Pointer on health care: 'It ain't over till it's over'

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Teresa Brooks has more than a passing interest in health care reform legislation being debated in Washington.

As a lawyer and director of National/International Health Care Practice for the law firm of Dykema Gossett, Brooks closely monitors the many bills introduced by Congress in response to President Clinton's call for health care reform.

Speaking at a bioethics conference sponsored by Harper

Hospital, Brooks described health care at any cost. some of the possible effects health care reform could have on medical ethics related to patient treatment and care.

'Cost will become a factor in medical decisions," she said.

Brooks described this as a result of 30 years of government involvement in health care de-

"Health care in this country is really a product of the Great Society programs begun by Lyndon Johnson," she said. "And the foundation of those programs during the '60s was always the final one. In the '90s cost of health care will be the major issue." Brooks said health care and its delivery systems are a sig-

"During the '70s we began to look at cost containment. And in the '80s managed care be-can economy. "Health care is one seventh of the American economy," she said. "It provides millions of jobs ranging from physicians to nificant portion of the Ameri-

housekeeping staffs and involves hospitals, universities and public health departments.

"And 18 percent of payroll costs go toward health care, so even if you are not in the health care business, it is still ar economic factor. Health care touches so many facets of the American economy. Even tobacco farmers are affected."

And while some government programs such as Medicare have proven successful, Brooks claims that it is because they are not subject to the vagaries of Congress.

"With current health care reform legislation, 650 groups have spent $100 million to influence the outcome," she said.

While Brooks praises Sen. George Mitchell of Maine for his efforts in moving a health care bill through Congress, she does not believe there will be a final health care bill introduced before the end of the current congressional session.

'It took the Senate only three days to declare war in the Persian Gulf," she said. "With health care reform there was 40 hours of debate before they even took the first vote."

City manager Dale Krajniak told the council that the money for the project would come from the city's northwest TIFA fund. The repairs were planned for this year and were budgeted at $250,000.

TIFA stands for Tax Incremental Finance Authority. It's a state-created program that allows cities to form TIFA districts to raise money within the designated district for the pur-

Wish becomes reality for library organizers

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer

Having overcome an identity crisis and funding obstacles, the Grosse Pointe Public Library can finally get back to the business of being a library.

The success of last week's millage election officially established a district library system for the Pointes and a portion of Harper Woods. Voters cast 3,304 yes votes and 1,226 no votes to establish a 1.7-mill permanent tax levy to support the new library system.

The millage election was the final step in a five-part process of separating the public library from the governance of the public school system.

Both school and library administrators are elated with the election outcome - and surprised by the election-day turnout.

"The community support was very good and we are grateful for the efforts that helped turn out the vote," said John Bruce, president of the library board of trustees.

Bruce said he was pleased with the turnout. There are about 40,000 registered voters within the school district (which shares the same boundaries with the library district). Of that number, about 10 percent cast ballots. While that may not seem like much, it was slightly higher than the turnout for last June's school board election in which 3,900 voters turned out at the polls.

"If you think about the time of year and that it was a special election, it's a significant turnout to support the libraries," Bruce said. "It speaks well of the value the community places on its library. With funding firmly in place, Bruce said the district library board must now work on establishing a budget for 1995-96, setting the necessary tax levy to support the budget and setting longterm goals.

Bruce said the board is also looking into the possibility of placing the library tax on the

Evolution of library

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer

Since 1922, the Grosse Pointes have had some type of library system. At first, small library stations oper-ated by the Wayne County Library were scattered around the neighborhoods.

In 1929, the Grosse Pointe Board of Education approved the establishment of a library to serve the entire school district. In 1939 the Park branch moved to Pierce Middle School from the basement of the municipal build-

The Woods branch opened at Parcells Middle School in 1949. Other smaller branches, including the City branch, located in what is now the Neighborhood Club Thrift Shop, and the Shores branch, located in the nowdemolished Vernier School, were closed.

By the mid-1940s, there was a need for a central branch. After considering several sites and collecting contributions in the amount of $300,000, and receipt of large bequest from Dexter M. Ferry Jr., the school district secured the Kercheval and Fisher site and broke ground in 1951.

The new Central Library opened in 1953.

Before school finance reform threatened the relationship, Grosse Pointe was one of 33 school districts in Michigan that operated a public library. Following the passage of Proposal A last March, school districts could no longer levy a separate tax to support a public library. Since then, many school districts around the state have sought other methods of funding for their libraries,

Laskowski named to Shores council

By Chip Chapman

In keeping with recent tradition, Grosse Pointe Shores last week selected its village clerk to fill a council vacancy.

Dr. Ronald P. Laskowski, who resigned Sept. 20 as clerk to assume the trustee position, was unanimously approved by the remaining Shores trustees to succeed James T. Wright, who died of a heart attack June

Wright, who was the village clerk before Laskowski, was picked to fill the spot on the council after then-president Edmund M. Brady Jr. resigned in June 1993. Current president John Huetteman III succeeded Brady and Wright filled Huetteman's spot on the coun-

Laskowski is chief of emergency medicine at Bon Secours Hospital. He had worked with Huetteman on the emergency medical services commission, helping to coordinate emergency services among the five Pointes and Harper Woods, before being selected as clerk in August 1993. He also is the owner of EMHS (Emergency Management Health Systems), a physician staff group which handles medical billings and transcription services.

"There are a lot of similarities between village government and running a business," Laskowski said. "Aside from my work at the hospital, being a business owner is one of the strengths I can bring to the council." "Ron Laskowski has served the Shores very well in his capacity as clerk," Huetteman said. "I had said that if we could have just one death-to-life save with the emergency medical service, it would be worth

In April, the Harper Woods Library Board adopted a resolution supporting the district library agreement. In May, the Harper Woods city council, in a 4-3 vote, adopted a resolution in favor of the plan.

In June, the school board approved the plan, followed by final approval of the docu-ments by the Library of Michigan. The final step was the voters approval of a millage to support the library.

The agreement between the Pointes and Harper Woods was in accordance with state law, which requires governing bodies of all municipalities affected to approve the establishment of a new library district.

Schools superintendent Ed Shine said he also is pleased with the election outcome. The school district had been discussing and researching the issue of library governance for a number of years. Proposal A, which eliminated the public school district's ability to levy a separate millage to support public libraries, forced Grosse Pointe schools to come up with a new source of funding, he said.

"We've been working on this for a long time and it's nice to see this," Shine said. "The seeds were planted in 1988 when we started talking about governance. The issue was set aside to discuss and when the (bond proposal to build a new library at Brownell) failed, the commitment to revisit the governance issue was made.'

"There will still be circulation of materials between the public library and the school system library and we hope to continue to capitalize on technology opportunities as they arise in the future," he said.

As part of the district library agreement, the public library will lease for five years the two branches at Pierce and Parcells middle schools. The Central Library building and property was transferred to the ownership of the library board of trustees as part of the district library agreement. If the library board decides to move out of the building, Shine said the ownership will revert to the school system.

Have some fun — bend a little

I think distortion gets a bad rap in photography. We usually try to eliminate it from our photographs. We want buildings straight, horizons level and faces looking normal.

But there are times when some distortion can actually add strength and impact to a picture. Distortion can be an attention grabber and can add an "artful" touch to your shot.

The best way to obtain distortion is to use a wide-angle lens. The wider the angle, the more distortion you'll get. Any 35mm camera, even with a normal lens, produces minor distortion when focusing up at a building. Rather than appearing vertical, the sides of the building will lean in toward each other. Use an extremely wide-angle lens and the sides will dramatically lean.

I prefer lenses in the 15mm to 20mm range. Not only can you get distortion, but the depth-of-field is so great with these lenses that everything in the viewfinder from front to back will be sharp and in focus.

Wide-angle lenses will distort foreground objects so that they will appear exaggerated in size relative to background subjects. A grouping of flowers or a pile of boulders can be used very effectively in this manner. Dominant and bold in the foreground, they will serve as an excellent foundation to a pic-

Interesting portraits can be done this way, too. Philippe Halsman's famous shot of Louis Armstrong is made with a wide-angle lens looking down into Armstrong's trumpet. The horn appears large and impressively distorted in the finished photo, but after all, that's what 'Satchmo" was known for.

'Fun" portraits can be similarly obtained by moving in close to a friend's face with a wide-angle lens. Noses will appear large, ears will look funny and the overall shape of the head will be distorted.

Distortion can also be applied to horizons. A wide-angle lens on your camera tipped up or down will cause the horizon line to curve upward or downward. A surrealistic effect will be obtained that no other kind of manipulation will achieve.

So get adventurous with your camera. Put a little distortion in your photographs.

Employee — or an independent contractor?

who doesn't withhold Social Security taxes from your salary? And does that person not withhold the taxes because he or she says you are an independent contractor, not an employee?

The Social Security Administration knows that some employers don't withhold Social Security taxes from their workers' salaries.

This often happens with household workers, beauticians and barbers, and other service occupations. The employer may mistakenly think the workers are actually independent contractors and responsible for their own taxes.

Or, in some cases, employers pay their employees in cash so they can reduce business ex day that you work and don't

Are you working for someone penses by not making the matching contribution of Social Security taxes.

While the employee may like being paid in cash, he/she should ask for a pay stub or voucher from the employer which shows that Social Security taxes have been withheld.

Nonpayment of these taxes by the employer could deprive the worker of valuable Social Security protection.

Because Social Security benefits are based on how long you work and the amount of wages reported for you by your employer, it's important that your earnings are reported accurately and your Social Security taxes are paid.

You never know when you may need Social Security. Each have Social Security coverage, you are robbing yourself and your family of a valuable resource.

If your wages aren't reported and you become disabled, you and your family could miss out on monthly Social Security disability benefits. If you die, your family could lose monthly survivors benefits.

There are rules for determining whether a person should be considered an employee or an independent contractor.

For example, an employee is hired, can be fired, receives employee benefits such as vacation time and sick leave, takes instructions from his or her employer, and is provided with tools and working materials.

The employer sets your hours, determines your place of work and pays you by the hour, week, or month.

What this means is that the employer controls or has the right to control how, when, and where the work is done.

An independent contractor, on the other hand, usually operates under the terms of an agreement or contract and doesn't receive employee benefits such as vacation time and sick leave

The contractor usually provides his or her own tools and work equipment, may set his or her working hours, has an opportunity to realize a profit or suffer a loss, and cannot be fired as long as he/she produces a result that measures up to contract.

Break on student loans

If you find it easier not to even think about repaying your student loan, Sallie Mae will automatically deduct the money directly from your bank account. You not only will avoid the risk of making late payments - and damaging your credit rating — but you will get an extra bonus: a onequarter-percentage-point interest rate reduction that can save you money over the life of your student loan.

Sallie Mae, the nation's largest funding source for guaranteed student loans, offers the Direct Repay Plan to all federal Stafford, SLS, PLUS, and HEAL borrowers whose student loans it owns and services. Currently that represents about one in three student loan borrowers

"With Direct Repay, on-time payment is guaranteed every month as long as you have the funds in your account," says

Allison Smythe, academic services representative at Sallie Mae. "You can avoid late payments, build a good credit rating, and save on interest charges — not to mention the 29 cents a month on stamps!"

Smythe says that under Sallie Mae's Great Rewards program, Stafford loan borrowers who began repayment after. June 30, 1993, can reduce their rate an additional 2 percentage points if they make their payments on time for the first four years - a job that's not hard to do with Direct Repay.

Borrowers may sign up for Direct Repay at any point in their repayment period. For more information, Sallie Mae borrowers should call 1-800. 643-0040. Students who have not yet taken out a student loan-should contact their lender or college financial aid adminis-

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

Worries expressed by members of the Woods city council about a possible tax liability against the city resulting from the sale of Grosse Pointe Cable turned out to be groundless, Woods officials said, as they finally allowed the council to approve the sale.

The Woods was the only Grosse Pointe Cable member city not to approve the sale of the system to Comcast Cable, when city officials in the five member cities were first informed of the offer Sept. 12 and asked to approve the sale. "We had some questions that we wanted answered and did not feel comfortable passing the ordinance the same night it was presented to us," said Woods mayor Robert Novitke.

council wanted answered was whether the city would have any federal tax liability from its share of the sale proceeds.

"My concern is that the cable company is a for-profit business," said councilmember Peter Gilezan. "Cities normally don't pay federal taxes, but I wanted to know if the increase in the value of the company would create a tax liability to the city.'

The council finally approved the sale Monday night in a special session after hearing a report from its tax consulting firm, Coopers and Lybrand, on the question of tax liability.

Grosse Pointe Cable president John Nicholson, an attorney, told the Woods council on Sept. 12 that he believed that the cities would have no tax Novitke instructed city attorney George Catlin to provide the council with a definitive answer for the council's Sept. 19 meeting. Catlin then instructed Coopers and Lybrand to research the issue, but because of an unanticipated staff absence, the firm was unable to research an answer in time for the Sept. 19 meeting.

Because the council did not have an answer that evening, they again delayed voting on the sale proposition. On Thursday, Sept. 22, Coopers and Lybrand gave Woods officials its legal opinion on the question of

City comptroller Cliff Maison said in the firm's considered opinion, neither the Woods nor the other cities involved in the Grosse Pointe Cable deal would have any tax liability as a result of the system's sale.

Gilezan also grilled Nicholson at the Sept. 19 meeting about sales clauses concerning the number of school and government access channels. The sales agreement calls for the number of school and government channels to increase to three. Currently schools and the cities share a single chan-

Gilezan's concerns focused on the language of the sale agreement, which will permit more government and school channels only after the three channels are filled 80 percent of the time between 8 a.m. and 11 p.m. during a consecutive sixweek period with non-repeating programming.

Gilezan said that he applies a test of reason to his council decisions, and he feels the restriction on the number of channels fails to meet reasonable standards because it does not answer what programs will be carried during what hours. If these questions aren't known, how can the contract

"We're just trying to be thorough in representing the city's and the citizens' interest in this matter," said Gilezan. "I really believe that the cities did not have suffcient information on the proposed sale to make an informed opinion. We have to anticipate what the situation is going to be five or 10 years from now. That's why we're being hard-nosed. Who knows what the cities' channel demands will be in the future? This clause is limiting.

But because the channel clause was agreed to by the four other cities, there is little anyone can do to change it, Nicholson said. The Woods will just have to live with the clause, he said.

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

The $10,000 estimate for salting Grosse Pointe Woods main street for the upcoming winter has some Woods' councilmembers seeing red because Mack is a county road.

"It's like Woods taxpayers are getting doubled-dipped,' said councilmember Bill Wilson. "They pay the county fees through state and federal gas taxes that provide the county money for maintaining roads, and they have to pay the Woods department of public works an additional $10,000 to keep traffic flowing on county roads during the winter."

The city is responsible for clearing and salting the Woods sidestreets, Wilson explained. Because Mack is a county road, the county is responsible for maintenance, including salting and snow removal.

Earl Ollila, county engineer of road maintenance, said that the county has seven trucks to salt District 1, which includes the Woods. Personnel who drive the trucks live farther from the county's Hoover street truck depot than Woods drivers live from the Woods truck sta-

Ollila noted that District 1, which includes a number of municipalities, is a lot larger than the Woods and it takes the county more time to complete a circuit. The county is also responsible for maintaining the traffic islands that divide north and southbound traffic on Mack,

Wilson said 'We've been asking the county to give us the money to maintain county roads within the Woods for years," said Wilson. "Their idea of maintaining the traffic islands is to cut the grass twice a year. The Woods cuts the grass and plants the flowers on those islands, not the county.'

Wilson noted that in the city's public works request for road salt, $10,000 of the requested $35,000 is identified as being for main streets. Mack is the major street within the

Woods woman gives vital part of herself to desperately ill brother

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer

Organ donation was not a subject Marge Drumm thought about - ever.

The Grosse Pointe Woods woman admitted that until two years ago, she never considered sticking the organ donor's label on the back of her driver's li-

Then she received a poignant letter from her brother John, a lifelong diabetic. He asked Drumm, along with his 11 other siblings, if any of them would consider donating one of their kidneys. His was failing and he needed a transplant.

"I cannot imagine how hard it must have been for him to send us those letters asking if we would agree to be tested to see if our kidneys would be compatible," said Drumm, an insurance agent at The Peppler Agency in Harper Woods and a mother of two grown children.

Drumm agreed to undergo a series of tests that would determine if her tissues would be compatible with those of her brother. Not every one of her siblings agreed to the testing,

"They had their reasons," she said. "Something like this is so personal. Some people are deathly afraid of surgery. There are so many things that go through your mind. You start to think: What if I don't match. What if I do?'

Test results indicated

POINTER OF INTEREST

Drumm's tissues were the closest match to her brother's.

While Drumm prepared herself mentally for the impending transplant, her brother's name came up on a donor's list and he received a pancreas and a kidney from an organ donor who had just died, she said.

Then his body rejected the kidney," Drumm said. "I felt so bad for him. He was so sick and he was getting ready to go on dialysis. I did a lot of soul searching and praying and agreed to do it."

On April 4, 1994, Drumm contacted a renal coordinator at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit and initiated the process. First, she had to submit to another round of testing to determine if she was in proper health to undergo the operation.

By the end of May, she said, the test results were in and the transplant was scheduled for June 8.

"We went in on June 7 for more blood tests and then we were admitted," she said. "I was surprised at how calm I was. I was at peace with myself. My family and my employer were very supportive."

Drumm's surgery lasted

convalescence, she returned to

The physical effects of the surgery are almost nonexistent, she said. She cannot tell the difference between having one kidney and having two. The eight-inch scar that wraps around the left side of her abdomen serves as a visual reminder and there is still some tenderness at the incision site.

But she can eat, drink and do whatever she likes, she said. Psychologically and spiritually, she is different, she said.

"If there's one thing I'd like to emphasize, it's the need for more people to donate organs," she said. "I never before realized the importance of organ donation. I didn't realize there are hundreds of people on donor lists who are waiting and waiting. I never even had the organ donor sticker on my driver's license. I do now.

"If I can give my brother another 10 years of life, I'll be happy. I'm proud to have been able to do that for him," she

On Sept. 10, John threw a family party in honor of Drumm. Everyone raised a glass and made a toast to life and love.

"I don't like being the center of attention but it was a touching moment," she said. "I work in the insurance business. When someone calls to say he totaled his car, I ask him if he's OK. I tell him to be grateful he's alive. A car is just a thing. But life is the most important thing you have. It's a gift."

That's why he was speeding

As a Grosse Pointe Woods police officer was leaving the station on Sept. 22, he saw a man driving a late '70s model Pontiac about 50 miles an hour on southbound Mack.

The officer pursued the car and pulled over the driver at Mack and Cook. The driver, a 29-year-old Detroit man, said one of his passengers was suffering from a gunshot wound to the chest and they were looking for a hospital.

After the officer determined that the driver's claims were true, he called for an ambulance to take the wounded man to St. John Hospital and ordered two other passengers out of the car for questioning.

The driver told police that he was in the area of Gratiot and Chene when he saw the men waving their arms for him to stop. They asked him if he would give them a ride to the hospital and the man said he agreed to do so.

The driver and passengers were released. Police had no further information on the gunshot victim.

Another one in the Farms

Police are continuing their investigation into a series of home break-ins in Grosse Pointe Farms in the past three weeks.

The latest burglary occurred between 10:15 and 11 a.m. Sept. 22 on Merriweather. The homeowner said someone got into her house while the sitter was taking the baby for a walk.

The babysitter closed but did not lock the door. When she returned, the door was ajar. The homeowner discovered around 2 p.m. that someone had stolen several pieces of jewelry from an upstairs bedroom

The latest break-in is similar to at least three others that have occurred in recent weeks. The burglars are focusing on jewelry and silverware, ignoring appliances and other valuables. Farms police are asking residents to immediately report all suspicious activity.

Stop that truck

A resident who lives in the 800 block of Barrington in Grosse Pointe Park called police at 11:30 p.m. Sept. 18 when he saw two people stealing his neighbor's pickup truck.

When police arrived, four suspects abandoned the truck and ran into back yards. After a yard-by-yard search, police arrested three of the four men.

Charged with one count each of unlawfully driving away an automobile are two 17-year-old twin brothers and one juvenile, all Detroit residents. A 19-yearold Detroit resident escaped.

The three suspects were scheduled to appear for a preliminary hearing in Grosse Pointe Park municipal court on Wednesday, Sept. 28.

And another one in the Park

Grosse Pointe Park police are hoping the arrest of three Detroit juveniles will put an end to a rash of car break-ins that has plagued the city's south end.

Police on patrol spotted the stolen car on Jefferson and Alter and attempted to pull over the driver, who abandoned the car and ran away.

After a brief chase, the suspects were captured by police. The case is being reviewed and petitions have been filed with the Wayne County Juvenile Court. Petitions are the juvenile equivalent of an arrest warrant.

The Wacky, Wild House

Once there were two dogs, two hamsters, one iguana and a bird all living in one house.

One day my big dog Queenie ate my babysitter's glasses. My little dog went to the bathroom on the floor. My hamsters got out. My iguana escaped and my bird flew into the fan.

This all happened when we were sleeping. I woke up from all the racket. When I walked downstairs, Queenie was ripping up my babysitter's glasses. My bird was sitting on the fan dead. K.C. was just sitting and my iguana was there crawling around the window. My hamsters were scurrying on the floor.

I had to clean up all the mess before my parents got up.

Park, South agree on use of park

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

Last week representatives from Grosse Pointe South and Grosse Pointe Park were able to reach an agreement that will allow South cross country runners to continue to use Patterson Park for practice.

The problem began this year when South cross country runners attempted to use Patterson Park at Three Mile for practice after school as they had done in previous years. For the first time a guard was at the park and would not let the runners in without park passes.

Since virtually all cross country runners don't carry wallets while running, no one got in. "I've been coaching girls" cross country since 1979, and there'd never been a problem before," said Steve Zaranek. 'Out of the blue we were told that we could not use the park. I replied that the nature of our sport is passive and that we'd been running there for years and never damaged the park."

Zarenek said that the boys and girls teams don't run in the park every day, just two or three times in a two-week pe-

"It's important that we practice in the park," Zaranek said. "Patterson Park is our home field for meets. Cross country running is not track running. It's done off-track on grass and over, if possible, hilly or nonlevel terrain. The nature of the sport requires the kind of environment available at Patterson Park.'

Park councilmember Robert Klacza, a member of the city's parks committee, said that due to some physical changes in Patterson Park this summer, the city had made certain policy changes, and that's what the cross country team ran

"The city put in a new playscape," said Klacza. "For the first time, we kept a guard at misunderstanding, and everythe park entrance past 5 p.m. one worked to clear it up after Labor Day. With the walk, people are using the park more beyond August, so we felt a guard would be a good idea. We did not tell the guard about the runners, probably because no one thought to. When they arrived en masse to practice in the park, the guard didn't let them in.'

Once the misunderstanding was brought to the attention of Park officials, Klacza said, it was easily cleared up.

"We officially announced our policy at the parks and recreation committee meeting last week, but the runners were able to use the park earlier," Klacza said. "It was a simple quickly."

Strong voter endorsement buoys library

oters in the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods gave a ringing endorsement to the new district library last Tuesday by approving a fouryear authorization for a 1.7 millage by a 72.9 percent margin.

The approval of funding for the year starting next July 1 assures the district of funding and also the community support required to maintain its independent sta-

Charles Hanson, director of the public library, expressed pleasure at the "wonderful endorsement" and praised the campaign committee for doing "a great job."

This endorsement, which came from all the participating communities as well as absentee voters, Hanson said, will enable the library to go forward with plans to improve its services to the community.

The action was the culmination of the five-part process which transformed the

oinion

Grosse Pointe library from an arm of the school district into an institution that serves the same area as an independent library for Grosse Pointe and the portion of Harper Woods that lies within the school district.

The community's strong support does offer the library an opportunity to improve its services under its own appointed board which ought to be able to concentrate its attention better on the library than the school board was able to do.

In view of community opinion, however, the management must keep a close watch on its spending. Its funding for next year, however, will be slightly increased because of the June 30, 1994, expiration of its funding will be slightly increased over this year's cutbacks required by the expiration of four-tenths of 1 percent of its funding last June 30.

While the vote was a one-sided 3,304 to 1,226, it also showed that a minority still had questions about the funding and the meaning of the independence which the library won from the Grosse Pointe school district.

From calls and questions to the library staff and the Grosse Pointe News, we think most of the no voters had not understood the need for the election which in effect re-established the same library millage that had been authorized under the schools' operation.

Some critics, as we explained last week, had thought the 1.27-mill authorization would result in a tax increase rather than a simple replacement of the tax that expires June 30, 1995.

And some, we regret to report, expressed annoyance that the library employes had recently voted to rejoin the Michigan Education Association through the new unit set up to serve the employes of the new independent library.

We regard that view as unfortunate because we think that Gov. John Engler has done a disservice to the MEA and to public school teachers generally by making them a focal point of his attack on the quality of education in Michigan.

We do not defend everything the MEA does, and, in fact, think it ought to disband its subsidiary that offers health care 4 insurance to its members even though it does not require they buy it. The Grosse 1 Pointe district's teachers, for example, are I served by Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

But we think school teachers as well as school administrators and school board members ought to be consulted whenever the governor and the Legislature consider educational reforms. In our view, reform ought to reflect public opinion but it also ought to give respectful attention to the views of professional educators.

With one hurdle successfully surmounted, Grosse Pointe educators and public school backers now will focus attention on the next test of public support at a referendum next Feb. 7 on a proposed increase in the school levy to maintain funding at roughly its current level.

The perils of instant analysis

If the Washington press corps can be described as united on anything, it is on the use of instant analysis of foreign affairs issues.

Whatever the administration proposes to do, or does, the critics swarm out of their bee-like colonies to provide their instant analysis of what is likely to go wrong or what already has gone wrong with the proposals.

The participants in this orgy of criticism do not all agree, of course. In fact, they seldom agree except in finding fault.

Take Haiti as an example. Most critics didn't approve of the invasion. Yet they didn't approve of the peaceful occupation, either. Instead, they immediately began to worry that the United States had engaged in a new Vietnam and we would be stuck in Haiti for years, just as we had been in the past. A few critics offered a bit of praise for the avoidance of a military invasion but most of the praise went to former President Carter and very little to President Clinton.

However, even the modest praise for Carter was quickly overtaken by the replays of the Carter administration's mistakes, including the failure of its aborted mission to rescue America's imprisoned diplomats in Iran.

It should be said, of course, that President Clinton has made his share of foreign policy mistakes, too. He apparently is paying the penalty in increased media and public criticism as well as a major loss of Democratic seats in Congress in good intentions and courage in having started public debate on many pressing domestic problems that had two long been ignored or swept under the rug by preceeding administrations.

Yet he seldom is given credit for anything except trouble by the Washington press corps, although some impartial ob-

In the long run, of course, some highly criticized policies, even the occupation of Haiti, may turn out to be successful. But Washington journalists, thinking about the long run is more difficult than instant analysis, which is also more fun.

United Way needs still rising

ith southeastern Michigan's health and human care needs continuing to rise, the United Way Torch Club drive has boosted its goal by 3.2 percent this year.

The 1994 goal for funds is $58.5 million, or $1.8 million more than the 1993 figure. Such funds have been supporting vital services to meet the needs of the tricounty area for 45 years.

In Grosse Pointe, for the first time, the drive is putting a local angle on its appeal by issuing a report emphasizing that at least 18,661 residents of the Pointes and Harper Woods were helped by United Way agencies in 1993.

Even that is only a minimal number based on agency reports that obviously cannot include services where the residence of the client is unknown.

The largest proportion of the services performed in the Pointes went to the 9,625 receiving community and special assistance, principally from the American Red Cross.

The second largest number in the Pointes, 4,106, received youth services from Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and YMCA and YWCA organizations of Detroit and the metro area.

Details about these and other United Way services performed in the Pointes are reported in the Features section of today's issue of the Grosse Pointe News.

This kind of information benefits the United Way Torch Club drive and justifies the appeal to Pointe families to support the Torch Drive to the maximum extent possible.

Thanks to all in passing library millage

To the Editor:

Thanks to the teamwork of library supporters throughout the community, 72 percent of voters emphatically endorsed our new district library by approving the library's millage. The restored operating millage guarantees long-term stable funding for the first time in the library's history. The administration, staff and governing board of the independent district library will now move forward to improve library operations and ensure quality service.

On behalf of the Grosse Pointe Public Library, we wish to express our gratitude to the large number of volunteers who rallied in support of the library. We are elated by the broad community support demonstrated by the many individuals and community groups who stepped forward to work on the Love Your Library campaign. The members of the Friends of the Library and the library board of trustees were particularly visible and involved in the campaign, working as a team with library staff and community groups. The PTO Council and the League of Women Voters offered invaluable support. We also thank the public and private schools' leadership for helping communicate the library's needs to the school community through their information

We are particularly grateful to the Grosse Pointe News for excellent coverage on the formation of the district library and the millage election. We look forward to continuing to work with the News for promotion of library programs and services.

Now is the time for a new beginning. We have the guidance of an enthusiastic library board, con-tinuing support of the Friends and a creative and talented library staff. To-

Open letter to War Memorial board

I do congratulate you upon diversifying the investment fund in transfer; ring from the cable television business, and the associated $11,250,000 number which is substituted in the investment fund. That looks very good on the balance sheet!

As you know, I have been an articulate advocate of the view that the subscribers and residents who paid for the cable television system originally (and who will pay for the depreciation of the new $22,500,000 investment by Comcast) should benefit directly, and that the now available telephone business in another Grosse Pointe Cable joint venture with a national telephone company is an even greater opportunity in gross numbers than cable television was, but I certainly recognize the efficacy of the decision made by four city councils and War Memorial board.

Given the kind of representations I individually made as president on behalf of the War Memorial to the city councils 15 years ago, as I put three $1 bills on the table to capitalize Grosse Pointe Cable Inc. and Barry Simon put down $1 for Teleprompter, you can understand my concern for those original representations. I understand your concern for risk of investment, and risk of independent operation of Grosse Pointe Cable: Those are real risks.

t is difficult enough just to reach someone with authority at Wayne County Community College without worrying about getting answers to questions about that beleaguered institution.

Five telephone calls from the Grosse Pointe News finally produced one available source of information who was reported to be in a closed meeting but was asked to call back.

What we sought were the answers to the questions raised by a Detroit News story about the Nov. 8 millage election seeking a three-year renewal of the current 1 mill levy that provides one-third of the financial support for WCCC.

The story had reported the school's denial of student concerns that the school might be forced to close. Student worries had been aroused by radio and TV ads about the the vote but also citing the possibility the college would have to close. However, college spokesman George

Swan III reassured the students, the newspaper story said, by telling them "the college is in no danger of closing, we are in the black and we have our accreditation through the year 2000."

However, accreditation is not the problem. The problem is that the current millage authorization expires in two years, which means that if the renewal fails on Nov. 8, WCCC will lose at least a third of its funding after 1996.

And if WCCC doesn't need the millage, which Swan's cheerful comment seems to indicate, why is the college asking for its

Edsel & Eleanor Ford House imports workers to fix roof

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

It stands to reason — when an old-world-style structure needs repair, the custodians look to the old-world for craftsmen to do the job, and that's exactly what's happening at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores.

In order to repair and replace the slate roof of the estate's Gate Lodge, estate officials called on the services of C. Rogers Roofing out of Swindon, England, in the Cotswold area of the country.

"This type of roofing goes on in the west of England all the time," said company owner Colin Rogers. "There are stone quarries in England that have this kind of stone. It's really the best kind of stone for roofs. It's meant to last a couple hundred years."

The lodge was built at the same time the house was erected, between 1926 and 1929. Estate officials noticed that the stone was beginning to deteriorate, and decided to replace the roof.

"It's the cold Michigan winters that does it," said Rogers. "It gets a lot colder here than it does in England. The tiles get wet, the water is absorbed into them, then it gets cold, the water freezes and causes the tiles to break apart. When I came over and looked at the tiles on the roofs, I could tell that they came from at least six different quarries in England. The quality of the stone in the tiles is not always the same."

In order to solve the problem, Rogers decided to use stone from a quarry in France. As a proud Englishman, he finds this a little galling.

"You see, when the two countries were first formed, a stone seam stretched from England to France," said Rogers. "The hardest stone I could find, the kind that can best survive in your climate, is on the French side of the seam."

Rogers and his crew got the job on the recommendation of the quarry contacted by estate officials. They have worked all across England and done jobs for many notable people including prince Charles and princess Diana.

"Steve, me son-in-law, has done two jobs for Princess Di," said Rogers. "We also did work on Prince Charles' Highgrove House in Gloucestershire. Let me say this, It's been my experience that it's the people with the most wealth who are the easiest to deal with. I've met many members of the Ford family, and found them all to be down to earth."

There are only a few companies in England that can do this kind of work, Rogers said. The real difficulty is learning to size the roof. The number and sizes of the stone tiles used in any job must be ordered in advance, he explained.

If a roofer orders too many of the wrong size, either the company or the house owner will end up paying for them, which can be very expensive. If too few tiles are ordered, the job takes much longer to complete, also an expensive proposition.

Are angels for real or just a whimsical wish?

The tiles used in a roofing job aren't all the same size. Tiles begin at 24 inches and decrease in size until the reach 7 inches. The 24-inch tiles are placed along the eaves portion of the roof. The 7-inch tiles are placed at the roof's ridge, its highest point.

Building a stone tile roof is complicated, Rogers said. First the timber is laid. Then felt is placed over the roof timbers. Battons are placed over the felt, then counter battons are put into place over the battons to hold the tiles in place.

These days stone roofers must undergo an apprentice-ship, but it wasn't like that when Rogers got into the business.

"When I was 18, I did me national service with me local regiment," Rogers said. "We spent two years in Cyprus, which in the 1950s, was dangerous duty. When I got out of the army, I had about a dozen jobs. Didn't really like any of them, but a fellow asked if I wanted to try roofing, and I thought I'd give it a go. Traveled all over the U.K., and met a man named Baxter, who got me involved in this. He taught me for 12 years. He taught me about stone and how to determine the size and number of tiles needed for a roof. Been doing it ever since."

While Rogers and his crew have travelled all over the U.K. on jobs, the Ford project is the first time they've worked outside the country.

"I'd always been afraid that if I'd worked in the U.S., I'd get spoiled," Rogers said. "You people have so much going for you. The average working man here has twice what the average worker in England has."

Rogers was also, in his words, "dumbfounded" to see the construction at the Ford estate.

"It's like working as home," said Rogers. "Didn't think you had construction like this over here."

Rogers and his crew are living in Gate Lodge, which has two cottages. He admits that they had to fix their own roof first. He is spending only two weeks in the States, while his crew will spend more time here, until cold weather prevents further construction. The crew will return in the spring to complete the job.

Estate officials declined to say how much the job is costing.

While over here, Rogers and his crew had the chance to see their first American football game.

"This football, it's a man's game, I can say that," Rogers said. "I thought rugby players were mad, but in the first 15 minutes of play, I saw three men carried off the field."

Rogers also had the chance to visit Greenfield Village. What impressed him most were the giant steam locomotive engines. His father built railroad engines in England, but they never got as big as the ones he saw in Dearborn.

"They must have used five stokers to keep those ore-hauling engines going," Rogers said. "Those engines were absolutely huge. I couldn't believe it?"

He completed his residency and internship in internal medicine at Providence Hospital. He served a preceptorship in allergy and immunology with Dr. Stanley W. Insley in the Maccabees Building.

Dr. Briggs was a captain in the U.S. Army during World War II, serving in the European Theater from 1944-46. After the war, he was associated with Dr. Norman W. Brey in practicing internal medicine and allergy. Drs. Brey and Briggs practiced in the Broderick Tower after the Maccabees Building was sold in 1962. When Dr. Brey retired in 1973, Dr. Briggs moved his office to St. Clair Shores.

He chose a medical career because he believed in service to others; he often reduced his charges or did not charge the indigent. After bypass surgery in 1984, Dr. Briggs closed the St. Clair Shores office, but returned to part-time practice in 1986 at the Providence Medical Building with Dr. Robert E. Weinstein.

Dr. Briggs was director of medical education at Providence in Detroit and was president-elect of the medical staff in 1964. He accepted the appointment as the first medical and a son, David Beste. director and director of graduate medical education at Providence Hospital in Southfield.

During his tenure, Dr. Briggs was very involved in the building of the new hospital in Southfield. He retired from these positions in 1971 despite a petition signed by the medical staff requesting that he con-

The Farmer's torecasts

The sun rose today at 5:40 a.m. It is scheduled to set at 5:30 p.m. And the moon and Mars are in conjunction with each other. At least that's what the 1994 edition of The Old Farmer's Almanac says.

Since this column was written a few days ago, I don't actually know whether the sun came up exactly at 5:40 this morning, but I will check to make sure it descends at 5:30 this afternoon.

(More recent forecasts listed in the daily newspapers say the sun rose at 7:26 a.m. and will set at 7:21 p.m.)

With the release this month of the 1995 edition of The Old Farmer's Almanac, I decided to see how the 1994 forecasts have turned out and what's ahead for next year. Of the 1994 predictions of local interest, the Almanac said plant pathologists predicted that "blight-resistent" elms, the Frontier and Prospector, would be available in 1994. If the elm has made a comeback, it doesn't appear to have happened here. Every elm in Grosse Pointe that has succumbed to Dutch elm disease has been replaced with a maple of other species, not a Frontier or Prospector.

But the Almanac was correct in forecasting that gambling would be more accepted, citing a nun who won $1 million in the California lottery. She had lived under a vow of poverty for 54 years. She will use the winnings to build a retirement

The Almanac was also right in predicting the popularity of lunch boxes (thermos included) from the '50s and '60s after a Dudley Do-Right box fetched $2,000 at a Christie's auction.

On the food front, however, some of the Almanac's forecasts for 1994 have not come to fruition. Caribbean food has not become "the next rage" and I did not see the new microwavable french fry that maintains its crispness. Well, there are still three months left in 1994.

The year 1994 is supposed to be when smoking reached par with spitting on the bad habits list. This may explain why ashtrays are predicted to become collectibles in 1995.

In 1995, we can look forward to higher bowling scores.

"Science has dedicated its efforts to producing a high-tech bowling ball," says the Almanac. "A resin additive allows for better reaction on lanes, which means the ball 'grabs' the wood lane and 'hooks' harder into the the pins, and that means more strikes for bowlers.

Cross your fingers.

Next year it will cost $225,000 for a regular citizen (of Russia, I assume) to be mummified in Moscow at the same lab that keeps Vladamir Lenin looking his circa 1924.

Caribbean cuisine is supposed to remain (?) popular in 1995 and the hot new seafood products, like beer and cola, predicted to be so popular in 1994 (yet were not) will be out in 1995.

"Impoverished nobility" is the near future in home decor.

This look features patchwork fabrics mixed with stripes on overupholstered armchairs, Grandma's treasures dragged from the attic and mixed with different eras," says the Almanac for 1995.

Who let the Almanac's people into my house?

In fashion, women may look back on 1995 as the Year of the Hat.

Miss Manners believes backpacks and canoes will replace place settings and matching towels with marrying types registering at Eastern Mountain Sports or L.L. Bean.

The Old Farmer's Almanac doesn't offer guarantees on these forecasts, but their advertisers do.

"I'll send you $5 FREE if you don't agree my ALL NAT-URAL beer is better than any will be salmon pastrami. Clear commercial beer you've ever tasted," says Tom Lee, president of Bierhaus International Inc., a homebrewing kit com-

"From practically dead to vibrantly alive," says W.Y. from Entoka, Ga., in describing Dynogen, the miracle hormone that makes plants ZOOM! Dynogen, of course has a moneyback guarantee.

"Boost your mental energy and feel more alive than you have in years," claim the folks at Gingko Biloba. "100 percent guaranteed satisfaction if you are not pleased" with their remarkable herbal extract.

Every year I check The Old Farmer's Almanac for information, entertainment, predictions and even the advertisements. I don't know if I will test one of the money-back guarantees, but I will make sure that the moon and Jupiter are aligned with each other on Sept. 29, 1995, and that the sun sets on that day precisely at 5:31 p.m.

A blockbuster of a sale

Liz Carpenter has lived on Mapleton in the Farms for 18 years but she's never seen anything like it:

the all-out, no-holdsbarred garage sale that took over her oneblock-long street a few weeks back.

The way she tells it, everything but the kitchen sink was "on the block," to coin another out rageous FYI pun. No, better include the sink, since "someone even opened up his house and put a 'For Sale by Owner' sign on it," says Liz.

Ken Eatherly

A carnival atmosphere prevailed at the great Mapleton outdoor market, maybe helped a bit by the keg someone put out for adult refreshment at one of the stops.

Amid the many small sales, there was at least one biggie. "One couple, Hugh and Frieda Johnston, sold their 1978 Chevy Caprice from the curb," Liz reports.

There was a bit of competi-tion: A check of the garage sale ads in this paper for Sept. 15 showed, beside Mapleton's, another street-long sale in St. Clair Shores, three "multi-family" sales, two five-family sales, two four-family sales, two three-family sales and four twofamily sales.

Maybe something was in the air that week. Like the soft rustle of dollars cascading into empty cigar boxes.

Pass the water and Alka-Seltzer

The honor of the Pointes was upheld and Sharon Van-DenBrouck of the Woods took the prize when she was named Queen of Hot Spices at Roseville's Thai House restaurant was the only Pointer there," says Sharon.

What did she have to do to win? Just eat a few dishes of incredibly hot-spicy Thai food, containing at least 25 peppers, that would take the paint off a battleship, according to contest rules set up by Chef Pipop Leodhuvaphan, who goes by the title of "Mr. Hot Cooked."

"Thai cuisine offers some of the hottest spicy food in the world and Thais chew hot peppers like candy mints," says

Besides getting new respect from her son, Eli Van-Brouck Wilson, who is 6 and has been known to munch a few hot peppers himself, Sharon also won the privilege of dining free at Thai House once a month for a year.

Her husband, Larry Wilson, may not be sharing her choice on the menu. "His ears get red There were at least 90 peo- when he eats spicy food," she

U.S. 'help' frequently yields nada

The night American troops were expected to invade Ku-I couldn't sleep. With m stomach in knots, I lay in the darkness and thought of the bloodshed then widely predicted on both sides.

It's hard to believe now that Kuwait is already two or three international incidents ago, the rhetoric and yellow ribbons long forgotten. The euphoria evaporated like morning mist and we have slunk back into our isolationist cave.

Our history of isolationism is a long and proud one: In the 1930s, the Secretary of War was an isolationist who refused to heed George Marshall's pleas for a military buildup. Now we have a military and cannot decide once and for all how to use

The international vertue du jour is Haiti. But vitriol, rather than the flag, is flying; there are no yellow ribbons for Haiti. We vilified President Clinton for conducting foreign policy by popularity poll; now we reward him in the polls for defying public opinion.

No question about it - military means should be the absolute last resort. But even this pacifist wannabe can see that sometimes you have to flex

A solid argument can be made that whenever we invade a country for its own good, we get bogged down and nothing changes over the long haul. Certainly our adventurism in Central America and the Caribbean tends to prove the point. We have mucked about in Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Honduras, the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Grenada, El Salvador, Cuba — and that's just the ones I can think of offhand. None of them can point to any improvements in their condition as a result of our "help."

Nancy Parmenter

But even those misbegotten missions contain a lesson. Just because we got it wrong the first 20 times doesn't mean we shouldn't keep trying to get it right. We're a nation of optimists, idealists, believers in the perfectability of humankind's situation. That's a big part of what defines us as Americans.

Can a nation whose citizens are the world's foremost charitable volunteers, whose communities idealize their role in the upbringing of all children, whose families pitch in to help disaster victims, refuse to help its neighbor nations? The isolationist litmus test ("what is there in this situation that is worth shedding one drop of American blood?") fails the generosity test.

Besides, there's a new element in foreign policy now. The Carter era, the Helsinki accords, legitimized human rights as a bargaining chip in the diplomatic poker game.

Now, instead of imposing military solutions for our economic benefit (I believe that is what "American interests" means), we use the military as peacekeepers, to protect the people. It's a neat-sounding idea (especially in the abstract), and especially when combined with diplomacy, as Clinton did more or less successfully last week.

But the carrot-and-stick thing doesn't always work very well (look at Bosnia) and it's always difficult to sort out just who the people are who need and are worthy (by what yardstick?) of our protection.

No wonder we retreat into isolationism. It's a lot easier. But isolationism ignores the Giant Factor. By virtue of the United States' sheer size and wealth, we dominate the neighborhood. We're the giant at the picnic. Cubans and Haitians don't flee to Mexico or Martinique, though they're close by and speak the language. We are involved, like it or not.

Hey, if Marion Barry can be redeemed, so, perhaps, can the Haitians, with their habit of official violence. And if there's a possibility that we can help, then we have to try.

But it sure is complicated.

Manna from heaven? A windfall? Sounds like the death of a long-lost uncle, or maybe winning the lottery.

It's such fun to imagine oneself the recipient of instant wealth. Every time the lottery jackpot builds up, even though I never buy a ticket, I work out in my mind what I'll do with my millions. The hardest part is deciding whether to give some of it to the kids - too much wealth too early wouldn't be good for them, you know.

This time it's our fair cities which will be instant millionaires. The cable system sale will leave every participating city with at least one or two unexpected millions.

What will they spend it on? Nifty dilemma, isn't it?

There are lots of options, but one problem cries out to be noticed in this summer of polluted lakewater. Grosse Pointe Park Mayor Palmer Heenan had it right when he suggested sewer

Tea and empathy

A friend has been talking about this wonderful organization with which she became involved a few years ago. I had been shopping with her on several occasions when she would detour and grab an item to put in her stash of Chistmas presents to be donated to the group. A couple of weeks ago she invited me to attend the group's annual tea in hopes that I would be hooked and inspired enough to join.

There was no contest. Within half an hour I was a goner. I knew I wanted to become associated with these committed women. "They" are the members of the Boys & Girls Clubs of Southeastern Michigan Women's Association. Every woman at the tea wore a smile and was devoted to the organization and its programs. Newcomers were greeted cordially; and our questions were answered with enthusiasm.

This is not just a group of suburban housewives dressed in their finery, sipping tea and devouring tiny sandwiches. These women are caring individuals joined in their efforts to make this part of the world a sunnier place for children who have seen too much darkness. The brochure provided pertinent facts concerning the purpose, basic programs and an overview of operations, as well as documenting the ongoing frustrations of organizations attempting to make a difference in a city that is struggling for survival.

The Boys & Girls Clubs have a devoted staff of employees and volunteers who are "committed to providing wholesome, character-building activities for as many children as possible." They present talks with teachers, policemen, sports heroes and those role models whose successes can inspire these impressionable young people. There are programs in physical activities, arts and crafts, and educational and career development.

The Detroit area has seven locations throughout the city and suburbs. The clubs provide boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 15 an opportunity to have fun, to learn and to value themselves as well as education. Trained professionals and volunteers join in bringing together children of all ages, backgrounds, creeds and colors. Their purpose is "to help young people grow and develop so they can be all that they can be." The clubs are open Tuesday through Friday after school as well as on Saturdays.

Fortunately, we in Grosse Pointe have many activities for our children. Just a holler away the situation is very different. Our attention is needed by these young people and this fine organization. It is extremely difficult to lure us into the inner-city to do hands-on volunteer work. We are afraid and that's not all bad and it keeps us alert, but burying our heads in the sand isn't the answer. The Boys & Girls Clubs, like so many organizations, is constantly challenged in seeking financial as well as volunteer help.

There is an opportunity here for those people who don't wish to travel far from their safe environment, but want to offer tangible assistance. They can write a check, attend a fundraiser and choose involvement that is comfortable for them. Even if it isn't a time in your life when you have spare time on your hands, financial support is badly needed and the opportunity to offer a child a chance for a better life is extremely rewarding.

Supervised parties busted?

To the Editor:

This past week - homecoming week at Grosse Pointe South High School was an outstanding display of South students' hard work, creativity, and self control. For weeks, students from each class have been meeting during offschool hours planning and putting together floats, banners, and posters. Other students have been spending countless hours honing their musical talents to perform at Friday's float parties and Saturday's football game. Football players have been practicing since August in good weather and bad, with sore muscles and plenty of sweat.

Kudos to you all for your self determination, spirit, and talent.

Sour grapes to those of the community who wish to put a stop to these activities.

On Friday evening float party night — my husband and I attended two of the four float parties held at private residences. The homeowners had given advance notice to the surrounding neighbors and the police that these would be parent-supervised activities, but warned that there might be greater than normal noise and traffic. We arrived at the first party around 9:30 p.m. hoping to hear and see one of our sons perform with his band. Unfortunately, the Grosse Pointe Park police had preceded us and had told the homeowner, in no uncertain terms, that the noise had to stop. Then they thoroughly cased the party even though there were plenty of adults in attendance. The second party also had a visit from the Grosse Pointe Park police, with the same demand. Our police force was probably reacting to citizen complaints, but this letter might not have been necessary if our citizens and law enforcement had used a little common sense and tact, and requested a reduction in noise rather than an end

Wake up, Grosse Pointe! We can't just roll up the sidewalks at 9 at night. The teenagers in our community deserve the opportunity to have good clean fun in a controlled atmosphere. This also applies to Friday night football, as well. If you provide teenagers with outlets in a supervised setting, you're going to have far fewer problems in the long run.

In an age when violence and drugs are synonymous with teenage life, Grosse Pointers should be rejoicing that the majority of our teenagers are involving themselves in worthwhile pursuits that result in minor inconvenience to a few.

John F. Breitmeyer III

John F. Breitmeyer III, former vice president of marketing for Health Alliance Plan (HAP), died Friday, Sept. 23, 1994, from complications following a second liver transplant. He was 42.

Born in Mount Clemens, Mr. Breitmeyer was a resident of Grosse Pointe Park.

He joined HAP in 1979 and was named director of marketing and sales in 1986. He implemented a widespread marketing and community outreach program that added recognition, value and goodwill to HAP.

His success helped HAP grow from 207,000 members in 1986 to more than 460,000 members in 1994. In 1991, he was named vice president of marketing for HAP and vice president of managed care for the Henry Ford Health System.

"The entire Henry Ford family is saddened by John's death," said Gail L. Warden, chief executive officer of Henry Ford Health System, the parent company of HAP. "He was a friend, colleague, and indomitable spirit. He fought the fight of his illness with the same vigor he gave to the organization, the community and his family. His death leaves a great void.

"In every organization there are people who leave a significant imprint, both on the organization and its employees. John was one of these people. He knew and cared for so many people. He wanted to make Henry Ford and society a better place to be. I think he did that.'

"John was our spiritual leader for volunteerism," said Roman Kulich, chief operating officer of HAP. "He set the tone for HAP becoming a community-focused organization, which helped HAP attain its leadership role in managed care. His presence will be felt long after his departure.

Mr. Breitmeyer's resume lists more than 30 civic, charitable and professional organizations to which he belonged. They include the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, Leadership Detroit, Michigan Coalition for Human Rights, the Father Clement Kern Foundation, the Southwest Detroit Business Association, the Detroit Urban League, the Greater Detroit Roundtable of Christians and Jews, Joy of Jesus, the NAACP, the Founders Society Junior Council of the cal Group, before joining HAP He is survived by his wife, Leslie; a daughter, Eve; a son, Alex; his parents, Kathleen and John Breitmeyer II; and a sister, Jane Adams.

A memorial service was held Wednesday, Sept. 28, at Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian Church in Detroit.

Memorial contributions may be made to the John F. Breitmeyer Memorial Fund, Health Alliance Plan, 2850 W. Grand Blvd., Detroit, Mich. 48202.

Mark VIII shows just how good a domestic car can be

The early morning sun on a September Sunday made the Lincoln Mark VIII parked on University Place look like the amethyst which likely inspired the paint.

It reflected the light and really was a jewel. An hour later, the color was not as interesting - gray tones began to dominate.

The exterior colors of Lincoln's personal luxury coupes are unusual and often quite beautiful. There's a grayish silvery moss green that also looks better in some light than it does at other times.

Then there's the French vanilla Mark VIII we drove recently. That's my name for it. "Eggnog" would work, too you can guess where my true * interests lie.

What was even more bodacious than the deep, "pearlized" finish on the outside was the matching leather trim inside. Seats, parts of the instrument panel and the kidskin-soft sport steering wheel were wrapped in leather or leather-like material to match the creamy off-white exterior. The thick, soft carpeting and even the floor mats were off-white. It was totally seductive.

Especially because it was brand new, inside and out. In the course of a short week, we watched that delicous interior pick up fingerprints and smudges and signs of life. Actually the leather seats maintained their composure admirably, but the door and centerconsole trims and the carpeting quickly soiled. I also surmised that this is not a car to take to the nursery. An oversize chrysanthemum was too tall to put in the trunk, so it was placed gently on the floor in front of the front passenger seat. The plant's calling card — a few pieces of dirt from the bottom of the container — made its mark on the light-colored mat. Keeping track of this kind of thing might make some owners

Would it be worth a halfhour of your time every week to keep this creampuff looking like new? We conclude: yes.

Lincoln has added a new cream color to the 1995 model-year palette for the Mark VIII. Other refinements include stainless steel-tipped exhaust pipes and new high-level audio system.

Even if you have to hire someone else to do it. But don't take a French vanilla Mark VIII on any serious work outings.

It's not only the Mark VIII's color that attracts. It's the whole vehicle. Since its complete re-do a couple of years ago, the slippery Mark has inspired volumes from auto writers and others who just can't seem to heap enough praise on it. It is a design benchmark: the driver-oriented instrumentation - redesigned for 1995 on its wrap-around panel; the soft aero exterior lines that say, "I know I look good"; the vertical grille.

'The grille is one of the Mark's most distinctive features," said a colleague. Maybe. I think it's the beautiful integration of all its elements that makes it work. And I think this car represents how good domestic cars can be. It is very American in its softer approach to luxury. It doesn't have the design and functional severity of German luxury cars or the blandness of Japanese luxury models. It has a sunny person-based writer and Studebaker enthusiast who retired from Ford Motor Co. a few years back, said he puts cars in one of three categories: happy, acceptable and unhappy. He said he did a review of Ford of Europe's Mondeo (it inspired the new 1995 Contour/Mystique series) after taking it for a lengthy spin in Ireland and pronounced it "happy."

"I'm not sure Ford liked my terminology, but that's the way I felt about it," Windecker said. He added that he doesn't care for the grille on the U.S. version. Looks something like a bluegill's mouth, he said.

The Mark VIII, complete with anti-lock brakes and dual air bags, is powered by a 4.6-liter four-cam aluminum V-8 engine. It develops 280 hp, and the car can take off as if turbocharged. But those horses are so ably tamed by a 4-speed automatic with electronic overdrive, you never have the feeling you're in a muscle car. There is a power lag or soft spot at 30 mph.

According to Lincoln-Mercury, the Mark's computer-controlled ride and suspension system automatically adjusts vehicle level and height based on speed. For 1995 the independent rear suspension uses rebound springs for improved handling and ride.

Options for the luxury sports coupe include a trunk-mounted compact disc player with 10-CD capacity and shuffle play; electrochromic automatically dimming inside-outside mirrors, and electronic traction assist for greater stability on slippery surfaces.

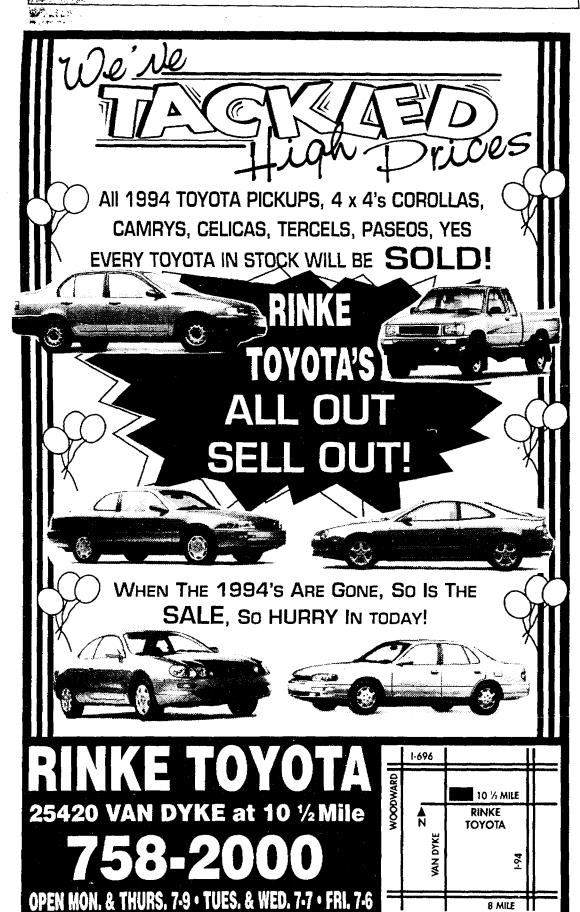

Along with avoiding trips to the garden center in your new Mark VIII, better stay away from the drive-thru lanes of fast food outlets unless you are alone and not too thirsty. There is only one cupholder in the Mark VIII on the center console and it's too dainty for much more than a small cup of coffee. If yours has the new cream leather interior, avoid chocolate ice cream, too.

Prices for the Mark start around $38,000. For the sake of comparison, the Cadillac Eldorado begins at $38,000, the least expensive Mercedes-Benz coupe is around $61,000, the Lexus SC 400 is about $47,500 and the Buick Riviera is $28,000.

Stretch Hyundai?

Hyundai has re-designed its Sonata sedan for 1995. The new model rides on a longer wheelbase and wider track. Engineers added rigidity to the body shell, and noise, vibration and harshness have been reduced with laminated sandwich panels, bonded sound absorbers and additional carpet underpinnings. The base engine is a 2.0-liter 137-hp four. A 3.0-liter V-6 rated at 142 hp is optional. Dual air bags are standard on all models base, GL and GLS. All models carry a three-year/36,000-mile bumper-to-bumper war-

Clinical depression is . . . . Lucy Elle of Clinton Township searched for words to describe

"It's a lack of emotion," she said. "It's a lack of any feeling. It's blackness. It's like sleepwalking. It's doing what needs to be done but not enjoying it. Not crying. Not laughing."

Elle, a 51-year-old former teacher, was diagnosed with depression. She is currently being treated — successfully — for an illness that drained the enjoyment and pleasure from a portion of her life.

Elle has been married for 29 years and is the mother of two grown children. Her first bout with depression began at age

"I was not able to smile. I had a family history of depression, so I sought a psychiatrist and was treated with talk therapy." she said. She felt better apy," she said. She felt better. Ten years later, the depression returned.

"I was perfectly content to lie in bed all day. I'd get up when everyone came home. I put my best face on for other people, but I didn't really want to talk to or see anyone. I didn't want to worry my mother or my husband or children. I hoped each day that the next day would be different," she said.

But the sadness didn't go away. Elle said she went to seven different clinics and psychiatrists.

"I'd feel a little better, so I'd quit going. During those years I was ill, then well, then ill, then well. I've been hospitalized five or six times during the last five years," she said.

She finally found a psychiatrist whom she describes as "wonderful." His diagnosis: bipolar II atypical depression.

"Actress Patty Duke is a well-known similar case," Elle

Depression Screening

National Depression Screening Day is Thursday, Oct. 6. Nearly 2,000 locations nationwide will offer walk-in clients free depression screening tests and information about one of the nation's most treatable mental illnesses.

Henry Ford Cottage Hospital and Bon Secours Healthcare System will cosponsor free, confidential written tests for depression in the lower level boardrooms of Cottage Hospital, 159 Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Screenings will be conducted continuously from 7 to 9 a.m.; 1 to 4 p.m.; and 6 to 8 p.m.

No appointment is necesary.

Participants will get a chance to discuss their test results with a mental health professional.

For more information, call Durstyne Faman of Cottage Hospital at 884-8600, ext. 2537; or Katherin Weiss at Bon Secours Hospital at 343-1910.

tion for the rest of my life to experience wellness. Even

ECT."

Elle is realistic. She said she probably will experience an episode of depression again. "It's a chronic illness. But it's not my fault. And it can be taken care of," she said.

Depressive illness affects the lives of 15 million people and disrupts the lives of their families and friends, according to the National Institute of Mental Health. Depression takes many forms, but clinical depression refers to periods of sadness and tired, hopeless, worthless feelings that last months, even years. Clinical depression is not the temporary blues or the occasional sad moods that everyone experiences after a loss or a disappointment.

Even though depression is one of the most easily and successfully treatable of all mental illnesses, only one in four people with depression actually seek treatment.

Eighty percent of the people with even the most serious forms of depression can improve and return to daily activities, usually within weeks, according to the NIMH.

National Depression Screening Day is sponsored by the American Psychiatric Association and other mental health organizations as part of National Mental Illness Awareness Week, Oct. 3-9.

Last year more than 24,000 people found help as a result of the one-day free screenings held around the nation. Henry Ford Cottage Hospital and Bon Secours Healthcare System will co-sponsor a free screening for adults, adolescents and children on Thursday, Oct. 6, in the lower level boardrooms of Cottage Hospital from 7 to 9 a.m., 1 to 4 p.m., and 6 to 8 p.m. Participants should bring their parking deck tickets for validation.

Last year's one-day program at Cottage Hospital screened 75 people for depression. Of those, 52 were identified as needing help and were referred to professionals.

"Our aim is to provide education about the signs and symptoms of depression," said Katherin D. Weiss, nurse educator of the adolescent mental health unit of Bon Sceours Hospital.

chiatrist with the adolescent unit at Bon Secours, said children and adolescents are not immune from depression. In addition, children often don't have the classic symptoms of depression, he said.

"Sixty to 70 percent of the adolescents who attempt suicide have biological depression," he said. "And teenagers often give up easily. They don't have as many life experiences to fall back on or dip into, to solve their problems. Parents need to educate themselves on how to prevent, recognize and get help for adolescents who are depressed."

man said. "It was triggered by back injuries due to two auto accidents. Depression is usually triggered by something stressful — mental or physical."

Foreman said he was misdiagnosed, at first. Doctors told him he was schizophrenic.

"When you say mental illness, people react like they used to react to lepers," he said. "Only 10 percent of the population really understands what mood disorders are or that they're highly treatable 80 or 90 percent of the time. It usually takes a combination of medicine and talk therapy."

Foreman sees a therapist every four or five weeks. Every two months, he sees a psychiatrist who checks and adjusts his medication — lithium carbonate and an antipsychotic drug.

Weiss emphasized the need for people who think they're depressed to seek help.

"Many people are unable or unwilling to seek help. If they have a physical illness, they will seek a physician. People support them. They're not told, 'It's your own fault, or you're lazy, or it's all in your head,'" she said.

People don't realize how easily and effectively depression can be treated, she said.

"There's no need to live your life depressed," Elle said.
"There's lots of help out there. Now is the best time to become mentally ill. If one medication doesn't work there are others to be tried. If the first doctor isn't agreeable, then move on. Don't settle for the first pill, the first doctor."

United Way kicks off annual Torch Drive

More than 2,000 people gathered at Hart Plaza recently for the kickoff of the 46th annual United Way Torch Drive.

Stanley A. Seneker, Ford president and chief financial of-ficer and 1994 Torch Drive General Chair, John Lobbia, chairman and CEO, Detroit Edison, and United Way board chairman, and seven United Way Torchlighters lit the 54foot tall United Way torch at Woodward and Jefferson.

"We light the United Way torch on behalf of the thousands of United Way volun-

The Pastor's Corner Religious right

By the Rev. David H. Wick Grosse Pointe Baptist Church

Since you've been hearing and reading about the religious right lately, and Baptists are assumed to be part of that dangerous cartel, maybe it's time for you to meet some actual local representatives of the Baptist tradition.

There are more than 100 varieties of Baptist denominations, not counting the thousands of churches that call themselves Baptist but affiliate with no other churches. The North American Baptist (N.A.B.) denomination with which Grosse Pointe Baptist is affiliated was originally German Baptist. The denomination began in the United States in the 1840's in Philadelphia when the northern Baptists (who split from the southern Baptists because of the slavery issue) wanted to do something about the beer-swilling, hell-raising German immigrants who were coming to work in the textile

They brought a pastor over from Germany, and his efforts succeeded. The original church, now called Fleischmann Memorial Baptist after him, still ministers at the corner of Ninth and Luzerne in the Hunting Park neighborhood. The current pastor, Jim Correnti, is a graduate of Julliard and of the Reformed Episcopal Seminary.

Other German Baptist churches were planted in Pennsylvania and New York, and conversion growth was augmented by the addition of Germans who had already been Baptists in the old country. Many of these were Germans from the Ukraine, not a few of whom migrated to avoid serving in the Russian army. These draft-dodging Germans settled mainly in the Dakotas and western Canada.

In the Detroit area, the N.A.B. drew strength from German craftsmen who immigrated after World War I and II to work in the automobile industry and building trades. Today there are 65,000 North American Baptists in 350 churches in the United States and Canada. That's about as many southern Baptists as there are in the state of Vermont.

The N.A.B. Conference supports a Bible college and seminary in Edmonton, Alberta, and the N.A.B. Seminary in Sioux Falls, S.D. N.A.B. Seminary was founded in 1848 as the German Department of Rochester Divinity School, and moved to Sioux Falls in 1949. It is fully accredited and serves a denominationally diverse student body. Dr. Marvin Faust, a Grosse Pointe Woods resident, currently serves as president of the seminary board of directors. The most famous N.A.B. Seminary theologian is Walter Rauschenbusch, recognized as the founder of the "Social Gospel" movement in the early 1900s.

I'm clearly not using "famous" here in the same sense as you would in relation to the Rolling Stones, but theologians know him and read him, and his writings had a profound influence on improving social services to the poor and oppressed.

The German aspect of N.A.B. hasn't been generally important for 40 years or more. I'm ethnically Scandinavian, and they even let me preach. Today there are African-American, Romanian, Polish, Chinese, Korean, Mexican-American, Vietnamese, and Cambodian churches in the N.A.B.

The N.A.B. heritage treasures the old Baptist concept of "soul liberty," which is the belief in the right of every believer to interpret for himself or herself what the Scripture says. At bottom, "soul liberty" is a belief in the reality of the Holy Spirit, because anarchy would result in our churches if the Holy Spirit were not real and did not lead us to similar conclusions. In the N.A.B., creeds and statements of faith are typically "descriptive" rather than "prescriptive."

The N.A.B. heritage, thanks to the German influence, places a high value on scholarship and intellectual endeavor. At our seminary, I was not taught what to think, but how to think. At least that was the idea. The heritage is also pietist, emphasizing the importance of personal holiness. Above everything else, the N.A.B. heritage is evangelical, teaching the necessity of personally trusting in Christ's atoning work on the cross as the sole basis for salvation, and the importance of preaching, living, and sharing the Gospel message so that people might find salvation in Christ.

This is a thumbnail account of who we are at Grosse Pointe Baptist. I wouldn't say we would shun the religious right label, but I hope this brief description challenges some of the prejudicial stereotypes associated with that label.

I invite you to come and see for yourself. If we are dangerous, it's my prayer and hope that it's because the Gospel is, after all, dynamite. It is the power of God unto salvation, a power that changes lives and the world in unpredictable but wonderful ways.

One woman who made a difference for doctors.

Elizabeth Blackwell was the first woman to receive a medical degree in the United States. However, no hospital would let her practice because of her gender so she chose to open a small clinic in a slum district of New York City. Just four years later, she and two woman doctors she had hired opened the New York Infirmary for Women and Children, In 1868. Elizabeth Blackwell founded the Women's Medical College of the New York Infirmary so other women could more easily choose to become doctors of medicine.

One doctor who makes a difference for women.

"In many ways, Family Practice is like old-fashioned medicine – the community doctor that everyone comes to for every kind of health problem. And now we have all the benefits of modern medicine to go along with that personal attention. I think it's the absolute ideal in health care."

> We created WomanWise to enhance the connection between you and the many services available through Henry Ford Health System on the East Side. But we believe the most important relationship in your health care is between you and your doctor. Doctors like Susan Schooley - the first physician her patients come to when they need medical attention.

"Family Practice is personal, primary care. I get to know my patients and they get to know me. We understand each other better. I don't just specialize in a part of their health care ... together, we look at the whole picture."

> Doctor Schooley joined our Family Practice staff in 1991. As a primary care physician, Susan is specially trained to diagnose and treat a wide variety of health problems. Because she develops long-term relationships with her patients, she is more able to understand their lifestyles and spot potential health risks. The focus of Family Practice is communication - promoting health to prevent sickness before it starts. The care is comprehensive, covering all members of the family throughout their lives

"I really enjoy building a lasting relationship with my patients. I recently delivered a baby at Cottage's Family Childbirth Center with three other generations of the family in the room, all of whom are my patients. That's something that is truly unique to Family Practice medicine - the ability to be the primary care physician for an entire family."

> Susan was educated at the University of Massachusetts and is Board Certified in the specialty of Family Practice. Today, she is both a practicing physician and a teacher of physicians training for careers in her field. Because Susan is a part of Henry Ford Health System, she is able to refer her patients to over 2,000 physicians. And like most of our primary care physicians, she practices in conveniently located neighborhood primary care centers so her patients can visit her easily.

"I believe in Family Practice. It's what I've always thought was the best kind of care. It's the reason I became a doctor. And it's what I choose for my own family."

Teachers, performers form Grosse Pointe Academy of Music

By Ronald J. Bernas Assistant Editor

Two well-known local musicians have teamed up to create the Grosse Pointe Academy of Music, a new institution committed to excellence in music instruction.

Jazz pianist Bess Bonnier and organist and harpsichordist Dave Wagner have assembled a team of local professionals who will teach everything from voice to violin and double bass to guitar at the new academy, which has set up operation at the Grosse Pointe Academy, 171 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe

"This all started a couple of years ago," said Wagner, who is also program director at WQRS-FM, the all-classical radio station. "Bess came into the station to record a commercial and we joked about starting an academy here on the east side." "What's so exciting about this," Bonnier said, "is that it's for all ages, and for all levels of proficiency.'

All lessons are 30 minutes of private instruction and can be tailored to jazz or classical styles. Individual instruction will also be given in Braille music.

Kindermusik, a system for teaching preschool students how to play the piano, is also part of the school's offering.

"We have a dream of being a school and not just a studio," Bonnier said. "We will focus, at least in the beginning, on teaching, but eventually we would like to have ensembles performing and a list of people available to perform.'

Eventually master classes and clinics are in the plans, but for now, they want to build up a list of students who are able to commit to a cycle of 36 lessons. Tuition varies, and some faculty members only accept advanced students.

"There is nothing like this on this side of town," Wagner said. "We're real excited about Classes begin Oct. 3. For more information, call the Grosse Pointe Academy of Music at (313) 882-2781.

Quiz Show's' questions are personal ones

By Ronald J. Bernas

If the sign of a good movie is that you find yourself debating themes, character motivations and the film's overall meaning three days after seeing it, then 'Quiz Show" is a great movie.

It is at once both a tense, catand-mouse criminal investigation and a fascinating character study of people who make choices even they don't under-

Director Robert Redford says "Quiz Show" is about America's loss of innocence. About how, after being duped by a television show, Americans started doubting what they were told, a cynicism that fed on itself from the quiz show scandal through the Vietnam War through Watergate and created a disillusioned populace which won't trust anybody.

But the film is more about ideals - personal, family, and, of course, American ideals.

And that point is made from the opening scene when congressional investigator Richard Goodwin (Rob Morrow) ogles a Cadillac, the pinnacle of the American dream, while a salesman humors him by pointing out the finer details. The salesman knows Goodwin will never be able to afford it, he'll only be able to admire it.

The story, for those who didn't live through it, and for those who did, but don't remember the details, deals with "Twenty-One," the most popular television quiz show of the late 50s. Champion Herbie Stempel (John Turturro) had plateaued after several weeks of answering questions nobody terest in him because he was Jewish, unattractive and socially inept.

This being television, and ratings being everything, the producers set out to find someone to unseat Stempel. Someone who better fits the mold of the American ideal They find him in Charles

Van Doren (Ralph Fiennes), son of a Pulitzer Prize-winning poet and much respected professor. The younger Van Doren is a second-rate novelist and a professor who seems to have trouble measuring up to what he thinks his father wants him to Stempel is told to take a dive and, for should have been able to an unclear, he does. When Van swer ("Was Paul Revere's horse Doren becomes a bigger money a mare or a stallion and who winner and a bigger star - apwere the people he rode pearing on the covers of Time with?"). America was losing in- and Life magazines - Stempel starts telling anyone who'll listen that the quiz show is fixed. Because Van Doren is what everyone wants an American to be - handsome, from a good family, witty and charming no one except Goodwin takes the allegations seriously.

What ensues is a cat-andmouse game culminating in congressional hearings in which everyone ends up losing. Van Doren loses the adulation of a nation, Stempel cannot feel good about the pain he caused Van Doren and Goodwin, who aimed too high, feels the loss of unattained goals.

While the film works as a detective story, it works better as a character study. Van Doren allows himself to be manipulated by the producers because he finds he enjoys the fame But he wants respect, too, especially from his father Mark (brilliantly played by Paul Scofield). His downfall comes when he realizes his father didn't

Star power keeps 'Blue Sky' aloft

By Marian Trainor Special Writer

In the opening scenes of "Blue Sky" we wonder how serious-minded Hank Marshall (Tommy Lee Jones), an Army nuclear scientist, chose cracked Southern belle Carly (Jessica Lange) for his wife.

But as the film progresses we agree with his teenage daughter, Becky (Anne Klempe), who remarks to her sister, Alex (Amy Locane), after one of Lange's outbursts: "She's crazy and he's blind. They're perfect for each other." It is, truly, a marriage made in heaven.

Carly, a voluptuous tease, is not only an embarrassment to Hank, but also a serious threat to him because of her behavior. The film opens showing her on a beach in Hawaii sun bathing topless and waving at approaching helicopters, then later performing a seductive flamenco dance for visiting soldiers. She's dynamite, more than the top brass can tolerate, and Hank is transferred to an army base in Alabama.

Carly is outraged when she sees the shabby bungalow that is to be their new home. She has a fit, trashes the furniture, jumps in the car and drives recklessly through the streets. When Hank takes off after her, the girls look at each other and say, "It's starting again."

The situation brightens for Carly when one of the wives on the base invites her to take part in a show they are staging for the officers.

She makes the most of the opportunity and the men can't take their eyes off her. Hank is embarrassed but at the same time he enjoys watching her and having other men watch her. However, when she and Hank's manipulative superior Vince Johnson (Powers Booth) all but seduce each other on the dance floor, Hank throws her in a nearby pool.

Soon after Johnson arranges for Hank to be sent on a disastrous mission and the sub-plot kicks in.

It is the sub-plot that explains the film's title. "Blue Sky" refers to the dangers of nuclear testing which Hank opposes. He is overruled by his superiors.

"Blue Sky" is at once a love

Everything's included isn't it?

It was several years ago, but 1 remember it vividly: 1 was newly divorced, with two young daughters, and of a certain age. I wanted to take a trip and was willing to risk going all by my-

By myself. It seemed like such a big deal at the time. But where, when the world is full of

The choice then was obvious: Club Med, known for catering to singles. Better yet, it was "all-inclusive" — meaning, you pay one price for everything which would help with my budgeting.

And, yes, it worked out just fine. My roommate was a woman from California, also recently divorced, with four children. We had plenty to talk about and had a dandy time.

Back then, scarcely ten years ago, there was little choice in such matters. Club Med was just about the only place I knew where singles would be comfortable and that featured the all-inclusive concept.

These days it is all the rage. No, not being single (although that may seem the case). We mean all-inclusive resorts. And they appeal to everyone - singles, couples and families. But if you don't choose the right one you could be extremely disappointed in your vacation.

To backtrack a bit: The most attractive aspect of an all-inclusive resort is that you pay up front and everything is included. No nickel-and-diming. No having to decide whether you are willing to pay the price every time you want to go windsurfing or snorkeling. No tipping. It's good for the wallet and good for the soul - letting it take a rest from day-to-day decision-making. (The concept should not be confused with American Plan, Modified-American Plan or European Plan, which refer strictly to meal packages.)

By Cynthia Boal Janssens

Club Med launched the allinclusive concept back in 1950 when it opened its first club on the island of Majorca. It was geared to war-weary Europeans looking for low-cost vacations. The housing was in army surplus tents, the staff was international and in those days guests helped cook meals and wash dishes. Since that humble beginning, Club Med has grown to 113 villages in 35 countries - and it has lots of competition.

In the late 1970's, several resorts on the island of Jamaica embraced the all-inclusive concept, but with new angles like limiting their guests to male/ female couples or including liquor in the tab. They were scattered - Sandals in Montego Bay, Couples in Ocho Rios and Hedonism II in Negril and attracted many to this politically troubled but popular island by offering a safe, if somewhat fortified, holiday.

All-inclusive resorts remained a small but distinct part of the Caribbean holiday market until cruising began to boom. People liked being able to buy an all-in-one package, including airfare, and began demanding the same of landbased resorts. The competition became fierce. Now just about every company is offering some kind of all-inclusive product and that's why you have to be very careful in what you

For all of their advantages, all-inclusives aren't for everyone. If you like sightseeing, eating at local restaurants and meeting the natives, you might be better off buying a package at a regular hotel. All-inclusives have not been particularly successful in Hawaii for this very reason: People come to see and explore the islands rather than to stay in one place.

Some considerations:

Is this resort really committed to the all-inclusive concept? The big players right now in warmweather vacations are Club Med, Sandals, SuperClubs, Club Maeva and Jack Tar Villages. They have been in this business for years, but they are different. For example, Club Med is still committed to the pay-one-price, plain-accommodations-for-everyone concept (although its new club on San Salvador is quite luxurious), does not include drinks, is heavily sports-oriented and has an international staff. Conversely, Sandals and the Pineapple Beach Clubs offer a wide range of very nice rooms and suites. much more luxurious rooms (at different prices), include all drinks and the staff is usually

Be careful of resorts that have just switched to all-inclusive. "Everyone who has a failing resort tends to buy a few wind-surfers and a sailboat, and declare itself all-inclusive,' warns Edwina Arnold, a spokeswoman for Club Med. 'So check out such things as does the resort really offer a full sports program, including lessons? Does it have motorized sports (water-skiing and such)."

What type of travelers does the resort attract? The all-inclusive concept tends to confine you to a particular property and the group of guests staying there. The brutal fact is if you are a casual-but-elegant type of person, you may not enjoy dining with folks attired in Tshirts and tank tops.

Resorts such as Hedonism II still cater to the partying singles with such activities as wet T-shirt contests and toga parties while the all-suites Franklyn D. Resort in Runaway Bay, Jamaica, focuses on children, assigning a "Girl Friday" to each family to watch the kiddies on the beach while Mom and Dad head off for a swim.

Half Moon Bay in Antigua caters to a somewhat older clientele than its sister property, Club Antigua. At the former, there is a dress code for dinner, entertainment is "not excessively loud" and ends promptly at 11:30 p.m. while honeymooners can boogie into the wee hours at the latter.

What do you like to do? A good way to make your selection is to choose a club which caters to your special interest. If you are a scuba diver, then Club Med offers free diving at San Salvador in the Bahamas and some other clubs. (Note: Sandals offers free diving at most of its resorts, even if the dive sites aren't particularly good.) If you are a golfer, pick a resort that includes greens fees, preferably at a number of courses. Water sports enthusiasts should look for well-developed beach programs. Tennis buffs would enjoy the program at Half Moon Bay in Antigua which has a resident pro. Skiers will enjoy the Club Med at Copper Mountain, Colo., or perhaps one in Europe.

Many such resorts rely heavily on organized activities to entertain their guests, making it a bit like summer camp. If you like to loll on the beach, make sure there is one.

What do you want to pay? Most all-inclusives, like huge cruise ships, cater to the middle-of-the-road vacationer. But if you are into luxury, there are some excellent choices: Jalousie Plantation on St. Lucia, Jumby Bay Island and Curtain Bluff on Antigua, and Ciboney Ocho Rios in Jamaica are all definitely upscale. Or be really exotic and head for Bedarra Island on the Great Barrier Reef of Australia with its 16 villas.

Be aware of extras: Are alcoholic drinks included? Wine with meals? Is there a surcharge for special entrees or premium brands of liquor? Airfare? Water sports? Scuba diving? Golf? Lessons? Tips? Some resorts promise more than they actually deliver, while others go so far as to throw in cigarettes.

Are you taking children along? All-inclusives can be an excellent choice for families, because of the controlled pricing and a wide range of activities. Several clubs run children's programs, but be sure they are offered at the time you will be there. Club Med even has "Baby Clubs" at some properties for ages four months to two years. Teenagers, especially, like being able to keep busy with tennis, sailing and snorkeling. Some clubs cater only to adults.

What are the dining options? Some resorts rely heavily on buffets and communal tables, while others offer a choice of restaurants with menus and

Jarvi brings new life to Tchaikovsky and Brahms works

In the season's first regular concert last Thursday, DSO music director Neeme Jarvi presented only two works in a program that proved well worth the listen-

The little-known Suite No. 2 by Tchaikovsky opened and was followed by the alltime familiar favorite, Piano Concerto No. 1 by Brahms with pianist Horacio Gutier-

Both performances provided new insights along with old satisfactions.

The first movement of Tchaikovsky's suite is a curiosity in that its melodic theme encodes the name of family. The result is a melody of random notes. The discovery of the performance is that even a random series of notes sounds wonderful in a Tchaikovsky orchestration when performed by a conductor and orchestra possessing the genius for giving them

While the suite as a whole does not match the emotional and melodic appeal of Tchaikovsky's better-known works, there is much to enjoy in its diverse moments. A lively, bombastic burlesque, a dreamlike waltz reflecting the innocence of childhood, and a wild dance with devilish fiddling sequences all held the listener's attention in the orchestra's gorgeous execution of the rich score.

Hearing the well-known Brahms concerto once again, it was hard to believe that its first performance was criticized for unorthodox balance between piano and orchestra. Jarvi maintained exquisite control allowing, Gutierrez' brilliant performance to shine through while still projecting the full scope of the total work.

Gutierrez has power to spare but uses it with supreme discrimination, shading and phrasing the Brahmsian themes and harmonies with high artistry. Taking the second movement with gio tempo, he and Jarvi gave it a loving, hymn-like quality in a contrast that greatly enhanced the more dramatic opening "maestoso" and closing "rondo."

If there was a primary climax to the performance, it was probably the short but exciting cadenza that occurs surprisingly late in the last movement. It punctuated the concluding passages with a dramatic moment that the pianist integrated seamlessly into the performance.

North tailback runs wild against Shamrocks

Sports Editor Grosse Pointe North athletic director Tom Gauerke was walking toward the field to congratulate the Norsemen's football team for its victory over East Detroit when he was stopped by a couple of young-

"Can we get No. 22's auto-

"Is he going to be a pro someday?"

No. 22 is North tailback Eric Peters and it's no wonder the kids were impressed. Peters impressed a lot of people with his record-breaking performance in North's 41-0 victory over the Shamrocks.

Peters' five touchdowns on runs of 43, 27, 32, 38 and 42 four that he shared with Steve Meathe (1993) and Duane Johnson (1970). Peters had four touchdowns in a game in 1993 and matched the total a week ago against L'Anse Creuse.

His 330 yards in 20 carries shattered the old mark of 235 yards set by Fred Schultz against Lakeview in 1982. Schultz carried the ball a

"He was outstanding, wasn't he?" said North coach Frank Sumbera after Peters ran over, through and away from the Shamrocks' defenders.

"But the offensive line really came off the ball and stayed with their blocks. Eric had some nice holes. He was in full stride once he hit the secondary another gear."

Linemen Donny Tocco, Kevin Halicki, Ryan Ruttan, Tom Zorwick and Tim Northey and tight end Joe Slomski gave Peters the chance to get into the open field where he left East Detroit tacklers grasping for air in a performance that the Lions' Barry Sanders would have been proud of.

'We've had some fine runners here, but they've been more power runners," Sumbera said. "Johnson was a power runner with great speed, but he ran over people. Meathe was a good one, too, but they didn't explode like Eric does. He finds a hole and cuts, spins, twists and then scores the touchdown. He has all the moves. If a DB doesn't stay close to him, he'll never get him."

The Norsemen finished with 431 yards rushing, only six short of the school record set last year against Grosse Pointe

It took North only three plays to get on the scoreboard against the winless Shamrocks.

Fullback Dan Shefferly picked up 13 yards on the first play from scrimmage and Peters had a three-yard gain before he went around right end and raced 43 yards for the touchdown. Steve Champine then added the first of his five extra points.

An interception by linebacker Mike Lucido - one of five turnovers racked up by North - gave the Norsemen a first down at the East Detroit 27 and on the first play, Peters burst off left tackle for the touchdown and North led 14-0 with 4:35 left in the first

"I thought it was important that we get something early,' Sumbera said. "East Detroit has an offense that can move the ball, and we didn't want to let them build confidence.'

Peters scored on a 32-yard run with 3:33 left in the second quarter to cap a 63-yard drive that was set up by Brandon Hacias' interception.

Five plays into the second half, the Norsemen boosted their lead to 27-0 on Peters' 38yard run.

North added two more touchdowns before the third quarter ended. Peters raced 42 yards into the end zone and Scott Phillips returned an interception 34 yards for a touchdown on the final play of the period.

In addition to the three interceptions, North also had fumble recoveries by Nate Pierantoni and Frank Senter.

Wayne Ford led the Norsemen with 10 tackles, Dave Keenan had nine and Mike Aubrey eight. Nick Chapie, Lucido and Chris Leinninger had five stops apiece, while Mike Magri and Leinninger each had two sacks. Paul Stencil played well at defensive end and contributed a sack.

North, 2-0 in the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division and 2.2 overall, faces another division foe Saturday at Warren Woods-Tower.

The Titans, coached by Grosse Pointe Park resident Ron Lucas, run the single wing offense.

"It'll be different," Sumbera said. "Fortunately, we scrimmaged Port Huron two years in a row when they were running it and that helped us a lot. I

Grosse Pointe North tailback Eric Peters left a lot of East Detroit tacklers grasping nothing but air last week as Peters set school records for rushing yardage (330 yards) and touchdowns (five) in the Norsemen's 41-0 victory over the Shamrocks in a Macomb Area Conference Blue Division game

Fraser back rambles past South

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

A year from now, Grosse Pointe South football coach Mike McLeod expects to feel a lot better on Sunday mornings.

That's because the Blue Devils will be on a more even footing with some of the powers in the Macomb Area Conference White Division.

"Our kids played so hard against Fraser but we're a year away from them in the weight room," McLeod said after the Ramblers' 28-7 victory that spoiled South's homecoming celebration.

"Their kids are 20 or 30 pounds bigger from lifting and Ray (Fraser coach Ray Earr) has had a good weight program going for several years. But we're getting there.'

South gave Fraser a better battle than the final score would indicate but six Blue

Shores youth does well in tourney

Anthony Stefani of Grosse Pointe Shores won all six of his matches in the boys 12-and-under division of the Challenge Cup tennis tournament in Boca Raton, Fla.

The tournament, sanctioned by the United States Tennis Association, brings together the 50 best junior tennis players in the country for a round-robin

Earlier, Stefani took first place in the boys 14-and-under division of the Okemos Fall Junior Open, winning all five of his matches.

Stefani is a sixth-grader at Parcells Middle School and his tennis coach is Joe Shaheen.

Devils' turnovers and an outstanding game by Ramblers' running back Brian Battisti dashed South's hopes of picking up its first victory.

Battisti ran for more than 300 yards and had touchdown runs of 84, 55, 30 and two

Despite Battisti's efforts, Fraser only led 7-0 at halftime and when South scored on an 80-yard pass from Todd Drake to Browe Merriweather with nine minutes left in the game, the Ramblers had a 21-7 advan-

We were still in the game, but those turnovers really hurt us," McLeod said.

Matt Agnone, who kicked the extra point after Merriweather's touchdown, had a key downfield block to spring him.

South, which had already lost senior lineman Erik Dahlstrom for the season with an inblow when fullback Paul Dwaihy broke a bone in his wrist in Saturday's game.

"He played a great game, too," McLeod said. "We just found out Monday that it was broken.

Jacob Przopiora replaced Dahlstrom in the offensive line and played a strong game. "The whole offensive line did a good job," McLeod said. "We ran well, Bobby (Kazma) had about 180 yards. Other members of the offensive line were Nelson Ropke, David Jennings, Brian Mc-Closkey and Rob Zurschmiede. McLeod also lauded the work of tight ends Nate Kuhl and Kevin Schroeder.

Mike Bianco, who moved to middle linebacker for the game, and Bill Starrs, who returned to the monster position, led a strong defensive effort by the

"We just didn't give the defense a chance with the turnovers," McLeod said, pointing out that three of them led directly to Fraser touchdowns.

South visits Warren-Mott at 7:30 p.m. Friday in search of its first victory.

The game will be something of a reunion for McLeod and the Marauders' new coach, Ed Belcrest.

"I coached against him in the Prep Bowl at the Silverdome when he was at St. Florian and I was at St. Clement," McLeod said. "He beat me because he had two all-state running backs. He won't have them now, but they'll be physical. I know how his teams play, but he also knows mine.'

Mott brings a 3-1 overall record into Friday's contest.

Grosse Pointe North's Eric Peters sidesteps an East Detroit tackler and keeps his balance on the way to one of his five touchdowns in the Norsemen's 41-0 victory last week.

ULS booters seek more scoring punch

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

University Liggett School soccer coach David Backhurst isn't asking for much.

One more goal a game would suit him just fine.

"We have to find some more offense," Backhurst said after the Knights dropped a pair of 2-1 decisions last week to Lutheran Westland and Ann Arbor Greenhills.

"We won one game 6-0, but in our other eight we've scored a total of eight goals. You can't expect to win by scoring one goal a game. That leaves you no margin for error. In those eight games we've only allowed 10 goals. That's a 1.25 average and it should be good enough to ` Give ULS two goals a game and they're undefeated. Instead they have a 3-4-2 record and the four setbacks equal the number of defeats the team suffered all last season.

"We lost a lot of offense through graduation," Backhurst said.

To make matters worse, last week the Knights had to play without senior midfielder Frank Tymrak, who has a pulled muscle in his leg.

"We're hoping he's back for our games this week," Backhurst said. "He's a critical player on our team. We're so thin we can't afford to lose somebody like that. Our depth consists of kids just up from the junior varsity.'

In ULS' Metro Conference game with Westland, the Knights took a 1-0 lead late in the first half on a goal by Chris Corneau, who drilled a shot into the near corner from about 20 feet out on a free kick.

won at No. 2 singles, while Kordas and Richard were also victorious. South's first three doubles teams - Wheeler and Durant, Lindsay Youngblood and Dana Mertz and Elrod and McCarthy won their matches and the fourth doubles team of Maryann Marantette and Samantha Damren lost 6-4 in the third set of a lengthy match. Last weekend, the Lady Devils finished second to Ann Arbor Pioneer in the Pioneer invitational. "We won two matches in every flight but first singles,' Sobieralski said. "Pioneer figures to win the state championship this year.'

South's coach was especially pleased with the performance of Youngblood and Mertz in No. 2 ·doubles.

Peggy Van Eckoute has a warning for the girls basketball coaches in the Macomb Area Conference Red Division.

"Chippewa Valley is going to surprise some teams in the Red this year," the Grosse Pointe South coach said after the Big Reds nearly caught the Lady Devils by surprise.

South escaped with a 47-43 overtime victory in its final tuneup before the opening of the MAC White Division season, but it wasn't easy. Chippewa Valley had a 29-20 halftime lead and it took a basket by South's Shannon Mc-Gratty with 18 seconds left in regulation to tie the game at 41-41 and send it into overtime.

"They're fast and quick and they stay with you on defense," Van Eckoute said. "Their coach moved up from the junior varsity this year, so he's had most of those kids for two years."

Van Eckoute didn't mince words while talking to her team at halftime and South responded with a strong second half, holding the Big Reds to only 14 points the rest of the

"We just played much better," Van Eckoute said. "We played better team defense. We picked up the pressure and made them throw the ball away more.

The Lady Devils jumped ahead quickly in the overtime on a layup by Molly McKenzie and Katy Lupo iced the win with four straight free throws in the extra period.

McGratty finished with 18 points and 15 rebounds, Becky Soltis had eight points and 10 rebounds, Lupo collected seven points and five steals and Mc-Kenzie added six points, three assists and four steals.

Earlier, South beat Stevenson 43-25 in a game in which 11 of the Lady Devils' 13 players broke into the scoring col-

The teams were tied 7-7 after one quarter but South led 18-9 at halftime and the Titans never threatened. By the end of three periods it was 32-13.

McGratty had 11 points and Soltis pulled down 11 rebounds. Ann Halpin came off the bench to toss in five points and Kim Hepner had six steals.

'We finished our pre-season 6-2 and we're pleased with it," Van Eckoute said. "We won the games we were supposed to win. Now our goal is to finish first or second in the league.'

South opened the MAC White season at Warren-Mott on Tuesday and the Lady Devils will host Fraser tonight, Sept. 29, at 7 p.m.

North sharp against Stallions

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor

The girls basketball program at Sterling Heights is one of the most respected in Macomb County and Grosse Pointer Tom Dailey's squad is always among the favorites in the Macomb Area Conference's Red Division.

Because of the esteem in which they're held, teams usually play their best against the Stallions.

That's what happened last week when Grosse Pointe North beat Sterling Heights 45-32 in a MAC crossover contest.

"We played with good concentration," said North coach Gary Bennett, "but I expected that we would because we have so much respect for Sterling Heights and the program Tom runs. It's nice to play good peo-

"Both teams played really hard. It was a nice high school basketball game. Sterling Heights never gave up, even though we were pretty far ahead. That's why they've been so successful. I'm sure they'll win the upper (Red) division again this year."

North took command of the game early, building a 21-5 lead by the end of the first quarter. Maureen Zolik scored nine of her 11 points in the opening quarter and Sue Karber, who didn't play at all in the second quarter after drawing her third foul late in the first quarter, added six points.

"Mo (Zolik) was the big difrence." Bennett said caused all sorts of problems with her defense and she took good care of the basketball when we were on offense.'

The Lady Norsemen cooled off on offense in the second quarter without Karber, but the defense stood its ground and North held a 24-10 halftime lead.

"We had one field goal in the second quarter - by Kristen Loeher - but the defense was still solid and (Sterling Heights) wasn't scoring either," Bennett

"We did a good job of rotating on defense. If somebody would get beat, somebody would rotate into her spot and when a Sterling player thought she was open, she really

North's lead eventually reached 22 points in the second half and the Lady Norsemen were never threatened as they improved their overall record to Loeher finished with 10 points, 11 rebounds and three steals, while Karber had 10 points, six rebounds and three steals. Zolik added four assists and four steals. Keri Muccioli finished with eight points, including a pair of important three-point goals.

North got strong performances off the bench from Tanya Latinas, who had four defensive rebounds as Karber's replacement, and Erin Peters.

The Lady Norsemen held a 24-19 halftime lead, but they outscored the Big Reds 20-6 in the third quarter.

By Chuck Klonke Sports Editor Tom Wise doesn't know from one meet to the next who's going to be his leading runner and the Grosse Pointe South boys cross country coach doesn't mind that one bit.

"I expect the top five to be changing places all the time," Wise said. "Last week it was Tim Nicholson who took the big jump, but then he got sick. We're gradually getting everybody into top form.

South passed one of its toughest Macomb Area Conference White Division tests last week when it beat Anchor Bay 24-33 and downed East Detroit 1941.

Depth is one of the Blue Devils' strengths again this season.

"There are some teams with good runners, but I don't think anybody in our division has a fifth man who can compete with our top 12," Wise said. "Sometimes we even get our 15th and 16th men across the line before the other team's

Matt Debski led the way for South in the double dual meet with Anchor Bay and East Detroit with a second-place finish overall. The only runner to Bedalla and the battle between the two was very close. Bedalla was clocked in 16:54, two seconds ahead of Debski.

Nicholson was South's second runner across the line in 17:12, followed by Jon Van Hoek (17:18), Nat Spurr (17:35) and Ben Butler (18:03).

The Blue Devils also got strong performances from Joe Suski, Mike Louwers and Josh Bosley.

Wise took several of his younger runners to the Fraser Invitational and he was pleased with the efforts of several of them. Freshman Brian Steele was 26th overall, sophomore Jan Stump 33rd and freshman Jeffrey Pilley 34th. "Steele ran a negative split, which means the second half of his race was faster than the first," Wise said.

Bosley, Dave DeGutis and Brad Gould also ran well at Fraser.

South girls

South took eight of the top 10 places, led by junior Aimee Vasse, who was first in 20:14. Senior Amy Zanglin was third overall in 21:16, followed by Katie Weed and Jennie Vasse, who tied for fourth in 21:29. Among those with seasonbest times were Monika Zielinska, Sarah Handley, Janel Zuidema, Danielle Slavik, Pam Ruman and Jennifer Stephens. South entered two teams in the nine-team Fraser Invitational and came away with the championship and runner-up trophies.

South was led by sophomore Elizabeth Borowiec, who was second overall in 22:00. Rebecca Padilla, Stephanie Keim and Darby Brownscombe placed fifth, sixth and seventh, respectively.

The ninth and 10th place finishes of Dara O'Byrne and Davna Bourbeau completed South's top seven.

Other medalists for the Lady Devils were Kate Callas, Melissa Balok, Kate Dougherty, Chris Littmann, Zuidema, Handley and Morgan Van Tan-

Hill's a help for North's runners

Sports Editor

It's intimidating enough for Grosse Pointe North's cross country opponents to step off the bus and see the hill behind the Grosse Pointe Shores city offices that's part of the Norsemen's course.

But then North tries to make the experience even more devastating for its visitors.

"That hill is the first thing teams see and they ask, 'Do we have to run up that?" said Scott Cooper, who coaches North's girls team and used to run for the boys team when it was a state power. "Since teams are already psyched out by the hill, we work with our kids on passing while they're going up the hill. That really gives us a nice edge."

Several area teams train on North's course, but there are some others that want no part of it.

"Brother Rice refused to run us on our course and when we ran them at home they beat us. It was our only loss in my four years on the team," Cooper

The Lady Norsemen used their home course to their advantage last week when they beat L'Anse Creuse North 24-35 and downed Warren Woods-Tower 20-43 in a pair of Macomb Area Conference Blue Division meets.

LCN was one of the teams Cooper felt would be a contender for the division title.

"They have three real good runners, but then there's a dropoff," he said. "We had to keep them from finishing 1-2-

North did that and more.

The Crusaders' Joanne Miller took first, but North's Carolyn Pruitt and Katie Daniels took second and third, respectively. LCN was fourth, but Abby Oman, Vinnie Lapiana and Jean Seo took three of the next four places to complete North's scoring.

'We had ninth through 18th, too," Cooper said. "They didn't all figure in the scoring, but L'Anse Creuse had to pass them. It's not so bad to have to pass one or two runners, but when there's nine or 10 of them it's pretty discouraging."

Although none of North's runners recorded personal best times on the tough course, Cooper was pleased with his team's steady improvement. "You compare courses in cross country and our top runners were about a minute and a half better than the last time we ran at home," he said. North is 4-0 in division teams to the Fraser Invitational last week and the B squad came in third behind two Grosse Pointe South teams. Argie Floyd, who was eighth, and Rebecca Pranger (13th) were North's medalists. Completing the Lady Norsemen's scoring were Katie Donahue, Erika Dattero and Kristen Davison.

Cooper sent his B and C

Dattero, Davison, Monica Rader and Julie Brescoll each posted personal best times in the meet.

North boys

Grosse Pointe North's boys cross country team overcame illness and injuries to several of its top runners as the Norsemen improved to 4-0 in the division with a 15-50 shutout of L'Anse Creuse North and a 20-40 victory over Warren Woods-Tower.

Kevin Grant finished first overall for North, while teammates Randy Larrabee, Paul Serilla, Tom McGrane, Suchin Shah and Ted Huebner posted personal bests.

500 ANIMALS __ ADOPT A PET

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY or NEUTER

YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens de stroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

acing tiles is easier than it may seem

Patching tile flooring

Most resilient tiles lift out easily once you apply some heat to soften the adhesive underneath them. To do this, use a heat lamp or an electric iron, working carefully to make sure that you don't mar the adjacent tiles. Be sure you put a piece of cloth between the iron and the tile.

If you can't raise a corner, use a chisel, working out from the center to the edges. Once the tile is removed, scrape all the old adhesives off the floor so the new tile will lie flat.

Different types of tile require different adhesives. Just ask the salesperson from whom you made the purchase for the proper adhesive.

To make the new tile look less conspicuous, rub off the gloss with fine steel wool or a solvent such as spot remover or lighter fluid.

Check to see if the new tile will fit and lie perfectly flat. If not, mark the tile and cut it with a sharp knife. Be sure to use a straight edge. Also note how the pattern is laid out.

Apply a thin coat of adhesive with a serrated spreader (available at any hardware store). Some adhesives brush on.

Now use an iron or heat the tile in the oven so the tile is pliable. Place the tile in the opening and stand on the tile and its edges. This may cause some of the adhesive to squeeze up between the tiles; just clean the excess up. You should now weight the tile with books, bricks, or any heavy flat object.

Solving other tile problems

Generally, heat is also the answer for tiles that have come partially unglued. Exceptions to this are asphalt and vinyl asbestos tiles, which you'll have to remove by chipping from the center out with a chisel. Work an iron (protected by a pressing cloth) back and forth until you can peel up the curled corner, then remove all the old adhesive. The more of the adhesive you can remove the flatter the tile will lay on the floor. If the tile has cooled, be sure to heat it again, then apply a thin, even coat of adhesive to the tile. Stand on the corners and the center, and wipe up the excess adhesive.

Often, you can remove stains by scrubbing them with a mild detergent solution. However, if that doesn't work, try a white appliance wax.

Household Help

The magazine ad has the window of your dreams but will the treatment work in your home? You need answers: What colors does it come in? How does it operate? Is it easy to clean? Does it come with a guarantee? Where can I buy it? Will it fit my odd-shaped window?

If you've ever tried to track down additional product information from most home furnishings advertisers, you probably know how frustrating it can be. Studying the fine print in the ad, you find the manufacturer's phone number. You finally get through only to discover that the operator cannot answer your queries and isn't sure who should speak to you. After a series of switches, you wind up in the voice mail of someone who "may" know the answers, but will be out of the office for an indeterminate amount of time.

Fortunately, one manufacturer — Hunter Douglas Window Fashions — has addressed this problem by establishing its own "Customer Information Center." Unique in the window coverings industry, this service was created specifically to answer questions about all Hunter Douglas products from consumers responding to advertised toll-free numbers. For general information, they can call 1-800-937-7895.

As a follow-up to the call, the consumer is sent within 24 hours a "fulfillment package," containing product samples, brochures, and a copy of the Hunter Douglas lifetime guarantee, plus the names of authorized local dealers.

My wife and I recently had our living room picture window replaced with a bay window. Having had no experience with such a window, we had no idea what to purchase as a window covering.

We shopped around and got some good ideas from a local Hunter Douglas dealer. Admittedly, we didn't go with their product for budgetary reasons but we did get some wonderful ideas, which we implemented.

I will not and cannot recommend brand names in this space but I will tell you that services such as the toll-free number instituted by Hunter Douglas are invaluable to the consumer. You can pick the brains, so to speak, of the experts for ideas on what you need and you are under no obligation to buy anything from them. When all is said and done, you may decide to do so. If not, you at least come away with some useful information. Kudos to Hunter Douglas for providing this service to the public.

Q. I have a 3-year-old apartment building with a flat roof. It has

2"x10" ceiling joists with plywood on top and tar and gravel to form the roof. The ceiling is made up of R28 fiberglass insulation between the joists with vapor barrier and 1/ 2" drywall over the surface.

This winter, I had to remove the drywall ceilings from the two bathrooms which are back to back to the two upstairs, and found that the plywood underneath the roof was wet. I also found that it is spreading into the room next to the bathroom.

Do you have any suggestions to prevent this from happening? Could it be that the vapor barrier wasn't installed tightly enough?

A. There are several possible causes of your problem and we need to trace the steps of each of them. Your conclusion of an improperly installed vapor barrier is a probability but there are other factors involved that could cause this problem as well.

One important thing to keep in mind is that newer houses often have higher indoor humidity and moisture the first few years. This is a result of the usual moisture that exists in new building materials. Since you didn't mention anything about a ceiling fan or some kind of exhaust system, let's consider it. A lack of adequate ventilation will surely contribute to a moisture problem.

Another culprit that is often overlooked is the possibility of leaky pipes, if there are any, that run above the ceiling. If your pipes are forming condensation, they will require foam insulation wrapped around them. This kind of condensation can spread to a room that adjoins your bathroom.

A final consideration is the possibility of a minor leak from your flat roof. Although the building is relatively new, you cannot rule this out. A good visual examination on the roof, above the problem area, is an important step to take. Sometimes the slightest flaw in someone's workmanship can cost you dearly.

I would strongly advise you to examine the aforementioned before you consult a professional. Also, if possible, keep the ceiling joists exposed until you fully remedy this problem.

Q. I need to know the ins and outs of caring for hardwood floors. I don't know what the best method is to clean them and maintain them. I was advised not to use any product with water, such as Murphy's Oil Soap. Would it be best to dust mop? What happens when the floor gets really dirty?

A. It is a common fallacy that you cannot use anything mixed with water on a hardwood floor. While I normally refrain from mentioning product names, I will this time since you mentioned the product yourself.

There is nothing wrong with using Murphy's Oil Soap to clean your floor periodically. However, if the floor is heavily soiled, the best cleaning product is Mex. You can purchase this at any hardware store

You might want to consider having a heavy-duty coat of polyure-thane applied to your floor. This coat will protect the wood underneath while still allowing the beauty of it to show through. Additionally, cleaning will be a snap because all it will require is the dust mop you mentioned.

Q. I own a single family home with an attached one-car garage. Over the last few years, I noticed large, deep cracks developing on the concrete floor. The situation hasn't gotten any worse but I can now easily pull out a chunk of concrete from the floor. I am planning to replace the existing floor with several experienced helpers this summer. Do you have any suggestions before we start this project?

A. Let's begin by first examining whether the room next to your garage has also developed any obvious cracks. Even without having seen your home I could more than guess that some foundation settling has occurred. However, if your garage space is below grade from the rest of your house, you only have to focus your attention on that area specifically.

Begin by breaking up and removing the old floor completely. Before you add extra sand and gravel bases, rent a vibrating tamper and compacting machine. This very handy tool will pack the grade firmly and efficiently. It can be found at large equipment rental centers. You can even rent a cement mixing machine for this job if you want to get the job done more quickly. Be sure the thickness of your floor is at least three inches.

Those are the basic preparations to follow. Good luck on your new floor.

Q. We have a stucco home and want to paint it as soon as weather permits. One of the walls has a problem where climbing ivy and honeysuckle vines were attached. In pulling these down to control at ground level, wherever the vines clung, there remain pieces embedded in the wall. We have experimented with a wire brush with absolutely no success, as well as overall deep steam cleaning. Is there some other method you know of to remove this vegetation?

A. Despite your failed efforts, take heart. There are ways to combat your problem. However, you must use extreme caution so you don't disturb or damage your fine stucco finish.

You will need to purchase a commercial root killer that can be found at your hardware store or major department store. This item is used primarily for killing deep roots, such as those that remain after cutting a tree down to its stump. The method employed requires a large, powerful drill. A very long drill bit is used to drill through the top of the stump as far as possible and the chemical is then poured in the holes.

In your case, you will drill much smaller holes and carefully funnel the root killer into the openings. If at all possible, drill your holes at a slight angle (45 degrees) above the roots. Be careful when handling the product and always follow the manufacturer's instructions. You should have favorable results in a short time and will be able to paint over your stucco finish.

Household Help

Whether your home is new or old, it should be waterproofed, especially basement and crawl space walls where the entry of water and moisture ultimately leads to deterioration and damage. With a little know-how and the right tools, you can easily waterproof areas where leakage has started or prevent it in areas where it may occur. To get started, you'll need the following tools and products: hammer, chisel, wooden paddle, trowel, wire brush, large pail, heavyduty masonry paint brush, hydraulic water-stop cement and waterproofing masonry coating.

LOCATE THE SOURCE AND PREPARE THE SURFACE: Inspect the walls and locate the source of the leakage. Once you've found it, use your hammer and chisel it to enlarge the crack or hole. Cut squarely or undercut while enlarging the cavity to a minimum depth and width of 3/4 inch, then remove all loose material from the cavity and scrub with a wire brush and water.

PREPARE MIXTURE AND APPLY TO SURFACE: Prepare a mixture of one part water and 4 1/2 parts hydraulic water-stop cement in a pail and roll the mixed amount in your hands until you feel it begin to stiffen and become warm (only mix as much as you can apply in a three-minute period). Beginning at the top of the crack or hole, press the cement into the cavity with your fingers and maintain pressure for a few minutes or until the cement sets. Then smooth the surface with a trowel. (Work gloves should be worn when completing this step.)

APPLY WATERPROOFING MASONRY COATING: When the cement has set, the entire area should be painted with a waterproofing masonry coating. Remove any paint, loose mortar or dirt with a wire brush and water. Next, mix masonry coating and water according to instructions on package. Dampen the surface with a hose just before using a masonry paint brush to apply the mixture in a circular scrubbing motion to ensure penetration of waterproofing ingredients. First coat should dry for 24 to 48 hours before applying second coat. Waterproofing masonry coating will continue to cure and harden for one month.

Should you have any questions about this job, call the QUIKRETE Companies at 1-800-282-5828. They are the helpful people who provided the above information and will be happy to be of assistance.

Foam Mattress - We have a trailer with a piece of foam to lay over the cushions that form a bed. I made a mattress cover and a sheet using two king-sized sheets. I sewed the sheets like a pillow case. I slip the foam into it and use another one as a cover. They slip on and off to wash very easily, and they never come untucked. Freida L., Rochester, N.H.

Create a wildlife habitat in your own back yard

By Rosann Kovalcik WildBirds Unlimited

What a great way to say that you care about the environment — by creating a wildlife habitat in your own yard.

Since 1973, the National Wildlife Federation has issued certificates to thousands of homes, schools and natural areas in recognition of their accomplishments in achieving a wildlife habitat.

In order to become certified, there are four elements that you need to provide:

- Food
- Water
- Cover
- · Places to raise young

Food can be offered in its natural form by means of trees and shrubs that provide fruit. Many birds prefer fruit and berries instead of the traditional seed offered at feeding stations.

Cedar waxwings can make short work of the ripe berries on a mountain ash. Robins spend the winter in this area feeding on the crab apples, holly berries and the fruits of the cotoneaster.

Other food sources for birds include junipers, serviceberry and viburnums. Supplementing natural food sources by offering seed in feeders is a way to provide for birds when natural sources are depleted. It also brings the birds close for your viewing enjoyment.

Fresh water is essential for birds, not only for drinking but for keeping their feathers in good condition. Water can be provided in birdbaths.

A mister or dripper would be an attraction for both you and the birds. During the winter, add a heater so that a fresh supply of water is available all year.

Cover in the form of trees and shrubs is necessary for courting and nesting activities. Cover also provides a place where young birds can rest while their parents are gathering food. Many of the trees and shrubs that provide a food source are also ideal for satisfying cover requirements.

Many species of birds will only use cavities to nest in. Since there are not many natural cavities available, nest boxes can be provided for wrens, chickadees and other species as places to raise their young. Nesting material can also be provided.

Don't forget to think of the wildlife other than birds. In our densely populated residential area, we are not likely to have reptiles, amphibians and mammals other than squirrels, raccoons and possum.

But all forms of insect life from aphids to dragonflies play an important role in sustaining the bird life around us. We can install host plants along with nectar producing flowers in order to encourage butterflies and moths. There are a number of excellent reference books on the market that will help you with your plan to attract wildlife. "Landscaping for Wildlife" by the Minnesota DNR, "The Naturalist's Garden" by Ruth Show Ernst, "Your Backyard Wildlife Garden" by Marcus Schneck and "Attracting Backyard Wildlife" by Bill Merilus all provide informative and enjoyable reading.

Wild Birds Unlimited has been chosen to be an official retail partner to promote National Wildlife Federations' Backyard Wildlife Habitat Program. Kits are available for sale which include the publication "The Backyard Naturalist" by Craig Tufts, chief naturalist at National Wildlife Federation, a how-to booklet entitled Backyard Wildlife Habitat and a pre-paid application form to certify your yard.

Fall planting tips for beautiful springtime blossoms

Autumn, traditionally considered a time for raking leaves, carving pumpkins, hay rides, and football games, is also the best time for planting flowering bulbs. Planted during fall, in flower beds, rock gardens, along a hedge or fence, or in the lawn, bulbs are a great way to add a splash of color to any landscape.

Easy to plant and cultivate, bulb blossoms will thrive next spring if they are given a hospitable growing environment and are properly groomed this fall for winter dormancy. Bulbs should also be protected from foraging animals by soaking them in a repellent, such as Ro-Pel Bulb Protector, before planting.

Bulb Varieties

The most difficult part of planting spring-flowering bulbs is choosing from among the hundreds of species and hybrids available. Some of the most sought after varieties include:

Tulips - The most popular of all spring flowering bulbs, tulips offer gardeners a wide range of choices in height, color, shape and bloom time.

Narcissus - More commonly referred to as daffodils, this winterhardy flower comes in many shapes and colors. These bulbs develop extensive root systems in fall and provide better flowering results in colder cli-

Muscari - Nicknamed the "Grape Hyacinth," these tiny, bright purple flowers multiply quickly and resemble bunches of upturned grapes. Flowers stay in bloom for one to three weeks and thrive in sun or shade. They are an excellent choice for borders.

Chiondoxa - Commonly known as "Glory-of-the-Snow," this spring flower blooms in loose clusters of white, blue or pink, and can vary from 3 to 10 inches in height. This bulb type is an ideal plant for borders and rock gardens.

Planting Tips

Whether they are planted individually or in groups, spring-flowering bulbs will thrive and flourish if you follow these few simple planting procedures:

Prepare the Soil - Once the planting bed has been selected, turn the soil over to a depth of about 10 inches to aerate the site and give bulb roots ample room to grow. Quick to rot if left in standing water, spring-flowering bulbs flourish best in light, welldrained soil. Where necessary, condition soil with fertilizer as required.

Plant at Proper Depth - Using a bulb planter or trowel to dig holes, the general rule of thumb is to plant bulbs to a depth of three times their overall height. With the soil removed to the required depth, lightly press bulbs into place bottom side down (the flat side is the bottom), return the soil, and water thoroughly.

Remember, if bulbs are planted too shallow the freezing and thawing of surrounding soil may interrupt their dormant phase, permanently damaging root systems and limiting your chance of bright, healthy blossoms.

Protect Against Pests — Bulbs are a tasty treat for many hungry creatures, such as mice, moles, squirrels and chipmunks. To keep these animals from making a restaurant out of your garden, soak each bulb for a minute, before planting in Ro-Pel Bulb Protector, a safe and effective animal repellent that works on the principle of aversive taste. Non-hazardous and ecologically-sound, Ro-Pel will give any bulb-feasting creature a "bitter" reminder that this property is off limits.

To ensure that hungry animals don't return to feed. Ro-Pel is also formulated with a mild medicinal tag scent. After one or two visits to your garden, animals quickly associate the odor with the subsequent vile taste in their mouth. As a result, raccoons, chipmunks, squirrels and other animals can be literally "trained" to leave your garden alone and move on to someone else's plot.

After bulbs have grown and flowered, spray the blossoms with Ro-Pel again to deter animals such as deer and rabbits from chewing on flowers and other foliage.

Groom With Caution - If you already have blossoms, the best way to ensure that bulbs flower again next year is to "deadhead" (remove the dying blossom) from the wilting plant at season's end, but allow foliage to wither without immediate pruning. This is crucial as stems and leaves continue to create and store food for winter dormancy and eventual use next

Once in place, most bulb gardens can be left to multiply and flourish. With a little time and effort this fall. flowering bulbs will provide colorful, bright blossoms next spring and yearround.

BULBS, GLORIOUS BULBS - Tulips and other spring-flowering bulbs give the landscape a touch of royal splendor. To protect colorful blossoms from hungry animals, spray them with Ro-Pel Bulb Protector.

Charming, comfortable and cozy best describes this 5 bedroom home. Some of the many features and improvements include either solid brass or crystal chandeliers, original leaded glass and beveled doors, freshly decorated master bedroom, powder room and kitchen.

Your ceiling fan can actually save energy during winter

ture is dropping — but not your electric bill.

A warm, cozy home in December is a wonderful thing, but keeping it that way sometimes gives you the chills. Home heating cost can be downright uncomfortable, and the discomfort is particularly acute when the utility bill arrives each month.

Lowering winter utility bills usually means adding insulation, caulking windows, and installing storm windows and doors. Doing these things will certainly help, but there's an easier way to cut up to 10 percent off your heating costs.

Turn on the ceiling fan. Ceiling fans traditionally have been but energy experts say they are useful in winter, too.

According to Michael Lamb, a spokesman for the Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy Clearinghouse, ceiling fans can cut winter heating expenses by 5-10 percent.

"Ceiling fans do a lot of nice things," Lamb said. "They prevent air stratification, which is layering of warm and cool air in a room. This is particularly true in rooms with high ceilings warm air rises while cooler air settles near the floor. A ceiling fan circulates the warm air more evenly. Considering that ceiling fans use relatively small amounts of electricity, they're really a good energy bargain."

An estimated 35 million American households have ceiling fans, but at least a third don't use them enough to enjoy year-round savings.

*Ceiling fans have been around since the 19th century, but most people still don't use them," said James Barrett of Hunter Fan Co., the largest manufacturer of ceiling fans in the country. "In winter, ceiling fans can help make a room feel warmer, so you can turn down the thermostat and save money. What other home appliance actually helps reduce your electric bill?"

Engineers at Hunter suggest operating ceiling fans in an updraft, or clockwise direction during the winter to comfortably re-circulate trapped warm air and ensure maximum heating efficiency (every Hunter fan has a switch that reverses the rotation of the fan). Concerning fan size, they recommend 52-inch fan blades for rooms up to 400 square feet; 44-inch fan blades for rooms of 250 square feet; 42-inch fan blades for 144 square-foot rooms; and 32-inch fan blades for anything smaller. A 15-degree blade pitch is recommended for maximum air movement.

Of course, there also are aesthetic considerations like color, finish and style. There are hundreds of fan makes and models to choose from, so finding one that matches your room decor should be easy. When shopping for a ceiling fan remember that fans of good construction and quality will probably last for a lifetime, so spending a few extra dollars may be a wise investment. Remember, you'll be getting a payback in energy savings.

According to 1990 census figures, Americans use more than $34 billion worth of energy to warm their homes each year. Based on energy conservations statistics, approximately $3.4 billion could be saved if homeowners used ceiling fans properly.

1994 AUDI CABRIOLET

The Convertible Built From The Ground Up. Not The Top Down.

Years ago, we could have brought you a soft top, or we could have modified one of our other models. But that's not our style. In the Audi Cabriolet, we built a great car first, a convertible, second. We gave it a 2.8 liter, V=6, 4-speed automatic powertrain and the road-handling you expect from a car developed near the Alps. So, for the first time in North America, you can put the top down on an Audi, go find a winding road and let the good times roll. And you can really leave all the hassles behind when it comes to maintenance. You get a 3-year or 50,000-mile scheduled maintenance plan covering even wiper blades and oil changes at no charge. There's much more, but why waste your time reading? Come in and see us for a test-drive now.
