

Your help to the needy is in the bag

Grocery bags are included inside this week's Grosse Pointe News for the 10th annual "Kids Helping Kids" school food drive. The annual food drive benefits Gleaners Community Food Bank.

Readers can fill the bags with groceries and drop them at the Central Library or any of the public schools. The drive will run until March 20.

Gleaners will give the donated food to over 200 non-profit member soup kitchens, church pantries, emergency shelters and other feeding agencies. Gleaners distributes over 11 million pounds of food annually for the hungry and poor in southeast Michigan.

"Last year, Grosse Pointers collected over 11,000 pounds of food through the 'Kids Helping Kids' drive," said Gleaners' president Gene Gonya. "We appreciate the long-time support of the Grosse Pointe community in helping us meet the increasing need for food."

WE'RE CONCERNED ABOUT YESTERDAY'S NEWS.

News can appear one day and be gone the next. But the paper news is printed on can and should live on.

Last year, more than one third of all U.S. newspaper was recycled. And that number is growing every day.

Recycling is the one way we can all give something back.

Quilting for AIDS

Joyce Gallegos joined quilters at Christ Church Grosse Pointe recently to make panels for the Names Project AIDS Memorial Quilt that will be on display April 5-9 at Cobo Hall. The Christ Church panel, which was sewn in memory of Gallegos' son, Timothy Brooks, will join the more than 27,000 3- by 6-foot panels making up the quilt. Five thousand panels (larger than two football fields) will be displayed in Detroit.

Woods declines to fund highly praised youth offender program

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

On a 3-3 vote, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council failed to approve spending $8,500 — or less than .01 percent of the city budget — on a youth offender program described by the city's public safety director as excellent.

Monday night, representatives of the Children's Home of Detroit asked the Woods council for $8,500 for its Youth Offender Program, which is designed to divert youths who commit minor criminal offenses away from the Wayne County juvenile court system and into a local program that guarantees they suffer some consequences for their actions.

The program is run by the Children's Home for the five Grosse Pointe communities and Harper Woods. Each city is assessed a $2,000 base fee. The remainder each city pays is based on the number of youths that a city sends to the program.

Last year the Woods sent 23 youths into the program, making the city's share of the program $8,500, wrote program coordinator Deborah Liedel in a letter to the council.

The Children's Home took over the program from F.L.E.C. in 1991, Liedel told the council Monday night.

"When we agreed to take over the program in '91, we said we would not ask for additional funds after making our yearly budget request," said Liedel.

"Since then we've kept our word. The Children's Home pays for 50 percent of the program and the six member communities pay for the other half based on use. This is an excellent program that has a 94 percent success rate. That means that 94 percent of the youths in the program stay out of further trouble with the law."

Grosse Pointe Woods youth officer Robert Kwiatkowski wrote in a memo to the council that "other than the Youth Assistance Program, there is no alternative to a Wayne County juvenile court referral for Grosse Pointe juveniles. This program provides the youths and their parents with personal attention that cannot be duplicated by Wayne County due to its large caseload."

Kwiatkowski added that the program offers Woods residents family counseling, parenting workshops and drug assessment and referral services without cost. He concluded by writing, "in my experience, I have found the Youth Assistance Program to be an excellent community service and one

Parent complaints result in removal of Maire principal

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Responding to a wave of parental discontent that has swept through Maire Elementary School in the past few months, the Grosse Pointe school administration on Monday removed principal Karen Zokas and began the process of revising the reading and math program for first- and second-graders.

Zokas has been reassigned to the position of administrative assistant to the assistant superintendent of instruction for the remainder of her contract, which expires on June 30, 1996. Susan Allan, director of instructional services, will serve as acting principal until a replacement is hired, said superintendent Ed Shine.

The action follows months of complaints lodged by parents of first- and second-grade students at Maire.

In Maire parent Norb Kaminski's opinion, the problems at the school concern the use of a math program called Beginning School Math, the use of Whole Language in the reading program, and what he sees as a lack of communication between the school and the parents concerning the children's progress using these programs.

Parents originally took their concerns to Zokas. Then they appealed to the school board and finally had several meetings with Shine and other central administrators.

Since January, six children were removed by parents from one first-grade classroom at Maire and either placed in another teacher's room at Maire, in another school in the district or in private school.

"When 20 percent of a classroom requests to leave a teacher's classroom, that's a big concern to me," said parent Patricia Galac, who is satisfied with the education her child is receiving at Maire, but is upset by the morale at the school, which she characterized as "at an all-time low."

"The parents are divided against each other and against the teachers," Galac said. "There is no camaraderie right now and that is very sad."

"The administration will have us characterized as resistant to change and as not understanding the program," said Kaminski, who has two children at Maire, one of whom was moved into a different first-grade classroom at the school. "I'll go on record as saying that is not true at all. This is not a situation of parents vs. teachers. There is strong parental support for the teachers at Maire. A number of parents, along with myself and my wife, looked at other schools in the district and the question was raised as to the significant difference between these other schools and Maire."

One difference parents talked about at the Monday, March 6 school board meeting was the California Achievement Test results, which are used by the district to screen for the gifted and talented program. Parents interpreted the numbers as indicating that Maire had the lowest scores in the district.

Shine said some of the tests at Maire were not completed by students and the numbers have to be reevaluated before he can comment.

In addition to the removal of Maire's principal, central administrators on Monday also delivered a supplemental math program and textbooks to first- and second-grade classrooms. This action also was in direct response to parental concerns about the math programs being used at the school. Reading and math consultants also have been called into the school to assess the situation, Shine said.

Beginning School Math is a program adopted by the school board in 1992 and Whole Language was approved by the board in 1991, said Marjorie Parsons, assistant superintendent for curriculum and evaluation.

Parents object to Whole Language because they think it does not include phonics, Parsons said.

Beginning School Math is a program that uses three-dimensional objects, or manipulatives, to help students visualize concepts like addition and subtraction, Parsons said.

"(Whole Language and Beginning School Math) certainly meet the objectives of the school district," Zokas said in an interview two weeks ago. "It just seems so different from what the parents had when they were growing up."

Shine said six students leaving one classroom is atypical for any school year. Elsewhere in the school district this year, only two students were removed by parents from two separate classrooms at schools other than Maire.

"Something happened that prompted six parents to remove their students from a Maire classroom," Shine said. "We consider that serious."

He said a number of factors may have contributed to the current situation at Maire, including the hiring of five new first- and second-grade teachers this year who were not familiar with the Beginning School Math program.

In addition, each school in the district is given a certain level of autonomy and administrators are free to select teaching materials as long as they achieve the objectives of the curriculum.

Problems occur, Shine said, when a school does not communicate significant changes to parents, particularly parents who are new to the school. Shine said this may be part of the problem at Maire.

Kaminski said he isn't necessarily opposed to any program utilized at Maire, as long as the children are learning and progressing.

"My primary concern is the education of my children," he said. "I think the current implementation has been confused and poorly planned."

that Grosse Pointe residents should strongly endorse."

While support for the program by the Woods city administration was strong, members of the Woods council balked at paying for services that they felt were the responsibility of parents.

"I've voted against this program in the past and I'm going to vote against it again," said councilmember Jean Rice. "I've gone through city records, which show that we've spent $28,000 since 1991 for 34 youths. I ask why can't these youths parents pay for this service. I've been asking that question for years, and all I've heard is that the Children's Home will try to collect money, but it never does."

Councilmember Eric Steiner said that while he likes the program, as a parent of young children, he thought parents should pay for their children's use of the program.

Program coordinator Ann MacDonald was at Monday's meeting and said that making parents pay defeats the purpose of the program.

"I understand the council's feelings, I feel the same way," said MacDonald. "But unfortunately, we're seeing kids in the program whose family life isn't great...which is why we're having a hard time getting money from the families."

"Some parents are very resistant to having their children in this program. Some already are taking punitive measures against their children because they are being asked to make a donation. If they were forced to pay, they wouldn't have their kids in the program. We've made great strides with the kids in the program. They need someone to listen to them, and they often don't get that at home. This program works, it has a 94 percent success rate."

Mayor Robert Novitke said he would also like to see parents pay for the program, but he believes that the city pays for a lot of services, like the parks, that don't charge a user's fee.

"We can't say that these kids are an isolated problem," said Novitke. "What happens to them affects us all. We have problems, but we deal with them better than most communities. It's not like there are other programs we can choose from. It's either this or send the kids to Wayne County and the county's giant caseload. These youths won't get the help they need there."

But despite the support of the city's public safety department, councilmembers Rice, Steiner and Peter Gilezan voted against councilmember James Alogdelis' motion to provide funding. Novitke and councilmember Thomas Fahrner supported Alogdelis.

Councilmember William Wilson was absent from Monday's meeting, and Novitke said that if officials from the Children's Home wished, they could approach the council again and ask for another vote when the full council was there.

MacDonald said the Children's Home would be back at a later date.

Robber caught

Park police on Friday, Feb. 17, arrested a suspect accused of robbing a business in the 15000 block of Mack. According to witnesses, the suspect confronted a cashier and told her that he had a weapon and ordered her to open the cash register. After taking the money in the register, the robber fled the scene.

The police were immediately notified, and a patrol car was dispatched to the area, where officers saw someone who matched the description of the

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

Restaurant broken into

Woods police noticed a window in the rear of a restaurant in the 21000 block of Mack was broken at approximately 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 19. Further investigation revealed that the window had been shot out with a BB gun, and one or more people had entered the restaurant through the broken window.

Business robbed

Police believe the robber or robbers left the restaurant by unlocking the front door after rifling the cash register and taking an undisclosed sum of money. A neighbor of the restaurant told police making a routine canvas of the area that some noise was heard in the alley at about 2 a.m. Sunday morning. Police have no suspects.

Business robbed

Park police reported a business in the 15000 block of Mack was robbed at approximately 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 14. According to witnesses, the robber handed the cashier a note stating that a robbery was taking place.

The robber then opened the cash register, grabbed the cash inside and fled the scene on foot. He was last seen in the area of Ashland, north of Mack. No arrests have been made.

Corrections

An item on page 11A of the March 2 edition should have said that St. Paul Catholic School student Jatayu Perlmutter was the first-place winner of the 26th annual America and Me contest sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance.

An article on page 2A of the Feb. 16 edition describing a school board meeting on the Feb. 2 millage vote should have identified Martha Hutting as PTO Council president. Lorna Zalenski is the Monteith PTO president. Also, in responding to the Feb. 16 article in last week's (March 2) paper, letter writer Richard T. Flynn was referring to Hutting's comments as PTO Council president. At no time was Zalenski quoted in the article or letter.

Are you living with space invaders?

Asbestos, radon, lead, carbon monoxide and more may have landed in your home long before you moved in. These aliens pose an environmental health risk to you and your family. But don't pack your bags. There are steps you can take to minimize their danger.

According to the Emergency Department at Bon Secours Hospital, your family's best protection is detection and prevention. Whether your home is new or old - and especially if you're remodeling - have it tested. Begin by calling the Environmental Protection Agency at 202-260-2090 for sound advice on what to do and where to turn for reputable help with:

- Asbestos - Commonly used as a fireproof insulator through the 1970s, asbestos can deteriorate or flake, causing lung cancer and other respiratory problems. If it is well-maintained, however, often the best solution is to leave it alone.
- Radon - An odorless, invisible radioactive gas from rocks and soil, radon can seep into your home through foundations, basements, even your well water. Radon is the second leading cause of lung cancer. The EPA recommends testing all homes.
- Lead - The number one household health threat to young children, this toxic metal is found in water, soil, air and, most often, in paint, especially in homes built before the '70s, in old china and decorative, hand-painted pottery. Repeated exposure can damage the nervous system, kidneys and blood, and can cause developmental and behavioral problems. The Emergency Department at Bon Secours Hospital recommends testing for all children.
- Carbon Monoxide - This odorless, poisonous gas can result from poorly-ventilated or faulty furnaces or heaters. Symptoms range from headaches and nausea to unconsciousness and death. To safeguard against CO poisoning, have your furnace checked every year and install a carbon monoxide detector available at hardware stores everywhere.

Get help if you suspect any trouble. If you or any member of your family exhibits signs or symptoms of illness, seek immediate medical attention. Remember, some close encounters could spell danger for you and your family. The best way to find out is to have your home tested.

City, Farms, Woods adopt poverty exemption guidelines

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

"We wish the state had some guidelines," said City of Grosse Pointe assessor Dennis Foran last year regarding standards for poverty exemptions in appealing property assessments.

This year, thanks to Public Act 390 of 1994, signed by Gov. John Engler on Dec. 29, the state has provided local governmental units with guidelines to prevent residents from abusing the poverty (or hardship) exemption.

The City and Woods councils approved their own local guidelines at their Feb. 27 meetings. The Farms council approved its guidelines at its March 6 meeting.

PA 390 requires that poverty exemption guidelines include income and asset levels. Income levels may not be set below the federal poverty income standards.

More than 50 homeowners across the Pointes received poverty exemptions in 1994. Typical cases often involved senior citizens living on fixed incomes.

Before PA 390, each municipality in the Pointes used its own guidelines in handling poverty exemption requests.

This resulted in reductions ranging from 29 percent to 63 percent of the home's state equalized valuation (SEV).

For example, last year the Farms required that a resident seeking an exemption not have an annual income over $20,000. Although done on a case-by-case basis, assessments were usually reduced by half.

PA 390 allows local governments to set asset levels for those seeking the poverty exemption. Applicants should not own other real estate than their homestead and they should provide identification and proof of ownership (deed, land contract or other documentation) for the property.

Woods residents seeking poverty exemptions must comply with the Michigan State Housing Development Authority guidelines.

For a family of one, annual income cannot exceed $16,450. A family of two cannot have annual income of more than $18,880; a family of three, $21,150; a family of four, $23,500; a family of five, $25,400; and a family of six, $27,250.

Farms residents seeking a poverty exemption must meet 150 percent of the Federal Poverty Income Standards as determined by the U.S. Office of Management and Budget.

A family of one with annual income more than $11,044.50 would not qualify. For a family of two, total income cannot exceed $14,121; for a family of three, total income cannot be more than $17,283; for a family of four, $22,144.50; five, $26,173.50; and for a family of six, total annual income of $29,577 or more will make a family ineligible for a poverty exemption.

City residents must meet the federal poverty income standards to qualify for a poverty exemption.

This level for a family of one is annual income of $7,363; for a family of two, $9,414; for three, $11,522; for four, $14,763; for five, $17,449; and for a family of six, annual income cannot exceed $19,718 to be eligible for a poverty exemption.

In both the City and Farms, a poverty exemption may not exempt more than $70,000 in taxable value of a homestead nor reduce the taxable value (SEV) of a homestead to be lower than $30,000.

The Woods will not exempt more than $57,500 in taxable value of a homestead.

Last year, a resident of the City had more than $81,170 in taxable value ($162,340 in true cash value) exempted. A Shores resident had more than $114,000 in taxable value ($228,000 in cash value) exempted under the old guidelines.

"There might be some people living in a $300,000 home," Foran said, "but even if their income is low, is it fair to have other people (taxpayers) pay when they (the exemption seeker) could alter their situation?"

If a poverty exemption reduced the value of a homestead to $30,000 ($60,000 in true cash value), the applicant would receive a homestead credit of about $1,200 from the state — enough to cover the property tax bill.

"Every taxpayer should pay at least 3.5 percent of their income to property taxes after the state homestead credit," said Woods assessor Bill Knapp.

For City residents, applicants' assets may not exceed $20,000 (excluding homestead, furnishings and automobile).

Farms applicants may not have net assets exceeding $40,000 (excluding homestead furnishings, automobile and vested pension benefits).

Woods applicants may not have assets (excluding homestead) of more than $75,000.

Applicants must own and occupy their home and bring to the board of review a copy of the poverty exemption form (provided by the local government), 1994 federal and state income tax returns for all persons residing in the house and property tax credit returns (MI 1040 CR).

The Park city council is scheduled to approve its poverty exemption guidelines at its March 20 meeting.

The Shores, which did not receive guidelines from the state in time, will leave poverty exemption determinations up to its board of review.

Poverty exemption applications must be filed between Jan. 1 and the last scheduled day of the board of review.

Park educator traveled a different path than his family of physicians

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Richard Sax jokingly refers to himself as the black sheep of his family, or the renegade — or the "dahouska" — the Ojibwa Sioux word for George Custer, which means the long-haired one.

Dressed in a blue tweed jacket, blue pin-striped shirt topped with a navy blue bow tie, wearing his wavy brown hair shoulder length and sporting a full mustache, he does resemble the young cavalry general who was massacred along with most of his men at the battle of the Little Bighorn.

Resemblance aside, Sax's life is nothing like the ill-fated Custer's. At 37, he has a Ph.D. in English, teaches literature at Madonna University, has been chairman of the English department there since 1990, and last month was named dean of the college of arts and humanities.

Sax was born in Houston, and his family moved several times during his childhood, particularly after his attorney father and pediatrician mother divorced. He began his education in San Francisco and graduated from high school in Shaker Heights, a Cleveland suburb.

Originally intending to follow in his father's footsteps, Sax began his undergraduate studies at Haverford College, a small Quaker school outside of Philadelphia.

"I developed a love for literature," Sax said, explaining how his studies to become a lawyer were derailed. "I guess I was foolish enough and egotistical enough to want to become a novelist."

Sax is the middle child and the English professor sandwiched between his physician mother and older and younger brothers, all of whom became doctors.

"At Thanksgiving dinner, my mother and brothers are discussing hemoglobin," he said, while he's concerned about the future of the National Endowment for the Arts.

Following graduation from

POINTER OF INTEREST

Haverford, Sax began his advanced studies at the University of Michigan, earning a master's degree in English. Thinking that the best way to begin writing that novel would be to take a teaching job, Sax finished his master's requirements in 11 months and took a job teaching English at an east-coast boarding school.

He quickly learned that being a prep-school teacher would not give him evenings, weekends and summer vacations to write a novel, as he had hoped.

"I learned after four years that I didn't want to be a prep-school teacher," he said. "I got a call at 6 a.m. on a Saturday morning from a father (in a socially prominent family), there was a lot of static on the line, and the operator said it was a ship-to-shore call. The father was on a boat off the coast of South Carolina and he'd just received his son's grades. He said, 'What the hell is wrong with Sonny? I decided then that I didn't want to be beholden to absentee parents.'"

Sax left the boarding school environment and began working on his Ph.D. in English at the University of Michigan. In addition, he taught part time at U-M, Wayne State and Madonna. He joined Madonna's staff full time in 1985, where he has had his most gratifying teaching experiences, he said.

"Most of the students are known as FTIAC, or first time in any college," he explained. "The average age of the student is 31; most have full-time jobs and are taking classes at night. It's a working class college and many of the students are the first in their families to pursue a college degree. These are the best students. They really want that degree and they are eager to learn."

Despite criticism he heard when he was a student and what surely continues today about degrees in English, Sax defends the study of literature.

"An English degree empowers a person with critical thinking skills and it provides an education in cultural literacy," he said. "The value of a society can be determined by its attitude toward the arts and humanities and the manner in which it chooses to educate its children."

Did Sax ever write that novel? He did and he said it was utterly unpublishable. "It was a derivative of William Faulkner stream-of-consciousness and point-of-view," he said. "It was about two college-age men hitchhiking and two women hiking on Mount Shasta."

With the novel out of the way, Sax has channeled his writing toward scholarly articles on Native Americans and other literary subjects. He has lived in Grosse Pointe Park since 1984 and coaches basketball, soccer and floor hockey at the Neighborhood Club.

Woods approves new paramedic labor contract

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The Grosse Woods City Council recently approved the last of four labor contracts just in time to begin thinking about the next round of labor negotiations.

The council, last week, approved a three-year contract with the Police Officers Labor Council on behalf of the city's advanced emergency medical technicians (AEMTs) and part-time radio dispatchers. The AEMTs had been without a new contract since the old one expired in June 1993.

"The city has four different bargaining units to deal with," said union representative and AEMT Jim Vowell. "About the time that the contracts expired, the city hired Peter Thomas as the new city administrator. The council asked us to be patient while Thomas got up to speed on the issues, and we had no problem with that.

"We also were the last bargaining unit that the administration negotiated with. Once we sat down, we were able to hammer out an agreement in about three weeks."

City administrator Thomas said that the new agreement calls for a 3 percent pay raise per year for the duration of the contract. The base pay for AEMTs at the beginning of the contract was $26,915. Pay raises scheduled for the first two years of the contract will be retroactively added to salaries.

"We're pretty happy with most of the contract," said Vowell. "We had to take some changes in our medical coverage, but what we are now receiving is typical for most contracts these days."

Under the new contract, AEMTs and dispatchers will have a 80-20 co-payment and a $100-$200 deductible on their health coverage. That means after paying a $100 deductible for single people and a $200 deductible for family coverage, the insured will have a 20 percent co-payment. Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Michigan is providing the coverage, said Vowell.

The city has four AEMTs, and seven part-time dispatchers. The part-time dispatchers, by the end of the contract, will have the same hourly salary as full-time dispatchers — $12.75 an hour. The part-time dispatchers will be limited to three eight-hour shifts per week, said Vowell. AEMTs work three 24-hour shifts per week with four days off.

"AEMTs have advanced training," said public safety director Jack Patterson. "After taking regular EMT classes, AEMTs continue their training in advanced studies. After completing these courses, they must complete a state-monitored test and demonstrate that they have learned the appropriate skills to be an AEMT."

"In order to keep their rating, AEMTs must maintain their credentials by taking a number of specialized courses approved by the state and the Michigan medical advisory board."

AEMTs can do a number of things that EMTs can't do, including defibrillation, and intravenous administering of fluids.

The Woods averages about 600 ambulance runs a year; a third of those require AEMTs.

BOARD OF REVIEW SESSIONS FOR 1995

The Assessment Roll for the Township of Grosse Pointe, Wayne County and the Township of Lake, Macomb County, Grosse Pointe Shores, Michigan, for the year 1995 has been compiled. The tentative equalization rates for residential and commercial property is 50.00 and the estimated residential multiplier for 1995 is 1.00, and estimated commercial multiplier is 1.00. An increase in the average of 1.2% will be reflected on assessments unless construction has been done to a home which would affect its value (assessment). The Board of Review will hear official petitions on the following dates:

TUESDAY, MARCH 7, 1995
and
MONDAY, MARCH 13, 1995

9:00 a.m. — 12:00 noon
and
1:30 p.m. — 5:00 p.m.

The Board will meet in the Grosse Pointe Shores Municipal Building (first floor), 795 Lake Shore Road, Grosse Pointe Shores. All property owners wishing to appeal their assessments and wishing to file official petitions will be seen BY APPOINTMENT ONLY. Appointments may be made by calling 884-0234. Petitions by mail must be received by the Board PRIOR to the last session (3/13/95) so they may be reviewed in a timely manner. Additionally, the Assessor is available to meet with you every Monday afternoon — You may call 884-0234 for an appointment.

Failed GOP budget plan is '96 issue

Defeat of the balanced budget constitutional amendment by the U.S. Senate last week has apparently launched it as an issue in the 1996 campaign.

The GOP by a single vote lost its bid to win the two-thirds majority needed to send the amendment to the states for their consideration.

But Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole promised to bring it up again and to continue to do so to make it a partisan issue for 1996 even if it never is approved.

Defeat of the amendment on a partisan vote also offers the Republicans a ready excuse for their expected failure to achieve a balanced budget program this year.

Yet the defeat is also seen as a setback for Dole's presidential candidacy because he is running as an experienced, "can-do" candidate. And it also will put on him the burden of getting most of the rest of the House Contract with America through the Senate.

But one reason the budget amendment failed in the Senate is the one given by many Americans who express serious doubts about it.

Opinion

In a New York Times/CBS public opinion poll on the eve of the Senate vote, the respondents supported a balanced budget amendment by a 71 percent margin.

However, when asked their opinion of the amendment if Social Security would have to be cut to achieve its budget balancing aim, only 32 percent remained as supporters.

An ABC poll after the vote reported similar results. In that poll, 67 percent of the respondents supported the amendment, but when told the balanced budget could mean cutting Social Security, only 25 percent said they still backed it.

In the Senate, most Democrats refused to vote for the balanced budget unless the GOP leaders included a promise that the Social Security trust fund would be safe if the measure became law. The GOP declined to accept that revision or to give any indication of where the party hoped to make its cutbacks.

In fact, however, the government already uses the current Social Security surplus to help finance other government activities and reduce the deficit. That fact makes the political talk in both parties about protecting the fund just more "smoke and mirrors."

The New York Times/CBS poll also showed Americans have serious doubts about other proposals in the GOP House Contract with America and the rest of the GOP agenda.

Consider these findings on several important issues:

- Sixty-two percent of all respondents said that unmarried mothers under 18 with no way of supporting their child should be allowed to receive welfare, against 31 percent who replied that they should not receive such grants, as the GOP agenda had proposed.

- On another issue, 63 percent of the respondents favored keeping military and defense spending about the same, while 18 percent would cut the current level of spending, and 16 percent favored the increase the GOP seeks.

- And on warrantless searches, already approved by the House, 69 percent of the respondents said it was a bad idea and only 20 percent favored it.

However, the poll did find strong public support for GOP proposals to reconsider preferences given to blacks and women in hiring and promotion.

Will the GOP moderate its views on some of the challenged issues to win enough Democratic support to pass them?

The Senate, traditionally the more deliberate and reflective body, seems to be more likely to do so, as it still must consider most of the House agenda.

And what will the Democrats do, if anything, to try to slow down the GOP juggernaut?

The president appears to be having adopted a more aggressive role in opposing parts of the GOP agenda, but his disorganized party has given little evidence of seeking unified opposition to the GOP.

However, the picture could change, now that the Democrats have been able to halt the GOP effort to pass the balanced budget amendment.

Millage & election date set

A second vote on a 1995-96 school millage for the Grosse Pointe school district has been set for June 12, the date of the annual school election at which two board members will be chosen.

However, Superintendent Edward J. Shine said the school board will determine later the form of the question or questions on the millage ballot.

Asked whether the school board had considered a bond issue to finance the purchase of new computers and other needed technology, Shine said it was one of several alternatives considered, but added that issuing bonds would be expensive.

Why?

Because, Shine said, it is illegal under new legislation enacted in 1994 to issue bonds for a period longer than the life of the computers, usually figured at five years.

Normally, the district issues bonds for a 20-year to 30-year term to earn the lower rate offered for longer-term bonds.

Some Pointe residents had expressed support for a bond issue as an alternative to another request for the 8.5-mill levy voted down earlier this year. That millage included the $2.4 million previously allocated to the library.

These critics said they had preferred a bond issue in order to limit the board to spending the $2.4 million for a specific purpose.

However, the board apparently could, as another alternative, levy general revenue millage and limit part of the revenue to a specific usage, such as technology, Shine said.

Another another way to face the funding issue would be to present two questions, with approval of both needed to reach the original 8.5-mill request.

One question would ask approval of a 7.2 mill-levy, excluding the controversial $2.4 million, and the other would seek 1.3 mills, the millage required to raise the $2.4 million.

By putting off the millage vote to the June date, the board will be required to pink-slip teachers and other staff members and identify other cost-cutting measures in case no additional millage is approved.

The school system attributes the first vote's defeat to people who wanted to trim school spending and taxes, to others confused by the $2.4 million issue, and to the school system's failure to communicate effectively its needs and the legislative authorization for the $2.4 million.

We agree with that analysis but also believe that the original proposal failed in part because the news media, in the Pointes and in Detroit, failed to explain adequately these two major issues:

One, the district's overall need for 8.5 mills; and the other, the complicated legislative route by which the district acquired authority to put on the ballot an 8.5-mill levy that included the $2.4 million formerly dedicated to the library.

Whatever the wording on the June 12 ballot, we hope that the school board and its management lay out more clearly than they did last time all the details of what is to be voted on.

And we surely will try to understand and explain the issues better ourselves.

Little splash in Whitewater?

The headline on a recent Wall Street Journal news story, "There may be less to the Whitewater case than meets the eye," was supported by a review of the current evidence indicating that the forecast may be true.

"Indeed," the story went on, "as independent counsel Kenneth Starr moves ahead with his investigation and refines his legal case, what is most noteworthy is how many of the biggest Whitewater headlines appear to be heading toward the cutting room floor."

Yet the story closes by suggesting that prosecutor Starr's "best — and only shot at attacking the Clintons (is) if he thinks they mishandled their personal or political affairs but didn't break the law."

Even such a conclusion, so much at variance with many media predictions, still could be, the Journal says, a "public relations disaster for Democrats — and a major blow to the Clintons, even if no criminal charges are ever brought."

Perhaps so. Yet even if that should occur, after the unproved charges, innuendoes, gossip and irresponsible reporting of the cast, it might be scored a victory for the Clintons and their associates.

Both guilty?

Michigan Republicans lost no time in attacking Democratic Sen. Carl Levin for casting "the deciding vote" to kill the balanced budget amendment last week.

The day the vote occurred, a state GOP press release called Levin's decision "a major loss for Michigan taxpayers," although 34 other senators voted against the proposal, including a lone Republican, Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon. Levin became the target because he faces re-election in Michigan in 1996.

Levin told the Detroit Free Press he could "not vote for a constitutional amendment which raids the Social Security trust fund surplus to cover up a huge deficit."

In fact, both parties have used the Social Security surplus for that purpose when in control of the White House, although the majority GOP refused to accept an amendment to end the practice.

Letters

Parent clarifies Maire stance

To the Editor:

Regarding the article written in the Grosse Pointe News on Feb. 9, "Maire Teaching Methods Questioned," I feel I must respond and clarify.

The impression that was implied by a fifth-grade Maire teacher was that I am unhappy with my children's teachers. This is not the case. I know my children's teachers at Maire are hard-working and dedicated, and I appreciate all their efforts.

The problem exists with the program selected by the administration that is the only math alternative tool for the K-2 children at Maire. Through literature dispensed by the school, I understand that this program was brought to our school by Mrs. Zokas, principal, via Oakland University, straight from New Zealand. A handful of other Michigan districts participated in its pilot program in 1989, with some schools abandoning it or using it as a supplement.

Maire adopted this program in 1992-1993 school year, costing taxpayers tens of thousands of dollars. Parents were led to believe that this program was going to be used as a supplement to the regular Maire math program. It was not until this year that I discovered that this program is not just the supplement, but it is the curriculum.

I am not opposed to manipulatives. However, I do know that most current research supports rote, drill, and pencil/paper math computation. These concepts are absent. Additionally, I am somewhat concerned that this program was designed for disadvantaged children and it lacks the substance to meet the Grosse Pointe curriculum standards.

I am a loving, concerned parent and consider it my duty (and privilege) to take an active role in my children's education. I did not choose this program that has insufficient longitudinal research to support its self-proclaimed excellence.

It has taken over two years to gather the appropriate materials (recycled garbage) to collate and administer this program to our children. To date, it is not completed or easily accessible to students, and teachers are not fully trained to implement the program.

I do not want my children's education to be part of someone's research paper. I was not aware that when I sent my children to Maire Elementary they would be subjected to experimental instruction and I would have no choice.

Just as happy parents at Maire get the instruction they desire for their children, I want the same opportunity. If this school administration wants to jump from one trendy experiment to the next, at least give parents a choice. After all, we are paying the tab and it is our children at risk.

Mrs. Pam Bartel
City of Grosse Pointe

Editor's note — Mrs. Zokas was removed as Maire's principal and reassigned to the school system's central office after we received Mrs. Bartel's letter.

Ditto on Maire

To the Editor:

I, too, echo Mr. MacLeod's comments ("Don't Take Schools for Granted," Feb. 23) that Grosse Pointe's appeal in large part is due to the reputation of its schools. I also acknowledge that my children are doing well to the extent that their report cards say so. As a wary consumer, however, I felt it necessary to "look under the hood" at the program. This is what I found:

No textbooks (children are "encouraged" to seek out reading materials), no desks (the children sit at tables and work cooperatively), minimal differentiation, little teaching basics,

Pondering the imponderable

I have lived for (ahem) a few decades. I have earned, fair and square, more than one college degree. I have hung around, occasionally, with some extremely bright people.

But I'm still plagued by imponderables.

Imponderables are those sticky, stupid why-don't-they kinds of questions.

The if-they-can-send-a-man-to-the-moon-why-can't-they-cure-the-common-cold kind of things. The why-don't-airlines-put-passengers-in-black-boxes kind of questions. (Who cares if the flight recordings survive? People are more important.)

Nobody knows the answers to imponderables.

Who knows why automobile manufacturers don't put steering wheels in the middle? Who knows who the Cling Peach Advisory Board advises? Who knows why O.J. thinks he can get away with murder?

I've written about imponderables before. But here are five new ones to ponder:

1. Why do people build homes and churches and schools and businesses in places that are below sea level?

Hello. Below sea level means no matter how high and how strong you build the seawall, how well you construct the levee or how many sandbags you stack up, sooner or later the joint is going to fill up with muddy water.

2. What is the ingredient in the Y chromosome that prevents a man from easing his foot onto a brake pedal, pulling over to the side of the road, rolling down the window, sniffing a manly snuffle, and saying:

I Say

Margie Reins Smith

"Excuse me. How do I get to ... such-and-so."

Women are testosterone-challenged. During their lives, women receive hundreds of dire warnings about speaking to strangers. Women are perpetually haunted by the threat of being typecast as "ditsy dames."

But women find it incredibly easy to ask total strangers to please point us in the proper direction. Sometimes we do this three or four times before we get where we want to go. It's easy.

3. When we heat water to a rolling boil to make coffee or tea, then spill it on our hands or feet or splash it in our laps, we yowl and scream and look for sympathy. But we sip the same boiling-temperature beverage with a smile and a satisfying sigh.

"Ahhhhhhh..." we say, closing our eyes to savor the warmth.

Are tongues and lips tougher than legs and laps? I think not.

4. We slather our arms, legs, shoulders, backs, noses and knees with gooey sunblocks and sunscreens a la SPF 32 and 64 and 128. Then we spread ourselves out on the sand and bake for hours and hours.

Why don't we sit in the shade? Or sit in the sun for 15 minutes, then take a nap under an umbrella?

My dermatologist even has trouble with this imponderable.

The final imponderable, appropriately, comes after I've returned from a week-long vacation.

5. What happens to my well-honed sense of fashion, propriety and who-looks-good-in-what when I travel? Why, when I'm out of town, do I enthusiastically purchase odd, flamboyant stuff that I'll never wear when I get home?

Being near the ocean seems to intensify this insane and irresponsible behavior. I fork over big bucks for wide-brimmed straw hats bedecked with plastic fruits and vegetables and swathed with filmy tie-dyed scarves. I buy blinding day-glo T-shirts bearing the names of places I'll never return to. I purchase clunky wooden necklaces, earrings the size of whisk brooms, wacky shoes and variations of shell-encrusted baubles and belts and bags and bangles that I'll never-ever-in-a-million-years wear again except when I'm cleaning the basement or washing the dog or going to a Halloween party.

Ponder those. Send answers ASAP.

Give a cheer for the cheerleaders

They're expected to carry a regular class load and do above-average work, and still manage to be at school as early as 6:30 in the morning, practice five days a week and stay at some games until 9 at night.

To hone their skills some pump iron, go to special camp or attend national meets, yet they never seem to get any mention — even if their team wins.

They're the Pointe's high school basketball and football cheerleaders, of course.

"We've got two new coaches and we're doing harder things than before," says North's Angelique Wierzbicki, whose mom, Ruth Azar, tipped FYI that some credit might be due her daughter's hard-working teammates.

One of the advanced moves is "flying," where cheerleaders stack up two high and flip another off into the air.

In case you wondered who these fearless flyers are, at South High it's Kristy Allor, Kelly Bakewell, Katie Berschback, Melissa Bogdan, Dana Esmacher, Christine Galnor, Lisa Mullen, Melissa Oglesby, Nicki Otto, Sandra Scannell, Annemarie Spaulding and Erin Wedding.

Also Sonya Gierck, Christine Kujowski, Carrie Marr, Marie Massu, Jenni Smith, Sarah Sudney and Larissa Peck

And Madeline Murawski, Brianne Nadeau, Jackie Pettibone, Jenny Schnepfer and Amanda Watkins.

At North, it's Ortenca Evans, Jennie Loranger, Karen Powers, Zabrina Ratzlaff, Lisa Ziolkowski and Angelique Wierzbicki.

Also Christina Bidigare, Lisa Christensen, Rebecca Dallaire, Melissa Miller, Nina Serafino and Dawn Wiringer.

Darned fax smudges the facts

Home, sweet home. Hot showers never felt so good. I could do with a little less ice on the sidewalks — but if I have to choose between winter and the Belizean humidity that left sweat coursing down my breastbone, I'll take the cold. I guess.

I've found that scorpions aren't nearly as funny when you encounter them in the bathtub as they are when you're just writing about them. And the collision of tradition and modernity, of ancient cultures and colonial mentality that is Belize can be exhausting.

Take the faxes. Please. The last three columns I sent in were an attempt to share the rhythm of village life, its pleasures and problems, the challenges people face every day, caught between old ways and new. The rewards of spending several weeks in a family home there are tremendous.

So are the difficulties. The faxed columns are illustrative. My little village has no electricity. My old manual typewriter has long since gone to the repair shop in the sky. The typewriter at the baboon sanctuary was stolen and sold by an employee with a drug habit. So I hand-wrote the columns on legal paper.

Then I rolled each column onto a nice smooth stick that Mr. Robinson sanded for me, so the papers could make it through the bus trip to Belize City without getting crumpled and rendered illegible when faxed.

It didn't help. My handwriting — perhaps abetted by electronic glitches from international transmission — was a mystery to the Grosse Pointe News typesetters.

I have it on good authority that they were seen to gnash their teeth and tear their hair and send the dang thing back to the editor — who couldn't read it either.

Those of you interested in tropical birds must have wondered at some of my sightings:

There's nobody to blame but my penmanship. It's one more piece of evidence that the American educational system has been going to hell in a handbasket for a long time. But there's also heartening evidence of the good old American genius for cracking the most difficult puzzle: Last week's column didn't have a single mistake.

"We found the Rosetta stone," the assistant editor explained.

Meanwhile, back in the 'burbs, you've all been up to some startling stuff while I've been occupied in sunnier climes.

What's this about turning down the school millage, for instance? Hey, that isn't the Grosse Pointe I'm used to. I can imagine that a protest vote like that sent shock waves around the educational establishment. Even in a comfortably affluent district, voters expect fiscal responsibility — and it looks like some people don't believe they got it.

The same week, it's reported that the librarians are suing the school and library boards for reducing their hours, wages, and benefits. If anyone is surprised about that, it's only because they underestimated the distress felt by library personnel when the library was spun off last summer. Lawsuits may be unexpected in the polite world that is Grosse Pointe, but my hunch is that the librarians didn't feel they were treated like gentlefolk in the first place.

It says here that the village of Grosse Pointe Shores is prepared to do the right thing and construct separated sewers — if the voters approve a bond issue in May. This is something the village and its residents can be proud of. Residents even have the opportunity to clean up their lakefront and make some money at the same time if they choose to invest in the bonds.

Good heavens if they'll let somebody else do the work here invest in these bonds they're bound to be a good investment. Are you guys going to invest any teeny weeny bonds that I can afford?

Learn cable production skills at War Memorial

The non-profit community television services department of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial is scheduling its next local origination production classes. The complimentary six-week course will meet on Wednesdays, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Individuals taking the course will be asked to serve as volunteers for at least three War Memorial productions. A course confirmation letter will be sent to the first six Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods residents, 18 years of age and older.

Call 313-881-7511 for reservations and additional information.

Learn how to produce local origination programs at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

As long as we're at it, let's hear it for South Varsity, J.V. and Freshmen coaches Paullette Griesbaum, Diane Johnson and Nan Lewis, and North High's two new counterparts Julie Walkley and Nancy Neal.

By the way, guys — it's not just for girls anymore. Unlike South, North has two men on the team, Varsity cheerleaders Bruce Robb and Steve Rogowski. How come North is beating South in the male cheerleader department? "We'd love to have some guys, but no one has expressed an interest," says South's Brianne Nadeau.

The birds and the beasts

Pointe wildlife has been getting into mischief as usual, with FYI's ever-alert Critter Patrol reporting:

— The Park's Karen McShane came home just before Valentine's Day to discover a hole in her 4-by-5 foot dining room picture window. If son Michael hadn't heard the crash earlier that day and spotted the culprit looking kind of dazed on the lawn, she still would have been able to figure out what it was.

She and husband James swear the hole (now repaired) was in the shape of a pheasant, with spread wings and a long tail.

I thought these things only happened in the cartoons.

— When a squirrel fell down the chimney into the fireplace of her Park home a few weeks back, Kay VanDeGraaf hastily blocked off the opening with whatever she could find, only to have the animal scoot down through the ash chute and emerge in her basement.

Terrorized by the frantic furry interloper, Kay had to wait until husband John arrived before she could plead with him to do something about it.

"What happened next was pure Grosse Pointe," says friend Susie Scheiwe.

John went to the liquor cabinet and selected a bottle of Cherry Kijafa.

Then he poured some in a bowl and put it in the basement.

The squirrel must have been thirsty, because the next time they checked it was curled up asleep inside a coffee can in the recycling bin.

John took the coffee can and placed it outside.

End of story.

If you have an FYI tip or a better way to put squirrels to sleep, call Ken Eatherly at 822-4091.

Parcells offers parent class

A parenting workshop sponsored by the social workers of the Grosse Pointe school district will be held in Parcells Middle School auditorium on Tuesdays, March 14-28, at 7:30 p.m.

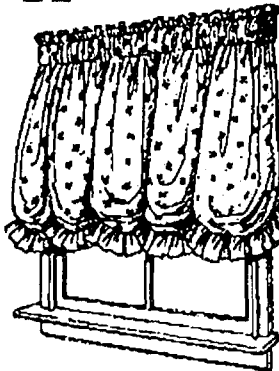

All school district parents and teachers are invited to the free workshop. Three different speakers will present material and answer questions on "When I Was Your Age," dealing with youth and adult communication; "Providing Structure and Nurture," on dealing with discipline and self-esteem; and "How to Survive Parenting."

phonics and computational mathematics replaced by experimental teaching programs (whole language and BSM), dedicated teachers forced to throw away what has worked well for so many years in favor of an outcomes based system that places more emphasis on collectivism and little emphasis on individual achievement, and a system that has been completely overhauled in the last four years without any clear reason for doing so (clearly not for budgetary constraints — this is the system that is spending nearly twice the state average). This is not the program that Grosse Pointe built its reputation on.

I endorse the need to support the school system in Grosse Pointe. I reject, however, the idea that funding a system that has lost its way is support. The Grosse Pointe school system needs parents to critically review the program, talk to the teachers and administrators, be involved in their children's learning, probe the school board and even look at what other schools are providing.

If the schools need additional funds, let them first explain why the program was changed, who was responsible for initiating these changes (and why parents weren't informed), where the money was taken from to fund these changes, and what is their explanation for the reduction in MEAP scores since the inception of these changes.

Until a full accounting is made and a strategy for a return to the school system excellence of the recent past is developed, I cannot sit by idly and vote for millages to encourage more of the same. As Mr. MacLeod correctly states, "Complacency is an insidious malady." It is my hope that it is not terminal in the Grosse Pointes.

Doing well on the Hill

To the Editor:

We are writing in response to Jim Stickford's article regarding La Strega's move from the Hill to the Village. We feel the need to clarify several points. This would not be necessary if he had interviewed other merchants on the Hill.

There is a general feeling on the Hill that we are one of four locations to shop in Grosse Pointe; the others are the Village, Kercheval in the Park and Mack Avenue. This is one of the reasons that living in Grosse Pointe is so special, the convenience of shopping selection within a very small area.

What might surprise you is that there are 25 retail shops on the Hill alone. This number includes four restaurants, three clothing stores, five gift shops, two jewelry stores, one drug store, two travel agencies, an antique store, a sports equipment and attire store, a children's furniture and accessory shop, a remodeling business, an eyewear store, two interior design businesses that sell merchandise off the floor, and the Grosse Pointe News.

We think it is important to note that this number does not include four banks, five hair salons, six Realtors, and a variety of other businesses on the second or third floors of many of the buildings. This variety offers those who work on the Hill the convenience of shopping during their lunch hour, not to mention the many general shoppers who frequent the Hill.

Last year, representatives from the Hill, Cottage Hospital, National Garages and the Farms reconvened a previously established parking committee to determine solutions for better utilization of available parking spaces. Because of this group's efforts, Cottage Hospital lowered parking deck rates for Hill employees, who are willing to park on the upper level.

For $40 a month employees can park all day. It only makes sense that employees, parking for the day, would take advantage of this opportunity for the convenience of their customers. The Cottage parking deck and the "B" lot behind the deck have plenty of spaces for long-term parking. If employees were willing to park in these two areas, they would not only be saving money, but freeing spaces on Kercheval and the municipal lot behind Perry's.

The comment regarding "the former car dealership" space being available is erroneous. Mr. Meade owns that property and still runs a repair service from that location.

The Hill Association is continuously addressing customer, retail and business needs. We care that La Strega is moving and wish them success in their new location, but also know that theirs was a business decision that residents on the Hill could not have changed.

It is a disappointment that the article, dated Feb. 23, was so one-sided, and we hope in the future that reporters make an effort to get both sides for a story. There are many fine and successful businesses on the Hill that wish to continue to serve the community.

Community ed self-supporting

To the Editor:

On March 2, a former instructor (who was concerned about out cancellation of classes that fail to meet minimum enrollment requirements) asked "Where is our Community Education Program Heading?"

As supervisor of Community Education for the Grosse Pointe Public School System, I would like your readers to understand how our department operates.

Because our programs are funded by class fees (rather than tax dollars), we cannot afford to run a class if expenses exceed revenues, which is why we cancel classes that don't operate in the black. However, we strive to cut costs so that we can continue offering, at reasonable fees, classes that may have only limited audiences.

Those who attended our systemwide Program Advisory Committee meeting on Feb. 28 heard superintendent Edward Shine remind the audience that Community Education is expected to be fully self-sustaining; tax dollars, in accordance with board policy and community consensus, are spent only on K-12 programs. While many school systems do use tax dollars for community education programs and some organizations, such as the Neighborhood Club and the War Memorial, receive additional financial support through donations and other revenues, Grosse Pointe Community Education cannot rely on either taxes or contributions. Thus, cutting costs and increasing revenues are the keys to our continued survival.

For this reason, we set course fees and class minimums to ensure that our classes cover their direct costs as well as our departmental costs. Direct costs include the instructor's salary, FICA, retirement, supplies, and so forth; departmental costs include staff salaries and fringe benefits, printing (including our brochure), postage, maintenance and repair fees of office and classroom equipment (photocopiers, audiovisual equipment, pianos, sewing machines, kilns, etc.), and both office and program supplies. In addition, course fees must also cover our share of operating and maintenance costs for the facilities where we run our programs.

If classes have high fixed costs and low enrollments, we can't cover our expenses. This is why we have converted many instructors (who were formerly paid an hourly wage) to co-sponsors (who split revenues with us and are responsible for costs directly associated with their classes). As co-sponsors, instructors receive higher revenues if enrollments increase, and lower revenues if enrollments decline. For some, the risks of this arrangement outweigh the potential benefits, and they have chosen to not teach for us. Other instructors prefer co-sponsorship because it allows them to run classes that would otherwise be canceled and gives them an opportunity to present new programs and develop an audience for them.

When I joined this department, only John Fun-

dukian's programs were then operating in the black. Why? Because when he was hired in 1990 as program supervisor, he took programs that were operating in the red and immediately implemented strategies designed to make them self-sustaining. As a result, all of his programs operate in the black and contribute significantly to the well-being of the department.

During last year's budget presentation, I reported that the financial principles that made these programs so successful were now being applied to all Community Education programs. Thus, we have reduced our fixed costs so that we can continue to offer a wide variety of classes without losing money, and we have developed new programs to meet community needs while generating additional revenues.

Where is Community Education heading? The answer is really quite simple: We are heading toward long-term financial stability so that we can continue providing lifelong opportunities for education, recreation, and enrichment. Through our commitment to fiscal prudence and sound management and with the support of this community, we will achieve our goal.

Paula Jarvis
Supervisor of Community Education

phonics and computational mathematics replaced by experimental teaching programs (whole language and BSM), dedicated teachers forced to throw away what has worked well for so many years in favor of an outcomes based system that places more emphasis on collectivism and little emphasis on individual achievement, and a system that has been completely overhauled in the last four years without any clear reason for doing so (clearly not for budgetary constraints - this is the system that is spending nearly twice the state average). This is not the program that Grosse Pointe built its reputation on.

I endorse the need to support the school system in Grosse Pointe. I reject, however, the idea that funding a system that has lost its way is support. The Grosse Pointe school system needs parents to critically review the program, talk to the teachers and administrators, be involved in their children's learning, probe the school board and even look at what other schools are providing.

If the schools need additional funds, let them first explain why the program was changed, who was responsible for initiating these changes (and why parents weren't informed), where the money was taken from to fund these changes, and what is their explanation for the reduction in MEAP scores since the inception of these changes.

Until a full accounting is made and a strategy for a return to the school system excellence of the recent past is developed, I cannot sit idly and vote for millages to encourage more of the same. As Mr. MacLeod correctly states, "Complacency is an insidious malady." It is my hope that it is not terminal in the Grosse Pointes.

Doing well on the Hill

To the Editor:

We are writing in response to Jim Stickford's

article regarding La Strega's move from the Hill to the Village. We feel the need to clarify several points. This would not be necessary if he had interviewed other merchants on the Hill.

There is a general feeling on the Hill that we are one of four locations to shop in Grosse Pointe; the others are the Village, Kercheval in the Park and Mack Avenue. This is one of the reasons that living in Grosse Pointe is so special, the convenience of shopping selection within a very small area.

What might surprise you is that there are 25 retail shops on the Hill alone. This number includes four restaurants, three clothing stores, five gift shops, two jewelry stores, one drug store, two travel agencies, an antique store, a sports equipment and attire store, a children's furniture and accessory shop, a remodeling business, an eyewear store, two interior design businesses that sell merchandise off the floor, and the Grosse Pointe News.

We think it is important to note that this number does not include four banks, five hair salons, six Realtors, and a variety of other businesses on the second or third floors of many of the buildings. This variety offers those who work on the Hill the convenience of shopping during their lunch hour, not to mention the many general shoppers who frequent the Hill.

Last year, representatives from the Hill, Cottage Hospital, National Garages and the Farms reconvened a previously established parking committee to determine solutions for better utilization of available parking spaces. Because of this group's efforts, Cottage Hospital lowered parking deck rates for Hill employees, who are willing to park on the upper level.

For $40 a month employees can park all day. It only makes sense that employees, parking for the day, would take advantage of this opportunity for the convenience of their customers. The Cottage parking deck and the "B" lot behind the deck have plenty of spaces for long-term parking. If employees were willing to park in these two areas, they would not only be saving money, but freeing spaces on Kercheval and the municipal lot behind Perry's.

The comment regarding "the former car dealership" space being available is erroneous. Mr. Meade owns that property and still runs a repair service from that location.

The Hill Association is continuously addressing customer, retail and business needs. We care that La Strega is moving and wish them success in their new location, but also know that theirs was a business decision that residents on the Hill could not have changed.

It is a disappointment that the article, dated Feb. 23, was so one-sided, and we hope in the future that reporters make an effort to get both sides for a story. There are many fine and successful businesses on the Hill that wish to continue to serve the community.

Community ed self-supporting

To the Editor:

On March 2, a former instructor (who was concerned about out cancellation of classes that fail to meet minimum enrollment requirements) asked "Where is our Community Education Program Heading?"

As supervisor of Community Education for the Grosse Pointe Public School System, I would like your readers to understand how our department operates.

Because our programs are funded by class fees (rather than tax dollars), we cannot afford to run a class if expenses exceed revenues, which is why we cancel classes that don't operate in the black. However, we strive to cut costs so that we can continue offering, at reasonable fees, classes that may have only limited audiences.

Those who attended our systemwide Program Advisory Committee meeting on Feb. 28 heard superintendent Edward Shine remind the audience that Community Education is expected to be fully self-sustaining; tax dollars, in accordance with board policy and community consensus, are spent only on K-12 programs. While many school systems do use tax dollars for community education programs and some organizations, such as the Neighborhood Club and the War Memorial, receive additional financial support through donations and other revenues, Grosse Pointe Community Education cannot rely on either taxes or contributions. Thus, cutting costs and increasing revenues are the keys to our continued survival.

For this reason, we set course fees and class minimums to ensure that our classes cover their direct costs as well as our departmental costs. Direct costs include the instructor's salary, FICA, retirement, supplies, and so forth; departmental costs include staff salaries and fringe benefits, printing (including our brochure), postage, maintenance and repair fees of office and classroom equipment (photocopiers, audiovisual equipment, pianos, sewing machines, kilns, etc.), and both office and program supplies. In addition, course fees must also cover our share of operating and maintenance costs for the facilities where we run our programs.

If classes have high fixed costs and low enrollments, we can't cover our expenses. This is why we have converted many instructors (who were formerly paid an hourly wage) to co-sponsors (who split revenues with us and are responsible for costs directly associated with their classes). As co-sponsors, instructors receive higher revenues if enrollments increase and lower revenues if enrollments decline. For some, the risks of this arrangement outweigh the potential benefits, and they have chosen to not teach for us. Other instructors prefer co-sponsorship because it allows them to run classes that would otherwise be canceled and gives them an opportunity to present new programs and develop an audience for them.

When I joined this department, only John Fun-

dukian's programs were then operating in the black. Why? Because when he was hired in 1990 as program supervisor, he took programs that were operating in the red and immediately implemented strategies designed to make them self-sustaining. As a result, all of his programs operate in the black and contribute significantly to the well-being of the department.

During last year's budget presentation, I reported that the financial principles that made these programs so successful were now being applied to all Community Education programs. Thus, we have reduced our fixed costs so that we can continue to offer a wide variety of classes without losing money, and we have developed new programs to meet community needs while generating additional revenues.

Where is Community Education heading? The answer is really quite simple: We are heading toward long-term financial stability so that we can continue providing lifelong opportunities for education, recreation, and enrichment. Through our commitment to fiscal prudence and sound management and with the support of this community, we will achieve our goal.

Paula Jarvis
Supervisor of Community Education

Kitchen & Bath Design CONCEPTS

by Gene Pindzia

Because the kitchen and bathroom are the most widely used rooms in the household, their condition and design play a big role in determining a family's enjoyment of its home. These factors also play a large part in determining the resale value of a house. With this in mind, homeowners are likely to devote a great deal of attention to the planning and creation of new kitchens and baths, as well as to improving and up-dating old ones. In the weeks ahead, future columns in this series on kitchens and baths will attempt to make the public familiar with current design, materials, fixtures, and appliances associated with these rooms. These ideas, hints, and information should help readers to conceptualize and better understand the basics of kitchens and bathrooms.

Welcome to our new column on kitchens and bathrooms. In the weeks to come, we will provide you with useful information on how to tastefully and affordably update or remodel your kitchen and bathrooms. We have over 18 years in the remodeling industry, offering complete remodeling and design services specializing in kitchens, baths, and additions. Visit our showroom at estate sales*To the Editor:

As a resident of Grosse Pointe, I urge all to attend your local city council meetings and demand a change or law on the books regarding household/estate sales.

The McKinley block had the unpleasant honor of a sale on March 4. People coming to the sale parked on the wrong side of the street, across driveways, in driveways, jumped curbs damaging lawns, walked across neighbors properties and, heaven forbid, one wanted to back out of their drive. The street was basically a parking lot.

I know of no other business that can blatantly disregard the parking ordinance or not pay for the privilege of metered parking.

And how many traffic-oriented commercial businesses are able to operate in a zoned residential area?

Yet household/estate sale companies are profiting at the expense of surrounding neighbors.

The five council branches of Grosse Pointe need to demand that 1) streets be demeaned one-way, at cost to the company, the day of the sale; 2) the company pays off-duty officers to maintain traffic, parking and order; 3) a tow company on standby to tow illegally parked cars; 4) the company pays for damage done to any neighbor's property; and 5) a fine system be established should local police need to respond, i.e., $50 first call and increases of $50 thereafter.

Another option is allowing the immediate block, on which the sale is to be held, to petition the refusal of such.

I refuse to tolerate disrespect in my own neighborhood from the household/estate companies whose only concern is profit.

As residents we have a voice and a choice. Make it heard.

League deserves
much thanks*To the Editor:

On behalf of all the parents and "Wayne County Youth At-Risk," I wish to publicly extend our deep and sincere appreciation to all members of the League of Women Voters-Detroit Metropolitan Area, particularly my Grosse Pointe "sisters" who have been so supportive of the efforts to bring public attention to the abuses and inhumane conditions which have persisted for over 20 years at the Wayne County Youth Home and also to the illegal diversion of millage money voted on in 1988 to correct this outrageous disgrace.

During 1994, the LWV-DMA and its sister leagues actively sponsored three educational forums in Harper Woods, the City-County Building and Livonia, respectively, and invited all relevant government officials to listen to testimony from not only parents and youngsters who have directly experienced the system, but also experts who work in the system as well.

In addition, LWV members from all over the tri-county area gave generously of their time to attend many hearings scheduled by the Wayne County commissioners and sat and listened to much rhetoric without any action.

Therefore, not only do I believe these wonderful

LWV members should receive public recognition for their efforts, but also a public apology for the oversight made in the Grosse Pointe News article, dated Feb. 2, "Commissioner Richner Calls for Reform of Wayne County's Youth Home." It was stated that "the Wayne County commission, hopes that a report by a commission committee will finally force Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara to release funds to fix up the county's youth home."

For a fact, this commission committee did not convene until after receipt of the scathing report from the Justice Department dated Dec. 21, 1994. However, during the 18 months of hearings and public forums prior to this report, not one commissioner was aware that the abusive conditions and civil rights violations of the youth home had been taken to the Justice Department as a last resort because no real improvements were made.

Simply put, any action to confront the Wayne County executive office was deemed political suicide, and these troubled kids were not worth the risk. Commissioner Bernard Parker did attempt at one time to lead reform efforts, but was driven back from lack of support.

Speaking as a school-teacher from way back, I have always believed in the importance of giving credit when and if it is due. On behalf of all our "Wayne County Youth At-Risk," may I commend all the supportive sister members of the LWV-DMA and the courageous parents who came forth to testify who not only deserve much of the credit, but sincere gratitude. Without your unflinching efforts, it would have been Wayne County business as usual. Thank you.

No means no*To the Editor:

According to news reports, members of the Grosse Pointe board of education and supporters of Proposition One (the 8.5 mill homestead tax) blame their defeat on "voter confusion."

Since the campaign was based on the premise of "maintaining property value," perhaps it is the "yes" voters who were confused.

Bridging the generation gap

Now is the time to enroll in generational learning courses offered at Grosse Pointe South High School. Last year the Grosse Pointe League of Women Voters conducted a pilot program that allowed three league members to study alongside high school students in a European history course.

The pilot was declared a success and as a result, three classes will be offered beginning this month:

- United States history begins Wednesday, March 15, and is taught by Mary Miller.

- American studies, which began March 6, is a combination of American history and American literature, is a two-hour class that meets from 10 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. and is taught by John Shanley.

- European history class begins Monday, March 13 and is taught by Jim Garlough.

To enroll, call the main office at South at 313-343-2122 and leave your name and telephone number as a message for Garlough.

First of all, property values have historically increased when taxes were lowered, not raised.

Second, with the passage of Proposal A, voters agreed to pay a higher sales tax and a higher real estate transfer tax in exchange for lower property taxes. Since everyone is now paying those higher sales and transfer taxes, aren't they entitled to the reduction in property taxes they bargained for?

Third, and most important, a significant number of Michigan's public schools have already proven they can provide students with an excellent education at $6,500 per pupil. Why not here?

The confusion seems to be among the proponents of Proposition One. The voters have responded, and the answer is "NO!" "No" does not mean that voters want to pay another $10,000 for a redundant election two, four or six months from now.

If the same millage proposal can be brought back to the polls so soon after its defeat, shouldn't the same be true if it passes!

Millage supporters who cannot take "no" for an answer, who feel they must beat voters over the head with the same question again and again, should be required to fund these superfluous campaigns out of their own pockets.

Maybe that would help eliminate the "confusion."

Board sheds light on next year's budget, night games at South

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

It's that time of year again. The Grosse Pointe school board on Monday discussed how it would approach the budgeting process this year with considerably less revenue than in previous years.

And while members discussed how it will have to work with less money following the failure Feb. 7 of an 8.5-mill proposal that would have raised about $15 million in revenues, the Grosse Pointe South High School Boosters and Drive for Lights Committee outlined to the board their ambitious fundraising plan for installing lights on the football field.

Following the Farms city council approval last December of the installation of lights on the South football field, the school board is now required to vote on a proposed agreement between the city and the school district governing the use of the football field.

Farms city council members approved the installation of lights with certain conditions and limitations.

Attorneys representing the school system and the City of Grosse Pointe Farms, along with school administrators, South high administrators and residents of Meadow Lane and Radnor Circle, discussed and reviewed the proposed agreement in an effort to come up with possible guidelines.

In addition, a Meadow Lane resident submitted to the school district a list of five conditions drafted by a member of the Farms council not included in the proposed agreement that he feels should be included.

Superintendent Ed Shine said he is pleased with the proposed agreement but suggested the board approve it without the five additional conditions. The proposed agreement addresses the neighborhood's wishes that the school system plant additional shrubbery along the field and to prohibit the use of portable toilets.

The additional suggestions include locking the gates before, during and immediately after games, limiting the broadcast of music over the PA system and use of Farms police for game security.

The board is expected to vote on the agreement at its Monday, March 13, meeting. Meanwhile, Tom Mertz, chairman of the South Drive for Lights Committee, explained to the board how the committee will raise the necessary funds to purchase the lights.

"We are pursuing private sources, people who have come forward and expressed a willingness to participate, and, in addition to private sources, we intend to issue a letter to all South families and appeal to South alumni," Mertz said. "Hopefully, all of this will be accomplished by mid-April when we intend to move forward."

Other plans for the coming months included a discussion by the school board on whether to develop more than one budget scenario for the 1995-96 school year.

Trustee Sears Taylor objected to the plan of developing a budget based on less revenue while considering placing a second millage request on the ballot in June.

Shine said the district had projected a budget of about $75 million, including $2.4 million in library revenues, if the "gap" had passed. Now the district must develop a budget based on about $59 million in revenues, he said.

"This is Draconian budgeting," Taylor said. "We develop a bare-bones budget now, then in June we'll be flush with cash."

"Our problem, our dilemma, is if we go ahead and pretend that nothing will happen to jeopardize a millage proposal in June, and voters do not support the proposal, we have a major disaster," Shine said. "The proposal did not pass and we should honor that and go forward with a budget based on the revenues we have."

The board is expected to further discuss at its next meeting its budgeting process and plans to hold a second millage election.

Viva Picasso

Grosse Pointe Academy's artist in residence Denise Szykula holds a cracked mirror up to a student so he can understand what inspired artist Pablo Picasso to paint his cubist portraits. Szykula, a choreographer and instructor of modern dance and creative movement, began a special program on Picasso in January and will continue through this month. She works primarily with students in the first and second grades.

Student loans easier to obtain

Getting a student loan now can be as easy as visiting your school's financial aid office.

The new William D. Ford federal direct loan program now allows students to borrow directly from the federal government through their school instead of through banks and other third-party lenders.

Schools cite a number of benefits in direct lending: it's simple, there's less paperwork, less money spent on staff overtime and phone calls to lenders, and much quicker turnaround time for loan processing.

Additionally, it creates better cash flow and flexibility to structure the loan program to fit the student's particular needs and capabilities.

Beginning July 1, the total number of schools participating in the program will be 1,400, or 40 percent of total loan volume, as set by law. Contact your school for more details.

Student Spotlight Lindsay Smale

Each week in this column we focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem or short story or essay.

Lindsay Smale wrote this poem just before Christmas. She is 7 years old and a second-grader at Richard Elementary School. Her parents are Daniel and Kerry Smale of the City of Grosse Pointe.

One magic Christmas

Once in a house warm and cozy there lived a family. That family was very happy because they knew they were going to have a very merry Christmas. It was getting close to Christmas and the family was sitting by the warm fire. They had already bought a Christmas tree and were watching it glow. Oh, it looked so pretty glowing in the living room as the fire glowed, too. The family knew that it was going to be a wonderful Christmas.

When it was time to go to bed, the children begged to stay up and watch the glowing tree, but the parents said that they could not. When the children went to bed, the parents wrapped a couple of last-minute presents and then they went to sleep.

Suddenly, in the middle of the night, the mother thought she heard something downstairs. She and the father ran down the steps. Who was down there? It was Santa Claus! Don't tell the children, the parents said.

On Christmas morning, the children rushed for their toys. And they had a very merry Christmas just like they thought they would. That's because they knew that love in the family is the best thing to have. The parents did not tell their children that they saw Santa Claus that night until they were older. But the children didn't believe them, anyway. So, maybe, just maybe, parents really do have imaginations.

America & me makes three

St. Clare of Montefalco students Jim Poledink, Jason Miller and Alisha Hurt, won first, second and third places, respectively, in the 26th annual America & Me contest sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance.

The three students received certificates for their achievements. Poledink's name also will be engraved on a plaque permanently displayed in the school. His essay advances to state level competition, from which the top 10 essays in Michigan will be selected. State winners will be announced in May and will receive plaques, U.S. savings bonds valued from $500 to $1,000 and will be honored at a banquet in Lansing.

Lauren Wolcott

Lauren Wolcott is in the second grade at Maire Elementary School. She is the daughter of Linda Galante and Roger Wolcott of Grosse Pointe Park.

Almost home alone

One morning — oh, by the way, it was Saturday — I was in bed and my brother had a hockey game. My mom was supposed to take him to his game at 9 o'clock. When I woke up and looked at the clock, I couldn't believe my eyes. It was 10:04 a.m.

"Ahhhhhhhhhhhhhh, my brother missed his hockey game," I said to myself. "He must have missed it because I was sleeping and my mom couldn't carry me out to the car."

I went into my mom's bedroom. I didn't see her. Then I checked in my brother's room. I didn't see him either. Then I looked out the window to see if they were playing in the snow. They weren't out there either.

I went downstairs. By then I was really wondering where my mom and brother had gone. Soon I heard footsteps coming up the basement stairs. I stood near the kitchen doorway listening. Then I heard somebody in the kitchen, taking what sounded like a jar of peanut butter out of the cupboard. Then I saw something black. I thought: "Robbers have black caps."

Then I saw someone wearing my mom's shoes. "Why would a robber have my mom's shoes on?" I wondered. Then I knew it was my mom.

I was still wondering where my brother was. Then I realized my dad must have taken him to his hockey game. I didn't think of that before because my dad was supposed to be at work.

I slowly and quietly walked into the kitchen. When my mom turned around, she jumped. She smiled at me and said: "Good morning, sweetie." Then I told my mom that I thought I had been left home alone. She said: "I would never leave you home alone."

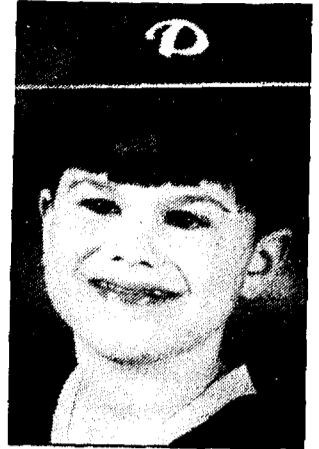

And that's how I was almost home alone.

Late afternoon lighting helped to produce this dramatic shot of Montana's Two Medicine Lake for Monte Nagler's camera. Notice how Monte placed the horizon near the center in order to give equal emphasis to both halves of the picture.

Seek harmony in landscapes

For many photographs, the image consists primarily of a subject and a background, and the technique of composition is creating a satisfactory balance between them.

With landscapes, the image is not so readily defined and more attention must be paid to color, tone, and texture and the creation of harmony within these elements.

As with most photographs, a successful landscape should have an identifiable center of attention supported by the other elements in the composition.

Something quite obvious such as a distant farmhouse, solitary tree, or mountain peak. But often it's more subtle, such as a certain area of pattern or texture or a color that stands out from the rest. Placing the emphasis on one area of the picture gives structure to your composition and helps guide the viewer's eye, which might otherwise wander about looking for something to settle upon.

Pay attention to the horizon line. A low horizon is used when you want to emphasize a dramatic sky and give a feeling of spaciousness to your shot.

A high horizon will draw attention toward the foreground and will minimize an uninteresting sky. Can you ever place the horizon in the center of the viewfinder? Yes, if you want to give equal emphasis to both halves of the image or if there's an overall symmetry that you want to emphasize.

Often, lighting is the single most important element in a landscape. Be on the lookout for fog and mist that will add a romantic quality to your shot. Sunbeams breaking through storm clouds are easily captured on film and will add exciting impact to your landscapes. Time of day will have a dramatic effect on a landscape image. Try to shoot in early morning or late afternoon when shadows are enhanced and texture and form are accentuated. Your shot will be much more exciting than if you had shot under a noontime sun.

Become aware of color changes during the course of the day. Light quality has more red content in the early morning and late afternoon, producing warmer, more mellow pic-

Proposed storage facility sparks controversy at Ghesquiere Park

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

A proposed storage shed for Little League baseball equipment in Ghesquiere Park provoked a rhubarb at the last Grosse Pointe Woods planning commission hearing when some residents questioned whether the need for a storage facility justifies another building in the park.

The proposed storage shed, a 20-foot by 20-foot structure, was suggested by Werner Lueckoff, president of the Woods-Shores Little League after he was contacted by Woods resident John Matouk, who played in the league during the 1970s.

"I was contacted by John, who asked me what the Woods-Shores Little League needed," said Lueckoff. "John wanted to make a donation to the league to honor the memory of his parents, and I suggested the storage shed, and he agreed to the idea."

The storage building is needed to hold the league's equipment, said Lueckoff, noting that there are over 40 teams in the league, but there is no permanent place to hold all their uniforms and equipment.

"We have a lot of our coaches keeping the equipment in their basements over the winter," Lueckoff said. "But that isn't always practical. We really need this. And as long as we're building a one-story building, why not build a two-story structure so that we can have people up there to broadcast games."

Planning commissioner John Kennedy said the prospect of having some baseball games broadcast over a loudspeaker is one of the things area residents are objecting to.

"Over the years, Ghesquiere Park has changed," said Kennedy. "There are baseball fields and soccer fields. A portion of the park was turned into a parking area for city hall. A lot of longtime area residents feel that their peace and quiet and their privacy have been slowly taken from them as the park has changed and become the home of organized sports."

Planning commission member Robert Fraley said the proposed site of the structure also bothers many, including some planning commission members.

"By placing the structure behind one of the diamonds, it will be close to the gazebo," said Fraley. "It will be at the apex of the park. If it's a storage shed, perhaps near the public safety garage. A lot of us aren't against the shed, just its proposed location. But I got the impression that some of the baseball people said if we didn't like the proposed location of the shed we were against baseball, Little League and children, which isn't the case at all."

After some discussion, commission members asked that all the interested parties get together to discuss the matter to see if any compromise can be reached. Lueckoff said that he is willing to discuss the matter with anyone, but the important thing is that some sort of storage building be built.

A nursing home doesn't have to be a permanent home

"Grow old along with me/The best is yet to be/The last for which the first was made..." (Rabbi Ben Ezra)

These words are part of a love plea which, in that one text, made growing older a happy prospect, secure and serene, sustained by love and companionship. A poet's dream.

Sometimes it happens but sometimes the realities of life intervene and we are left alone and lonely, dependent on the kindness of strangers, when the fragility of age weakens our ability to take care of ourselves.

Perhaps that will mean moving from familiar surroundings to a nursing home. For some, that is a frightening prospect stemming from a misconception about what a concerned nursing home can provide.

Good grief

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial will offer "The Healing Power of Grieving" with instructor Betsy McCormick on Tuesdays, March 14 to April 11, from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. or on Thursdays, March 16 through April 13, from 1 to 3 p.m. The cost is $25 for five weeks.

For additional information, call 313-881-7511.

Travel agent to address Senior Men

The Senior Men's Club of Grosse Pointe will feature Mir-eille de Bary Wilkinson at its next luncheon meeting on Tuesday, March 14, at 11:15 a.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Wilkinson is well known in Grosse

Pointe as Wilkinson owner of the de Bary Travel agency and planner for many who travel worldwide. She is a member of the board of directors of Hutzel Hospital and active in many civic and cultural activities in the Grosse Pointes.

The format of the presentation will be an interview conducted by Lyman Hurd, a member of the club.

The Senior Men's Club is the largest club of its type in the area, currently numbering over 1,000 members. Retired men in Grosse Pointe are eligible for membership. The club has regular bimonthly luncheon meetings, and sponsors 17 sub-clubs, including sports and card games. Applications can be obtained from Joseph Callahan at 313-885-1939 or any current member.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

While it is true that many people are likely to spend some time in a nursing home, it's a myth that many people are likely to spend the last years of their life there.

The whole concept of a nursing home is undergoing a much-needed metamorphosis, according to the New England Journal of Medicine. Among other improvements, rehabilitation will be emphasized with the view that older people may be able to return home.

To accomplish that goal, these institutions must serve a variety of needs for the elderly and their families. Rather than being a last resort, where elderly people passively live out their final years, nursing homes should foster patient independence and self-sufficiency in a variety of situations.

Nursing homes are often the only recourse for elderly people who may need post-hospital care following a disabling illness, such as a stroke, or an accident, such as a hip fracture, or who need day care while other members of the household work. Their needs are quite different from those of permanent residents.

The Journal article concludes that a critical first step in designing long-term care is to set some straightforward goals — improving a patient's functional abilities when possible, providing services to compensate for disabilities when necessary, and doing so in such a way that people can live as meaningful lives as their condition permits and be reasonably satisfied with the quality and cost of the therapy services.

Nursing homes offering comprehensive care are designed to put theory into practice. They demonstrate the range of both inpatient and outpatient specialized service that nursing homes must offer to serve the needs of a growing elderly population.

Among them are a chronic medical care unit for patients with ongoing ailments that require intensive medical help, a rehabilitation center and a skilled nursing facility, geared toward long-term residents and an assessment center to provide comprehensive evaluation.

First-rate residential facilities should have an ongoing rehabilitation program staffed by physical and occupational

Safeguard your retirement

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial will offer three separate lectures on "Safeguarding Retirement Security from Catastrophic Expense," on Wednesday, March 15, from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.; Wednesday, March 22, from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.; and Saturday, April 1, from 10 to 11 a.m.

Faced with sweeping social therapists, frequent physician involvement and a vigorous activities program. Pleasant surroundings and good, nutritious foods are a must. Everyone hopes that he or she will never need custodial care but, with added years, it becomes increasingly possible not only for ourselves but for those whom we may at some time be responsible, such as an aged parent.

If the person for whom you are responsible lives with you or near you, then the problem of finding the right facility for them is a matter of visiting various nursing homes, checking them out and talking to professionals who have had some experience in what to look for.

But suppose that an ailing parent or grandparent lives miles away and is suddenly injured or becomes ill and it is impossible for you to get to them?

A relatively new service called geriatric care, or case management, can come to your rescue.

A case manager can act as your stand-in and arrange for hospitalization if necessary and find a nursing home when the patient is discharged.

Services vary. If the patient does not need to go to a nursing home, the case manager can arrange for support services that enable a parent or changes, families are struggling to take care of the aging members of their families. T. Colby Cantrell will answer questions about Medicare, private insurance, Medicaid and other related questions. The cost is $3.

grandparent to live independently. They are there to help in a crisis, to provide counseling, to arrange and monitor outside services, such as house cleaning or meal preparation, to line up transportation or to help with shopping or scheduling visits to the doctor.

Qualifications for a case manager include a graduate degree in social work, psychology or gerontology, plus licensing.

It's a bird; it's a plane — no, it's Ford's Contour

Perhaps the most amazing thing about the new Ford Contour, Ford Division's version of the corporation's much-heralded "world car," is that Ford Motor Co. bean-counters allowed its engineers and designers to spend $6 billion on its development, which is a lot of beans.

Does the final product justify all that action? Ultimately, of course, that will be determined by Ford's bean-counters. But to the car buyer, the answer is yes. The Contour replaces the Ford Tempo, a bit of a Caspar Milquetoast as far as personality goes, with Clark Kent, a mild-mannered, pleasant fellow with potential to be a Super-guy, depending on how much you want to spend on an entry-level compact car.

Behind the wheel, it is easy to forget that this is just a compact, a Tempo without its glasses and with a dynamic and impressive shape, ride and pep.

Base prices start at $13,310 for the GL four, $13,995 for the LX four and $15,695 for the SE V-6. These put it in a competitive range with such compact rivals as Pontiac Grand Am, Dodge Spirit and Avenger and Honda Civic. But this is a car worth dressing up a bit, because it can do a pretty good imitation of an upscale European sport sedan.

The Ford Contour is positioned between the subcompact Escort and mid-size Taurus, Ford says. The front-wheel-drive Contour is designed to attract singles, young couples and young families with children still at home. Primary customers targeted are between the ages of 25 and 40.

"This new, four-door mid-size car is exactly what these buyers have been telling us they want," says Ross Roberts, Ford Division general manager. "It provides excellent performance and a tremendous array of technical and serviceability features."

Contour is offered in three series — the GL, the upscale LX and the sporty SE. Our test car was a GL with 2.0-liter, 16-valve DOHC in-line four-cylinder Zetec engine with all-aluminum cylinder head and rated at 125 hp. The Contour is peppy, even exuberant, with the four.

But if that's not enough, Ford is very proud of its Duratec V-6 System, standard on the SE and optional on other models. It is Ford's all-new all-aluminum low-maintenance 2.5-liter 24-valve DOHC V-6 engine. Platinum-tipped spark plugs enable the 170 hp Duratec engine to hit 100,000 miles before its first scheduled tune-up, Ford says.

But don't dismiss the base Contour four. This engine is also technologically advanced and with the five-speed manual transmission offers good performance at a bargain-basement price. Our test car was so equipped and its sticker came to $14,935. Optional equipment included air conditioning, AM/FM stereo with cassette (AM/FM stereo radio is standard), and 14-inch cast aluminum wheels. I would also opt for anti-lock brakes ($565) and relatively inexpensive features such as power windows and power locks, which would greatly enhance enjoyment of the Contour. Door locks are of a rather awkward design, and locking rear doors is difficult on a cold, dark night.

The front-drive Contour uses struts all around, with coil springs and front and rear anti-roll bars, even on the base model. Control arms locating the front struts are mounted to a rubber-isolated powertrain cradle. Such a sophisticated design is unusual in cars in this price range. Power rack-and-pinion steering is standard.

The rear suspension also uses struts, located by twin lateral links and a trailing link on each side. The result is a controlled, comfortable ride with very little harshness.

Safety features include standard driver and front passenger air bags, "anti-submarine" seat design to help keep occupants from slipping forward in a sudden stop or impact, and "Safety Cell" unitized body with high-strength boron steel side-impact beams which meet 1997 federal safety standards. Optional anti-lock braking system and the All-Speed Traction Control System will make the Contour behave like a four-wheeler on winter snow and ice.

Contour is one of three vehicles developed under a global umbrella. The first, the Ford Mondeo, was introduced in Europe in March 1993 and has achieved outstanding sales.

Then came the Ford Contour and its Mercury Mystique sister.

"These cars have a higher product content and more features to satisfy customers than we could have provided if we had designed a car for only one market," Roberts said. Ford Motor Co. plans to market the cars around the world.

The most surprising thing about the Contour is its tautness of suspension and a smoothness of driveline not usually found in low-priced domestic sedans. The decision to make the Contour a "world car" made this achievement possible.

Designing one car, with only a few variations, for both Europe and America makes economic sense, because a sedan in the Contour's size and price range can run up big sales on both sides of the Atlantic. At least Ford hopes so.

St. John Hospital moves a step closer to new parking lot lights

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

St. John Hospital and Medical Center moved one step closer toward completing a project that will make the hospital parking lot safer by installing new lights, but at the same time reducing the amount of light that shines on the surrounding residential property.

The planning commission gave its unanimous support to the hospital's plan, which requires variances, to build a new fence around the north parking lot. The Woods city council is not bound by the commission's vote, but usually does approve a unanimous recommendation.

City ordinances require fences be no more than 4 feet in height. St. John is proposing a 6-foot tall wooden fence. Ordinances also require the commission to review and approve of any lighting plans in the city's high intensity city center district to ensure that as much light as possible is deflected away from adjacent properties.

"We're putting in new lights because we want to upgrade security for our north lot, which is behind the hospital, and because we have to replace the light poles," said hospital spokesman Gregory Jakob. "Our poles are rusting and really need replacing, and this is the perfect time to put in new lights as well."

The new lights, while brighter, will be more focused on the lot. This should actually reduce the amount of light that "spills" over into the yards of neighbors who live next to the parking lot. The 6-foot wooden fence will help to keep light out of yards as well, Jakob said.

Hospital head of security Ron Kelleman said that while crime is not a huge problem, anyplace where there are a lot of automobiles, there are thieves.

"Thieves go to where the cars are," said Kelleman. "Annually we get about 12-20 cars stolen from that lot every year. Last year we had 66 crimes reported to our security department. They mostly were things like hubcaps stolen or cars broken into and radios taken. New, brighter lights will make it easier to protect cars in the lot. Remember the hospital has three shifts and cars are parked in the lot at all times of the day and night."

Planning commission member John C. Kennedy said that he and his fellow commission members were impressed with the hospital's plans. He said he especially likes the fact that there will be less light spilling on residential property with the new lights than with the old ones.

Jakub said the hospital's staff will now mail out letters notifying its neighbors of what is going on. The city council is tentatively scheduled to vote on the commission's recommendations in April.

Woods official appointed to head county panel

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

After a decade of service, Grosse Pointe Woods council member Thomas Fahrner was recently appointed chairman of the Wayne County Community Development Advisory Council, an organization that administers federal funds for the county.

"I've been the Woods' representative to the advisory council since the early 1980s. The advisory council is the local administrator of this money, and I'm very proud to have been selected to chair the council," said Fahrner.

"Communities in Wayne County with fewer than 50,000 residents have representatives on this council," said Fahrner. "The advisory council is responsible for making sure that community development block grant money is used for the reasons stated by communities applying for the federal money."

The federal government disburses the money to local counties, and the counties in turn send the money to local communities, Fahrner said. In Wayne County, the advisory council meets once a month in a different member community to discuss funding proposals.

"Recently the advisory board turned down a funding request from Garden City because they did not have their paperwork in on time," said Fahrner. "Each city is responsible for coming up with projects and for making sure the paperwork is done on time. This is important because the money is not given to the cities until after a project is completed."

In short, cities don't get any money until it's spent, said Fahrner. Vouchers must be submitted by April 15, so that money will be distributed by July. The amount of money available to a city depends on that city's population.

This year the Woods received $100,500 for its CDBG projects. This year, said Fahrner, the city is spending it on making the city hall handicap-accessible.

"The Woods' grants are also used to help fund the city's share of PAATS and SOC, programs that help low-income people," Fahrner said. "These programs help a lot of people in the Woods and other communities."

Scott Shuptrine to close its Farms store

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

A victim of its own success, the original store of the Scott Shuptrine furniture chain will close its doors sometime in March or April, a spokesperson for the company recently announced.

"It wasn't that the store wasn't doing well at its present location on Mack near Moross in the Farms," said Karen Gold. "It's just that the store was too small, and there wasn't the space to operate the kind of store we want Scott Shuptrine to be."

The Grosse Pointe store has about 17,000 square feet of floor space, said Gold. The flagship store in Troy has about 80,000 square feet and represents what company officials believe is the new way to shop for furniture.

"Our other stores are really superstores," said Gold. "Instead of putting the couches in one section and the tables in another section and the chairs in another, our furniture is broken down into lifestyle themes. So customers see a room of matching furniture."

In addition to furniture displayed according to theme, the Troy store has a coffee bar, so customers can get something to drink, Gold said. It also has a children's play area to keep the kids entertained as their parents shop.

Gold said that Art Van Furniture acquired Scott Shuptrine in 1987. At one time the chain, started in 1927, numbered five stores. But by the time Art Van purchased it, only the Grosse Pointe Farms store was open.

Shortly after purchasing the store name, said Gold, Art Van opened stores in Bloomfield Hills, Troy and Novi.

"What we want to do is to continue with our 'superstore' theme," said Gold. "It's the wave of the future for chain stores and it represents the future of our company."

Assistant Farms city manager Shane Reeside said that the closing of the Scott Shuptrine store really won't affect the city's plans for the property it recently purchased at the corner of Mack and Moross.

"We've hired the Gerald Luedtke firm, a company specializing in determining best uses of land, and it is currently looking at the property," said Reeside. "I don't think Shuptrine's leaving will affect the firm's recommendation, and may even open up some new possibilities."

The Shuptrine building is owned by Art Van Furniture. Gold said that as far as she knows, no plans for the property have been announced.

Red Cross trains volunteers to help where they're needed

By Jenny King
Special Writer

Some 13 years ago, Jeff Bauer told a friend there was no way he would get involved as a Red Cross volunteer. He just wasn't interested, the Grosse Pointe attorney said.

But in the fall of 1992, Bauer was heading one of 22 special on-site service centers established by the American Red Cross to help the thousands of Floridians devastated by Hurricane Andrew. He supervised a staff of disaster relief volunteers who helped 500 clients a day with needs ranging from food and clothing to temporary shelter and basic communication.

"We were living in tents on a 25-acre field, which we soon discovered was infested with fire ants," Bauer recalled.

The venomous, potentially deadly ants were building cozy nests under the protective cones Bauer and his team had put over the steel stakes to keep their canvas homes taut in place. Bauer, a former U.S. naval officer, was to call this humid, treeless, forsaken area his home for close to two months that autumn.

"Hurricane Andrew is probably the worst natural disaster affecting people to ever hit the U.S.," the disaster assistance volunteer said. "Here in Michigan, we are in a more benign part of the country. Floods and forest fires are our fears."

The Red Cross trains volunteers for disaster service on a regular basis, said Peter Amos, director of emergency services for the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the Red Cross. There currently are about 150 individuals among the ranks. In teams of four, they serve, on-call, for a week at a time.

"That usually figures out to three or four weeks a year," Amos said. "The volunteer hours are from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. weekdays, and 24 hours on weekends."

Last fall, volunteers "on duty" were given pagers so they didn't have to stay home near the telephone evenings and weekends, Amos said.

The work itself involves establishing a service center close to the disaster — an apartment fire or a toxic spill, for example.

"Then the volunteer team gets people affected by the problem settled somewhere. That could be in a hotel, with friends or with other family," he said. "The team is prepared to distribute vouchers for groceries and clothing, if these are needed. They make sure people have transportation, through vouchers, for taxis or with bus tickets."

There are no income limits in either direction, he added. Even the well-off may find themselves stranded by a calamity. From his days with the Red Cross in Rochester, N.Y., Amos recalled an Eastman-Kodak executive whose house burned in the night on a weekend.

"If your wallet, with all your identification and your credit cards and bank cards, is in the house, if your car keys are there, it doesn't matter how much you own — you are helpless," Amos said.

Bauer, who has gone from a guy who didn't want to be involved to Southeastern Michigan Chapter chairman of disaster services, is available to travel to national disaster sites. Amos said a person might even accept an international assignment. That's up to the volunteer.

"Michigan is the third largest producer of individuals to serve at disasters," Amos said. "The initial training instructs students in assessing situations, meeting food-clothing-shelter needs and doing next-day follow-up."

Volunteers begin with 16 hours of classroom training. That's followed by hands-on experience with an actual team. "Within a month or two, you are ready to join a team," Amos said.

Jeff Bauer

There were 75 people under Bauer at his post near what was Homestead, Fla. He also was responsible for 40 vehicles, dozens of portable commodes and $75,000 in Xerox equipment — duplicators which sat on pine risers and which were run on electricity from gasoline-powered generators.

No matter the scale of a disaster, human needs tend to be the same, Bauer said. The complication after Andrew was that a piece of land 75 miles long by 60 miles wide was laid waste. It was as if everything was cleaned off the planet, he said. All forms of modern communication were useless, including radios and cellular phones. The birds disappeared for three months. In the Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties, the chapter responded to 854 house and apartment fires and helped 826 families recover during 1993-94, Amos said. This fiscal year, the number of fires will be greater. So is the need for additional trained disaster action volunteers, he said.

"In the past we have attracted people in their retirement and professionals ages 25 through maybe 40," he said. Age and infirmity have thinned the ranks, and able-bodied men and women are encouraged to telephone the Red Cross for further training information. Amos can be contacted at (313) 494-2752.

Two other areas — health and safety, and youth services — have training and volunteer opportunities. Youth services spokesman Michael Corbin said teens ages 14-17 are needed to serve in hospitals, nursing homes and summer camps.

"Hospital work might involve visiting with families who are waiting in the emergency area, doing some physical or recreational therapy, taking meal orders and serving water to patients," Corbin said.

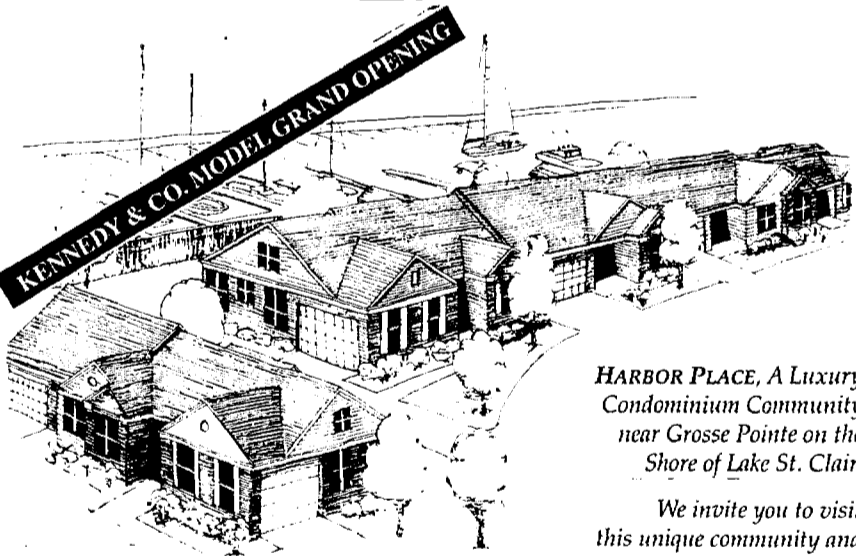

Teen involvement has been affected by more young people needing to work, he said. Corbin thought the number of Red Cross youth volunteers might be up as much as 50 percent this year over last, due to teens helping to staff blood drives at high schools.

The youth services field representative for Grosse Pointe is located at the Macomb Service Center in Roseville. Telephone number is (810) 778-5600.

Volunteers trained by the American Red Cross help people who are affected by disasters, from hurricanes, tornados and floods that affect hundreds of families to local emergencies that involve one or two families. This Detroit house exploded in January.

Music Hall benefit will celebrate Baryshnikov productions

Michigan Opera Theater board member Gloria Clarke of Grosse Pointe, and Music Hall board member Joanne Danto Honhart of Bloomfield Hills, are co-chairs of a gala benefit welcoming Baryshnikov and his White Oak Dance Project to Detroit.

The Saturday, April 1 event includes dinner at the Rattlesnake Club, VIP orchestra seating at the Music Hall performance, valet parking, a collector's souvenir book and an afterglow with the dancers. Tickets are $250 for individuals; $400 for couples.

Cocktails and dinner at the Rattlesnake Club begin at 5 p.m., followed by a White Oak Dance Project performance at Music Hall at 8 p.m. An afterglow catered by the Rattlesnake Club will be in the Music Hall lower lobby at 10:15 p.m.

The gala's honorary committee members are Mr. and Mrs. Edmund T. Ahee, Sandra Baer, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Garberding, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Schultz, Dr. and Mrs. Donald C. Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Cameron B. Duncan, Dr. and Mrs. Kim K. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. F. Randolph Swartz and Enid Wasserman.

For tickets, call the Music

Hall box office at 313-963-2366. Fax credit card orders at 313-963-2462.

Ole! Alpha Mu, the Grosse Pointe chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Society International, chose the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House for an evening of relaxation and fun. On Feb. 16, members and guests enjoyed a dinner buffet prepared by the Mexican Village and were entertained by vivacious musical selections played by a mariachi band.

The highlight of the evening's Mexican Fiesta! was viewing the exhibit of Jose Guadalupe Posada's finest prints. Posada worked as an illustrator for newspapers, magazines and pamphlets. The 53 prints graphically represented his wit and political insight as he chronicled the political events which culminated in the revolution of 1910, crimes, scandals and daily and religious events. In addition, the exhibit also featured rare 18th and 19th century Mexican folk art: Retablor and Ex-Votos. Documents were on hand to explain and answer all questions.

The event afforded Alpha Mu's members and guests an opportunity to visit with old friends and mingle with those from other participating community organizations.

Seeing red: Grosse Pointe Farms residents Peter and Elaine Schweitzer have joined the list of honorary chairmen of the American Red Cross "Rhapsody in Red II" ball.

Proceeds from the event, scheduled for Friday, April 28 at the Ritz Carlton in Dearborn, benefit disaster and emergency relief in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. About 500 guests are expected to attend the fundraiser.

Schweitzer is president of J. Walter Thompson Co., the volunteer advertising agency for "Rhapsody in Red II."

For ticket information, call the American Red Cross Southeastern Michigan Chapter at (313) 833-4440.

What's cooking: ACF Chefs de Cuisine Association chefs from top Detroit-area restaurants will prepare a gourmet adventure of tempting hors d'oeuvres, entrees, and desserts to satisfy the most discerning connoisseur at the 11th annual Cuisine Extraordinaire, hosted by the Children's Hospital of Michigan Auxiliary.

The event will be held Sunday, March 19, from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. In addition to the palate-pleasing pleasures, guests will be able to bid on and buy fabulous packages in both silent and live auctions, as well as dance to the big band sound of the Mark Phillips Band. Proceeds from Cuisine Extraordinaire benefit the auxiliary's commitment to pastoral care, rehabilitation services and the Endowment for Pediatric Nursing Excellence, which the auxiliary founded in 1992. The auxiliary has been supporting Children's Hospital since 1948 and has raised more than $1.5 million since its inception.

Children's Hospital of Michigan is a private, non-profit 260-bed pediatric facility, founded in 1886. It is a member of the Detroit Medical Center and the Academic Health Center of Wayne State University.

Tickets for this international gourmet evening are $100, $150 and $200 and are available by contacting the development office at Children's Hospital of Michigan at 313-745-5373 or the auxiliary office, 313-745-0962.

LCE presents 'Old and New' concert at War Memorial

The Lyric Chamber Ensemble presents the duo of pianist Andrew Cooperstock and violinist William Terwilliger in a concert of traditional and contemporary chamber music at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, March 12, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Clarinetist Martha MacDonald will also perform.

The program will feature Franz Schubert's Sonatina in D Major, Cesar Franck's Sonata in A Major, Paul Schoenfield's "Four Souvenirs" and "Trio," and Mozart's Trio in E-flat Major.

Cooperstock is a winner of the National Federation of Music Clubs Artists Competition and is well-known as a recitalist, chamber musician and orchestral soloist. He is a gradu-

'Hideaway' pits good and evil

By John Miskelly
Special Writer

Good vs. evil is what the new movie "Hideaway" is all about.

From the book of the same name by best-selling author Dean Koontz, the film stars Jeff Goldblum as Hatch Harrison and Christine Lahti as his wife.

They run an antique shop presumably somewhere in the northwest United States. They have a daughter, Regina — played by MTV video vixen Alicia Silverstone — and recently lost a younger daughter in a hit-and-run accident.

"Hideaway" is akin to David Cronenberg's "The Dead Zone," which tells the story of a man who, after having been in a coma, can see the destiny of people just by touching them.

But Harrison doesn't just go into a coma. He dies. For almost 120 minutes he is dead in fact. His body temperature falls to 84 degrees. Hatch is brought back after going through a near-death experience that uses special effects wizardry at its best.

One clue that bringing him back might be a problem comes when a nurse reminds the doctor of what happened last time. The film takes on the subject of should physicians play God? How far should one go to save a life? And more importantly, is it being done to better a career or give someone a second chance? It takes on these issues, but lets the audience decide.

After coming back to life, Hatch begins to see things which are being done by a psychotic serial murderer with whom he seems to be psychically connected. The problem is, the killer, played by Jeremy Sisto, is connected, too. He sees Regina and decides that she will be the jewel in his maniacal sculpture at an abandoned amusement park.

Thankfully, the film isn't about how a lawman chases a serial killer before he does it again. The twist is that some average guy gets thrust into the fight. The fight that pits good vs. evil. Hatch knows that only he can stop the killings.

The movie ends with a battle between God and Satan. As the killer says, he doesn't want to be saved. He wants to be damned.

Unfortunately, the special effects in the climactic fight make the ending too preachy.

This movie takes the audience on a journey which has never been quite successful. "Hideaway" is like an amusement ride. Be ready for the twists and turns. They might leave one gasping.

Quartet performs

The Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church, 17150 Maumee in the City of Grosse Pointe, will host the Bel Canto Quartet at 7 p.m. Sunday, March 19. Tickets are $10, $15 and $40 for patron tickets which include preferred seating. For more information call (313) 881-0420.

'Hunted' eludes believability, finds gore

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Basically, "The Hunted" is an adult version of the popular juvenile series, "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles"; the difference is that the warring clans are people, one is a ninja, the other a samurai.

Their struggles to gain supremacy dates back to ancient times in Japan. They practice martial arts in a secret place far from the streets of modern Nagoya emerging only when one or the other has a grievance.

The storyline centers on Paul Racine (Christopher Lambert), an American computer salesman who wanders into a bar and catches the eye of mysterious Karina (Joan Chen). He accompanies her back to her apartment. After he leaves he remembers he has the keys to her apartment in his pocket and goes back to return them. He opens the door and sees her kneeling before a character with a sword raised. The girl is ready to die but has one request. She begs to see the face of her executioner. It is Kinjo (John Lone), leader of the ninjas. Kinjo has never let anyone see his face.

The girl dies, and when the police arrive they find Racine severely wounded but still alive. However, because he has seen Kinjo's face, he becomes a hunted man. While in the hospital, he is approached by samurai Takeda (Yoshida Harada), a sword master who offers to take him where Kinjo will never find him. He takes Racine to his island hideaway where he is training a group of young people. When Racine recovers his health, he begins taking lessons. As he gets to know Takeda better, he becomes suspicious of his mentor and finally realizes that Takeda is using him as bait to lure Kinjo and that it is only a matter of time before Takeda will send a message that he is on the island.

Harrada's Takeda projects the tragic aura of a driven man who knows he must wade through an ocean of blood to avenge an ancient wrong. Lone is convincing as a killing machine.

J.F. Lawton, who wrote and directed "The Hunted," has an obvious fascination with Japan. He presents Nagoya in the best of lights and shows off a picture pretty countryside. A powerful percussive soundtrack accents the violence.

"The Hunted" will be remembered for its scenic vistas of modern Japan and its insight into how strong a hold the culture of centuries past has on its people.

Americans pay low-fat tribute to Emerald Isle

B'gosh and begorrah, 'tis time for the wearin' of the green and the cookin' of the Irish stew.

Pour the ale, peel the carrots and potatoes, cube the lamb and simmer the stew all day long.

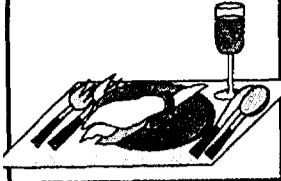

Now that was the plan for St. Patrick's Day past, but thanks to tender American lamb and convenience food, Irish stew has joined the list of quick and easy meals for today's busy cooks.

Stews taste great and are good for us but trying to find the time to cook a hearty stew is a challenge.

The colder months of the year are usually the time most of us pull out the huge soup pot or Dutch oven, the vegetables are peeled and chopped and the stove is turned on for us to watch for a couple of hours of slow cooking.

It doesn't happen that way in many households these days.

There are many convenient shortcuts which make a stew easy to prepare and which cut cooking and preparation time. You might want to consider a Quick and Easy Lamb Stew as the center of your St. Paddy's Day dinner.

A lamb stew is always the choice for that great holiday and this one has all the traditional ingredients with just a touch of horseradish and mustard to zip it up a bit. Remember to cut the lamb and vegetables in smaller cubes to speed the cooking time.

American lamb is available already cubed in some markets, but if you can't find the cubes, look for a small lamb roast or thick leg steaks or shoulder chops and cut them into cubes. American lamb is bright red or pink and is extremely mild.

The shoulder chops are less expensive and add marvelous flavor to your stew.

Our Irish ancestors would be delighted with the lean meaty and mild American lamb found in the market today.

The prepared brown gravy is a quick and easy way to add the thickening and most are low in fat. You might also find that you can substitute frozen stew vegetables for the potatoes, carrots and celery, and that will shorten your preparation time.

For those who have not had much experience creating character and delicious flavors by cooking for long periods of time, the flavor of your stew will get better each time it is reheated. Make your lamb stew ahead, store in the refrigerator and quickly reheat to receive raves from your family and friends.

Quick and Easy Lamb Stew can be served with a crisp salad and warm cornbread. Then, a dessert of canned Bartlett pears and syrup drops of green color added to the syrup would be a festive touch for the occasion.

Quick and Easy Lamb Stew

1 lb. lean American lamb, cut into 3/4 to 1 inch cubes

No-stick spray coating
2 medium onions, cut in wedges
1 clove garlic, minced or 1/2 t. bottled minced garlic
1 T prepared horseradish
1 T prepared or brown mustard
1 t dried thyme, basil, oregano, marjoram, or rosemary, crushed
1 (15 oz.) can stewed tomatoes, undrained
3 or 4 medium potatoes, peeled and cubed
2 carrots, cut in 1/2 inch slices
2 stalks celery, cut in 1/2 inch slices
1-1/2 c small fresh mushrooms (4 oz.)
1 cup frozen peas
1 (12-oz.) jar brown gravy

Spray a large saucepan or kettle with non-stick spray. Brown lamb cubes and add onion, garlic, horseradish, mustard, and herb; mix well. Stir in tomatoes, cover and simmer 15 minutes.

Add potatoes, carrots, celery, and mushrooms. Cover and cook 15 to 20 minutes or till meat and vegetables are tender. Stir in peas and gravy; heat through. Serves six.

American lamb — leaner and more tender than lamb of the past — makes a healthy and hearty lamb stew, that brings to mind the Emerald Isle.

Archaeology looks at ruins of Virginia

The Virginia Adventure: Roanoke to James Towne: An Archaeological and Historical Odyssey

By Ivor Noel Hume
Knopf, 491 pages. $35

If one is already an archaeologist and history enthusiast, amateur or professional, this impressive tome is just the ticket for you.

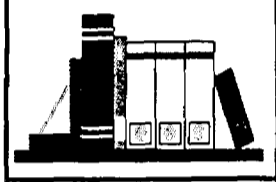

"The Virginia Adventure" is, indeed, a scholarly and well-written work containing interesting glimpses of a dim period in American history.

As an active participant in the unearthing of James Towne, Ivor Noel Hume spent many years in the study of early Virginia settlement, beginning in the 17th century, and of the quarrelsome colonists from England who attempted to carve a home away from home in the Indian-infested forests. These hardy souls from abroad also had to cope with the vagaries of inclement weather and the infrequent supply ships bearing badly needed food and supplies.

An Englishman who now lives and works in Williamsburg, Hume was named an Officer of the British Empire in 1992 for his contributions to British cultural interests in Virginia.

This newest book is filled with period maps, contemporary portraits, and pictures and diagrams of the buildings uncovered during extensive excavations around James Towne. No detail is spared in describing the frightful conditions under which these early settlers worked to create a viable foothold on the North American continent — all in dangerous defiance of the French and the Spaniards, who were here before the British.

In the early 1600s, London investors were swept by gold fever as rumors percolated that gold was to be found in abundance in Virginia. Consequently, one of the first ship's commanders, a "Captain Seagull painted his picture of Virginia exclusively in familiar European colors. But sailors who had crossed the ocean knew better, and before long the Virginia promoters' carefully fostered English perception of the benign American Indian would be drastically revised. He would join the ranks of the world's non-Christians as a subhuman species to be exploited, despised, and brutalized."

King Philip of Spain in the late 16th century sent his feared armada against the British sailing toward the New Land, but it lost: "A battle had been won, but the war was far from over. In spite of his losses, Philip immediately began to patch his fleet together for a further invasion attempt, still mindful, no doubt, of the scathing comment made by Pope Sixtus V three years earlier, to the effect that it was odd to see the king of half the world defied by the queen of half an island."

As Hume points out: "Although the North American coast had been poked and prodded with increasing frequency during the second half of the 16th century, nobody, Spaniard, Frenchman, or Englishman, has shown any enthusiasm for probing to any depth the rocky shores which by the turn of the century were known to the English as the northern part of Virginia."

Then, in 1606, the story of James Towne began; it is the first chapter in the history of modern Virginia.

Captain John Smith played a pivotal role in the founding of the new colony, and his wisdom and guidance were so respected that "without undue arrogance, John Smith could conclude that every time he turned his back the place fell apart. So, responding to what he concluded to be the will of the people, Smith deposed Ratcliffe and appointed himself president. But because the Indians he had met on his first trip up Chesapeake Bay had led him to believe that it eventually opened into the South Sea, Smith was eager to try again."

The Indians continued their ugly belligerency against the invading white men who dared to trample upon their turf: "With the trading angrily terminated, Ratcliffe and his men gathered up the corn they had already bought and set out on the half-mile walk to the boat. They never made it. Indians in ambush in the woods and fields beside the trail picked them off one by one."

does not disappoint; it is an enthralling, fascinating account of how a venerable publishing house, Peverell Press, becomes intimately involved in a number of inexplicable suicides and grisly murders. The author's redoubtable sleuth, Commander Adam Dalgleish, takes over the investigation, which produces red herrings and false trails.

Immediately, we are drawn into this sinister web of evil. Nineteen-year-old Mandy Price enters Innocent House, an unbelievable Venetian palace set on the banks of the Thames River, which is the home of Peverell Press. She is applying for a temporary job and, while touring the premises, she comes upon the body of an apparent suicide in an upper level archive room. With this shocking opening, not many readers, if any, will be able to withstand the temptation of learning more about the deepening crisis of Peverell House.

Throughout the book, James showcases her infallible touch for atmosphere and character.

A great cast of credible characters populates this full-bodied novel: most prominent are the five members of the board of Peverell Press: Gerard Etienne, the chairman; his sister, Claudine Etienne; Frances Peverell, the daughter of a former chairman, the deceased Henry Peverell; Gabriel Dautsey, an elderly house poet; and James de Witt, who adores Frances Peverell.

The board personalities clash frequently which precipitates a battle of will and wits as to who shall run the Press.

Proceeding further into the narrative, we find even more characters, both inside and outside of the company, each emerging with their own agendas. There is the strange, reclusive Frenchman, Jean-Philippe Etienne, now retired from the Press, and residing in haughty solitude on England's barren west coast. Commotion is created by a disgruntled author, Esme Carling, a writer of romance fiction who has been dropped by the Press.

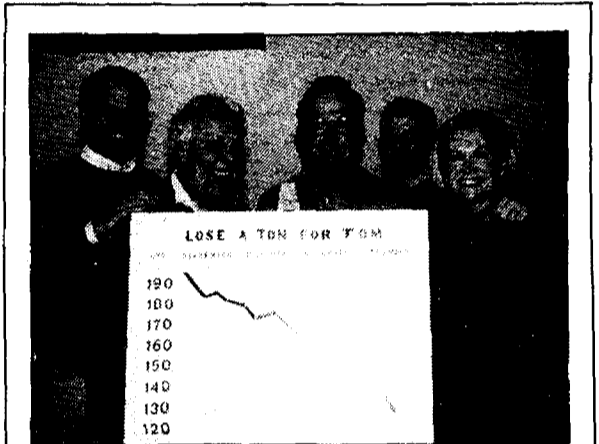

In 1616, John Rolfe came to London with his exotic bride, the Indian princess Pocahontas, where they quickly became the city's latest curiosity. Just as they would be today, opinions were sharply divided on the wisdom of such a marriage, not so much on racial as on religious grounds.

As for Captain John Smith, whom the Virginia Company regarded as a loose cannon, he retired to London, a disappointed man because he failed to obtain additional backing for another trip across the Atlantic.

Hume considers that "when one stands on the Park Service's manicured lawns at Jamestown today, it is hard to imagine how much hope, regret, fear, hatred, hunger, pain, and dying were experienced at this place or at least near this place in the 17 years between the first landing and the dissolution of the Virginia Company in 1624."

In the present day, "recognizing that in archaeological research terms the nation's 400th birthday in 2007 is just around the corner, in 1992 the National Park Service invited bids to begin a long-term interdisciplinary study of the island and its environs." Archaeological teams have begun to unite in co-operation for this huge undertaking and to hunt for funds to support this worthy endeavor.

Hume remarks that "and if, as I believe likely, the new APVA excavations succeed in uncovering a landward corner of James Fort and the National Park Service gains a better understanding of 17th century life on the rest of the island, few will doubt that the nation's quartercentennial will be eminently well served."

Once again P.D. James spins a chilling web

Original Sin
By P.D. James
Knopf, 416 pages. $24

Currently, I have three absolutely favorite modern women mystery writers who have yet to fail to live up to my extremely high expectations: Patricia Cornwell, Elizabeth George, and P.D. James.

What distinguishes them from the usual run-of-the-mill feminine practitioners of this popular genre is their ability to merge impeccable novel-writing technique with their mystery stories.

A good case in point is P.D. James of England, whose latest thriller, "Original Sin," is now out, much to the delight of her legion of fans.

Artists needed for festival

Artists, craftspeople and performers can now apply for booth space at the Ninth Annual Detroit Festival of the Arts to be held Sept. 15-17 in Detroit's Cultural Center. Applications should be post-marked no later than June 2. More than 200,000 people attend the festival annually, which features 110 selected artists, concerts on several stages, a children's fair, poetry festival and a book fair.

The celebration of the arts is sponsored by Wayne State University, the Center for Creative Studies, the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Children's Museum, the Detroit Historical Museum, the Detroit Public Library, the Detroit Science Center, the International Institute, the Museum of African American History, the Scarab Club and Your Heritage House. ## Defense carries Blue Devils to division title

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's Brian Nugent doesn't have the big offensive numbers that usually land basketball players on the all-conference team, but it will be a shame if Nugent's name isn't included when they call the roll for the Macomb Area Conference White Division all-star squad.

Nugent's coach, George Petrouleas, thinks his senior guard belongs and last weekend he earned the vote of Romeo coach Marty Alwardt.

Nugent played an outstanding defensive game against Romeo standout Dan Stubleski, holding the sharp-shooting guard to only six points, as the Blue Devils rolled to a 63-33 victory that gave South the division championship in a showdown between the league leaders.

South finished with a 12-2 record in division play, while Romeo was a game off the pace at 11-3.

"Nugent's defensive play should put him on the all-league team," Alwardt said. "He took Dan out of the game and nobody else was able to step up for us. South's defense played so well that it gave them confidence on offense."

out ahead."

Each team scored 15 points in the second quarter, but South got an important basket by John Topacio with 1.5 seconds remaining to send the Blue Devils to the locker room with a 34-18 lead.

Romeo managed only one point in the third quarter, while South stretched its lead to 45-19. The Blue Devils' margin eventually reached 35 points midway through the final period.

"It was an awesome performance," Petrouleas said. "Holding a good team to one point in the third quarter and three in the first is amazing. It's fun when you're hitting on all cylinders and it happens in front of a packed house."

It looked like the Blue Devils, who lost two of their previous three games and had to go to overtime to beat Warren-Mott, had been waiting two weeks for the shot at Romeo.

"You try to guard against something like that, but I'm sure the kids have had this game on their minds," Petrouleas said.

Todd Drake led South's balanced scoring attack with 14 points, one more than Jake Howlett posted. Charlie Wascher and Ben Harwood each scored eight points and Topacio finished with seven. Wascher and Harwood also had eight rebounds apiece.

"My focus has always been on the team aspect, not the individual," Petrouleas said. "I like to get all the kids involved because at crunch time your big kid might not be around. Then you don't know who to go to."

There's plenty of action under the basket as Grosse Pointe South's Ben Harwood (50) battles a Romeo player for position under the boards in case there's a rebound. The Blue Devils beat the Bulldogs 63-33 to win the Macomb Area Conference White Division championship.

South

Petrouleas said that the play of the guards — Nugent, Matt Agnone, Pat Worrell and Paul Long — was a key factor in the Blue Devils' success this year.

"We knew if we were going to be successful this year we needed good guard play," he said. "If we got that we thought we could be decent. Our guards struggled the first few games, but that was a matter of inexperience. Since then they've gotten better, we've found a good rotation and they've all learned to recognize their roles."

Earlier, South kept its hopes for its first championship since 1989 alive with a 55-50 overtime victory against Warren-Mott.

Agnone scored the only points of the overtime — all of them from the free-throw line.

Mott led 22-19 at halftime and the game was close for the entire second half, although South shot much better than it did in the first half.

"We shot about 20 percent in the first half, but did a lot better in the second half, hitting about 60 percent," Petrouleas said.

Both teams had chances to win the game in the final minute but neither one was able to snap the 50-50 deadlock.

Drake led South with 14 points and nine rebounds, while Howlett added 12 points. Harwood, Wascher, Worrell and Nugent also had good games. Nugent played well defensively against the Marauders' leading scorer, Kevin Whitten.

South took a 15-5 overall record into its first district tournament game at East Detroit.

Highlights

There are 20 teams participating in the Neighborhood Club high school basketball league this season and all of them have had some fine performances.

Playoffs began this week and will conclude on Saturday.

The Regulators and Warriors are the top two teams in the ninth and 10th grade division, while the Perculators and Green Mountain Boys lead the way in the 11th and 12th grade division.

There are some 200 students from the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods, Detroit and other surrounding areas participating in the league.

For more playoff information, call 885-4600.

Outdoor soccer

It's time to think spring so the Neighborhood Club is accepting registration for youth outdoor soccer through March 20.

The club offers the sport for boys in pre-kindergarten through third grade and for girls from pre-kindergarten through eighth grade.

Youngsters participating in the pre-K program must be 4 years old by Dec. 1, 1995. They will receive entry-level instruction on soccer basics on Saturdays from April 29 through June 17.

Boys in kindergarten through third grade and girls in kindergarten through eighth grade will play on weekends, beginning April 29.

Youngsters in grades two and above will also have practices from one to three times a week, depending on their volunteer coaches.

All participants will receive a participation award and team picture and will keep their uniform T-shirt.

The cost to play soccer is $55. Each child must also have a current club membership, which can be purchased at registration.

Registration may be done in person or by mail to the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo, Grosse Pointe, 48230.

For more information, call 885-4600.

Softball clinics

Clinics are offered by the Neighborhood Club as part of the girls softball program.

They will be held Saturdays May 6, 13 and 20.

Girls in grades two and three will receive instruction from 9 to 10 a.m., girls and grades four and five will meet from 10 to 11 a.m.; and sixth through eighth graders will meet from 11 a.m. until noon.

Jay Shaheen will instruct each group in the fundamentals of fielding, throwing and hitting. The $15 fee will cover all three days of the clinic.

MCC slates hoops camps

Macomb Community College will conduct a series of one-week basketball camps this summer for boys and girls.

The scheduled camp dates are: boys 12 through 18, July 17 to 21; girls 12-18, Aug. 7-11; boys and girls 8-12, Aug. 14-18.

Full-day camps for players aged 12 to 18 will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., while half-day camps are scheduled for 9 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. for boys 8-12 and 1:15 to 5 p.m. for girls 8-12.

The cost is $30 for half-day sessions and $130 for full-day sessions.

All camps take place at MCC's south campus physical education center, located near the corner of Hayes and Martin roads in Warren.

For more information, call 445-7476.

Norsemen end up in tie for third

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Dave Stavale was upset after his Grosse Pointe North basketball team dropped its regular-season finale to Mount Clemens last week, but his players weren't the cause of his dismay.

"I was upset because we had a fabulous effort and it still wasn't good enough to win," Stavale said after the 52-47 defeat moved the Bathers into a third-place tie with the Norsemen in the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division standings.

"I think that clouded what we've really accomplished here this season. We've had a great season. We finished 15-5. We avoided the nightmare game — losing to a team we should beat. And we finished the regular season playing better than we did at the start."

Despite the accomplishments, Stavale still wished that North had been able to beat division champion L'Anse Creuse or runner-up Clintondale. The games were close the second time around, but North came up a few points short each time.

"We had a chance to win every game in the second half of the season," he said. "I think the seniors feel the sting more than anyone because they had such high expectations after our good start."

The loss to Mount Clemens was especially frustrating. One of the assigned officials didn't show up for the varsity game so a junior varsity official was pressed into duty and he seemed to be over his head with the pace of the contest.

Only 17 fouls were called on the two teams in a physical game and it probably hurt the Norsemen more than the Bathers because North is no match for Mount Clemens in size.

North lost to Mount Clemens the first time the two teams played, but the outcome was reversed when school officials discovered that the Bathers had used an ineligible player.

"We changed our defense a little this time," Stavale said. "We didn't pack it in quite as much and we didn't come down quite so far to help out. That way we were in a better position to block out on the boards. They just blew past us last time."

North led 13-8 at the end of the first quarter, but Mount Clemens went ahead 26-21 at halftime.

The game was tied several times in the third period before

Mount Clemens took a 40-36 lead into the final quarter. The Bathers stretched their lead to eight points with about five minutes left. North tied the score with 1:25 to play but then ran into another dry spell and missed some easy shots.

Steve Champine finished with 17 points for the Norsemen, while Ryan Rouls added 11. Rich Winsinski had eight points and eight rebounds.

Earlier, North used a strong second half to overcome a nine-point halftime deficit and beat Cousino 59-43.

"We couldn't hit our shots in the first half and Cousino started banging theirs from all over," Stavale said. "They hit three threes (three-point baskets) in the first half."

The Norsemen, who trailed 22-13 at the break, outscored the Patriots 17-4 in the third quarter and held a 29-17 edge in the final period.

"We stepped up our defense in the second half and created some offense from it," Stavale said.

Winsinski led the way with 15 points and he also had seven rebounds. Champine scored 10 points and Rouls and Dan Vormelker added eight apiece. Vormelker also did a solid job defensively.

Cranes blank ULS in regional

By John Miskelly
Special Writer

University Liggett School's hockey team had a tough obstacle to overcome in its quest to stay alive in the Class B-C-D regional at Fraser last week.

It was top-ranked Cranbrook, which beat the eighth-ranked Knights 3-0 in the regional semifinal. The Cranes went on to beat host Notre Dame 3-0 in the championship game two days later.

"Cranbrook was really prepared," said ULS coach John Fowler. "They had a simple game plan — very effective."

It was the first time a team had beaten ULS three times in a season. Cranbrook had posted 3-0 and 6-2 wins earlier this year.

Cranbrook opened the scoring midway through the first period when highly-touted junior Raffi Kalajian tallied with an assist from defenseman Carlos Medina.

Although Kalajian is playing his first season at Cranbrook, he's no stranger to Fowler and the Knights. Kalajian transferred from Lake Forest Academy in Chicago — a team ULS played last season.

The Cranes continued to pressure Knights' goalie Andy Arbanas in the second period. "Andy played well," Fowler said of the junior netminder, who made 25 saves. "We knew he'd play well."

ULS killed off two penalties early in the second period, keeping Cranbrook's shots at a minimum.

"Cranbrook has a good power play," Fowler said. "We were prepared with our box defense."

Ironically, the Cranes scored their second goal while they were shorthanded. ULS gave the puck away in its own end and Rob Harness beat Arbanas with a point-blank shot.

Fowler lamented the lost opportunity.

"Opportunities come too infrequently against a good team," he said. "We didn't handle the puck well on defense."

ULS delivered some solid bodychecks, including one by John McNaughton that sent a Cranbrook player over the boards.

The Cranes continued to play solid defense in the third period, holding the Knights to only 14 shots on goal for the game. Cranbrook goalie Dan Currie posted the first of his two regional shutouts.

Bryan Doner scored a power-play goal with 3:47 remaining in the game to close out the scoring. It was Cranbrook's only power play goal in seven chances.

"We had them well-scouted," Fowler said. "We were prepared. We wanted to keep it close."

North spikers shade South for district title

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Kristen Loehner, Erin Peters and Maureen Zolik didn't believe they could be beaten while they were playing for Grosse Pointe North's girls basketball team that went to the state quarterfinals last fall.

Now they've brought that same attitude to the volleyball court.

"They're outstanding competitors and their attitude is contagious," said North volleyball coach Ann Belloli after her team won the Class A district at Grosse Pointe South last weekend with a thrilling 15-13, 16-14 victory over the host Blue Devils in the championship match.

"I don't think they ever believed they were going to lose, even when we were down 13-6 in that second game. They gave everything they had on every point."

North advances to the Class

A regional at South on Friday. The Norsemen face East Detroit at 6 p.m. in a semifinal match. The other semifinal at 5 p.m. will match Detroit Public School League rivals Central and Cass Tech. The championship match is scheduled for 7 p.m.

The North-South match had all the intensity of a state final battle. South had leads of 4-0, 8-2 and 14-8 in the second game, but the Norsemen got back into the game when Zolik served six straight points to tie the match at 14-14. Loehner had a key tip for a point and Peters and Jean Seo each had kills during the run.

ing one for South, which beat Regina 14-16, 15-5, 15-3 in the district semifinal. It was also a disappointing end to the coaching career at South for Cindy Sharpe, who announced her resignation effective at the end of the season.

Sharpe has guided the Blue Devils to several league and district titles during her years at South.

"Our girls know the feeling," Belloli said. "They've been on the other side for several years."

Belloli said she didn't know who to pull for during the South-Regina match.

"We'd beaten South earlier in the year, but I knew they were a fine team and would give us a tough match," she said. "I also know the rivalry between Regina and North."

North had the easier time in the district semifinal, rolling past Detroit Southeastern 15-6, 15-0.

"That wasn't even a hard practice," Belloli said. "That's why I told the girls to go into the other gym during the South-Regina match and scrimmage themselves. I told them to play each other like they'd be playing against Regina or South."

One of the reasons for North's success in the district was improved serving.

"We struggled with our serves earlier in the year, but we've worked a lot to improve them," Belloli said. "When you have momentum and you get the ball over the net on the serve it's like a perfect serve. It puts the other team on the defensive. And nothing kills your momentum like a bad serve."

Several players had key roles in North's championship.

"That's one of the strengths of our team," Belloli said. "The girls were always ready to come off the bench when we needed them. It's comforting for a coach to look down the bench and know that anybody you put in can do the job."

Knights oust an old friend

University Liggett School's basketball team couldn't have hand-picked a better first-round district opponent.

The Knights wound up facing Harper Woods in the first game of the Class C district hosted by the Pioneers and they came away with a 59-48 victory. It was the third time in three meetings that ULS has beaten its Metro Conference rival this year.

"Sometimes you're worried about facing a team you've beaten twice, but I wasn't concerned tonight because I knew my kids would be fired up," said Knights' coach Chuck Wright. "The seniors have never lost to Harper Woods and they didn't want to lose their last game to them, although we like playing them because they're all good people."

ULS didn't change its strategy against the Pioneers. The things that worked earlier this year worked again.

"We're quicker than they are so we like to push the ball up the court against them," Wright said. "Now that strategy might not work against a team like DePorres."

Detroit DePorres, which is ranked No. 1 in the state in some Class C polls, is ULS' likely opponent if the Knights reach the championship game Friday at 7 p.m.

ULS had 15 fast-break baskets against Harper Woods, including all four in an 8-0 run after a spurt by the Pioneers had cut the Knights' 18-point halftime lead to 42-31 early in the third quarter. Rod Williams, who led ULS with 14 points, had six of the eight in the run that gave the Knights a 50-31 lead — their biggest of the game.

ULS never trailed after a 10-0 spurt in the first quarter gave the Knights a 15-6 advantage.

Williams was joined by three teammates who scored in double figures. Joe Grant and Frank Tymrak each tallied 11 points and Brad Cassin added 10, despite playing with a broken index finger on his left hand.

Cassin also had nine rebounds, while Grant collected eight and Tymrak had seven. ULS had a big edge on the boards, outrebounding the Pioneers 43-27, including a 13-3 margin in the first quarter.

"Tymrak did another great defensive job on Dimitri (Stathis)," Wright said.

North gymnasts second

Grosse Pointe North was seeded third at the recent Great Lakes Eight Gymnastics League meet, but the Lady Norsemen weren't satisfied — they wanted to bring home a trophy.

"They flipped, twisted and tumbled their hearts out," coach Tina Francis said after North finished second to dual-meet champion Trenton in the league meet by only .65 points.

"The girls had no idea how close they were to first place because we were all too busy celebrating getting second."

North started the meet on the balance beam. Teams usually dread the event, but not the Lady Norsemen.

"We have a lot of depth in this event and the girls are very confident with their routines," Francis said. "From the first competitor to the sixth we had excellent routines."

The top four scorers achieved an event-high 32.5 points. The momentum carried North through its next three events — bars, vault and floor exercise.

There were several personal bests in each event.

Senior captain Teri Varchetti (8.5) and freshmen Robbie Langlois (8.45), Colleen Bryzik (7.55) and Amy Kohl (6.05) posted bests on the balance beam. Langlois (8.3) and sophomore Sue Taylor (6.1) had their best efforts on the parallel bars, while Langlois' 8.15 on vault was her best. Junior captain Christine Spada (8.5) and junior Aimee Faner (7.05) recorded bests in floor exercise.

North also won 14 medals, with Langlois, Varchetti and Spada accounting for all of them.

"These three girls have carried our team throughout the season and it's nice for them to be in a meet where they receive the recognition they deserve," Francis said.

Varchetti was third on the beam, fourth in floor exercise (8.3), seventh on vault (7.8) and fourth all-around with a score of 31.45.

Spada was second in vault (8.2) and floor, third on bars (7.95) and seventh on beam (8.0) for a third-place all-around score of 32.65.

Langlois was second all-around with a 32.95 score that included a second on bars, third on vault, fourth on beam and fifth on floor (8.05).

"I'm so proud of all the girls," Francis said. "This second-place finish was a total team effort. Each girl who competed this season added something to the team to get it where it is."

She also praised the efforts of senior Rachael Pesta, who has been a consistent performer all season, April Fisher, Leigh Spezia and Jennifer Spindler.

Langlois turned in North's best performance at last week's Class A regional at Rochester with a 15th place on the balance beam.

Others who competed in the regional were Spezia, who had a personal-best 6.7 on bars, Bryzik, Spada and Varchetti.

"The teams are so good at the regional level," Francis said. "Most of them have club gymnasts who compete the year round. Robbie is our only club gymnast."

DRIVING AMBITION

The days have passed when an automobile could be purchased on the basis of kicking the tires and listening to the door shut. Gone also is the era when driveway tinkering under the hood would yield a finely-tuned automobile. Today's cars possess advanced technical systems that alleviate the need for much of the work associated with the old-fashioned tune-up. By adhering to a recommended program of computer-based diagnosis and maintenance, car owners can expect to enjoy sustained, event-free driving. The purpose of this column is to inform our readers of automobile safety features, system advances, and driving tips that will help in the purchase of a car, in effectively maintaining it, and in enjoying its performance.

Hello! Our names are Tom Fraser and Bob Hoover, and we would like to welcome you to our column. In the weeks ahead, we will be bringing you the latest information on automotive technology as well as sharing with you trends in new cars. At RINKE TOYOTA, trust is our middle name. The Grosse Pointe Devils Pee Wee A hockey team celebrates after winning the Trenton Invitational championship with a 6-2 victory over the Allen Park Lasers.

Devils tops at Trenton

The Grosse Pointe Devils Pee Wee A hockey team survived a hectic 24 hours while winning the championship at the Trenton Invitational tournament.

The Devils skated to a 6-2 victory against the Allen Park Lasers in the title game as Brian Williams collected two goals and two assists.

Chris Barger and Williams scored 11 seconds apart in the first period to give the Devils a 2-0 lead. Ray LaDochi and Greg Kelly tallied in the second period to put Grosse Pointe ahead 4-1. Kelly's goal came while the Devils were short-handed.

Jake Wardwell completed the scoring for Grosse Pointe. Jeff Schroeder and Marc McRandall each had two assists for the Devils, while Barger and Richard Balow added one apiece.

Kaufmann also played well in front of goalie Ryan Kramer, who had an excellent game.

Williams was named most valuable forward, while Bayko got the defensive MVP award and LaDochi, the Devils' captain, was the tournament MVP.

The Devils didn't have much time to celebrate after the 8 a.m. title game because they had to come back at noon to play their final regular-season contest against the Grosse Pointe Habs.

It was the fourth game in 24 hours for the Devils, but they didn't act tired as they skated to a 4-1 victory over their cross-town rivals.

Williams scored at the 35-second mark of the first period, but Brad Sidelko tallied for the Habs to tie the game at 1-1.

Wardwell broke the deadlock in the second period and Kasprzak and Kelly added third-period goals for the Devils.

Mike Barger had three assists, while Clark, Chris Barger, LaDochi and Coates added one apiece. Adam Doughty and Alex Chapman had the Habs' assists.

Kramer had an outstanding game in goal, while Balow, Schroeder, McRandall, Kaufmann and Bayko also played well.

The Devils began the tournament with a 6-1 victory over RFB as Chris Barger and Schroeder each scored twice.

Schroeder, Chris Barger and LaDochi tallied in the first period to stake the Devils to a 3-0 lead.

Kelly scored Grosse Pointe's other goal, while Williams had three assists, Chris Barger and LaDochi each collected two and Bayko and McRandall added one apiece.

Chris Barger was the Devils' MVP for the game, while Grosse Pointe got excellent defensive play from Wardwell, Kaufmann, Clark, Coates and goalie Kramer.

The Devils rolled to an 8-1 victory over the USA Bulldogs as Schroeder scored three goals and LaDochi collected two goals and two assists.

The Devils, who led 6-0 after the first period, also had goals from Kelly, Balow and Kasprzak. Chris Barger and McRandall each had two assists, while Wardwell, Kaufmann, Mike Barger and Kelly collected one apiece.

LaDochi was named MVP, while Williams, Coates, Bayko, Clark and Kramer also had good games.

Chris Barger's power-play goal with three minutes left in the game gave the Devils a 2-2 tie with the Downriver Wolverines. Williams set up the winning goal with a nice pass.

Kelly opened the scoring with Mike Barger drawing the assist, but the Wolverines tallied the next two goals.

Grosse Pointe met the host Trenton squad in the semifinals and came away with a 7-1 victory as LaDochi and Chris Barger each scored twice and Kramer had a shutout until Trenton scored with 20 seconds left.

Kelly, Balow and Schroeder also tallied for the Devils, while defensemen Clark and Coates each collected a pair of assists. Schroeder, Williams, Wardwell, McRandall, Mike Barger, LaDochi and Kasprzak each had one assist.

Kramer was the game's MVP.

Earlier, the Devils made a good showing in the Junior Great Lakes Invitational at the City Sports Center in Detroit.

Grosse Pointe won three of its four games, but failed to reach the championship round when it was beaten by the Michigan Panthers and Livonia Knights in a tie-breaking formula.

The Devils battled back from a 3-0 deficit to edge the St. Clair Shores Saints 4-3 in the tournament opener as LaDochi scored the game-winner 37 seconds into the third period on a pass from Williams.

Kelly scored twice and had one assist for the Devils, while Chris Barger notched the other goal.

Williams finished with three assists and Wardwell had two.

The Devils dropped their next game 4-1 to the Michigan Panthers, but came back strong in the next game to hand the Livonia Knights their first defeat 3-2.

Grosse Pointe fell behind 2-0, but Kelly brought the Devils within a goal late in the first period with Kasprzak and Mike Barger assisting. The Devils dominated the second period as Williams tied the game and Mike Barger scored the winner 27 seconds later.

Chris Barger set up Williams' goal and Kelly and Kasprzak set up Mike Barger's winner.

The Devils' defense corps of Bayko, Coates, Clark and Kaufmann, along with Kramer in goal were outstanding in holding off the Knights for the rest of the game.

Kramer recorded the shutout and Williams and Barger each had a goal and an assist in a 2-0 victory over the Eastside Outlaws. LaDochi also had an assist.

Trojans end South's finest year

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's hockey team cleared its first two state tournament hurdles with ease last week, but the third was too big an obstacle for the Blue Devils.

Trenton, which has won six Class A championships — more than any other school — jumped out to a 3-0 lead and rolled to a 9-2 victory over South in the Class A regional championship game at Wyandotte.

South beat Livonia Stevenson and Grosse Pointe North in its first two regional contests.

"We're made a lot of progress in our program, but we haven't made that step to be on even footing with Trenton," said Blue Devils' coach Bob Bopp, who has guided the school to a 53-17-1 record in his three seasons.

"Confidence-wise we needed the first goal. I keep thinking each year Trenton will slip but they just keep getting better and better."

Trenton was ranked second in the final state Class A poll and South was fourth in the ratings.

"I was very concerned about them," said Trojans' coach Mike Turner, who guided Trenton to its first three state championships and returned behind the bench this year after retiring for several years.

"I saw Grosse Pointe play in its first two tournament games and they certainly earned the right to play in the championship game."

Trenton's success in past state tournaments was probably a factor in the Trojans' explosion against South. They played like they expected to win, while the Blue Devils went in hoping they would win.

"That's a good assessment," Bopp said. "We kept playing right to the end and I was very happy with the way the kids prepared for the game with Trenton. A lot of good things happened this year. Everyone's disappointed with the way it ended so it will take a while to realize all we've accomplished this year."

Turner admitted that Trenton has lofty goals when it comes to hockey.

"Our expectations are always high," he said. "We never feel that our season is a success unless we get past the regionals."

Chad Clements opened the scoring for the Trojans at 5:41 of the first period when he took a crossing pass from Dave Guidi and put the puck into the corner of the net before South goalie Todd Dunlap could get across the crease.

Trenton killed off a penalty to Mike Lamb at 9:14 and then took advantage of a questionable tripping call against the Blue Devils' Josh Preus with the first of two goals by Joe Ottenbreit, only 17 seconds into the power play at 11:45.

Trenton's Ryan Clements made it 3-0 with the first of his two goals with 1:35 left in the first period when he deflected Lamb's pass into the net.

"The key was getting three goals in the first period," Turner said. "We felt we had to jump on them early."

Bopp felt that South's failure to mount a serious attack during the power play was also a turning point in the game.

"Our power play had been slipping lately," Bopp said. "We've been having trouble getting into the attacking zone. We considered changing back to our old 1-3-1 formation."

Ryan Clements scored his second goal at 2:26 of the second period. Rich Ferrante made it 5-0 at 8:16 and Kevin Ahern flipped a long shot from the blue line that eluded Dunlap, who appeared to be screened, 16 seconds later.

Jason Durbin gave Trenton a 7-0 lead at 1:24 of the third period, but South's John Graffius spoiled goalie Shawn Greene's shutout bid at 3:50 when he took a pass from Terry Brennan and jammed the puck into the net while skating in front of the crease.

Ottenbreit scored a power-play goal at 8:35 and Lamb, who also had four assists, tallied unassisted at 10:53. Bill Starrs scored South's second goal with 59 seconds left, assisted by Graffius and Geoff Kimmel.

South began regional play with an impressive 8-1 victory over Stevenson, which had gone undefeated in winning the South Suburban League championship.

"They're a good team, but because they were undefeated they might have taken us a little lightly," Bopp said. "But we play in the best league in the state."

It took South only 21 seconds to get on the scoreboard when defenseman Justin Braun beat the Spartans' netminder. Goals by Terry Brennan, freshman Andy Klein and Kimmel gave the Blue Devils a 4-0 lead after one period.

Fifty is Knights' magic number

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

The recipe for success for University Liggett School's basketball team is a simple one — hold the opposition under 50 points.

"We've won every game in which we've allowed less than 50 points," Knights' coach Chuck Wright said after ULS split its final two regular-season games last week.

The Knights turned in a strong all-around performance in beating Lutheran Northwest 57-48 in a Metro Conference crossover game, but then had some key defensive lapses in a 52-48 loss to Ann Arbor Greenhills in a non-league contest.

"When you can frustrate a team on your defensive end, it makes them do a lot of things they don't want to do," Wright said. "You can take them right out of their game."

ULS never trailed Northwest after Frank Tymrak opened the game with a three-point basket.

The Knights held a 13-6 advantage after the first quarter and increased the lead to 28-18 at halftime. ULS came out strong in the second half, using a 9-1 run to open a 37-21 lead with about three minutes left in the third quarter.

The Crusaders made a run at the Knights in the fourth quarter and closed the gap to 49-44 with 1:38 remaining after a layup by Matt Blom. Northwest went to a full-court press, but ULS broke it with ease. Rod Williams, who led all scorers with 23 points, got behind the press twice for layups, was fouled each time and hit both free throws. Brad Cassin then scored on a layup to give the Knights a 57-44 lead with 39 seconds remaining.

"We tried to make sure that we didn't have a letdown in the third quarter," Wright said. "It seems like the third quarters are never close. Either we come out strong or we have a bad third quarter."

Joe Grant had 15 points, 10 of them in the first half, for ULS and also grabbed eight rebounds. Cassin also had eight rebounds.

Eric Werth led Northwest with 11 points and 10 rebounds, while freshman Jim Essian, the son of the former major league catcher and ex-Chicago Cubs manager, added 10 points. Blom and Mike Greenwold each scored nine points for the Crusaders.

"Northwest isn't a bad team," Wright said. "They lost to (Lutheran) East by four and on Friday they blew out a pretty good team, and scored 90 points so they have a pretty good offensive club."

ULS finished with an 8-6 Metro Conference record and wound up fourth overall in the league.

The Knights' trip to Greenhills wasn't quite as productive, although ULS got off to a good start, taking a 15-6 lead.

Then the Gryphons switched to a matchup zone defense and the Knights had trouble scoring.

In other words, ULS was beaten at its own game. "We let our offensive difficulties affect our defense," Wright said. "We got away from our defensive game plan and let Greenhills' two best players score 42 of their 52 points."

The Gryphons went ahead to

Drake among NCAA leaders

Former Grosse Pointe South star Angela Drake of Toledo is among the NCAA women's basketball leaders in several statistical departments.

Drake is fourth nationally with 17 double-doubles, trailing Darcy Smith of Virginia Commonwealth, who has 19, and Dana Wynne of Seton Hall and DeShawne Blocker of East Tennessee State, who have 18 apiece.

Drake, a sophomore and three-time Mid-American Conference Player of the Week, has scored more than 20 points 13 times and has grabbed 10 or more rebounds 18 times.

She leads the MAC and ranks among the top 15 nationally in rebounding with an 11.4 average. The 6-foot-1 Drake leads the MAC in field-goal percentage (.587), is third in scoring (19.4) and sixth in free-throw percentage (.767).

She is closing in on several Toledo season records, including free throws, rebounds and rebounding average. Drake has 138 free throws. The record is 149. She is four behind the rebound record of 292 and is on pace to break the Rockets' rebounding average mark of 11.0.

In her last outing, a 96-74 victory over Akron, Drake had 13 points and 10 rebounds in just 20 minutes before she was sidelined with an injury.

101 PRAYERS

NOVENA TO ST. JUDE May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world, now and forever. Oh, Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. Worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us.

Say this prayer 9 times a day. By the 8th day, your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail, never. Publication must be promised. Thanks, St. Jude for prayer answered. Special thanks to our Mother of Perpetual Help. R.L.

101 PRAYERS

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT Holy Spirit, you, who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You, who gives me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. In this short dialogue, want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you, no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day, your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. D.J.E.

NOVENA TO ST. JUDE May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world, now and forever. Oh, Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. Worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Thanks, St. Jude for prayer answered. D.E.

PRAYER OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God. Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart, to succor me in my necessity. (Make your request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, comforted without sin, pray for me (3 times). Holy Spirit, bless this prayer (3 times). Say this prayer 9 times consecutively. When you must publish it will be granted to you. E.P. for A.P.

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!
An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

Chickadees are friendly, year-round residents of the area

"Chick-A-Dee-Dee." Anyone who feeds the birds and is familiar with that call can tell you that the sight of the bird it belongs to will always bring a smile.

Chickadees are small birds, only 4 to 5 inches in length, with tiny bills and an acrobatic ability to feed in any position necessary to get their food. They always seem to be in a happy mood and impart that same feeling to anyone who takes the time to watch them. In fact, chickadees are so endearing that there have been a few attempts at having them named the state bird of Michigan.

Chickadees are a year-round resident in the state, but have very different social structures depending on the season. In the fall and throughout the winter, chickadees form small flocks of up to 10 birds, traveling together for safety and in order to help each other locate food. The area that this flock inhabits can be quite large — from 10 to 20 acres. Starting in February, the mated pairs begin to stake out a nesting territory that is smaller — approximately one to two acres. This is the time of year that you hear a very different call from the chickadee — "fee bee." This beautiful little whistle is a sign that the chickadees are ready to set up house and begin the rigors of parenting.

Chickadees are cavity nesters exclusively. While other birds may gather nesting materials and form an open bowl or cup-shaped nest, chickadees look for old woodpecker holes to use as a nest site. They will also excavate their own cavity, carrying the wood shavings away from the nest site. One of their favorite trees to excavate is the birch.

Once a suitable nest site is located or created, the chickadees line it with moss, feathers and other plant matter, forming a cup-shaped nest inside the cavity. Four to six eggs laid and are incubated for a few weeks before hatching. The young keep parents busy for the next two weeks, which is all the time it takes for them to get big enough to leave the nest. Parents continue with their duties by teaching the young to forage for insects and seeds. After another two to three weeks, the young are on their own and the parents start all over with a new brood.

Because they are cavity nesters, chickadees will use birdhouses. The dimensions of the birdhouse should include a floor that is 4 by 4 inches with the entrance hole approximately four to six inches above the floor. The entrance hole should be 1 1/4 inches. Any larger and the hole allows other birds the chance to use the birdhouse. Competition for housing can be a problem for chickadees since starlings, house finches and house sparrows will all use cavities for nesting. One of the benefits of birdhousing for chickadees is the fact that house wrens may take up residence between the broods of chickadees. Their breeding cycles differ just enough that they can share the same housing alternatively. When providing housing, make sure that you do not have a perch on the birdhouse. This gives predators a place to land or hold on to.

Chickadees are some of the friendliest birds that will visit your feeders. Their favorite food is black oil sunflowers, but they also love peanuts out of the shell (the unsalted variety), and suet. Since chickadees are so acrobatic, you can offer food to them in smaller feeders that do not have perches. These feeders have been developed to encourage the smaller birds that have the ability to cling to the edge of the seed port, giving them an exclusive area to feed. Suet has been developed to withstand warmer temperatures which allow you to watch the adult chickadees bring the babies to the feeders throughout their breeding season. And yes, with patience, you can teach chickadees to eat from your hand.

There is nothing quite so exciting as that feeling of softness when they daintily land on your hand to accept the morsel that you offer them. Then off they go in that characteristic flash. Chickadees have a unique way of opening the seeds that they take from your feeder. While holding the seed with their feet, they use their beak to hammer away at the outer shell until they uncover the nut meat inside. Chickadees are voracious insect eaters and are especially beneficial to us from that standpoint. In anatomical studies, it was found that a single chickadee is capable of eating 450 insect larvae in a day. Encourage the chickadees to reside in your yard and you can give up manmade pesticides — you'll have your own natural pest remover.

With their cheery calls, their darting presence, and their friendly manner, it is no wonder that the chickadee is one of our favorite feeder birds.

NBD introduces mortgage information hotline

NBD Bank has introduced a free, automated service designed to answer almost any mortgage question, 24 hours a day. Callers to the new NBD Mortgage Information Hotline can get current mortgage rates, determine how expensive a home they can afford and learn about the mortgage application process — from any phone.

The service is available in all NBD markets in Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Florida. The hotline number is 1-800-583-INFO.

NBD vice president Todd Crysler says the Mortgage Information Hotline puts the customer in control of the home buying process.

"Many people who are interested in purchasing a home are intimidated by the thought of approaching a mortgage representative cold for fear that they won't qualify for a loan," he said. "The hotline is the easy way to determine the mortgage amount for which they will qualify before they talk with a bank. Callers can essentially pre-qualify themselves over the phone."

With the ability to handle up to 500 calls simultaneously, the hotline is always available.

Among its many features, NBD's Mortgage Information Hotline:

- Provides an explanation of the types of mortgages available through NBD.
- Provides current mortgage interest rates.
- Allows callers to determine the amount of mortgage for which they qualify.

- Provides an explanation of the mortgage process and information needed to get started.

- Provides answers to the six most frequently asked mortgage questions.

- Explains the purpose of the Truth in Lending Disclosure and defines common mortgage terms.

"The hotline gives callers the option of 'switching out' to a mortgage rep once the automated system has answered their questions," Crysler said.

When the caller chooses this option, he or she will automatically be transferred to a local NBD mortgage professional.

Crysler points out that people who use the hotline to pre-qualify themselves may want to ask a mortgage rep about the NBD Mortgage Pre-Approval Program, which allows buyers to establish a maximum mortgage amount they can afford. With the program, buyers may shop for a home with the security and confidence that they are already approved for the purchase, thus giving them buying power when a Realtor presents their offer to a seller.

"The Mortgage Information Hotline is designed to allow NBD mortgage reps to follow-up with people who use the hotline to find out if they need more information," Crysler said. "This service is another way NBD is building relationships with our customers."

Construction industry reports strong year

Last year provided a much needed boost to Michigan's construction industry, according to the latest survey conducted by the Construction Association of Michigan (CAM), and Deloitte & Touche.

The Troy-based trade association surveyed over 3,700 Michigan companies, including general contractors, sub contractors, suppliers, manufacturers, engineers and architects to gauge the health of the state's third largest industry. Over 80 percent said their cash flow position was good compared to 1993. Nearly half said the money flow was considerably better than last year.

"Our figures show that every segment of construction was up considerably from 1993," said CAM chairman Thomas B. Wickersham, chief financial officer of Roncelli Inc., in Sterling Heights. "Industrial construction led the way, accounting for 33 percent of all construction activity. Opportunities for office construction doubled, and health care projects were strong. Education, public works, and residential construction opportunities also showed marked gains."

A large majority (70 percent) of all respondents reported their work volume had increased more than 5 percent. Nearly half said their volume was up more than 10 percent. New construction provided more bidding opportunities than renovations or additions, accounting for 61 percent of all work.

Wickersham says prosperity in the construction industry may mean new jobs for Michigan residents this year.

"Fully one-third of respondents said they expect to hire full-time employees over the next six months," Wickersham said. "Another 10 percent plan to add part-time people to their payroll. That's very encouraging news. Companies just don't add to their cost of doing business unless they are fairly confident about the economy. There is a lot of optimism about business opportunities this year."

Architectural and engineering firms appear to be the most optimistic group, with over half saying they plan to hire additional personnel in 1995. General contractors were second on the list with 46 percent planning to add to their payroll.

Wickersham said the hopeful tone of the survey extends to every area of the state.

"Respondents from every geographical area of Michigan reported plans to add new employees," Wickersham said. "Sixty-four percent of those in western Michigan reportedly plan to hire new people; 50 percent of those in lower northern Michigan; and over one-third of the contractors located in metropolitan Detroit."

While such optimism is good news for those looking for work, the economic upswing has some contractors worried about possible labor shortages.

"For the first time in our four-year history of doing these surveys, over half of all general contractors and sub-contractors are concerned about adequate labor supplies," Wickersham said. "That makes sense considering that Michigan's unemployment rate is at the lowest point since 1969. Many contractors are already having trouble finding manpower, so it's not surprising that they are concerned about finding qualified people in the future."

According to John Fovenesi, director of construction services for the Detroit office of Deloitte & Touche, labor shortages often lead to higher inflation as companies begin offering higher salaries to retain their workforce.

"One minor concern we have is a jump in the inflation rate, which generally means higher interest rates," Fovenesi said. "Higher interest rates mean less construction. It's going to be a delicate balancing act to keep inflation under control without killing economic growth."

There are already some indications that inflation is edging upward. According to CAM's survey, material prices have jumped as much as 20 percent for some trades over the last year. Nearly half of all respondents reported that material prices increased at least 5 percent.

Fovenesi said such concerns are minor compared to the problems that many construction companies had to overcome in recent years.

"All things considered though, these kinds of problems are welcome concerns for construction companies that were poised on the brink of bankruptcy just two or three years ago," Fovenesi said.

CAM is a trade association of contractors, sub-contractors, suppliers and others involved in the commercial construction industry. The association is the largest organization of its kind in North America. It is also the oldest, celebrating 110 years of continuous service to Michigan's construction industry.

CAM's annual business survey is produced in cooperation with the construction services group of Deloitte & Touche. Results were tabulated by Marketing Resource Group Inc. of Lansing to protect the confidentiality of respondents.

Copies of the Construction Business Survey are available by contacting CAM's public affairs department at (810) 585-1000. There is a $7 fee for reproduction and mailing.

Lighting and pictures can make hallways more interesting

Virginia Carr
The Color Wizard'

Q. How can I make our long, dark hallway more interesting?

A. Here are some ideas.

- Paint the ceiling white and add a four-inch to eight-inch track lighting system. Match their color to the ceiling paint color. Point the lights to wash the walls on both sides.

- Paint the walls a light color and the two end walls just a touch deeper to visually bring them forward. Also, blend the floor coverings to the wall color. Remember, contrast draws attention.

- For interest, turn one of the hallway walls into a picture gallery.

- Add a mirror to the end walls to reflect more light or install a grouping of them on the long wall.

Q. We live in an apartment where wallcoverings are not allowed. What can we do to warm up the cold-looking walls?

A. If allowed, hang a grouping of pictures and/or try some sponge painting techniques over the white paint. By the way, there are some new wallpaper borders that adhere like contact paper and can be easily applied and removed. Check it out.

Virginia Carr, the Home Decorating Color Wizard, will answer your questions here or make a house call for individual attention. # NAR applauds property rights bill in new Congress

The Private Property Protection Act of 1995, now before the U.S. Congress, should be enacted to ensure that property owners receive financial compensation when their property is limited — therefore devalued — by federal actions, says The National Association of Realtors.

The bill, H.R. 925, a portion of the GOP "Contract with America," will grant property owners compensation when the value of their property is reduced by at least 10 percent.

"This private property rights bill is a goal we have worked toward for a long time," said NAR president Edmund G. Woods Jr.

"Property owners and Realtors have teamed together in recent years to combat the growing number of environmental restrictions that limit property use. Many of these restrictions violate the constitutional rights of property owners when they are denied just compensation for these limitations," said Woods, a Realtor from Holyoke, Mass.

"NAR recognizes the importance of protecting the natural environment, but believes that any federal action should be balanced with compensation guaranteed under the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution.

The general public should pay the price for land-use restrictions, Woods said, rather than the private property owner. Both homeowners and business owners will be better off with enactment of this legislation, he added, since the costs will be shared by the public, which benefits from the restrictions.

Several states are already requiring agencies to assess whether certain actions could result in "taking" private property and are permitting courts to review such actions.

"Private property rights are the backbone of our country. What's good for private property owners is good for America," Woods said.

The National Association of Realtors, "The Voice for Real Estate," is the nation's largest professional association, representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

"Turning surplus into a plus for the hungry"

The Grosse Pointe
Public School System

ANNUAL SCHOOL CANNED GOOD DRIVE PLEASE FILL THIS BAG WITH NOURISHING FOOD

RETURN THIS FILLED BAG TO YOUR LOCAL GROSSE POINTE SCHOOLS.

This canned food drive is part of the "Kids Helping Kids" program sponsored by Gleaners: a comprehensive and hands-on program of classroom activities and lessons dealing with the effects of hunger on children.

KIDS HELPING KIDS

HELP FEED THE HUNGRY

Gleaners Community Food Bank distributes food to over 200 Southeast Michigan church pantries, soup kitchens, and emergency shelters. These agencies provide 200,000 meals a week to the needy. Our agencies report that the number of hungry and poor people has increased. Gleaners appreciates the continued community-wide support in our efforts in feeding the hungry.

The Simple Food Facts cry out...

- The "gleaners" idea is based on the belief that food which would normally go unused should be given to the hungry.
- Gleaners has distributed over 120 million pounds of food to the hungry since 1977.
- Gleaners currently distributes nearly 1 million pounds of food every month.
- Hungry Children may live in a city, suburb, in the country or on a farm.
- Educators say that children who have enough to eat do better than those who do not have enough to eat.

If you are unable to use this grocery bag for food donations, you can still feed the hungry by clipping the coupon shown here and buying a case of food for the needy through Gleaners. All donations will be acknowledged.

GLEANERS COMMUNITY FOOD BANK Help Feed the Hungry

Please use this coupon to HELP FEED THE HUNGRY. GLEANERS COMMUNITY FOOD BANK will use your donation to buy the case(s) of food you select and distribute them FREE to over 200 member soup kitchens, church pantries, emergency shelters, and other feeding agencies.
