Board urged to drop driver's ed program

The driver's training program in the Grosse Pointe schools may have reached the end of the road.

Due to reductions in state funding and a variety of other problems, providing driver's training to students is increasingly difficult for public schools, said Paula Jarvis. director of community education. In addition to funding obstacles, Jarvis said car dealerships no longer are willing to provide cars for the program, instructors are asking for more money and only about onethird of the eligible students in the district each year enrolls in the program.

"The program has never been able to meet the needs of all members of the student population," she said. Vacations, sports programs and summer jobs prevent many students from participating.

Jarvis addressed the school board on Jan. 12 and recommended the board get out of match the state's per-student the business of teaching teens how to drive. Even if the district were to continue the program, it would be a break-even proposition at best, she said.

Under the new Michigan dri ver education law, school sys- match the $60 and then may tems in Michigan will have to select one of three options as of April 1. They may choose to: education programs, thereby eliminating the offering from community education. Students may then enroll in private programs whenever they wish. However, schools will be required to transfer to all eligible students the state's reimbursement money for driver education. Students then will be required to pay for their own training.

Board members felt that under different funding circumstances, they'd be willing to continue providing the service to students to ensure that capable drivers are behind the wheel of cars. Since a decision wasn't required at Monday's meeting, trustees have directed administrators to gather input from the community on the possible elimination of the program.

"Speak now or forever stay parked," said board treasurer Jack Ryan.

Jarvis said the only piece of feedback she has on the program is in terms of numbers.

"Only a fraction of the eligible students in the community use the program." she said. "There are about 700 students eligible every summer and the average is about 180 students. If the district chose to continue the service and charge tuition, it would be required to reimbursement and then charge tuition for the balance, Jarvis said. Therefore, if the program costs $300 a student and the state's reimbursement is 360, the school

> "We have talked to at least a dozen companies that would be willing to build us a network, which is an arduous task," she said. "We cross six municipalities and cross a freeway and we'd have to negotiate rights of way, issue permits, lease the utility poles and on top of it we'd have to have a service contract."

> Parsons said she's hoping the agreement will be settled sometime this week so that the district can apply for a 40 percent discount with the Universal Service Fund. Application deadline is Jan. 16.

Based on the 1995 federal telecommunications act, relief is available to schools and libraries through the Universal Service Fund for telecommunication costs. Discounts to the school are based on the number of free and reduced lunches offered, Parsons said.

"We have the lowest discount of all," she said. "But it is still an attractive discount."

But — what would it do?

Once the entire Grosse Pointe Public School System is connected with fiber optic cable menting an inte tive, voice, video and data link between all 17 of its buildings, what will it do with this technology?

The capabilities of this are really exciting," said Julie Corbett, instructional television program coordinator for the school district. This will provide a lot of things that we now are not able to offer."

The network will be used as an instructional link for distance-learning or what is sometimes known as distance conferencing, she said. This involves bringing together the instructors and learners, who are at different sites.

An example would be students at one high school participating in a class at another high school, where previously students woulda't have had the opportunity due to either low enrollment or not enough funding in the агеа.

Students in the middle school could participate in high school courses. High school students could participate in college courses.

The students participating in this would be part of a two-way communication. They will not be merely sitting in front of a monitor, Corbett said. The instructor, through the use of a camera, will be able to see his or her students on a monitor as well. Questions, answers and dialogue will flow between the two.

Additionally, information can be teleconferenced through a satellite downlink There will be access to cable channels such as Discovery, CNN, The Learning Channel, she said, adding that "none of it will be used unless it is part of the classroom objectives."

The system can also be used for faculty meetings so that teachers don't have to travel throughout the district. It also can offer programming for some of the district's homebound studenta

Park to end pollution of Fox Creek

y the end of 1998, Grosse Pointe Park expects to complete its separation of the city's sanitary and storm sewer system in order to end the discharges into Fox Creek and the flooding of nearby residences during heavy rain storms.

Completion of this expensive project will be a major triumph for the Park municipal government, which has been seeking Detroit's cooperation in the project for many years.

Two of the three contractors handling the project are about 60 percent fimshed with their part while the third has completed about 55 percent of his work.

The city had wisely begun its separation project even before a 1995 suit was filed by residents along the creek seeking compensation for the flooding of basements and other private property that occurred four to six times a year on average.

The Park City Council, in a closed meeting, has agreed to pay $1.9 million to settle a class-action lawsuit filed against the city on behalf chiefly of Detroit residents who live along Fox Creek. The Park's decision is subject to the Detroit City Council and the Fox Creek plaintiffs' approval of the settlement.

The residents sued both the City of Detroit and the City of Grosse Pointe

Park, and a tentative agreement has been reached by the attorneys representing the plaintiffs for a $1.9 million payment by each of the governments.

In Detroit, the city's water department board already has approved the proposed settlement and the issue was expected to come before the city council Monday.

The Park carries 10 million insurance coverage with the Michigan Municipal Learne and still has to settle with the insurance carrier over how much of the total it is responsible for and how much will fall on the shoulders of the Park city government.

But whatever happens, the likelihood is that the current source of pollution of Fox Creek and the residences of people who live along its banks will be ended by the end of the year.

When that is accomplished, Grosse Pointe Farms will be the only Pointe government left to handle pollution that its sewer outlets are discharging into Lake St. Clair.

The Farms is now monitoring its discharges, which have contained little pollution, but further protective actions may be required

The Park deserves a hand for carrying on this project, which has been a nagging issue with Fox Creek residents and property owners, chiefly in Detroit, for many vears.

If, as expected, the settlement finally is approved, those residents also will be paid some compensation as well as being guaranteed no further pollution from the creek.

And costly pollution of the creek finally will be ended.

Surplus creates new problem

ll of a sudden, Washington is confronted with a new problem: What to do with the federal revenue surpluses that soon will be piling up if current policies remain unchanged?

Both parties are beginning to talk about solutions 'to this new problem, but the best solution we have heard of is one that was offered by Leon E. Panetta, chief of staff in the Clinton administration, former director of the Office of Management and Budget, and a former California congressman.

Panetta was one of many experts that the New York Times polled to seek recommendations about the use of the extra dollars that will soon be pouring into the tax coffers. His recommendation:

"There is only one thing that should be done with any budget surplus: absolutely nothing. No new legislative mandate; no new tax cut; no new defense spending; no new social spending; no new program to satisfy someone's political agenda.

"Why? Because the surplus is already committed.

Panetta pointed out a "1990 budget agreement and confirmed by subsequent budget agreements require that any new initiative be paid for by new revenue or additional savings."

One intent of these agreements was to institute discipline in both Congress and the Clinton administration, he added.

But he cited two more reasons to support his view. One is that any surplus in any given year is committed to reducing the amount the federal government has to borrow to pay its debts.

Finally, he thinks that it is "premature to discuss how to spend any surplus when there is a huge entitlement cost looming in the future." He is referring, of course, to the "exploding" Medicare and Social Security benefits that will hit beginning in 2008.

Michael J. Boskin, chairman of George Bush's Council of Economic Advisers, and Martin Feldstein, chairman of the same council during the Reagan administration, offered different views which seem to be in line with those of the current GOP Congress.

We tend to agree with Panetta, however, that "paying down an outstanding debt makes good sense for a family, a business - and for government."

And we doubt that the current prospects of a surplus really warrant another tax cut, popular as they are with both parties.

Michigan's ethnics on the rise

ichigan and Detroit are attracting more and more ethnic immi-grants, chiefly Asians and Hispanics, according to a new U.S. Consus report analyzed in The Detroit News.

In the state as a whole, whites still predominate by a large margin, but showed only a 2.31 percent increase, from 7,843,032 in 1990 to 8,024,496 in 1996.

But the percentage of ethnics rose substantially in the same six-year period. Asians rose in Michigan from 107,473 to 142,112 for a 32.2 percent gain, while Hispanics increased from 202,985 to 242,128 for a 19 percent increase.

Larry Sink, a Census Bureau demographer, told the News we're experiencing a fairly large growth among Asians and Hispanics in this state because of the increasing number of such immigrants nationally.

Numerically, Michigan's blacks rose from 1,302,381 to 1,368,804, to show only a 5.1 percent gain, but their increase was larger in numbers than the gains by either Asians or Hispanics.

Typically, Asians and Hispanics tend to move to regions with high concentrations of immigrants with similar ethnic backgrounds, but William Frey, a researcher for the University of Michigan Studies Program, contends Michigan is not yet a multi-ethnic state.

In short, compared with a state such as California, Michigan's ethnic growth tions. numbers are "not much," he said.

Yet for Grosse Pointers, one interesting fact is that in the last six years whites in Wayne County declined by 7.1 percent as contrasted with increases of 22.4 percent in Asians, 10 percent in Hispanics, and 1.6 percent in blacks.

For a year now, it seems the music department has been under fire — in both directions. Yes, the choir has been under attack, and yes, the band has been in the line of fire as well. Yet what troubles me is the direction some choose to present their concerns.

I was rather upset over the recent letter written by the choir chair holders ("Music Students Defend Program Following Media Reports, Jan. 1). The letter as a whole did not bother me, but a particular section caught my eye and left me with some degree of agitation from the accusation.

It is clear the choir does put on great musicals; for I have attended each one and played in the pit for the last two years of my high school career. And I was aware there were professionals joining me and several other students in the pit. But my concern, at that time, was why they were there.

I understood the use of professionals for competitions, since many students cannot afford to miss school and the musical instrumentation is needed for the numbers. Yet, why in a school-related perforwere not needed, had there been enough students.

They think if it's natural, it is better. Not necessarily. It is also true that if it is prescribed, the government health plan pays for it. I would like to think that, as a result, the people in Germany are in a better mood. As a matter of fact, the substance was introduced to me by a patient, who said he started taking it on his own, unbeknown to me, because of word-of-mouth recommendations and positive articles about it.

Despite the fact that he had been in therapy for many years, taking the pill three times a day gave him a feeling of stability in his mood. Things that had bothered him in the past just rolled off. In addition, he felt more than usually light-hearted.

That sounded pretty good to me. I knew him pretty well and considered him a reliable informant, so I tried the substance myself. to see if the effect was reproduceable. I usually try the drugs I prescribe myself, to check out the effect as well as the side effects.

They said they would have contacted an attorney before calling, but their tongues had been burned to the extent that they couldn't talk; their lips were singed, and their ears were still smoking.

As old friends, they had decided to give me the courtesy of a call requesting that I inform the paper of the mistake. Apologies were offered and accepted.

The story began when she read a recipe for chili in the namer made a list of ingredients and asked her husband to stop at the neighborhood store to purchase the fixin's. She had written the items down as seen in the paper, right down to the one can (40 ounces) of chopped green chilies! When her husband attempted to locate a 10 oz. can of chilies, the grocer said he'd never heard of such a thing.

Dutifully, the husband insisted on following his wife's instructions and bought her eight small cans of chilies. She paid little attention as she unpacked the groceries and put them away.

She tells me she was side-tracked and didn't get around to making the chili immediately upon his return home. In fact she waited until the following day to reread the recipe and assemble the ingredients. She started to laugh as her gourmet trained eve caught the misprint in the paper and decided to have some fun with the staff, hence the call and the threats.

I've been taking the St. John's Wort for three months now, trying to give it a good chance to prove its worth. Actually, I don't feel any different and probably won't continue. My patient has also stopped taking it, losing the initial effect. I have learned that the herbal mixture may also contain substances which are called MAO-inhibitors, which also have an antidepressive effect, but which may, with certain foods, such as strong cheeses and red wine, cause hypertensive crises (very high blood pressure), which can be dangerous.

This brings me to my next point. The letter I read from Ms. Pettitt, Ms. Richardson and Mr. Healy made me feel that the band students are not capable or talented enough to play in the school musicals. On the contrary, the music I read and played, and the music other students saw in the pit was rather basic. Sure, it had its difficult spots that needed the old practice makes po routine, but what area in life doesn't?

The music placed on my stand throughout the past four years in the band showed a much higher degree of difficulty for myself, and others I have spoken with, to accomplish. This does not say band is better than choir or vice versa, but it does say perhaps one should look at the music with an instrumentalist's eye before categorizing it.

It is true many band students cannot or are not interested in playing in the pit. The rehearsals for the pit are rather time consuming and many in the band and orchestra play in sports, work or do other after-school activities. But that does not mean we are incapable of playing the music for the musicals.

I was disturbed at how we band members were told the capability is not there. In the future, think about what is written and who is targeted. "striking out." Each area targeted negatively will have a voice to say about feel nostalgia, envy, curiosity disappointment. You're likely to pick up on the enthusiasm of other visitors as you alternately try not to step on them or be stepped on by them.

Cobo auto show stirs emotions, teases minds

Reviewing photos from the auto show preview days is something like looking at snaps from a great vacation. Flipping past the graphicssurrounded stage where Chrysler spotlighted its Chronos, Jeepster and Pronto concept cars; inspecting the clear shot of the General Motors top brass explaining improvements to their electric and hybrid vehicles; checking out pictures of the new Suzuki Esteem wagon, the Pontiac Grand Am and Mercury's latest generation Cougar.

The auto makers have also included some interesting technology at their stands. Engines, suspension components and safety features are explained to those who have the putternee to stop and read or listen. GM is promising to have electric vehicles that will travel farther than the 60-80 miles of the first battery-powered cars and trucks. GM and some other makers are experimenting with clean, no-emission powerplants; with hybrid vehicles that can run on a couple of different kinds of fuel; with engines that can crank out 100 miles per gallon of fuel. While we may tend to dismiss much of the research, let's try not to find ourselves standing in the shoes of earlier generations who scoffed at the earliest automobiles, certain that they were only a short-lived tad.

The new Beetle from Volkswagen was unveiled with tremendous theatrics during auto show press preview days. It looks like a winner. Assembled in the VW plant in Mexico where the last original Beetles are put together, this one will be powered by a base 2.0-liter, 118-hp four which is up front this time. (A billboard ad reminds us its heart is still in the same place.) Volkswagen officials said the new car will be available at dealerships in March. Base price is just over $15,000. The RX 300 will satisfy the changing tastes of today's luxury vehicle buyers who want the style, versatility, commanding is available as low as 1,600 visibility and poor-weather traction of an all-wheel-drive SUV, but did not consider one because on-road performance, ride comfort, fuel economy or ease of entry/exit did not meet their expectations.

Thanks to an exceptionally rapid design process, Lexus ences. As a result, the RX 300 signals the direction for SUVs of the future.

"Luxury means more than adding leather to a truck," said Jim Press, Lexus senior vice president and general manager. "Because it's not built on a truck-based chassis, the RX 300 is the first true car-like luxury SUV. This newest Lexus offers an ideal combination of performance, luxury, roomy utility and fourwheel-drive traction, designed for the way sport utilities are used every day. Owners will appreciate its distinctive personality and Lexus quality and satisfaction."

The RX 300 is a completely new model and its basic floor plan and platform were specially developed and are not shared with other Lexus or Toyota vehicles.

In size, the RX 300 is slightly longer and wider than a Grand Cherokee. Jeep Combined front- and secondseat leg room is more than Grand Cherokee, Infiniti QX4 or Range Rover Discovery. Overall height and floor height are lower than the M-Class or Infiniti QX4 for easy entry and exit, yet the RX 300 has a generous ground clear-

Efficient full-time four-wheel drive

The technologically advanced RX 300 power plant is linked to an equally sophisticated drive train that provides poor-weather and off-road traction without unnecessary weight and power-robbing inefticiency. Its heart is a completely new four-speed electronically controlled automatic transmission with integrated transfer case and viscous limitedslip center differential coupling. Its unusually small size and efficiency help the RX provide excellent on-road driving performance.

The RX 300 is available with two different drive lines: full-time four-wheel drive and sure-footed front-wheel drive for customers in milder climates who want the utility of an SUV with even better performance and fuel economy.

The RX 300 will complement the highly successful Lexus LX when it joins the lineup in March of 1998. The LX 450 was the first SUV to be offered by a luxury carmaker, and provides the ultimate in rugged, go anywhere capabilities combined with luxurious comfort and accommodations.

Rugged look with urban sophistication

Based on the highly acclaimed Lexus Sport Luxury Vehicle (SLV) Concept which debuted at the Chicago auto show, the RX 300 faithfully retains the concept vehicle's combination of rugged, yet sporty styling that is at home in sophisticated urban settings. Individual round headlamp reflectors are housed under aerodynamic clear covers, with projector-beam fog lamps just below. The dramatic tail lamp housings each contain four separate round lenses, grouped to complement the head-lamp theme.

Very careful attention to packaging and body structure design offers ground clearance and approach and departure angles that are competitive with other SUVs, yet step-in and seat cushion height are much more comfortable and convenient. Traditional SUVs dictate stepping up into the

BMW Z07: Dream or reality?

On occasion of the Tokyo Motor Show in 1997, the design study of the Z07 was in the limelight for the first time. A decision as to whether the study ready for driving and worked out down to the very last detail is to be further developed to series production has not been taken so far. For this reason, the management in Munich decided on another ron out - in the country of unlimited possibilities, in the USA, i.e. on occasion of the Detroit auto show.

For a long time it has been one of BMW's great ambitions to show how the legendary BMW 507 sports car launched in 1956 might have evolved, had its development continued throughout several generations, like with the BMW 3, 5 and 7 series. Indeed, this idea was so appealing that BMWs designers were finally given the go-ahead to create such a car.

The heritage of the Z07 is unmistakable: Behind the long and sleek ongine compartment lid comes the low windscreen raked to an extra-flat angle for perfect streamlining. The soft, flowing lines of the wheel arches merge into the wide doors and from there to the powerful, muscular rear end. This particular line of styling gives the Z07 a very elegant and smooth look from the side. The grille between the front wheel arch and the door as well as the large wheels finally round off this perfect picture of a thoroughbred BMW sports car. Looking at the Z07 from the front, you will immediately recognize a familiar face: Small, round (xenon) headlights behind a glass cover and the distinctive double kidney grille are among the traditional styling elements of every BMW. The rear end, in turn, is characterized by the interaction of wide wheel arches and the slanted luggage compartment lid with its striking aerodynamic fin behind the driver's seat and the diffuser on the

This tower of pop cans guarded by a group of Defer Elementary School fifth-graders may not look like the Eiffel Tower in Paris, but it is intended to remind Grosse Pointe residents of an important fundraiser being held this Saturday. Jan.

The French-American Back-to-Back student exchange program, in which these students are participating, needs to raise the funds necessary for hosting a group of French students and their teachers from April 28 through May 19. A can and bottle collection fundraiser will help defray some of the costs incurred in providing a meaningful experience for these visitors.

This is the ninth consecutive year that the Grosse Pointe Public School System has participated in the Back-to-Back program. The fifth graders will leave for their three-week stay in France on March 9. Each student's family is paying for all program and travel costs involved, as well as hosting the French student in their Grosse Pointe homes. The visitors will attend classes at Maire school and will be exposed to a wide variety of cultural and recreational activities in the Detroit area. The program is conducted by the Assoication of French-American Classes Lt. and operates in approximatily 75 communities across the United

Anniversary

Gallagher, Chrissy Denomme, James Spencer and Marley Adragna. The school was founded in 1952 and is Grosse Pointe's first cooperative preschool. Nearly 1,000 students have been touched by the program and its dedicated teachers. The school boasts families who have had three generations go through the program. Sociability and kindergarten readiness are stressed in the 3's and 4's programs.

What's In a Single Shingle?

Asphalt shingles have evolved in terms of durability, performance and appearance since they were f rst introduced over 80 years ago. They are popular because they are durable and reasonably priced in comparison to cedar, clay tile slate.

Asphalt is actually the sticky, tarry substance which and holds together a variety of composite materials. The base can be made of either fiberglass (which makes up more than half of the asphalt roofs installed in the U.S. today), felt or cellulose (known as "organic" shingles). Laminated shingles are those which consist of two or more layers fused together to create a three-dimen-sional appearance reminiscent of wood or slate. They are more expen-sive than their fiberglass or organic counterparts. Manufacturers warranties on the products run from 20 to 50 years.

J&J offers all of these shingle types, and can provide the home-owner with any brand on the market. However, J&J prefers to install Tamko Roofing Products because of their excellent warranty at d broad color selection. With only a token deposit of 10 % down, J&J can quick-ly begin work. Since it is difficult to envision how a particular color will look, J&J has compiled an address book which their s desmen carry with them. It is filled with the names of past clients, and indicates the product and color they chose to have installed. Just drive by a home to see how the color you are considering actually lool s. guarantee this is to offer every visitor, including the mailman and any stranger who might come to the door, some thing good to eat or drink. No ore dares refuse. This would break the spell, and the one who refuses would carry the Christmas spirit away with him. The Christmas appirt away with day with a spirit away with chinese New Year's Day wanders around somewhere in the month of January, or even early february, falling somewhere between Jan. 20 and Feb. 20 at the inception of the second new racon after Doc. 22, the winter solution.

Day was a popular one for wed-dings perhaps because the idea of beginning a new life together on the first day cf a new year held rucch appeal for the happy cou-ple. Flowers were lavishly used for decoration: for a New Year wedding.

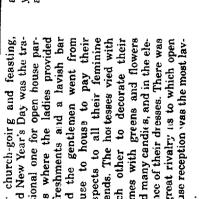

New Year's JJay was the time for gift-giving rather than Chrisemas, which was reserved for church-goir g and feasting, and New Year's Day was the tra-ditional one for open house par-ties where the ladies provided refreshments and a lavish bar and the gentlemen went from house to house to pay their respects to all their feminine friends. The hortesses vied with each other to decorate their homes with greens and flowers and many candics, and in the ele-gance of their dresses. There was a great rivalry us to which open house reception was the most lav-ish. ieh.

Preparations for holiday flower usage had to be planned well in advance in the Middle Ages. Months before, luring the sum-mer, violets, lilacs and rose petals would have been dried and pre-served with sugar for holiday con-fections, and potpourris and pomanders would have been lov-ingly prepared to scent the halls and to give as gilts.

Q. I bought several plastic and gold metal pins shaped like flow-ers. They are marked "Givenchy." Can you tell me when they were made?

A. Plastic jewelry by Givenchy dates from the late 1950s. The firm is still working.

Q. What's the difference between a flax wheel and a spin-ning wheel? Is one more valuable than the other?

A. A flax wheel is a spinning wheel. There is a difference between a flax spinning wheel. The flax wheel is treadle-operated, so the spinner sits. The spinner walks back and forth to use a wool wheel. The wheel part of the wool wheel is larger than a flax wheei. Both kinds sell for $100 to $300, depending on age, condition and decoration.

ward to the Celebration Contraction of the second second

By Ellen Probert Williamson COCK SAL

In the winter Mother Nature is often lavish with snowfall and bestows rather more of it upon us than we really want, to the delight of children and the sellers of snowblowers, and the despuir of those of us who must drive on icy streets and on blizzardy days. But dedicated gerdeners have their geneer, the flowers and veg-etables will be more lavish and the trees more verdant. Snow contains nitrates, phos-phates and a host of other orgun-ic compounds. Some of these come from contact from the soil and others from debris blown on to soil surfaces. Even new fallen snow is not pure water. It con-tains nuclei around which flakes first crystallize. These same drifts which provide protection for dormant plants, when melted, will yield essential moisture and nutrients for next summer's crops. Indeed, snow has been called "the poor man's fertilizer." With air trapped between each snowlfake, snow provides excel-lent insulation. Beneath a foot or two of it the ground may be many degrees warmer than the air above it. Daily fluctuations of air temperature do not penetrate snow and the cycle of freezing and thawing does not cxist. A deep snow coming early and last-ing all season will act as a mulch for perennial plants, protecting their dormant crowns. Did you know that a shovelful of fluffy snow weighs about four pounds, and wet snow is even hecvier? If you lift 10 shovelfuls a minute it's like walking up three flights of stairs in one minute. If the snow is heavy and wet, that is equal to running up seven flights of stairs in three minutes, and you would have to run to get up that many steps in that length of time. No wonder snow-shovel-ing is frowned upon for those with less-than-perfect hearts. In some parts of the world the holidays are not yet over. The Russian Christmas is celebrated in January and New Year's Day is to the circus, the museum, the ballet or the puppet theater and a visit from Ded Moroz, or Grandfather Frost, who distrib-utes presents and spiced cakes with a lavish hand. In Scandinavia, the Christmas season lasta until Jan. 13, St. Canute's Day, which is marked by continuous partying. This is to maintain the often repeated say-ing that the Christmas spirit must not be allowed to leave the house and the only sure way to

By Amy Andreou Miller Special Writer

Imagine being near the and witnessing a camel crane its neck to give a kiss to the young native boy riding it.

Or imagine traveling through a remote part of northwestern China in a simple bus (not a luxurious tourbus) taking in the cacophony of foreign languages spoken by people sitting around you, who in both a serene, yet also frenetic and joyous manner, rise from their seats, thrust their arms out the window and let the wind take the scraps of paper they had been holding in their hands. These little scraps of paper were illustrated with elaborate prayers. The indigenous people release these papers at various mountain passes to show their appreciation to a God for their safe travel.

These are only two of the thousands of experiences Grosse Pointe Farms resident Steve Donaldson witnessed on his excursion around the world. He recently has returned from 1 1/2 years of travel through 42 countries or territories on the six inhabited continents of the world.

And he is prepared to share amazing images with everyone.

"Traveling around the world is very romantic, but out of reach, for a variety of reasons, for most people," Donaldson said. "I hope to help people feel that romance . . . I hope to draw people into an experience, and provide them with the opportunity to be a part of a moment that was unique." Donaldson said.

He hopes to do this through the 5,500-plus photographs he shot.

Now, mind you, these are not Joe Tourist's vacation photos. Donaldson excelled at photography at University Liggett School and Cranbrook Schools, from which he graduated in 1979. #### The Pastor's Corner

Who are we?

By the Rev. Ron Corl Redeemer United Methodist Church

Some time ago, I was reminded that the most important question we need to answer is the "who" question - more specifically, "Who am I?" Understanding who one is determines how one lives.

For example, who my 10-year-old grandson in Texas is - is his hair. He takes great pains and a considerable amount of time in front of a mirror making sure his hair is just right, and he doesn't go anywhere until it is. Once he has it just right, heither his grandpa, nor anyone else, had better mess with it.

I have another grandson who is getting a driver's license and his own car to drive. I am almost certain that who he will be -- is his car. He will wash it, polish it, cruise around in it, etc.

I have another grandson who is a little older and who he is (at times) — is his girl friend.

I know some other individuals who understand themselves to be their jobs - long days, little or no time off, rare vacations, etc. Everything and everyone else - family, friends, church, time alone with God - all take a back seat to their jobs.

For some others, who they are is their families. This is good except when the wants and the desires of the family come before what the family really needs. and/or if God is left out; or if the needs of all families, all God's children, are neglected or rejected. I understand that too much for my family and not enough for my neighbor's family is not healthy.

Well then, who are we? Christian theology and the Bible informs me that we are children of God, created spiritually in God's image "Then the Lord God formed man (male and female) from the dust of the ground and breathed into his/her nostrils the breath of life (God's spirit) and man (male and female) became a human being." (Genesis 3:7)

In the church, when one is baptized, one is proclaimed "a beloved child of God."

Who we are are God's beloved sons and daughters. Since that is who we are, should we not live as God's sons and daughters, following the example of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, when he was baptized, a voice came from heaven saying, "You are my Son, the Beloved, with you I am well pleased." (Luke 3:22)

May you remember who you are as one of God's beloved children, loved totally and unconditionally by our God.

Have a love-filled New Year.

How to participate in winter sports safely

Commitment to fitness

By Lisa M. Blackburn Special Writer

Getting fit to prevent disease - rather than to enhance personal appearance --- has become the new focus of the 90s for women and men.

Vibrating belts that supposedly reduce inches in tummies have been replaced with back extension machines. Women today have more to worry about than whether their skirts are a little snugger than they were yesterday. Fitness has become a means of preventing heart disease, stroke, breast cancer, osteoporosis, osteoarthritis, diabetes and many other life-threatening diseases.

Maintaining good health also helps to reduce stress and lets us feel better about ourselves.

Fitness is more of a mind-set than crything else. Setting realistic goals and building bridges to get there are what the majority of people need help with. Whether beginning a new program or maintaining an existing program, we all need help to continue our fitness journey.

Beginners are challenged with many questions about where, how and when to exercise as well as what kind of results to expect. Setting goals is an important part of maintaining a program. Although getting started can be frustrating, it also can be exciting.

A beginner can set any goals he or she wishes to Lisa M. Blackburn reach — anything is progress. Short-term realistic goals are the best place to start. For example, you can walk for 10 minutes, three times weekly for two weeks. When that goal is met, the beginner can take credit for attaining it, then set a slightly more challenging goal. Eventually the goal should be to exercise for 30-45 minutes, four to five times weekly.

Setbacks are bound to occur, but don't let them get you down. Recognize the setback, take credit for your accomplishments, and move on.

Tracking accomplishments is helpful to most beginners as well. To help keep you motivated, start a diary of what type of exercise you did, for how long, and how you felt during exercise. Keep the diary or calendar in an area where it is visible, so you are constantly reminded of your accomplishments

Exercise intensity is an important aspect of fitness as well. Some beginners prefer to measure their heart rates to make sure they are in a safe range. If this is too overwhelming or difficult, the "talk test" is a great alternative. Basically, if you can talk but not sing while you are exercising, you are in a safe range. Your physician may recommend a specific range for you, so it's crucial for all new exercisers to check with their physicians before beginning an exercise program.

Stretching before and after exercise is important for all fitness enthusiasts, whether beginner or advanced. Advanced exercisers have other concerns, such as injury prevention and continued motivation. There are many different incentives advanced exercisers develop to keep their interest piqued, including tracking exercise on a regular basis and continuing to challenge themselves with new ways to work out. Increasing the intensity or duration of an exercise program also helps advanced exercisers stay interested.

Exercise is a critical part of everyone's life. The benefits help reduce the risk of cancer, heart attack, stroke and osteoporosis. Finding a type of exercise you will enjoy is possibly the most important part of any program. Whether you choose walking, running, aerobic dancing, weight training or biking, make exercise a life-long commitment. It may save your life.

Norman Lewis offers memoirs of a lifetime of travel

The World, The World: Memoirs of a Legendary Traveler"

By Norman Lewis Henry Holt. 293 pages. $27.50

London-born, Norman Lewis has written 13 novels and 10 nonfiction works, all of which have firmly established him as a truly legendary seeker of many obscure corners of the world.

His latest offering is an autobiography of sorts, "The World, The World," which sets forth in absorbing detail some of his most unusual and bizarre explorations in South America, the Middle East and Africa. What mainly sets him apart from his fellow travel writers is his acute understanding and sincere appreciation of unfamiliar people, their history and their culture.

As a young man during World War II, Lewis found himself "enrolled in the Intelligence Corps, underwent avoided, but being a bad perfour months of training with an infantry unit in Northern Ireland, then three months at the Corps depot at Winchester, where they specialized in ceremonial drills invented by Frederick the Great and taught recruits to ride motorcycles downhill after the brakes had been disconnected, with the result that one third of them went to hospital. The call to dress up - I could only suppose as an Arab - and be deposited from a submarine on the Algerian shore, never came. It was a lucky escape indeed for a poor swimmer. Most certainly I would have drowned, for according to a newspaper report published in the last few years, the three or four volunteers committed to this adventure all died." At war's end, Lewis took himself off for a bird-viewing holiday: "Rock-climbing, the announced reason for my pres-ence in Wales, was not to be former at sports of all kinds, 1 was convinced that no good would come of it, and this proved to be the case. Westward of Tenby, the road through Solva to St. David's frequently passed close to the edge of the cliffs, offering seascape views unchanged since pre-history. On my first exploratory day I tried an unambitious preliminary climb and found myself in an uncontrollable slide among shale which brought me within yards of a 100-foot drop. From this dangerous amateurism, I took refuge in long and hopefully invigorating walks and bird-watching. This, in an area devoid of the human presence, was extraordinary, with peregrines to be seen at their nesting sites on cliff-ledges, and on one occasion a parliament of ravens, as described in the bird books. with 50 of these excessively rare birds gathered to perform some mysterious social ritual in a farmer's field." Lewis early visited a stirring Vietnam before heading for The Borneo Company's headquarters, which "were a cross on an enormous scale between a pagoda and a cattle shed, full of the scent of ancient ledgers and exhausted spices, although in one corner of a vast room at the time of our arrival the fragrance of kippers for breakfast lingered on. It turned out that the object of my visit had been lost to sight, for by now discussions over the proposed book were going on with Compton McKenzie, although later I was to learn that the fee he had suggested was considered too high. It would have made a fascinating book, for in this same room the contract had been signed for the supply of the celebrated Anna, a children's nanny, to Mongkut, King of Siam. It would have been only one of hundreds of arrangements of comparable importance to have been negotiated under the sincere gaze of the company's Victorian principals whose portraits decorated these walls.

During his sojourn in Thailand, Lewis visited the remarkable orchid house, which completely astonished him. "The main exhibit, which we examined with proper respect, was a 'Vanda Coerulia', the blue Thailand orchid, believed to be extinct in the wild. The prince had organized an expedition which, after a two-day journey by bulldozer from Chieginai, had discovered the rare flower out of sight from the ground in the forest canopy. The orchid itself was six feet in length, and a packing case had to be built on the spot to accommodate both the plant and part of the tree. The journey back as far as the paved road was by bulldozer, after which the valuable load was transferred to a suitably decorated cart. In addition to the usual coloured streamers and a picture of a magic tiger intended to deter highjackers, the orchid was accompanied on the final stage of the journey by a musician, whose function it was to pacify any spirit the flower might contain by playing to it on an archaic form of panpipes." While living in Africa, Lewis mused over his rented farm. "In a way it would be a good place to write in, because there were no distractions apart from those you made for yourself. At intervals of an hour or two a farm cart would pass with the squeal of an axle and the crackle of the wheels over the flints. Toward sundown. cream-coloured coursers came sprinting into sight, running over the stones at speed in pursuit of flying beetles, with desolate cries of hark! hark! before disappearing into a purple mist. I had understood that these birds only thrived in desert surroundings, but they had evidently decided that Ibiza was the next best thing."

In Cuba the author made an interesting observation: "Whenever I could, I attended the political railies held in the Plaza Civic. Not only to pick up titbits of political news but for the sheer pleasure of listening to Castro talk. In my opinion he was the greatest orator since Demosthenes, and I much enjoyed the faintly hypnotic effects of these entertainments. Castro's interminable speeches contained frequent quotations from Burke, Rousseau, Juvenal and even Shakespeare, and were liberally seeded with wisecracks and jokes."

Indeed, a rare glimpse of the mighty Dietator of Cuba. During his wanderings.

Lewis succeeded in meeting and associating with a number of prominent people. To mention a few -- Ernest

Hemingway, who he called "a blowsy drunk too fat and lazy to continue writing"; Ian Fleming, the creator of James Bond, who traveled a bit with Lewis and shared some experiences; S.J. Perelman, the mines wars mansurise, whose wit and insight charmed everyone; Lord Snowdon, the brother-inlaw of the Queen of England, who brought along his photographic paraphernalia to join ewis on a tour that quickly turned sour, thanks to publicity and obnoxious tourists; and, of course, Lewis' British publisher, the testy Jonathan Cape, who melted under the author's gregarious sociability.

In conclusion, Lewis aptly sums up his life of travel: "It's just a compulsion I've always felt. It's the pull of the world. I spent most of my childhood on my own, and some of it was in the mountains of Wales. I would go exploring with the idea in my head that the farther I was from home the better it would be. The next valley would always be wilder. The lake would be bottomiess, and I would find a mysterious ruin, and there would be ravens instead of crows in all the trees.

"Now it's not just the Black Mountains of Dyfed, but the world."

Your hidden talents can boost symphony's coffers

Do you have the yearning to sing in places other than the shower?

Do you like to play your favorite instrument? Do you feel that your musical talent is yet undiscovered? Council Corner -

Here's your chance. The Grosse Pointe Symphony is looking for local talent to perform in its fifth annual Fun Fundraiser." And you get to invite all your friends.

It's very simple. All that's necessary is for your friends to raise $500 in your name because, of course, they want to come and hear you perform. The Symphony will do all the work for you. Submit that list of your friends to the symphony. They will contact the friends and promote your talent. Tickets are $25 each and music in our area. This highly respected group of amateur singers welcomes invitations to sing at various affairs, so if you are having a luncheon or other function, give them a call. The director is Margaret Lindner and the accompanist is Saily Murray. New singers are always welcome, so telephone if you would like to add your voice to a group that sings for the joy of it. The Choraliers also give their support to local art organizations, another great reason to have them be a part of your festivities. For more information, call Margaret at (313) 821-2312. Another group that raises its voice in song is the Community Chorus. The chorus is accepting new singers until Feb. 15 when they will begin serious practicing for their May 17 Spring Concert. They practice every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Choir Room at Grosse Pointe North High School. Everyone is welcome to join and no auditions are necessary. For more information, call Virginia at (313) 881-0909. The February meeting of the Grosse Pointe Artists will feature Tony Warren, who will complete a water color painting, including matting and framing. Tony is a senior designer at the GM Design Center in Warren. His art work is varied, ranging from commemorative posters, to architectural models for auto shows and exhibits. He studied with Grosse Pointe's own Robert Rathbun; then, with a full tuition scholarship from Scholastic Awards, attended the American Academy of Arts in Chicago.

proceeds go to help support the symphony. So, don't be shy. Send your list of friends and start practicing. Time is running short. The program will be at 3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 22 at the War Memorial. For more information, call Lawrence LaGore at (313) 885-0744.

Also — here's a reminder about the Grosse Pointe Symphony's fabulous "Cabaret Concert." This is an evening of festive, informal music in the relaxed setting of a cabaret. Refreshments will be served and surprises are in store. The date is Sunday, Jan. 18. at 7 p.m. at the Assumption Cultural Center, Individual tickets purchased at the door are $12: $10 for seniors; $5 for students.

Continuing with the plays presented during its 50th year celebration, Grosse Pointe Theatre's next production is "Sabrina Fair," that wonderful play made famous by Audrey Hepburn in the movie, "Sabrina."

Two years ago, the movie was re-released with Julia Ormond as Sabrina. And now the Grosse Pointe Theatre has its own Pam Montgomery as Sabrina. This is a delightful comedy complete with a romantic triangle and love triumphs at the end. Not to be missed! The play runs Jan. 21-25. and Jan. 28-31 at the War Memorial. Tickets are $13. The third annual Friends of the War Memorial Jazz Night will feature Kurt Krahnke's Bassline Jumper with vocalist Janet Tenaj, shown at the left, from 8 p.m. to midnight Saturday, Jan. 24 at the Grosse Pointe War Memoriai.

Tickets are $11 in advance; $15, at the door. Beverages are welcome. Set-ups, ice and glassware will be provided. Guests must be 21 or older.

The Friends of the War Memorial are adult volunteers, between the ages of 25 and 45. The Friends meet on the first Tuesday of each month at 6:30 p.m. The group's purpose is to support and enhance the War Memorial's program activities through sponsorship of a variety of social functions including Jazz Night and "Taste of the Hops," a beer tasting event, scheduled for Friday, Feb. 20. For more information about the Friends, or to request being added to the mailing list, call the War Memorial during regular business hours at (313) 881-7511.

Spearheading Mite Division championship in the defensive efforts were Dan Rosso and Luke Mitcheil of the Blackhawks the annual Snowball Christmas Tournament. and Fredrick and Bocmer Urisko of the Penguins.

The Bruins won all six of their games, including a 5-3 victory over the Sharks in the championship contest.

Matt Miller scored twice and Davies, Rich Brian McManaman and Tony Jacobson added a goal apiece in the title game, while Mike Zukus, Mike Walsh, Steve Carson, Anthony Paglino and Mike Kelly also played well. Stefan Pfaehler had an excellent tournament in goal and posted a pair of shutcuts as the Bruins outscored their opponents 26-9.

The Bruins didn't have their full complement of players for the tournament because of family vacation plans.
