

Neighbors of proposed Ameritech tower site in Village sue City

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Residents living adjacent to the proposed site of a 104-foot cellular telephone tower expressed their opposition to its construction near their back yards during three City of Grosse Pointe council meetings this spring and summer.

With the granting by the council of a special use permit to Ameritech to erect the tower, some of the residents are expressing their opposition in court.

Five residents filed an appeal of the council's decision last week in Wayne County Circuit Court.

"We filed so that the city would appeal its decision," said Duncan MacEachern. "We would like an outside telecommunications attorney to look at the law."

The suit claims that the plaintiffs have been deprived of their protected property rights by the City granting Ameritech a special use permit to erect the tower near the plaintiffs' homes, in the rear of the municipal parking lot behind Arbor Drugs.

City attorneys contend that the Federal Telecommunications Act signed in February prevents municipalities from blocking a telecommunications firm from erecting an antenna in a community, if the need for the antenna is demonstrated.

According to Ameritech officials, there are "dead spots" in the City where cellular communication service drops off or is nonexistent.

"The City took the action it did because it is mandated to do so under the federal law," said Bill Thorpe, an attorney for the City. "We adopted an ordinance in order to gain as much control as we could under the law. We have the authority to say where a tower can be located within the city.

"We have had to act expeditiously under the law. Phone companies have sued other municipalities because they have not acted expeditiously."

The City is in the process of negotiating a lease with Ameritech.

"We're proceeding with the lease during the lawsuit," said City manager Tom Kressbach.

The City has 21 days to respond to the suit.

School board OKs amendment to Richard/McMillan project

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

In the first of three votes that will have to take place, the Grosse Pointe school board on Monday approved an amendment to the Richard/Messner site improvement project.

The amendment includes some changes in wording in the original two-way agreement between the school system and the city of Grosse Pointe Farms and essentially brings in St. James Lutheran Church as a third-party.

"The city, the school and the church have been working diligently to resolve our various issues," said Dale Marshall, president of the church's board of directors, in a prepared statement. "We are pleased that we were able to work things out."

city council is expected to vote on the amendment on Monday, Aug. 19.

The project, designed with student safety in mind, closes McMullan at Ridge Road and merges the Richard Elementary School playground with Messner Field. In addition, McMullan will end in a cul-de-sac in front of St. James

Richner victorious in landslide, faces Hartmann for House

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Despite the negative campaigning of two of his four challengers, Grosse Pointe Park resident and current Wayne County commissioner Andrew Richner collected more votes than all the other candidates combined on his way to a landslide victory in the state House Republican primary.

"I'm honored to have received the overwhelming support of so many people in the Pointes, Harper Woods and the east side of Detroit in being elected as the Republican nominee for state representative," Richner said.

"I'm extremely grateful for the literally hundreds of volunteers who actively supported my candidacy. Clearly, voters agreed with our positive, issue-oriented campaign on how we can best represent our community's interests in state government."

He will face Grosse Pointe Farms' Elaine Hartmann, who was unopposed in the Democratic primary, in the November election.

Richner gathered 5,148 votes. Former Wayne County Community College trustee and Grosse Pointe Woods resident Sue Radulovich received 1,786 votes. She was followed by Grosse Pointe Park's Philip Tannian with 1,363 votes, Timothy Beck of Detroit with 828 votes and Paul McCarthy of Detroit, who received 478 votes.

The winner of the November election replaces William R. Bryant Jr., who decided not to seek a 14th term in Lansing.

Richner said Bryant called, offering support in the November election. Bryant had earlier supported Tannian in the primary.

This is Richner's first run for the state House. Hartmann ran unsuccessfully against Bryant for the office in 1992.

Richner endured attacks from McCarthy, who published negative cartoons, editorials and advertisements in his monthly shopper, The Pointe

Andrew Richner

Post, and from Radulovich, who attacked Richner in an advertisement published in the Grosse Pointe News.

Radulovich also sent to residents a mailer entitled the "Grosse Richner News," which accused Richner and the Grosse Pointe News of "maliciously republishing false information...for the purpose of defaming Richner's opponent (Radulovich)." In this literature, Radulovich quotes herself and an unnamed "political observer," who said that Richner had been the Grosse Pointe News' candidate ever since announcing his run for the state House.

She accused the Grosse Pointe News of publishing "the worst possible photographs of Radulovich it could find in its files." The photograph published in the Grosse Pointe News to which she was referring did not come from any files, but came from Radulovich's campaign literature.

Radulovich has filed law suits against Richner and the Grosse Pointe News.

Richner beat McCarthy by 10-to-1 and Radulovich by 3-to-1 margins.

"The voters clearly repudiated negative campaigning," Richner said. "I think people in our community are well-educated and know that negative campaigning doesn't work here."

Woods homeowners along Brys Drive are shocked when the assessment for paving their street came in at $350 a household instead of the $250 originally promised. The residents stormed city hall seeking explanations, which were forthcoming when the council learned that the assessments were higher because 12 properties were mistakenly omitted from the cost calculations.

It's Stempfle vs. Cavanagh in county race

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

In two close contests, Republican Mary Ellen Stempfle and Democrat Christopher Cavanagh each edged the next closest challengers in their respective Wayne County commissioner primary races.

Stempfle, a Wayne County Community College trustee and City of Grosse Pointe resident, beat Grosse Pointe Farms councilmember Gail Kaess by a 2,882 to 2,813 vote count. City of Grosse Pointe councilmember Patrick Petz finished third with 1,219 votes, Grosse Pointe Shores resident Robert Lubera was fourth with 1,096 votes and former Harper Woods councilmember David Pochmara finished fifth with 1,053 votes.

"I am grateful to every campaign worker and volunteer. I appreciate all of their teamwork," Stempfle said. "I am looking forward to working hard toward the November election."

Grosse Pointe Woods resident Christopher Cavanagh won the Democratic primary, beating Detroit's Tamika Kennedy by a 2,346 to 2,095

Cavanagh overcame a strong showing by Kennedy in Detroit, where she gathered 1,947 of her 2,095 votes.

"I want to thank everyone involved, especially the voters," Cavanagh said. "It was a hard battle. We had to draw from around the entire district. I did well in the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods and in Detroit, I held my own. This election shows that I can draw from throughout the entire district."

Cavanagh was the Democratic nominee in the 1994 county commission race, but he lost to Richner in the general election that year.

Officials look to spend new county parks tax

By John Lundberg
Staff Writer

Officials on both sides of the controversial Wayne County board of commissioners proposal to spend nearly $40 million on county parks, talked of reconciliation after the 1/4 millage increase narrowly passed last week. The final vote was 104,861-98,205.

"I plan to work with the county ... to make sure this is done right," said commissioner Andrew Richner. "It is my job to ensure that the money is spent prudently."

Richner voted against the proposal when it was initially voted on by the board to be placed on the primary ballot. Richner also was the victor in the Republican primary for state representative for Michigan's 1st District.

"My main concern was that some of the language in the proposal was vague in wording," Richner continued. "But I guess it is good for the city of Detroit."

Detroit Parks director Hurley Coleman said he expects to work with local communities to guarantee citizen involvement.

"We're very excited about this," Coleman said. "For the first time, (the voters) have given us a mandate to grant a level of leisure service that will enhance the quality of life for the public."

The plan will increase spending on several county parks by nearly $8 million a year for the next five years. The cost of the plan will be about $25 a year for a $100,000 home.

Much of the rancor between officials centered on why should suburban communities foot much of the bill when most of the renovations will only affect Detroit parks. Tentative plans include building a water park at Chandler Park on the city's eastside, and possibly adding a boat launch site onto Mariner Park at the end of Alter Road.

As commissioner, Richner represents the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

"I think there is enough flexibility in the plan," Richner said. "We're paying for it, so we should have some input."

Coleman said the city plans to hold public meetings with neighborhood communities before any renovations begin. He also denied that the plan was vague in specifics.

"(This plan) specifically identifies parks throughout the county," Coleman said. "Focus meetings in the communities will be scheduled (for the public)."

Operations cost for the parks will absorb about $26 million of the money earmarked by the plan, Coleman said. He added that the board had not yet scheduled public meetings.

"I have suggested that the parks people work with officials from the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods," Richner said. "I want us to be working within the parameters (and) adopt an outline (for efficient implementation)."

Teachers learn about computers

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Anyone who thinks Grosse Pointe's public school teachers punch out in early June and don't return until September haven't looked at the staff development roster this summer.

More than half of the district's 535 teachers have enrolled in more than one of the computer training classes offered this summer.

Classes in everything from beginning word processing to desktop publishing to creating spread sheets have been offered twice weekly since June 20. Classes, offered on Tuesdays and Thursdays at Grosse Pointe North High School, will continue through Aug. 29.

"The teachers' response has been overwhelming," said Susan Allan, director of instructional services, during a presentation to the school board on Aug. 5.

In the spring, the school district devised a "self-evaluation" test for the teachers to rate their computer skills. The results showed that some teachers would have to begin with "level one" classes while others already were quite knowledgeable. Evaluation results were used to determine which classes to offer during the summer, Allan said.

Training is in preparation for the completion of the first wave of the five-year technology upgrade under way in the district. Phase one involves the implementation of computers and related software and equipment at all nine of the district's elementary schools.

When the first phase is completed, all elementary schools will be linked by a network. Each classroom will have five computers, a CD-ROM player and a TV-VCR.

The project, funded by a separate millage approved by voters in 1994, earmarks $2.4 million each year over a five-year period.

"I've had some training but never felt comfortable," said teacher Josephine Kaiafas. "I was really phobic before and now I'm excited about these courses and look forward to using these in the classroom. Now I can put grades into the computer instead of calculating everything by hand."

church and the municipal lot behind the Hill shopping district will be expanded to accommodate more cars.

The project began in July and most of the heavy construction should be completed by the opening of the school year on Wednesday, Sept. 4, said Rich Solak, Farms city manager. Improvements to Messner field and the parking lots probably will not be finished until after school starts, he said.

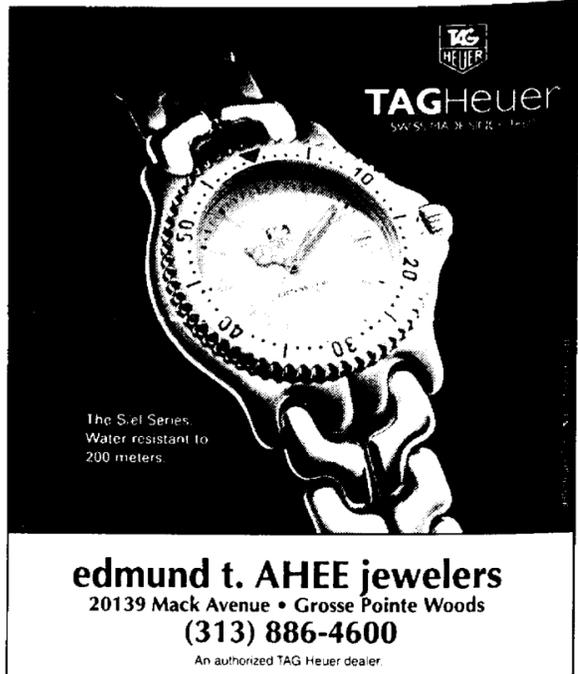

"It is good to have the church on board," Solak said.

The amendment includes:

- An exchange of one 24-foot-by-70-foot piece of property from behind St. James for another piece of property along Messner field so that the city can expand the municipal lot.

- An agreement that the school system will accommodate the church, when given advance notice, with access and parking needs during funerals and weddings.

- The city agrees to keep an eye on traffic patterns on the cul-de-sac and in the alley behind the Hill to determine if a "No Left Turn" sign should be installed to restrict traffic southbound on McMillan. The city also will reimburse the church $5,000 for the replacement of its monument sign.

Pointer's first novel is tale of murder, sex, vampires

By Margie Reins Smith
Assistant Editor

When Anthony Ambrogio was 10 or 11, he begged to be allowed to stay up past midnight on Friday and Saturdays to watch "Shock Theater" on television.

He was a regular patron of Saturday matinees at local theaters — the Ramona, the Vogue, the Alger and the Harper. He loved the horror films.

"I was always interested in monster movies," Ambrogio said. "My favorites were 'Frankenstein Meets the Wolfman,' which I saw for the first time in 1958. I loved all the Wolfman and Dracula movies — the old, classic ones."

Ambrogio has published his first novel, "Nun's Blood," which he describes as "a vampire tale set in a convent."

The novel involves an order of nuns who are engaged in bloody rituals, mysterious disappearances, lechery, death, sex and bizarre supernatural vampire-like goings-on.

He could visualize scenes in a movie, he said, while he was writing portions of the tale.

"I'm not a fan of violence in cinema and literature for its own sake," he said. "I like to believe that we can separate the kinds of things we watch and read from the kinds of people we are."

Ambrogio, himself, is an interesting contrast to the content of his novel.

By day, he works for an insurance company. He's married and has a teenaged daughter and a toy poodle named Fluff.

The front yard of his home in the City of Grosse Pointe is crowded with blooming perennials, even a bird feeder. He vacations with his family on Cape Cod.

By night, he sits before a computer and writes stories of murder, sex, vampires and the supernatural.

Ambrogio was born in Detroit in 1948 and grew up on the east side of Detroit. He earned a bachelor of arts and a master of arts degree in English from Wayne State University. His major was Shakespeare. He has completed all the courses for a Ph.D.

"I haven't written my thesis yet," he said. "I call it my ABD — All But Degree."

"I've been writing things since I was a kid. I used to draw comic books and write the dialogue," he said. "I wrote cowboy stories, which I still have in a drawer somewhere. I always fancied myself a writer."

"When I was a teenager, I was naive enough to send my stories to publications like Playboy and science fiction magazines. Of course, none were ever printed."

He was published for the first time in 1972, in a college magazine. "In Defense of the Thing That Came and Went Again" was a discussion of downbeat endings in horror films.

Ambrogio earned a master's degree in English in 1972, while working as a graduate assistant. For a few years, he taught English composition courses at Wayne, then he taught courses on the history of film.

"In 1984, a friend said his company needed someone to write instruction manuals for people who use computers and software programs. By then I was married and had a daughter.

"My wife and her mother were born in Romania and her mother spent vacations in Transylvania. She said it was beautiful country."

"The Dracula myth (that the fictional Dracula was based on a real person) has only been around for the last 20 years. It was based on a book, 'In Search of Dracula.' My mother-in-law said that the facts presented in that book were simply not true."

Ambrogio has published several dozen articles, essays and poems, mostly critical essays about horror films. Many are about the fictional Count Dracula.

"Dracula-Schmacula! Misinformation Never Dies," appeared in the September-October 1993 issue of Video Watchdog. Ambrogio said it severs the non-existent link between the historical Prince Vlad (the Impaler) of Wallachia and the fictional Count Dracula of Transylvania.

Both Ambrogio and his wife write at home, at their computer, upstairs. He always carries a small notebook, to take notes, copy snatches of dialogue that catch his fancy, write memos to himself about his works-in-progress.

"If somebody asks how long it took to write 'Nun's Blood,' I probably should say 12 years," he said. "But that's not correct. I got the idea for it in 1980; I first wrote something down in 1988; I finished it in 1992. But I did lots of things in between."

He doesn't write every day. "I have fits and starts. Dry spells. Life interferes," he said.

"Nun's Blood" and a shorter piece, "Lollipop," a story that takes place in the future (when vampires make up 20 percent of the population and only streetwalkers venture out after dark) were submitted by Ambrogio's agent to a publisher in Canada.

After accepting "Nun's Blood," the publisher wanted to cut about 15 percent of the ter and a house with a mortgage.

"I took the job."

Ambrogio is a technical writer for Royal Maccabees Life Insurance Co. He works in the marketing communications department, writing instructions for using computer software as well as some promotional material and sales brochures.

In his spare time, he writes horror stories.

Ambrogio's wife, Anca Vlasopolos, is a professor of English at Wayne and has a Ph.D. in comparative literature. She, too, has written a novel.

"She wrote a detective novel, pre-Lorena Bobbitt, called 'Missing Members.' It's about a serial castrator. Her agent said it was too gory and bloody for Midwesterners," Ambrogio said.

manuscript, Ambrogio said, because it would be censorable in Canada.

"I was angry," he said. "We eventually negotiated a deal where there would be no editing changes and I would do the typesetting myself."

The publisher agreed to do a first run of 10,000 copies in two stages, he said. They did 2,500 at first, with no advance payment to Ambrogio.

In fact, Ambrogio had to contribute to the publishing costs. "We figure I have to sell 2,000 copies to break even," he said. Then, with a smile: "I could make $10,000 if all the copies are sold."

He surmised that if "Nun's Blood" is successful, the publisher will print "Lollipop."

"It's frustrating," he said. "It takes so long to write something — days, weeks even — then somebody can read it in a half hour.

"Then, after you write it, you need to deal with an agent, a publisher, finally the legwork involved with promoting it. I keep asking myself, 'When do I get to bask?'"

Ambrogio hopes "Nun's Blood" will be available at Barnes & Noble bookstore at Pointe Plaza and at Waldenbooks in the Village. Both stores are interested in carrying copies of the novel, he said.

Ambrogio will be available to sign copies of the book on Wednesday, Oct. 2, at Border's Bookstore in Birmingham.

Kemp ignites GOP hopes for a victory

Selection of Jack Kemp as Bob Dole's running mate energized the GOP convention in San Diego that opened Monday and raised Republican hopes for victory in November.

At least one early public opinion poll endorsed the party view by indicating that by adding Kemp to the ticket Dole already had cut President Clinton's lead from more than 20 points to only about 10.

Kemp, as one of the early converts to supply-side economics and one of the originators of Reagan's massive tax cut, was welcomed aboard the presidential team even though he and Dole have not

In effect, Dole added to his team not only a man with a long experience in Congress but one who can and no doubt will argue the merits of supply-side economics with anybody willing to listen.

Dole is a campaign convert to that cause, but he has made it the heart of his call for a tax cut of more than $500 billion over a six-year period with the cost to be largely paid for by the taxes produced from the increased revenue the new tax program will produce.

That didn't work with the Reagan tax cut, but GOP spokesmen insist the Democratic Congress caused it to fail by continuing its big spending practices despite the huge tax cut.

But it is not all sunshine and roses for the Republicans in San Diego.

At least three Republican governors of important states, California, New York and Massachusetts, declined invitations to speak because of the conditions imposed by the convention management.

That hardly contributed to the motto of "inclusion" that the Republicans were sounding in everyone's ear. Instead, it represented the fact that the convention program was being tightly adjusted with little or no room for any real diversity of opinion.

Most of the early infighting was over Dole's request for an easing of the abortion plank in the GOP platform. But Dole finally backed off after the religious right, strongly represented in the convention, would have none of that compromise.

Instead, everybody supposedly agreed on the insertion of a long appendix to the platform that will mention divergent views on a number of subjects, including abortion, but the "right to choice" supporters were obviously disappointed.

However, Dole in his acceptance speech tonight will offer the party's real program for the campaign, and he may, in effect, ignore parts of the platform that he doesn't like.

As of Sunday, he told a reporter he had not read the document, which ought to be a signal to the general public to go and do likewise.

Platforms are seldom ever referred to before and after elections anyway, and what is more meaningful is what the candidates themselves do and say.

'Voodoo economics' in again?

As the GOP convention got under way Monday, Bob Dole still was dogged by the question that was raised about his proposed economic plan:

If Ronald Reagan's huge proposed tax cut — called "voodoo economics" by George Bush during the 1980 presidential primaries — didn't work, why does Dole think it will work when he tries it a second time?

Well, perhaps it will as a result of the enthusiastic reception of Dole's choice for vice president, Jack Kemp, a supply-side supporter, who can and will defend Dole's economic plan.

The Dole proposal took an immediate hit, however, when the Concord Coalition full page ad in the New York Times ran under a headline, "It's too early for 'Christmas,'" to describe proposed tax cuts such as Dole's and similar talk from Clinton's camp.

But most important national and Michigan economists agreed that the package would not work unless accompanied by huge spending cuts.

Then the question becomes where the cuts can be made without further trimming the federal benefits for the needy. And Dole did rule out any cuts in Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid.

The Dole proposal aims at providing $548 billion in tax relief by reducing individual tax rates 15 percent, cutting capital gains rates in half, granting a $500 tax credit for each child in a family, and repealing the 1993 Social Security tax increase for higher-income recipients.

In the 1981 Reagan tax cut, the GOP contended the huge reduction could be easily paid from the greater volume of taxes to be stimulated by the increases in business activity to be stimulated by the tax cuts.

However, the Concord Coalition, headed by former U.S. Sens. Warren Rudman and Paul Tsongas, plus Peter G. Peterson, former secretary of commerce, directly challenged the basis on which the Dole cut is proposed.

"Some say large tax cuts can pay for themselves," but the coalition's message responded, "This is not so. . . ."

"And no mainstream economist believes that such an across-the-board cut will come anywhere close to paying for itself."

So what does the Concord Coalition propose as a substitute?

"If we are serious about cutting spending, the big areas to focus on are middle-class entitlements like Social Security and Medicare, and in addition, Medicaid," the coalition says.

Neither party wants to consider those cuts at this time, however. So we do not expect any positive response from either party to the coalition's proposals.

Engler praises choice of Kemp

Michigan friends of Gov. John Engler who had hoped Bob Dole would pick him as his running mate were obviously disappointed, but the governor proved himself a good team player by praising the choice of Jack Kemp.

In both television interviews and comments to newspapers, the governor spoke glowingly of Kemp's background and abilities, and contended that the two leaders complement each other in many ways.

He especially cited the fact that Kemp was a supporter of supply-side economics, which Dole himself now has embraced in calling for a huge federal tax cut.

Dole's failure to choose Engler was a special blow to a couple of Michiganders who had begun thinking about running to succeed Engler should he have been chosen and elected vice president.

Appearing on a Channel 7 newscast from California, Dick Posthumus, Michigan state Senate GOP leader, said that the governor still has a "lot of potential ahead of him" and held out the prospect of a run for the vice presidency or presidency in the future.

Both Posthumus and Secretary of State Candice Miller hinted they were considering running for governor in two years if Engler does not seek a third term.

Asked about the supposed gender gap that polls indicate among Republicans, Miller said she saw no evidence of such a gap among the GOP families she dealt with.

However, the New York Times reported that 64 percent of the delegates are men and only 36 percent are women, a fact that may help explain why the convention paid so little attention to the "pro-choice" faction on abortion.

John Chouinard apparently was the only delegate from the Pointes to attend the convention in San Diego, but four other Pointers served as alternates. They were Marti Miller of the Woods, John Petz of the Shores, and Shirley Nagel and Randolph Agley of the Farms.

New representatives in sight

Whoever wins in the November election, the Grosse Pointes will have new representation in two important offices, 1st District state representative and 1st District county commissioner.

Facing off for the post of 1st District state representative will be the GOP and Democratic nominees, Andrew Richner, who retired from the county commission to make the race, and Elaine Hartmann.

Hartmann was unopposed but Richner wound up an easy winner over four competitors in the GOP primary, with Timothy Beck coming in second.

Battling for the county commissioner district's seat will be the GOP nominee, Mary Ellen Stempfle, and the Democratic nominee, Christopher Cavanagh.

Stempfle, a member of the Wayne County Community College board, edged Gail Kaess, the veteran Farms council member, in the five-person GOP race.

GOP criticism of Kaess as an employee in the office of Democratic Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara figured prominently in this contest, even though Kaess' friends and supporters denied the accusations.

Cavanagh, whose brother formerly served as the commissioner, led the other three Democratic candidates with Deanna Maher Scallen coming in second.

Powell a star for GOP future?

Retired Gen. Colin Powell gave the National Republican Convention a sample of his core beliefs as he closed the first day of the session with a rousing speech in which he differed from GOP dogma on abortion, affirmative action and other issues.

Powell's explanation was that the Republicans "are a big enough party and a big enough people to disagree on individual issues and still work together," and then went on to explain why the GOP must shift its rhetoric in advocating welfare and health care reform:

"The message we must convey to the American people is that we fight for welfare reform, we fight for health care reform, and other reforms not just to save money but because we believe there are better ways to take care of Americans in need than the exhausted programs of the past."

He said he became a Republican because he believes "the policies of our party will lead to greater economic growth," which he described "as the only real solution to the problems of poverty that keep too many Americans from sharing in the wealth of this nation."

Some Democrats shook their heads over Powell's address on the grounds that many of his comments "sounded more like those of a Democrat than a Republican," but some moderate Republicans already were thinking about Powell in terms of a GOP presidential bid in the year 2000.

However, the extreme right-wingers were not appeased by his remarks and expressed modest criticism of his support for abortion rights for women and affirmative action for minorities and women.

At least four GOP governors — from New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts and California, all important states for both parties — should have found Powell's views similar to their own.

In fact, Powell's speech could be seen as a possible olive branch to the GOP to indicate he might be interested in running for the top of the ticket — if they were interested in having him do so in the year 2000.

Michigan model for the nation?

To the Editor:

Bob Dole has just released his long-awaited economic plan for the country. In it, he outlined his vision of freeing American families from the shackles of our heavy federal tax burden in order to spur economic growth. He named, specifically, a 15 percent, across the board tax cut, the resurrection of the $500 per child tax credit, and other measures that will save American taxpayers hundreds of billions of dollars. Not surprisingly, Bill Clinton and his damage control team began their onslaught against the plan, even before it was released.

This tax cutting vision is nothing new to the people of Michigan. In 1991, with a $1 billion deficit, one of the worst unemployment rates in the country and a nearly unbearable tax burden, the Michigan Legislature began our own tax cutting agenda. The critics argued that this was going to shrink revenue and cause the deficit to explode. We proved them wrong. By cutting taxes 21 times, we've placed more money in people's pockets to save, invest or spend as they choose. After just five years with this vision in place, we not only have erased our deficit, but we've been able to stash away $1 billion in surplus. Our state-wide unemployment rate is lower now than it has ever been, and taxpayers are keeping more of their hard-earned money because they're sending less to Lansing. The theory behind Bob Dole's plan has already been tried in Michigan, and its success has been proven.

With Bob Dole's economic plan on the table, we can see a clear difference between the two viable candidates. Bill Clinton, who enacted the largest peacetime tax increase in history, believes your money is better spent by bureaucrats in Washington. Bob Dole believes you have the right to keep and spend more of your money, because that's how jobs are created and that's how families prosper. In November, we'll have an opportunity to choose which path our country follows. I hope the nation will look to Michigan as a model of what can be achieved when you lower taxes and empower people with economic freedom.

Life is a carnival

Sometime in the early '70s, I remember going to a county fair and shelling out 25 cents to see the county's largest black Angus — "capable of becoming 10,000 hamburgers" read the sign outside the tent. I paid a quarter, walked inside and was not disappointed.

Not that I have gone to many state fairs, but those I have attended have seemed too professional. The rides appeared safe and the entertainment was actually someone I had heard of.

Not so with county fairs — at least with the one I went to in the '70s.

Last weekend, I decided to attend the same county fair. Despite 25 years of progress in the outside world, the county fair looked remarkably the same.

The black Angus were not behind tents. They were out in the open, along with sheep, hogs and holsteins — all available for auction. But in order to see a 13-foot alligator, one of the only animals there not raised by the 4-H Club, fairgoers had to pay 75 cents.

Cotton candy, funnel cakes and fried dough (that's how it was advertised) were as popular as ever.

Also as popular (and seemingly dangerous) as ever were the rides. The ferris wheel looked as shaky as I remember. If the merry-go-round's horses had been real, they'd be candidates for the dogfood and glue factory. And some of the dodgem cars were not fully operational.

I Say

There were still people, both kids and grownups, hoping to collect the change that had fallen out of the pockets of unfortunate Zipper riders.

Back when I was under the supervision of my parents, I was forbidden from going on most of the rides. I didn't argue. I could see the rusted bolts about to snap on the rides and could smell the sour mash on the breath of many of the ride operators.

What makes county fairs indistinguishable from one another are the "games." I passed on tossing lopsided softballs into open milk jugs and trying to land wooden curtain rings around the necks of soda pop bottles.

I also decided not to play the game where one shoots a squirt gun into a clown's mouth causing a balloon above the clown's head to inflate. The first one to pop the balloon winning a toy animal stuffed with Styrofoam pellets.

I did play a game in which one throws a ball in hopes of shattering plastic dinner plates.

I also threw darts at balloons, shot baskets and tried to bounce a plastic ball off a tilted backboard and into a laundry basket.

I went home without any stuffed animals, large or small.

The musical entertainment at the fair consisted of a nameless man and wife team — he playing a mandolin and she playing guitar. They would let various kids bang wooden paddles as their "percussion" section.

After spending most of the afternoon at the county fair, I figured I'd head home. I did this knowing full well I'd miss the fair's most popular happening — the demolition derby. By 5 o'clock, folks were lining up to get a good view of the 7 o'clock car smashing.

This particular county fair has been going since 1862 — at least that's what it said on the T-shirts. I have a feeling it hasn't changed a whole lot since that time. And if I wait another 25 years before going again, I'm sure it will still be the same.

Don't be swayed by appeals to hatred

By Sanford Cloud Jr.

Appealing to hate, especially in times of economic insecurity, is a time tested insidious tactic increasingly being mainstreamed in modern American dialogue. Joe McCarthy did it, to serious effect. The neo-Nazis and white supremacists do it — witness the Montana Freemen. Certain religious leaders do it, and gain media attention. And, recently, some of our politicians have done it. This effective technique drives wedges between fellow workers and neighbors, and alienates us from people we do not even know. At worst, it inspires hatred and violence.

The modus operandi involves a leader appealing to segments of the population whose sense of self is shaky, often due to tough economic times. Corporate downsizing, restructuring, re-engineering, rising costs, diminishing quality of life and the threat of lost jobs stir anxieties. Recognizing this as a fertile breeding ground, a leader steps to the podium and rallies the fearful and angry by blaming their troubles squarely or implicitly on some "other" ethnic, racial, socioeconomic or religious group. The leader then positions himself as the brave spokesperson of "truth," who will challenge the enemy — the "other" — who has caused the problem. With someone to look down upon, the fearful feel empowered and define themselves as members of a superior group, more valuable than those "others."

Historically, specific ethnic, racial, political and religious groups have been targeted as the threat. For Hitler, it was Jews, Catholics, gypsies and homosexuals. Joe McCarthy's enemies were liberals, in particular members of the Hollywood community. Today, some members of that same entertainment community are maligning the Jews, while films stereotype people of color as violent youths. The Klan burns its crosses and Muslims are attacked as the purveyors of terrorism, while some African American leaders rail against white America. The Montana Freemen defrauded the financial community as a statement against our government and in furtherance of their view that white male Christians are the sole intended beneficiaries of the U.S. Constitution. For each, the message is the same: silence, stop or eliminate the "other" and you — the unfairly victimized — will triumph.

It is relatively easy to recognize the appeal-to-hate tactic in its extreme forms. But today, the tactic is becoming ever more subtle, as leaders begin to use wedge issues that are silent synonyms for targeted groups. Through insinuation, allusion and even clear statements, certain leaders, a number of elected officials and some who would have been president have fanned the flames of hate, by using wedge issues — such as immigration, welfare and affirmative action — to divide.

Regarding immigration, for example, we've recently heard talk about constructing walls at our borders and, alternatively, about a new branch of the armed forces to keep out illegal immigrants. Here, the wedge argument is simple: The real Americans must stop the immigrants, who are taking the jobs of U.S. citizens, adding to crime, destroying our communities or, when they are not working, living off welfare. Forget that immigrants take low-paying jobs that others will not accept, that some clean the hotel rooms where presidential candidates stay and that they pay taxes. Forget that they enrich our culture. Forget that America is, after all, a country of immigrants save for Native Americans. And forget to differentiate between illegal immigrants and those who legally come with special skills or to join family members. But, most of all, forget that the current arguments are not new. Almost 100 years ago they were hurled at Irish, Jewish and other central European emigres.

With welfare, those who breed division play on the commonly held assumptions that most welfare recipients are African American or Hispanic, have a large number of children to increase their checks, regularly double their benefits through fraud, and readily stay on welfare for the long haul because they do not want to work. Each of these beliefs is untrue. But many hard working, taxpaying Americans believe them and are angry at those in need of help. To many, welfare reform now means eliminating support totally, rather than seeking a creative and considered response toward those who can achieve self-support and those who might starve without our help.

It is time for us to take stock and call upon leaders in all walks of life and, in particular, the presidential candidates who will receive so much media attention, to meet their obligation to sharply, openly and honestly debate issues and avoid taking America down the path toward division and suspicion.

We must remain mindful that, while the U.S. Constitution properly protects free speech, history shows that the rhetoric that preys on insecurities breeds a milieu receptive to hatred of some "other." Americans can and should tolerate all points of view, even when distasteful. What we must not tolerate is the silence of people of good will, who by their passivity allow the noxious use of wedge issues to be mainstreamed, creating a vacuum into which the venom of hate is welcome. We must respond with facts to those who would appeal to the worst in us. And we must expressly condemn the conduct of those who would use direct or implied scapegoating as a tool for gaining public attention, power or election. If we do not, we will have endorsed through silence a climate that sanctions the language of hate, permits bias crimes and perhaps, ultimately, creates random acts of group violence throughout our nation.

Sister act

A weekend sailboat outing of the Woods' Ed and Lillian Zemmin and friends was a sentimental journey that ended with a bang.

Aboard "Alleluia," the Zemmins' 37 foot sloop, were friends Helen and Donn (Kip) Kipka, Floyd and Joan Skikiewicz and Helen McGraw, out e a r l y S a t u r d a y morning from the Bayview Yacht Club to cross the river and anchor off the northern tip of Belle Isle.

All eyes were on the old Detroit Edison power plant a mile or so away when a tad after 9 a.m. a tremendous blast leveled the plant's river end, blowing down the famous Seven Sisters smokestacks in about that many seconds and raising a terrific cloud of brick dust over the water.

At first all anyone could say was "Wow!" and then Kip was seen standing at the rail, holding his hat over his heart and looking wistful.

"I worked for Edison and used to conduct tours there," he explained. In coal-burning days the plant didn't create fond memories for everyone. "One day a woman nearby put some lemon meringue pies outside to cool, and they got full of soot," Kip recalls. "She took one to the plant manager, put it down in front of him and said, 'Here, you eat this pie.'"

Edison eventually installed smoke scrubbers.

Trouble down under

Psychotherapist Beverly Curtiss' Australian shepherd dog, Sydney, has a little adjustment problem her Farms owner was laughing about: "When I get a call at home from someone who needs counseling over the phone, Sydney gets jealous and she bites at my ankles."

Isn't this a bit odd, FYI asked.

Bev shrugged and smiled sweetly. "When they were little, my kids used to do the same thing."

Pointe place is priceless

The ad in last week's Grosse Pointe News caught reader Martha Schroeder's attention: It said FREE Grosse Pointe home. Move to your lot or buy parts.

Some kind of joke, or another great want ad bargain?

It's for real, said the voice on the other end of the line when FYI called to check. "It's a nice house, 1,400 square feet, two bedrooms, one bath. Our son bought the property a few weeks ago and he wants to build a bigger place."

The catch: The lucky new owner has 10 days (from last Thursday) to take the neat brick ranch-style house away.

Otherwise, it's wrecking time.

Political hoof in mouth

Last week's primary winner for 1st District State House Andrew Richner is chuckling over the note he just received from Congressman John Conyers.

It congratulated him and ended by saying, "Now the real work begins — the next three months require our best collective efforts in order to guarantee the ultimate victory of a Democratic sweep in November."

"It's a nice gesture, but I'm not sure I agree with the sentiment," says Richner, a Republican.

Pierwatch

Vigilant lifeguards are jumping in and pulling them out at the Farms Pier this summer, and while not everyone needed CPR it still adds up to an impressive string of water rescues.

"So far we've had 17 saves, all from the pool," said head lifeguard Alex Keros. Most were youngsters who needed a little assist.

Last year four or five of the incidents were in the lake, where the Farms has a swimmable beach, Alex said. "We've had a lot more saves this year," he said, explaining it might be due to more people swimming because of better weather.

As of about noon last Saturday the lifeguard honor roll and number of saves credited to each was:

Amy Booher, 1.
Dana Casazza, 2.

Erica Cordier, 3.
Michelle Dumler, 2.
Ann Echlin, 1.
Kim Hepner, 3.
John Koenig, 1.
Rob Latta, 1.
Kelly Prysak, 1.
Kristin Reagan, 1.
Jenny Rolka, 1.

"It shows our people are watching," said Alex, "but we can all be lifeguards just by paying attention to our kids."

Tall tale?

Attorney and amateur gardener Howard Hill may have the tallest corn in Grosse Pointe — or at least on Fern Road, where his mini farm sprouts out back at his place. The crop's standing at least 10 feet tall, he reports.

The secret of Howard's luck may be a highly experimental fertilizer, provided by a little friend of one of his daughters.

Guinea pig dung. (Would this one fly in Kansas?)

Has your Mom had a mammogram?

The risk of breast cancer increases with age. It is one of the leading causes of death among women 65 and older. Early detection through regular mammograms could prevent many of these deaths. Yet as women get older, they are less likely to get mammograms. Has your Mom had a mammogram? If not, encourage her to get one. It might be your chance to give her good advice.

Call us. We can tell you everything you need to know about mammograms. Free.

Missing

Dionisia Hantzis, above left, and her children, Themis and Maria, above right, disappeared from the area of Mack Plaza and St. John Hospital and Medical Center at Moross and Mack around 2 p.m. on Aug. 9. Hantzis is 26 years old, stands 5-feet, 4-inches tall, has brown eyes and auburn hair. Maria has brown eyes and dark brown hair, is 7 years old and is 4-feet, 5-inches tall; Themis also has brown hair and brown eyes, is 6 years old and is 4-feet, 3-inches tall. Anyone with information about their whereabouts is asked to call Detroit police at (313) 596-5500.

Alert resident thwarts theft

A woman who lives in the 300 block of Merriweather in Grosse Pointe Farms heard her dog barking around 2:30 a.m. on Aug. 6 and looked outside to see two men running away from the Jeep Grand Cherokee parked in front of her house.

A street light near her house enabled the woman to get a good look at both men — and describe them and the light blue mini-van they took off in — to Farms police.

An officer on patrol on Mack saw three men in a light blue mini-van turn off McKinley and onto Mack and enacted a traffic stop.

The van's driver, a 28-year-old Detroit man, told police that he had just dropped off two Grosse Pointe girls, whom they had met while "cruising Gratiot." However, none of the van's occupants, two adults and one juvenile, could say who the girls were or where they lived. Officers ordered all three men out of the vehicle and found two standard screwdrivers on the floor of the van.

An officer at the house on Merriweather found fresh damage to the Jeep's driver and passenger door locks.

All three were taken to the station, processed and questioned. The juvenile, a 16-year-old Detroit boy, was released to the custody of his mother. Police have submitted a petition to Wayne County juvenile court seeking a warrant against the youth for attempt-

Warrant issued against tenant

When a tenant cited for numerous violations at a house on Madison in Grosse Pointe Farms failed to show up for her Aug. 7 court date, municipal judge Matthew Rumora authorized a warrant for her arrest.

The situation was brought to the city's attention in late July when the property owner paid a visit to the house. She was met at the door by a vicious dog and the smell of animal waste and rotting food. She alerted Farms police, who went into the house, along with the city's public service director, and found a dozen dogs and three cats. The interior was littered with fecal matter and rotting food.

The homeowner and tenant each were cited for failure to maintain a dwelling in a clean and sanitary condition; keeping and maintaining any pet which, by its odor, constitutes a public nuisance; owning more than two dogs; not keeping the premises litter-free; and for having noxious weeds, rubbish and waste.

Rumora authorized a warrant against the tenant for violating the city's ordinance against having more than two dogs on a given piece of property. Further action against non-compliance with orders to remedy the other violations will be pursued by the city's public services department.

Roofer arrested on warrant

A Grosse Pointe Park woman, apparently in a dispute with a roofing contractor over his quality of workmanship, became intimidated by him and called police on Aug. 5.

While police were at the woman's house in the 16000 block of Maumee, they ran a background check and learned the contractor had an outstanding warrant for fraud issued by the city of Madison Heights.

Police placed the man under arrest. During a routine search, police found him in possession of marijuana and charged him with violating the controlled substance act, a city

Signs, signs...

To the Editor:

This letter is written to call upon the council members of the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods to enact an ordinance in each city that would place the maximum fine possible on the placement of a candidate's political signs on public property. The ordinance should evoke a fine for each individual sign. Thus, a candidate could be fined 20 times if they had 20 of their political signs on public property. Such an ordinance would help to stop the candidates in both parties who are blatantly ignoring our present ordinances. Further, I call upon the president of East Side Republican Club to join with me in attempting to help our fine community from looking like a trash heap.

President, Grosse Pointe Democratic Club

ordinance.

Randy Riedel, 30, of Eastpointe, pleaded guilty to the charge at his arraignment Aug. 6 in Grosse Pointe Park Municipal Court. He posted a $100 interim bond for the Madison Heights warrant and was released. The length and nature of Riedel's sentence is being reviewed by Park municipal Judge Carl Jarboe.

Boom and go fall

The famed Detroit Edison Seven Sisters smokestacks were demolished on Saturday, Aug. 10, by U.S. Dismantlement Corp. The power plant, which was home to the landmark smokestacks, has not been used since 1983. The entire demolition took only about 10 seconds. The above photographs were taken by City of Grosse Pointe resident Don Coles of Great Lakes Aerial & Legal.

Winners don't smoke

Tobacco use is the single most preventable cause of death worldwide, the American Cancer Society reports.

It is important for children to learn early on about the dangerous effects of smoking such as lung cancer, emphysema and many other diseases.

Through awareness and education, our children must be taught to stay smoke-free. Seventy percent of adolescent smokers say they would not have started if they could chose again and 40 percent of teenage smokers have tried to quit and have failed.

The tobacco industry is dependent on youth tobacco use to replace the smokers who die from the use of their products. Our kids today need to follow the examples set by our athletes. Be on a winning team, don't start.

For more information on anti-smoking programs, contact the American Cancer Society at (800) 925-2271.

New SS benefits will be paid by direct deposit

As of Aug. 1, people who apply for Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) will have the convenience of direct deposit.

That policy will also apply to people who receive any federal benefit payment, federal wage, salary or retirement payment, or vendor and expense reimbursement payment.

People already on the Social Security and SSI rolls who get checks will continue to be paid by check, unless they opt to change to direct deposit.

Also, new beneficiaries who don't have a bank account will be paid by check. The government saves 40 cents each time someone uses direct deposit instead of a check.

SCHOOL NEWS

Busy students

The Grosse Pointe Rotary Foundation awarded 13 scholarships to Grosse Pointe area high school graduates this year.

Winners from Grosse Pointe South were, Sherry Eathorn, Eleni Matsis, Andrew Marr and Andre Vaesey. Recipients from North were Steven Lancaster, Phuong Hoang, Jeffrey Landers, Michael Magri and Susannah Sperry. Winners from University Liggett School were Rebekkah Camm, Todd Kamin, Jessica Papa and Jerry Carr.

The Rotary Foundation selects scholarship recipients through its scholarship committee, which encourages the schools to award at least one scholarship each year to a trade or technical school student, as these students often do not have opportunities for academic scholarships. In 1996, the Grosse Pointe Rotary has awarded $14,000 in scholarships so far.

In addition, the Foundation also awards full scholarships to six juniors, three from each public high school, to attend the University of Wisconsin's annual World Affairs Seminar. This year's participants were Chris Bigelow, Lisa Johnson, Katy Gladysheva, Charles Thomas, Kate Huetteman and John Buckler. The seminar, held June 9-14, involved hundreds of students from all over the world, who participated in lectures, discussion groups and met with Nobel Peace Prize winner Oscar Arias Sanchez, former president of Costa Rica.

Reunions

The Lincoln High School Alumni Association will hold its annual reunion dinner dance on Saturday, Oct. 19, at the Warren Chateau on 10 Mile and Mound, in Warren. School board waives policy for pair of foreign exchange students

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe school board voted Aug. 12 to make an exception to its policy and allow two foreign exchange students from the Republic of Mongolia to attend Grosse Pointe South High School this year.

Sunjidmaa Ganbold and Altanzul Zorigt, had they not had the private backing and support of Paul Robinson of the City of Grosse Pointe, would have been unable to study in the Grosse Pointe schools. Their country does not currently have an accredited student exchange program.

"I was (in the Republic of Mongolia) for one and a half years," Robinson told the school board at its Aug. 5 meeting. "I became starkly aware of the educational system there; it was in a shambles after the fall of the Soviet Union."

While there, Robinson met Ganbold and Zorigt, both of whom are now 18 years old, and have received excellent grades in their respective schools, can speak and write English and will have the full support of their own families as well as Robinson's backing.

"If Mr. Robinson is willing to sponsor and house these kids, we should approve this," said board president Tim Howlett. "I don't want to encumber and slow down the process."

Trustee Sears Taylor agreed: "It's essential that the board have flexibility; we have to take these on a case-by-case basis. Mr. Robinson has taken on a huge financial burden and we have an obligation to help him out."

Assistant superintendent Chris Fenton said it is district policy to accept only students from other nations who are in exchange programs recognized by the school board. Recognition is based on the advisory list of the International Educational Travel and Exchange Programs, as published by the council on Standards for International Travel.

'(T)he educational system (in Mongolia) is in a state of shambles.'

Paul Robinson
Grosse Pointe

Each year the school system receives between five and 10 requests from foreign students to attend Grosse Pointe schools. Most of the requests come from relatives or friends of the student who live in the Pointes. In order to obtain a student visa, the accepting school must sign an I-20 immigration form, Fenton said.

"But there have been cases where we weren't in a position to approve," Fenton said. "A student came here without the approval and there were severe language limitations. We decided no more. Let the accredited organizations do the screening."

In 1991 the board adopted a policy that ensured there was a fair and equitable approval process in place and that the student was under someone's care and support.

The school administration reviewed Robinson's request to waive policy based on the overriding issue that Mongolia does not have a recognized organization for exchange students.

Frosting on the Concours d'Elegance cake

Awards at an automotive event such as the Concours d'Elegance at Meadow Brook earlier this month are kind of like frosting on the cake, or even gilding the lily. Just being invited to exhibit a car is an honor.

So when Mary Beth Adderley, of Bloomfield Hills, took the People's Choice Award at the Concours for her 1937 Cord 812 convertible coupe, more luster was added to this magnificent example of the art of the late Grosse Pointe Gordon Buehrig, who probably designed more classic automobiles during his career than any other designer.

In fact, the "coffin-nose" Cord has been "the people's choice" ever since it was unveiled to the public at the 1936 New York Auto Show as the Cord 810. A poll of visitors revealed that twice as many rated the Cord best of show as the second-place choice (and it was no slouch, the Lincoln Zephyr).

Autos

By Richard Wright

Design firsts on the Cord included hidden headlights, an electric-vacuum four-speed shift, variable-intensity interior lights and a radio as standard equipment. But it only survived two model years. What went wrong?

Buehrig, who had worked for Harley Earl at General Motors, then became chief body designer for Stutz, Duesenberg, Cord and Auburn, addressed this question about 10 years ago in a talk before the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Buehrig said: "We had no problems, the company did."

Buehrig said his team did not ignore costs; it knew the company's money was limited. "We used an obsolete steering wheel; we just added a distinctive horn ring. To save money on dies, the left rear and right front doors were identical and vice versa."

Buehrig said a few changes were made in the original design. "The front fenders were changed slightly to facilitate manufacturing. A cheaper bumper was used and the wheel covers were ventilated to solve a problem of brakes heating up. But there were no compromises in design, only in manufacturing.

"We had designed plastic knobs to dress up obsolete window cranks. Two plastics were available, Tennite and Bakelite. We specified Tennite, because it was more colorful. Purchasing ordered painted metal, which looked fine until the paint wore off.

"Too much 'engineering' is done in the purchasing department."

While many feel the People's Choice Trophy is the most important honor, the official top award at the Concours is the Governor's Trophy Best in Show, which went to Arturo Keller, of Petaluma, Calif., for his 1928 Mercedes-Benz SS Castagna.

Most Elegant Car Trophy was presented to Robert and Christine Waldo, of Sandusky, Ohio, for their 1931 Cadillac V-16 Town Brougham. The Meadow Brook Memorial Trophy was awarded to L. Thomas Caulfield, of Janesville, Wis., for his 1951 Ferrari 212 LeMans Berlinet-Ferrari.

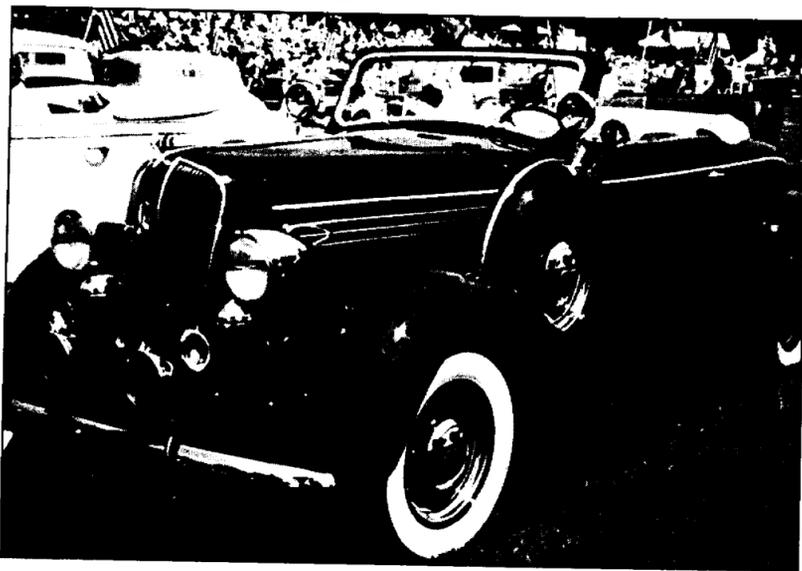

See AUTOS, page 16A

A featured car at the Concours was this 1930 Blue Train Bentley, so named because it raced and beat a locomotive named Le Train Bleu through France from Cannes to Calais and across the English Channel (by ferry) to London.

Parked near the entrance to the Concours, ready to help if any of the modern cars failed, was this 1927 Ford Model A wrecker. AAA service from Rochester Hills.

Height of style in mid-Depression was this 1936 Plymouth convertible with dual sidemounts and rumble seat.

The three American auto makers each presented awards for the most significant cars of their respective product lines. The General Motors trophy went to John Pierce, of Warren, for his 1964 Buick Riviera. Malcolm Pray Jr., of Greenwich, Conn., got the Ford trophy for his 1939

You couldn't get much sportier in 1914 than in this Stutz Bearcat, finished in yellow with black trim.

The last pre-tailfin Cadillac was this 1947 convertible. Fins were not yet in vogue, but chrome was.

Red Cross offers tips on how to keep cool

The hot, humid days of mid-to late-summer are upon us, and the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross is urging people to take precautions as temperatures rise. Below are some tips on how to beat the heat.

• Dress for the heat: Wear light-colored clothing. Light colors will reflect away some of the sun's energy. It is also a good idea to wear hats or use an umbrella.

• Drink water: Carry water or juice with you and drink continuously even if you do not feel thirsty. Avoid alcohol and caffeine which dehydrate the body. Eat small meals and eat more often. Avoid foods that are high in protein which increase metabolic heat. Avoid using salt tablets unless directed to do so by a physician. Avoid strenuous activity. If you must do strenuous activity, do it during the coolest part of the day, which is usually between 4 and 7 a.m. Stay indoors when possible.

In case of heat emergencies:

- Cool the body
- Give fluids
- Minimize shock

Are you scared of rollercoasters? Market behaved like one in July

By Joseph Mengden
The stock market did a double dip in July. Some of the downdrafts felt like dropping off the first high tower of Cedar Point's roller coaster, the "Mantis."

In spite of it all, we survived, although some of us were bruised and a few were beaten up pretty well.

The old-timers are comparing July 1996 to October 1987 and even back to December 1974.

LTS read somewhere recently that most of today's 6,000 plus mutual fund portfolio managers were not even in the business nine years ago when Black Monday scared us elders.

The 1973-74 decline was unlike the usual sell-off, which climaxes in a sharp price drop, percentage wise.

The sell-off includes delayed openings, price gaps, margin calls, ticker tape delays and unusually large volume.

On the other hand, the 1973-74 decline was a slip-and-slide action for almost two years. Earlier, the Dow Jones Industrial (DJI) index had twice broken through the 1,000 barrier, but did not carry through.

At the beginning of 1973, the market started declining on relatively low volume.

Month-by-month it retreated from the 1,000 level, painting a chart picture of a "backing and filling" movement.

Where had all the buyers gone? They say every day there is so much stock which must be sold that day to raise cash for (1) college tuition, (2) trading up into a larger residence, (3) settling an estate, (4) starting a new business, etc.

That stock will be sold today, but most buyers don't have to buy today. They can wait to buy tomorrow, or even next week. At year end 1973, and again in 1974, "tax-loss selling" added to the downward pressure on prices.

The DJI bottomed in late December 1974 around the 540 level. This represented a 45 percent, two-year decline for the "blue chips."

The Over The Counter stocks (there was no NASDAQ back then) fared even worse. Mutual funds, pension funds, profit sharing accounts, etc., were all cut in half.

LTS knows of several corporate plans where the employee/participants were offered an investment choice for the first time in early 1975 of equities or annuities, or portions thereof.

In one plan, over two-thirds of the employees bailed out of stocks near the bottom and reinvested the proceeds in increases as the maturity increases.

Another way to look at this price volatility is to look at a fox terrier dog's tail. The length of the tail is the maturity ladder.

Think of the beginning of the tail as the one-year maturity, the midpoint is 15 years and the tip end is 30 years.

When you give Fido a bone, watch his tail whip back and forth. The tip of the tail travels the farthest distance (price wise).

If your "slumber quotient" doesn't relish the extreme price swings of long bonds, then shorten your portfolio.

Your income from the shorter bonds will be reduced moderately, but you'll sleep better. Joseph Mengden is a City of Grosse Pointe resident and a former chairman of the board of First of Michigan.

LOCKING IN ANTILOCK BRAKES

Originally developed and patented in Germany during the 1930s for use in aircraft, antilock braking systems (ABS) were first introduced into passenger cars in the mid-1980s and are now available on all but a small number of vehicles. ABS helps drivers maintain control of their cars in emergency situations by preventing the wheels from locking up under hard braking. The system accomplishes this by engaging and disengaging the brakes rapidly when sensors detect wheel slippage. This technique is similar to the traditional method of pumping the brake pedal to avoid skidding on slippery surfaces, but ABS can perform this task more quickly (up to 18 times per second) and more precisely than the best driver. In order for ABS to work, drivers must keep their feet firmly depressed on the brake pedal without letting up. Any attempt to pump the brake pedal will merely defeat ABS and the improved safety edge that goes with it.

When you have ABS brakes, you don't want to impair their effectiveness by pumping unnecessarily. At RINKE TOYOTA, we have a great lineup of new cars at prices you can afford. G. P. public schools celebrate 75th

By Shirley McShane
Staff Writer

Quite a few candles will burn on the celebratory cake this Dec. 23, when the Grosse Pointe Public School System observes its 75th anniversary.

Regarded today as one of the top 10 districts in the state, the Grosse Pointe school district began as five separate rural districts.

In 1921, in an effort to upgrade educational standards and facilities for Pointe-area children, citizens led a petition drive to consolidate the districts. In December of that year, voters went to the polls and approved the consolidation proposal.

Thus began Rural Agricultural School District No. 1 of Grosse Pointe and Gratiot townships. The name may have reflected the nature of the Pointes in the 1920s, but it soon became obsolete.

A history of the district written in 1953 by James Bushong, superintendent of the district from 1951-62, says, "there has been a rather steady and rapid growth in population and school enrollment since the time of organization in 1922. At that time there were less than 1,000 children enrolled in the public schools . . . and the total population was less than 8,000. While there was much growth in the late '20s and then in the few years preceding World War II, the greatest growth has taken place during the last four years, during which time more than 4,000 new dwelling units have been built, the school enrollment has increased by 1,300 pupils and the total population by almost 10,000 persons."

Yet the name, rarely used in conversation, remained until Aug. 23, 1955.

School administrators decided once and for all to officially rename the district the Grosse Pointe Public School System. (That's what everyone called it anyway, said one retired administrator who led the charge to change the name).

Here's a brief history of the school district: The area comprising the five Grosse Pointes and a fractional piece of Harper Woods originally was five separate rural or fractional school districts: Rural Agricultural School districts No. 1 (Tromby and Cadieux schools), No. 2 (Kerby School) and No. 3 (Vernier School) and Fractional Districts No. 9 of

See Anniversary, Page 10B

Why the five districts merged:

Letter, circa 1920

To the friends of the country school: Rural school education is one of the big problems of today. The "little red school house" of the country is no longer adequate for present needs. The country boy and girl of today are not enjoying the longer educational privileges as their more fortunate cousins in the town or city. This is unfair, especially in an agricultural state like Michigan. The remedy is to be found in large part in rural school consolidations.

A report, circa 1919

"Aside from the teacher, two basic things are necessary for an efficient school—a body of students so that there may be a division of the labor of instruction and a large assessed valuation so that the financial burden imposed on the supporters of the school will not be excessive. The unusual one-room school has neither a large body of students nor a large taxing area."

What was happening in senior high school in 1929?

• A ticket to the junior class prom in 1929 sold for $1.

• The menu for the junior-senior banquet, held in the Grosse Pointe High School cafeteria: melon cocktail, hearts of cherry and olives, radishes and salted nuts, creamed chicken with mushrooms, shoestring potatoes and asparagus tips, along with parker house rolls. Dessert: ice cream colonial baskets and cakes.

• Popular nicknames of students who graduated in '29: Skippy, Bunnie, Speed, Doe-Doe, Mugsy, Maisie, Hug, Bub and Irish.

• Senior pranks: Someone tossed a chalkboard eraser into the stove. The subsequent odor of burning material quickly enveloped the classroom. A snake, as well as a chunk of Limburger cheese were among the popular items hidden in teachers' desks.

• Fight song:

Dear Grosse Pointe High, we're all for you,
We know you'll give your best.
In every game be loyal and true
For you have stood the test.
Then hail to the boys of Grosse Pointe High;

The bravest in the land,
They loyal school now salutes thee,
As you start out to take your stand.
Then hail to the boys of Grosse Pointe High

Let's give a Rah!Rah!Rah!
May the faith in dear old Grosse Pointe live
As firm as it is today.

Fruits and vegetables better than pills, researchers say

Can supplemental vitamins, fiber, and natural fruit and vegetable compounds called "phytochemicals" in pill form work as well as foods to fight off cancer?

At a recent symposium presented by the American Institute for Cancer Research, leading diet and cancer researchers said supplements are not a substitute for eating plenty of plant-based foods.

When our bodies absorb phytochemicals, vitamins and fiber from plant-based foods, they work in different ways to protect our health, by shielding cell membranes from damage to affecting rates of the cell division that is key to the cancer process.

"Researchers still have not discovered answers to questions about dosage and combined effects of these plant food elements," said Dr. Gary G. Meadows, professor of pharmacognosy at Washington State University. "Studies that find benefits from food substances use amounts that are far greater than in normal diets, and the toxic effects of large amounts of some vitamins and phytochemicals, and combinations of them, are still not known."

That's one reason why taking large doses of vitamin and phytochemical supplement pills is not advisable, the researchers pointed out.

"Many people believe that if a little is good, more must be better," Meadows said. "In fact, overdoing any one thing often has negative effects. When people rely too much on supplement pills, they tend to forget about eating a balanced diet."

Other uncertainties, Meadows said, are the lack of standardization in the manufacture and labeling of complex phytochemical supplements, and not knowing how early in life or how long consumers have to take them to get beneficial effects.

For example, people may take supplement pills that claim to isolate the phytochemicals such as beta-carotene or sulphur compounds found in broccoli, garlic and other vegetables.

In reality, however, there may be so much processing in making supplements that the chemical composition of the compounds may be altered and ultimately yield few health benefits for the consumer, said Dr. John D. Potter, head of the Cancer Prevention Research Program at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, professor of epidemiology at the University of Washington and co-chairman of the World Cancer Research Fund expert panel on diet and cancer.

"Deodorized garlic, for example, has wiped out at least half of the sulphur compounds that are beneficial in garlic. And to release a number of compounds in a vegetable such as garlic, you need to chew it, crush it, or cook it. But if you don't like the odor of garlic, you can eat a number of other foods and perhaps get the same benefit from different compounds with overlapping effects, and that's the point of eating a variety of vegetables and fruits."

As for the familiar refrain, "no time to cook," the researchers advised Americans to put health before convenience by making the time to prepare and cook more healthy foods like vegetables, even if it means giving up some TV-watching time.

"We're a pill-taking society," Meadows said. "Instead of changing our eating habits, we'd like to eat potato chips and take a pill to counteract the negative effects. But that's not realistic."

Meadows advised looking at what we can do to eat for better health. The food industry is expected to manufacture more foods fortified with phytochemicals and other health protectors, following the current trend of foods now available with extra calcium, such as orange juice and breakfast cereals. For now, the researchers agreed, the best way to fortify our health and eat for lower cancer risk is by using salad bars, packaged salads, frozen vegetables and the wide variety of fresh fruit and vegetables that are more available than ever before.

For a free brochure on eating for lower cancer risk, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. CL, Washington, D.C., 20069.

The Pastor's Corner Shabbat (Sabbath)

By Roger M. Skully

Grosse Pointe Jewish Council

Judaism has given the world the awareness that time is sacred. It has also revealed a way of celebrating this sanctity of time: the Sabbath.

God had finished creation. In Genesis 2:1-3, it states "And God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it, because on it God ceased from all the work of creation which He had done."

The blessing on this day did not relate to a product of creation, but to time itself. With the sanctification of time, the work of creation reached its climax and its consummation.

The Sabbath was appointed that we might learn the meaning and the sanctity of time, experiencing time without exploiting it for work but simply as a holy gift out of the hand of God.

No work may be done. With this sanctification of time, all relationships, between man and man and between man and nature, are transformed.

"Sabbath observance is equivalent to observance of Torah as a whole (the Jerusalem Talmud)."

There are two versions of the 10 commandments in the Bible, one in Exodus 20; another in Deuteronomy 5. The version in Exodus emphasizes the call for cessation from work in order that we may celebrate God's sacred time. The version in Deuteronomy places emphasis on the ethical implications: equality of man, man's stewardship over nature. The memory of slavery is invoked. Slavery represents human conditions that are odious. One human being transforms another into a mere tool and thereby degrades him or her. It kills the human spirit. We must not tolerate it. The Sabbath is the vehicle of social justice which moves men to reject slavery and exalt freedom.

The Sabbath is a sign of the covenant as we read and proclaim in prayer: "The children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, observing the Sabbath throughout their generations as a covenant for all time between me and the Children of Israel."

It is Judaism's gift to mankind, revolutionary in its time and our own. It becomes a unique day of meditation.

Unlike Eastern religions, in which meditation is a separation from life, Judaism has placed meditation within life, affirming the need for it and balancing it against the obligations of work.

He who observes the Sabbath is removed to an island of enchanted time for contemplation and renewal of spirit. (It should also be remembered that this or any law of Torah must be broken if a human life is in danger. All of the Law is compassionate where life or health is involved.)

It is easy to see in this frantic world how each of us is in need of a Sabbath for renewal of spirit when the demands upon us seem unending.

It is the equivalent of a mental health day ordained thousands of years ago. Consider making it a part of your life, whether you observe it on Friday, Saturday or Sunday. Use it for self-renewal and understanding. Allow it to temper harshness and exhaustion, bigotry and ignorance. Utilize the sanctity of time to combat injustice and recognize the universal truths of our existence on this planet. Allow it to infuse all life with sanctity and justice.

"It is a sign between Me and the Children of Israel (and all mankind) forever."

A 10-minute life saver

By Dr. Thomas Mertz
Special Writer

Ten minutes. That's all it takes to have a prostate exam. Those 10 minutes could save your life.

Prostate cancer is a common affliction for men over 70. Medical surveys report that one out of eight men have a high probability of developing prostate cancer. In the past year, prostate cancer surpassed lung cancer as the most prevalent form of cancer among American men.

Of the estimated 317,000 men who will get prostate cancer, more than 41,000 will die from it.

The prostate gland is part of the male reproductive system. It's about the size and shape of a walnut and is located in front of the rectum, near the bladder. Prostate cancer may remain confined to the prostate gland, or may spread locally to other organs or through the blood to distant organs.

If detected early, prostate cancer can be controlled. A simple digital exam, along with a blood test that examines the PSA (Prostate Specific Antigen) are usually enough to detect the onset of the disease. A PSA rating lower than 4 is usually safe; between 4 and 10 would require a follow-up exam and over 10 is considered high.

This simple prostate screening exam should be conducted once a year after age 40 for men at high risk, such as African-Americans and those with a family history of the disease. Men who are not at high risk but are over 50 should be checked every other year; men over 60, every year.

Because early prostate cancer usually does not exhibit any symptoms, it is extremely difficult to detect without testing.

However, some typical indications are: weak or interrupted urine flow; inability to urinate or difficulty stopping or starting a urine flow; frequent urination, especially at night; blood in the urine or semen; burning or pain with urination; and pain in the lower back, pelvis or upper thighs.

Men often are hesitant to have a prostate exam because they really don't want to know that they have cancer. Quite often, it is women who encourage the men in their lives to have these exams. It's critical that both men and women be educated about this life-threatening disease.

Some men are afraid. They shouldn't be. There are a number of treatment options. Besides, the sooner the cancer is detected, the sooner it can be treated.

Some treatments available include removal of the prostate gland, radiation and hormone therapy; or cryosurgery, a technique that freezes and kills prostate cancer cells.

Each patient and case of prostate cancer is different. Prostate cancer is slow-moving. If the patient is over 70, he may just be put on observation. If the patient is younger, the prostate may be removed. We want to work together with the patient to find out what is best for him.

Increased awareness and early detection have proven to have a positive impact. Currently, 58 percent of all prostate cancer cases are detected while the cancer is still localized and at its more curable stage. This indicates that men are improving their knowledge of the disease and gaining an advantage through early detection.

Dr. Thomas Mertz is a urologist on staff at Bon Secours Hospital. Mertz and his associates at Grosse Pointe Urologic Surgeons, P.C., will conduct free baseline prostate exams and PSA blood tests for new patients in conjunction with Prostate Cancer Awareness Week, Sept. 24-30. This third annual free screening will be offered from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 25, in the Roseville office at 18245 E. 10 Mile, Suite 130.

If you are 50 or older and don't see a physician regularly, or if you're over 40 with a family history of prostate cancer, call (810) 773-6948 to schedule your baseline exam.

Kick-off luncheon

The White Christmas Ball, a fundraiser sponsored by the Fontbonne Auxiliary of St. John Hospital and Medical Center, will be held on Friday, Dec. 13, at the Ritz-Carlton in Dearborn.

A kick-off luncheon to plan the event was held recently at the home of Mrs. Kim Lie of Grosse Pointe Park.

Cancer researchers put 'wonder foods' in perspective

Beta-carotene, olive oil, red wine — these are just a few of the items we eat that are being touted as "wonder sources" of protection from cancer and other diseases.

For every research finding that shows health benefits, another study tells a different story about the same dietary substance we'd like to believe is boosting our health. Why is there so much contradicting information, and what should consumers believe?

Several leading diet and cancer researchers from the American Institute for Cancer Research tackled this question at a recent symposium in New York on "Diet and Cancer: Putting the Puzzle Together."

"Exploratory study results are sometimes mistaken for information that is useful to the general public," said Dr. John D. Potter, head of the Cancer Prevention Research Center at Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, professor of epidemiology at the University of Washington and co-chair of the World Cancer Research Fund expert panel on diet and cancer.

Potter noted as one example the nutrient beta-carotene, which as a component in foods has been shown to help protect against cancer. However, two recent studies found beta-carotene to lack protection and perhaps even increase cancer development among both Finnish and American smokers.

Potter explained that this was good science that tells us clearly that a relatively high dose in high risk individuals is not protective. However, he said that one or two studies alone are not enough to determine good public health policies. In this example, beta-carotene is just one piece of a very large and complex puzzle that shows overall that a higher plant food intake probably is protective.

Potter also noted that different answers result from different types of scientific studies. Human studies, studies with laboratory animals and "test-tube" studies of cells and substances under microscopes all have different purposes and outcomes — although they are all necessary to understanding the entire picture of how and why a food might protect against cancer and other diseases.

"We end up with a picture of mechanisms from isolated laboratory studies that may or may not directly reflect what's going on in human beings. That's because we consume complex diets and complex mixtures of foods every day of our lives," he said.

"What we desperately need is to get simple ideas out of complex biology," said Dr. T. Colin Campbell, professor of nutritional biochemistry at Cornell University and co-chairman of the World Cancer Research Fund expert panel on diet and cancer.

"There are many exciting indications in all of the research that is going on, but we still don't know enough about how specific foods or substances in them work in combination to protect our health."

Campbell said that after health authorities in the early 1980s issued the recommendation that Americans reduce fat from 40 percent of daily calories to 30 percent or less, people began to think that cutting fat was the only answer to a healthier diet. Since then, he noted, "We've learned that cutting back on certain foods is only half the story. We need to increase the amount and variety of protective foods, like fruits and vegetables. It doesn't mean that broccoli or another plant food is individually going to be the answer, because we need protection from the hun-

Fetal monitoring may give early warning of problems

By Dr. Fredric Frigoletto Jr., President, The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

If you're awaiting your baby's birth, it's natural to worry. Who doesn't want her baby to be healthy?

Chances are, everything will be fine. But if there's a problem, fetal monitoring tests during pregnancy can give your doctor early warning.

The tests described here are not foolproof. But they are important tools to help check the fetus' growth and progress, especially if your doctor suspects a problem. If all seems normal, you may not need any tests.

Kick Count — You can do this test yourself, by counting the number of times the fetus moves during a certain period.

Ultrasound — This test creates pictures of the fetus from sound waves the human ear can't hear. It is done in hospitals and many doctors' offices. A small device called a transducer is moved along your abdomen or, less often, inserted in your vagina. Besides picking up possible problems, ultrasound may show if you're carrying twins. In fetal heart rate monitoring, ultrasound is used to listen to the fetal heartbeat or record the heartbeats on a graph.

Non stress Test — This measures the fetus' heart rate when the fetus moves. If the heart beats faster, it's a sign of good health. You lie with a belt around your waist that has transducers attached to it. Each time you feel movement you push a button. Sometimes this test is done with a device that senses fetal movement.

Contraction Stress Test — This test measures how the fetus' heart rate reacts when your uterus contracts. To cause mild contractions you may be given a drug called oxytocin, or you may be asked to massage your nipples so your body releases oxytocin naturally. Contractions should cause no change in the fetal heart rate. If the heart rate drops, you may need further testing or treatment.

Biophysical Profile — This test combines ultrasound with a non stress test to study the fetal heart rate, movements and muscle tone, as well as the amount of amniotic fluid around the fetus. Each factor is scored and the total is added. If the score falls below the normal 8 to 10, it could indicate a problem. Further testing may be necessary.

If a monitoring test suggests a problem, it doesn't always mean the fetus is in trouble. Be sure to bring up any questions about monitoring during your prenatal care visits.

Although Russell Kirk (1918-1994) is no longer with us, he still remains very much alive and vigilant in his remarkable literary and political books. With the political season quickening, it will behoove all of us Americans who are concerned with America's direction to read both of Kirk's last books. One is a magnificent autobiography and the other is a collection of penetrating essays.

In his disarming preface to "The Sword of Imagination," Kirk explains his nodus operandi: "Emulating Julius Caesar, Henry Esmond and Henry Adams, I express my memoirs, throughout the following chapters, in the third person — that mode being less embarrassing to authors who set at defiance the ravenous ego. . . Besides, when the man within regards critically the life of the outer man, it may be possible to attain some degree of objectivity — using that word in its signification of detachment from strong emotion or personal prejudice."

Kirk claims that his birthplace was "a good town to be born into, Plymouth was old as civilization goes in Michigan, founded by New Englanders in the 1820s. Although only 20 miles by rail to the west of Fort Street station in Detroit, Plymouth in 1918 — and indeed until the Second World War — remained a tranquil place with handsome old houses (nearly all of them vanished today), tree-shaded streets and a square on the New England model."

During his primary years, Kirk attended "Starkweather School, a few blocks distant from his house: a brand-new school building then, handsome, situated next door to an old Lutheran church, on a bluff above the valley of the little River Rouge. Well sited and designed! Its library was a charming room, with hardwood bookcases and paneling, all of the books on its shelves good ones. It was kept open during the summer months, too, for families with a bookish turn, some of whom belonged to the poorer families of the North End."

After graduating with a B.A. in history from Michigan State in 1940, Kirk entered the army where he served for four years. He taught briefly at his alma mater before obtaining his M.A. in history from Duke University.

Then one of the greatest and most illuminating experiences of Kirk's life opened before him — the glorious years he spent in Scotland attending St. Andrews, which conferred upon him in 1952 the Doctor of Letters degree, the highest arts degree of the university.

As Kirk recalls: "The St. Andrews scholars of that generation were truly learned men who read, who thought, who were civilization incarnate; no one ever had told them to be salesmen or Rotarians. Kirk reflected that some of his American professorial colleagues had no books in their homes except for free copies of textbooks."

During his time at St. Andrews, Kirk wrote and published the first of his many books, "Randolph of Roanoke: A Study in Conservative Thought."

Kirk always wished to be free of entanglements that would hamper his freedom of thought and movement. In other words, he did not desire a tenured professorial position or to be otherwise obligated. Instead, he chose to lecture before political groups, universities and various groups interested in his conservative philosophy.

With his vast historical knowledge, he successfully wrote many books, magazine and newspaper articles. In such a demand as a speaker and a teacher, Kirk often found himself on the move from his beloved home on Piety Hill in Mecosta.

Kirk elucidates the reasoning behind his book's title. "In his smaller way, he believed that his political function was to work upon the body politic by endeavoring to rouse the political and moral imagination among the shapers of public opinion — that large category including political leaders, opinion makers of serious journals, the mass media, the academy and the church; and that unknowable crowd of individuals who . . . influence their neighbors by the strength of their convictions."

"By talent, he was a writer, a speaker, an editor. In the long run, conceivably he might demolish some molehills, if not move mountains. The only weapon with which he was skilled was the sword of imagination."

"The Politics of Prudence" is Kirk's final statement of his political beliefs. He does not beat around the bush — ever. For instance, he says:

"Ideology provides sham religion and sham philosophy, comforting in its way to those who have lost or never have known genuine religious faith, and to those not sufficiently intelligent to apprehend real philosophy. The fundamental reason why we must set our faces against ideology . . . that it is opposed to truth: it denies the possibility of truth in politics or in anything else, substituting economic motive and class interest for abiding norms."

Further on in the same essay, Kirk makes clear that "what we need to impart is political prudence, not political belligerence. Ideology is the disease, not the cure. All ideologies . . . are hostile to enduring order and justice and freedom. For ideology is the politics of passionate unreason."

One of Kirk's correspondents "finds himself confronted, from time to time, by young people calling themselves conservative, who have no notion of prudence, temperance, compromise, the traditions of civility or cultural patrimony."

In another clarifying essay, the author points out that "the contest between conservatives and radicals in the modern world has been a fierce battle between the world of order, on the one hand, and the antagonistic world on the other. Beholding the world today, could anyone maintain that ours is an age of sanity, harmony, virtue, order and fruitful penitence? No, even if conservatives have held their ground here and there, in general the antagonist world has prevailed."

Kirk devotes another essay on the importance of conservative books. After mentioning 10 titles, he claims that "if you line up these volumes on a shelf and religiously read one chapter in one of them each night, until you have read and digested all 10, you will acquire very considerable political and moral wisdom."

An anguished essay is Kirk's cry of exasperation: "Our great cities . . . are nearly ruined, ravaged by crime, their populations corrupted or endangered by deadly narcotics, all community destroyed. Our boasted affluence is given the lie by the swift and sinister growth of a genuine proletariat, voracious and unruly, subsisting at public expense. Our layers of governmental bureaucracy are increasingly inefficient and vexatious."

Kirk continues with the pollution of our natural resources, schools have become nothing more than adolescent-sitting and collegiate mating, and the influences of religion have declined.

In his final essay, Kirk claims that there is still hope to retrieve our society from the slough of despair in which so many of us are floundering. He says that "many among the rising generation have not known a tranquil and confident America. They scarcely can imagine a time, not many decades past, when it was the diversion of families or couples to stroll in an evening in New York's Central Park or Detroit's Belle Isle Park, or Los Angeles' MacArthur Park. . . Most of the rising generation have experienced little of continuity and stability; the expectation of distressing change has been greater by far. Yet many of them sense that much remains to conserve, and that much ought to be restored."

Kirk offers so much in the way of advice and good common sense in both of his books that they should be required reading for all of us who wish to restore the dignity and greatness of the United States. True Americans need to be conservatives.

Stratford Festival's Godot was well worth the wait

Samuel Beckett's play "Waiting for Godot" is at once a great artistic creation of the 20th century and a tale that can hold any audience in rapt attention. This is demonstrated with overwhelming humor, pathos and impact at Stratford this summer.

Thanks to a brilliant duo recital by Stephen Ouimette as Estragon and Tom McCamus as Vladimir, and remarkably insightful direction by Brian Bedford, Beckett's seemingly impossible script unfolds as a genuinely funny and ironic metaphor for contemporary mankind's need for companionship and significance (or at least a little recognition) in life.

It does so at a level that few productions even approach and its impact is intensified wonderfully by the intimate atmosphere in the Tom Patterson Theatre. Being able to attend such a superb performance on such an ideal stage is a rare, if not unique treat.

Like two highly articulate Emmet Kelly clowns, Ouimette and McCamus turn circus burlesque into high art as they use impeccably timed and inflected delivery, startlingly rubber-faced expressions and brilliantly conceived gestures to make Beckett's messages clear.

Their threadbare clothes and clown-white face makeup and their pantomimed aches and pains bring into bitterly funny perspective the prosaic, bad jokes of life that Beckett wrote into the script.

Using every device of the actors' art, they take the word pictures that Beckett painted with a palette of all our banalities of social small talk and give them physical dimensions. The pictures are cliches and stereotypes that everyone will recognize. The nag, the complainer, the insecure, the boor, the bully, the impatient, the self-pitying and the bored are portrayed in turn by the two figures with an incisiveness that has us laughing at the same empty behavior we have noticed in others — and in ourselves.

State of the Arts

There is an engaging wistfulness to it all, brought into focus by the controlling factor of the pair's existence, that they are waiting for someone named Godot but are not sure when, or even if he will show up.

Their efforts to pass the time are repeatedly strained bits of small talk that can be painfully familiar and, at the same time, make us chuckle. We recognize them as those moments of struggling to make small talk when life is really at a standstill, moments that raise questions of life's basic purposes. Those are times when any diversion is a welcome relief.

James Blendick as Pozzo and Tim MacDonald as Lucky provide that relief and add to the repertory of human foibles with equally polished performances. Blendick's alternation between supremely vain self-confidence and whimpering vulnerability only further enriches the repertory of human ineptitude that Beckett lays before us.

The underlying message of the play is a grim existential view of life without purpose. But the performance generates high entertainment that enables the audience to enjoy getting the message, which could be another point of the play. It is, at least, of this production which is a real tour de force of virtuoso serio-comic acting by Ouimette and

Samuel Beckett's "Waiting for Godot" at the Tom Patterson Theatre in Stratford, Ontario, will run through Sept. 13.

McCamus and their supporting cast members.

"Waiting for Godot" continues at the Tom Patterson Theatre through Sept. 13, alternating in repertory there with outstanding productions of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" and Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth." Detroit Concert Choir named world's best

The Detroit Concert Choir, under the artistic direction of Gordon Nelson of Grosse Pointe Woods, represented the United States at the 50th anniversary celebration of the Llangollen International Musical Eisteddfod, a musical competition in North Wales, Great Britain.

The choir was one of three chosen to represent the United States in the competition.

The 65-voice choir won first place in the mixed choir competition by singing three selections: "Svete Tihy" by Alexandre Gretchaninoff, sung in Russian; "Brazilian Psalm," by Jean Berger, sung in Portuguese; and "Dona Nobis Pacem" by J.S. Bach, sung in Latin.

This victory propelled the choir into the premier choral competition for Choir of the World, where they went against first-place winners of other choral groups from Denmark, Hungary and Wales.

The title was conferred by a vote from an international panel of seven judges.

Grosse Pointers in the choir include Donna Abdo, Margaret Cooper, Brad Lapratt, Robin Ramsay, Beth Stevenson, Judy Swanson, Paul Wesley, Eric Frakes, Sandy Pisula and Paul Stuckey.

The 1996-97 season will mark the 10th anniversary of the Detroit Concert Choir. It will offer a three-concert subscription series and will perform in several benefits and community events, including the Focus: HOPE Walk for Justice at 1 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 13.

A "Welcome Home

Celebration Concert" will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 29, at Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church, 19950 Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods. The choir's office is at the church. The group rehearses at Grosse Pointe North High School.

How to protect your credit card

Protect your credit card numbers as though they were cash. Do not leave your credit card numbers where others can steal them.

Cheryl Krysiak, of the Michigan State University Extension in Macomb County, suggests you take the following precautions to keep your credit card numbers private:

- When cashing a check, a clerk can ask you to display a credit card for identification. If asked to show your card, do not allow anyone to copy the number.

- When shopping, never allow your address and phone number to be put on credit card charge slips. Credit Card companies require only a signature on the charge slip.

- When throwing away old papers containing credit card numbers, old credit card statements, airline ticket stubs, travel itineraries prepared by travel agents, car rental agreements or carbons from credit card receipts, tear them in many pieces.

- When your monthly credit card statement arrives, go over it carefully. If you find charges that you did not make, call the credit card issuer immediately and say that an unauthorized charge was made. Then write a letter saying the same thing and send it to the credit card company. Send it by certified mail so you will have proof you notified them.

With these precautions, your credit card numbers should be safe. And, if they are stolen, you will be able to avoid paying for the thief's purchases.

Take your heart to court.

Exercise serves you right.

a private firm) and the Hanstein School on Marseilles in Detroit (which houses administrative offices for the Detroit Public Schools) still stand.

The Vernier School, on Vernier near Lakeshore, was built in 1916 and closed in 1956. It remained unoccupied until May 1994, when, after no useful purpose could be found for the building, it was razed.

On Jan. 17, 1922, the first school board was elected: Lewis E. Smart, Charles A. Paye, John F. Kerby, George Defer and Charles A. Poupard.

The first regular meeting of the board was held on Feb. 6, 1922. Wilder L. Walling was appointed the first superintendent on Feb. 20, 1922. His salary: $4,000 a year.

For the 1922-23 school year, the district had 30 teachers and six principals. The average salary for principals was $1,980; teachers earned $1,600 a year.

In 1925, Defer school was built. Other new buildings followed: Trombly in 1927, Grosse Pointe High School in 1928, Mason in 1929, Richard in 1930, Maire in 1936 and Pierce Junior High in 1939. Parcels was built in 1948 and the first unit of the new Kerby school was constructed in 1949. In 1951, Parcels Junior High School, Kerby, Monteith and Poupard schools were completed. Ferry was built in 1954, Barnes in 1956 and Brownell Junior High School was opened in 1958.

Barnes closed as an elementary school in the mid-1980s, due to a decline in enrollment. Today it serves as the administrative offices for Grosse Pointe Community, Education and Leases space to the Services for Older Citizens.

Throughout the 1996-97 school year, a number of anniversary activities are planned. A kick-off celebration is planned for Nov. 17-23, in conjunction with National Education Week. Special displays will be set up at the school board meetings on the second Monday of each month in the Wicking Library at Grosse Pointe South, as well as in the main hallway at the administrative offices, 389 St. Clair.

If you have school memorabilia or photographs you'd like to share with the school system, contact the administrative offices at (313) 343-2012.

The Grosse Pointe News also plans to feature, on a weekly basis, bits and pieces of school system trivia and memories under the heading, "Telling tales out of school." Call 343-5591 with ideas.

First municipal streetcar operated — the St. Jean line. Detroit Times purchased by William R. Hearst.

Warren G. Harding inaugurated as president. Sacco and Vanzetti convicted. First Atlantic City bathing beauty contest. Multitudes of young women are bobbing their hair. Professional National Football league organized. First sales tax — West Virginia.

look the eighth grade examination. The questions were the same throughout the state.

The same course of study had been followed in all schools. The results: approximately 65 percent of the students received eighth-grade diplomas. The one-room school house with its limitations is the principal offender.

"An investigation of several graded schools, having a sufficient number of teachers to prevent any teacher from being required to teach more than two grades, showed the percentage of those who sought promotion from eighth grade was 8 percent and higher.

"The consolidated school becomes the center for the social life of the community. It is the logical place because of the interest that all have in the school. No religious dogmas enter in to divide people into groups. The consolidated school, moreover, makes it possible to have better-trained and experienced teachers.

— A report on the need for consolidated school districts, written by Wilford L. Coffey, assistant superintendent of public instruction.

A report, circa 1927

"When this district is all built up, and your schools are all completed, when no child will be compelled to walk more than a half mile to school, when there will be no crowded school rooms, no temporary buildings, when there will be no half day sessions, when your junior high schools will all have been built and filled to capacity and your senior high school is in full swing with a broad curriculum, when your junior college will have been placed in operation, when everything has been done that today seems possible or probably, even then perfection will not have been reached.

Pfaendtner's Olympic medal draws attention

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Jeff Pfaendtner is the object of attention wherever he goes these days.

"That's what winning a medal in the Olympics will do for a person."

"I visited my mom's office at the U.S. District Court and I had the medal in my jeans pocket," said Pfaendtner, who won a bronze in lightweight men's four rowing. "I must have showed it to 50 people."

"And when I was on the plane coming in from Washington I was making small talk with the fellow next to me during a stopover and I mentioned I was returning home from the Olympics. One thing led to another and pretty soon I was showing the medal to almost everyone on the plane."

"It's interesting to see how people react to seeing an Olympic medal. Some of them get goose bumps from it. It's something you don't see every day. I'd never seen one before."

Pfaendtner, a 1986 Grosse Pointe South grad, is proud of his medal and he should be. It took a lot of hard work and sacrifice to win it.

"We had to earn that bronze," he said. "There were actually two races in the final heat. Denmark and Canada were battling for the gold with the Danes rowing through Canada, in the last 500 meters. Then there was the battle for the bronze between our boat and the Irish."

"They were actually ahead of us for a good part of the race, but they didn't have much left at the end and we found some reserve energy. It wasn't comfortable at all. I remember looking over once and they were right next to us."

Some Olympians expressed disappointment when they didn't win a gold medal, but not Pfaendtner.

"I don't think anybody in our boat felt disappointment," he said. "To me, winning the bronze is as good as winning the gold. Just making the Olympic team was an honor by itself."

Pfaendtner, who had the No. 2 seat in his boat, said that winning the medal was the culmination of several goals he had set during the season.

"You set goals all along the path to the Olympics," said the fifth-year graduate student at the University of Pennsylvania, where he is working toward a doctorate degree in material science and engineering. "First, you just want to be invited to the selection camp. Then you fight your way to the top of the ladder in your group and fight to get into a boat."

"Next come the trials—which had seven boats entered—and you hope your boat is the one that beats the others. I reached every goal but one. That's satisfying. I think we had what it took to win a gold medal, but it comes down to some luck and just being the best on that particular day."

One thing that worked against the U.S. lightweight fours boat was a headwind.

"We weren't much of a headwind racing crew," Pfaendtner said, "and all of our races were with a headwind. If the air had been flat, maybe we would have won the race. Also, we didn't get off to the best start off the line and that cost us a little bit."

Rowers like to get off to an early lead because they're seated backward in the boat and it's impossible to see the boats ahead of them unless they turn around.

"And that disrupts your rhythm," Pfaendtner said. "That's why everyone goes off at a fierce sprint off the line. If you compare it to track, it's like starting the 800 meters like you'd start the 100."

"By the time you're into the last 500 meters, you're rowing blind. You can't feel your legs and your vision is in a tunnel. But somehow, you keep going."

Pfaendtner's crew had its first heat race on the first Monday of the Olympics.

"That was an important race because it gave us our first chance to see how we stood against the top European boats," Pfaendtner said. "They'd been racing each other all spring, but we stayed home partly for financial reasons and partly because we didn't want to give up the valuable practice time."

The U.S. crew drew Canada in its heat and the Americans were edged out by the Canadians, but at that point, winning or losing wasn't the most important thing.

"We knew we had the boat times to compete with the best in the world and we used the race as a learning process," Pfaendtner said. "We found that our rigging was too heavy and we were forced to expend too much effort. So we made some changes in the rigging for the repechage (second-chance round) and won that race by quite a bit."

That sent the Americans into the semifinals and once again Canada was an opponent. But this time the United States beat its northern neighbors.

"We were learning on the run," Pfaendtner said. One of Pfaendtner's most indelible memories of the Olympics is that of marching into the stadium with the rest of the U.S. squad during the opening ceremonies.

"There was a lot of adrenalin flowing that night," he said. "The athletes were collected in the baseball stadium next door and you could hear the crowd clapping as each of the countries was introduced. The American team was the last to enter and when it appeared on the ramp the crowd went crazy."

"It's hard to describe that feeling. It makes you feel like a superstar. I felt a little bit like Michael Jordan."

Once the opening ceremonies were over, Pfaendtner had to get over the emotional high.

"Fortunately, we rented a home in Gainesville, Ga., which is about a mile north of Atlanta and where the rowing was being held," he said. "I think it was good to get away from the village and all the hype and distractions. We were real low key."

The men's and women's eights were both expected to win and they finished out of the medals, which was really a tragedy. But they were distracted by the spotlight. We were in the background and we were able to focus completely on our races."

Three of Pfaendtner's four races were telecast back home to Grosse Pointe.

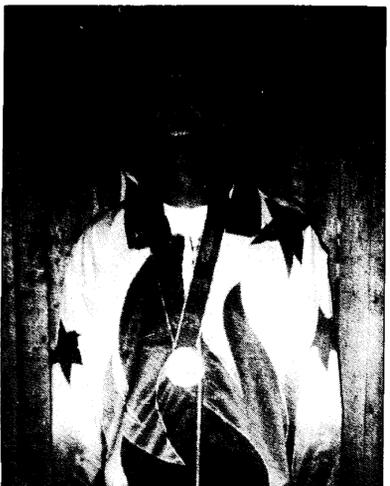

"That was great for my family because all of them weren't able to go down to Georgia," he said. "Channel 9 showed a lot of the rowing because it's one of the major sports in Canada."

Pfaendtner said that NBC also gave the rowing teams more exposure than they'd received in previous Olympics.

"They rate the sports one, two or three, with one being basketball, track and field, gymnastics and swimming and three being the sports they virtually ignore," he said. "This year rowing got bumped up from a three to a two."

The Olympics were probably Pfaendtner's final competition. He plans to complete his degree and get on with the rest of his life.

"If this is my last elite competition it certainly is a great way to be leaving the sport," Pfaendtner said.

Jeff Pfaendtner is shown with the bronze medal he won in lightweight men's fours rowing at the recent Olympic games in Atlanta. Pfaendtner's crew nosed out the Irish entry to earn the bronze.

101 PRAYERS

NOVENA TO ST. JUDE
May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world, now & forever. Oh Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Thank you for prayers answered. B.C.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT.
Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You who gives me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you, no matter how great the material desires may be I want to be with you & my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen. Thankyou for your love towards me & my loved ones. Thank you B.C.

ST. JUDE: Thank you for the favors received in June. Lou

THANK you, St. Jude, for favor granted L.P.

THANKS Blessed Virgin Mary for answering my prayers and for your help G.V.

Water gardening is a hobby growing in popularity

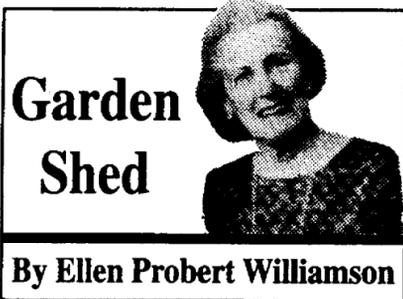

Experienced gardeners know that overgrown trees, shrubs and poorly maintained lawns aren't just eyesores, they are tremendous water-wasters.

The truth is that a well-manicured plant uses water much more efficiently than an overgrown one.

Surrounded as we are in Michigan by water, it is no wonder that we seldom think of conserving it in our garden. Indeed, water gardening is popular not only to ensure the greening and flowering of plants, but to add coolness and freshness to the air. Still, efficient use of water is important from an environmental standpoint, not to mention the size of the water bill.

Reflecting pools, fountains, bird-baths and wading pools all find their places in our gardens and add a beautiful dimension to summer living.

Famed landscape architect Jens Jensen, whose specialty was designing large public parks and great estates, used water in all of his creations. The lavish gardens at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House which were designed by Jensen, are a perfect example. Reflecting pools, cascades and ponds provide a sense of motion in a still landscape by reflecting shifting clouds, moving tree branches, and sunlight.

By Ellen Probert Williamson

The gardens at the Ford house in Grosse Pointe Shores are magnificent examples of Jensen's artistry and are one of the very few original Jensen gardens still in its original form that are left.

Natural streams or man-made approximations of them are very appealing. Think how the lagoons and lily ponds at Belle Isle delight the eye. The pools, lagoons and fountains in the gardens at Cranbrook are another local example of the importance of water as a landscape enhancer.

You don't need a whole lake or even a big garden to enjoy the effect that water adds to gardening. A child's plastic wading pool sunk into the ground and bordered with small rocks and plants and filled from the garden hose can create a beautiful effect. A series of cement basins of different sizes set at different levels creates an interesting dimension.

Water hyacinths and other aquatic plants, ornamental fish and a colony of snails will keep the pond crystal clear without the need for a pump to keep the water from becoming stagnant.

Man-made ponds, like natural bodies of water, can sustain their own ecosystems through all seasons if they are large and deep enough to prevent freezing in the winter.

But if your water-gardening is on a large enough scale to include filters, pumps or fountains, late fall is the time to clean and store them and to clean the pond and prune aquatic plants. In winter, pools and ponds may be covered with plastic or plywood and straw. Pond heaters are available from garden catalogues.

As the weather warms in spring, plants will revive and fish may be returned to the water after their winter sojourn in a fish tank in the house.

Summer is when the full glory of your water gardening comes into its own.

Although algae is often regarded as an enemy, it is useful as a barometer of the pond's condition. Usually snails, fish and the right plants will keep it under control. Algae does not form on moving water and often the natural breezes will ripple the water sufficiently from time to time to keep it clear.

Water gardens can be artistic endeavors, too. One local garden takes its cue from the paintings of Monet. Interesting garden sculpture can be reflected in a pool or a small ornamental bridge can span a pool. This is often found in the gardens of the Orient.

A garden bench beside a pool invites repose and contemplation. A pebbled path around the edge focuses attention on it.

Water gardening is a larger subject than you might at first think. Hydroponic gardening is now being done on a large scale to produce vegetables and salad greens for the commercial market.

Growing lettuce and carrots entirely in water without any soil has been done for many years but it is only now coming into prominence.

Visitors to Grosse Pointe often comment that it seems to be one vast garden area.

From that point of view it is easy to think of our beautiful lake as the water accent for our garden community.

With its bordering willow trees and reed beds, its fish and water birds, it is a focal point of our garden city.

Home Tips

Boxing day — When I have a nice box or carton with print on the outside, I carefully take it apart at the seams, reverse it (turning the printed side to the inside), then I glue the seams and tape the bottom.

This gives me a nice clean box with no print on the outside. They are great for shipping packages to my children and grandchildren. This way I recycle the boxes and it saves me a trip to the packaging shop. Glenda K., Toronto.

Last on line — I like to be the last person to look at any magazine or newspaper so that I can cut out any good cartoons, articles and recipes.

I enjoy sending them to friends and family, and I keep them organized with filing folders that have been taped along the sides.

Each person has a folder and I simply drop the clipping in that person's folder and it is ready for my next letter. Gina W., Omaha, Neb.

Travelin' along — When members of my family travel, I pack toiletries in a gallon-size resealable plastic food-storage bag to prevent any leakage on other items.

If the need arises, we can use the bag as a heat pack with a hot towel sealed inside or as an ice pack with ice inside. Lynette T., Perryville, Ky.

Phone manners — Please do not start your recorded message on an answering machine with "hello," then pause long enough to make the caller believe he has gotten hold of the real, live person and start a conversation. It's just not funny.

This has happened to me more than once, and although it only takes a few seconds to realize that no, this is only the answering machine, it's really frustrating (and even a little embarrassing) to find yourself talking to a machine that is paying absolutely no attention to you and is going on with the rest of the recording. Tricia F., Lubbock, Texas

Housing still plays a big role in the economy

Housing is vital to the nation's economy.

The building industry accounts for millions of jobs, about 5 percent of the gross domestic product and billions of dollars worth of goods, services, wages and taxes each year.

It is essential to any economic recovery.

"In fact, housing accounted for as much as 33 percent of the growth in gross domestic product during the early quarters of the current economic rebound," said Gilbert "Buzz" Silverman, president of the Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan and the Silverman Companies in Farmington Hills.

Housing's contribution to the economy goes even further. According to a recent National Association of Home Builders survey, a family spends an average of $6,500 to furnish, decorate and improve its new home during the first year of ownership.

"That means buyers of the 1.1 million new homes forecast to be built in 1996 will pour an estimated $7.15 billion into their local economies when they furnish and equip those homes," Silverman said.

Construction of 1,000 new single-family homes generates $60.5 million in wages and $33.2 million in federal, state and local taxes and fees while creating 2,097 worker-years of employment.

Construction of 1,000 multifamily units generates 800 worker-years of employment, $23.3 million in wages and $15.8 million in federal, state and local taxes and fees.

In 1994, the nation's home builders constructed a total of 1.45 million new homes, providing jobs for 2.7 million people and generating $78.3 billion in wages and $43.8 billion in tax revenues.

New home construction and remodeling typically account for between 4 and 5 percent of the total domestic economy — or about $250 billion a year. In 1994, home building and remodeling accounted for 4.3 percent of the U.S. gross domestic product.

"Because of the demand for new homes during the remainder of the decade, the housing industry will continue to play a crucial role in the nation's economy," he said.

Between 1.3 and 1.5 million new homes, including multifamily units, will be needed annually to meet demand created by the formation of new households and the demand for trade-up homes.

Other growth sectors in the industry include senior housing and remodeling. The demand for housing for the senior population is projected to increase by 10 percent over the next decade with the double impact of the aging of the baby boom generation and the fact that people are living longer, healthier lives.

Similarly, the remodeling sector will continue its strong growth with expenditures for remodeling estimated at $116 billion in 1996 and $200 billion by the turn of the century.

This trend is driven by a growing tendency to age in place and the aging of housing stock from a median age of 27 years in 1990 to 32 years by the end of the decade.

In addition, by that same time, the sheer number of homes in the country will rise from more than 100 million to 110 million. Therefore, a large number of homes will need maintenance or renovation.

Windows can protect your furniture from the sun

Yearly expenditures for home decorating continue to soar. In fact, 35- to 54-year-olds spend the most for housing and home furnishing, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

That trend is expected to continue. By the year 2000, that same age group is expected to increase its spending in the decorating market by 100 percent.

But once the dollars are spent, many homeowners believe they have to turn their homes into caves to keep natural sunlight from fading their new furnishings.

New technological advances indicate otherwise.

"Furniture and wall colors can stay true longer if homeowners get to the core of the problem," said Patrick Bushey of Pella Window & Door Co., the local representative of Pella windows and doors. "The most basic place to start is the windows. New window technology can bring natural light in while blocking most of the harmful rays that cause fading."

Bushey said today's high performance windows offer advanced glazing technologies such as low-emissivity, or low-E, coating. The coating acts much like a mirror, reflecting heat and other fading rays.

Because the coating is clear, it allows nearly all visible light into the home. Some windows with multiple layers of low-E, for example, block up to 74 percent of ultraviolet and other rays which cause fading, he said.

"Homeowners should make sure the windows they are considering don't have coatings that tint the glass gray or brown. Tints can detract from the bright and open feeling windows add to the home," Bushey said. "Another option to consider is mini-blinds or pleated shades that can be pulled during the sun's most intense part of the day. Today, these options can be placed between the panes of glass — out of the way of dust and damage."

As an added benefit, today's windows offer energy-efficient options. Bushey recommended that homeowners evaluate a window's U-value, which measures the amount of heat lost through both the glass and window frame. The lower the U-value, the more energy-efficient the window. U-value of approximately 40 indicates good energy efficiency.

Q. The area in which I live is quite damp and full of moisture around spring and into early summer. I have taken all preventive measures to combat the humidity and I even have a portable dehumidifier. The problem of moisture in my home multiplies even more when all of the members of my family take showers. There are also isolated sections of the house that are plagued with mold and moisture discoloration on the walls. Can you possibly help me?

A. The probable cause of your dilemma sounds as if not enough dampness and/or moisture is being converted into dry air. Let's first target your portable dehumidifier and make sure it is in proper working order.

A household dehumidifier needs regular care and maintenance. One major part which must be cleaned annually is the refrigerant coils. A long-stemmed brush or vacuum cleaner with a long extension will reach into the coils. In addition, if your fan motor requires a few drops of a light-weight oil, be sure to service that, too.

Another overlooked room in the house is your kitchen, which creates a lot of heat and humidity. If your kitchen stove does not have an exhaust fan over it, you are increasing the unwanted moisture in your home.

However, one big advantage of your having this problem in the springtime and early summer is that you can have a barbecue outside. Also, the installation of even one exhaust fan in your kitchen will greatly decrease the humidity.

Finally, let's talk about your bathroom. This room is the perfect breeding ground for dampness, high moisture, mold and discoloration which you are experiencing. Once again, without the presence of a good exhaust fan, the enemy elements will win the war. As a matter of reference, a small dehumidifier in the bathroom alone can greatly overcome your predicament.

As for mold spores and discoloration on your walls, there is help.

Treat the affected areas with one part of chlorine bleach and three parts warm water. In the future, you can paint your bathroom with a mold and mildew-resistant paint.

Many books and training materials are available for self-teaching, but a fun way to learn the basics of mushroom identification and preparation is to participate in a mushroom workshop with people who share the same interests.

A three-day mushroom workshop, co-sponsored by Michigan Technological University and Michigan State University Extension, will be held Sept. 6, 7 and 8 at the Ford Forestry Center

Q. I have a toy horse-drawn Coca-Cola wagon that I just found at a flea market. It is a red cart with red-and-yellow coke cases filled with bottles. There is a red and white umbrella over the driver. The horses are brown. The toy is in mint condition.

A. You probably have a reproduction toy made during the past 10 years. The pristine paint suggests that the toy is not very old.

Old Coke trucks were made in the 1930s and after.

Q. I found some business-card-sized cards that commemorate Abraham Lincoln's birthday. The earliest one is dated 1874. They're made by Cosack & Co., Buffalo, N.Y. Do you know anything about Lincoln birthday cards?

A. The custom of sending cards

By John Amantea

Redecorating your home — whether it's a single room or the entire house — is an exciting opportunity to create a new look and ambiance that expresses your taste, personality and lifestyle.

No longer relegated to just kitchens, baths and entryways, ceramic tile has become a decorating medium that can lend a distinctive aura to a variety of room types and settings. Ceramic tiles also can lend a unique beauty to decors ranging from traditional to contemporary to country.

to commemorate the day started as early as 1905. Several series of postcards were issued to mark the centennial of Lincoln's birth, Feb. 12, 1909.

Your Buffalo "business" cards were distributed to school children by druggist Julius Francis. Francis was a founder of the Lincoln Birthday Association, which petitioned Congress in 1874 to make the day a national holiday.

Q. I have a bottle of Dr. Ward's Celebrated Liniment that's half-full of red liquid. The label says it was manufactured by Ward-York Products, Madrid, Iowa. It is dated 1856. Value?

A. In the mid 19th century, there were many patent "medicines" like Dr. Ward's Celebrated Liniment. Others included Pa-Ja-La Famous Liniment, Hy-John Famous Liniment and Snake Oil Liniment.

They were used externally and reportedly cured toothaches, head and chest colds, corns, bunions, rheumatism, sore throats or whatever ailed you. Some also "cured" your horse.

Bottles of liniment from that era sell for between $15 and $50.

Tip: Rubber bands will stain silver through several layers of paper wrapping.

"Kovels' American Art Pottery, The Collector's Guide to Makers, Marks and Factory Histories" provides information on 104 potteries and 95 tile factories. Fabulous color pictures show details of design. The book includes lists of makers with identifying marks, factory marks, dating information and hundreds of clues to help the collector identify art pottery. It is a coffee-table book that belongs in every collector's research library. For a copy, send $60 plus $3 postage to Kovels' American Art Pottery, Box 22900, Beachwood, Ohio 44122.

Household Help

Perhaps the most common use of ceramic tile is for flooring. However, tile is increasingly finding its way onto walls, countertops, fireplaces, and even furniture, as a decorative accent.

For homeowners who have decided to incorporate ceramic tile into a particular decor, there are a number of aspects to consider when choosing the actual tile. These include the finish, color, pattern, size and shape.

Regarding the finish and texture of the tiles, today's selections range from the high gloss of a smooth glaze, to the metallic sheen of a lustre glaze, to matte surfaces, which can be rough or smooth. The texture you choose should relate to how and where the tile is to be installed. For instance, a rough, unglazed surface might be perfect for an entryway where people tramp in wet shoes or boots, but not for a spot where children play or tend to walk barefoot.

When selecting a color, decide whether you want it to blend or contrast with the room's other colors.

In addition to color, there is a huge choice of patterns. You can make your selection from tiles that recreate the look of natural stone, that echo the intricate mosaics of ancient European villas, that convey the elegance of rare marble, that capture the charm of delicate florals — or dozens of other designs.
