The hearing was supposed to started until after 2 p.m. Due to the length of the testimony and the lateness of its completion, Woods municipal Judge Lynne Pierce said that the defense attorneys would not be able to cross-examine the witnesses that day.

She pointed out that she was scheduled to be in another court on Thursday, July 2, and that Friday, July 3, was a legal holiday. So she scheduled the cross-examination to begin on Monday, July 6, at 9 a.m.

Before the hearing began, Pierce admonished the media not to take any pictures of the victims. She said that they are minors and that she has issued a gag order protecting them. The electronic media could not take their pictures or even tape their testimony.

County prosecutor Maria Petito questioned all three complainants on Wednesday.

Bartlow redesigned the hull and replaced the engine with two 300 horsepower Fageol Sweepstakes engines which turn in opposite directions and are in direct drive with the propellers. Features of the boat are a foot rudder control bar and two individual throttles which control the speed of the motors. the council had no choice but to approve the ballot request.

Those supporting allowing dogs in the park so that boaters can bring them on outings _aid that the petition drive was necessary because the city council and the parks and recreation committee refused requests to change city ordinances allowing dogs in the park. Several residents said they didn't know what the big deal was about letting dogs in the park. Lake Front Park docks are along the river, so people can drive right up to their boats, unlike other Pointe parks that do allow dogs to go on boats.

Others said that if the city was worried about people not cleaning up after their dogs, some sort of permit system could be developed. So if someone got caught not cleaning up leave their dogs in their boats after their dog, they could have their permit yanked.

talked about why they opposed granting boaters special privileges. Vicki Granger talked about the added expenses that would be involved in enforcing Miller, such an ordinance. She asked if all residents should bear the cost, or should all boaters, even those who don't have a dog, bear the cost. If it's only a few boaters who would want to bring their dogs onto their boats, would they be willing to split the costs evenly? That could get very expensive.

Councilman Fahrner said that he keeps a boat at a private marina and has witnessed many instances in which the first thing that happens after docking is the dogs jumping off the boat to relieve themselves. He said that while many boaters are do doubt responsible dog owners, there's no way the city can monitor every boat to make sure that dogs are cleaned up

Mark Miller, a Woods resident who serves on the city's parks and recreation commission, said that when Hohlfeldt came before the commission, he promised to provide information showing support for the proposal, but never did.

The next thing Miller knew, Hohlfeldt and others were going before the city council making their request. When the council turned them down at the recommendation of the parks commission, dog supporters began circulating a ballot petition proposal.

We did consider his request, but felt that the cons outweighed the pros," said Miller. "We were worried about safety. What if dogs got out and bit someone. We were also afraid that boaters might want to while they went to the pool or the tennis courts. He said there are over 15,000 people in the Woods, but there are only about 220 boat wells in the park. Once you allow dogs in the park so that they can get to boats, where do you draw the line?

The question now lies before the voters, who will decide the issue in November. Councilman Al Dickinson said that there was a lot of confusion on the issue and maybe it was best that voters decide the question after several months of public debate.

INCIP! The psychology of sexual assault

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

The recent arrest of four youths by Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers in the sexual assault of three 14-year-old girls has left many Grosse Fointers with questions.

Suzanne Kelier, a psychologist and manager of mental health outpatient services at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital, agreed to answer some questions about cases of sexual assault.

She emphasized that she does not know the particulars that kind of behavior. of the Woods case and her comments should not be interpreted as applying to that case.

"I am speaking in generalities only," said Keller. "I am not speaking about anyone involved in the Woods case. I can't emphasize that point enough."

One question brought up by many who have heard about the case is why did it take so long for the girls to come forward. Generally, in cases like this one, said Keller, it is not that unusual for the victims to remain quiet.

She said there are a number "All the people in this case of reasons why sexual assauls have either explicitly, by their victims are afraid to come forattorneys (defense) or implicit-

A profile of a date raper shows him to typically be fairly popular, fairly attractive somewhat competitive with his peers, said Keller. These people don't take no for an answer. In the most extreme cases, they are sociopathic.

"What's missing is empathy for others, they don't consider the feelings of other people when they act," said Keller.

The event begins at 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 10 at the Hillcrest Banquet Center on Groesbeck in Mount Clemens. Ahee founded and underwrites the event, which has raised more than $2.5 million for Capuchin.

Being privy to his customers' marriage plans involves responsibilities not normally imagined by the public.

"Everyone in the store is required to maintain the 'client-jeweler' privilege about who is to become engaged," he said with a wry smile.

Ahee must be doing something right because 2/3 of his business comes from the Grosse Pointes.

Regardless of his success. Ahee always remembers his modest beginnings by giving back to the community that has supported him, his family and business for so long.

Ahee's efforts have been recognized by numerous awards, including the National Society of Fundraiser's Outstanding Volunteer Award and the National Philanthropic Award. Ahee has been named the St.

Marion's Parent of the Year and Nordurft Man of the Year. As for his business reaching the half-century mark, Ahee said, "Not many businesses are able to stay around for 50 years. "We feel privileged and blessed to have been able to do the things we have - in business and philanthropically."

Democrat is wooing GOP Pointe voters

ust what was Mark Brewer, head of the state's Democratic Party, doing in the Republican Grosse Pointes the other day?

Appearing at the Grosse Pointe News, he was seeking support and publicity for his party, its principles and its candidates for state and national office in the August primary and the November general election.

Furthermore, Brewer emphasized that there are more Democrats in this GOP stronghold than many people think.

He pointed out that the Democratic Party has a strong and active Democratic Club in the Grosse Pointes. In addition, the Pointes are represented by two Democratic congressmen and a Democratic county commissioner.

Brewer said it will be an uphill fight to dislodge GOP Gov. John Engler, but he claimed that the Democrats have a number of good issues. The first is that Engler once promised not to run for a third term, and yet he now is doing just that.

But why would Brewer spend his precious campaign time to visit Republican Grosse Pointe which strongly endorsed Engler in his first two elections?

Asked that question by Grosse Pointe News reporter Brad Lindberg, Brewer responded to the effect that the Democratic nominee for governor, whomever it will turn out to be, can win. He can do so. Brewer claims, hy stress. ing such important issues as the follow-

First, the bad condition of the state's highways until Engler recently moved to obtain more financing for improvements by backing a 4-cent gasoline tax and more federal funds.

Second, the state's disappointment with Proposal A which was endorsed by the Engler administration but has reduced funds in many school districts and made it difficult for districts to levy more than they get from Lansing.

Third, the state of Michigan's environment, which, Brewer contended, the governor had ignored until he began his third-term campaign.

But the Democratic chieftain contended that there are many other issues that affect various groups of voters.

For example, he pointed to the discovery of tuberculosis in the state's deer harde which reportedly has spread into some Michigan cattle.

That could be important to farmers because only states that are certified as TB-free are able to move cattle across state lines.

The Democrats still are opposed to legislative term limits which are being imposed this year for the first time on 64 House members. Brewer contends it is the toughest term-limit law in the nation because it imposes a permanent ban on legislators after six years in the House and eight in the state Senate.

The Democrats and other critics contend that term limits will give more power not only to the governor and his administration but to lobbyists and even staff members in view of the number of new House members who will lack expe-

Brewer conceded that the party does win support from organized labor, but he also believes the state needs a governor who will be fair to both labor and management in any dispute.

As any TV viewer knows, Gov. Engler already has begun his campaign for a third term, using TV commercials and visits to different groups of supporters around the state.

The Democrats will pick their nominee in the August primary, which is expected to serve up a close race among the three major contenders: Doug Ross, Larry Owen and Geoffrey Fieger.

The Free Press has endorsed the governor and Ross as the party nominees. while Owen seems to be winning labor support. As state chair, Brewer says he's neutral.

While we often have criticized the Engler administration, we doubt that any of the three Democrats can win in November

We hope, however, that the nominated Democrat can at least discuss intelligently the major issues that Brewer cited.

We'll miss storytelling judge

Tith his three children now through college, Stan J. Kazul, municipal judge in the City of Grosse Pointe for more than 25 years, felt it was time to retire and do some other things in life.

Kazul brought to the bench, to which he was appointed in March 1975, a down toearth realism coupled with a shrewd understanding of what a municipal judge in the Pointes should do and be.

Since he presided over the smallest municipal court in the state, he was personally acquainted with many, if not most, of the voters in the city he served. As for the future of the Pointes' municipal courts, now the last in the state of that size except for Eastpointe, he has a couple of recommendations that make sense.

Thus, he also would prefer to see their jurisdiction increased to $5,000 and make them courts of record. However, he does not favor uniting the Grosse Pointes into one district court, as several people have proposed in recent years.

At one time, the argument was that a Pointe district court could more speedily take care of felonies arising in Grosse Pointe than the downtown courts do.

But in recent years, Kazul pointed out, he downtown district court ed up their actions under a new law that requires cases to move within two years.

Kazul is a story teller who uses that ability to explain why young people can get into or avoid trouble. In the Pointes, we have reason these days to pay attention to his philosophy as our reporter, Brad Lindberg, quoted Kazul about it last "People between the ages of 13 and 15 acquire a bank account of 'dumb.' By age 25, the account reads zero. That's called maturation.

"Withdrawals from the 'dumb' account are made in different amounts. The boy who kills somebody in a drunk driving accident, or the teenage girl who gets pregnant have emptied their accounts and changed their lives forever."

"Along those lines," Lindberg's story continued, "Kazul said experience tells him that by age 17 kids reach the age of reason. They make conscious decisions on their own which are out of their parents'

That story alone tells us why the judge is being missed not only in the municipal court of the City of Grosse Pointe, but in all the Pointes since his recent move to

To the Editor:

Our new council continues in the spirit of the reason the Knights of Columbus exist.

We have just completed a very successful blood drive, purposely scheduled during a period of blood shortage crisis. We had 57 pints of blood donated, the value of which can never be determined -- we only know that up to 228 persons will receive the benefits of our donors.

Special thanks must be given to all the donors, Msgr. Blair and St. Paul School -Midge and her staff are second to none.

Two individuals also deserve special recognition for the multiple phone calls made and for assisting all day on the drive. We couldn't have done it without them, namely Norm Lussier and Barry Quinn, and the many other Knights who made calls and donated blood.

Our next drive is on Saturday, Dec. 26, the other critical blood shortage period. Thanks for your efforts.

See you on the day after Christmas — an opportunity to give again, or to join us for the first time.

God bless our work. S. "Whitey"

In fact, the last time we looked Ann Arbor wasn't a part of the Detroit Metropolitan area, but Jim Nichols, president of The Sporting News, which made Indeed, I have always thought of the Pointes as a friendly, civil, caring community. Yet, the way people reached out to each other during the tragedies that resulted in the loss of lives and property is worth reflecting on again one year later, and beyond.

Foremost in the effort of unity and selflessness were the Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park staff and lifeguards who dodged falling trees and swallowed any fear they had to work valiantly at rescuing 13 members of the Algahaim family who were either knecked into Lake St. Clair by the 100 m.p.h. winds or caught under debris of the collapsed picnic

FYI's source says the prisoner was conveyed to Platz Animal Hospital, where vet guess was that Stoolie was temporarily incapacitated from eating too many discarded doughnuts from the Dumpster in back of a nearby bakery.

"He was grounded with a severe case of diarrhea," says FYI's source.

Charges of creating a public nuisance, indecent conduct, malicious destruction of property, resisting arrest, assaulting an officer and attempted escape were dropped and a fully-recovered Stoolie is now free as a bird.

A sad situation

To the Editor:

Several articles in the June 25th edition of the Grosse Pointe News were centered on what can be only described as a very sad situation allegedly involving several students at Grosse Pointe North.

Regardless of the outcome of the investigation and any resulting criminal legal action. i.e., it is determined that the accusations as they have been made are accurate or if it is determined that they are false each should be disturbing to members of this community. The executive's spouse

She has been relating tales from the corporate wives' circuit for years, and I believe her when she tells me she truly tries to be and do what is expected of her at various business functions.

I can't help it; I howl at some of the stories she tells, and before I get jumped on because it sounds stereotypical, she and I are the first to admit this could just as easily be the role some husbands play while joining their executive wives. Like it or not, these games are a very real part of corpo-

During the course of the year, my friend will visit assorted gatherings for charity events, plant openings, retirement parties, several holiday functions and various board and corporate gatherings, both national and international. These may require various sport and other skills, such as golf and bridge. There was also a benefit that turned out to be a surprise walkathon that had not been on the agenda and, therefore, appropriate footwear was 2,000 miles away at home in the closet.

Language, if not an outright barrier, often is certainly a sizeable obstacle. This is especially true during those three-hour lunches with the other wives where you are the only one who doesn't speak the language. They might be criticizing your hair, clothes or figure, but you continue to smile and laugh when they do, praying that this mirth isn't at your expense.

Above all, one must be a good sport. This is particularly difficult when another woman asks you to dance. This can be a bit awkward, but one must not offend - furthermore, you know she just won the local dance contest.

Some advice my friend suggested I pass along to up-and-coming young spouses who have this ahead of them would include: Approach your meals with great caution, especially when you can't recognize the fare. On one occasion she attempted to cut a mysterious substance, which turned out to be an entire delicate bird on a nest of scorched starch, and she shot the entire vertebrate across the table and still its head remained intact.

It isn't unusal to discover color-coordinated themes at various venues. On one such occasion, she encountered a red buffet table that included everything from rare beef to marinara sauces, beets, red Jell-O molds and topped off with strawberry ice cream. Another hall offered an entire white repast, including fish, chicken, potatoes, rice, cauliflower, cottage cheese and coleslaw. White on white cake with vanilla ice cream completed the theme.

She warns that one be prepared for every secretary to know your name and use it often. However, don't waste your time trying to remember each name, because chances are they will be transferred next year. Be a good listener, but be careful not to blow it on the personal stuff, like how are the kids when they don't have children. Always play it safe.

One of the sad-but-true tales she told concerned the woman who found out her husband was being naughty and decided to pay nun nack by spending her days as a QVC addict, ordering countless items and charging them to his account. Too often you learn more than you want about things that should remain private. Pretend not to hear.

Another piece of advice is to always carry a book. A great deal of time will be spent walking or waiting ... and waiting. My friend isn't stupid. She has spent countless hours touring cities and museums. However, she is human and her tootsies do get tired. It's also hard to shop on tired feet when you know you will have to stand at a party for several hours that night and be ready to meet the girls for golf bright and early the next morning.

Now let's talk about clothes. This becomes a diplomatic issue. One wants to appear smart, tasteful, display respect rather than decollete; however, never outshine your hosts. Some homework is necessary here. Learn the customs of the country and which expect flowers and which small, appropriate gifts. Body language reads differently in different countries, so do without the hand gestures and behave with decorum. Less is Never take the venue for assurance of a swell time. There have been many times when the location sounds glamorous, but there is no time scheduled for beach or idle nonsense. Rather, time is spent playing cruise director and tour guide.

Last, but not least, always be adorable, but not so adorable that you have perennial house guests. Promise a lunch, real soon, and try to enjoy the good parts.

One has marvelous opportunities to see other lands and explore and meet fascinating people along the journey. Many solid friendships have resulted through business liaisons, and my friend certainly doesn't wish to discount the positive side while illustrating the humorous angles.

Some of us have spouses who rarely travel in business. I guess all things in moderation still holds true.

They were there to help the GOP candidate's campaign for Wayne County Commissioner from the First District, and not even an occasional sprinkle of rain could keep them away.

At that time the car would be paid for and we would be right back to square one with a junker, but that would be in the future and we would have had the pleasure of driving it into the ground ourselves and not inheriting it as a brokendown heap from someone else.

It is this pride of ownership and the willingness to incur a lifetime of debt to trade up from the old to the new that created and supports the automobile industry.

Not only did the automobile affect the economy, it created a mobile society that could live in one community and work in another, wreaking havoc with

Roads and freeways were built to make it easy to leave behind the problems of congestion and move out to newer small communities.

Like Topsy, the industry grew without much regard or concept of the changes in the way people would live or the values they would embrace because the automobile had changed the pattern of life.

For the city of Detroit, the automobile was an even more important force. It was the industry on which the city survived, grew and changed.

The automobile factories ere the center of Around it, like spokes on the wheel, were businesses that emerged and prospered because of auto production.

Not only did auto suppliers prosper but every phase of business expanded and grew from an economy supported by those who worked in the auto industry or some business related to it.

In the beginning, the automobile was something of a wonder. Comfort and looks were not the main concern. The fact that the contraptions actually worked was enough.

Even by the turn of the century when more of them began to appear, most thought they were a passing fad. Groups of amused bystanders would jeer, "Get a horse!" if they saw an embarrassed driver struggling with his balky little onecylinder gas buggy trying to get it started.

In those days, anyone who was silly enough to predict that the automobile was a coming thing was regarded as a crackpot, in a class with those who talked of someday going to the moon.

Few material things have been more important than the automobile in shaping our lives. And few material things have become more deeply rooted in our hearts and emotions. We cherish the earlier cars because they recall an era and simple way of life long past. The gleaming creations that appeared from the mid-century to the present day have become symbols of American

Nursery closes

Paul Evangelical Church of Grosse Pointe Farms has closed its coop nursery school for the 1998-99 school year, according to Mary Lou Greive, church secretary.

The co-op nursery was not a ministry of St. Paul's, and was not actually administered by the congregation.

"We rented our space out," said Greive.

The decision to close was an economic one, "three to four years evolving," due to lack of enrollment, according to St. Paul's office

Honda Accord is popular — and for good reasons

We recently had a chance to hang out with the popular kids - strictly speaking, the popular automotive kids. Hondas and Acuras.

We had figured much of the fuss over them was due to crowd mentality. A vehicle gets a few good reviews, becomes trendy, works its way up to the top of the sales charts and becomes an automotive deity when actually it has no more virtues than less-often-purchased vehicles.

There's more to the continuing popularity of Honda's Accord than marketing and

Our first impression that's the very first one, those first few moments behind the wheel of the redesigned midsize sedan — turned into an act just short of worship. This is indeed as close to a perfect everyday vehicle as one is likely to find on the market.

So much for our "popular kid" bashing. This kid has substance. No wonder owners come back again and again over the years for updated models. No wonder used car dealers love to have Accords on their lots to sell.

An esteemed colleague says he likes to form his own opinions about new cars and trucks and then see how his takes compare with those of other reviewers. He graciously fished out some recent independent criticisms of the Accord and these writers were really scraping to find any faults with Honda's top-selling nameplate.

You know a vehicle is awfully good when the worst criticisms of it are things like the under-elbow position of the door lock switch results in unwanted activation of the locks; or the fact that Accords are much sought-after by car thieves.

Honda says its re-do of the Accord for 1998 was the most comprehensive redesign in the model's 22 years. It resulted in a larger-than-ever passenger cabin - more spacious overail than those of Camry or Taurus, says Honda. Head, shoulder and leg room all were increased between 1997 and

At least as important is Honda's new 200-hp VTEC V-6 engine. It's available on LX and EX models. The 150-hp VTEC 4-cylinder is standard on LX and EX models and a 135-hp 16-valve four is standard in the base DX model. A 5-speed manual transmission is standard on all 4-cylinder Accords. A new 4-speed automatic is standard on all V-6 sedans and is available on 4cylinder models.

The Accord's "effort-sensitive" power steering provides some nice tension. It takes a little effort and thought to maneuver this car, a feature that adds to driving pleasure. Few people really know what they're up against when try ing to secure money for college.

Here are four tips to help you tackle financial aid:

 Get the whole family involved. Since both parents and students are expected to foot at least part of the bill, one of the first things to do is determine how much you can afford to pay. If this is the oldest of several children, take into account the overall financial burden that college will have on the entire

If your child needs to take out a student loan, how much debt can he carry comfortably?

Educate yourself about financial aid.

Research how much money each school has available for financial aid, and how that money is allocated. Contact the financial aid offices for information on grants, scholarships and campus job opportunities.

Many schools now have financial aid information available on the Internet.

• Keep your options open.

There are ways to bring down the sticker price of private coleges, without your child giving up on his dream of going to the college of his choice

One way to do this is to take classes at a local community college that will transfer to a four-year school. This way, you'll pay less money for the required foundation classes in a particular area of study.

Make sure everything's in order.

Keep track of all deadlines for filing. Also, be aware that in order for your child to apply for financial aid, you must have filed your federal income tax for the preceding year.

The rules of financial aid are not only complex but are also apidly changing, so it's important to ask the right questions before applying to any school.

Finding money for college is an arduous process. However, it's the only way to afford what has become a necessary luxu-

Life-sustaining vegetables founded bu the colonists were menorialized by Plymouth's Cov. William Bradford, a self-styled poet who apparently did not believe in brief titles for his work. One of his long, narrative-style poems was titled, "Some Observations of God's Merciful Dealings With Us in This Wilderness and His Gracious Protection Over Us This Many Years, Blessed Be His Name."

One verse of this laboriously detailed puem explains:

"All sorts of roots and herbs in The many life-sustaining vegetables which grew in the colonies

Onions, melons, cucumbers, Skirrets, beets, coleworts and and grapes, of several re are,

One widely held superstition insisted that a naked squaw strolling through her garden on a moonlit night dragging her garmonlit night dragging her would ensure a good crop and prevent cutworms from destroying the vegetables, and especially the corn.

Indian corn, or maize, was the most important food staple of the early settlement of America. Explorers from all sections of Europe seemed fascinated by this plant that grew so abundantly and required so little attention. Priests who accompanied fternands de Soto on his Florida expedition in the mid-1500s considered exhebrating the Eucharist with corn bread, but the idea was rejected as not belitting the dignity of this solemn ceremony. Maize, sometimes called "turkie wheat" was being widely cultivated by all the colonists in the new country.

According to their belief, these foods came from the daughter of the holy Sky Woman, who had descended from the heavens on the wings of birds. When the daughter if ied and was buried in a shallow grave, corn sprang from her breas: squash grew from her abdomen, beans sprouted from her fingers, and potatoes from her abdomen, beans sprouted from her fingers, and potatoes from her toes. As an added benefit, tobacco grew from her head.

Although the first settlers reserved udgment on this somewhat bizerre explanation, vegetables soon became just as important to their survival as to the lives of the Native Americans.

Colonials followed many of the agricultural practices developed by the Ir dians. Corn, pumpkins and beans were planted together. Early milluring stalks of corn were the poles to support the climbing bean stems, while the ground vices of pumpkins helped to retain water and prevent erosion of the soil. One section of a field would be planted several weeks after the first in order to extend the harvest season so that fresh vog tables would be available for a longer period.

After the crops were gathered, corn husting bees were held in pion: er cromunities, Indians celebrated a successful harvest with the Green Corn Dance festival which coir cided with the Pilgrim's Thanksging celebration.

vated many varieties of both peas and beans, as did the Indians. One early merican cookbook lists nine different types of edible vari-cties cultivated during this peri-assisting Lord Baltimore in his attempts to lure colonists to Maryland, insisted that the land was so fertile that peas grew a full 10 inches in only 10 days.

The pease porridge of nursery rhyme fame was a staple food in Maryland and consisted of a cooked pea mush, which had been put through a sieve and flavored with herbs, pepper and butter A similar 4.1.

with herbs, pepper and butter. A similar dish in New York involved several different types of peas flavored with butter, celery and ginger. The Indians ate not only the peas, but also the plant's stalks, shoots, leaves and pods.

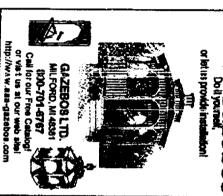

With Independence Day on July 4 fresh in our memories this year it is intriguing to know of the great controversy which developed when a national bird to symbolize American characteristics was being chosen soon after the original Independence Day, Many patriotic citizens voted for the great wild turkey, which was far more common to colonials than was the rarer bald eagle.

Benjamin Franklin, supported by James Madison, led the turkey lobhyists and soundly condemned both the bad moral character and the predatory hunting habits of the eagle. Supporters of the eagle, however, carried the day in the Continental Congress when, in the heat of debate, it was alleged that the turkey was both cowardly and stupid, and therefore not typical of the bold new nation. The discussion, certainly not one of the most critical, raged for six years before it was resolved in favor of the engle.

When colonial settlers came to America they found no vast treasures of gold and silver, or rare spices, but something much more vital to survival, the world's largest outdoor supermarket, and gave us a heritage of enormous value.

Mulch can conserve moisture Page 8

Q. My cogwood tree and maples have been wilting lately. What can I do to he p these trees?

A. These trees and other plants are wilting because they are losing moisture faster than the plant can take in from the ground. During the hot, dry weather is the only time this usually occurs. Newly planted trees and shrubs are more affected by the weather than established plants with developed root structure.

During the summer your trees and shrubs need to be watered too. They do not need as much water as your lawn requires, but a soaking once a week is helpful. By setting your hose under these trees on a slow trickle you can water these plants well without wasting water. Soaker hoses also do a great job of watering those difficult spots.

Flowers need special attention during the summer. Plantings in sunny spots can dry out fast—especially during a week without any rainfall. Large trees on boulevards and plants on berms are difficult to water because of runoff. Some shrubs can withstand the dry summer weather better than others. It is best to consult the sales assistants at your local garden center about how much mois-

plant in those hot, dry spots. Plants such as rhododendrons, azaleas and spireas need far more moisture than yews or junipers.

Adding mulch around your plants not orly makes the planting beds decrative, it reduces the moisture loss from the soil. Plants with shallow root systems such as rhododendrons or newly planted shrubs and trees will benefit from a light layer of mulch. A few inches of mulch will reduce how much water is necessary during the summer. As an extra benefit the mulch will reduce the weed growth too. Plack-moss can be used in areas such as flowerbeds where it would be hard to install mulch between flowers.

There are many types of mulch available. (edar, cypress, hardwood, cook shells and colored shredded wood are a few. The colored mulch has been growing in popularity over the past few years. This product is recycled from scrap-wood and pallets. Any metal or nails are removed in the process with powerful magnets. The shredded wood is then colored red or brown with an earth-friendly dye. This coloring will last for years

It is not necessary to install a weed-control landscape fabric under the mulch. Over time the organic mulch will decompose into the soil. This will make landscape fabric effective for only a few years. Instead an application of Preen weed preventer each spring will give you effective results preventing weed growth. A cubic yard of mulch spread two inches thick will cover approximately 125 square feet.

People who think more caterpillars than usual have been attacking their trees this season are probably correct.

Deb McCullough
Michigan State
University forest entomolog st, says that high gypsy moth numbers in some areas of the Lower Peninsula have coincided with elevated populations of forest tent caterpillars, cankerworms, leafrollers and other dwelling insects.

Most of those insects have finished feeding for the year. Lots of gypsy moth caterpillars remain in the trees, however. They will pretty much finish their leaf feeding soon and emerge as adult gypsy moths in laze summer to lay eggs.

Though more than 80,000 acres were sprayed for gypsy moth suppression this spring and many of the gypsy moth caterpillars were killed, it isn't possible to get all of them when populations are high.

The Bt spraying program was very effective in most areas, but even though the Bt may have gotten 90 percent of the population, you still have 10 percent to 20 percent left," McCullough says.

are now more than an inch long, and Bt will not affect them.

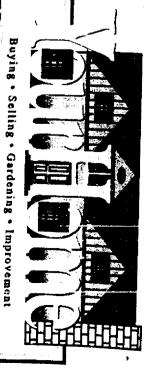

Broad-spectrum conventional insecticides will insects, including natural insects, including natural enemies of the gypsy moth ons of predators have been present at low numbers this summer.

McCullough attributes this to low gypsy moth populations in the previous year, which caused the natural enemies will probably be greater next year because of this year's increased gypsy moth population. Because many of the gypsy moth caterpillars will complete the sup-sum was moth caterpillars will complete the sup-sum was moth papulations, a natural virus — NPV—says moth populations, a natural virus — NPV—says moth population, as were says McCullough. Moreover, in areas with high gypsy moth population, and begin to take a toll on the gypsy moth population, in the meantime, homeowners, should focus on taking care of

"For the most part, defoliated trees will recover this summer and be able to survive the winter," says McCullough. "The best thing homeowners can do is give their trees an inch of water per week from now into fall, through a slow-running hose, sprinkler or soaker hose that runs all day, especially during dry weather." drip line of the canopy, not near the trunk. Putting a tin can under the water pattern of a sprinkler will help homeowners tell when an inch of water has been applied. Homeowners should start making pluns now for dealing with next year's gypsy moth population. Ample educational materials on gypsy moth management planning are available from the county MSU Extension office.

By the mid-1940s, the figural cookie jar came into fashion. Jars were made to look like barrels, animals, fruit, vegetables, people, cars and hundreds of other objects.

One jar in demand by collectors is shaped like Yogi Bear, the Hanna-Barbera cartoon character who debuted on television in 1958. Yogi got his own show in 1960, and he appeared in a full-length movie in 1964. His most recent show went off the air in 1992; reruns of his various cartoons still air.

The Yogi Bear cookie jar, made by the American Bisque Co. of Williamstown, W.Va., was made in 1961. It came in several color variations. Yogi jars sell today for $300 to $400.

Recovery resources are available on the web

By Jeff and Debra Jay

Dear Jeff & Debra:

When I looked up addiction and recovery on the internet I got over 300,000 choices. What are the best resources in

- CyberSearcher

Dear CyberSearcher: These are some of our favorite sites on the worldwide web. We find the information on these sites to be consistent with the viewpoint of mainstream addiction professionals. Since you didn't pinpoint specifically what you'd like to know about addiction and recovery, we attempted to provide you with an assortment of websites.

· National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence, Inc. (www.ncadd.org). Don't be fooled by the uninspiring splash page. This site is a treasure trove of resources, as well as links to other sites. You'll find information for parents and youth, and learn what's going on at the federal government level and what you can do about it.

National Clearinghouse for Alcohol and Drug Information (www.health.org). A comprehensive informational site, including a very powerful treatment locator for all 50 states. You'll also find an exhaustive list of low cost publications, the latest research and statistics and online forums.

 Alcoholics Anonymous (www.aa.org) and Al-Anon/Alateen (www.al-anon.alateen.org). These are the home pages for the 12-step recovery organizations. These programs still offer the best opportunity for recovery for alcoholics and addicts and their families.

 Mining Company (http://alcoholism.miningco.com). This is a surprisingly comprehensive information and resource directory, covering many areas of interest. We suggest selecting "health" from the subject guide and then select "alcoholism" under the topic heading "disease." Bookmark that page so you can go to it directly next time. This is a great site and not to be missed.

Families Anonymous

(http://home.earthlink.net/~famanon/index.html). This is a newer 12-step group for the families of addicted individuals. This group is especially helpful to parents who have children who are addicted to alcohol or other drugs.

• Brighton Hospital (www.brightonhospital.org). One of the oldest alcohol and drug treatment centers in the nation and a local resource for treatment and education. There is a calendar of upcoming events, most of which take place in Brighton, Mich.

 American Society of Addiction Medicine (www.asam.org). This is the organization for physicians specializing in addiction medicine. You'll find addiction medicine news and an online doctor finder.

• Hazelden Foundation (www.hazelden.org). This site has a good cross section of information from one of the leading treatment centers in the country as well as a bookstore of Hazelden publications.

• Take Charge (www.takecharge.net). This is a site we have sponsored on how to help someone with an alcohol or drug problem. There is a list of libraries that have Take Charge, the home education program for families, on loan. All Grosse Pointe public libraries have copies of Take Charge for circulation. A related site, designed to help families, is Family Help (www.familyhelp.org).

 Moyers on Addiction: Close to Home (www.wnet.org/closetohome). This site is a companion to the five-part PBS television series broadcast earlier this National Association for Children of Alcoholics (www.health.org/nacoa). This outstanding organization is focused on children living in alcoholic homes and how to help them.

 McGovern Family Foundation www.mcgovernfamily.org). Helping families deal with alcoholism, in honor of the memory of Teresa Jane McGovern.

· National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (www.niaaa.nih.gov). A good source for technical information on the latest research.

 Recovery Net (www.recoverynet.com). A very good resource for all kinds of recovery information and the homesite for live chats with experts in the field. The most recent chat was hosted by Claudia Black and the topic was "Children of Alcoholics."

Jeff Jay, a native of Grosse Pointe, is director of Program Development for Brighton Hospital and the president of the McGovern Family Foundation in Washington, D.C. Debra Erickson Jay is an interventionist and the managing director of "Take Charge! America," a fundraising drive that places educational materials for the families of alcohol and drug abusers in libraries and churches throughout the country.

Take Charge is available at all Grosse Pointe churches and public libraries. Send questions to Jeff Jay, c/o Brighton Hospital, Dept. GP, 12851 East Grand River, Brighton, 48116, 810-227-

One reason we grind our teeth is when nunder stress or pressure, say when we exercise or are in a traffic jam, some of us take these stresses to sleep with us.

The second reason is irregularities in a person's bite. When a child has part baby and part permanent teeth, the jaws are trying to find a comfortable position and the child will subconsciously grind to smooth out irregularities. 'Man of La Mancha' is suited to Stratford's unique Festival Theater stage

As lights come up on the set of "Man of La Mancha" at the Stratford Festival Theater, the striking effectiveness of this unique stage for musical comedy is obvious at once. Thrusting into a semicircular seating arrangement, the platform brings the performance close to every part of its audience in a situation that calls for highly creative staging. That it is also more challenging to the cast and staff than a conventional stage seems only to result in a higher level of creative imagination in mounting and performing the show. This "Man of La Mancha" benefits mightily. Set as it is in a prision of the Spanish Inquisition, the scene is dominated by a huge, heavy staircase suspended on chains like a drawbridge and raised and lowered with an ominous, thundering roar. Once a man descends those stairs, there seems little left but despair. Into that dark atmosphere

Juan Chioran as Cervantes brings the light of the author's fantasy - the knight and subtle amplification errant Don Quixote — to entertain the other prisoners and the andience royally while pursuing the show's central question: "If life itself is lunatic, who knows where madness lies?"

In reenacting the crazy episodes of the knight's adventures, every detail of performance and production is superbly executed. The sound and audibility of the performers, for example, leaves nothing to be desired. Expertly tuned body mikes make it easy to distinguish every whisper and understand the doisiest shout. The musical score rendered with bright vitality by Berthold Carriere's orchestra nestled high in the flies is well balanced to support, not overwhelm, the performers.

The costumes and costume changes, as the action switches from prison to the windmill, country inn, or open highway of Don Quixote's fantasies, are picturesquely historic to suit each situation. The staging, particularly as choreographed by Michael Lichtefeld, is almost hypnotic in the patterned movements of the actors.

The dance for Aldonza's abduction in particular is powerfully suspenseful and ominous. And the suspense is especially understandable when you learn that the petite, yet sturdy Cynthia Dale, rehearsing her part as Aldonza, injured herself in practicing acrobatic moves in that dance. She barely returned to the performance by opening night.

All these critically important factors provide a basis for a truly vibrant and engaging show based, of course, on the performers themselves. They meet the challenge, too.

Alternating between his alter egos of writer Cervantes and the mad knight, Juan Chioran in turn sings, dances, narrates, rants, raves and tilts with his windmills. It is a whirl of sympolic adventure that provides constant comic relief to the Don's tribulations and drives home his inspirational message "to dream the impossible dream."

As his number one dreamer, Bruce Dow makes Saucho Panza a truly lovable, bumptious squire demonstrating a touching devotion to his loony lord. Dow's rendering of Sancho's song, "I really like him" is one of the sentimental high points of the show. He helps you understand this devotion later when he wryly describes coming home reluctantly to his wife.

Meanwhile Ms. Dale makes convincing transitions from kitchen wench of humble origins and her sordid life to understanding of how she too can share the dream with Quixote's bestowal of her new identity as his Lady Dulcinea. She handles that difficult switch with great effect and humanity.

Bringing new dazzle to the second act is a shining example of the creative expertise of Stratford's designer Debra Hanson and prop builders. In the effort to shock Quixote into sanity, his future son-in-law appears as Knight of the Shining Mirror with a troop of doubles. Their props are armor and shields so shiny they dazzle every eye with reflected light. While creating a spectacular special effect, the device works in unexpected ways.

In all, this is a truly probing and world class production of a show that has suffered shabbily at the hands of any number of exploitive road companies. Thus it is a special opportunity to experience the thoughtful satire and idealism of Cervantes' classic book, as it has been distilled, only with considerable difficulty, into the musical comedy format. Not forgetting what is important it is also really great entertainment.

Gazpacho —Cold soup serves as a summertime cool-down

I took my first stab at gazpacho last week, from a recipe written on a cocktail napkin (no less) at Lucy's. My friend Judith Misch from Tappan Reality popped by and told me about this great gazpacho recipe that she had, and proceeded to sit down and spell it out for me.

My total prep time was about 30 minutes. Several patrons sampled my efforts and the common response was, "Annie, this soup is Gazpacho (gahz-PAH-choh) is a cold, summertime soup originated in southern Spain. This refreshing union of summer's favorite vegetables with tomato and V-8 juice is sure to please as an appetizer, as a side dish or served with bread and a

While this recipe could very well be made by chopping the veggies by hand, I strongly recommend a food processor to cut down on preparation time. Another great feature is that you can add the ingredients in any order. It doesn't matter. Simply stir well, refrigerate overnight and enjoy.

Cool your family down on a hot summer day or evening with this concoction of chilled veggies.

Judith Misch is a resident of Grosse Pointe Park. Her talents expand from the kitchen to local and statewide art shows. Her speciality is glass blowing and bead making. Thanks to Judy for a deliciously easy recipe.

might encounter in a small business -- personalities, logistics of the race, weather, mechanical things breaking that you have to fix. It throws all the elements of life at you and when you can get eight people to work together, solve the problems and have a good time together - you can't ask for a better sport.

"There are very few sports the family can be involved in where you go against nature -that last frontier. That's why I keep coming back to it, even though I'm going on 63. I still love sailing and I love seeing kids get involved in it."

Although she doesn't sail, Balcirak's wife Barbette is also very involved in the race.

"To do these races, you need a support team," he said. "My wife gets seasick, but without her doing all the shore duties it would be tough to keep a crew together. She lets the wives and girlfriends know what's going on and helps them make arrangements to get up to the island.

"She also cooks and prepares all the food. When you're on a 34-footer with eight people, you have to be very creative and we eat very well."

Balcirak said the first night's meal is traditionally a roast beef dinner with all the trimmings. The second night it's stuffed turkey or chicken breast. If they're out a third night, lasagna is on the menu.

"I don't believe in going out to sea without feeding the crew a good meal," Balcirak said. That's my wife's job and she takes it very seriously. It's a key element in making the whole thing successful.

"Some of the hot racing machines might take 12 or 14 pizzas and eat pizza all the way up and when they're gone you're done. I believe that if we can't have a good time, eat well and be competitive, it isn't worth it."

All three Balcirak children went through the junior sailing program at Bayview, but Dean Jr. real got bit by the sailing bug. The other two are great sailors, but they could go on to other things," Balcirak said. Dean Jr. really had a burning desire to do it and he was a natural. We tried to promote that. Both my wife and I are educators, so we worked with kids, knew a lot of the kids and got quite involved in the junior sailing program here."

Balcirak became director of sailing at Bayview in 1988 and ran the junior program while

"We trucked him and a lot of other kids around the country to do national competitions, Balcirak said.

It paid off as Dean Jr. became one of the first junior sailors from the Midwest to win a junior national sailing championship - the Sears

That was quite a feat because kids in the Midwest just don't have the same opportunities that kids from the East, West and down South have." Balcirak said. "So we had to do a lot of trucking around with these kids during the winter to get them to a competitive level with the other parts of the country.

"It wasn't just Dean. There was a whole group at that same age bracket that won many junior championships at the national level. They've all gone on to universities and won college sailor of the year awards. We're pretty proud of those kids. Sailing helped many of them get into other career options as well."

Many of Balcirak's students are now trying to beat him as crew members in the Mackinac fleet.

"Being a teacher and educator, you try to impart all the knowledge you can, but you have mixed emotions when the guy you taught how to sail beats you in a race," Balcirak said with a smile.

Balcirak has sailed in more than 30 Mackinac races and has no intention of quitting anytime soon.

"As long as the kids keep coming back, I'll probably keep coming back until I can't walk around on the boat anymore," he said. "I'm always looking forward to the next challenge."

One of the biggest challenges for Balcirak was the 1985 race — his first with Sea Fever.

That was a real gear buster. * Balcirak said. High winds ripped the main sail during the night.

"It was a clean cut from the leech up to the mast," Balcirak said. "My oldest son and one of his friends spent six or seven hours in the cabin in very rough sea, trying to sew up this sail so we could use it again. They got sick in the process, but they never quit. They'd come up for air and then go back down to continue hand-sewing the sail."

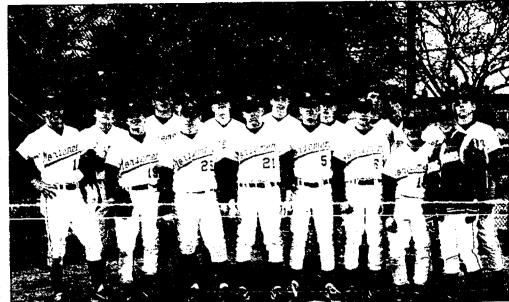

Balcirak figured this was one race that had to be written off as a disaster.

We thought we were dead last because we didn't hear any boats reporting in," he said. Then we heard one report that was in our class. It was a bigger boat and very well sailed. We looked at our watches and saw on a corrected time basis he would have had to beat us by 20 minutes or so - that it was close enough that we might still have a shot at it. It rejuvenated everybody. They got the sail finished, we put it back on the boat and sailed like crazy to the finish line. We ended up missing first place by about 30 seconds.

Balcirak said he was surprised to see very few boats in the harbor when they arrived and it wasn't until then he learned that a third of the fleet because of the rough water.

"That race tested everybody," he said. "We did very well under adverse conditions. We were sailing just under a jib. If we'd have had the main, we might have won that race. But the winner sailed a very good race, so I don't feel bad that we didn't win."

Bigham batted .459 and led the Norsemen in at bats (85), hits (39), RBI (33), doubles (8), home runs (6) and fewest strikeouts (1).
