

SMART merger should improve bus service along Jefferson

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

In an effort to save money and improve bus service, SMART and D-DOT are combining bus service in the metro Detroit area beginning Saturday, June 25.

The SMART board approved the merger June 9 and the Detroit city council gave the go-ahead on June 17.

SMART (Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation) will operate all bus service along the Jefferson and Michigan corridors and D-DOT (Detroit Department of Transportation) will handle the John R and Fort Street corridors.

Soon after Mayor Dennis Archer was inaugurated, SMART and D-DOT put together teams to see how money could be saved by coordinating service.

The scheduling team figured that by avoiding duplicate routes, the two bus systems could increase the number of bus runs on a particular route and save money in the process.

"I have good news for Grosse Pointe," said Mike Duggan, Wayne County deputy executive and SMART interim general manager. "We combined service while cutting spending and eastsiders will get more bus service as a result."

Now along Jefferson there are 152 D-DOT and 76 SMART weekday runs; 122 D-DOT and 34 SMART Saturday runs; and 64 D-DOT and no SMART Sunday runs.

Under the new plan SMART will offer 180 weekday, 138

Saturday and 64 Sunday runs along Jefferson. Having 382 total SMART runs compared with 448 combined runs will save $285,700.

SMART will put half of the total savings into new service by extending weekday service until 10 p.m., adding more weekend service and provide new service to job centers such as the Chrysler plant and Eastland mall. "It will increase flexibility for those looking for jobs in the mall and those who shop there," Duggan said. "Before, people who worked from 1 to 9 p.m. on the weekend could take a bus to work, but then they would have no way to get home."

WE'RE CONCERNED ABOUT YESTERDAY'S NEWS.

News can appear one day and be gone the next. But the paper news is printed on can and should live on.

Last year more than one third of all U.S. newsprint was recycled. And that number is growing every day.

Recycling is the one way we can all give something back.

One case solved, one remains mystery in Woods vandalism

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

A large wooden cross — looking as though it had been used in some kind of sacrilegious jousting match — was ripped from its mountings and, covered with scratches and nicks, tossed behind a row of pews.

Tables, chairs and candle holders lay overturned on the altar while stereo equipment, pamphlets, chalk, hymn books and other odds and ends littered the main aisle leading to the altar.

The scene looked like the aftermath of a tornado and it is how Pastor Walter Schmidt found the First Evangelical Lutheran Church when he opened its doors at 6:30 a.m. Sunday, June 12.

Schmidt, along with the help of the congregation, managed to clean up the sanctuary and fellowship room in time for morning services. But he, along with community members and Grosse Pointe Woods police, are puzzled as to who would vandalize a place of worship.

"I find this to be unbelievable," Schmidt said. "What would motivate people to do such vandalism to a church? I have to feel sorry for people who have to do something like that. But as I reflect on this, it could have been much worse."

The only information police have to go on is that the break-in and malicious destruction of property occurred sometime between 5:30 p.m. Saturday, June 11, and 6:30 a.m. Sunday, June 12.

Whoever broke into the church made it a point to leave nothing that wasn't bolted to the floor untouched, said Woods police detective Bob Kwiatkowski. Every cupboard and bookshelf was emptied, their contents strewn on the floor and in some cases carried to other parts of the church. Furniture was overturned and rearranged. Flowers were plucked from vases. Glass table tops were smashed. Pictures were ripped from their frames and the glass smashed.

"They knocked over everything and anything they could and went into every room they could get into," Kwiatkowski said. "Not one part of the building was left untouched. Everything was overturned, pulled apart, dumped or smashed."

While the damage was widespread and extensive, it appeared to be haphazard and not the work of an organized group, Kwiatkowski said.

Schmidt said this is first incident of vandalism since he has

All approvals secured, Pointe District Library will be effective July 1

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Advance planning saved the Grosse Pointe schools from a lot of last-minute scrambling.

So said school board members following a unanimous vote last week that established a district library agreement between Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods.

"We have been fortunate here to have had an administration looking into (a district library plan) for the last six years," said trustee Gloria Konsler. Public Act 145, signed by Gov. John Engler last summer, hinted at the fate of the public library in Grosse Pointe. Passage of Proposal A in March made the library's fate clear — no longer could a school district levy separate taxes to support a public library.

"Even though the legislation (last summer) was a surprise, at least the option of having a district library was not a surprise to us," Konsler said. "We already knew a lot about what it entailed and what the pitfalls would be and what issues we needed to look at."

Konsler and other board members publicly thanked the school and library administrators and Doug West, the school system's legal counsel, for their "forward thinking so that the board wasn't scrambling at the last minute."

Konsler said when she was elected to the school board in 1988, a subcommittee was being formed to look at whether a district library would be a viable option for Grosse Pointe, which is one of 33 school districts in Michigan operating a public library.

Since 1988, a number of citizen committees also have looked at alternative forms of library governance. In 1992, the library governance committee recommended to the school board that a separate board be appointed to oversee the public libraries. A minority of the committee members favored the district library plan.

The agreement OK'd by the board last week also was approved by the Library of Michigan earlier this week, making the Grosse Pointe District Library effective July 1.

The district library will comprise the same area as the school system — the five Pointes and one-third of Harper Woods. The Grosse Pointe library branches physically will appear the same. Assets, employees and operations will be transferred from the school system to the district library board of trustees.

Appointed by the school board in May, the seven-member library board will spend the next year organizing a millage campaign and familiarizing themselves with library operations.

The Harper Woods library will remain a separate entity. The agreement between the Pointes and Harper Woods was in accordance with state law, which requires governing bodies of all municipalities affected to approve the establishment of a new library district.

School board to vote on landmark budget

By Shirley A. McShane

In a sparsely attended meeting Monday night, the Grosse Pointe school board discussed next year's projected $68.3 million budget.

Superintendent Ed Shine characterized next year's spending plan as a landmark budget because 72 percent — about $51 million — will come directly from the state.

A breakdown of budget expenditures at $70.7 million includes $67.7 million for the general fund; $1.7 million for school services; $935,658 for debt; and $400,000 for the building and site fund.

No one in the audience spoke when the board opened the meeting to public comment. The budget is expected to be

Trips from Eastland mall will run until 9:50 p.m. weekdays and 9:40 p.m. on Saturdays. Currently the last trips from Eastland run between 6:30 and 7 p.m.

Weekday bus service along Jefferson will run every 12 minutes. Currently, D-DOT service is every 16 minutes and SMART service is every 30 minutes.

The express runs will remain the same; buses will come by more frequently. Riders should read the electronic sign on the front of the bus to make sure it is an express.

Saturday service will improve to every 15 minutes from the present 18 minutes on D-DOT and 45 minutes on SMART.

Sunday service will be every 40 minutes. There is no current service along Jefferson to suburban areas.

The Archer administration and SMART agreed earlier this year that a single fare would apply to all bus routes in the tri-county area.

The base fare structure from Grosse Pointe or other suburbs to the city will remain at $1.50. Trips originating and ending in Detroit will be $1.25. Senior fares will be reduced from 75 cents to 25 cents. People with disabilities will be charged 75 cents even during peak hours.

Passes or tickets from one bus company will be valid for the other. By August there should be uniform passes and tickets for each company.

Detroit is the only metropolitan area in the country that has a transportation system that is not supported by tax dollars, Duggan said.

"We wouldn't go to the taxpayers to ask them to fund more of the same," Duggan said. "We want people to have a chance to see how the new system works, then we may come back to them."

Duggan said SMART's budget has decreased from $52 million in 1992 to $51 million in 1993 to $50 million for 1994.

"We have enough funds for the rest of the year, but we've squeezed out what we could," he said. "By January 1995, we will need a permanent source of funding."

Duggan indicated that the new funding could well be a new tax, but that the state Legislature would play a role in making that determination.

been pastor at First Evangelical. The church has had a few break-ins but no trouble with neighborhood youths.

"Some people have surmised that this was connected with the graduation service held here, but that's pure speculation," he said, referring to the evening of June 12 for graduating seniors at North and South high schools.

Security measures have been tightened at First Evangelical, Schmidt said, and Woods police are asking anyone with information about the incident or who may have seen anything suspicious around the time of the incident to call the detective bureau at 343-2412.

In an unrelated but similar incident of vandalism, Woods police closed their investigation into the recurring car break-ins and damage occurring at the University Liggett School on Cook Road.

On June 4 a security guard at ULS called police when he saw two young men in the process of pulling apart a dashboard of a car parked in the Cook Road parking lot. The guard detained the two boys until Woods police arrived.

The youths, ages 14 and 15, live in Grosse Pointe Shores and admitted to police that they had been responsible for previous incidents of vandalism over the past two months. The boys and their parents agreed with ULS administration that criminal charges would not be pursued if the boys made restitution and performed community service to the school.

City man launched the torpedo that sank Japanese battleship

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

In October 1944, Bridgeport, Conn., native and Farms resident James Fielding (featured April 7, 1994, in the Grosse Pointe News) and his B-24 crew bombed the Japanese battleship of the Yamato class in the Philippines. The battleship, however, was not sunk.

Six months later, Des Arc, Ark., native and City resident Fred Wicklund set the torpedo from his plane at 23 feet below the surface of the same Yamato class battleship.

After the sinking of the Yamato, Wicklund remembered a lot of talk about which members of the squadron would get which medals of distinction and who would get the credit for destroying the battleship.

"I wasn't there to go after medals," he said. "I was there to win the war."

Wicklund entered the U.S. Navy in February 1943. After boot camp in San Diego, he went to aviation radio school in Memphis, then to gunnery school in Florida.

Wicklund went to Pascoe, Wash., and joined Torpedo Squadron No. 9.

He was an aviation radio gunner, radar man and Nordon bomb site operator.

Wicklund later learned that in October 1944, the United States sank a Japanese submarine in Puget Sound.

In December 1944, he traveled to Maui, then to an airstrip on Ponam in the Admiralty Islands, where his crews' job was to put 60 hours on new torpedo planes (TBMs) "to get the bugs out."

On Feb. 16, 1945, Wicklund embarked on his first combat raid.

"There were 13 aircraft engine plants in Japan and we had 13 carriers (Wicklund was aboard the Lexington)," he said. "Each carrier group was assigned an aircraft engine plant to bomb."

Each carrier had 15 torpedo planes, 15 dive bombers and 15 fighters.

Even though he was on a torpedo plane, the planes could carry four 500-pound bombs, 12 100-pound bombs, one 2,000-pound bomb or a torpedo.

One of Wicklund's jobs was to set up the bombs for dropping.

"Our target was the Ota aircraft plant," he said. "On the way there was very little action. In fact, it was a very pleasant ride."

"Once we went into the dive, all hell broke loose. We got hit twice in the dive and our electrical and intercom systems were knocked out."

Wicklund's plane was able to carry out the bombing mission despite being hit.

(Wicklund later learned after the war that a fellow class member at the University of Arkansas had been a prisoner of war kept at the Ota plant during the bombing raid.)

On the return flight there were planes everywhere, both American and Japanese.

"Our fighters were surrounding us in pairs," Wicklund said. "Anytime a Japanese tried to get near our squadron, a fighter would engage it."

With the electricity out, the turret gunner couldn't operate the turret. As Wicklund went to help him turn the turret, a Japanese fighter was on their plane's tail firing at them.

"He was so close, I could see his face," Wicklund said. "He was smiling, just as happy as could be."

Wicklund was firing back, but the shots kept bouncing off the Japanese's planes cowlings. The windshield of the Japanese plane began to fog over and the plane began descending. Another American fighter knocked off the plane, but Wicklund killed the Japanese pilot.

The mission was a success. More than 500 Japanese airplanes and all 13 aircraft plants were destroyed.

Wicklund's next mission was to Iwo Jima, still aboard the Lexington, for the invasion.

"We'd go in and drop 500-pound bombs into the caves," he said. "Then we'd drive back around and guns would still be shooting out of the caves."

Flying over the island, Wicklund said, with all of the fire and dust it was hard to believe anyone could live on it.

After two days of bombing the caves and seeing little damage done to the Japanese guns, someone came up with the idea to have a second plane 15 seconds behind the first plane on the bombing runs.

"The Japanese would see us coming and roll their guns back into the caves," Wicklund said. "The bomb would explode in the mouth of the cave and they would be back out firing by the time we came around again."

"With a second plane following 15 seconds behind, we started having a lot of effect then."

Wicklund's outfit hit various islands in the Ryuka chain and then was sent aboard the Yorktown to soften up Okinawa before the invasion.

At first, the American planes encountered a lot of anti-aircraft fire, but eventually the Japanese stopped returning any large gunfire.

"We hunted 'targets of opportunity,'" Wicklund said. "We'd carry all the ammunition we could in the airplane, usually Aviation Radioman Fred Wicklund aboard a carrier-based Navy plane.

12 100-pound bombs, looking for anything big enough to bomb."

Wicklund's plane would fly low and fire tracers, which would leave a trail of fire, at the Japanese patrols.

One day at Yantan, a torpedo and a fighter plane collided over an airfield.

"The fighter bomber burst into flames," Wicklund said, "and the torpedo plane just spun down. We saw both airplanes go down and no one got out."

About three days later, Wicklund said, a teletype came that indicated one of the men from the fighter bomber that crashed had been picked up in the sea by a picket destroyer.

"All of us saw him go down in the crash," Wicklund said. "We said, 'no way, we reported everyone from the crash dead.'"

Seven days later, the destroyer produced the man in question, Lt. Fox. He told an amazing story about his escape from the Okinawa-based airfield.

His story, as Wicklund recalled, was that the plane hit the ground just as he tried to bail out. He rolled across the airfield and found he wasn't hurt too bad. He knew that the Japanese would be after him, so he headed for the jungle. He didn't remember directions so he climbed a tree to find out where the coast was. The tree was beside a native Okinawa hut. The limb of the tree broke and he came crashing down through the roof of the hut. A man and woman ran out of the hut screaming. Their screaming had the whole village in an uproar.

He then hid in a rice paddy. All day long he saw Japanese soldiers coming through. Just as it was getting dark, two soldiers came into the paddy where he was. He realized they saw him so he shot at one of them (U.S. soldiers carried a .38 and a knife) and escaped into the jungle away from the other.

On the beach, he came across a lone Japanese sailor guarding a launch boat. Lt. Fox killed the sailor with a knife and then spent 30 minutes trying to start this motor launch.

"The most amazing part of this story is that he got close enough to our picket destroyer to be identified," Wicklund said. "Normally, they would blow something like that out of the water before it was even in sight. Apparently the IFF (Identification, Friend or Foe) wasn't working."

"That was the story of Lt. Fox," Wicklund said. "You wonder how much of that to believe, except that I saw him go down. I saw him come back. I know he didn't go down in a (parachute.)"

The day of the invasion of Okinawa, April 1, 1945, was a beautiful Easter Sunday, Wicklund remembered.

"We didn't see anything," he said. "We were patrolling the beach. We didn't even fire our guns. No buildings in Naha (the capital) were even left intact."

After the invasion, the Japanese sent out a fleet with the battleship Yamato, two cruisers and 10 destroyers.

"April 7, 1945, we were ordered to hit the Japanese fleet," Wicklund said. "Out particular target was the two cruisers."

The Yamato was supposedly unsinkable. It had been hit by U.S. forces before (including by James Fielding in October 1944) and had 22 feet of armor plate below the water surface.

"Our torpedoes were set for 10 feet by our ordnance manual before we left," Wicklund said. "That was for the cruisers. No one was going to hit the battleship because that would be wasting our torpedoes."

Wicklund was aboard the furthest carriers that were to hit this Japanese fleet. Only 11 of the 15 planes made the trip due to malfunctions.

The cruiser Wicklund's plane was assigned to hit was already sinking. The torpedo skipper asked the airgroup commander if he could take half of the airplanes to hit the battleship because it wouldn't take many planes to sink the other cruiser.

"I had learned how to reset a torpedo in the air," Wicklund said. "As soon as I learned we were going to hit the battleship, I crawled into the passage way and reset the torpedo for 23 feet."

It was rainy and very difficult to see. They could not see any other airplanes. The crew could have turned back, but they decided to continue the mission, going by radar.

Wicklund gave his skipper directions, but the skipper just wanted yardage figures. The release point for the torpedo, the skipper determined, was whenever they were hit by the Japanese.

"We all knew that we probably were not going to make it back," Wicklund said. "We barreled in and could see the target. I thought the skipper was going to crash into the battleship."

Normally, torpedoes were released from 1,500 yards. It took 300 yards for the torpedo to settle into the water and another 300 yards in the air. They figured 800 yards was as close as they could get.

"I felt a sharp turn and I saw a destroyer below us," Wicklund said. "Then I saw another destroyer. I realized the skipper was going to get away by diving on these destroyers. Everyone had to quit firing or else they would blow their own destroyer out of the water."

During this time, Wicklund dropped the torpedo on the battleship.

"The battleship carried about 30 aircraft," Wicklund said. "It could launch, but it couldn't receive. It had a lot of aviation gasoline on board."

About 10 miles out, while rendezvousing with the other U.S. planes, the battleship was smoking. All of a sudden, it turned over on its side and exploded.

Setting the torpedo for 23 feet below the water level, Wicklund was responsible for sinking the Yamato.

Wicklund received four medals and two presidential unit citations for his part in the attack of Japan.

Anyone with a Distinguished Flying Cross could be discharged. Wicklund was discharged as an aviation radioman 2nd class exactly six months after sinking the Yamato.

He entered the University of Arkansas and after working as a teacher and principal in Arkansas, Wicklund worked for DuPont in Virginia. He then worked for the FBI, who had tried to recruit him when he was teaching. He was in the Chicago field office before being transferred to the Detroit office. Wicklund retired in 1979.

For Peter Vitale Jr., hard work is the price of doing business, and eastsiders are grateful for his efforts.

Vitale is one of the owners and operators of Pete and Frank's Fruit Ranch, a shopping institution on the eastside that recently celebrated its 40th anniversary.

The store, currently located at Nine Mile and Kelly, was started by his father Peter Vitale Sr. in Detroit. It moved to its current location in the '60s. The store specializes in fresh fruits and vegetables, but also sells some meats and other dry grocery goods.

Vitale credits two factors to the success of the store. The first is the quality of the food.

"There's a company across the street that sends candy to California in refrigerated trucks," said Vitale. "My father is semi-retired and has a house out there. He is able to go directly to the farms and make purchases, which are sent back on the refrigerated candy trucks. By buying fruit direct, we avoid the middle men at Farmer's Market. We get fruit that's a week fresher than it otherwise would be with this system."

The second secret to the store's success is plain hard work. Vitale said that he works an average of 120 hours a week. The fruit business demands that kind of attention, he said, because people are particular about their fruit. If they don't get superior quality at his place, it's a lot easier for them to go to the Kroger's or Farmer Jack's near their home.

"People demand service," Vitale said. "That's why I'm at my store every day, seven days a week. When the employees see the boss putting in long hours, it demonstrates to them what it takes to make the business work."

The success of the store at Nine Mile and Kelly has inspired Vitale and his brothers Frank and Vito to open another store in Sterling Heights.

"These days people are more interested in eating healthy," said Vitale. "We don't sell canned or processed fruit or vegetables; we sell fresh produce, and that appeals to today's health-conscious consumer."

Grosse Pointe Woods resident and green grocer Peter Vitale Jr. stands behind the quality of his fruit at Pete and Frank's Fruit Ranch. The store recently celebrated its 40th anniversary.

Recycling fee drops sharply; water, sewer rates climb in the Farms

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

At first, it seems like a "good news-bad news" scenario for Grosse Pointe Farms residents, but the overall picture is good news concerning water and recycling rates.

The Farms city council approved June 13 a 4.3 percent increase in the rate it charges customers for water and, to reflect costs the city of Detroit charges the Farms for sewage treatment, a sewage increase of 6.3 percent was also approved. This combined increase of 5 percent will cost Farms customers $21.76 per thousand cubic feet.

(The Farms has its own water treatment plant, but pumps its sewage to Detroit.)

"We are fortunate to have our own water supply system," said councilman Edward J.

Gaffney, chairman of the audit and budget committee. "This increase will ensure the integrity of the system and protect it as a city asset."

Helping offset this cost is a reduced recycling fee.

Now Farms residents pay a $7.50 fee for recycling on their quarterly water bill.

A new three-year contract for curbside recycling was awarded to Tringali Sanitation Inc. at a cost of a $5 fee on customers' quarterly water bill.

"Increased competition in the curbside recycling industry has led to lower prices," Gaffney said. "The bid from Tringali amounts to about one-third less than our current contract. As a result, we are passing this savings directly through to our residents."

The new recycling contract depends on approval by the councils of the City of Grosse Pointe, Grosse Pointe Park, Grosse Pointe Shores and Harper Woods.

"At $21.76 (per thousand cubic feet), Grosse Pointe Farms still charges less for water and sewage service than in most communities in southeastern Michigan," said Farms controller James Nash. "Assuming the new recycling contract is approved by the other cities, our minimum quarterly utility bill will actually decrease from $38.58 to $37.64."

The new rates are scheduled to take effect on the July 31 bill which residents will receive in August.

Hot, dry spring stresses new trees

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Summer heat is hard on everyone, but many Grosse Pointers probably don't know it can be equally stressful on young trees, said Grosse Pointe Woods tree commissioner George Martin.

"Because of the unusually dry spring, many young trees planted within the last year are showing signs of stress, like wilting or sparse foliage, leaf-drop, dwarfed or yellowing leaves or many dead twigs," said Martin. "If they aren't deep-watered immediately, they will be very susceptible to disease and insect problems, and they could even die."

Martin explained that young trees have not had sufficient time to develop deep root systems and adapt to their new surroundings so they depend heavily on supplemental watering for survival during dry periods, like the one southeast Michigan is currently experiencing.

"When you water, water deep," Martin said. "Use a hose without a nozzle so a stream flows out slowly, and thoroughly soaks the soil six to eight inches deep. This could take several hours. Lawn sprinklers don't adequately water trees unless they are allowed to operate for many hours."

Martin said that even if it rains, people may still need to water young trees. Large amounts of rain that fall in a short period of time during a thunderstorm often end up running off into the sewer system.

"Water can fall faster than the soil can absorb it," said

Martin. "The excess water merely runs off. The amount of water absorbed by the soil can be far less than what actually fell."

Something homeowners who are worried about young trees can do is place mulch with woodchips or bark around the tree. The mulch keeps the soil moist by preventing rapid evaporation.

Martin also said that people should resist the urge to fertilize a young tree during its first year because that can stimulate new crown and leaf growth faster than the roots can supply water, especially in a dry year.

Budget

adopted by the board on Monday, June 27.

The total projected budget reflects a number of changes made for the coming school year, including the cost of retirement benefits which the state no longer pays to schools, cost-saving measures enacted by the administration and board this spring and the impact of voter-approved Proposal A.

State payment to the school district is based on a formula of $6,500 per pupil and the district has projected an enrollment of 8,022 students for next year.

Property owners will pay a tax rate of 13.9 mills for the next school year — 6 mills for the state foundation grant, or what every property owner must pay; 7.7 mills in a "hold harmless" levy given by the state to a handful of school districts to allow them to maintain current levels of per-pupil spending; and .2 mills for debt payment.

Next year's tax rate is a significant reduction compared with 1993-94 when the school district levied 30.4620 mills to support the schools and the public library.

Monday's budget discussion was the culmination of a five-month site-based budgeting process involving central office and all 14 schools in the system. Each building has its own Program Advisory Committee (PAC) which reviewed program priorities and advised principals and central administrators on how funds should be spent.

PACS are made up of parents, teachers, administrators and community residents without children in school.

The district anticipates it will save $18 million over 10 years through the Voluntary Incentive Plan — a buyout plan of which more than 100 eligible district employees took advantage. Also, as part of the teachers' contract settlement for 1993-94, the district extended from two to four years the Preferred Provider Organization (PPO) plan for new teachers that should result in a savings of $238,000.

Since it appears that the district library plan will be effective July 1, the school system will fund the library at the same level as last year for one more year. Next year the district library board of trustees will ask the public to support a tax rate for the library, which will no longer be governed or funded by the school system.

In addition, the board adopted several resolutions to lay off district personnel — 12 library employees who will take positions with the district library; seven clerical workers "bumped" by library employees who have seniority and have taken positions with the school system; 11 plant and cafeteria positions, two permanent layoffs and nine reduced positions; and three paraprofessional employees permanently laid off due to reduced staffing needs.

Circuit judge uses her position to try to make a difference

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Making a difference, that means a lot to City of Grosse Pointe resident Andrea Ferrara. That's why being a judge is so important to her. Ferrara, 42, has been a judge since she was 28.

"As community leaders, we can make a difference by serving as mentors and role models," she said. "I felt I could make a difference in the community."

"I love being a judge. It's exciting and fulfilling and I feel this is the way I can best serve the public and make a difference."

Ferrara has been a judge for 14 years. Early on she knew what she wanted to be. She is also proud of her Grosse Pointe roots.

"I grew up in the Park and graduated from South," Ferrara said. "I am the oldest of five children, and my father, Dr. Richard J. Ferrara, along with my brother Rick, has a medical practice in Grosse Pointe Woods."

Family is very important to Ferrara. She spent the first three years of college in Morgantown, W.Va., to be near her paternal grandmother, whom Ferrara describes as a strong woman who raised eight children alone during the Depression after her husband died.

Ferrara came home to Michigan for her senior year in college at Wayne State. She graduated with a degree in English literature, but decided not to become a teacher.

"In the mid-1970s, there were a lot of people with degrees like mine going into teaching," Ferrara said. "So I worked in my father's office for about six months. I always liked writing and communications, and my mother's father was a lawyer. He was great, a man of integrity who believed in the law and encouraged me to be a lawyer. He was my idol and mentor."

So in January 1975, Ferrara began attending the Detroit College of Law. Upon graduation, she went to work for the Oakland County prosecutor's office, where she handled district court and juvenile court cases. She worked for the office for about 18 months in 1978 and 1979.

In 1980, Ferrara decided to take the plunge and ran for district court judge in the downriver area. She moved to Woodhaven and ran for the 33rd district court judgeship, and much to the surprise of many, she won.

POINTER OF INTEREST

"The people in the district were desirous of change," Ferrara said. "I was 28 at the time and not part of an entrenched political machine. I think the voters thought I could be a truly objective and neutral judge with no political ties."

Ferrara was a judge in the 33rd district court for six years. She then became a visiting judge in the 36th district court in Detroit and the 19th district court in Dearborn.

In 1988 she began working for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, where she handled the criminal alien program, and spent a lot of time working on deportation proceedings against criminal aliens in Jackson state prison.

In 1992 she ran for a circuit court position in Wayne County. Her opponent dropped out of the race, so she ended up winning handily.

She's handled thousands of criminal and civil cases at the circuit level.

"Justice is a balance between fairness and efficiency," she said. "Cases must get to trial without undue delay."

"The tough part of being a judge is the sentencing. Anytime I sentence someone, I am having a material impact on their life. I have to look at all the factors and circumstances. I exercise a great deal of judicial authority, and I am duty-bound to protect the community, as well as seek the fairest sentence. I take my role very seriously because it impacts people's lives."

She said rehabilitation should be sought when warranted, but foremost is her duty to protect the community.

"Criminals should not be allowed to freely threaten society," she said, adding that she is also very concerned about the victims of crime.

"I'm deeply committed to fair and impartial treatment of everyone who comes before me," she said. "Wayne County is one of the most multicultural communities in the country."

When Ferrara is not being a judge she spends a lot of time chauffeuring her three children to their various baseball and basketball games, swim meets and dance lessons. Ferrara was married in 1981, and was divorced in the mid-'80s. She is currently single.

"My kids are proud that I am a judge," said Ferrara. "That's a nice feeling. I am pleased that we are close. Family is very important to me. One of the things I've noticed is that most of the people who come before me come from dysfunctional families."

"I'm very disheartened to see a growing number of violent crimes being committed by our youth."

To impact lives before they go bad, Ferrara invites young people to her court, where they see the impact of crime on real lives.

"One mistake — getting in the with wrong crowd, doing drugs, robbing a store — can change or ruin a life," she said. "I'm reaching out to the youth in the community and give them respect for the law."

"I'm deeply concerned about drugs, crime and threats to law-abiding citizens. What people see on TV, I see every day in my courtroom."

Park sells long-dormant site across from city hall

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

After being for sale for years, the Grosse Pointe Park City Council managed to sell a parcel of land at the corner of Pemberton and Jefferson, across the street from city hall, to an office building developer Monday night.

Park city manager Dale Krajniak presented the council with three different bids for the land. Wilhelm Funeral Home bid $30,000, with the idea of relocating the business there when the lease on the home's current building expires.

TXS Association bid $35,000 for the land and proposed building one single family home and four townhouses on the property. Ferlito Construction bid $42,000 for the lot and presented the council with plans to build a 6,600 square-foot office building at the location.

Councilmember Dan Clark started off the discussion by recommending that the council consider the Ferlito bid. Clark noted that Ferlito's proposal for an office building most fit the city's long-range plan for the area. Clark also said that Ferlito presented the highest bid, something else for the council to consider.

Ferlito attorney and spokesman John Gelle said that proposed building would be similar to one the company is building in St. Clair Shores. It would be a professional building for doctors and lawyers. The company had already tentatively lined up some of the tenants for the proposed building.

"It will be an 8-5 building for doctors and lawyers," said Gelle. "Unless of course the tenants want to work a little harder. But the idea is to build a Colonial-style building for daytime use only."

Several councilmembers expressed concerns that the building's parking location and rear facade facing homes on Pemberton would detract from the neighborhood.

Gelle assured councilmembers that Ferlito Construction would be willing to work with everyone to make the building acceptable to the city and neighbors.

Also on hand Monday were several Pemberton residents. Phil Mabarab examined the plans and told the council that he had no objection to the proposal. But several other residents expressed a hope that the city would keep the lot undeveloped because as a "greenbelt" or small park, it presented a nice introduction to the city.

Mayor Palmer Heenan said that it was the council's job to find the best use for the city-owned land, and while Pemberton residents enjoyed it as a small park, during the summer it gets overgrown with grass and weeds, and is sometimes used as a trash dumping ground.

Heenan also said the idea was not to develop the property so that maximum city taxes could be collected, but rather so that whatever was put there was compatible with the other buildings on Jefferson and be an appropriate use in respect to zoning. Heenan noted that part of Jefferson is zoned for office use only.

Peter Wilhelm, owner of the Wilhelm Funeral Home, was also on hand Monday, and told the council that he and his family had been good residents of the Park for over nine years. He expressed anger that the Park was not more closely considering his proposal.

"I don't understand why the council is so quick to decide this issue," said Wilhelm. "We want to stay in the city and provide a needed service, but the council is acting like this is cut and dried and that's too bad."

Clark pointed out to Wilhelm that the Ferlito proposal is more in line with zoning ordinances and was also the highest bidder for the land.

Councilmember Robert Klaczka proposed an amendment to Clark's motion to sell the land to Ferlito, contingent on the city's various departments approving the building site plan. The council unanimously approved the motion to sell to Ferlito.

Grouches are not likely to mellow with old age

Two items of interest: One involves the theory that essentially we are what we were — in other words, years add no pluses to our personality. The other is one more caveat about cigarette smoking as if more warnings were needed. Nevertheless, women should be particularly interested in this one.

Although liquor ads have had great success pushing their product with the slogan "improves with age," the same may not be true when it comes to people. A long-term personality study conducted over the past decade among almost 10,000 people ranging in age from 35 to 84 shows that personalities don't change appreciably with age. Will the grouchy individual mellow with age? Not likely.

Research has found that the common belief that growing older is inevitably accompanied by personality changes is a myth. The fact is you are likely to age much the way you've lived so far. The impatient, short-tempered individual will probably remain so. The laid-back, easy-going person will retain those traits as he or she grows older. In fact, personality has proven to be one of the constants in life.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

Personality is only one aspect of the new field of adult development, which examines how life-changes affect the psyche of the individual and how individuals adapt and grow with experience. Psychologists have found that personality can be defined in terms of five characteristics: neuroticism, extraversion, openness, agreeableness and conscientiousness.

Focusing on these traits, psychologists have been able to study individuals over time, measuring their perceptions of themselves as well as the perceptions of those close to them. They found that most people will behave over time in ways that are characteristic for them. In fact, "The process of personality change and maturation is essentially completed by age 30," says Robert H. McCrae of the National Institute on Aging (NIA) and one of the leading researchers in the field of adult development.

The question is, If you are dissatisfied with some aspect of your personality, are you stuck with it? "One moral seems clear," says McCrae. "We should not wait to outgrow undesirable characteristics, for without intervention, they are unlikely to change themselves."

At any age, if you are seriously unhappy with yourself, you should consider talking to a therapist. Psychotherapy has been shown to alter undesirable personality traits.

Personality stability can be helpful in planning for the future, especially as one confronts the major events that accompany growing older, retirement, children leaving home, possible illness, the death of a spouse or other loved ones and increasing health concerns.

For example, the gregarious business person who travels of ten and works weekends is probably not going to be content settling into a routine of golf after retirement. The hobby buff who spends all his free time at home in the garden is not likely to enjoy the schedule of world travels and visits to far flung friends during the increased leisure of later years.

As McCrae and his colleague, Dr. Paul Costa Jr., say in their book, "Personality and Adulthood," the question to ask is not how personality is changed by life experience, but how it shapes lives and gives them order, continuity and predictability, as well as creating change. Turning to smoking, it is believed that cigarette smoke causes yellow discoloration in gray or white hair. The sticky tar residue that becomes airborne in smoke clings to hair and alters natural color.

Cigarettes may not be the only culprit. Many dandruff shampoos also contain tar, in addition to other chemicals that stain hair yellow. These elements bind to hair of all shades; one just doesn't see any color change with dark hair, thanks to heavy pigments. But as people age, the number of cells that produce pigment in the base of the hair shaft decreases. Without that pigment, the hair turns white and is most vulnerable to discoloration.

To restore natural color, avoid exposure to the offending chemical, be it from cigarettes or shampoos, and eventually the discoloration will grow out. Many shampoo companies have products that do not stain and this will be indicated on the label. But if it is cigarettes that are turning your hair an unnatural yellow that's just one more reason to give them up.

Head, neck cancers yield to new treatment

A unique new treatment that hits cancer cells hard and fast is proving to be a powerful new weapon against advanced head and neck cancers, according to researchers at Henry Ford Hospital.

Six weeks after undergoing the experimental treatment, 82 percent of a group of patients with advanced, inoperable tumors appeared to be free of disease.

"This is a remarkable figure," said Dr. Jadranka Dra-govic, of the department of radiation oncology. "Until now, advanced tumors of this type had a low probability of cure. With standard radiation therapy, you would expect such a complete response in only 30 to 40 percent of patients."

Timing is the key to the new treatment's effectiveness.

"Treating cancer is almost like a race," Dragovic said. "When tumors are assaulted by any kind of treatment their defense mechanism is to start dividing like crazy. So while the treatment is killing some cancer cells, it's also stimulating others to divide and grow. The trick is to give the radiation treatment fast enough to get ahead of that accelerated growth."

Studies have shown that the shorter the overall time in which radiation is given, the greater the likelihood of winning the race and killing the tumor. That's because a shorter time frame gives cancer cells less time to bounce back. Quicker treatment is especially important with larger, more advanced tumors, which have many more cells that can divide and multiply.

In this group of patients, the necessary speed was achieved by giving radiation treatments twice each day rather than the once-a-day that is the current practice. To further enhance the effect radiation had on the tumor cells, it was combined with chemotherapy. As a result, in this new treatment regimen, the cancer cells were battered simultaneously with two different weapons — radiation and chemotherapy. The increase in the intensity of the treatment required planned breaks in the treatment course.

"The whole point of this approach is to speed up the treatment and give intense therapy so that we can overwhelm the tumor," Dragovic said.

Election-year politics seen in 2 tax cuts

In two short-sighted election-year actions, the state House of Representatives last week voted tax cuts for two groups of constituents — businessmen and retirees with private pensions.

Those moves constituted the House's quick response to the administration's recent disclosure that the reviving economy is producing a state surplus estimated at $300 million.

News reports indicate that the state Senate is poised to take the same actions — and may already have done so after the News' press time. If the bills become law, they will use up roughly half of the expected surplus.

Gov. John Engler reportedly is ready to sign both bills and thus strengthen his political appeal as he faces a tough fight for re-election, just as many House and Senate members in both parties do. Democrats as well as Republicans jumped aboard the legislation which cuts the single business tax rate from 2.35 percent to 2.30 percent and the alternate tax from 3 percent to 2 percent.

The other action raises the tax exemption on private pensions to $30,000 for a single return and $60,000 for a joint return.

The justification for the increased exemptions for private pensioners is that public retirees are already exempt from taxes on their pensions.

But why didn't the Legislature just set the public pensioners' exemptions at the same figures as the private pensioners' current exemptions of $10,000 for joint returns and $7,500 for single returns?

That would have been more equitable than the actions taken and would have boosted state revenues a bit rather than trimming them.

But in an election year tax cuts are seen as easier to enact — and more pleasing to constituents — than the tough moves required to meet the state's needs now and in the future.

We know of no justification for increasing the tax exemption on the gross receipts of small firms from $100,000 to $250,000, unless it's to match earlier benefits voted to big business.

Even conceding the political appeal of tax cuts, we think a more prudent use of the surplus would have been to stick it into the rainy day fund rather than spending half of it on tax breaks.

After all, there is no assurance that state revenues will remain at a high level, and, instead, the prospect is they will again decline in this "boom and bust" economy that is so reliant on the automobile manufacturing industry.

When that downturn occurs, of course, the businessmen and the state's private pensioners will continue to benefit from the tax cuts, but there will be the usual scramble in Lansing to find new sources of revenue or some imaginative new accounting procedure to authorize deficits.

In addition, several legislators pointed to other state needs that are not being met in the current budget. State welfare recipients have not had an increase since the 1980s and even the highly-ballyhooed new state school fund may fall short of meeting all needs as early as next year.

But, no, faced with a Nov. 2 election, the Legislature is ready to approve ill-advised tax cuts, and thus apparently accept the myth that permanent prosperity is now here.

In fact, prosperity didn't arrive in President Hoover's day, either, even though it was widely reported to be just around the corner.

A contrast in sports heroes

Through the miracle of television, millions of Americans late Friday saw one national sports hero retire to the cheers of millions — and a second fall from grace after being charged with the murder of his ex-wife and a companion.

It was late afternoon on the second day of the U.S. Open Golf Tournament that Arnold David Palmer, who will be 65 on Sept. 10, marched up the 18th fairway in his final appearance in that championship.

As he holed out for an 81, and a 36-hole total that failed to qualify him for the final two rounds, Arnie's traditional army erupted in a standing ovation that left him in tears.

Possessor of a clutch of major titles and given credit, along with the late President Dwight Eisenhower, for golf's tremendous expansion after World War II, Palmer said he might play "a few more golf tournaments along the way."

During an interview, he added that it had been "40 years of fun, work, enjoyment." In fact, it was 40 years ago that Palmer began his illustrious career by winning the U.S. amateur title in Grosse Pointe at the Country Club of Detroit.

Later Friday, another sports legend, Orenthal James Simpson, a former football star who'll be 47 on July 9, was the central figure in a televised police chase over more than 60 miles of Los Angeles freeways before he finally surrendered to police.

Despite the evidence of his guilt and his attempt to flee from the police, Simpson in the eyes of the law is still innocent until proven guilty. After protesting his innocence in his "suicide" note, he formally pleaded not guilty on Monday.

Some friends and sports fans also seem to believe he was, in truth, not guilty of the two mutilation murders for which he will be tried and could, if found guilty, be put to death.

With the emerging of his ugly record of spousal abuse, however, objective observers started a critical re-evaluation of the successful athlete, TV and movie actor, and businessman who still was a man who apparently nobody really knew.

As this process began, observers realized that in this era of anti-heroes in history, government, academia and other serious pursuits, the news media have offered outstanding achievers in sports as replacements.

But perhaps we should all realize that sports figures also are human and subject to the same pressures, strains, and emotions that sometimes upset more conventional homes.

Nor, as a CBS commentator said, do these heroes' wealth and fame inoculate them from the demons that sometimes prompt violence.

As for these two sports figures, the Palmer legend lives on, and Arnie's Army will march beside him and cheer him on whenever he plays an occasional game.

For "the Juice," however, the processes of the law will determine his guilt or innocence — and whether or not he will be "a man admired for his achievements or qualities."

Lansing erodes public trust

That special legislation enacted to permit a Lansing state representative to file for state senator after the filing deadline was wisely struck down last week.

That action was taken by Wayne County Circuit Judge James Rashid on grounds it was "special or local" legislation that affected only one area or district and lacked the required approval by a local referendum. He commented:

"I think the result of this legislation can be further erosion of public trust in our government."

The law was enacted to benefit state Rep. Carolyn Cheeks Kilpatrick, a Detroit Democrat, who had filed for the senate post held by Sen. David Holmes, Detroit Democrat, but then withdrew when he decided to seek another term. He died 11 days after the filing deadline.

That left perennial candidate Henry Stallings II as the only Democrat in the race — until Lansing insider Kilpatrick persuaded both parties to enact the law for her personal benefit. Stallings then appealed to the court.

Since the state said it won't appeal Judge Rashid's ruling, Stallings, the only Democratic candidate in the strongly Democratic district, will be the likely victor over a lone Republican in November.

We think Judge Rashid handled the case perfectly. He not only killed a bad law but made the correct comment that such legislation could result in "further erosion of public trust in our government."

Shame on Lansing!

Dole as '96 GOP nominee?

Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas is apparently readying a third run for the GOP presidential nomination in 1996.

The senator has told his advisers to begin seeking commitments from political strategists and fund-raisers to try to head off competitors for support for the next Republican nomination.

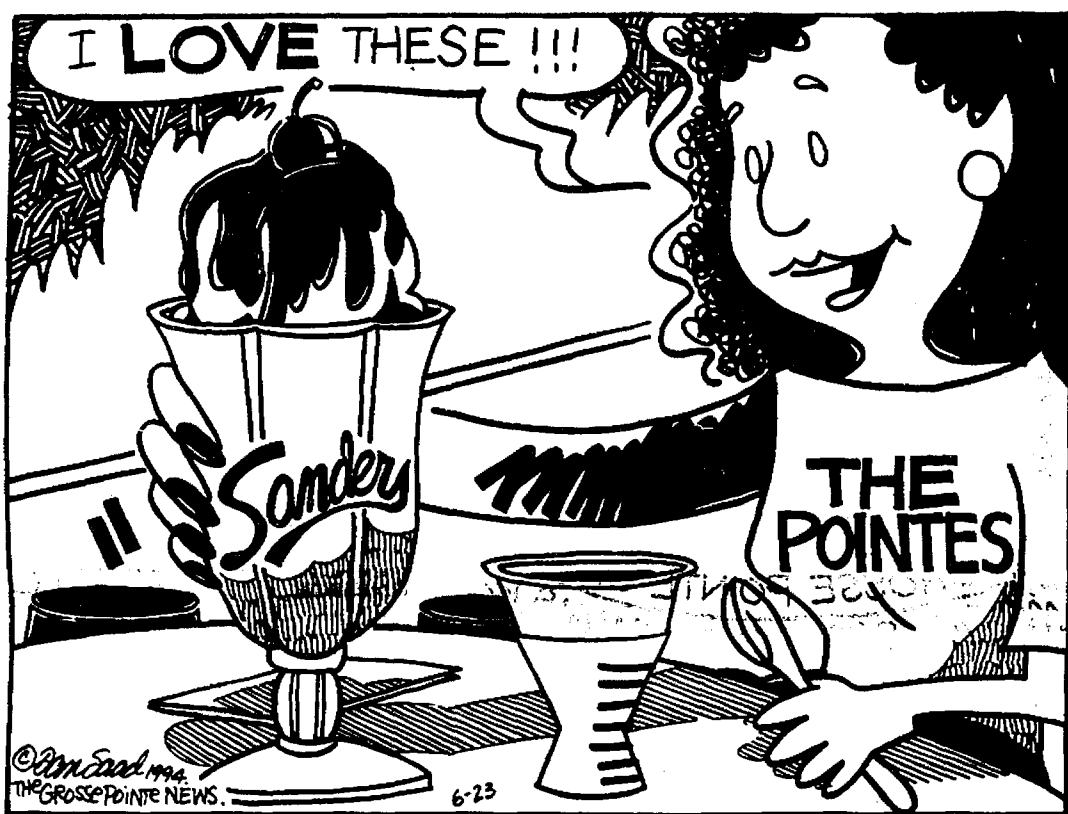

Even before taking that action, Dole's speaking schedule, his leadership of the GOP Senate and his personal actions all indicated he is starting to form his campaign organization and strategy.

Dole, once regarded as a middle-of-the-road Republican, seems to have given a significant signal in recent weeks that he is seeking support from the conservative right as well.

At first he remained neutral on the Virginia GOP's endorsement for the U.S. Senate of Oliver North, the Iran-contra scandal survivor, but then he suddenly announced he is backing North and contributing $5,000 to his cause.

However, he is a formidable strategist who does not look or act his age of 70 and he could attract broad support in the country if he doesn't stray from his past middle-of-the-road course.

Letters

Still waiting

To the Editor:

Almost three months ago, I wrote a letter that you published in your Letters to the Editor column making a public request to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial board of directors for an accounting regarding the cost of their ill-fated endeavor with respect to the purchase of the adjoining Griffin property for $1,300,000.

I am sure that this was an exceedingly costly venture expending community funds and I expressed the opinion that the Grosse Pointe citizenry was entitled to a specific accounting with respect to this project. As of this writing, nothing has been done to justify this investment.

Mr. Weber and the Grosse Pointe War Memorial board of directors apparently feel that they do not have an obligation to account to the community. They buried the cost of the liquor license debacle, an ill-considered project, in the War Memorial's annual report which is not satisfactory to me or the hundreds of other residents, who are from time to time solicited for contributions.

Once again, we are asking for a detailed accounting of this matter, particularly in view of the recently aggressive solicitation of funds.

Computers in elementaries inadequate

To the Editor:

In his boiling-hot home office in Grosse Pointe Woods, computer consultant Army Krueger sits at his computer, reading a Grosse Pointe News article titled, "9 G.P. elementary schools make big gains in computer literacy," not knowing whether it is the heat or the article that is making him sweat great rivers of stinging, salty fluid. He types on.

On the face of it, this article is true — great gains have been made, but that is probably as compared to standing still. It is also true that dedicated teachers and parents should take a lot of credit for the good things that have happened.

Having spent any number of afternoons over the past six months at 389 St. Clair, with other citizens, teachers and administrators on an ad hoc computer and educational task force, I believe that, regrettably, little credit is due Grosse Pointe for keeping up with computer technology in the elementary schools because we are not keeping up.

Having worked with computers in business for 30 years, and a number of months in a few Grosse Pointe elementary and high schools, I know that there is a big gap between elementary and middle school computer technology, and what is commonly used in business. There is also a big gap between computer technology in the high schools and what the elementary and middle schools must make do with.

While this article seems to talk glowingly about computer labs, the fact is that businesses haven't used their computers clustered this way for 15 years. Computer labs are an attempt to make too few computers stretch to cover too many students. Ultimately, the right place for student computers is student desks, just like it has been for years for their parents and older siblings who work in "the real world."

If the Grosse Pointe elementary computer labs were, as a rule, modern, that would not be too bad. But for our elementary school computer labs, modern is the exception rather than the rule. The fact is that most of the elementary computer labs I've worked in were so obsolete that most of their equipment was ready for the junk yard. Of course the junk yard may not want them because of the possibility of hazardous waste.

A Grosse Pointe elementary school lab may have one or more machines down for weeks and months. Equipment is so non-standard, and esoteric that repair parts are often

Frank R. Rossi Sr.

A memorial Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Tuesday, June 28, at St. Clare of Montefalco Catholic Church in Grosse Pointe Park for Frank R. Rossi Sr., 72, of Lapeer, who died of cancer Sunday, June 19, 1994, at St. John Hospital in Detroit.

Born on Detroit's east side, Mr. Rossi was a former resident of the City of Grosse Pointe. He graduated from St. Clare grade school in Grosse Pointe in 1937 and Grosse Pointe High School in 1941.

After serving in the U.S. Army during World War II, he worked for Michigan Bell and retired as a PBX installer after 45 years.

"His 72-year legacy stretches far beyond his family," said his son, Joseph. "We can only guess the details of his World War II military service because Dad never talked about himself. But his family knew whenever someone needed something, Dad would always be there. He lived a life of continuous service to his family, church and community."

An accomplished musician, Mr. Rossi entertained Detroiters for more than 50 years, most recently with the Moonlights dance band. He also performed with the senior citizens variety act, The Versatiles, and served many years as school play musical director for St. Suzanne grade school in Detroit. His family, though, remembers most the ever present accordion around his neck at every family get-together.

With the gift of music in his heart, he inevitably had to compose. And compose he did, from pop music to "Water Wonderland," a one time candidate for Michigan's official state song, to special hymns for Catholic churches — St. Clare of Montefalco, Our Lady Star of the Sea and St. Suzanne.

Mr. Rossi also served more than 18 years as assistant scout master for Boy Scout Troop No. 586 (Detroit Area Council). More recently, Mr. Rossi volunteered at the Immaculate Conception Church of Lapeer as an usher, landscaper and handyman. He was also a member of the Lapeer Knights of Columbus.

He is survived by his wife of 47 years, Nellie (Betancourt); two daughters, Lori and Susan (Miceli); three sons, Frank Jr., David and Joseph; eight grandchildren; five sisters, Angelina, Rose, Dalina (Knous), Mary (Ogle) and Jeanne (Juarez); and two brothers, Dominic and Louis.

Larry Crane

Larry Crane, a longtime resident of Grosse Pointe Woods, died Thursday, June 2, 1994, at St. John Hospital in Detroit.

He is survived by his wife, the former Anita Dimmer; a daughter, Marcia Hartlieb; two sons, Lawrence Jr. and Mark Crane; and three grandchildren. He was predeceased by two sisters, Frances Kerwin and Ann Peters.

Mr. Crane graduated from Calumet High School and received his degree in military science from the University of Maryland.

After serving as a captain in the Pacific during World War II, his postwar assignments included tours of duty in Colorado Springs, Colo., Carmel, Calif., and Honolulu.

Larry Crane

He continued his Army career in Heidelberg, Germany, as director of personnel security intelligence for Europe and director of industrial personnel security at counter intelligence headquarters in Baltimore.

Mr. Crane was a special aide to secretary of defense Robert McNamara in Washington, D.C., before retiring as a colonel following 25 years of service.

After his military career, Mr. Crane worked for Chrysler Corp. for 15 years as a district manager for the parts division and a regional manager for Chrysler's export-import division.

Mr. Crane was an accomplished musician, playing the violin and organ. He sang in the St. Paul church choir for many years.

He was a 50-year member of the Gabriel Richard Council No. 2463 Knights of Columbus. He belonged to the Lake Shore Assembly Fourth Degree and the Senior Men's Club of Grosse Pointe.

A memorial Mass was said Saturday, June 18, at St. Paul Catholic Church in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Capuchins.

Anna Louise Smith Johnston

Anna Louise Smith Johnston, formerly of Grosse Pointe Farms, died Thursday, June 16, 1994, in Southport, Conn. She was 92.

She was born Anna Louise Griffith in Indianapolis, Ind., where she graduated from Tudor Hall. She also attended Pine Manor and Miss MacLean's School in Paris, France.

A charter member of the Junior League of Indianapolis, she turned down its presidency to move to Detroit, where she married Guy Chester Smith in 1929.

Continuing to be involved with her Junior League volunteer work, Mrs. Johnston inaugurated the JL Transfer Club and also promoted the formation of the JL Garden Club in Detroit.

She served on the board of the Visiting Nurses Association and the board of the League for the Handicapped (now called the Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit), becoming its president for two terms.

As a sustainer, she was chairman of Cargill Junior League Follies, which cleared the largest amount of money in a Follies' endeavor up to that time.

In 1989, she was awarded honorary membership in the Junior League of Detroit after 60 years of dedicated service.

Mrs. Johnston was also a member of the Grosse Pointe chapter of the National Farm and Garden Club and an avid member of the Detroit Theater Arts.

She was an advertising manager for Walton Pierce in the early 1960s.

In 1961, she and Mr. Smith retired to Southern Pines, N.C. After the death of her husband in 1973, she married Frederick

S. Johnston, moving to Southport upon his death.

She is survived by four daughters, Barbara Leigh Smith, Marion Leigh Smith, Anna Louise Basarich and Kit-tie Smith Jones; six grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren.

Burial was in North Carolina.

A private memorial service is pending in Southport.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit, 3132 Trumbull Ave., Detroit, Mich. 48216 or to the Village Chapel, Pinehurst, N.C. 28374.

William Jerome Croul

A memorial service for William Jerome Croul, formerly of Grosse Pointe Farms, will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday, June 28, in the Elmwood Cemetery Chapel in Detroit.

Mr. Croul died Nov. 28, 1993, in Bryn Mawr, Pa.

He is survived by his wife, Winifred Palmer Croul; three daughters, Winifred Croul Diedrich, Maria Croul Bush and Amy Croul Weiss; and a son, Robert E. Croul.

Subjective objectivity

In journalism you know you're being fair when both sides condemn you for being biased. Such is the case with our coverage of school issues.

We've been criticized for being pawns of the school board and administration, and at the same time we've been accused of siding with the antagonists of the schools.

The truth is that except for the opinion page — which is written by Bill Elston, a veteran editorial writer who is independent of the newsroom — the Grosse Pointe News is a disinterested party in all issues. We do not pick a side we want to agree with and then "slant" our news coverage accordingly.

If we give all sides of an issue an opportunity to express their views, then we figure we've done our job — no matter how unsatisfying for readers, who then must make up their own minds how they feel about the issue.

Objectivity or fairness was not always the aim of American journalism. The Colonial press was highly partisan; promoting their own paper's political view was paramount, with objectivity and truthfulness coming in a poor second or third.

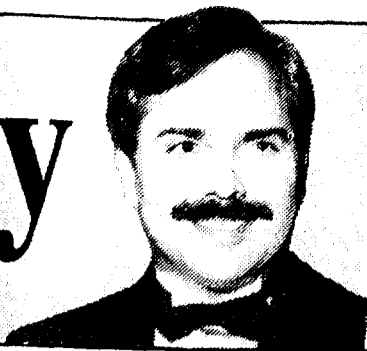

At the time of the penny press, objectivity was sought, but the goal wasn't a lofty one. Rather, taking the middle road was a way to attract the largest audience without alienating large segments through partisanship. Also, at the same time, sensationalism — crime, sex, scandal — appealed to the masses' prurient interests.

Today, journalism remains a business in which making a profit is the primary concern, while providing news and information is a part of the product mix that attracts readers and, therefore, advertisers. Objectivity is important, not only for attracting all segments of the readership, but also because of professional ethics taught in journalism school.

Do newspapers have to be fair, objective? No. They can print or not print anything they want or don't want to. They can be as biased, slanted and misleading as they wish. And to top it off, they have the First Amendment that gives them the right to do so.

I Say

The Founding Fathers' belief was that through a free and unfettered press with a multitude of ideas — albeit biased ones — disseminated, truth will be found. Sort of the laissez faire of ideas.

For the most part, modern newspapers strive to adhere to fairness and accuracy.

However, in trying to be fair, the media are sometimes criticized. For example, by giving voice to a small opposition group, a newspaper is accused of siding with the group, of ing it credence. But what if that small voice in the wilderness happened to be yours? Certainly you would feel you had a right to be heard.

Usually newspapers are criticized for sticking up for the status quo, for being too conservative, for being a part of the establishment. It's ironic, then, when a paper is then criticized for sticking up for the little guy. But readers should remember that by merely giving voice to various factions does not mean that the paper somehow agrees with them.

Many times, reporters or editors' personal beliefs are diametrically opposed to the aims of the groups being written about, but they attempt to put their views aside. The situation is not unlike that of judges, who no matter how they feel about the defendants, must make sure they get a fair trial.

Being fair is not always easy or clear cut. Sometimes judges are overruled, as are editors. That's why we accept letters to the editor, print corrections and even do follow-up stories on occasion.

Which brings us to the case of the critics of the Grosse Pointe Public School System. The key word here is "public," meaning anyone should have a right to question, to criticize the school system and its administration, staff and elected officials. We hope that their criticism is constructive and well-founded, but that's not always the case.

On the editorial pages, the Grosse Pointe News has acknowledged the critics and has been a critic itself when warranted. The paper, however, has also supported the school system, which is not hard to do considering its highly successful track record and reputation. It's hard to quibble with success.

Anyway, the point of this essay is to say that one person's objectivity can be perceived in many different ways. But before condemning the messenger, search yourself and your own biases and make sure you're not reading more into a story or a letter or a column than is really there.

And if you can still find fault, write a letter to the editor, me. If it's to the point and fair — not taking unwarranted potshots at someone else — we'll print it, even if we disagree with it and even if it is critical of us.

How many other businesses would do that?

I'll be out of town for six weeks — July 4 to Aug. 15 — studying journalism in London. I hope to file a weekly column from England for all you Anglophiles out there.

Assistant editor Ron Bernas will be filling in for me while I'm gone, and I'd like to thank you in advance for working with Ron as well as you have with me.

Needed: Korea policy wonk

This North Korea situation keeps rolling around in my head, trying to get a veneer of historical policy consistency to stick to it.

No luck so far.

Let's take a look back in time:

The United States developed a bomb, but didn't want anyone else to have it. It's okay for us to have it, of course, because we're restrained enough not to use it — except on civilians, in order to end a war.

When a bunch of other countries figured out in spite of us how to make a bomb, we organized the first of a series of non-proliferation treaties. The idea, again, was that the folks who had it wouldn't use it, either because they were too nice or too scared of retaliation. But we had to stop everybody else.

Not everyone agreed to join. India and Pakistan both made bombs first, then signed the treaty. Israel signed, then made a bomb anyway (with the help of the French, who were signatories, too), but we all pretended we didn't notice. That's because Israel was also made up of nice guys.

When Iraq started making bombs, the world was pretty upset. (Iraqis have always been bad guys, even when we were giving them military aid.) So when Israel bombed the Iraqi bomb factory/nuclear plant, we didn't care, though from certain angles, it definitely looked like an act of war. But because Israel is good guys, they can — and frequently do — get away with acts of war.

The North Koreans signed, but nothing they do can take away from their bad-guyness. Like the Serbs and the Iraqis, they have proved impervious to world opinion. That's the practical difficulty with international agreements: They only work when everyone wants them to, leaving bad guys plenty of scope for thumbing their noses.

Now that the North Koreans have gone into the bomb business, we wish we could pull an Israeli-style raid. But we can't, because China is right there.

The Chinese are already plenty mad at us for trying to influence their policies (though they don't mind taking our money in world trade), so even though they agree with the rest of the world that the North Korean government is headed by a couple of nut cases, they aren't likely to let us spearhead any meddling along their borders.

Besides, Japan and South Korea, the other nearest neighbors, have a bad case of the shakes. The very idea that North Korea may already have a bomb is making them sing a new tune. Which, of course, is why any country wants a bomb in the first place.

Now many Americans are afraid Bill Clinton doesn't know what to do, because he has no foreign policy background. They wish George Bush, a foreign policy wonk, could make a quick comeback.

Gee, maybe Clinton could take a cue from the policy Bush pursued when the problem first arose about four or five years ago. Bush ignored it.

That was a popular choice, because the other fact of life is that the American electorate doesn't want any foreign involvement whatsoever. No matter what.

Of course, now that Jimmy Carter has paid the North Koreans a visit, we can delay the decision. But something tells me no one is going to come out of this satisfied.

Last week I bragged about the fact that no one in my immediate family has fought in a war since the Revolution. We're just lucky, I guess.

The longer I thought about it, the more the record seemed unimaginably perfect. Just an uncle who served in WW II — and his son, who practically starved himself until his weight fell below draftable limits. And an ancestor who is supposed to have saved George Washington's life by shooting an enemy sniper out of a tree.

That's it. I called my dad for confirmation.

"Well, let's see," he mused. "Uncle Roy played in the American Legion band. He went to all the conventions and wore a uniform, but it wasn't military."

So he was never in the service? No. Then why did the American Legion let him in?

"I guess they needed a French horn."

Talk about having your priorities straight.

Somehow, people with military experience have come to dominate our political institutions — vocally, if not numerically. After the Civil War, for instance, men campaigned for office on the strength of their war background. It was called "waving the bloody shirt" — and it worked. It still works.

Interestingly enough (since we picture it as a heroic, patriotic era), the Civil War was also a period of big-time draft dodging. A massive anti-draft riot occurred in New York City. Men routinely bought their way out of the military. Bigger and bigger signing bonuses were paid.

You first read it here: Threatened with closing in July, the Sanders store in the Village is about to get a reprieve.

"We've had verbal confirmation of a three-year extension of the lease agreement," Sanders fan Mike Mendgen said. "It's not the first time the Village has paid off, Mike says, with a lot of help from such notables as Village Association president Jerry Valente, Farms Mayor Gregg Berendt and Lisa Gandelot, who's into so many things I get confused about what title to give her."

"Local support has been incredible," says Sanders manager Mary David. "We've had an overwhelming number of customers in the store since the news broke and their loyalty is very gratifying. I congratulate the people of Grosse Pointe — they're the ones who did it."

Mike hinted that a return to the nostalgia look may be in the works for the establishment, with input from the Grosse Pointe Historical Society. "And the next step is getting a celebration organized to tie in with the store's 60th birthday next year," he says.

And, finally, the answer we've all been waiting for: Just how do you pronounce Sanders? Is it Sawnders, Sahnders or what?

"It's Sanders, just like the people who refinish floors," says Mary.

There. Now you know how to say the name of the place you've helped save.

Family reunited

Maybe it was only a family of ducks, but the way Pointers feel about ducks, it's worth telling: Shirley LaJoy of the Park reports she and her husband, John found a dozen ducklings trapped in their basement window well on Trombley a week ago Sunday, with the mother duck making quite a flap about it up above.

After calling local vet Lawrence Herzog for advice, the couple's son, John LaJoy II, a 13-year-old Pierce Middle School student, managed to resdoubtable Jeb Stuart, used the system to his advantage. His family needed the money, so he took the enlistment bonus, then deserted — then did it again, for a total of three enlistments and two desertions. The last time, he was wounded in action and sent home on the train to die.

Heroic, maybe; pragmatic, certainly; but not as forthright as the people who wouldn't serve in Vietnam.

cue all 12 through the basement window and return them to Mom Duck.

When Mom Duck decided to depart with only 10 of her brood, young John tried taking care of the remaining pair, but one died soon afterward and Dr. Herzog took the other in when it stopped eating. Although he put it in an incubator, it later succumbed to pneumonia.

"He came out on a Sunday, his day off, and charged nothing for the emergency service," said Shirley.

It's not the first time the LaJays have hosted water fowl. "When we used to live on Bedford two mallards would come every year and swim in our pool," she says.

Musical chairs

How does an imported English bench break loose from its sidewalk mooring and take a little walk up the Hill? This one had Farms city manager Richard Solak scratching his head for a while last week.

Originally bought by One23 and bolted down in front of the restaurant, the distinctive piece of street furniture had developed loose ways and been repositioned just east of their door — but last Monday it was gone.

Puzzled owner Vivian Day called the city and asked if the bench had been arrested for improper exposure (maybe showing a bit too much leg?).

Nope, said Solak, but a check with Farms police turned up the odd fact that a "new bench just like it" was now sitting nonchalantly in front of a nearby place of business that we're simply not going to mention here.

Yep, it was the same bench. The slightly chagrined settee adopter explained that since it wasn't fixed in cement, he thought it was kind of up for grabs, and his customers could use a place to perch.

The wayward bunch of teak is being fitted with stronger mountings and will be bolted down in front of the restaurant again.

Another bench, one that needed a bit of work, may be refurbished and put in the new spot, Solak said.

Which just goes to show how tough they are in the Farms: You make a little mistake and they give you the chair.

Flamingo power

Retiring Mason Elementary teacher Carolyn Sands woke up last week to find 50 brightly colored plastic flamingos on her Brys Drive lawn, her neighbor Diane Hamlin tells me.

"Her husband got a crew of people to put them up in the night," Diane laughs, explaining that the Florida-dwelling birds symbolize retirement for many.

It's a movable prank. "Another neighbor is retiring too and people are moving some of the flamingos to their lawn," she says.

"We don't know where they'll turn up next."

available only at inflated prices. Much of the old equipment is from IBM and adheres to standards that IBM was unable to impose on the industry. Now the industry treats old IBM equipment like it is irrelevant. But in Grosse Pointe elementary schools, old IBM equipment is bread and butter.

Salvage efforts must be tempered because it is easy to spend more on just labor for a band-aid repair than the replacement value of the entire piece of equipment.

Computer technology in the Grosse Pointe schools has been held back by the lack of a common, agreed-upon and adhered-to computer technology strategy. The task force I was part of worked for weeks and succeeded in finalizing a hardware standard. The next week a PTO went out and bought 20 or 30 non-standard computers. It is not the PTO's fault. Why should they think that there is a standard?

The lack of hardware standards is the tip of the iceberg. Lurking below the water line is a hodge-podge of incompatible and outdated networks and stand alone computers running all kinds of outdated software.

Some school buildings may not even have enough capable 120 volt outlets to plug new computers into. If they did, the students might melt down in centralized hives with inadequate ventilation, frustrated by sub-standard computers that lack modern energy (and heat) saving features. Most of these elementary school laboratory computers can't run modern software, anyway. It is a Windows world and they are running DOS 3.3.

Finally, computer hardware and software sufficiency in our schools is not the real problem. What is the Grosse Pointe vision for the application of computers to the problem of educating our children? After studying the situation at close hand for a number of months I'm convinced that there is nothing coherent. Things are too fragmented and oligarchical for a coherent strategy to be implemented, even if it existed. This may not be the administration's fault because a lot of citizens seem to like it that way.

Enough already

To the Editor:

I was surprised and disappointed to find yet another lengthy article in the June 16 edition of this newspaper regarding "The Alliance."

I fail to understand why so much attention is given to this fringe group of malcontents. Contrary to the perception repeatedly advanced by articles appearing in this newspaper, this group is neither representative of local professionals or parents nor significant in number. Rather, they are a very small but vocal group with controversial views concerning how our children should be educated.

After raising a major fuss about the introduction of the Magnet program into Richard school last year, they were able to pressure our school board into expending precious funds to hire an education expert to review the Magnet program. Despite the fact that the Alliance was ably represented on the search committee which recommended Ms. Fiedler, now, they predictably denounce both her objectivity and her findings claiming a bias in favor of child grouping programs which they claim was hidden from them.

Hogwash.

They denounce her findings because she reached a conclusion different than the one they sought. Ms. Fiedler's extensive writings on children's education are and have been a matter of public record. They were available to all members of the search committee who took the time to research the candidate. Moreover, their claim that she is biased in favor of Magnet type programs is totally without basis.

I for one am tired of the uninformed preachings of this self-righteous lot that would substitute its judgment for that of our elected school board and recognized experts in the field of children's education. If the Alliance disagrees with the direction of our schools, it should seek representation on the school board as that is where this community has properly placed responsibility for their operation.

The Alliance's marked lack of success in that endeavor, as highlighted by the school board election earlier this month, suggests that the Alliance's beliefs are not shared by the vast majority of the citizens of this community, most of whom probably would rather read about something else.

istence and continued support for the program.

As one small example of the many distortions in the article, I cite the following:

A former "Alliance" representative to the district advisory panel accuses a Grosse Pointe Public School administrator of "inappropriate" and "unprofessional" conduct. What really happened is that the administrator from the other school district, at the suggestion of "Alliance" representatives, came to Grosse Pointe to chat informally with members of the advisory group. The "Alliance" member taped the conversation, without the guest administrator's knowledge or consent. The Grosse Pointe administrator, as a responsible hostess, informed the guest administrator of the incident when she became aware of it.

"Alliance" now blames Grosse Pointe administration for the unpleasantness resulting from the actions of one of their members.

I could go on and on with similar clarifications of the many misrepresentations in the article, but the words of the Grosse Pointe News editor have made it abundantly clear that, in the "letters" section, even when correcting a lengthy article, brevity takes precedent over accuracy.

Response to Alliance article

To the Editor:

I came away from reading the "watchdog group" article (Grosse Pointe News June 16) with the impression that your writer would nominate "Alliance" members for sainthood.

Anyone familiar with the relevant issues will recognize the article as a collection of half truths, distortions of reality and opinion represented as fact.

The Grosse Pointe News has been very quick to publicize negative criticism of the Magnet program (and school issues in general), but has yet to devote any substantial attention or analysis to the reasons for the creation, continued ex-

Public safety reports

By Shirley A. McShane

Another fire in the Park

No one was hurt in a June 17 house fire in the 1000 block of Wayburn that started when the resident left candles burning.

In the Park's second house fire in a week, the resident alerted neighbors at 1:45 a.m. when she ran out of her flat screaming as black smoke billowed out of the living room windows.

Firefighters were able to contain the blaze within 10 minutes. Smoke and fire damage was limited to the upper flat living room. The first-floor flat suffered some water damage as a result of the firefighting efforts.

Couple charges that angry 'ex' assaulted them

A 22-year-old Grosse Pointe Park man was charged with malicious destruction of property, assault and battery and aggravated assault for allegedly attacking his ex-girlfriend and her new boyfriend on June 15.

Michael Teranes was arraigned June 17 in Grosse Pointe Park Municipal Court. He is free on bond and was scheduled to appear for a preliminary exam on Wednesday, June 22.

Teranes allegedly climbed through a window of his ex-girlfriend's flat on Beaconsfield around 1 a.m. and began attacking the woman and her boyfriend. During the melee, the woman received bruises on her neck and the boyfriend suffered multiple facial injuries, including a possible broken cheekbone.

Teranes also allegedly damaged a TV and stereo equipment.

The man and woman fled her apartment and called police from a neighbor's house.

Open door lures Park burglar

An intruder entered a home in the 1000 block of Kensington in Grosse Pointe Park on June 17 and stole a number of items from the front hallway.

The front door was either unlocked or had been left partially open, allowing the burglar to get in and remove a cellular phone, credit cards, and money from two purses.

The residents found their purses — stripped of their valuables — dumped on the front porch. Police have no suspects.

Caught in the act of stealing

A resident who lives in the 1300 block of Maryland caught a group of youths in the process of stealing bicycles from his yard at 8 p.m. June 12.

As the man called Grosse Pointe Park police, the youths ran in the direction of Alter Road.

Park police captured all five boys involved in the incident. The boys, all residents of Detroit, have been turned over to the Park youth officer, who is reviewing the case for potential charges.

Caught in the act, part II

Grosse Pointe Park police, responding to a disturbance complaint, caught a man in the act of rifling through a car in the 15000 block of Jefferson on June 15.

The man apparently had gotten into the 1993 Cadillac around 3:30 a.m. by kicking in the sun roof. The noise he made getting into the car awakened a neighbor on Barrington, who saw the man and called police.

When police arrived, they found the man searching through the glove compartment. Park police learned the man was wanted on outstanding warrants issued by another police department. Possible charges against the man are under consideration by the Grosse Pointe Park city attorney.

Farms home vandalized

Another home in the Farms has been the target of window vandals.

Residents who live in a home on Hall Place were awakened at 1 a.m. June 13 to the sound of breaking glass.

When the homeowners investigated, they heard voices and then a car driving away but did not see anything broken.

Later that morning the residents discovered both front windows in the home had been smashed. A 24-inch steel stake was found on the ground near the windows.

Although the incident is similar to another the same night in the 200 block of Vendome in which eight windows were smashed with a thin blunt object, police said there is nothing to indicate the homes were vandalized by the same suspects.

Safety fair

More than 500 people enjoyed the hands-on displays at the Safety First Kids Fair held Saturday, June 18, at Bon Secours Hospital.

Children and their families watched safety demonstrations for soccer, bicycling, skateboarding, in-line skating and fishing. Other safety stations included swimming, lawn mowing, playgrounds, pets and wild animals, first aid and poisons.

The mayors of the five Pointes, Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores declared June 18 "Safety Day."

Above, children and their families watch one of the safety demonstrations at the fair. The fair was hosted by Bon Secours Hospital and sponsored by the American Red Cross, the Grosse Pointe News, the Family Channel, the Doll Hospital and Toy Soldier Shop and Shorepointe Emergency Care Physicians P.C.

Student Spotlight

Eric Berschback

Each week in this column we focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem or short story or essay.

Eric Berschback is a student in Eleanor Obermeyer's first-grade class at Maire Elementary School. He is the son of Mary and Richard Berschback of Grosse Pointe Park.

Fred, the Fire-Breathing Dragon

Once upon a time there was a dragon named Fred. Fred was a very nice dragon. He obeyed his parents. He did not grab a lot. He was not greedy. But there was one little problem with him: Whenever he took a breath, he blew out fire.

Every day his mom and dad took turns going to the pond and getting lots and lots of water. They had to have him hold his breath in the morning because they didn't have the water for the day yet. Fred tried not to breathe very hard and he especially tried not to sneeze. Ah-CHOO!!

Not many of the animals played with him because they knew that when he took a breath they would catch on fire. Fred was useful in some ways, though. When it was winter, his family didn't have to wait long to get a fire started and they didn't need lights in their cave, either.

But the dragons still wanted Fred to stop because there were more bad things happening than good.

Mrs. Dragon thought it was because Fred didn't like cold things to eat. He only liked hot things. His father, Mr. Dragon, thought it was because he was always mad. Mrs. Dragon said that that was silly.

Fred knew all about it. He knew it was because he had never had cold water in his mouth before. Whenever his mom gave him water he would dump it in the pond by his cave and then he would tell his mom or dad that he drank it all.

One day during lunch, his mom stayed in the kitchen reading the newspaper, so he couldn't go out and dump the water in the pond.

He had no choice other than to drink it. He kept on changing his mind about whether to drink it or not. His mom told him to eat all of his lunch and he could have a piece of candy.

That's why Fred was thinking about it so much. He loved candy. But to get the candy, he had to drink the water and eat everything on his plate. Fred didn't know what water tasted like, because he had never tried it.

He took a teeny sip of it. He didn't like it, but he didn't hate it, either. He took another sip. This time it tasted a little better. Then he took another and another. Every sip he took tasted a little better.

Then he took a breath. No fire came out! Fred was so happy. He showed his mom. She was so happy. Fred showed everyone he knew and everyone started to play with him (since they knew they wouldn't get burned). But now there was some good news and some bad news.

The good news is that Fred's parents didn't have to go to the pond and get water every day. The bad news is that the Dragons had to live with lights and had to wait as long as all the other families to have a fire. But, they still liked living without all of that fire.

The end.

Stephen Elias

Stephen Elias is a student in Eleanor Obermeyer's first-grade class at Maire Elementary School. He is the son of Paula and David Elias of the City of Grosse Pointe.

The Dinosaur

Once upon a time someone gave me a pet. It was a baby dinosaur! I really liked it.

One day I came home and I went up to my room and I looked for my dinosaur, but I couldn't find him. So, I went looking for him.

I found him. He was eating my clothes. So I got him a cage and he did not eat my clothes again.

Monteith mascots

Students, below, in Cheri Treiney's first-grade class at Monteith Elementary School in Grosse Pointe Woods recently completed a project to raise money to help save the endangered manatees. Students collected returnable bottles and cans over a 10-day period. With that money they were able to adopt eight manatees through the Florida-based adopt-a-manatee program. Pictured above is Phyllis the Manatee and her twins.

South teacher's art on display

The artwork of Grosse Pointe South High School teacher Jack O. Summers will be on display now through July 15 at the Center Galleries in the Park Shelton Building, 15 East Kirby, Suite 107, in Detroit.

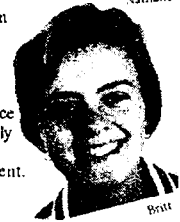

The exhibit will feature the works of 91 artists and will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Tuesdays through Saturdays. The gallery will be closed on July 2.

10 percent of the registered voters turned out to vote on an election which affects every homeowner who lives here.

The present school board is entrenched and not responsive to saving money. MEA once again got what it wanted in the union/board negotiations.

I moved here from the west side just under eight years ago. I had two small children who would soon be entering school and I wanted to make sure they got a good public education. Most of the teachers my kids have had at Defer and Pierce have been good. Robert Palmer was superb with my daughter's third-grade class this year. But some of those teachers are not very good at all. They will rarely meet with working parents outside of regular school hours. The MEA has got the school board exactly where it wants it. Raises must be based on merit and not time and grade.

We have too many administrators. We have too many school employees that just get by with the minimum. Throughout private industry, companies have found that they can get by with less employees and be much more efficient. We have to keep the many good employees who work here and can the rest.

One last point — my property taxes have more than doubled in the eight years I have lived here. That increase is way more than double the rate of inflation in the same period!

Paper race

To the Editor:

A number of voters in last week's school board election have asked why paper ballots were used.

In simple elections, like the one on June 13, paper ballots save money. Moving and setting up voting machines at six different locations cost the school system between $3,000 and $4,000. Since this particular election had only two candidates and no other issues on the ballot, counting votes by hand was relatively simple. Consequently, the school system decided to forego the machines in favor of paper ballots in order to cut costs without incurring delays in reporting the results.

The cardboard boxes were provided by Double-day Brothers, an election supply company, as an acceptable and inexpensive way to provide privacy in school districts and/or municipalities that do not use paper ballots on a regular basis. When the ballot is marked and folded within the confines of the box, no one's privacy is compromised.

Grosse Pointe municipalities are presently exploring less costly and more reliable alternatives to voting machines. Grosse Pointe Shores has begun using an optical scanning system, as has Grosse Pointe Farms for absentee ballots. Optical scanning technology still uses paper ballots, however.

In addition, whether we use voting machines, punch cards, paper ballots, or opt-scan equipment, election workers are still needed. We try to employ enough workers so that voters will not be faced with long waits. An adequate number of workers is not a plethora; it's necessary to make the voting process as quick and troublefree as possible.

The Grosse Pointe Public School System will continue to opt for cost-effective ways to conduct elections without compromising personal privacy or the integrity of the vote.

Gratified

To the Editor:

It is with great pride that I have observed two recent instances of our community youth learning first hand about the democratic process.

In April, the City of Grosse Pointe Farms hosted young people from St. Paul's School, who for a day, assumed roles of mayor and council. At the May 16 meeting of the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council, a group of Girl Scouts from the Children's Home of Detroit was in attendance to see how such an elected group functions.

It is most rewarding to see that these responsible youth from our community have seen the foundation of our society first hand.

State surplus should go to cities

To the Editor:

What do you do with a $400 million state budget surplus? You give some back to retirees, some to small businesses, put some more into the state's rainy day fund, and then you take $67 million from local governments and their taxpayers. At least, that is what is being advocated by some in Lansing.

When Gov. Engler originally proposed the 1994-95 state budget, it included a $67 million reduction in revenue sharing to cities, villages, townships, and counties. Revenue sharing is made up of a portion of state collected sales tax, income tax, single business tax, and intangibles tax that is distributed to local governments. The funds distributed replace revenues lost when similar local taxes were prohibited or limited by the state imposed taxes.

In normal years, formulas in the revenue sharing law and the tax laws ensure that the appropriate proportion of funds are distributed automatically. When the economy is bad and less of those taxes are collected, less is distributed to local governments. When the economy is good, local governments share in the increase. That is, until now.

When Proposal A was developed, the $67 million revenue sharing cut was proposed to help fund schools. Now there is a budget surplus and that money should be sent on to cities, villages, townships and counties.

Otherwise, it reneges on state promises made since the state income tax, sales tax, and single business tax were enacted. A specific portion of those taxes is promised to local governments and their taxpayers. They help fund basic services like police, fire, roads, parks, and sewers.

Local units have already seen over $200 million in revenue sharing retained by the state to balance the state budget for the past 4 years. This is money that could have been used to preserve local services or reduce local tax burdens.

Cities and villages are just recovering from the property tax revenue reductions caused by the 1992 property assessment freeze imposed by the legislature. Now they face the Proposal A assessment cap, which will limit growth in property tax revenues to less than the inflation rate. If the economy cycles down in future years as expected, revenue sharing will also be reduced. Many other communities will see funding for economic development programs slashed by the changes in school financing under Proposal A.

Finally, if the legislature and governor are allowed to reduce revenue sharing to fund other state programs at a time of budget surplus, then revenue sharing will just be another piggy bank that the state can raid whenever they have the urge.

Are there really that many local communities with too many police officers, fire fighters, parks programs, and smooth streets? David N. Osborn

Gatherings — Enjoy 'em

It is that time of year that is traditional for gatherings of all kinds. There are year-end meetings, graduations, weddings, and reunions of many varieties. With the exception of the Christmas holidays and funerals, this is the time of year when most families and friends come together to reminisce, review, rejoice and, in some instances, refuel and rejuvenate.

For the graduates this is a time of rejoicing, reflection and expectation. The world awaits their exploration and choices abound. For the brides and grooms, their celebration of marriage is a culmination and a beginning, occurring after an interval of a loving relationship. The couples share hopes and dreams not yet realized. There is untapped energy and happy anticipation for their futures. The years ahead hold possibilities that seem endless through their youthful gaze. It is a time for beginnings of families and careers, a time of promise.

Reunions are what we make them. High school and college reunions too often fill the participants with silly fears concerning physical changes, including hair loss and poundage gain. This foolishness has kept many people from attending functions that are once-in-a-lifetime experiences and are almost always enjoyable. Old friendships are reviewed and retained or released and new friendships begun. Doors are closed and doors are opened. We have the power to choose.

Family reunions can be the most fun of all. I hasten to admit that the older one is, the more he or she favors these gatherings. After 50, we tend to look back as much as we look ahead. We acquire a curiosity about our family's history and listen to the stories our elders share with the attention we never gave in the past. We begin to realize the importance of labeling old photographs for future generations and writing notes of explanation on documents. It is nice to find an old recipe and know that it originated with your grandmother or to discover the author of a poem you have found is your father. Occasional tears are shed at recalled memories, both good and bad. Mostly, there is joy and laughter at the coming together of people with common bonds.

This is a wonderful time of the year. Try not to regret attending the gatherings that hold delightful possibilities and answers to some mysteries.

Bracketing his shots assured Monte Nagler a correct exposure of a unique image that may not be seen much longer — the changing of the guard at Moscow's Lenin's Tomb.

Exposure problem? Try bracketing

Have you ever picked up your prints from the lab only to discover to your chagrin that your shots are either too dark or too light and the perfect exposure eluded you? Or for you slide shooters, were your pictures from last year's vacation just not up to par exposurewise and you don't want to repeat the problem this year?

Well, a negative can be reprinted and you may possibly get a good print but why take the chance? Slide film is very unforgiving and if your exposures are off the mark, you may be out of luck!

Simple solution: bracket your shots. Think of bracketing as "photo insurance" because you're bound to get an exposure that is perfect.

Bracketing means taking three shots of the same scene: the first at the actual meter reading, the second at one stop underexposure, and a third at one stop overexposure. You have just "bracketed" the initial exposure to assure you'll get the ideal shot.

Bracketing can be accomplished either with the aperture control or by adjusting the shutter speed.

With slide film, I would definitely recommend bracketing as described above. With the more forgiving color negative and black and white film, a more experienced photographer need only bracket on the high side, that is, one shot at correct exposure and one shot over.

Remember, even though you won't get as many pictures out of a roll, film is still relatively inexpensive and bracketing will assure you'll get that special shot.

Photography

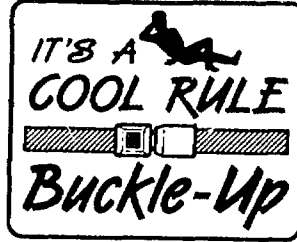

By Monte Nagler

Other advantages of bracketing is that you'll often get an acceptable second print or slide you may be able to put to good use. Also, if a negative or slide should ever be damaged, you'll have a backup.

Bracketing your shots makes good sense both at home and when traveling. After all, you take an extra set of clothes or an extra traveler's check just in case. Think of bracketing in the same way. An extra shot or two covers you just in case.

City votes to retain 'small town flavor' — but not on tape

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

The City of Grosse Pointe council voted 4-3 May 23 to table the issue of taping its meetings.

On Monday, June 20, one motion was defeated and another was killed.

The council voted unanimously to discuss Mayor Susan Wheeler's original motion made

May 23 to audio-tape meetings as an aid for preparing the written minutes, and keeping the tapes for 30 days or until the written minutes were approved at the next meeting.

City attorney John Fildew informed the council that, by law, tapes must be kept for at least three years or, upon approval by an archival unit, for a shorter time period.

The motion was seconded by councilmember Myrna Smith. The six members of the council defeated Wheeler's motion to tape meetings and keep them for 30 days. Smith, who had introduced the issue of taping council meetings, voted against the motion due to the law requiring the length of time tapes must be kept.

Councilmember Patrick Petz, citing no phone calls or letters to the editor of the Grosse Pointe News favoring the taping of council meetings, said he would vote down any motions to tape meetings.

"I want to maintain the flavor of a small town meeting," said councilmember Joseph Jennings. "The flimsiest excuse is to say that other towns do it."

The City of Grosse Pointe is the only one of the Pointes which doesn't tape its council meetings.

Councilmember Dale Scrace said there is nothing in the Open Meetings Act that requires city councils to tape their meetings. He added that members of the audience have always been welcome to tape meetings on their own if they wish.

Smith said she learned at a Michigan Municipal League meeting that Schwarz Creek, near Flint, had been saved from a lawsuit because it taped its meetings.

According to Fildew, who cited high court cases in Florida, Colorado and Utah, a written journal (the written minutes) is the law and is considered more reliable than the spoken word in court.

"From a legal standpoint," he said, "the tapes would mean nothing."

Smith introduced a new motion, that the meetings be taped as an aid for preparing the written minutes, that they be available for public use and that they be kept for three years.

The motion died. Written minutes must be available to the public within eight business days of the council meeting.

Smith said she would tape the meetings herself and have them available to the public at the City offices.

No-wake zone to begin at Ford Point

By Debra Pascoe
Staff Writer

It's only a matter of time before boaters will be ticketed for speeding along Lake St. Clair.

As soon as the Department of Natural Resources gives the OK, the Macomb County Sheriff's Department and DNR officials will start ticketing boaters traveling faster than five knots — or about six miles per hour — within 600 feet of the shoreline.

Since last year, members of the Nautical Mile Merchants Association have been working with marine surveyor Terry Purdie and Sgt. Larry Sargent of the DNR to enforce a speed limit/no wake zone ordinance along the waterfront.

Members felt that establishing the zone would reduce the number of accidents caused when the captains of larger craft have a difficult time seeing smaller craft, like jet skis and wave runners as they zoom in and out of marinas.

"We don't want to stop people from playing, we want them to play safer," said Curt Dumas, president of the nautical mile association and St. Clair Shores city councilmember.

If a similar ordinance had been implemented in Harrison Township, Dumas said a recent accident involving a personal watercraft might have been avoided.

Purdie said the DNR is expected at any time to approve establishing the zone which will extend from the St. Clair Shores Coast Guard station to Ford Point.

"What happens on any given afternoon is we have the larger boats and the smaller ones all going different speeds and all running together. They need to slow down when they ingress and egress at the marinas," Purdie said.

"If they drop off and get in line, no one will get hurt."

Purdie said that this year the problem seems to have lessened after the media reported on the Nautical Mile Association's concerns last year.

"Most people are already doing it, with the exception of the occasional jerk," Purdie said.

Once the DNR gives the go-ahead, the sheriff's department will be allowed to use its speed radar gun to detect and ticket violators.

Purdie said he's spoken with area marina owners and is encouraging them to post signs at the ingress and egress to their harbors reminding boaters of the ordinance.

The Anchor Bay Yachting Association — an organization comprising past yacht club commodores — is considering purchasing buoys to hold the speed limits out on the water, Purdie said.

Nautical mile member Al Gaskill has also agreed to donate a sit-down personal watercraft to the Macomb County Sheriff's Department for use in patrolling the shoreline.

Travel group completes gripping Normandy visit

A drumhead service has historically taken place before battle to bless the colors and uplift the hearts and minds of the troops.

Upturned drums overlaid with national or regimental colors formed the altar at which the act of worship would be conducted.

The ceremony we attended on June 5 will always stay with all of us. President Clinton came to talk with each of our veterans. I had the honor of being thanked for "being there" with a warm handshake.

To see historic aircraft participating in the flypast such as the Swordfish, Lancaster, Hurricane, Firefly and the TBM Avenger, to name a few, brought many memories to all of us.

After the ceremony at the South Sea Common in Portsmouth, we joined the ships participating in the D-Day commemorative events to cross the channel to Normandy.

In the evening at Deauville, we saw on CNN the Grosse Pointe veterans with President Clinton talking individually to them. What a thrill!

The next day, the Longest Day, June 6, was a very emotional day for all. We left our hotel at 6 a.m. to attend the bilateral French-American ceremony at Utah Beach.

Once more we were privileged to see President and Mrs. Clinton, President Mitterrand and the other dignitaries.

We went to Colleville (the American cemetery) and there was an optional visit to the German cemetery in Lacambe.

St. Mere Eglise, with the hanging parachutist from the church steeple, had a great museum. But we all agreed the Peace Memorial at Caen is a must for every visitor going to Normandy.

We went to visit these sights to give thanks to those who took part in the momentous event and to remember those who did not return.

The French people clearly demonstrated that they had not forgotten their liberators.

Now I look forward to show that my country, Belgium, is also full of gratitude. This December, I will escort another group to Bastogne, where many events are planned for the anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge.

After a trip to the back seat, you'll love the 'baby Benz'

I'm in love. Again. But seriously, this time it's different.

I know. I was in love only a couple of months ago. With a teal '94 Mustang.

But this is different. Trust me.

This one is special. It comes from an old and distinguished European family. It's solid. It's respected. It's conservatively stylish. It's intelligent without being boastful. It's a Mercedes. And it's almost affordable, this silver C220 sedan with gray-and-wood-trim interior.

The so-called entry-level Mercedes for 1994 is the all-new C series. This marque replaces the 190 family, and it's an enormous improvement. It's bigger inside and out, its styling is far more attractive, dual air bags are on an impressive list of standard equipment and buyers can choose between a multi-valve four or six-cylinder engine.

The "baby Benz" debuted several years ago. My colleague and fellow columnist, Dick

Autos

By Jenny King

Wright, participated in its short-lead press introduction that began with a trip to The Greenbriar resort in West Virginia (complete with uniformed and white-gloved waiters in the dining room). The excursion ended at the famous Brickyard in Speedway, Indiana, home of the Indy 500, where driver Parnelli Jones actually managed to scare members of the press by piloting Mercedes products around the track at impossible speeds, all the while talking and gesturing as if everyone should be able to have this kind of control behind the wheel. It's a while since I've been in a 190 Mercedes sedan. If memory serves, the smallest Benz was, frankly, too small. Back seat passengers of any stature found their heads brushing against the roof liner. This is not good in a luxury sedan of any lineage; for a Mercedes, it's quite unacceptable. So one of the important tests to run on the new C-class was a trip into the back seat. It's roomier all the way around — legroom, sideways (a.k.a. hip-room) and in height. But the front buckets are preferable,

In its most affordable sport sedan, the C220, Mercedes-Benz packages dual air bags, anti-lock brakes and power equipment including sunroof, seats, windows and locks in the $29,900 pricetag.

'cause this almost old-fashioned sedan is a pleasure to drive. I'm still not sure why.

There's nothing new on the conservative instrument panel; it's not even "integrated" into the doors. Acceleration still has its characteristic weird lag; most cars steer as precisely and easily as the C220. Maybe it's the ease of entry, the sitting-up-straight seating position, the good visibility, the knowledge that you have a fix on where the bumper begins so you won't be embarrassed bumping into walls, other vehicles, metal-stemmed meters and such when parking the first few times.

The C-class sport sedan looks good, a compliment I've not been able to pay some other Mercedes models in earlier years. Its lines flow. Exterior

Big 3 seek common design to reduce electric wiring complexity

The nation's domestic auto-makers have joined forces to improve reliability by developing common designs for electrical connectors on future generations of vehicles.

The Big Three's newest consortium, Electrical Wiring Component Application Partnership (EWCAP), will attempt to reduce costs and product complexity while improving quality and serviceability.

EWCAP will look for ways to cut the number of designs found on an average car and the domestic industry's inventory of connector-part numbers. It's expected that the number of designs will shrink from more than 100 to less than 10 within the next 20 years and EWCAP aims to cut parts numbers 80 percent, from more than 15,000 to 3,000.

"We're trying to address the complexity and improve reliability for our customers," said Chuck Hurton, manager of Power Generation and Wiring for General Motors Corp. and chairman of the EWCAP's management committee. "For example, a 1948 family sedan's typical wiring harness, or electrical distribution system in today's jargon, weighed 10 pounds; had 150 feet of insulated wire; 35 connectors, none of which were sealed; 75 terminals and 55 individual wires.

"To show how much it's grown, an electrical distribution system on today's luxury vehicle weighs more than 65 pounds; has more than 1 mile of insulated wire; 300 connectors, of which 100 are sealed; 2,000 terminals and 1,500 individual wires.

"If your kitchen were as complex an environment, you might have 60 outlets to do the job of one outlet. You might need five adapters and a specially marked outlet just to plug in the toaster. There's really no need for that kind of complexity."

With an annual operation budget of more than $750,000, the new research partnership will focus on developing common designs for four new families of blade- and pin-type electrical connectors that currently account for more than 99 percent of the connectors used on today's vehicles.

Six research engineers, two each from Chrysler Corp., Ford Motor Co. and GM, will be assigned full-time to the program and more will become involved on a part-time basis. Formed as a research consortium, EWCAP will be part of the United States Council for Automotive Research (USCAR) — the Big Three's cooperative research initiative. EWCAP will occupy facilities in Dearborn, Mich. — USCAR's first co-located team of Chrysler, Ford and GM researchers. The consortium will be managed by a three-member committee, including Frank Povilaitis, Chrysler's Electrical Systems Department manager; Jeffrey Van Dorn, manager of Ford's Electrical and Electronics Engineering Department and Hurton. Chairman duties will be rotated annually. "Our goal is to establish common families of 'best in class' electrical connection systems," Hurton said. "We also plan to develop industry-wide test specifications and design guidelines for electrical components.

"With standard components, we will make service repairs easier, electrical systems more reliable and dealership parts inventories less cumbersome and expensive. Suppliers benefit too, because they will have fewer parts to design. The savings should go to their bottom line."

In addition to reducing the cost of developing and manufacturing electrical connectors, automakers and suppliers expect to improve component quality and open new, overseas markets for their connectors.

The first of four new electrical connector groups is expected to appear in dealership parts inventories and new-car showrooms between 1998 and the year 2000. For example, design work on a 1.5 mm blade connector will be completed by year's end. Lab testing and manufacturing tests will be done by 1996. Following that, the new connectors will be ready to be included in the Big Three's full-vehicle product development cycles.

Design work on a 2.8 mm blade, 6.3 mm blade and 1 mm pin will be completed by mid-1995. The last family of connectors will be included in product development cycles in late 1998.

Current suppliers will continue to support EWCAP through the development of the new, common designs.

panels are nicely proportioned, as are the monster taillights. What is it about this make? Everyone seems to know from a distance that it's a Mercedes. Even Conwell Carrington, jazz singer and bass soloist in the choir at Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian Church. Ordinarily cool and reserved, Carrington leaned in the open car window one Sunday and said he'd be happy to take the C220 off my hands when the test period was finished.

It was Ken Holden, professional organ technician and another member of the church's choir, who discovered one of the car's more amusing features on the way to lunch one Sunday. Among the seat-shaped power seat controls on the inside of each of the front doors, there was a little black button whose function was a mystery. Holden, from his spot on the rear seat, informed us that, when pressed, it was moving the front-seat headrest up and down. Apparently Stuttgart, site of Mercedes worldwide operations, is close enough to the Black Forest to be influenced by some of its fancy.

So what do you get on your $29,900, 2.2-liter, four-cylinder base-model C-series? Dual air bags, anti-lock brakes, an electric sunroof, digital electronic climate control, power windows and locks and cruise control. Also included is a four-year/50,000-mile warranty. Mercedes adds that all its cars, regardless of model year, are covered by the company's 24-hour roadside assistance program.

St. John opens new Surgery Center in St. Clair Shores

The far eastside's first center outside of a hospital for surgery, recovery and return home in one day is scheduled to open Monday, June 27, in St. Clair Shores at 12 Mile and Little Mack.

"The St. John Surgery Center will bring more convenient cost and time-saving surgery to the area, as a response to the demands of healthcare reform and the community's needs for the healthcare of tomorrow," said Cheri Dendy, director of the center. Most patients will stay between three and four hours. Special recovery rooms, where patients may stay up to 23 hours, will permit more extensive surgical procedures to be done.

The center is possible due to advances in anesthesiology and technology, such as laser and video cameras attached to various viewing scopes. These require smaller incisions and often offer shorter surgery time, quicker recoveries and less discomfort.

Dendy said that today's families face ever-increasing demands on their resources. "Time away from family and from work is precious. We've reached an age when surgery doesn't have to mean a long stay in a large hospital and a patient doesn't bear the cost of round-the-clock care. Dollars saved could mean more long-term care, likely needed as healthcare reform unfolds."

Modern approaches will be used to educate patients before surgery, which may lessen fear and affect the amount of anesthesia required. Newer shorter-acting drugs often allow faster recovery and less nausea.

The center will include four state-of-the-art operating rooms, recovery areas, X-ray and laboratory facilities, mobile technology areas (for portable services such as lithotripsy, which breaks up kidney stones using sound waves), a community education room, a lounge for family and friends, a snack area, physicians' offices, and convenient parking with no long walks to the entrance.

A pharmacist on-site will fill the patient's prescriptions.

Types of surgery to be performed at the new center may include laparoscopic vaginal hysterectomies, plastic surgery involving eyelids, breast reconstruction and carpal tunnel hand and wrist surgeries.

Orthopedic procedures such as wrist, knee and shoulder repair, setting broken bones and plate and pin removal from previous surgery may be done.

The St. John Surgery Center is the newest addition to the St. John Health System, anchored by St. John Hospital. For more information, call 1-800-237-5646.

American Red Cross: Summer heat cools blood donations

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Alexander Sikorski is 5 years old, healthy and active. His mother, Elaine Sikorski of Grosse Pointe Woods, calls him "the boss of the house."

Alex's 14-year-old brother, Gianluigi Gennari, will be a freshman at Grosse Pointe North High School in September and expects to play soccer for his school.

Both boys needed blood transfusions shortly after they were born. Alex had six transfusions; his brother had three.

Fortunately, the correct kind of blood products were available when the babies needed it.

Local blood supplies are often dangerously low, especially during the summer months, said Mark Cornillie, director of public relations for the American Red Cross Blood Services Southeastern Michigan Region, which serves Wayne, Macomb, Oakland, Washtenaw and St. Clair counties.

"We need about 5,500 donations each week to be self-sufficient," he said. "We're only collecting 75 percent of that now."

Cornillie said people generally respond to emergency appeals, but the Red Cross is uncomfortable operating with anything less than a three-day supply.

"I'm convinced that part of the problem with the whole process is tied to the confidentiality," Cornillie said. "Donors don't see the people (like Alex and Gian) at the other end; the recipients."

Judy Andrus of Grosse Pointe Woods was a donor during the Grosse Pointe Blood Council's recent drive at Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church. Andrus donates blood about every three months.

More than a third of blood supply collections take place at work sites, he said, while another 33 percent is donated at fixed blood collection centers in the metropolitan Detroit area. There are centers in Ann Arbor, Bloomfield Hills, Canton, Dearborn, Livonia, Oak Park, Port Huron, Roseville, Southgate and at the Renaissance Center.

Community drives and high school and university collections provide about 17 percent of the blood inventory. The Grosse Pointe Blood Council has held four drives a year since 1948 and is the oldest community-sponsored organization in southeastern Michigan — perhaps in the nation.

It's led by Esther Riske, Harriet Kamm, Pearl Halbert, Edith Petrosky, Rosanna Culp and Ellen Dern as well as 22 local churches and the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. The council has collected more than 8,000 pints of blood in the last 20 years.

Blood inventories are low during the summer because potential donors are on vacation, because people take long holiday weekends off, and because high schools and universities are closed or have minimal enrollments, Cornillie said.

"Donated blood needs to be tested," he said. "The process takes 24 hours before the blood can be distributed to those who need it. If something critical happens — an emergency — it still takes 24 hours."

Anyone over 17 who is healthy can probably donate blood every eight weeks.

Giving blood takes a little over an hour, including registering, gathering a brief medical history and having your temperature, blood pressure and hemoglobin checked.

The actual donation takes less than 10 minutes and is nearly painless. Most people resume normal daily activities immediately after giving blood, but are advised not to participate in strenuous exercise or heavy lifting for about five hours after donating.

Donors and donations are carefully screened. "There are many layers of safety checks," Cornillie said.

Blood is tested for HIV-1 and HIV-2 (the viruses that cause AIDS), ALT (the level of a liver enzyme), hepatitis B, hepatitis C, human T-cell lymphotropic viruses and syphilis. Other safeguards include blood typing, screening for red cell antibodies and, in some cases, additional tests.

Collected blood is separated into components — red cells, platelets and plasma. Various parts of the blood are spun,

2 books deal with plight of handicapped travelers

I have a friend named Loreena. She is 39 and has cerebral palsy. She attends college and is the author of a book. She gets around by walker or wheelchair, depending on the circumstances. Her speech can be difficult to understand, but, believe me, she gets her point across.

Loreena wants to travel. Unfortunately, she has no one to travel with and that pretty much keeps her at home in St. Clair Shores.

People who are physically challenged do have certain problems traveling, but they are not by any means insurmountable. Loreena probably faces the toughest: Depending on the severity of the handicap, many people need someone to travel with them. (This is because most companies which run tours for the disabled require that they be accompanied.) Usually, or course, family members do this but Loreena does not have anyone available to her at this particular time.

So while Loreena and I have had several discussions about her desire to travel, we have not yet solved her problem.

Another acquaintance has twin boys, both with disabilities. He regaled me with the stories of a recent trip to Disney World, where they go almost every year.

Such talks have raised my awareness of the topic of travel for the physically challenged and I've done a bit of researching. More than 40 million Americans have some kind of disability which limits their mobility.

I should also note there is much disagreement about what

TRAVEL TRENDS

By Cynthia Boal Janssens

terms should be used: Some people prefer "handicapped," others "disabled," and still others "physically challenged."

And so you will find different terms used in different places in the many books, pamphlets and newsletters that deal with this topic. The most important thing is that, finally, it is being written about. I was fortunate to come across two excellent books which were recently released:

The first is "Wheels and Waves" by Genie and George Aroyan (Wheels Aweigh Publishing Co., Ft. Myers Beach, Fla.; 1993). Subtitled: "A cruise, ferry, river and canal barge guide for the physically handicapped," the dedication of the book reads:

"To the Jonathon Livingston Seagulls of today

Who, with some bumps along the way,

Still are up, and ready to roll,

Ashore, a-wing or . . . afloat."

The fact is, in general, ships challenge the handicapped. No elevators on the smallest, and, with the exception of suites, tiny cabins, high sills and inaccessible bathrooms for most others. This extremely thorough guide is detailed and comprehensive in telling you everything you might want to know before planning a cruise.

It goes right to the nuts and bolts: It measures doorways to make sure wheelchairs can get through, checks the height of door sills, and the availability of ramps. It finds out if the cruise line expects wheelchair-bound passengers to walk "just a few steps" to the toilet.

The 173-page book describes more than 200 vessels (100 specifically with facilities for the disabled). The authors obviously know their stuff. The Aroyans are experienced cruisers — Genie is a polio paraplegic, unable to walk since age 12, and George is a retired naval engineer.

The book contains a broad mix of sketches, maps, charts and deck plans. There are helpful appendices on adapting wheelchairs and coping with ramps and steps (which can be a bit trickier aboard ship than on land).

Actually, this book would be helpful to anyone who is a bit slow or frail.

If you are a first-time handicapped cruiser, this book would be invaluable to both you and your travel agent in making the right choice of ship. Experienced cruisers will appreciate all the information about ferries, barges and such.

And while George Aroyan admits that it has been difficult to reach potentially interested readers, the importance of their work is obvious: The Library of Congress has sought permission to bring out Braille and TDD versions and the ACCESS Foundation is converting it to CD-Rom format for easier access to travel agents and computer users.

The book costs $13.95 in softcover; $19.95 hardcover, and may be ordered from Wheels Aweigh Publishing Co., 17105 San Carlos Blvd., Suite A-6107, Ft. Myers Beach, FL 33931; phone (813) 463-5306 (include $2 for shipping). To order with VISA or MasterCard, call (800) 637-2256.

Another new guide — one my pal with the twins would appreciate (or maybe he could write it by now) — is called "Handicapped in Walt Disney World" by Peter Smith (SouthPark Publishing Group Inc., Dallas; 1993).

This one has a different sort of subtitle: "A Guide for Everyone." And that is just what it is. I have read several other guides to WDW and this one is just about as thorough as you can get. The publishers stress that it is an unofficial guide.

Author Smith is a paraplegic and has used a wheelchair since 1978 when he fell in Switzerland and damaged his spinal cord. The accident ended his career as a field geologist but he adapted and spent the next 11 years as an exploration geologist and continued to travel, but not to such remote corners of the world.

Smith explains his title: "People have disabilities; handicaps are imposed on them. . . . This book helps people overcome the handicaps in Disney World."

It is particularly useful by defining three categories of the mobility-impaired: Those who can stand and walk, but with difficulty; those using wheelchairs, but with the upper body strength and coordination to routinely transfer in and out of them; and the most severely disabled, who use motorized chairs and are unable to move to another seat or vehicle by themselves.

He also addresses the issue of time: a minimum of three days just for seeing all of Epcot Center; two days for the Magic Kingdom and one day for Disney-MGM Studios.

After dealing with the generalities, the 302-page book goes into a ride-by-ride, attraction-by-attraction description that tells all about the attraction (so you can decide if you really want to see/experience it) and then describes any difficulties or barriers to the physically challenged. The book's tone is particularly noteworthy: Smith describes rather than criticizes. As a result, the book is upbeat.

The general sections of the book, about choosing lodging and restaurants, are very helpful and can save anyone lots of time and money. This book will definitely be in my suitcase the next time we go to WDW.

It is available in many bookstores or directly from the publisher: SouthPark Publishing Group, Inc., 4041 W. Wheatland Road, Suite 156-359, Dallas, TX 75237 or call (800) 669-5657. The price of $13.95 includes shipping and handling.

Both of these guides include references to other publications, travel agents, tour operators and agencies that assist disabled travelers.

Another guidebook is due out this month. "Great American Vacations for Travelers with Disabilities" is being published by Fodor's. Look for it in bookstores.

Cynthia Boal-Janssens' Travel Trends runs on alternate weeks in this section.

Sigma Gamma's Fireworks Picnic is June 28 at Ford house

Sigma Gamma Association will hold its annual Fireworks Picnic on Tuesday, June 28, at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, 1100 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Shores. The family event, which will begin at 6:30 p.m., is a benefit for the Detroit Institute for Children.

Activities will include mid-way games, a Moonwalk, children's entertainment, strolling banjo-players and singers and, of course the grand finale — a fireworks display.

All-American food will be available — hamburgers, hot dogs, apple pie, ice cream and popcorn.

The "I Love America" silent auction will feature items like a four-day trip for two to San Francisco and a tour of the Fisher Vineyards, including hotel and airfare; a behind-the-scenes tour of the DIA and lunch with the museum's executive director Sam Sachs; a chartered plane trip for four to Cedar Point; and many one-of-a-kind items such as handmade clothing, children's toys and tickets to local sporting events.

Chairmen are Mr. and Mrs. Curtis W. Fisher and Mr. and Mrs. John C. Donnelly Jr.

Admission for benefactors is $250, which includes four adult tickets, a gourmet picnic and special seats. Admission for patrons is $150, which includes tickets for two adults and two children. Admission for sponsors is $100, which includes two adult tickets. Individual tickets are $25 for adults; $10 for children 17 and under.

New this year: an appetizer basket for four will be available for $50. Baskets must be pre-ordered. Call 886-5493 for tickets or more information.

Award-winner: The fifth annual JC Penney Golden Rule Awards ceremony was held in April, with the dual purpose of honoring volunteers and providing financial support to worthy organizations. The awards include personal recognition as well as cash contributions to the organization represented by the award winner.

Among the winners was Ardis Gardella of Grosse Pointe Woods, representing the Holley Ear Institute, affiliated with St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

Gardella is the driving force behind the Holley Ear Institute. Her fundraising efforts have helped finance the institute's recent purchase of equipment and expansion of services.

On your toes: Brunch with the Ballet, a fundraiser for Metropolitan Ballet Theatre, Detroit's first full-scale professional ballet company, will be held from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Sunday, June 26, at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Dearborn. Tickets are $45 and include a performance by MBT dancers Keith Scheaffer and Anne Karaboyas.

For tickets or more information, call 441-2100.

Mutts galore: About 900 people — including 500 registered walkers — and 600 dogs turned out for the Michigan Humane Society's Spring Mutt March, a benefit for animals cared for by the MHS held on a five-mile course at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores.

A similar benefit, the Fall Mutt March, will be held on Saturday, Sept. 17, at Nankin Mills Station in Westland.

"It was one of our most successful marches ever," said Ron Blauet, MHS special events director.

The Michigan Humane Society is a private, non-profit organization dedicated to serving animals since 1877. It operates three full-service shelters and charitable animal hospitals in the metropolitan Detroit area, as well as a gift shop, Paw Pourri, in Royal Oak.

For more information about the MHS, call (810) 852-7420.

Spring Soiree

The sixth annual Henry Ford Hospice Spring Soiree, which was held at the Detroit Athletic Club May 21, raised more than $73,000 for hospice care, education and research throughout the Henry Ford Health System.

Among the more than 200 guests from Grosse Pointe were, from left, Dr. Fred Whitehouse, division head of the Department of Metabolism at Henry Ford Hospital; Wendell Anderson Jr., president of the Anderson Fund and member of the Henry Ford Health System board of trustees; and Dr. Edward Krull, chairman of Henry Ford Hospital's Department of Dermatology.

Year. The honor is given in recognition of commitment to improving the quality of life in one's community, Macomb County and the state of Michigan. The award is named for Gen. Alexander Maccomb, a hero during the War of 1812 and, of course, the county's namesake.

Awards will be presented at a dinner in September at Pen-na's of Sterling.

New program: The Alzheimer's Association announced that it has received $126,000 from United Way for Southeastern Michigan to provide health and human services to the people of the metropolitan Detroit area.

The Alzheimer's Association provides education and crisis intervention to more than 70,000 people with the disease — and their families — in the tri-county area. One of the newer programs, Safe Return, helps locate missing Alzheimer's patients through a national computerized network.

Therapy helps those with obstructive sleep apnea

By Tymon C. Totte, DDS, Totte, Hart and Associates, DDS,

Are you always tired when you awaken in the morning? Do you feel like you didn't get enough sleep? It may be because you snore.

You snore because your breathing airway is narrow, which causes the soft tissues of your throat (tonsils, soft palate and uvula) to vibrate. It is this vibration that makes the sound of snoring. It's like putting a flag in front of a fan — the faster the fan goes, the greater the flutter.

Many things can reduce the diameter of your airway, including large tonsils, a long soft palate or uvula and if you are overweight, excessively flabby tissue. The most common cause of snoring occurs when your tongue relaxes too much during sleep and gets sucked back into the airway with each breath.

Although snoring itself may be harmless — except to interrupt a good night's sleep — it can develop into (or be a symptom of) a more serious medical condition known as obstructive sleep apnea (OSA). When your tongue is sucked completely against the back of your throat, the airway is blocked, and your breathing stops. When that happens, you try to breathe harder, which makes the airway seal even tighter. It's like trying to drink through a straw that's stuck in a lump of ice cream. The harder you suck the flatter the straw becomes.

The airway obstruction won't clear until your brain's oxygen level falls low enough to partially awaken you. When you awaken, your tongue returns to a more normal position, and the airway seal is broken — usually with a loud gasp. Naturally, waking up like this several times a night can severely interrupt your sleep pattern and cause you to awaken feeling tired.

What can you do about snoring or obstructive sleep apnea? Mild or occasional snoring and symptoms of OSA may be alleviated by life-style changes, such as:

Losing excess weight.
Exercising regularly.
Avoiding alcohol, heavy meals and medications that make you drowsy, especially within three hours of bedtime.

When symptoms are more severe or if these measures don't resolve the problem, other treatment options are available. They include:

Surgery to the nose, throat, tongue or jaw.

Nasal continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP), a therapy in which an air compression device and a nose mask are used to force the airway open and aid breathing during sleep.

Dental appliance therapy, which is an effective way of treating snoring and OSA for many patients. It may be employed on its own or in combination with other methods of treatment.

A dental appliance is a small plastic device which is similar to an orthodontic retainer or an athletic mouth guard. It is worn in the mouth during sleep to prevent the soft throat tissues from collapsing and obstructing the airway. It works by bringing the lower jaw forward, while opening the throat airway for breathing.

In recent clinical studies, physicians and dentists have found that, in a majority of patients, a well-made, well-fitted, dental appliance will effectively reduce or eliminate snoring and significantly relieve symptoms of mild and moderate OSA. Dentists with training in dental appliance therapy can design, construct and fit these special appliances to meet their patients' individual situations and conditions.

Dental appliance therapy offers many advantages, such as:

Dental appliances are relatively small and easy to wear. The appliance weighs only a couple of ounces, and its small size makes travel easy. Most people find it takes no more than a few weeks to become completely comfortable wearing the appliance.

Dental appliances are relatively inexpensive. The total cost of therapy is considerably less than the cost of alternative treatments.

Treatment with dental appliances is reversible and non-invasive.

For more information about snoring, obstructive sleep apnea or dental appliance therapy, see your dentist.

The Pastor's Corner

Interim work

By the Rev. Nancy B. Rohde
Grosse Pointe United Church

I am currently serving as the interim pastor of the Grosse Pointe United Church. An interim pastor is one who works with a local church in the interim period between regularly called pastors.

This seems to be a growing concept, not only for churches, but also for schools. The idea is that there are specialized tasks and skills needed in the interim period in order to be well-prepared for the next pastor or leader. Sometimes the term "acting" is used instead of "interim."

I enjoy interim work. In six months to a year a church and I work together to try to deal with the loss and grief of pastoral change, to develop skills for planning and telling the stories, sharing the rituals and to begin to help refocus mission direction.

The more interim work I do, the more I appreciate the fact that many of our jobs are interim — that is, time- and site-specific.

Take parenting, for instance. We have about a 20-year period in which to help our children become capable, functioning adults. Our job as parents is to teach our children what we know about how to live and then to get out of the way so they can do just that. We are to work our way out of a job. We are to teach decision-making and problem-solving skills and allow them to practice those skills while we are still nearby to process and consult about the results. We are to help them discover what to do differently next time to get a better result; we are not to do the job for them.

An interim pastor tries to do a similar job. First it is important to establish a caring relationship and build trust. In parenting, we call this bonding. A pastor tries to help a community of faith feel safe and nurtured. Together we try to identify and deal with feelings and change. Together we learn new ways to get needs met, work accomplished, and to prepare to move forward. Like parenting, this type of pastoring encourages participation/empowerment and problem-solving, with special attention to the values of how we work together.

While the tasks are time-limited, the relationships are not. But healthy relationships grow and change as the people in them grow and change.

You will not be surprised that my husband and I have just witnessed the marriage of one daughter and the receiving of a graduate degree by another daughter. Clearly I am assessing the stages of my work as both a parent and a pastor. Somehow those assessments do not come to us clearly defined or one at a time. As we all grow, our worlds and learnings generally overlap.

People often say to me, "How can you do interim work? I'd hate leaving, just when you get to know people."

It is not easy. You can never be deeply involved with a person or faith community and not experience grief and loss. But the older I get, the more I savor the relationships and persons who touch my life.

The recovery community captures that notion in the expression "one day at a time." That has biblical roots

Christ Church welcomes new clergywoman

The Rev. Julia A. Dempz of Grosse Pointe Park has joined the clergy staff at Christ Church Grosse Pointe as an associate for Christian education.

She comes from St. James Episcopal Church in Birmingham, where she was associate rector for five years. Dempz graduated from Trinity College at the University of Toronto with a master of divinity degree. She is pursuing a doctor of ministry degree at the Ecumenical Theological Seminary in Detroit, with an emphasis on Christian education.

Dempz will preach at 5:30 p.m. Saturday, June 25; and at 8 and 10:15 a.m. Sunday, June 26. A coffee hour will be held in her honor after the second Sunday service.

Vacation Bible School includes parents and children

"Come Along With Jesus" is the theme of Vacation Bible School at First English Evangelical Lutheran Church, 800 Vernier in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The community is invited to the classes, which are for children aged 3 through middle school and their parents. Sessions will be from 6 to 8:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 11-15, at the church. Nursery care will be available.

Karen Ford and Nancy Grumm are directors of the program for children. Emilia Heinrich will lead the adult sessions.

"Including the parents for a special adult session proved to be very popular last year," Grumm said.

Students will participate in activities involving Bible stories, art activities, music, service projects, recreation and snacks. Families of all the participants will be invited to a closing celebration on the last evening.

The cost is $6 for one person; $10 for two; $14 for three or more people in one family. To register, or to learn more about the program, call the church between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. at 884-5040.

Fry now, pay later

Now that warm weather is here, people are getting ready for summer. For many, this often means going to the tanning booth or lying out to get some color on pale skin.

"Prolonged exposure to the sun, even in the tanning booth, can lead to skin cancer later in life," said Dr. Mark Balle, a dermatologist at Henry Ford Hospital. "The incidence of skin cancer increased over 500 percent between 1950 and 1985. Today a newborn baby has a one in 105 chance of developing malignant melanoma in his or her lifetime — an increase of 1,500 percent since 1935."

More than 700,000 Americans will be diagnosed with skin cancer this year alone, making it the most common form of cancer in the United States. One in six Americans will develop some form of skin cancer in his or her lifetime. Yet most cases can be avoided, according to Balle.

"At least 75 percent of all skin cancers can be prevented if simple precautions are taken against the sun's ultraviolet radiation," he said.

Physicians at Henry Ford Hospital recommend the following precautions to lessen the chances of developing skin cancer:

- Minimize sun exposure, especially during the peak sun hours of 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., when the sun's rays are most intense.

- Wear protective clothing during prolonged periods in the sun.

- Apply a sunscreen with a sun protection factor (SPF) of at least 15 liberally and frequently and reapply every two hours when swimming or sweating.

- Keep infants out of the sun and teach children about sun protection. The majority of sun damage occurs before the age of 20.

- Avoid tanning parlors and sun lamps. The ultraviolet rays can cause sunburn, premature aging of the skin and risk of skin cancer.

To detect skin cancer at an early and curable stage, examine your skin and that of family members regularly for any changes in moles, freckles or skin discolorations. Contact a dermatologist immediately if there is any sign of change or if new lesions appear.

About 80 percent of the new cases of skin cancer will be basal cell carcinoma. This usually appears as slowly growing, raised translucent, pearly nodules which may ulcerate and sometimes bleed. Squamous cell carcinoma is the second most common form, affecting 130,000 people. It usually appears as raised, red or pink scaly nodules or wart-like growths that ulcerate in the center. Both of these types of cancer have a 95 percent cure rate if detected and treated early enough.

Malignant melanoma is the most serious form of skin cancer and can be fatal. If untreated, it can spread throughout the body. Malignant melanoma is characterized by the uncontrolled growth of pigment-producing tanning cells, and may develop from or near a mole.

Stratford: It's an exotic vacation nearby, in Michigan's back yard

By Alex Sucek
Special Writer

Anyone wanting an exciting trip could lay out big bucks for a transatlantic flight to one of the world's great arts festivals. He or she could visit a foreign town, a countryside rich in excellent restaurants, great shops, fascinating sights and stimulating activities.

There is such a treat less than three hours from Grosse Pointe.

A little more than 140 miles of freeway driving will bring you to a place that offers all the above in generous measure. It's Stratford, Ontario, site of one of the world's finest English repertory theatres.

What's more, the current exchange rate on the Canadian dollar makes it a bargain and there's enough to do there to fill several days — even a week — of joyful escape.

It is not even necessary to rave about the excellent plays and musicals presented in the Festival's three distinctive theatres, except perhaps to point out that the forthcoming presentations of Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors" and a stage adaptation of "Alice in Wonderland" are perfect fare for families with children. "Comedy of Errors," which lends itself to all the sight gags and pratfalls of full-blown slapstick, is, in fact, one of the ideal shows to introduce children to live theatre and Shakespeare. It's not even necessary to read them the play in advance.

But that is only the beginning. There is no end of other entertainments to fill the days and after-theatre nights in this charming Canadian town. Prim and old-fashioned in appearance, with a distinctly Victorian flair, Stratford offers a vacation lifestyle that is thoroughly contemporary and diverse.

With the Festival's quality shows at the core, a panoply of attractions has sprung up to enrich and enliven the free time of tourists in town for the theatre. Making the acquaintance of other visitors is one of the great attractions, since quality theatre attracts a quality audience. The handiest place to meet is around the communal breakfast table at a bed and breakfast inn. Conversation may range from the play seen the night before, to Canadian and American politics. Whatever the subject, discussion tends to be animated and stimulating. Lasting friendships have been formed.

The temptation to linger over coffee must be curtailed, however. At 9:30 a.m. Wednesdays through Fridays, Meet-the-Festival presentations (no admission fee) bring audience and actors into conversational repartee in the Tom Patterson theatre by the lake. Questions from the audience are very penetrating and answers from members of the company are often surprising and witty.

There are displays and exhibits to see as well. Selected costumes and props from 41 seasons of the Festival are open to view on Wednesday and Saturday mornings at the Festival warehouse. It's best to buy tickets in advance through the Festival box office and it is well worth the effort. The costumes are a historic show in themselves.

Exhibits of the work of leading Canadian artists are also worth seeing at the Gallery on Romeo street where the current display is shared by a video program about women's roles in Shakespeare's plays, as discussed by the leading actresses who performed them at the Festival. It suggests that Elizabethan women, like their queen, were both influential and relatively independent for their time.

Places to eat and sleep allow a wide range of choice, style and price. Some one-day visitors bring their picnics to feast on wooden tables alongside the lake formed by the pent-up Avon River, which flows past the Festival Theatre. Others shop at local supermarkets and specialty delis or buy the excellent boxed gourmet meals on sale in the Festival Theatre lobby.

Dozens of restaurants and lounges all over town use the high quality local meats, cheese and produce to offer an amazing diversity of tempting menus. They range from the Down The Street Bar & Cafe, with its mix of Asian and vegetarian specialties at bargain prices, to the contemporary elegance of Rundle's nouvelle (and very creative) cuisine. Fast food and such exotics as Indian, Chinese and Mennonite specialties are also well-represented.

Meanwhile, your preference and pocketbook can be met with accommodations that range from campgrounds to full service hotels. Some B&B's even have pools and tennis courts.

The town is also a great place to shop. Especially attractive are the native Canadian arts, but antiques, fashions, fine Oriental rugs, delectable handmade chocolates and imported gifts are plentiful too. Bookworms and souvenir collectors can browse for hours in the Festival bookstore across from the main theatre.

The Federal Tax (GST) that you pay on merchandise and accommodations is refundable when you leave the country. (There's a tax refund office on the Canadian side of the Blue Water Bridge).

Even getting there can be a minor adventure. The fastest route (less than three hours) is to take I-94 to Port Huron, cross the bridge and take 402 east. Exit at Strathroy, go left on Highway 81 about four miles, then a right fork on County Road 19 to Ailsa Craig. There, take a right on Highway 7 and cover the last 30 miles to Stratford.

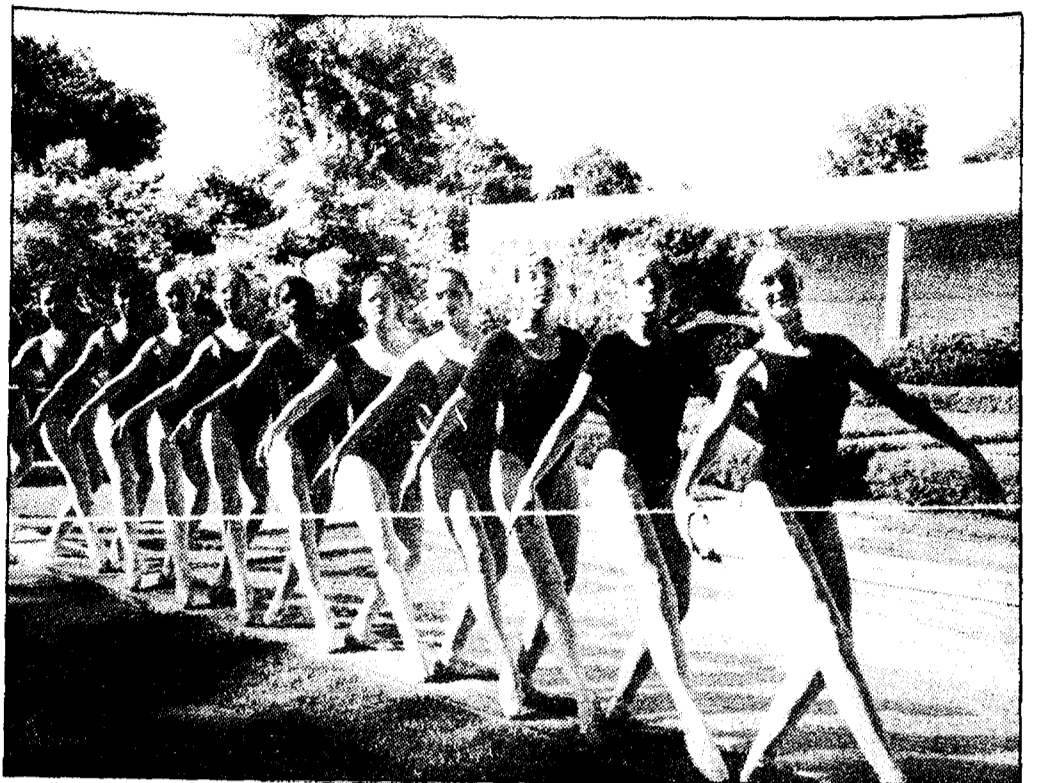

For a pleasant diversion, allow an extra half hour and exit I-94 to Marine City. Take the ferry across the St. Clair River to Sombra and go left on the River Road for an oldtime, shunpiker's drive along that two-lane scenic route.

To avoid going through Sarnia, turn right at Corunna on County Road 4, proceed to Highway 21 where a left turn takes you the 10 miles north to 402, the main route east.

For a complete guide to all this and more, call the Stratford Festival at 1-800-567-1600 and ask them to send you the Festival Brochure and Visitors' Guide. They will also take orders for tickets and accommodations. In Stratford, there is a Travel Information Office on York street, alongside the Boat Rental Service for punting on the Avon.

This office provides maps and information leading to many enjoyable attractions in the surrounding area, such as the Mennonite Farmers Market at St. Jacobs, the Stone Quarry Swimming Hole at St. Marys, the Seagram Distillery Museum in Waterloo or the authentic covered bridge in West Montrose.

Put in the right perspective, going to Stratford is a foreign adventure in one of the world's great entertainment centers and a bargain to boot. With something for just about everyone among the 11 shows being presented this summer and two-for-one specials on some weekdays, Stratford is an overlooked bonanza for a summer vacation.

'Speed' is 100 thrills per hour

By Marion Trainor
Special Writer

"Speed," a non-stop action thriller, comes roaring in like a roller coaster and never slows down. It begins with a dangling elevator scene that would be the climax of most films but is only a prelude to the main story.

A psycho, played by Dennis Hopper, has wired the elevator in a towering downtown building in Los Angeles and threatens to blow it up if he doesn't get $3 million. It's a tense situation that keeps you on the edge of your seat while a LAPD SWAT team cop, Keanu Reeves, works under the direction of his brainy partner, Jeff Daniels, to free the passengers before the elevator blows.

With that shot of adrenaline, the film moves into high gear. Hopper attaches a bomb to the bottom of an occupied public bus. Once the bus reaches a speed of 50 miles an hour, it can no longer drop below 50, or the bomb will go off. Daredevil Reeves maneuvers himself onto the speeding bus, he explains the situation to the terrified passengers and begins work on defusing the bomb.

It is important to keep the bus moving and since he can't work and drive too, he chooses a passenger, feisty Sandra Bullock, for the task. It is an ironic choice. She has lost her driver's license because of too many speeding tickets. Her urge to put the pedal to the metal serves her well in zipping onto the shoulders and around the edges of freeway jams, zigging though the urban roadways and soaring over a 20-foot gap in an unfinished freeway bridge. Then there are the terrified passengers to deal with, most of whom try to stay calm, but some who panic.

Meanwhile, Hopper is in his basement watching the proceedings on a hidden television hookup to the bus. At intervals, he calls Reeves to gloat.

The stunt work in "Speed" is vigorous and breathtaking. Directed with no frills efficiency by cinematographer Jan De Bont, who did "Die Hard," it has spectacular special effects, carefully constructed action sequences and thrilling acrobatic stunts, tight focus and smart plotting. The runaway bus is the main event but there is more excitement to follow.

Bullock gives a star-making performance. Bright, smart and feisty, she makes the viewer confident that she will steer the bus through crowded streets, around hairpin turns and over a highway abyss. "Speed" marks Reeves' graduation from

Mosaic presents Shakespearean comedy

Mosaic Youth Theatre, Detroit's nationally acclaimed, high energy youth ensemble, presents "What Fools These Mortals Be!" a comedy for all ages, at the Attic Theatre June 22-26, with special student youth group discount matinees on June 29 and 30. "Fools" is a comedy based on Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

"We've modernized the language and added original music," says Mosaic's director and founder, Rick Sperling, "and yet we've kept the zany characters and the crazy plot twists that have made the play a crowd-pleaser for over 400 years."

The cast consists of 24 young people from throughout the Detroit area.

Since its stunning debut with "Runaways" in 1992, Mosaic has received overwhelming national and local acclaim. Tony and Emmy-award winning actress Jane Alexander, chair of the National Endowment for the Arts, has cited Mosaic as a national model for youth arts:

"Mosaic is exactly what we at the Endowment are encouraging across the country," she said.

For ticket information, call the Mosaic Youth Theatre of Detroit at (313) 864-7322. Group discounts are available for all performances. During the week of the show, tickets will be available at The Attic Theatre box office, 875-8284. The Attic Theatre is located in the New Center Area at 7339 Third Street and West Grand Boulevard (across from the Fisher Building parking lot).

Artists needed for Our Town Exhibition

Artists across the state are invited to submit their work for jurying for the ninth annual Our Town Art Exhibition and Sale, to be held Oct. 19-23 at The Community House in Birmingham.

All entries in the form of color slides must be post-marked July 31. Artists who have not already received an entry form may ask for one by calling the Community House at 810-644-5832, or by writing the Community House, 380 S. Bates, Birmingham, 48009.

Last year 319 works of art from 248 Michigan artists were selected from almost 1,000 entries. Sixty-one of these works were purchased by some of the 3,000 people who attended the four-day exhibition. Prizes totaling $10,000 will be awarded to selected artists at the artists' award ceremony on Sunday, Oct. 23.

Artists may submit their interpretations of "Our Town" — any hometown — and its meaning to them. Works may pertain to, but are not limited to, the following: Michigan landmarks; architecture/city; nature/landscape; people/portraits; and still life. Art work may be two or three dimensional, prepared in any medium, ready for presentation, and must not have been previously shown in Our Town exhibitions.

Allen Rubiner will be the 1994 Our Town juror. He is a nationally recognized artist and instructor and has his work displayed in many municipal, corporate and private collections throughout the country. The Our Town Art Exhibition and Sale opens with a gala benefit on Wednesday, Oct. 19. It is open to the public from Thursday, Oct. 20-Sunday, Oct. 23. There is no admission fee. All works of art must be marked for sale. The artists receive 65 percent of the selling cost, with the rest benefiting the Community House.

One of the earliest pioneers in emergency care.

Clara Barton chose to help people in their time of need. Her first contribution to medicine began with a position as an unpaid nurse during the Civil War. After being promoted to a supervisory post, she persuaded various women's organizations to contribute food, bandages and other supplies for the soldiers at the front.

She delivered them personally.

When war broke out in Europe, Barton went overseas to help set up military hospitals for the International Committee of the Red Cross.

It was this experience that prompted her to organize the American Red Cross - an organization that has since provided emergency care for almost a century.

GREAT WOMEN
great choices

One of the latest.

"When I asked my son Kevin what had happened, he just said it was a 'double dog dare'... whatever that is. His friend was holding his skateboard by one wheel. Kevin was holding his arm ... much more gingerly."

Henry Ford Health System East Side created the WomanWise Women's Services Network to give you more options for better health. With the changes in our new Emergency Center, we are bringing that same level of quality and service to emergency care.

We enlarged our triage area to assess patients' conditions more quickly. We added a central nurses' station to more easily monitor all patient rooms. And we included a specially designed pediatric treatment room for 24-hour children's care.

"It was Kevin's first time in a hospital, which can be kind of intimidating. I'm glad we chose the Emergency Center at Cottage. Our doctor obviously had experience with nine-year-olds -- he knew that Kevin would find his x-rays pretty interesting. Of course, I wouldn't have referred to a broken arm as 'cool,' but at least it took Kevin's mind off his injury."

And while medical excellence is always our first priority, we recognize the need for privacy, comfort and communication. That is why we have a large, comfortable reception area with support services just for guests. Special consultation rooms are also part of the new design. And we have added patient representatives to our staff. They serve as a personal link between the patient and physicians in the Emergency area and friends or family members in the reception area.

"Kevin's cast hadn't even dried and his friends were there, waiting to sign it. I'm glad they came to see him. It made Kevin feel better. And it may just encourage all of them to be more careful. Well, maybe."

One of the most comforting parts of the new Emergency Center is our affiliation with Henry Ford Health System. This nationally recognized health care network gives our patients access to over 2,000 doctors in southeast Michigan for follow-up or specialized care.

"Boys will be boys. And no matter how often you tell them to take it easy, there will always be skateboards, and steeper hills, and 'double dog dares.' That's why I'm glad the Emergency Center at Cottage is so close by. I have a feeling we'll be back."

Blood

After a pint of blood is donated to the Red Cross, it is taken to a laboratory and separated into components — red cells, platelets and plasma. Theoretically, one donation can save the lives of three different people. All blood donations are tested for a variety of viruses and enzymes. About 12 percent of donated blood is unusable.

squeezed, frozen and/or agitated. It's probed and tested and labeled and safeguarded. Before it's even collected, donors are carefully screened, Cornillie said. There's even a way to go through the process of giving blood, then telling the Red Cross not to use it.

"Suppose you're feeling pressure at work to participate in a blood drive," he said. "Suppose you know that your past history puts you at risk for a blood-borne disease. We've provided a way for you to participate in the blood drive; to donate blood. But then there are several ways for you to tell the Red Cross that your blood should not be used."

About 12 percent of donated blood is not useable, Cornillie said.

Picture the University of Michigan's football stadium, Cornillie said. "Now imagine a person in every seat."

Imagine each person holding two more people on his or her lap. A quarter of a million people.

That's how many people receive blood products every year from the Southeastern Michigan Blood Services Region of the American Red Cross.

In order to provide these quarter of a million people with the blood products that may mean life instead of death, the American Red Cross needs 5,500 blood donations each week, Cornillie said.

Platelets have a five-day shelf-life. Red blood cells have a 42-day shelf life. Plasma is frozen and may be used up to a year later.

Cornillie donates blood every eight weeks or so.

Elaine Sikorski is also a blood donor. She said she's thankful blood was available when her babies needed it.

"If they weren't given blood, all the medical technology of the last 20 years would be for naught," she said. "It's really the gift of life."

The Roseville donor center, 17955 E. Eleven Mile, is open from 2 to 8 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays; from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursdays; and from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays.

To make a reservation to donate blood, call 494-2800 or 1-800-582-4383.

Pastor

in understandings about "daily bread" and the Ecclesiastes passage, "there is a time for every matter."

Summer is a great interim. It is between spring and fall. It is vacation from school. It is a different pace. It is delicious fresh fruits and vegetables, long evenings and beautiful sunsets. Savor each day. Hear the birds. Smell the flowers. Embrace the task at hand and when it is done, let it go. Enjoy your children. Teach, listen, love and guide them and then bless them on their way.

You will, of course, continue to love and care about them, but the relationship of parent and child — or of pastor and congregation — changes as the times change. It is an important faith question to ask, "What time is it?"

The James Russell Lowell hymn, "Once to Every Man and Nation," sings the question this way:

"New occasions teach new duties. Time makes ancient good uncouth. They must upward still, and onward, Who would keep abreast of truth." Upward and onward.

Shalom.

Racing, running keeps Sieber on the move

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Jon Sieber is going to be faced with a dilemma in a few weeks.

The Grosse Pointer, who is a third-year engineering student at Bucknell University, is going to have to decide between running cross country on a team that has a chance to be ranked nationally or staying in auto racing with the Dale Coyne Racing team, where his responsibilities increase almost daily.

"I'm going to have to decide which team I'm going to stay with," Sieber said. "If I leave the racing team, I'll have to teach somebody the whole computer program, but they won't have had the time to learn it like I do."

"If I don't come back for cross country, I know my coach isn't going to be too happy about it. If everybody comes back, we have a good shot to be a top 10 team nationally."

Since March, Sieber has been living a dream.

He's been working in the pits with the IndyCar team as part of an internship program.

"I think people are surprised I'm doing this at my age (19), but they're not surprised I'm working in the pits, because this is a kid who used to sleep in a race car bed," Sieber said.

When Sieber started working with the Coyne crew, Grosse Pointer Robbie Buhl was one of the drivers, but Buhl recently left the IndyCar circuit to drive a Trans-Am car. Now the Coyne drivers are Johnny Unser, of the famed Unser family, and Alessandro Zampedri.

Unser is the son of Jerry Unser, the racing Unser brother who was killed at Indianapolis several years ago, and he's been taken under the wing of his uncles, Al Senior and Bobby, and his cousin, Al Junior.

"The Unsers have all come together as one, so it isn't unusual to have Al or Bobby or Little Al in our truck or in our pits," Sieber said. "When Johnny crashed at Milwaukee I was on the headset with Bobby in one ear and Johnny in the other. I'm hearing Johnny saying 'Uh, oh,' but I didn't want to tell Bobby that he had just hit the wall.

"Another time I had to talk to Johnny about something and he and Dale and Al Senior were talking. I excused myself and said, 'I have to talk to Johnny.' Later on I thought to myself, 'I just pulled a guy away from Al Unser.'"

Working with Zampedri has posed a different problem for Sieber.

The young Italian driver's

English is less than fluent, while Sieber's Italian isn't any better.

"We had some serious communication problems at the start last weekend, but by the time the race was over, we were able to understand each other almost perfectly," Sieber said.

It didn't take Sieber long to earn acceptance around the pits.

"The idea was to come in and see how things run in the pits and maybe do a few of the smaller tasks," he said, "but with each race I've been getting more and more responsibility. I'm in charge of the whole computer program. At first the crew chief would check over what I'd give them, but lately they've just been accepting what I tell them. It boggles my mind that they'd listen to a college kid without questioning it, but it makes me feel good that I've earned their respect."

Lowell Werner, the vice-president of marketing for Coyne Racing and MI-Jack Products, said he believes the Coyne team is the first to allow a college student to work with the professionals.

"It's very difficult for people to break into racing," Werner said. "You can be a wizard of an engineer and understand all the engineering principles, but there's nothing like practical knowledge — hands-on experience with a racing machine. Knowledge and relating that knowledge to performance and production on the track are different things because all the variables change so fast and often. You need to adjust the car, the aerodynamics, the suspension and even the tire pressure."

In addition to learning the tricks of the trade, Sieber will be earning a half-semester of college credit.

"It's almost too good to be true," said Trudy Cunningham, associate dean of the College of Engineering at Bucknell. "Not only will it be a good experience for him to find out whether he likes racing as much as he thinks he does, but it is a wonderful networking opportunity. He'll meet people he could never meet in any other setting."

One of Sieber's goals is to pave the way for other aspiring engineers to receive the same opportunity.

"I'd like to establish a place on a team where each year there would be an internship," he said. "I wouldn't mind putting the program together. I'd supervise it, whether the internship is from Bucknell or another school."

Sieber is also interested in the safety aspect of racing. He has watched tapes of the crashes that killed two Formula One drivers, including defending champion Ayrton Senna, to see if they could have been prevented.

"My main goal is to work on the design of cars, with special interest in the safety factor," he said. "I'd like to work with the aerodynamics and maybe be a driving coach to tell the drivers what to expect from their cars."

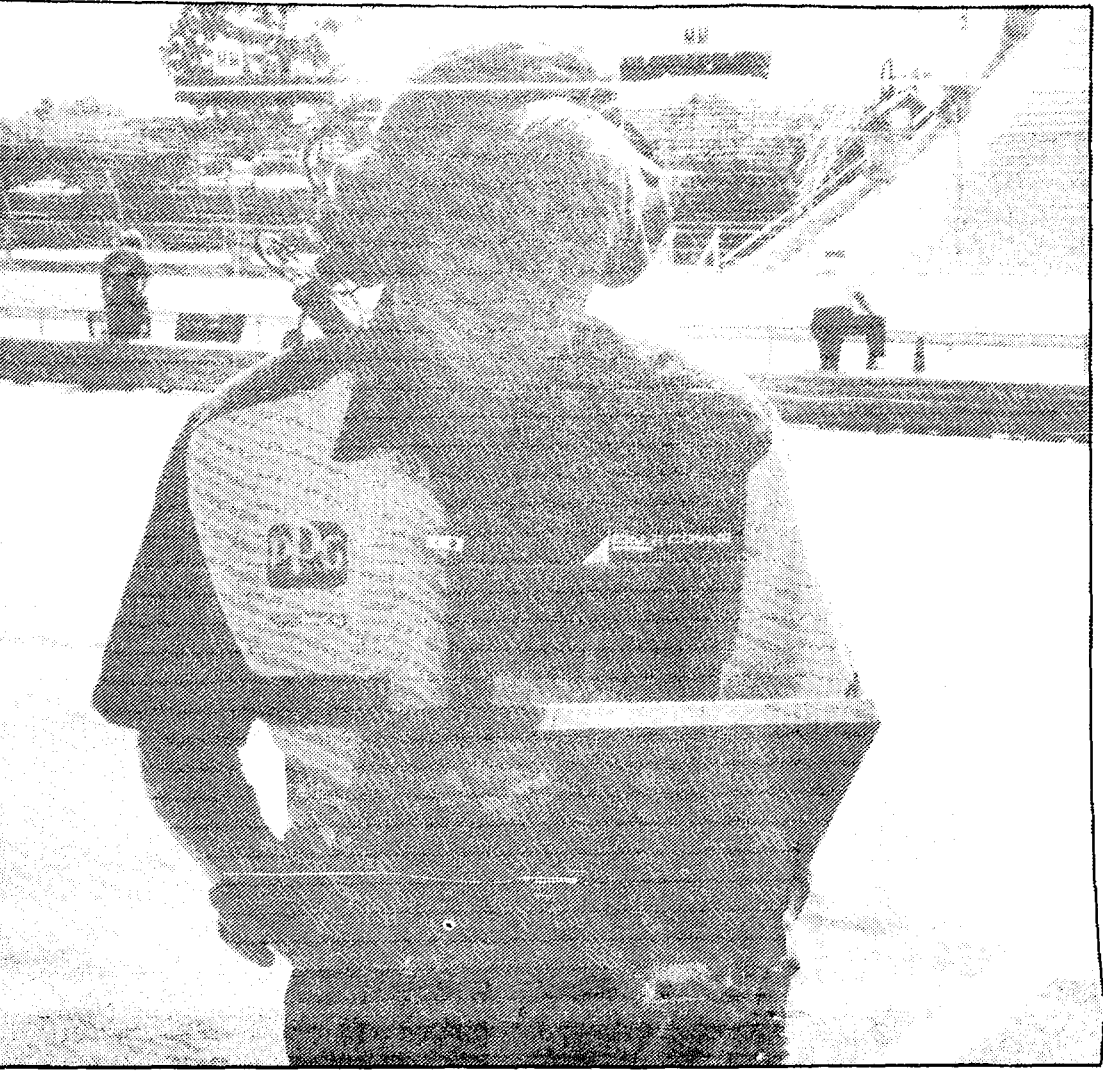

Although he's been around race cars ever since the Grand Prix first came to Detroit, Sieber hasn't been bitten by the driving bug.

"I have no ambition to get behind the wheel of a race car," he said. "I'm sure if I stay with racing, I'll have to go to driving school to get the driver's perspective, but as far as racing a car myself — I don't think so."

Sieber, who finished 31st in last year's national championship cross country meet despite a pulled calf muscle, stays in contact with his former coach at University Liggett School, Phil Langford.

"He can always tell right away if I'm having problems mentally with my running," Sieber said. "He's a good friend and a great coach. Every once in a while Jenny (former ULS distance standout Jenny Miller)

Clean out...Clean up with a GARAGE SALE

One man's junk may be another man's jewel! Why not gather those items that you no longer treasure and tag them "For Sale" in a GARAGE SALE! You'll be surprised at how easy it is...and how much cash you can make!

TIPS FOR RUNNING A SUCCESSFUL GARAGE SALE:

- HOW LONG SHOULD A SALE RUN?
Usually two days gives enough time for professionals and amateurs and browsers. The best day to begin is Friday and run through Saturday. At the end of each day, reconsider pricing and make adjustments where needed.
- THE PRICE IS RIGHT:
Always mark prices on everything. Suggested price for good quality used clothing is one eighth the original cost. Check with store catalogues to get an idea of original prices. Clothing older than 10 years may be thought of as "campy" and could be worth more to the right buyers. Usually upholstered furniture costs less than all wood.
- GATHERING MERCHANDISE:
Go through your home...attic, basement, garage... and jot down items as you go. Small items can be displayed in baskets and buckets. Consider clothing, furniture, appliances...anything you no longer want or need. Ask friend if they'd like to run a joint sale and try color coding price tags to keep inventories separate.
- THE DAY BEFORE YOUR SALE:
Go to the bank and get small bills and change. Borrow an adding machine if you don't own one, to help keep sales straight. Always have someone watching merchandise. Keep money box, tags and materials together. Provide a full length mirror if possible for people to try on clothing. Create aisle like rows if possible for easy accessibility.
- And most important, ADVERTISE YOUR GARAGE SALE IN THE CLASSIFIEDS!

Division champion

Our Lady Star of the Sea's fifth and sixth grade softball team won the Catholic Youth Organization division championship with an 8-2 record. Team members were Jennifer Ballew, Kate Briles, Katie Crowther, Carrie Culos, Anne Marie Evola, Kelly Flemlion, Stacie Hadgikosti, Kate Irwin, Danielle Kinkel, Lindsay Laskowski, Maureen Loy, Julie Parthum, Sandra Pochmara, Nicole Russo, Ellen Shaheen and Kristen Simon. The team was coached by John Albrecht.

Buhl makes a switch

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe Robbie Buhl is putting his IndyCar dream on hold for a while in order to taste victory again.

Buhl recently left Dale Coyne Racing, which gave him his first ride on the IndyCar circuit, to join Roush Racing of Livonia, where he'll drive in the Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) Trans-Am Tour series.

"I'm real happy with the move," Buhl said. "Driving the Indy circuit was great and it's my goal and focus to win at Indianapolis, but right now it was in my best interests to be a part of a team that was capable of running with the leaders."

Braves reach the semifinals

The Grosse Pointe Braves won four games in a row before bowing in the 16-year-old division semifinals of the Home Plate baseball tournament in St. Clair Shores.

Hits by Johnny Spath, Steve Lentine and Dave Keenan highlighted a three-run second inning that sparked the Braves to a 6-5 victory over the North Farmington-West Bloomfield Cobras in the tournament opener.

Dan Sylvester had four hits and Chris Copus and Keenan three each to back the combined pitching of Rich Turri and Kevin Schroeder in a 16-3 win against Lincoln Park.

Keith Smith pitched a two-hitter, struck out eight and drove in two runs during the Braves' game-winning four-run rally in the seventh inning of a 6-2 victory over Riverside, Ontario. Chris Ford had three hits, including an RBI single in the seventh.

Turri drove in three runs and Greg Sieszputowski knocked in two to lead the Braves to a 9-8 win over the Commerce Township A's in the quarterfinals.

The Braves were eliminated in the semifinals when they lost a rematch with Lincoln Park 10-8, despite a 14-hit attack that included a 3-for-4 performance and two runs by Keenan and two RBI apiece for Smith, Kevin Collins and Ford.

Earlier, the Braves pushed their Macomb Amateur Baseball Federation record to 4-2 with an 11-5 victory over the Sterling Heights Rebels and a 4-3 loss to the Clawson Clippers.

John Fincham doubled, homered and scored twice against the Rebels and Brandon Welch shut them out with two hits over the last five innings.

The Braves, 8-3 overall, will meet the Port Huron White Sox in a doubleheader Saturday in Port Huron, then will play the Fr. Coughlin Cubs Tuesday at South Lake before hosting the Detroit Hornets at 6 p.m. Wednesday at Grosse Pointe South.

Budget limitations kept Coyne Racing from using the newest cars and technology and from regular testing.

"I'm thankful for the opportunity (Coyne) gave me, but it was a getting to be a problem to win," Buhl said. "I didn't feel I could show my ability as a driver in a year-old car and without testing. You have loyalties — that's how I was brought up — but I also have to do what's best for my career."

"Most people don't realize just how important it is to develop a rapport between the driver and his crew. You develop that rapport as much during testing as you do during a race."

Buhl has driven for Roush Racing before. He was part of the Roush team in the 24 Hours at Daytona, finishing first in 1993 after a third-place finish the year before.

Buhl will drive a 1994 Ford Mustang Cobra. Since Roush is a factory-backed team, it will be using all the latest equipment.

"Trans-Am racing is a lot different than what I've been used to, so it's going to take me a while to get used to it. It's all racing, but it's a different approach," he said.

The major difference is from open to closed cockpit racing and the weight of the cars.

"The Trans-Am car weighs about 2,700 pounds to 1,500 for the Indy cars," Buhl said. "Because there are no pit stops, you have to manage your tires. You can't drive as hard as you want from green flag to green flag. Your car changes with the difference in the fuel load. The handling and response is a lot different with a full tank than it is at the end of a race. There's the rubbing you don't have in other racing. I'm just learning to play that game. Everybody expects some bumping, but if you spin somebody, you have to remember your day will come, too. The visibility is totally different and you have fenders to be aware of. There are a lot of variables that provide a challenge for a driver."

That's why Buhl is willing to bide his time.

"I'll spend the rest of this year learning the car and the racing and then next year I should be able to make a bid for the (driver's) championship."

This is the fifth major racing series in which Buhl has competed. He won the 1992 Firestone Indy Lights championship and the 1989 Barber Saab Pro Series. He also drove in the Formula Atlantic Series.

Buhl has driven the Mustang in two races this year. He was 11th at Mid-Ohio after bending the front suspension and ended up 12th in Detroit when he cut a tire after moving up to fourth place.

"The competition is great," he said. "In the Detroit race, there were five former Trans-Am champions in the field."

Buhl will continue his Racing for Kids program that has raised more than $400,000 for children's hospitals.

"No matter where I'm racing, I'll keep that up," he said. "We had a lot of fun during the (Detroit) Grand Prix. We took the kids to the track on Friday and that night had a big party. It was a real successful weekend."

Sailors fall short by a game

The Our Lady Star of the Sea seventh and eighth grade baseball team came within a game of fulfilling its Catholic Youth Organization championship dream.

After an undefeated regular season, a second consecutive Eastside Division championship and a three-game run in the playoffs, the Sailors were defeated 9-3 by Farmington Our Lady of Sorrows in the CYO city championship game at the Detroit Mercy baseball field.

Star of the Sea took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on walks to Andy Beaupre, J.J. Kinkel and Chris Mikula, followed by RBI hits from Marc Bertelsen and Michael Curis.

Outstanding defensive play and Bertelsen's strong pitching preserved the Sailors' lead until the fourth inning when Sorrows erupted for five runs and went ahead to stay.

Star of the Sea finished 11-1 with Brent Nielubowicz and Curis being named most improved players. Mikula was the regular-season batting champion, Beaupre was defensive player of the year and Bertelsen and Brian Kasiborski shared the Most Valuable award.

Sour ending for North

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North baseball coach Frank Sumbera can live with the 3-0 defeat by Owosso that his Norsemen suffered in last week's state Class A quarterfinal game.

But he may never understand why his six seniors had to choose between the most important high school baseball game of their lives and their graduation.

"High school seniors shouldn't have to choose between graduation and baseball," Sumbera said. "These kids have worked 13 years to graduate, but they've also worked hard to get this far in the baseball tournament. I'm really disappointed in the state (Michigan High School Athletic Association) for not intervening in this."

After the Norsemen won their regional, North officials requested that the quarterfinal game at Lake Fenton be changed from the original starting time of 4:30 p.m. to an earlier time to accommodate North's graduation at 6:30.

Gary Fulks, the athletic director at Lake Fenton, refused to change the starting time of the contest. He was quoted in one of the Detroit papers as saying, "It's my tournament, not Grosse Pointe North's and they're not going to tell me what time the tournament should be played."

That statement made Sumbera as mad as anything.

"I think he just had an attitude about a team from the metropolitan Detroit area," Sumbera said. "It's a beautiful facility there, but I don't know why a Class C school was hosting a Class A quarterfinal game."

Sumbera felt that Owosso would have agreed to an earlier start.

"I talked to their head coach and he said he could see our point. If the guy at Lake Fenton had said to play at noon or 1 o'clock he would have gone along with it."

Four of North's six seniors — Joe Maceri, Derek Ottevaere, Donny Tocco and Steve Guest — passed up graduation to play in the game. The other two, Rob McLeod and David Guaresimo, are class officers and chose the commencement ceremony.

All six seniors are starters. "I don't like to make excuses, but this was a tremendous distraction for our team," Sumbera said. "When you get this far, all eight teams are quality teams so you have to be completely focused. With all this malarky that was going on for the 72 hours between the regional and the quarterfinal, there was no way our team could be in the right frame of mind to play baseball."

The distraction showed as North, which scored 29 runs in its two regional games, was blanked on six hits by Owosso pitcher B.J. Smith.

In addition to pitching a strong game, Smith was aided by some brilliant defense. The Trojans' center fielder made a catch on Ottevaere's long fly ball in the third inning and robbed Sean Ziegenhagen of an extra-base hit with a diving catch in the fourth.

"The catch he made on Ottevaere looked like Willie Mays' catch in the (1954) World Series," Sumbera said.

Owosso's shortstop took a hit away from Guest when he was out of position and snagged his grounder up the middle that probably would have scored a runner from second base.

"He went over to the bag to hold the runner and didn't get back to his normal position, but if he had, he wouldn't have caught the ball," Sumbera said.

Owosso got the only run it needed when Scott Ostepol homered off Maceri in the fourth inning.

North threatened in the seventh when Bob Gates walked and Nate Treska hit a two-out double, but Smith retired the next batter on a groundout.

"It's a shame it had to end this way," Sumbera said. "We thought we had a real good chance of going all the way."

The Lady Knights came back to scored 16 runs in the last two innings to win the game. ULS' offensive leaders were Sarah Childs, who hit .500 in the tournament and collected three doubles, and Stacey Corbin, who scored four runs and did a good job at catcher.

Campbell is most valuable

Sophomore Angela Campbell has been named most valuable player for the University Liggett School girls track and field team.

Campbell, a transfer student from Port Huron Northern, led the Knights with 118 varsity points — a 13-point-per-meet average — which is the third highest in school history.

She ran the third leg of the school's record-setting 3,200-meter relay, finished third in the 1,600 run and won the 3,200 run at the state Class C regional meet.

Campbell placed in the ULS top 10 in the 800, 1,600 and 3,200 runs and in the 300 hurdles.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY! An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.
