Remember mom on Sunday North, South lobby for night football

By Kathleen Ryan Special Writer

Let there be light. And along with it - night football in Grosse Pointe.

That's the message the athletic booster clubs from North and South high schools sent to the board of education at its meeting Monday evening.

The clubs wish to donate lighting systems for their football fields to the school board, and were seeking board approval for the gift.

Tom Mertz, head of the South Drive for Lights Committee, and Terry Kasiborski, president of the North Booster Club, made presentations to the board, describing the systems they wish to install and the reasons they feel night football is important to a community like Grosse Pointe.

That was the question asked by a sixth grade student about the slaying of teacher Marjorie Angyal, 60, who along with her husband Kenneth Angyal, 61, was found shot to death Sunday morning in the couple's home.

Park officials believe that the couple's son, Thad Angyal, 24, killed his parents and then took his own life.

According to a public safety department statement, an officer reported a fire at the Angyal home at 1109 Bishop at about 4:45 a.m. Sunday.

Park firefighting units were immediately called to the scene. At about 4:56 a.m., City of Grosse Pointe firefighting units were called in under the mutual aid agreement. Farms firefighting units were summoned at 5:05 a.m.

The fire was brought under control by 7 a.m. and three bodies were found on the second floor. Department of public safety detective Lt. David Hiller said the bodies were badly burned, and it took officers some time to determine that they had been shot.

Hiller said in a Sunday afternoon press conference that Kenneth and Mariorie Angval were found in separate bedrooms and that Thad Angyal shot and killed each parent using a .45 caliber semi-automatic hand-

Hiller said Thad Angyal then poured gasoline around the second floor of the house, ignited it and went into his bedroom where he shot himself with the handgun he had used to kill his parents.

The weapon was found in Thad Angyal's hand. Investigators also found a gasoline can upstairs. The large number of books and magazines kept in the house by the family made it especially difficult to put out the fire, said Hiller. The fire spread to the attic, destroying it, but did not reach the first floor.

"Even before we had the fire under control, we knew that there were bodies in the house," Hiller said. "But because there was so much debris, it took officers hours of digging to get to the bodies. It was then that we discovered that they had been shot."

The bodies were so badly burned, said Hiller, that officers at the scene were unable to determine if the parents suf-fered from multiple gunshot wounds. The county medical examiner had to determine that and a preliminary report was released to the public safety department Monday afternoon.

"The medical examiner's preliminary report indicated that Kenneth Angyal was shot once in the forehead," said Hiller. "Marjorie Angyal was shot once in the right cheek and Thad was shot once in the left side of his head. The report said that no smoke was found in any of the victims' lungs, indicating that they were all dead before fire or smoke reached them."

"We may never know why this happened. There are no relatives in Michigan, and we haven't had the chance to speak with them, but in a case like this, well, quite frankly, I don't know if we'll ever have a motive.'

Hiller said that he had heard a number of theories about why this tragedy occurred, centering on a conflict between father and son over tennis, but he would not comment on any speculation. He said investigators would have to finish interviewing friends, neighbors and

Breaking ground

The City of Grosse Pointe officially broke ground last Friday at Neff Park for the installation of new play equipment.

City officials hope to complete the first phase of the three-year project by Memorial Day.

"The only thing that would stop us would be the weather," said Brian Murphy, administrative assistant.

The first phase brings two play structures to the park, relocates some of the existing equipment and adds a new sidewalk that completes the perimeter sidewalk around the park.

"The weather has been very favorable lately, so we should have a very exciting Memorial Day weekend," said Diane Zedan, director of parks and recreation.

Reason why cats go 'out of control'

Recently while visiting at a friend's house, I witnessed something that left me awestruck. I noticed my friend's cat, Peuter, becoming anxious as it stared out the sliding glass door.

Soon after my observation, Peuter went ballistic! I watched in amazement as he tore through the family room. He sped across the carpet and threw himself over the sofa and chair. He raced around the pe rimeter of the room — around and around and around. He disappeared into another room for a moment, probably to gain even more speed, and then came charging back.

This sudden activity triggered some concern - OK, lots of concern. As I looked at my friend, she unconcernedly continued her story. I wondered, "How can she be so seemingly unaffected by Peuter's sudden change in behavior?" With my eyes bulging and mouth agape, I had no doubt that my face showed my own horror. I thought, "Oh, my God, Peuter's gone mad!"

Within minutes. Peuter was literally climbing the walls. He raced around the room, gaining speed-faster and faster! "He's out of control! He's slipped into a hysterical frenzy! He's going to kill himself. We must save Naturally, I was overreacting just a bit.

I cut my friend off in midsentence and asked, "Do you notice anything strange happening? Is it just me, or is your cat just a little hyper today?" She laughed and said, "Oh, he does that a lot. I'm not sure why. I think he's playing. It doesn't last very long and then he's normal again.'

I wondered if this was indicative of a brain disorder. I wondered what "kind" of cat did this. Was it just a few cats, a certain breed of cat, or did all cats have this "affliction" and was it an "affliction" at

I decided to investigate this wild display further and found a very simple explanation behind it.

Veterinarian Bruce Fogle said this behavior is quite natural for cats. It appears to actually be necessary in that it gives cats an outlet for stress and pent up emotions.

Biologically, when cats are confronted with fear or danger, their adrenalin begins pumping. This causes the heart rate to increase, the blood pressure to change, and the skin temperature to rise. Of course, the cat never gives an indication of his "true feelings" therefore, we don't see the outward appearance of these changes.

Fogle says, "When the danger passes, the body returns to normal, but there has been no chance to vent all of that emotion - even the most controlled cat needs to let off steam. Hunters (lions, tigers, etc.) will do it after a capture and kill. They dance around the body in a reverie of excitement and joy. Housebound cats never have the chance. Instead, house cats have a "mad half hour." They release their pent-up energy by suddenly racing around the Fogle points out that some cats will race in circles in a room until they've reached a "critical velocity." He says. "At that point, they defy gravity and, using centrifugal force, race around the walls as far as possible.'

Not to worry, though, as my friend pointed out - Fogle assures us that "dignity returns a few minutes later."

Important filters for black and white shots

Recently, I wrote about the filters that were important in color photography. For black and white lovers, there are important filters, too.

Similar to color photography, the right filter with black and white film can turn an ordinary picture into something quite special.

Today, I'm going to discuss the filters essential for black and white photography:

 Red-orange-yellow family — These filters are the most important when shooting in black and white. Beginning with yellow and ending with red, this family of filters progressively darkens the blue of the sky to add all-important impact to your pictures.

With no filter, separation between blue sky and clouds will be lost in a black and white print and the sky will appear washed out.

But by using one of this family of filters, here's what happens. A yellow filter will darken the sky to a light gray. The orange filter darkens it further and the red makes the sky almost black. The clouds always remain white. So can you visualize the drama these filters will add to your shot? The way they work is that yellow-orange-red filters progressively block the blue light from the sky from reaching the film during exposure - yellow the least, red the most. The resulting prints therefore show progressive darkness in the sky.

 Green — This filter lightens its own color making-foliage such as grass and leaves, lighter in the finished print. Greater contrast is achieved and a more pleasing picture results.

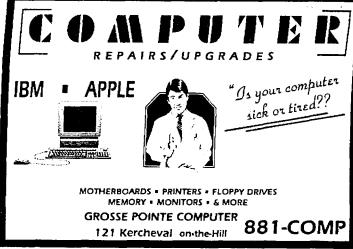

• Common filters with color film - Three of the filters I recently discussed in my column on color filters are also very useful when shooting in black and white. The skylight serves as protection or "insurance" for an expensive lens. The diffusion filter softens harsh facial lines in a black and white portrait just as it does with color. And a set of close-up filters will move you in close for those tight shots of springtime flow-

Filters are an inexpensive investment that will produce a high rate of return for your photography.

Daughters enjoy seeing parents at work in Grosse Pointe

By Jim Stickford

Staff Writer All across Grosse Pointe mothers and fathers were taking their daughters to work as a part of the Ms. Foundation for Women's "Take Your Daughter to Work Day." While the events were enjoyed by all, some girls were asking the question what's the big deal about women in the workforce?

Emily Krajniak, 10, daughter of Park city manager Dale Krajniak, said that she welcomed the chance to see her dad at work, but thought that the days of girls being shunted to the mommy track are over.

"I think in the old days, girls used to be told that they had to stay at home and take care of their families," said Emily.
"But that's not what happens today.

Emily's father Dale agrees with her assessment.

"I think it's more the norm that mothers work these days, said Krajniak. "That wasn't true 15 to 20 years ago. I think these days daughters anticipate and look forward to having careers, and I think that's a positive step. The forces that place daughters on a certain career track like secretary or teacher aren't as prevelant as they once were, or have disappeared.'

Bon Secours sponsored special activities for "Take Your Daughter to Work Day." Melissa Kostera, who helped organize the activities, said that she believes that it's important to present to girls a balanced set of choices.

"At Bon Secours, about 85 percent of the employees are women," said Kostera. "The largest group of employees we have are nurses, but there are also women x-ray technicians, women pharmacists, physical therapists, dietiticians. In most hospitals, the majority of employees are women.'

I know a number of women who had a job, then quit to raise the kids. It used to be the other way around. You raised the kids and then got the job. I think a lot more women would like to do that, except that it's very difficult to live on one paycheck and raise a family. That's something that's also changed over the past 20 or 30 years.

Firms beware of Nigerian princes bearing gifts that American businesses are being targeted by a "Nigerian prince" for an old-fashioned confidence swindle purportedly offering huge sums of money from the Nigerian government. This scheme, though implausible at first glance, has achieved remarkable success among unwitting American entrepreneurs.

This is how the scheme works. American companies are contacted by mail by a mysterious Nigerian businessman with an impressive, and probably fictitious, title such as "prince," "chief" or "doctor." The writer states that he is contacting the American business on a referral and that he is operating with the knowledge of Nigerian government officials.

Offering only the sketchiest of details, the writer explains that a large sum of money,

The biggest rip-off is a "tax" which must be paid before the ultimate payoff, which of course, never materializes. One victim admitted paying more than $400,000 before reporting the fraud to authorities.

The arrogant perpetrators of this scheme know that few victims will step forward to complain for fear of implicating themselves in a fraud being committed on the government of Nigeria. Gravel killers face June 8 sentencing

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer

The two Detroit men who killed Grosse Pointe Farms businessman Benjamin Gravel in 1990 are scheduled to be sentenced for first-degree murder on June 8.

At an April 25 pre-sentencing hearing, Kermit Haynes and Cortez Miller were ordered to appear before Detroit Recorder's Court Chief Judge Dalton Roberson for sentencing as adults. The hearing was a result of a Michigan Supreme Court decision earlier this month that reversed Roberson's sentences for Haynes and

Many Americans weren't happy when President George Bush broke his "no new taxes" pledge in 1990, but Grosse Pointe Farms residents and those who use Kercheval can at least see where their tax money is going. Kercheval, between Fisher and Kerby, will be resurfaced during the 1995 construction season. In 1990, Bush approved the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA), which made Kercheval and Moross (between Ridge and Lakeshore) part of the National Highway System and eligible for federal funds.

That means the Farms will only have to pick up about $111,000 or 20 percent of the estimated $550,000 cost of construction.

The Farms city council April 25 approved $30,000 for Hubell, Roth & Clark, the city's consulting engineers, to submit a preliminary construction cost estimate and design fee. The council also approved an addi-

Psychiatrist went from Holocaust horror to peace of the Pointes

Dr. Emanuel Tanay has high praise for "Schindler's List," Stephen Spielberg's Acadamy Award-winning film.

Tanay's father was executed by Amon Goeth, the anti-hero of Spielberg's powerful chronicle of the Holocaust.

Tanay, his mother and sister survived the Holocaust.

"Schindler's List' is a work of art," he said. "The term 'good' is an understatement. It's a great historical contribution, a new genre in terms of film. It's accurate. It's a great achievement, a concise history of the Holocaust."

He's ready to write his own account of growing up as a Jew in a Europe dominated by the Nazis. In fact, he has a bookcase crammed with notes, research and memoirs of World War II.

"I always said when I retired, I'd write the book. But I haven't retired yet. Probably won't. And I haven't written the book," he said.

Tanay is a forensic psychiatrist and clinical professor of psychiatry at Wayne State University who is known nation-

Health care seminar planned

The public is invited Tuesday, May 17, to attend a free nutrition/alternative health care seminar at the Harper Woods Public Library from 7 to 8 p.m.

The topics that will be covered are cholesterol, hormone replacement therapy for menopause and ritalin and hyperactivity in children. This seminar will be presented by Dr. David Jantz and the Grosse Pointe Woods Chiropractic Clinic.

To register, call the library at 343-2575. The library is located at 19601 Harper (I-94 service drive next to the police sta-wide for his courtroom testimony in spectacular highprofile homicides.

He testified on behalf of Jack Ruby, for instance, and Ted Bundy.

And Valentine Kwiatkowski of Westland, who shot his overweight daughter in the head while she slept; and Douglas Glazier, a former Detroit News reporter who shot his lover, Detroit policewoman Carol Roketa, with her own gun.

After 34 years in a 24th floor office in the Fisher Building, he moved his office to Grosse Pointe Park a few weeks ago. He's lived in the Pointes since

He concentrates on cases concerning medical and legal matters, he said. In spite of his reputation, he most often deals with civil cases - people with closed-head injuries, for instance - or matters involving post-traumatic stress disorder.

"But it's the homicide cases that attract attention," he said.

The 66-year-old self-described workaholic said he's trying to lighten up. He hopes to develop the habit of walking to work. He wants to devote more time to his lifelong ambition of writing a book about his teenage years as a Jew in Germany, Poland and Hungary during World War II. He wants to write about how he survived the Holocaust.

As for people who say the Holocaust didn't happen: "I understand them," he said. "I don't believe it myself. I remember it. But I don't believe it. The reality was far worse than 'Schindler's List."

Tanay was born in 1928 and grew up in Miechow, Poland. When the Nazis marched into Poland, his family fled. In 1942, he was sent to a Catholic monastery, where he pretended to have converted to Catholi-

"Jews spoke Polish with an accent," Tanay said. "It was difficult to hide it. One day, when one of the priests made a correction of my accent, he smiled in an unusual way.

"His smile made me anxious, minds can break," he said. so I hid inside the church organ that priest had known about Tanay escaped to Hungary. By 1944, when Jews were being persecuted in Hungary, he had already joined the underground and had been captured and sent to a concentration camp in Yugoslavia. Friends helped him escape and he was able to join his mother and sister in Budapest, where they were liberated in 1945.

They learned later that his father had been killed.

After the war, Tanay moved to Munich to study at the university. He started out in political science, but soon switched to medicine. He came to America in 1952 to finish preparing to be a psychiatrist, and moved to Michigan in 1958 to join the staff of the Ypsilanti State Hos-

Because he had developed an interest in the legal aspects of psychotherapy in the early 1960s, Tanay was invited to interview Lee Harvey Oswald's killer, Jack Ruby.

Tanay believes most crimes are not committed by criminals, but by ordinary people - "like you and me" - who have been pushed beyond their limits.

Everybody has a breaking point, he said. "The mind is like any organ - like bones for instance. Bones are designed to hold weight. Minds are designed to hold experiences and emotions. And like bones, "Of the last 100 homicides in him to comment on his experi-any city," Tanay said, "guess how many were regular people, upstanding citizens?

"I say about 60 percent. At one time, before drugs were so common, it was probably 80 percent. In some countries it's 90 percent. But it's always a majority."

The law says there are different kinds of homicides, he said. Legally, there's a difference between a hitman and a psychotic mother who kills her child.

We make these distinctions in the law, he said, but when the psychotic mother comes to trial, we don't want to practice what we preach. We don't want to see any difference.

Tanay doesn't say people shouldn't be accountable for their actions or shouldn't be punished. However, he said, what they often need is treatment and/or confinement.

As for his workaholic ways, he said he loves what he does and doesn't need much sleep. He's usually awake at 5 a.m., reading. He reads professional materials and books about World War II and the Holocaust. He rarely reads fiction.

He skis and sails. His 35-foot sailboat is probably the oldest vessel docked at the Grosse Pointe Park marina, he said. It was one of the first fiberglass

It was the best of times and the worst of times for Mack Avenue merchants with sign problems. Grosse Pointe Park restaurant owner Anthony Milana was pleased when the Park council quickly granted him a sign variance, while Woods merchant Ed Schmidt has to wait until late May to find out if the Woods council will even consider amending the city's sign ordinance.

"I've been in the Park for 25 years," said Milana. "They've always been willing to work with business owners to come to a mutually acceptable solution to a problem.'

Milana's problems began when the awning outside his Mack avenue Mama Rosa's restaurant was damaged by the extreme cold of last winter. The awning, which was already 8 years old, had to be replaced.

But Milana wanted to replace it with an awning with the flag up, he was given a lettering larger than allowed by Park city ordinances. So Milana went to the council and Mack Avenue merchants atasked for a variance on April tended last week's Woods plan-25. And after a short debate, he ning commission meeting to was granted a variance.

"We've granted numerous restrictive ordinance.

Phase II to begin at Neff

A new gatehouse, new fences and a new landscape plan are part of the second phase of the City of Grosse Pointe Foundation's Neff Park improvement program slated for this spring.

Also part of Phase II are a semi-circle turnaround area near the planned gatehouse, a bicycle storage area, relocating the well-known concrete eagles and installing new flag poles.

Last year, new wrought iron fencing, a brickway, wooden benches and trees comprised the first phase of the project.

New street signs on Jefferson and Kercheval were added with new signs for Mack planned. More than 250 donors helped raise close to $50,000 last year. The foundation thanks all of the contributors and hopes this year's efforts will be as success-Anyone wanting to contribetters to the editor about community issues, and especially when they involve the public schools, often create new controversies.

No freedom of the press for letters?

Such a controversy now is occurring over the publication in the Grosse Pointe News of almost weekly letters to the editor from an organization that calls itself Concerned Citizens of Grosse Pointe.

Some of the complaints come from the Concerned Citizens who object to the elimination or editing of their letters because they repeat facts and arguments listed in letters already published.

But some also come from citizens who feel that the Concerned Citizens are using our letters columns to publicize their own limited agenda and that the newspaper is doing a disservice by continuing to publish them.

The trouble is that neither side really understands the obligation that a free press enjoys under our First Amendment. We were awarded our freedom in the Constitution in order to assure our protection against government attempts to control us.

But in return we in the news media accept the responsibility of offering our readers the opportunity to express their views in letters to the editor whether we agree with them or not.

ED!TORIAL

John Minnis, Editor, 343-5590 Ronald J. Bernas, Assistant Editor

That is what we try to do through the publication of a variety of views about our schools, whether they come from an organization that terms itself Concerned Citizens or from other equally concerned citizens who express different views.

Sometimes, when the debate on issues such as abortion and gun control gets out of hand, we call a halt on the grounds that most of the arguments pro and con already have been aired and, furthermore, neither issue is likely to be settled soon in Lansing or Washington to the satisfaction of both sides.

The schools, however, constitute a major public, cultural and economic resource for this community. We continue to defend them in our editorials against attacks by the Concerned Citizens and other critics, even though we occasionally have differences with school leaders over how we arrive at the goals we believe we

Those goals in general call for continuation of the high quality of education this community has enjoyed for years as well as fair treatment of teachers, students and taxpayers in raising the revenues to finance that quality.

But in supporting those goals we believe we should offer all our readers the opportunity to express their views in the letter box (as space permits) so that it truly becomes a public forum.

We continue to believe, with this nation's Founding Fathers, that truth is more likely to emerge in the long run from the dissemination of conflicting opinions than from any attempt to censor participants in public discussions.

An attack on teachers' tenure emocratic victories in three House special elections last week restored a 55-55 partisan split in the state House and probably ends the spate of union-busting legislation passed during the recent period of GOP control.

However, it does not seem to have ended the campaigns against Michigan's teachers in view of the start last week of a petition drive aimed at repealing teachers' tenure.

A sponsor of the petition drive said it was organized by a group of parents and activists in Chelsea, Mich., who fear that Stephen Leith, the Chelsea teacher charged with shooting to death his superintendent, Joseph Piasecki, would be found innocent and restored to his post.

The goal of the organization, Parents' Alliance to Repeal Tenure (PART), presumably 1s to make it easier for school boards to fire bad teachers and keep them out of the state's classrooms.

However, if the case against Leith is as strong as it is made out to be in the media, we think the Chelsea parents should have little fear of Leith's return.

But since the current system puts tenure appeals into the courts and the state Department of Education, eliminating tenure protection would deprive Leith and teachers generally of the protection of due process guaranteed to all citizens.

Removal of that protection would give local school boards the final decision about a teacher's removal, no matter how trivial, petty or remote from the school situation the charges brought against the teacher might be.

This sounds to us like another of the continuing attacks on the public school system hatched by the GOP administration, with the help this time of the Michigan State School Boards Association and the state Chamber of Commerce, which helped publicize the repeal proposal.

Gov. John Engler's trip to Washington to brag about his supposed victories spurs speculation he is seeking more right-wing conservative support to improve his chances for re-election - and for a place on the 1996 GOP national ticket.

However, he appears to have ignited a serious fire of opposition not only from the MEA and its friends but from Michigan unions generally, all of which means his re-election will be stoutly resisted.

n death, as in life, Richard Milhaus Nixon remains a controversial figure Lin the minds of the public as well as in the words of the news media.

Reactions to the death of the 37th president have ranged from those who pilloried him for his failure to end the Vietnam War sooner than he did to those who claim, as did one caller to CNN, he was the "greatest president in our history."

So now we have only four living expresidents: Ronald Reagan, 83; Gerald Ford 80; and George Bush and and Jimmy Carter, both 70, with Carter still Death, as it came to Richard Nixon, will come sooner or later to the aging survivors of the presidential club. Like Nixon, all deserve our respect for their service in the presidency, if not always our admiration for their performance.

Instead, she hammered hard against crime, outlining a tough 10-point legislative program to guarantee life imprisonment for career criminals and strengthen iaw eniorcement's nand.

A firm believer in term limits for politicians, she co-sponsored the campaign to adopt term limits in Michigan and also has promised to serve no more than two terms if she's elected.

She backs the campaign to elect more women to Congress and says she is running because not enough young business and professional men are willing to challenge the professional politicians who occupy most of the seats in Congress.

Whether she will be able to capture the Republican nomination is still open to question, despite her lead in recent public opinion polls, because Spencer Abraham, a former state GOP chairman, is leading in party fund-raising.

Yet she also served her party as GOP national committeewoman for eight years, was co-chair of the Bush campaign in Michigan in both 1988 and 1992, and co-chaired state and national campaigns for other Republican candidates.

Overall, she is an impressive candidate who shares an important characteristic with her former father-in-law. She knows where she stands on the issues and expresses her views as directly and as forcefully as he always did.

South actor stands by 'My Girl'

To the Editor:

As the 15-year-old actor who portrayed the elderly gentleman making the gesture that so offended Mr. Steinkampf of Harper Woods in our successful production of "Me And My Girl," I am utterly insulted by the way in which he refers to our production.

Referring to the cast's rendition of "Me And My Girl" as "seedy" and a "theatrical insult" is not the way to teach children the values he says should be learned in school. Thinking of the musical that I, and 140 others worked on for months with no incentive but our own assurance that we would have a wonderful production, the words which come to mind are not "seedy," or "theatrical insult;" they are commitment, dedication and excellence. These values are taught to us not only by our parents and families, they are also enforced by the many wonderful members of Grosse Pointe South's faculty, who not only produced and directed the show, but also gave the cast and crew more than a few lessons in dedication and discipline as well.

To omit scenes and actions that largely contribute to the plot of the production would compromise the quality of the show and do a great disservice to the many people who worked to make this production successful. Censorship is something artists, actors, musicians have fought for decades to overcome. It certainly says something positive about the values of Grosse Pointe when the students and faculty who contribute and participate in their high school's dramatic productions refuse to be a part of this heinous act of oppression.

It is also a gross overreaction to imply our production advocated obscenity, the abuse of alcohol and prostitution. The implication that our directors promoted and trained us to carry out these acts is equally as absurd.

If an apology is in order it should be forthcoming from those who attempt to undermine the sincere effort of those who made a diligent effort to produce a show for the enjoyment of the community. To put their morals and artistic judgment in an unflattering light not only discourages them from attempting to involve students in the arts, but also insults them as well. As a point of interest, Mr. Steinkampf, Noel Gay's musical "Me And My Girl" has been a classic example of English satire since 1934. The students who attend Grosse Pointe South are well aware of the difference between satire and farce in the theater, and the reality of life. As stated by a member of the cast, "We should no more believe the people in "Me And My Girl" are be having like Grosse Pointe students than we should assume reading "Black Boy" by Richard Wright makes us racist.'

It is time for Mr. Steinkampf, who was so quick to condemn the Grosse Pointe public schools, to discover the many outstanding elements, we as students, know are in our fine arts, music and drama programs. These programs have continued to produce state champions in their respective fields, consistently for the past eight years. To denounce programs consisting of such academic excellence, is to weaken the hard work and tireless effort of those students and faculty, who, together, made a show that is beyond dramatic reproach.

South Player offended

To the Editor: Mr. Steinkampf:

According to my dictionary, seedy is defined as "shabby and disreputable." I feel that our production of "Me And My Girl" (not gal) did not fit this definition. I also feel the choice of the show was fit and proper for our "high school" because we have reached a point in our education where high school material can be simple and boring for the students and the audience. We try to expand our horizons by striving to be our very best every day and that includes using advanced materials. In that sense, the show was definitely not a waste of our talents but rather a challenge because it contained materials relating to the real world.

As stage manager, I read through the script more than enough times to find that it contained no profanity. Yes, that's right, none. Profanity was not used durtate Sen. John Kelly of Grosse Pointe Woods, who is giving up his I legislative seat to run for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate, Sunday billed himself as a fiscal conservative who is a liberal on social issues.

Appearing on Channel 7's "Spotlight" program, Kelly conceded that several other candidates are outspending him for the nomination to succeed retiring Democratic Sen. Donald Riegle Jr.

Kelly insisted, however, that despite his limited resources, his independent record in Lansing had won him strong consideration for the seat.

While other Democratic candidates claim labor endorsements, Kelly said many labor leaders do not speak for their members and that in his 16 years in the state Senate he had received strong backing from rank-and-file union members.

In Washington, he said he would continue to act as a fiscal conservative and a social-issues liberal. Achieving that record in Lansing helps explain why he won four terms in the state Senate and served Grosse Pointe's interests on a number of important issues.

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. today, Thursday, May 5, at St. Michael Episcopal Church in Grosse Pointe Woods for Dr. Robert S. Sinclair, 77, who died Saturday, April 30, 1994, at his home in St. Clair Shores.

Born in Royal Oak, Dr. Sinclair was a former resident of Grosse Pointe Woods.

He attended the University of Michigan and graduated from Kirksville (Missouri) College of Osteopathic Medicine. He had a private practice in Grosse Pointe Farms for 50

Dr. Sinclair was a member of the American Osteopathic Association since 1938 and the Wayne County and Michigan Associations of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons since 1940. He was president of the Wayne County association in 1957.

Dr. Sinclair was the first doctor of osteopathy in the U.S. armed forces, where he was a lieutenant in the U.S. Public Health Service from 1944-45.

He was president of the Lochmoor Club in 1960, a 25year member of the Players Club and a charter member of the Harper Woods Rotary Club.

Although she's still able to do many things she's always done, she doesn't seem to enjoy them as much as she once did.

So when she suggested we visit The Whittier, I wanted to find time to help her make a decision she'd be happy with. Well, it didn't take more than one look at their spacious riverfront suites to convince her that The Whittier was the best move she could make. For example, she needn't bother with cooking her own meals each day, The Whittier has the availability of three meal service. The biggest plus, should the need arise, is the availability of on-site 24-hour medical supervision.

I know they've got programs suited to just about everyone's desires. As a matter of fact, my best friend and her mother are visiting The Whittier this week.

And me, I don't spend any more time being concerned about by mother, I just spend more time loving her.

Mom, you did well, for a kid

With Mother's Day arriving this Sunday, I naturally began to think about my mom and what she means to me.

It occurred to me that Mom was 20 years old, barely older than a kid, when my twin brother and I were born. And we weren't the first. I have an older brother who was born just 10 months earlier. Mom wasn't even old enough to drink and she had three sons in diapers and I'll bet there were days when she could have used a stiff belt.

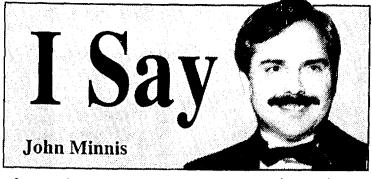

Now, at age 39, I have no children and, perhaps because of that, I am in awe of and fear the responsibility of parenthood. Imagine, bringing other lives into the world knowing that they are your responsibility. Will they be benefits or detriments to society? While there are no guarantees, good parenting does help children turn out for the better rather than the worst.

Mom went on to give birth to five more children over the years. The youngest and the oldest are just 11 years apart.

What I remember the most about Mom is that she was more of a friend than Dad was. Perhaps this was because Mom was home more, knew us more intimately and was there to talk to more often. She knew when we skinned our knees, literally and figuratively, and she was there to boost our spirits so we'd try again.

Mom could be counted on to short on softball players. And, our lifeline to school, sports, friends and the world.

A creature of the 1950s, Mom cooked a meal every single night and did all the laundry. Sure, we had our chores, like washing the dishes and cleaning our rooms, but with today's fast-food restaurants and home delivery pizza, I don't think moms cook as much.

Mom held jobs outside the pitch or catch when we were home, as well. One of her first ventures in the workplace was of course, her taxi service was a sweatshop that made seatbelts. After a night or two, she came home from the afternoon shift crying; she couldn't hack it. I remember Dad telling her it was OK. Later, she sought bookkeeping work in offices, which suited her better, and I recall her being appreciated by house, and she always seemed all her employers. She always to be one step ahead of me. She told us to give 150 percent at our jobs; getting by was never neer. enough.

Married men are fortunate, though, because they get to have two moms - mother-inlaw jokes aside.

call and a memory.

I'm lucky. I have a great mother-in-law. In fact, I don't call her by her first name as many sons-in-law do. I simply call her "Mom," and she treats me like a son. She's also a good cook and never fails to prepare my favorite meal on my birth-in the basement. As we struggled with the roll of carpeting, I recall joking that it was like moving a corpse. We laughed till we cried. On another occasion, my wife and I slept at her parents' home for some reason or another. When everyone was in bed. I tooted a harmonica like they do on the "Waltons." Two nights later, the harmonica again was sounded, but not by me. Mom had somehow appropriated the instrument. It was even funnier coming from She's a saint, as is my birth mom. In fact, there must be a special place in heaven for ipso facto sainthood. Moms have been worshipped throughout humankind, and it's not surprising why.

But enough mush. Moms know they're special, and I'd just like them to know that we Mom lives far away now, but tore up some living room car-know it, too. Happy Mother's

The stuff history's made

My uncle died last week. Six months ago he seemed healthy. But undiagnosed colon cancer was eating him up from the inside. It seemed that once he knew about it, he went fast.

The saddest thing is how little I knew him. We were to have visited him next week, for the first time in four or five years. Hey, he lived far away and there were always so many reasons not to go just now. The good intentions were there, but slow to be acted on. Now we'll be visiting his widow.

My mother has her own set of little-brother feelings and memories, of course. In my experience, he was always a distant figure, living in far-off places, swooping in occasionally for a quick visit, seen through a child's eyes as some sort of high roller in the oil business that mostly boomed in those days.

I thought about him when Penn State joined the Big Ten, magically without increasing its official number. When he graduated from Penn State, he got my grandfather to give him a convertible so he could look good on his upcoming job search in Texas. He injected a sense of exotic romance into our solidly Midwestern family by bringing home a Southern belle, a languid beauty whose soft drawl matched her good looks. We kids were transfixed.

In memory's fragmented snapshots I think of Uncle Henry playing his flute to my mother's piano accompaniment. Giving us rides with the top down, baking in the Oklahoma sun. Teasing his delighted mother. Teasing my sister about her toes. Teasing me about dying when I had the flu.

He used to go around Grandma's house putting his name on the bottom of things he hoped she'd hand down to him. She had a big house; bits and pieces of it are scattered around the family, so that a visit to anyone is to suddenly remember Grandma in the chair from the tailor shop or at the grand piano or rummaging in the wooden chests.

My cousin doesn't want any of it. Sensible fellow.

But the rest of us, too sentimental by half, are faced with decisions. What do we want to help us preserve the memories, our little piece of family history? I groan to think of it.

Deep inside me there's a war going on. On the one side, the sentimentalized nostalgia that makes me keep half of a note my grandmother sent me 10 years before she died. On the other, a newfound minimalism that has banished half the wall art to the attic and the furniture to the Goodwill. My kids hate to visit because I always try to give away my stuff.

Why can't I be more like my cousin? He's happy without Grandma's furniture. He knows his priorities. He knows you don't remember people for their possessions. Things just gather Sometimes I watch "Lovejoy," that engaging scamp of a detective-cum-antiques dealer on A&E on Monday nights. And I wonder what kind of person covets all that old stuff. What makes collectors throng to antiques markets all around the country, cluttering their houses with more things?

"Everybody needs a collecon." an antiques dealer once told me. Bosh. I'm living my life without collecting anything and I still manage to get up in the morning. (Of course, that could be why life seems so empty at times . . .)

So why should I want any of Uncle Henry's things?

But the fact is, of course, that I do. What, exactly, I don't know, but it seems important to keep the old things in the family.

When we go out there next week and see that big rosewood bed, I'll remember little girls giggling in the dark in Grandma's attic. When I look in the tall gilt hall mirror, I'll remember how it used to reflect the light from Grandma's beveled glass front door.

And it won't matter whether it'll fit in my house or not.

Herbert set, Sparky it was already an oldie here. Pink and green amphibians had been slithering around at least in local pop culture for years.

Since alligators aren't exactly indigenous to Lake St. Clair, nobody thought they were anything but a symbol for an upscale lifestyle. Nobody, that is, except George Campbell and his neighbors on Lin-

The story came out last month on national TV, when George, now a retiree and ex-Pointer for at least 17 years, revealed that as a hobby he used to keep a menagerie of exotic critters, including snakes, rare birds and a tub or two of live alligators, in his basement.

Lincoln Roaders who knew him then swear it's true. "It was quite a sensation on the block," said one eyewitness, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Even though all traces of the private zoo are long since gone from this very proper street, and alligators do not - I repeat do not roam among the petunia beds at night, nobody who was in on one of Grosse Pointe's best-kept secrets is giving their name for publication.

And who can blame them? After all, it's a jungle out there.

Art of winning

Longtime Pointer and artist Charmaine Kaptur captured Best of Show for her painting "Alpine Silver" at the 56th Annual Exhibition of the Grosse Pointe Artists Association, which opened with an artfully done champagne punch and dessert reception at the War Memorial Saturday. The show continues through Saturday, May 7.

ing the run of the show and the cast certainly did not add any. My dictionary also states that violence is in. 1. Physical force exerted, as for causing damage or injury... 2. Great force or intensity... 3. In general, acts of breaking the law, vandalism, destruction of property..." Maybe someone getting slapped in the face is too intense for some people to see, yet you see it all the time on television, along with "profanity and obcene gestures, sexual inauendo, violence, extensive ase of alcohol, and numerous portrayals of public drunkenness." You should ne writing letters to the television programmers explaining that there is too much of this kind of improper behavior going on everyday on television rather than writing about a high school show, which was much more tame.

The show takes place in the '30s and it was written for that time period. Bad things like the use of alcohol occurred then. Who are you trying to shelter? These things, unfortunately, are still around in today's society and younger people are aware of them whether you like it or not.

May I remind you that this is musical theater and every few minutes we break out into song and dance. It's understood that certain aspects of the production should not be taken literally. Performing this show did not "damage the credibility of the Grosse Pointe school system as a safe, wholesome and civil place to send children." In some ways it strengthened our school system by showing that we are mature enough to enjoy and perform this farce. We are lucky our high school actors can handle a show like "Me And My Girl" because it challenges their abilities to cooperate with each other and work on their interpersonal skills. They are learning and maturing as human beings. Isn't that one reason for being in

All of the elementary schools who were invited to our show received information in the mail two months in advance that we would be putting on this show. Two months is plenty of time for the concerned parent to:

1) Review the sci 2) Call the director and ask questions.

3) Go to a rehearsal and watch to see if anything is "offensive."

4) Remind the children that they will be viewing a play.

Last time I checked, each child was required to have a parent/guardian sign a permission slip to attend the show. That signature tells us the parent/guardian approves of their child viewing our show, even if they didn't engage in any of my four suggestions listed above.

We perform a musical every year to entertain the community. If you have a problem with the choice of our show or any other aspect of our show, you should contact us, rather than take the easy way out by writing a complaint letter suggesting censorship to the local paper. Your immediate action ruined a day for many students, especially mine. We are not apologizing for our fine production but rather attempting to correct your misconceptions of the show and to explain options the elementary schools had.

Tim Reynolds Pointe Players' Stage Manager City of Grosse Pointe 1930s' filth vs. '90s' innocence?

To the Editor: I am taking a break from my favorite hobbies drinking and beating small children with a stick - to respond to the charges raised by Randall W. Steinkampf in his letter published in the Grosse Pointe News on April 28. He maintains that Grosse Pointe South's production of "Me and My Girl" was a negative influence on its audience due to its use of alcohol, violence, profanity and sexual innuendo.

I would first like to commend Mr. Steinkampf on his extensive knowledge of the subject of his indictment. I realize that he must have pored countless hours into his research, but there is one slight mistake I would like to point out. I understand that typographical errors do occur, but the title of the play is "Me and My Girl," not "Me and My Gal." A minor detail, granted, but next time I suggest he check his copy of the script to avoid trivial issues such as this.

I agree with his observation that there was too much violence in the performance. I can recall many instances of gentlemen slapping each other on the back and shaking hands a bit too vigorously. Dangerous activities such as this may prove deadly if shown to children unaccustomed to the random violence of a family picnic. I submit that this sort of beis atrocious and should be strictly sanctioned on the high school stage.

As for the rest of the script, I can only submit that all arts reflect the period in which they were created. There is no comparison between the cynicism, debauchery and breakdown of family values evident in the 1930s with the innocence and naivete of the 1990s. I do have to applaud the bravery of Mary Martin and Ellen Bowen in choosing such a weighty piece. It was a radical decision, choosing a play dealing with topics as controversial as love and the acceptance of others for who they are.

I am shocked and appalled that so many innocent young students consented to purveying such a piece of filth in our community. This is a frightening commentary on the state of today's youth. I am a startled person.

'Cancellation' canceled out

To the Editor:

In response to the letter in your April 28 edition labeled "Cancellation," I would like to comment that I have written several letters against teacher pay increases and that I am not, nor have I ever been a member of "Concerned Citizens for Education.

I am however, a 27-year resident of the Pointes who has seen his property taxes increase over 750 percent during that period, mostly due to school taxes.

I attended the March 11 school board meeting and spoke out against the pay raise. My efforts were ignored, as I learned that the board had already passed the increase in secret behind closed doors.

I also wish to state that I am not against fair salaries for teachers; however an average salary of around $57,000 for 8 1/2 months' work, along with a benefit package that provides everything, is excessive and uncalled for.

Regarding the Grosse Pointe News being a forum for people concerned about excessive teacher salaries, I call it concern for fiscal responsibility. The paper does have a policy of not printing an excessive number of letters on the same subject, and I have written letters that have not been printed because of this policy.

I suggest that the author of "Cancellation" get involved and face the real facts. He of course, won't see this letter as he has apparently canceled his subscription.

North parents say thanks

To the Editor: The members of the committee organizing the geranium sale for Grosse Pointe North High School want to thank the North and South parents and everyone else in our community who have once again demonstrated their support for our students by ordering flowers, volunteering their time and spreading the word far and wide about our annual flower sale. Thank you, also, to the businesses that have allowed us to advertise in their establishments.

The annual geranium sale at North High School and its companion, the impatiens sale at South High School, are the major sources of funding for the Grosse Pointe North Parents Club and the Grosse Pointe South Mothers Club. With these funds the students, faculty and entire school community are able to receive vital funding to support enrichment activities and scholarships, and with so many cuts to public school funding looming in the future there will be even more requests coming to our organizations requesting funds. With your help, we will be able to continue supporting the students and others in our school community.

For those of you who have asked to have your flowers delivered, please watch for them on Friday, May 6, and Saturday, May 7. If you are picking up your own order, come to the Grosse Pointe North High School gym on Friday from 2 to 6 p.m. or on Sat_ urday from 9 a.m. to noon.

The various geraniums, hanging baskets of begonias, New Guinea impatiens, and ivy geraniums will also be available for sale in the gym during the same hours. Once again, the Parrish family farm will bring in an added variety of flowers and vegetables plants for you to examine and buy. The variety and selections are too numerous to mention. We hope you will be able to drop in and check out our various flower baskets and planters already arranged by Cynthia Parrish and separate flower plants for you to arrange yourself.

Thank you once again for supporting our local schools by purchasing our flowers this spring.

What is O.M. and who cares?

To the Editor: O.M. stands for Odyssey of The Mind, a worldwide competition.

For over 12 years, the O.M. Association based in Glassboro, N.J., has issued sets of guidelines and limitations for a number of problems. Using these guidelines, teams, with a maximum of seven members, create their own performance that solves the problem.

Using creative problem solving, brainstorming skills, and group decision making, each team evolves their own presentation. This required them to build props, write scripts, sing, dance, or whatever they feel will help to illustrate their solution.

The first level of competition called the Regional Tournament, is held at Grosse Pointe North High School in March. The competition itself is somewhat obscure and if you didn't understand the requirements or limitations of the problem, the eight-minute

Tiger Stadium faces same fate as old Detroit Times

It's apparently a done deed. A gallant effort doomed. A doomed battle lost by a handful of soldiers fighting for a cause they believed in. Save Tiger Stadium.

But hope prevails in the face of certain defeat. There is a promise that what is lost will be Detroit's gain.

However, it is possible to mourn for a vanished dream even if in your heart you knew it was an impossible one. So it is right and proper for those first, of being best. It beat with

It's more than that. What is mourned is the death of a neighborhood that it was hoped could be rejuvenated if the stadium where spared. In their mind's eye they see Michigan Avenue in its better days, a thriving street of stores and services. They remember there were three movie theaters in a six-block radius. There were ice cream parlors, restaurants and pubs. Michigan Avenue was a neighborhood mecca. Downtown was walking distance.

For those who treasure the past, it was Camelot. It hurts that the last vestige of those glory days may soon be gone. Its presence there is a beacon of light, a hope that the city might reach out to include Old Corktown in its Renaissance.

Losing a landmark is almost like losing a good friend, so many of your memories embrace it.

On a personal note, I look back on the closing of The Detroit Times. One day editors were handing out assignments, reporters were pounding out stories and presses were rumbling. The next day the city room was a silent tomb. Like a thunderbolt, the order had come down in the night. Close the doors. Stop the presses. Pointe AARP will meet at the Shut it down. NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

The City Council of the City of Grosse Pointe Woods will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, May 16, 1994, in the Council Chambers at the Municipal Building, 20025 Mack Plaza, to review the proposed 1994 tax levy for said city.

In 1993 the City of Grosse Pointe Woods levied a total of 11.3950 mills ($11.3950 per $1000 SEV) for the City's general operating fund, 1974 swimming pool bonds, 1986 park redevelopment bonds, emergency medical services (advanced life support ambulance) and for solid waste/recycling/disposal operations. In 1994 the City of Grosse Pointe Woods proposes to levy a total of 11.8243 mills ($11.8243 per $1000 SEV) for the same funds as provided by Michigan Statutes.

The "Headlee Amendment" currently limits the maximum city operating and solid waste millage rates to

The State "Truth in Taxation" law (211.24e MCL) provides that the 1994 base tax rate for the City's operating and solid waste purposes shall be 9.8814 mills. This base tax rate is determined by utilizing a formula provided in the aforementioned law.

To fund the City of Grosse Pointe Woods' proposed 1994-95 budget and maintain the present level of service; that is, to continue providing funds for curbside recycling, incineration, maintenance, replacement of infrastructure and to make needed improvements on City facilities, the City finds it necessary to increase the base operating millage. An additional millage rate of .6025 mills (.6025 per $1000 SEV) is proposed above the 1994 base operating and solid waste tax rate. The increase in millage provides an estimated 6.34% increase in these operating revenues.

COMPARISON OF TAX LEVIES

	1993	1994
General Operating Fund	7.4130 mills	7.8721 mills
Solid Waste/Recycling Disposal	2.6128 mills	2.6118 mills

Emergency Medical Services	.5000 mills	.4998 mills

TOTAL TAX LEVY	11.3950 mills	11.8243 mills

In accordance with P.A. 5 of 1982, the City of Grosse Pointe Woods has complete authority to establish the number of mills to be levied within its authorized millage as authorized by the City Charter, the electorate

Public comments, oral and/or written, are welcome at the public hearing on the proposed additional millage rate.

North Pointe tops

The Spartan Award, the highest recognition given to a high school publication in Michigan, was presented to the North Pointe staff at Grosse Pointe North High School at the annual conference of the Michigan Interscholastic Press Association on Friday, April 29.

Areas of special commendation include page design and advertising design. One of the judges commented, "Nice use of comtemporary design ideas to encourage reading."

North Pointe, published at Grosse Pointe North High School, also earned 14 individual awards. Senior Justin Fines, feature co-editor, won an award for his human interest story on physically challenged students and a second award for an illustration that accompanied a story on sexual harassment.

Pipchowski and other Park residents enjoyed themselves at Grosse Pointe Park's recent Easter egg hunt at Patterson Park. The event was open to Park residents of all ages and was enjoyed by all.

Mentally ill lose again under Clinton health care plan

By Dr. E. Fuller Torrey

President Clinton's plan for health care reform is an ambitious and laudatory attempt to correct some of the most serious flaws in American medicine.

Unfortunately, it fails completely to correct discrimination against people with serious mental illnesses. These diseases include schizophrenia, manicdepressive illness, serious depression, obsessive-compulsive disorder panic disorder, and childhood autism.

There is now overwhelming evidence that serious mental illnesses are brain diseases in exactly the same sense that Parkinson's disease, Alzheisclerosis are brain diseases. Genes are thought to play some role in each of these, but in addition something changes the chemistry of the brain so that it does not function as it is supposed to. We can visualize differences in the brains of individuals with serious mental illnesses using magnetic resonance imaging and other techniques, and we can objectively measure differences in their brain function.

Since the brain is simply another organ in the body, why should Clinton's plan discriminate against some brain diseases? When a person with schizophrenia has to be hospimer's disease, and multiple talized, that person will have to nesses with every kind of un problems or personality disorpay the cost of the first day's hospitalization; a person with heart disease will pay nothing. Medical discrimination against serious mental illnesses has a long and sordid history.

For many years, it was believed that mentally ill individuals were afflicted with evil spirits and this was used as grounds for discrimination against them. Now that these illnesses are known to be brain diseases, why should discriminatory coverage continue?

The Clinton health reform plan perpetuates the evil spirit myth. Serious mental diseases can and should be covered as equitably as any other diseases. There are no evil spirits; there is merely ignorance.

First- and second-place winners from regional competition earn the right to compete at the state finals held in April at Central Michigan University.

Only the first-place teams from state finals have the honor of representing Michigan at Odyssey of The Mind world finals, this year held at Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa. First-place teams from each state, in addition to first-place winners from countries around the world, will present their solution to these same sets of requirements and limitations. It takes three days of competition to present all the teams at the world finals.

This year, three out of the 15 teams representing Michigan at world finals are from Grosse Pointe.

In spite of attempts by school principals and other interested parents, nothing has been printed in the Grosse Pointe News to congratulate these three teams or recognize their accomplishments. So, to the teams from Trombly Elementary School, Pierce Middle School, and Grosse Pointe South High School: Congratulations to you all and good luck at the world Dale Johnson

Grosse Pointe Park Belle Isle

spruced up To the Editor:

The youth of Grosse Pointe and Detroit were out in force Saturday, April 30, continuing the cleanup of our Detroit; but where were the media??? Although all the television stations and both the Free Press and News had been sent news releases and notified by phone, there was virtually no coverage.

Despite the rain and cold, mountains of garbage bags were filled, restrooms and a concession stand painted, and gardens weeded and cleaned. Over 50 Girl Scout Troops 173, 843, 327, 1012, 494 and 1815 (three of these are Grosse Pointe troops) joined with Army Jr. ROTC from 17 Detroit public high schools to help clean Belle Isle. The Wayne County Work Force, members of the Detroit Yacht Club (whose three commodores are all Grosse Pointe residents), Detroit Grand Prix Committee, Friends of Belle Isle, the Salvation Army, and lots of public volunteers also helped. Every jogger, fisherman, rollerblader, biker and casual island visitor was given a garbage bag and asked to help.

If you visit the island this summer, please respect their hard work by placing your rubbish in the many cans provided and stop by the conservatory where a plaque will soon be posted recognizing these outstanding youth and citizens. To them we should all say a heartfelt, "Thank you for making Belle Isle a better place for all!"

Coast Guardsman battled Japanese, beer-swilling monkey

By Chip Chapman Staff Writer

'I saw this Coast Guard recruiter and thought, 'Oh boy, Belle Isle," said Park resident Donn Kipka. "This oldtimer said, 'Sonny, you come into the Coast Guard and I'll have you in gold in six months.' Two vears later...'

Kipka, a native of Elkhart, Ind., had been in the ROTC program at the University of Michigan, but did not want to go into the Army. He had a low draft number and decided to go across the hall to the Coast Guard office at the recruiting station.

Kipka said it turned out to be a good break for him. He was sent to Manhattan Beach in New York. Because of his ROTC background, he was chosen to train raw recruits.

"It was good duty," he said, "I was home three nights out of four and my wife was able to get a transfer from Michigan Bell, where she worked, to Brooklyn Bell.'

Kipka was one of three persons from his station sent to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn., for officer training.

"There were a lot of men there who had ships sunk at sea and had all kinds of meritorious recognition," Kipka said, "and they (the government) wanted to recognize them so they opened up this academy."

Of the 500 men who entered the academy, Kipka was one of 150 who graduated.

He was assigned to the Danmark, a three-masted Danish ship used for training cadets in the merchant marine. The ship was crossing the Atlantic when Germany invaded Denmark. The Danish asked the United States to impound the ship.

Danish officers were kept on board, and the American officer trainees made up the crew.

"Every weekend, we went out on the Danmark," Kipka said. "It was cold. We climbed the rigging, the rope ladders, and unfurled the sails."

In January 1945, Kipka graduated from the academy and was sent to the Pacific aboard a FS (freight and supply) boat.

the ships to supply their bases. "We were listed as a frontline fighting ship," Kipka said.

"We had two 50-caliber machine guns and a 3-inch 50-caliber cannon.' On the first trip west, Kipka's ship stopped at a rest camp in New Guinea. The first person he saw was his wife's sorority sister, who worked for the Red Cross.

"I thought, 'My wife has

He sailed around the Philippine Islands to various bases "carrying 500 tons of anything, like potatoes, cigarettes or the ship for a while. "We were having trouble with light bulbs on the ship," Kipka said. "We couldn't figure out why they were burning out. Right after we'd replace them, the monkey would unscrew them."

The guys in the engine room had cleaned up their area only to find that the monkey had smeared grease everywhere as soon as they went to find the skipper for inspection.

"He had a GI coffee mug and the guys were always giving him beer," Kipka said.

A shipmate from Hamtramck, whose family had a bakery, received a birthday cake with little bottles of whiskey inside it.

"How it got all the way from Hamtramck to the Philippines, I'll never know," Kipka said, "but after it arrived, the whole ship was invited in and the monkey picked up the cake and threw it through a porthole."

For Kipka, life in the Coast Guard wasn't all monkey busi-

One night, his ship was almost blasted by "friendly fire." Sailing through an inlet in the Philippines, the ship did not have the IFF (Identification, Friend or Foe) code.

"The area was heavily armed, with big cannons pointed down at us," he remembered. "Fortunately, it was a moonlit night and they recognized it. They told us we came close to getting blasted out of Once, on the Philippine island of Palaon, Kipka's ship visited an Army fighter base stationed there.

"We'd invited them aboard for a meal because they had lousy food," Kipka said.

On the way to the port, a squadron of P-38 airplanes smoke bombed us.

"I said, 'We haven't been re-lieved yet," Kipka said. "He said, 'We're going to see the rear admiral and tell him where the ship is parked, and go home.' I thought we were going to prison, but he got away with it and I returned home in mid-December 1945."

Winter forces repairs at Park pier with a $16,000 repair bill for the city's finger piers at Windmill Pointe Park.

"The city had already voted money to repair portions of the seawall at Windmill Pointe Park earlier this year," said city manager Dale Krajniak. "But an inspection made of the dock area after winter was over indicated that the finger piers used to tie up boats at the city docks were damaged by this winter's cold weather.

City engineer Muzaffar Lehkani determined that the un-Old man winter socked derpinnings of 23 finger piers Grosse Pointe Park taxpayers were damaged so badly that they must be replaced.

> So at the April 25 council meeting Krajniak requested that the council approve spending an additional $16,000 to complete the repairs. The vote to approve the outlay was unanimous.

"It is important that the city complete the repairs right away," said Krajniak. "We are entering the boating season, and we had to have the piers repaired before residents began using the docks for the season. The repairs should be complete by May 6."

The city was fortunate because it had already contracted with Champion Marine to complete repairs of the seawall. It was a simple matter to add the pier repairs to their duties. This made the fast repairs of the finger piers possible.

Krajniak said Park boaters should suffer no inconvenience as a result of the repairs and boating in the Park should be business as usual.

Woods puts Steiner on cable board

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

Woods councilmember James Alogdelis voiced his displeasure Monday night over being replaced as the Woods cable representative by council newcomer Eric Steiner, accusing the council of violating Michigan's open meetings law.

Alogdelis' complaint stems from a Woods council committee of the whole meeting two weeks before Monday's meet-

The meeting was held in the main council chamber, said Alogdelis. He also complained that the council met as a committee of the whole after the regular council meeting. Alogdelis noted that the committee of the whole meeting had no audience and was attended only by Woods councilmembers and city employees.

"This violates the open meetings act," Alogdelis said. "Holding meetings in the council's private meeting room makes it difficult for the public to attend, and news of the meeting wasn't properly posted, so the public didn't know about it."

Alogdelis went on to say that the result of the meeting, a recommendation that the council vote to replace him as the city's representative on cable issues at the next regular council meeting, was invalid.

Woods Mayor Robert Novitke asked city attorney George Catlin if the council's actions violated state law. Catlin replied that as long as news of the meeting was posted 24 hours before being held, and that any member of the public who wished to attend was allowed to attend, it was legal.

City clerk Louise Warnke said that she placed a notice on the city's bulletin board in city hall on the Friday before the meeting. The bulletin board is in an area of city hall that is open to the public during business hours, and anyone looking at Monday night's agenda would have been able to see the notice, said Warnke.

Novitke said that the council decided to make the switch because of changes in the relationship between the cities and Grosse Pointe Cable. Each city will now have a representative on Grosse Pointe Cable's board of directors. So it was decided by the council that the Woods representative on the cable board would also act as the Woods' main conduit of cable information.

For the past several years, Alogdelis had been the Woods member who met with other city representatives to discuss cable issues and to keep the council up-to-date on what was going on with cable.

Councilmember Thomas council's antechamber, not the Fahrner, who recommended replacing Alogdelis with Steiner, said that Alogdelis has served the council well in his capacity as cable representative, but it was time for new blood.

"Eric is the youngest member of the council," said Fahrner. "He's also the newest member, and I expect he'll be on the council long after Mr. Alogdelis and I have left. It's important to have a cable representative who will be here for a while, so the council, as it changes over time, will have someone familiar with the issues. Cable is changing at a rapid pace right now, and continuity will be important."

In the end, Alogdelis was unable to persuade other councilmembers to keep him as cable representative and the council adopted the committee of the whole recommendation 6-

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES AND ON THE PROPOSED 1994-1995 CITY BUDGET

The City Council of the City of Grosse Pointe Farms will hold a Public Hearing at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, May 16, 1994 in the City Hall at 90 Kerby Road, on the proposed 1994 City tax levy and on the proposed 1994-1995 City Budget. The proposed Budget is on file in the Office of the City Clerk for public inspection Friday.

The following is a summary of the proposed Budget:
GENERAL FUND
ESTIMATED REQUIREMENTS:
General Government	$ 724,770
Police	2.427.400
Fire	530.880
Public Service	335.740
Public Works	1.448.470
Parks & Recreation	531.550
Municipal Court	226 560
Contingency
Transfer to Other Funds	344 936
Other Functions	873,000
Total
MEANS OF FINANCING:
Taxes	$6.190.000
Licenses and Permits	144.850
State Shared Revenue	693 350
Charges for Services	490.750
	225,000

.....$8,024,710 PROPOSED TAX RATE - 11.75 per thousand - Based on Est. State Equalized Value of $516,126,230.

Interest Income......100,000

Other Revenue 17,500

Last year (1993) the City levied 10.40 mills (10.40 per every $1,000 SEV) for City operating purposes.

Because of an estimated increase in the State Equalized Value of existing property in the City, The State "Truth in Taxation" law (P.A. 5 of 1982) provides that the base tax rate for 1994 City operating tax be decreased to 10.25 mills ($10.25 per $1,000 SEV). This is a .15 mills ($.15 per $1,000 SEV) lower than the 1992 operating tax rate.

To fund the City's proposed 1994-1995 Budget, provide for Debt Service and to maintain the present level of City services, the City finds it necessary to increase its operating tax levy. An additional millage rate levy of 1.50 mills $1.50 per $1,000 SEV) is proposed above the 1994 base operating millage rate. This provides an estimated 14.7% increase in City operating taxes.

If the proposed additional millage rate is not approved the operating revenue will increase by .07% from the preceding years operating revenue.

In accordance with P.A. 5 of 1982, the City has complete authority to establish the number of mills to be levied within its authorized millage rate as authorized by law and the City Charter.

Public comments, oral or written are welcome at the Public Hearing on the proposed City Budget.

Bantam: Cute little car of the 1930s that couldn't

The 10th annual Village Antiques Show and Sale, a benefit for Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, is scheduled for Friday, May 6, through Sunday, May 8, but it actually gets under way tonight, May 5, with a preview evening at which a sporty red and white 1938 American Bantam will be on display for a silent auction.

The silent auction is new to the Village Antiques Show and Sale. Preview evening is a black-tie-optional benefit with $300, $$15\overline{0}$ and $100 tickets for staggered admissions at 6, 7 and 7:30 p.m.

Three other antique cars will be sold at the show: a black 1963 Mercedes 300SL roadster. $180,000; a black 1964 Cadillac convertible, $38,500, and a white 1957 Thunderbird, $26,500.

The tiny (1.200-pound) American Bantam was designed by Russian-born Count Alexis de Sahknoffsky, a leading custom body designer in the '30s. Its tinyness can be attested to by Don Pilette, adjunct journalism professor at Wayne State University and former systems editor at The Detroit News. When Pilette was a student at Wayne State, he said several of his picked up his Bantam and deposited it in State Hall.

The Bantam, built in Butler, Pa., was introduced in 1938 by a company that had just about gone broke trying to build and market the American Austin, a small car based on the British Austin Seven.

The American Austin Car Co. was incorporated in 1929. Production began with 1930 models, sprightly little cars built on the English Austin Seven chassis American Austins were owned by such luminaries as Ernest Hemingway, Al Jolson and Buster Keaton, but to most Americans the little cars were just a joke. Even in the depths of the Depression, Americans did not take small cars seriously and Austin sales languished. The little cars often appeared in funny movies in the '30s. Fewer than 10,000 were built in two years and the company went into receivership

A supersalesman named Roy Evans kept the company barely alive, but in 1934 it went into bankruptcy and production ceased in 1935. Evans had been the man behind the American

Austin and after that venture faded, he raised capital to try

He redesigned the Austin engine enough so that he was not infringing on any patents and in late 1937 introduced the 1938 American Bantam, a car about the same size as the Austin, with very cute styling by de Sahknoffsky (who apparently considered the Bantam a pro bono project and charged Evans only his own costs of $300), with body by Hayes Body Co., Detroit, and a 19-hp four-cylinder engine.

Despite such model designations as "Riviera," "Hollywood" and "Boulevard Delivery," the Bantam wasn't taken much more seriously than the Austin had been. By the late '30s, a person's automobile made a statement about him or her and most people did not want to make the statement the Bantam espoused. The last American Bantams rolled off the line in 1940, shortly after the company demonstrated a small military vehicle it had developed.

In the summer of 1940, the Army tested a small lightweight vehicle developed by American Bantam. The Army liked Bantam's vehicle, but was dubious of the firm's production capabilities and the very light weight of the vehicle, so it invited other auto makers to submit bids for such a vehicle. Willys-Overland and Ford Motor Co. both responded and the Army settled on the Willys de-

Willys could not satisfy the Army's voracious appetite, so the Willys design specs were given to Ford and Bantam and all three went to work building the vehicles, known in Army parlance as "vehicle, quarterton, GP (General Purpose)." The "GP" was quickly Americanized to "Jeep."

More than 600,000 Jeeps were built during the war, 368,000 of them by Willys. Willys received the rights to build civilian versions of the Jeep after the war and it was soon Willys' most successful vehicle. Later Jeep was acquired by Kaiser-Frazer, then by American Motors and is now a part of Chrysler Corp. American Bantam went out of business in

Really good American Austins and Bantams have sold for up to $20,000 at auctions. Brand new, the 1930 Austin sold for $445, which sounds good but was $5 more than a Model A Ford and may help explain its lack of popularity

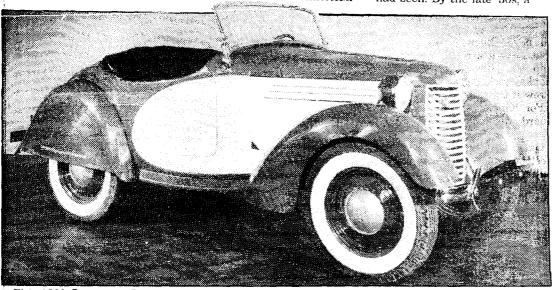

The real purpose of the event at the Henry Ford Museum is not automobiles, of course, but everyone knows that a good way to draw a crowd in the Detroit area is with an interesting car. And the Village Antiques Show and Sale has certainly selected an interesting car.

The event is in Lovette Hall, adjacent to the museum and Village.

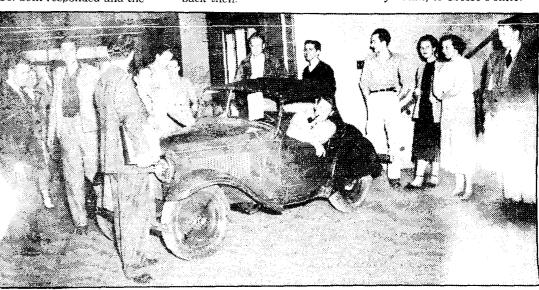

"The setting of this show amid the splendor of Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village combines with the outstanding expertise of the exhibitors to make this show a valuable experience for both the novice and the seasoned collector," said show manager Robert C. Lawler, of Chicago.

Tickets for the Village Antiques Show and Sale are $6 general admission and $5 for museum members and senior citizens (62 and up). Show hours are Friday, May 6, 11 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Saturday, May 7, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Sunday, May 8, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

This year's event is chaired by Marlene Borman and Mary Kay Crain, of Grosse Pointe.

This 1938 American Bantam will be sold at silent auction at an antiques show at Henry Ford

Michigan's in the path of May 10 solar eclipse — but view it safely

Michigan skywatchers will nating the atmosphere above have a front-row seat for a so-University of Michigan astronomer Richard G. Teske. "A solar eclipse occurs when the moon passes exactly between the sun and Earth, casting its shadow on us. It is a rare event that happens at most only a few times each year," Teske said. "The eclipse will be the last one visible in North America until the year 2012. The next 'big one' for Michigan viewers will take place in April 2024."

Although May's eclipse will be visible from Alaska to Panama, the best viewing will be along a 140-mile-wide strip from El Paso, Texas, through Toledo, Ohio, to Halifax, Nova Scotia. Teske said. Within this narrow band, the moon will blot out all but a tiny fraction of the sun's light, plunging onlookers into a sunset-like darkness. Over Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Lake Erie, the moon will be completely in front of the sun for six minutes and 15 seconds.

"The sun and moon will be almost overhead in Michigan during the period of deepest eclipse. At Lansing the moon will first encroach on the sun's disk at 11:31 a.m., with maximum coverage at 1:15 p.m. By 2:59 p.m., the eclipse will be over," Teske explained. "These times will be the same within five minutes for watchers anywhere in Michigan.'

During May's eclipse the moon will appear slightly smaller than the sun. The moon seems small, because on May 10 it is almost as far away from us in its elliptical orbit as it ever gets, according to Teske. "For this reason, Michigan observers living south of a line from Benton Harbor to Port Huron, including the Detroit area, will see a black moon almost centered on the sun, sur-rounded by a narrow bright rim of sunlight. North of this line the dark moon will almost cover the sun, giving observers an excellent view of a partial solar eclipse. At Toledo, Ohio, observers will see the moon exactly centered on the sun because the eclipse track will pass directly over their city," Teske said.

Teske emphasized that it is dangerous to look directly at the sun and moon while observing the eclipse. The sun's surface is so bright that even a priet glance might permanently impair vision. "Even if you observe through something dark like multiple sunglasses or stacked photographic negatives, you are taking a chance with your eyes," he warned.

"The safest way to view the eclipse is to do it indirectly. Punch a hole about half the size of a dime in a large sheet of cardboard. Even though the hole is small, be sure to use a sheet of cardboard big enough to cast a large shadow on the ground," Teske said. "Lay a white pillowcase or sheet of paper on the ground at your feet. Move the cardboard around until an image of the sun appears on the pillowcase on the ground. This way, you can safely watch the progression of the solar eclipse without risking damage to your eyes."

During the upcoming eclipse, a brilliant sliver of the sun's rim will remain visible illumi-us. For this reason the sky lar eclipse on May 10, says stays a bit too bright for observers to get a glimpse of the faint, hot gaseous corona that surrounds the sun. Teske added that the sun's corona can be seen only during a rare type of total solar eclipse, when the sun becomes completely obscured and the sky is very

> "Some people worry that dangerous 'solar rays' are emitted during eclipses, but this doesn't happen," Teske said. "It's perfectly safe to be outside during the event; there are no rays or other side effects to worry about.'

The central track of the May 10 solar eclipse includes southeast Michigan and northern Ohio. In southeast Michigan, the eclipse will begin at 11:31 a.m. with maximum coverage at 1:15 p.m.

Man who shot Park cop sentenced

The 16-year-old Detroit youth who shot and wounded a Grosse Pointe Park police officer in June 1993 has been sentenced to serve 40 to 60 years in prison for second-degree murder and between 15 and 30 years for assault with intent to commit murder.

Detroit Recorder's Judge Gershwin Drain sentenced Ricky Cline of Detroit on April 28. Although a juvenile, Cline was sentenced as an adult for shooting and killing a Detroit resident in a carjacking and subsequently shooting and injuring Park police Sgt. Steve Johnson.

Johnson was shot as he and Detroit and Park police were chasing Cline through the Manistique-Vernor neighborhood on June 3. When surrounded by police, Cline fired three rounds, one striking Johnson in the hand.

A Detroit police officer then shot at Cline, hitting him in the arm.

Police were pursuing Cline in connection with a June 2 fatal carjacking in the Gratiot and Outer Drive area. Earlier that day a relative of the carjacking victim saw Cline driving the victim's car and began following hìm.

The relative then flagged down a Detroit police patrol car and reported what he had seen. Detroit police, along with the help of Park officers, chased Cline through several back yards before surrounding him.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING OF INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

The City Council of the City of Grosse Pointe, Michigan will hold a public hearing at 7:30 P.M. on Monday, May 16, 1994 in the Council Chambers at the Municipal Offices, 17147 Maumee, on the proposed 1994 City tax levy and on the proposed 1994-95 City budget. Copies of the proposed budget are available for public inspection during regular business hours in the office of the City Clerk beginning May 12, 1994.

In 1993, the City of Grosse Pointe levied 13.38 mills ($13.38 per $1000 SEV) for both City operating and debt service purposes. In 1994, the City anticipates levying a total of 13.62 mills ($13.62 per $1,000 SEV) for both City operating and debt service purposes. The State "Truth in Taxation" law (P.A. 5 of 1982) provides that the base tax rate for 1994 City operating taxes is 12.94 mills.

To fund the City's proposed 1994-95 budget, to maintain the present level of City services and to provide capital improvement funding, the City finds it necessary to increase its operating millage. An additional millage rate levy of 0.55 mills (55 cents per $1,000 SEV) is proposed above the 1994 base operating tax rate. This represents an increase of 4.85% in property taxes (both operating and debt purposes) for City residential property owners. If the proposed additional millage rate is not approved, the operating revenue will decrease by 1% from the preceding year's operating revenue. Date and location of the meeting to take action on the proposed additional millage will be announced at this public meeting.

In Accordance with P.A. 5 of 1982, the City has complete authority to establish the number of mills to be levied within its authorized millage rate as authorized by law and the City Charter. The "Headlee Amendment" currently limits City operating and rubbish taxes at 15.14 mills.

Public comments, oral or written, are welcome at the public hearing on the proposed additional millage rate and on the proposed additional millage rate and on the proposed City budget.

Get MADD, get scholarship

Photos by Leah Vartanian

Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) Michigan chapter is accepting applica-tions for its annual student scholarship now through May 15. Anyone with an active interest in the fight to end drunk driving may apply.

MADD created the scholarship in response to the economic devastation caused by alcohol-involved traffic accidents. In the United States, someone dies in an alcohol-related traffic crash every 30 minutes and an injury occurs every 26 seconds; about 47,000 people a year will suffer permanent work-related disabilities. Even with improvements in the alcohol-involved crash fatality rate over the past decade, alcohol-impaired driving remains a major menace on highways and the single greatest factor in traffic crashes.

The scholarships are to assist students in their educational pursuits at any Michigan University or college. The scholarship will be awarded based on a combination of merit and financial need. Amounts vary between $500 and $1,000 for the 1994-95 academic year. Recipients must be entering, attending or returning to college or a trade school, and be a Michigan resident and a high school graduate.

To obtain a scholarship application, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to MADD, Michigan, 910 Eastlawn, Midland, MI 48642 by May 6. The completed, returned application must be postmarked no later than May 15.

JLD Designers' Show House is open until May 31

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor

Artists and designers - dozens of them - have made their marks on the walls, ceilings, floors, rugs and furnishings of the Junior League of Detroit's 1994 Designers' Show

We're not talking about graffiti. We're talking creative stuff, to say the least.

The 67-year-old Webber House, 22 Webber Place in Grosse Pointe Shores, will be open to the public during May. About 20,000 people are expected to visit the 12,000square-foot, 23-room mini-mansion to view the work of 27 interior designers and seven landscape designers.

The biennial JLD fundraiser will raise about $250,000 for the league's community programs and projects.

Wendy Jennings, one of three cochairmen of the project, said the designers have surpassed all expectations for excellence in the 10th showhouse to be presented by the league.

The spectacular architectural design inherent in the Webber House has been preserved and enhanced, she said. And visitors are encouraged to pay attention to the unusual details from designers and artists.

Some notable accents: the bug collection in the child's playroom; a glass table filled with rocks and gravel in the home's office; a bowl of crayons set out for visiting grandchildren in grandma's den; a Pewabic lamp in one of the many Pewabic-tiled bathrooms; restored, enhanced, polished, rubbed, refurbished wood paneling all over the house; sisal rugs, often painted or layered under and over Orientals; a pillow made from the old Fox Theatre's upholstered seat fabric in the home's office; roses everywhere - on fabrics, rugs, wallpaper, ceilings, furniture and floor coverings; and unique wall treatments like crinkled paper, padded fabric, textured cloth, glaze, stenciling, unusual wallpaper and paint techniques, faux finishes, hand-lettered quotes and original art.

And original art is everywhere: • In the foyer, a mural by John Paulson, a panoramic view of the Webber House gardens as they appeared 60 years ago, and a handlettered quote from Tennyson: "Splendor falls on castle walls."

• In a closet-turned-into-a-bar, artist Jane Shook's hand-painted grapevines, twining among the wine bottles and between glass

· On the ceiling, shutters and the shower of a bright blue Pewabic-tiled bathroom, Shook's trompe l'oeil, marbelizing, gold leaf, even a and the rug of the master bathhand-painted shower mat adorned with plump green frogs and lily pads.

• On the walls of the circular staircase to the ballroom, cherubs and clouds painted by Audrey Baenziger.

• In the third-floor ballroom, a mural by artist Hope Ruessmann depicting a scene in ancient Greece.

 In another blue Pewabic-tiled bathroom, hand-painted faux fin ishes, bouquets of flowers and vines by artist Rick Walton.

• On the walls, ceiling, cabinets room, echos of the master bedroom's floral wallpaper. The artwork was done by Roberta of Roberta Originals.

• In the child's playroom, above the ceiling molding, a hand-lettered quote from a poem by John Masefield, painted by Kim Curran and Marcia Doolin.

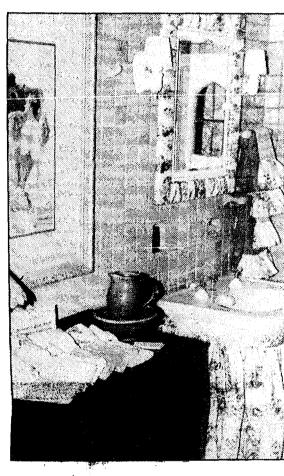

• In the pantry, hand-stenciled decorations on the ceiling and a bright blue peacock on the wall, by Michael Pawlowski.

• Beside the garden door, trompe l'oeil garden accessories by Pawlowski.

• In the basement, the best posters from Detroit school children who entered an art contest sponsored by the league's provisional class. The nine winning posters are on display. "I've loved watching all these talented people come together for a cause," said Dona Reynolds, publicity chairman. "It's an expression of humanity. People are giving their love, their talent and their energy

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠ ♥ ♦ ♣

Maybe usin' "ain't" at the table ain't so great English, but I notice that lots of players who ain't usin' "ain't", ain't playin' the game so good as they could. Either that or they ain't workin' at it as tenaciously as they might and that only requires a desire to train, discipline, and concentrate more intently.

At this one's youthful stage of life, time has a limit and one shouldn't dally too much before sunset, as morning might be beyond my horizon. In spite of this concern for what's coming, I found time on my hands a week ago and turned to my bridge wheel of fortune to see in a spin which V.I.P. might pop up I could write about. You'll never guess how lucky I struck it and now it only remains to be seen if this one can do that subject justice. If so, I think you'll enjoy this story.

When I mentioned to Don Greene of Bloomfield Hills that I was considering scribbling a narrative about his lovely bride Betty, his reply was the standard canon of man: "Why not me?"

I reminded him that ladies come first and he immediately resurrected his parents' sound advice about custom with a nod of acknowledgment. Providentially for the master of the handsome Greene family, you can't glorify Betty without the honor favoring Don too. These two have done much together for nearly 36 years. This is especially true of their favorite recreation. Betty and Don have been working hard at their bridge and it's beginning to show at the corners. Recognize that many have played on the same plateau for a lifetime. I will never admit, even though true, that my game was under investigation for negligence most of the years I've been playing. Improvement just doesn't come easily in spite of persistent endeavor.

Betty will tell you that rearing their three wonderful daughters was a joyous, but sometimes maddening happening. In the course of understanding this game you experience many coincidental emotions. Don has now reached the life master level and Betty is only a few points away. Then the challenge for both will again be as stimulating as they step towards their next pedestal of achievement.

Today's illustration of excellence was masterminded by Betty at the Bridge Connection one evening last December. I had a ring side seat sitting East and our partnership fell prey to her final declarer play.

As you can see everyone got his money's worth of bidding. Don's double, the negative variety created by Roth/Stone, said "Partner, I have a tolerance for your suit (in this instance a super tolerance) and cards in both the unbid suits." East's Re-double promised diamonds and some H.C.P. Betty's pass even though she held half the deck in high cards, was superior as she knew Don wouldn't drop the auction there. B she correctly decided to wait and gain more knowledge before committing the hand to game or even slam.

The Greenes were fortunate to side-step the heart slam which had no play even though many in the field were there. I attribute this to Betty's pass over East's Re-double. The play for a dozen clubs is a major spade puzzle. Who has the ace, jack? If both are with West, protected, the hand is down, but if divided, declarer must speculate correctly.

Dummy ruffed the lead and played two rounds of trumps ending in dummy. Next the spade ten to her king as both opponents followed low in tempo. Now the ace, king, queen of hearts in the hopes the jack would fall. When it didn't at trick (8) Betty ruffed her other diamond and played the spade nine. Again East played low in tempo and the lovely Mrs. Greene was faced with the guess of her lifetime. Of course she did correctly and victory otherwise there'd be no reason for today's column.

Did I learn something from this? You betcha! One must be extremely careful of these new lady life masters.

Her tone in discussing the stalled MBT is diplomatic, even resilient, if a little sad.

"It's not as if starting a new ballet company isn't a risky thing, especially if you look at what's going on in the arts all across the country, where there's not a big demand for culture. But in terms of Detroit, it was a really good idea. I mean, Mayor Archer was talking about funding the arts by taxing sporting events, and as far as MBT being too good to be true, I don't think it was unrealistic to expect MBT to start out on the scale of other national companies," she said. And as far as Detroit's cultural palate accommodating the visceral grace of dance, Dorsey cites both the Feld Ballet's and Alvin Ailey Dance Troupe's well-received stops in the area over the past year. She also noted, with a mix of awe and contempt, that every suburb of Detroit has at least three dance schools and every Christmas they put on their own "Nutcracker."

"I think the problem is in this kind of geographic independence. If people would just get over their reluctance to go downtown for a dance production, there would be more of a need for something like MBT," she said.

MBT is still a possibility, though, with plans for a second, less expensive, season under way.

> emotions regarding MBT's unfulfilled promise of a dance future for her in Detroit, Dorsey recognizes that the practical concerns of being a dancer are more afterthoughts than motivations. When a young woman once asked modern dance legend Martha Graham if the matronly mentor thought the student had what it took to be a dancer, the precise and poetic Graham responded "Young lady, you don't decide to be a

But despite her mixed dancer. You know.' Dorsey knew when she was 6, when she first studied ballet. By the time she was 12 her commitment had blossomed, in its dedicated way, into 10 classes a week, which, along with school and other adolescent realities, meant a schedule militarily disciplined enough to rival that of Cold War Olympic hopefuls.

Unlike more privately tutored athletic arts like figure skating, dancers benefit from a wealth of established dance academics, which Dorsey took full advantage of, studying with the esteemed Gabriela Darvash Ballet Studio in New York when she was still in her teens.

There, her high-profile appearance in such classic Darvash staples as "Giselle" allowed Dorsey's classical interpretations to take voice, in the form of laudatory reviews from the New York Times, arguably the most important ink a dancer can

And though she prides herself on being something of a traditionalist, favoring classical ballet over avantgarde experimentalism, it has been Dorsey's variations on classical themes that have won her her highest praise.

In a review of her performance in George Balanchine's "Concerto Barroco" with the Ohio Ballet, Times critic Jennifer Dunning wrote, "Her softly buoyant jump and voluptuous attack are not all that Balanchian, but she moves with such graciousness and delight that one sensed the pleasure of dancing that ballet."

Of course, while she sing the praises of her life experiences through dance, her national tours, her year in Germany, her impressive reviews, dancing is a lifestyle, one of constant renewal and discipline for Dorsev. The intense combination of athleticism and drama makes for a potent and constant challenge.

"I've made choices as to how much freedom I want in terms of what I do. In ballet, there's a story, there are roles, it's not just pure dancing," she said.

And there is no time off. After her five weeks with the MOT, it's back to Cincinnati for a five-week run with a company there. She's not complaining, but she's keenly aware of the instability of dancing.

"It's strange being in my 20s seeing people my age finished with school, getting settled, because stantly moving," she said.

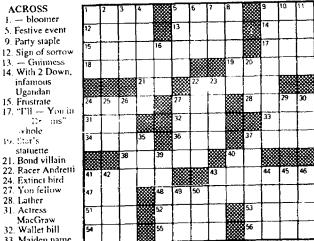

"I know people who got really tired of all the moving, and they're in med school now,'

It's not that being a dancer is such a rough profession, it's just a committed one. After all, even doctors get vacations.

The last of Detroit's great ballrooms — the Vanity Ballroom - will open its doors to the public for the first time in nearly a decade Saturday, May 7, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Vanity Ballroom is an outstanding art deco building built around an Aztec theme," said Rebecca Binno, co-chair of the society's preservation subcommittee. "It has been at the top of the list of endangered buildings for nearly a year. The Vanity holds many memories for Detroiters. It is the last remaining intact ballroom in Detroit that played host to Count Basie, Tommy Dorsey, and other big bands of the 1930s and '40s.

Salvation Army will present awards at annual dinner May 9

The Salvation Army's annual civic dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m. Monday, May 9, in the Columbus Ballroom of the Westin Hotel.

The army's highest awards will be presented to Grosse Pointer Edsel Ford II and Q95 radio personality Dick Purtan.

Ford will receive the Booth Award for his support and service to the Salvation Army and Purtan will receive the Others Award for his service to the community.

The Salvation Army provides shelter for thousands of people annually. When the army itself needed shelter (i.e., larger offices), the Ford Motor Co. donated a two-story building in Southfield which now serves as a divisional headquarters and corps community center.

Purtan has raised more than $1 million for the army's Bed and Bread Club, through an annual radiothon that began in 1986.

Seven army volunteers will also be honored for their dedication to community service activities.

National Salvation Army Week is May 9-15.

"Through this week of celebration, we hope to generate a better understanding of those who need help in Detroit and what is being done for them," said Lt. Col William J. Speck, divisional commander of the army.

The dinner is open to the public. Tickets are $30 and may be purchased by calling (810) 443-5500.

Antiques: More than 40 of the nation's top antique furniture dealers will participate in a benefit for Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village May 6-8 at Lovett Hall at Greenfield Village in Dearborn.

Items for sale will include Oriental furniture and collectibles, Russian silver and enamels, antique and estate jewelry, Audubon prints, Asian textiles and jade objects, native American art, Ming and early Qing porcelain, antique Wedgewood and English pottery, rare books and autographs, vintage wicker furniture, weathervanes, American arts and crafts and more.

A preview party will be held today, May 5. Tickets to the black-tie benefit are $300, $150 and $100.

Proceeds from the event will support the educational programs of Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village he fight goes on in the fashion world. Original versus look alike is the basic question. And the answer, for the most part, is purely economical.

Look alikes, as opposed to counterfeits, are legal and are less expensive copies of a designer original but don't pretend to be the real thing. Counterfeits use trademark logos and attempt to look exactly like the genuine article. Most are of fair to poor quality.

J. Tíras Classic Handbags, a leader in the look-alike field, manufactures incredibly high quality handbags and accessories. "The secret isn't skimping on materials," says Jeannie Tíras. Tíras uses the finest materials from Italy and Asia including Karung snakeskin and lambskin; and adorn the bags with Swarovski crystals and semi-precious stones. "We have lambskin that you would want to go to bed with," Jeannie smiled.

J. Tíras has styles and quality that rival designers such as Judith Leiber, Bottega Veneta, Louis Vuitton, and Ferragamo among others and usually sell for less than twenty-five percent of the originals. "We save by manufacturing in the Far East and selling direct with no middlemen," Tíras says.

The Bag

The company sells through its Houston store, catalog, and through trunk shows in most major cities in the country. Bulk buying is not unusual. "Women come in from California and buy 30 at a time," Tíras says. Other clients, whom she won't name, include TV personalities, movie stars, socialites and wife of a Texas billionaire.

You can view these exciting handbags and accessories, as well as designer look-alike jewelry, this week in Detroit at the Troy Marriott, 200 W. Big Beaver Rd., on Sunday, May 8 from 5pm - 8pm and on Monday, May 9 from 10am - 5pm.

Be wise, immunize

By the Rev. Jack Giguere Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church

I've been reading about the needs of children. The Carnegie Corp. has issued a report detailing that onefourth of all infants and toddlers in America live in poverty. One-third of the victims of physical abuse are children under the age of 1.

We rank near the bottom of all industrialized nations in infant mortality and in child-disease immunization. Forty percent of 2-year-olds are not properly

The question, however, is this: Do we take as many pains to guard children from moral and spiritual infection as we do from physical infection? Do we try to be as sure that they are kept safe from that which threatens their minds and souls as we do for dangers to their

I don't think there has ever been an age when children are so exposed to spiritual infection.

There seems to be a cult of violence in the entertainments available for children. This cult has invaded even the games children play and the language they use.

Look at advertising. One of the strangest features of our society is the amount of advertising directed to creating the worst possible habits! Joe Camel ads are clearly aimed at kids. Advertising does not only aim to satisfy an existing need, it aims to create a need to be satisfied. And sometimes the needs created are anything but desirable.

Life is full of infection. I know it is impossible for young people to escape contact with it. I don't think it is either possible or desirable to completely isolate children from life.

Parents have a great responsibility in these difficult days on this matter of spiritual infection. Therefore, I ask you: Are you and your children in church and Sunday school every Sunday? Do you have Christian literature in your home? Are your children in church choirs, youth fellowship groups, summer camps, mission work trips? Is "grace" offered before every meal and do you give your children the opportunity to lead in those prayers?

Immunizations are as necessary for your child's moral and spiritual infections as for physical infec-

Bananarama Nature's favorite fruit

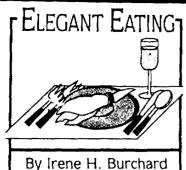

A food staple of the tropics, bananas are now an item of world-wide commerce.

They are one of the oldest known fruits, perhaps one of the first cultivated. Distinctive names in sanskrit, ancient Chinese, and the Malay languages indicate it was known throughout much of prehistoric southern Asia.

The botanical name of the common banana, Musa sapientum, means "fruit of the Wise Men." According to legend, the sages of India rested in the shade of the plant and ate the

A second species, M. nama, the dwarf banana, is similar to the common bananas. Another closely related cooking banana or plantains, M. paradisiaca and M. Fehi, are important fruit in the tropics. These fruits are not palatable raw since they remain starchy when ripe, but are excellent cooked.

It is interesting to note that bananas grow on the world's tallest plant without a woody trunk. Banana trees are really large herbaceous plants which quickly shoot up to a height of 15 to 20 feet. The plant's true stem is underground and has buds or "eyes" like a potato. These stems, or rhizomes, are transplanted to establish new plants; as with potatoes, each may be cut into several pieces.

The banana's popularity is unsurpassed. No single fruit is purchased more frequently than bananas, with 90 percent of households buying bananas every week. They are very nourishing, with a high energy value (98 calories per 100 g.) and rich in potassium, vitamins A, C and K and starch.

For the busy American lifestyle, the snack, once the "little something" to keep betweenmeal hunger pangs at bay, is becoming an increasingly popular part of the diet, accounting for 19 percent of the vitamins and minerals and 16 percent of the calories for women, according to Food Focus. For children aged 1 to 4, the figures are even higher; 22 percent of the vitamins and minerals and 23 percent of the calories come from snacks

At the breakfast table, the 1/2 cup low-fat yogurt banana is the overwhelming favorite fruit and, for healthful snacking, the banana is way ahead of the bunch. With recent attention focused on healthy lifestyles, bananas are a simple way to increase individual consumption of fruit, and the banana is easy and convenient to enjoy. Anyone can tell when a banana is ripe, preparation is minimal and the banana is a good source of important vitamins and minerals.

And best of all is the banana's marvelous portability. It can be slipped into a pocket, a briefcase, a lunch bag or tote bag; or tucked in a baby's stroller or into a backpack while hiking or biking. It's nature's most convenient fruit.

When you've had your fill of all-natural bananas, they will prove themselves just as congenial dressed up for dessert. Here is a 1990s version of two old favorites, the banana split and banana cream pie. They are healthier, but taste just as rich. The split is made using frozen yogurt and fresh pineapple; the pie is a creamy, but low-fat, no-bake version of the old-fashioned cream and eggladen type.

Banana Cream Pie 1/3 cup orange juice 1 package plain gelatin 1 cup low-fat cottage cheese 1/2 cup light sour cream

1/3 cup sugar 1/4 cup low-fat milk

3 medium bananas

2 T lemon juice 1 ready made 9-inch graham cracker crust Warm orange juice, add gelatin and stir until dissolved. In a food processor or blender, process cottage cheese until smooth. Add sour cream, yogurt, sugar, milk and warm orange juice and process until just blended, scraping down sides of bowl.

Slice one banana into 1/4 inch thick slices and toss in one tablespoon lemon juice. Place banana slices across the bottom of the prepared pie crust and pour cream mixture over bananas. Chill until set, about 2 hours. When ready to serve, slice remaining bananas and toss in remaining lemon juice. Use to garnish pie. Makes 8 servings.

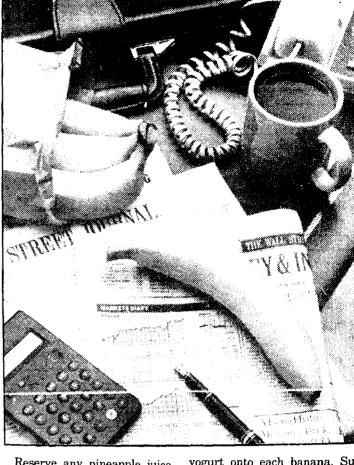

'90s Bananas-Pineapple Split

1/4 pineapple cut up or 1 16 oz. package fresh cut Hawaiian pineapple

4 medium bananas 1 pint strawberry frozen yogurt

1 pint vanilla frozen yogurt 3/4 cup fudge sauce or chocolate syrup

1/2 cup chopped walnuts 1/2 whipped cream topping, optional

Reserve any pineapple juice. Peel and halve each banana lengthwise. Coat the cut banana with pineapple juice. Place each cut banana in a banana split dish or shallow dessert bowl. Scoop about 1/2 cup strawberry and 1/2 cup vanilla yogurt onto each banana. Surround with pineapple pieces. Top with fudge sauce, nuts and whipped cream if desired. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

A look back at an epic blockbuster

Sometimes I have deliberately shunned the best-selling books of the moment.

Perhaps this is a perverse attitude on my part because I do not wish to participate in a stampede toward the "red-hot" books which perch atop bestseller lists from coast to coast. Often I lament that many more worthy books are overlooked by readers who zealously seek out the books which have gained was a Michael Crichton autonotoriety through publishers' publicity releases and the Hollywood hullabaloo of scrambling for movie rights and TV

This is what particularly deterred me from rushing to read Michael Crichton's very popular "Jurassic Park" when it first appeared a year or so ago. Just recently, however, I received the lovely "Illustrated Gift Edition" (Knopf. 461 pages. $35), with a colorful laminated binding, a transparent saurs. Crichton has done his

Of course, it would be very interesting to watch these massive figures as they roamed around for food, fought with other dinosaurs for territorial space, and raised their young, but it could be quite frightening if they somehow managed to escape from within their en-

As Crichton writes in his preface: "For although 'Jurassic Park' is an exciting adventure story, it is also a cautionary tale about the power of fundamental technologies, and the limits of control. It reminds us that as our power grows, so does our responsibility to use that power wisely."

situations that continuously confront them, from children to scientists, and who must react quickly to each dramatic turn of the scenario.

Thus, the dinosaurs dominate the action, and every sinister twitch of their tails threatens another melodramatic turn of Jurassic Park is located in the tropical venue of Costa Rica. The author points out:

"Only 75 miles wide at its narrowest point, the country was smaller than the state of Maine. Yet, within its limited space, Costa Rica had a remarkable diversity of biological inhabitants: seacoasts on both the Atlantic and the Pacific; four separate mountain ranges, including 12,000-foot peaks and active volcanoes; rain forests, cloud forests, temperate zones, swampy marshes, arid deserts. Such ecological diversity sustained an astonishing diversity of plant and animal life. Costa Rica had three times as many species of birds as found in all of North America. More than a thousand species of orchids; more than five thousand species of insects."

All of which provided a rich laboratory to carry forth the ambition of a slightly mad multi-millionaire who hired scientists to clone and grow modern day dinosaurs. Michael Crichton offers a caution: do not tamper with nature or you might open a Pandora's box that could never be closed.

'Guys' leave you asking for 'Moe'

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Let the good times roll.

And they do when "Five Guys Named Moe" come leaping out of a radio to set Nomax (Kirk Taylor) straight as he tries to drown his sorrow over a lost love in alcohol.

With song, dance and rhythm, No Moe (Keith Tyrone), Big Moe (Doug Eskey), Little Moe (Jeffrey Polk), Four-Eyed Moe (Kevin Brackett) try to raise Nomax's spirits. In the process they provide high-octane entertainment for the audience.

Nomax resists until the seca totally different level.

"Five Guys Named Moe" will strut their stuff at the Fisher Theater through May 15 after appearing for four years in London where the show won the prestigious Olivier Award, and a year on Broadway where it was nominated for a Tony Award for best musical.

Those who grew up in the '40s may remember the original hepcats known as the Tympany Five who were made famous by singer-saxophonist Louis Jordan in the song, "Five Guys Named Moe." He is credited as being the main influence on rock 'n' roll and was inducted into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame in 1987.

Contending that jazz played to a limited audience, he set out to play for everybody with a simplified jazz that relied on shuffling rhythms and repetitive riffs by the horn section. It became known as "jump blues." Some of that common touch remains in this glossy and colorful musical, such as "What's the Use of Getting Sober, When You Gotta Get Drunk Again.'

Although Jordan is best known for his pop hits, he had a different set of music for dances. He was an excellent And fun would be the best blues singer and often did such Jordan's hits backed by a swaying band on stage.

and cranberry colored suits, arm garters and suspenders. They are outstanding singers and dancers who can clown it up and still project class. They are jazz comics making sure that the audience has as much fun as they seem to be having.

Take your pick of a favorite song and dance if you can. From such numbers as "Reet, Petite and Gone," "Five Guys Named Moe," "Choo, Chooch Boogie," "Is You Is or Is You Ain't Ma' Baby."

Smooth sidestepping, airborne splits, gliding sideways, the group amazes with its grace and suppleness.

All this is played out against a cartoony backdrop of skyscrapers adapted to suit the mood with shaded lights or encircled with bright red lightbulbs.

"Five Guys Named Moe" is alive with the sound of music that sets your feet tapping, your sides shaking with laughter and your spirits soaring.

Moira

Ballerina reveals pressure under the grace of dance

By Hobey Echlin Special Writer

For now, Moira Dorsey is just happy to be working. The 26-year-old dancer will appear as one of the evil stepsisters in the Michigan Opera Theater production of "Cinderella" May 6-8 at the Masonic Temple Theatre.

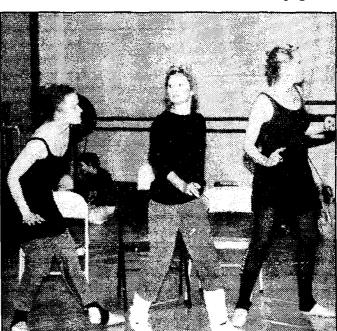

It's a good role in a timehonored production, but for Dorsey, raised and schooled on the East Coast, it's hardly a career-affirming move, just a safe one. Which is why she is, for now,

The transplanted easterner, who is settled for the moment in Grosse Pointe Park, has known happier times. Nine months ago she and 20 other dancers made their way from as far away as Switzerland, and Australia to join in what was to become, like the DSO and the DIA, a crowning moment in Detroit's history of culture: The Metropolitan Ballet Theater.

MBT, under the artistic direction of Boston's Karl Condon, boasted a repertoire and scale to rival even the most established civic ballet companies. The story is a long and frustrating one, but crucial funding failed to come through and the newly staffed ballet company, barely settled into its rehearsal studios in downtown's Harmony Park, found itself laid off.

For Dorsey, who had spent four years with the Ohio Ballet following a year-long stint in Germany before leaving to join MBT, the disappointment was more than just being out of a job. "The most difficult thing was that people had stayed here in Detroit for a really long time to make this work," she explained. "The employment side of it wasn't as rough; obviously dancers aren't in this profession to make

Watch out, guys: 'Bad Girls' turn out a good western

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

Move over Clint Eastwood, you're up against some competition, namely four young ladies who appear in an old-fashioned shoot-em-up western called "Bad Girls."

They're dead-eye shots, and Clint, they have an edge on you: they're prettier. As for that catch line "make my day?" they have one, too. It's "die like a man!"

If anyone thinks that this raucous romp is a western in which four attractive women dress up like cowboys and playact, they would be wrong. These cowgirls are deadly serious. They are womanly women with the courage to tough it out when the going gets rough.

All four, Cody (Madeleine Stowe), Anita (Mary Stuart Masterson), Eileen (Andie MacDowell), and Lilly (Drew Barrymore), for one reason or another have made their way west where they resort to the only means single women have to make any money: running a thrilling escapades, she is rescued by her three friends and they gallop away with the law in hot pursuit.

When an unruly bigwig in the town gets rough with one of the girls, Cody shoots him.

Before the girls can get out of town a lynch mob arrives. Three of the girls escape but Cody is nabbed, a noose is put around her neck and she is taken to the center of town to be hung. In one of several tains.

The rest of the movie deals with their attempts to go straight, and elude the law.

These four women may well pave the way for a new breed of western films, or at least a series starring the same cast. It would be a loss to waste the talents of these feisty female outlaws who break the mold with their bravado.

Stowe, as the ringleader, stands out. Her deep-voiced toughness plays intriguingly against her porcelain beauty. Radiant MacDowell, currently on screen in "Four Weddings and a Funeral," is lovely and flirtatious. Eileen, Barrymore belies her Barbie doll looks with a "don't-mess-with-me" manner and Masterson, the most reticent of the quartet, displays an unexpected toughness in the final scenes. James Russo as badman Kid Jarret is so villainous you expect the audience to hiss. Not far behind him is his father, played by

A mid-season trade can be a traumatic experience, but it was like a dream come true for Grosse Pointe South senior Chris Fox when he was sent from one North American Junior Hockey League team to another.

move," said Fox, who was traded from the Detroit Freeze to the Compuware squad. "We weren't winning many games and Compuware was having a good year."

The trade looked even better last weekend when Compu-grad Brad Dunlap on the roster, won the National Junior A championship in Des Moines, Playing for national championships is nothing new for Dunlap, an outstanding defensive forward, or Fox, a speedy, puck-carrying defenseman. Dunlap was a member of the Fruehauf Flyers Bantam team that won a national title in 1992 and Fox played for Little Caesars, which won the national Midget crown in 1993.

"This was my biggest thrill playing hockey," Dunlap said before leaving for a 3 1/2-week trip to France to visit a friend who lived with the family while he was an exchange student at South. "It's the culmination of 14 years of work."

This was Dunlap's second year with Compuware. And it was much better than the first.

"I think we won 10 games all last year, so it was a big turnaround," he said. "We had some new guys come in and the ones who played last year had a year of experience.'

One of the key newcomers was Fox, who is projected as a fourth-round pick in June's NHL Entry Draft.

"Chris really helped because he can move the puck so well," went to Denny's to eat at 1 Dunlap said.

Dunlap also played a major role in Compuware's success with his defensive play at for-

"Our job as a line is to shut down the other team's top line," Dunlap said. "We don't to rest before a rematch with worry about scoring. We have other people to do that."

His performance earned Fox's admiration.

"Brad's an outstanding defensive forward," Fox said.

"He's a good penalty killer and scored a big goal when we were shorthanded against Sioux City (Iowa)."

Compuware started its climb to the championship with a victory over Cleveland in the NAJL division semifinals and then beat Niagara Falls in the East finals. A victory over West champion Kalamazoo gave Compuware the league title and sent it to the nationals.

The national championships opened with a 6-3 victory over Sioux City. Then Compuware came back from a 3-0 first-period deficit to beat Des Moines 54 in three overtimes.

"We were really dragging after that game and it showed in a.m. because it was the only place open at that time. We got to bed at 3 o'clock and then had to get up again at 9 because our next game was at 2."

After the disaster against Omaha, Compuware got a day the Lancers. This time Compuware posted a 5-4 victory, scoring the winner with 32 seconds left in overtime.

The Detroit squad then wrapped up the title with a 7-5 win over Sioux City.

"Most people think that the USHL (United States Hockey League) is better than our league, so we went into the tournament with the idea of proving that we can stand up to anyone. I think we showed that our league is as good as any," Fox said.
"The USHL has a reputation because it's the only thing going in places like Omaha and Des Moines and they have a lot bigger crowds. Our league has so many other teams to compete with - the Red Wings, the Junior Wings, Michigan and Michigan State.

Dunlap, who graduated from South last June, and Fox are our next one when we lost 10-2 going to pack away the skates likes offensive players wh to Omaha," Fox said. "We for a little while, but it won't skate and have quickness."

the ice.

"I'm excited about going to France," Dunlap said. "It'll be interesting to see how much I learned from all the classroom work I did. Right now I'm a little nervous.'

Fox has rejoined South's baseball team and hopes he can add some punch to an attack that has been struggling.

"Our pitchers have been carrying us right now," he said.

Both players are looking forward to their first seasons of college hockey. Dunlap is going to Yale and Fox has a full scholarship to play at Michi-

"Yale won only six games last season, so it should be a good opportunity for me to get some ice time right away,' Dunlap said.

Fox is just as excited about playing for the Central Collegiate Hockey Association champions.

"I'm really impressed with (coach) Red Berenson and I love Yost (Arena)," he said. "I think Michigan's going to be a good fit for me because (Berenson) likes offensive players who can Another bit of strategy by Backhurst paid off in the Lady Knights' third goal.

Diane West, who moved from halfback to forward, took the ball away from a North defender and sent a crossing pass to Liz Eldridge. Eldridge went around the Mustangs' sweeper and fired the ball into the goal.

North outshot ULS 15-12 but Buhalis was outstanding in turning back each of the Mustangs' opportunities.

"She played like she had glue on her gloves," Backhurst said. "And I can't say enough about the defense because those girls stayed with a fast and physical Lutheran North team. ULS, which is 4-0 in the Metro Conference, had an easier time in its league game with Lutheran East, trouncing the Eagles 13-0.

Norsemen's Peters sets pace

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

A warm day made a red hot runner out of Grosse Pointe North junior Eric Peters.

Peters took advantage of the best day of the high school track season to post personal bests in the 100- and 200-meter dashes as the Norsemen beat Cousino 86-50 in a key Macomb Area Conference Blue

Division meet. "I figured Eric would run under 11 seconds in the 100 and under 23 in the 200 but I didn't expect him to do it this quickly," said coach Pat Wilson. "Last year he didn't turn in his best times until the weather got warmer. "But these times (10.8 in the 100 and 22.0 in the 200) weren't just because of the weather. Eric was the only one with that kind of improvement. Both of those times would have scored in the state finals.'

Wilson said there's no limit to what Peters could accomplish in the sprints. In fact, the veteran coach has a dream.

"Eric is a very smooth run-one next to him to run fast, but I'd love to see him chase somebody on the anchor leg of a relay. Then I think you'd really see some times," Wilson said.

In addition to his wins in the sprints, Peters also took first in the long jump with a leap of 21 feet, 1 1/2 inches.

"And he missed the (takeoff) board by a foot on that one," Wilson said.

North continued to do well in the hurdles races. Shareef Simaika led a 1-2-3 sweep in the highs with a 15.5 clocking. Kevin Stanley had a personal best time for second place and Jason McBrien was third. Chris Georgandellis won the highs in 42.7 and Stanley was second with a personal-best 42.9.

Simaika won the 400 in 53.2, his best ever in the event, and Bill Clark cleared 5-6 to win the high jump.

North had three winning relay teams. Bob Stevenson, Kevin Grant, Justin Fines and Bill Stevenson took the 3,200 relay in 8:48 and the team of Clark, Georgandellis, Hosea Peters and Simaika won the 800 relay in a season-best 1:35.6. The Norsemen's winning 400 relay team composed of the Peters brothers, Nick Williams was ninth in the 1,000-meter freestyle with a time of 9:24.36, 11th in the 500 freestyle (4:34.42) and 11th in the 1,650 freestyle (15:51.87).

Leanakis and Georgandellis posted a season-best 45.8.

Bill Stevenson was second in the mile in 4:42.8, shaving three seconds off his best time. Bob Stevenson cut three seconds in the 800 with a secondplace time of 2:06.

Another pair of brothers, Steve and Tom Fennell, had excellent runner-up efforts in the weight events. Steve had a heave of 41-11 in the shot and Tom threw the discus 116-3.

Other personal bests were by Clark and freshman Dave Massaron in the 200, Scott Phillips in the long jump and Matt Schneider in the 400.

"We expected a good meet and the kids were pumped up for it," Wilson said. "It was a great day and seeing some of the top kids turn in good times helped the others. All the events were quality ones because Cousino has some excellent kids, too.' North also did well in the 23-team De La Salle Invitational last weekend, winning the shuttle hurdle and distance medley relays.

Simaika, McBrien, Stanley and Georgandellis won the shuttle hurdle relay in 1:03.7, a half-second faster than the Norsemen's winning time in the event last year.

Dave Slanec started the distance medley with a 2:06.6 in the half-mile leg. Simaika ran a 52.9 quarter, Bob Stevenson ran the three-quarter mile leg and Bill Stevenson anchored with a 4:35 mile.

"Slanec did a great job against the kid from De La Salle who is one of the best half-milers in the state," Wilson said. "We were third after the first leg, but Shareef blew by everybody, Bob ran well and

Maliszewski, Peleman lead North

Many track athletes take a career to accomplish what Grosse Pointe North's Anne Maliszewski did in two recent meets.

Maliszewski won seven events to lead the Lady Norsemen to a pair of victories over Macomb Area Conference Blue Division rivals.

She won four events and teammates Jean Seo and Katie Daniels each had two first places in North's 85-43 victory over Cousino as the Lady Norsemen improved their overall record to 5-0.

Michelle Peleman and Monique Linthors also had firsts for North.

Earlier, Maliszewski won the long jump (15-feet), 100-meter dash (12.79) and 200 (28.2) to spark a 105-23 rout of Warren Woods-Tower.

Peleman had a personal best of 92-5 in winning the discus. She also took first in the shot put with a heave of 31-0.

Highlights

Winning championships is a habit for the Cal's Pizza team in the Neighborhood Club men's volleyball program.

The squad, which has been together since 1981, won this year's title in the Wednesday Upper Division, coming out of the losers' bracket to capture two straight matches against the Holy Roman Emperors.

Cal's took two out of three games in the first match, then took two straight in the rematch of the double-elimination tournament.

The average age of the Cal's team is 38 and the younger Holy Roman Emperors provided a serious challenge.

"We've been playing together for such a long time that we know each other's strengths very well," said player-coach Wally Kiehler.

ULS team completes perfect year

The University Liggett Middle School boys basketball team had a perfect season in league play as the squad won its second straight Southeastern Michigan Independent Conference championship.

The Knights clinched the title with a 31-27 win over Detroit Waldorf in the season finale. ULS was 8-0 in the league and 14-2 overall.

"Since we didn't have a true big man, we played the entire season with a three-guard offense," said head coach Bruce Pelto. "That type of offensive style, pluse our team's strong defensive play, is what made the difference for us."

Pelto said the players' confidence grew with each game.

"When we took Southfield Harris. Christian into overtime and beat them on their home court (in the season opener), it really set the tone for the rest of the year," he said.

Guards Joel Parrott and Kevin Espy led the team in among track athletes. scoring and Brad Cenko's steady play and leadership was also a major factor in the team's success.

"Brad understands the game so well it's like having a coach on the floor," Pelto said.

Although they were outsized in nearly every game, Ben Kennedy and Kyle Denham gave ULS muscle on the boards. Thomas Pozios and Clark Durant provided a spark coming off the bench.

"The players on this team really believe in themselves,' Pelto said. "Each day they worked hard and looked at every challenge as an opportunity. Every game we had someone step up their game. Our chemistry was very good all season.

In addition to the dramatic overtime win in the opener, another highlight was a non league victory against Detroit Country Day.

"That one was really sweet," Pelto said. "It was the first time we've beaten Country Day in over five years.'

Next season will provide a challenge for the Knights, who Howard, Tim Deters (Cougars). have only one player returning Girardi (Cougars). from this year's squad.

confident that our players will fourth quarter and teammate Nevin be ready for the challenge," Pelto said.

Earlier, North lost to L'Anse Creuse 13-7 as the Lady Norsemen fell behind by seven runs in the fifth inning.

Bertelsen and Emily Kraft led North with two hits apiece.

North opened the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division season with an 11-10 win over Warren Woods-Tower.

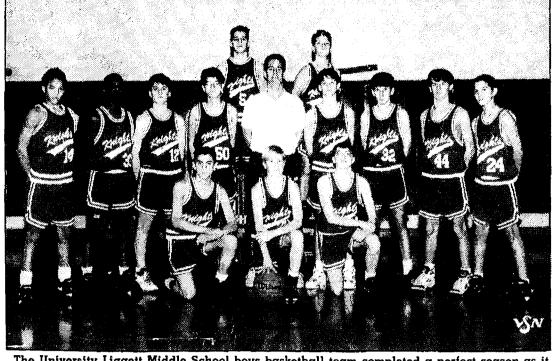

Karber's solid single to center in the bottom of the seventh drove in Loeher with the winning run. Loeher and Karber each had two hits.

"Our expectations for the year are to defend our league championship and win the Grosse Pointe Tournament," said coach Bill Taylor.

The Lady Norsemen are led by tri-captains Bertelsen, Keri Muccioli and Loeher.

North dropped four nonleague contests during the pre-season but Taylor said, "This gets us ready for the season."

He expects the Lady Norsemen's toughest challengers in the division to be Lake Shore, L'Anse Creuse and Cousino.

Katy Lupo, Becca Walter, Toninia Nicosia, Melissa Van Hoek and Lisa McCurdy each contributed to high finishes by South's three sprint relay teams.

Lupo came back to place fourth in the 400, while Mc-Curdy placed in the 100 hurdles and Walter was among the leaders in the 200.

Other South medalists were Shannon McGratty, Sandra Hammel and Eileen Lang.

Mott gave the Lady Devils their closest dual meet of the season. Weed, Zanglin and McCurdy joined O'Byrne as first-place finishers, while Gretchen Carter was runner-up in the long jump and 400.

Jay Harrington pitched a two-hitter and struck out 11against Ford, but wound up the loser when a disputed call at a second base resulted in a fourrun fifth inning for the Falcons.;

Ford had runners at first and third with one out when Brian Nugent fielded a groundball and stepped on second for an apparent force. The umpire, however, said the runner was; safe. The runner on third scored and the Falcons had runners on first and second. Harrington fanned the next batter but Brian Krenzel, who set a school rushing record in: last fall's football victory over South, destroyed the Blue Devils again by hitting a three-run

"When I questioned the umpire, he said Nugent took his 🖫 foot off the bag to avoid the sliding runner," Griesbaum said "Maybe he did, but he touched the base first. It should have been a 3-1 game."

The Lady Devils were ahead of Randy Vasser started the rally with a double and scored on Ryan Messacar's two-bagger. Harrington's double drove in: Messacar and the final run scored on a double by Nugent.

"That was probably Jay's best outing of the season." Griesbaum said. "He threw great.'

South's victory over L'Anse Creuse North featured a ninerun first inning that saw 14. batters come to the plate.

Harrington and Nugent each collected three hits and the two combined for five RBI. Eugene Agnone had two hits, including a double, and drove in two runs; Chris Fox had two hits and two RBI; and Sean Recht had a pair of doubles and drove in one run.

Vasser started and picked up the victory with relief help from Todd Malbouef and Karl Davids. Vasser fanned eight.

Earlier, South managed only one hit - a third-inning single by Recht — in a 3-0 loss to Anchor Bay. Winning pitcher Jim Hoschield went the distance and struck out seven.

Agnone absorbed the loss despite pitching a two-hitter with seven strikeouts. His problem was control as he walked nine.

South is now 1-3 in league play and 6-7 overall.

Lifelong partners since kindergarten, Stan & Dave would like a chance to become lifelong partners with you!

Dave Levy and Stan Schwartz, the owners of Classic Window & Siding, have been friends and partners in business ever since they were little kids. Though, as youngsters, back in the days of Kool-Aid stands, they probably never suspected that they would grow up to be the men behind the East area's most respected name in windows and siding. On the other hand, if their Kool-Aid was any indication of what was to come, on a hot summer day, they knew even then what it meant to be in demand.

Sun porch and breakfast room are oriented to rear

By W.D. Farmer

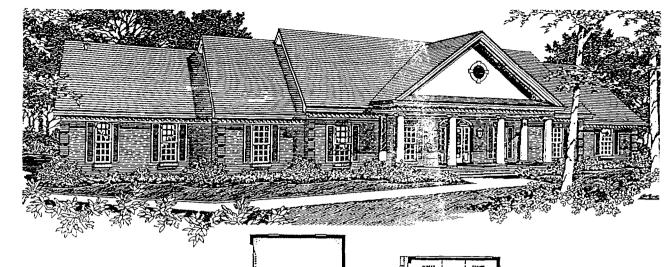

The main level of this sprawling house is largely devoted to open family living space. The vast great room is highlighted by open access to a great sun porch and the sloped ceiling is carried straight through. The only visual obstruction between the two is a central fireplace. Stairs to the basement and attic are adjacent to this area.

The formal living room and dining room are separated by attractive wood columns and the foyer is shown with a tray ceiling.

Three bedrooms and a hobby room complete the plan. The master bedroom is provided with a luxury bath and a large walk-in closet. The remaining two bedrooms share a central double entry bath and a powder room is provided for daytime use. The hobby room also includes access to a full shower bath and the large laundry room is in the same area.

The entrance to the rear garage is from the hall near the spacious kitchen.

The Colonial exterior is enhanced by a columned porch, brick construction and corner quoins. The roof style is steep gable.

The computer-generated plan is No. 4010. It includes 4,036 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency. For further information write W.D. Farmer Residence Designer Inc., P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, Ga. 30345.

Pewabic show at Ford House

Gardens past and present will be the theme of this year's Pewabic Pottery Garden Show and Sale, to be held in the Rose Garden of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House on Saturday and Sunday, May 14 and 15, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Members of the Pewabic Society will be admitted free; tickets for non-members are $5.

Before the show's opening, a Patron Preview hosted by Neiman Marcus and the Pewabic Society board of trustees will be held in the Rose Garden on Friday, May 13, from 6 to 9 p.m. Tickets to the preview, which includes a tour of the Ford House, are $75 a person. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served. All proceeds will benefit the pottery, a nonprofit center for ceramic arts and a national historic landmark.

Ceramic wares by Pewabic Pottery and invited artists will include garden urns, birdbaths, tableware, and other accessories for the well-dressed sunroom, porch, or garden—all displayed against the Cotswold-inspired setting of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House and gardens. Pewabic Pottery's staff and board members will be on hand to answer questions about items for sale and about the pottery itself, which celebrated its 90th anniversary in 1993.

On Saturday, May 14, the Ford House will host a symposium on historic gardens as part of its 1994 lecture series. Also in May, an exhibition focusing on historic Pewabic garden vessels and the Pottery's original garden will open at Pewabic Pottery and continue through August. For novices and serious gardeners alike, this three-faceted event shouldn't be missed.

Founded in 1903 by Mary Chase (later Stratton) and Horace J. Caulkins, Pewabic Pottery continues to create and produce hand-crafted ceramic tiles and vessels for public and private installations. The pottery also offers educational programs for children and adults, exhibits work by emerging and established ceramists, provides guided and self-guided tours of the facility, and maintains research collections that document Pewabic's role in the history of ceramic art.

The pottery is supported by contributions form individuals, corporations, and foundations and is partially funded by the Michigan Council for the Arts and Cultural Affairs and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Pewabic Pottery is open Monday-Friday, from 10 a.m. 6 p.m. For more information, call (313) 822-0954.

Learn how to build your own home

FLOOR PLAN

LIVING ROOM

A 24-hour seminar on the basics of building your own home will be offered by Grosse Pointe Community Education, in cooperation with the Michigan Builders Institute. The course will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays, beginning May 17, from 7 to 10 p.m. at Barnes school, 20090 Morningside Drive in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Classes cover the home building process from start to finish. Subjects include buying property, site planning, zoning questions, financing and building codes and permits. Students also learn basics of concrete, masonry, wood frame construction, roofing, plumbing, electrical, insulation and ventilation, dealing with subcontractors and more. The course helps people avoid making costly mistakes when building their own homes and to become more confident when working with a contractor.

BED ROOM

The course costs $195 and includes a building textbook and course manual. Registration is required no later than Friday, May 13, at Grosse Pointe Community Education. Call 313-343-2178 during office hours to register.

The course instructor is a licensed builder with experience teaching builders' classes. He can answer questions related to all facets of home building. Michigan Builders Institute staffers teach in 72 schools in Michigan. For a free brochure and more information about all classes, call 810-651-2771.

Gardeners to host plant exchange

Bring garden plants and paraphernalia and plan to leave with plants from others' gardens at the Spring Macomb County Plant Exchange from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday, May 21, at the Macomb MSU Extension parking lot located at 21885 Dunham Road in Clinton Township.

The event is sponsored by Master

F:

Gardeners of Macomb MSU Extension. Anyone may bring healthy plant material, preferably labeled with name and growing information, for trade or just to share. No registration is necessary. The exchange will be rescheduled for the following Saturday in case of rain.

For more information, call Sandra Goeddeke-Richards at 469-6440.

Pesticides may exacerbate lawn mole problems

Q. I am having a problem with moles in my lawn. What are some of the recommended methods for control?

A. Moles disrupt the surface of the lawn by tunneling in search of food. The moles are usually found in a lawn because of the presence of white grubs and other insects that the moles eat.

Killing the white grubs with insecticides may work on soils with few earthworms. Where many earthworms are present, the moles will eat the earthworms when the grubs die. The result may be even more tunneling than before the insecticide treatment. Formulations of diazinon or dursban which list white grubs as a controlled insect on the label may be used according to directions.

Traps will work where there are just a few moles. Be sure to set the trap on a tunnel the mole uses every day. Where moles have made many tunnels, rolling the lawn will push the tunnels back down.

Q. I have recently acquired a new home and on my land there is an old apple tree. It is very tall with many weak and dead limbs. Is it worth the effort to try to manage it or should I just cut it down?

A. Old, abandoned or semi-abandoned apple trees occur throughout Michigan. Often the cultivars are very old and are no longer grown commercially. Many of them, however, if properly managed, could produce good fruit for use by homeowners for fresh eating or for processing into applesauce, apple jelly, apple butter or cider. When trees of desirable cultivars are near residences, people are often interested in attempting to care for them so the fruit can be used.

Often the old trees are 25 to 30 feet tall and have not been pruned for many years. The average homeowner is simply not equipped to spray and care for them, so the fruits produced are generally small, diseased and severely damaged by insects. A tree that is reasonably structurally sound may be renovated and brought back into production. The trunk should not be severely rotted, and large lateral limbs should not be hollow. Unsound trees can be successfully renovated but they will not live as long.

Once the owner has decided that a particular tree or trees are worth keeping, how can he/she bring the trees back into production with quality fruit and, at the same time, reduce the tree size to make them more manageable? In some cases, aesthetic value may also be a consideration. The following bulletin is available from the Cooperative Extension Service office: NCR-429 "Renovating Old, Abandoned Apple Trees."

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

"This Victorian dresser dates back to the 1700s," said a letter from a reader. It continued with a description of an oak dresser with two small side cupbords that "held a gentleman's powdered wig." The picture that was enclosed showed a typical oak bedroom piece made about 1890-1900. It is indeed Victorian, but one must remember that Victorian refers to the time of Queen Victoria of England and is approximately 1850 to 1900. She did not reign in the 1700s.

The cupboards were probably made to hold a potty, bowl and pitcher. We were also asked how much it is worth. The letter says, "I was told that a Shaker chest sold for $160,000 and I have only been offered $700 for my furniture." The value of the one-of-akind handmade Shaker chest of the best design does not have anything to do with the value of a machinemade Victorian piece that was probably inexpensive when purchased. The price of $700 seems fair.

Q. As a little girl in 1938 I remember sending for a Sunbrite Junior Nurse Corps membership. I liked nurse Dorothy Hart because she wasn't like the rest of the helpless, clinging girls in the other shows. I still have my membership button. Is it of value?

A. The Sunbrite Junior Nurse Corps was part of a radio program sponsored by Sunbrite Cleanser and Quick Arrow Soap Flakes in 1937 and 1938. Dorothy was a nursing student about 17 years old. Her Aunt Jane was a nurse. For several can labels or some soapflake and can labels and a stamp you could get the premiums. There were many types of premiums, including a notebook, first-aid kit, ring, doll, pictures, toothbrush, handkerchief and pictures of the cast. Your button is worth from $5 to $20 depending on condition.

Q. My funny pottery mug has a hillbilly handle that reminds me of a cartoon from my childhood. On the bottom is the mark "Hipsh, Inc., Kansas City, Mo." What can you tell me about it?

A. You do have a mug from your childhood. The Blue Ridge Mountain Boys were in a cartoon strip by Paul Webb in the 1940s. Some of the characters were incorporated into the designs of pottery mugs, pitchers, ashtrays, salt and pepper shakers, vases and other pieces. The mugs had handles portraying the mountain men and others like Maw or the babies.

The earliest mugs were marked like yours. Later ones, made by the Imperial Porcelain Corporation, were marked with the strip and artist's names. There is great interest in these products.

Q. I just purchased a bachelor's chest at an auction. The upper drawer extends out slightly over the three lower drawers. It is stamped "Johnston, Meader & Co. Manufacturers of all kinds of Furniture & chairs, 41st & 48, W. Second St., Cincinnati, Ohio." Can you tell me about the maker?

A. Charles Johnston was a chair manufacturer in Cincinnati from 1849 to 1868. In 1856, he was working with John Fitch Meader on West 2nd Street in Cincinnati, but by 1860, he had changed partners and locations. Your bachelor's chest was made sometime between 1856 and 1860. The larger upper drawer is typical of the Empirestyle furniture made at that time.

Beware of exaggerated food, supplement claims

Q. How do I know when a claim that a food product or supplement cures diseases is true?

A.These claims can be dangerous because they often prevent users from getting the medical help they need. They also create false hopes and waste money.

In general, if it sounds too good to be true, it is. Suspect a product if it: makes outrageous claims, like curing a disease or reversing the aging process (no product or food has yet been proven to do either); promises immediate or fast results; does not list ingredients; cites only one study or a preliminary study as proof of results; does not give information about possible side effects; claims to be a secret formula; and is available only from one source.

Q. How can cucumbers be seeded easily?

A. Cut the cucumber in half lengthwise and scrape out the seeds with a spoon or the handle of a vegetable peeler.

Q. How do you suggest scalding milk?

A. To scald milk, heat it in a heavy saucepan until bubbles form around the edges of the pan. (To facilitate cleaning the pan, rinse it with cold water before pouring in the cold milk.

Pruning, Feeding and Watering

Helpful Tips For The Care of Trees and Shrubs —

Spring has sprung and summer is on its way. That means now is the time to tend to your yard's trees and shrubs, so they'll look their very best throughout the entire growing season.

To help facilitate a beautiful landscape that's lush and thick with plant growth, the experts at The Scotts Company offer the following tree and shrub care tips:

Pruning

Broadleaved and needle-bearing trees and shrubs, such as poplars, maples and evergreens, are especially susceptible to the damaging effects of freezing rain, winds and snow. Often, the results are broken branches and weak, spindly growth that prevents plants from maintaining their shape and staying attractive. Pruning is the secret to restoring trees and shrubs to their former luster.

The myth that all pruning must occur during the dormant season isn't true. When to prune, how far to cut back, and the methods of cutting vary depending upon the season, the plant's condition, and its reaction to weather and previous prunings. Contact your nurseryman or local county extension agent for specific information.

Once you know what to prune and when, one of two basic pruning methods can be employed — thinning or heading cuts. Thinning cuts create space and reduce the effects of pressure caused by rain, snow, sleet and wind. The cut follows the branch to be removed to its source, with the cut made close enough to leave a short stump, called a branch collar. A thinning cut enables remaining limbs to continue growing naturally.

Heading cuts, on the other hand, lead back to a bud or buds, rather than follow a branch back to a limb. Such cutting promotes further bud growth and encourages remaining buds to thrive in full sun.

Feeding

Like people, plants need to be fed regularly to survive and thrive. For years, however, homeowners have been confused by the many fertilizer types on the market. As a result, their plants tend to have been either over- or underfed. Modern technology offers an ideal solution. A new product called Once Season Long Plant Food for Trees, Shrubs and Evergreens[©] is a time-saving and convenient plant feeding system that delivers vital nutrients and minerals for an entire growing season. As its name suggests, the Once product need only be applied one time in order for plants to enjoy all of its benefits for up to nine months.

Once contains Osmocote, unique resincoated granules which swell into capsules of liquefied plant food, and continuously release a controlled amount of nutrients into the soil, as plants need them. This means plants receive more food when they're hungry and less when they're not, which eliminates the feast or famine cycle often associated with ordinary plant foods.

Watering

Plant roots thrive where there's ample water, air and nutrients, so it is vital that water reaches deep into the soil. Rainfall is not enough, as much of it evaporates or drains off before the soil absorbs it. The same applies to watering with a hose. Regular (but not frequent) deep waterings are recommended, and this can best be accomplished with a soaker hose, sprinkler or drip irrigation system. In areas where water is in short supply, soaker hoses or drip systems will do the job well and will not waste water.

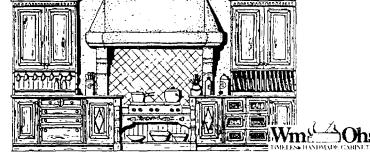

HOME & GARDEN FEATURE

LUSH & LOVELY TREES AND SHRUBS — Gardeners can help their trees and shrubs thrive by properly pruning, feeding and watering them. For example, a single application of Once Season Long Plant Food for Trees, Shrubs and Evergreens will provide vital nutrients and minerals for up to nine months.

Redecorate Aging Rooms By Starting at the Top

One of the best ways for style-conscious do-it-yourselfers to redecorate a room that's begun to show its age is to start at the top.

A new suspended ceiling consisting of decorative panels in one of today's new styles can turn the cliché of yesterday into the fashion statement of today.

According to Thomas Hills Cook, director of interior design at Armstrong World Industries, a growing desire to create unique and individual homes is causing homeowners to focus more on the ceiling.

"In the past, ceilings were special," he says. "They were decorated with crown mouldings, medallions and carved plaster. In more recently constructed homes, however, owners have had no choice but to live with one vast expanse of drywall ceiling, usually painted an off-white. As a result, the ceiling became the great unclaimed territory, the Alaska of most people's homes.

Today, there's a new generation of suspended ceiling panels that offer style, pattern and design. Now, there's an opportunity to once again make the ceiling part of the overall decor. And, it's a fun and great thing to do."

Representative of the panels that Cook describes is the new Prestige Collection from Armstrong. This unique array of decorative ceiling panels features the look and smooth finish of molded plaster and is offered in four grid-hiding patterns: Raised Panel, which is reminiscent of fine Old World woodwork: Scalloped, a 19th-century egg-and-dart design that's still popular today; Fluted, which features an ornamental edge detail with a classic architectural design; and Diagonal, a contemporary design well-suited for a

A new manufacturing process that combines greater levels of ceiling pattern and depth with a smoother, cleaner finish makes the distinctive visual appeal of these 2-foot-by-2-foot panels possible.

When it comes to installation, do-it-yourselfers will be pleasantly surprised at how little time it takes. Most ceilings can be transformed into a surface of style and beauty in just one weekend.

Another bonus of a suspended ceiling is that lighting can easily be incorporated into the ceiling. Homeowners can choose from energy-efficient fluorescent fixtures that drop right in or recessed fixtures that position the light exactly where it's needed.

A special video showing how to install Armstrong ceilings, as well as Armstrong floors and mouldings, is being offered by the company during National Home Improvement Days. The price is $10, which is refunded for a limited time on a $50 qualifying purchase. To order the video or free product literature, call 1-800-909-9991 by May 31, 1994.

A MINI-TILLER AND CULTIVATOR, such as the HTC-12 shown above, makes weeding and cultivating your garden a minimal chore.

A Mini-Tiller Makes Mighty Good Sense

To make gardening more fun and satisfying, start with selecting the right garden tools. Choose wisely, and you will spend more time enjoying the results of your efforts, and less time toiling with the wrong equipment to Take the garden tiller for example. Many larger units on the market today offer tilling power but are inef-fective as cultivators during the growing season. As a result, the gardener spends many hours weeding by hand during the peak growing months of summer.

One of the best tools for the backyard garden, says Homelite, a leading manufacturer of American-made lawn and garden equipment, is the HTC-12 mini tiller/cultivator. A tough and compact unit powered by a two-cycle engine, it tills a 7- or 10-inch wide path up to 8 inches deep. It weighs only 24 pounds and runs about a halfhour on a tank of fuel.

Then, when the initial tilling is done, cultivating and weeding become effortless tasks. Features like fingertip controls for quick response, padded grips for reduced vibration, and handles that fold down for compact storage and fold down for c pact storage and transport, make weeding and cultivating less of a

A bulb primer on the engine, as well as a rugged worm gear drive transmission, will provide many seasons of trouble-free gardening. The HTC-12 gas-powered mini tiller/cultivator is one of many labor-saving products featured in Homelite's free lawn and garden equipment catalog. To get a copy, write Homelite Dept. HP, P.O. 11 easy tips to dress your house for summer

It's time to bring out your spring and summer house clothes and lift the spirits of your rooms. Begin by clearing off a shelf or a spot to store your home's winter attire. Roll up your sleeves and take out the paint brush.

1) Freshen up your walls with a coat of paint. Make them a little lighter or darker than they are now. They will cast a new light on everything in the room. You can get the most mileage for your money with a gallon of paint. In fact, it has been said that for every $300 you spend on paint you can increase the value of your home by $2,000. If painting an entire room isn't in your budget at least freshen up the woodwork.

2) Take down those heavy overdrapes and put up some inexpensive mini-blinds or curtains.

3) Store the dried flower arrangements and replace them with fresh flowers or silks. Use clear glass bowls and colorful containers.

4) Use a white card table cloth or square of color to top your kitchen and dining room table.

5) Top your bedspread with an inexpensive white lacy tablecloth.

6) Add some colorful plaid or check throw pillows that match the colors of your room.

7) Change your neutral lampshades to something more colorful.

Add little lampshades to those bright candlestick chandeliers. If you are ambitious, install dimmer switches. Lowering the lights

Home repair workshops start

Are you interested in doing some basic repairs around your house or apartment? Maybe you're not quite sure how to begin or whether it's something you should have a professional do?

Michigan State University Extension-Macomb and NBD Bank are co-sponsoring a series of classes in home repair and maintenance. Experienced instructors from the MSU Extension and community professionals are presenting the se-

The classes are geared toward homeowners and tenants who have very little experience with home repair work. However, they do include helpful hints for participants with some "do-it-yourself" back-makes a room seem cooler on those hot summer nights.

The six home repair classes will be held on Thursday evenings beginning May 5, from 7 to 10 p.m. at the VerKuilen Building, 21885 Dunham Road, Clinton Township.

8) Rearrange your furniture. Enjoy the outside view. Change the focal point of your room. For example, make a window the center of interest instead of the fireplace

9) Step outside and look at your house from across the street. Squint at it and draw a color out of the roof or bricks and use that color to paint your front door. Or select a contrasting color. Then fill your flower beds with colors that draw attention to your door.

Always select a grayed-down color; it makes a home look sturdier and richer.

Remember to play down the garage door, gutters and down spouts, blend them into the background. Your front door is the welcoming

If white is your choice for trim, try an off-white for a change unless your brick or vinyl is white.

10) Cool it! Declutter your rooms. Put away some of the stuff that's been hanging around and not being used - even remove some furniture. Use baskets to hold magazines, papers, mail, etc. Group collections and family pictures. Too many things here and there end up fighting for attention.

11) Remember light colors visually expand space and seem to make a room feel cooler. Use greens, blues and/or purples for rooms that face "the sunny south side" of the street.

Add Value By Doing Own Wallcovering value to any room and save hundreds of dollars by doing their own wallcovering. But, where does a "wallcovering wannabee" begin? First, get walls in shape by doing minor repairs and patching. You want your wallcovering to stay put once you hang it and the following tips should help.

Remove all switch plates, fixtures, and if possible, moldings. Begin by doing a preliminary dry layout of the paper, to see how many full-width sheets will be needed. Papers that are pre-pasted require submersion in a water tray. When paste is needed, it may be purchased as a powder to be mixed with water or premixed. "Plan on about one gallon per five rolls of paper," says Larry Alexander, wallcovering specialist, Red Devil Inc.

The right wallcovering can be a perfect coverup. "When selecting wallpaper for problem walls, use a heavier vinyl wallcovering with fabric backing to minimize show-through," advises Dave Hughson, president of Hughson Painting Co., Succasunna, New Jersey, which provides full-service wallcovering, "And, avoid patterns with stripes or plaids, which draw attention to uneven walls."

A plumb line is a good tool to determine a true vertical line for your starting point, so the pattern doesn't go up or downhill.

Here are the recommended tools to do the job: pencils; sponge; pasting brush; wide blade taping knife; seam roller: razor knife with breakaway blades; casing knife (optional); wallpa-wallpaper); roller (may be used as alternative to pasting brush); plumb line: drop cloths; protective eyewear; gloves.

Evenly apply paste to pre-cut strips with the paste brush or roller. Do not allow paste to touch the pattern side of the paper. You may fold over the pasted area to meet another pasted area to make it easier to manage.

Start by laying paper where wall meets ceiling; the rest will unfold itself down the wall. Position the strip according to your plumb line marks and remember to leave some overhang at top and bottom. Beginning at the top, smooth wallcovering out from the center in both directions with a smoothing brush. Check for bubbles and be certain seams are properly butted. A seam roller may be used to flatten paper into corners and crevices. Remove excess paste or marks with a dampened sponge.

For a professionally trimmed look, Alexander advises using a wide blade taping knife to press paper into the crevice where wall meets ceiling and around trim. Then, run a breakaway razor knife along the crease, using the edge of the taping knife as a guide. Peel away excess wallpaper. He also recommends a casing knife (which looks like a pizza cutter) to trim hard to reach areas around windows and door jams.

For the next section of paper, butt it against the first strip to match patterns, without gapping or overlapping and proceed as previously mentioned

Save Money With Gas Water Heaters

When it comes to home energy use, water heaters are surpassed only by furnaces and air conditioners—so choosing one that's efficient and the proper size can make a big difference in utility bills, say specialists at the American Gas Association.

Under federal law, all manufacturers are required to produce water heaters that meet or exceed the efficiency requirements mandated in the National Appliance Energy Conservation Act of 1987.

These higher-efficiency water heaters contain such features as improved insulation, more efficient burner systems, refined flue baffles and more efficient heat transfer technology. Because of the added engineering, they cost slightly more than earlier models, but the lower operating costs and fuel savings from a natural gas water heater will quickly make up for the price difference, A.G.A. officials say.

The Federal Trade Commission requires that manufacturers put an "EnergyGuide" label on all water heaters. This large yellow label can help consumers compare value by determining which model will be the most economical to operate. The guide also shows consumers how to compute annual operating costs by using local utility rates. On average, a high-efficiency gas water heater will heat water for less than half the cost of a comparable electric water heater.

Water heaters also carry a "first-hour rating," which tells the consumer how much hot water the unit can supply in a one-hour period if it starts with a full tank of hot water. For example, a 50-gallon gas water heater may have a first-hour rating of 67 gallons.

Because electric water heaters do not heat water as quickly as gas water heaters, larger tanks are required to achieve a comparable first nour rating. Therefore, first-hour ratings, not tank size, should be used to compare units.

To estimate a household's hot water requirements, use the following chart:

Shower

(3 per minute) 15-20 gallons Bath Dishwasher 12-15 gallons Clothes washer (cold rinse) 10-12 gallons Hand dishwash 4 gallons Shaving 2 gallons 5 gallons Food preparation 2 gallons Hand/face wash House cleaning 5-12 gallons

Estimate the gallons of hot water required during the hour of the day when the household uses the most hot water. Then look for a water heater with a first-hour rating that matches the usage.

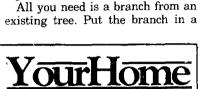

Gas water heaters come in 20-gallon to 50-gallon sizes. Some newer models have a power venting system, which allows installation through a side wall as far as 40 feet from the water heater.

For starters, grow a giant weeping willow in a bucket

The weeping willow trees here and there along the lake are coming into full leaf now, and their graceful cascades of yellow-green leaves twinkle like strings of stars in the bright sunlight.

Most of us have at one time or another placed a sprig of mint or a branch of ivy in water until it grew roots and we could plant it in the garden. But how many of us have thought of using this same technique on a larger scale and growing our own weeping willow tree?

bucket of water for several weeks until it grows roots. Then plant it and water it frequently. Be sure to plant it away from water and sewer lines because the roots will seek water and might clog pipes or

In 15 or 20 years your willow tree will be a towering giant and you can give branches of it to your grandchildren so they can start their own willow trees. It could become a family tradition.

The Babylonian weeping willow, the most ornamental and the type seen in Chinese paintings, is not as cold-hardy as most other willows. The Thurlow weeping willow does better in more rigorous climates, although its leaves are not as shiny.

The dandelions are back to decorate our lawns and gardens with their cheerful yellow blossoms. Perfect-lawn fanciers greet their arrival with annoyance and consider them weeds; children think of them as flowers, and health food epicures welcome them for their many nutritional values.

Dandelions have been around for about 30 million years. Their nearest relatives are lettuce and chicory. In previous ages they were classed as perennial herbs and now are native all over Europe, Asia and North America. They are very resistant to disease, bugs, heat, cold wind, rain, and human beings. Dandelions are thought to be one of the "bitter herbs" mentioned in the Old Testament.

Young dandelion leaves make a spicy salad; the flowers add flavor and color to a classic light wine. If you toast the roots, grind them and brew them you will have a good coffee substitute. The tender shoots make a tonic tea and the dried mature leaves are high in iron and vitamins A and C. Dandelion buds sauteed in butter may be substituted for mushrooms in your favorite recipes.

Violets, which also tend to creep into our lawns, are wonderful salad ingredients, too, containing more vitamin C than oranges.

are perhaps the only wildflower to ever become a political symbol. In 1814, during Napoleon's exile on the island of Elba, the French Bonapartists chose the violet as their emblem. Napoleon was nicknamed Corporal Violet, the little flower that returns with spring, and France was soon flooded with postcards picturing bunches of violets.

This seemed innocent enough at first glance, but close inspection would reveal that the flowers pictured concealed the faces of Napoleon, Marie Louise, and their 3year-old son Charles, the king of Rome. On and off, for many years, the French government fought by decree any reproduction of the violet, the symbol of the Bonapartists. This violet campaign finally died down about 1880, and the famous violet postcards are now sought-after collector's items.

Violet perfume was also in great demand and it was during this period that the perfume house of Coty introduced "Violet Sec," still its most popular perfume.

In the various flower calendars of the world, daisies, wisteria, and cherry blossoms are the flowers of spring, but somehow the Chinese symbol of resurgent spring, the willow, seems to say it best.

A Gorgeous Garden of Azaleas, Rhododendrons and Camellias

The vivid blooms produced by azaleas, rhododendrons and camellias are among the most beautiful in the world. Ranging in colors from purple to yellow, there are a wide variety of these acid-loving plants available to fit any size of garden, as long as the growing conditions are right — especially the soil. Here are some plant care tips from the experts at The Scotts Company to help keep your plants healthy all season:

- Remarkably hardy, these plants grow best in dappled sunlight or partial shade and in moist, acidic soil. Plants should do well in full sunlight, but flowers tend to last longer in shade
- When preparing the planting site, well-drained and aerated soil is a must. The soil must contain humus peat moss or compost — to hold moisture long enough for it to be absorbed. To test drainage, dig a hole about 18 inches deep, and fill it with

- water. If it takes more than 10 minutes to soak in, drainage needs to be improved.
- Putting fertilizer directly in the bottom of the planting hole can be fatal to these types of plants.
 Moderate amounts of light, water and pruning are recommended.
- Azaleas, rhododendrons and camellias all require acidic soil a pH level of 4.5-5.5 is best (neutral is 7.0). If soil is alkaline, add a water-soluble plant food such as Peters Professional Azalea, Camellia Rhododendron Food (24-12-12) in recommended doses. Applied every 7 to 14 days, the Peters product is absorbed directly through leaves and roots. Two iron sources stop leaves from yellowing. Also, it slowly acidifies the soil so that available nutrients can be absorbed, resulting in greener foliage and brighter blooms.
- Plants seldom need pruning except to control size and shape. Pruning should be done with proper sharp tools after the plant has finished blooming.

Gutter Helmet — The solution to clogged gutter problems!

Now something new and different promises to make cleaning your gutters obsolete.

United States and Canadian nt offices have granted ents on a unique gutter add-on system called Gutter Helmet.

Homeowners cannot ignore gutters full of pine needles, twigs, or bird's nests. Seed pods can form a pasty mat to block the downspout strainer or seal off screens that may be installed over gutter, water runs over both the front and back of the gutter causing the facial board to rot and water to seep into your basement or crawl space. Cleaning your gutters involves climbing ladders or working from the roof, both very dangerous and unpleasant chores. The solution is clear, prevent debris from entering the gutter in the first place.

Gutter Helmet is made of impervious aluminum and comes with a written guarantee that you will NEVER HAVE TO CLEAN YOUR GUTTERS AGAIN. This product is made by American Metal Products, a division of MASCO CORPORATION and carries the same reputation for quality that all their products do (Delta Faucets, Drexel Heritage Furniture, etc.)

Futuristic Home Improvements is the Gutter Helmet distributor in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Livingston and Washtenaw Counties and while Gutter Helmet is relatively new in this area, it has been on the market for over ten years. All Gutter Helmet installations include free gutter cleaning and minor gutter repair. For a free no-cost, no obligation demonstration and estimate call: Futuristic Home Improvements, Gutter Helmet of Southeast Michgian at 1-800-693-1100.

This aluminum ornamental fence has a long life and has a distinctive appearance that complements any home. Jerith fences give the attractiveness and protection of traditional wrought iron fencing, but eliminate the continuous maintenance. Jerith fences are available in a style and color that will add value and prestige to any property.

$100,000 Tomato Challenge Largest Gardening Prize Ever

Stem's Miracle-Gro Plant Food has again raised the stakes for amateur gardeners as it begins its second year of seeking a winner for the biggest gardening prize ever offered — the Miracle-Gro $100,000 Tomato Challenge.

Besides the cash prize, the first person to use Miracle-Gro to grow a tomato bigger than the 7-pound, 12-ounce gargantuan that holds the current world record will also win the chance to appear in a Miracle-Gro television commercial. According to a Gallup Poll, there are sure to be lots of contenders, since 95 percent of the 29 million American families who plant vegetable gardens grow tomatoes.

"Truly giant tomatoes don't come along every day," says current record holder Gordon Graham of Edmond, Okla. But somewhere among the seven billion tomatoes grown each year, someone is going to combine the right seed with a little luck and Miracle-Gro to make my world record tomato look like a cherry tomato!"

An avid amateur gardener, Graham says his whopper of a pomme d'amour (yup, that's French for tomato) was a delightful surprise. "I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw it," Graham, a painting contractor, said. He used the popular Delicious variety, one of many seeds that produce large tomatoes. He says his family and friends enjoyed 21 "absolutely delicious" tomato sandwiches after the official weighing and measuring Graham communes with his plants, sings to them, plays them country music on the radio (they're partial to Kenny Rogers, he says), and provides lots of Miracle-Gro and soil-building compost. "My world champion tomato has made me a TV star," he says. "I'm having a ball!" The previous world record of 6-pounds, 8 ounces was grown in 1976 by Clarence Daley of Monona, Wis., who also used Miracle Groon.

who also used Miracle-Gro.
Graham credits a 91-year-old Hopi Indian with teaching him to garden. "He taught me to respect the earth. You've got to put back what you take out," he says. Graham recommends enriching the soil with a compost of decomposed vegetable scraps, manure, sawdust, ground bark chips, oak leaves and grass clippings, liherally sprinkled with a solution of Stern's Miracid. The nitrogen in Miracid feeds the microbes in the compost and helps them convert the yard waste into rich soil faster.

One of Graham's secrets is that he matches the amount of plant food with the normal growth rate of the plant. "It's sort of like the way people eat," Graham says. "When the plants are babies they eat little meals frequently. As the plants grow and become teenagers, they are growing fast and their need for energy grows too, so I feed them bigger meals more frequently. Finally, when the plants are totally mature, they don't need to cat as much as often."

Graham says anyone who spots a truly gargantuan tomato on their vine should let it grow as long as possible. Photograph it as soon as it is picked and quickly bring it to an overnight express courier for shipping to Miracle-Gro $100,000 Tomato Challenge, % Nationwide Consumer Testing Institute, 1415 Park Ave., Hoboken, NJ 07030. There, the tomato will be weighed and measured. After it has been X-rayed and examined by experts to determine that it qualifies as a single, whole, totally natural tomato without adulteration, the winner will be declared the official new world champion tomato.

To allow ample time to beat Graham's record, gardeners will have until the end of 1995.

"Even if they don't win, they'll have fun and the enjoyment of feasting on some really great tomatoes," Graham says. If there has been no winner by the end of 1995, the $100,000 will go to The American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund.

For official rules and tomato growing suggestions, visit your nearest garden center, or send a self-addressed envelope to Miracle-Gro Tomato Challenge, Box 888, Port Washington, NY 11050. The Miracle-Gro folks will supply the return postage.

Exterior Home Painting Tips

If offered the choice, would you spend the afternoon in a hammock or paint the exterior of your home? Remember, your hammock provides the best view of that aging paint job.

"If you're familiar with the function of different products and plan ahead, you'll be surprised at the job a do-it-yourselfer can accomplish," said Gene Lewis, a paint expert at The Home Depot. "Most homeowners can finish a three bedroom house in two days."

Drop the idea of painting in the summer. You'll do a much better job if you save the muscle for the spring or fall when temperatures are pleasant. And winter is out of the question because it must be at least forty degrees fahrenheit for the paint to work effectively. If the surface is cold and contracting, the paint won't adhere and will separate and peel.

When faced with a paint job that has been neglected for a long time, take the extra day to thoroughly strip and clean. A putty knife, paint scraper or wire brush can be used to scrape the old paint. Once you've scraped, go back over the exterior with sandpaper to feather the siding for better adhesion of primer and paint.

Use bristle brushes, not roller, when painting the exterior of your home. Roller brushes don't reach into the pores of the wood as well as bristle brushes and are much more effective in the interior of the home. And choose your bristle brush carefully. A Chinese bristle brush works best with oil-based paint and polyurethane or nylon with latex.

Paint sprayers are great for applying paint to wicker furniture but not necessarily the best tool to use for painting the exterior of your home. If you happen to be using the sprayer on a windy day, you may add an extra coat of paint to your neighbor's car. And by using brushes, you're adding an extra year of durability over the spraying method.

Don't guess how many cans of paint it will take to paint your home. Simple measuring and mathematics will make the job cost-effective by eliminating the purchase of excess cans of paint.

One gallon of paint will cover about 400 square feet. Measure each side of your home by determining the height and width. Multiply these two dimensions then divide by 400 which is the number of square feet a gallon will cover. The final figure is the number of gallons needed for that particular side of your home.

Before the brush hits the first piece of siding, it's important to thoroughly clean the exterior. Use any recommended cleaning solution and give the entire exterior a good wash with a broom then rinse really well with the garden hose. If not properly rinsed, Clorox crystals will dry in the pores and leave white spots. This reaction is especially noticeable when latex paint is involved.

Once you've cleaned, and if you're down to the bare wood, he sure to place a primer coat on before applying paint. You'll have a much more solid and consistent color.

When painting an older home, it's important to know what type of paint was originally used. To determine the type of paint you have, use this simple test. Scratch a nail on the surface of the paint. If the paint shatters from side to side, it's probably oil-based. If the nail leaves a straight line, it's latex.

If your home has aluminum siding, make sure to use paint made especially for that type of exterior. Most latex paint can be used on aluminum.

For cleaning outdoor oil and latex paint spills, use the following tips. To remove oil-based spills use mineral spirits or paint thinner as soon as possible. For latex spills use warm soapy water or paint remover.

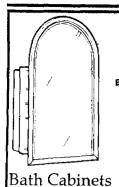

Homes that are shaded by pine trees have a special mildew buildup problem. It takes an average of 120 days for the mildew to really stick to the exterior of your home. To beat this problem, mark your calendar every 90 days and rinse your home with a high pressure stream of water. And in coastal areas where mildew is an even bigger problem, use paint with more mildew inhibitor mixed in.

Learning the "tricks of the trade" before you start a project is the best advice in order to avoid any hidden surprises. Study and thoroughly understand every aspect of the job, gather all the necessary tools and supplies and start painting.

Do A White Kitchen-

Create a white kitchen that's anything but bland! This kitchen design from Whirlpool Corporation uses traditional white cabinets, but accents them with black glass on appliances and black toe panels. Background elements of the kitchen include extensive use of wood and patterned wallpaper and fabrics.

The trend toward white kitchens really turns you on, but the white-onwhite look is just too bland for your tastes. Can a kitchen be white, without the appearance of boring same-

"Actually, doing all or a major portion of a kitchen in white allows more personal creativity in designing a space that's definitely neither bland nor boring," say home economists from Whirlpool Corporation.

They suggest combining white-finished cabinets with contrasting black glass appliances, using touches of brass for cabinet hardware and surrounding the white areas with natural wood tones. The unique kitchen pictured here incorporates white cabinets with grooved panels and a combination of solid and windowed doors. Varied-height base cabinets are topped by white counters with contrasting wood edging. A ceiling skylight and hardwood floors emphasize the basic white and black of the kitchen centers.

According to Whirlpool home economists, this broken "U" kitchen is just as efficient as it is beautiful. On the right, a deluxe baking center features a combination full-size microwave oven and 30-inch self-cleaning electric oven. The elevated end of the adjacent center island offers a convenient spot for handling and serving food from the ovens.

Adjoining the baking center, the food storage area features a deluxe 25-cu. ft. side-by-side refrigeratorfreezer. The grooved wood panels installed in its doors match those of surrounding cabinets, giving the appliance a built-in appearance.

Around the corner, the cooking center features a black glass cooktop that incorporates four high speed elements and an easy- clean surface. To take care of steam and cooking odors, a Whirlpool exhaust hood is installed above the cooktop.

Whirlpool appliances installed in the sink clean-up center include a food waste disposer, a trash compactor and dishwasher. This center, in the left end of the broken "U veniently located to both the island and the eating area, offering handy disposal of food wastes and convenient dishwasher loading of soiled

The eating area, with its glass topped wicker table, uses patterned accessories that coordinate with the small-print wallpaper design used in both the kitchen and sunny dining alcove. Wicker accessories on counters and green plants atop upper cabinets tie the design elements together, creating a feeling of harmony between high technology and nature.

Once is not enough when The results of a recent consumer sur-

The results of a recent consumer survey indicate decks are an investment few people properly protect.

Of the survey respondents who owned a deck, equal numbers (about 25 percent each) either knew they should treat their decks, but never got around to it; had never treated their decks; or had treated their decks with a wood preservative.

"A report from Remodeling magazine reports the average cost of a new deck is $3,000. Leave it unprotected, and your deck will look old and weathered in just a year. And maintaining that deck can cost as little as $50 or $60 a year," says Scott Seman, product manager with DAP Inc., makers of the Woodlife brand of wood preservatives and water repellents, and sponsors of the survey.

Consumers in the survey realized there are two types of products available for treating decks: preservatives that protect it from ultra-violet light, insects, and decay, and water repellents that protect the wood from mold and mildew. Products like DAP's Premium Woodlife combine the protection of both types in one coat.

both types in one coal.

While most survey respondents, nearly 69 percent, said they knew they should use a product containing both a wood preservative and a water repellent on their decks, they disagreed about how often to reapply these products.

More than half said you should retreat a deck every two to three years; more than one-third suggested annually; but barely more than five percent said each spring and fall.

said each spring and fall.

Because water repellents wear off quickly. Seman says that the lonely five percent group generally is right. Several factors including foot traffic, weather conditions, exposure to water from frequent plant watering or a hot tub, and what product you originally used to protect your deck all affect how lone your treatment will last long your treatment will last.

"If you first treat your deck with a treating deck

combined wood preservative and water repellent, you can re-treat it once or twice a year with a water repellent only. If you start to see some signs of mold and mildew, probably after four or five years, you'll need to reapply the wood preservative with water repellent," says Seman.

Re-treating your deck is easy unless you stained it with a standard house stain. The stain won't protect the deck from insects, decay or even mold and mildew, and prevents a wood preservative or water repellent from penetrating the surface. So, says Seman, you'll have to remove the stain by sanding, then give the deck a good cleaning and treat it with a wood preservative/water repellent product.

There are semi-transparent stains, such as Woodlife Semi-Transparent stain, that contain both a wood preservative and water repellent. You may notice a weathering of the color of these stains, which merely indicates the water repellent is wearing off.

Depending upon how much you use the deck, you may need to reapply a coat of stain every 18 to 24 months, especially in areas subject to a lot of foot traffic. You don't have to remove the old stain, just apply another coat of stain right on top of it.

To determine if your water repellent is wearing off, sprinkle water on your deck on a dry day. If it beads up like rain on a waxed car, it's fine. If not, retreat it with a water repellent.

If you just built a deck, select a

If you just built a deck, select a wood preservative water repellent like Premium Woodlife which is paintable and stainable. A gallon will cost between $8 and $10 and will cover 150 square feet. The water repellent you'll use for annual or biannual re-treating costs about $7 a gallon.

Automated Homes Lower

Energy Costs

Home automation systems make homes more comfortable, convenient, safe, secure, and they help you use electricity more efficiently, according to the Edison Electric Institute and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, two national electric utility trade associations.

During the past few years, many home automation systems have come on the market for new or existing houses. You now can choose from a variety of options, as well as purchase prices.

Home automation systems generally control a variety of electrically-powered appliances: indoor and out-door lighting, selected kitchen, entertainment, and security appliances, and heating and cooling equipment.

Home automation systems also add protection against burglary with door and window sensors. And the systems can protect against fire with smoke and heat sensors.

One system, TotalHome by Honeywell, allow syou to operate the house through program modes. These modes are "Good Morning", "At Work", "At Home", "Sleep", and "On Vacation". The house reacts to each mode, depending upon how you have programmed it.

For instance, the "Good Morning" mode makes your start easier each day. When you wake up, the temperature in the house has already been adjusted from the nighttime setback, the lights are on in the halls and stairways, and the coffee is perking.

Electric utilities encourage home owners to consider home automation systems, because these systems can help to lower the annual electric bill. The Honeywell system claims energy savings by as much as 30 percent with their new TotalHome system. These systems can reduce the demand for electricity, and with it, the need to build new power plants. And that helps to keep the cost of electricity lower for everyone.

A NEW STORM DOOR is one of the most dramatic changes you can make to your home's front entry area. This model costs less than $200.

Highlighting your home's entryway

Among the most popular home improvement projects are those that can dramatically improve the looks of your home. In fact, "curb appeal" has become an important factor in the looks, live-ability and sale-ability of a home.

One project that adds a distinctive design element is a re-do of the home's front door and entryway. Popular new entry doors now feature cut glass, ornate trim, carved panels and other features designed to create a dramatic focal point for the home. And helping to frame these entryways are full-view storm doors that highlight, rather than hide, these high-design entry doors.

hide, these high-design entry doors.

In fact, some storm doors offer design elements that further enhance the entry area. In addition to full-view glass, other features include antique brass knob hardware and picture-frame trim. One example is the Cole Sewell Cambridge Series Model 1700, a door that also features interchangeable glass and screen.

If you're thinking about a front door facelift, you should consider function as well as good looks.

With storm doors, look for solid core construction, typically an aluminum skin bonded to a wood core. These doors give a solid feel of quality and seal tight and flat against the frame. And, solid core doors won't warp the way wood storm doors do, and are much less likely to dent or bend than hollow aluminum models.

Storm door replacement is a popular do-it-yourself project. Even occasional do-it-yourselfers can do the job in just a few hours, using ordinary tools. If you'd rather hire someone to do the job, check with your nearest home center. Many offer installation services.

For more information on storm doors, including Cole Sewell's Cambridge and Estate Series, write to: Cole Sewell Corp., 2288 W. University Ave., Dept. S-92, St. Paul, MN 55114.

Choking landfills spur new mower technologies

This spring, four more states are joining six others in banning grass clip-pings and other yard refuse from choking landfills. Mower manufacturers have jumped into the fray with new types of mulching mowers that leave clippings on the lawn.
The payback to the consumer is convenience and a healthier lawn. Mowing time is reduced by almost 40 percent and watering and fertilizing costs are reduced.

Still, many homeowners groan at the word "mulching" because it conjures up images of clumps of clippings across the carpet of freshly-mowed turf. Others worry that clippings cause thatch build-up, a layer of dead grass that is unhealthy for a lawn.

These fears are unfounded. Researchers say the new high-tech mowers like Toro's Recycler models chop clip-pings so finely and drive them so deeply into the grass that you can't see them. Further, new studies by university extension services show that clippings do not cause thatch. In fact, clippings act as a natural fertilizer by reducing the need for nitrogen by up to 25 percent.

When shopping for a new mulching mower, consider these points:

·Look for models with a deck specifically designed for mulching, not a conventional deck converted into a mulching deck.

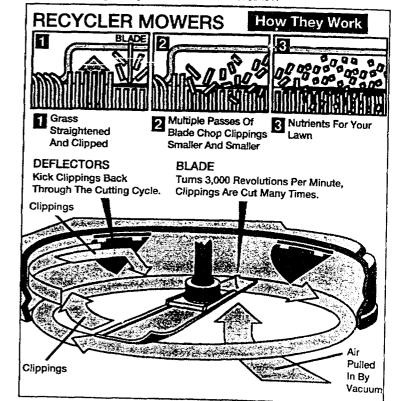

The deck should be deep, approximately 4-5 inches, and have special "kickers" or deflectors and a gull-wing blade.

These features are essential for optimum mulching, even under adverse conditions like wet and thick grass.

· If you're looking for a yard or garden tractor or rear-engine riding mower, look for brands that offer retrofit mulching decks. These decks should have the same features listed above.

Install a Home Automation System

As spring approaches and homeowners' thoughts turn to gardening, spring cleaning and home improvement, no investment can do more to increase the comfort of your home and simplify your life than installing a home automation system.

automation system.

Honeywell, the leader in home controls, offers the latest in home automation with its TotalHome* system. The TotalHome system integrates control of a home's security, temperature, lighting and appliances into a single, easy-to-operate panel. The system provides comfort, convenience, safety and energy sayings all at the touch of a button.

gy savings all at the touch of a button.

Spring is the perfect time to begin realizing the benefits of a home automation system. For example, to combat spring's constant weather changes, the Total Home system can regulate a home's temperature to ensure the most efficient and comfortable setting throughout the day. During cool spring mornings the system will adjust the temperature so homeowners wake up in a comfortably warm house. When the sun warms the house in the afternoon, the system will maintain a cozy, inviting environment by automatically adjusting the temperature to the the garden, a home automation system can secure the entire home except for the entrance or area being used. When a family is working on projects inside the house, a home automation system can provide security in parts of a home while leaving other areas completely free for movement.

The TotalHome system can be programmed with up to 15 different modes or scenarios, with settings tailored to the homeowner's personal preferences. Homeowner's choose not only which options next comfort setting — keeping the home cool and comfortable.

Another important feature of the TotalHome home automation system is security. As the temperature warms, and bushes and trees become lush, their renewed life offers more cover for intruders. A home automation system that includes a security system can alert homeowners of intruders at all possible points of entry — and give peace of mind.

When mowing the lawn or planting each scenario will include — such as temperature setting and security status — but also what each mode will be called, such as GOOD MORNING, AT WORK or ON VACATION.

For increased peace of mind, comfort and convenience for every season, add home automation to your spring home improvement list.

New Lighting Systems Aid Heating, Cooling Efficiency

- In these energy-conscious times, home builders are finding a way to save on heating and cooling bills that is as surprising as it is ef-

They're making changes in light-

Recessed lighting has become more and more popular, but homeowners have learned that in the winter months homes lose heated air through recessed lighting fixtures. just as they do through areas around windows, vent openings and chim-

More than 20 percent of a home's heated air can escape through openings in and around recessed fixtures.

W/THIS AD

Even insulation does not stop this air flow.

In summer, hot, moist air is drawn down into the home through these "leak paths," making the air conditioner work harder.

The best way to stop this costly energy loss is through a new type of housing for recessed downlights, one that stops air from escaping or entering through a fixture. Setting the industry standard in this area is the "Air-Loc IC" by Juno Lighting. This completely sealed housing with a specially designed foil gasket completely eliminates the "leak paths" associated with recessed lighting.

Many states have begun mandating the use of such energy-efficient recessed lighting fixtures.

Environmental consultancy firms have determined that the amount saved by switching to these housings can be substantial. Studies have shown that savings from replacing a standard IC housing with the Air-Loc housing can exceed $5 per light fixture per year.

In addition to saving energy, however, a completely sealed system reduces moisture buildup under the roof and destructive condensation that may collect on structural beams. This is because moisture contained in warm air is carried through "leak paths" in standard recessed fixtures and can condense in colder areas of a home, such as the attic. Resulting problems can range from peeling paint and mildew-related odors to rotting structural materials and ice damage, leading to costly repairs

With the new, completely sealed lighting fixture, rooms become more comfortable, drafts are eliminated and there is reduced sound transmission between floors. Housings such as Juno's Air-Loc IC can be covered with insulation.

Evergreens Are So Simple

Spring is a time of great change, and even if your garden is in transition, you can make some major changes yourself by planting evergreens.

During the 80s housing boom, the evergreens were a boon to canny house-builders who wanted to attract buyers with "finished" gardens.

Evergreens are usually fast-growing and tolerant of poor soil conditions, so they are well suited to the gardens of new homes where the topsoil has probably been churned up and badly compacted by building work.

Evergreens are also useful if you want to spruce up an existing garden which has been left to its own devices for too long.

It's all very well feeling satisfied that you've cleared the weeds and tidied up, but then you need to do something with it.

Evergreens are ideal because they need little care and attention after being planted—and now is the best time to plant.

You won't find a shortage at the nurseries and garden centers, and most should have an explanatory note beside them, telling how tall they should grow and what conditions they like.

It should be quite a revelation to people who think evergreens only come with needles.

These trees actually have all kinds of foliage, and range from dwarf varieties and those ideal for hedging, right up to soaring types better suited to Siberia than your back garden.

Look for container-grown or ballrooted trees, because these establish well. Reject any with browning or damaged foliage or disturbed roots.

Once chosen, take the tree home and water it thoroughly, keeping it moist if you are likely to delay planting.

Dig a hole big enough to take the root ball to within an inch below soil level, and allow it to be surrounded with a four-inch thick mix of topsoil and damp peat.

Here are a few varieties to consider for various tasks in the garden:

Leyland Cypress—one of the most popular. A hybrid created by man, it is fast-growing, tough, versatile and attractive—green and gold varieties are available.

It is popular standing alone as its tall conical shape looks good right down to ground level, but it is more commonly used for hedging because it grows fast and creates a dense foliage from low down.

But do make sure you trim such a hedge ruthlessly at least once a year, and try to keep it below seven feet tall or you will create a tough job for yourself next time.

When clipping, trim from a wide base low down to a narrower top to create a healthy and dense foliage at all heights.

Western Red Cedar—also produces an attractive dense hedge and will put up with shade and problem soils except low-lying or badly-drained ones.

Yew—a traditional favorite and very attractive, but the high cost of buying the stock is not helping those who would like to revive the once common Yew hedge.

No wonder that most cost-conscious gardeners opt for one or two as attractive specimen trees, especially since the Irish Yew family offers so many varieties

False Cypress—a favorite evergreen largely because of its many compact varieties which fit so well into small gardens and other sites where space is at a premium. Ellwood II—an excellent choice for tubs, and deserving greater popularity for its trick of "turning blue with the cold." During winter, the grey-green foliage turns a misty blue.

Pest Control Tips

By Dr. Richard Kramer

-Few things are more annoying than losing a battle against pests in your home. The following tips will help you spot these posts and give you an advantage over the enemy.

Termites Swarm, Dig Into Your Home

If all the termites and all the people in the world were put on opposite sides of a scale, the termites would weigh more than humanity, experts say.

And that means substantial potential for damage. Last year, these wood-eating pests were found in 600,000 homes and damage reached $800 million, according to the National Pest Control Association.

Since termites do their dirty work out of sight, it takes a trained eye to detect an infestation. Subtle signs include termite wings on window sills, tiny mud tunnels on the ground near the house and thin patches of a paint on the baseboards where the insects have eaten through the wood.

There are preventive 7/1. steps you can take to avoid damage to your home.

- · Always stack firewood away from the house.
- Do not allow structural wood for a porch, patio or deck to come in contact with your home's foundation.
- Replace decorative wood chips with stones.
- Keep heavily watered gardens away from the house.
- Check crawl spaces for moisture

Bar Free-Loading Roaches

Your home can be a luxurious resort for the most bothersome pest in the nation, the lowly cockroach.

German cockroaches, for instance, will feast on everything from dirty garbage cans to the glue in a dresser drawer, according to the National Pest Control Association.

American cockroaches, a larger variety often found in older city dwellings, love most leftovers, but will happily make do on book-bindings and paper with starchy sizing.

It's easy to see why cockroaches are consistently picked as the most hated pest, since they spread disease and bacteria rapidly. About eight percent of the U.S. population is allergic to roaches, which have been around an estimated 350 million years

There are things you can do to control cockroaches:

- · Store food in airtight glass or plastic containers
- Wipe up food spills immediately; keep counters, floors and cabinets clean.
- Vacuum frequently.
- Keep garbage cans tightly covered.
- · Seal cracks and crevices, caulk openings around pipes, fixtures and Mouse In The House?

You don't have to see a mouse scurrying across your kitchen floor to know you have an unwanted visitor. Telltale signs of a resident rodent include chewed wires, furniture, books, or food storage containers, or the presence of droppings.

Rats and mice are no small nuisance. They cause from $500 million to $1 billion a year in property losses and health care. They cause structural damage with their burrowing, and spread disease.

More than 45,000 rat bites are reported each year, mostly to children under six years old. In addition, some 20 percent of fires of unknown origin are thought to be caused by rodents gnawing through electrical wiring.

To control rodents, the National Pest Control Association suggests:

- · Clear away boxes, lumber, firewood and other debris that might harbor rodents.
- Plug foundation cracks and crevices and openings around pipes entering the house.
- Don't leave food outdoors for your pet.

Design and function

EVER-INCREASING ECOLOGICAL CONSIDERATIONS have prompted more manufacturers to provide products that are sensitive to the environment. One such leading manufacturer from Germany, Blanco, has designed a beautiful new kitchen sink that addresses recycling with ease. Called BlancoStar, the new sink is the first to combine European design with optimum function by providing for two waste disposal systems. The first, a waste disposal chute, features an under-the-sink waste bin system to catch refuse. It is integrated in the front of the sink deck and is accompanied by a chute lid which opens for disposal and closes tightly. When accompanied by a second electric waste disposal system, the waste chute can be used to separate specific refuse, such as bottles and cans, for example. The BlancoStar sink measures 39 inches x 22 inches and is made of quartz — a hard, through-color, heat and stain resistant material, in three popular colors. It is easy to clean and maintain. For more information, please write: Blanco America, Dept S1, 1001 Lower Landing Road, Blackwood, NJ 08012.
