So two South high teens told the school board on Monday. Student Association president Christine Galnor and vice president William Conway spoke out against a policy the board discussed and approved on Aug. 14 that would permit administrators to use "breathalyzers" on high school students who are reasonably suspected being under the influence of al-in response to concerns raised by parents and students last school year, the board has been reviewing a proposed policy since July.

The district has not yet decided on the exact type of device it will use. The word "breathalyzer" is used in the generic sense and does not mean the district will be purchasing a cumbersome, expensive and highly sensitive device used in police stations for the purpose of criminal prosecution.

Breathalyzers are a ridiculous idea," Galnor said. "If you think it will stop students from drinking, it's not true. It will only scare them away from the dances. It's not fair for those who work to sponsor the dances. Students will just find somewhere else to drink; it's not that hard."

Conway acknowledged that teens know it is illegal to consume alcohol but he argued that there already is a policy in place for handling students who are intoxicated on school grounds

"With the attitude the way it is, and because of the scare last year of breathalyzers being at dances, attendance was down. We had to cancel a few dances," he said.

North principal Caryn Wells told the board that discussions held last year with parent groups and with students drew mixed reactions. She said there

Torch ignites blaze

Contractors using an acetylene torch to remove an iron balcony from the front of a house on Winthrop Place in Grosse Points Farms accidentally sparked a fire just before ason on Aug. 11. No one was injured in the blaze, which was contained to the master bedroom and dining room and brought under control within 30 minutes. Farms firelighters were assisted by the City of Grosse Points, the Park and the Shores public safety departments. Although an investigation has not been completed. Farms fire officials believe the acetylene torch used on the angle trans anchored in the outside walls conducted heat intense enough to ignite material within the walls. Although the fire wan relatively tame, the outside lemperatures, which soured in the 80s last week, required numerous firefighter shift changes, thus the need to call in three departments for anti-

A pair of purse snatchings

A Grosse Pointe Farms woman had her purse stolen on Aug. 12 as she was walking out of a restaurant on Mack.

The 74-year-old woman said a young man ran up to her, grabbed her purse and fled across Mack. Later that day, Farms police were contacted by a Detroit neighborhood CB pa-trol group which found the woman's purse and contents in the area of Balduck Park. There were a number of witnesses to the incident and police are following up on leads.

In another, unrelated inci-dent, an 87-year-old Farms woman had her purse furgibly removed from her car as she was pulling into her driveway on Bolances. on Belanger.

The woman said a man appresched her car around 10 p.m. Aug. 11 and demanded she hand over her purse, then reached into the car and grabbed the purse and fled in a nearby waiting vehicle.

A wiry mess

The driver of a dump truck working at the Mack and Moross building demolition site on Aug. 12 raised the truck's dump bed and inadvertently tangled it into a primary power line, pulling down four wires carrying about 4,800 volts and toppling a wooden pole and a transformer which began leaking a fluid.
The driver was trapped inside the truck cab until Detroit Edison employees cut the power to the area and Farms public safety officers rescued the man. He was treated at the scene for minor injuries.

A field test of the substance leaking from the transformer determined it was not hazardous and not a threat.

The bike rider said he swerved to avoid the car. Both exchanged words and continued to do so while traveling on Lakeshore toward Fisher. Witnesses said the cyclist was thrown from his bike onto the pavement. He suffered minor scrapes to his left knee.

Rather than pursue criminal charges, the pair agreed that the driver would pay restitu tion to the cyclist for damages to his bike.

Woods passes anti-noise ordinance

News

Late sleepers don't have to worry anymore. The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council last week passed an ordinance mak ing it illegal to operate lawn equipment before 9 a m

The ordinance was the result of a suggestion by Woods resi dent Sheila Knubbe, who is also running for city council this November Knubbe wrote a letter to the council asking that something be done about the operation of lawn mowers early in the morning.

The ordinance was first intro duced at the council's July 17 meeting when Knubbe told the council that there was a real need for such an ordinance. She said that most of the problem was the result of professional lawn services coming into the city and mowing people's lawn early in the morning.

Councilmember Bill Wilson observed that lawn services have a large number of clients in the Woods, and that they like to get an early start so that they can complete as many jobs as possible. He noted that people who mow their own lawns tend not to do it first thing in the morning.

the general support of the couned mayor Robert Novitio said that the ordinance didn't make much sense given the fact that city ordinances make it legal to operate construction equipment in the city after 5 a m

"I like what the ordinance is trying to achieve," Novitke said "But it just doesn't make movers before 9 a.m. while at the same time permitting the use of much louder construction equipment at 8 a.m.

Knubbe also expressed a concern about other types of power gardening equipment, like leafblowers being used early in the morning as well. Novitke said

White Knubbe's request had the ordinance passed by the council last week also regulates the use of leafblowers and other equipment

"As I read the ordinance w just passed it deals with all power lawn equipment, including edgers, dippers, leafblowers and weedcutters." Novitke. Their use before 9 a.m. is now forbidden in the Woods. As for any sense to me to ban lawn the use of construction equipment at 8 a.m., the council's committee of the whole will review that ordinance, with the idea of bringing it in line with the new lawn tool ordinance."

Knubbe did not speak at last week's meeting and could not be reached for comment on the ordinance's passage.

He was then shipped to China, but it took 38 days to get there, allowing for layovers at many interesting ports along the way.

He said the worst thing about China was the food. "We got virtually no American food," he recalls. "We all suffered dysentery. Sanitation was unhelievably poor. You could smell the mess hall haif a mile away. We ate rice bread, rice pancakes, rice with everything."

Woods supports circuit court bill

At the behest of mayor Robert Novitks, himself an attorney, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council last week approved a resolution supporting a bill that would shoush De-

Wayne County voters.

Recorder's Court in Detroit handles all felony cases com-mitted in Detroit," said Nov-itke. "In every other jurisdiction in Michigan, felony cases are tried in county circuit courts. Detroit residents get to vote for both Recorder's Court judges and Wayne Circuit Court judges. But Wayne County residents outside the city can't vote for Recorder's Court judges. Court judges."

The idea that Detroit residents get to vote for Wayne circuit and Recorder's court judges doesn't sit well with Novitke. He said he feels that Wayne County residents have a sufficient vested interest in felony cases in both Detroit and the rest of the county that they should have equal say with Detroit residents on who their judges are.

The resolution says Recorder's Court is a "violation of 'one person, one vote' for voters in the City of Detroit to elect all 'circuit level' Judges where other communities in the County of Wayne may elect only 35 of those judges."

The resolution goes on to call the decision of the Court and combining it with Wayne County circuit court, increasing the number of circuit court judges from 35 to 64. (There are currently 29 Recorder's Court judges.)

Novitke said that the state Constitution created the circuit court, while Recorder's Court is established under a simple state statue, which can be revoked by the Legislature at any time. To change the circuit court system would require an amendment to the state Consti-

"This is not meant to be a slam against Detroit," said "It's merely meant to make Detroit voters equal with

Perot threat: He'll run if reforms fail

oss Perot last Sunday threatened to make a second bid for the presidency if Congress and President Clinton fail to produce the reforms be wants.

In a 45-minute interview on NBC's Meet the Press," Perot, as usual, dodged and ducked the tough questions but still offered enough hints to indicate his course of action.

In a later address to the closing ceremony of the Dallas conference that attracted an estimated 4,000 Perot backers from across the country. Perot repeated those views and listed the reforms he wants Congress and the president to complete before Christmas

They include campaign finance reforms that would impose curbs on lobbyists, a constitutional amendment to belance the budget, another amendment to limit congressional terms, and a number of revisions in a new "Contract with America."

Every major GOP presidential candi-date and several Democratic leaders stopped in Dallas to talk to Perot's supporters during the weekend, but the major applause went to Pat Buchanan, a GOP isolationist and protective tariff de-fender, who appeared more angry with the status quo than the other speakers.

Several Michigan members of the state chapter of Perot's United We Stand America organization, when interviewed by Richard A. Ryan of The Detroit News' Washington bureau, expressed different ideas about Perot's future course.

A music producer from Livonia, Phil Esser, said there was "tremendous passion" at the conference workshop to develop a third party.

But Elmer Grapler, a retired GM employee from Saginaw, proposed that Perot run in the Democratic primaries to "take out" Clinton early.

However, Sugan Easer, head of the Michigan chapter and wife of Phil Esser, told Ryan the entire membership should be polled before a decision is made on a Perot candidacy.

"I would not want to make any decision until we know what all the members think," she said.

Nobody knows whether Perot really will run again, but it is obvious he glories in the political limelight and the 19 per-cent of the popular vote he captured in

However, we believe that puopie who seek the presidency ought to have been through a political campaign or two at a lower level in order to qualify as a reads tic presidential candidate

Perut, on the other hand, believes his money and his business experience qualify him to run for president or any other post. We think presidential aspirants ought to have a broader background and wider experience than that to serve well.

Unfortunately, people who are cynical about government and apathetic about voting think that as president. Perot could reform the government.

Even if he could persuade either a Democratic or GOP Congress to go along with his program, which we doubt, his lack of experience in elected office and lack of knowledge about many national and international problems would raise strong doubts that his program would serve the best interests of all the American people

Nor, in fact, do third parties have a record of success in the presidential arena, although they have on several occasions split the vote and helped elect a Republican or a Democrat president.

Farms man in Senate race

C rosse Pointe Farme resident Jim Nicholson, who runs FVB Chemitral Co. in Detroit, appears to be the party leaders choice for the 1806 GOP nomination for the U.S. Bernste.

COP nomination for the U.S. Benete.

Most observers see Ronna Ronney, who lost a close 1894 primary battle against Spencer Abraham, as the front runner at this time, but Nicholson's string backing from party leaders indicated he is their choice even though he never has run for public office before.

Ronney, however, discounted Nicholson's polls which claim she would be a weak contender both in the GOP primary and in a general election against the Democratic inclument, Carl Levin.

In contrast to Nicholson's polls, fifere Mischell, a Landing lissed pollster and consultant to Ronney, said a poll by EPIC/MRA of Lansing showed Ronna leading Nicholson by a 10 to 1 margin.

U.S. Rep. Devid Camp of Midfand is also mentioned as a potential GOP candidate for the Senate nomination.

The tipoff on Nicholson's backing from state GOP leaders was the announcement that his finance committee includes businessen an Bandy Agiey — who has served as a campaign finance chairman for Gov-John Engler, Abraham and the state GOP — Detroit attorney Michael Timmis and William Clay Ford Jr., Ford Motor Co. finance chairman. All are Grasse

In view of Agley's experience, his promise that Nicholson will have "all the rethe that Nicholson will have "all the resources he needs to run a comprehensive campaign and get his message out" is surely significant.

The GOP obviously would like to control both U.S. Senate sents from Michigan. But in his previous three herse rampaigns, Levin has shown that he is a condictance who attracts support campaigne. Levin has shown that he is a good campaigner who attracts support from independents and progressive Republicans he wall as Democrats.

However, state GOP chairperson Susy Heintz reported that a public opinion poll showed 38 percent of 600 voters saying Levin deserves re-election and 42 percent saying they would vote for someone place. But how was the question worded, what was the margin of error and how did the remaining 30 percent vote? The Michigan GOP State Committee report on the poll doesn't say.

Bombing case isn't closed prime suspects in the Oklahoma City bombing disaster, the case apparently is still far from closed.

The indictments against two

The indictments against two former Army buddies. Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols, who has Michigan roots, means that the federal government now will move to convict them but that the presumption of minocence must attach to them unless they are found guilty.

A third suspect, Michael Fortier, who has pleaded guilty to lesser charges and faces as many as 23 years in prison, has agreed to cooperate with federal prosecutors and has said he will testify against the other two.

Meanwhile, charges were dropped against James Nichols, Terry's brother and a Decker farmer who was jailed during the early investigative process.

Prosecutors said that while he could have built a bomb from materials found on his farm, there was not enough evidence that he had planned to do so.

But in Sunday's New York Times, John Kifner reported that the case is far from closed. He pointed out that while the indictment chiefly blamed the two disgrunted farmer soldiers for the bombing, it also spoke of a wider conspiracy with "others unknown."

"An examination of the events leading

An examination of the events leading up to the bombing shows that the identities of those conspirators, if they exist at all, are just one of several questions left unanswered as the government prepares for trial." Kifner's stay said.

It may be that the two former Army huddles were solely responsible, but obviously federal authorities are still searching for additional evidence to support the possibility of a wider conspiracy.

From this state's viewpoint, let us hope there are no more potential Michigan connections to the crime. An examination of the events leading media sexagenerians ailing wo of the most widely known and highly respected sexagenerian media leaders in the Detroit metropolitan area are ailing, and have been off the news firing line for several weeks.

One is J.P. McCarthy, 62, who is Detroit's leading radio personality as a result of 30 years of topping the local radio ratings with his performances on WJR's morning show.

He is suffering from myelodysplastic syndrome, a pre-leukemia condition that has been described as "malignant but not cancer.

When the illness took J.P. off the air, hundreds of friends and admirers offered to donate bone marrow, after it had been announced that no compatible donor had been found and that a close match is required to combat the condition.

The other ailing media leader is Neal Shine, publisher of the Detroit Free Press, who will be 65 next month. He was hospitalized after a viral infection which led to several other illnesses. He is still in some pain but now is recovering at home, the Free Press reported.

Adding to Neal's distress is the continuing strike of employes of the Free Press and The Detroit News, which started its second month on Aug. 13.

After people heard about a non-denominational service at the Free Press led by Father William Cunningham of Focus Hope at which prayers were offered for an early end to the strike, rumors circulated that Neal was in critical condition. Fortunately, that rumor turned out to be greatly exaggerated.

Both men probably know more people in public life - and know them better than anybody else in the Detroit area. They also have hundreds of personal friends in the region.

We join all their friends in expressing hope for their early recovery and soon reading and hearing their stuff from their respective assignments.

An injustice to the courts

To the Editor: At one time or another, most Michigan citizens will come in contact with Michigan's court system — when samily members die, for adoptions, divorces or maybe as victims of crimos. We should all expect this justice system to operate inguis avaient to appraise effectively and efficiently. Our experiences have made us well awars of the problems of our overloaded court avaient.

What is the governor waiting for? Although he claims we can't provide more funding until the courts are reorganized, he has no plan of his own and has not endorsed any of the numerous court reorganization plans that have been put forth. spoke with neveral of the athletes and asked them why they competed in Highland game events, here and at other stivals across the Midwest and Canada.

Several of the athletes told me that they played sports in high school and college and that this was a way to remain active in the competitive MESON.

William Wahn, 27, of Bloomfield Hills was participating in his third Highland games Securday while it was only his first year of competition. He was surprised at how helpful everyone was when he participated in his first contest outside Toronto earlier this year. "It's great," Wahn told me. These guys are really helpful. A lot of the pros come and help us with our techniques. It's very competitive, but it's also really friendly. You get to know the other athletes, and they really cheer you on."

I don't encounter that kind of encounter applies of the control of th sportsmanship often. These days, lip service is paid to the virtues of athletics, but that's shout it. Alabama's Crimson Tide football team was just placed on probation by the NCAA for three years because of rules violations

This is Bear Bryant's football team, the team that suspended Joe Namath for breaking curfew. So when I bear about athletes who compete against each other talking about how their opponents are friendly and helpful, I take notice.

Another thing I noticed at the games is that people will get excitad and interested in any sporting event, no matter how strange or foreign. I was watching Frank State. 35, a weightister and computer program analyst at Wayne State University try to break the Detroit record in the weight for height event, and I received the crowd was entranced

The weight for height event. for the uninitizated is where competitors attempt to task a 56-pound weight, using only one hand, over a cross her set at a specific height. The bur is raised until there is only one competitor remaining who can clear the height.

The har was set at 13 feet, six inches, and Stass cleared it. He now had three chances to toes the weight (which did have a handle to make tossing easier) over the bar, now set at 13 feet seven inches.

At the first toss, the crowd was watching intently as the weight want high enough, but straight up, meaning it went but not over. The second went up and over, but did not cleanly clear the bar. The weight fell on the bar, and fell over the other side, similar to a tennis ball butting the net and bouncing onto the opposite OME GREEN & MELVE!

So the toss didn't count as a record-breaker. The crowd was now very interested in the third and final attempt. The other competitors were watching intently. I was watching intently, despute the fact that I had never seen this event before. Stasa's throw was again high enough, but did not cleanly clear the bar. But there was applause anyway. A good attempt, well done.

Stage was the overall winner of the amateur portion of the games while wearing a kilt with the tartan of the Black Watch, Scotland's most honored military regiment.

So in this day and age it's nice to see people living up to ideals involving decency and integrity, even if they do wear kilts. Here's to the Highlanders, I salute you. That's another tradition I can get behind - the saluting of athi etes with a wee dram, preferably of the single malt variety.)

They kicked off June 15 with the combined Grosse Pointe North/South Jags Band con-ducted by Ralph Miller and they've been going strong ever since: It's the Merrill Lynch and Grosse Points Village Association Music on the Plaza for 1906, with a new musical group appearing at 7 p.m. every Thiraday.

Last week's Harvey Thompson (5-manl) Quartet was too cool for Richard and Jackie ncide to take sitting down, so they got up and treated the 250 or so music fans present to an imprompts swing dance performance in the middle of a blocked of St. Clair Avenue.

"We used to put on denoing shows in nightchine when we were younger," said Jackie, a regular who comes all the way from Clinton Township with

There are many lessons to be learned from outrageous laws

The current backlash over the growth of government has spawned an often bitter struggle to separate the statutory wheat from the chaff. While most of the controversy surrounds costly entitlements and federal regulations, politicians should be aware that there are many laws and ordinances in Michigan that nearly everyone will agree should be repealed. A brief review not only makes for some laughs, but also should cause public officials to think twice before regulating further To the careful observer, such laws speak volumes about what occurs when political leaders abandon principle, and begin governing by crisis or by special interest.

that makes it illegal to have an emblem or insignia of an organization on your car wh you are not a member of that organization. How many Michigan motorists are illegally driving around the state in a used car with the former owner's alumni association decal plan tered to the window. Or what about that auto decleration insignia? Does buying a Taurus make me a member of Big Al's Ford? Who in the world ever thought that driving with the wrong bumper sticker should be a punishable offenne?

Michigan municipalities have their own unique laws. The City of Harper Woods prohibits painting birds, in an apparent effort to stop unser lous per-sons from passing on a sperrow a canary with the help of a times destructive laws. First, we highlighter. The city there is tremendous political ager there notes, however. the to his knowledge no one has ever been prosecuted under the ordinance. The Village of Lyons provides a fine for "indecent exposure of any stallion or buil.

Some of the worst laws are those that make it difficult for a person to earn a living or operate a business, which often hit hardest low income business people and struggling entrepre-neurs. For example, Michigan farmers need a license to feed garbage to a pig, unless the garbage is from his own househuld.

While many rules reflect historical times and mores, there are some lessons to be learned from these often silly and somepressure to govern by crisis. When a riot occurs and the people think the mayor could have done more to stop it, we pass a state law providing a fine for such neglect. When some poisons a pig with tainted gerbage, we require a lice When a parking lot attendant damages a car or allows a car to be damaged, we require a license. When dwarf tossing becomes a spectator aport, we require a permit, as the City of Leasing does. Any abuse or un-

What we need are officials with a botter definition of when, instead of turning to the selves or accept a certain modicum of imperfection. A country without same abuse of liberty is a country without liberty.

The second lesson to glean from outrageous laws is that special interests thrive where ecribed by policy is not circum principle. Movers of household ods have a special Michigan law that fixes prices when anovurial firms from com- 16°24

Stealing is still wrong

To the Editor:

In the past two weeks I have personally experi-enced three incidents involving youths. The brazenness of the acts and the lack of fear, shame or remorse on the part of these kids is cause for alarm.

As my family ate dinner, two new bikes were stolen from our garage. A week later while returning a movie, I saw a teen hanging out on a corner on my bike. I circled the block to make sure that it was my bike. Sure enough, it was. But what was I to do? Confront him and demand my bike back, follow him home, or go and get the police. By the time I circled a second time he was gone.

On Thursday evening I was at a store in the village with my children. A group of unaccompanied children ranging from age 4 to 12 walked in and begen to handle everything in sight. I then have the bloest girl ever so casually slip a small item into her pocket. I immediately informed the manager who then followed the youth around until she and her friends left.

When I asked her why she didn't confront the girl, she replied that it was just to swallow the loss rather than risk a scene or a nasty epithet being burled at her.

The final incident occurred at a new store in the Park. On her second day of business, the owner ight a child with a tape in his pocket. He was 5 years old! The older boys he was with had set him up to it.

What is going on hare? How do I explain these in-cidents to my children? Where the beck are these kids' parents? What are we as homeowners and business owners going to do in order to protect our property and way of life? And do we have the will to do

We must, in no unour tain terms, make it clear that stealing is wrong. We welcome everyone to this community, but we will not tolerate stealing. It isn't acceptable for our children, and it shouldn't be seen ble for anyone else's. Let's stop making excuses for these kids and hold th to the same standard we hold our own children — to do any less is morally

Response response

To the Editor:

A response is in uniter to the letter in your Ang. 3 letter "Bonior distorted on Medicare." The writer attacked the Democratic Party for the $5 trillion debt now confronting us. It would seem appropriate to remember that $4.6 trillion of these deficit dollars were piled up while two Republican presidents were in office (remember voodoo ecoics?).

It is a further distortion of fact to accuse President Clinton, Rep. Bonior and the Democratic Party of irponsibility in dealing with the impending crisis in Medicare. The writer conveniently chooses to ignore the Democratic posi-tion that any Medicare cuts, or reductions in the rate of increase, should be used to reduce the deficit.

The writer obviously pre-fers the reverse Robin Hood tactics of Newt and his Merry Republicans. Is

One of the nicer collectibles was this '41 Cadillac Series 62 convertible, which changed hands for $42.500.

RM Classic Car Productions. He said the two-day 125-car sale totaled more than $3 million.

Among the serious classics that crossed the block, in addition to the '31 Packard 840, were a 1931 Packard 845 roadster that sold for $132,000; a 1930 Pierce-Arrow Model A cabriolet that brought $73,500 and a '35 Auburn Speedster cabriolet that sold for $56,000.

In a middle range were cars which are already valuable collectibles and likely to increase in the coming years. These included a '41 Cadillac Series 62 convertible coupe ($42,500), a '54 Cadillac Eldorado convertible ($38,000), a '58 Chevrolet Impala ($34,500), a '39 Lincoln Zephyr V-12 four-door convertible, a '46 Chevrolet Bei Air convertible ($28,500), '68 and '69 Shelby Mustangs ($25,000 each), a '34 Ford Deluxe V-8 cabriolet ($24,250), and a stunning butterscotch-colored '54 Chevrolet Bel Air convertible ($19,700).

Some of the most fun was had with the lower-priced vehicles. A like-new '55 Mercury Monterey hardtop coupe, which had only 39,000 miles on it, said the auctioneer, who claimed that it was "only driver on Sundays by a little old lady from Pasadena and only driven downhill." Despite the hype, it changed hands for only $8,700.

The auctioneers interrupted the proceedings several times to scold the audience for its tight-listed ways, but the audience seemed to love it. And they kept their bidding in check.

The auctioneers often called for bids of $25,000 or $50,000 to get things going as a new offering rolled into view, but settled for the $2,000 or $3,000 he usually got. The auctioneers clearly knew when bidding had reached to top level and quickly shouted

Among unusual lowerpriced bargains were a '48 Dodge convertible ($11,500), a '58 Edsel Citation convertible ($9,750), a '63 Studebaker Gran Turismo Hawk ($9,350), a '57 Mercury Turnpike Cruiser ($7,600), a '52 Packard convertible ($6,500), a '53 Willys Aero sedan ($4,200), a '51 Packard Patrician four-door sedan ($3,000) and a '51 Henry J two-door sedan "Thrill Car," $3,300.

In case you hadn't noticed, the once ubiquitous Volkswagen Beetle is now rare and has become a collectible. A 79 Beetle cabriolet brought $11,000, more than it cost new.

One of the most interesting vehicles was a showroom condition red and black '36 Chevrolet pickup truck that the auctioneer said had undergone a $28,000 restoration. It sold for $7,000. The buyer got a remarkable vehicle. The audience got scolded again for being so tight.

Councilmembers Peter Gilesan and Eric Steiner agreed with Fahrner, saying before they approved any lot split, they would have to see what Bogen's plans for the property were, including site plans. Mayor Robert Novitke told

Bogen that while city ordinances don't require him to sent the council with site plans as a condition of getting a lot split, the council would feel much more comfortable approving the split if it saw his plans. The council, in the end, did not grant Bogen's request for the split, but said it would

"I guess my next move is to talk with some councilmembers to see what exactly it is that they want me to provide," said Bogen. "This will delay the start of any contraction by at least two months. I probably won't be able to go before the council until September, and possibly October. "From my personal point of view, as opposed to a legal point of view, I feel that the council is being overly restric-tive and controlling. I provided them with all the information city ordinances required me to provide when requesting a lot split. I feel they may be over-stepping their bounds."

Free Press reporter resting at parents' Farms home after auto accident

By Chip Chapman Staff Writer

Twelve days after being injured in a car accident, Detroit Free Press reporter and Grosse Pointe Farms native David McHugh came back to the Farms to recuperate at his parents' home before he returns to his job.

"I'm coming along," McHugh said last week, "but it's going slowly.

At about 3:30 a.m. July 30, McHugh, 36, and four striking Lansing-based reporters from the Free Press and The Detroit News who had been picketing at a newspaper distribution center in Brighton, were traveling on Grand River back to Lansing when the car in which they were riding was struck by a drunken driver

McHugh said he did not see the accident, but heard a loud noise from the crash.

"I'm told I pissed out," he said, "but I don't recall that. I remember that I was hurt in the abdomen. I took my seatbelt off, I believe, and then a state trooper was there soon comforting me."

Emergency medical technicians got McHugh out of the car, into an ambulance and then headed down US-23 to University Hospital in Ann Arbor.

"They really worked fast," McHugh said of the EMTs. "They were impressive."

Detroit News reporter Bric Freedman, the driver of the Honda, was also hospitalized in Ann Arbor for injuries he sustained in the accident. News sports reporter Terry Cabell required eye surgery from injuries he received in the crash. The two other reporters suffered minor injuries.

McHugh had been assigned to the Free Press' Lansing buhis colon.

Board renews law firm, national membership

By Shirtey A. McShane

A number of matters of unfinished business were on the table at Monday's board meet-

There was the matter of legal counsel.

Traditionally at the July or ganizational meeting, the board reviews the performance of its legal counsel. The Detroit firm of Hill Lewis has represented the Grosse Pointe School System for more than 20 years, with attorney Doug West being the primary legal counsel.

The board tabled making a cision on the matter until this month because freshman trustee John Mills had some concerns about two $100 PAC contributions made by Hill Lewis to the campaign funds of Linda Schneider and Julie Bourks, the defeated incumbents in the June election.

Superintendent Ed Shine said the PAC contributions were legal and not in violation of current school board policy.

After much discussion, the board voted 4-3 to retain Hill Lewis at an increased rate of $161 an hour for the 1995-96

Mills, along with trustees Sears Taylor and Cindy Pangborn, voted against the motion.

"Just because an action is not expressly forbidden in writing doesn't mean it's not wrong," Mills said.

Board president Carl Anderson fully supported Hill Lewis and Doug West and called both "very ethical and effective counsel to the board."

The remainder of the board said they were satisfied with Hill Lewis' legal representation but at the suggestion of treas-urer Gioria Konsier, supported the drafting and adoption of a board by-law that would prohibit vendors from making cash contributions to the school

But we should make sure we have a board policy so this doesn't happen in the future."

The board also discussed the matter of membership renewal in the National School Board Association. This, too, was discussed at the July meeting and tabled after Taylor raised concerns about membership costs

$2,750 for the 1995-96 year. "I had a chance to review some of the materials and the subjects are frequently featured in the Wall Street Journal and Better Homes and Gardens," Pangborn said. "I think it's a high price tag for another jour-nal for us to read."

The board voted 4-3, with Taylor, Pangborn and Mills dissenting, to renew membership in the NSBA

And finally, the board voted unanimously to approve for the 1996-96 year the continuation of the Collaborative School Improvement Time program, which was piloted at North and South high schools last spring.

Administrators, teachers, parents and students spoke highly of the program at the Aug. 7 board meeting and Aug. 7 board meeting asked the board to renew it for asked the board to renew it for another year. Research creates new controversy, questions about ADD

Special Writer

"It's like trying to build a bouse of cards in a windstorm, or having 10 televisions on maide your head simultaneousiv.

This is how the symptoms of Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD), one of the fastest growing diagnostic categories for adults, has been de-

ADD became the focus of new controversy when research revealed there are actually two similar but distinctive disorders with overlapping symptoms. As a result, adults who had been diagnosed in childhood found themselves once again having problems. Some, never diagnosed when children. recognized their own symptoms after their child was diagnosed.

At a lecture earlier this year, Dr. Walter Guevara, head of psychiatry at Cottage Hospital, told the audience that in the last few years researchers began to realize that many adults were suffering from ADD. The question is, where were they before?" he asked.

It was come thought that ADD affected only children and that symptoms diminished or disappeared with ristarity, but it is now believed to be genetically transmitted and that 70 percent of the entidren will carry the disorder throw adulthood.

According to an article by Thomas Brown, PhD., at Yale University. ADD WO (without hyperactivity became a valid diagnostic category in 1991 when research confirmed. "ADD is found in two independent dimensions: one consisting of motor hyperactivity and impulsive behavior, and the other consisting of inattention, disorganization and difficulty completing tasks," and concluded, "It no longer seems doubtful that ADD WO exists and that ADD/WO differs from ADD W (with hyperactivity; in important clinical ways."

Dr. Barbara Fisher, who with her hushand founded the United Psychological Services Attention Deficit Disorder Clinic in Macomb County and Ann Arbor, says,

'ADD WO is true sustained attention deficit, more common and less severe. This may be one of the reasons ADHD. Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder or ADDWi is still the focus of most research because of the severity of behavioral and conduct problems associated with it Drs. John J. Ratey and Edward M. Hallowell who both have ADD and wrote the book, "Driven to Distraction," claim that ADD/WO, "can be a severely debilitating disorder in which even very bright and talented people are unable to activate and sustain their effort for productive work. In ADD, time collapses and it feels like everything is happening all at once, creating a sense of inner turmoil or even

Because they are so easily distracted, some ADD individuals can't go into a shopping mall, attend a social gathering, or focus on facial expressions when talking with someone without being overwhelmed by the extraneous sti-

As one might suspect with this type of disorder, most ADD adults performed poorly in school and even those who managed to get by on native intelligence were still considered to be lazy, unmotivated or were labeled stupid.

Once believed to be a psychological disorder, ADD is now known to be a biochemical imbalance and the new theory is that it is a thinking disorder. This means the brain cannot work to its fullest potential. Most ADD individuals will tell you they spend a lifetime hearing the message: "You could do better if you would only try.

Ratey and Hallowell say, "The most dangerous part, if left untreated, is the assault to self-es-

Common not only with self-destructive risk takers and type A personalities, it is also highly associated with creative, intuitive, high energy and highly productive

Usually above average in intelligence, these individuals have been able to problem-solve their way through a multitude of challenging situations. Difficulties begin to increase later with the complexities of life, jobs, marriage and family as well as the aging process.

One woman persuaded her husband to go with her for counseling in an effort to learn communication skills when it appeared he didn't listen and never remembered what she said. "Most of the time he would either stare into space, or interrupt me to interject something unrelated," she said. When the husband failed repeatedly to accurately feed back dialog, the counselor lectured on the importance of developing good listening skills. Totally frustrated, he confessed during their second session that he was trying and really wanted to listen, but had never been able to focus for more than a few seconds. The astute counselor suspected ADD and suggested he be evaluated.

Most ADD individuals experience immediate and profound relief as well as new hope once they have been diagnosed. They are elated to finally understand the underlying source of the chaos, problems, frustrations and devastating feelings of inadequacy they've endured throughout life.

One 52-year-old man said after being diagnosed, "I wish my parents were still alive so they would know I was really trying, I was always trying my best.

Like others, Guevara believes the best method of diagnosis is to look at the childhood history of behavior and consider observations of See ADD, page 2B current family members.

Fisher, while agreeing that back ground information is important, has compiled a battery of psychological, personality and other tests which she finds helpful not only in confirming and diagnosing ADD but in differentiating between the two disorders.

"Diagnosis is critical in the treatment of both disorders, not only in prescribing the best medication but in teaching behavior modification and coping skills," she

Some doctors remain skeptical and are reluctant to diagnose and prescribe medication because ADD symptoms seem to apply to almost everyone.

Ratey and Hollowell say that's because our American lifestyles are ADD-ogenic: "American society tends to create ADD like symptoms in all of us." The key, they say is when you have nine or 10 of the symptoms and they have been pervasive in your life as long as you can remember.

The woman who took her husband to the counselor said he took his first Ritalin before they attended a Christmas candlelight service. "Instead of fidgeting all through the service as he had in past years, he sat quietly, his hands folded in his lap. He was totally meamerized. SALINE-FILLED BREAST
IMPLANTS

Since 1992, silicone gel-filled implants for breast reconstruction have only been made available to those women who have agreed to participate in clinical studies or who could not use saline-filled implants. Tighter controls imposed by the FDA have left the remaining women who desire breast implants with only one option, the saline-filled breast-implant. These are composed of silicone rubber envelopes filled with salt water. The FDA believes these implants to be safer than their silicone gel-filled counterparts by virtue of the fact that if they do rupture, only salt water is released into the body. Until final data on saline-filled implants' safety is salt of the filled with the safety is salt of the safety is safety in safety is safety in safety safet information will be supplied to surgeons dissemination

Road construction ahead

By the Rev. Troy G. Waite St. James Lutheran Church

It's the middle of August, and I've come to one profound conclusion: I hate the summer.

Well. I don't really hate the summer. There are, however, things about summertime without which I could happily live. The heat? Certainly. The humidity? Definitely! Road construction? Don't get me started. . .

The road on which I live is currently under construction to be widened, and has been for a couple of months now. There are, in my estimation, few things worse than having to sit in a backup of traffic on a road which has been reduced to one lane in 90 degree heat with an equal (or greater) amount of humidity. The radio doesn't help much to calm or take my mind off the situation; and other passengers soon seem drawn from comforting conversation to a litany of how they, too, hate summertime construction.

Sooner or later, of course, my turn comes with everyone else who has waited to utilize the one existing lane, and movement, though slow, finally occurs. And come fall, when the machines are gone and the road is smooth and beautiful, all of these construction irritations and frustrations will give way to rejoicing over what is new and improved. Still, I can't help wondering, what about that in between time?

I am reminded of how much of life itself is represented by summertime road construction. Most of us want the "new and improved," but it seems that less of us like to take the time it requires to get there from the "old and impaired." Most of us are aware that whatever it is in our lives that requires improvement—our health, a relationship, a business, a church, even a road a telescome of the most reprints comeven a road - takes up one of our most precious commodities: time.

Can we accept the amount of time it takes to get to where we would like to be?

As Christians we say, "Yes," and there is no secret as to why that is For we not only agree with the writer of Ecclesiastes who reminds us that to everything there is a time (3:18), but we believe that all the controls the line of the controls. time, all history is held in the hands of One who makes, and will make all things new, heautiful and improved in time (Rev. 21.5). The "newness" that God brings, we believe, has already broken into our time and history in the life, death and resurrection of Jesus the Christ. And upon His return He will consummate the new and improved existence under the Reign of God.

In the in between time we have been called to set up (construction) signs of God's in breaking through our words and deeds some in His name. We are called to be like construction machinery that tears away at the old ways (hatred, poverty and injustice) and, instead, builds up the new - roads that lead to forgiveness, love, acceptance, life and salvation.

Can we accept the amount of time it takes to get

Can we accept the amount of time it takes to get where we would like to be? We can if we know the One who holds all time, and as we commit ourselves to using in constructive ways the in-between time that God has given us.

You know, in many ways, I can't wait for the fall. But I can wait for on God (Jasish 40:31)

'Walk' gets lost in the 'Clouds'

At one point in the romantic film "A Walk in the Clouds" two people who are falling in love but cannot be married toast each other. 'To what might have been."

The toast applies to the movie, as well What might have been a sweeping epic set in the vineyards of California in the 1940s ends up being uin ordinaire — harely palatable wine in a fancy bottle.

Paul is just the physical manifestation of those changing times - an orphaned American with no past, invading a family that can trace its lineage back 400 years

The other interesting scene - there are only about two in the entire hour and 46 minutes also centers around the grapes — the harvest, in which Paul proves to the father he's a good man and in which Victo-ria and Paul realize their love for each other.

Stop me if you've heard this one: An idealistic teacher, new on the job, gets stock with the class of juvenile delinquents no one else wants and, despite setone else wants and, despite set-backs, is able to show them that they're not the morons the school system seems to think they are. Along the way the teacher learns something about berself, as well.

Yep, that recycled old plot is what "Dangerous Minds," a new film starring Michelle Pfeiffer as an ex-marine-turnedteacher, is about.

Pfeiffer? An ex-marine? Exactly. Casting an actress who has built a career on playing delicate women as an exmarine who cries at the drop of a textbook and has an irritatingly fey way of brushing her hair behind her ears is the film's first, and perhaps big-gest mistake. She's completely wrong for the part.

'Talk' offers ideas, but no story

By Romant 1 Bernes Assistant Editor Grace Bichon (Julia Roberts) has the perfect life: A hand-some and loving husband, a precocious daughter, a supportive family, a great job on her family's borse ranch and is still able to find time to fulfill herself by doing charity work.

Then she sees her husband share a passionate kiss with another woman

That's what begins Lasse Hallstrom's new film "Some-thing To Talk About." And like all of Hallstrom's films, you'll leave with something to talk

The main topic of that post-cinema discussion will be whether the movie was any good. And that answer depends on whether you like stories with strong parratives and under drawn characters or if you like your movies peopled by strong characters who have very little story to work with. Something To Talk About" is the latter.

As he did in "Once Around" and "What's Eating Gilbert Grape," Hallstrom again creates in "Talk" a family that is as stifling as it is comforting. When Grace leaves her hus-band iplayed very well by Dennis Quaid) the family gives her advice ranging from "ignore it, because it's bad for business' to "poison him, a near death experience will do wonders for him." But no one seems to care how Grace feels, and no one really cares what she does about the situation as long as she does it privately, without causing scenes that would lead

Stratford company heats up the cold war in 'The Stillborn Lover'

In fact, one of my most distinct memories of my four days on the Drake was how frequently we changed anchorages. On this particular trip, we hoarded the ship at Crus Bay, St. John, in the U.S. Virgin Islands, where we arrived by taking a ferry from Red Hook in St. Thomas.

That evening we traveled to the West End of Tortola and overnighted in an anchorage called Soper's Hole. Before and after dinner, we were shuttled to a number of the lively beath bars that surround this wellsheltered harbor.

This is the type of activity where the mix of your fellow passengers will determine how well such an eyent succeeds This week, our group of 20 included 14 students from a travel school in Colorado. They were a lively crew.

Fortunately, these would-be gents pretty much provided the entertainment that evening for the rest of us, who were a bit more reluctant.

One evening, a video featuring a sailing trip around Cape Horn was shown in the lounge. Otherwise, we were on our own to spend our evenings quietly on deck or at a beach bar on shore.

While this trip is fun and casual, it is definitely not for everyone. One must be able to deal with the fact that because there is only one main deck area, you will be spending much of your time with your fellow passengers. You'd better hope you like the other folks.

That said, the Drake really does have a lot going for it, of fering lots of fun for a good price - slightly over $100 per day. Meels, while not fancy, are plentiful and each afternoon rum punch and hors d'oeuvres are served on deck. A crew of 12 runs the ship.

Things poke along with no clear direction or forward momentum to an ending that seems too pat, with nothing to support it.

It's a story of the changing attitudes and powers of women in the male-dominated world of southern horse racing. It's a world where women still won't give up being referred to as Mrs. John Smith. Those attitudes clash with the new generation of women who want more out of life than to simply attach their names to a man's. It also shows that the biggest obstacle to women's equality is other women. That's a brave statement, and it's well supported by the script. Still, it's a script filled with ideas, and not much

They are truly the poignant and touching couple who have given their lives to the nomadic and often frustrating world of diplomacy and are now caught in a trap of intrigue partly of their own making. Their sensi-tivity to and understanding of

CompleteHeat offers virtually unlimited hot water

Since we are in the middle of the dog days of summer, better known as August, we certainly are not running our furnaces. Nevertheless, I thought I would take this time to talk to you about one of the latest heating products available from Lennox Industries.

Lennox recently introduced a unit called CompleteHeat. This unit is a combination heating system, offering you comfortable home heating with a virtually unlimited hot water supply, and at 90 percent efficiency. It is able to heat water at a faster rate than conventional tanks. thereby minimizing standby heat loss and producing an abundant supply of hot water for your family. Imagine that two teenagers and still enough hot water for you.

With the efficient CompleteHeat system there is one burner that heats a hot water coil. Off of this coil, zone valves are placed to run hot water lines off the heater which can be used for a myriad of applications besides home heating and hot water heating. This system offers technological advantages you can't get in other home systems. One unique application is to have a zone set up for your driveway. When you are having installation of a new driveway, patio and/or sidewalk, just install the proper tubing before the surface is laid and hook up to the and when the outside temperature is below 32 degrees the heat will come on and presto, no more shoveling or salting. And all at a reasonable cost for installation and operation.

The CompleteHeat system can also help with some of those difficult areas, i.e., family rooms, basements and garages, simply by adding small amounts of hot water baseboard.

Lennox CompleteHeat is available only through certified, licensed and insured Lennox dealers. If you are considering replacing your furnace and water heater, think about the CompleteHeat combination heating system.

accounts for most of home owner's wealth It's no secret that Americans keep a Owning a home is perhaps the great deal of money secured in their single most important investment that homes, but a look at the actual can be made. By paying down mortgage debt, home equity - and According to 1991 U.S. Census therefore, household net wealth -Bureau figures, Americans have more grows. That equity can be tapped than $4.1 trillion in equity in the through a home equity loan to give homes they own. That's an average of home owners cash for significant costs, $66,152 per household and accounts such as college tuition.

> Homeownership and home equity are even more important for lowerincome households than for households in general. In 1991, home equity for owners with monthly incomes below $1,071 accounted for 75 percent of their total net worth. People over 65 make up the majority of this group, meaning home equity is an extremely important financial cushion for postretirement years.

For younger home owners, home equity also makes up a significant portion of their wealth. For example, for households headed by a person age 35 or under, home equity accounted for 54 percent of total net worth in 1991.

For households with limited net worth, home equity takes on great significance as well. For home owners with net worth from $5,000 to $10,000, 71 percent of that net worth is home equity. As net worth rises, home equity as a percentage declines since those households typically have greater financial assets of other types.

For home owners of all ages and income levels, it's clear that buying a home and building equity in the home offer a stepping stone to a secure financial future.

The Michigan Association of Home Builders comprises more than 10,000 member companies providing service to over 370,000 people in the home building/construction industry. MAHB also represents 36 local home builder associations throughout the state.

Is your home ready for sale?

If you are like most people who are preparing their homes for sale, you're wondering which improvements you should make and how much you should spend "sprucing up" your property before putting it on the market.

In general, you're better off emphasizing the inexpensive things that sell a house, such as painting and replacing light switches and door handles. However, if you expect to command a premium price, you should complete any major repairs or improvements before showing your house.

Limit your repairs to functional parts of the house, such as the roof, plumbing and major appliances. Then focus your energy on painting and otherwise freshening up the house to make the exterior appealing and the interior light, airy and spacious. Your local real estate professional can make recommendations as to which repairs and improvements will help sell your home quickly and give you the most "bang for your buck."

As the saying goes, "You never get a second chance to make a first impression." And your house will make a first impression on potential buyers before they even reach the front door. It's called "curb appeal."

What buyers see as they drive up to your house will make a lasting impression, so keep the grass mowed and edged, and the flower beds weedfree. Trim trees and bushes away from windows and clean the yard of all debris. If your house needs painting, do it now. A good paint job should more than pay for itself in the selling price.

You also should remove oil stains from the driveway and buy an inexpensive drip pan to avoid further stains. Replace the weatherbeaten mailbox, remove torn screens and clean outdoor light fixtures. Pay special attention to the front door and entrance: polish the brass, repaint worn trim and put out a new doormat.

But curb appeal doesn't stop at your property line. Potential buyers will be sizing up the neighborhood as well. Ask your neighbors to tidy up and keep the curbside as free of parked cars as possible. It's in their best interest, because a top selling price for your house will help their own property values rise.

A fresh coat of paint will brighten interior walls and could pay a tremendous dividend considering the small amount of money invested particularly if you do the work yourself. Choose neutral shades of white, off-white or beige that will coordinate with most decors.

By cleaning out the closets and cupboards, you can make your storage space appear larger — and maybe even turn a small profit by holding a weekend garage sale with the unwanted items. Freshen up the house by oiling squeaky door hinges, tightening loose cabinet knobs and replacing floor tiles. If soiled, wall-towall carpets should be professionally

Take extra time in the kitchen and bathrooms, as they go a long way toward selling a home. Remove stains from fixtures and repair dripping faucets. Check the caulking around tubs and fix noisy toilets. Finally, make sure that all kitchen appliances are working.

If you have professional skills as a builder or carpenter, you may want to do more than the average homeowner, such as adding an extra bathroom or upgrading the kitchen. But, you're generally better off not adding major improvements, like a swimming pool or an addition, to the house.

Once all of the repairs and improvements have been made, your real estate sales associate will begin showing your house to potential buyers. Even though you and your family may still be living there, you should take extra care to keep the house neat and clean.

It's important to do a daily check: Is all clutter stowed away? Are soiled clothes in the hamper? Have the dishes been washed and beds made? Was the trash taken out?

Bathrooms should be absolutely spotless — and more. Add a sanitizer to the toilet bowl and keep the lid down. Wash and fluff bathroom rugs, hang fresh towels and use potpourri or scented soaps to add a nice fragrance to the air. In the kitchen, clean the oven inside and out and run a lemon through the garbage disposal for a fresh smell.

Just showing your house, open the curtains and turn on all the lights even in broad daylight. If you have a fireplace, light it when appropriate. And, make sure the temperature in the house is as comfortable as possible. You may want to bake cookies or brew chocolate-flavored coffee to give your house a pleasant "homey" smell — but avoid strong cooking odors like onions and garlic.

If possible, leave the house when your sales associate and the buyer arrive; the buyer will feel more at ease touring your house and will ask more questions about the property. If you must be present, keep children and pets under control and turn off televisions and stereos, as the noise may distract the buyer.

Most important, let your sales associate show your house to the buyer. Don't follow them from room to room; just stay in the background as much as possible. Let the professional do the talking. He or she knows the real estate business and will present your house in its best light.

With a little paint and elbow grease along with some sound advice from your real estate professional - you can have your house ready for sale in no

Housing affordability slips due to higher home prices

Despite declines in mortgage rates, home buyers lost a marginal amount of purchasing power in the second quarter of 1995, due primarily to home price increases, according to the National Association of Realtors.

NAR's composite Housing Affordability Index, which measures affordability factors for all home buyers, was 124.8 in the second quarter of 1995, compared to 125.5 in the previous quarter and 127.2 in the second quarter of 1994.

NAR president Edmund G. Woods Jr. said the home price increases that occurred during the second quarter offset declines in mortgage rates, resulting in a slight loss in purchasing power. However, he noted that housing affordability conditions extremely favorable.

"Overall, home buying conditions excellent. In many cases, consumers are surprised at how much they can afford," Woods said.

When the index measures 100, a family earning the median income has exactly the amount needed to purchase a median-priced resale home, using conventional financing and a 20 percent down payment. Using the second-quarter housing affordability measurement, half the families in the nation had at least 124.8 percent - easily more than enough - of the income needed to qualify for the purchase of a home at the national median second-quarter price of $111,000. In fact, based on the second quarter statistics, the typical family could qualify for a home costing $138,300.

NAR chief economist John A. Tuccillo noted that housing affordability conditions are expected to improve later this year, as interest rates keep edging downward. However, he pointed out that firsttime buyers are continuing to face affordability problems that are not solved solely by favorable financing. NAR's first-time home buyers index. which shows the ability of renters who are prime candidates to qualify for a mortgage on a starter home, also fell in the second quarter of 1995

According to this measurement, the typical first-time buyer had only 80.9 percent - less than enough - of the income needed to purchase the typical starter home, priced at $94,400 in the second quarter. NAR's first-time buyer index showed that the qualifying income needed for conventional financing covering 90 percent of the starter home price was $30,580. Yet the median income of prime first-time buyers was $24,735 — a difference of $5.845. As a result, a typical first-time buyer could only afford a home costing compared to the previous quarter. The first-time buyer index was 80.9 in the second quarter, down from 81.5 in the first quarter of 1995, and down from 82.4 one year ago.

$76,400, which is $18,000 below the typical starter-home price. The firsttime buyer median income represents the typical income of a renter family with wage earners between the ages of homeownership," Tuccillo said. "Purchasing still remains difficult for many entry-level buyers, because they must struggle to come up with down payment funds. Outside of income differences, the major difference between the purchasing power of firsttime buyers and repeat buyers is that repeat buyers have equity, which they can put into future purchases. Firsttime buyers don't."

Colonial

Bungalow

Woods pointed out that the National Association of Realtors is one of more than 50 housing organizations participating in a national plan announced earlier this year by President Clinton to expand homeownership opportunities. The goal of the plan, called "The National Homeownership Strategy: Partners in the American Dream," is to raise the U.S. homeownership rate to a recordhigh level of 67.5 percent by the year 2000. A major aspect of the plan involves reducing the costs of home buying, including down payment and closing costs.

"We are looking at ways to make buying a home easier for those who need help beyond low interest rates," Woods said.

Under affordability current conditions for all buyers during the second quarter of 1995, a family earning $20,000 per year would have sufficient income to qualify for a $71,000 home with a $56,800 loan. A family sarning $30,000 would qualify for a $106,500 home using a $85,200 loan; and a family earning $40,000 would qualify for a loan of $118,600, enabling them to purchase a $142,000 home.

A family earning $50,000 annually would be able to buy a $177,500 home after qualifying for a $142,000 loan.

What first-time home buyers want: lots of amenities and a reasonable price tag

First-time home buyers want many of the same features in a home that trade-up buyers want --- a large lot, a two-car garage, walk-in closets and bay windows - but aren't willing or able to pay a big price, according to a survey by the National Association of Home Builders.

Renters who planned to buy their first home in the near future were surveyed on their housing desires.

"One feature they definitely want in a home is significantly more space than they have in their rental accommodations, a median of 1,900 square feet vs. 1,000 square feet," said Janet L. Compo, president of the Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan and chief executive officer of James D. Compo Inc. in Farmington Hills.

First time bayers are willing or able to pay a median price of $87,000 compared to trade-up buyers who could afford a median price of $120,200.

"The top five priorities for first-time home buyers were energy efficiency, a big lot, less crime, a better neighborhood and less noise," Compos said.

For a newly built home, first-time buyers said that quality of workmanship, neighborhood, energy features, builder's reputation, warranty, exterior appearance, schools, distance to work and to shopping were all important to them.

Asked whether they were willing to give up space in one part of the house for more space elsewhere, more than half said they want a larger family room instead of a larger living room, and more living space rather than dining space. Sixty-two percent said they would not be willing to give up bedroom space for either bathroom or group activity space.

Potential buyers want a home filled with amenities, particularly a washer/dryer, linen closet, additional bathroom, central air conditioning, walk-in closets, microwave oven, dishwasher, pantry, security system and fireplace.

Reflecting the current trend toward kitchen/family room combinations, 45 percent said they prefer the kitchen and family room to be adjacent and visually open but with a divider.

In the kitchen, the most desired feature is a large counter top followed by a walk in pantry, special-use storage and a pay window. Cabineta definitely beat out kitchen windows nearly three-quarters of the respondents said they would prefer more wall cabinets to additional windows in the kitchen.

The majority of potential buyers prefer two bathrooms (46 percent), although nearly as many (40 percent) want more than two. Forty-nine percent prefer three bedrooms, while 38 percent want four bedrooms.

For their first home, about 25 percent of the respondents said they were not willing or able to pay more than $60,000, 20 percent were willing or able to pay from $60,000 to $79,000 and another 20 percent were willing or able to pay between $80,000 and $99,999. Only 18 percent were willing or able to pay $150,000 or more.

Today's students, tomorrow's scientists

It has often been said that today's youth is tomorrow's future, and such a truism could not possibly be more accurate than when considering the sciences. Around the country and throughout the world, countless young science students are just beginning to realize their talents and test their theories.

Every year, millions of these high school-age students participate in science fairs, where they can display their experiments, have them judged by leaders in their respective fields. and develop personal friendships and scientific partnerships. partnerships can pay off not just for the individual students, but for everyone around the globe, in the long run. Inarguably, the "World Cup" of these many fairs is the Science Service International Science and Engineering Fair (ISEF). The 1995 ISEF, Science Service Inc.'s 46th annual science competition, was held this past May in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada and attracted some 1,000 high school age students from the United States and more than 36 other nations.

The students, in disciplines ranging from Biochemistry to Computer Science, Earth & Space Science to Engineering and from Medicine & Health to Physics, vied for hundreds of thousauds of dollars in scholarships and all-expense paid trips to the Nobel Prize ceremonies in Sweden, the European Community Contest (EU) for Young Scientists and the All South America competition. Further, the students had the opportunity to meet with Nobel laureates, among them Dr. Anthony Hewish, Dr. Bertram Brockhouse and Dr. John Polanyi.

"Far too many people talk about what's wrong with our school systems without really looking at what is right, without celebrating the talents of our student pool and the genuine ability of our teachers to teach," said Dr. Alfred S. McLaren, president of Science Service Inc.

A not-for-profit corporation, Science Service Inc. publishes the weekly magazine Science News, administers the ISEF and the Westinghouse Science Talent Search.

"It is our goal at Science Service Inc. to whet the appetite of our youth to participate in science fairs and, ultimately, to pursue careers in the sciences," McLaren said. "In fact, that has been our very mission since Science Service Inc. was founded in 1921. It is also our hope to stimulate schools, the government and the business sector to work with us to create learning environments and career opportunities for our future scientists. If we all work together in providing educational opportunities for our young people, it's my personal belief that the world will ultimately be a better, safer place for us all."

At the recent ISEF in Hamilton, there were a number of exciting and newsworthy happenings. More young women and students from racial beckgrounds historically underrepresented participated than ever before. This marks the fifth year in a row that the minority population has increased. Students from China, Venezuela and Columbia participated for the first time. More scholarship money than ever before, over $750,000, was distributed to students, thanks in part to the involvement of such corporate sponsors as the Intel Foundation, McDonnell-Douglas, Lockheed/National Air & Space Museum/IMAX, the Explorers Club, the U. S. Global Change Program, and the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps. Among the judges were Professor Thor A. Bak of the Royal Danish Academy of Sciences and Letters in Denmark, Dr. Alfred Frennet of the University of Brussels, Dr. Joseph Lahr and the Institute Superieur de Technologie in Luxembourg, professor Dervilla Donnelly of the Custom House Docks Department Authority of Dublin, Ireland, and Professor Dr. Galo Ramirez of the Universidad Autonoma in Madrid, Spain.

"As you can see, the ISEF is an ongoing and growing event, the face of which keeps changing," McLaren said. "It has been a fascinating experience to watch the ISEF develop and diversify over the years. Next year's competition will be held in Tucson, Az., and we're expecting nearly 1,200 students from 40 countries to participate. Hopefully, there will be additional corporate sponsors and further funds for student scholarships."

Success stories abound about students who have participated in ISEFs and ventured onto careers in the sciences. Hartley D. Peavey attended several fairs in the 1950's, and now owns Peavey Electronics Corp., which manufactures sound equipment for rock musicians. Michael Ruberto of New Jersey won an award at a 1986 science fair. These days, he's a senior scientist at Ciba-Geigy, a research and development company, where he works on finding methods to keep sunlight from fading plastics.

Anyone interested in learning more about Science Service Inc. and the International Science and Engineering Fair should talk to their local high school's officials or contact Science Service Inc. directly at: Director of Youth Services, Science Service Inc., 1719 N. Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

Household help

Q. I am in the process of painting my bedroom and several other rooms, too. The existing ceiling light fixture is outdated in style and needs to be replaced. What I have in mind is to install a three-speed ceiling fan, including a light fixture or globe type.

My home is not very old, so therefore, I believe the electrical wiring is adequate to accommodate this conversion. Can you advise me on how to safely install a ceiling fan into an ordinary light fixture?

A. You are certainly correct in mentioning the safety factor involved when installing a ceiling fan and light fixture. These fans are very modes in electricity consumption and are versatile all year round.

Although your house is not particularly old, the existing wiring can be made to accommodate the fan you purchase. If you are not at all tamiliar with electricity or don't feel safe with its various properties then call a qualified electrician.

The primary concern when installing a ceiling fan is properly supporting its weight. The code for such an installation is to mount a crosspiece (of bar hanger) between two joists. Of course, if accessibility above your ceiling is not possible, then a sturdy metal box will suffice. These fans are usually sold in kits and will be compatible with the hardware enclosed and your coded metal box.

Q. My backyard deck is fairly new and is in good structural condition. I treat the wood annually with a water scalant and always check for any loose boards or protruding nails. However, the problem that I'm concerned with is slippery steps in wet weather. Do you have any helpful hints on how to remedy this problem?

A. Probably the best and only solution to your dilemma is to create a skidproof surface on those steps. One method of resolving slippery steps is to use a sand finish paint additive to ordinary exterior deck or marine paint. You can either mix this product in the paint or apply it directly onto we paint.

This should remedy your problem of slipping and you can go ahead and put this job onto your list of annual chores.

The following is from a discussion with Gerry Connell, host of TV's "The Home Pro."

Q. Does it matter what type of wood is used to build a deck?

A. Yes. Wood is an important consideration in building a deck. I would use pressure-treated wood for the entire frame. Pressure treated lumber, redwood or cedar, will all work for the actual top decking, depending on your budget and the look you desire.

Of course, no matter where you live or what type of wood is used, all decks must be protected by a waterproofing product. All natural woods are vulnerable to water damage, silvering caused by sunlight, and mildew growth, and should be treated for protection. And treat the deck as soon as you can after it's finished. Leaving the wood unprotected for even a short time can allow damage to begin. Check the product label to see if any waiting period is required before treating new pressure treated humber.

Inarguably, the "World Cup" of these many fairs is the Science Service Inc. International Science and Engineering Fair (ISEF). The 1995 ISEF, Science Service Inc.'s 46th annual science competition, was held this past May in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada and attracted some 1,000 high school age students from the United States and more than 36 other nations.

The students, in disciplines ranging from Biochemistry to Computer Science, Earth & Space Science to Engineering and from Medicine & Health to Physics, vied for hundreds of thousauds of dollars in scholarships and all-expense paid trips to the Nobel Prize ceremonies in Sweden, the European Community Contest (EU) for Young Scientists and the All South America competition. Further, the students had the opportunity to meet with Nobel laureates, among them Dr. Anthony Hewish, Dr. Bertram Brockhouse and Dr. John Polanyi.

"Far too many people talk about what's wrong with our school systems without really looking at what is right, without celebrating the talents of our student pool and the genuine ability of our teachers to teach," said Dr. Alfred S. McLaren, president of Science Service Inc.

A not-for-profit corporation, Science Service Inc. publishes the weekly magazine Science News, administers the ISEF and the Westinghouse Science Talent Search.

"It is our goal at Science Service Inc. to whet the appetite of our youth to participate in science fairs and, ultimately, to pursue careers in the sciences," McLaren said. "In fact, that has been our very mission since Science Service Inc. was founded in 1921. It is also our hope to stimulate schools, the government and the business sector to work with us to create learning environments and career opportunities for our future scientists. If we all work together in providing educational opportunities for our young people, it's my personal belief that the world will ultimately be a better, safer place for us all."

At the recent ISEF in Hamilton, there were a number of exciting and newsworthy happenings. More young women and students from racial backgrounds historically underrepresented participated than ever before. This marks the fifth year in a row that the minority population has increased. Students from China. Venezuela and Columbia participated for the first time. More scholarship money than ever before, over $750,000, was distributed to students, thanks in part to the involvement of such corporate sponsors as the Intel Foundation, McDennell-Douglas, Lockheed/National Air & Space Museum/IMAX, the Explorers Club, the U. S. Global Change Program, and the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps. Among the judges were Professor Thor A. Bak of the Royal Danish Academy of Sciences and Letters in Denmark, Dr. Alfred Frennet of the University of Brussels, Dr. Joseph Lahr and the Institute Superieur de Technologie in Luxem'oourg, professor Dervilla Donnally of the Custom House Docks Department Authority of Dublin, Ireland, and Professor Dr. Galo Ramirez of the Universidad Autonoma in Madrid, Spain.

"As you can see, the ISEF is an ongoing and growing event, the face of which keeps changing," McLaren said. "It has been a fascinating experience to watch the ISEF develop and diversify over the years. Next year's competition will be held in Tucson, Az., and we're expecting nearly 1,200 students from 40 countries to participate. Hopefully, there will be additional corporate sponsors and further funds for student scholarships."

Buccess stories abound about students who have participated in ISEPs and ventured onto careers in the sciences. Hartley D. Peavey attended several fairs in the 1950's, and now owns Peavey Electronics Corp., which manufactures sound equipment for rock musicians. Michael Ruberto of New Jersey won an award at a 1986 science fair. These days, he's a senior scientist at Ciba-Geigy, a research and development company, where he works on finding methods to keep sunlight from fading plastics.

Anyone interested in learning more about Science Service Inc. and the International Science and Engineering Fair should talk to their local high school's officials or contact Science Service Inc. directly at: Director of Youth Services, Science Service Inc., 1719 N. Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

Household help

Q. I am in the process of painting my bedroom and several other rooms, too. The existing ceiling light fixture is outdated in style and needs to be replaced. What I have in mind is to install a three-speed ceiling fan, including a light fixture or globe type.

My home is not very old, so therefore, I believe the electrical wiring is adequate to accommodate this conversion. Can you advise me on how to safely install a ceiling fan into an ordinary light fixture?

A. You are certainly correct in mentioning the safety factor involved when installing a ceiling fan and light fixture. These fans are very modes in electricity consumption and are versatile all year round.

Although your house is not particularly old, the existing wiring can be made to accommodate the fan you purchase. If you are not at all familiar with electricity or don't feel safe with its various properties then call a qualified electrician.

The primary concern when installing a ceiling fan is properly supporting its weight. The code for such an installation is to mount a crosspiece (of bar hanger) between two joists. Of course, if accessibility above your ceiling is not possible, then a sturdy metal box will suffice. These fans are usually sold in kits and will be compatible with the hardware enclosed and your coded metal box.

Q. My backyard deck is fairly new and is in good structural condition. I treat the wood annually with a water sealant and always check for any loose boards or protruding nails. However, the problem that I'm concerned with is slippery steps in wet weather. Do you have any helpful hints on how to remedy this problem?

A. Probably the best and only solution to your dilemma is to create a skidproof surface on those steps. One method of resolving slippery steps is to use a sand finish paint additive to ordinary exterior deck or marine paint. You can either mix this product in the paint or apply it directly onto we paint.

This should remedy your problem of slipping and you can go shead and put this job onto your list of annual chores.

The following is from a discussion with Gerry Connell, host of TV's "The Home Pro."

Q. Does it matter what type of wood is used to build a deck?

A. Yes. Wood is an important consideration in huilding a death. I would use pressure-treated wood for the entire frame. Pressure treated lumber, redwood or cedar, will all work for the actual top decking, depending on your budget and the look you desire.

Of course, no matter where you live or what type of wood is used, all decks must be protected by a waterproofing product. All natural woods are vulnerable to water damage, silvering caused by sunlight, and mildew growth, and should be treated for protection. And treat the deck as soon as you can after it's finished. Leaving the wood unprotected for even a short time can allow damage to begin. Check the product label to see if any waiting period is required before treating new pressure treated humber.
