Beginning in September or October, a committee of two library board members chaired by trustee Steve Matthews and including trustee Florence Miller - will begin the process of replacing director Charles Hanson, who resigned in June and leaves on Aug. 31.

The board postponed making an annual review of its legal counsel's performance and will continue its relationship with the law firm of Hill Lewis.

"Because we are in the middle of labor positioners that's their primary responsibility with our legal requirements, we didn't really want to review that relationship." Bruce said That would be more appropriate at the conclusion of negotiations

One of the Park's finest has affinity for all things Scottish

Staff Writer

We all have stereotypes about what cops do in their off hours It's a pretty good guess that these stereotypes don't include antique collecting and a love of all things Scottish.

Park resident Randall Cain is a lieutenant with the Park Public Safety Department while on duty, but of duty he's president of Detroit's St. Andrew's Society, as well as an avid collector of antiques associated with old-fashioned apothecaries and George M. Cohan.

"I came from a family that is very musically and intellectually oriented," said Cain. said Cain. What I remember most from my childhood is the sound of music, the small of good food and the reading of books."

In 1965 Cain received his law degree from the University of Detroit Law School, some thing that makes his mother very proud. Studying law gave him a new perspective as a police officer, and being a police officer gave him a different perspective on the law, something one of his professors

"It's good to see things from a different point of view," Cain said.

Cain has been fascinated by George M. Cohan since he was about 10. He enjoyed Jimmy Cagney's performance of the famous Tin Pan Alley songman in "Yankee Doodle Dandy.

"I just think he's a great musician," said Cain. "I like antiques, and specialize in items associated with old apothacaries, like display cases, jars and the like.

Cain has been an officer in the Park's public safety department for 18 years. He was with the Meridian Township police just outside Lansing for a short period before joining the Park's department.

I went to Michigan State and majored in social studies with an emphasis on Russian History," Cain said. "I had fun Andrew's Society.

1972. I grew up in the Park and my high school class was the last one that graduated from Grosse Pointe High School, before it was renamed South.

Becoming a police officer was not a career choice people expected Cain to make. His father was a manufacturer's representative for several furniture companies, and he worked with his father for three years. but decided the furniture business was not for him.

"It was a good move for me," Cain said. "Telling my dad ! was going to be a cop was hard, but I don't regret the decision. ! worked in Meridian Township for a while, when a position in the Park opened up. I grew up in the Park, and when I got the job. I was coming home.

The Park combined its fire. police and ambulance departments into one public safety POINTER OF INTEREST had to be able to go on fire runs, and firemen had to be able to act as police officers.

"I didn't find this a big adjustment," said Cain. "I was a volunteer firemen in Meridian Township. I had to take some in-house training, as well as some outside firefighting courses, but I was very comfortable with it. I didn't take peramedic training though. It was a personal decision.

Cain was one of the department's public education officers. It was his job to visit local schools and talk to students about public safety issues.

"I'm still remembered for at." said Cain. "Every now and then I will meet an adult who will tall me that I lectured department eight years ago, his grade school class about That meant that police officers public safety. It's nice to be remembered, but it can be disconcerting to have an adult tell you that he remembers you from his childhood."

> Park youth of today know Cain because he and his horse Johnny constitute the city's cavalry, as it were.

"I've been riding for seven years, and own Johnny, a Missouri foxtrotter," said Cain. "So I bring him to parades, and the kids see me. I remember one time a little boy was looking at me, and he finally came up to me and asked if I was Johnny's daddy. I get a kick out of that,

One thing Cain hates when parents tell their children to behave or they'll have the police take him away to jail.

"Police are supposed to be people's friends," said Cain. This does not promote that One of the things I like about the Park is that we have a positive relationship with the pub-lic. There aren't that many communities that can say Cain's interest in Scotland started when he visited the country back in the 1980s. He purchased a kilt while there, and when he were it to the opening of Gallerie 454 in 1989, someone saw him and sent him an application to the St. Andrew's Society.

"My grandmother was from Scotland," said Cain. "Her said Cain. name was Margaret Mac-Gowan, which is a sept, or branch, of the Clan Mac-Phearson. When I was in Scotland, I seked a police officer where the best place to buy a kilt was. His name is Raymond Gordon, and we became friends. My wife and I are the godparents to Ray and his wife Corinne's daughter Hannah.

The St. Andrew's Society is the oldest benevolence society in the state, Cain said. Given the fact that the Scottish population of metro Detroit is fairly wall off as a whole, he'd like to see the society establish outreach programs.

"Maybe put on pipe and dance shows for the elderly in retirement homes," said Cain. "Do something positive for the community.

The society also puts on the Highland Games, held at the

for the past three years. Cain was in charge of the project last year, and is glad not to have to do it this year

"It's something to plan a project for months, and then see it fall inco place overnight," Cain said. 'The games are the biggest thing we do, and we've doing them for over 140 years."

With the release of movies like "Rob Roy" and "Brave-heart," Cain believes that interest in the St. Andrew's Society will grow. The group has 330 members, the largest number in its history. People are interested in their roots, and this gives them something to be a part of, Cain said.

Media giants dominating U.S. dailies

ith Gannett extending its lead in both numbers of papers and circulation by its $1.7 billion purchase of Multimedia Inc., the newspaper field is increasingly being dominated by a short list of corporate media giants that own most of the major U.S. papers.

In fact, six Detroit News and Free Press unions representing 2,500 employees are now pitted against the nation's two largest chains, Gannett, with almost six million readers subscribing to its 93 papers, and Knight-Ridder, which owns 27 dailies with a circulation of 3.6 million.

It's hardly an even contest, as the newspapers are proving by their ability to persuade many strikers to pass through union picket lines to return to work.

Yet Disney's recent purchase of Capital Cities ABC for $19 billion dwarfs the Gannett purchase price while further increasing the concentration of media ownership, especially in the entertainment field.

In fact, the Disney acquisition of CBS is also more than three times larger than the $5.4 billion spent by Westinghouse in finally completing its long-rumored pur-chase of CBS, the last of the independent networks.

In the Detroit metro area, the Disney

Vol. 56, No. 32, August 10, 1995, Page 6A

purchase covers radio stations WJR and WHYT and the Oakland Press. Elsewhere in Michigan. Capital Cities/ABC also had owned the Lapeer County Press, the Armada Times, the Brown City Banner, the Thumb Blanket and eight real estate magazines.

What apparently prompted the gigantic purchase by Disney are the new opportunities beckoning in the developing field of telecommunications.

Congress has been wrestling with a telecommunications bill that promises consumers a wider choice of cable and telephone companies, but the New York Times and other critics fear the legislation would put local phone companies in a position to drive their rivals out of busi-

In the Times' view, the legislation could concentrate control of the main media outlets - TV, radio and newspapers - in too few hands while also giving such media new opportunities to expand their horizons in wider markets.

With Disney in charge, the emphasis in the new media giant is likely to be on the new opportunities in entertainment, more than in news. That raises questions about the outlook for news departments in TV and radio stations as well as for newspapers now owned by Disney.

In fact, the Disney purchase even seems to diminish the Detroit newspaper strike's importance, except, perhaps, in the Detroit metropolitan area, where the papers' efforts to improve their "bottom line" constitute the major issue.

As the strike continues, the papers, and especially The News, still fail to provide a fair and balanced coverage of the strike, and center their news stories, editorial comment and columns on union violence.

That leaves it up to the Metro Times to report on and criticize the activities of three private security companies hired by the newspaper managements.

Those companies serve a legitimate purpose when they protect management personnel and even strikers crossing picket lines. But if they use scare and other tactics reported by the Metro Times, they are out of bounds, ethically and perhaps even legally.

While concentration of ownership of the news media once was a major issue, there was little protest when Gannett made its latest purchase, according to Charles Eisendrath, a University of Michigan journalism professor.

His view is, he told the New York Times, "The war is over and the old guys

He is right that the demise of familyowned journalism enterprises, once popular in the daily field and is still in week lies such as the Grosse Pointe News, was signaled earlier when family-owned dailies in Louisville. Des Moines and Detroit sold out to the chains.

In the early 1980s. Ben H. Bagdikian, a media critic and scholar, estimated that only 46 companies in the world controlled most of the global business in daily newspapers, magazines, television, books and movies. By 1990, he estimated the number had fallen to 23, and the trend obviously continues.

When businesses buy or control newspapers, staff members often are required to pay more attention to the needs of advertisers. That breaches the separation that journalists have usually felt was required for journalistic integrity.

In addition, mega media companies of ten have a lot of other corporations under their umbrella. That increases the number of "sacred cows" journalists have to worry about for fear of offending the parent company.

Yet William Glaberson's article in the Sunday Times, which tended to be critical of the business dominance of newspaper ownerships, appeared in a paper that still values its integrity.

But the Times, too, owns 25 newspapers with a circulation of 2,436,436, making it the fifth-largest newspaper chain in the country.

Nor, in fact, is the end yet in sight for concentration of ownerships not only of newspapers but of all elements of the media, as the recent developments prove.

A '16 Chevy sold for $750

Detroit Free Press Sunday magazine story, "Twilight for the General Store," some months ago sent me rummaging through our family photograph album to find pictures of my family's rural store in the early 1900s.

The store was located at Rich Valley, Minn., an unincorporated crossroads in southern Minnesota that was owned by my paternal grandparents and managed by my father just before World War I.

One picture I found was shot inside the store with my grandfather, my father and a cousin standing in the aisles apparently awaiting customers.

The year was set by a huge banner across the store proclaiming that the 1916 Chevrolet was priced at $750.

That date means the picture had been taken about a year before a fire destroyed the store and the living quarters upstairs in which I was born.

In fact, all I can recall about the store was the fire that consumed it while I. a 5year-old, watched from my kiddie kar through a neighbor's bay window as a olunteer hucket brigade vainly fought to control the blaze.

In the distance up the road, the photo also offers a glimpee of the community church that our family attended and beyond it the one-room building in which my sister started school.

Rich Valley never boasted of more than a couple of homes, a community hall across the road, a blacksmith shop, a grain elevator, a railroad depot, and the store in which my father also served as postmaster.

Today only a couple of lonely houses remain of what was once Rich Valley. Our family's store never was rebuilt or replaced and neither was the post office inside it.

The school building is boarded up and so is the community hall. The blacksmith shop, the depot and the church have simply disappeared.

Such country stores served nearby farmers in many ways before improved highways, more reliable automobiles, improved marketing systems, and a declining farm population put most of them out of business.

Occasionally, such stores served as training grounds for ambitious entrepreneurs who expanded their businesses and moved on to bigger markets in larger communities.

In our family's case, however, the fire ended our business and merchandising

A-bomb

justified To the Editor:

As the executive officer of LCS 92 which spent many days in July and early August of 1945 in the waters between Japan and the Philippines preparing for the invasion of Japan, I find the criticism of President Harry Truman for or dering the dropping of the atomic bomb to be absolutely outrageous. In addition to probably saving my life and the lives of hundreds of thousands of other American servicemen, there are numerous other justifications for that bombing, includ-

1. The heroic sacrifices of life and limb of the many

U.S. soldiers who fought and defeated the Japanese on Okinawa, Iwo Jima, Tarawa, Saipan, Peleliu and Midway.

2. The fight-to-the-death defense the millions of Japanese soldiers and civilians would have put up against our invading forces to protect their homeland.

3. The horrible massacres, rapes and pillages the Japanese committed in China between 1931 and sneak attack on the U.S. Pacific Fleet in Pearl Har-bor that started the war.

5. The inhumane treatment of American troops during the Bataan Death March in the Philippines.

6. Finally, the recent disclosure that the Japanese were developing their own atom bomb. Just imagine what they would have done to this nation if we had given them a year or two more to develop such a bomb.

Frankly, I seriously question the intelligence and patriotism of these history revisionists who question Truman's decision

Limiting gifts to senators

en. Carl Levin, Michigan Democrat, is one of a small bipartisan group of Senators being given credit for Senate passage of a strict ban on free meals, vacations and other gifts from lobbyists to lawmakers.

A New York Times editorial also praised Sen. John McCain, Arizona Republican, who negotiated several modest revisions in the proposal that brought sunnort from annuah freshmen Renublicans to pass it.

The measure does permit gifts of up to $50 in value, with the caveat that the total value from an individual to a lawmaker cannot exceed $100 a year. But

n another short-sighted move, the City of Detroit has cost the Detroit Institute of Arts its chief curator for violation of the city's residency require-

The Civil Service Commission in imposing that rule sounded as if it still were controlled by pals of former Mayor Coleman Young, who were always seeking ways to find jobs for their friends.

Revising history

Anchorman Peter Jennings must have caught wind of the Disney CapCities ABC deal before it was announced late last month.

That's one way to explain the Disney-esque revisionist account of the dropping of the atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki ABC aired a couple weeks ago and which was so embarrassingly sympethetic toward the Japanese

Let's not forget that Disney is the company that took historic liberties with the story of Pocehontas and also thought Thomas Jefferson penned the U.S. Constitution.

Being a prime time special Jennings obviously felt he could be looser with the facts than he normally is on "World News Tonight."

One can travel below the Mason Dixon line and find people who still believe the South won the Civil War, but these rebels aren't given a nationwide television audience to spread their mistaken beliefs

As an undergraduate history student, I endured the revisionism accounts. The professors. however, had the sense not to rearrange the facts about World War II, probably because many of the war's veterans are still around. Other wars and events, with soldiers and political figures long gone, have no one left to defend the truth.

It's amazing the amount of new (and usually unflattering) information that comes out after an important figure dies.

There is nothing wrong with bit of healthy skeptism, but the underlying message in many of my history classes of my history classes "question everything." Even an incorrect hypothesis qualified as a "potential theory," especially because it differed from what past histori- existing story, not replace the ans i.e. "dead white males". had concluded.

History, as a subject of study, must have become redundant and boring for some professors. who must lecture on the same material year after year.

Teaching a subject another way may make it more interesting, but it can also distort the facts.

If new information is unearthed on a historical subject, it should be added to the need to drop the second bomb entire picture.

Putting the "new" in news does not have to mean distorting the truth to come up with fresh information.

For Jennings, who was all of years old when the atom bombs were dropped, to question the motives of President Truman and actions of U.S. servicemen is insulting to veter ans, alive and dead.

Jennings also questioned the

Perhaps if Jennings had spoken with these men or realized that even his tellow Canadiane could possibly lose their lives. ne might have approached his television special differently or not broadcast it at all.

At least the current mayor of Hiroshima, in a ceremony last weekend, acknowledged Jananese atrocities during the war.

Jennings and ABC just glanced over them. They seem to forget why places such as Bataan, Okinawa and Pearl Harbor are remembered

Catastrophic revelation

It was shocking: door-to-door beggars, right here in good old Grosse Pointe.

OK, so they don't ask for money, instead being satisfied with handouts like bowls of food, but still what I was bearing was an eye

"They're smart - they know how to con strangers out of a meal," said the Grosse Pointe Animal Clinic's Dr. Lewrence Herzog.

"So, if your cat is gaining weight even though you have it on a diet, and you've been letting it outside, most likely it's found one or more other houses to go to where they're feeding he said.

It's kind of a time-share arrangement you didn't know you

The good doctor's advice is to keep the meow-type guys in-

"That way they don't do things like use kids' sandboxes for their litter," he said. (Or the roof of wife Doc's car, as she found upon returning from a recent train trip to Chicago but that was our own cat, Eeyore, choosing a strange way to show he missed her.)

Is being inside all the time good for such wild jungle creatures? The stats seem to support it: 'The average life span for an outdoor cat is eight rs, and for an indoor cat 15," says Dr. Herzog.

Eeyore has beaten the odds: He's 13 now and has been in charge of the whole neighborhood since he was a kitten.

And until a week or so ago, he carried a lot of weight to show for it.

'Snow White' and the other 32

Uh-oh, a chink in my general knowledge armor has showed up. Comes a reader who thinks know, if not everything, at least something that he doesn't. Wrong.

C. Lang has written to ask me what Disney's 33 full-length animated features are, having only been able to think of 30 on his own. Mr. or Ms. Lang should know that I am amazed, astounded, and flummored.

I probably couldn't think of three Disney features by myelf. Almost everything i knov about Disney comes from my grandkids, two of whom are old enough to know that they need "Lion King" nightshirts and "Pocahontas" lunchboxes.

I did see "Snow White," possibly in original release (1950s?). That's about it.

C. Lang challenges all of us to come up with the complete list - no cheating by getting a catalog from a video or Disney store. Anyone who can think of all 33 may send the list to me and flummox me again.

You're on your honor.

Another reader tells me he can perceive my religious worldview in my writing. This wouldn't be astounding, except that he is right on target at guessing my rather small religious denomination.

Pushing religion, or rather, a particular religion, isn't one of the goals of this column. That's partly my journalistic view, and partly, I imagine, because my particular denomination has traditionally abhorred aggressive proselytizing.

On the other hand, religious views (and that, to me, includes moral and ethical views) inform one's entire worldview. Or they should. So, while we're playing guessing games, if it appeals to you, you can try to guess my religion. Hint: It's in the Western tradition. .

That's a little joke, for those of you who don't have assorted rs who have joined various Eastern re ligions in their quest for meaning. In my family, three of the young adults have become Buddhist and one has tendrils of several Eastern religious traditions entwined with her traditional beliefs.

In the process, my own religion, rooted firmly in the European Enlightenment, has taken a bashing for its rationalist foundation. The rejection doesn't offend me, as it's been carried out in a fairly gentle context of questioning and search. At the same time, I ve picked up a few new ways to look at things. .

Everyone knows of stories where a person has nearly died, then seems to have a different outlook or even character after recovering. One of the lighthearted things I've picked up from my Buddhist relatives is this about reincarnation:

Remember that scene in the sappy movie, "Ghost," where spiritualist Whoopi Goldberg's office is thronged with the spirits of the dead, all talking to her at once? I'm told that Buddhists believe that spirits wait around to select a body to be reincarnated into, and that occasionally, one makes its move before the body was quite vacated on a permanent basis (such as a near-death experience). So when the recovered victim seems to be a different person, it's because he is. They call it a "walk-in" . . .

Did you know: You can spread mulch on your garden and don't even have to dig it in. Worms will do the work for On average, worms will mix the top and lower layers of soil to a distance of 18-24 inches much deeper than you would spade it. And they've been known to work the soil as deep as six feet.

If you have poor soil when you start mulching, it might take a little while until the worms gravitate to your garden. But once you start the process, they'll multiply.

Joyce Janicki, an organic gardener in St. Clair Shores, told me her garden is famous in the neighborhood for having lots of big earthworms. Kids come around and want to dig them for fishing.

else in mind. So what does she tell the kids?

These worms don't have time to go fishing. They're working worms.

My own compost heap is done in the let-nature-take-its-course style. I don't seed it. feed it, turn it, water it. I just dump yard waste in it. So the resulting product (which I used unscreened) is clumpy and messy looking.

Back in planting season, I piled a bunch of it on the garden and took off for six weeks Up North. When I returned, it was mixed in, and the resulting loose soil made the inevitable weeds easy to pull.

I also got a surprise gift of a volunteer cantaloupe plant. That's what happens with natural compost....

Negatives are for photographers

It's another version of "is the glass half full or half emp ty" philosophy. The subject is negativity. During the course of my tender years I've been privileged to serve on an assort-ment of committees and boards. For the most part these have been wonderful learning experiences and I have met and made many friends through these relationships.

I was reviewing some of the lessons learned, or at least observed, through the years. Delegating is a GOOD thing. The problem is few people have the ability to delegate. They feel indispensable, thus spread themselves too thin and the project or organization is often shortchanged. These people are almost always extremely capable and that very fact gets in their way. There simply are not enough hours in the day to manage every detail, yet they are reluctant to release control and give responsibility to others.

Further observation from this corner is that the size of committees and boards is often too large and consequently decisions are reached at a snail's pace, and often after bitter discussions, mostly unnecessary and with considerable time wasted. Indeed, there is occasionally a need for sub-committees, but more often their existence puts more obstacles in the road to solutions.

Now you must be saying to yourselves, what is she telling us that we don't already know? We've been observing our elected officials and CEOs at work and at "play" for decades. Indeed, there are times when we are literally drowning in the practice of democracy. Far more competent heads than mine have tried to streamline leadership in government as well as in private enterprise, which brings me back to my original point, negativity.

No matter what capacity we serve in our lives, negativity never has been a tool for intelligent solutions. Sound advice, checkpoints, research all have a role in government and industry, but negative behavior helps no one. Tossing about poisonous rumors, starting little factions of people with their own agendas, fanning flames of vulnerability are mean-spirited and counterproductive acts. Suggestions or complaints should be registered with those in authority, not whispered behind backs. Negativity is a cancer that spreads with relentless speed and often devastating results.

Perhaps Mickey Mouse and Cap Cities had a great idea on that street in Sun Valley. Who knows, maybe I'll bump into Bill Gates on the Hill one day and we'll do a little deal.

Woods holds hearing on senior housing project at Assumption

By Jim Sticklord Staff Writer

Despite the presence of a number of St. Clair Shores residents protesting Assumption Church's plans to build senior housing, the Grosse Pointe Woods planning commission last week voted 41 to approve variance and rezoning requests needed to undertake the pro-

Woods planning commissioner John Vitale said that while the meeting was well attended, most, if not all, of the people who opposed the church's requests were from St. Clair Shores. Church property is in both St. Clair Shores and Grosse Pointe Woods. Woods residents seemed to support the project, said Vitale.

The Assumption Greek Orthodox Church's project to build 65 senior citizen apartments is mostly in St. Clair Shores," said Vitale. "Only about 25 percent of the land to be used the project is actually in the Woods. The land that is in the Woods borders the Milk River, the Milk River pump station and Marter Road. The part of the project that borders residential homes is in St. Clair Shores?

The church asked the Woods planning commission to rezone the property in question from family residential to multiple person dwellings. The church also needed a setback variance, said Vitale.

"We saw the plans for the project," Vitale said. "They project," Vitale said. "They looked good. I felt that the church's project was the best use of the land because the land isn't really suited for single family homes. It's by the Milk River on one side, church property on another, and the pump station on another side. It's a small piece of property on the city border. Another kind of development would be very difficult."

Charles Van Hove, the only planning commissioner to vote against the church's requests. did so because he opposes spot zoning, not because he did not tike the project. Vitale said.

Spot zoning is the practice of resoning specific areas of property differently from the surrounding area.

"I think this is a good plan," said city councilman Bill Wilson who is also a member of the planning commission. "I've beard complaints that a multistory senior condo project would detract from the neighborhood.

But when I think about how this project is near the Milk River pump station and the Woods' public works storage facility, which contains our big cil has no trucks and snow plows, I don't for a vote.

believe a well-thought-out senior housing facility will hurt the neighborhood.

Vitale said that the commission has received a letter from the St. Clair Shores city government indicating that it will provide the city services. The planning commission's vote is not binding. The variance and rezoning request will now go before the Woods city council for a final vote. While the council is not bound to follow the commission's vote, it usually does. St. Clair Shores officials must also approve the project before it proceeds.

Imagine how thrilling it would be to produce portraits with an aura of excitement, pictures that really say something, pictures that tell a story about the subject. to that person's interests or field of expertise.

If photographing a friend who has strong string musical inclinations, doesn't it make sense to photograph him or her with violin in hand perhaps in a room setting conducive to the mood? If your son is hooked on football, a portrait of him in full uniform right after the game when he's sweat and dirt-covered will be loaded with impact and memorable.

In the accompanying photograph, I gave much thought to how I could best depict cowboy Iverson Martin. First, I asked him to wear his hat and sheepskin gloves to add realism to the portrait. I selected the porch of the old cabin with the woodpile and decorative antler as the setting. I placed lverson slightly to the left for compositional strength. His relaxed stance rounds out a neatly executed environmental portrait that says a lot about Iverson Martin and his interests.

Two acknowledged masters of the environmental portrait are Yousuf Karsh and Arnold Newman. It would certainly be worth your time to browse through their books during your next visit to your library or bookstore.

Medicare vouchers — a bad idea whose time has not come

By Martha A. McSteen President, National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare

There's an idea gaining strength on Capitol Hill as a novel and surefire way to rein in escalating Medicare costs. It's called a government voucher and, at first blush, it sounds great. But a careful analysis uncovers a concept heavily rehant on the market-place and fraught with problems for Medicare beneficiaries.

While I strongly believe in market forces, it nevertheless would require a huge leap of faith on the part of the nation's 36 million senior and disabled citizens to wholly trust the marketplace to offer them quality health care at an affordable price. After all, it wasn't too long ago that the marketplace didn't want seniors.

Consider that before the advent of Medicare some 30 years ago, the health insurance industry rejected most older Americans. Back then, about the only older Americans with health insurance coverage were those with employer-provided retiree health plans. Insurers knew seniors were more expensive to cover than their younger customers: Seniors visited doctors more often, went to the hospital more frequently and used more prescription drugs. Even today, many insurers who cover seniors want only the healthiest seniors, those for whom they expect to pay few claims.

A voucher system assumes that all private health insurance plans would be open and available to seniors, particularly those with pre-existing conditions. But this is not the case today. All over America we hear stories of younger and healthier workers losing their health care coverage. Why should seniors believe that insurance companies, whose first loyalty is to their stockholders, not their policyholders, would treat them any differently?

In addition, many older Agnericans' experience with insurance is tied to medigap policies. For too many years, some seniors were sold worthless or multiple policies when only one was needed or they were regularly sold new policies solely to generate new commissions for insurance agents. It has taken the better part of three decades and concerted efforts of the federal and 50 state governments to reduce fraud and abuse in the medigap insurance market to manageable proportions. It has only been with the advent of a highly regulated medigap market that seniors have been protected from the abuses of unscrupulous insurance agents eager to profit from confused or uninformed older customers.

Medicare covers all those eligible for Social Security, regardless of pre-existing conditions, and charges everyone the same premium. As currently structured, Medicare takes the worry out of finding affordable health insurance and provides unparalleled access to quality health care.

Why, then, would seniors trade in Medicare for an unknown, untested system that relies on historically anti-senior market forces for direction?

Many voucher supporters believe the system could work like the Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan, the umbrella program that offers federal employees and retirees a choice of dozens of competing plans. Unfortunately, the FEHBP is not a true example of a free market system at work.

For example, the myriad FEHBP plans actually are loathe to expand benefits beyond those offered by competing plans because they have found that if they do offer improved benefits, federal workers needing those benefits will flock to that plan and drive up its costs. One FEHBP plan found that when it increased its mental health benefit beyond the coverage offered by other plans, workers in need of mental health benefits jumped into its plan. Costs went up. Unfortunately, within a short time, the expanded benefits were reduced to those of competing plans. Over the years, benefits under FEHBP, instead of expanding, actually have become more uniform.

In addition, premiums in individual plans have tended to rise as participants have gotten older. Premiums are lowest in new plans that attract the youngest and healthiest federal

Another problem with vouchers is that even the most prudent senior could face considerable additional out-of-pocket expenses. Proposals under discussion would cap the value of the vouchers at a rate below medical inflation. As health care inflation continues to rise steeply, the buying power of the vouchers would erode. In a short period of time, the vouchers will not be adequate to buy a health care plan as comprehensive as the current Medicare program.

Seniors then will be faced with a tough choice — paying the difference out of pocket or buying a less expensive and less comprehensive policy.

For too many years, Congress has answered rising Medicare costs by simply cutting back on the rate of growth of Medicare funding. But those who would do away with Medicare in favor of vouchers are ducking their responsibilities to get to the root of the health care dilemma — exactly what is it in our health care system that is driving these enormous cost increases?

icare funding without reforming the larger health care system is not the answer. Rather, the voucher approach only shifts the burden of escalating health care costs entirely to seniors and provides no incentives for providers to hold down costs. After all, it would be the individual seniors who would be responsible for making up the difference between the value of the voucher and rapidly increasing health care costs.

Until we are willing to identify and deal with the core causes of our soaring health care costs, we cannot hope to come up with a long-term solution — or at least one that reaches beyond the next elec-

Pontiac Sunfire sports coupe glows with excitement

It took the quick eye and nimble fingers of 10-year-old Erik Hamilton to find the extra cupholders. There they were, at the back of the center console — a deep-welled tapes-and-stuff container between the front bucket seats of the Pontiac Sumire.

Erik pulled down a small door and two cupholders for back-seat passengers presented themselves. Up front, we had only one between us. Erik put his that's as attractive on the inside as it is on the outside. When the re-designed W-bodies Chevrolet Cavalier and Pontiac Sunfire hit the market as 1995 models last fall, fans of their earlier body styles reserved judgment. At least the Chevy people did.

Pontiac stylists took a bolder approach to the shape and trimming of their compact coupes and sedans and came up with a mini Firebird. The Sunfire's racy look sets it apart from the crowded pack of sports coupes. The roofline is pure Monte Carlo, but fits well on a body with aggresaive, thrusting nose and muscular haunches.

In 1981, GM introduced the front-wheel-drive Chevy Cavalier and Pontiac J2000 with the usual boasts that they would drive the Japanese imports into the sea. It didn't happen, of course, but no one who didn't work for GM believed it anyway.

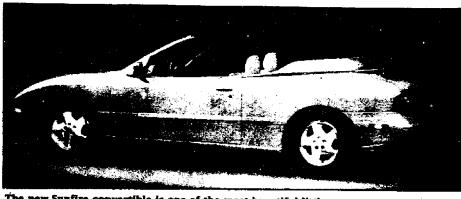

But what they did do was to become bread-and-butter cars for GM at a time when the corporation really needed them. Chevy and Pontiac sold 366,840 Cavaliers and Sunbirds (the renamed J2000) last year.

Now the Sunfire replaces the Sunbird. The new name is designed to create an image of a car more related to the Firebird than to the dowdy J2000. And that is more than image. The Sunfire is a quick and neat sports coupe, ready to hold GM's place in the tough sporty coupe market.

The test vehicle, a Sunfire SE Coupe, was powered by a refined version of GM's venerable Quad 4. The 2.2-liter overhead-cam four is rated at 120 horsepower, but it doesn't have a lot of weight to haul around and teamed with its five-speed transmission, the car is as peppy and as much fun to drive as it looks.

If you want hotter performance, opt for the Sunfire GT, which has the 2.3-liter, 150 hp of the Quad 4, the same amount of power the engine put out when it was introduced in 1987. But it does it in a much more quiet and refined manner. The old Quad 4 was famous as a noisy engine. This year's are not.

Only the front brakes are discs, but every Sunfire has four-wheel anti-lock control. Braking is controlled and consistent. Driver and front passenger airbags are standard.

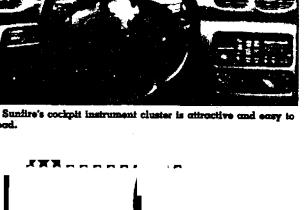

The Sunfire's driver area offers plenty of head and leg room. The interior continues Pontiac's anthropomorphic theme that it seems to have cribbed from a biology textbook. The turn-signal and wiper stalks are thick and easy to find and use. Analog instrumentation gives a sports car look with large, easy-to-read gauges

Perhaps one of the strongest features of the Sunfire is its price. Base price of the SE Coupe is $11,074, plus destination charge of $485. Our test vehicle which was nicely equipped had a sticker tag on it of $15,016.

Base price of the Sunfire GT coupe is $13,319 and the newly introduced convertible starts at $17,249.

The Sunfire SE test vehicle is a lot of car and a lot of fun for $15,000.

Woods council approves a new coffee house

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer In the face of neighborhood opposition, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council voted 4-3 to approve a hardship variance that will permit a coffee house to open at the corner of Prestwick and Mack.

Rick Brown of Caribou Coffee in Minneapolis and local developer Edward Russell approached the council Monday night and asked for a hardship variance. The coffee shop is technically a restaurant, and Grosse Pointe Woods already has 11 restaurants, the maximum allowed under city ordinances - hence the request for a hardship variance.

City building official Melissa Spranger told the council that the city council, under city ordinances, is allowed to grant a hardship variance to a business that requests one.

Spranger told the council, that the proposed coffee house had sufficient parking under city ordinances, and that it met all aethack requirements.

"If they did not need a variance because the city had reached its restaurant limit, then the owners of Cariboe Coffee would not need to go before the council for any reason; they could just go and put in their restaurant," Spranger said. "The council could not do any-

But when mayor Robert Novitke asked if anyone opposed placing a coffee shop in the old Comerica building, several neighborhood residents got up

Q. What amount of my social security benefits must I include in my taxable income?

A. If your only income was social security benefits, usually none of the benefits are taxable. If you had income, in addition to social security, your benefits are taxable only if your income goes above certain base amounts

• $25,000, for single, head of turn and not living with your spouse during the year,

• $32,000, for married filing a joint return,

 Zero for other taxpayers. How much of your benefits are taxable also depends upon income and filing status. Unmarried people and married people filing separately who don't live with their spouse may have to include 50% of their benefits if their modified adjusted gross income is between $25,000 and $32,000. Once that income exceeds $32,000, 85% of their benefits may be taxable. For married people filing jointly, the ranges are 50% of their benefits if their modified AGI is between $32,000 and $44,000 and 85% benefits if their modified AGI is over $44,000.

Q. Where can I get more information on the new rates for reporting social security benefits?

printed in the IRS Publication 915, Social Security Benefits and Equivelent Bailroad Re-tirement Benefits. To order, call 1-800-829-3676.

Q. In 1994, my husband contributed to a 401(k) plan at work. We were told that the wages that went into the plan would not be taxable. Where do we deduct his contribution on our tax return?

Astronomers first began to study the strange object in Cygtronomers believe to be a black nus when a satellite spotted intense X-radiation coming from the constellation. "Because nothing, not even ray your teeth, most are more energetic and penetrating, and black hole, they can only be they flash and flicker like the zapping of a spark," Teske explained. The mystery source was dubbed "Cygnus X-1" to denote its place on the sky and the X-rays it emitted.

This unseen companion orbits around its companion star at many million miles distance, just as Earth orbits around the sun.

When they used special techniques to "weigh" Cygnus X-1, astronomers found it to be so heavy, most believed it must be a black hole. Additional evidence for a black hole comes from the flickering X-rays emanating from Cygnus X-1.

Many acientists think these X-rays come from a region of ultra strong gravity close to a black hole," Teake said. "They believe some gaseous material from the visable star is always heing trapped by the black hole and drawn into it. On the way into the hole, the gas is comand heated to extremely high temperatures by the extraordinary gravitational effects it encounters just before entering. This hot, compressed gas releases the X-rays that Earth-circling satellites have picked up from 8,000 light years away."

otters money

When gearing up for that summer getaway, travelers should ask themselves an important question: What is the best way to manage vacation spending money?

AAA Travel Agency officials say traveling with loads of cosh is not wise.

"If lost or stolen, cas is irre-placeable," said AAA Travel director Bill Best. "Also, flashing wads of bills may make a tourist an easy theft target."

Instead, he suggests vacation ers consider a variety of pay-ment methods — from travelers checks to credit cards - to ensure maximum convenience and security.

Most of the vacation funds should be in travelers checks, Best said. The agency recommends American Express Travelers Cheques since they are widely recognized and accepted like cash throughout the world. And unlike cash, if they're lost or stolen, they are e placed at thousands of American Express offices worldwide. It's vital to keep a set of travelers check serial numbers separate from the checks to order for them to be replaced.

American Express Travelers Cheques have lots of other advantages. They are fee-free to AAA members at any branch office. In general, visitors also get a better exchange rate oversees when changing travelers checks rather than cash. And for those away from home a long time, mail can be sent in care of the American Express office wherever they are visiting. Also, American Express "Traveler's Cheques for Two" are the only travelers checks that allow two people to carry and use the same set of checks. letting them pursue separate vacation interests without sec-

AAA Travel Agency also recommenda members use a credit card to cover unexpected or very large expenses incurred during vacation. # August 1945: Grateful Pointe accepts peace

By Margie Reins Smith Feature Editor When President Harry Truman announced that Japan had surrendered unconditionally, ending World War II. Americans went ber

They shouted: danced: drank: kissed each other; prayed; blew car horns; rang bells; hugged strangers; waved American flags; held impromptu parties.

Grateful Pointe Accepts

Peace ... blazed across the front page of the Aug. 16, 1945, issue of the Grosse Pointe News.

Police reported an orderly celebration. Most Pointers did their drinking and dancing and kissing and noise making within the privacy of their own homes or in neighborhood churches and restaurants.

"Some just shouted, some sang, millions of auto horns were pressed down until tired batteries gave up," the article reported, "and from millions of human hearts the most sincere and devout thanks ascended to the Great White Throne that had ever poured forth from the thanksgivers in all their long or short lives.

Truman announced the war's end on national radio a few minutes after 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 14,

Within minutes Pointers were blowing their car horns. At 7:10 p.m., according to the newspaper, a carload of youngsters sped down Jefferson, all ringing cow bells. Three 11-year-old boys decorated themselves with trailing streamers, placed army helmets on their heads and rode their bikes down

Many Pointers attended church services; others got into their cars and headed downtown to celebrate with a more boisterous crowd. Soon after the peace announcement, the state of Michigan banned the sale of alcohol, but there was obviously an ample supply from well-preserved private caches," the Grosse Pointe News said. "One expert estimated that 10,000 highballs gurgled down thirsty but patriotic Grosse Pointe throats in the first 30 minutes of peace.

Police blotters were unusually clear - even for the Grosse Pointes - although a Roslyn Road homeowner called to report that a heavy calibre rifle bullet had plunged through his roof and smashed an ashtray next to his elbow.

One local police sergeant remarked: "We're only arresting for murder and arson this evening.

The Grosse Pointe News' editorial page celebrated the end of the war and expressed hope for a brighter, more peaceful future: "Let us pray God that this will be the last eclipse of freedom in all coming time. . . And as we clear the wreckage and mark the graves of those who died, let us dedicate our supreme effort to making this more just world and a vastly happier world for all the human brotherhood than it has ever been

Pointe Played Big War

Role topped another front-page story. Pointers should look back at the last four years with pride, according to the reporter who wrote the story.

Pointers were involved in collecting "Bundles for Britain," donating time and money to the Red Cross, organizing bond drives, donating blood, planting victory gardens, and more.

Local school children and women were responsible for selling more than $18 million in war bonds to a community of about 38,000 people. Children helped the war effort by collecting waste paper, fat, tin and scraps. A local Hostess Corps entertained servicemen at the Grosse Pointe Neighborhood Club. The Pointes' honor roll listed 3.508 men and women in the armed services. Of these, 86 were

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD 🌢 🖤 🛊 🍨

What a marvel memory would be if it would recepture our reprines and forget our regrets

Today I'm going back more than a half century in the annu of Grosse Pointe's past to chronicle the early life and times of one of our prominent playing celebrities. Iack "The Shadow" Chapin of the lake front family of fame was as exceptional as anyone I dueled or dealt with at the table. The agoless John Reindel of this community's beinge antiquity would voice noncompliance, claiming the author of this lacked the agritude to discern great play in those days. I have always swept aside such mockery and stood ally to my good friend's wonders in play or away from the pasteboards.

fack's early play was first recognized at St. Paul's Boarding School where the rector placked him from the shadows of mediocity and set him on his way to glory and reward. At Yale, history and hockey took precedence, but he was the champ in his finiteraity at playing slams. Then came Quantico where he first groomed for his three years of distinguished service with the Pacific Lenternecks. His vanity was wounded, for none of his company gave a hoor about his past card arristry. But the priorities of the time and place forced his attention to more important matters and while he managed to stay in one piece, the hits he got micked with far exceeded those to his bridge playing

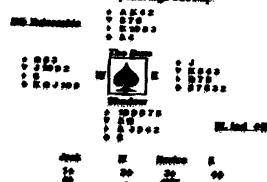

So it was perfectly natural upon his person to the Ferm fall of 1945, for all to hold him in veneration, especially when sessed at a four-sided square playing plateau. Remember those were the days when you never bid a slam off two or more aces unless you had 12 in the same suit.

So it was a class act to watch the likes of Jack, Howard Smith, Billy "Bitch Bitch" Basbie, Gordon Wood and the Reindel brothers perform sometimes with much less. Today, 25 FICP slams are as common as Clinton equivocations. But not

Two objectives motivated Jack to move to our capital on the Potomac 36 years ago. Francis Sayre, dean of The Washington National Cathedral, needed his skillfulness. And the marines wished fervently to use his experience and penmanship to trace their exciting Pacific history.

Grosse Pointe Summer Stock is also presenting an all-stu-dent production of a bittersweet comedy "The People in the Class Paperweight," at 8 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 13.

The play, which runs about 45 minutes, is directed by Geoff Button, and stars Kate Callas, Jeff Case and Kevin Young. It tells the story of an old couple which never leaves its home and a fireman who comes to their rescue one day.

"Grosse Pointe South did this show several years ago and I just remember it being so funny and so touching that I wanted to present it again. said Button, who graduated from Grosse Pointe South in June. # Presenting the GPAC

By Carol LaChiusa-DiSanto

GPAC president Grosse Pointe teems with talented artists and cultural groups; some large and organized; some small and informal; some are not a group at all but simply individuals working alone.

The schools have excellent art and music departments but outstanding students are often recognized only by their own teachers and fami-

The east side is truly a cultured community with an insatiable appetite for our arts and cultural events, yet we have never organized our art, music, literary, dance groups, schools and the community under one "um-

That is until now.

We are proud to announce that for the past year a small but diligent group has been quietly working to form the Grosse Pointe Arts Council. We are the "link between the arts."

We have written our bylaws. We have obtained our non-profit status and are now incorporated by the state. We have joined the Michigan Association of Community Arts Agencies, and the Midwest Arts Council. Now we will be able to take advantage of speakers, workshops, conferences, grants and exhibitions.

We sponsored a reception for a nationally known artist, John Stobart, last Murch. It was hosted by Tom Pavlock of the Framing Gallery, and was held at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Last fall, we were instrumental in getting musical, choir and theater groups involved with the Grosse Pointe Art Association's Festival of the Arts held on the grounds of the War Memorial, in the Village and on the Hill. It was an incredible success. This Sept. 9-10, it will happen again.

We will have our first fundraiser on Sunday, Oct. 29, in conjunction with the Grosse Pointe Theatre. We are hosting a pre-theater party at the War Memorial, followed by a performance of "The Secret Garden."

A brochure listing all our cultural groups with a con-tact name and phone num-ber is a short-term goal.

We have many long-term goals also. We want to sponsor competitions as a means of recognizing and rewarding those with special talents and abilities.

We have a vision of Grosse Pointe one day being known as a viable are community -"Grosse Pointe, the Art Community on the Lake." Charlevois did it. So did Santa Fe. As did Malibu. So can we with a little input from arts groups, from the business community and from you

This newspaper was kind enough to give us this space in order to communicate with you on a monthly basis. You will find this column under our logo the second week of every month. We will keep you informed of our progress, and of the goings on of our member groups

Member organizations to date are the Angela Ken-nedy Dancers, the Commun-Chorus, Ibex, the Grosse Points Artists Association, the Grosse Pointe Library Association, the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra. the Grosse Pointe Theatre, the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and the League of Women Voters.

'Grand Days' is grand, historical fun

By Frank Moorhouse Pantheon Books 572 pages

If you are in the mood to immerse yourself in a robust novel with an authentic back ground and unusual characters pick up "Grand Days"

The setting is 1920s Geneva. Switzerland, where the budding League of Nations is poised to become a world authority

The author of this intensely interesting book. Frank Moor house, was born and educated in Nowra. New South Wales. Australia. First, he worked as a journalist in Sydney and in country areas, and he is now a full-time writer living in a suburb of Sydney. He describes much of his work as "discontinous narratives" reflecting his strong interest in social and cultural issues. Although he already has 10 works of fiction to his credit, to me he is a new author well worthy of further acquaintance.

Grand Days" will quickly catch the reader as the lovely Australian heroine, Edith Campbell Berry, meets the man who, for better or worse. will guide her to her new job at the League of Nations, Major Ambrose Westwood, a British staff member at the League. boldly initiates a close encoun-

Edith thrives in Geneva and is constantly drawn into new experiences: "There was something about the age-old feel of Europe and the way that this entered her very marrow, giving her a sense of return. As though she had come, if not home, come back to her historic quintessence, had passed through the pyotographic post-card and walked back into the scene. She felt slightly ashamed about this filling of her marrow with ancient se tions, about admitting to herself that this had been missing back home, ashamed about feeling that maybe she needed this ancient texture about her. She even wished that the buildings of Geneva were older.

Moorhouse is skillful in por vestitic who likes to wear her clothes Enequently, the couple dressed in women's garb and wearing make-up, would join the neisy jazz-band parties booming in the downtown bis-tree of Geneva Shocking, kinky sex is all the rage, with no apparent inhibitions, and Edith pulls away in revulsion, even though she had considered this aspect of life to be a necessary experience to counteract ber sheltered upbringing in Aus-

The League of Nations was. of course, the forerunner of the present United Nations, and Moorhouse has painted an insightful portrait of the various individuals and different nationalities who were involved.

"Grand Days" is certainly an entertaining novel with its fo-cus on Edith Campbell Berry's character development amid the heady excitement of coping with international agendas.

It counts the most in the case of Brian Bedford's Salieri. The play's exposition depends above all on his narration, which is directed to the audience. As Bedford bares Salieri's soul, and his bargain with God to gain fame as a musician, the audience is able to capture every subtlety of the actor's gestures, facial expressions and exquisite delivery. It is like being privileged to sit at his side in the confessional booth; you can almost feel his pulse.

And Bedford as Salieri is brillient. As the consummate serious comedian, he recognizes and gives expression to the ironies and contradictions of the character. The laughs are plentiful and they are not only genuine, they reflect insight into the pathos of the musician who is unrequited in his bargain with God to achieve artisgreatness. Yet Bedford's gift for poetry is equally impressive. The eloquent lines Shaffer wrote describing Mozart's music, which Salieri utters in dismay as he realizes he can never equal it, are as inspiring as the music itself, which fills the theater as Bedford makes his listeners ardently aware of the incredible genius that in-habited the otherwise bumptious and rude person of Moz-

That earthy and generally undiplomatic character is played with equal artistry by Stephen Ouimette who manages the changes in character from ebullient, self confident youth to the desperation and disillusionment that preceded his early death with authentic flair. Along the way he and Megan Follows as Constanze, Mozart's wife, manage to convey a lively impression of their first frolicsome and later tragic life together.

The result is a version of this fascinating play that brings a dimension probably possible only with performers of the scope and talent of Bedford and Ouimette who know how to take supreme advantage of the special audience contact they enjoy on the Festival stage. It is an unmatched theatrical experience.

"Amadeus" is presented in repertory on the Festival Theater stage through Oct. 28 but it is so good that it is a likely candidate for continuation in next summer's scason. For accommodetions and tickets call 1-800-

CSE survey of home owners on flat tax is flawed, NAR says

A survey by the Citizens for a Sound Economy (CSE) purporting to show home owners' support for a flat tax as advanced by Rep. Richard Armey (R-Texas) and Sen. Richard Shelby (R-Ala.) is flawed yet interesting in its results, the National Association of Regitors said recently.

"While the survey methodology is questionable, at best, the results show that nearly half of all home owners indeed are not enamored with a flat tax that does away with mortgage interest and property tax deductions," said NAR president Edmund G. Woods

In fact, 46 percent of the 800 recent home buyers surveyed by CSE last month, said they would be more likely to support a flat tax without the mortgage interest deduction. This compares with 48 percent who said they would be more likely to support it for this reason and 10 percent who either did not know or didn't enswer the question.

This near majority of respondents who expressed reservation about the flat tax were not even presented with the most damaging fact of all - that is, the typical home owner would lose 15 percent of his or her home value if a flat tax without the mortgage interest and property tax deductions were enacted." Woods said.

Late last month, NAR, along with two home owner groups, hosted a news conference at which the independent economic consulting firm, DRI/McGraw-Hill presented the findings of its study on the effects of a flat tax on housing. That study found that home owners would lose $1.7 trillion, or an average of 15 percept, of their home equity in the first two years of a flat tax without the mortgage interest and property tax deductions. This loss would occur whether or not the home owner uses the mortgage interest deduction.

That's $1.7 trillion — trillion with a T." Woods said. The DRI study reveals a scenario too costly, too dangerous and too devastating to home owners and the entire economy to justify a simple post card return."

Roger B. Brinner, executive director and chief economist of DRI/McGraw-Hill, noted that while interest rates likely would fall under a flat tax, the savings would not offset the decline in home values.

"Our study shows that a flat tex would be especially devastating to middle-class taxpayers," Brinner said.

Low-income taxpayers, who usually do not itemize, would get larger standard deductions and exemptions. High-income texpayers would face drastically reduced marginal tax rates. Also, they would not be taxed on interest, dividend and capital gain income. The middle and upper-middleclass not only would face higher taxes. but would see the value of their homes decline by an average of 15 percent, leaving many with no equity, he explained.

While Armey, the U.S. House majority leader, called the CSE survey results a "wrecking ball" for the idea that taxpayers are unwilling to give up mortgage deductions in exchange for tax reform, Wends said "the demolition is really of a different nature."

The wrecking ball swinging under a flat tax system is crushing millions of nest eggs as owners — young and old — see their home equities diminished and in some cases shattered," Woods said. "One of the more unenspecting groups of home owners is the nation's seniors who are selling their homes in preparation for retirement."

We take great exception to Rep. Armey's contention that 'to know the flat tax is to love the flat tax." Woods said. Rather, there are some ugly truths about the flat tax that a growing number of people are now waking up to. As people see the economic bardship that a flat tax would cause the nation's home owners — sepecially the middle class — they are more likely to hate it than love it.

"Veg. simplification is a noble goal. but simplicity is not the only standard for evaluating a tex system

The current rules that apply to hame awnorship are very easy to understand and comply with. At the end of the year, the mortgage company provides the home owner with a form 1098 containing all the information needed to report to the Internal Revenue Service. These who have paid off their mortgages still have property too bills and recepts they can use. This is simple already," he said.

Detroit Edison says 'Our House' will save viewers money

"Our House," a weekly television show about money-saving, energyefficient home improvement projects. will be brought to your house at 11 a.m. Sundays from Aug. 6 through Oct. 29 on WKBD-TV/UPN 50.

The program is presented as a public service by Detroit Edison, local Carrier Heating and Cooling dealers. the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers and WNIC-FM.

"Our House" is co-hosted by home improvement expert Tom Tynan and associate Paula Engel. They'll show viewers how energy efficient home improvements affect more than just the size of their utility bills.

"We're sponsoring this program because our customers are telling us they want information about using energy more efficiently in the home and saving money while helping the environment," said Robert J. Buckler, senior vice president, energy marketing and distribution.

Wise home energy use helps Detroit Edison postpone the need to build new power generating plants, which lessens the potential for higher electric rates, Buckler said.

The show's hosts demonstrate how measures such as weather stripping. caulking, insulating, using energyefficient lighting and high-efficiency appliances can reduce utility bills.

Each week, Typan and Engel will focus on a different part of the home where improvements can result in energy efficiency and cost savings. They also will provide environmental

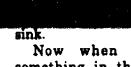

A "gizmo review" segment will survey an array of gadgets that save energy and make life around the house a little easier.

Even non-do-it-yourselfers will benefit from the show by becoming more educated consumers of home and appliance repairs and services.

"Our House" also gives viewers an opportunity to send home improvement questions to Typen for an answer on the show. Questions can be mailed to "Our House," c/o Detroit Edison, 2000 Second Ave., Detroit, Mich. 48226.

SCOPE IT OUT - The other day I had some dishes soaking in soapy water. I stuck my hand in the water looking for my favorite knife and cut myself.

I stopped and grabbed a paper towel to apply pressure. There just happened to be a clear drinking glass (empty) standing in the water. By accident, I noticed that by looking into the glass I could see the bottom of the

Now when I'm looking for something in the sink, instead of sticking my hand in there, I get a clear glass and use it like a scope. It works really well and now I won't cut myself as often. Georgia B., Vancouver, Wash.

Perfume's history parallels history of civilization

For almost as long as there have been human beings, people have need many and varied ways to capture the scent of flowers and plants to use when real flowers and plants to use when real flowers were not available. The history of perfernes parallels the history of sivilization.

Many primitive people used smoke perfernes. Aromatic plants, true resins and fragrant berbs were hursed; garments and other textiles were held in the smake to perferne them. Some American Indian tribes still do this as a seromanial ritual, and, of course, this was the beginning of the development of income.

Forfume substances were a large part of the embalming process used by the ancient Egyptions. The Bible is full of references to scente and perfumes made from flowers, herbatree regime and other plant meterials. Most of the perfumes used by the ancient Jawa were imported. The ishmeelites brought belm and myrrh to Egypt. Frankincence was carried by caravans from southern Arabia.

by caravans from southern Archia and cinnamon, cassis and slose came from India.

From the Egyptians the Grocks learned (and later taught the Egyptians the Grocks learned (and later taught the Romans) the custom of strewing their rooms with roses, desprating their hanguet tables with flowers, scenting their wine with spices and making their person and their homes fragrant with perfumes cancacted from flowers.

In the beginning, this use of scents and fragrant flowers was connected to and fragrant flavors was connected to religious ceremony. It was also a form of primitive againstian, for acents and spices were believed to purify the air, help maintain health and keep away evil apirits. Honoewives attended their rooms with black hellohers, which scented the air and brake the spalls of witches and magicians. Theselvastus, in addition to his book, Transity Into Plants, wrate a book short offers in which he explains how rose performs is made. Aristotle, before him, hints at the process of distillation which the Araba, many contacts later were to discover and perfect.

The new of perfects.

The nee of perfects is as ancient as human vanity. The Old Testament contains constant references to their use. In The Book of Enther "oil of myrrh, sweet oders and other things" are mentioned. Abassarus bestowed these on Hadassah for her purification. Proverbs tells of the strangs woman whose had was perfumed with myrrh, aloes and sinnamen. The Bong of Bolomon has many allusions to perfume. When Bolomon traded with Hirman, king of Tyre, perfumes and congress made from flowers and herbs and spices were among the cargoes and we read that Jerobel, wife of Abab, "not her eyes in paint."

The Greeks demand for perfumes and spices indicates a thriving industry. The spice and flower industry flourished in Athens, Cos,

By Ellen Probert

Corinth, Cyprus and Ephesus. Alexandria became the most famous of the perfume centers. Greek literature tantly mentions this traffic, even telling us the names of the two most famous perfumers: Peron and Megalus blended a scent compounded of burnt resin, cassis. cinnamon, myrrh and oil of belanos. called Megaleon. From quince blossoms and sweet marjorum was made a perfume called Melenum, for which Cos became famous. Ephesus produced its own popular scent-Rhodes made a perfume from crocuses and Corinth did a thriving trade in Irenin, a perfume made from dried iris thizomes, which smelled like violets. Still another perfume was made from the peel of pomegranates. In many of the blends rose oil was a prominent ingredient. Some were highly complicated. A perfume made especially for the King of the Parthisns, so Pliny says, required 37 ingredients.

Oil of roses is still a principal ingredient in the compounding of modern perfumes and acres of roses are grown annually in Bulgaria and in Grasse, France, for this purpose. Rose water is used to this day in many of the middle eastern countries as a flavoring for food as well as a scent-

In the ancient world frankincense and myrrh were among the most valuable commodities there were. We could equate them with gold and diamonds. Knowing this, it is not surprising that these substances were among the gifts which were brought by the Maggi to the Christ Child.

Many modern perfumes are based on these ancient formulas. Rose oil is still a basic ingredient. Incidentally, it takes 5,000 pounds of rose petals to make one pound of virgin attar, or oil, of rose. No wonder perhime can get so expensive! But you could make a very simple form of rose water by boiling rose petals in water until the water is reduced to half or less. A refreshing scent to add to a bath or to splash in on a hot August day.

COST CUTTER - I find the prices on king-size pillowcases completely outrageous for the amount of material involved.

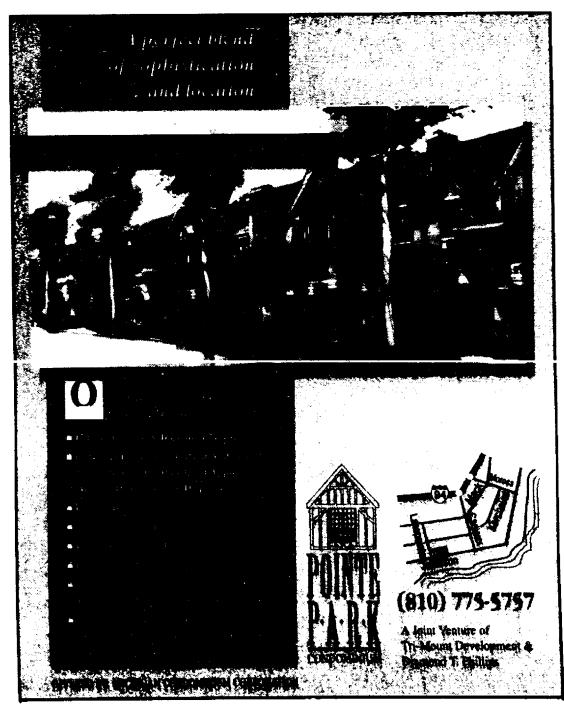

I have king-size pillows but I buy standard pillowcases, open the hem and add a 5- to 6-inch strip of a contrasting color, plain or print or wide cotton embroidered trim. It is an economical way to make my own pillowcases. Amelia K., Seattle.

When I came home, the bubble gum was all over my new dryer, so I took a plastic scrubbie, dipped it in a bowl of water, sprinkled baking soda on it to make a paste and rubbed it on the melted gum. It took about 45 minutes to clean, but I was very thankful for the baking sods. Lillian W., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Executive gives money-saving tips for relocating your home

A number of ways are available to save money when you move, according to a Michigan moving company

For the nearly 43 million Americans who relocate each year, saving money on your move can range from the time of year you choose to keeping receipts for tax purposes to discarding unneeded personal and household items, says Richard A. Meyer, president of DMS Moving Systems.

Meyer, whose company is an agent for Atlas Van Lines, explains: "Mince nearly 50 percent of interstate moves are made between May 1 and Sept. 30, one simple way to save money is to move in the off season and avoid a summer premium that most movers Another way of controlling your moving costs, Meyer continues, "is to keep receipts so you can deduct allowable moving expenses from your income tax. By using a professional mover, this deduction can be significant.

"One of the surest ways to save quey is to discard items you don't need or can't use in the new residence, since the cost of a local move is usually based on time, and longer moves within the state and between states are figured on weight and distance. Meyer suggests considering the following ideas when you move:

 Measure the new house and leave furniture or appliances that don't fit into it or match the decorating scheme. Many times it is cheaper to replace furniture and appliances than to reupholster or refurbish and move them.

Check with your mover on the legality of moving plants where you're going. Also, supply sandboxes and large planters and use them to hold miscellaneous items.

New home buyers benefit from lower home owners

Almost every home owner has home owner's or properly insurance. Banks require proof of insurance when granting mortgages, and most people who own their home free and clear still keep them insured to protect against property damage caused by fire, lightning, wind, riots, smoke, theft and more, but generally excludes flood and earthquake damage. Separate policies are available for people who live in eleas prone to these natural disasters.

According to legend, the first property insurance was offered by a home builder in 1667. The builder, Nicholas Barton, Ancinded an agreement to repair or rebuild any house damaged by fire with each sale. Property insurance makes up only about 4 percent of the monthly mortgage payment that includes principal, interest, taxes and insurance. The national median property insurance premium per $1.900 of property value was $8.5$ in 1990, or $494 on a home worth $140,000, excluding the value of the

The factors used by insurance companies to set property insurance rates often favor new homes, so buyers of new homes benefit from lower home owners insurance rates than the rates paid for existing homes. Insurance companies set their rates hased on premium and claims experience for a state. To estimate what factors are more or less likely to result in a claim, they examine property attributes, location and tenant characteristics.

Frometry attributes include factors like wring and materials. New homes have lower property insurance costs per 1,000 square feet then older homes because they are deemed safer old wiring is one fire hazard) and hecause their up-to-date technology because their up-to-date technology makes them sesier to replace, so the risk to the insurance company is lower and the home owner's rate is lower,

To examine location, insurance companies rate the efficiency of the local fire department and water systems. Some companies may also rate community building codes and code enforcement. Crime is also a factor. Homes in high crime areas will have higher insurance rates than comparable homes in low crime areas.

Insurance costs also vary depending upon who resides in the house. Elderly households may reselve lower insurance premiums because it is assumed that they stay home more, and that resuces the rise of a hreak-in or an unational house fire. Non-success also may receive discounts.

There are several ways to reduce properly insurance engle. Fire resistant materials, particularly in roofing, may give home numers a discount of as much as in percent. And bries homes will senerally enjoy premiums a to 10 percent lower than premiums 5 to 19 percent lower than houses with wood siding. Location near a fire hydrant, and installing household springler systems, smoke detectors, fire extinguishers, burglar alarms and dead bott locks also will lower premiums.

for home owners, adding these features not only reduces insurance costs, but they also increase the safety and security of a home.

Pulling the shades on furniture fading

Home decorating is big business. In 1995, Americans are expected to spend nearly $9 billion on furniture alone.

College-educated Americans, especially those aged 35-44, list home decoration as the top choice for where they would spend more. But once the dollars are spent, many homeowners believe they have to turn their homes into caves to keep natural sunlight from fading their new furnishings. New technological advances indicate otherwise.

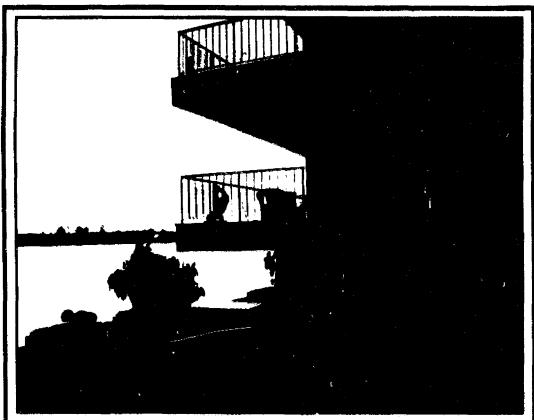

"Furniture and wall colors can stay true longer if homeowners get to the core of the problem," said Patrick Bushey of Pella Window & Door Co., the local distributor of Pella windows and doors. "The most basic place to start is the windows. New window technology can bring natural light in while blocking most of the harmful rays that cause fading."

Bushey said today's windows offer advanced glazing technologies such as low-emissivity, or low-E, coatings. The coating acts much like a mirror, reflecting heat and other fading rays. Because the coating is clear, it allows nearly all visible light into the home. Some windows with multiple layers of low-E, for example, block up to 74 percent of ultraviolet and other rays which cause fading, Bushey said.

"Homeowners should make sure the windows they are considering don't have coatings that tint the glass gray or brown. Tints can detract from the bright and open feeling windows add to the home," Bushey said.

"Another option to consider is miniblinds or pleated shades that can be pulled during the sun's most intense rays of the day. Today, these options can be placed between the window's panes of glass — out of the way from dust and damage."

Mechanical banks from the Victorian era have been popular with serious collectors since the 1930s, and prices have gone higher and higher.

Put a coin in the bank, press the lever and watch the coin disappear into a pocket or shoot from a gun. Each bank has its own motion. Most tell a story, such as Jonah and the Whale, William Tell or Teddy (Thousevell) and the Beat.

Some banks are political. Uncle Sam taking your money and putting it in his suitcase, the Tammany Hall politician pocketing the penny and the Bread Winner's bank with figures labeled "Labor" and "Monopoly" seem strange subjects for banks meant to be used by children.

Others feature more child-friendly games and toys. There are banks showing a girl jumping rope, children playing leapfrog and youngsters engaged in football or baseball. All such toys bring grown-up prices today.

Q. I have a souvenir plate picturing views from San Francisco. It probably is from the 1920s. On the bottom is printed, "D.E. McNicol Pottery Co."

A. The D.E. McNicol Pottery Co. operated from 1892 to the 1920s in East Liverpool, Ohio. It then moved to Clarksburg, W.Va., where it operated into the 1960s. The company made common china, semi-porcelain dinner sets and odd decorated dishes.

Q. The tag on my rustic-style chair says, "The Old Hickory Furniture

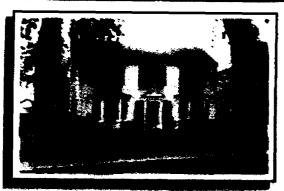

A. The Old Hickory Furniture Co. of Martinsville, Ind., was a successful manufacturer of hickory chairs and rustic furniture.

It started in 1892 making chairs, log abins, fences and riverboats with name, "The Old Hickory Chair Co." In 1922, it changed its name to "The Old Hickory Furniture Co."

Its furniture — made of twigs, logs, roots and antlers - was popular in rustic hunting and fishing lodges.

All Old Hickory pieces have either a brand on the leg, a brass tag with the year the piece was produced or a paper

Old Hickory went out of business in 1965. Other furniture companies making similar furniture included Indian Hickory Products, The Laporte Co. and The Colfax Co.
