These are the figures that the council tentatively approved at public hearings held on the budget in May.

The council also voted to spend about $175,000 in CDBG funding for the upcoming fiscal year. The money is provided by the federal government through HUD to Wayne County. The county administers the money on behalf of the city.

"This really is an economical way to do things," said mayor Palmer Heenan. "By letting the county administer the money as our council voted, it saves in bookkeeping expenses. ### Chianti gets outdoor service

By Chip Chapman

Fans of outdoor dining on the Hill will soon have another place to eat and drink.

The Grosse Pointe Farms City Council granted permission Monday night to Chianti Villa Lago restaurant to provide outdoor service.

The restaurant plans to add seating for 22 patrons in front of its building. There is room for 16 to the left of the front door and for six to the right.

The outdoor dining area will be surrounded by a decorative fence. There will not be an awning erected, but the tables will have umbrellas.

"The idea is to add to the streetscape," said proprietor Jimmy Schmidt.

Last month, the Farms city council granted permission to Lucy's Tavern on the Hill for similar outdoor service.

David Pochmara Runs For Open Wayne County Commission Seat

David Pochmara, former Councilman for the City of Harper Woods, has decided to enter the race for Andrew Richner's vacant Wayne County Commission seat. Mr. Pochmara has been active in Republican politics for the last several years and ran for this same seat when the district was configured to favor Democrats and garnered over 28,000 votes against David Cavanaugh.

While on the Harper Woods Council, Mr. Pochmara was responsible for saving the city in excess of $40,000 per year when he insisted that the professional services for the city be put out for bids. He also proposed the implementation of numerous other programs that other communities were already using and would have generated over $400,000 per year for the city.

When Wayne County raised the Real Estate Transfer Tax without a vote of the people. Mr. Pochmara formed Taxpayers Allied for Constitutional Taxation (T.A.C.T.) and sued Wayne County for violation of the Headley Amendment and won his case in the Michigan Supreme Court. Thousands of Wayne County taxpayers will receive rebates as a result of Mr. Pochmara's efforts.

Mr. Pochmara has been married to Carol for 29 years and they have four children. A graduate of Wayne State University with a degree in Public Management, Mr. Pochmara is currently completing Wayne State's Master of Arts in Teaching program. Mr. Pochmara is a teacher at St. Jude School in Detroit.

Voters reject challenge to school board

rosse Pointe school district voters, faced with what many regarded as a serious threat to the future of their excellent public school system, decisively trounced the school board challengers by almost a 2to-1 margin in a heavy vote in Monday's school election.

It was a fine victory for all of the Pointes and especially for Jack Ryan of Grosse Pointe Park and Steve Matthews of Harper Woods, the winning school board candidates, whose top finishes assured the community that the current 4-3 majority will be maintained along with most current policies.

It was also an impressive victory for the new Grosse Pointe Community Network which, organized only a few months ago, endorsed Ryan and Matthews to counter the challenge posed by candidates later endorsed by the Concerned Citizens/Grosse Pointe Taxpayers Association.

Opinion

Ryan, a businessman and former teacher, led the ticket with 6,566 votes. and Matthews, a Wayne State professor, was close behind with 6,372. Michele Montagne Shield led the challengers with 3,252 votes, while James Bordato, the second candidate endorsed by the taxpayers group, won 1,657 votes.

John M. Denler Jr., who was running independently but is a general supporter of the administration, came in fifth with 413 votes.

The victory was also a fine going-away present for Superintendent Edward J. Shine, who had resigned effective July 1. He had made it clear in his resignation statement that pressure from minority members had been a major influence in his decision to accept the superintendency in Rye, N.Y.

The winning candidates, in statements in today's paper to Shirley McShane, the News education writer, expressed the view in general that the election had reflected the community support for the schools.

While we agree with their views, we also express the hope that the minority now will join in support of more school proposals, while reserving its right to express its views at all times. After the one-sided victory by the majority candidates, that attitude would seem to make

In fact, even before the election, both sides had seemed to agree that the future will require additional concern about budgets and spending because the passage of Proposal A and other moves in Lansing put new limitations on revenues.

Perhaps that general agreement can lead to other agreements so that the support for the overall system and many of its programs can be continued with minority backing.

The majority also will need help from the minority to make sure the new superintendent is a person who can meet the needs of the Pointes, and offer the leadership to achieve the district's goals.

The new board members are to be congratulated on their victory, but both they and the five holdover members know they do not face an easy future, especially in matching spending with reduced revenues and in choosing a new superintendent.

To meet these problems, the renewed majority will need all the help it can get, not only from the community but from the minority members who could, if they will, offer much.

At last week's regular board session, the tone was set for a more friendly atmosphere when members of the audience joined in a series of tributes to the two retiring board members, Gloria Konsler and Frank J. Sladen, and the superintendent.

The contributions made by these three people, and the Grosse Pointe Public School System's tradition of excellence, should make it possible for the school district to continue to improve despite the changes wrought by Lansing, the election of two new board members, and the need to replace the superintendent.

No school choice for families?

Grosse Pointe Public School System voters headed for the polls Monday to pick two new school board members, they had another problem to consider: a new law that permits students to attend any school within their intermediate school district that will

The new law covers all of Wayne County, which is a single intermediate district, and would make it possible for students who want to attend school in Grosse Pointe, for example, to transfer" without the consent of the district in which they live.

In addition, the change in the law will require districts to decide by July 1 whether they will accept nonresident students from other districts in the same intermediate district.

Rep. William R. Bryant Jr. of Grosse Pointe Farms, chairman of the House Education Committee, said he had voted for the measure because "it was the least dangerous of all the alternatives" being considered by the Legislature.

As a consequence, Bryant said he had told Superintendent Edward J. Shine of the Grosse Pointe schools that the measure is also "the most discretionary" of the bills on the subject, and he suggested that Shine recommend that the Grosse Pointe school board not participate in the plan.

That is exactly what the superintendent told the Grosse Poionte News he would do at tonight's board meeting. Then he explained his position:

"Our enrollment is increasing, we have just adopted a new strategic plan, and thus we are not in a position to make a decision, as required, by July 1, on such an important matter.'

The fact that the Grosse Pointe board is also scheduled to hold its budget hearing at tonight's meeting, in anticipation of board adoption on June 24, only a week from July 1, also seems to argue against giving the new plan any consideration at

Dole asks abortion tolerance

TTTe welcome Sen. Robert Dole's proposal to add a "declaration of tolerance" for views other than those expressed in past GOP's platforms on the subject of abortion.

The soon-to-be GOP presidential nominee said his proposed language was an effort to "reach out to all Republicans so everybody will understand we can have diversity in our party."

However, Dole would have attracted stronger support from us and others if he had left the choice up to individual women rather than repeating the language of the party's 1992 platform which opposed all abortions and called for a constitutional amendment to outlaw them.

It was significant that while Dole's proposed revision was welcomed by several GOP governors who favor abortion rights and had urged him to take such a step, the move was questioned by Ralph Reed, executive director of the Christian Consistent

"If the senator intends to add language to the preamble of the platform that there is a diversity of views in the party on a To the Editor: wide range of issues, then I do not anticipate any objection.

"But," he went on, "if there is an policy the Grosse Pointe News sure I want to cast my lot with attempt to attach that language to the pro-life plank itself, I doubt if the votes are there on the platform committee."

However, at least one GOP governor, William Weld of Massachusetts, wants the GOP platform to offer equal explanations of both the pro-life and pro-choice positions that would go well beyond Dole's statement.

Right-to-life committees also appear to be divided on the issue, and Pat Buchanan, who had announced earlier his purchase ads to make their intention to keep the pro-life commitment point, Mrs. Shield availed herin the platform as is, to date has given Dole's proposal little attention.

The radical right and the threat to civil liberties will be among the subjects for discussion at the ACLU of Michigan State Convention Arbor on Saturday, June 29.

Two questions were posed for four panelists: First, how can civil libertarians organize to promote American values of tolerance and individual choice? The other was: Why has the radical right been so effective in implementing its agenda in Michigan?

Panelists will be state Rep. Maxine Berman; George Harrison, former superintendent of Romeo public schools; Sharon Howell, professor of rhetoric at Oakland University; and the Rev. Ken Phifer, minister of First Unitarian Universalist church of Ann Arbor.

Moderating the discussion will be Howard Simon, director of the ACLU of Michigan.

A metro cultural tax sought

nce again the idea of a metro area tax to support Detroit's cultural institutions is being talked about, and, of course, getting support from Lansing.

The governor and the Legislature claim credit for cutting state property taxes, which, in fact, they have done. But in many cases Lansing is shoving back onto the local communities the problem of funding important services.

Now the state, which already has sharply reduced its support for Detroit's cultural institutions, seems to favor a metro area tax that could relieve the state of even some of its smaller arts burden.

At the moment, the tax is being discussed as part of the funding package, and that may become necessary. But the state must be required under such an arrangement to continue with at least its present level of funding.

Otherwise, the proposed legislation may let the state off the hook. That would be stated policy. foolish as well as dangerous to the longtime tability of such institutions as the world-class Detroit Institute of Arts.

Many metro communities, including the Pointes, already have voted to tax themselves for improved bus service. Wayne County's taxes continue to rise, and the Perrys are correct that it is our county is asking another property tax policy not to print letters from hike to improve parks.

A majority of Michigan residents apparently feel that an increase in the gax tax theless, do consider requests to is necessary, but a wary Gov. John Engler doesn't want it until after the election, probably to preserve his status as a possible candidate for the GOP nomination for vice president.

But just how much more taxation can local communities take?

Poetic meter is running

The Farms' John Jackson may impress a lot of people with his gift for writing poetry, but his wife, Janet, is probably at the top of the list.

"I'm his biggest fan and promoter," says the charming young lady who works parttime at The Hill's Upper Crust bakery and purveyors of fine foods.

John's latest accomplishment is having his poem, "Quartet," published in this month's Poetry Magazine, one of the nation's most prestigious poetry journals. (You can read it at the Central Library.)

He's also contributed to the Rigdon and Franklin and Paris Review and is seeking a Jean Woo (the church's 1994 publisher for a book-length

You and Your Car

by Tom Fraser & Bob Hoover Sales Mgr.

The most common sign that indicates that your car is in need of wheel alignment is that it drifts or pulls to one side on a straight stretch of road. Other telltale signs include looseness in the steering wheel, a steering wheel that is off-center when the front wheels are straight, a sensation that the car is wandering over the road, and hard steering. The experience of any of these unusual sensations in the steering wheel should prompt a wheel alignment, which need not otherwise be done periodically without cause. Another good reason to suspect a wheel alignment problem is abnormal tire wear. Vibration felt in the steering wheel, floor, or seat of the car may also be symptomatic of misalignment, but the cause of theses problems is usually unbalanced wheel/tire assemblies. It may also be that tire inflation is incorrect, the lug nuts are loose, or the tires are out of round.

Beyond drifting or pulling as a warning sign, you can also check your tires for wear to see if you need an alignment. ### We've met the youth and they are us

We love having house guests. Now that our chicks have all left the nest, we have a couple spare rooms ready to receive friends. Entertaining old friends in our home permits us the luxury of leisurely conversation at the dinner or breakfast table where the dialogue exchanges can be more than passing commentary,

A few weeks ago we were fortunate to host three young adults. We had known two of the three from birth and the young man brought his wife. Their parents had been childhood pals of ours and, for a number of years, our children had shared a similar relationship with the next generation.

After our two families were separated geographically, the parents continued to share occasional vacations and visit each other. Our children went off to different colleges, married and went off to seek their fortunes. Communication with the younger generation fizzled to Christmas cards and news gathered from parents and weddings.

After marrying and working for a few years, our friends' daughter, son and his wife decided to pursue more academic degrees. The young husband and wife graduated from the University of Michigan Business School, and the other sibling earned her master's and Ph.D. degrees after graduating with her B.S. from another Midwestern university.

Each of the three was involved in an unrelated field, one in product design and marketing, one in finance and one in animal biology. The latter has been offered a grant and is taking a year's sabbatical to study in Kenya and Israel. These "silly kids" used to give their parents' fits. I remember the Little League games where the boy was literally in left field watching the birds fly by, impervious to the game tak-

His sister was and still is one of the great gigglers of all time. She was a "spunky" teen and got into her share of partying and though she always was an academic scholar, I never could have foreseen her future. She now lectures an average of 350 students a class and apologized for arriving at our house late because she was correcting exam papers. The new bride graduated first in her class and has an avalanche of job offers, as does her husband.

My husband and I looked across the dining room table and asked, "Who ARE these people?" Now, this is the kind of babble that used to get me in trouble with our own perfect progeny. They would roll their eyes at each other when I would go on about "other people's children." So, I go on record with the following disclaimer: "Our own flesh and blood are perfection. There are five degrees in higher education spread among them and we wouldn't trade any of them for another child, not to mention the joy that their children have brought to us."

Their generation has taken a lot of heat. They have been accused of being raised by television and vilified about their choices of music, literature and fashions, to name a few. We tend to overlook their successes and their courage. We have much to learn from them, starting with the discipline in the way they treat their bodies through diet and exercise. The ways in which they have taken up the gauntlet in this technological maze that few of our generation can grapple with is reason enough for our praise and admiration.

You and I can sleep well knowing that our futures are safe and that not everyone under 30 is Roller-Blading straight to hell with an electronic gizmo in his ear. The work ethic is alive and well and in capable hands.

A gas company that's much more than a gas company? It's no pipe dream.

You get a lot more than natural gas from your natural gas company these days. For example, we've just introduced Home Protection Plus," a new program to protect you against costly appliance repairs. To help you confidently purchase natural gas appliances such as grills and fireplaces, our Ideal Energy Dealer Network connects you, tollfree, to qualified dealers in your area.

Then, too, we now offer helpful products ourselves, such as carbon monoxide detectors and gaslights. Plus advanced technologies such as cogeneration that supplies cost-effective thermal and electrical energy in commercial/industrial applications. We're also putting natural-gas-powered vehicles on the road (and Zambonis on the ice) to protect the environment. We're even turning

There isn't a better time to borrow for home improvements, trips, a car, debt consolidation, or anything else you need. Because now Michigan National Bank is offering Equi:Money®-money you can borrow from the equity in your home-at a low introductory rate, currently just 6.25%. That's a full 2% below the prime lending rate! Plus, the interest you do pay is usually tax deductible. But you must apply by July 31,1996. So make it your prime concern to look into it while the rate is still below that.

For information or to apply by phone, call I-800-CALL-MNB

The discounted introductory variable rate of 6.25% is based on The Wall Street Journal prime rate minus 2.00% good through December 31, 1996. After that, the regular rates will apply. For example, the Annual Percentage Rates in effect as of March 1, 1996 were 8.75% for lines of credit of $50,000 to $250,000, 9.25% for lines of $25,000 to $49,999, and 10.25% for lines of $5,000 to $24,999. The APRs are variable, subject to change monthly and based on The Wall Street Journal prime rate plus the applicable margin. Maximum APR is 18%. Offer limited to new accounts and line increases of $5,000 or more. $40 annual fee after the first year. There are no other costs to open your account. Please consult your tax advisor regarding tax deductibility. Property insurance is required. Applications must be received by July 31, 1996.

Grosse Pointe owners bring unusual cars to 'Eyes'

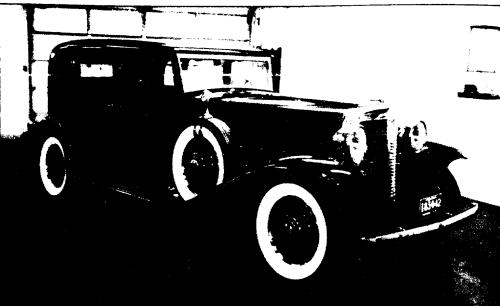

Grosse Pointers are adding fascinating history and great anecdotes, along with their vehicles, to the 1996 Eyes on Classic Design.

La Verne and Marlene Johnson have taken some trips in this 1931 Marmon Sixteen, which will be shown at Eyes on Classic Design June 16 at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford bring their blue-black 1931 16cylinder Marmon to this year's Eyes. Veterans of the Concours d'Elegance at Meadow Brook, this will be their first time showing one of their vehicles at Eyes.

It's too big to be classified as a muscle car, but this Chrysler 300C was the most muscular production car of 1957 and is a favorite of owner Jim Krausmann, who will show it at Eyes on Classic Design.

Johnson said he and a grandson spent over 20 hours on their backs under the elegant sedan "getting it cleaned

"Like our other cars, this is "We like to a driver," he said. "We like to get our vehicles out and go places in them."

The 200-hp aluminum V-16 responds. The Marmon is a stately and elegant car as befits a vehicle built for the American aristocracy. Powerful, comfortable, luxurious. Johnson said his car cost about $5,000 new, at a time when many cars sold for under $1,000.

But even the aristocracy was running out of money in the early '30s and the Depression killed the legendary nameplate in 1933.

Howard C. Marmon graduated from the University of California at Berkeley just about 100 years ago with a degree in mechanical engineering and joined the family business, Nordyke & Marmon Co., of Indianapolis, which manufactured flour milling machinery.

Having his name on the building didn't hurt, but Marmon was a brilliant engineer and he built his first automobile in 1902, an advanced car with an overhead-valve air-cooled V-2 engine. He built a second car the following year, a V-4, and six of these were built and sold, mostly to friends, in Production began in earnest in 1905 and Marmon moved up to a V-6 engine. Twentyfive Marmons were sold that year. In 1906, Marmon built a long-wheelbase luxury car with a 65-hp V-8 engine and showed it at the New York Automobile Show. Marmons got larger and more luxurious through the years, but never achieved enough volume to generate a profit. In 1926, Nordyke and Marmon sold its flour machinery business to Allis-Chalmers and reorganized as the Marmon Motor Car Co. A 'Little Marmon" was introduced in 1927, but had scant impact on the market. A series of lower-priced cars with eight-cylinder engines, including one called the Roosevelt, boosted sales to over 22,000 in 1929, but the stock market crash ended that Marmon introduced its most magnificent machine in 1931, the Sixteen. But Cadillac had hit the market with a V-16 first. Sales totaled 86 in 1933 when the company went into receivership. Marmon went out as it had come in - building advanced cars of utter magnificence.

It took Jim Krausmann 13 years to put his black 1957 Chrysler 300 back together.

"I spent 11-1/2 years thinking about it and a year-and-ahalf actually doing it," he said. "In fact, I was thinking of just getting rid of it until a friend who has an identical model gave me his keys and suggested I take his for a drive. "I got to work on my 300 the Fin (BLK FIN on the license plate) wasn't without its incidents.

"Jim was so excited about the project he forgot to winterize the engine and when cold weather arrived the block cracked," said Andrea Krausmann. "Last summer he wound up in the hospital from breathing fumes while painting it."

The sleek "Forward Look" Chrysler, now nearly perfect even with its original interior, is a driver, not a "trailer princess." The Krausmanns took it east last fall and Andrea drove it in her first drag race. She didn't think to press the transmission button to switch it out of first gear, so she not only lost out to her competitor, the oversight caused the engine to put a slight bump on the underside of the hood.

"There aren't too many cars that will go 50 mph in first gear like this one," Jim laughed.

He pointed to one of the car's more unusual options: a retractable 16-1/3 record player that emerges from the center of the dashboard.

"I'd love to have some records for it - I'd even take Perry Como," he said.

The Krausmanns have an unusual car in the family room of their house in Grosse Pointe Park -- a chrometrimmed lavender and white Dodgem. It sits in a corner of the room near an ancient gasoline pump and service station air pump.

It's pretty heavy, so you can't lift it up to see under it, but if you could you would see its front drive," said Krausmann.

Chrysler introduced its 300letter series in 1955, a fullsized luxury sedan with a 300hp hemi V-8 engine, one of the fastest cars made in America. Krausmann's '57 was third in the series, the 300C. The engine had grown to 392 cubic inches and it was the fastest production car made in the country. Its front end looks like the nose of a jet fighter and it has the power to back up that look.

This was the peak of Virgil Exner's "Forward Look." Tailfins were large, but well proportioned. Krausmann said he likes the lines of the hardtop coupe (which his car is) better than the convertible.

The 300-letter cars continued through 1965, when the last 300L was built. By then, engines were over 400 cubic inches. Chrysler brought out a high-performance 300-H model in 1970, but this was not really part of the letter series. The H stood for Hurst (Hurst Performance Corp., which modified the Chrysler two-door hardtop).

Krausmann also has one of these rare cars, which he showed last year at the Eyes on Classic Design show.

Harry Jewett II is probably the only owner to show a vehicle at Eyes on Classic Design with his family name on it. His grandfather ran Paige Motors in Detroit. The company built the Jewett for only a few years: 1923-26.

"It was a cheaper version of the Paige," Jewett said. "It had a big in-line six-cylinder engine which made it popular out west where it was able to climb mountains."

Jewett said his 1923 Jewett Touring car has been in the family since the early 1950s.

It had been living in Syracuse. N.Y., and working, for at least part of its life, as a taxi cab.

"Barney Pollard, the famous Detroit collector, gave it to my father," Jewett said.

Jewetts are fairly rare now, he said. "I knew of 19 of them at one time, including one in rough condition in St. Clair Shores. I haven't driven mine in over a year. It's an old restoration.

"The car is presently up in St. Clair, where I'm having some work done on it."

The first Harry Jewett made a fortune in mining around the turn of the century and decided to try the same in the then infant auto industry. He acquired a car designed by Andrew Bachle which was being promoted by Fred O.

Since Jewett didn't know much about autos, he installed Paige as president of his newly formed Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. in 1909.

In 1910, having learned a bit about cars, he decided that the Paige was "a piece of junk" and fired Paige, took over himself and hired a new engineer-ing department to design a new car. Paige sales gradually picked up and the first sixcylinder Paige appeared in 1915.

Paige gained a reputation for graceful styling and good performance. A smaller companion car was introduced in 1922, named after the president and founder, Harry Jewett. It was produced until 1927, when Jewett decided he had had enough and sold the company to the Graham brothers, who reorganized it as Graham-Paige Motors Corp.

Part of the Graham-Paige manufacturing plant still exists on Warren and Lonyo on Detroit's west side.

'Eyes on Classic Design' traces history of automobile industry

Car buffs — and regular folks - will get to review the history of the American automobile industry at the "Eyes on Classic Design" auto display, Sunday, June 16.

The annual celebration of automotive design on the grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House will run from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tickets are $12.

It's important, however, not to lose sight of what's really significant about "Eyes on Classic Design." The event is a fundraiser for the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology, a Grosse Pointe-based non-profit organization that offers programs and support for people who are blind or visually impaired.

Car enthusiasts will have a chance to see a retrospective of the first 100 years of the automobile history in the United States, said Renee Burke, event spokesman.

In keeping with the theme, cars spanning the entire history of the industry will be on display, instead of from just one period, as was the practice in previous years.

"There will be a Quadracycle built in 1896 by the Duryea brothers in Springfield, Mass.," said John Bissa of the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology. "Historians believe the building of that vehicle was the beginning of the auto industry in this coun-

The DIO maintains several support groups, Dara said. Two groups are for seniors. One meets twice a month in the DIO offices; the other meets once a month at the Whittier Towers, a retirement center on Detroit's east side. During the first DIO meeting for seniors, there are discussions on where to get help for visual problems, Dara said. The second meeting usually includes a speaker. Meetings at the Whittier usually alternate between lectures and

"These are fiercely independent people," Dara said. "They want to remain that way, and we do all that we can to help them maintain the kind of life they want. The Gorey resource center also contains over 300 low-vision aids. They range from special lined paper to talking watches to a closed-circuit TV magnifier that displays documents in an enlarged form, making them easier to read." The DIO also has a young adult support group, Dara said. These are mostly people in their 20s and 30s who have been losing their vision since

Tough questions; tough decisions

By Robi Haris

Regional director, FOCUS-GP

Working with teenagers full time, as the regional director of the Fellowship of Christians in Universities and Schools (FOCUS), I often ponder the tough questions and decisions facing today's adolescents as they see them. And what a viewpoint it is!

Adolescents (and their parents) have their work cut out for them. Growing up in a society that says "no fear" or "if it feels good, go for it, as long as you are safe," teenagers are receiving all kinds of mixed messages that cause a great deal of stress in their lives.

As a result of these messages, young people are having more and more difficulty making wise and informed decisions. Even with all the consequences that follow, it is no wonder that alcohol, drug use and sexual activity are on the rise among teenagers.

Accompanying the mixed messages is a sense of hopelessness and emptiness for both parents and teenagers alike.

Tough questions like "What should I do?" "Where do I go for help and love?" and "What is the purpose of my life?" are not only being complicated by the mixed messages of society but also by divorce, abuse of all kinds, and a general breakdown in the moral fabric of society.

As a result, the answers teenagers are coming up with can be very unhealthy. This dangerous mix of tough questions and the accompanying false solutions can cause a hopelessness in the youth of today that has never been seen before.

Jesus Christ came on the scene to a similar situation where people were feeling very hopeless. He came at a time when people were asking tough questions and making tough decisions. They were looking for a Messiah, a deliverer, to guide them.

This parallels the youth of today as so many of them are looking for a Messiah to guide them. Unfortunately, many of them are searching through alcohol, drugs and unhealthy peer relationships.

The wonderful thing about the message of Jesus is, while the tough questions and decisions may be different from 2000 years ago, the answers are the same. He offers hope through His message of guidance and love; He gives people hope for their own lives, and freedom from sin. Through Christ we have the opportunity for a personal relationship with God the ultimate guide.

Why can one say this? Well, the cross is one part of the puzzle, and the empty tomb is the other. In other words, He conquered death and therefore is still with us to give us this sense of hope. He is able to answer the question, "What are we all about?"

It is my desire to help teenagers have the opportunity to investigate the word of God in practical ways, so they can see for themselves how His word can guide them through the rough waters of adolescence.

A personal relationship with Jesus is where hope lies in a world that presents teenagers with so much uncertainty. Regular attendance at their own churches and active participation in a youth ministry like FOCUS can be instrumental in the development of this personal relationship with Jesus Christ.

It is this same personal relationship with Jesus Christ that guided me through the tough and uncertain times of my youth.

As the father of a 2-year-old girl, soon to be a father again in January, I feel Christ continues to guide me through the rough waters of being an adult

Christ has the ability to cross over time, culture, and generations to answer the question "What are we all about?" by saying, simply, "Come follow me, and I will show you the way."

FOCUS-GP (Fellowship of Christians in Universities and Schools) is a non-denominational Christian youth ministry. It serves middle and high school students in Grosse Pointe.

Real Men still order 'the usual'

The American Dietetic Association

Healthful food items on restaurant menus may be like the various tools men collect in their garages nice to have around, but seldom used for home improvements.

A recent survey of callers to The American Dietetic Association's Consumer Nutrition Hot Line showed that 98 percent of male callers thought restaurants should offer healthful menu items.

When it comes to actually ordering, however, only 54 percent said they frequently or always select a healthful item. About 66 percent of the men surveyed told ADA that they go out to eat at least once or twice

These results are consistent with conclusions drawn from ADA's 1995 "Winning Strategies," a national survey of men's nutrition attitudes and behaviors. About 82 percent of the men surveyed said they were very concerned about nutrition, but only one-half reported making any changes in their diets within the previous year.

"The gap between men's nutrition awareness and action may be related to their fear of having to give up their favorite foods," says ADA president Ronni Chernoff, Ph.D., a registered dietitian.

It is estimated that 30 percent of men's caloric intake and dietary fat is consumed outside the home. Chernoff said eating right when dining out can help men achieve and maintain a healthy weight and may contribute to health maintenance and disease preven-

"Five of the leading causes of disease and death in men are linked to diet. These include hypertension, cancer, stroke, diabetes and coronary artery disease," she said.

With a little planning, Chernoff said eating on the run can be healthful. When eating out, she suggests:

 Choose broiled, baked, steamed or poached items instead of fried. Order lean cuts of meats, fish and chicken with the skin removed. Ask for salad dressings and sauces to be served on the side, to limit calorie and fat intake.

· Eat whole grain breads, bread sticks or Italian and French breads rather than rich croissants. Moreover, Chernoff said ADA's "Winning Strategies" men's nutrition campaign aims to heighten awareness of men's health and fitness.

Men can call the ADA's National Center for Nutrition and Dietetics consumer nutrition hot line at (800) 366-1655. Registered dietitians are available to answer food and nutrition questions from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Callers can also get referrals to registered dietitians in their areas for individual or group counseling near During the month of June, the hot line will feature a special prerecorded message on food, nutrition and physical activity for men.

With headquarters in Chicago, the 68,000-member American Dietetic Association is the nation's largest group of food and nutrition professionals. ADA serves the public through the promotion of optimal nutrition, health, and well-being. Established in 1990, ADA's National Center for Nutrition and Dietetics provides objective food and nutrition information to the public.

SOME OF THE BEST FRIEN A MOTHER-TO-BE ASK FOR

When you're expecting a new addition to the family, your relationship with a medical professional is more important than ever. The Henry Ford Medical Group Obstetrician/Gynecologists and Certified Nurse Midwives on the East Side provide individualized care during your pregnancy, from prenatal exams and education to the delivery itself and follow-up care.

You can choose the Board Certified Obstetrician/Gynecologist or the Certified Nurse Midwife that best meets your needs and desires with the added confidence of knowing that the entire team is working together for you and your new baby.

"My patients depend on me to help them make the hest choices for their delivery. I want all mothers to have a wonderful experience, but each in their own individual way."

Shari L. Maxwell, MD, FACOG

Dr. Maxwell received her post doctoral training in Obstetrics & Gynecology at Henry Ford Hospital and is particularly interested and skilled in gynecologic surgery.

"It's important to take into account all aspects of a woman's health during pregnancy and childbirth. A healthy lifestyle, including exercise and a well-balanced diet, are good indicators for a healthy pregnancy."

Scott B. Ransom, DO, FACOG

 $\label{eq:decomposition} \textbf{Dr. Ransom is Division Head/Medical Director for Obstetrics \& Gynecology for the Henry Ford}$ Health System Eastern Region and also has a strong background in advanced pelvic surgery.

"Sometimes the most comforting part of childbirth is simply knowing what is happening and why. I encourage my patients to ask questions and to attend a Childbirth Preparation class during their pregnancy."

. Islam H. Sidky, MD, FACOG

Dr. Sidky also is specially trained in microsurgery.

"I believe that the role of today's Certified Nurse Midwife is to ensure that every patient's experience with health care is safe, satisfying and family centered."

Catherine Collins-Fulea, MSN, CNM

Catherine Collins-Fulea is director of Nurse Midwifery Services for Henry Ford Health System. Midwives provide patient care for healthy women from puberty through menopause, with special emphasis on pregnancy, childbirth and family planning.

"HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION" BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♠

Total freedom from error in our game is unheard of, but a few have the skills to flirt a little with its eminence.

One is Paul Soloway of Mill Creek, Washington. To date, he has gathered more bridge decorations than any player living or dead in the modern contract game. He is the leading master point holder of all time with well over 43,000. That's some 8,000 more than Mike Passell who's in the placement position. He's a three time winner of the Bermuda Bowl and a world bridge federation grand master. He was an original member of Ira Corn's Dallas Aces that in '74 brought the championship back to the U.S.A. after 16 years of the Italian Blue Team's dominance. He also holds 21 North American championships; three Barry Crane top 500 wins; over 90 regional victories and a winner of the prestigious Cavendish Invitational. He's every bridge players bridge player. At 55 he's still the most sought after professional playing and if it weren's for a mild bear sought after professional playing and if it weren't for a mild heart condition, his pace at play would be even greater. Yet he's home in the Pacific Northwest much of the time with his wife and family. As he says, "It's what I truly look forward to."

His favorite partner is Bobby Goldman and this relationship developed when Ira brought the aces together in 1968. Their bidding system is singularly significant. When vulnerable they play Standard American five card majors, otherwise Precision. You can't begin to recognize what that requires in one's concentration.

I know of no pair playing who has more respect for each other. The total confidence they display at the table is absolute. Each in real life is the others defender and that veneration was recently tested and the topic of much talk in our North American bridge community.

Today's hand isn't one of those complicated, knotty problems intended to show his brilliance. It is, though, a beautiful exhibit of his extremely careful play which he is renowned for.

N/S Vuinerable Paul Int

As you can see, west got off to a devastating lead, but that can be expected in top flight duplicate competition. True to every fine player's doctrine, Paul counted winners and losers before his first play from dummy. There seemed to be 3 spade, I heart, I diamond and 4 club winners if the latter suit could be established before the opponents could win 2 hearts, 2 diamonds and a club.

Paul ducked the diamond in dummy, east winning his queen. The heart switch was won by declarer's ace! Surprised? Well don't be. Paul had his declarer play set for nine winners and he didn't intend to let east again be on lead if at all possible. At trick (3) a spade to dummy's queen and a small club back to his eight when east played low. West won his jack and played his diamond eight. Declarer won dummy's ace and then ran four high clubs and three more spades when east's jack fell. In all he won 10 tricks for a tie for a top. Many fine players weren't as careful losing 2 hearts, 2 diamonds and 1 club.

No player has total freedom from error, but Paul has the right to dabble with its eminence.

19th century Lear is real, no mythical king

Shakespeare's "King Lear" is one of the theater's greatest master works. It probes so many aspects of human nature that it is virtually impossible to absorb them all in a single sitting.

The character of Lear alone is incredibly multi-faceted. Best known are Lear's frailties of age and his raging frustration when thwarted by selfseeking offspring. What follows is the breakdown of his personality.

There is his failure as a father (accustomed to absolute obedience) to judge the true character of his children. And there is his heart-rending reconciliation with the loyal daughter he misunderstood. There are also the temptations of the role's theatrical potential. Many actors and directors have played it for the histrionics, climaxing the performance with a thundering delivery of the famous storm scene and a piercing cry of grief as he comes on stage in the finale carrying the dead Cordelia.

Those are highly dramatic and moving experiences, but more visceral than thoughtful. At the Stratford Festival this summer, William Hutt and artistic director Richard Monette have chosen another, wonderfully evocative approach. This is Hutt's third crack at the role in as many decades there. Being in his mid-70s and at a pinnacle in his acting powers, he has found his way to a profoundly moving characterization. Hutt is a Lear to touch the heart.

Like a regal chief executive, he acts decisively and grandly, but always with an air of logical clarity. It is a super realistic approach that lends contemporary credibility. This is helped by props and costumes setting the scene in the late 19th century, close enough to our times to feel realistic.

So this is no mythical king of bygone days. He is a real father and boss, accustomed to running the show. He is ready to turn the reins over to his children but wants to retain status and privilege and, irrationally, much control as well.

A modern audience can relate to this Lear's frustration as he is thrust aside by avaricious offspring eager to take over. The heirs squabbling with their father and each other bring to mind the breakdown of a wealthy, or royal dwily, where the younger generation is selfish, self-indulgent and even brutally cruel, without restraint. Modern TV series also come to mind, even episodes from the soaps, but they are hopelessly superficial in comparison. The reward of this approach is the remarkable clarity it allows in the reading of the lines. Much of the time, Lear is thoughtful and conversational. As a result, the revelation of Shakespeare's insights into man's mind and soul is exceptional.

Nowhere is it more telling than in the exchanges between Hutt's Lear and Jordan Pettle's touching Fool.

Almost childlike, Pettle voices repeatedly the truth and consequences of Lear's folly as though telling the emperor he has no clothes. He makes such

State of the Arts

a gentle, loving touchstone that Lear's acceptance and amusement over what is often

ble. Both even give rise with surprising frequency to the relief of ironic laughter in the audience. As Pettle clings defensively to Lear's leg in the torment of the storm, the relationship is most moving. Like Hutt, Pettle delivers the richly meaningful lines with clarity and sincerity, rather than dramatic exaggeration or a jesterlike affectation. The impact is intense.

One of the most effective touches in Patrick Clark's costume designs is putting the cynical, illegitimate Edmund in clerical collar. His ugly betrayal of step-brother, father, friends and lovers becomes even more disgusting.

But as in real life, neither hero nor villain is all good or evil. Wayne Best's suave and gentlemanly Duke of Cornwall only gradually reveals himself as ruthlessly ambitious and capable of the worst brutality.

Diane D'Aquila and Martha Burns, both malevolently excellent as Lear's ungrateful daughters, Regan and Goneril. almost make reasonable sense as they suggest that their father tone down his lifestyle in their homes. Even Edmund comes up convincingly with one act of contrition.

Throw in a beautifully staged symbolic battle and a realistic and exciting sword fight, and this new "King Lear" comes off at the basic level as a really gripping drama with tear-jerking power that was evident in the opening night audience.

If not every line can be intelligible, it is not surprising in the rise and fall of emotional dynamics, the competition of sound effects or occasional lapses in articulation by some performers.

The last is a matter for the festival's ongoing program in speech training and might warrant some special attention for Lear's daughters and perhaps the Fool as well. It is minor in the context of the show's overall excellence.

Lear is too rich to absorb at one sitting anyhow. "King Lear" will continue at the Festival Theatre until Nov. 2. For tickets, accommodations and information, call (800) 576-1600.

Cleaning out the IN box

This is the time of year, right after the end of school and graduations and such, that everyone's IN box tends to be full. So is mine. Ever since the holidays I have been tucking away items that I wanted to share with you. Here goes:

If you are heading off to London or other parts of

By Cynthia Boal Janssens

Europe for a summer stay, you might consider renting a flat rather than a motel room. Keith Prowse, an agency already well-known for booking theater and concert tickets, has published a brochure detailing some 4,000 apartments for rent. Most stays are for seven nights, but some properties will accept only one or two nights, so this could work for anyone.

When you consider how dinky many European hotel rooms are, this is a nice option particularly for families. Most units offer housekeeping services and a fully equipped kitchen, another potential savings. Contact Keith Prowse at (800) 669-7469; e-mail: tickets@keithprowse.com; Internet address, http://www.keithprowse.com.

The American Water Ski Association is offering a free newsletter about the sport to kids of all ages. Those who sign up become part of a special Summer Kids' Water Ski Club and receive a membership card, pogs and stickers.

Those who enjoy active vacations sometimes find cruises a bit too tame. However, this summer, World Explorer Cruises, the company that has offered educational sailings to Alaska for many years, not only has a larger ship (the SS Enchanted Seas) but also offers a program called "Bike and Cruise Alaska."

On selected sailings, escorted bicycle tours will be offered in eight ports: Ketchikan, Sitka, Seward, Valdez, Skagway, Juneau, and Wrangell, Alaska, as well as Victoria, B.C. In each port, cyclists can opt for short or long tours with a range of anywhere from 12 to 50 miles.

What a great way to see glorious Alaska up close! (By the way, whenever people ask me my favorite destination in the world, Alaska almost always tops my list.)

These trips are offered during the seven-day sailing departing July 23; and on the 14-day sailings departing July 30, Aug. 13 and 27. Prices for the seven-day cruise are from $1,145-$1,195 and for the 14day cruise are $2,295-$3,995. The biking package is an additional $495 per person and includes escorted tours in eight ports, bike rental, meals during the rides and a train ride in Skagway. Space is limited to 35 cyclists on each cruise. Call (800) 854-3835 for more details.

Antique-hunting is the theme of two six-night barge cruises in England offered by Kemwel's Premier Selections. The cruises are on the 12-passenger Actief. Sailings begin at Windsor Castle with stops at Eton, Marlow, Hurley and Henley, Wallingford and Pangbourne and Oxford. These cruises will combine a leisurely trip on the Thames (believe me, these barges only go 5-7 knots) as it winds its way past villages, farms and woodlands. There will be lectures by antiques experts and visits to members of the Thames Valley Antiques Association. Departure dates are Oct. 27 and Nov. 3 and sailings are priced from $1,690 per person double, not including airfare. (Advice: Go for the biggest cabin on board, you will not regret the expense.) Call (800) 234-4000.

If you like chi-chi resorts, but hate the prices, it is time to take advantage of low season rates in the Caribbean. For example, on chic St. Barts in the French West Indies, the SeaHorse Hotel offers a rate of $140 for two persons in a junior suite; on unspoiled Nevis, the four Plantation Inns, once great houses of sugar plantations, offer rates from $120 to $210 for two, with some meals included; on remote Plantation House offers a cottage for two with breakfast for $140 and on lush St. Lucia, East Winds Inn - a handful of cottages scattered on a private beach - offers an all-inclusive rate of $390 for two per night. Most of these rates are good through mid-December. For more information, contact a travel agent or call (800) 223-9832.

Most of us who enjoy the outdoors and photography dream of taking a safari one day. Here are some possibilities. In 1996, Natural Habitat Adventures has scheduled three different "off-the-beaten-path" safaris to East Africa, all utilizing luxury tented camps and secluded lodges. Programs begin in Nairobi. Most popular is the 16-day "Hidden Kenya and Tanzania" tour ($4,295). It visits Lake Elmenteita, Soysambu Wildlife Sanctuary, the Masai Mara Game Reserve and the Ngorongoro Conservation area. Departures are July 27, August 11 and Dec. 28 in 1996, and Feb. 9, 1997. The "Kenya Migration Photography Safari" is timed to coincide with the millions of zebra and wildebeest that migrate through the Masai Mara Game Reserve. This program is Sept. 7-21 ($4,595).

Travelers with more time (and the money) will want to opt for the "Ultimate East Africa" safari which incorporates the best of Kenya and Tanzania and includes the rare opportunity to track mountain gorillas in Uganda. The program is 18 days with departures on July 25, 1996 and May 23 and June 11, 1997. It is limited to nine travelers.

For information and reservations, call (800) 543-8917. However, when booking such an ambitious and costly trip, I always recommend using a travel agent.

In these days when everyone views "discount airlines" with trepidation, I am almost reluctant to mention charters. However, these are deals that you should at least consider. If you are heading to Ireland or England this summer, your best bet may be American Trans Air charters on widebody L1011's. These trips from Chicago to Ireland's Shannon airport have been going for five years with no mishaps. The price for most flights is around $650 round-trip plus $40 in taxes. ATA also offers flights from New York's JFK airport. Contact your travel agent or call (800) 621-7442.

Drew Hofmann led a balanced Mets' attack with three hits and three RBI. The Mets broke open a close game with five runs in the third inning and four in the fourth. Rob Rottach, Andrew Beer and Jeff Schroeder each had two hits for the Mets, while Beer and Matt Harris homered. Mark and Stu Boynton each had extra-base hits for the Yankees, while Brad Johnson had a key hit and played well at second base.

Mets 6, Cardinals 5

Kyle Tannheimer drove in the winning run in the bottom of the sixth inning. Pat Danzer, Andrew Amato and Kyle Hacias had key hits for the Cardinals. Matt Harris homered for the Mets, while Charlie MacKinnan and Dave Wenzel led the defense.

Mets 8, White Sox 3

The Mets scored five runs in the fifth to overcome a 3-1 deficit, then added a pair of insurance runs in the sixth. Drew Hofmann pitched the first four innings and Matt Harris got the win in relief. Marty Van Amerongen and Chris DesRosiers led the pitching and hitting for the White Sox and Taylor Morawski had a key double.

Mets 7, Dodgers 6

The Mets won the nine-inning marathon on Kyle Tannheimer's sec-ond game-ending hit of the season. Jeff Schroeder and Matt Harris handled the Mets' pitching, while Nick Hoban and Miles Talbot made key contribu-tions at bat and in the field. # Container gardening can be fun, especially when you don't have the space to plant a large garden

For the dedicated gardener, anywhere is a likely spot to plant something and anything is a likely container to plant it in.

It is not necessary to have an acre of land to have a garden. For millions of people even a small plot is not available — apartment dwellers, people who live on houseboats, people whose occupations keep them on the road in campers or mobile homes. Container gardening is the answer.

As a matter of fact, the size of our gardens is shrinking. In 1988, the average United States back yard vegetable garden covered 300 square feet. By 1993 it had shrunk to 200 square feet, according to the National Gardening Association.

However, container gardening is on the rise. It solves the problem of lack of land and can turn even the smallest of spaces into an exuberant garden. If you have a balcony, patio, window sills, small porch or deck or front stoop, you can have a garden.

Containers are fun. Anything will do as long as it is big enough to hold some small rooks in the bottom for drainage, potting soil and some plants. It is surprising what will grow. Many kinds of herbs and greens can be grown on sunny window sills as houseplants in the winter, making them available for salads at a moment's notice.

By Ellen Probert Williamson

Lettuce, tomatoes and carrots can be grown in pots; climbing beans can be grown on a small trellis at the end of a deck or on strings against a window. A popular idea in Victorian times was to train ivy to grow around window frames, or even around the picture moldings in the parlor.

The Victorians were very much into container gardening. Terrariums were very popular and nearly every home had a "Wardian Case." This was a large glass tank rather like a fish tank but with a lid. It was a development of a terrarium and used in much the same way.

This idea is one which we can use. A glass anything will do — a fish tank, large punch bowl, glass jar or a glass cheese dome. Small pebbles, some charcoal, potting soil, a few shells or other decorative items and appropriate plants for the shape and size of your container and you should have a contained garden to delight you for years to come.

Outdoor container gardens have many advantages. One is that you can move them around. They can be moved to have more or less sun, come inside if the weather is too hot or too cold, provide variety instead of the same landscape day after day, and create any interesting grouping you might want. In a rooftop garden for an apartment dweller, potted small trees, a window box vegetable garden and a collection of interesting pottery filled with flowers can create a charming oasis in the midst of a city.

Sometimes, however, container gardening can get out of hand. A ceramic sculptured head sprouting green grass for hair, for instance, discarded bathroom fixtures overflowing with petunias, a beached rowboat on a cottage lawn laden with geraniums or a pair of old, scuffed boots brimming with pansies do add humor at least.

In the ancient city of Pompeii, urns and planters were used extensively inside and outside of Pompeian homes.

Now studies are being conducted to find out what kinds of plants were used in these containers in the homes of well-to-do citizens of the time.

We are beginning to know what container plants were used in the ancient world.

Pompeii was one of the first cities to make container gardening fashionable. It was a walled city and houses were very close together, leaving very little room for gardens.

Many householders had country homes as well, where there were extensive gardens, but in their city homes they had houseplants.

A garden can be as large as a country-sized farm, or as small as a single flower pot, but for gardeners, it's always an experience.

Home Tips

Refill tip — When it's time to refill my salt and pepper shakers, I put a strip of transparent tape over the openings on top.

I can just turn over the shakers, pour in the desired ingredients, plug up the hole, turn it upright and easily remove the tape. It works like a charm! Cecilia T., Moline, Ill.

Check it out — I use the boxes my checks come in to compartmentalize two big drawers in my vanity. They're plenty sturdy and a great size! Jill F., Marlton, N.J.

Untangle snags — I often get snags on my sweaters when I'm at work or out somewhere and I don't have a needle handy.

I use either a fishhook-type earring or a paper clip by pushing it up through the sweater from underneath and using it like a needle to pull the snag through to the other side. Helen W., Genoa City, Wis.

Scoop it — My friend was surprised to see me pour one cup of water into my full-size coffee maker and put one scoop of coffee in the basket and come out with a cup of perfect coffee.

She thought you had to buy a special coffee maker that made only one cup. If she didn't know it, maybe other people think they have to make a full pot of coffee also. Franny G., Harrisonburg, Va.

Vinegar magic — Sometimes my coated frying pans develop a sticky residue from cooking oils.

I simply put the frying pan on the stove top over high heat, fill it to the brim with water and about 1/2 cup of vinegar, then bring it to a boil. All the sticky residue floats to the top and I skim it off with a paper towel. You may want to let the water cool down before discarding, and wash the pan with soap and water.

Then I do what the manufacturer calls re-seasoning the pan by giving it a light coat of cooking oil. After that my frying pan is as good as new again. Liz H., Newville, Pa.

Protect your plants and gardens from predators

Home&Garden Features

Having trouble keeping unwanted pests away from your manicured lawn and garden? The great outdoors can become a war zone between gardeners who want to protect their property and hungry animals.

Not only do squirrels, chipmunks and birds like to dig-up the back yard to find and store food. but their presence can be noted in the bites that they take out of vegetables from the garden and fruits from trees. Patrolling the yard and garden won't do, for these animals are quick, but there are solutions to deter their harmful ways.

Due to the countless complaints from hard-working gardeners, many lawn and garden manufacturers have developed new products designed to reduce and/or eliminate annoyances caused by animals. These products are not only effective and easy to use, but most cause no harm to household animals and are environmentally safe. The result is a beautiful, flourishing garden, without the fear of having it attacked by ravenous animals.

Blooming vegetable gardens and newly seeded yards are the most popular targets for animals to snack upon. The only way to protect these areas is to cover them directly, and products such as BirdBlock, new from Easy Gardener, do just that. This lightweight. UV-treated mesh is installed by simply spreading it over the vulnerable area and securing the edges with Fabric Pegs, ties, or heavy objects. The mesh forms a barrier between the garden and hungry birds, allowing plants and/or trees to thrive.

The fear of losing a garden to outdoor predators is legitimate. especially when time and money have been invested," said Boyd Thomas of Easy Gardener, a leading manufacturer of lawn and garden products. "Gardening products such as BirdBlock can help overcome that worry, because they prevent possible destruction."

Easy Gardener also manufactures DeerBlock, a similar product that is designed to keep deer away from plants and vegetation.

Versatile fencing

The fence is no longer just a fence. Gone are the days when it was simply used to separate one property from another. Today, with a little ingenuity and imagination, homeowners can use newly developed, versatile fencing products such as Yard and Garden Fence, for a number of different purposes. Some of the most popular uses of the fence include creating an enclosure around a garden. as a trellis, or as a compost bin.

Intrepid gardeners are also turning to the Yard and Garden Fence to solve their gardening dilemmas. Gardeners have found success with the Yard and Garden Fence, by using it as a trellis for those plants that climb, or even as a compost bin to create rich soil. The versatility of such a fencing product means that its applications are virtually endless. Further, the Yard and Garden Fence is strong, long-lasting, and easy to use.

Most fences built to deter pests usually have barbed wires or electrical currents running through them, but garden manufacturers know safety is a priority for families with small children or pets. The Yard and Garden Fence is devoid of this kind of danger, making it safe, but at the same time its durable plastic construction gives it the strength to be effective deterring Additionally, the fence is rustproof, making it a dependable product and able to last throughout the seasons without falling victim to the elements.

Thanks to innovative new products, gardeners no longer have to worry about their plants, vegetables, or fruits being eaten alive by animals. Maybe now gardeners will have the time to truly "stop and smell the roses." Stop by a local home or garden center or hardware store to see what other new products are available that will protect your yard and enhance your time spent in the garden.

June savings are in full bloom at English Gardens

Spring cleaning is the key to a healthy lawn

By Tony Lienert

Spring is eagerly anticipated by gardeners. After a winter cooped up in the house, the first sign of green in the landscape is a welcome sight. Though you may still have to wait to install bedding plants and vegetables, there is a lot you can do now to guarantee a healthy lawn, according to Matt Jesue, retail manager for Ray Wiegand's Nursery.

Experts recommend that you begin with a general cleanup of yard waste and debris. This may include old leaves, twigs, loose trash, etc. If these are not cleaned up early, they could mat down and smother sections of the lawn and reseeding would be required.

The next task is to give the lawn a good mowing, the earlier the better. Be sure mower blades are sharp, so they will cut the grass instead of tearing it. Set the mower low, to 2 inches, for the first mowing; this will expose crowns to light for an earlier start. Afterward, blades should be reset to 2-1/2 to 3 inches.

The first fertilizer should go on in early spring, followed by a second application in late spring. If crabgrass or other annual weeds such as chickweed were problems for you or your neighbors last year, the first fertilizer should also contain a weed killer that targets crabgrass. If your lawn has bare patches that need reseeding, according to Jesue, ask for a fertilizer/weed killer blend that won't harm the new grass. Make sure you get the special blend, since the standard blend can't tell the difference between good seed and bad seed. The ideal time for crabgrass control in southeastern Michigan is late April to early May, weather permitting.

De-thatching the lawn is also a good idea. Excessive thatch — a spongy layer of decaying plant waste - can keep water and air from reaching the grass roots, resulting in a much thinner lawn. In spring, it is best to work with a dethatching machine (which removes plugs from the thatch) or with a rake.

"If you're using a rake," said Jesue, "don't use too much elbow grease. Too heavy activity can damage young plants."

According to extension experts, the best time for spring dethatching is at least two weeks after the first fertilizer application; this allows plants to recover quickly.

Any large areas that are thin or bare can be reseeded with a quality lawn blend. Once seeded, they can be covered with a very light layer of straw, and watered daily until the grass begins to sprout. The straw layer can then be removed, allowing the new grass the benefit of full sunlight. Pest prevention is also an important part of spring clean-up. According to Michigan State Extension experts, a number of pests are active in the yard by mid-spring; if left unchecked they can cause extensive damage to your lawn.

Two types of beetle grubs start their feeding in late April and continue through the end of May the Japanese beetle and the European chafer.

The Japanese beetle grub is distinguished by a thick, C-shaped body and grayish head.

The grubs begin feeding in late April and continue on through late May.

The European chafer is a smaller grub, maggot-like in appearance, that feeds from April until early June.

To check for beetle grubs in the lawn, Wayne County horticultural extension agent Dean Krauskopf recommends that you lift sections of damaged turf and inspect the root systems for grubs.

If your lawn is not regularly irrigated, you should treat it if you find more than five grubs per square foot.

Regularly irrigated turf has greater tolerance to grub injury, and will not need treatment unless you find more than 25 grubs per square foot.

Several granular insecticides are recommended for grub control. The most often-used items will contain such chemicals as trichlorfon (Dylox), sevin, diazinon, imidacloprid (Grubex), chlorpyrifos (Dursban) or isofenfos (Oftanol). Jesue said these should be applied in late April or early May (weather permitting) for best results. Treat only those damaged areas where you have found heavy grub activity - this is beneficial to both wallet and wildlife.

If you're planning on using a biological control like milky spore disease on Japanese beetle grubs, extension specialist

Dave Smitley advises patience (especially if there is a high population).

Extension tests have found that an area needs to be treated with the milky spore fungus for at least three or four years before major control is sustained. Smitley doesn't knock the effectiveness of milky spore, but he does caution homeowners not to look for instant results.

Following these steps will help to ensure a healthy, pest-free lawn that you will enjoy all season.

What to get for the father who has everything

The Home Depot

It's June again and you know what that means — time to choose that special Father's Day gift. But does your father have enough neck ties to choke a horse? And if he gets one more golf shirt, will he wrap his nine iron around the nearest tree?

If you are at a loss for what to buy the man in your life who has everything, check out the following ideas for a unique, useful and fun Father's Day gift.

What man doesn't enjoy grilling out? If your father has been struggling with charcoal and lighter fluid, why not consider a gas grill?

Gas grills are safe, easy-to-use and come in a variety of sizes.

"Char-broil makes a popular medium-sized grill with a convenient side burner," said Bob Liedberg of The Home Depot. "These gas grills are much more convenient than the traditional charcoal grill, and they work great."

Another gift for those dads who enjoy working outdoors is a gaspowered trimmer. Some brands even have attachments that can be purchased to expand the capabilities of the trimmer. A popular brand, Ryobi, offers attachments including blowers, vacuums, snow throwers, pruners and cultivators. These trimmers offer two different cutting speeds and have an adjustable handle.

Black & Decker has recently added to its line of VersaPak tools with outdoor products for the lawn and garden. The new tools include cordless brooms, shrubbers, grass shears and blade trim-

All tools are cordless and use the interchangeable VersaPak battery system.

These tools are perfect for the father who likes to work in the yard, but wants it to be easy and hassle-free.

All the VersaPak tools are lightweight. compact ergonomically designed for comfort and precision.

Another unique gift for fathers is a cordless drill kit. Ryobi offers a 50-piece power kit that includes a two-speed cordless drill with a three-eighths-inch drill driver. The kit contains drill bits, screwdriver bits, a socket set, bit extender and charger.

Every father needs a proper tool set. Husky offers a 93-piece mechanics tool set that comes complete with a lifetime warranty. The set includes a quick release ratchef with a speeder disc and a comfortable polish handle.

The set comes in a durable molded storage case that holds each tool in place.

Has your Mom had a mammogram?

The risk of breast cancer increases with age. It is one of the leading causes of death among women 65 and older. Early detection through regular mammograms could prevent many of these deaths. Yet as women get older, they are less likely to get mammograms. Has your Mom had a mammogram? If not, encourage her to get one It might be your chance to give her good advice

Lawn problems? Try OTC — Objective Turf Care

By Ellen Henke

When we get the sniffles or chills, most of us drop by the drug store to pick up an OTC — or over-the-counter medicine — to make us well.

When things seem a little more serious, we go to a professional. Our lawn's problems can be dealt with in a similar way.

By following the proper guidelines we can avoid many lawn problems. This is the OTC Objective Turf Care — approach. If a problem develops, first examine the symptoms. If an OTC approach works, you can nurse your lawn back to good health by yourself. The following is information about how to diagnose and solve some common lawn prob-

Our ancestors had a problem when trying to serve food that was meant to be cold. The refrigerator is a 20th-century idea. The ice box that was used in the 19th century was a luxury limited to areas where natural ice was available. But the wealthy managed to cool wine or fruit at banquets even in earlier times. Cold water from mountain streams or ice that had been cut from lakes and stored in the winter were used to cool food on the table.

In the 1790s, sets of dishes included "fruit coolers" or "ice pails." The cooler was made of three pieces: a deep bowl, a liner and a cover. It was displayed on the table during a meal.

By 1840, the ice cooler was out of fashion. It no longer was a required part of a complete set of dessert dishes.

Q. Thirty years ago, my grand-father gave me an aluminum flip-top case that holds 10 aluminum "cards." The case says "Souvenir of St. Louis." The cards show scenes relating to naked women, little boys urinating and males looking under women's skirts. What are these?

A. Your grandfather must have visited the World's Fair in St. Louis in 1904. The 10 "Bawdy Cards" in their aluminum cases lems.

• Thatch is one of the biggest factors contributing to lawn problems. Thatch restricts the flow of air, water and fertilizer into the soil, weakening the lawn and making it more susceptible to disease. If you have more than a half-inch of thatch, rent a vertical-cutting machine or core aerator and remove it.

• Yellowing is a common lawn problem due to lack of nitrogen since nitrogen is the nutrient most needed by lawns. Most lawns need fertilizer every year—if you haven't been applying fertilizer, your lawn is probably slightly yellow and may be growing a little slower than it should.

If after fertilizing at the manufacturer's recommended rate your lawn still has a yellow tint and slow growth, the problem could be a lack of iron or an improper pH level. A soil test will tell you exactly what your lawn needs. If it's iron, applying iron as a liquid spray or in combination with nitrogen and sulfur should do the trick. If the pH level is the problem, add lime if it's too acid and ammonium sulfate if it's too alkaline.

• Leaf Spot normally occurs from April to November and most often attacks Bermuda grass, fescue and Kentucky bluegrass. The disease causes elongated, circular spots with brown or straw-colored centers and black borders. To fight leaf spot, plant a mixture of sun- and shade-tolerant varieties of grass, improve aeration and drainage, mow at the recommended height and don't over-fertilize.

Now you say, "But, Doc, it's too late. I don't know what to do!" It's never too late. If your lawn is suffering from a disaster that OTCs won't fix, consult the lawn doc in your area — someone at a nursery, a county extension adviser or a university turf specialist. And be advised, chicken soup does not work on sick lawns.

America's plant doctor and John Deere lawn and garden expert Ellen Henke is a botanist, garden writer and nationally recognized authority on "earth friendly" gardening.

were sold as souvenirs. They're worth from $100 to $200.

Q. I would like to know something about my black satin candlesticks with "twisted" shafts. They have no identifying marks on them. I know they are quite

A. The United States Glass Co. made such candlesticks in 1926. The company had factories in Pittsburgh; Glassport, Pa.; and Tiffin, Ohio.

In 1923, Cambridge Glass Co. made a nearly identical design. Cambridge candlesticks have two vertical mold seam lines. The United States Glass version has three.

Your candlesticks are worth about $80.

Q. My father has a stamp-collecting book that's marked, "The Ivory Stamp Club with Captain Tim." Do you know anything about it?

A. "Captain Tim Healy's Ivory Stamp Club" was on the radio from 6:30 to 6:45 p.m. in 1934. The show offered children tips on the latest hobby craze of stamp collecting. Other radio shows, such as "Little Orphan Annie" and "Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy," featured promotions that gave away stamps and stamp-related items.

A Captain Tim stamp album is worth about $20 in mint condition. The Kellogg's cereal box

Composting: A Recycling Center In Your Back Yard

-Normally, recycling works like this: after separating your glass, plastic, etc., it goes to your nearest recycling center. You don't see it again until it possibly comes back to you through purchasing recycled products. Yard recycling works a little differently. though. Here, you are the manager of your very own recycling center. Fortunately, that's not as difficult as it sounds, and your yard benefits from the enriched earth that you've created from yard waste. You may not know it, but leaves contain twice as many minerals as manure. Twigs and branches can be broken down into chips that retain moisture to keep plants healthier.

And, with the right plan and the right combination of environmentally helpful outdoor power equipment—such as cleaner running lawn mowers and mulching mowers for grass clippings and chipper/shredders for branches, twigs and leaves—you can substantially reduce the amount of waste your yard produces. And the waste that remains can be recycled through the use of a compost pile.

Creating a compost pile is simple. Choose a corner of your back yard approximately three feet by three feet. Section it off from the rest of the yard with garden fencing or chicken wire. Then place yard wastes and other organic materials (banana peels, coffee grounds, similar household wastes) onto the pile.

Since leaves take a little longer to break down, you can grind or shred them by running a rotary mower back and forth over them, then rake them into the pile. Or, if you use a mower with a bagging attachment, simply collect chopped clippings and leaves in the bag and spread on a compost pile.

Nature does most of the work from here. These materials will decompose and become useful as hardworking humus and enriched earth. However, as your pile grows larger, you must give nature some help by turning the pile so that air can reach all levels. This helps the decomposition process.

When your compost is ready, blend it into the soil of your garden or flowerbed with the help of a power garden tiller. You'll increase fertility in the soil and boost growth.

Composting gives you a constantly renewable source of rich soil, while giving our Earth a break. And, composting shows that you are doing your part to be "EarthWise."

For a free guide on recycling yard waste with helpful outdoor power equipment, write to the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute, 341 South Patrick Street, Old Town Alexandria, VA 22314.

Q. I own a four-bedroom, high-ranch style house in a residential neighborhood. I have lived in this area for about seven years and have municipal water and sewer supplied to me. Recently, I have noticed a decrease in my water pressure. I'm assuming that this problem is not from my home because all of the water faucets have inadequate pressure. Can you possibly determine the cause of this problem?

A. Before you complain to your local water supply company, make a few checks on your own. Make sure that your main shutoff valve is fully opened and working properly. In addition, ask several of your neighbors if they are receiving adequate pressure. There are also several types of water supply valves, such as the ball valve, gate and globe valve. The possibility is slim that a problem such as yours is caused by a faulty valve, but it could happen.

The next thing for you to do is to call your supply company and find out if there may be a leak. This leak usually occurs in the pipe between your house and the main water supply. In this situation, you should not have to incur any service fees.

Q. I recently removed an old ceiling smoke detector in my dining room hallway and installed a new one in a better locale. The popcorn-textured ceiling I have was done less than a year ago and I need to repair that circular spot where the smoke detector was. Can you give me the best method on blending this spot with the rest of the ceiling?

A. This patch repair can be done relatively quickly and easily with just a small putty knife, a small container of drywall spackle and a whisk broom. A large, aerated sponge can also work well, depending on the desired texture.

Mix the compound with a coarse sand texture, which is sold at your paint or decorating store. Make sure the consistency is not too soupy or too thick. With your whisk broom or sponge, dab at the bare spot on the ceiling until it blends uniformly. Allow several weeks to cure before painting.

BOD HOUSES FOR SALE Yesterday's elegance and craftsmanship coupled with today's modern conveniences combine to make this 3650 SF a real gem. 4 bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, and an exquisite designer kitchen with cherry wood cabinets, Corian counters and beveled art glass are just the beginning of the features. Main hallway opens into the sun room, study or breakfast room. A fully finished basement includes a 1/2 bath, and there's plenty of storage in the expansive attic. Leaded/stained glass windows, gumwood wainscots, patterned hardwood floors, four sets of beveled glass French doors, and the gold and silver leaf on sculpted ceilings are among the finishing touches that are so numerous it takes more than one showing to see them all. The house and 2 car garage (with 20' x 20' summer room) sit on a spacious 82' x 172' lot.
