Limits at fishing rodeo

Shelby Schroeder shows off a big perch she caught during the 50th Annual Family Fishing Rodeo at the Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park last Saturday.

About 460 kids and 370 adults took part in the oldest children-oriented event in the Pointes.

"Every kid won a prize. We gave away tons of fishing reels, nets and sport watches," said general chairman Dick Graves Jr., who has already started preparing for next year's rodeo. "If you have a year to plan, you can get some great gifts."

In an adult raffle, parents won color TVs, VCRs and radios donated by local businesses. Graves, owner of the park concession stand, served more than 1,600 free breakfasts and lunches during the event.

Pointe voters win some, lose some

Democratic gubernatorial nominee Geoffrey Fieger owes nothing to Grosse Pointe for his victory in last week's Michigan primary election.

The feisty attorney may be ready to rumble, but local election results show that most Pointe voters wish he'd throw in the towel to Republican incumbent Gov. John Engler.

As shown in the accompanying chart, Fieger landed dead last in the community among serious contenders for the state's top job and was beaten handily in the conservative district by Engler.

On the other hand, Pointe voters contributed significantly to the renomination of Democrat Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara, who overwhelmed second place challenger Sharon McPhail by 7-to-1 in the Pointes, well above the county ratio of 2-1.

Republican candidate Edward Romanowski beat rival Herbert Scott for Wayne executive.

Closer to home, incumbent Wayne County Commissioner Christopher Cavanagh, a resident of Grosse Pointe Farms, beat his Democratic opponent, Republican Mary Ellen Stempfle won her party's nomination unopposed.

Former county commissioner and now state Rep. Andrew Richner, an unopposed Republican, will face

Shores cell tower ordinance up for review by public

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Residents who attend next Monday's public hearing in Grosse Pointe Shores regarding cellular communication towers will consider a proposed ordinance regulating the often controversial but increasingly common structures.

The ordinance will give the Shores "maximum control over the imposition of reasonable conditions" for the construction of cell towers, according to a draft of the document written by Ralph Houghton, council for the Shores.

The measure will also "prevent the haphazard development of commercial towers" and prohibit citizens from granting "permission to a (cellular) provider to erect towers on residential lots," he wrote.

Although the Shores is batten down restrictions on cell towers, the Federal Telecommunications Act of 1996 prohibits outright bans on communication sites. All the Shores can do is make sure residents are protected from the "potential adverse impact of towers and antennas, prohibit location of towers in residential areas, and minimize the number of towers in the community," according to the draft.

Other aspects of the ordinance include joint use, or "collocation," of existing antennas and prominent buildings rather than the construction of additional towers. Cell towers are already in use at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, which trustee Dr. Richard Mertz Jr. said might be a good site if the Shores is faced with another application.

"(A tower at) the end of the breakwall would be a benign location that could double as a navigation aid," said Mertz.

According to the ordinance, anyone who wants to build a tower will have to participate in an approval process involving the building department, city manager, planning commission, village trustees and the public.

If plans are approved, the applicant will post a bond to pay for the structure's removal when it's no longer in use. Shores officials can condemn the structure if they determine it has become obsolete by new, reasonably priced technology.

Although the debate was sparked last winter by a request from AT&T to build a communications tower on municipal property, the new ordinance will go beyond the initial concern to include "all structures and accessory facilities relating to the use of the radio spectrum for the purpose of transmitting or receiving radio signals."

Ralph Houghton
Shores attorney

The ordinance will regulate radio and TV towers, and commercial mobile radio service facilities. It will include lattice towers, poles or guyed towers that "appear to be something other than a mere support structure," according to the draft.

Unobtrusiveness is a key aspect of the regulations. The maximum height of towers will be restricted to the minimum height required for them to function properly. Accessory buildings will be "no larger than necessary to accommodate the equipment," said the draft.

After the close of Monday's public hearing, the Shores Planning Commission, headed by Mary Matuja, will consider passage or modification of the proposed ordinance. The matter will then move to the village council for possible approval at its meeting Aug. 18. If passed, it will go into effect within 15 days. Until then, a moratorium on the construction of cell towers will stay in force.

Although the ordinance won't allow the Shores to prohibit the construction of new cell towers, Houghton said that without the legislation, "We're vulnerable to just about anything."

The public hearing takes place Monday, Aug. 17, at 8 a.m. in the council chambers of the Shores Village Hall on the corner of Lakeshore and Vernier.

■ A threatened protest against one-way traffic on Whittier from Jefferson to Mack anticipated to occur during the Grosse Pointe Park council meeting turned out to be a dud. This picture was taken from the end of the mole which has been constructed to keep pollution from collecting in the basin. ## Phone frauds strike the elderly in Grosse Pointe Park

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods detective Lt. Dave Hiller said that people would do well to remember the old saying, "let the buyer beware."

"I've just been in touch with the FBI about a case of telephone fraud," said Hiller. "An 86-year-old Park woman was contacted by telephone. She was told that she won $21,000 in a California-based sweepstakes. But she was told that in order to collect her prize, she had to send the company a check for $4,100 to take care of California taxes. If she didn't she would be held liable and would have to come to California to defend herself."

The victim was given a call-back number and a name to ask for, said Hiller. In a humorous vein, that name was Lucard, or Dravula spelled backwards.

"The victim was told to send a money-order, not a check," said Hiller. "People can stop the payments of checks, plus someone has to sign for them and they are returned to the bank. The victim was also told that if she sent the $4,100, she would be exempt from future tax liabilities and would be automatically entered in future contests."

Hiller warned that Grosse Pointers are targeted by con men who use mail order and telephone cons. "The 48230 and 48236 zip codes are seen as high-income," Hiller said. "These operators get what is called a 'tap' list with the names, addresses and telephone numbers of Grosse Pointers. These lists are generated by a variety of methods."

For example, said Hiller, if you're at the local mall and fill out a slip to win a car, your name can be placed on a tap list and sold. A lot of legitimate companies purchase these lists, but they can also be sold to unscrupulous operators.

"If you are the winner of a legitimate contest, then chances are you're not going to be contacted by telephone," said Hiller. "A registered letter is probably how you will be notified. I can tell you that if you win, you won't have to pay any money to get your money."

The victim told Hiller that she grew up in the Depression and that people didn't do things like that back then and that people trusted each other.

"Con artists know about that mentality," said Hiller. "That's why they often target the elderly. We know that this kind of thing goes on, but we're afraid that people are too embarrassed to report it to us. Don't be embarrassed, call your local police. We may not get your money back, but we may prevent someone else from becoming a victim."

Products protect basements from sewer system backups

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Weather-wise, the Pointes have dodged a number of bullets this summer.

Mother Nature has fired broadsides at our community that have fallen either short or wide. The big storm a few weeks ago clipped the north end of town, downing trees and electrical wires that cut power and led to a couple of house fires. Yet, overall damage was nothing compared to last summer, when straight line winds devastated parts of the Farms, City and Park.

Two weeks ago, heavy rains inundated much of Oakland and western Wayne counties. Flooded streets and basements virtually wrote their own news reports.

Last Sunday, it was Macomb County's turn to be dunked by heavy squalls. Again, there were reports of sewer water backing up and flooded basements.

Through all of this, Grosse Pointe got off relatively easy, including the drenching last Monday that knocked out power to sections of the Village.

Basement flooding in the Pointes is expected to become less common now that the community is gung-ho about sewer separation.

Recent storms may have downed tree limbs and power lines in the Pointes, but between luck and millions of dollars in sewer separations there weren't many flooded basements reported to city officials. In Grosse Pointe Shores, where separation is being followed by the disconnection of downspouts, there wasn't one case of sewer water flooding a basement, said Brett Smith, head of the Shores' department of public works.

"Separation has reduced the strain on sewers during storms so there isn't as much back-up of water into homes," said Smith.

But for residents wanting to be extra careful, Tony Neme has a last line of defense.

Neme, manager of the family-owned Lochmoor Ace Hardware on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods, said easy-to-use products are available that homeowners can use to protect their basements from being ruined by floodwater.

"Flood-Guard can be literally dropped into each sewer opening to keep water from backing up," said Neme. Compared to other methods of protection, "it's a no-brainer. You just unscrew the drain cover, pop in Flood-Guard, put the cover back on and forget about it," he said.

The product comes in various sizes and consists of a little rubber float hanging from a sturdy metal frame that fits into a basement drain opening. When water starts to back up, the float is pushed up into the frame and cuts off the flow of water into the basement. The basement stays dry and up to thousands of dollars of flood damage is prevented.

Neme told about a Grosse Pointe homeowner whose unprotected basement flooded shortly after being renovated. "There was $20,000 in damage," said Neme.

Tony Neme, manager of Lochmoor Ace Hardware in Grosse Pointe Woods, demonstrates how a PVC pipe can be fitted to an adapter, which is then inserted into a basement drain opening. By rigging an upright pipe to a basement drain, homes can be protected from backed up sewer water during heavy rains, said Neme.

Woods plans major late-summer road repairs

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods residents along Clairview Court will have to prepare to endure the inconvenience of having their streets dug up. That's the downside. But when the work is done, they will have repaved streets without potholes. That's the upside.

Director of public works Tom Whitcher said that the city will be replacing and repaving Clairview Court at the beginning of September. The street is in bad shape and there will be a complete removal of the top layer of asphalt as well as the concrete base.

Once that's done, a new concrete street will be laid down, Whitcher said. The street is horseshoe-shaped and is over 1,500 feet long. The entire construction project should take up to three months to finish.

"We want to get this project done before the end of the construction season," Whitcher said. "So next year we can begin repairing Torrey Road. During construction, residents will have access to their homes. Right now we don't know if we are going to do one side of the street at a time, or repair half of the 'horseshoe' at once and have residents park on the other half. Either way is viable, but we haven't picked which one we will use yet."

While his department will do every thing possible to allow residents access to their homes via cars, there will be times, depending on the location of a particular house, when residents will be blocked from getting to their houses.

"There will come a time when construction will be directly in front of your driveway," said Whitcher. "That's unavoidable in construction like this. But we promise that trash pickup will remain on schedule. If you take your trash out to the curb, we will pick it up, barring some unforeseen circumstance."

City officials will be at the Woods Community Center at 7:45 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 25, to answer any questions about construction and to inform interested residents about what will happen.

"There's no way that this won't inconvenience people who live on the street," said Whitcher. "But if you are going to repair streets, there will be inconvenience. The best that we can do is to get the job done as quickly as possible."

Democratic candidate John Patrick Anderson in November.

Incumbent State Sen. Joe Young Jr., a Democrat, won his party's nomination while Republican contender Frank Palazzolo ran without competition.

Republicans showed strongly in the Pointe's two Congressional districts, with Vendella Collins and Chrysanthea Boyd-Fields winning the 14th and 15th districts, respectively. But looming on the horizon in November are heavyweight Democratic incumbents John Conyers Jr. and Carolyn Cheeks Kilpatrick, both of Detroit, who earned thousands more votes district wide than the Republican hopefuls.

In the race for the Court of Appeals, 2nd District, in which the top four candidates advance to the November election, Helene White, Myron Wahls Jr., Susan Bieke Nelson and Daniel Ryan won the Pointes, while Nelson was bumped from overall contention by Helen Brown.

As for judges for the Wayne County Circuit Court, three of the Pointe's four top vote getters will continue to the general election. Brian Sullivan, Patricia Susan Fresard and Jane Gillis won the district along with Gary Edward Gardner. Local winner Muriel Diane Hughes was left behind.

Pointe voters contributed to the passage of all three ballot proposals, including funding for SMART bus service and a measure requiring 60 percent voter approval to raise the county millage.

As for voter turnout, Grosse Pointe Woods led the Pointes at 26.2 percent, while the community averaged 24.3 percent.

New War Memorial director of lifelong learning gears up for fall

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Anyone looking for something to do should talk to Maria Esposito.

She has a list of more than 5,000 things going on in Grosse Pointe that involve more than 200,000 people annually.

From learning swing dancing, a modern version of Big Band dancing that Esposito said is "hugely popular these days," to arranging a tour of Beijing and the Great Wall of China, Esposito is at the heart of most of what takes place in the Pointes.

She's the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's new director of lifelong learning, a job formerly called the program director.

The new title better describes the War Memorial's role in providing cutting edge continuing education and enrichment activities, she said.

As a major in English communications at Allentown College of St. Francis de Sales, Esposito studied Chaucer and, especially, Milton. "The depth of Milton's writing is immeasurable," she said.

But unlike the weighty meter of Milton's call to duty, "They also serve who only stand and wait," Esposito has a promoter's energy and drive.

"My job in Grosse Pointe is more than I expected and better than I hoped," she said, referring to all the events involving the War Memorial. Organizing that kind of schedule doesn't leave much time for passive reflection.

These days, Esposito and the War Memorial are gearing up for big events next month.

Family Fun Day, on Saturday, Sept. 27, is "a huge event that involves 2,000 people, a giant inflatable slide, midway games and a youth swap meet where kids can trade or sell their usable toys," she said.

There's non-contact kick boxing for kids and adults, educational wine tasting classes, a home furniture workshop "for every weekend home warrior," and more, she said.

"Don't forget the garden party on Sept. 6," she said.

The outdoor party on the back lawn of the War Memorial melds, music, munchies and friends among the landscaping of the lakefront Italian Renaissance mansion built for the Russell A. Alger Jr. family in 1910.

The engine driving all this activity is fueled by a desire "to do something that I haven't done before. I love being part of implementing change," she said.

Esposito is from Old Forge, a little town in eastern Pennsylvania that, like most little towns in that part of the county, lives and breathes our country's colonial history and tight sense of community.

After college, she took a job as a news assistant at the Morning Call, a daily newspaper in Allentown. The industrial center located across the Lehigh River from the steel mills of Bethlehem is nothing like its rust-belt reputation, she said.

She should know. After five years working on the paper, she became a staff executive with the Allentown-Lehigh Chamber of Commerce.

"I was on the good-guy side of business," she said.

When she moved to Grosse Pointe a few years ago with her husband, Daniel Fricker, the Detroit Free Press economic development writer, she got a job as CEO of the chamber of commerce in Farmington-Farmington Hills. That, ironically, was when she became involved with the War Memorial.

"Frankly, I didn't want to be in Michigan. I didn't know anybody. I left a great life in east-

POINTER OF INTEREST

Maria Esposito, director of lifelong learning at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, takes a morning break among the black-eyed Susans in the front courtyard of the former Italian Renaissance mansion built in 1910 for the family of Russell A. Alger Jr. The bronze statue of a quintet of musical nymphs is on loan to the Memorial and is one of many art treasures dotting the community facility.

War Memorial had caught her in its lariat, but it would take a couple of years to rope her in. In the meantime, she was part of the mad dash across I-696, driving back and forth to work in Farmington, while her free time was spent taking part in events with friends at the War Memorial.

"The first community event I went to in the Pointes was a 'Taste of the Hop at the War Memorial,' a taste-tour of local micro breweries. Soon after, she began volunteering at the center. "You could say the Memorial had planted a seed in me," she said.

She never considered doing anything but volunteering at the War Memorial until she was told that Denler's job was available.

"I really believed in the Memorial's mission of providing educational, cultural and patriotic programs that enrich the lives of people in the community," she said.

During her interview with Mark Weber, president of the War Memorial, Esposito thought to herself, "I really want this job."

She hit it off with everyone. "We were all on the same page," she said. "The interviews were an energizing experience. It was a perfect opportunity for me to be productive in my own community, which is equally as important as a paycheck."

She got the job.

Among the large living rooms, paneled library, sun porch and basement billiard lounge of the former Alger estate, "The Moorings," Esposito's office is upstairs in a small sliver of a high-walled, newly wallpapered enclave that is entered through a heavy wooden door and overlooks the lake and former back yard bowling green through a large, single window.

Two doors down the hallway in a former corner bedroom, complete with fireplace, the Grosse Pointe Garden Center's green and white headquarters contains bookshelves filled with enough reference material to get to the root of any horticultural mystery. It's open to residents of the Pointes.

At the other end of the hall, through a few doors and down a couple of flights of curiously placed but ultimately symbolic steps that don't seem necessary, Weber sits humbly in the president's office, the former bedroom of the Alger family governess. The irony is a source of amusement to Weber and the War Memorial staff.

The servant quarters of the home were built a few steps lower than the family living area, a gentle reminder of who was in charge, and who wasn't.

By that measure, Esposito's digs in the former children's bathroom are palatial.

It doesn't matter, Esposito said she works at the center of "the jewel of Grosse Pointe."

Superpower status doesn't protect U.S.

The fact that the United States is now the only superpower on the globe does not protect this country from international terrorists, but, instead, appears to attract them.

The Oklahoma City bombing also taught Americans that we also grow some of our own terrorists. In fact, a photo of one of the sites of the African bombings looked like the Oklahoma City Federal Building after that terrible blast.

The bombings at the U.S. embassies in Africa have cost the lives of at least 12 Americans, but many hundreds of Africans. Some worked for the embassies, but more victims were passing pedestrians or bus passengers not connected to the embassies.

Thomas L. Friedman, a native Minnesotan who is the New York Times foreign affairs expert, offered suggested motives for the bombings of U.S. embassies in Nairobi and Dar es Salaam in an Aug. 8 column.

"There are more than a few Ramzi Yousefs out there," the Times man wrote. (Ramzi Yousef is the head of the gang that pulled off the 1993 attack on the World Trade Center in Manhattan that killed six people and injured more than 1,000.)

"They hate America because it is the most powerful country in the world, because they feel it throws its economic weight around with great arrogance, and because its cultural exports uproot their traditional societies.

"They use the best of today's modern techniques for the most evil of deeds. One reason Ramzi Yousef was caught was because police found his Toshiba laptop computer in his Manila apartment where all his plots were filed on the hard drive."

As for Friedman's conclusions, one was that "the United States pays a price for letting things like the Khobar Towers bombing go without retaliation."

That was the U.S. military apartment building in Saudi Arabia where a huge truck bomb exploded on June 25, 1996, killing 19 Americans.

The Saudis never have turned over all the evidence because some of it reveals links to Iran, the Times man said. And that kind of reaction, the Times found in a review of terrorist attacks, is often the case in U.S. investigations into such attacks.

The local governments, friendly as they may be to the United States and its interests, are fearful of retaliation from the local area terrorist leaders.

But the U.S. role in the world merits stronger protection of our embassies and their personnel.

In fact, it appears that the Clinton administration and the GOP Congress were jointly at fault for not pushing hard enough for more funds to upgrade the protection at all our foreign embassies.

But if the local governments often do not cooperate in helping protect embassies from attack, how can the U.S. government retaliate without itself losing its friends and allies?

It won't be easy, as Tom Friedman wrote. But, he contended, "when people think they can attack the United States with impunity, they will be tempted to try again."

But if the United States is compelled to retaliate, he added, "the Monica Lewinsky affair can only complicate matters."

"Every foreign or domestic actor will claim that President Clinton is only acting to distract attention from his embarrassing entanglements, and that will make building diplomatic support more difficult."

All of these comments indicate that foreign and domestic problems often are interrelated. Excessive consideration for domestic problems often leaves this nation open to foreign affairs mistakes.

Can a Fieger change stripes?

Geoffrey Fieger probably has little chance of attracting any more votes in November from the Pointes, one of the state's GOP strongholds, than he did in last week's primary.

In the Pointes, he ran third behind his two Democratic competitors, but did well enough elsewhere, and especially in Detroit, to win his party's nomination.

If he simply continues his noisy and abusive campaign against Gov. John Engler, he may attract no greater percentage in the fall than he received in his narrow victory in the Democratic primary.

But if he were able to put together a constructive campaign based on proposals to ameliorate some of the state's major problems, he might be able to carry on a legitimate campaign for governor in the fall.

In fact, his backers contend that Fieger rarely got coverage of the serious issues he did discuss in the primary campaign. From our review of his material, we find some merit in the criticism that the media overexposed Fieger's pot shots at Engler.

Yet the conventional wisdom may be correct in this instance when it indicates that "a Fieger can't change his stripes."

And it is probably true that even if he does shift to a more conventional discussion of the real issues in Michigan, he would be an unlikely victor in November.

great campaign to explain the state's policies and programs was necessary.

Yet in the Grosse Pointe school district, for example, one problem is the future of the public school system. Since the approval of Proposal A, the amount of funds available to the local public school system is now set by state fiat.

In fact, 71.7 percent of the funding for our public schools now is determined in Lansing by the Proposal A formula and the laws enacted to carry it out.

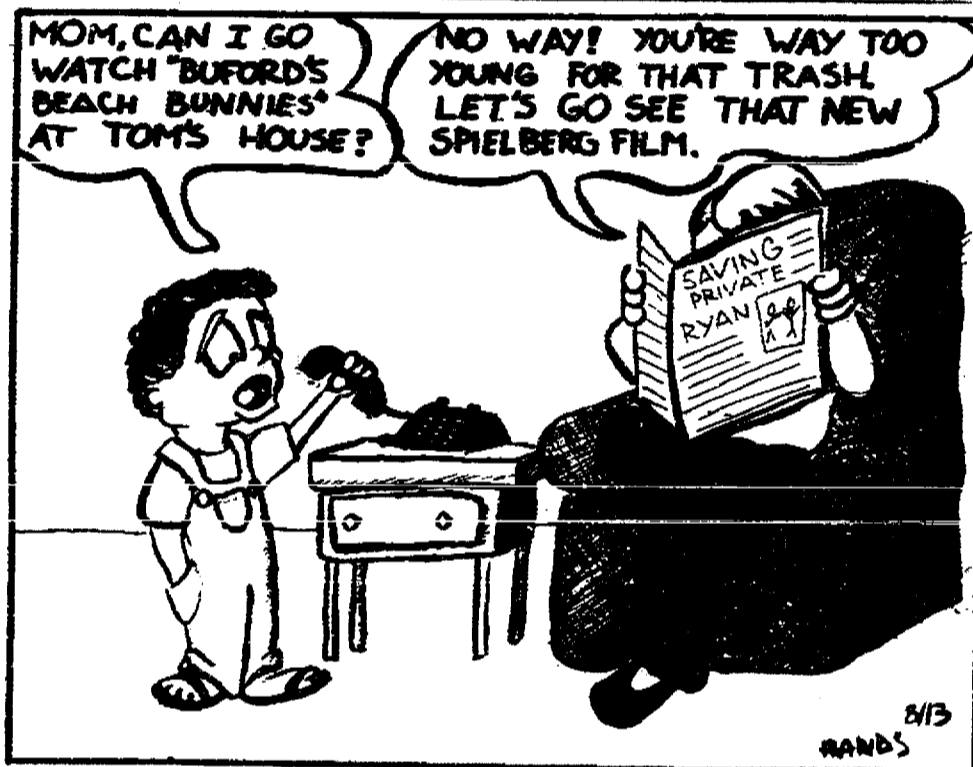

If Fieger proposed constructive solutions to the problems encountered by excellent schools such as those in Grosse Pointe, and others in need of help, it could serve as one plank in a meaningful platform.

Another plank could come from proposals to improve the state's conservation programs and practices which currently do not meet the approval of strong environmentalists in Michigan. Such reforms were seldom mentioned in coverage of Fieger's campaign.

And surely some reduction of state taxes, and especially for those in lower income categories, ought to be another part of such a program in view of the increasingly regressive effects of recent tax trims.

We suspect much of what we have suggested above is wishful thinking. Now if Fieger could broaden his appeal, and wage a constructive campaign with specific remedies for problems, he could serve the interests of all the people of this state.

He might even begin a political career with some promise if he lost after shifting his political gears in the directions we have suggested for the campaign ahead.

Yet, he could be doing a service to the state's voters by helping conduct a meaningful dialogue about the state's problems.

The opposition to Engler in the GOP primary was exceedingly weak, so the governor's team obviously felt that no

As Clinton faces grand jury

Everyone in Washington appears to be expressing an opinion about what President Clinton should do or not do when he testifies on Aug. 17 before a grand jury investigating his relationship with Monica Lewinsky.

After Aug. 2 talk shows offered the opinions of present and former White House officials, representatives of both political parties and newsmen who aired their own prejudices, there was obviously no agreement on what the president should do or say.

The talk shows on Aug. 9 were but a repeat performance of the previous week. And, as usual, the news magazines offered their own versions of what was going to occur.

Critics tended to accept leaks from unknown sources and rumors as facts, and called on the president finally to tell the truth about his relationship with the former intern.

Friends and supporters of the president in general said they thought he should stick with his testimony that he had had no sexual relationship with Lewinsky.

Whatever the prosecutors are doing with a dress that Lewinsky turned over to prosecutors, we abhor the publicity that this kind of so-called Washington news gives to things that should be personal matters.

We think the Washington news media are being used by both sides. And it is disappointing to see the latest leaks and rumors reported at length in even such responsible papers as the New York Times and the Washington Post.

And we don't think much of the latest GOP technique of suggesting that the president bare his soul, admit he had lied but seek the forgiveness of the American public.

If the president insisted on his innocence, what would these critics then do? They no doubt would seek to start an impeachment inquiry because he had supposedly lied.

We don't know whether the president lied or not. But we do know that the president as well as his wife are still entitled to be considered innocent until proven guilty, just like any private citizen.

But if he did lie, and that can be proven, we still think he ought to resign. Yet the GOP doesn't like that idea either, because it would put Vice President Gore into the White House.

Frankly, we don't think that is going to happen in just this way, but the possibility of an impeachment trial obviously does hang over Clinton's head.

Assumption meets need

To the Editor:
 I would like to add Assumption Cultural Center to Mr. (Jack) Sullivan's recently published list of area businesses that accommodated Grosse Pointe Yacht Club patrons during the July 23 power outage.

When the Grosse Pointe Shores Swim Team learned it would be impossible to hold our annual Swim Team Banquet at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, swim team parents contacted Assumption. With only a few hours' notice, Assumption put together a beautiful banquet for the swimmers and their families. The catering staff was extremely accommodating, and the results of their efforts were appreciated by all who attended the banquet.

Services for Older Citizens (SOC) is housed within this facility (on a month to month basis). # Europe — it's really there

My seventh-grade English teacher, Roger McCaig liked to challenge students to think for themselves. He said we shouldn't accept things at face value; we should ask questions; we should seek truth. He asked how many of us had been to Europe.

Practically nobody. Then he asked how we knew that Europe existed. Perhaps, he suggested, the whole concept of an overseas continent was pure fiction.

What if a world-wide conspiracy had been created especially for our class — a few dozen lowly, gullible, day-dreaming 12-year-olds — and had been designed to fool us into believing something that was blatantly false.

Some day, somebody would eventually tell us the truth. "Ha ha. Fooled you. It's all a joke. The globe is only half as big as we told you it was. There's no England, no Spain, no Portugal, France or Germany. All that historical stuff you memorized was pure fabrication. You fell for it, you dummies. You're such gullible sheep."

Mr. McCaig was making a point about the nature of propaganda. This was in the '50s, after all — the United States was smack in the middle of a cold war.

What if all our reading materials had been preselected, screened, invented, doctored up, he said. It could all be propaganda. How would we know? All that stuff about the Crusades and the Spanish Armada and King Henry VIII's wives and the French Revolution, even the details of two global wars could be pure fiction.

How would we, mere pre-teenagers, know?

Mr. McCaig posed this question 40 years before the making of a recent movie, "The Truman Show," in which the main character Jim Carrey, unknowingly stars in a real time television show. Carrey (a.k.a. Truman) doesn't know that his whole life is scripted, prefab, fake, set up, contrived. He's the only one in the world who isn't in on the joke.

Margie Reins Smith

Anyway, ever since seventh grade, I've never been completely sure Europe is really there because I hadn't seen it first-hand.

Well, now I have. And I waited too long.

It's real. And it's spectacular.

OK, I visited just two countries — France and England.

But they're wonderful and, by extrapolation, I know the rest is real. I intend to explore it, too.

All the history classes I've taken, all the historical novels I've read, all the period movies I've seen, and all the videos, TV programs, music, art, photography, stories and articles I've consumed lived in my imagination. I conjured up the sights, sounds, smells, feels and tastes of Europe.

Now I've seen first-hand the rough-hewn walls, towers, turrets and ramparts of a medieval castle. I've wandered through the parlours, chambers, library and beer cellar of a restored English country house. I've seen the remains of the mosaic floors in a Roman villa that was built in the second century A.D.

Am I starting to sound sophisticated yet?

I've strolled through Claude Monet's garden and walked over his well-examined Oriental bridge. With my own fingers, I've traced names on gravestones of people who lived in the 15th century. I ambled down the Champs-Elysees, climbed the endless circular stairway in the Arch de Triomphe, gazed up at the gargoyles perched on the ledges of the cathedrals of Notre Dame and Chartres.

I've sipped wine at outdoor Parisian cafes, motored down the Seine on a rainy evening. I saw the dazzling beveled glass and cut crystal in Versailles' Hall of Mirrors.

I saw Mona Lisa and she's bigger than I thought. Most accounts emphasize how small the famous Da Vinci painting is — so I had imagined it was the size of a three-by-five index card. I witnessed the changing of the guard (which was underwhelming) and toured Winston Churchill's underground cabinet war rooms (which was overwhelming). I saw the house where Shakespeare was born and walked through Ann Hathaway's cottage and garden. I touched a thatched roof and I learned that each thatcher has his own signature design to identify his work.

I took photos of the ravens that patrol the Tower of London. They have names — Cedric, for instance, and Thor and Gwylum. I've danced through fields stocked with picturesque Cotswold sheep, marked by hedgerows, dotted with stiles and brooks and wooden footbridges. I've marveled at acres and acres of bright blue flowers that from afar looked like small inland lakes.

It's there. It really is.

Mr. McCaig: You made Europe more spectacular than it ever was in print or on film. I'm sure of it. Thanks.

Glee club ends on generous note

"Years ago we toured the country," says the Park's Kurt F. Hartlieb, who recalls performing in San Francisco with the German-American Concordia Singing Society. Back in the '30s, they appeared at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club on a bill that included the Viennese Boys' Choir.

Old-timers may recall some of the other Pointe members: Alfonso (Al) Limberg, of the City, and A.C. Lang and John T. Miller, of the Park.

The group was founded 133 years ago by returning Union Army veterans of the Civil War to promote German culture and music. "We were probably the oldest glee club in Michigan. We had about 300 members in 1961," says Kurt, whose vigorous voice hardly sounds like he's 83. "Now, they're (mostly) gone."

When the Concordia singers stopped singing, Kurt, who was president for 41 years, was faced with a problem: What to do with all the funds in the society's coffers?

Some was from dues, but most was from investments, and it was approaching a quarter-million dollars. "I worked pretty hard in the stock market over the years," he explains. The solution came after a board was formed from members of the German-American community.

"I wanted to help international relations in some small way," Kurt says. "So we (four of the six remaining members) decided to change to a foundation and donate the money to a scholarship endowment fund."

On June 20, at the Lochmoor Club, Kurt handed over shares worth some $215,600 to the Wayne State University Department of German & Slavic Studies, to be used for the University's Junior Year in Munich program which allows young people to study in Germany.

"The remaining members are not wealthy men," says Kurt. "I think it's a generous gesture on their part."

The art of golf statesmanship

Pointe ex-pat A. Scott Bodeau, who now takes mail as Chief Deputy Attorney General of the State of Nevada (Gaming Division) makes note that his dad, Art Bodeau (who, with wife Jane, is a Country Club of Detroit member), has just completed a gaming record of his own. "My father recently fulfilled a lifelong goal of playing golf

Where does his garden grow?

For those looking for "Bob's Garden" on "Waterloo at St. Clair," mentioned here a few columns back (and not finding it): The fabulous foliage of Bob and Emilie Marshall is actually on Charlevoix, not Waterloo. Now FYI knows what Napoleon felt like.

Shhhh — it's an art exhibit

If you blink, you'll miss it — and next week, it'll be gone. It's the "secret" art show of 25 water colors by students of Woods artist Nancy Patek, at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House Activities Center.

Advertisement for the show? This may be it right here: 25 paintings of scenes from around the fabled estate, including flowers, trees, and the great house itself, or details from parts thereof such as gates, doors and leaded-glass windows.

The list of local artists includes Beverly Remus, Pat Pawsat, Helen Roarty, Ann and Joan Howard, Kay Gee, Nadia Stratelak, Gloria Bertallini, Dan Lew, Agnes

They'd be good cat burglars

The Fourth of July was Independence Day for a couple of Pointe cats, FYI has learned. One cat was turned in to City police by a resident who had found it wandering around St. Clair, a few days earlier. Shortly after arriving at the station, the little vagrant "became loose and unable to be found," according to reports.

The other was reported running free in a yard on Hampton in the Shores. It was taken by police to the department of public works garage to be fed and watered, and 15 minutes later it kind of vanished into the woodwork.

The owner, located by tag numbers, finally arrived and was able to coax it out of hiding. The escape artist's name? "Ninja."

Power shortage preventable

By Julie Metty

Michigan is facing a crisis, and conservationists are saying, "I told you so!"

The crisis is that power producers are not able to provide enough power to meet customers' needs. Many Detroit Edison customers had their power interrupted as a result of shortages last summer. Now the Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) predicts this problem will occur again because Detroit Edison does not have the ability to generate enough power to meet its customers' needs.

Power shortages were never a threat for Michigan in the past because, beginning with Gov. Milliken in the 1970s and continuing through the mid-1990s, Michigan policy-makers strongly supported utility-based energy efficiency programs to help meet customer demand, distinguishing our state nationwide as a leader in energy conservation.

The state mandated several demand-side management (DSM) programs during that period, requiring utility companies to increase energy conservation programs for homes and businesses. These programs included energy audits of buildings, information campaigns, educational training for builders and contractors and cash rebates and/or low interest loans for the purchase of energy-efficient lighting, appliances and equipment.

DSM reached its high point in the early 1990s. Utility companies were offering a wide array of programs that benefited consumers and the environment. For example, Consumers Energy was spending about $5 million per month on programs intended to help its customers save electricity. Evaluation reports of Detroit Edison's 1994-95 DSM programs indicated they were the cheapest way to meet electricity needs. It cost less money to save energy using these programs than to build new power plants or operate existing ones.

Also, the environmental benefit energy conservation provides is extremely important because of the damage electricity production causes. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has determined that the electric utility industry is the largest single source of harmful air pollution in the country. Coal-fired power plants are the largest source of mercury air pollution in the United States as well. Since 1988, fish consumption advisories have been issued for all of Michigan's 11,000 inland lakes as a result of mercury-contaminated fish.

One study estimated that Detroit Edison's 1994-95 DSM programs reduced air pollution emissions by 1.37 million tons of carbon dioxide, 11,800 tons of sulfur dioxide, 4,000 tons of nitrogen oxides and 83.9 pounds of mercury. The result was less mercury exposure to our fish and wildlife, a decrease in ozone smog components, fewer incidences of asthma attacks and other respiratory diseases, and reduced greenhouse gas emissions.

DSM also lowered electricity bills. Two independent surveys done in 1996 documented overwhelming support for energy efficiency among residential and business customers. Also, almost all customers who participated in Detroit Edison's 1994-95 Low Income DSM program reported it improved their ability to control their electric bill and a large majority reported they were saving money as a result.

Despite all these benefits, by 1997, there were no utility-operated energy conservation programs left in the state, leaving Michigan far behind most other states in this regard. The power companies sought the dismantling of DSM from Gov. John Engler as part of moves toward deregulating the electricity industry. At the urging of his Michigan Jobs Commission, the Michigan Public Service Commission issued an order in 1996 allowing the utilities to reduce program costs to zero and suspend future DSM plans.

As a result, Michigan utilities are increasingly unable to provide enough electric power to meet their customers' needs. Instead of taking advantage of the potential of energy efficiency to solve this problem, Detroit Edison proposed to restart its 50-year-old coal-burning power plant that has been out of operation for a decade and has not been modified for pollution control since 1978. If Detroit Edison had continued to operate and expand energy conservation programs, as recommended by MPSC staff in the mid-1990s, there would currently be no need to invest money into restarting this poorly controlled moth-balled power plant.

Those who fought to preserve DSM programs are left saying, "I told you so," and hoping that the power shortage crisis will spur the state to renew its commitment to energy conservation. The state of Michigan is currently in the process of restructuring the electric utility market for open competition, but there is no mention of energy conservation or energy efficiency programs in these plans. This is in stark contrast to other states tackling this issue, virtually all of which are including specific mechanisms to fund energy conservation. When will we learn?

Woodward Dream Cruise — it's legal this time

"Come out to 13 Mile and Woodward Thursday night if you want to see some awesome cars before the crowds get too heavy," advised Don Morten, Grosse Ile hot rod owner.

The event, of course, is the fourth annual Woodward Dream Cruise, Saturday, Aug. 15. It began four years ago as an unorganized — in fact, quite disorganized — call for cruisers to relive the happy days of the '50s and '60s by cruisin' North Woodward in their hot rods, street rods, special interest cars, classics or whatever.

The first cruise was an astonishing success. No one was quite ready for the enthusiastic hordes that showed up, but everyone was having a great time and behaving in an orderly and good-natured fashion.

You might expect that, since most of the rodders are now in their 50s and 60s — too mature for the kind of shenanigans that occurred back when they were young and wanted to test their machines in the informal but ritualized crucible of North Woodward.

A simple "wanna go?" would often lead to a tire-screaming

Autos

By Richard Wright

Incentive to travel the entire route to Pontiac is strong. In Pontiac, a display of more than 400 vehicles will take place in Phoenix Center. And for all you folks who really did cruise North Woodward in the '50s and '60s, there will be a nostalgic Ted's Drive-In display.

(The cruisin' drive-ins strip ran roughly from the Totem Pole near the Zoo in Royal Oak to Ted's, south of Pontiac, with several stops in between. They are just memories now.)

So pack up your most interesting vehicle and head out Woodward. Don't plan too much and don't worry at all. The worst that can happen is that you will get stuck in the most fascinating traffic jam you have ever seen.

As kind of a postlude to the Dream Cruise, there will be a carillon concert at 4 p.m. Sunday afternoon at Christ Church Cranbrook, Lone Pine and Cranbrook roads, part of the church's summer series of carillon recitals.

Playing some '50s rock 'n' roll and other cruisin' music on the church's magnificent bells will be Dennis Curry, a Ford Motor Co. engineer in real life, and Jenny King, a freelance automotive writer.

A couple of years ago, King organized a mini-concours for the post-Dream Cruise concert and it has become a very special event. So if you don't get enough cruisin' in Saturday — or you're curious as to what a carillon is — bring your special vehicle out Sunday to Christ Church Cranbrook, park it, show it off and enjoy the music.

Sales race heats up

It is a mark of how strong General Motors' sales dominance is that when Ford Motor Co. topped GM in sales of new cars and trucks in July it made headlines.

Since it was the first time Ford had beaten GM for a month since 1970, it was news. But the market structure is not written in stone and major changes have occurred in the past.

At one time, Ford Motor Co. had a stronger grip on the new-vehicle market than GM does now. On Oct. 1, 1908, Ford introduced the Model T. The Model T was produced with only minor changes for 19 years. When production ended in 1927, more than 15 million had been built. In some years, the Model T accounted for more than half of the cars sold in the United States.

GM had been running well behind Ford in sales during the Model T era, but had been slowly closing the gap. In 1924, GM accounted for about 19 percent of U.S. new-car sales, Ford for just over 50 percent. The next year, GM cut Ford's lead to 42-20, then the next year to 35-28.

When Chevrolet introduced a new model in 1925, it was competing with a Ford Model T so old in its design and so different from its contemporaries that some states required a special license to drive it. The handwriting was on the wall. The days of the rubber-burning race from a stoplight — quite illegal and not appreciated by the local residents. But Woodward was not as heavily populated then and, as I say, the cruisers are now driven by moms or dads or, more often, grandmas and grandpas. So now they are welcomed by the communities from Ferndale to Pontiac with an array of events.

If you get caught in a traffic jam at the Woodward Dream Cruise, it will be an interesting one, with vehicles such as this '49-'51-vintage Mercury.

In 1996, participants showed up in surprising numbers on Friday night, and the event became, by the will of the people, a de facto day-and-a-half event. Last year, the Friday night crowds were even greater and on Saturday the Dream Cruise became a traffic jam.

So if you are driving an oldie that may tend to over-heat, you will have to plan your route carefully. No one really knows how this year's cruise is going to unfold Saturday, but based on experience, it will be stop-and-go from around Marshall (about halfway between Eight and Nine Mile roads) in Ferndale to between Maple Road (15 Mile) and Big Beaver/Quarton (16 Mile).

The first event Saturday, heading north from Eight Mile, is the Ferndale Classic Car and Truck Show at Nine Mile. Some 800 entrants are expected, so you might want to park your car somewhere and walk to Woodward and Nine Mile. The show is an official judged affair, produced by the United Street Machine Association.

Parking is made available by merchants along Woodward through Pleasant Ridge, Huntington Woods, Royal Oak, Birmingham and Pontiac. But it's first-come-first-served, so get there early. Like Friday, maybe even Thursday.

Friday night, the official Woodward Dream Cruise Classic Car Parade will take place in Berkley. It will feature some 300 vehicles.

Many car clubs are planning displays in downtown Birmingham, where more than 600 collector vehicles are expected.

Autos

Model T, the most successful car in history up to that time, were numbered.

In 1927, Ford Motor Co. halted production of the Model T after more than 15 million had been built. Henry Ford went to work on a new car, the Model A.

Ford was out of production for much of 1927 while the Model A was being readied and GM beat it in sales for the first time.

The Model A was an overnight sensation and Ford recovered the lead in 1928. But GM passed Ford in sales in 1931 and Ford never regained the lead.

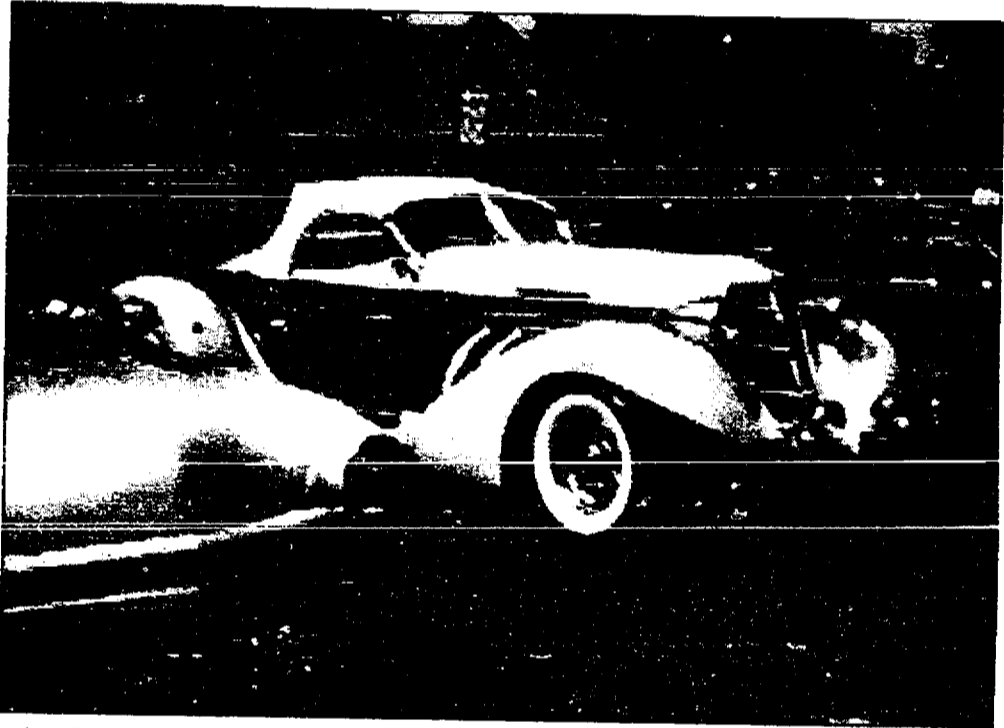

In 1932, Ford tried to stem the challenge of established GM and upstart Chrysler by introducing the first low-priced car powered by a V-8 engine. Ford sales improved, but GM was still No. 1.

In 1933, Chrysler Corp. also passed Ford in sales. A three-way sales race was on. In 1929, the year the stock market crash in October triggered the Great Depression, new-car sales in the United States totaled a then-record 5,848,937. They would not reach that level again for 20 years.

Chrysler held the No. 2 sales spot until the first new-model introductions after World War II, in the 1949 model year.

The '49 Ford was a sensation and the public was cool to Chrysler's more conservative offerings. Ford regained the second spot in 1950 and Chrysler was permanently No. 3.

Another traffic sight you're not likely to see elsewhere is this customized Ford and classic Auburn Speedster. In fact, the Auburn is a repicar, not a real Auburn. A real Auburn Speedster would be worth too much to take it out into traffic.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church in St. Clair Shores on Tuesday, July 28, for Grosse Pointe Shores resident John James Spath, who died of complications from brain cancer on Thursday, July 23, 1998.

Mr. Spath, 29, was born in Detroit and graduated from St. Joan of Arc grade school and Grosse Pointe North High School.

He attended Albion College and owned and operated his own lawn service.

An avid sportsman, Mr. Spath participated in the Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Little League, playing on teams that won three world series. He also played Babe Ruth baseball and Federation ball, as well as playing on North's 9th grade and junior varsity team.

In addition, Mr. Spath played football, basketball and baseball at St. Joan of Arc from the fifth through eighth grades. During his final year with the school's baseball team, he pitched all four play-off games and the championship game, which the team won, at the CYO city championships in 1992.

Mr. Spath also played in an AAU national tournament, hitting a 350-foot home run over a 10-foot tall fence against North Carolina's state champions. In 1996, he was awarded the Selfridge Air National Guard's Young Heroes award for honor and courage.

A collector of Star Wars paraphernalia, Mr. Spath also had a great love of music and was a member of the Grosse Pointe North Concert Choir. He also coached baseball and basketball at St. John of Arc. In 1997, along with his father and his brother, he took the baseball team to the CYO city finals, where they lost in the championship game. He also coached Little League and Babe Ruth.

Diagnosed with brain cancer in 1992, Mr. Spath had a great admiration of Fr. Solanus Casey for his simple and deep love and understanding of God and the power of faith. This belief sustained him in his battle against cancer, during which he never complained.

Mr. Spath is survived by his fiancée, Elena Zachary; two brothers, Michael and James; his parents, John M. and Gloria L. Spath; and his grandparents, John G. and Marcie Spath, and James and Leona Dunn.

Interment is at Resurrection Cemetery in Clinton Township. Funeral arrangements were handled by the A.H. Peters Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Memorial contributions may be made to the St. John Hospital Pediatrics Oncology unit.

Awash in losses, Dow Jones dipped 285 points last week

Last week, the DJI tanked 396 points on Monday and Tuesday, closing then at 8,487, down 4.5 percent in two days.

Tuesday's NYSE volume of 826.8 million shares was the second highest on record.

The last three days of last week witnessed a modest recovery of 111 points, with the DJI closing Friday at 8,598.

From its July 17 record high, the Dow is down 8 percent, but it is still up 8.7 percent from year-end.

Technically, Birinyi Associates reported that the 10 day advance/decline ratio hit its lowest level ever last Tuesday. Most stocks are trading below their 200-day moving average, with only 52 new 52-week highs (excluding preferreds) last week.

On the positive side, Goldman Sachs' market strategist, Abby Joseph Cohen, telephoned in Wednesday while on vacation in Israel.

She said then the most recent market decline represented an "overreaction," and that the market's fundamentals were still intact.

On the other hand, a Salomon Smith Barney report stated that the "average stock" on the NYSE has fallen 26.1 percent, and on NASDAQ was off 36.6 percent, from their 52-week highs, as of last Monday (before Tuesday's big sell-off).

Since LTS always says that stocks go up because there are more buyers than sellers, then the reverse must be true too. Stocks go down because there are more sellers than buyers!

AMG Data Services tracks the flow of net cash deposits into mutual funds for each week ended Wednesday. Last week, only $468 million flowed into equity mutual funds (net of cash withdrawals). At the same time, net deposits into money-market mutual funds ballooned to $19.5 billion.

Others also track money flows. The Investment Company Institute reports a broader base of mutual fund activity on a monthly basis.

The SEC estimates quarterly flows of funds by foreign and mutual fund investors and corporate stock buy-backs, on a delayed basis.

For the latest available period, the first quarter, 1998, the net inflow was $430 billion (annualized rate), of which $116 billion came from foreigners.

Earn money through dividend DRPs

If you own mutual funds, the odds are that

- You keep your shares in "book-entry form" at the fund company (no stock certificates to get lost, since none are issued) and

- You direct the fund company to reinvest all your cash dividends by buying additional shares.

Did you know that some companies listed on the NYSE and NASDAQ offer these same services?

Over 1,000 companies offer "dividend reinvestment plans," called "DRPs."

If you don't really need the cash from your quarterly dividend checks for your household budget, why not get rid of all that hassle and sign up for DRPs?

Start with the stocks you already own.

If you keep the company's annual report — it's that slick magazine-type booklet with all the photos — look near the back of the report for the page listing all the directors and officers. It usually also lists the company's mailing address.

Drop a line to the company, Attention: Secretary or Investor Relations Department, and ask for a copy of the company's DRP. You'll get it by return mail, unless the company doesn't have a DRP, in which case, ask it to start one!

The biggest advantage of a DRP is "compounding," which produces dynamic performance results over time.

The company uses your cash dividend to purchase additional shares, usually without commission, and rarely at a small discount to the market.

The additional shares now held will receive a larger cash dividend next quarter. Etc., etc., etc. That's compounding!

Another advantage is never losing the dividend check in the mail. And no check to mess up your checkbook balance, and no trip to the bank to redeemable only at the company store. Remember Tennessee Ernie Ford's golden record, "6 Tons"?

LTS has a "short-snorter," which is a roll of many currencies, taped end-to-end. Initially in WWII, to start one, you had to fly over an ocean. And if you were caught in a bar, without your short-snorter, the penalty was that you had to buy a round for the house.

Since LTS flew from Goose Bay, Labrador, non-stop across the Atlantic Ocean to Wales, the short-snorter starts with a $1 U.S. Treasury note (redeemable in silver), then a $1 Canadian note, a 10-shilling Bank of England note, etc., etc.

Snorters became great traders with other armed services personnel.

In each occupation of Axis-occupied territory, the U.S. forces used special "script" overprinted with the name of the country being invaded and the denomination.

Radio announcements decreed that the "script" was now "legal tender" and the old currency was promptly reissued. Allied soldiers were paid in the new "script," as were local merchants and suppliers.

Joseph Mengden is a resident of the City of Grosse Pointe and former chairman of First of Michigan.

Let's talk...STOCKS

deposit the check, because there is never a check in the mail.

Instead, you receive a quarterly activity report for your DRP account, just like the ones you receive from your mutual funds.

Once you sign up, it's all automatic!

You just volunteered for a forced savings plan. Some companies allow you to add additional cash, up to specified limits, to purchase even more shares, without paying commissions.

LTS' advice: Try it, you'll like it!

More about 'script'

Last week, LTS received a phone call from a Grosse Pointe reader concerning LTS' Aug. 6 article about "Detroit Script." (Calls or letters are always welcome.)

Charles De Galen Jr., of the Farms, recalled his father was the manufacturer's representative in this area for the Columbia Bank Note Co. in the early 1930s. His dad took the order for the City of Detroit "script," and for other municipalities, school districts and counties in Michigan and other nearby states.

Last week, De Galen went to his bank and checked out his safe deposit box where he found the answer to LTS' question: Was the "script" ever issued in denominations larger than $1?

Mr. D.G. has "Detroit script" in $1, $5, $10, $20 and $1,000 denominations, some of which are perforated with holes about three-eighths-inch in diameter. Perforating currency and bearer bonds was, and still is, the preferred method of cancellation, after payment.

Mr. D.G. could not recall whether the "script" was also issued in $50, $100 and $500 denominations, same as Federal Reserve notes.

De Galen says the biggest volume of "script" was issued by the mining companies out west and the coal companies in Appalachia. The miners were paid in "script," which was

Many executives do want resumes mailed

Looking for work? Make a good first impression with prospective employers by submitting your resume through the mail.

Even in the age of fax machines and E-mail, old-fashioned snail-mail still gets the best results.

"Executives often prefer the mailed version of a resume because of what it reveals about the job seeker," said Diane Domeyer, executive director of OfficeTeam, a staffing company that recently developed a survey about resume submissions.

While the majority of the nation's top executives were neutral on the subject, more than one-fifth of the respondents said they preferred resumes through the mail. Only 8 percent preferred faxed copies, while 4 percent preferred E-mail.

Whatever you do, don't deliver a resume in person. A measly 1 percent of executives preferred getting resumes by hand.

Mailing a resume "shows that a job candidate has extended a greater effort to personalize the information," she said. "In addition, such elements as the choice of paper, printing and layout of the document give insight to overall professionalism."

However, if you must fax or E-mail, explain that a hard copy is on the way.

School board hires Parcels principal; passes math revision

The Grosse Pointe Public school board voted to approve the hiring of Mark Mulholland, formerly of Tempe, Ariz., as principal of Parcels Middle School.

Mulholland holds a dual B.A. in Spanish and education from the University of Wisconsin, a master's degree in Spanish from the University of Northern Iowa (Soria, Spain campus), and a master's degree in education administration from the University of Wisconsin.

He has seven years of teaching experience (Spanish) and 18 years of administrative experience in education.

Mulholland will work an 11-month yearly contract at $86,434 salary.

In other personnel items, superintendent Suzanne Klein will receive a 2 percent salary increase and a year extension on her 12-month contract.

The board also approved a new math curriculum, as presented previously at last month's meeting, by Dr. Susan Allen, assistant superintendent for curriculum development.

According to board documents, the math curriculum is characterized by "some clear themes: balance, comprehensiveness, consistency, and challenge."

"It's important to note that GPPSS has enjoyed a high rate of success on all measures of testing. The current curriculum revision is not because of any deficit in our student achievement," as stated in the math revision introduction.

"The curriculum continues a high-quality math program and unifies instructional effort," according to the math agenda information.

Catie L'Heureux read 11 books this summer, meeting her goal as a rising first-grader at Mason Elementary.

Four-year-old Charlotte Koelsch had at least 30 books read to her in the library's "Read to Me" unit of the summer reading program. Approximately 450 parents and children attended the GPPL summer reading program at the GPWar Memorial Theater.

Summer readers star in library celebration

Summer readers were recognized on Tuesday, Aug. 4, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial in an hour-long celebration of children's literature and books.

The program included a performance of "The Fantastic Journey," a loose adaptation of award-winning children's writer and illustrator Steven Kellogg's book, "The Mysterious Tadpole," by Madcap Productions Puppet Theater of Cincinnati.

Grosse Pointe Libraries Director Vicky Bloom said this summer's reading program was successful, with possibly more registrations than last year.

The summer reading series was the statewide, public library program, "Reading is Dine mite," featuring a dinosaur theme and modest, dinosaur-based incentives, such as coloring puzzle-sheets, stamps and stickers.

Readers and pre-readers (in the Read-to-Me group) who read 10 books or more received a paperback book. Books (and pages for chapterbooks) were posted in branch reading record files.

Record '98 BAL

In term of blood alcohol content, Grosse Pointe Shores racked up enough drunken drivers last week to last the rest of the summer.

On Monday, Aug. 3 at 10:20 p.m., police were notified of a careless driver. Police witnessed the suspect weaving from curb to curb on northbound Balianyue near Clairview. The suspect, a 50-year-old Detroit man, meant it when he admitted drinking beer and whisky. He set a Shores record for 1998 by registering a 40 blood alcohol content. He was taken to St. John Hospital for detoxification under the supervision of emergency personnel.

A few days later, another pair of Detroit men made a run on the record by blowing .36 and .385 percent, respectively.

On Saturday, Aug. 8, at 5:17 p.m., police saw a black 1994 Pontiac four-door stop at a green light on northbound Lakeshore at Vernier. The 36-year-old driver said the car ran out of gas. Both he and his 30-year-old passenger exhibited signs of intoxication and admitted drinking while in the car. After the suspects failed preliminary breath tests, they were arrested and police confiscated two bottles of gin and two 22-ounce bottles of beer.

Both suspects were transported to St. John for drying out before paying bond and being issued a court date.

Transformers catch on fire

Shores public safety officers responded to a pair of electrical transformer fires last week.

The first occurred behind a house in the first block of Sunningdale at 9:30 a.m. on Thursday, Aug. 6, and the second in the first block of North Deeplands at 1:54 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 8.

In both cases, the transformers burned themselves out and a Shores public safety officer remained on the scene until crews from Detroit Edison arrived within an hour of being called.

Lousy drivers

In ascending order of driving suspensions:

A routine background check of 24-year-old Detroit man revealed that he had an expired license plate and four suspensions. He had been pulled over on southbound Lakeshore near Oxford in Grosse Pointe Shores for driving a black 1994 Volkswagen with a burned out headlight. He paid $100 bond and was released. The incident took place on Saturday, Aug. 8, at 1:30 a.m.

On Thursday, Aug. 6, at 5:55 p.m., a 31-year-old Detroit man was pulled over for driving a 1982 Jeep Wagoneer on northbound Lakeshore near Shorecrest Circle. He had six suspensions, a $1,000 warrant from Wayne County for child neglect, and a $500 criminal bench warrant from Fraser for failure to appear in court. He was picked up by Fraser police after paying $100 bond in the Shores.

A 21-year-old Detroit man swept the field in this week's suspension derby held on Lakeshore in the Shores. Stopped for driving erratically near Vernier, police learned that his 1981 Pontiac was "in poor driving condition, causing it to swerve." The suspect's license had been suspended 15 times and he had a couple of outstanding warrants from family and traffic courts in Detroit. His jalopy was impounded and he was released.

Armed bottle snatcher in City

A man caught pilfering empty bottles and cans from behind a business in the 18800 block of Mack in the City of Grosse Pointe was found to be packing a 5-inch knife. The 45-year-old St. Clair Shores resident was held by police until numerous "sound alike" warrants from Detroit were investigated.

Earlier in the week, a man and woman were reported loading a 1992 teal colored Plymouth Sundance two-door with empty cans and bottles from the same store.

Charges filed in sexual assault

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers were called in to investigate a case of kidnapping and sexual assault.

The incident took place on Wednesday, June 17. A 27-year-old Park woman reported that while walking in the 1000 block of Somerset, a casual acquaintance forced her into his car.

The suspect, a 29-year-old Detroit man, then took her to his home in Detroit and sexually assaulted the victim.

According to Park police, she was able to escape and get away by flagging down a passing Detroit EMS van. Detroit and Park police were called in to investigate, out because the incident began in the Park, detectives from that city were authorized by Wayne County prosecutors to perform the investigation because it was a "continuing jurisdiction" crime that crossed municipal borders.

After completing their investigation, Park officials presented their evidence to prosecutors, who authorized arresting the suspect and charging him with kidnapping and two charges of criminal sexual conduct. On Wednesday, Aug. 5, the suspect was arraigned in Park municipal court and is currently free on $25,000 bond pending his arraignment in circuit court.

Bad behavior

A Grosse Pointe Park patrol unit observed what appeared to be an underage youth drinking beer on the sidewalk in the area of Kercheval and Wayburn at about 11 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 4.

When the officer got out to investigate, the suspect said that he was 16 and gave the officer a false name. The suspect, a Grosse Pointe Farms resident, was taken into custody. When his mother arrived at the station, she said her son was 18, not 16.

Because the suspect was too young to drink, but too old to be treated as a juvenile by the legal system, he was charged with presenting police with false identification, being a minor in possession of alcoholic beverages and resisting arrest and obstructing a police officer. The suspect will be arraigned in Park municipal court.

Wilting hosta will benefit from mulch

Q: Our hosta are wilting and turning brown around the edges. What could be the problem?

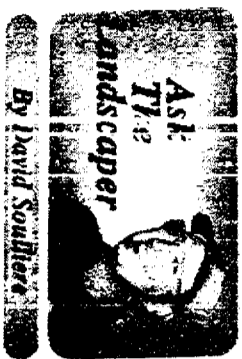

A: Hosta are probably the most popular of all the perennial plants. There are many different varieties of hosta. Hosta varieties have narrow leaves or very wide leaves. The colors of hosta plants range from green to blue and even include some variegated varieties. The best feature of a hosta is that once established, they are very hard to kill. Even if problems occur such as wilting or insects, they will be back next spring.

Wilting hosta is probably due to lack of moisture. Hosta plants like a shady environment to grow in. Even though they will grow in full sun areas they will need extra water for those sites. The most common cause of wilting plants is dry soil. Most plants will recover if additional watering is resumed. When drought conditions are prolonged you will see leaves turning brown, usually around the edges. This is called leaf scorch and it affects a variety of different types of plants.

Recommended treatment is thoroughly watering the plants to wet the soil to the bottom of the root zone. Using a soaker hose or watering each plant for a while with the hose on a slow trickle will water the plant without a lot of extra water runoff. To help conserve moisture apply a layer of mulch over the soil or incorporate some peat moss or compost into the soil.

Q: My hosta plants have many holes in the leaves. What is causing this and what can be done?

A: Slugs and snails are the culprits. These pests live in shady moist areas during the day and come out to feed at night. A silver slimy trail on the ground is sure to be seen around the plants.

There are many types of control methods to use, such as leaving out a snail trap of beer to trap and drown the pests. Diatomaceous earth is a popular choice for many gardeners. This product is very finely ground and shells which when applied over the soil will cut the slugs as they travel over it. Repeat applications need to be made after a rainfall or heavy watering. The most effective method to use is Ortho slug bait. Wet down the area to encourage slugs to eat actively that night. Then scatter the granules over the areas where the snails or slugs are hiding. Control will be obtained as they eat the granules. Repeat applications are usually necessary after two weeks.

Using soil encourages snail and slug growth. If possible try to cut down on the amount of water the area is receiving. Removing the mulch around the base of the plant in damp areas will eliminate a hiding area for the pests.

"Saving Is Easier"

Thomas Ewin
Let's Talk About Real Estate

We all know how difficult it is to save money today. If you are a homeowner, however, the power of leverage can help you increase your net worth dramatically.

Leverage is a concept that allows you to make money by using someone else's money. If you, as an example, buy a house for $100,000 and put $10,000 down, you borrow $90,000 from a mortgage lender. Assuming the value of the house rises $5,000 at the end of the first year of ownership, you will realize a 50% return on your original investment of $10,000 down.

Your principal balance has also been reduced on your mortgage and you have realized additional savings because your income tax liability has been reduced by the amount of your property taxes.

Another huge financial benefit comes when you decide to sell your home. If you have owned and lived in the home for the previous two years or more, you can sell the property and keep a capital gain from the sale in the amount of $50,000 if you are a single person or $500,000 for a married couple without incurring a federal capital gains tax.

If you do sell and buy a more expensive home, your savings are likely to increase even more dramatically because of the higher price range and greater opportunity to maximize your return.

ADVICE: The eventual purchase of your dream home begins with the purchase of your first home. Ask your local Realtor for help and guidance in buying your first home.

Birds

increased species of birds that will visit. Some birds prefer water sources low to the ground while others are high with a higher level. Likewise, smaller birds such as the migrating warblers, prefer a shallower bath than the larger birds that may already visit your bath on a regular basis, such as the American robin or the mourning dove. Place some shallow stones in one end of your bird bath to accomplish these different levels of depth.

Although many migrating birds are insect eaters rather than seed eaters, it is not unheard of for migrating warblers to stop and help themselves to suet or shelled sunflower. Many of the common birds in your yard will also take advantage of the convenience and ready energy of shelled sunflower to satisfy their young and themselves as they get ready for fall.

Keeping in mind the birds that will be foraging for insects in your yard, do not use sprays of any type. Even the supposedly harmless spray for gypsy moths is a non-selective killer, eliminating all caterpillars and, therefore, the food supply for these migrating birds as well as our local chickadees and woodpeckers. Birds should be the natural insecticide of choice. Invite them into your yard and you will be rewarded with the best insect control that nature can provide.

As you watch for migrating species to visit your yard or the neighborhood around you, notice the number of birds that are attracted to berries that are ripening at this time of the year. It is no coincidence that the berries of fall are higher in fat content than the berries that ripen at other times. This extra fat is provided exactly when the birds need a fat store the most.

If you have not already done so, fall is a great time to add to your landscape with berry bearing trees and bushes that are pleasing to you and helpful to your feathered visitors. These plantings include red-osier dogwood, gray dogwood, mountain ash, cotoneaster, American elderberry and Nanking cherry are all excellent for robins, catbirds, thrashers, cedar waxwings, cardinals and others.

Did you put out a hummingbird feeder this summer with no results? Think positive for the fall! The parents and their offspring will be flying through on their way south, stopping at flower sources and feeders from mid-August through September. Check your nurseries for plants that you can offer as a lure for these tiny wonders. Trumpet creeper blooms well into September as well as butterfly bush, cardinal flower, bee balm and honeysuckle. For a great reference guide, there is a plant list offered in "Enjoying Hummingbirds More" by Bird Watcher's Digest.

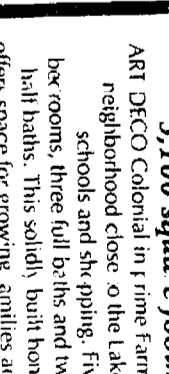

Bird banders have reported that the length of stay of migrating birds at a given rest area is four to eight days and have reported this behavior in warblers, thrushes, towhees, wrens, sparrows, grosbeaks and buntings.

As you enjoy the fall migration in your yard, think of the words of Alfred Newton, a British naturalist, who said, "We are brought face to face with the greatest mystery which the whole animal kingdom presents... The flow and ebb of the mighty feathered wave has been sung by poets and reasoned of by philosophers, has given rise to proverbs and entered into popular superstitions, and yet we may say of it that our ignorance is immense."

PICTURE FRAMES - To maintain the integrity of the picture, give it some thought. Match the frame to the mood of the picture and the style of the room. For example, if it is an old family portrait or a subject that lends itself to the past, consider an antique-type frame. A wicker frame would enhance a summery picture while a delicate fabric-covered frame suits a baby's picture.

PICTURE ARRANGING - The craft of hanging a picture certainly goes beyond hammering in a hook. Arranging the pictures in an aesthetically pleasing manner takes some thought. Take your time; damaged walls are a result of indecision and poor planning.

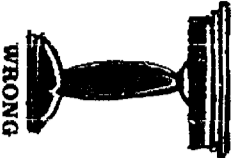

Begin by making a template of the picture and tape it up before you nail it up. Stand back and view the entire wall as if it were a blank canvas and consider the furniture placement and any other architectural feature as part of the picture you are hanging. Templates are especially helpful when arranging a grouping of pictures. Think of the cluster as pieces of a jigsaw puzzle. Measure the wall and sketch a layout on graph paper and arrange the pictures on the floor before you position the hooks.

Balance your picture selections. A room of only large pictures is less interesting than an assortment of shapes and sizes. A large space, such as over a fireplace, demands a substantial piece. This can be accomplished with one large picture or a grouping that equals a large picture. If a mirror is your choice, all the same rules apply. Consider the fact that they also enhance the light in the room as well as create visual space.

Mirror-like arrangements, even numbers of matched sizes and positions, is one way to display pictures. This conveys a formal, symmetrical look. But symmetry isn't the only way to achieve a pleasing, balanced design. Two small pictures can balance one large one by setting the small ones to one side of it. An odd number of items is a more dynamic combination and somewhat less formal than identically matched pairs.

Dark-colored pictures, mats and frames, regardless of how simple or ornate, portray a heavier look as opposed to light colors.

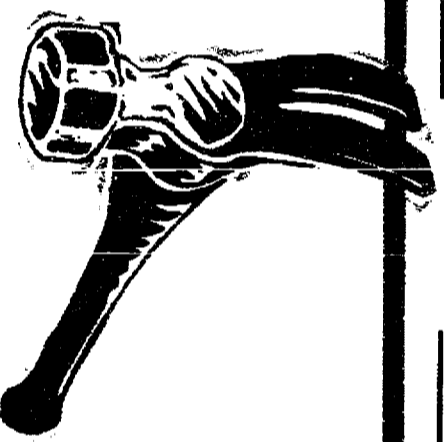

The most frequently asked question is, "How high should I hang a picture?" The answer is, at a comfortable eye level. This is determined by where it is going to be hung and in relation to how it will be viewed. If it is to be viewed while standing, it will be much higher than over a sofa, chair or table which is viewed while seated. Then it is hung no more than 10" to 12" above the furniture.

The time to stair-step pictures is on stairways. Using the banister as a guidepost, position them at eye level as you climb the stairs. And for uniformity be consistent with your selection of mat board and frame colors.

Clusters of pictures of various sizes and shapes are easy to arrange if you fit them

THE NEW TRICKS OF HANGING IT

By Virginia Carr

The new tricks of hanging it

great so far! The paint is dry, the furniture is in place, the curtains are up and now for the finishing touch, the icing on the cake. This is the time when fear grips you. Where and how to hang the pictures? The last pictures you hung left the walls riddled with holes and chipped plaster. The art of hanging pictures is not an easy task, but it is manageable. Here are some guidelines that may help turn a tedious job into a rewarding experience.

No matter whether your budget permits attractive reproductions, family pictures, collectibles or original art, the picture's subject matter, size and colors should harmonize with the frame as well as the mood of the room. First select a frame that will enhance the picture without dominating it and, secondly, place it in a space that is in proportion to its size and its neighboring elements.

into an imaginary frame. Visually draw a large rectangle or square on the wall (or graph paper) and fit them inside the framework, leaving 1" to 3" between them. For identical frames, but one right up to the other to create one big picture. Let your eye be your guide depending on the size of the space that needs to be filled.

To create an interesting focal point, arrange pictures together that have a similar theme, the same frames or mat color. When building a gallery wall of baby pictures plan ahead. You may want to purchase several of the same frames at one time so over the years they will all match.

For a more adventurous approach, add a shelf to your picture grouping. Another alternative to hanging pictures on a wall is to prop them up on a narrow shelf created with moldings.

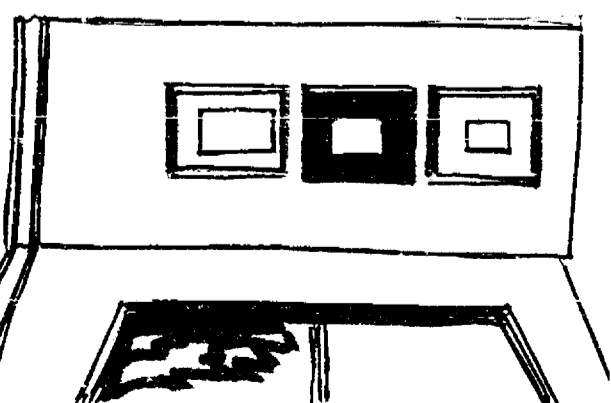

Arrange pictures to mimic the space they occupy, vertically, horizontally or even in a triangle. Accent the hop corners by horizontally lining up a series of similarly framed pictures.

Anchor your pictures. They need to look like they belong to something. A picture is less likely to drift away if it is visually linked to a sofa, chair, desk or table.

HANGING THE PICTURES

Now that you have the hang of design, you are ready to put up the pictures.

To do the job right, you will require a hammer and drill, a tape measure and level, a variety of picture hangers for different weights, clear tape, a stud locator and a pencil.

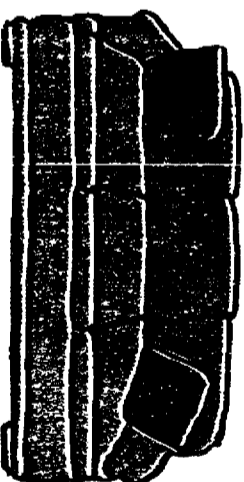

The lighter the object, the lighter the hook.

The type of anchor depends on the weight of the picture and the wall's composition. Placing two hooks 3" apart will help keep a picture straight longer. Choose from hollow-wall anchors to toggle bolts. Get advice on selecting the right fastener for the job when purchasing the hooks.

To mark the right spot on the wall, note where the picture hook or wire hits the wall. If the picture ends up too high or too low, you may be able to adjust it by tightening or loosening the wire instead of moving the hook. Another trick is to crisscross a piece of clear tape over your pencil mark before you hammer in the hook. This will help prevent the wall from chipping.

Being "picture perfect" requires a happy marriage between well-hung pictures that are pleasing to the observer and appropriate for the furnishings which they enhance.

Former Grosse Pointer's workshop helps young performers on the road to Broadway

By Stephanie Ziegler

Special Writer
"I can't emphasize enough how important 'place' is," Rohn Seykell is telling a young actor. "If you're doing a scene in a living room, I want to believe that you've sat in that living room chair a thousand times. You're supposed to be in your basement, so you must know this basement and everything in it."

"I know that all the details can be pretty frustrating," Seykell says, now addressing the entire group. "But that's just what you have to do for an audition; that's the home-

Ten young actors nod their heads in understanding, and Paul Spurgeon of Royal Oak begins his entrance once again.

That is the format of former Grosse Pointer Rohn Seykell's Broadway workshop — work with an individual on the details of his or her audition, then translate the individual lesson into a more general one that can be applied to the whole group.

Seykell's workshop, BroadwayCamp98, takes only a small number of serious performance students for each session. The aim of the program is to dispel some of the myths about Broadway and impart valuable insights about the New York scene to ambitious young actors.

The workshop covers a wide gamut of performers, from actors to dancers to singers. It is specifically tailored to performance students with previous training who are serious about going on Broadway. The students must be 12 years old or older, and each must have a prepared audition ready when the course begins, to be improved by Seykell's direction.

Included in the five-day program are such topics as "Acting in Singing," "Shaping a Performance," "Realistic Expectations," and "Morals and Values."

On the last day of class, parents and teachers are invited for a special question-and-answer session.

Seykell knew from an early age that theater would be in his future and began training at the age of 4, studying tap and jazz with Eileen Marlowe, who would be his teacher for 10 years. He continued his training with Mary Lou Barnes at Dancer's Workshop in St. Clair Shores, and also starred in several productions of the Grosse Pointe Theatre.

At the age of 16, Seykell went to New York, where he continued studying at Alvin Ailey's American Dance Center and Broadway Dance Center. At 20, he made his New York nightclub debut at the famous Duplex Cabaret, and it became the longest-running debut act in the club's history.

He went on to star as Marius in the Tony-award winning musical "Les Miserables" and as Rum Tum Tigger in the national touring company of "Cats." He also appeared as Rock in "All My Children" and taught theater at Brown and Yale.

Seykell's teachings come from personal experience, making the lessons resonate all the more with his students, whom he cautions not to be worried about initial rejections: "It's not healthy to base your self-worth on whether or not you get a job," he said. "At auditions, people are watching for a certain 'look,' and if you don't have it, it doesn't mean you're a bad or untalented performer."

"Always respect the wishes of the people you're auditioning for," Seykell teaches. "Give them what they want — even if you're auditioning for 'Les Miserables,' they may want a lighter piece, and you have to be ready to give it to them. "And always, always, always be polite," he added.

Seykell had nothing but good things to say about his former training grounds: "I'm really excited to be here," he said of the Grosse Pointe area. "There is a lot of support for the arts; that's why you get a lot of well-trained actors from around here going to New York."

Seykell also gave many thanks to Dancer's Workshop for sponsoring the space for BroadwayCamp98.

He hopes that he will be able to train even more local performers in the future: "We're attempting to provide a nurturing environment instead of the New York mayhem," said Seykell.

Sam Kertz of Grosse Pointe Shores and Tatiana Kouskoulas of Grosse Pointe Woods, at the left, observe the audition of a fellow actor.

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD

"My single significant wish is to never raise writing about bridge to a new low."

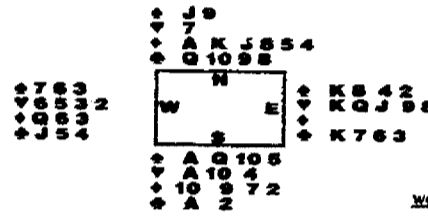

I often go over to the Bridge Connection, Oakland County's largest daily duplicate play club, just to watch. I'm always searching for the positive, the ultimate limit, and whether it's reasonably possible to achieve. Such examples are never effortlessly attainable among modest performers. Unfortunately we seem to abuse our judgment, concentration and technique too often, or we don't properly use the gadgets that are at our disposal.

Then there's our instinct, which can be extremely beneficial. Too often it gets minimal consideration.

No one ever questioned that difficult hands are a dilemma, but that is the source of most top boards. When I'm so confronted I always remind myself: averages never win nothing.

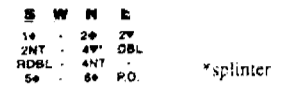

Here follows an innocent looking 32, but it actually is a superb example of why the game is such a challenge.

N/S Vul.

The bidding culminated in three no trump or five diamonds with every vertical pair, and winning 11 tricks was routine. My wonder after watching was that no pair made an attempt to bid a slam even though two declarers accumulated 12 tricks in their play. Actually the slam can still be made in diamonds even if West had one of the black kings. The three missing diamonds in one hand is only a 22 percent probability and specifically finding them with East is even less. So the slam in diamonds is a favorable venture and should be bid as it would in a life master scrap.

Here follows how the experts might bid this one; all of us are capable of such an execution.

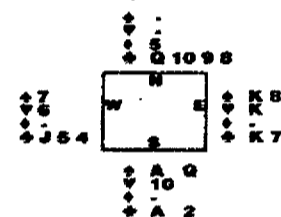

South's second bid (2 no trump) is my bid if your partnership plays two spades, a reverse, game forcing as it doesn't quite match that HCP requirement. But North promised 10 HCP and another bid when, as responder, he bid a new suit at the two level. South had no reason to be pushy.

North is the one who has to make the slam try and instinct should tell him there may be more than game. Here's why. South's opener isn't made up of high cards in diamonds. North knows that his singleton card in that suit isn't wasted. Then when South now bids two no trump, North's prediction is confirmed.

But that in itself isn't enough. North must also determine whether opener's hand is composed of quick taking honor tricks. South's redouble confirms first round control of hearts, and his response to the ace asking bid shows that they have all five important cards.

The play is a little more ticklish after East's heart king is won by declarer's ace. A diamond to the ace reveals the unusual trump break. The spade jack is led and the nine continued to the 10 when East correctly ducks twice. At trick 5, South's diamond 10 is finessed and next the king picks up the queen, and declarer plays his nine under so the suit isn't blocked. Next, dummy's diamond jack and then the eight.

Here is the position at trick 9 when dummy plays the diamond 5.

Poor East is finished. Pitch a spade and South's ace, queen are winners. Pitch the heart king, the ten is the fulfilling trick. A club and South's ace and North's queen are winners.

By the way declarer, you've just executed a successful simple squeeze for 12 tricks. Congratulations!

Rotary Speaker

The Grosse Pointe Rotary's guest speaker on July 27 was Steve Safranek. A constitutional scholar and a professor of law at the University of Detroit Law School, Safranek is also involved in local matters as a member of the Grosse Pointe Park City Council. His principal topic was term limits for all Michigan legislators and the governor. Michigan has enacted term limits for its representatives (three two-year terms) and for its senators (two four-year terms). These term limits come into effect next year. The consequences of term limits include a more diverse mixture of backgrounds in the legislature. Safranek also expects that with the term limits legislators will consider themselves part-time. Safranek also suggested that a constitutional amendment that limited any law to term limits (say six years) would help to check the growth of government. Steve Safranek (left), councilman and resident of Grosse Pointe Park, with Jack Sullivan (right), president of Grosse Pointe Rotary.

The Pastor's Corner

How is your spiritual health?

The Rev. Fred Harms

St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran Church

There is a lot of concern being expressed lately about maintaining one's health.

Everything from regular exercise to diet is being explored. We are being advised by many sources as to that which can best keep us operating in a healthy manner. Other factors such as stress levels in our jobs and pressures from other daily demands are being examined as to their impact on our physical well-being. And to help us in this quest for good health, we have a myriad of resources provided.

One factor, however, is sometimes overlooked — our spiritual component. Researchers at Duke University Medical Center recently completed a study concerning the correlation between religious faith and an individual's health. The conclusion was that people who regularly attend religious services appear to have healthier immune systems than those who don't.

Why should religious faith be such a strong contributing factor to our overall health? Researchers propose that in a religious community generally positive thoughts and behaviors are promoted, healthy coping skills are fostered and relationships with others who hold the same beliefs are offered to give support and encouragement.

There are no guarantees of good health. Even those who have strong faith convictions can still suffer ill health. However, the discipline of regular worship, prayer and Scripture reading are all positive resources available to us in the quest for healthier living.

Recently, Walt Weiss, the Atlanta Braves shortstop, gave a testimonial in support of this thesis. When his 3-year-old son, Brady, suffered from a life-threatening E coli infection, Weiss claimed that the medical attention, together with the supportive prayers of many people and his own Christian faith helped his family get through the ordeal.

Particularly, Weiss found that reading the Book of Psalms and daily prayer provided solace and strength.

When we think about our health, let us not forget the important spiritual component. Make time and space for religious faith in your life.

Vatican art

The Rev. Allen Duston, international director of the Patrons of the Arts in the Vatican Museums, was honored at a reception July 20 at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Duston visited Detroit to welcome new members to the Michigan chapter of the Patrons of the Arts in the Vatican Museums and to promote "The Invisible Made Visible: Angels from the Vatican," an exhibit that will open Sunday, Aug. 23, at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

The Patrons of the Arts is a non-profit, non-denominational philanthropic organization that supports and maintains the cultural and artistic legacy of the museums of Vatican City.

The DIA exhibit will include more than 100 works of art that have been restored by the Patrons. Some of the pieces have never been seen outside the Vatican. In the past, Patrons have contributed to the restoration of the Sistine Chapel and paintings and sculptures by Michelangelo, Raphael and Fra Angelico.

Don't put a chill on August vacation

By Jeff & Debra Jay
 Special Writers

Dear Jeff & Debra:

We're planning a vacation in August with our extended family — four families of relatives — and we're all going to a lakeside resort for one week. Several of the kids are now over 21 years old and of legal drinking age. I worry that they will drink in ways that may jeopardize their safety or the safety of the younger kids. I have talked to the other moms about setting some rules about drinking in advance of the vacation. Could you give me some guidelines?

— Mom

Dear Mom:

By communicating clear drinking guidelines, you can prevent alcohol from putting a chill on your summer vacation. If parents and adult children follow these simple guidelines, alcohol-related accidents or health problems can be prevented.

If you drive, do not drink; if you drink, do not drive. There is no safe level of alcohol for drivers because everyone reacts differently to alcohol on different occasions. Do not ride with drivers who have been drinking.

Never drink and pilot a boat of any kind. The same things that make drinking and driving dangerous (impaired judgment, information, and coordination, among other alcohol effects) can be as deadly on water as they are on land. Boating, windsurfing, jet-skiing and waterskiing — anything that involves speed and skill — can all be dangerous to anyone who has been drinking.

Do not swim or dive if you have been drinking. Remember that alcohol inhibits your swallowing and breathing reflexes, both of which are necessary for swimming, and make you feel warmer than you really are, putting you at risk for hypothermia in cold water. In addition, drinking affects your ability to judge distances and may lead you to swim too far out into a lake or ocean.

If you are riding in a boat, remember that alcohol will impair your balance and increase your chances of falling overboard. This danger, compounded by alcohol's effects on your swimming ability, is a common cause of drowning.

If you are a heavy drinker, remember that during the summer alcohol consumption can:

- more rapidly dehydrate you
- raise your blood pressure
- increase your chances of developing hypoglycemia, a condition that causes weakness and interferes with the body's temperature regulation
- increase your chances of becoming a heat prostration or stroke victim

If you have a health condition that makes any of these effects particularly dangerous, do not drink in hot, sunny weather.

Do not drink if any of the following is true:

- you are pregnant or trying to conceive
- you are using medicine of any kind
- you have had difficulty keeping your drinking moderate in the past

Feel free to refuse alcohol for any other reason, regardless of pressure or encouragement to drink.

Do not drink if you are a child or adolescent. For anyone under 21, alcohol is an illegal drug.

Eat before and during occasions when you are drinking — eating will slow alcohol's effects.

If you are a woman, remember that alcohol will have a greater effect on you than it will on a man of your weight.

Remember that alcohol will impair your performance in most sports, making you more vulnerable to accidents and injuries.

Most importantly, parents and other adults need to model a responsible relationship to alcohol. Show your children that you can have fun without drinking alcohol. Also, make it clear that intoxication — or alcohol abuse — is never tolerated.

Rest stop cuisine can be healthy, light

"Burgers and fries? Or burritos?" your loved one asks as you exit the turnpike for a quick lunch before continuing your 300-mile journey.

But heavy, greasy food is the last thing you want sitting in your stomach as you ride in the car for the next five hours. No need to worry — there are some healthy options to choose from when you're limited to car-ride cuisine.

Fast food restaurants are beginning to offer some lighter, healthier fare. Packing some nutritious foods from home can help chase away your rest-stop food blues altogether.

Not only will you feel better once you arrive at your destination, the American Institute for Cancer Research says that choosing more low-calorie, plant-based foods can help reduce your risk of cancer and other serious diseases.

There's little doubt that, while traveling, fast food restaurants offer the quickest, most convenient meals for your money. But that doesn't mean you have to order the extra large portions of everything with cheese.

For a low-fat breakfast on the road, order a fat-free muffin or pancakes instead of high-fat bacon, egg and cheese sandwiches.

Fresh-tossed salads are available at most drive-throughs — just remember to request low-fat dressing. Another good choice is a grilled chicken sandwich minus the mayonnaise. If you want to add more flavor to your sandwich without adding excess fat, ask for a packet of honey mustard or barbecue sauce, and add lots of lettuce, tomatoes and other veggies if they're available.

As you ponder your snack selection at the rest-stop vending machine, ignore the candy bars and corn chips and choose pretzels, air-popped popcorn or baked potato chips.

If you decide to bring food from home, sandwiches are an easy choice. Use whole grain bread for added nutrition, lean meat (if any) such as turkey breast, and a variety of fresh vegetables like tomatoes, green peppers, onions or chopped carrots.

For something different, try a bean spread sandwich filling, or wrap your sandwich fillings in tortillas instead of traditional sandwich bread. Keep them cold with frozen juice boxes.

Fresh fruit such as peaches, plums and grapes also travel well (just remember to bring extra napkins in case some fruits are especially juicy). Low-fat crackers and dried fruits are other healthful alternatives, as are a variety of cold cereals, like sweetened squares, which can make a good cookie substitute.

Many road trip travelers make the mistake of waiting until they're overcome with hunger before stopping to eat. This often leads to eating too much, too quickly and paying little attention to the nutritional content of the food you choose. Instead, pack some healthful snacks to munch on in the car until you're ready to stop for a bigger meal. These snacks not only help curb your hunger, they also give you the opportunity to fit in the recommended five daily servings of fruits and vegetables, which may be more difficult to do if you rely solely on meals from fast food restaurants.

So while you're deciding what to pack for this summer's vacation or your next weekend road trip, remember to take along your healthy eating habits by either ordering more nutritious meals at restaurants, or by bringing your own small cooler of healthy favorites for the car ride.

For a free brochure with more tips on healthy eating when dining out, send a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents), business-sized envelope to: American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. CD, P.O. Box 97167, Washington, D.C., 20090-7167.

Open Arms will host remembrance

Open Arms, a grieving children's program sponsored by St. John Health System and Eastwood Clinics, will host a remembrance program entitled "Ribbon in the Sky." The program will be held on Saturday, Aug. 15, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Eastwood Center for Developmental Disabilities, 11148 Harper near Conner.

This event will provide an opportunity for community residents to join together and remember those individuals whom "we have loved and lost." Highlights of the program will include a special prayer for grieving families and youth in our communities, a balloon release and a tour of the new facility. It is free and open to the community.

According to Naomi Mathews, program manager at Open Arms, when someone we love dies, lives are forever changed. With the help of support groups, families learn to manage their grief and begin the healing process.

"Although each individual's grief is unique, there are a number of parents and children who share a common experience," she said. "We want those families to know they do not grieve alone."

Established under the direction of Vernice Davis Anthony, senior vice president of Community Health at St. John Health System, Open Arms provides support groups for children and family members who are experiencing a loss due to violence, an accident or illness. The first program of its kind in Detroit, it is designed to help children understand death and the grieving process and how to cope with feelings of anger, sadness or loss.

"It is especially important to address the grief of high-risk youth in our communities — those children who lose a loved one due to violent circumstances," Anthony said. "This is a violence prevention strategy because they are more likely to become either the victims or perpetrators of violence themselves."

Activities during group sessions at Open Arms include play, art, storytelling, role playing and physical activities such as punching "boppers" and tearing up phone books to help relieve frustration.

Your Skin

by Lisa A. Manz-Dulac, MD

Brown spots, sometimes known as sun spots, age spots or liver spots, are hyperpigmented areas of skin which appear as brown or gray areas of skin, much like over-size freckles.

Though not related to the liver at all, they are related to sun exposure. The spots appear and grow due to the increased production of melanin, the pigment which colors our skin.

Especially where hyperpigmentation is light, treatment can be achieved in several ways. The most common is the use of "bleaching cream", although some lesions may require freezing (or cryotherapy) or laser treatments.

Bleaching creams actually do not bleach, but reduce the production of melanin. They are available over the counter, or your doctor may recommend a prescription strength formulation.

To learn more about treatment of brown spots, call Eastside Dermatology, Dr. Lisa A. Manz-Dulac and Associates (313) 894-3380. (Please note new address, 20030 Mack, Grosse Pointe Woods)

New Detroit Symphony Orchestra CD is a sweet treat

When Richard Strauss composed his "Whipped Cream (Schlagobers) Ballet" in 1921 it was his intent to put aside the operas of World War I. However, the Viennese were bereft of their empire and had been left with poverty and privation.

State of the Arts

By Alex Sucek

They were in no mood for a fantasy about pastry confections. After a poorly received performance, the work was put aside. Strauss himself might feel requited by this new recording of the suite taken from the score. Neeme Järvi and the DSO have imbued this musical confection with a joyous flavor to whet the dullest appetite.

Always a consummate orchestrator, Strauss lavished on this score his full repertoire of tone, timbre and signature harmonic development. He achieved rich colorations with special techniques like pizzicato and big orchestral chords, and mastered the artful use of such instruments as the harp, celeste, bassoon and horn.

He created a challenge to make the audience taste the chocolate that obviously appeals greatly to Maestro Järvi and the orchestra whose performances on this CD are positively exultant.

The music is performed throughout with wit and style. A flute solo with harp in the opening dance suggests the airy topping of whipped cream over a rich, chocolatey orchestral sound. "The Dance of the Tea Leaves" is languorously evocative and then briskly breaks into a stimulating tarantella with irresistible flair.

There are several gorgeous violin and flute solos accompanied sometimes by the harp and sometimes in duo with cello. The violin in the exotic entrance music for the Coffee Prince is especially luscious, following the Prince's introduction by the tart crack of castanets.

Järvi conducts for the moods, from the exuberant marches and grandiloquent waltzes to the tenderness and suspense of the solos and the results give a really full display of the orchestra's ability to play with precision, color and power.

The elegant "Waltz of the Princess" led primarily by the violin, cello and harp is the most quintessentially Viennese of all the music in the suite. That means "Viennese" in the sense of the sentimental, romantic world of operetta.

In contrast, the "Dance of the Little Chocolates" has a folk quality expressed by the Bavarian tune that Strauss adapted for it. Judging by the heady quality of the music, they must be chocolate truffles. It is an opulent feast.

Yet there is never a suggestion of excess. Like the finest Viennese confections, this music is more piquant than sweet and Järvi keeps even his most exuberant moments within the realm of good taste.

Moreover, concentrating on the thematic element of the music, he also makes it easy to recognize that while the stylistic techniques are the familiar work of Richard Strauss, the harmonies and melodies are fresh and original, not derivative of the composer's other famous works. One thing is sure, however. Anyone who likes the music from his opera Rosenkavalier, is sure to love this Suite from the ballet Schlagobers. It is vintage Strauss. All the more wonder that it has been neglected for so long.

Like offering an encore at the end of one of his concerts, Järvi has added the composer's short but substantial "Memorial Waltz" to complete the disk. It is a tribute to the city of Munich alternately vibrant and soulful. Like most of Järvi's encores, it provides a satisfying afterglow to the experience of listening to a wonderful performance.

For the careful listener there is a special caution. The music flows so quickly and smoothly from track to track that anyone who wants to know what is playing at any given moment needs to keep an eye on the number on the CD player display and check off the movements as they go by. There are some details referred to in the CD program notes that add to the interest of listening to the music, making it worth the effort to keep track.

This disk, CHAN 9606, is the 28th on that label by Järvi and DSO. It can be purchased on the Internet by visiting <http://www.detroitssymphony.com>. It is also available at most Michigan music retailers and at Orchestra Hall's Music Box Boutique during concerts.

Five South players make Division I All-State tennis team

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

For three years, Grosse Pointe South boys tennis coach Tom Berschback never had to worry about his first doubles team.

He knew that his nephew, John Berschback, and Mike Case were going to give the Blue Devils a sure victory.

They lost only twice the first year they played together and last year had only one defeat. This year they capped a perfect 26-0 season with a state Division I championship.

Case and Berschback headed a delegation of five South players who were named to the Michigan High School Tennis

Coaches Association Division I All-State team.

Preston Gaspar was also a first team selection, while A.J. Rohde and Tony Tocco received honorable mention.

"They were good enough to play No. 1 doubles for us three years ago, which is quite an accomplishment for a freshman and sophomore," said coach Berschback.

It's unusual for a doubles team as strong as the Case-Berschback combination to stay together that long, but even though they could have challenged for one of the singles positions in the lineup, they were just as happy playing doubles.

"They didn't have the ego that you so often see among good players and I really admired that," coach Berschback said. "By playing doubles, they helped the whole team because we had so many players that were very close in ability."

Tom Berschback marvels at the pair for another reason, too.

"I've never seen two kids learn more tennis by doing what they do — not playing the whole year with a pro," he said. "They've learned so much by playing together and working with Dr. Detroit (assistant coach Jeff Hodges)."

Case also proved that a high school tennis player doesn't have to play singles to earn a college scholarship. Last winter he signed a letter of intent to play at Eastern Michigan University.

Case graduated, but John Berschback is back for his senior year and his uncle doesn't know if he'll play singles or will find a new doubles partner.

There was a murmur going through the crowd at the Midland Tennis Center during the state championships when Case and Berschback took the court.

"That's unusual for a doubles team, but they were acknowledged state-wide as being the best," coach Berschback said.

Case and Berschback didn't lose a set until their first match at the state tournament when they dropped their first set to Midland Dow's top team 5-7, but they came back to win the next two sets 6-1, 6-0.

"Their experience paid off because they never panicked," the coach said. "I panicked a little, but they didn't."

After their brief early scare, Case and Berschback beat Port Huron Northern 6-3, 6-3 and defeated Brother Rice 6-1, 6-1 in the championship match.

That gave them a career mark of 77-3, the best in South tennis history.

Gaspar had an outstanding junior year at No. 1 singles, posting a 20-5 record. He advanced to the semifinal round of the state tournament before losing 6-0, 6-1 to Ann Arbor Huron's Mike Kosta. Kosta handed Gaspar two of his five losses. The others were also to top-seeded players.

Adversity has always been a motivating factor for Gaspar.

When he lost a tough league match as a freshman, he told coach Berschback "that's never going to happen to me again."

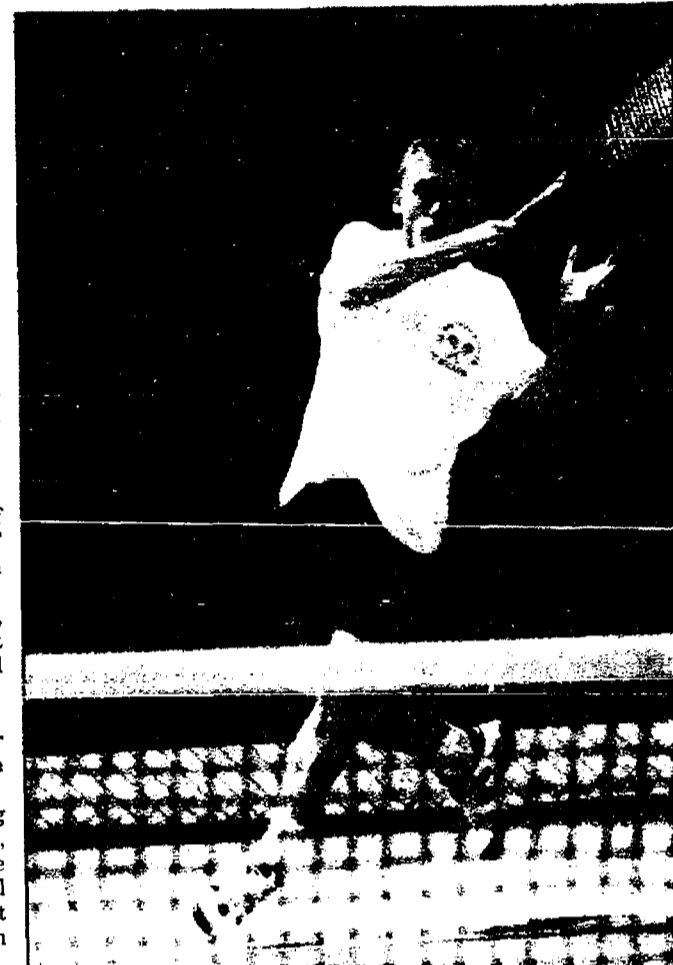

It was the same thing this year after losing a three-set match to David Lynn of Brother Rice.

"After he lost to Lynn, he started hitting the ball harder and with more consistency," coach Berschback said. "Now he hits winners. He was our most improved player this year. He's physically stronger and he has that inner fire that

Having a state championship first doubles team brought a lot of smiles to the face of Grosse Pointe South boys tennis coach Tom Berschback, center, John Berschback, left, and Mike Case won all 26 of their matches this year and finished with a three-year career record of 77-3.

Preston Gaspar posted a 20-5 record in first singles for Grosse Pointe South's tennis team.

Mets spring surprise in Woods-Shores Ruth

There was an unlikely champion in the Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Babe Ruth League World Series this year.

The Mets, who had more games called on a mercy rule than they won during the regular season, got their act together in the playoffs and posted a 17-2 victory in the championship game.

Inconsistent hitting and fielding plagued the Mets during the season and they were mercied by the Cardinals, Giants and regular-season champion Marlins. But in the playoffs, the Mets turned the tables and mercied each of their three opponents.

Rauss and Cheolas were the mainstays of the pitching staff with Cheolas getting the victory in the final game.

The Mets were managed by Terry Breedlove, who was assisted by James LaLonde, Steve Cheolas, Paul Mallon and Michael Coleman.

Tennis

"His mental preparation is phenomenal — much better than most high school players." Gaspar had an impressive victory over Midland's Chris Rolf, a nationally-ranked player, in his first state tournament match.

Rohde, a senior, had a disappointing finish to an outstanding year at second singles.

"A.J. had a great season, but he got sick before the state tournament and didn't have the stamina you need to play at that level," coach Berschback said.

Rohde was a co-captain with Case and a four-year player for the Blue Devils.

"When he was healthy, A.J. really played well," the coach said. "He has the best variety of shots of anybody on our team. He can hit a return slow or hard and he keeps the opponents off balance."

Rohde, who went into the state tournament as the fourth seed at second singles, lost a three-setter to West Bloomfield's Adam Wright in his only finals match.

He breezed through the regional, losing only one game in three matches.

Rohde was undefeated in Macomb Area Conference Red Division play and was an all-academic selection along with Gaspar, Case and John Berschback.

Tocco, a junior, finished with a 26-0 record at No. 3 singles. He was the first South singles player to go unbeaten since 1990 and also the first singles state champion since that same season.

Tocco had one of his toughest matches in the state semifinals when he was taken to three sets by West Bloomfield's Mark Cuevas.

"He had his serve broken twice but this year he had the confidence to come back," coach Berschback said. "His mental toughness improved so much from March to the end of May. He had to make up his own mind that he could play with anybody."

Tocco was the Blue Devils' most valuable player this season.

"He's the guy that made the difference in dual meets because there were a lot of good 3s on the teams we played," Tom Berschback said.
