Municipal court system may be on its last leg as reform effort builds

On Nov. 7, after almost a month of testimony regarding Park goes court restructuring before the state House judiciary and appropriations (on judiciary) committees, state supreme court justice James Brickley is sched Keep court uled to again address members of the Legislature.

In Brickley's speech to the Legislature on Sept. 13 he asked state lawmakers to join the court in modernizing the state's judicial system.

Among those testifying re. Grosse Pointe Park City Councently was Michigan State Bar cil into action last week as Association president and former Grosse Pointe resident Thomas Kienbaum.

"I did not touch upon the municipal court in my testimony," said Kienbaum, an attorney with the firm of Dickin son, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen & Freeman, "but we (the state bar) support the chief justice's view.

In his September speech, Brickley said "municipal courts should be merged into the district court system.'

A suggestion by chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court James Brickley to eliminate local municipal courts stirred the Grosse Pointe Park City Councouncilmembers passed a resolution opposing the idea.

Park mayor Palmer Heenan said the resolution is not exclusive to the Park.

"The mayors of the five Grosse Pointes recently met and decided to submit this resolution to all the Pointe councils," said Heenan. "This issue affects us all and I believe it's better to stand together rather than hang separately.'

For Heenan, the people have spoken. He pointed out that a few years ago, Park residents voted against establishing a district court in the city.

"People seem very happy with local municipal courts handling cases, and they seem not to want a district court," With uniformity and effi- said Heenan. "I think we can take some umbrage at the fact that the supreme court declined to make Eastpointe's municipal court a district court because of the costs involved, yet did not give Grosse Pointe the same consideration.

Fire in Park

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers received a call about a fire at a home in the 1300 block of Berkshire at about 10 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 29.

By the time fire fighting units arrived at the scene, the fire had spread from the front bedroom to the attic. A second alarm was sent out and fire fighting units from the City of Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Farms responded.

An initial report by the public safety department indicates that efforts to put out the fire were hampered by a door to the attic being locked and the stairs to the attic being blocked Hunch pays off by stored materials.

The fire was finally contained, and a damage survey showed that fire damage was limited to the front bedroom and the attic, while there was water damage to the upstairs and downstairs levels of the

Betty Scherer's church, Grosse Pointe United Method ist, celebrates its 50th anniversary this year. Scherer has been an active participant in many of the church's programs for 48 of those 50 years.

Scherer is 88 and has been a widow for the last 11 years. She's not one to sit by herself watching TV. She's not one to complain about lonliness or lack of things to do.

Every Monday morning, she gets up early and goes to Kerby School to help third and fourth-graders with their spell-

"You couldn't find sweeter children anywhere," she said.
"Every year, I think my class is the best; the next year I get a new group of wonderful child-

She has volunteered at Kerby for the last seven years.

One year, she twisted the arms of 26 of her fellow senior citizens by persuading them to become pen pals with a roomful of Kerby kids.

"Coerced' is the right term," Scherer said. "Most of the older people had to be talked into

The project was a huge success, she said. The seniors shared memories of their childhoods with the children by writing to them about the books they read, the toys they loved, the clothes they wore and games they played. The children wrote back about their school and leisure activities.

At the end of the year, Scherer arranged for the pen pals to meet each other.

"We ended the year with a pizza party in my back yard,"

Scherer grew up in Iowa. She met her husband Ernie in Omaha, Neb., where she worked one summer. They were married in 1926.

He worked for Hearst Newspapers at first; then for the Minneapolis Tribune for nearly 20 years. They raised three children in Minneapolis.

They moved to Grosse Pointe in 1947, when Ernie took a job with The Detroit News. The children were nearly grown and Ernie and Betty didn't know anyone in town. They lived in a rented house while they searched for a home to buy.

"We didn't know anybody. I was so lonely," Scherer said. "So I volunteered at St. John Hospital, helping in the nur-sery and with new mothers. I also worked at a blood bank downtown.'

Scherer doesn't remember how she got the job, but she soon found herself working for a market research company.

"I loved the work," she said.
"It was part time. I went door to door. I would stand on the porch and asked people their opinions, then record their answers. Some wouldn't respond. of course. But most people were pleasant.

Scherer was involved in the research that preceded the construction of Eastland Mall. She also did a survey on how people read their newspapers.

"Some read the funnies first," she said. "Others turn

Scherer has lived in her Grosse Pointe Farms home for 32 years. It's crowded with family mementos - photographs of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren; hand-made, child-crafted items like clay pots, crayon drawings, fingerpaintings, padded fabric picture frames and various creative offerings from cherished children.

Family pictures are prominently displayed. Scherer peruses a poster-sized collage of color snapshots of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren while she works at her kitchen sink.

She gazes on two rows of grandchildren peering from identical decorative frames, which march across her family room wall.

A vertical arrangement of great-grandchildren in identical oval frames greets her every time she walks from family room to kitchen.

Bryant backs single bill on school choice

mong Wayne County school chiefs as well as Lansing legislators, revisions in the school code passed last week by the state Senate are running into serious opposition.

Rep. William R. Bryant of Grosse Pointe Farms, chairman of the House Education Committee, told the Grosse Pointe News he hopes to separate the schools-of-choice issue from the Senate's major school legislation.

By putting it into a separate bill, Bryant hopes to avoid some of the controversies already swirling about the schools-of-choice issue as his committee takes up the wide-ranging school bill approved by the Senate.

However, the Grosse Pointe Republican also objects to the Senate removal of the limit on the number of charter schools that universities and community colleges

His point is that with an unlimited number of new charter schools, the sponsoring agencies would lack the staff and ability to adequately monitor their performance, which the agencies must pledge to do when proposing the schools.

Other controversial measures in the Senate bill, in Bryant's opinion, would provide for approval of home schooling; would permit parents to preview all school textbooks, attend classes, and take videotapes and audiotapes of all classes.

The bill would also allow an individual with a bachelor's degree and five years of experience related to a school subject to teach without certification in grades 9

As reported in last week's issue of the Grosse Pointe News, the superintendents of Wayne County schools opposed the schools-of-choice proposal in the Senate bill, and found other faults with it.

Grosse Pointe Superintendent Edward J. Shine missed the county superintendents' meeting but said his local school board has not yet discussed the Senatepassed bill or the schools-of-choice issue in

However, Shine, at an earlier superintendents' meeting in September, drafted a proposed statement for the second session expressing concern about the proposal on grounds it was premature and had not yet been researched.

Shine's draft did point out that most districts, like Grosse Pointe, already permit some choice in their own districts. It also expressed Shine's concern that questions about foundation grants, transportation aid, and similar issues should be answered before the proposal becomes law.

The majority of the 34 Wayne County superintendents, however, went beyond his draft to express concern that the proposed "inter-district schools-of-choice legislation will foster even greater racial, social and economic segregation.

As reported earlier, the association also criticized the legislation on other grounds, some of which are similar to Bryant's views of the Senate proposal.

When his committee takes up the Senate bill this week, Bryant expects to offer a separate bill containing a minimal form of school choice.

He believes his bill is needed to protect the people involved in student shifts from being charged with discrimination or segregation in federal court.

In his view, the Senate bill would also force the Legislature to deal with the funding of transportation aid for special education pupils who might enroll in distant districts or even different intermediate districts.

Bryant says both GOP and Democratic caucuses want to protect the special ed students from being disadvantaged under the proposed legislation.

Overall, however, Bryant said that the Senate bill revamping the state school code is "not bad" because it retains many proposals that he favors.

They include requirements that schools adopt a school improvement process, submit an annual report, issue a state-endorsed diploma, meet the accreditation requirement, and offer schools a model core curriculum, instead of mandating it.

But we won't know for sure what is in the final legislation until the House has spoken and compromised with the Senate on the controversies involved. At present, Bryant does not expect his committee to complete its work on revamping the bill until about Dec. 6.

Public scoffs at GOP savings

New York Times/CBS News Poll last week showed surprisingly lit-Lattle public support for the GOP Medicare and tax cut plans.

The poll reported on Oct. 24 that "by nearly 3-to-1, the public rejects the tax cuts" and "by a 2-to-1 ratio the public disapproves of the GOP Medicare plan.'

In the 1994 campaign, the GOP, and especially the House, used Speaker Newt Gingrich's Contract with America as a political advertising gimmick and then claimed that the GOP victory meant approval of everything in the contract.

But a public opinion poll after the election showed that fewer than 50 percent of the GOP voters knew what was in the contract. In our view, that is a weak read of public support for the GOP to rely on to justify Medicare and other budget cuts.

While both houses now have passed the budget bill, such public opinion reports will strengthen President Clinton's hand in carrying out his promised vetoes of budget and spending proposals.

Even so, however, the majority GOP is expected to win most of the legislative aims it seeks in its political bargaining with the White House.

The GOP did get some good news from the polling. It showed that the public shares the GOP view that the states are superior to the federal government in the handling of specific programs.

True, some states may be superior to the feds in some matters, but we think that overall the number of states that will handle federal programs badly will outnumber those that already do a good job in distributing federal funds.

Unfortunately, the GOP fails to mention that the new layer of bureaucracy that will be created to handle federal programs at state levels will not be bound by a national policy on Medicare, Medicaid or anything else.

Such a national policy is badly needed to prevent some states from diverting federal funds to political and other unauthorized uses.

Unfortunately, the GOP Congress' refusal to include such a policy in the new legislation is likely to lead to a lack of service to Medicare patients and other people in need.

YOU'RE FORGETTING WELL, HONEY-ALLTHE WE HAVE AN ELECTION SCARY STUFF IS OVER FOR ANOTHER YEAR! NEXT WEEK!

Letters

Remember elections on Nov. 7

ext Tuesday, Nov. 7, voters in four of the Grosse Pointes will go to the polls to vote on candidates for mayor, city council and municipal

Most of the contests are centered in Grosse Pointe Farms, the City of Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Woods.

Grosse Pointe Park lacks contests for mayor and city council but has two candidates for municipal judge.

In all contests, the Grosse Pointe News has interviewed the candidates, with one exception.

The only candidate not interviewed, Thomas LeFevre, running for the Woods council, failed to respond to numerous requests and then, we were told, went out of town until Nov. 1.

These are the News' choices, as indicated last week:

For Farms council: Edward Gaffney, Ron Kneiser, Peter Waldmeir, Edward Wilberding.

For the City council: Peter LaFond, Stephen L. Sholty, Larry Dowers. For City municipal judge: Stan C.

Kazul. For Woods mayor: Robert Novitke.

For Woods council: Eric Steiner, Joseph Dansbury (third council post unre-commended). For Park municipal judge: Carl F.

No major issues seemed to drive these campaigns, although we received three letters through Monday on two matters. Two from the Park complained about the endorsement of the incumbent judge by the mayor and council. One from the Woods objected to the 76 percent increase in the water bill. Since this is the last week before the voting, the News followed its usual policy of not publishing campaign letters at a time when they could not be answered prior to the election.

Harbor rate clarification

To the Editor:

I would like to convey my appreciation to Mr. Chapman for his excellent coverage of the Oct. 23 Grosse Pointe Farms council meeting.

It was informative and reported the key points as presented before the coun-

However, I would like to clarify some figures that were used based upon my handout at the presentation. The last column of the harbor budget (1995-96) needs further explanation.

In Mr. Chapman's opening paragraph, he stated that marina rates "in-creased 10 percent for the 1996 season, after 5 percent increases the previous two years."

This was not the case. Boat well rates increased 20 percent in 1994; 5 percent in 1995; and after an initial request by the administration of a 5 percent increase in 1996, it was increased to 10 percent.

That is a 35 percent increase in just three years. It was this escalation of rates, oblivious to the average inflation rate of 2.6 ercent, and the boaters' $42,600 (21 percent of the 1996 budget) earmarked for the general fund that has angered boaters.

Again, on behalf of the boaters at the Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park, I would like to thank the Grosse Pointe News for its coverage and interest in community matters.

Grim Reaper poor placement To the Editor:

Please tell me that having a blown up, color picture of the Grim Reaper next to the devastating story of the death of Christina Comito was an error made when planning the front page.

The parents, family and friends of this cherished young woman opened our paper and saw a picture of their child and friend and only inches away, a symbol of death and hopelessness.

Halloween is a fun and mysterious time for our children and there may be a place for such symbolism at this time of year. But I believe that this time, the feelings of our community would have been better a symbo of hope, faith and love.

Editor's note: You are correct. The color picture was selected and processed well in advance for the issue just prior to Halloween. The juxtaposition was not meant to be considered as part of the tragic story on Page 1. We apologize for any further grief we may have caused.

ow that Colin Powell has finished his book tour, and is still exploring the possibility of running for the 1996 GOP nomination for president, he has become the target of many of his GOP conservative foes.

His plan after completing his book tour was to go into seclusion for a couple of weeks with his family and advisers, and "then come to a conclusion and announce it in due course, sometime in November.' Apparently he has been following that

However, in a Sunday TV roundup of COP leaders, three of four conservatives stoutly opposed Powell's candidacy as a Republican. They left it to William Bennett, a former cabinet member in a GOP administration, to argue that if Powell gives the right answers to some unanswered questions, he could be accepted by the GOP, including the conservatives, as their nom-

But Monday morning the right-wing Wall Street Journal editorial page strongly questioned Powell's GOP qualifications, and contended that "despite the polls, Bill Clinton will lose to the Republican nominee who doesn't drool on stage."

This shot came after Mona Charen, ultraright columnist, had said in the Oct. 26 Detroit News that Powell's political views "are hardly in harmony with the majority of the GOP."

Maybe not, but at the moment Powell is the only person listed among the GOP hopefuls who runs ahead of President Clinton in the public opinion polls.

Of lions and life lessons

Right about the time my father died my daughter developed an obsession for "The Lion

King."

Over and over again she'd demand to see the full-length animated feature film about the lion cub who blames himself for his father's death, runs away, and then, after learning many life lessons, returns to avenge his father's murder and reclaim his rightful place as

All that is way over her head, of course. She just thinks the lion and his outcast friends are funny. Besides, the music is upbeat, the colors are bright, the action is never-ending and the animation takes your breath away.

After two or three viewings of the movie, she was hooked, and ever since has signaled her desire to see it with a shrieking declaration: "King."

On the first note of the opening theme, as the black screen bursts to life with a sunrise over the Serengeti, she screams "King" and points to the roaring lions in utter amazement.

I'm so amazed that a nearly 2-year-old child's attention could be sustained for the 80plus-minute movie, that I decide to watch it myself.

The significance of the story hits me at a particulary vulnerable time. Two months and a week nearly to the day my father died unexpectedly and it's ironic to think that a child-ren's story could help me sort out such a complicated event.

The night my father died, after we left the hospital realizing there was nothing more anyone could do, the family gathered back at his house.

The reality of what had hap-pened struck me as I began to look around at all of his possessions. No longer were they "dad's things" left in their "dad's things" left in their usual places to be retrieved by him the next day. From that moment forward, they were "things that dad left behind."

Shirley A. McShane

I Say

His lunch for the next day was prepared, packed and waiting on the kitchen counter. In the yard, his garden tools were scattered on the lawn, and the sprinkler, forgotten in the panic earlier that evening, was spraying water onto the saturated earth supporting ready-tobe-picked tomatoes and peppers. Inside the house, everywhere I turned, I saw signs of him: His books lining the shelves in the den, symbols of his hobbies, interests and obsessions over the course of a lifetime. On the dining room table, a half-dozen envelopes stuffed with color pictures just retrieved from the drugstore chronicle his trip only a month earlier to Greece and Turkey. Next to the pictures, in a paper bag handed to us by a hospital nurse, his wristwatch and wallet.

As I searched for the quintessential object that would define who he was, something to take home to remind me that he had existed, I realized it could not

I spent several weeks asking myself what it was I was supposed to learn from this experience, this life lesson. What facets of who my father was should I carry forward and what should I bury? Is it better to put the experience in the past or to carry a piece of it with me?

Then one Saturday afternoon as my daughter cried out for "King," I joined the movie in progress and found the protagonist lion in a confrontation with a wise old baboon.

Bitter about his father's death, the lion has turned his back on the past. The baboon urges the lion to face his duty

And so, a children's tale gives me the answer I was looking for all along. The spirit of someone who is gone cannot be found in the objects he left behind, it can only be found in the people he knew, influenced and touched.

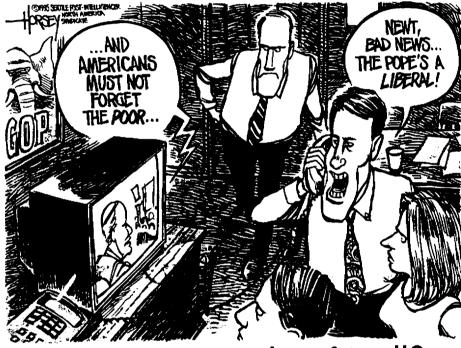

I stopped looking through drawers and bookshelves and photo albums and started looking at myself. Most of who I am today is based on his influence, both good and bad. Rather than prop up an old photograph on the mantel or leaf through an old book, I can take the good and pass it along and I can toss out the bad. I can carry with me the good advice and knowledge he shared and I can learn from his mistakes. But most of all, I should not forget.

The Op-Ed Page

What are we to make of it all?

Down here at the column, we like to think of ourselves as OJfree, which is, of course, absolutely different from "free OJ." Now that the second has actually happened, flying in the face of what orginally looked like logic (but has been revealed as self-deception), let's review our coverage.

On April 6, we noted to our horror that we had seen the OJ trial for the first time, with Kaeto Kaelin, who passes for Everyman in Hollywood, testifying. That was scary enough for a month. On May 4, we promised to continue our established tradition of OJ-freedom, noting that if one has nothing to add to the general blather, one should talk about something else.

Our files aren't computerized, but a reasonably thorough search suggests that that was it for OJ. We didn't even join in the universal hoo-rah when the jury announced it was sick of being sequestered and let him off after only four hours.

Nationally speaking, however, even that catharsis wasn't enough to get him out of our systems. A couple of weeks ago, Newsweek, obviously feeling it needed an OJ story, ran one with him in the title — but it was really about jury consultants.

Of course, something good did come out of OJ's release. It got us, as a nation, to continue the discussions about race relations and the justice system, the one that started with Rodney King and the LA riot and most recently continued with the Million Man March.

I didn't write about that, either, but it wasn't because I didn't care. On the contrary, anyone who has participated in a march on Washington - or knows someone who has knows precisely the great value of coming together for a cause.

And whether it was a million men or a half-million doesn't really make much difference. It was a whole lot of people. Every march that ever was has felt undercounted by the Park Service - and felt it was for political reasons. I'm a little tired of it.

Perhaps the most useful thing we can garner from all this is the renewed reminder that white America doesn't know much about black America . . . We don't know much about Canada, either. American me-dia have had only superficial coverage of Monday's election in Quebec. But we have been transfixed, watching night after night last week as Canadians poured their hearts out on national television.

One Quebecois got it right: As little as French Canadians feel that Canada really cares about Quebec, there's another, bigger country that cares even less. And that's us, of course . .

In my search through the files for OJ-related prattle, I find that in March and April I wrote about the Republican revolution, saying that once the public found out what it really means, we won't want it! And I predicted that the Republicans themselves would find their plans derailed by special interests protecting their various niches.

Whoa! Better eat my words. I was right that the public doesn't want a revolution anymore. Polls show that the voters want Medicare more than they want a balanced budget, and that they prefer balancing the budget to cutting taxes. So what are we getting? Cuts in Medicare and taxes.

I was also right that special interests would be involved in planning the bills. But - oof! -

I got the interests wrong.

The interests that tried to protect the social safety net and the environment were shot down in flames, if indeed they ever got in the door (which I doubt). Instead, the AMA got some Medicare concessions and the bankers got some student loan concessions and the corporations got a lot of environmental concessions.

The House and Senate are currently reconciling the rather small differences between their budget bills. Shortly the bill will be sent to the president, who can veto it.

We'll see.

Now's the time to get flu shot

Older Americans are urged to take precautions against the pneumonia and flu epidemics that come with the approach of winter. The cost of both pneumonia vaccinations and flu shots may be covered by Medicare Part B (medical insurance) for those age 65 or older.

Statistics show older people are twice as likely as younger people to get pneumonia or flu. The Public Health Service recommends an annual flu shot for people over age 65, even if they are generally healthy.

Typically, shots are given in the fall or winter. The best time to get a flu shot is mid-icare beneficiaries do not need a doctor's prescription or supervision to have this vaccination covered by Medicare Part B. And, beneficiaries do not pay a deductible or coinsurance amount.

Generally, the cost will be paid if the vaccine is provided at a doctor's office or by a hospital, skilled nursing facility, home health agency, rural health clinic, federally qualified health center, outpatient physical therapy provider, a comprehensive outpatient rehabil-itation facility, or health maintenance organization

Pointe of faith

The Pointe's Dr. Paul Zavell has been a practicing pediatrician for more than 37 years may put him in the his-tory books happened 4,000 miles away and involved someone else's patient.

Last year Zavell joined the Knights of Malta, a lay Catholic religious group that regularly takes people judged as incurably ill to visit the shrine at Lourdes in France, where miraculous cures have been reported. "This past April my wife Patricia and I went there with about 250 Knights and their spouses, and we took with us 35 malades (French for 'patients')," he said. Zavell registered as a doctor and was invited to a meeting the next day at which he and some 25 other physicians from France, Germany and England discussed the case of a Dublin man of about 35 who had been diagnosed with multiple sclerosis 18 years earlier.

"Since then he had recurring episodes of MS but in 1989 a severe attack lost him use of his left side and his left eye," said Zavell.

"At that time his doctors said he'd never recover that vision and he would probably die if he had another attack."

The man's wife persuaded him to go to Lourdes and he arrived later that year in a wheelchair, where he found the grotto of St. Bernadette too noisy to pray in because of all the other pilgrims. He also tried the baths, but without any luck, Zavell reported.

They returned to the shrine at midnight, where he started to pray," said Zavell. "Within a minute, a feeling of warmth started in his hand and foot, traveled up his extremities and the use of his left arm and vision in his left eye were completely restored."

Back in Dublin, the patient's doctors found him cured and were unable to explain it, said Zavell, adding that additional studies in a hospital also found him normal.

There have been 65 authenticated 'miraculous cures' since the time of St. Bernadette," he said. "In order for a cure to be OKd by the Catholic Church it has to go through a process where the person must appear before three independent medical committees whose doctors must all be able to say they cannot confirm or deny it is a miracle.

Then the patient must go to two different specialists, both of whom must agree he is cured. "Finally, the case must be authenticated by a canonical committee.

'We were the third independent medical committee for this patient, and the rest of the process may take two to five years. "If this cure is judged a miracle it will be number 66 and my name will go on the record as one of the examining doctors.'

Bittersweet memory

The makeshift sign someone stuck on the door of the dark and empty former Sanders store in the Village last week was illustrated with drawings of two kids crying, but the hand-lettered message said it all: "Good bye, Sanders, we'll miss you."

the Henry Ford Hospice.

"It went very well — we were lucky," says Kathy, a receptionist at Century 21 who is studying for a degree in physical therapy. Because of the widespread heat wave this summer, the couple did much of their hiking early in the morning or late at night, and a record drought in Maine made finding water difficult.

"We finished at the end of the trail Sept. 21, by watching the sunrise from the top of Mt. Katahdin in Maine, the first spot in the United States that the light touches," Kathy says, adding that this involved a 4,000-foot climb.

Would she recommend hiking as a good form of physical therapy, FYI asks.

"Yes," she says without reservation.

You've got to love it.

Pressing engagement

The call to Pointe Printing in the Park usually starts out with the party on the line saying they want some tickets, says office manager Nancy

"We print a lot of admission tickets for events, so we start to write up the order with name, address, phone number," she says. The catch comes when the party is asked how many tickets they want (the usual printing run for local events averages 200 or so, but it can be thousands) and the answer that comes back is something like

"two."
"That's when we know they just want to go see something playing at the Masonic Temple Auditorium," says Nancy, laughing. "Our phone number is almost the same as theirs." Sorry, you can't catch The Japanese Devil Drummers at 15201 Kercheval. But the shop does have a great collection of odd-sized note pads on sale.

Bryant backs single bill on school choice

mong Wayne County school chiefs as well as Lansing legislators, revisions in the school code passed last week by the state Senate are running into serious opposition.

Rep. William R. Bryant of Grosse Pointe Farms, chairman of the House Education Committee, told the Grosse Pointe News he hopes to separate the schools-of-choice issue from the Senate's major school legislation.

By putting it into a separate bill, Bryant hopes to avoid some of the controversies already swirling about the schools-of-choice issue as his committee takes up the wide-ranging school bill approved by the Senate.

However, the Grosse Pointe Republican also objects to the Senate removal of the limit on the number of charter schools that universities and community colleges can sponsor.

His point is that with an unlimited number of new charter schools, the sponsoring agencies would lack the staff and ability to adequately monitor their performance, which the agencies must pledge to do when proposing the schools.

Other controversial measures in the Senate bill, in Bryant's opinion, would provide for approval of home schooling; would permit parents to preview all school textbooks, attend classes, and take videotapes and audiotapes of all classes.

The bill would also allow an individual with a bachelor's degree and five years of experience related to a school subject to teach without certification in grades 9 through 12.

As reported in last week's issue of the Grosse Pointe News, the superintendents of Wayne County schools opposed the schools-of-choice proposal in the Senate bill, and found other faults with it.

Grosse Pointe Superintendent Edward J. Shine missed the county superintendents' meeting but said his local school board has not yet discussed the Senatepassed bill or the schools-of-choice issue in

EDITORIAL

However, Shine, at an earlier superintendents' meeting in September, drafted a proposed statement for the second session expressing concern about the proposal on grounds it was premature and had not yet been researched.

Shine's draft did point out that most districts, like Grosse Pointe, already permit some choice in their own districts. It also expressed Shine's concern that questions about foundation grants, transportation aid, and similar issues should be answered before the proposal becomes law.

The majority of the 34 Wayne County superintendents, however, went beyond his draft to express concern that the proposed "inter-district schools-of-choice legislation will foster even greater racial, social and economic segregation.

As reported earlier, the association also criticized the legislation on other grounds, some of which are similar to Bryant's views of the Senate proposal.

When his committee takes up the Senate bill this week, Bryant expects to offer a separate bill containing a minimal form of school choice.

He believes his bill is needed to protect the people involved in student shifts from being charged with discrimination or segregation in federal court.

In his view, the Senate bill would also force the Legislature to deal with the funding of transportation aid for special education pupils who might enroll in distant districts or even different intermediate districts.

Bryant says both GOP and Democratic caucuses want to protect the special ed students from being disadvantaged under the proposed legislation.

Overall, however, Bryant said that the Senate bill revamping the state school code is "not bad" because it retains many proposals that he favors.

They include requirements that schools adopt a school improvement process, submit an annual report, issue a state-endorsed diploma, meet the accreditation requirement, and offer schools a model core curriculum, instead of mandating it.

But we won't know for sure what is in the final legislation until the House has spoken and compromised with the Senate on the controversies involved. At present, Bryant does not expect his committee to complete its work on revamping the bill until about Dec. 6.

Remember elections on Nov. 7

ext Tuesday, Nov. 7, voters in four of the Grosse Pointes will go to the polls to vote on candidates for mayor, city council and municipal

Most of the contests are centered in Grosse Pointe Farms, the City of Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Woods.

Grosse Pointe Park lacks contests for mayor and city council but has two candidates for municipal judge.

In all contests, the Grosse Pointe News has interviewed the candidates, with one exception.

The only candidate not interviewed. Thomas LeFevre, running for the Woods council, failed to respond to numerous requests and then, we were told, went out of town until Nov. 1.

These are the News' choices, as indicated last week:

For Farms council: Edward Gaffney. Ron Kneiser, Peter Waldmeir, Edward Wilberding.

For the City council: Peter LaFond, Stephen L. Sholty, Larry Dowers.
For City municipal judge: Stan C.

For Woods mayor: Robert Novitke.

For Woods council: Eric Steiner, Joseph Dansbury (third council post unre-commended). For Park municipal judge: Carl F. Jarboe.

No major issues seemed to drive these campaigns, although we received three letters through Monday on two matters. Two from the Park complained about the endorsement of the incumbent judge by the mayor and council. One from the Woods objected to the 76 percent increase in the water bill.

Since this is the last week before the voting, the News followed its usual policy of not publishing campaign letters at a time when they could not be answered prior to the election.

However, I would like to clarify some figures that were used based upon my handout at the presentation. The last column of the harbor budget (1995-96) needs further explanation.

In Mr. Chapman's opening paragraph, he stated that marina rates "in-creased 10 percent for the 1996 season, after 5 percent increases the previous two years.'

This was not the case. Boat well rates increased 20 percent in 1994; 5 percent in 1995; and after an initial request by the administration of a 5 percent increase in 1996, it was increased to 10 percent.

That is a 35 percent increase in just three years. It was this escalation of rates, oblivious to the average inflation rate of 2.6 percent, and the boaters' $42,600 (21 percent of the 1996 budget) earmarked for the general fund that has angered boaters.

Again, on behalf of the boaters at the Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park, I would like to thank the Grosse Pointe News for its coverage and interest in community matters.

Of lions and life lessons

Right about the time my father died my daughter developed an obsession for "The Lion King."

Over and over again she'd demand to see the full-length animated feature film about the lion cub who blames himself for his father's death, runs away, and then, after learning many life lessons, returns to avenge his father's murder and reclaim his rightful place as

All that is way over her head, of course. She just thinks the lion and his outcast friends are funny. Besides, the music is upbeat, the colors are bright, the action is never-ending and the animation takes your breath away.

After two or three viewings of the movie, she was hooked, and ever since has signaled her desire to see it with a shrieking declaration: "King."

On the first note of the opening theme, as the black screen bursts to life with a sunrise over the Serengeti, she screams "King" and points to the roaring lions in utter amazement.

I'm so amazed that a nearly 2-year-old child's attention could be sustained for the 80plus-minute movie, that I decide to watch it myself.

The significance of the story hits me at a particulary vulnerable time. Two months and a week nearly to the day my father died unexpectedly and it's ironic to think that a children's story could help me sort out such a complicated event.

The night my father died, after we left the hospital realizing there was nothing more anyone could do, the family gathered back at his house.

The reality of what had happened struck me as I began to look around at all of his possessions. No longer were they "dad's things" left in their usual places to be retrieved by him the next day. From that moment forward, they were "things that dad left behind."

I Say Shirley A. McShane

His lunch for the next day was prepared, packed and waiting on the kitchen counter. In the yard, his garden tools were scattered on the lawn, and the sprinkler, forgotten in the panic earlier that evening, was spraying water onto the saturated earth supporting ready-tobe-picked tomatoes and peppers. Inside the house, everywhere I turned, I saw signs of him:

His books lining the shelves in the den, symbols of his hobbies, interests and obsessions over the course of a lifetime. On the dining room table, a half-dozen envelopes stuffed with color pictures just retrieved from the drugstore chronicle his trip only a month earlier to Greece and Turkey. Next to the pic-tures, in a paper bag handed to us by a hospital nurse, his wristwatch and wallet.

As I searched for the quintessential object that would define who he was, something to take home to remind me that he had

beings. Once we die, those things might be regarded by those who knew us as symbolic our personalities, tastes, quirks, talents and weaknesses. But to those who didn't know us, they're just "things" to either be claimed, sold or discarded.

I spent several weeks asking myself what it was I was supposed to learn from this experience, this life lesson. What facets of who my father was should I carry forward and what should I bury? Is it better to put the experience in the past or to carry a piece of it with me?

Then one Saturday afternoon as my daughter cried out for "King," I joined the movie in progress and found the protagonist lion in a confrontation with a wise old baboon.

Bitter about his father's death, the lion has turned his and I can learn from his mis-back on the past. The baboon takes. But most of all, I should existed, I realized it could not urges the lion to face his duty not forget.

be found. We spend our whole to the rest of the pride. He also insists that the lion's father lives collecting "things" that insists that the lion's father define who we are as living really isn't dead. As proof, he prods the lion to peer into a pool of water. The frustrated lion sees only his reflection. Look closer, the balxon urges, and you will see that he is alive because he lives in you.

And so, a children's tale gives me the answer I was looking for all along. The spirit of someone who is gone cannot be found in the objects he left behind, it can only be found in the people he knew, influenced and touched.

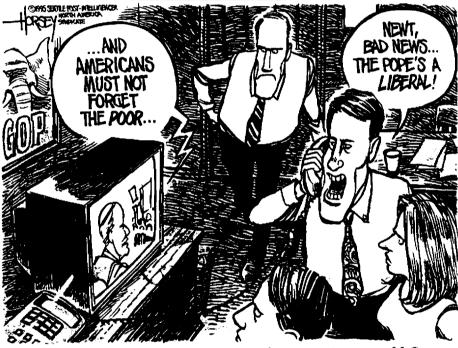

I stopped looking through drawers and bookshelves and photo albums and started looking at myself. Most of who I am today is based on his influence, both good and bad. Rather than prop up an old photograph on the mantel or leaf through an old book, I can take the good and pass it along and I can toss out the bad. I can carry with me the good advice and knowledge he shared

Hikers are home

Randy Aardema and Kathy Gayman are glad to be back in the Pointes after completing a 2,158-mile hike across the entire Appalachian Trail that began in March and was dedicated to raising pledges for the Henry Ford Hospice.

"It went very well — we were lucky," says Kathy, a receptionist at Century 21 who is studying for a degree in physical therapy. Because of the widespread heat wave this summer, the couple did much of their hiking early in the morning or late at night, and a record drought in Maine made finding water difficult.

Pressing engagement

The call to Pointe Printing in the Park usually starts out with the party on the line saying they want some tickets, office manager Nancy Tallman.

We print a lot of admission tickets for events, so we start to write up the order with name, address, phone number," she says. The catch comes when the party is asked how many tickets they want (the usual printing run for local events averages 200 or so, but it can be thousands) and the answer that comes back is something like the water system.

'That's when we know they just want to go see something playing at the Masonic Temple Auditorium," says Nancy, laughing "Our phone number is almost the same as theirs."

Did you know that the cost of some of the miscellaneous items on your water bill are driven by water usage? You have control over that! Here are some of the ways you can control water usage in your home.

- Install a water saving shower head.
- Have new washers put on your faucets.
- Check toilets to see if they are leaking.
- When buying a new washing machine, carefully compare water usage.
- If you have a sprinkling system, set the controls to deliver the largest drop of water possible, instead of a fine spray.
- Water your lawn before 10 a.m. and after 6 p.m., not in the heat of the
- Install a drip system for watering flower beds. This saves much water and time.
- Consider the use of a new concept in landscaping known as Xeriscaping (the use of plant material requiring less water).

Manufactured

crisis

To the Editor:

Apparently, Mr. Durant is not a student of Michigan history.

In an article dated Sept. 21, "State board's mission: Reform education," Mr. Durant presents a view of reform as if his components would dramatically increase the quality of education in our state. I submit that this plan was offered in 1990 as Public Acts 25 and 197. Schools have been improving the quality and delivery of public education as a result of this legislation.

The public agrees with me as evidenced by the state board's own survey taken in July.

Nearly two-thirds of parents responding said that they would not avail themselves of choice even if transportation were paid for at public expense. Eighty-four percent said that the rules applied to public schools should also apply to charter schools. Fifty percent rated their public schools with an A or B. Sixty-eight percent said the quality of education had improved or remained unchanged. Sixty-five percent gave a confidence rating of A or B to their teachers. The governor re-ceived a rating of 40 percent followed by the state board 32 percent, and Legislature at 22 percent.

In light of the above, how can you move headlong into charter, choice, vouchers, when there is no evidence that those programs currently in existence are any more successful than public schools.

The media and politicians have continued to portray U.S. education as failing when facts do not support this "manufactured crisis." In the October 1994 issue of Money magazine, the report concluded that the top 10 percent of public schools were superior to the best private and parochial schools in America. Dropout rate is down for the 12th consecutive year. The graduation rate of 89 percent exceeds all other industrialized countries in the world — suggested reading, "The Manufactured Crisis," by D. Berliner & B. Biddle.

Public school education is the "cornerstone" of American democracy.

What connection do "cornerstone schools" and school board president Clark Durant have in common?

Kids in danger
in the Woods?

To the Editor:
Recent events have provoked us to write this letter and bring to everyone's attention a very serious situation in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Children (our kids) in Grosse Pointe Woods encounter danger daily as they walk to and from their public schools. We have children who attend Mason Elementary School and Parcells Middle School. Access to these schools is now extremely dangerous. Automobile accidents and fatalities and street stalkers have made it impossible for our children to walk to school.

An Oct. 17 automobile accident in front of Mason school (in which a speeding truck killed the driver of an oncoming car) could have been far worse if the trucker had plowed into children just leaving school.

Also, last May one of our daughters was confronted by a stalker. Luckily she was able to flee. Upon reporting this to the Grosse Pointe Woods police, we were informed that this was a common occurrence and little was being done to stop these criminals to stop these criminals

Repeated communications with the principals of Mason and Parcells and local media have not brought about results. Also, dialogue with the Grosse Pointe Woods public safety office has been unproductive.

It is our hope that bringing public awareness to these dangerous situations will bring about immediate and appropriate action from the Grosse Pointe Public School System and the Grosse Pointe Woods public safety office.

We need a safe environment now!

Residents ignored over Staples

To the Editor:

At its meeting of Oct. 16, the Grosse Pointe City Council reviewed the Staples proposal. They took the position that they could do nothing about the usage which would be made of the Ram's Horn building but only its site plan.

This is despite the city code which states clearly that "adverse effects" of a plan must be considered before it is approved.

An overwhelming majority of an audience of nearly a hundred spoke of the many adverse effects connected with the plan: decreased property values; in-creased traffic, pollution, and crime; insufficient parking; and the effects of continual expansion. They also were concerned about the future of Grosse Pointe merchandising with the possibility of more warehouse discount stores following in the wake of this move. Grosse Pointe retailers also voiced concerns about the impact of a national chain on their markets.

But these concerns were ignored and disdained. One councilman referred to "your 600 petitions" as "only 13 percent of the vote." Another rejected your concerns as "just those of disgruntled neighbors." and a third dismissed all evidence of possible problems as "pure conjecture."

Three attempts to call for an independent traffic study were rejected. No councilman offered any positive benefits which this move would bring to the community. In fact, every indication suggested that the council's concern was solely for the buyer and the seller's benefit.

In the end, the council voted unanimously to approve the Staples site proposal with its 6,000-square-foot expansion.

Further action, it would seem, must move to the ballot box. The council demonstrated disdain for your concerns and your voices and a disregard of a significant number of the voting residents of Grosse Pointe.

A polarizer can add impact to your shots

A polarizing filter is a must in your list of photographic equipment. Few photo accesso ries can add impact to your shots like a polarizer and I strongly recommend that every serious photographer have one. An investment of $15 to $20 will put this exciting filter on your lens.

Polarizers do a number of things that are useful to a photographer: 1) darken blue skies, 2) remove reflections from nonmetallic surfaces, 3) penetrate haze, and 4) increase color saturation.

Before touching on these uses, let's find out how a polarizing filter works. When a light ray hits a nonmetallic surface such as glass or water, part of it is reflected completely in one direction This is called "polarized light." Light from a blue sky is polarized because it is reflected off particles in the atmosphere. A polarizer filter consists of two pieces of glass that rotate relative to one another. When the rotation is 90 degrees, the polarizer will block the "polarized light" in the sky. Because less light now reaches the film, the result in the final picture will be a darker blue sky.

A polarizer filter works for both color and black-and-white film. To obtain the maximum darkening effect, try to take pictures at a right angle to the sun. And in black-and-white, use a polarizer in combination with a red filter to produce a completely black sky. Further, because you look through the lens of your SLR camera, you can see the darkening effect happening as you rotate your polarizer. Remember, a polarizer will not darken an overcast

A polarizing filter will reduce reflections on non metallic surfaces. Unwanted reflections on a lake or disturbing glare in a store window are good examples. The degree of control on removing reflections depends upon the camera-to-subject angle and the amount of rotation of the filter. Often, an unwanted reflection can be completely eliminated.

As in darkening the sky, what you see is what you'll get with your SLR camera. You can actually see the reflections being eliminated.

Color saturation can be increased with a polarizer. To begin with, there are two types of light reflected by most surfaces: reflections are neutral (no color) and tend to dilute the diffuse reflections (those that give objects their color). A polarizer will absorb the specular reflections (those that give objects specular and diffuse. Specular their color). A polarizer will absorb the specular reflections, allowing the diffuse, colored light through to the film. The result is an increase in color satura-

As with most filters, be aware that a polarizer has a filter factor. In this case, an increase in exposure of about two stops is required. But because your SLR has through-the-lens metering, the exposure adjustment is automatically taken care of so you will be better able to concentrate on improving your photography.

1 million kids to be fingerprinted

More children will be better protected against abduction through a national child identification program that will reach one million children by the end of this year. If you would like to have the IOF Forsesters ChildPrint Program come to your school, store, day care center, fair or community event, please call toll-free at 1 800-922-4-IOF.

The "One Million Children" campaign is part of the IOF Foresters ChildPrint program. Sponsored by the IOF Foresters, the program allows parents to keep up-to-date vital information in the event of a missing child.

Through the IOF ChildPrint are Program, communities are given the opportunity to organize free fingerprinting events in their area. As part of the program, an identification card with fingerprints is completed for each child and given to parents for their home records. To participate, a parent or guardian must accompany the child.

"This crime prevention program gives the police an opportunity to act promptly in the event of a missing child," says Dennis Ray Martin, president of the National Association of Chiefs of Police. "Parents need to be prepared to provide law enforcement officials with vital information about their children," continues Martin. "Time is a vital part of the process. Every hour that goes by gives us less of a chance to find the child.

Approximately 800,000 children in the United States were reported missing in 1994.

Papers do print good news about today's kids

By Daniel A. Ludwig

Most of us are guilty of complaining at one time or another that there's very little good news in the newspapers these days. Such is the nature of news that when most activities or events transpire as planned, that's not news. Conversely, when something unexpected, unusual or tragic oc-curs, most people want to know about it - that's news. There are lots of exceptions to this so-called negative-news rule. I'd like to point out one of them in particular. You may, in fact, have read about this good news in your local paper already, based on the scores of newspaper clippings we're continuing to receive at The American Legion National Headquarters from around the country.

Newspapers such as The Sedalia Democrat in Missouri; The Daily Breeze in Torrance, California; the Greenwich Time in Connecticut; the Gillette News-Record in Wyoming; The Morning Herald in Hagers-town, Maryland; the Las Vegas Sun in Nevada; the Des Moines Register; The Houston Chronicle; The Washington Post; and The New York Times, to name

What did these and so many other newspapers throughout the United States report recently that's such good news? The answer to that question is a program known as The American Legion Boys Nation, created in 1946 to introduce high school youths to the struc ture and function of the federal government through an annual week-long program in Washington, D.C.

Ninety-six young men from across the country gathered in the nation's capital in late July for this year's American Legion Boys Nation.

Allow me to introduce two of them: Rick Lam Jr., 17, of Tecumseh, Oklahoma; and James Scott Wong, 17, of Randolph, New Jersey

Rick and James were elected American Legion Boys Nation president and vice president, respectively, by their fellow del-

Rick is an Eagle Scout who's held several offices in his high school including freshman class president, junior class secretary and student council representative. He plans to attend college in Oklahoma.

James is president of his high school's debate and Spanish clubs. He hopes to attend West Point, and he has an interest in politics. If James does throw his hat in the ring someday, he won't be the first American Legion Boys Nation delegate to do so.

These young menand women are the bright hope of America's future. And, that's very good news.

Next time someone com plains that there's never any good news in the newspaper, tell them about Rick Lam and James Wong. Tell them about The American Legion Boys Nation program.

And, tell them you read it right here, in your local paper. Daniel A. Ludwig is national commander of The American Legion, the mation's largest vet-

By The Federal Communications

Citizens across the nation can help the FCC in its review of children's educational and informational television programming and make sure these shows are easier to find.

The FCC, the government agency that regulates the tele- ther there's enough educational vision industry, is seeking com-ments on a Notice of Proposed Rule Making (NPRM) that would establish regulations for broadcasters that would help ensure an adequate supply of children's educational and informational programming.

A portion of the NPRM proposes that there be a minimum ments. of children's educational and informational programming (three hours per week and up to five hours a week), and that stations identify programs as educational and informational at the time they are aired and provide identifying information to publishers of programming guides noting when these programs will be aired.

Petite Hyundai Accent scores points for space and economy

Looking very up-to-theminute with its fashionable exterior finishes and rounded lines, the Hyundai Accent invites attention.

A couple of its best attributes are actually not among its more noticeable features. The Korean-built front-drive subcompact has one of the most pleasing cabins of the small cars on the market today. And the driver can enjoy it with fewer interruptions because with 36-mpg highway economy the little car doesn't need constant re-fueling. This is something to think about as the cold, windy, wet days of another Michigan winter approach.

On the down side: You may have trouble finding your little Hyundai in the average parking lot. It's

The Accent was introduced head room, we wouldn't as an all-new car earlier this year. It actually replaces the veteran Hyundai Excel, a subcompact that had been in this market since the mid-1980s. The Accent goes up against other mighty-mites like the Ford Aspire, Geo Metro and Toyota Tercel.

Accent is available as a coupe or sedan. Driver and front-passenger air bags are standard. Each car weighs about 2,000 pounds. The fourcylinder engine has a 5speed manual as standard transmission; a 4-speed automatic is available. Front brakes are disc, rear are drum. ABS is available but not standard. Both body styles have great trunks.

There are seat belts for five in the sedan. While the rear bench is very adequate, with good knee room and recommend stuffing three people there unless they are young enough to still get away with trick-or-treating.

Here's the deal. With a small, entry-level sedan or coupe like this, don't expect amenities like power locks and doors and outside mirrors on a model that begins at well under $10,000. You may be happy to discover that you can live without them rather nicely. The Accent is so compact that just about any adult - including folks without a boardinghouse reach (isn't that a great expression?) reach all four locks and all four window cranks and inside door handles from the driver's seat.

Let's talk for a moment about "small" and "underpowered." As a one-time VW Beetle owner, I like small." I'll even admit to having picked out a red Plymouth Horizon with a 1.6liter engine for family transportation not that many years ago. I know underpowered." On today's highways, with speeds sometimes averaging around 80 mph, I'm not too keen on "underpowered. Unfortunately, it often accompanies "small" and "economical."

The Hyundai Accent, with its 92-hp, 12-valve, 1.5-liter four, will keep up on the Interstate. It just takes time to get there. And don't expect any miracles when trying to make lane changes at high speeds. There isn't much ooomph left, particularly with the automatic transmission. You may, however, make up for perceived lost time when the Mercedes or Lexus or Jag that blew your doors off is busy filling its belly with premium unleaded at a freeway service plaza as you cruise past at an appropriate one exhaust and two intake valves per cylinder. Hyundai developed the engine for the Accent, which was only introduced to the U.S. buying public for the first time this year. The Korean company has been striving for more independence from Japanese companies in its engineering, and for high quality standards in its products.

Most will find the Accent's instrument panel welldesigned and pleasing to look at and use. The interior is nicely finished with attractive upholstery, easy-touse door handles and window cranks and plenty of Hyundai entered the North American market in the early 1980s by way of Canada. Today Hyundai has some 500 dealerships in 49 states. The company said after it announced plans to market in the United States in 1985, it received as many as 7,200 applications from prospective dealers. In a staggered or tiered approach, the first dealerships here opened only in selected states, most of them in the western half of the country.

Since then the company has built a new national headquarters on an 18-acre site in Fountain Valley, Calif. The Western Region office, California Design Center and Hyundai Motor Finance headquarters also are housed there.

golden, AAA Michigan says vehicle-deer crashes remain a big-bucks expense in the state (pun intended) with the auto club paying out some $10.4 million in property damage claims last year.

Numbers tell the story:

• A record number of accidents involving vehicles and deer occurred last year, with every county showing an increase.

• In 1994, there were 56,666 vehicle/deer crashes in Michigan, a 19 percent increase over the 47,813 reported in 1993.

· Five people died in such accidents in 1994, the same as a year earlier.

• There were 2,040 injuries reported in 1994, up from 1,712 the previous year - a 19 percent increase

- Deliberately look for deer. Your visual search should include well down the roadway and far off to each side
- · Vehicle/deer crashes most often occur on paved local and country roads, but freeways are not exempt.
- Use extra caution when driving in the hours before dawn and just after dusk.
- · If you see a deer, slow down, drive cautiously and assume others are nearby.
- Should a deer dart into the road in front of you, do not take unsafe evasive action, such as swerving. It is usually safer to strike the deer than another object, such as a tree or
- Be alert for shining eyes at night. Your headlights can "freeze" the deer. Flash your crashes in the state last year, "freeze" the deer. Flash your 56,666 (or 14 percent) involved headlights on and off well in advance to encourage the deer to move from the roadway.

Restoring self-esteem can stop teen suicide

By Victor Bloom, M.D. Psychotherapist and Psychiatrist Grosse Pointe Park

Nothing is so tragic as the life of a young person, who has not yet really or fully lived, to be cut short. And there is a certain horrific stigma when it becomes public knowledge that a premature death was from suicide.

Suicide conjures up all the negative connotations of mental illness in the family, the "dysfunctional" family and sin. It is often considered to be an act of cowardice, escaping life or "copping-out."

Such attitudes show a lack of understanding and a lack of empathy. A person with adequate self-esteem and self-confidence, a positive and outgoing attitude, can hardly realize the suffering of a teenager with severe depression. The most severe depression is due to a double jeopardy, negative psychology coupled with a genetic biochemical imbalance.

The individual who is doubly handicapped suffers great anguish and despair within. I say "within" advisedly, as many afflicted with depression learn to put on a happy face and seem perfectly normal. They are often considered to be the "nicest" people, as they have learned how to say what people want to hear and show what people want to see.

But they contain their demons in a box that is like a coffin, and when alone they are haunted by horrible jack-in-theboxes, dark feelings and impulses they can share with no one, and so they feel isolated, alienated, not belonging to the rest of humanity, which seems to be going along with gaiety and confidence.

Often these severely depressed individuals become addicted to substances such as alcohol and cocaine, and there is the ever-present consolation of marijuana. These are self-medications for feelings that are experienced as intolerable.

If not for the substance, life feels like it is not worth living. As addicts, there is yet another stigma, that of the "junkie." Their reputations fall with the lowest of the low, even though the habit may be relatively mild. But in self-medicating, the teenager removes himself from the professional help he or she greatly needs.

In order to prevent suicide, early intervention for depression is advisable, and a psychiatrist is best suited to help the family evalute which of the many treatment possibilities would be most helpful.

He or she can provide prescription medications and a variety of psychotherapy and counseling approaches, from individual and group psychotherapy to family counseling. The psychiatrist may also refer to Alcoholics Anonymous or other self-help groups for alcohol and other drug dependencies and addictions. AA and other selfhelp programs are very effective for some and totally ineffective for others, and yet the cost is minimal and the resources great, over time

Then there are the 20- or 30-day rehabilitation and detox programs, which are helpful to a few more. There are also residential treatment centers where patients would be inmates for months at a time, with comprehensive programs of individual and group therapy, and rehabilitation resources.

Psychotherapy may be short or longterm, supportive or intensive.

Supportive therapies aim to maintain the status quo, and usually consist of short sessions once a week or less or even less often. Intensive psychotherapy, for those who have the motivation and capacity for it, seek more profound changes in the personality, which work to prevent recurrences of depression or relapses into addiction. This means more than one long session per week, sometimes extending for a period of years. It aims to resolution of unconscious unresolved conflicts. Its basis is an evolved working relationship which seeks to restore trust and interpersonal skills, which are necessary to self-esteem and social functioning.

When resolution is effected and insight obtained, the person regains self-esteem and self-confidence and his or her unique creativity is released. Oftentimes the teenager is a frustrated writer, artist, musician or actor. The person will find a constructive niche in society and become a productive citizen.

This is a better choice than a premature interruption of life, but involves a considerable investment of time and energy, and persistence in a painful, difficult and protracted process.

But depression itself is a signal of struggle, and that struggle can be resolved by either life or death. Most of us would say, difficult as it is, life is the answer.

There are those who might consider me a klutz. I perfer to think of myself as "dexterity handicapped." I have this prob-

My mind envisions all sorts of projects and artsy ideas. I can actually see the finished product in my mind. However, my hands betray me. To be blunt, I am simply not a crafty continue to make an attempt at creating an original product. It doesn't help that I'm short of patience, yet stub-born enough to proceed, regardless of the outcome.

It started early. I knitted squares for afghans for the soldiers during the Big War. That was relatively simple, but when I started knitting them socks in high school I had to summon help when it was time to turn the heel. Because my friends were expert and kind, I never did learn.

I completed a few sweaters, with help, and decided, in the future, to knit only baby clothes — smaller was instant gratification. That was years ago and there are still boxes of unfinished projects in the attic.

Some 30 years ago, I was involved in a volunteer project where we made Christmas ornaments and tree skirts out of felt. Mine were mostly glued instead of sewn, but we still have that skirt hauled out for the holidays annually.

It was my one success.

My mother gave me a sewing machine when I was a young bride and I never did master the thing. The last time I approached it I tripped over the cord and broke my wrist. Is there some message here?

Not a crafty person

There have been various attempts at needlepoint, most of which were finished by an accomplished friend. My efforts are never allowed to be viewed from the back, as I never mastered the basketweave method and mine are full of holes

It has been years since I approached a handiwork project. Last week I found myself in a craft-type store in search of picture frames. I was assaulted by all of the do-it-yourself items available and the marketing display seduced me.

I love carousel horses and when I spotted one in paper mache, I envisioned it covered with ivy and flowers. I bought the horse, a garland of ivy and some silk flowers.

Thinking I was innovative, I decided that the easiest way to apply the ivy would be to cut the leaves individually and put them in holes which I would make in the horse.

Out came the rusty old ice pick and I began the exercise of venting my frustration as I stabbed the horse 500 times. I managed to puncture myself only four times and only broke one of the horse's legs. A glue gun, the obvious choice for most, was out of the question. I knew the burns would be extensive and the ice pick was a catharsis.

Down another aisle I spotted a bust of Abe Lincoln. This I had to have. A member of the family is a "Lincolnophile" and this would be great for a present. Never mind that Abe was made of powdery plaster. Surely any fool could fix that.

Had previous failures taught me anything? Heck no! Linclon stashed in my shopping cart, I headed to the faux paint department. In a matter of minutes Abe would look like he had been carved in marble

Impatient, impulsive me just didn't know when to stop. I sponged that poor bust until it was one glob of dark shadows. The feather used for marbling refused to behave in my clumsy hands. The pattern looked like bad spillage. The minutes turned to hours punctuated with some frustrated verbal outbursts

The finished project looked like a charcoal remnant from "Sanford and Son." It now resides in the garage, until I have the courage to try again. I know I can't stop here. Now that I think of it, I remember finding a tangle of pink yarn on some old knitting needles shortly before my mother died. She told me that they were the booties she was knitting for our first child, who was, at that time, 28 years

A MATTER OF TIMING (BELTS)

A timing belt should be replaced on a periodic basis; putting the job off risks considerable damage to some engines. Why? The timing belt runs from the crankshoff to the camshoff(s), which open and close the valves. On some engines, more durable timing chains are used. Others make use of rubber timing belts which, although less durable, offer the advantages of being less expensive, lighter, quieter, and never need lubrication. If the belt were to head the camshoft would and never need Jubrication. If the belt were to break, the camshaft would stop turning, but inertia would keep the flywheel, crankshaft, connecting rods, and pistons moving. On a free-wheeling engine, this poses no problem because there is enough clearance to keep the pistons from hitting open valves. On an interference engine, however, bent valves and broken pistons may result.

Checking and routinely replacing your belts can help prevent breakdown on the road and much inconvenience. If you are looking for folks who know cars inside and out, you can count on us. Juvenile justice reforms can benefit youths and society

The one issue virtually everyone agrees on is that Michigan's juvenile crime problem has gotten significantly worse in recent years, and we need to find new ways of dealing with it.
It is hard to turn on the TV or pick up a newspaper without learning about yet another shocking, violent crime that has been committed by teenagers. Statistics show that between 1983 and 1993 the juvenile arrest rate for serious, violent crimes increased 36 percent. The juvenile murder rate skyrocketed by 160 percent.

So what are we going to do about it? The state Senate is working on the problem right now as we consider the administration's juvenile justice proposal. The proposal has been multi-bill package.

The governor calls the cenber of the Senate Judiciary Committee, where the legislation was sent for its initial review, I have had the opportunity to carefully scrutinize this proposal. I think it would be more appropriately named the the juvenile kills someone. I want to address the problem before someone gets killed. My approach also recognizes that it is very expensive to put a kid in jail at the age of 14 and have the state foot the bill for the duration of the sentence.

What I am proposing as part of the juvenile justice reform legislation is a "dual" sentencing system. A juvenile who introduced in the Senate as a commits a serious crime and comes before the court would be sentenced as both a youth terpiece of his proposal "adult and an adult. This is the young crime, adult time." As a memoffender's opportunity to either offender's opportunity to either take the road to treatment and rehabilitation, or end up on the road to prison.

If the young person meets all the terms and conditions imposed on him or her under their juvenile sentence, their "lock 'em up and throw away adult sentence would be res-the key proposal." adult sentence would be res-cinded. If the juvenile does not cinded. If the juvenile does not Certainly I believe that we meet those terms and conditions, the adult sentence would would serve the sentence.
This "dual" sentence pro-it helps to save young lives. It also helps to level the playing

Communities treat juvenile crimes differently. Some impose a community service requirement on juvenile offenders while others impose harsher sentences. Consequently, some young people find they are with a record that ruins their life and makes it difficult for them to find even a menial job. That situation too often results in the feeling that they have no alternative but to turn to more serious crimes to get money. Everyone loses when

We need a better system than we currently have for dealing with juvenile crime. My dual sentencing proposal should be part of the new system now being developed. It is tough and effective, it provides needed options for judges and juvenile offenders, it saves money and lives and it protects society.

Students in over their heads with assignment

North student Mike Schuster, above, demonstrates how deep a hole he and partner Jamie Buiglino dug in search of treasures. The class used shovels, picks and sliters to sort through the earth for anything of interest. After the dig, the students displayed their work and wrote

By Shirley A. McShane Staff Writer Nobody found dinosaur hones, or a hidden box of rare jewels or any other buried treasures during an Oct. 26 amateur excavation on a vacant lot overlooking Lake

St. Clair. What the group of anthropology students from Grosse Pointe North High School did find was a lot of old building materials, bricks in all shapes and sizes, bent pieces of pipe and wire, chips of porcelain and tile, a glass shard from a perfume bottle, a weathered baseball, a yel-low piece of plastic from a Lego set, a sliver of blue willow china and a shred of newspaper from the Reagan administration.

Each year North anthropology teacher Andy Montague takes his students to a site around the Detroit area, with the property owners' permission, and lets the students put into practice what they have been discussing in the classroom.

The excavation began around 9 a.m. on a plot of land at the end of Christine Drive in Grosse Pointe Farms, which is immediately south of the Crescent Sail Yacht Club at Lakeshore. Students were assigned dig sites along the perimeter of the property, which until 1991 was the site of an old caretaker's residence, circa 1920. Representatives of Russell Homes Inc. granted Montague's class permission to use the site.

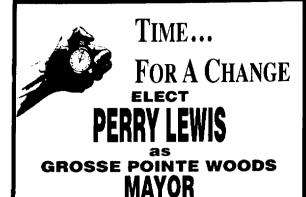

Some teams were more successful than others. Nicole Dabbous, a junior, said she and her partner only managed to find bricks and rocks but heard excited shouts coming from some of the other groups as they unearthed their "treasures."

By 2:30 p.m. the students had filled in the holes, bagged their treasures and headed home

The MASS System sponsored by the Office of Services to the Aging in cooperation with Wayne State University's Institute of Gerontology and the State's Office of Information Technology is designed to pro-vide information about services to Michigan's ever increasing elderly population.

According to Braunstein, working with focus groups from Michigan's aging network, the Wayne State team has helped to design a system which is "very easy to use." Using the Internet, and with just a point and a click on the computer, MASS users can access a wide range of aging information including: phone numbers for local senior centers. Councils and Commissions on Aging; Alzheimer's Association Chapters; and information about statewide programs such as the Medicare/Medicaid Assistance Programs and the Retired Senior Volunteer Program; Social Security program information and a toll-free national Eldercare Locator number.

The system also provides daily congressional updates and Federal Register annoucements, and access to local and national census information, demographic information on the growth of Michigan's aging population and access to a vealth of health information from the National Institutes of Health.

Designed to serve as a stateof-the-art planning tool for those engaged in delivering services to seniors, the MASS system is available to anyone with an Internet connection. The system can be accessed on the World Wide Web using the Netscape Web browser at http:// mass.iog.wayne.edu.

Don't take depression lightly — especially in older people

Have a good day; thank God for small favors; the cup is never empty, it's always half

All of these phrases are meant to lift spirits and accent the positive.

For some folks, such wellmeant greetings work. Seeing a bright smile or hearing a cheerful message immediately makes them feel better about life. But there are others so sunk in their own despair that a bright greeting and pleasant well wishes fail to penetrate their helpless gloom.

They are depressed, a condi-tion that is often too lightly dismissed by spouses, relatives and friends.

'Leave them alone.'' "They'll be all right in a day or two.' 'Just don't deal with it now." "Something will happen and blue days will turn into happy

Sometimes things do work out and the person returns to normal. The person who is "down" will get a phone call from an old friend, receive an unexpected present or be invited to a party and the old world will be sunny and bright once more.

Unfortunately, this is not always true. It is estimated that 15 percent of the population is seriously depressed and requires professional treatment.

Furthermore, it is most common among older people. The older a person, the greater the likelihood of developing depres-

Dr. Nathan Kline, director of Rockland Research Institute in Orangeburg, N.Y. clinical professor of psychiatry of New York University School of Medicine and author of "Sad to Glad" (Ballantine), warns that depression should not be taken lightly. He even goes so far as to calling it a "fatal dis-

"We all get depressed from time to time," he says. "Out-side of that, there are certain individuals who tend to overly worry about their problems. This is not considered too serious. Usually they can be helped by ordinary psychotherapy.

Some of the symptoms outlined by Kline were unwarranted sadness and dejection, difficulty in concentrating, anxiety or irritability.

Another type of depression takes the form of abject lows, alternating with periods of wild highs. Such a person is constantly on the go, boisterous, uninhibited and has delusions of grandeur. Such periods are usually followed by despond-

Depression can be a biological disturbance in the brain. It is usually triggered by an external event, like the death of a loved one, that the person can't cope with. Only a few cases are the result of an unhappy childhood or an abnormal family relationship.

When does a depressed person need help? According to Kline, people need help when they are suffering, when depression interferes with productivity or when the person is dangerous to himself or others. Once the condition is spotted, the next problem is persuading the person that he needs help. Often he will resist. He will insist nothing is wrong or that he is not worth the money it costs for treatment.

The best approach in such cases is to express concern and love and ask him to go to a doctor as a personal favor to keep you from worrying.

It is recommended that concerned relatives be as persuasive as possible, particularly if the depressed individual talks about committing suicide. Don't brush it off as an idle threat or an attention-getting ploy.

The more precise the person is, the more evidence is that he or she has given a lot of thought to it, the more likely that person is to follow through on the threat," warns Kline.

The most vulnerable to suicide are older people, particularly white males who are widowed, divorced and who have moved to another community which all adds up to a collapse of an accustomed lifestyle.

One of the difficulties of persuading severely depressed in-dividuals to see a psychiatrist is their fear of being hospitalized, even for a short period. Stories of shock therapy and jail-like treatment centers made more vivid in movies,

The truth is most patients do not need hospitalization. Kline said. There are drugs that effectively treat depression.

A proposal by a local grocer to build an expanded version of his store at a new location in Grosse Pointe stirred up some neighborhood opposition at last week's Grosse Pointe Park City Council meeting before being unanimously rejected by the

John Yaldoo, owner of Park Market Square at 15230 Char-levoix in the Park, petitioned the Park council for a variance that would permit him to build a store on an empty lot located at the corner of Charlevoix and 1402 Beaconsfield, just across and down the street from his current location.

Yaldoo told the council that he wants to build a new store because of the success of his present store.

"We need the space to compete with Kroger," said Yaldoo. People have been saying that we're a convenience store, but we're a grocery store. A larger store would permit us to carry more of the gourmet items our customers like. We sell fine cuts of meat, and we sell wine. We don't want to sell liquor and lottery tickets. We're a gro-cery store, not a party store."

Yaldoo also submitted to the ouncil a petition with about 900 signatures supporting the variance request.

Yaldoo's request, explained his attorney Simeon Maychock, if approved would allow him to build a bigger store than other-wise permitted under city ordinances. Yaldoo would like to have the rear of his store extend right up to the alley set-back line. Current city ordinances require a 10-foot space between the alley and the back of a business.

Maychock pointed out to the council that just about every business on the block is flush against the alley line. Yaldoo, said Maychock, simply wants what every other business on the block already has.

Councilmember Vernon Ausherman raised the issue of trash receptacle storage. He asked where the store's outside receptacle would be stored, noting that one of the reasons for the ordinance was to keep the bins out of the alleys.

Several neighborhood residents spoke at the meeting voicing their opposition to the variance request. They said that by building a store on the empty lot, the line separating

Park resident Ray Michael said that there are already several groceries in the area, and he wondered what would happen to Yaldoo's old store, would it remain empty and be an eyesore? Michael also questioned

Yaldoo angrily replied that the people who signed his petition were his customers, people who lived in the neighborhood. Councilmember Dan Clark said the council has a tradition of granting variances for businesses only if there was a hardship. He asked Yaldoo what his that makes business sense and we don't blame you for wanting the biggest store possible. But you don't have a hardship."

Maychok said it's a foregone conclusion that Yaldoo will build on the lot, and what he wants is what every other store on the block has, a building that goes to the alley line.

Clark pointed out that the other buildings were built before the current zoning ordinance was in effect and they enjoy "grandfather" tleuse pro- agos quest. Councilmember tection. dential area, Clark said.

Mayor Palmer Heenan said that if Yaldoo wanted to build a store on the lot, a store that met all the city's zoning ordi-nances, he could and there would be nothing that the city council could do about it.

The lot, said Heenan, afterall is zoned for Yaldoo's type of business. It is only his requesting a variance that gave the council a voice in the matter.

The council voted unani-mously to deny Yaldoo's varicord stating that she wasn't

A couple of neighbors did not like the proposed location for the drive-up ATM, saying it was too close to their homes. Another expressed concerns about increased noise at night.

Robert Ferber, Farms director of public safety, said that of the five proposals submitted by the bank, the one at the southeast corner of the building was the only plan that complied with the city's ordinance. The other plans were rejected because of traffic flow problems.

Junior Group Goodwill Antiques Show is Nov. 17-19

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor
Attending the Junior Group Goodwill Antique Show is lots more fun than walking around a mall, said Mary Valpey, public relations chairman for the Goodwill Industries' benefit.

'It's more fun than walking a mall, more varied than a patchwork quilt and as colorful as a Broadway show," she said. "And it's all for love.'

The 48th annual Junior Group Goodwill Antiques Show will be Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 17, 18 and 19, at the Michigan Mart Building of the Michigan State Fair and Exposition Center, Woodward at Eight Mile in De-

"Proceeds from the show help underwrite Goodwill Industries' programs for persons with physical, mental, educational, social and/or emotional disabilities," Valpey added.

The show will feature 50 selected exhibitors with a variety of 18th and 19th century furniture, art objects, rugs, glassware, silver, brass, pewter, tole, jewelry, maps, prints, oil paintings and nautical items.

Junior Group Goodwill members have been collecting, restoring and creating hundreds of items to be sold in their own booth as well including donated furniture and collectibles (new and gently used china, silver, jewelry, furs, books, etc.); jars of homemade jams, jellies, pickles, canned fruits, chili sauce, corn relish, salsa, dilly beans, etc.); hand-crafted holiday items (wall hangings, Christmas tree ornaments, Santa figures, doll clothes, puppet theaters, etc.); restored furniture and antiques; consignment pieces from local artists; and two hand-made doll houses cre

'Where else can you get a fulllength raccoon coat for $100?" said Michelle Henning, one of three cochairmen of the 1995 show.

More than 7,000 people are expected to attend the show during the three-day period.

Junior Group volunteers met several times each month for the last year, Henning said. "Usually there are west side and east side meetings to work on craft items. This year we also have some consignment goods from local crafters and some customized, personalized bird houses."

Henning said about 200 of the 300 Junior Group members work on the show each year, forming 35 different committees.

Lunch, supper, snacks and afternoon tea will be available. A bakery booth will offer pies and bread as well as fresh pecans and a popular item called sponge candy. heavenly. It's chocolate coated,"

Henning said. "If you buy a bag, you'll eat it all."

Last year's show made a record $107,000 for Goodwill Industries, and members hope to top that amount in 1995.

A patron's preview party will be from 7-10 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 16. A silent auction will offer items such as a piano, an electric organ, a spool bed, two doll houses created by volunteers, sports memorabilia and more. Tickets for the preview range from $75 to $125.

Honorary chairmen are Gov. John and Michelle Engler, Mr. and Mrs. Rich Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hagenlocker, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Makupson and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Sachs.

Chairmen of the 1995 show are

Henning, Marnie Parrott and Heather Ryan.

Evidence that Jesus lives

By the Rev. David H. Wick Grosse Pointe Bapist Church

What we have seen and heard we proclaim to you also. . ." I John 1:3.

Last week at the 30 (plus) year reunion of my high school Young Life club, I saw and heard evidence that Jesus lives. He goes about His work of changing lives in amazing and wonderful ways.

Grosse Pointers will understand Young Life as being like FOCUS, a nondenominational Christian High school ministry. In the mid-60s, 80 to 100 kids used to jam the not-very-large basements of north Minneapolis homes to sing, laugh at skits, and hear testimonies about how Christ could change their life.

Some kids responded and made commitments to Christ. Some listened skeptically but made commitments later in life. Some listened and haven't yet responded. Some peeked in the door and took off as soon as they saw a Bible. Some never came, but their lives were touched by others who came to Young Life. Other kids in the community came to Christ later in life, and Young Life had nothing to do with it, except that I heard about their conversion at the reunion.

I heard about Bill, who used to come to Young Life. His nickname was "One Punch," because that's all it took for him to win a fight. Twenty years ago, through the witness of a Christian friend, he gave his life to Christ. "One Punch" is a mighty man of God now, a prayer warrior.

I spoke with George, the friend who led Bill to Christ. George was one of those who ducked out of Young Life as soon as he saw the Bible. His father came to Christ while George was in Vietnam, and led George to Christ when he came home. George worked his way through Bible college and now, although he is close to 50, serves as a youth director at a large subur-

George told me about Vern, whose violence was legendary. Vern nearly killed a biker gang member in a bar fight and was sent to prison. There he heard the Gospel and gave his life to Christ. Now he works with street kids in a youth ministry.

There are more stories. The point is, it is inconceivable, it is impossible, for Bill or George or Vern to have ever come to faith in Jesus Christ. I knew Bill and George personally, back then. I knew of Vern through his brother and local legends, which is as close as I ever cared to come to him. No way were these guys ever going to be Bible-carrying, praying, church-going claim to you also." Jesus lives. the reality of His life, death and resurrection. Seeing that he died for them and rose on their behalf, they saw they had no other choice but to live for Him.

How have you dealt with the reality that Jesus lives? That is a wonderful and awesome reality; it is a reality with which God means to change your life.

Health

Hospice care

By Sondra Seely

November is Hospice Month, recognized at both state and national levels. This month provides hospices an opportunity to celebrate 17 years of administering quality care. While reflecting on the quantity and quality of the services provided, we would also like to use this opportunity to educate the community on hos-

The trend of health care today is managed care. Hospice has been providing managed care since its conception - cost-effective care with a daily rate for each level: inpatient, respite, routine care and continuous care.

Hospice is based on the concept that all patients have the right to live with dignity and integrity, to participate in decisions regarding their treatment and to decide where they prefer to die. The hospice goal is to manage symptoms while maintaining the quality of life for the patient, as well as supporting the family while they care for the person they love. In a recent quality improvement monitor, indicators showed that 97 percent of hospice patients were pain-free.

Hospice cares for the patient and family as a unit. We provide relief for the caregiver, who may neglect his/her own needs. Hospice uses a team approach, with all disciplines coming together in a weekly meeting to collaborate on the plan of care. Services are available 24-hours per day, seven days a week. A member of the hospice team is available to go into the patient's home whenever necessary. The Cottage Hospice team includes physicians, nurses, chaplin, social worker, dietitian, pharmacist, home care aides, therapist and trained volunteers. Reimbursement for services may come from Medicare, Medicaid or other private insurance carriers. Some patients who do not have insurance, however, may be charged for services.

Cottage Hospice accepts patients into the program based on their needs, not their ability to pay. Hospices of Henry Ford Health System use memorial donations, fundraisers and grants to provide care to those who are not able to pay for our services.

Hospice is available to patients with cancer and those with non cancer diagnoses, such as Alzheimer's, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), end stage cardiac and renal disease and AIDS. Hospice care is provided in foster-care centers as well as in nursing homes. We have contracts with several nursing homes, and a special team is in place to provide hospice care to residents in nursing homes throughout southeastern Michigan.

Children with terminal illnesses are cared for by Kaleidoscope Kids, a special program meeting the needs of parents and children coping with impending death.

Recently, I received a call from a woman whose father had been cared for by our hospice program. "Why weren't we informed of hospice before we spent all of dad's savings on his pain medication? We could have used that money to do things he enjoyed during his last days," she said.

She thanked hospice for the equipment that made caring for her father easier and less expensive for the family. I explained to her that it is difficult to pinpoint the right moment for each person to enter hospice. However, hospice warns against waiting until there is a crisis or until everyone in the family is worn out.

We suggest that patients talk to their physicians and inform them that if a cure is not possible, hospice is something to be considered. Call (800) 492-9909 or (810) 774-4141 for more information.

Volunteers are a vital part of the care the Hospices of Henry Ford Health System provide. Volunteer training sessions are held twice each year. Bereavement support services are offered monthly at all of our branches. Hospice has assisted more than 1,000 families through its bereavement program, even though some of the patients were not enrolled in our hospice program.

Sondra Seely is an administrator with the Hospices of Henry Ford Health System.

Adolescent suicide will be topic of First Friday Wellness Forum

"Adolescent Suicide Prevention and Intervention" will be the topic of the First Friday Wellness Forum community luncheon program on Friday, Nov. 3, at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital.

Judy Liliensiek will explore the pressures that may push an adolescent toward suicide. She will define depression and how it can be identified and treated at the family, school and community levels. Discussions of personal stories will ciation. help reveal answers to questions including:

• What can each individual do to prevent adolescent suicide?

· How should you respond if you have knowledge of a suicidal adolescent?

· How should the community respond to the issue of adolescent and teen suicide?

· How can we prevent suicide clusters?

Liliensiek is a clinical nurse specialist with a background in phychiatric nursing. She is licensed by the state of Michigan as a nurse practitioner in childadolescent psychiatric nursing, and is a member of the American Psychiatric Nursing Asso-

The facility, located in the Irish Hills on Lake Vineyard, will be known as the Holley Ear Institute Family Village and is expected to open in summer 1996.

"Family Village is aimed at strengthening the family unit through communication and support," Gardella said. The facility will host regular weeklong programs for parents while their children participate in activities to help them develop their communication skills, social skills and self esteem.

The village will offer programs for the deaf, deaf/blind deaf/autistic, and deaf with cerebral palsy.

Families from Michigan, Indiana and Ohio are expected to benefit from the programs. More than 350,000 people in Michigan are hard-of-hearing and an additional 8,800 are deaf.

Family carves turkey, each other in 'Home'

By Ronald J. Bernas

Assistant Editor
Claudia Larson (Holly Hunter) is - like most people around the fourth Thursday of November - finding it hard to find something for which to be thankful.

She's lost her job, her daughter tells her she's going to sleep with her boyfriend, and she's facing the prospect of a weekend with her family, minus her favorite brother.

"Home for the Holidays" tells the story of one hellish weekend in Claudia's life when she finds out just what the wacky bunch of relatives who show up to break bread - and each other's spirits - means to her. And a wacky bunch it is, too. There's the chain-smoking mother (Anne Bancroft) who thinks saying "Claudia, I can see your roots" is a way of showing she cares. There's the sweetly bizarre, lamp-giving Aunt Glady (Geraldine Chaplin) who sets the film's philosophizing second half in motion. There's Claudia's gay brother Tommy (Robert Downey Jr.), who shows up after all, with a new man, Leo (Dylan Mc-Dermott). And Cynthia Steven-brother-in-law who resent the pressure Claudia's leaving town has put on them. The father (Charles Durning) is the eve of the storm who doesn't allow the weirdness to get to him.

In other words it's a wacky family the way only Hollywood can make a wacky family, and it rings only partly true.

Guiding these characters through the hectic weekend is director Jodie Foster, who knows how to assemble a great cast and get good performances, especially out of old pros like Bancroft, Durning and Chaplin, who steals the show. She, unfortunately, let Downey improvise too much and he comes across as irritating and squirrely instead of devil-maycare. And McDermott is not far

And no one underplays frantic, out-of-control and miserably as funny as Hunter does.

Foster gets no help, though, from an often incoherent script by W.D. Richter. Perhaps that's part of the point because no one in the family ever seems to know what's going on or what the others are feeling; but the audience should know what's son and Steve Guttenberg play going on, and there are long Some Claudia's uptight sister and stretches during which the knives.

New activities offered at the War 1emorial

Facing the onset of winter needn't be a problem. The War November/December calendar of events is packed with fascinating new programs to fill the days and evenings leading up to the holidays. Whether your interest lies in the arts or astrology, bridge or bow making, fitness or finance, writing or relationships, there is something of interest for everyone, adults and children

Approximately 100 classes, lectures, trips and events such as Veteran's Day observance, a cabaret evening and brunch with Santa are featured in the latest calendar. Here is just a sampling of what's happening in the days ahead:

 Award winning French impressionist painter Pierre Bit-tar visits the War Memorial Monday, Nov. 6, from 6 to 7:30 p.m., offering a rare glimpse into his soul as he discusses his philosophy of life and how his emotions and personal sense of truth are expressed in his art.

Considered a leader in contemporary impressionism, Bittar spent several days last summer painting at historic Grosse Pointe locations, including the War Memorial. He returns Saturday, Nov. 11, to lecture, advise and critique. The two-part program consists of a 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. lecture devoted to Bittar's approach to "plain air" painting. All levels of painters are invited to attend. From 1:30 to 5:30 p.m., Bittar will critique a piece of art work provided by 20 advanced students. Beginning students are invited to observe.

Bittar's presentations join the War Memorial's lineup of arts lectures that include a Friday, Nov. 3 offering, "Beauty Is In The Eye Of The Beholder,' a slide-illustrated examination of artists' perceptions of feminine beauty from a variety of cultures and periods. The 1:30 to 3 p.m. lecture is part of a monthly series presented at the War Memorial in cooperation with the Detroit Institute of Arts speakers bureau.

Pro Musica presents Parisii String Quartet

Members of Grosse Pointe's Alliance Francaise will host a quartet of world famous musical artists next week.

Fulfilling their commitment to promote French culture, Alliance members are supporting the Pro Musica Society in presenting the Parisii String Quartet coming direct from Paris for the event, which will be the society's opening concert on Fri-

On the program are quartets by Milhaud, Beethoven, Webern and Ravel to be performed in the Recital Hall of the Detroit Institute of Arts. The concert begins at 8:30 p.m. and will be followed by a buffet and social hour in the adjacent Romanesque Hall and Kresge Court. Access to the museum for the concert is by the Woodward Avenue entrance.

The Parisii String Quartet was formed in 1984 by four prize-winning graduates of the Conservatoire National Superieur de Paris and has enjoyed a rapid rise to fame. First prizes at international competitions at Banff, Alberta, and in Munich and Evian in Europe were followed by highly successful concert tours of Europe and the Far East. A series of CDs on the Ades, Accord and Adda labels ensued.

Last spring the quartet enjoyed an extraordinarily successful U.S. debut with a 17concert tour.

Founded in 1927, the Pro Musica Society specializes in bringing artists who are just emerging as world class performers and includes in its history Detroit recital debuts by such famous artists as soprano

Concert features violinist Takezawa

This week's Detroit Symphony Orchestra concerts provide an exceptional opportunity to appraise the talents of the orchestra's assistant conductor, Lan Shui.

Appointed to his position only a year ago, he came to Detroit with experience and credentials that were already impressive.

Chinese born, Shui was briefly conductor of the Beijing Symphony before coming to the United States. Here he has already guest conducted the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Baltimore Symphony and the Pro Arte Chamber Orchestra of Boston as well as important or chestras in Canada and Eu-

Tonight, Friday and Saturday evenings, Shui will conduct the DSO in Verdi's Overture to "La Froza del

Destino" and Dvorak's Symphony No. 6, and lead the orchestra in accompanying violinist Kyoko Takezawa in the Mozart violin concerto No. 5. It is a program in which a talented conductor has many opportunities to show his skill and musician-

Takezawa is an equally interesting attraction. Initially a product of the Suzuki method in Japan, she came to the United States to study with the famed Dorothy DeLay at the Juilliard School in New York. Now at 28, she shares concert stages with such illustrious musi cians as Isaac Stern, Yo-Yo Ma, Wolfgang Sawallisch and Joseph Suk. Clearly she is another artist worth going to hear. New types of egg salad get grade A

Over the past several weeks we've featured many salads macaroni, potato, greens, vegetables - but I've neglected one of my pets: egg salad. I like egg salad because I know it has an abundance of good nutrition Hard-cooked egg slices, opand it's an all-season dish. Eggs are always in the stores and they should be in your fridge, ready when you need

Here are two salads that show how you can, by varying ingredients, put a new face on your egg salad. These are not the usual mixture of eggs, celery, onion and mayonnaise. They're different in their combination of other compatible foods. Naturally, they start blend flavors. Garnish with egg with hard-cooked eggs. With slices and parsley, if desired. these guides, and guides are what recipes should be, you can create your own culinary art.

Remember, eggs are cooked, not boiled. Follow the American Egg Board's instructions and you'll have tender whites and golden yolks.

To hard-cook eggs: Place eggs in a single layer in saucepan. Add cold tap water to at least one inch above eggs. Cover: bring just to boiling point. Turn off heat, remove pan from burner and let eggs stand, covered, in the hot water 15 to 17 minutes for large eggs. (Adjust time up or down by about three minutes for each size larger or smaller.) After standing time, run cold water over eggs or place in ice water to cool them. To remove shell, crack by tap-ping egg gently all over. Roll between hands to loosen shell; peel, starting at large end. You should have no trouble but if the shell resists, hold egg under running cool water or dip it into a bowl of water to help remove shell.

'Panama' opens locks to intrigue

Panama By Eric Zencey Farrar, Straus & Giroux. 375

Now and then I read a new novel so superb that I can't wait to come across another one just as impressive and entertaining.

That happy occasion occurred last year when I read Caleb Carr's "The Alienist," an excellently written and unusual first novel showcasing Theodore Roosevelt as the police commissioner of New York City in a frustrating pursuit of a stealthy murderer. A fast-moving plot carries the reader hell-bent toward a heart-gasping conclu-

Just recently I felt that way about "Panama," a first novel by Eric Zencey, a professor of history at Vermont's Goddard College and a contributing editor to North American Review.

As' a historian and a philosopher, Zencey is well equipped to write of 1890s Paris, where the protagonist is Henry Adams, grandson of one president and great-grandson of another.

It was, indeed, an inspired choice on Zencey's part to introduce Adams as the amateur sleuth who frantically explores the dark, curving streets of the City of Light trying to unearth the mystery behind the notorious Panama Canal Scandal.

Lest he be wrongfully acwater chestnuts, mushrooms, cused of plagiarism, let me add that he began writing "Panama" nine years ago, and that he has yet to read Carr's "The Alienist.")

Zencey's historian's hat is firmly in place when he opens his book with the scene in Ancon, Panama, to lay out the background. He describes the failure and decay of the de Lessup's venture to build a waterway to unite the two great oceans and expedite the passage of large ships, liners as well as tankers, between the Atlantic and the Pacific.

By Elizabeth P. Walker

It becomes painfully obvious that something is drastically wrong with this ill-fated project. French engineers are discouraged and demoralized by the lapse in their gargantuan efforts to cut through the muddy isthmus. Government officials appear helpless or indifferent to this embarrassing impasse, and it becomes clear that there is some bribery influencing some French officials to line their own pockets rather than upholding the glory of French marvels.

Seven years a widower. Adams meets a young woman painter in Mount Saint-Michel who introduces herself as Miriam Talbott. While she continues working at her easel, casual conversation ensues, and he finds himself ever drawn to her beauty and intelligence. Together they explore and appreciate the magnificent artistic glories of the medieval cathedrals in both Chartres and Mount Saint-Michel. A few days later she disappears, leaving Adams completely bewildered, and even more so when he finds that the name she had given him was not a true one. Then he races to what he thinks is her apartment, but she has inexplicably vanished

Back in Paris, after the loss of his new friend, whose freshness and charm remind him of his late wife, Clover, Adams looks in upon his old friend, John Hay, an American diplomat who seems strangely helpless to assist Adams in his desperate search for Miriam.

Adams reflects: "That the world no longer had room for an Adams in the White House. he thought, was one clear sign of its change. Politics now, was little more than the regulation of traffic - and the virtues a president needed were no differ ent from those displayed by the Parisian gendarmerie, who, pedestalled at every intersection in Paris, commanded the stream of carriages and carts and cabs and wagons and omni

To further complicate Adams situation, he had to contend with the insistance of Elizabeth Cameron, wife of Sen. Donald Cameron, a man much older than her.

The Paris police are soon on the trail. Somehow, this young woman's disappearance is linked to the Panama Canal and which threatens to topple the French government. Graft and corruption have permeated the bureaucracy, and thus the future of the canal is left up in the air with a possible takeover by the Americans.

As Stephen Schiff writes in The New Yorker: "If 'Panama' is any evidence, Zencey's view of politics is a dark one. For him, as for Adams, a mass culture is a culture easily manipulated, easily victimized by power. In the 1890's, that mass culture was just coming to life, and its birth throes do exert a peculiar fascination: the reorganization of police work around such 'industrializing' innova-tions as finger-printing becomes a metaphor for the eventual reorganization of an entire society around Social Security numbers, ZIP codes, pension plans, and TV marketing cam-

Zencey himself adds to Schiff's pertinent comments: "He says over and over again that if you look for the roots of the modern world, you return to the last decade of the nineteenth century. The world changed then in ways that made it completely different."

From a historian's erspec-tive, Zencey has created a marvelous amateur detective as well as a keen look at 19th century France.

Panama is a tale that always intrigues, and whould long endure among discerning readers.

Grosse Pointe North's soccer team seems determined not to let coach Guido Regelbrugge retire.

The Norsemen gave their veteran coach a Class A district championship last Friday with a 1-0 victory over Grosse Pointe South to move into the Class A regional at Fraser.

'We've accomplished all the goals we set for ourselves," said Regelbrugge, referring to the Macomb Area Conference White Division and district championships the Norsemen won. "And there were times that appeared difficult with the injuries we sustained during the year."

When Regelbrugge met with his team Tuesday - a day be-fore they were scheduled to meet old nemesis De La Salle - he told the squad to relax.

"There's no pressure at all on us," he said. "We can go out and just let it all hang out. We'll give the best effort we can and we'll see what hap-

"We should win if we play well, but we can't go in over"We might not have taken Southfield Christian seriously enough because we beat them handily early in the year.

It looked like ULS might win easily again when Mike Gressman gave the Knights the lead on a free kick seven minutes into the game. It was an unusual goal that glanced off the back of an Eagles player and caromed over the goalkeeper's

'We got a little bit lucky on that because it was a low shot into the wall," Backhurst said.

Southfield Christian tied the game on a controversial goal with about five minutes left in the first half. A shot hit the bottom of the crossbar and fell to the ground, where it was ruled by one of the officials to have gone over the goal line.

Mike Howe took the opening kickoff, went around a defender and was knocked down inside the 18-yard line where ULS was awarded a penalty kick.

Howe took the penalty kick - his third of the season - and sailed it into the lower corner of the net to break the 1-1 tie.

"That took some of the wind out of their sails and we went into a defensive shell to make the one goal stand up because we haven't had a strong offensive team this year," Backhurst said.

But with 17 minutes left, Brendan Thomas took a pass from C.T. Brown, came around the corner and scored into the far side of the net from a nearly impossible angle.

North's Kevin Grant was the overall winner in the regional, posting a career best 16:36.

"He ran his usual good solid said North coach Pat Wilson. "Kevin worked hard to get where he is, so this is a wonderful experience for him. He beat several kids who beat him last year. He just took off in the last mile and a half."

Freshman Tom Smiley was North's other state qualifier, coming in 20th overall in only his second varsity race.

"He was injured early in the year and didn't really start running until the end of Sep-tember," Wilson said. "He'll lead the charge for us next year. He's a good kid with a good head on his shoulders."

Suchin Shah just missed qualifying for the state with a personal record time of 17:44.

Although North didn't qualify for the state meet as a team. Wilson saw a lot of positives in the season.

We were 10-1 in dual meets and most of the time they ran well," he said. "We beat two teams we haven't beaten in a while and we surprised a lot of

Ricci shows promise

University Liggett School graduate Jay Ricci completed his first season of varsity baseball at the University of Dayton on a positive note.

Ricci survived a slow start to Flyers' staff with the lowest opponents' batting average

Ricci had five scoreless relief innings at Tulane, which was ranked 24th in the nation at the time, and allowed only one run against the Alabama-Birmingham.

"If Ricci can cut down on his lost 40.7 as Zach Schmitt walks, he could be one of the > Ricci allowed only 33 hits in 37 innings, but walked 37 and struck out 28 as he posted a 1-3 record with a 5.84 ERA, the second-lowest on the staff.

> The freshman lefthander was the Flyers' starter on May 11, when Dayton played Michigan State in the first Great Lakes Invitational baseball tournament at Tiger Stadium. The Flyers upset the Spartans 4-3 in 11 innings and finished second in the tournament.

North nips unbeaten foe

Gary Bennett is glad he doesn't have to play his Grosse Pointe North girls basketball

And Fraser probably wishes didn't have to meet the Norsemen last week, either.

"I'm not being cocky about it, but I'd hate to play our kids," Bennett said after North handed the Ramblers their first loss of the season 37-35 in the Macomb Area Conference White Division game.

"Our kids play so hard. And when a team plays as hard as we do, anything can happen. For that reason, I'd be concerned about playing us."

North jumped out to a 15-8 first-quarter lead, but the Ramblers switched from a zone to man-to-man defense and cut the Norsemen's lead to one at halftime. Fraser took a sevenpoint lead during the third quarter, but by the end of the period, it was back down to

Then things got hectic. Both throws down the stretch. Fraser missed a pair of free throws with 10 seconds to go. Then the Ramblers went to the line again with no time remaining for two shots that would have tied the game. But when they missed the first one and had no chance to tie, the officials picked up the ball and declared the game over.

"It was crazy that last 40 seconds," Bennett said.

North received some imporcontributions from its White.

"Our kids showed a lot of bench. Becky Iskenderian did a good job filling in at one of the posts and freshman guards posts and freshman guards Claire Kotwick and Lindsay Hawkins each came off the bench to score six points.

Molly Peters had 16 points and five steals for North and Jenny Pagel grabbed 10 re-

"The players on our bench who didn't get into the game also played a big role," Bennett said. "When we were making teams had turnovers. Both that comeback from seven teams missed shots and free points down, they were cheering us on and got the crowd

Earlier, North rolled to a 43-26 victory over Warren-Mott as 10 of the 12 North players broke into the scoring column.

University Liggett School's the wind. The booming kick football team learned a lot this season, including how to celebrate a win on the road.

"I couldn't believe how quiet the bus ride home was," said coach Gary Hills after the Knights closed out the season with a 26-8 victory over Lutheran Northwest.

Then I realized, these kids had never won on the road. It was the first road victory for the seniors. I told one of my assistants 'these kids don't even know how to have fun on the bus ride home.

The victory gave ULS sole ossession of seventh place in the Metro Conference with a 2-5 mark.

"This was the first time all year we played for something," Hills said. "If we won, we'd get out of the basement, which is where we were picked to finish at the start of the season.

'It was a wonderful victory but this is the last time we're going to celebrate seventh place.

Some of the Knights' seniors made that point in a pre-game

"I asked the seniors to speak because it was their last game and they told the kids, 'Don't win it for us. Win it for the new football foundation at ULS."

ULS marched down the field the first time it had the football but was stailed at the Northwest two. Then the Knights' defense held and got good field position after the punt.

A few plays later, Brian Bruenton went 25 yards on an end-around, but lost the ball a step from the goal line. It bounced into the end zone where lineman Renard Morey-Greer fell on it for the touchdown.

Crusaders came back to quarter.

ULS had a couple of fumbles deep in Northwest territory during the second quarter, but school-record 110 solo stops.

line," Hills said. ULS tried its new play and quarterback Justin Macksoud hit Legree for a 53-yard touchdown pass. And Legree passed to Macksoud for the two-point conversion on a "transcontinental" play.

Late in the game with freshman A.J. Stachecki replacing Macksoud at quarterback, David Tidwell raced 40 yards for a touchdown. He sprung free on a fine block by left tackle Billy Tringale.

Stachecki then hit Tidwell for the two-point conversion.

"On Stachecki's first play at quarterback he tried a sneak and went 10 yards and fum-bled," Hills said. "He was really upset so I told him, 'Intercept the ball and you can go back in at quarterback.' On the second play he did it."

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY OF NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens de-stroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy WE WILL BE HAPPY TO PROVIDE ADVICE as well as a LIST OF ECONOMICAL

How did plants ever make it into the house?

Houseplants are a fact of life. We all have them and sometimes they even become a nuisance and a problem, but even then we hesitate to throw them away, and cannot really imagine a house without them.

But did you ever wonder how the whole thing got started? Who first thought of bringing gardening into the house?

Excavation is still going on at the ancient city of Pompeii and about 20 year ago gardens and plants were studied there. Plant archeologists found that urns and planters were used lavishly inside the houses of many well-to-do citizens of the city.

Now studies are being made to find out what plants were most used in these classic houses in a world forgotten for centuries, then miraculously unearthed. Now the holes left in the solidified ashes in the pots and planters by the roots of shrubs and plants have been filled with plaster and act as molds so that the shapes and markings of the plant roots can be studied. Seeds have been carefully sifted out of the ashes. (Seeds are very durable - wheat has been grown from seeds found in ancient tombs in Egypt.) So we are beginning to know what houseplants were popular in the ancient world.

Pompeii was one of the first cities to make houseplants fashionable. It was a walled city and houses were crowded together, leaving very little room for gardens. Many householder shad country estates as well as townhouses and had extensive gardens, but in their city homes, missing their earliest in history.

Archeology is a science that provides us with fascinating facts about our past. Did you know that Michigan, a state long known for its gardens, comes by this heritage naturally? In ages past a pre-historic race inhabited this area long before the Indians were here. The only record we have of their unusual ability and great intelligence is the so-called "garden beds."

gardens, they had houseplants, the

When the earliest European settlers arrived in Michigan in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, they were astonished to find these symmetrical plots in southeastern and western Michigan. Henry Schoolcraft, an early historian, has left us some information about these mysterious gardens.

"The garden beds are raised patches of ground separated by sunken paths and are generally in the shape of a wheel with spokes running out to a circular ridge from a circle within," he said.

The Trial Gardens at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial are in this pattern

"Sometimes the ancient gardens were rectangles arranged in blocks. The gardens resemble the work of the ancient mound builders who have left their creations scattered through the midwest, but are quite definitely for agricultural purposes," Mr. Schoolcraft wrote in 1827 "The garden beds and not the Indian mounds are the Antiquarian monuments of the state."

Some of the ancient Garden Beds are in the valley of the Grand River and the St. Joseph River, and through the counties of Kalamazoo, Cass and St. Joseph, as well as a few in Macomb and Wayne counties.

Schoolcraft relates seeing these gardens as early as 1827, and says that at that time one of the trees nearby was cut down and had 335 cortex layers, or rings, dating it to 1492. The garden was much, much older.

Unfortunately, the march of progress and the growth of cities in Michigan has obliterated many of these prehistoric gardens. Now archeologists are working to save the remaining ones as part of the state heritage.

An early horticulturist, Liberty Hyde Bailey, was born in Michigan in 1858 and lived in this state until 1954. During his long life he, more than anyone else, transformed horticulture from a craft to an applied science. At Michigan Agricultural College, now Michigan State University, in 1884 he set up the first college department of horticulture and Landscape Architecture in the United States. At Cornell University, as professor and dean of agriculture, he made botanists understand the practical problems of horticulture and helped horticulturists overcome their prejudices against scientific classification.

Victorian homes were filled with houseplants, to an even greater degree than our homes today. In many books devoted to housekeeping in the 19th century, whole chapters were devoted to decorating rooms with plants. There are many suggestions about making plant stands, terrariums, window boxes and hanging baskets. In a wonderful book called "The American Woman's home" are some surprising suggestions for room decoration with plants.

How about a large carrot scooped out and filled with water and hung in a window, which, it is promised, will soon send out a profusion of graceful ferny shoots? Or how about training ivy to grow all around window frames and picture frames and planting ivy in them to hang down around the picture frame? Or filling an oxmuzzle with moss and hanging it on a wall? (Where would you buy an oxmuzzle in Grosse Pointe, anyway?)

Antiques

Electrical kitchen appliances of the past are being repaired and refurbished, and some are even being reproduced for use in today's kitchens. Collectors are looking for the chrome-and-black designs of the 1930s-1970s era.

Toasters, coffee pots, milkshake machines, coffee grinders, mixers and blenders are in demand.

If you buy an old appliance and plan to use it, there are several rules to follow:

• Be sure the electric cord and plug are in good condition. An old appliance can be rewired at a hardware store or kitchenware shop.

• If possible, have the machine tested before you buy it, especially if it is a toaster, waffle iron or any machine that produces heat. The internal heating element might be broken or worn, and that attractive old appliance could be a fire hazard.

• Coffee pots, blenders and other machines holding liquid often have rubber gaskets between the parts that keep the liquid from leaking. The rubber parts harden with time, and may need to be replaced. Sometimes the original manufacturer can furnish a part.

• Old toasters were made only for commercially sliced bread. They did not hold bagels or other thick breads.

• Be cautious when cleaning chrome, which scratches easily. Don't use scouring powder. Q. My glass dish has the Liberty Bell in the center and the dates "1776-1876." Along the top are the words, "100 years ago." At the bottom are the names of all of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Is it rare?

A. You have a pressed-glassed piece called "The Signers Platter." It is most likely the bread tray of the Liberty Bell pattern of dishes. They're not rare, but they are old. The pattern was patented in 1875 by James Gillinder, who owned a glass factory in Philadelphia.

A. A platter like yours sold for $125 last year.

Q. Stamped on the bottom of a saucer I own are the words "Enoch 1784 — Ralph 1750 — Woods — Burslem — England." Could the plate be that old?

A. Members of the Wood family of Burslem, England, were well-known makers of pottery and porcelain for several generations. Family members teamed up at different times, forming their own factories.

There were several Ralphs and Enochs through the years. From 1784 to 1790, cousins Enoch and Ralph Wood were in partnership. The words "Burslem, England"

The words "Burslem, England" show that your saucer is a 20th century version of a pottery piece made during the 1780s.

Keep the birds in mind when you landscape

Autumn is a wonderful season to plant with the birds and you in mind. You've spent the summer in your yard and may know exactly where you'd like to develop your landscaping. After a tree or shrub is planted, it needs a period of dormancy to reestablish itself. If you plant in spring, your plant is set back to accomplish this, even though it was already in a state of development. This makes the fall an better time to add to your landscaping plan.

Why plant with the birds in mind? As recommended by the National Wildlife Federation, birds need cover to protect them from the wind, rain and predators. They need plants that will provide them with places to raise their young. They also need the berries and seeds that trees and shrubs can offer. A yard that offers a lawn and a few trimmed bushes or some annual flowers is not especially attractive to birds. Offer birds a row of evergreens, a fruit bearing tree and a hedge of berry bearing bushes and watch the individual numbers of birds in your yard increase along with the number of species.

Because landscaping provides habitat for birds, varying levels of height of your plants — vertical diversity — must be considered when choosing what to plant. If you think of the northern woods or a metro park where the plant life is left to grow undisturbed, there is always a layer of undergrowth. This is a natural feature that you should work to develop in your yard.

Conifers, also called evergreens, include the trees and shrubs that do not lose their needles in the winter. This group includes pines, junipers, cedars and fir trees. They are important to birds as escape cover, winter shelter and summer nesting sites. They are also a food source as their sap, buds and seeds are eaten by the birds. (Yes, there really is a yellow bellied sapsucker and their drill holes leak sap in the spring that attract bugs for the sapsucker. The sap is one of the first food supplies for hummingbirds as they migrate back into this area. The benefits you gain by planting conifers is the visual enjoyment of looking at green all year round and, if planted on the north side of your property, they act as a windbreak to you and your birds. The most desirable conifers as far as birds are concerned include eastern red cedar, eastern white pine and

Spring blossoms will attract northern orioles. Listen for their beautiful song and look to the tree tops for that brilliant flash of orange complimented by black. Tanangers and warblers will use these insect attracting trees to feast on during spring migration. When the plants have fruited later, they will round out the nutritional needs of the resident birds. Try serviceberry, chokecherry, blackberry and elderberry, which are a few among the many desirable plants.

Fall fruit is important to birds so that they can add to their fat reserves before migration or before the winter if they are permanent residents. The fruit of red-osier dogwood, grey dogwood, mountain ash, cotoneasters, American elderberry and Nanking cherry are excellent for robins, catbirds, thrashers, cedar waxwings, chickadees and cardinals. If your yard allows, plant the row of fall fruit sources in front of your row of conifers. The visual effect is wonderful and you've achieved vertical diversity. Just make sure that you allow for the mature sizes of the plants. Once you've decided on which fall fruits to plant, think of extending the availability of fruit in your yard through the winter months.

Winter fruits are not appealing to birds when they first mature. One of the attributes of winter fruit is the fact that it is persistent, remaining on the plant until it is needed in the late winter months. Some of the fruits need to freeze and thaw several times before they attain a desired edibility level. American highbush cranberry, "red splendor" and "prairie fire" crabapple, bittersweet, sumac, hackberry, hawthorn and many of the viburnums family are some of the best choices for providing winter food ources.

Does this concept of landscaping for birds seem overwhelming? It isn't if you let nature guide you. Put away the hedge clippers and get by with a small trimming, if any. Remember your levels of diversity and plant that under story. Instead of planting close to your house which would block your own view of your yard, plant the perimeters with trees and bushes. These plantings will act as "natural" fences and will become travel ways for birds.

For a great reference guide, Landscaping for Wildlife, by Carrol Henderson, Supervisor of the Minnesota DNR, is an excellent source.

A final word of advice - if you want uncommon birds in your yard in the spring, set aside a part of your yard and create a mini-forest where you can let nature take over. Lay a log in an empty area. How about that shady spot under that tree that you don't quite know what to do with? Or over in the corner next to the compost pile? Put some of the autumn leaves that you gather on each side of the log. In Spring, watch the magic of wood thrushes running along the log just as they would in the north woods. Towhees, white throated and white crowned sparrows will kick up the decomposing leaves to eat the insects underneath, having found your natural landscaping suits their specific needs.

Have fun creating a yard that birds love to come to — and then have fun watching them!

Traditional style is modern home trend

Traditional home decor is making a comeback. Five years ago, House Beautiful magazine predicted the trend, saying the '90s home would be a synthesis of natural materials and traditional-style with features such as brick exteriors, sloped roofs and gables and divided-light windows.

"Locally, we see many people remodeling or building new homes with a traditional style," said Patrick Bushey of Pella Window & Door Co., the local distributor of Pella windows and doors. "They're selecting products for their home to help create this transformation, from windows to wood floors to cabinets. Traditional, however, does not mean homeowners are willing to sacrifice the convenience and energy efficiency of modern-day products."

Bushey cited an example of the traditional trend — the popularity of simulated-divided-light windows and doors. Many older homes feature true-divided-light windows, which have individual panes of glass in a wood framework. A single true-divided-light window is often composed of six or more individual panes of glass. True-divided-light windows fall short when it comes to energy efficiency because they have so many window pane edges. With more edges, the opportunity for air and energy to enter or escape the home increases.

"Homeowners are requesting simulated-divided-light windows offering the authentic look of true-dividedlight without the energy efficiency problems," Bushey said. "On a simulated-divided-light window, wood grilles are permanently bonded to both the interior and exterior of the insulating glass, creating the illusion of multiple panes of glass. The single unit of glass translates into fewer edges, less energy lost and improved energy savings."

New hand tools make do-it-yourself crafting and repairing a breeze

The image that springs to mind when one thinks of home repairs is that of a big, burly guy with huge forearms, lugging around loud, monster drills, hammers and chisels. Well, the times, they are indeed achanging, thanks to modern technology and some good, old-fashioned ingenuity, tools that were not available to homeowners even as recently as a few years ago can now be purchased, conveniently and affordably, at hardware stores and home centers nationwide. Now, anyone can become a virtual doit-yourself professional.

Most people start doing their own handiwork around the house in order to save money, but many quickly come to realize that the real worth of fixing, creating and/or restoring things themselves is the pleasure that comes with having accomplished the tasks with their very own hands. And, as noted, technological advances have made the job easier, quicker and safer than ever. For example, re-hanging a door in an older house once required the use of a hammer, chisel and knife to relocate recesses.

Now, a product such as the Detail Carver (Model DC-500) from Ryobi, a leading manufacturer of power tools and outdoor power equipment, can do the work of those three products in a fraction of the time and without expending much physical effort at all. Removing built-up layers of old paint from the base of a window is another job that is ideally suited to a Detail Carver. This new product is specifically designed to produce chiseling and/or handcarving results with power tool speed. Further, the lightweight electric carver features a compact body for precise control and a comfortable grip, includes five chisel tips to allow for a variety of carving options, and can be operated at one of two speeds: high for roughing out and larger areas, and low for carving precise details with pinpoint accuracy.

Other uses for such a product include bas relief work and adding exciting new patterns to such old furniture as chairs and tables, and even creating handsome sculptures. Many artistic types turn to a carver when sculpting such figures as ducks and people, which require attention to finer details, a steady hand, and a carving device that lets the craftsperson transform their individual vision into a reality that can be enjoyed for years to come.

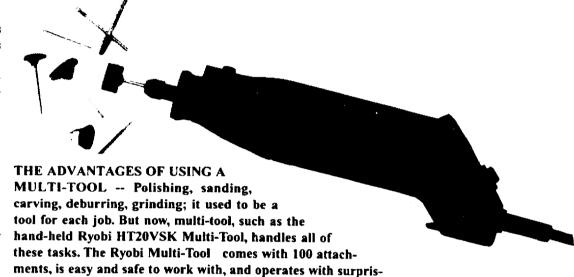

If someone were to ask homeowners a few years back what else besides time and effort prevented them from jumping onto the do-it-yourself bandwagon when it came to creating or repairing at home, another common answer was "I simply don't have the space to store all of the tools I might need to do the job right." Just as most hand tools today are no longer as cumbersome, loud or expensive as they used to be, many tools are now designed to serve, literally, as a variety of tools. In other words, the body of a tool can serve as the power source to which different tool heads can be added. Using such a system will result in the homeowner having access to a closetful of tools without having to actually purchase or fill a closet full of

A prime example of an all-in-one device is the new hand-held Multi-Tool (model HT20VSK) from Ryobi. This just-introduced product is perfect for crafting and fix-it tasks ranging from small space sanding and buffing to sharpening knives and scissors to engraving. This powerful Multi-Tool, which sells for less than $60, comes with a 100-piece kit of bits that can be attached or removed as needed so that it can be used as a grinder, polisher, cutter, sander, filer and/or deburrer when working on everything from glass to ceramics and metal to, of course, wood. Among the many projects that homeowners can turn to confidently with an allpurpose tool are engraving valuables with one's name (for insurance and protection purposes); fine tuning figurines and other artistic endeavors; restoring faded or damaged detail work on table and chair legs, etc.

To ensure that homeowners get the best results from power tools, Ryobi strongly recommends that all product usage directions be followed and that safety glasses be worn to protect one's eyes from any debris. The company also suggests that before embarking on any project beginners should purchase a how-to book in order to learn, among other things, the elements of design and repair and which tools are best for working with a certain material. For more information on Ryobi products and a free catalog, call toll-free, 800-525-2579.

Home Tips

LARGE APPLIANCE COVER — I have noticed that many people put towels on top of their washer and dryer to keep them dust-free. Since our children are married with homes of their own, I had several twin-size sheets and had no use for them. I cut one in half and it makes a perfect cover for both appliances. Since I used a fitted sheet, it fits over the dials and stays in place. Helen C., Altoona, Pa.

THIN POTHOLDERS — Ever wonder what to do with those too-thin, handmade potholders received as gifts or bought at a local bazaar?

Just put one in each of your nonstick pans to keep them from scratching each other when stored. Wendy V., N. Canton, Ohio

EASY PLACEMENT — Recently, I was putting pictures in a purchased collage - the kind with the spaces already cut out.

I was feeling frustrated because I couldn't keep the picture still while it was centered, but then an idea came to me. I taped the mat to the window (with the good side facing out). From there I could easily center each picture perfectly by seeing the shadows of the images. It turned out perfectly! Sandra W., Lighthouse Point, Fla.

GETTING AROUND — Two months ago, I fractured a hip bone and have been on crutches since then.

I am 75 years old and have always been a very active person. I found it very frustrating trying to carry anything with both hands devoted to the crutches, so I have found a great

I wear my shop carpenter's apron drinks, the newspaper and books, pens, paper, dog food for my pet and grain for the yard feeder.

I think that when my hip heals, I'll still be putting on my trusty tool apron every day around the house and yard. Sam D., Gardner, Kan.

BASEMENT STEPS — I got ready to paint the basement steps, but I realized that if I painted them all, I couldn't get back up into the kitchen!

I painted every second one the first day and the remaining steps the next day. Wally M., Astoria, N.Y.
