact that the contents of my car could sustain life in the event of nuclear attack. Besides numerous changes of clothing, it was home to water bottles, juice boxes, and enough McDonald's french fries to feed an army.

And here's a household hint you won't find in Heloise's column: Wet beach towels dry remarkably fast in a closed car on a hot day. All right, they smell a little after a while and get a little stiff, but Labor Day is always just around the corner and it will soon be time to pack them away anyway.

But the car seats are long gone and minivans and station wagons hold the same appeal that becoming pregnant at 60 does.

What I want now is a fun car, a young car, a car that won't make it worth my while to drive on any more school field trips because it won't seat seven children with seatbelts.

No, what I want is that cute red convertible I saw one day on a car lot near my house. I found myself repeatedly driving out of my way to visit it. I finally stopped one day and touched it softly. There was an instant bond.

The problem came when I had to go inside the dealership and tell someone that that car had my name on it.

"What can I help you with today," he said as he turned toward the minivan in the showroom.

"I'd like to test-drive the red convertible," I said.

"Oh," he responded, with an inane grin on his face. "Who would you be buying it for?"

"Myself," I said, returning the grin.

"Why would you be interested in that model," he continued, just not getting it.

"Because I'm having a mid-life crisis," I responded. "It's either the car or I run off to Tahiti with my son's best friend."

I think for a second he believed me.

"Well," he laughed, "my name is Ray. And you are?"

"Mrs. Ryan."

"And I can call you..."

"Mrs. Ryan," I said.

"All right, Mrs. Ryan. And is there a Mr. Ryan?"

I give up. Would someone call me a cab?

Moving time is nostalgia time

They moved in across the street 20 years ago and became our friends.

Our kids connected us. Their two sons were about our son's age, and soon they were playing at each others' houses. Their boys liked our sandbox and swing set, and our son liked their house that had so many rooms he could get lost in it.

Before long we were talking on the phone, then dropping by, then borrowing things and doing little favors for each other.

Their place resembled the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and ours had a certain simplicity. To us, at first, they seemed a bit fanciful and hard to predict, and to them we probably seemed rather down to earth and involved in details.

But we quickly saw that although we had very different backgrounds and occupations, we also had a lot in common.

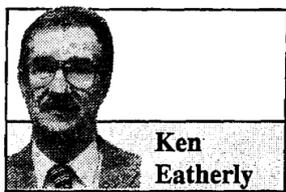

There were dinners, and parties. She befriended our daughter and did kind things for her. Before many holidays had passed we were gathering on Christmas Eve for supper and exchanging presents.

We also exchanged house keys. When we went away, they watched our house and cat, and took in their mail. When they went away, we watched their house and dog, and took in their mail.

They helped us appreciate the lake. Season after season, they had us out on their sailboat. We lent a hand with the rigging and docking and steering and I helped him take the boat to its winter storage at season's end. We invited them to come on a skiing vacation with us.

We watched each others' kids grow up. When they had troubles, we listened and gave the best advice we could. They did the same for us. We overcame occasional misunderstandings. Somehow we all survived the trials and kept on celebrating the joys.

We came to appreciate each

others' sense of humor, and we did a lot of laughing together.

When I go through our photo albums, I see them often. I am sure they see us as much in theirs.

The albums are going to have to do heavier duty now. When they told us last year that they were moving, we were sad. Although we hope to still see them from time to time, we know there will be fewer times for us to be together.

Their decision was no big surprise, since we had all talked about the future and where our plans might take us. But we weren't really ready for it.

We smiled and told them it seemed like the right thing for them to do at this time of their lives. I don't think we were completely convincing.

I knew they were serious when they had their garage sale. When they invited us over for a preview, it seemed strange to see the souvenirs of their family's stay here spread out all over tables and benches.

There were golf clubs, toy trains, his medical books, her sociology books, camera accessories, their skis, scuba gear, her hand-carved jewelry from Africa, some of his power tools, the boys' weightlifting equipment, vases, statues, tennis racquets, a guitar, a really pretty dress I remember her wearing, his jackets, pictures he had painted, a hall table I always marveled at because it looked as if it had been carved by Heironymus Bosch, stacks of old 78 rpm records, a color TV, a glass globe that produced an artificial snow storm when you turned it upside down and, incongruously, contained a brightly painted Easter bunny.

It was a grand exhibit of the relics of a long run of happy times, the artifacts of two good decades. It didn't seem right to buy anything.

Their house was sold almost before the real estate agent's sign went up.

Again, we weren't too surprised, because it is a beautiful place and they had priced it right.

When we heard that they had found another, somewhat smaller but really quite nice house "Up North," we got ready for the goodbyes.

At our last Christmas exchange, we gave her a sweat shirt with "Grosse Pointe, Michigan" embroidered on it, so their new neighbors would know where she was from.

We promised to keep in touch, and told their sons, now both grown to manhood, that they could always visit and have dinner with us whenever they were around. And we began to feel glad for our friends, because a new adventure was beginning for them.

We didn't see them much the last couple of weeks before they left. They were always on the go, dealing with movers and the endless details of becoming temporarily uprooted.

On their last evening in their old house, we gathered amid echoing rooms that they had just spent the whole day cleaning from top to bottom. For them, it was a ritual, a way of saying who they were, and one last time marking their pride of ownership. Empty, the house seemed twice as big.

We each had a glass of sherry, drank a toast to the future, and talked about the old times. I had to bring the glasses, because the only things they had left in the house were cleaning supplies and the clothes they would take with them the next day.

The cycle of life in this community we call home is running true to form. We have met the new people, and they are already like someone we have Manoogian mode from Pointes?

Jim Fitzgerald must be squirming. The Detroit Free Press noted that Mayor Dennis Archer's sister-in-law, C. Beth Dun-

Combe, is heading the Manoogian Restoration Committee, which is charged with bringing the once-charming river-front home up to par. D.J. Kennedy, interior decorator from Grosse Pointe, has been named to handle the job. Paint, carpeting and general rehab will not be at taxpayer expense, they say. Fitz, always quick to pique the Pointes for the cul de sacs, etc., has moved to Lapeer's suburbs, but still coddles the cudgel for downtown Detroit.

Hugh Munce

all the prominents who came there for summer living.

I was reminded of Irene's whisper, "Now take care of Bea, 'cause she's getting to that age. Needs watching, you know." Those words are something from the 99-year-old, about her sister, 95.

Groups merge for rare show

It's only happened a few times in the nearly 100-year history of these three community groups. The Theater Arts, Fine Arts and Players will present March 5, 6, 11 and 12 to more than 500 members and guests a special show at the Jefferson Avenue Players Playhouse.

Among the dozens of locals involved are Marie Carpenter, Teresa Gillis, Shirley Worthman, Irene Elkins, Greg and Sue Owens, Margaret Lindner, Irene Blatchford, Steve Shrader, Marie Carpenter, Chet and Evelyn Bogan, Irene and Paul Gracey, Yolanda Turner, Marianne DiStefano, Julia Keim, Donna Ridella, Sandy Jorgensen, Christine Burt, Gigi Gaggini, Priscilla Schaupter, Sue Keim, Diane Dawson, Kathleen Laethem, Phyllis Brewster, Betty Kackley, Molly Flinterman, Gaylord Creedon, Jane Frame, Nancy Pilorget, Frank and Sally Van Deventer, Geno Perrami, Marilyn Schneider and artist Evelyn Snyder, whose work in ink, watercolor, pastels, oils and monograph prints is well-known.

Dancing again

A local musician played to a packed ballroom last Friday at the BYOB Big Band program of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

"Great to have people from Detroit, Birmingham, Livonia, old Redford, St. Clair/Algonac come up to me and say what fun they were having, about 140 of them," says Chet Bogan, who has a big following, especially the big dance club Merry-Go-Rounders, which meet at different clubs round-robin.

Bunny Denler may put us on again this spring, and Grosse Pointe Cable is doing a big show featuring the Wolverine Jazz Band at 7 p.m., March 7, and April 11."

Century mark

FYI went to Harbor Beach last weekend. We picked up Aunt Bea Black, 95, who wanted to be with her sister, Irene Gemple, who celebrated her 99th birthday, with family and friends, including son-in-law, your FYI correspondent.

There was much talk about the old-timers of that Thumb town, former Justice Frank Murphy, Judge Jim Lincoln, the original Henry Ford and known for a while.

As we hold fast while a generation has swung by, we feel a bit like a pivot point. In a sense, our whole town is a great pivot, around which many families have come, taken their turn, and gone.

To some, the phrase "a good place to raise a family" is a euphemism for a place young people can't wait to get away from. And yet, when they are married and have children, they usually look for a place just like it.

And now I know why.

Tragedy fails to daunt her

A resident of the City of Grosse Pointe for more than 43 years, Margaret Anzinger reflects on the newspaper writing and her excursions into major public relations work, but pauses when talking of her nearly 18 years' experience with the Michigan Department of Social Services, which she described as "heartbreak, tragedy, sad situations day in and day out, problems, human tragedy."

She gathers facts and delves into individual situations, but the common denominator is often predictable: "Money isn't the answer in many cases. Many case studies by writers, television producers and social scientists reveal that alcohol, drugs, child or spouse abuse arises from these unholy situations."

The tragedies drive many from social work after a few years, but Margaret stays on the job.

Driving in Moscow is sort of like driving in downtown Detroit would be if there were no traffic lights. Traffic is surprisingly light for such a big city and everyone likes to go just a little faster than is really safe. The cars themselves look a little like the early '60s here, when traffic was heavy.

But no city really tests your motoring mettle like New York, specifically Manhattan. I have had occasion to motor around Manhattan a number of times and have found that conventional wisdom does not seem to apply.

In my first couple of ventures onto that unique island, I drove small and agile cars, a Dodge Omni and a Mercury Capri station wagon, thinking they would be best to survive the heavy traffic and find parking spots. Most of the time, I was in panic city.

Then I went to an introduction in New York of the Chrysler Imperial a few years ago and discovered a strange effect — this fairly large vehicle was actually easier to drive on Manhattan than the smaller ones were.

For one thing, Manhattanites respect money and if you're driving an Imperial this is stronger evidence that you have money than is a Dodge Omni. And the bigger car is more intimidating. I entered traffic with a lot more elan in the Imperial than in smaller cars.

The next visit was in a Mercury Grand Marquis, which proved to be an excellent broad-shouldered choice for driving on Manhattan. The one mishap was pulling into a parking structure and forgetting about the car-top carrier we had borrowed from friends, which hit the top on the entrance. It is amazing what an awful sound plastic makes when it is being ripped and what a baleful effect such things have on friendships.

The perfect vehicle for a trip to Manhattan turned out to be a Chevrolet Suburban, a Texas-size station wagon built on a truck chassis (and the unofficial state car of Texas). This vehicle was big enough to intimidate all but full-blown trucks, at least into not running into you and trying not to allow you to hit them. And it is fast enough

Older drivers rated safer

Younger drivers are more than twice as likely to be involved in a traffic accident compared to motorists 45 to 54 years old, according to a recent study conducted by Michigan Association of Insurance Cos. (MAIC).

Statistics in the report also indicate that young driver crashes tend to be more deadly.

"About 15 percent of drivers aged 16-20 are involved in a traffic accident each year," said Terry Buckles, president of MAIC. "By comparison, only 6 percent of 45- to 54-year-olds are involved in a roadway crash annually."

Buckles also noted that 16- to 20-year-old drivers have a greater involvement in fatal accidents than most other age groups. Only those drivers aged 75 and older have a higher rate of deadly crashes.

"Younger motorists are having more accidents and more costly accidents," Buckles said. "That is the reason they pay higher premiums for car insurance. The greater price is a reflection of greater insurance pay out."

A younger person who is the principal driver of a motor vehicle typically pays 40 percent to 200 percent more for coverage than older drivers, according to the MAIC report. This surcharge is reduced as the driver grows older and is generally discontinued by insurance companies at or before age 25.

Premium surcharges are generally much lower for young drivers who use the family car only on an occasional basis. These typically range from 20 percent for 24-year-olds to 90 percent for 16-year-olds, but vary from one insurance company to another.

for you to take advantage of any opening in traffic.

These are the qualities a vehicle needs to live and prosper in Manhattan traffic — substantial size to back up the aggressive needs of the driver and the accelerative torque to actually do what you want to do, which is to survive.

It is also not as common a vehicle on Manhattan as it is west of the Hudson. One gentleman who appeared to be collecting bottles for return, spotted us on a side street somewhere trying to find our way back to what might loosely be called civilization.

"Nice car," he called from the curb. "What is it?"

"Chevy Suburban," I answered.

"Oh, yeah. Nice."

"Thank you."

"You're welcome."

It is good on Manhattan if your vehicle looks odd, so our last visit there in a Pontiac Trans Sport minivan was very successful. Visibility in the Trans Sport is extremely good, which is important, because motoring attackers can come from any side. Also, it was odd but stylish and drew approval from trendy New York types like the fellow living on a sidewalk in the theater district on a mohair davenport with a cat.

"That's a very attractive vehicle," he remarked, as we sat idling in traffic by his residence on the sidewalk near a fire escape alongside a theater.

"What do you call it?"

I was momentarily nonplussed by his question and couldn't remember what it was called and just said, "It's a Pontiac."

"Oh?" he said with what I deemed an unnecessarily skeptical tone. "Trans Sport," I shouted as traffic began to move. I not only drive defensively in New York, I am defensive.

A big advantage that sports/utility vehicles and vans have for driving on Manhattan is that you sit up a little higher and can see what is holding up traffic and what perils lurk ahead.

But the challenge is wonderful and I am looking forward to another motor trip to the Big Apple. There are many tourist attractions in New York, and Manhattan is kind of like a theme park. One of the greatest joys we have found there is the Staten Island ferry.

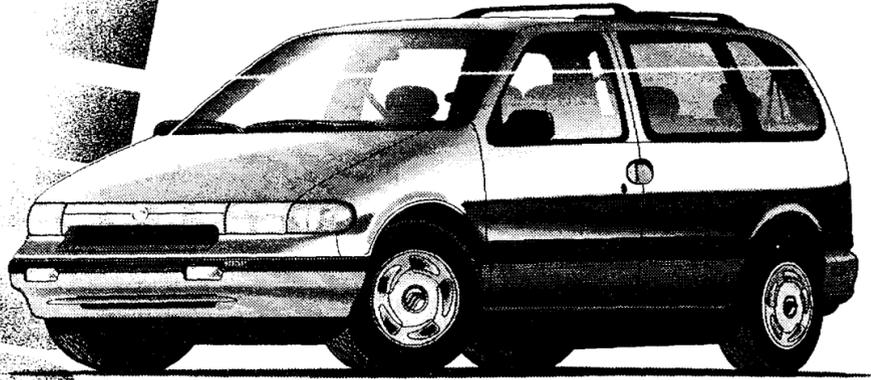

A sunny late afternoon crossing on the ferry is incredibly relaxing after driving down the island to get to it. And from the ferry, New York is breathtakingly beautiful, just like Woody Allen says it is.

Driving in Big Apple: The bigger the car the better

Like combat, it is exhilarating; the ultimate test of nerve, reflex, skill and courage; sharpened by the possibility of sudden, humiliating loss, pain, even death; worse yet, damage to your vehicle.

And like combat, driving in Manhattan brings out the best and the worst in motorist and passenger alike. For anyone who learned to drive west of the Hudson River, Manhattan is an alien experience. But exhilarating.

Every city's traffic has its own personality. Chicago drivers are chatty. Motorists in other vehicles strike up conversations in traffic jams. Most of these conversations take place on the freeways, because much time is spent creeping at a pace at which civilized conversation may take place. After you've chatted amiably with the guy driving the Olds next to you, it is hard to threaten him with sudden death if he doesn't let you cut in.

In Los Angeles, everyone drives as fast as they can. This is like New York, except that most driving in LA is done on freeways, so you really can get going fast. Ditto for Detroit.

Autos

By Richard Wright

But 80 on a freeway in LA or Detroit is not as scary as hitting 50 on 63rd Street crossing Park Avenue, knowing you will have to come to a dead stop within a half block, but if you don't go for it the guy behind you will honk or maybe even ram you because he couldn't conceive of anyone so stupid as to not speed up to 50 to make the light across Park.

It is surprisingly easy to drive in London, once you get the hang of driving on the wrong side of the street, partly because there are not many traffic stoplights — which constitute an American mania which wastes enormous reserves of fuel, fouls the air and takes up a sizable portion of your life if you live in a big city.

Britain may be the only country where it is less harrowing to drive in the big cities than in the countryside. The esprit of British motorists and their abiding faith that some god is watching over them while they drive make the narrow back country lanes much scarier than the 70-to-100-mph traffic on the motorways.

German drivers seem to be skilled, but somewhat unaware that anyone else is driving on the same road. They also like to drive fast. Very fast. A common sight in your rearview mirror on the autobahn is a Mercedes-Benz or Porsche or BMW closing incredibly fast on your rear, the driver intent and concentrating on his task, which is to pass every car on the road.

The same thing happens on the autostradas in Italy, only there you are usually not sure what kind of a car is hurtling at astonishing speed toward your tailpipe and you sense that the driver is not intent on what he is doing, he just considers 100 mph a normal speed.

In Japan, I am told, drivers are polite to the point of being unpredictable and therefore dangerous. If you want to cut into another lane, the motorist you are cutting off will lose face if he doesn't let you in. Such giving way is, of course, shocking to an American mo-

Also excellent, is the more stylish Pontiac Trans Sport minivan; an eye-catcher and cool.

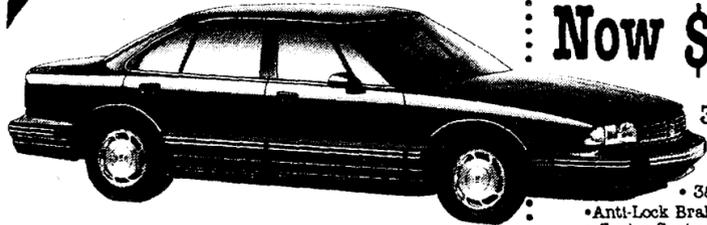

Chrysler Imperials are made for Manhattan (as are, obviously, Chrysler New Yorkers). At the press introduction were auto writer Paul Eisenstein, who claimed to be demographically correct to pose with the Imperial, and the author, at right, a face in the crowd. The setting is the Vanderbilt mansion in the Hudson Valley.

Like combat, it is exhilarating; the ultimate test of nerve, reflex, skill and courage; sharpened by the possibility of sudden, humiliating loss, pain, even death; worse yet, damage to your vehicle.

And like combat, driving in Manhattan brings out the best and the worst in motorist and passenger alike. For anyone who learned to drive west of the Hudson River, Manhattan is an alien experience. But exhilarating.

Every city's traffic has its own personality. Chicago drivers are chatty. Motorists in other vehicles strike up conversations in traffic jams. Most of these conversations take place on the freeways, because much time is spent creeping at a pace at which civilized conversation may take place. After you've chatted amiably with the guy driving the Olds next to you, it is hard to threaten him with sudden death if he doesn't let you cut in.

In Los Angeles, everyone drives as fast as they can. This is like New York, except that most driving in LA is done on freeways, so you really can get going fast. Ditto for Detroit.

Autos

By Richard Wright

But 80 on a freeway in LA or Detroit is not as scary as hitting 50 on 63rd Street crossing Park Avenue, knowing you will have to come to a dead stop within a half block, but if you don't go for it the guy behind you will honk or maybe even ram you because he couldn't conceive of anyone so stupid as to not speed up to 50 to make the light across Park.

It is surprisingly easy to drive in London, once you get the hang of driving on the wrong side of the street, partly because there are not many traffic stoplights — which constitute an American mania which wastes enormous reserves of fuel, fouls the air and takes up a sizable portion of your life if you live in a big city.

Britain may be the only country where it is less harrowing to drive in the big cities than in the countryside. The esprit of British motorists and their abiding faith that some god is watching over them while they drive make the narrow back country lanes much scarier than the 70-to-100-mph traffic on the motorways.

German drivers seem to be skilled, but somewhat unaware that anyone else is driving on the same road. They also like to drive fast. Very fast. A common sight in your rearview mirror on the autobahn is a Mercedes-Benz or Porsche or BMW closing incredibly fast on your rear, the driver intent and concentrating on his task, which is to pass every car on the road.

The same thing happens on the autostradas in Italy, only there you are usually not sure what kind of a car is hurtling at astonishing speed toward your tailpipe and you sense that the driver is not intent on what he is doing, he just considers 100 mph a normal speed.

In Japan, I am told, drivers are polite to the point of being unpredictable and therefore dangerous. If you want to cut into another lane, the motorist you are cutting off will lose face if he doesn't let you in. Such giving way is, of course, shocking to an American mo-

Also excellent, is the more stylish Pontiac Trans Sport minivan; an eye-catcher and cool.

Chrysler Imperials are made for Manhattan (as are, obviously, Chrysler New Yorkers). At the press introduction were auto writer Paul Eisenstein, who claimed to be demographically correct to pose with the Imperial, and the author, at right, a face in the crowd. The setting is the Vanderbilt mansion in the Hudson Valley.

Furthermore, if the program provided for the "gifted" is a good instructional program, it should be provided to all students. Otherwise the school is telling the other students "you are unable to learn what these special students are learning. We do not expect you to learn and we will teach in such a manner that you will not learn what the superior students learn." The district's research on the students identified as gifted supports this conclusion. Incidentally, I note that none of the district's research reported to me deals with what happens to the "non-gifted" students, except those qualified that did not go into the program. The latter achievement proves my conclusion.

The most consistent relevant research finding in recent years is that students tend to learn what they are expected to learn. This simply means that if teachers do not expect them to learn, they are not likely to try to teach them and do not. Also those that are not expected to learn and are identified as "slow" develop a "sense of futility" in school which our research explains more of the difference in achievement between groups of students than any other variable studied (see our report "Schools Can Make a Difference").

As Dr. Slavin suggests, the use of randomly selected cooperative learning teams that compete as teams (not individuals) maximizes outcomes for all and improves their human relations.

School board now on cable

To the Editor:

There has been some negative writing about the groups that have been forming in opposition to many of the boards recent policies. Two of these groups, the Grosse Pointe Alliance for Educational Excellence and the Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe, have had erroneous statements made about them and I feel that the Grosse Pointe News, by not covering the discussion part of the school board meetings, has added to these misunderstandings.

Due to these groups coming to the meetings and encouraging the community to attend, the last years board meetings have averaged 100 people per meeting.

Our community is now at a crossroad and it is no longer necessary for erroneous statements to be perpetuated because we may now see the board meetings, in their entirety, on cable. Every Tuesday, at 6:30 p.m., on Channel 20, cable subscribers may watch the school board meetings.

Now the community can judge for itself what is really happening to our system. Now the community can see first hand who is doing their research and who is not.

Now the community can see that the Concerned Citizens are asking for no cuts in classroom teachers (who are less than one third of our school employees) and are asking for cuts in our top-heavy administration.

Now we can see that the purpose of the Alliance is to advocate and promote equitable educational opportunity for all of our children throughout the district.

Now the community can see that the board held the line on taxes this fall, not by aggressive cost cutting but by spending 3.1 million dollars of our fund equity.

Now the community can hear the true opinions of our superintendent and school board members.

Finally, we are no longer hampered by censored news. Finally the community can grow and come together without restrictions.

Wrong impression

To the Editor:

We appreciate efforts by the Grosse Pointe News to keep the community informed about expansion and renovation at St. John Hospital and Medical Center. However, we received feedback from the community that indicates the Feb. 3 article on St. John Hospital has caused some confusion.

Based on the article's headline, "St. John Hospital to expand again," some readers received the impression that the hospital has started a new expansion project. The article's first sentence which says the hospital has "begun another round of expansion," also gives that impression.

To clarify, this article reports on the emergency center expansion/renovation and diagnostic center/MRI addition which began respectively in June and July 1993. Construction has progressed steadily since then, but no additional expansion projects have been started on the hospital campus.

St. John Hospital and Medical Center is aware of the community's interest and concern about hospital expansion. We will continue to offer periodic updates on these projects as they progress toward completion in 1995.

Thank you very much

To the Editor:

While the idea of recycling Christmas trees is catching on nationally, we in the Farms have been doing it for years, and at no cost to the taxpayers. This is the third year that we recycled our Christmas trees at the Pier Park solely through volunteerism.

I must thank the Farms City Council for its support, encouragement and foresight to see the benefits and advantages of this program — both to the taxpayers and to the environment.

In previous years we have relied heavily on the graciousness of our local tree service companies to volunteer their services to recycle our trees. In an effort to diversify the program and expand its list of participants, I contacted Al Shelton, director of line clearance at Detroit Edison. He and his staff were especially helpful on many fronts.

He arranged to have John Caretti, a forestry specialist with Edison's line clearance staff. Mr. Caretti had charts, graphs and other literature relating to trees and power lines, why Edison has to trim our trees as they did two years ago, and what types of trees we can plant near the power lines that cause the least problems for Edison and in turn the homers.

He arranged to have Detroit Edison's main tree contractor, Asplundh Tree Expert Co., do the actual chipping of our trees. Frank O'Dea of Asplundh was on hand both weekends to oversee the chipping of all of our 1,503 Christmas trees.

Thank you Al. I also have to thank Carson Tutt and Mark Ruszkiewicz of the Wayne County Alternative Work Force, which provided the free manpower to help mulch the trees for all three years.

Residents were encouraged to take home and use as much mulch as they like. The remaining mulch will be recycled by Greater Detroit Landscaping Co.

A special thank you must go out to Dave Armintrouts of Armintrouts West Michigan Farms Inc. who, for the third year, is donating the tree seedlings we will be giving away during Arbor Week.

There was Sandra Richards of the Macomb County Extension Service, who put me in touch with Michael Janiszewski, a Master Gardener as well as a Christmas tree farmer from Mount Clemens. Michael brought several of his displays and articles and chatted with participants. Mike, too, has become a regular at these events.

I am most appreciative of, and indebted to, our growing list of exhibitors. From Frank Budd and his staff at Waste Management of Michigan, to Julie Loiselle at City Environmental Inc., to Barbara Hamilton at MichCon and Rich Locke of the Detroit Water Board, Lawrence Bean of the DNR and Scott Lamb of Neroc, the people who manufacture the pop bottle/can recycling machines.

I must thank Fran Schonenberg who supplied us with organic recycling video tapes, literature, other supplies and moral support.

However, I would be amiss if I didn't say that the real heroes of this program, the people who truly made it successful and perhaps those who gave me the greatest pleasure, were the participants.

Mom Always Knew Best!

"Being a mother, balancing a career, and trying to interpret my husband's schedule really keeps me busy... Recently though, I've spent a great deal of time being concerned about my mother."

Although she's still able to do many things she's always done, she doesn't seem to enjoy them as much as she once did.

So when she suggested we visit The Whittier, I wanted to find time to help her make a decision she'd be happy with. Well, it didn't take more than one look at their spacious riverfront suites to convince her that The Whittier was the best move she could make. For example, she needn't bother with cooking her own meals each day, The Whittier has the availability of three meal service. The biggest plus, should the need arise, is the availability of on-site 24-hour medical supervision.

I know they've got programs suited to just about everyone's desires. As a matter of fact, my best friend and her mother are visiting The Whittier this week.

And me, I don't spend any more time being concerned about my mother, I just spend more time loving her.

He arranged to have John Caretti, a forestry specialist with Edison's line clearance staff. Mr. Caretti had charts, graphs and other literature relating to trees and power lines, why Edison has to trim our trees as they did two years ago, and what types of trees we can plant near the power lines that cause the least problems for Edison and in turn the homers.

He arranged to have Detroit Edison's main tree contractor, Asplundh Tree Expert Co., do the actual chipping of our trees. Frank O'Dea of Asplundh was on hand both weekends to oversee the chipping of all of our 1,503 Christmas trees.

Thank you Al. I also have to thank Carson Tutt and Mark Ruszkiewicz of the Wayne County Alternative Work Force, which provided the free manpower to help mulch the trees for all three years.

Residents were encouraged to take home and use as much mulch as they like. The remaining mulch will be recycled by Greater Detroit Landscaping Co.

A special thank you must go out to Dave Armintrouts of Armintrouts West Michigan Farms Inc. who, for the third year, is donating the tree seedlings we will be giving away during Arbor Week.

There was Sandra Richards of the Macomb County Extension Service, who put me in touch with Michael Janiszewski, a Master Gardener as well as a Christmas tree farmer from Mount Clemens. Michael brought several of his displays and articles and chatted with participants. Mike, too, has become a regular at these events.

I am most appreciative of, and indebted to, our growing list of exhibitors. From Frank Budd and his staff at Waste Management of Michigan, to Julie Loisselle at City Environmental Inc., to Barbara Hamilton at MichCon and Rich Locke of the Detroit Water Board, Lawrence Bean of the DNR and Scott Lamb of Neroc, the people who manufacture the pop bottle/can recycling machines.

I must thank Fran Schonenberg who supplied us with organic recycling video tapes, literature, other supplies and moral support.

However, I would be amiss if I didn't say that the real heroes of this program, the people who truly made it successful and perhaps those who gave me the greatest pleasure, were the participants.

Mom Always Knew Best!

"Being a mother, balancing a career, and trying to interpret my husband's schedule really keeps me busy... Recently though, I've spent a great deal of time being concerned about my mother."

Although she's still able to do many things she's always done, she doesn't seem to enjoy them as much as she once did.

So when she suggested we visit The Whittier, I wanted to find time to help her make a decision she'd be happy with. Well, it didn't take more than one look at their spacious riverfront suites to convince her that The Whittier was the best move she could make. For example, she needn't bother with cooking her own meals each day. The Whittier has the availability of three meal service. The biggest plus, should the need arise, is the availability of on-site 24-hour medical supervision.

I know they've got programs suited to just about everyone's desires. As a matter of fact, my best friend and her mother are visiting The Whittier this week.

And me, I don't spend any more time being concerned about my mother. I just spend more time loving her.

Diary of a Slave

Sept. 7, 1862
Dear Diary,
After a long beating I have to work!
But mamma said someday "I'm gonna be free."
Though we aren't allowed to read
My secret pappa is teaching me how to read
Because someday, "I'm gonna be free"
Mamma said so.

When I was milking the cows and got a drink,
A guard saw me and I got whipped
But that's okay "I'm gonna be free"
Mamma said so.

Sept. 10, 1862
Dear Diary,
Today for breakfast I got two pieces of week-old bread
This time it wasn't moldy, maybe next time I'll get some butter.
I had to milk the cows today, and when nobody was looking,
I took some milk to get strong.
Because someday, "I'm gonna be free"
Mamma said so.

June 3, 1868
Dear Diary,
Today I'm gonna try to run away, tonight.
I saved some bread so I won't be hungry,
Because "I'm gonna be free"
Mamma said so.

Sept. 18, 1862
Dear Diary,

June 4, 1868
I didn't make it,
And it's gonna be hard for me to write
Because of what they did to my hand,
But that's okay someday, "I'm gonna be free"
Mamma said so.

Junior League offers sneak peek at Webber House Feb. 26-27

By Margie Reins Smith

Psssst.
Wanna see a naked house? It's a magnificent one. Even bare. Even in its unfurnished, unadorned, unlandscaped, undressed state. The Webber House, at 22 Webber Place in Grosse Pointe Shores, is a beauty. It's an example of some of the best work of Leonard B. Willeke, a local architect whose designs were popular in the Detroit area in the early 20th century.

The Webber House is the Junior League of Detroit's 1994 Designers' Show House.

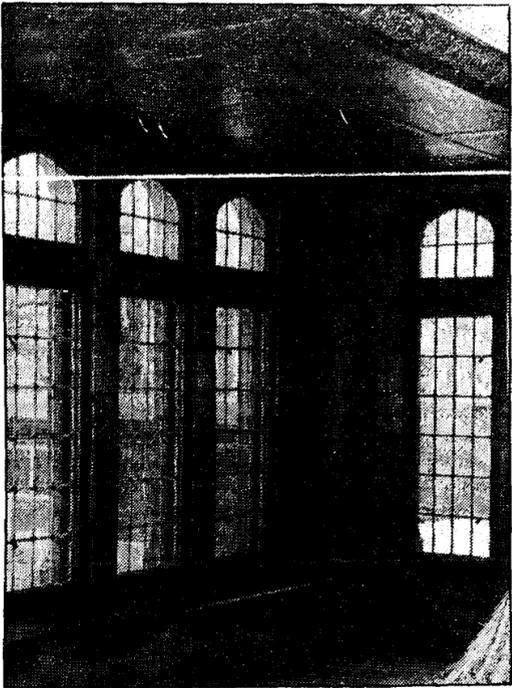

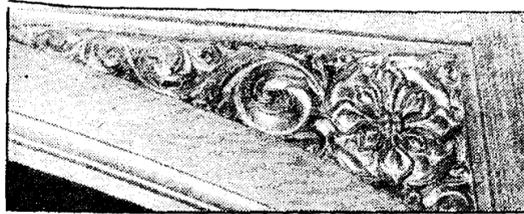

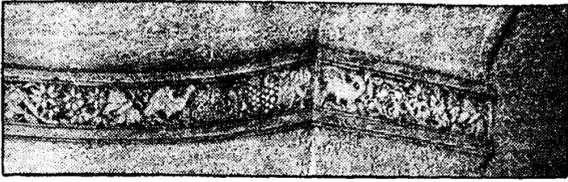

"This house has everything necessary for a great show house," said Wendy Jennings, co-chairman of the fundraiser with Carole Selmo and Mary Lou Grieve.

"It has history, location and great interior areas. It flows well. It doesn't need a lot of structural work. Its best feature is the hand-carved wood throughout the house. My favorite room is the dining room, which, when all the doors are closed, looks like a chapel."

The Designers' Show House — decorated and beautified by designers and landscapers and volunteers — will be open to the public the entire month of May. The biennial fundraiser is expected to attract 20,000 visitors and raise $250,000.

For those who like before-and-after comparisons and those who get a kick out of gawking at bare architecture, the league will offer a tour of the naked house from noon to 4 p.m. on two days: Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 26 and 27. A sneak peek tour costs 99 cents.

The next week, hordes of designers will swoop in with their papers and paints, swatches and swags and stencils and potted plants and colorful Orientals and crisp chintzes. They'll start fussing with gauzy win-

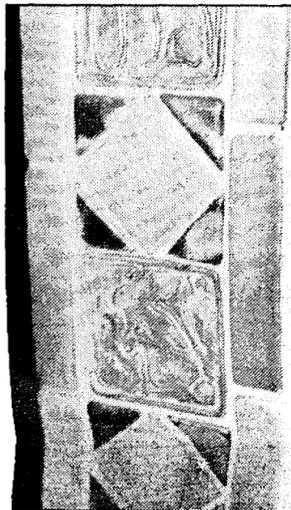

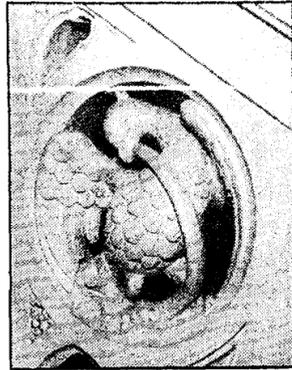

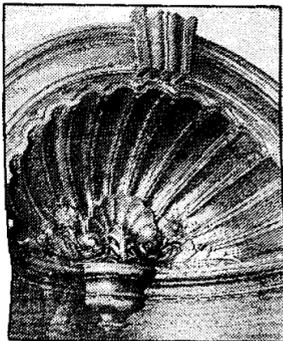

Photos by Margie Reins Smith

The Junior League of Detroit's 1994 Designers' Show House features the work of Danish carver Alfred Nygard in nearly every room.

Nygaard's designs adorn the walls, moldings, paneling, fireplace mantels, ceilings, built-in storage areas and the exterior of the historic 23-room architectural masterpiece.

The house was designed by architect Leonard B. Willeke for Oscar Webber in 1925. Webber was president of the J.L. Hudson Co. from 1948-1961.

The Webber House is currently owned by Geraldine Mazzei, who purchased it with her late husband in 1971.

dow treatments and slubbed silks and tufted thisses and brocaded and damask thats and pieces of tile and brass and wrought iron and ceramic and silver and porcelain and so on.

When they're finished, a tour will cost $12 at the door; $10 if you buy a ticket before May 1; or $8 for groups of 15 or more.

"I've been impressed by the warm, family feeling of this large home," said co-chairman Grieve. "Even with the family gone, it feels like a family home. My favorite feature is also the carving — all the carved wood."

The magnificent hand-carved wood details were designed by Willeke and executed by Danish carver Alfred Nygaard.

Highlights of the 12,000-square-foot 23-room home include a stately two-story carved oak staircase; a paneled library; different carved molding motifs for each room; seven Pewabic tiled bathrooms, a ballroom with a stage, and five fireplaces, each decorated with a different style carved mantel or Pewabic tiles.

The Junior League of Detroit has raised approximately $1.5 million from its last nine show houses, all returned to the community for projects like community alcohol and drug education; the development of Chene Park; the restoration of the Sibley House; an AIDS volunteer network committee; the Grateful Home Dreamweavers' P.O.W.E.R. project; Goodwill Industries and Adult Well-Being Services Christmas parties; and more.

Chairmen for the Sneak-A-Peek weekend are Mrs. Bryan Lane and Mrs. James H. Kellow. For more information about the 1994 Designers' Show House, call the Junior League of Detroit office at 881-0040.

Every baby carries a bit of family history.

Mary Helen Quigg M.D., Geneticist, OB/GYN

When you have a baby, you pass more to your child than blue eyes or brown hair. The genes you give your baby are codes for every body structure and function. These genes can also cause an increased risk for birth defects, hereditary diseases, or the susceptibility for common medical problems like cancer or heart disease. Fortunately, the genetic code is being unlocked which allows genetic counseling and prenatal testing for a growing number of disorders. Prenatal diagnosis of genetic conditions is available to help rule out possible problems or to better prepare you medically and emotionally for the birth of a special needs baby.

Because genetics is fast becoming an integral part of medicine, and especially obstetrics, Bon Secours Hospital welcomes reproductive geneticist and OB-GYN specialist, Mary Helen Quigg, M.D., to our healthcare staff.

Dr. Quigg's office is located in the Bon Secours Roseville Diagnostic Center where she conducts in-depth risk assessment with family medical histories, pre-pregnancy counseling, prenatal genetic counseling and screening tests.

Dr. Quigg also has a general OB-GYN practice with Eastside Gynecology and Obstetrics with offices located in the cities of Roseville and New Baltimore.

To learn more about reproductive genetics, or to arrange an appointment with Dr. Quigg, call the Bon Secours Diagnostic Center at 810-774-3210.

ARE YOU AT RISK FOR OSTEOPOROSIS?

Millions of women suffer from postmenopausal osteoporosis. This condition affects the structure of the bone causing it to weaken and making the bone more vulnerable to fracture. The more we know about this painful disease, the better we'll be able to assist those who suffer from it. Women are needed to participate in a study comparing a new investigational drug and estrogen for the prevention of osteoporosis.

CALL US IF YOU ARE:

- Postmenopausal, undergone a hysterectomy within 15 years, and healthy.
- Not taking estrogen, progestin, anabolic steroids, and calcitonin.

Each participant will receive a free screening bone density test. Those participants whose bone density is low and qualify for the study, will be invited to participate in the project.

Parking is provided. Study conducted by:

The Bone and Mineral Division of Henry Ford Hospital, Henry Ford Medical Center-Lakeside, and Cottage Hospital, Grosse Pointe Farms.

For more information, please call Sandra Spiteri at: (313) 876-7135.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION

BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

When you have been praised for a genius play or perfect bid, be a little humble, of course enjoy it, but never completely believe you're really that clever.

Not many of this column's followers will immediately identify with two remarkable Indianapolis players of the past: Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Kasle, but scan on for today. They will be pedestaled for the part they play in this portrayal of one of Michigan's marvelous performers.

Sidney and Lee Kasle won a number of major tournaments before his untimely death in 1960. They were also the gratified parents of two fine sons who have become achievers in our stimulating game. Gaylor is the elder, a formidable competitor of world-class rank. Denis of Bloomfield Hills is the younger, who may be a shade less able, but one who put his vocation and a family first. In the past few years his has limited his appearance at the table, but his peers for years have applauded this artisan's accomplishments.

Denis will tell you that when he moved here in '67, his first and preferred partner was Howard Perlman, a superb player in his own right. That marvelous relationship has endured handsomely for more than 26 years. Of course a beauty by the name of Carol who is also a life master and a pretty fine player, came between them. Today Carol and Denis have much to be proud of and grateful for with four gorgeous daughters, the premium reward for their diligence and demeanor.

Today Howard and Denis can be seen on occasion still ardently at it, but Lynne Schaefer, who we inscribed in this column last fall, has also become one of a few preferential partners.

It was December 1992 when Denis experienced his most uncommon honor. Robert Hamman, unquestionably the world's greatest master, agreed to fly in from Dallas to play with Denis in the stratiflighted open pairs of the MBA Regional. Typical of Robert, he performs these acts of personal expression unannounced and with little fanfare. One can only conclude that it was a significant tribute to our Mr. Kasle. Of course they were the favorite pair to win this prestigious event and did so, but Denis will acknowledge he was vigorously tested to play his best.

Today's hand from that event depicts Denis defending, which is his favorite role. His opening lead was an exceptional commencement of the defense and his later play was just as brilliant too. Approximately 61 percent of the time there is a given lead that will beat a given contract. Denis found it. Have you? There is also that rare instance when defender realizes he is holding a card, even a big one, that has become cumbersome and must be dumped to effect success. Denis did that too.

Four hearts is unbeatable, but North obviously concluded that with his limited array of insignificant high cards, nine tricks would be easier. For most declarers it was. But this particular South, a good player, obviously had never played against such formidable opponents.

Declarer ducked Denis's spade 10 lead and for good reason, but if he had known the position of the spade suit (10, nine doubleton with West), he could have won the spade lead and blocked the suit. He won Denis's spade nine continuation and rattled off six additional winners, four diamonds and two clubs.

At trick nine, he played his heart ace. Would you now do what Denis did? He dropped his heart king under the ace knowing that if he didn't, declarer's next play — a small heart — would end play him and at trick 10 he would have to lead a club into dummy's queen, 10, eight, giving declarer 11 winners and an obvious top.

Denis's foresight was declarer's undoing, when at trick 10 he continued hearts, Bob's queen won and the spade king, queen, three defeated the contract one trick which was a top the other way for East, West.

Work at it, my fine readers. You can defend as well if you set your mind to do so.

The Pastor's Corner Time out

By the Rev. Ronald Carl Redeemer United Methodist Church

"Time out!"

In the great game of basketball, "Time out" is called by teams to rest, to re-group, and to re-focus. Time out is taken especially when the team is playing out of control or in the closing minutes of the game when it can be won or lost by a crucial break or careless mistake. During time out, the team can get settled down and refocused on playing well and smart. The coach also has the opportunity to put things in their proper perspective and to remind his players that they must work together as a team, not as individuals each trying to win the game on his or her own.

The same is true for each of us in our daily living. We need to take time out from our running back and forth, trying to do everything on our own. The season of Lent in the Christian year reminds us of that. It is a time of reflection and repentance to change our way of living.

We need time out, in quiet solitude, to be alone with God, to center in and focus on God's presence in our lives; time out when God can help us sort things out and put them in the proper perspective, according to God's will and plan for life: time out to let go of our frustration, our confusion, and our anger; time out from trying to do everything on our own and to let God and others help us; time out to remember that we must work with God; time out to remember that God is with us and that God knows what needs to be done; time out to be quiet, to pray, and to let God work in us and through us.

"Time out!" world. I need some time alone with God so that I can live the way God meant for me to live. In Jesus' name, "Time out!"

Childhood asthma class helps parents, children breathe easier

Childhood asthma affects from 5 to 10 percent of children in the United States and is responsible for more visits to emergency rooms and more school absences than for any other chronic illness.

The Bon Secours cardiopulmonary department offers an asthma education program that teaches both the parents and the affected child about medications and other methods of treatment to improve the family's ability to manage the disease. The program is held the first three Wednesdays of each month from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Bon Secours cardiopulmonary department. Registration is $10 a family.

Presented by a registered respiratory therapist, the program follows guidelines established by the National Institutes of Health and stresses education. Program participants will learn what asthma is, how to recognize the signs of asthma and what to do, medications used to control asthma and how they work and how to use a simple device to detect early warning signs of asthma.

For more information or to register for the class, call the Bon Secours cardiopulmonary department at 343-1594.

Archer offers pep talk; sees success for Detroit

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer sang the praises of the city's potential.

"The city of Detroit will be THE PLACE TO BE in the next few years. Brooks Patterson, eat your heart out," Archer said with a smile at a luncheon meeting of the Women's Economic Club Feb. 16 at the Westin Hotel. "We are open for business. Say good things about Detroit — we're re-defining our image."

Archer, Crain's Detroit Business 1993 Newsmaker of the Year, offered an upbeat, inspirational message about the future of the city and its suburbs before the largest crowd ever to attend the annual luncheon honoring the recipient of the Crain award.

Archer emphasized his determined campaign to name Detroit a federal empowerment zone, making it eligible for millions of dollars worth of tax credits and social service funds. "If we win this," he said, "it means $100 million over two years coming into the city.

"But even if Detroit isn't named an empowerment zone, it will still do great things."

The upcoming G-7 jobs conference which will take place in Detroit March 14-15 will be a terrific public relations opportunity, he said. As representatives of the foreign and national media follow the conference's progress, Detroit will get a chance to show off the good things about its businesses and cultural institutions.

"The direct benefit of this conference will be to showcase the city of Detroit," he said.

Archer reminded the group of improvements he's already begun: collecting the city's backlog of garbage, for instance; and putting more police on the street. He told of a task force whose efforts are to streamline Detroit's cumbersome system of permits, codes, and regulations.

"We're going to make it easy to do business in this city," he said.

He re-stated some promises: to balance the books; to create a Detroit master plan; to develop a good, sound bus transportation system by merging DDOT and SMART; to identify and develop a "downtown" which is friendly to businesses and has "free or dirt-cheap parking"; and to enact a modest sports/entertainment tax to fund cultural institutions in the tri-county area.

"In April," he said, "we're going to have a Mayor's Night In. I'll listen for five minutes to anyone who has suggestions and ideas."

Archer's view of a successful city includes the surrounding area ... "the city — the suburbs — all our diversity. We're all in this together," he said. "And we're going to succeed. I see it; I smell it."

"Anyone who wants to volunteer to help Detroit should call my office at 224-3400."

New Friends and Neighbors Club

The New Friends and Neighbors Club will feature Jessie Davies, board member of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, at its monthly luncheon on Thursday, March 3, 11:30 a.m., at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Davies will present a perspective on the early history of Detroit with special emphasis on the Grosse Pointes. Her presentation will include the newly released Grosse Pointe Historical Society video documentary on the history of Grosse Pointe.

An ideal 'Getaway' is sleek and exciting

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Bullets, blood, explosions, car chases and double-crossings — it's all here in "The Getaway," a sleek, entertaining '90s version of "Bonnie and Clyde."

Actually it's a remake of the identically titled 1972 film directed by Sam Peckinpah that starred Steve McQueen and Ali McGraw.

Comparing the two, McQueen was better than Alec Baldwin is in the same role, but Kim Basinger is better than McGraw.

As a whole, the current offering directed by Sam Donaldson is more exciting. Amy Holden Jones has polished Walter Hill's script which was adapted from a novel by Jim Thomson.

"The Getaway" wastes no time in establishing its genre. Credits roll on a startlingly enormous revolver that fills the screen.

Soon after, the camera turns to Doc McCoy (Alec Baldwin) an accomplished safecracker and his accomplice wife, Carol (Kim Basinger), who are passing the time shooting at cans in the air while waiting to be filled in on their next assignment — one that lands Doc in a Mexican prison because his colleagues fail to back him up.

Doc, who never loses his cool, is confident his time there will be short. It is Jack Benyon (James Woods), a big-time crook, needs "the best there is" to pull off a major heist at a dog track. He arranges to have Doc sprung but makes it clear that the job will be carried out on his terms and if anything goes wrong, he has the power to send him back to Mexico and jail.

Well-armed with an arsenal of high-tech gadgets and weapons, Doc takes on the dangerous mission. What he doesn't know is that Carol has already paid for his release by sleeping with sleazy Benyon.

The action-packed dog track heist is fascinating, spectacular and packed with suspense. You are jolted by an explosion that fills the screen with fire and provides a cover for Doc, Carol, and Doc's associates, Rudy Travis (Michael Madsen) and James Deer Jackson (David Morse) to escape to a pre-arranged rendezvous where they will collect their share of the loot.

Then the double-crossing begins. When Doc and Carol meet Benyon he goes into detail about his nights with Carol. Doc doesn't bat an eye, but Carol knows that he is seething with jealousy and is not sure what he might do.

The possibility that one will turn on the other hangs in the air as they make their way to El Paso and freedom.

Carol strikes out with words and blows as she reminds Doc that what she did, she did for him in scenes that are in sharp contrast to earlier segments that portrayed them as a couple deeply in love. However, at peace or at war, there is a real chemistry between them which shouldn't come as a surprise. Baldwin and Basinger are husband and wife off-screen.

Part of the film's attraction is these two stars. He is a hunk. She is beautiful and sexy. When they are together, sparks fly. Their drop-dead images are accented by a to-the-nines wardrobe, and they are never disheveled. Even after hiding in a garbage truck and being dumped into a sea of refuse, they come out looking good.

Rounding out this fast-paced romp is a subplot that features Madsen's Rudy. Madsen, who bit off a detective's ear in "Reservoir Dogs," is equally sardonic in "The Getaway." He trails Doc and Carol after taking a veterinarian and his wife, Fran (Jennifer Tilly) hostage. In a revolting ride, the cruel, mischievous character of a sadistic psychotic is seen in action as he torments his victims. There are no virtuous characters in "The Getaway." Doc and Carol are not admirable but you'll like them enough to wish them well and get a laugh out of a surprise ending that will delight you.

Kathleen Rowe McAllen as Agnes and William Katt as Michael in Birmingham Theatre's "I Do! I Do!"

Marriage examined in 'I Do! I Do!'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

"I Do! I Do!," a romantic comedy playing at the Birmingham Theatre through March 13, is a pleasant evening out that takes the audience back to a time when courtship and marriage were far different than they are today.

"I Do! I Do!" is a series of vignettes that spans 50 years of Michael's and Agnes' marriage. It begins in 1894 and ends 50 years later, a period in which we are privy to the ups and downs of the marriage. All of it is played out in the bedroom and all of it features a four-poster bed which occupies center stage. The bed almost becomes another character. Michael moans on it with imagined labor pains while Agnes stands by waiting to call the doctor, not for herself, but for him. In moments of elation, the two dance on the bed.

They weather the crisis of Michael's infidelity. Michael, who has become a pompous bore, excuses it by pointing out that women are attracted to older men in a song "It's A Well Known Fact," and then quips, "Every night between the sheets/Must you look like trick or treat." Agnes, who has been playing the role of the dutiful wife and mother, while seething inside, counters with, "You may think you're sexy but you make me sick." Michael sees another side of her in a stop-the-show number when, in a bright red dress and a sexy hat, she sings "Flaming Agnes" while doing a bump and grind routine.

Sometime between Act I and Act II antagonisms and irritations lessen with changes that come. Older and more tolerant, they expect less of each other. They celebrate in song, "When the Kids Get Married," the traveling they will do and the books they will read. They even drag out a saxophone which Michael plays while Agnes accompanies him on her violin. The empty nest letdown that comes later is resolved with "Roll Up the Ribbons" as they realize that "the best day is the next one."

The appeal of "I Do! I Do!" is that it shows what it takes to

Guest conductor, soloist leave some room for debate

Guest conductor Hermann Michael and violin soloist Miriam Fried, who highlighted last weekend's concert set at Orchestra Hall, offered a program of three of the greatest masterworks in performances that left room for debate.

The Mozart violin concerto No. 5 K 219 is probably the most noteworthy example.

Fried is a virtuoso player with superb technique and elegant tone. Both qualities make anything she plays beautiful and moving. Her interpretation of Mozart's classically ingenuous concerto took an unorthodox turn, however, assuming a more romantic approach with extended dramatic phrasing.

The tendency was to overphrase the clean development of Mozart's musical lines. It was comparable to a beautiful young person being dressed too opulently in elegant attire better suited to someone more mature, obscuring the youthful grace and charm.

Moreover, Michael's conducting approach was not always consistent with Fried's styling. Tempos and phrasing of the orchestral interludes digressed discreetly as though to return to a more traditional Mozartian manner. While the performance was pleasing, it generated an uneasy feeling as to its overall consistency. Moreover, the refreshing, ingenuous quality of Mozart, which is especially evident in his earlier music like this concerto, was obscured.

With no soloist to accommodate and music that must be second nature to him, maestro Michael appeared to be in total command and harmony with the spirit of Richard Strauss' unique tone poem, "Also Sprach Zarathustra." Inspired only by philosophical concepts expressed in Nietzsche's famous poem of the same name, Strauss created sweeping impressions of mankind's striving for individuality and spiritual independence.

Michael conducted with profound insight to engender a powerful sense of Strauss' spiritual inspiration in the ebb and flow of this lush score. And the skilled forces of the orchestra rendered the music with exceptional clarity and power.

This was, unfortunately, not the case with the work that opened the program. Schubert's impassioned "Unfinished Symphony" ranges in mood from somber despondency to sunny delight and is an emotional trip in itself. Michael's controlled leadership of the orchestra brought out much of the symphony's beauty and drama with careful dynamics. Even so, the performance did not plumb the emotional depth of this work to bring out the tragedy and joy that are inherent in Schubert's remarkable score.

Meanwhile, tonight is Latin Jazz Night at Orchestra Hall presenting acclaimed trumpeter Arturo Sandoval and percussionist Poncho "King Conga" Sanchez.

Tomorrow, guest conductor Jerzy Semkow opens a two-week engagement with a concert set for Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. This weekend's program is Mozart's "Overture to The Abduction from the Seraglio," Stravinsky's Symphony in Three Movements and Brahms' Symphony No. 4. For times and tickets call 833-3700.

The 'T' in T-fruit is for terrific

When planning their daily menus, Americans are becoming more conscious of nutrition, but they still refuse to give up their poor snacking habits. Today, most consumers consider nutrition to be a key factor in their food-purchasing decisions.

This concern spans all demographic groups, with fat and cholesterol being perceived as the top health hazards.

Yet all this nutrition awareness and behavior modification is not affecting the way we snack.

A recent study by Columbia University's Institute of Human Nutrition found that junk food is still the preferred snack over fresh fruit.

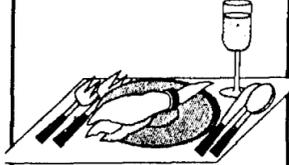

Several government agencies have joined the nation's fresh fruit growers and retailers in an effort to reverse this trend through the national "5 a Day" program, which urges consumers to eat five or more servings of fresh fruit and vegetables daily.

An ideal snacking option, and one that has become increasingly popular, is Florida specialty fruit, also known as Florida T-fruit. Included are tangerines, tangelos and temples, all hybrids of other Florida citrus varieties that combine the best qualities of all citrus fruit.

Nutrition experts agree that fresh fruit is a nutritionally-sound snack, and Florida T-fruit is easy-to-peel, easy-to-pick and an excellent snacking fruit, which, however is highly seasonal, available only from October through March.

Tangerines, including the Robinson, Dancy and Honey (or Murcott), are the most plentiful

ELEGANT EATING

By Irene H. Burchard

and best-known variety of Florida T-fruit. Often called "zipper-skin fruit" because they're easy to peel, tangerines are famous for their rich, sweet flavor.

Tangelos, a hybrid of grapefruit and tangerines, are larger than other Florida T-fruit. The two varieties, Orlando and Minneola (Honeybell), have a delicious sweet/tart flavor.

Temples are generally regarded as Florida's finest eating orange. Temples are medium in size with a deep orange color and pebbly peel. They have some seeds. Temples peel and section easily and are great for juicing, with an appealing fragrance and rich flavor quite different from other varieties.

Nancy Clark, author of "Nancy Clark's Sports Nutrition Guidebook" and nutritionist with the Boston-area's Sports Medicine Brookline, recommends a realistic approach to eating throughout the day.

"People often deny themselves permission to eat treats, be it a cookie, chips, or a candy bar," she said. "This denial almost always fails to bring about real change, but rather contributes to overindulgence and food binges. When tired and hungry, these nutrition-conscious people cast aside their good intentions and splurge on less nutritious foods."

Rather than forbidding treats, Clark teaches her clients to schedule snacks before they get over-powered by hunger and still have the presence of mind they need to make wise food choices.

"People think it's bad to snack in the afternoon, but it's not," she said. "Snacking should be planned."

The afternoon snack is very important, Clark said. It helps maintain proper blood sugar levels, and prevents people from getting too hungry.

"I've found that people tend to crave treats when they get too hungry," she said. "By planning nutritious foods ahead of time, the afternoon snack can become a valuable part of the day's nutrition intake."

Florida T-fruits are a perfect snack food in this respect — they are nutritious, convenient, sweet, easy-to-peel and make important contributions to the daily requirement for vitamin C.

A jumbo-size tangerine is a good source of vitamin C, with only 46 calories. Like all Florida citrus, T-fruit is a natural source of beneficial nutrients including potassium, folate and dietary fiber.

Fiber-rich plant foods are among the strongest nutritional allies against disease, helping to ward off certain types of cancer, and are instrumental in lowering blood cholesterol. The national Cancer Institute recommends that we get 20-30 grams of fiber daily, but the average American only gets about a third of that. Citrus snacks are a great way to bring up your daily fiber tally.

Cool T-Fruit Dip

This cool, creamy snack is rich in health and low in fat. It's full of bone-building calcium and health-promoting vitamin C, and it's perfectly portable for the office or school.

Perfect as afternoon snack or for dessert, this dish can be quickly prepared, and then left in the fridge until you're ready to serve.

4 temples, peeled and cut into rounds (circles)

'Nightmares' is a dream for King fans

Nightmares & Dreamscapes

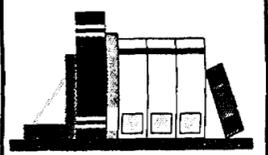

By Stephen King
Viking, 816 pages, $27.50
The virtuoso of spooky fiction, Stephen King, has recently produced a blockbuster volume of 23 of his hair-lifting tales.

Thus, "Nightmares & Dreamscapes," his third collection of short stories, is a worthy addition to his rapidly growing oeuvre, and a bonanza for his multitude of loyal fans.

King writes: "I can only speak from my own experience, of course, but for me, the imagination which so often kept me awake and in terror as a child has seen me through some terrible bouts of stark raving reality as an adult. If the stories which have resulted from that imagination have done the same for some of the people who've read them, then I am perfectly happy and perfectly satisfied."

In his explanatory notes at the end of the book, King generously gives credit, whenever credit is due, to other wordsmiths who have pushed him, with their style and subject matter, to greater heights. As a young man, King's attention was captured by Robert Ripley and his fabulous facts: King pronounces in no uncertain terms that "my primary sources of wonderful and amazing facts in those days were the paperback compilations from Ripley's "Believe It or Not!" Poe's "Cask of Amontillado" provides the shivery inspiration for "Dolan's Cadillac," King's modern version of a horrific planned revenge. Also, thanks to Lovecraft, Doyle, Chandler, and others, they all gave King stimulating ideas for clever pastiches or new versions of their own tales.

Therefore, I consider "Nightmares & Dreamscapes" a worthy addition to the ever-growing shelf of King books. Although I must confess that King is not exactly my cup of tea, I truly recognize his superb mastery over this genre, and I respect his skill in weaving tingling tales. In fact, one night, alone at home, I had to bring one of my ancient dogs to my bedroom where I was deeply immersed in some of the nightmares and dreamscapes running rampant throughout my imagination — thanks to King's provocative descriptions.

Like many short story collections, King's latest shows some unevenness in quality. However, most of them display his imagination in full strength.

For example, one of my favorites here is "You Know They Got a Hell of a Band," which, in turn, is riveting and then completely hilarious. The acerbic dialogue between a husband and wife who become lost as they drive through a patch of southern mountain country is absolutely a good case illustrating the author's marvelous ability to combine humor with terror. This, quite naturally, causes the reader to teeter nervously between the urge to laugh and the desire to shudder.

According to his notes: "There are certain horror-tale archetypes which stand out with the authority of mesas in the desert... the peculiar-little-town story. It's not really about what it's about, if you can dig that; this is, by and large, the literature of the nerve-endings and the muscle-receptors, and as such, it's really about what you feel. What I felt here — the impetus for the story — was how authentically creepy it is that so many rockers have died young, or under nasty circumstances; it's an actuarial expert's nightmare."

Another favorite of mine is "The House on Maple Street" which starts off with a bang: "Although she was only 5, and the youngest of the Bradbury children, Melissa had very sharp eyes and it wasn't really surprising that she was the first to discover something strange had happened to the house on Maple Street while the Bradbury family was summing in England."

From then on, we are exposed, pell-mell, to a rapid spin of events, complete with a martinet step-father and a dominated mother, which compels the inquisitive children to gingerly explore the dark mysteries of their home.

"The Moving Finger" is a splendid spine-chiller, guaranteed to produce terrifying dreams. It would be very advisable, indeed, not to read this story in the blackness of night because breeze-blown shadows outside and the least creek in the woodwork will be quite sufficient to shake even the most stolid composure.

This tale concerns a timid CPA, Howard Mitla, who lives with his wife, Violet, in a Queens apartment, and how they are gradually frightened and victimized by a persistent scratching noise. Eventually, Howard gathers up his courage to pursue the source of this irritation; he enters the bathroom where "the tub was empty except save for the hand-held shower attachment. Its hose lay on the enamel like a dead snake. The scratching had stopped either when Howard turned on the light or when he entered the room, but now it started again. Behind him. He turned and took three steps toward the bathroom basin, raising the broomhandle as he moved. The fist wrapped around the handle got to the level of his chin and then froze. He stopped moving."

What chilling sight greeted Howard as he glanced at the drain-hole in the basin? That, dear reader, is for you to find out — if you dare.

North swimmers win first MAC dual meet title

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North's swimming team is treading new water these days.

The Norsemen won their first outright Macomb Area Conference American Division dual meet championship last week when they beat Ford II 105-75. Last year North finished in a three-way tie for first with Ford and Grosse Pointe South.

This weekend the Norsemen will try to add the conference meet championship trophy to their collection, but it won't be easy.

"On paper we should win it," said North coach Mike O'Connor, "but (Ford coach) Dennis Schreiber's last words to me after our meet were 'We'll see you at the league meet and we'll be ready then.' 'Ford has some good kids and so does South. (South coach) Fred (Michalik) and I will have to get together and plot our strategy to keep the championship in Grosse Pointe, but we'll be selective in our information because we'd both like to beat each other, too."

The league meet will be held Friday and Saturday at North's pool.

The Norsemen's victory over Ford hinged on North's success in three events. Brett Collins (1:50.09), John Finkelman and David Nielubowicz went 1-2-3 for the Norsemen in the 200-yard freestyle. A 1-2 finish in the 200 individual medley from Jeff Shelden (2:04.21) and Mike O'Connor and a 1-2-5 standing in the 100 butterfly from Steve Williams (54.91), Shelden and Tony Atrasz was also helpful to North's cause.

"We gambled by going head-to-head with the Schreiber boys," O'Connor said of the Ford coach's two sons. "Jeff and Mikey beat Darcy in the IM and Steve Williams beat the other one (Dayce) in the 50 freestyle. Then Williams and Shelden beat them both in the 100 fly. The Schreibers are Ford's two best swimmers and beating them was a big key for us."

The Falcons jumped out to a 10-4 lead with a first and third in the 200 medley relay, but the sweep of the 200 freestyle put North ahead to stay.

Williams' winning time in the 50 freestyle was 22.76. Collins took the 100 freestyle in 51.16, Finkelman won the 500 freestyle in 5:01.63, O'Connor's winning time in the 100 backstroke was 59.05 and Atrasz won the 100 breaststroke in 1:05.72. Don Schmaltz won the diving with 173.90 points.

North also won two relays. The 200 freestyle relay team of Collins, Shelden, Williams and Nielubowicz had a winning time of 1:35.01. Shelden, Finkelman, O'Connor and Collins took first in the 400 freestyle relay in 3:35.41.

Best times were posted by Nielubowicz, 100 freestyle; Jeff Vollmer, 500 freestyle; Rick Helm, 500 freestyle; and J.P. Gamrat, 100 backstroke.

Last weekend, Williams set a pair of varsity records during the Michigan Interscholastic Swim Coaches Association (MISCA) meet.

His winning time of 4:40.01 in the 500 freestyle set a varsity record and he broke the nine-year old school record in the 100 freestyle while leading off the 400 freestyle relay. Williams was also third in the 200 freestyle.

Collins was third in the 500 and third in the 200 freestyle, Shelden was sixth in the 200 IM and ninth in the 500 freestyle. Atrasz was ninth in the 100 breaststroke and missed a state qualifying time by three-tenths of a second.

The 400 freestyle relay team of Williams, Shelden, O'Connor and Collins took fourth in the meet that drew 65 teams from throughout the state.

Puck takes bad bounces for Knights' skaters

By John Miskelly
Special Writer

There seems to be a direct correlation between bad luck and defeats.

University Liggett School hockey coach John Fowler can attest to that after the Knights' 3-1 loss to Notre Dame in a Michigan Prep Hockey League game.

Whenever a ULS skater was in position for an offensive opportunity, the puck didn't get to him. That was especially apparent in the third period when the Knights had momentum.

"I thought we carried the play in the third period," Fowler said. "We played real well in the period."

The loss dropped the Knights to 8-11-1 overall and 3-6 in the league. The Irish improved to 15-3-2 overall and lead the MPHL with an 8-1-1 mark.

ULS is a different team than the one that started the season. Offensive powerhouse Eric Kiskalt has missed most of the season with a serious knee injury and Omar Sawaf's broken shoulder has kept him out of action for two long stretches.

The Knights have three freshmen playing regularly — the same as the senior contingent — and defensive standout Matt Spicer has been moved to forward to plug some holes.

Notre Dame opened the scoring when Jeff Goodman picked up a loose puck in the neutral zone and skated in untouched on ULS goalie Ken McIntyre.

The Knights had only three shots on Irish netminder Mike Van Lacken in the first period. Notre Dame extended its lead to 2-0 at 1:05 of the second period when Goodman notched his second goal of the game.

The Knights' persistence paid off at 6:15 when a good individual effort by Spicer resulted in ULS' only goal as he popped in front of the net with a nice move and drove the puck past Van Lacken.

The Irish increased their lead to 3-1 late in the period when Kevin Stempin deflected Evil Covacha's point shot into the net during a power play.

"We played our type of defensive game," Fowler said. "We wanted to keep it close. And we were." ULS had most of the offensive opportunities in the scoreless third period. Jay Ricci was positioned several times in the high slot, ready to put the puck into the net, but it always bounced over his stick.

Irish coach Mike Manzella was happy with the precise manner in which his team played after clinching the league championship in its previous game.

"We just didn't put the puck in the net, but we did what we wanted to do," Manzella said. Fowler wasn't disappointed in his squad's effort.

"We're learning a lot about how to play," he said. "We're just not getting the scoring."

ULS will complete the regular season tonight, Feb. 24, at 6 p.m. against Flint Powers. State tournament action begins Monday, Feb. 28. The Knights will compete in the regional at Allen Park, which includes Notre Dame, Allen Park Cabrini and Jackson Lumen Christi.

Norsemen have a week to forget

Last week was one that Grosse Pointe North coach Dave Stavale would like to wipe out of his memory.

Unfortunately, it keeps haunting him.

"The kids didn't deserve for this to happen," Stavale said after the disappointing 48-41 loss to Warren Woods-Tower. "We felt we were beyond all of this, but I guess this proves that you never are."

The Norsemen had beaten the Titans by 32 points in their first Macomb Area Conference Blue Division meeting this year, but when Woods-Tower was within striking distance at halftime, Stavale was worried.

"I told the kids the first few minutes of the second half were critical because if we came out and jumped on them it would take away their heart," he said. "But we couldn't let them hang around and gain confidence, which is exactly what happened."

"All of a sudden they couldn't miss. They made some shots in the second half that I haven't seen them make in two years."

North's 11-point lead early in the second half quickly evaporated and by the beginning of the fourth quarter the Titans were in front 35-34. The Norsemen's shooting turned ice cold as they made only two field goals in the third quarter and three in the fourth.

"We weren't getting any offensive rebounds. The kids were working hard, but we were coming up empty. That made every miss like a turnover," Stavale said. "It's a disappointment because in the first half we played well. In the second half we did the right things technically, but the ball wouldn't go through the hole."

North trailed by two points with 18 seconds left, but the Norsemen lost the ball on a turnover. They were forced to foul and Woods-Tower hit a pair of free throws to ice the victory.

Dan Vormelker turned in another fine performance for North with 14 points and 13 rebounds. Mike Melhem scored nine points and Steve Champagne collected six points, five rebounds and four steals.

Earlier, North suffered a 75-

38 loss to Lake Shore, the second-ranked Class B team in most of the state polls.

"We started out fairly well, but we had trouble stopping them," Stavale said. "Then in the second quarter they really charged us and pressured us. They looked great. They totally overpowered us."

The Shorians held a 20-13 lead after one quarter, but held North to only six points in the second period.

One of the factors in the Norsemen's demise was the 25 turnovers they committed.

Vormelker led the way with 13 points and 10 rebounds. Ryan Rouls had nine points and Melhem tossed in eight. Steve Zachary pulled down nine rebounds for North.

ULS in a zone for victory over Hamtramck

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

University Liggett School basketball coach Chuck Wright uses a zone defense just a little more often than Indiana's Bob Knight, but it was a big factor in ULS remaining atop the Metro Conference standings.

"I'm not tied into a certain philosophy, but we've only used the zone one other time this season," Wright said after the Knights nipped Hamtramck 63-62. "But Hamtramck has a big penetrating team and we wanted to keep them from hurting us inside."

"We went to it late in the first half and Hamtramck had trouble on its two or three possessions so we stayed with it in the second half. They never could solve it. We use it in practice when we have to play somebody that plays a zone and we work on it because we might have to go to it in the state tournament, but the only other game we played a zone was against Country Day."

The victory over Hamtramck, which was unbeaten in its six previous home games, came a few days after ULS dropped a 51-49 heartbreaker to Lutheran East. The Eagles share the Metro Conference lead with the Knights.

ULS fell behind early against Hamtramck, but by halftime the Knights led 30-29. ULS stretched its lead to eight points with two minutes left in the fourth quarter, but the Cosmos rallied and cut the margin to 61-60 with 10 seconds to go.

McRill makes state field

Megan McRill of Grosse Pointe Park, who is attending the Killington Mountain Ski School in Vermont is one of 15 qualifiers from the 14-15 age group to qualify for the Vermont skiing championships.

The competition will be held in two parts. The first was last weekend at Burke Mountain. The second portion of the meet will be held March 4-7 at Stratton Mountain.

Joe Grant then hit a pair of free throws to seal the win.

Chris Corneau scored eight points and Vernon Pernel added six in the fourth quarter for the Knights.

"We played our best half-court offense of the year," Wright said. "We didn't have a turnover from the second quarter until late in the third."

"Beating Hamtramck was crucial for us."

Pernel led ULS with 16 points and Corneau and Grant added 14 apiece. Frank Tymrak dished out five assists.

The Knights' loss to East was the second time this season the Eagles have beaten ULS. East won the earlier meeting 53-51 with a bucket at the buzzer in overtime.

The Knights trailed for most of the game, but made a thrilling comeback in the last three minutes. Grant and Pernel hit consecutive three-point baskets to cut East's lead to 48-47. Grant then stole a pass, penetrated the lane and dished the ball off to Tymrak for a layup and a 49-48 ULS lead with 20 seconds remaining.

East answered with a jumper in the paint area by Gerald Broderick. He was fouled and hit the free throw to complete the three-point play and give the Eagles their final margin of victory. Grant just missed a three-point attempt at the buzzer.

Pernel led ULS with 14 points and 12 rebounds. Grant had 12 points, five assists and three steals.

"East was motivated because they had lost two games in the league and they needed this one to get back into a tie for first," Wright said. "But they still have to play at Hamtramck. It won't be easy."

ULS hosts Lutheran North on Friday.

A rebound slips off the fingertips of Grosse Pointe South's Todd Drake during last week's Metro Conference White Division game with Fraser. The Ramblers' Rob Moore also makes an effort to snag the ball. South held off a late Fraser rally to post a 71-70 victory.

South splits close ones

Nothing came easy for Grosse Pointe South's basketball team last week.

"It was a struggle all week long," said Blue Devils' coach George Petrouleas after South held on for a 71-70 victory over Fraser in the Macomb Area Conference White Division.

Earlier in the week, the Blue Devils dropped a 61-59 decision to Anchor Bay.

South's game with Fraser

Sharrow, North trio in regional

Grosse Pointe South wrestling coach Larry Carr wouldn't be surprised if the Blue Devils' lone regional qualifier, Rob Sharrow, makes it all the way to the state meet.

"I think he'll have a good chance of qualifying for the state," Carr said of his junior 160-pounder, who finished third in last week's district at East Detroit. "His goal is to make it to the state and he can do it if he keeps wrestling with intensity."

Sharrow posted a 10-7 decision over Port Huron Northern's Jerry Lumen in the consolation final at 160. Earlier, he had beaten a pair of formidable opponents before losing 9-6 to Roseville's Ryan Tavernier, the eventual champion in the weight class.

"Rob stuck the kid from Fraser who was fourth in the Macomb County meet at 160 and then he beat Anthony Adamo from East Detroit, who was fourth at Macomb at 152," Carr said. "Rob wrestled the type of match we wanted against Adamo. He was very physical and won 16-4."

Carr was disappointed that no more of his wrestlers advanced to the regional Saturday at Troy High School.

"Nobody else was seeded and guys like James Hill, John Hill and Paul Dwaihy lost to the first and second seeds," Carr said. "This was the first year they didn't seed eight kids in every weight class. Only half the wrestlers entered in a class were seeded and we didn't find out until the seeding meeting."

Grosse Pointe North advanced three wrestlers from the East Detroit district, including Jeff Rizzo, the champion at 125 pounds.

Rizzo beat Warren Lincoln's Jody Bird 7-6 in the title match at 125.

North's Dave Sandercott was second at 119 pounds and teammate Charlie Vasapoli was fourth at 130.

Sandercott lost 14-2 to East Detroit's Eric Salyer in the finals and Vasapoli dropped an 11-10 decision to Jason Arnold of Anchor Bay in the consolation final.

was back-and-forth most of the way. The Blue Devils led by five points at halftime, but fell behind by six points after three quarters.

South regained the lead in the fourth quarter and led by six points with about two minutes left, but Fraser hit a pair of three-point goals to get back into the game.

"We gave up some easy baskets on putbacks but give Fraser credit, they came to play," Petrouleas said.

The Ramblers also came to shoot.

They connected on eight of 22 three-point attempts, which enabled them to stay within striking distance of the Blue Devils, who had won handily in an earlier meeting.

Jim Dailey led South with 20 points, while Todd Drake had 14 points and seven rebounds. David Collins played his best game of the season, contributing 12 points, including eight in the fourth quarter. Paul Gentile turned in another fine all-around effort with 10 points, five assists and solid defense. Lee Rupert grabbed eight rebounds. Petrouleas was encouraged by the play of Ben Harwood, who had nine points and five rebounds.

"He finally got the soft cast off his broken finger, so it looks like he's really ready to help us," the coach said.

Other top contributors off the bench were John Trupiano, Jake Howlett, Dan Wolking and Brian Nugent.

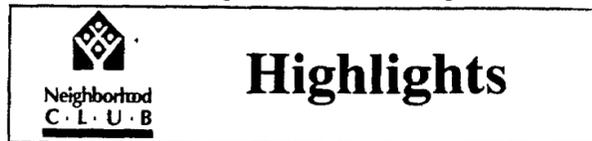

"It was truly a team effort," Petrouleas said. "We got quality minutes from several people."

Anchor Bay's ability to hit long-range shots turned out to be South's downfall.

The Tars hit eight of their 14 three-point attempts, including the winning basket with 35 seconds left.

"We allowed them to out-rebound us and our offensive flow just wasn't there for this game," Petrouleas said. "We didn't move the ball crisply and couldn't get it inside."

Dailey led South with 17 points, Gentile had 14 and Rupert added 10. Collins pulled down a team-high six rebounds.

Highlights

This is the first of a new feature that will appear regularly in the Grosse Pointe News. In it, you'll find information and coverage regarding Neighborhood Club programs and the people who participate in them.

The Neighborhood Club is a non-profit community service organization that has provided recreation to the community for more than 80 years.

The club offers a professionally organized program of leisure activities for families and individuals of all ages. One of its largest areas of concentration is youth and adult league sports.

Adult members of the club can enjoy volleyball, basketball, football, softball and baseball leagues. Youth leagues include floor hockey, basketball, indoor and outdoor soccer, T-ball and girls softball. Many of the youth leagues have a pre-kindergarten instructional program. High school students can participate in a basketball league — where students form their own teams with friends — and a girls fastpitch softball program.

The Neighborhood Club always seeks to expand and improve its programs. Participation by area residents is growing. The present winter sports program has 2,406 athletes playing on 247 teams. Financial assistance is available for low-income families, making participation possible for all who want to play in a league sport.

The Neighborhood Club also offers gymnastics classes for children and fencing instruction for all ages. There are adaptive softball and bowling programs for all ages and a

The Neighborhood Club holds regular clinics for athletes to aid them in development of skills in their favorite sports.

Volunteer coaches and assistants play an important role in the success of the club's youth programs, which are designed to foster good sportsmanship, social skills and high self-esteem. Each year, more than 600 volunteers help achieve those goals.

Sponsors are also important to Neighborhood Club sports. Any business or individual may sponsor a team. Sponsor donations provide uniforms and all donations are tax deductible.

The Neighborhood Club is proud of all its athletes and ensures that members enjoy sports in a safe and positive environment. The club also enforces an equal participation rule, which provides that children have equal playing time, regardless of ability.

A current 1993-94 Neighborhood Club membership is required for participation in programs. An individual membership is $25 and a family membership is $60.

In addition to its sports leagues, the Neighborhood Club houses a senior center, a nursery school and the Bodman computer center, where computer classes are available to children and adults. The computer lab is also open to the public. Equipment can be used by the hour for a fee. There's also the Neighborhood Club thrift shop where treasures of all kinds can be found at bargain prices.

North spikers sweep Lancers

Grosse Pointe North's volleyball team bounced back from two straight defeats in the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division to sweep league rival L'Anse Creuse.

"We did a good job of digging," said coach Leslie Harwood after the 15-9, 15-7 triumph over the Lancers. "Tricia Morrow had nine saves and Maureen Zolik had 15."

Morrow served 100 percent with 15 points in 18 tries. She also had nine hits. Lynette Pone had six service points.

Zolik had five kills among her seven hits and was 24-of-26 passing. Erin Schneider had five hits, two kills and six blocks. Setters Kristen Loehner and Betsy Gebeck were perfect in 21 and 17 attempts, respectively.

Last weekend, the Lady

Norsemen competed in the Bedford Invitational. They didn't win a game, but the experience wasn't a total loss.

"It was tough competition and we played OK," Harwood said. "We lost 15-2, 15-4 to Bedford, but we had 44 attacks in the two games. Unfortunately, we didn't have any kills. We could have beaten Walled Lake Central (a 15-12, 15-13 winner) but made some costly mental errors. The thing that hurt us was our passing. Our serve-receive was only 44 percent."

Errors were again North's downfall in a 15-5, 15-9 loss to Livonia Churchill in the final match of pool play.

"We made 15 to 20 errors in the first game and between 10 and 15 in the second game," Harwood said. "The scores might not show it, but we learned a lot."

Morrow served 11 points, two aces, and was 88 percent passing with 15 saves. She also had 15 hits and three kills. Adriane Salomon served 10 points and Zolik served six.

Zolik had four saves, graded out at 86 percent hitting and had seven kills. Schreiber had 15 blocks, including five for points or sideouts, 14 hits and one kill. Anne Maliszewski was 17-for-19 passing and had four saves.

Erin Peters was 36-for-37 setting with seven assists and three blocks. Loehner was 37-for-39 setting and had five assists, while Gebeck was 18-for-24 with two assists.

North is 15-8-4 overall, and the Lady Norsemen are 9-3 in the MAC Blue.

Soccer champions

The Grosse Pointe Soccer Association Dragons capped a successful season by becoming the first Grosse Pointe team to win a Little Caesars championship. The under-12 girls team posted a 27-2 record with victories in tournaments at Romeo and Oakland University. The Dragons lost to the state champions of Ohio in the semifinals of a tournament in Indianapolis. The Dragons are setting their sights on the state championship this spring and

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

Victorian style design placed on a narrow lot

By W. D. Farmer

A distinguishing wraparound front porch leads to a cozy entry foyer including a coat closet and access to the garage in this quaint, triple-gabled home. The garage can be either a single or double as your lot permits. Access is also provided to a half bath convenient for guests and daytime use.

The large activity room which spans the full depth of the home and includes a fireplace, is highlighted by a two story open area at the rear of the room where the open rail stair leads up to the bedrooms or down to the basement.

The dining room is open to the activity room and includes a counter for snacks and quick meals. The kitchen is U-shaped and has the unique feature of the sink overlooking the snack bar and dining room, and thus looking out to the sun deck and rear yard as well. A laundry room is adjacent and interconnects to the half bath.

The triple windows shown on the stair up provide a light and airy feeling to the balcony area above. There are three bedrooms up, including the large master bedroom retreat. Upon arriving at the bedroom door you are greeted by the sitting area rather than the conventional bedroom. This sitting area leads into the large bedroom and bath. The garden bath is highlighted by a whirlpool tub with step and a double vanity with knee space and a glass enclosed shower stall.

The other two bedrooms share a central hall bath and a linen closet is indicated here as well. A disappearing stair is located in the central hall for attic access and storage.

The Victorian exterior of the home is simple yet appealing. The multiple gable roof lines, horizontal siding and covered wraparound front porch create an impression of days gone by.

Plan No. 680 includes 1,730 square feet of heated space. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn in accordance with FHA and VA requirements. For further information about this plan, write W.D. Farmer Residence Designer Inc., P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, Ga. 30345.

Got the winter blues? Get out the yellow paint!

Are you feeling a little anxious, lack your normal energy or crave carbohydrates?

Not to worry, it's the winter "blues" and you're not alone. Join the millions of Americans who fall into this seasonal depression. The Journal of the American Medical Association in a recent article calls it seasonal affective disorder (SAD).

We simply need some bright-light therapy. So hang on, just a few more weeks to spring. Until then, dress yourself in warm yellow colors or get out the paint brush and surround yourself with sunshine.

Along with red and orange, yellow is one of the three warm colors. Yellow, since it is associated with the sun, is a good therapy color for this time of year. The best advice I can offer at this time (short of an extended vacation in the tropics) is to invest in a gallon of yellow paint to perk up your spirits and spruce up that room you've been meaning to repaint anyway.

Yellow is a highly visible color, quickly perceived, and expresses immediacy. Note the color of traffic signals and signs. It's known to speed up metabolism and is a favorite color for fast food restaurants. Although it is a cheerful and happy color, in its brightest tones it can be irritating and cause feelings of anxiety when confined to a small room.

Virginia Ficarra

Gold — yellow in its grayed-down tones — in a dressing room can make your complexion look sallow.

So select it carefully. It is a good color for rooms that face north and especially "perky" when combined with crisp white woodwork. Remember that colors intensify with quantity, so don't depend on a small paint chip as the final word. Walls reflect off each other, so you may want to paint a small section of a couple of walls first. The lighting in the room will also make a difference.

If your favorite color is yellow, you more than likely have a "sunny disposition." You are artistic, idealistic, intellectual, proud and a good friend. On the other hand, you're also quite a perfectionist and strong willed — relax.

If you have a "nifty" idea on decorating or a question and would like to share it with us, write The Color Wizard, P.O. Box 104, St. Clair Shores, Mich. 48080.

Celebrate spring at District 1 Flower Show at Silverdome

Jump into spring at the Pontiac Silverdome March 3-6, when District 1 of The Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan Inc. presents its third annual Standard Flower Show, titled "Anywhere I Hang My Hat Is Home."

The Michigan Home and Garden Show and the District 1 Flower Show are combined under "the Dome" to bring metro Detroit gardeners and flower lovers a true celebration of spring.

District 1 Flower Show highlights include dozens of dramatic floral designs interpreting themes like "The Hogan: Home of the American Indian" and "Northern Lights: As Seen From An Igloo" (an illuminated design using black lights).

Succulents, herbs, topiaries and living wreaths will be on display in the horticulture division, along with a wealth of other unusual plant specimens.

The Michigan Home and Garden Show, held in conjunction with the District 1 Flower Show, includes more than 15 beautiful gardens, jam-packed with lovely spring flowers. Spectacular feature gardens incorporate the latest trends in outdoor settings — a cascading water river bed, an English conservatory greenhouse and other unique architectural accents. Professional landscape designers will be on hand to advise would-be shoppers and do-it-yourselfers.

Lectures and demonstrations will be presented daily on a variety of subjects from birds, bats and butterflies to water gardening, floral design, natural crafting and herb gardening. "The Environmental Gardener," Laurence Sombke, will preview his new book "Beautiful Easy Lawn and Landscapes" in a series of seminars. Workshops on deck-building, paver bricking and various aspects of landscaping will also be presented.

Tickets are $6 for adults and $3 for children 6 to 14. Children 5 and under are admitted free. The price includes admission to both the Home and Garden Show and The District 1 Flower Show. Show hours are Thursday, March 3, 3 p.m. to 10 p.m.; Friday, March 4, noon to 10 p.m.; Saturday, March 5, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Sunday, March 6, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Discount coupons are available at Elias Bros. Big Boy restaurants and Amoco stations. For further information, call (313) 456-1681.

EXTRA BUTTONS — Here's what I do with those extra buttons that come with new garments and which you can never find when you need them.

I stitch one of the buttons to the inside of a pocket on the garment or under a collar. When a button gets lost and needs replacing, a replacement is handy. Be sure to keep other loose buttons secured in a jar with a lid or in a plastic container. Myrna T., West Trenton, N.J.

First Security claims top spot in home mortgages

First Security Savings Bank logged a record $6.2 billion in new residential mortgage financings for the calendar year 1993, announced Mark Hammond, executive vice president of First Security and a resident of Grosse Pointe Farms.

"We are very pleased with our success over the last year," Hammond said. "It is the result of vigorous expansion into stable markets, superior people and excellent teamwork. We are fortunate because the current business climate and the state of the economy have kept interest rates low. We also have the strong equity position needed to sustain our strategic growth."

First Security Savings Bank is the first Michigan company, including all banks and thrifts, to reach the $6 billion mark in mortgage financings in one calendar year. Since its formation in 1987 as a federally chartered savings bank, First Security has grown into one of the nation's most profitable thrifts.

In a recent five-year performance analysis of the country's Top 500 largest savings institutions, First Security Savings Bank ranked first in return on equity (ROE), and second in return on assets (ROA). With headquarters in Bloomfield Hills, First Security has retail offices in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana; and wholesale operations in Michigan and 26 other states, plus the District of Columbia.

What's in a name? A lush, colorful world

The confusing thing about daffodils, narcissus and jonquils is that they are all the same thing and, furthermore, they are all members of the amaryllis family.

There are many varieties of daffodils. The ones we are seeing now in the supermarket, promising that some day soon we really will have spring, are the yellow, trumpet-shaped blooms that William Wordsworth had in mind in his famous poem.

Daffodils are native to the mountains and valleys of Spain and Portugal and have been known and loved since very ancient times. They were used to decorate temples in ancient Greece and are mentioned in literature from Chaucer to the authors of today. Columbus knew and loved daffodils and Shakespeare refers to them many times.

It was mostly wild daffodils that our ancestors brought to this country in the days of the first colonists, but it was in England about 1870 that crossing with what were called "lent-lilies" produced the daffodils we know today.

In the Victorian language of flowers, the daffodil is the symbol of egotism and conceit. On the other hand, it is also the emblem of the Annunciation. It is the Greek plant of Nemesis, the Chinese emblem of winter, and of good fortune, and the Japanese symbol of formality, mirth and joy.

It won't be long until daffodils will begin to bloom in our own gardens, and spring will help us forget the rigors of this strenuous winter.

The confusion arising from daffodils, narcissus and jonquils being members of the amaryllis family is not a unique thing in the horticultural world. Why do we call those bright flowers nasturtiums, which is the botanical name for watercress? And why is the mock orange usually called syringa, which is the botanical name for lilac?

William Shakespeare's statement that a rose by any other name would smell as sweet is perfectly true, but, just the same, it's fun to trace some of the ways by which familiar garden plants come by their popular names.

Many of our favorites have names just slightly changed from their Latin origins, such as rose, lily, tulip, peony, violet and lavender. And many of the standbys of our herb gardens come to us in the same way, including mint, borage, fennel, coriander, thyme and chervil.

Carrots, beets and cauliflower and others have been a part of the English language for so long that we have forgotten that these are their Latin names, just rounded off a bit.

Nobody now talks about gilly flowers, which we call carnations, and the medieval eglantine is now sweetbrier.

Garden Shed

By Ellen Probert

The names of many of our grains, such as wheat, oats, barley and rye and also hemp, flax, hazel, oak, yew, thistle, holly, daisy and daffodil are pure Anglo-Saxon in origin. The Greek helianthus has become the sunflower.

Many of the rollicking medieval names for plants have been lost (some in favor of more prosaic names) but how exuberant a garden would seem planted with such things as "bobbing Joan," "bouncing Bet," or "sweet sultan." Or with "Iustie gallant," "gardener's garters," or "glare of the garden."

Some flowers have names referring to biblical incidents, such as "Aaron's rod," "Jacob's ladder," "Solomon's seal" and "star of Bethlehem," but what has become of "Grace-of-God," "Gethsemane" and "Hallelujah?"

In some areas of rural England people refer to all flowers as lilies and all weeds as docks, which makes everything much simpler. And then there is the cheerful yellow flower that grows around many farmhouses, which the same folks call "welcome-home-husband-no-matter-how-drunk."

People have garden-related names, too. Most of us have known people with the surnames of Gardner, Farmer, Thresher or Flower.

Many girls answer to flower names such as Rose, Violet, Lily or Blossom, and think of all the boys called Bud.

Changes in name are not the only difference between antique and modern plants, especially vegetables and fruits. Shape and color have also been altered over time. The most popular watermelon in 1865 was called "ice cream" because of its pale pink-and-white color, and the canteloupe your great-grandmother served was green although it was perfectly ripe. Gradually these melons were made to have an orange-pink color and now there is no such thing as a green canteloupe, unless it is totally unripe.

This change was contrived and was a matter of fashion. Green-tinted melons were the rage in the 19th century but are not popular in the 20th.

Before 1610, carrots were spherical in shape and only gradually over several centuries have they become the long, tapered vegetables they are today. On the other hand, beets and turnips, once shaped like a child's spinning top, are now completely round.

New firm connects buyers with houses, affordable lots

Prospective homeowners in the "Your Home" area now can purchase a new home, arrange financing, select appliances and other extras, and purchase property on which to build, all in one visit and all under one roof.

Visitors to Farmington Hills' new Keating's Home Town are able to choose from among nine model homes in various sizes and styles, then select an affordable lot in the community of their choice from an up-to-date computerized database of land throughout southeast Michigan.

Currently, Keating's Home Town has identified an estimated 38 lots in the City of Grosse Pointe, 95 in Grosse Pointe Farms, 57 in Grosse Pointe Park, 20 in Grosse Pointe Woods, 60 in Harper Woods and 578 in St. Clair Shores.

"Affordable lots" include those with market values between $10,000 and $40,000. Company founder Howard T. Keating II said the process being used in the showroom will assist municipalities as well as individuals.

at affordable prices," Keating said. "But an added benefit in our approach is that buyers can choose to build in any community they wish, rather than being limited to a particular new subdivision. Cities and townships will find that lots that have sat vacant will finally begin to fill in. As this happens, we anticipate a direct and positive impact on a community's tax base and property values."

Keating Home Town's two-acre showroom offers its model homes for sale displayed as an indoor neighborhood, complete with trees, flowers, a waterfall, walkways and streetlights. Buyers select from ranches, Cape Cods, Colonials and vacation homes priced from $80,000 to upward of $135,000, depending on the cost of land. In addition to lot selection, every other aspect of the home purchase also is arranged through Keating's Home Town, from selecting appliances, garages and decks to arranging a mortgage, insurance and all title and site work through construction.

The showroom, which opened in mid-January, is the first of its kind, and is planned as the first of 70

Keating's Home Town showrooms to be opened nationwide over the next five years, Keating said.
