Daisy Bledsoe-Herring, a 7-year-old resident of the City of Grosse Pointe, test drives the business end of an insta-tandem bicycle with Rick Teranes, manager of Bikes, Blades & Boards on Mack in Grosse Pointe Park. In the lead, Teranes said quick-hitching tandem bicycle attachments are a safe way for adults to take children on bike rides without worrying about the child not being able to keep up or weaving into traffic. He also reminded bicyclists to always wear a helmet.

'Insta-tandems' let families go bicycling together safely

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Wherever Mom or Dad goes, the child follows. No worrying about little ones riding off the road or sidewalk into traffic or a tree.

"Tandems aren't so much for teaching kids how to ride a bike," said Teranes. "They're for including kids in adult activities, like taking kids out for a five-mile ride. They can keep up with you. Adults feel safe because they're in control."

He said tandems are good for "families into recreational sports and bike riding where adults want everyone to keep up."

Unlike a trailer, in which a passenger is pulled along as though riding in a souped up stroller, tandem riders help pedal.

"I could really feel Daisy helping when she pedaled during our test drive," said Teranes.

Both bike shops sell two brands of tandems. A single-speed model costs around $200. A more expensive version has six gears and costs more than $300.

Insta-tandems are made for kids between 4 and 10 years old who weigh less than 80 pounds. Tandems weigh less than 25 pounds, feature quick-locking hitches for easy attachment to adult bikes, and withstand heavy use.

Eickman's been selling the products for five years. He hasn't received "one complaint or heard of any problems," he said.

Tandems don't take much getting used to, but the manufacturers have some advice for the adult rider:

- Like a semi-truck, take wide turns. When turning, tandem units track closer to objects than the adult bike in front.
- Don't go over 18 mph.
- Ride on smooth surfaces. Tandems aren't for off-road excursions.
- Apply brakes earlier than normal. The added weight of a tandem and rider increase braking distances.

"Insta-tandems let kids ride along with parents and be part of the family," said Eickman.

Added Teranes, "The child will always be able to keep up."

What does Daisy think?

"I like it," she said.

School's notes sought, trial date set in rape case

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe school district has declined to turn over the notes of an investigation that resulted in the charging of four former North students with criminal sexual conduct in the third degree.

The trial date in Wayne County circuit court for Daniel Granger, Robert Cooper, James Raymond and Daniel Raymond, all former Grosse Pointe North students charged with criminal sexual conduct in the third degree, has been set for Wednesday, Oct. 14.

The charges were the result of an investigation that began when Grosse Pointe North officials wanted to know how a picture of Granger exposing himself got into North's yearbook.

In testimony before Grosse Pointe Woods Municipal Judge Lynne Pierce last month, three North freshman girls told how the investigation into Granger's actions concerning the yearbook led them to talk to North officials about incidents that took place off campus last January and December, when the girls were freshmen.

Once North officials completed their investigation, the parents of the girls were notified. The parents then went to Grosse Pointe Woods public safety department detectives and filed complaints against the four suspects.

After the July preliminary hearings were complete, Judge Pierce ruled that enough evidence existed to send the case to circuit court for trial.

But during the hearings, both the prosecution and defense attorneys asked to see the notes of the investigation begun by the school officials.

After both sides petitioned for the school notes, Pierce ruled that because the three girls were going to be testifying in open court about the December and January incidents, they had waived any privilege. But this waiver applied only to the three girls. The other students who talked with North officials had not waived their privilege. Any information released to the attorneys would be limited to what was said by the three girls.

Pierce then reviewed the notes before they were turned over to the attorneys to make sure that no one else's rights were violated.

On Friday, Aug. 14, the prosecution filed a subpoena for the school's notes on the case. Also subpoenaed was North principal Dr. Caryn Wells.

School officials have declined to turn over the notes and the matter will go before Wayne circuit court judge Timothy Kenny on Monday, Aug. 24.

Mark McInerney, attorney for North, said that under Michigan law there is a statutory student-school privilege of confidentiality that goes back

Sexual harassment policy to be stressed

By Liz Ferszt
Staff Writer

In the wake of the alleged criminal, albeit off-campus, events concerning former and current Grosse Pointe North High School students, the question has been raised by many Grosse Pointers, of all five cities: What have we learned, if anything, from the underaged rape allegations in Grosse Pointe Woods?

Dr. Caryn Wells, principal of North High School said Tuesday that her students will be learning something from the fallout of the highly publicized case.

"We're using this time to plan where these issues might fit into the curriculum," said Wells, who indicated that the mandatory health classes already contain units on the more serious issues of date rape and other socially inappropriate if not illegal behaviors.

"For a number of students, legitimate questions have been raised. . . . Our response is, what kinds of information and dialogue can we provide our students to arm them from these pressures?" Wells said.

In response to those who blame the schools for the environment which might have fomented the alleged acts, a sentiment also shared by some parents close to the case, Wells said that she feels confident that her focus on service will stave off any detractors:

"Our role as administrators, and as teachers, is to serve students. Right now we are navigating some tough whitewaters, but our goal is not to dodge these issues. I'm dedicated to finding ways to do this (service)."

"My background is in guidance and counseling," said Wells, who said she feels ready for the new school year.

Area in Woods used as dumping ground
Since last November, Detroit has been dumping the refuse and dirt from its alleys on this property owned by Johnstone and Johnstone. The Grosse Pointe Woods Council allowed the dumping despite a recommendation from its planning commission that the permit be refused. Tuesday night, the council reversed its decision, revoked the permit and ordered the dump covered with at least six inches of dirt. decades. This privilege extends to confidential communications between a student and a school official. This privilege also protects student behavior records.
"The nature of the privilege belongs to the student," said McInerney. "Only the student or the student's legal guardian, in the case of a minor, can waive the privilege. If a student, for example, goes to a school counselor and discloses something in confidence, this information is protected from disclosure. Not only is it protected, but the school can't disclose the information in criminal or civil cases."

So far, said McInerney, none of the students who also talked to North officials have waived their privilege. That's where it stands for now. He said he did not know what the school would do if ordered to turn over the notes. There might be an appeal, but for now officials are taking the position that they can't turn over the notes.

Policy

not be a whole school assembly, finding that a plenary forum "is not an effective way to work with students," Wells said that at least the new ninth-grade class would be broken up into small groups, "so we can look them in the eyes" while discussing school rules.
Now that the case has been formally sent to the circuit court of Wayne County, under the ruling of probable cause issued by Woods Municipal Judge Lynn Pierce on July 15, the drama has changed venue.
Wells also stated that she and her administrative records have been subpoenaed by Wayne County Circuit Court.
"Schools attorney Mark McInerney, (of Clark-Hill), will represent me on Monday Aug. 24, (in circuit court)," said Wells.
Schools public information officer Kathleen Roberts said Monday that the district would most likely have no further comment until the entire case had been decided by the courts.

"The school administrators and faculty have reviewed the policy in the student handbook against sexual harassment," said Roberts.
Indeed, at its Aug. 10 conference meeting, the board took up a revised policy on sexual harassment, "due to increased public awareness about the unacceptable nature of sexual harassment in the schools," according to board agenda documents.
The extant and approved policy states that the board "is committed to creating an environment free from harassment, where respect for the individual exists and is safeguarded."
The policy further states, "Sexual harassment of students by other students or by employees of the school system is unlawful both under Michigan and federal law, and is contrary to the commitment of the school system to provide a stable learning environment."

The board policy also explicitly defines sexual harassment in terms compatible with national studies on the nature of the infraction, specifically as it appears on campuses, according to the American Association of University Women's recent survey on the frequency of sexual harassment.
The investigatory and punitive language of the policy is equally explicit: "All such reports shall and will be investigated immediately by administration. . . . Anyone found to have violated this policy will be subject to disciplinary action up to and including expulsion from school or termination from employment."
Wells added, "We'll follow that policy to the letter."

The only real solution to the problem of swimming bans in the Pointes is enclosed swimming pools, according to Grosse Pointe Health Commissioner Dr. Thomas Davies.
On another matter, Davies recommended enlisting refuse collectors in the local war against rats in the Pointes. He said garbage collectors could carry spray guns around with them and spray garbage cans to repel rats and kill flies.

Effective Sept. 1, smoking will be banned in Grosse Pointe public schools in accordance with a new state law. Schools superintendent Ed Shine said he was "delighted with the law," which will supersede the district's three different smoking policies for students, administrators and community education.

"The students have asked that some consistent message be presented in the schools and this is another step in our efforts to help adults quit smoking and prevent children from beginning a habit that all the literature has indicated is harmful to your health," he said.

Regulation likely for Shores communication towers

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

A proposed ordinance regulating communication towers sailed through a public hearing in Grosse Pointe Shores and appears headed for approval by the village council.

Comments made by a handful of residents attending the hearing ranged from benign inquiries to outright support of the measure.

If Shores trustees pass the ordinance, it could go into effect early next month. Until then, the community's moratorium on new cellular towers will be extended, said John Huettner III, president of the Shores.

The ordinance forbids the construction of communication towers on residential property. Another provision funnels the placement of new facilities to sites on which towers already exist, where possible.

Given those restrictions, the most likely spot for a new cell tower in the Shores is on the property of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

The club is non-residential property and is allowed up to four cell towers, said Mary Matuja, chair of the Shores planning commission.

The club already has two cell towers, said Jack Sullivan, manager of the yacht club.

"Whatever (the club) does will depend on whether any tower posts a health hazard and is architecturally compatible with the club," said Sullivan.

The Shores' has only two other locations available. In descending order of preference, a tower could be erected on municipal property at Osius Park or next to Village Hall, said Mike Kenyon, Shores city manager. In either case, towers would be unobtrusive and located as far away from residential areas as possible, he said.

The Edsel & Eleanor Ford House can't be used because of restrictions proscribed by the estate, said Kenyon in a previous council meeting.

In any event, a new tower is almost certain. The Shores is "hamstrung by federal law" that prohibits the banning of cellular towers by local communities, said John Monahan, a member of the planning commission and former trustee.

"With the way technology keeps forging ahead, (towers) might become obsolete one day," concluded Matuja. "But now we need them."

Cigar lounge comes to Woods

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council recently approved the transfer of a liquor license from Red Lobster to a new business that will be called Robusto's. This move puts the city on the cutting edge of nighttime entertainment.

"Robusto's is a cigar lounge," said Woods resident David Bergamo. "It's a place that will feature different kinds of coffees, liquors, desserts and cigars. It will be located on Mack, right next to the Woods Theater. We expect to open by early November and the theater should be torn down by then."

Bergamo said that in recent years he's been to larger cities like New York and Chicago and has seen how cigar lounges have become very popular.

"Detroit really doesn't have a place like this," Bergamo said. "We will have about 150 private humidor lockers that will cost between $395-$800, depending on size. Members can store their own private stock of cigars there. We already have a number of customers lined up and have rented out about half the lockers."

'People don't have to smoke if they don't want to.'

Bergamo was quick to say that he wants to establish an upscale place, where people can come to after a show and perhaps get a coffee or dessert.

"People don't have to smoke if they don't want to," Bergamo said. "We will be selling about 30 different cigar names, with about 100 different shapes and sizes. Our air purification system will be state of the art, and the decor will be rich in dark woods and leather furniture. We won't be selling knife and fork food, just desserts and coffees."

Bergamo purchased the liquor license from the Farmer Jack supermarket chain. That company came into possession of a liquor license when it purchased the Red Lobster on Mack, which had a state liquor license that allowed the restaurant to sell beers, wines and hard liquors.

"We will be able to sell anything from beer to cognac, from vodka to single malt whiskeys," Bergamo said. "These days cigars aren't just for men. In New York, a lot of women are smoking them. It's the first true cigar bar in metro Detroit."

As to the name, Bergamo said Robusto is a cigar about 5 inches long, and has become very popular in the 1990s.

Park Foundation plans Jefferson renovations through to Cadieux

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Jefferson Avenue will look quite different in a few months if the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation has anything to say about it.

The foundation recently held its summer fundraiser at the home of Janet and Frederick Bellamy. Over $6,000 was raised at the gala evening party.

The money will be added to the $60,000 the foundation has already set aside for its 1998 project.

"This year the foundation will add to the landscaping of Jefferson, from Somerset to Cadieux," said Park city manager Dale Krajniak. "They expect to go forward with the actual work in the late fall."

The foundation has not yet decided on a final design, Krajniak said. Part of the problem is that whatever work is done, must be consistent with the rest of Jefferson.

There will probably be some decorative lighting and some sort of new landscaping.

"There are residents who have driveway access to Jefferson," Krajniak said. "Others have fences along Jefferson. Any design chosen will have to take those things into account and then present a harmonious design."

The beginning of the foundation's project should coincide with the plan to build a small English garden-style park on Jefferson between Lakepointe and Pemberton, across from city hall, Krajniak said.

"The money for this project is being donated by the Dewey and Eula Marcks Foundation," Krajniak said.

"Right now the lot is empty, but when the project is completed there will be a small green space for residents to see. I don't know if calling it a park is accurate, but it is more than just a bed of flowers."

Both projects are part of an ongoing effort by the city administration to change and beautify Jefferson, said Krajniak. Over the past 10 years, the Jefferson business district has changed considerably. A number of retail businesses have closed and been replaced by office buildings.

The Jefferson condominium project went up on the site of an old Oldsmobile dealership as well. This change in Jefferson follows the master plan developed by the city in the mid-1980s.

The new landscaping is just the final part of an ongoing plan 15 years in the making, said Krajniak.

Alice Johnson, a resident at St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community, works on a poster project with Samaya Nichols at a "Let's Connect" session, an intergenerational program that brings together children and senior residents.

'Let's Connect' brings together children, senior community

A unique, intergenerational program, called "Let's Connect," is bringing together children and seniors at St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community. For six consecutive Mondays this summer, a group of employees' children and grandchildren comes to the center to spend time with residents of the extended care facility in a day-long session.

The first day of camp on July 13 featured an "Under the Sea" theme. About 20 children and residents worked together to design posters, using glitter, sponges and other craft materials. Most residents were impressed with the children's creativity.

Many of the children were shy at first but quickly learned how to relate to the residents. One 10-year-old boy sitting across the table from a resident who had difficulty hearing, discovered that she understood him better when he walked around the table and talked at closer range.

"I think it's fun. It brings back memories of when I was their age and doing what they are doing now," said Alice Johnson, a resident who took part in the first day camp session.

"I think it's wonderful" was the sentiment expressed by resident Marguerite Edwards. "It's uplifting for elder adults to interact with children," said Judy Smith, CEO of the senior community. "It offers a youthful perspective for residents. The program helps bridge the gap between the generations and offers an informal way for children and residents to get to know each other."

Let's Connect is a progressive step in the center's implementation of the Eden concept, a philosophy of making extended care facilities more enjoyable for residents by introducing plants and animals and encouraging children to visit.

Last summer, the center built enabling gardens — wheelchair-accessible planters that permit residents to grow flowers and vegetables. In December, the center added two aviaries (elegant, screened-in cabinets that house canaries, finches and doves) and brought two daisy pups — Bogey and Bandit — to the center as house pets. The center already had aquariums and a cat named Toby.

The senior community, located at 18300 E. Warren in Detroit, provides a continuum of care, ranging from residential care to assisted living, respite care and skilled nursing care. It is celebrating its 10th anniversary this year.

Pointer remembers when there were farms in the Farms

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Talk to Grosse Pointe Farms resident Don Reno, 71, about growing up in Grosse Pointe and he'll tell about when Mack was a gravel road and how a relative sold the property that would eventually become the Eleanor & Edsel Ford house.

"I was born in Grosse Pointe Farms," said Reno. "When I was a boy, there were only two houses on the street. (Ridge, near Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church.) Hillcrest didn't go through to Moross. There were horses and cows in the area. There were still strip farms around when I was growing up."

Reno still lives in the house in which he was raised. It's only a few doors down from where his grandmother lived her entire life. He worked for what then was called the Grosse Pointe Farms highway department after finishing school.

"I was 4-F for a long time," said Reno. "That was during the Korean War. Well, they took the clerks and gave them rifles, and suddenly I wasn't 4-F anymore. At the time I was working for the Farms. I ended up being stationed in Camp Polk in Louisiana, where I worked in the local hospital."

Reno said that during his tenure in the camp hospital, he worked in a number of wards, including the maternity ward.

"I didn't think an Army base would need a maternity ward," said Reno. "But I didn't take into account all the wives of the soldiers who went to the hospital to have their kids."

After finishing his hitch in the Army, Reno returned home to Grosse Pointe Farms and his job with the old highway department. He ended up putting in 37 years, retiring at the age of 60. But working for the city was not unusual for his family.

Reno's father was a policeman as was his uncle. Several of his relatives also worked for the city.

"My grandmother had 13 children," said Reno. "A lot of them ended up working for the Farms."

Growing up on a farm left Reno with certain skills he uses to the present day.

He raises a variety of different birds, including ring-necked pheasants, silver pheasants, red golden pheasants and yellow golden pheasants, as well as quail and white pigeons.

"When I was a kid, we had chickens," Reno said. "We used to eat them all the time. When I got into the Army, it was chicken. I got very tired of eating chicken. I can tell you that."

Reno started raising birds after an incident that took place about 10 years ago. A friend of his who owns a farm was mowing the hay and accidentally ran over the nest of a goose.

Several of the eggs were destroyed but a couple weren't and he gave them to Reno.

"I put the eggs in an incubator and hatched them," Reno said. "The goslings followed me everywhere. When I cut my grass I had to be careful of not hitting them. Someone would walk by my house and the birds would go out and chase them."

Eventually one of the geese was hit by a car, so Reno took the other one to a farm. But that started him raising birds.

"Friends give me the eggs and I hatch and raise the birds," Reno said. "The kids from the church like to come by and see them. When the birds are grown I give them back to my friends. I also get some eggs from a local club. They are quiet birds and don't make too much noise."

When asked if he ever thought of moving to a warmer climate in his retirement, Reno replied that he never did consider leaving Michigan.

"I lived in the South when I

POINTER OF INTEREST

was in the Army," Reno said. "That was enough for me. I like the change of seasons and I like going up north to hunt deer. I go every year with my family, and we butcher the deer we kill. When butchers started charging $50 to butcher a deer, it became cheaper for us to do it. When I was a kid we had farm animals we butchered, so this is nothing new."

Around Reno's house are reminders of Grosse Pointe's past. The clock attached to his tool shed came from the old Kerby Road kindergarten.

"I was setting up voting equipment for an election," Reno said. "I saw a clock and asked what they were going to do with it, once the building was torn down. I was told that they would throw it out, so when the time came I took it."

Reno said he could remember as a kid going out and buying a bucket of beer from the local speakeasies that used to populate Lakeview.

"I was afraid of spilling the beer and would take some steps to prevent that," said Reno. "Well, that's what I told my father when he would notice that a little was missing. Things in Grosse Pointe have really changed from the days when teams of horses were used to cut the grass along Torrey Road, but it's still Grosse Pointe."

Farms resident Don Reno shows off some of the birds he raises.

There is still a bit of the farmer in Farms resident Don Reno. In addition to raising birds, he has a large garden, where he grows a variety of vegetables and fruits. Plus the view of Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church from his back yard isn't all that bad either.

If both Clinton and Starr quit, would inquiry finally end?

In a four-minute speech to the nation Monday night, President Clinton confessed that he had carried on a "not appropriate" relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

The president admitted that he had been wrong, and had even misled his wife, but then contended, "It is private; it is nobody's business but ours. Even presidents have private lives."

As several presidents in recent decades have learned, the news media, and especially TV, have made the White House practically an open book, even though President Kennedy did escape the media's keyhole peeping while he was alive.

So Clinton's continuing sexual adventures have had important effects on his presidency and, what is worse, on the presidency for decades to come.

Some of the effects may not be seen for some time. But certainly court decisions robbing the president of some of his prerogatives, as former White House counsel Lloyd Cutler said, could cripple future presidents by limiting the advice they could expect to get.

Clinton testified before the grand jury for about four hours, but obviously did not cover all of his grand jury testimony in four minutes.

In fact, some of the questions he apparently ducked or did not answer aroused new speculation Tuesday morning. No one knows at this juncture whether Kenneth Starr, the special prosecutor, found some new fuel for his investigation in the speech.

Immediate post-speech public opinion polling did show that the president had not lost much if any of his popularity, with a majority of respondents contending he should not be subjected to an impeachment trial.

Our own view now is that the country would be best served if both the president and Starr would resign. In fact, that would be the easiest way to end this Whitewater case that started at least 20 years ago in Clinton's native Arkansas.

But Republican leaders made it clear in their reactions to the president's speech that they would await Starr's report and its study by the appropriate committees of both houses before deciding their future course.

As usual, Republicans were critical of the president for his attacks on Starr, although the president is apparently maintaining his standing with Democrats in Congress, at least for the moment.

Looking back on the origins of the case, we can blame the Supreme Court of the United States for approving the beginning of a suit against the president by one of his accusers.

In fact, the court rejected the contention by the president's counsel that such a case would work to the detriment of the president's ability to carry forward his own agenda to the best of his ability.

As the president headed for two weeks of family vacation on Martha's Vineyard, Starr continued to press his grand jury investigations although even he said he wants to complete them early on.

If readers wish to learn more about Clinton's family background, we suggest they read "Partners in Power," by Roger Morris, a historian who traces the seamy side of the family in earlier generations in Arkansas.

Yet on the book's dust jacket there is an approving review of another Morris book, this one about the late president, Richard Nixon, by (guess who?) Kenneth Starr.

So what did Starr say?

"Massive . . . powerful . . . absorbing. It will no longer be possible to damn or defend Mr. Nixon without reference to this great locomotive of a work."

Such words come easily to Starr for he was a top Justice Department official in both the Reagan and Bush Republican presidencies.

The animosities between the president and Starr run deep. So if both of them departed soon, we could quickly see the end of the investigation and the immense federal spending to support it.

In fact, the public already has indicated that it has had enough of the investigation, with most people who are not strong partisans ready to see it end soon.

Ex-prosecutors rap the law

Seven former independent counsels told the New York Times last week that the statute creating the counsel's job was needed, but might have to be overhauled before it is renewed.

All were glad to have served, they told the Times. But the majority said that "the law covered too many officials and too many potential acts of wrongdoing."

And that left the attorney general too little discretion about when to invoke the law, the Times report said.

"It should be limited to activities that occur in office," said Lawrence E. Walsh, who spent six years and $40 million investigating the Iran-Contra affair and whose suggested changes were the most sweeping.

"It should be limited to misuse of government power and should not include personal mistakes or indiscretions," the Times quoted Walsh as saying.

"The enormous expense of an independent counsel's investigations and the disruption of the presidency should not be inflicted except for something in which there was a misuse of power.

"That's not out of consideration for the individual," Walsh went on. "It's out of consideration for the country."

The Times reported that all the former counsels declined to comment on the work of the current independent investigator, Kenneth Starr.

However, most of them also said that wide expertise as a criminal prosecutor or a defense lawyer — experience that Starr lacks — should be a requirement for the job.

A common theme of all seven former counsels who agreed to be interviewed, the Times reported, was the "momentous power and isolation of the job, a universe of solitude and solemn responsibility."

Another common theme, the Times reported, was that all the men interviewed "deplored the partisanship of an office that grew out of bipartisan concern for President Nixon's 'Saturday night massacre' of the first Watergate special prosecutor and two of the highest officials of the Justice Department."

"It's become so politicized now," one former prosecutor said, "that the ins hate it and the outs love it just for the purpose of bringing the ins down. That's the part that will turn the public sour."

In fact, it seems to us that the current Starr investigations have so disillusioned the public that the public already has become sour about its use.

Fieger now needs a Democrat

Now that Republican Ronna Romney has declined Democratic gubernatorial nominee Geoffrey Fieger's offer to become his running mate, perhaps Fieger will return to his own party to fill that spot.

While he also had on his list Helen Milliken, wife of former GOP Gov. William Milliken, she said nobody had approached her on Fieger's behalf and, furthermore, she was not interested in returning to active political life.

In his clumsy handling of these suggested running mates, Fieger ought to have convinced his handlers he really needs a Democrat.

In offering the post to Romney, Fieger said they both are fiscal conservatives and that his willingness to consider her is an indication of his intention to pursue a "broad-based agenda . . . with diverse points of view."

Romney, however, told Fieger she didn't want to be considered for the post because of the conflict it would create within her family.

Romney's ex-husband, Scott Romney, son of the late GOP Gov. George Romney, is seeking the GOP nomination for attorney general and she already had endorsed him.

In his own party, however, Fieger has won the important backing of Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara. Mike Duggan, McNamara's deputy, said, "We are going to help him in any way we can."

The Detroit Free Press said that Duggan had played down the frostiness of Mayor Dennis Archer toward Fieger, pointing out that in the primary, Fieger had demonstrated his ability to win votes in Detroit.

But other observers had called attention to Archer's comment that he wanted "certain assurances" before he would support Fieger. And what would those "assurances" cover?

Archer had said he wants to know what Fieger's issues are and what that means to the City of Detroit and other cities. Expanding on his view, Archer told the Free Press he wants to hear from Fieger on crime, education and economic development.

But we wonder whether the mayor's coolness toward Fieger could possibly arise from Archer's own ambitions to seek the Democratic nomination for governor in the future.

Stranger things have happened in politics in Michigan.

New judge appointed in City

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Russell F. Ethridge has been appointed municipal judge for the City of Grosse Pointe.

The appointment runs until November 1999 and fills the vacancy left by the resignation of Judge Stan Kazul.

"I am delighted and honored that the council has seen fit to put the community's trust in me," said Ethridge.

Ethridge led a field of seven candidates during a six-week search for the appointment.

"The candidates were well qualified, which made for a difficult decision," said City Mayor Susan Wheeler.

Ethridge is in private practice in St. Clair Shores as a civil and criminal litigator. He has more than 18 years experience in the courtroom, including work as an assistant prosecuting attorney for Macomb County. He currently serves a chairman of the civil practice committee of the Macomb County Bar Association.

He has a law degree from West Virginia University College of Law and has lived in the City of Grosse Pointe most of his life.

Ethridge said his first day on the bench will likely be in September. Kazul's retirement becomes effective Aug. 31.

Mapleton restrictions permanent

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

A 90-day test of parking restrictions on Mapleton Road in Grosse Pointe Farms was made permanent after the trial period ended recently with no complaints by residents and an unexpectedly high compliance by the public.

"Since the plan started, we've had less traffic, a cleaner street and an easier time getting in and out of our driveways," said a resident of the narrow street that runs between Grosse Pointe Boulevard and Kercheval near the Hill shopping district.

Restrictions came about after Mapleton residents complained to city officials that employees and customers of businesses on the Hill were turning the street into a no-cost parking lot.

A petition signed by 90 percent of the residents nearest Kercheval resulted in a three-month trial period that required residents and guests to display permits if they wanted to park legally on the street between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m., Monday through Friday.

During the test period, only two parking violations and four warnings were issued, said Robert Ferber, Farms chief of public safety.

Ferber said the new policy "eliminated more signs than we put up," but will consider removing some of them in nine months.

Farms saves on its lights

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

As though a light bulb signifying a good idea has lit up over the municipal offices of Grosse Pointe Farms, controller James Nash has come up with a plan to make city hall's lights shine brighter while saving the community $9,800 per year.

In a sort of electrical lease program, Nash will outfit city hall with energy-efficient interior lighting fixtures. The new equipment will be leased from Detroit Edison for three years for a total cost of $23,989. At the end of the lease, the Farms will buy the fixtures for $1.

The program will provide "brighter illumination than now and a payback period of under three years," said Nash. The savings will be applied to the city's electrical bill, he said.

The project is part of a tax exempt agreement with DTE Finance Program.

Media and justice are the losers

Twenty years ago, when Bill Clinton was engaged in questionable land dealings in Arkansas, Monica Lewinsky was in preschool.

Yet both have become embroiled in a disgusting investigation of the presidency of United States, supposedly the most powerful office in the world. While not prostrate, a defiant Clinton nevertheless had to tell all, had to admit to "not appropriate" behavior with an intern young enough to be his daughter.

Clearly, in the classical sense, both Clinton and Lewinsky are pathetic, tragic, intrinsically flawed characters, who are incapable of saving themselves from self-destruction.

But they're not alone. The media are also pathetic.

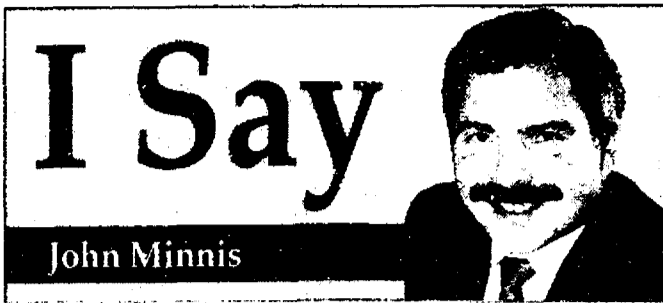

The Washington press corps has sunk from reporting on important matters of state to peeking in White House keyholes. There is little difference between the elite Washington news media and the sensational supermarket and TV tabloids.

Even more disturbing are the detrimental effects the "Fornigate" scandal has had on the way we gather news and on the justice system.

First the news. It seems that no one in Washington is willing to "go on record" for anything. All Washington stories these days are based on anonymous sources or high-ranking officials or "those close to the president or the investigation."

Reporters argue that if they did not promise anonymity, no one would talk and they'd get no stories. Maybe. But could it also be true that since the sources are not forced to put their names where their mouths are, why should they?

And if anonymity comes so easily, how good is the information they're passing on? Is it merely one person's opinion? Is it a trial balloon? Is it an outright falsehood? Is it an attempt to manipulate the media and/or public opinion?

I Say

How do we know these anonymous sources even exist? Maybe they are figments of the reporter's imagination. Maybe they are an amalgamation of many sources. Maybe the reporter "thinks" something is true but has no one to confirm it, so an anonymous source is created.

How can we ever know? Not only is the use of anonymous sources being abused in Washington, it's also lazy reporting and lacks culpability, both on the parts of the sources and the media.

Another tragedy during this whole fiasco is the sanctity of the grand jury system. Few states have standing grand juries, and that's good. Without strict limitations, grand juries can too often develop into witch hunts, inquisitions.

But grand juries are sometimes necessary because they can move difficult investigations forward where all regular means have failed.

The reason grand juries are effective is because they can compel testimony. It's my understanding that no one can refuse to testify before a grand jury. Further, no one can invoke Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Why such broad powers? Because all testimony before a grand jury is confidential. It cannot ever see the light of day. That's why no one can refuse to testify. Because if the information will never, ever be made public or used against those testifying before a grand jury, then they cannot be said to be incriminating themselves.

I've always understood that a grand jury, through its powers, determines whether a crime was committed and whether there is a likelihood that a certain suspect committed the crime. And if so, then indictments are handed down. But the prosecution must still prove its case through traditional means, not through grand jury testimony.

Obviously, ironclad confidentiality has not been the case in the Whitewater grand jury. Testimony has been leaking like a worm-rotted ship.

Indeed, the Washington media are already salivating over leaks of Clinton's four-hour testimony and, in fact, they are looking forward release of the transcript of Clinton's testimony, "the hottest journalistic quest in Washington right now," according to a Detroit Free Press Washington reporter.

Huh? Is there a law being broken here? And if it's seriously illegal to leak grand jury testimony, is it suddenly morally and ethically correct for the media to publish that testimony?

The media do not have to be facilitators. They can refuse to go along, but they lack the integrity and the courage to do so.

Clearly, the lack of confidentiality in this case has seriously damaged the credibility of the grand jury system. After all of this, how can anyone feel compelled to testify?

Add the justice system and the media to the list of tragic, pathetic characters in what will be known as the "Fornigate Fiasco."

Clinton, Lewinsky rivet a nation fyi

Monday night, Aug. 17, was a culmination of a growing crisis in our government.

Despite many people expressing disdain about the media preoccupation with the secret life of the president, they were drawn to consider every rumor, every leak, and all the guesses by assorted experts and pundits. Finally, the attention of the nation is riveted at 10 o'clock and the president admits to lying, but denies perjury. And the president says it is time to move on.

The question is, does he have the moral authority to determine when it is time to move on? Starr will eventually give over to Congress the accumulated evidence of wrongdoings, and it will be the Congress, after due consideration, which will decide when or if it is time to "move on." Our congressmen and women are our representatives in government. Their due consideration should not be influenced by trendy popularity and approval polls.

The president's four-minute speech to the nation was part "mea culpa" but mostly attacking the prosecutor, who took four years and $40 million to get past the previous pattern of lying and evasion. Had Clinton come clean early on, this investigation would not have been carried on for so long.

We know that there is more involved than simply whether or not he did it or lied. What holds an unconscious fascination is the generation gap. Bill Clinton is old enough to be Monica Lewinsky's father. The fact that there was sex between them raises the symbolic issue of incest.

Incest is one of the most powerful of taboos, which cuts across many, if not all, cultures. In Freud's "Totem and Taboo," he seeks to explain the origin of the incest taboo. His explanation continues to be controversial.

Still, a great part of his theory is the Oedipus complex, based on the Sophoclean tragedy of King Oedipus, who killed his father and married his mother. In the play, when Oedipus realizes what he has done, he blinds himself and howls. Audiences have flocked to this play for 2,000 years, and modern playwrights have voted it the world's most popular and powerful play.

Here the central theme is incest. Audiences have a fascination and horror of it. Freud insists that this fascination has to do with everyday life, where boys are attracted to their mothers and girls attracted to their fathers. Rarely, but surely, sometimes these drives lead to frank incest.

More often, there is a subtle but powerful incestuousness within each family, more often described between fathers and daughters, less often between mothers and sons. It is hard to think of seductiveness between parent and child, but it does occur. A remake of Nabokov's classic, "Lolita," has been playing on the Showtime channel, and the next showing will be Aug. 29 at 9 p.m. At 8:45, will be a discussion of the theme, also taboo, which is between a mature, middle-aged man and a young girl, a prepubertal nymph. He is her stepfather and her mother is killed in an accident. The story is about what happens to their relationship over time, considering that it is taboo, incestuous, perverted.

Freud's Oedipal theory was dismissed with the straw man being a misinterpretation of his writings. He never said that a 5-year-old boy wants to have intercourse with his mother. He did say, and I think all of us have experienced examples of the fact, that a 5-year-old boy would like to have mother all to himself and get his father out of the way.

All this is but the tip of the iceberg. Most boys, for example, end up conceding to father, identifying with father, and wanting to marry a girl just like mom. "I want a girl, just like the girl, that married dear old dad." This is "normal."

As a result of the repressed Oedipus complex, which consists of the internal struggle of the child to love and keep both parents, we are drawn to incestuous themes, such as "Hamlet," another famous case of the Oedipus complex. Freud argues that Hamlet delayed in exacting revenge for his father's murder for unconscious reasons. If he had quickly and decisively dispatched the new king, there would have been no play.

Freud thought that Hamlet's indecision and delay was the result of his realization that his motives were no purer than his uncle's. Hamlet himself wanted (on some level) to kill his father and have mother all to himself. If he would have killed the king outright, he himself could have proclaimed himself the king, but because of his guilt, he had a fear of his murderous impulses and a fear of success.

Bill Clinton says we have no business prying into his priate life. But is it a private thing when the chief executive of the country, who we, the people, elect and hire, abuses his power in the White House, a government building which we pay for, and indulges in sex with the lowest-rung government office worker, an intern? This is sex-in-the-workplace, an abuse of power, and an incestuous one at that.

A more discreet and sophisticated (read: mature, reasonable) man might have indulged in a romantic relationship with a woman more his age in a quiet hideaway, far from the White House. Still, he might want to keep it a secret from his family that he has violated his wedding vows and family commitment. What can Chelsea be thinking and feeling?

The citizens have reason to question Clinton's judgment and veracity more than ever from this time forward. Although Clinton is very savvy about manipulating the media and getting campaign contributions, he is apparently not smart about incestuousness and abuse of power — most of all, about disillusioning the people. He may need psychiatric care for a possible sexual addiction.

Some people say he's only human; that goes without saying. But we evaluate and judge humans on their ability to control their drives and instincts for a higher purpose. If he is not to be trusted within his own family or in the White House or before a grand jury, how are we to trust him in the major issues?

The commander-in-chief has access to the atomic button and security secrets. How can he be trusted? The people who continue to support him, and they still seem to be in the majority, are undoubtedly identifying with this flawed man. They, too, have their precious secrets, which at bottom, may be incestuous.

Little miracle in a box

Back when Anne Koenig, daughter of the Park's Gary and Susie Scheiwe, was a senior at South High she came home from a wedding at St. Paul's on the lake and told her mom she'd seen "the neatest thing" at the wedding and hoped she'd have one at her own.

"We'll try and get it for you," said Susie. "You can't," Anne said. "It was a rainbow." Last Saturday Anne was married to fiance Tom Elias, of Cincinnati, at the War Memorial with some 80 guests in attendance.

"It was going to be a garden wedding," Susie says. "At the last minute we decided to get the chimes at (next door) Memorial Presbyterian Church to play so people would hear it right after the ceremony."

Memorial Church organist Bob Moncrief said the arrangement to signal him when to start was the most high-tech he'd ever seen: The Scheiwehs had supplied him with a cell phone and pager. Unfortunately, the weather didn't cooperate. "It poured,"

Susie says. "We had to go inside and only heard part of the chime." The guests did have fun taking snapshots with the disposable box cameras supplied at each table, Susie says. Right after, someone rushed them to the new Walgreen Drugs on Moross near Mack for one-hour developing.

The party was still going on when the finished pictures arrived, and Tom's best man was going through the last few from the last camera when he handed the wedding couple a snapshot of the groom taken from the glassed-in walkway between the Alger House and the Fries Auditorium.

Behind him, in the sky over the lake, was something no one had noticed amid all the celebrating: "There's your rainbow," he said.

London jaunt's a tip-top trip

Returning from a recent vacation in England with her husband, Mike Goodell, the Farms' Mary Northcutt was obviously impressed with the treatment given guests at Claridge's, London's veddy posh hotel: "It was lovely," says Mary. "The service was marvelous — they try to anticipate every whim."

The rarefied atmosphere at the hotel, which is about as British as you can get unless you're staying at Buckingham palace, got to Mary. "I felt as if I should have brought a personal maid to unpack my clothes," she says.

Private club gets retroactive dunk

Christ Church Grosse Pointe Rector Ed Putnam, playing the role of a robed and bearded Noah in the Vacation Bible School's play for the congregation at last Sunday's service, put the biblical flood in perspective for his Pointe audience: "Even the Little Club was under water," he said.

Well past the midlife crisis

Who was that dashing gent in the driving cap, tooling around The Hill in his custard-cream open sports car last Thursday?

When he spotted FYI on the street he stopped to say hello. It was Pointe musicmeister Alex Sucek, out for a spin in his copy of a 1920's Mercedes roadster. "I've had it for years — just got it fixed up," said Alex. "It's my toy."

Not bad, for a sporty fellow who's on the far side of 70.

Summer Select Choir workshop and Fest

On Monday morning, Aug. 17, 300 talented Grosse Pointe vocal music students gathered at North High School to begin the 5th Annual Grosse Pointe Vocal Music Department's Summer Select Choir Workshop.

The workshop is part of Grosse Pointe Schools Enrichment program. The students have been rehearsing all week and tomorrow evening, all 300 participants will present "Pointes Choral Fest '98" - a concert which culminates their activities for the week.

Workshop participants are selected by the vocal music teacher at their respective schools and represent students who have shown special abilities and interest in vocal music.

Every school in Grosse Pointe, elementary, middle and high school, is represented in the workshop.

This week is an excellent opportunity for students to interact with others throughout the district who share their special talents and excitement in vocal music. The music selected is, deliberately, both challenging to learn and rewarding to perform.

Workshop choral directors represent G.P. Schools vocal music educators: Carolyn Parravano, vocal music teacher at Brownell will be working with grades 4/5; Anne Maters, from Ferry, will be directing the 6th grade group; Ellen Bowen from South High School and Margaret Steele from North High, will conduct the 7/8 graders. Featured guest director for the high school group will be Dr. Jerry Blackstone, Choral Director at University of Michigan and director of the UM Men's Glee Club. Margaret Steele, G.P. Music Department Chair, is the coordinator of the workshop.

Music from a variety of musical periods will be presented from Renaissance to the '90s including "How Lovely is Thy Dwelling Place" by Brahms, and "Dry Your Tears, Afrika" from "Amistad." The closing selection will feature all 300 students directed by Dr. Blackstone.

This workshop has become a very popular event and parents inquire about the dates early in the school year so that they can make vacation plans accordingly. Parents assisting with tickets and snacks include Marion Manganello and Beth Linne.

"Pointes Choral Fest '98" will be held on Friday, Aug. 21 at the Performing Arts Center, 707 Vernier Road. There will be two performances - 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. Tickets are $3 and can be obtained by calling 343-2239 or purchased at the door.

AP scores increase

During the 1997-98 school year, high school enrollment at Grosse Pointe North and South high schools increased by approximately 2 percent (from 2,628 to 2,706). During the same year, the number of Advanced Placement (AP) test takers increased by 19 percent (from 407 to 483).

Despite the significantly higher number of AP participants this year, the district's longstanding, exemplary passing rate of 77 percent remained constant for 1998, according to Dr. Marjorie Parsons, assistant superintendent for student services.

Of 988 AP tests attempted, 764 AP tests were passed, meaning that college credit was earned (if transferrable) while the student/test taker was still in high school, said Parsons.

Any AP exam is voluntary, and costs $75 per test from the College Board. GPPS award a weighted grade to students who achieve a grade of C or higher in an AP course on the South or North campus, and who take the AP test.

A multiplier of 1.1 is used when determining the student's grade point average for that course. Students may take an AP test without first taking an AP course.

The College Board offers 32 AP courses, with exams; 20 have been implemented in GPPS, including: English Literature, French, Spanish, German, Latin, Calculus, Microeconomics, Biology, Chemistry, Physics, History.

Parcels gives Fred W. Adams award

The Fred W. Adams award was presented on May 26 to Marisa Ventimiglia and Lauren Safran, both of Grosse Pointe Woods, two eighth grade students at Parcels Middle School.

The award was given based on the following criteria: commitment to education through demonstrated scholarship; community leadership; renaissance spirit; concern for others; high behavior standards.

Starting on June 15, teams of students used the three-week program to study the rotation of the sun, create computer-automated movies and home security systems, and construct a Frisbee-throwing machine, mortarless building bricks, and model hovercrafts.

Students also got an early look at college life by attending lectures by Rose-Hulman faculty, and by living in a college residence hall.

Library Board meets on Aug. 24, Monday

A public meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Grosse Pointe Public Library will be held Monday, Aug. 24 at 7 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo, City of Grosse Pointe.

Any member of the public interested in attending who may be in need of special assistance or accommodation because of disability should contact the library at (313) 343-2325, Central Branch, 10 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms.

Minutes of this and of any open meeting of the board are available for review at the Central Branch library.

South new student enrollment thru 28th

A special six-day summer enrollment period has been established for students who are new to Grosse Pointe South High School, said Russell P. Luttinen, assistant principal for student services.

An enrollment counselor will be on duty at South on Monday, Aug. 17; Tuesday, Aug. 18; Wednesday, Aug. 19; Tuesday, Aug. 25; Thursday, Aug. 27; Friday, Aug. 28.

New student enrollment hours will be from 8 a.m. to noon, and 1-4 p.m. each day except Aug. 19, when enrollment will be from 8 a.m. to noon only.

New students should call 343-2151 to schedule an enrollment conference. Transcripts or last report card, birth certificate, Social Security card, proof of residency, and health records are all needed at the time of enrollment.

"Teach Michigan" has some tips for back-to-school/new parents

Getting a good education for your child is about who you know, says a veteran parent.

When it comes to helping your child have a good school year, it's not so much what you know, as who you know.

That's an insider tip from veteran parent Linda Wacyk as she launches a new bi-monthly guide, called "Michigan Learning," that equips parents to maximize their child's education.

Recent surveys show that many parents feel overwhelmed with all they have to do. They find it hard to make time to be involved in their children's education. In addition, they often feel intimidated by professional educators who seem to have all the answers and fail to invite parents into the process.

"It is amazing to me," says Wacyk who has four children scattered between third grade and college, "that the same parents who would willingly dive in front of a car to save the life of their child will avoid going to school to talk to a teacher. We forget how much power we have to improve how schools serve our children."

The key she says, is knowing the right people. And the people to know, are your child, your child's teacher, and other parents.

"As a parent you know your child better than anyone else," says Wacyk.

Parents who take advantage of that relationship—by always asking about their child's school work and trying to customize opportunities to meet their unique needs see consistent gains.

"Next, you need to introduce yourself to your child's teacher the first week of school," says Wacyk, whose guide will tell parents six things teachers wish parents knew about preparing a child to go back to school. Not only do you show your child that school is important, you also build a relationship with the teacher that will make it easier to share information and work together to help your child learn.

Michigan Learning's non-profit mission is to give parents easy ways to keep track of their children's progress and evaluate their needs.

Parents can get a free premiere copy of the guide by calling 1-800-TEACH-MI

More "how-to" data can be accessed on the web at <http://teach-mi.org/learning>.

Perhaps the most important thing Michigan Learning will do," says Wacyk, "is to give parents a forum where they can swap stories and strategies with parents across the block or across Michigan. Connecting with other parents can multiply your effectiveness. Michigan Learning is all about parents helping parents improve education.

Research shows that what a parent does at home is a more important influence on student success than a parent's education, social status or income.

Here are proven tips you can borrow from parents of successful learners:

AT HOME:

1) Actively organize and monitor your child's time, both in and out of school. Stay informed about kids pastimes, performance and homework expectations at school.

2) Help with homework. Ask questions and check to see that work is complete and provide whatever tutoring the student needs.

3) Discuss your child's experiences in school, both good and bad. Make decisions together about projects and courses.

4) Read at home. Parents who model reading and read with their children powerfully influence their child's success at school.

WITH THE SCHOOL:

1) Be sure your child is enrolled in a challenging course of study that best meets his or her needs for the future.

2) Keep in touch with the school. Don't wait for the school to talk to you. See that children are assigned meaningful homework in appropriate amounts and are challenged to do their best.

3) Ask more from schools. Challenge them to create new ways for parents to get involved. Compare your school's goals and standards with emerging academic and occupational standards.

4) Use community resources like enrichment programs, recreation and sports teams, and religious youth groups to help your child fill in after-school hours and build a strong network of supportive adults.

5) Encourage businesses to adopt policies that allow families to spend more time in school; form partnerships with schools, donate money, supplies or expertise and participate in school-to-work efforts.

Pointers in Wilderness Ventures

While their friends spend the summer at shopping malls and skateboard parks, a group of students from Grosse Pointe is spending its days far away, in wilderness areas and national parks as they strive to improve their leadership skills.

Four young adults from the Grosse Pointe area are participating in Wilderness Ventures 4-8 week outdoor leadership programs in Alaska, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming.

Local students participating in the expeditions are Ryan Wilderness Ventures has 26 years of experience in youth wilderness programs and is one of the largest programs of its kind in the United States.

Founded in 1972 by educators Mike and Helen Cottingham, the school, with its educational and leadership bent, differs from "youth adventure travel" programs. Activities include backpacking, canoeing, whitewater rafting, mountaineering/rock climbing and sea kayaking with the core programs based on leadership training.

On June 25, over 600 students ages 13-20, from across the country departed in small groups (maximum 20 students) for destinations in the Rockies, Northwest or Alaska. As they return home in July and August, the students will be challenged to take what they've learned about the environment and make a difference in their hometowns.

"Our goal is to make the wilderness experience relevant to life by instilling group leadership skills," said co-founder Mike Cottingham.

While Wilderness Ventures strives to teach useful and confidence-building outdoor skills, it does so without losing focus on the importance of instilling life-lasting leadership skills as well. The group interaction process we develop and facilitate within our expeditions teaches young adults how to live and work together.

Now maligned, the potato has deep, honored roots

Searching for roots has become a popular pastime. But with all the assiduous digging by historical excavators, no one has paid tribute to one of the most fundamental "roots" of our nation's history — the potato, a root that gave comfort and sustenance to our persistent forebears.

Common in origin, lacking the symmetry and color of the more glamorous vegetables and even defamed for its carbohydrate content, the potato's place in history is on a par with its storage accommodation — a dark corner in the basement or under the sink.

The potato has been enjoyed throughout history by rich and poor alike.

It can be eaten without upsetting the diet. The caloric content of a potato is as great as that of an apple — a skinny 70 calories.

It is difficult to determine when the potato fell into disrepute.

Just a generation ago, dinner-time revolved around when the potatoes were "put on."

Potatoes were cooked in a style to complement the meat and were considered more an integral part of the meal than salad or another vegetable.

Commonly thought of as an Irish institution because of the dependency of the poor on it for survival, the potato is as American as "baseball, hot dogs, apple pie and Chevrolet."

The potato's history dates back to 1621 when it was brought to Virginia by way of Bermuda.

The Irish potato got its name from the immigrants who brought it with them when they settled here. Well, the Irish knew the value of the humble vegetable.

The potato had not only been the backbone of their diet, they had also become so economically dependent on it that when the Irish potato crop failed in 1845, thousands of Irish starved to death or immigrated to America.

The Irish weren't the only people who had the potato to thank for survival.

The ugly tubular beauty fed France's starving peasants during the Revolution, and

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

those who lived through the Depression in America know how potatoes filled empty stomachs.

So adaptable was the potato that even those who were dispossessed of homes, could toss a potato into a campfire to cook. Its lovely, steaming white softness comforted both body and spirit and encouraged the homeless to keep going.

Today, the potato serves as a missionary among the deprived. It is still a mainstay among the Indians of Peru where it is too cold to grow corn or wheat.

There, the potatoes are laid out in the mountain air to freeze and thaw. When this process is completed, old men, women and children trample them underfoot to press out juice. The result, called "hamot," is carried in small wooden bags as a staple for herdsmen.

It is said that Americans eat more potatoes than any other vegetable. A health and nutrition tip of the day contends that the potato is a fiber-packed, nutrient-rich vegetable.

A medium baked potato with skin has nearly twice the potassium of a medium banana and half the recommended dietary allowance of vitamin C; it's also high in niacin, vitamin B6 and fibers. It has only 70 calories, about the same as a cup of rice or pasta.

It is estimated that 12 million tons of potatoes are consumed annually. They rank with wheat and corn as the world's most important food crop.

Vodka is a most democratic drink. It mixes well with anything and is made from potatoes.

Potato starch is widely used as a thinner.

Although it will never replace its plainer relative, the sweet potato is up a notch socially in the lineage of the potato family.

Served at family feasts, blended with butter, marshmallows and brown sugar, the sweet potato holds its own with turkey, plum pudding and pumpkin pie.

Versatile in its comeliness, planted in a jar of water, the sweet potato can develop a pretty vine to grace the kitchen windowsill.

King Louis XVI was so taken by the flowers produced by the sweet potato vine, he wore them in his buttonhole. George Washington Carver found 118 products could be made from the sweet potato.

From a plain beginning, the little brown spud can emerge as a beautiful addition to a satisfying dinner. Steam floating up from the crisp, freshly broken skin of a baked potato can set the mood for the relaxed enjoyment of good things to follow.

Crinkly fried with tender middles, scalloped in cream, delicately seasoned with sweet butter, or carefully blended with onions and pimientos — and browned just right — potatoes can be the meal's piece de resistance. It is indeed a comfort food.

Let us remember its goodness as food, its importance to our industry and contribution to our survival. Let's join with Falstaff in tribute as he cried, "Let the sky rain potatoes!"

Seniors need water for their good health

As we age, we may think we need less water because we don't seem to get as thirsty as when we were younger, but actually the reverse is true. Drinking ample water and other fluids is important for everyone, but especially so for seniors, according to a nutrition expert.

"Our thirst mechanism becomes less reliable as we age," says Susan M. Kleiner Ph.D., R.D., a dietitian and fitness expert who has researched the effects of hydration on the body. "Because we aren't thirsty we forget to drink water or other fluids. Over time, this can create a chronic water debt that may contribute to overall feelings of fatigue, minor headaches, and loss of appetite, among other symptoms."

One of the easiest things we can do for good health is to drink plenty of fluids. The recommended eight glasses of water a day is just a starting point for most people, and this is especially true for seniors, Kleiner points out. She cites research conducted by The Brita Products Company that shows many people don't drink enough fluids and they walk around mildly dehydrated.

Even mild dehydration can be a special problem for seniors, Kleiner says. "By our 70s, our kidneys filter waste about half as fast as they did when we were 30. So increased fluid intake is crucial for waste removal and it also helps to prevent kidney stones." She notes that it's also important when taking medications. "Medications are designed to work best in a well hydrated body. If we're dehydrated, they may not work as well as intended. In fact, in a dehydrated body, there may be negative effects if a person is taking more than one medication."

Studies show that to produce perspiration, seniors' internal body temperatures must rise higher than someone younger. Since heat escapes through sweat, older people tend to retain heat, which can rise to dangerous levels if the body is not properly hydrated. This is especially true in warmer climates.

Kleiner notes that ample water offers many benefits. It aids digestion and regularity, helps carry nutrients in the blood stream, increases blood volume and helps circulation. And when we get sick, as with the flu or a cold, water helps the body deal with the illness. "We're less physically resilient when we're dehydrated," Kleiner notes.

Seniors should have a water plan, Kleiner advises. They need to remind themselves to drink water during the day. She says she keeps a Brita water filtration pitcher on the kitchen counter to remind herself and her family to drink water throughout the day. "It's an easy and inexpensive way to get good tasting water. And it's great for seniors who don't want to be lifting heavy bottles. The smaller pitchers are light yet provide ample water for one or two people."

And how much water is enough? According to Kleiner, that depends on your age, level of health and fitness, activity level and even the temperature. What we do know, she points out, is that the recommended eight glasses of water every day is the minimum. Eight glasses (about 64 ounces) is roughly the amount of water our bodies lose and need to replace each day — even if we are inactive. When we are more active, or the temperature rises, we need to increase water intake. A brisk walk on a warm day may increase our water needs by two glasses and a round of golf by four glasses, Kleiner notes.

Her point? "Drink water regularly throughout the day, not just when you're thirsty. If you're thirsty, you're probably already somewhat dehydrated," she says.

Water tips for seniors

Here are some hydration tips for seniors from The Brita Products Company:

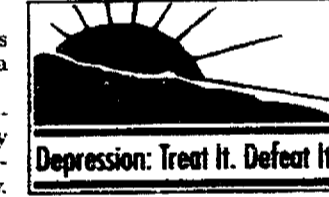

- Drink at least eight 8-ounce glasses of water daily and space your water consumption throughout the day. Don't wait until you are thirsty to drink. That means you're already slightly dehydrated.

- Drink a glass of water every hour or so during the day. To remind yourself, keep a glass on the kitchen or bathroom sink or, better yet, a full water filtration pitcher. Increase consumption if the weather is hot or you are more physically active.

- If you are dieting or adding more fiber to your diet, drink an extra glass or two of water daily. Dieting requires more water to help eliminate the extra waste our bodies create, and water helps process extra fiber.

- Drink extra water if you drink coffee, tea or an alcoholic beverage. Caffeine and alcohol are diuretics and cause us to excrete water, so we need to drink more. The same is true for soft drinks containing caffeine.

- Increase water consumption when you are ill. Your body can deal better with common illnesses, such as colds and the flu, when you are well hydrated. Also, being adequately hydrated will enable medications to work properly.

Good Old Days Dance for seniors

Services for Older Citizens (SOC) and the MichCon Foundation have joined together to sponsor the ninth annual Good Old Days Dance for older adults.

According to Joan Thornton, dance chairperson, the festivities include entertainment reminiscent of a summer outing as well as music for dancing and listening. An ice cream truck will serve old-time favorites; prizes will be awarded.

The dance will be held in the Ballroom of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial from noon to 3 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 28.

Admission is by advance ticket and is limited to seniors in the MichCon service area. Seniors can pick up their free tickets from the SOC office between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. weekdays. SOC is located in Room 105 of the Barnes Community Education Building, 20090 Morningside between Cook Road and Vernier.

Blossom Lane gets new water mains

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Things could get sticky, literally, for the residents of Blossom Lane in the next few weeks, as Grosse Pointe Woods puts in new water mains along the street.

Water mains, said director of public service Tom Whitcher, are the pipes under the street that provide water to homes. They are going to be eight-inch concrete pipes and their installation is scheduled to be on Monday, Aug. 24.

"These pipes are replacing the original pipes that were installed to service the neighborhood over 40 years ago," Whitcher said. "As time goes on, the ground freezes, which can cause pipes to crack. Tree roots can get into the system, causing water to leak out. It's time to replace the pipes."

The city of Grosse Pointe Woods has to pay for every gallon of water it receives from Detroit, said Whitcher.

When a resident uses water, a meter measures how water goes to the house and the resident is billed accordingly.

But when water leaks through a cracked water main, the Woods has to pay Detroit for it.

The cost is added to all the water bills sent out. So by replacing aging mains, the city is actually working to reduce bills.

The water main is underground, between the sidewalk and the curb, said Whitcher. This means that the streets will be left alone, but the parts of residents' driveways between the curb and the sidewalk will be dug up.

Once the pipe is installed then that portion of the driveway will be recovered with asphalt or stone.

Once all the pipes are in, Pamar Construction will return to the job of repaving residential driveways in a more permanent fashion, said Whitcher.

Jenny King makes sweet music at Dream Cruise

Putting a cap on the growing Woodward Dream Cruise festival, Christ Church Cranbrook mixed music and special cars with its "carillon concours" Sunday after the cruise.

It may seem like an odd mix, the carillon and classic cars, but in fact it makes sense.

Christ Church Cranbrook carillonneur and artistic director Jenny King proclaimed the Sunday after the cruise "Carillon Concours Sunday" in planning the church's traditional summer carillon series of recitals.

Jenny's connection with the auto industry is well known, as she has been a free-lance auto writer for years and a regular contributor to this publication.

While working as a staff writer for Automotive News, she began studying performance on the carillon at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church under the former music director, Bill DeTurk, an accomplished carillonneur.

A carillon is a set of bells covering at least two octaves which can be played from a keyboard inside the bell tower. Grosse Pointe has two carillons, at Grosse Pointe Memorial and at Christ Church Grosse Pointe.

Detroit has one at Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian. In the North Woodward area, Kirk in the Hills Presbyterian Church and Christ Church Cranbrook have carillons.

There are two at the University of Michigan and one at Michigan State.

Jenny King is carillonneur at Jefferson Avenue Presbyterian and at Christ Church Cranbrook.

Any institution in Detroit almost certainly has ties to the automobile and this is very true of Christ Church Cranbrook.

The magnificent Gothic Episcopal church in Bloomfield Hills was built to a great extent, as was the Cranbrook school complex across the street, under leadership of the Scripps and the Booth families.

Autos

By Richard Wiigli

James Scripps founded The Detroit News in 1873 and his family was united to the Booth family by marriage. In 1912, James Scripps-Booth started an auto company to produce a very distinctive car bearing his name.

The original Scripps-Booth automobiles were cyclecars, using an air-cooled V-twin engine and final drive by leather belts.

In 1914, a Model C roadster was introduced powered by a 25-horsepower Sterling four-cylinder engine and using a driveshaft.

This was replaced in 1916 by the Model D, which had a V-8 engine and was built in roadster, touring and town car models.

Both the Model C and D had pointed radiators and the Model D town cars were quite similar to Mercedes in their appearance.

In July 1918, Scripps-Booth was acquired by William Durant for General Motors and the cars rapidly lost their individuality.

The 1918 model Scripps-Booth had a Chevrolet 490 engine, transmission and rear axle, so was really a Chevrolet in Scripps-Booth clothing. It also had a higher price tag than Chevrolet.

In 1919, the car had an Oakland chassis, Northway engine and Scripps-Booth body and radiator. In 1921, the distinctive Scripps-Booth pointed radiator was dropped and in 1923, the Scripps-Booth disappeared.

The two carillonneurs at the post-Dream Cruise recital both had automotive ties. Dennis Curry, carillonneur and interim organist at Kirk in the Hills Presbyterian Church in Bloomfield Hills is an engineer at Ford Motor Co. The other was Jenny King.

And one of the volunteer hostesses for the summer carillon series is Lenore Grabowsky, whose father Morris and uncle Max started the Grabowsky Motor Vehicle Co. in 1900 and began manufacturing the first gasoline-powered truck to operate in Detroit in 1902.

The company's name was changed to Rapid Motor Vehicle Co. in 1902 and was acquired by General Motors in 1909 and formed the basis for GMC Truck and Coach Division.

The concours itself drew several interesting cars, including a bright yellow '72 Morgan Plus 8 sports car.

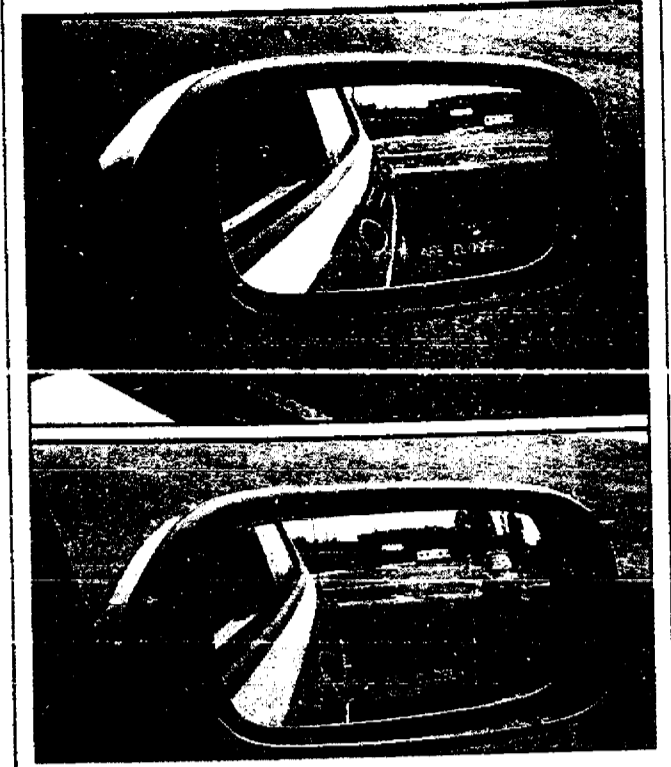

The British sports car features a wooden frame and part of its mystique is a leather strap which keeps the bonnet from popping open on a rough road.

The Morgan is owned by Richard Ruelle, of Farmington Hills.

But Christ Church's rector, the Rev. Edward L. Mullins, stole the show and startled the carillon fans with his '82 Freeway, a weird little "cycle car" made by H&M Vehicles of Minnesota.

"They only made 750 of them," he said, adding that he bought it during a gasoline crisis. "It gets about 100 miles per gallon on the highway," he said. "It's fun to drive and it's pretty unique. I couldn't let this go."

Another crowd-pleaser was carillonneur Jenny King's '54 Chevrolet Bel Air two-door sedan. She has owned the car about 20 years, bought it because it aroused feelings of nostalgia as it looked like a car owned by the parents of a friend when she was a school-girl in Grosse Pointe.

Reduced 'blind spot'

A split-angle passenger-side outside rearview mirror has been introduced by Saab on its 9-5 and 9-3 models to reduce the "blind spot" in the driver's right-side field of vision. Saab said this unique wide-angle mirror increases the driver's field of view by 30 percent over a conventional convex mirror of the same size. The view looks clear with a conventional mirror (top), but the wider field of view from Saab's wide-angle mirror (below) reveals a vehicle in the driver's "blind spot."

Motorcycle helmets help prevent brain injuries

Head injuries are the leading cause of death in motorcycle accidents. The Michigan State Medical Society reminds you that a motorcycle helmet is your best protection from head injuries.

Michigan state law requires all motorcyclists and passengers to wear a helmet. Although a motorcycle helmet may not always save a life, it is 67 percent effective in preventing brain injuries.

Here are some things to remember when choosing a motorcycle helmet:

- Buy a helmet that offers the most protection without being uncomfortable.
- Make sure the helmet meets the Department of Transportation's Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard 218. (Look for the DOT symbol on the back of the helmet. Also helmets that comply with these standards will have a firm Styrofoam inside liner).

- Make sure your helmet can be seen. Bright colored helmets or helmets with reflective tape on the back are the most visible.

- Make sure the helmet fits properly. It should feel snug, and not move back and forth on your head. However, it should not prevent you from turning your head to look for traffic.
- Always fasten the chin strap; an unfastened helmet will fall off in an accident.

- Do not use a damaged helmet. replace the helmet if you have been in an accident.

The Michigan State Medical Society is the professional association of 14,000 medical doctors in Michigan. Visit the medical society's home page for more health-related information at www.msms.org.

Park council debates lot splits

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

When the Grosse Pointe Park City Council debated whether or not to grant a lot split to Lorenzo Cavaliere, owner of 1040 Harvard, it was a taste of things to come because, as mayor Palmer Heenan put it, the economics of Park real estate makes more lot splits inevitable.

Cavaliere and his attorney Richard Darke came before the council Monday with a request to split the large lot at 1040 Harvard into two smaller lots. Cavaliere, a contractor, would then build a home on the second lot. He told the council that the plan is for him and his fiancée, once they are married, to move into the second house.

The house already on the lot would then be sold to someone else and the end result would be two families living in two houses. This plan met with strong neighborhood opposition. Several Harvard area residents got up and spoke against the lot split plan.

Christine Murphy, who lives next door to 1040 Harvard, told the council that her sun light would be blocked out by a new house. Walter Banka said that the 1040 Harvard address is kind of an area landmark and "shoehorning" a new house into the lot would hurt local property values.

Other residents were afraid that the new house would look awkward in relation to the surrounding neighborhood and that it would not be up to area standards.

Cavaliere said that since he plans to live in the new house, it would be up to the highest standards. He said that he was asking for a lot split and not a zoning code variance. The new lot would be consistent with other lots on the block and a home could be built on that lot without any variances.

Mayor Palmer Heenan spoke bluntly to Cavaliere. He said that there was a marketing problem.

"Your neighbors oppose this lot split," said Heenan. "We are elected to represent their interests as well as yours and they have a lot more votes."

Cavaliere appreciated Heenan's honesty and asked what was the best option. Heenan said that Cavaliere should get together with area residents and explain to them what his plans are.

"What I'm hearing tonight is that a lot of people are worried about what might happen," said Heenan. "People don't like uncertainty. If you explain your position and work with people, who after all will be your neighbors, I think you might have a better chance before the council."

Councilman Vernon Ausherman then made a motion to table the lot split request until the next city council meeting on Monday, Sept. 14. He urged Cavaliere to use the next month to meet with residents and work with them to overcome their fears.

But this did not end the discussion on lot splits. Councilman Greg Theokas said that there are several proposed changes in current zoning ordinances before the city's ordinance review committee.

These proposed changes, said Theokas, deal with the size of houses that can be built on split lots. He said that he's seen houses go up on newly split lots and he didn't like how the houses looked in relation to the surrounding neighborhood.

Heenan said that the problem is that Park real estate has risen greatly in value in the last five years. This increase in real estate prices makes it logical to split lots. He added that in the next few months, the council will probably see similar requests.

"Real estate values put great pressure on property owners to use all the city's available land," said Heenan. "People like our schools and our parks and they want to live here, but there aren't many places that can be built on, except for large lots that can be split. This puts the council in a difficult spot."

Heenan pointed out that a nice $400,000 house properly built, with neighborhood ambience in mind, adds to a block. But he also said that people want to put up the biggest house possible and they have been doing that on relatively smaller lots. He cited the houses as the former Morrison estate on Bishop as an example of big houses on small lots.

"We don't want high-density housing in the Park, but real estate prices push development in that direction," said Heenan. "The council must come up with a strategy to handle this problem. We'll be seeing more cases like this in the future."

Farms book spells out justice for kids

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

In what might be called "Crime and Punishment Grosse Pointe Style," a pamphlet has been published explaining how juveniles fit into the criminal justice system.

"Youth Handbook," edited by Lt. Mark Brecht of the Grosse Pointe Farms Department of Public Safety, explains how laws apply to kids and how the juvenile court enters the picture when rules are broken.

It also outlines the roles of the department's Detective Bureau, Youth Service Division and youth officer Mike McCarthy, and the traffic safety department and traffic safety officer Donald Dewey.

In a section dealing with the Farms municipal court, judge Matthew Rumora invites kids to watch court proceedings every other Wednesday of the month.

In a simple question-and-answer format, the handbook provides a general overview of the role and jurisdiction of juvenile court. The book defines different levels of crimes, from civil infractions to felonies, and explains youth-oriented rules like open house parties, use of bicycles and mopeds, and truancy.

Another section explains the city's curfew for minors:

In general, it is unlawful for any minor under the age of 15 to be on the street, sidewalk, park, vacant lot or any other public place between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. unless:

- Accompanied by a parent or legal guardian over the age of 21;
- On an errand directed by the parent or guardian;

The section on traffic laws reminds readers that hitchhiking is illegal in the Farms, as is walking, jogging and in-line skating in the street, except to cross at a crosswalk.

Japan, China, Russia: All 3 overshadow markets

It's hard to be optimistic about the market when the Dow was down four out of five days last week, for a weekly loss of another 173 points, or 2 percent.

The other closely followed indices, the S&P 500, the NASDAQ Composite and the Russell 2000, all suffered a similar fate.

The DJI, at 8,425 last Friday, was down 9.8 percent from its all-time high of 9,338 just four weeks earlier. And only 21 Dow points above the 10 percent decline to constitute an "official correction."

A "correction?" No, it was more like a slaughter! Last Thursday, Aug. 13, Du Pont (DD, about 53-1/4) — one of the bluest of the DJI "blue chips" — crashed 5-1/2 points, or 9.1 percent, in just one day!

Du Pont warned that its third-quarter earnings would be less this year than a year ago because of declining prices in its oil subsidiary, declining volume in its polyester yarns and slower agricultural chemical sales.

Meanwhile, investors poured a net $1.5 billion into equity mutual funds last week and $1.4 billion into money market funds. It has been reported that some portfolio managers are building up cash reserves, and being not so anxious to put new cash into the market.

Here's a list of current Wall Street worries this week:

- Russia devalues its ruble currency;
- Asian flu infects American corporate profits;
- the new Japanese government loses effectiveness;
- China devalues its currency;
- the President Clinton/Lewinsky "matter"; and
- Iraq's refusal to permit full weapons inspections.

The good news is that summer is more than half over. And no interest rate changes were expected from the August meeting of the Fed's Open Market Committee last Tuesday.

Let's talk...STOCKS

The media really got hyped-up over Russia's problems last week. It's stock market, what little there ever was, is down 85 percent over the past two years. And last week's banking crisis appears to be more than a liquidity problem.

George Soros, the American redeemer of the Eastern bloc countries, is calling for a "modest devaluation."

Last Friday, Russian federal government nine-month bonds sold to yield 150 percent per annum, after Moody's and Standard & Poor's, the two largest bond rating agencies, downgraded Russia's federal and provincial bond debt.

Did you see that the New York Times (Aug. 14) reported that President Clinton is scheduled to go to Russia Sept. 1 and 2?

You will recall that Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin orchestrated a massive currency intervention of the yen, just prior to President Clinton's visit to Japan last June.

Not unexpected, there has been a worldwide flight to quality, which only means U.S. dollar-denominated Treasury Bonds. Last week, the Treasury Department conducted its quarterly auction of new notes and bonds, the proceeds of which refunded a like amount of maturing debt.

The 30-year Treasury Bonds closed last Friday to yield 5.54 percent, a new 30-year low in yield. Of all the Treasury debt, only the long bonds presently yield more than the current 5-1/2 percent Federal Funds rate.

Some bond analysts are now predicting that the long bond will increase in price and decline in yield to 5 percent by year-end (bond prices move inversely to yields).

More script

Thanks to reader Charles Van Hove of Grosse Pointe Woods for setting LTS straight about money collectors, those not collecting stocks! First of all, the coin collectors (and medals, transit tokens, etc.) are called numismatists.

Whereas, the paper-money collectors, sometimes ridiculed as "rag-pickers" (because the paper stock usually has a high rag content), are called syngraphists.

Another fast-growing collector group is the seriphology society, which searches for unusual stock and bond certificates. Old certificates were usually beautifully engraved and were authenticated by manual (pen and ink) signatures by the corporate officers.

Especially valuable are those with the signatures of J.P. Morgan, Cornelius Vanderbilt, John D. Rockefeller and Henry Ford.

And don't forget the stamp collectors, who are called philatelists. Collecting is an all-American hobby. What do you collect?

You're joking, aren't you?

Last week, Mrs. LTS brought her car into the auto hospital. She has a typical Grosse Pointe wife's automobile, a 1991 Big Three model with 33,164 miles (to and from the supermarket, the drug store, the beauty parlor and bridge club once a week).

Back when they still pumped gasoline, the service station attendants would compliment Mrs. LTS on her "cream-puff." Now, when she takes her foot off the brake pedal, the brake lights stay "on."

A squirt from the "fix-all" WD-40 can didn't help a bit, and the auto insurance agent asked why we had so many road service claims (to jump-start the dead battery).

The Big Three auto hospital service manager told Mrs. LTS just to leave her car. He said they were so busy, they couldn't look at it for two or three days. As promised, they phoned the third day. The S.M. told Mrs. LTS that a complete repair would require removal of the entire brake pedal mechanism.

He recommended a new replacement system, which would cost $2,300, including labor. But a rebuilt system could be installed for only $1,300. Or she could have a brake pedal adjustment for $30, which was the cost of one-half hour labor.

Mrs. LTS told them "PIABT," which means "Put It All Back Together!"

When Mrs. LTS told this tale to LTS, he asked: "You're kidding, aren't you?"

LTS thinks we've finally found a use for all those green Detroit Free Press rubber bands in that kitchen drawer. We'll tie them all together, end-to-end, then attach one end to the brake pedal and the other end to the dome light.

When you take your foot (A) off the brake pedal (B), the rubber bands (C) pull the brake pedal (B) back upright, disconnecting the brake light switch (D).

That should fix the problem!

The Beach Grill's goal is comfort

By Ann L. Fouty
News Editor

ST. CLAIR SHORES — Those who patronize The Beach Grill will have the weighty responsibility of enjoying themselves.

Creating an atmosphere of comfort and relaxation were requirements set forth by The Beach Grill's owner, Al Wagner, to his designers.

The Beach Grill, located at Jefferson Beach and the newest Nautical Mile restaurant, reflects the water in each of its two indoor dining areas.

Opening today, the three separate dining and drinking areas have been built for a capacity of 800 customers and each of those customers can have a view of Lake St. Clair year round.

The restaurant's entrance from the lake was dredged so boaters are able to cruise up to the deck, where deck boys will escort customers from their boats, mooring the boats nearby.

Entering either from the lake side or from the parking lot, customers walk into the high-ceilinged foyer of the white building which centers around a multi-colored compass.

A sleek reservation desk erupts from the middle of the compass and directs the eye to the skylight, complete with small lights and spheres.

At this point, the customer makes a decision. To one side is the dining area and the opposite direction is the bar and music room. Eating on an outside deck, furnished with white tables, yellow umbrellas and cobalt blue chairs, is a third choice for summertime visitors.

Selecting the bar will give eyes a palette of bright colors to absorb.

The English-made bar stool seats are covered with blue, eggplant or red and the teak and maple vinyl flooring was designed for durability, said interior designer Tami Kessler of Grosse Pointe Woods. The maple continues throughout the restaurant, particularly in the tables.

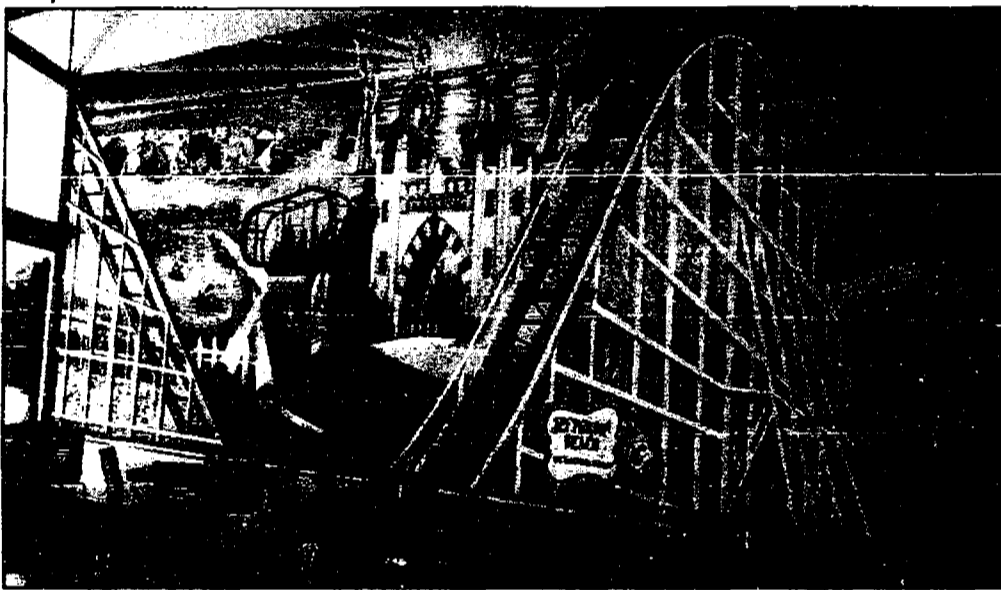

As she talks of the bar as a fun and relaxing place to patronize, on comes a wall of 12 screens, divided into three sections so viewers will be able to watch three different sporting events or news events.

Below the bar is an area for a live band or disc jockey and a small dance floor.

Tables and intimate booths in blue and red fill the room. Hand-blown glass flowers on steel stems, made by CCS student Andrew Madvin, rise to the ceiling, which has high tech lighting, Kessler said.

The floor patterns and carpeting patterns relate to the angle of the ceiling beams which follow the lake's pattern, she said.

For a quieter setting, the patron can choose the dining room, which has both maple tables, Italian made chairs and booths of red and blue fabric seats, eggplant blue and small above-the-table lighting.

Chairs in all three areas were chosen, Kessler said, for the comfort of the customer.

Brilliant paintings, colorful 12-inch plates and an optical illusion of endless colorful circles add to the feeling of fun dining.

A 3-D mural, by Californian Dan Melandez, depicts Jefferson Beach as an amusement park of the 1930s, complete with a carousel horse, roller coaster, boats, tickets and the old ballroom with Wagner twirling his dance partner.

Food will be prepared by executive chef John Wesenberg and executive sous chef Joe Czerniakowski.

With a universal menu, Czerniakowski said, the kitchen will be smoking the salmon, creating meals with foods that are in season and inviting people to be imaginative with their pizzas.

Czerniakowski promised "good, quality food that is fresh and made in house."

The Beach Grill will offer Sunday brunch — reservations are suggested by calling (810) 771-4455, and private parties and catering.

Man threatens parking officer

What began as a normal case of someone refusing to remove his bright red 1994 GMC pickup truck from the sidewalk on the Hill got a little screwy when he threatened to kill a parking enforcement officer. "Hitler!" the man yelled at the officer.

"You know who I am and the people I know that can make trouble for you," he yelled at police who responded to a call to help an officer in trouble.

The case, involving a 63-year-old resident from the 1000 block of Marion Court in Grosse Pointe Woods, has been forwarded to the Grosse Pointe Farms city attorney.

The suspect "has an extensive poor driving history and a warrant from District Court in Clinton Township," also threatened Farms officers and bashed his truck into the car of the parking officer on Tuesday, Aug. 11 at 2 p.m., causing minor damage to the car's front bumper.

Bad habit going on at Nuns Walk

Let's hope the person responsible for damaging Nun's Walk has more money than brains.

Ten residents of the first block of Kenwood in Grosse Pointe Farms estimate damages of $33,000 to lawns and underground sprinkler systems due to a series of recent lawn jobs in the block.

The latest incident took place during the night of Monday, Aug. 10.

Police have taken tire impressions from the damaged lawns and suspect the vehicle in question was a truck of some kind. The home owners say they'll prosecute.

The same night, two lawns in the 600 block of Rivard were damaged.

Casing the area for easy pickings

Two Detroit men were arrested on Tuesday, Aug. 11, at 12:30 p.m. for stealing golf clubs and a jar of money from the trunk of a car parked in front of a residence in the 400 block of Roland Court in the Farms.

Police were called to the neighborhood to investigate the youths' suspicious behavior as they cased the area from a red 1985 Ford Mustang.

The pair, 18-years-old cousins wanted in other cities for violating probation, paid bond and were released to officers from Oakland and Wayne counties.

Failed car theft

An attempted car theft in the 400 block of Lexington in the Farms left a green 1998 Jeep Cherokee with a broken passenger window and damaged ignition at 3 a.m. on Monday, Aug. 10.

Drunken driver

A 36-year-old man from St. Clair Shores was having trouble keeping his pickup truck between the curbs of northbound Lakeshore near Colonial on Friday, Aug. 14, at 9:34 p.m. No wonder.

He blew a .21 blood alcohol content. After a night in jail, he posting $100 bond, was given a court date and released.

BB gun taken

Police confiscated a BB gun from a 13-year-old Detroit youth as he walked along Mack near Fisher on Thursday, Aug. 13 at 7:08 p.m.

The kid's parents were notified that the gun would be returned to them.

Speeding and drinking & jail

A late night speeder was arrested for drunken driving on Lakeshore at 3 a.m. Thursday, Aug. 13.

The suspect, a 23-year-old man from Dearborn whose license was suspended and had an outstanding warrant from Pontiac, blew a .145 preliminary blood test.

He posted bond and was given a court date.

Warrants and suspensions

A 22-year-old man from Highland park renewed his association with the criminal justice system at 12:57 a.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 12 after being pulled over by Shores police for speeding 57 mph down Lakeshore near Woodland Shore. He had five outstanding traffic warrants from Romulus and Highland Park, and his driver's license had been suspended seven times.

His car was impounded and he was released on $100 bond.

Never had a driver's license

A 26-year-old Detroit woman told Shores officers that she never had a driver's license after being stopped on Lakeshore near the Ford estate on Tuesday, Aug. 11, at 10:54 p.m.

Police pulled her over because her forward vision was partially blocked by flowers decorating the car's dashboard.

Wrestler loses boots in Farms

A woman from Warren reported that her car was broken into while parked in the municipal lot at Mack and Moross on Wednesday, Aug. 5, between 8 and 11 a.m.

Among items stolen, she reported in-line skates worth $200, a $50 bowling ball and bag, $50 in clothes, a $200 weed whacker and a pair of black leather wrestling boots of undetermined value.

Cellular phones

In a recent upturn of thefts of cellular telephones in the Pointes, an AirTouch phone and Bell radar detector were taken from a 1998 Lincoln parked in the 17100 block of Maumee between the hours of 1 and 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 4.

On Friday, Aug. 7, at 2:25 p.m., a resident in the first block of Cranford Lane made a belated report of a cell phone stolen on Aug. 2.

On Saturday, Aug. 8, at 10:25 p.m., a cell phone was reported missing from a car parked in the 490 block of Rivard.

Woods police nab fugitive

A routine traffic stop by Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers resulted in the arrest of a fugitive from an electronic tether program.

The incident started on Thursday, Aug. 13.

A Woods officer noticed that the windshield of a 1976 GMC pickup was severely cracked.

When the officer pulled the car over on Mack, near Kerby, a routine check of the driver's background revealed that he was wanted in Lansing for walking away from his electronic tether program.

The suspect was taken into custody until offers from Lansing police could pick him up.

The original crime for which the suspect was arrested was armed robbery.

Hacker hits car

A resident who lives in the 1300 block of Vernier discovered that the rear window of his 1992 Pontiac was smashed on Thursday, Aug. 13, between 7 and 7:45 p.m.

When police arrived at the scene to investigate, they found a golf ball in the vicinity of the car.

They believe there is a connection.

So far no duffer has come forward to claim the ball. One hopes he or she at least took a penalty stroke.

Window broken

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers investigated an incident in which a rock was thrown through the front window of a sandwich shop in the 15200 block of Kercheval.

The incident happened between 2:20 and 4:45 a.m. on Thursday, Aug. 13.

The cash register was moved around, but no money was taken.

The only thing missing was the Humane Society canister that usually was next to the register. It contained an undetermined amount of change.

Park thefts

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers are investigating a number of thefts that took place in Windmill Pointe Park between Monday, Aug. 10 and Sunday, Aug. 16.

The first incident happened between 10 p.m. Aug. 10 and 6:45 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 12.

A stereo receiver, a CD player and VCR and six life jackets were taken from a boat on pier 4.

The next reported incident took place between 5 and 6 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 16. A wallet containing $500 and some clothes were taken from a bench near the pool.

The clothes were later found in an unused locker.

The wallet, minus the cash and credit cards, was found on the street in the 800 block of Barrington.

The final incident took place between 4:30 and 6 p.m. A man's watch and some cash were taken from an unlocked locker in the men's locker room by the pool.

Police are investigating.

A frame job

Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers were called to an optician's shop in the 19500 block of Mack at about 4:45 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 6, to investigate the theft of several expensive eyeglass frames.

When officers got to the scene, they were told that a couple had just come in and ordered some eyeglasses to be made up.

While the female half of the team was talking to the staff, her partner walked around the store.

After he rejoined his partner, they suddenly departed the store after canceling their order.

The staff then called the doctor who wrote the eyeglass prescription and were told that it was altered by the couple and was not valid.

A check of the store revealed that several display frames were missing. Police continue to investigate.

Flags fly away

A resident who lives in the 1300 block of Edmonton Drive in Grosse Pointe Woods reported that at about 1 a.m. on Monday, Aug. 3, he heard a noise coming from his front lawn.

When he went to investigate, he saw two juveniles pounding flag poles, with flags still attached, into his front lawn. The youths fled the scene in a black Jeep Cherokee.

Five of the flags were American and one was a "birthday" flag.

Later that morning Woods officials received reports from residents about their flags being stolen.

No motive for the incident has been discovered.

Phone felons

A Park resident saw two youths on bicycles looking into cars in the area of Vernor and Three Mile.

Thinking this was suspicious, police were called.

When they arrived in the area, they found the two 16-year-old Detroit residents, both of whom were carrying cellular telephones.

When questioned by police, they gave the officers conflicting stories as to how they obtained the telephones.

A check on the phones revealed that they were just stolen from a car in the 1200 block of Yorkshire and from a car parked in the City of Grosse Pointe.

The phones were confiscated and the youths turned over to Wayne County juvenile court authorities.

Don't 'crack up' over driveway repairs

Mr. Hardware, my driveway has settled in front of my garage. There now exists a three-inch bump when I drive my car into it. What do you recommend to use to make a ramp so my car doesn't need realignment before its time? Steve K. of Harper Woods

A. Mr. Steve, there is more than one way to "slope" the ramp. You can use several different products:

- Patching cement with its own built-in binder.
- Sand mix cement with latex binder.
- With black top patch.
- Layers of plywood for a temporary solution.
- And, lastly, get it mudjacked and hydraulically raised even with the garage.

Mudjacking is a process of drilling carefully placed holes in a slab of concrete. Then they pump mud into the holes and raise the concrete back into their original position.

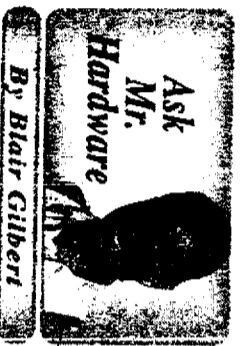

Most "mudjacker" offer a one-year or more guarantee, so check their credentials so you will be able to find them if something goes wrong.

Repairing a sagging slab with mudjacking would be my first choice. The only thing stopping me could be the price. The other drawback could be the condition of the cement. If it is broken, most mudjacker's won't take the job, especially if it is in several pieces. If it is unble to be lifted, you will be forced to build a ramp of some sort or replace the concrete.

The first thing you must know is you can't patch over a beam or a crack with a masonry product. Living in Michigan, we have this winter frost that moves our "un-finished" concrete an inch or more. (At least until this past winter.) When this winter's frost moves the cement as little as 1/16th of an inch, the patch over the seam will crumble and flake off. This is why I recommend foam and caulk between the garage and the driveway.

When the cement moves the foam will let it and so will the caulk. And they will require less maintenance next fall if it should need to be touched up in preparation for winter.

Back to the ramp: If the concrete isn't too bad, only a crack or two, cement patch may be for you. If the bump is small or doesn't run very far across the front of the garage, you could use patching cement (vinyl concrete patch). It is nice because it has some glue built into it; although it is a little expensive. If several bags are required for the ramp, bagged cement and a concrete binder would become more economical. Regular cement won't bond to old concrete very well without some help so you use a masonry binder. It is latex "glue" applied to the cement before pouring the ramp; it bonds the new cement to the old.

Crack in the cement. Make cardboard expansion joints in all the cracks in the cement. The bigger the crack, the bigger the expansion joint should be. A "real" expansion joint is about one-half of an inch thick to allow for movement, so don't make your cardboard ones too thin.

Cut your "expansion joint" the height of the top of your ramp. This will serve as a guide when you are pouring the cement ramp.

If you have too many cracks or you aren't patient enough to separate all of them, maybe blacktop patch is for you. Wait for a nice warm day — it is more flexible when it is warm — and pour out of the bag and tamp smooth. It is not too pretty but it is fast and flexible.

Thomas Ervin Let's Talk About Real Estate

"WHEN SELLING, STAY AHEAD OF THE MARKET"

Before putting a home on the market, there is usually some time spent on researching the current real estate market in order to arrive at an appropriate asking price. Recent sales are examined and competitive properties are evaluated to see how much of a market they pose for a buyer's attention. After the house is on the market and the asking price is set, however, market data is too often ignored until an offer is made by a buyer.

I believe a prudent seller should stay in touch with changing developments in the marketplace. Some of these changes could have a major impact on the ability of a property to be sold in the foreseeable future. Here are some things to watch:

COMPETING HOMES NEARBY
 The most important factors to consider are similar homes now competing for your buyer. How is your home positioned when compared with them? Have any of them had a price reduction? Have any sold and, if so, for how much? Are there any new listings that have just come on the market that are in direct competition with you? Also, have any listings expired because they were too badly overpriced? Your home may have been very competitive when you listed it, but it may no longer attract buyers because other homes are now a better buy.

THE LOCAL ECONOMY
 The real estate market is not the only thing that changes regularly. Is your local economy hot or cold or lukewarm? Is buyer confidence up or are buyers saying away until things look better? A buyer who is confident of his or her future usually offers more than someone who is interested in buying only if they can get a seal.

INTEREST RATES
 Are interest rates rising, falling, or remaining steady? The worst time to have your home for sale is when rates are falling. Most people like to wait until rates have hit bottom before making a decision to buy.

ADVICE: Always list your home with a Realtor. They are aware of the factors listed above and their knowledge and expertise can help you get top dollar.

801 COMMERCIAL BUILDINGS

Do-it-yourselfers can handle brick pavers

Q. I see a lot of my neighbors installing brick-paver patios and walkways. What are the steps to install these pavers?
A. Every year, brick pavers become more popular. Homeowners are installing a lot of pavers themselves and saving a lot of money. For the last five years, I have been having a do-it-yourself clinic every Saturday at 10 a.m., and the attendance has been growing. By following the steps below you can achieve professional results. The key to great success lies in a solid foundation under the pavers. Many people think pavers are too complicated to install, but they're not.

1) First, choose the style of paver you wish to install and the size of the patio or walkway. Lay out the perimeter on the ground with a garden hose to help you visualize the size. The drop from your doorway or porch also needs to be noted in order to determine how many steps are needed, if any. Remove any existing concrete pavement, blocks or brick.

2) Now you are ready to start the installation. Place stakes for attaching the grade strings at the corners of the patio area a few inches from the edges. Now, we set the brick height of the patio at the doorway or porch first. This is normally the level side of the project area. The height is determined by measuring down from the porch cap or doorway the predetermined step heights. A common height for steps is between 6 and 8 inches in rise. If you are going to install multiple steps figure 6 inches rise per step for steps made with retaining wall and brick. It is best to keep all the steps the same rise heights.

Now, attach the strings on the sides of the patio. The slope should be about 1-1/2 inches per 10 feet of distance. Tie the string to the stake along the porch or house first then pull the string to the other side and determine which point is level height first. Now measure down 1-1/2 inches for each 10 feet in length. Repeat this procedure for the other side of the patio. Then connect the last two stakes. Walkways may vary on the slope of the brick.

3) Next, excavate the soil in the area 7 to 8 inches below the string lines and an extra 4 inches beyond the borders of the actual paver area. This will allow for about 5 inches of base material and 2 inches for the pavers.

4) The base for the paver project will consist of a geotextile fabric layer and a combination of 21AA crushed stone and slag sand. Fill in the first three inches with 21AA crushed stone and compact the area. The remaining height of slag sand and rough graded to about 2 inches is then filled with compact the area with the power tamper and regrade as necessary. Check your slag sand heights by sliding a brick between the string and the sand.

5) The next step is to do the final grading. To help achieve an even surface to your pavers, you will use a set of guide poles called screeding poles and a 2-by-4 straight-edge board. The longer the 2-by-4 board, the larger the area we can grade at one time. Set your screeding poles on the slag base parallel to each other crossing the grade strings at the opposite ends of the poles. The distance the poles should be set apart should be about a foot shorter than your grading board.

Next lower the screeding poles into the slag sand by digging a small trench in the sand about 1 inch deep. Set the height of the pole by using a brick paver as a spacer between the pole and the string. Add a little extra slag over the paving area and screed off the extra by pulling the screeding board over the poles. Compact the area and repeat this step two or three times. Remove one or both the poles to continue this process around the project area. Fill in and tamp the area where you remove the poles.

6) Now you are ready to lay the pavers in the area you graded. Start along the longest straight edge in a corner for most geometric styles. If you are installing a circular paver patio, the starting point is the center of the circle. Walkways are installed from one side to the other. Some steps are installed on the paver surface and others are installed on the compacted sand surface.

As you install the perimeter See LANDSCAPER, page 14

How safe is your food when the power is out?

Facing the recent weather conditions in the metro area, consumers have been out of power. The following steps can be taken to keep your food safe in your refrigerator/freezer.

- Dry ice can be purchased to keep your food coldest. A 50-pound block of dry ice should keep a full 48-cubic-foot freezer cold for up to 48 hours.
- When handling dry ice, precautionary measures should be taken. Gloves should be worn and tongs used when handling because it registers at 216°F. Wrap ice in brown paper for

- sausage, peanut butter and jelly.
- 4. Hard or processed cheese.
- 5. Fruit juice.
- 6. Fresh herbs and spices.
- 7. Breads, rolls and muffins.

The following foods would be considered unsafe to consume and should be discarded if kept above 40° F for more than two hours.

1. Raw or cooked meat, poultry

- or seafood.
- 2. Soft cheeses.
- 3. Dairy products.
- 4. Soups, stews and leftovers.
- 5. Creme filled pastries and custard.
- 6. Mayonnaise and tartar sauce.
- 7. Lunch meat.

Remember, "When in doubt, throw it out!"

longer storage and separate it from direct food contact with a piece of cardboard.

- Fill partly filled freezer with crumpled newspaper to cut down on air currents, which cause dry ice to dissipate.
- If no dry ice is available, the following precautions should be taken:

- The following foods would be safe if kept at room temperature (above 40° F) for a few days.
  1. Fresh fruits and vegetables.
  2. Dried fruits and coconut.
  3. Open jars of condiments, such as catsup, mustard, taco

Landscaper

row of pavers you will install your edge restraint on the borders next to grass or beds. Diamond-loc edging is what I prefer. It is a "T" shaped edging which keeps the bricks from moving horizontally. Then stake the edging in.

7. After all the full bricks are installed, you will cut any bricks that need to be fitted. This can be done with a saw, or most homeowners will rent a brick splitter. Now sweep the sand in the joints and sweep off the excess sand. Now compact the area with a machine power tamper or a hand tamper.

Library gets by with a lot of help from its Friends

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Residents of Grosse Pointe are likely to go on their thanks in part to the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library.

The Friends recently pledged $80,000 over two years to pay for 36 personal computers and related furniture for the community's Park, Central and Woods public libraries.

"This significant gift reaffirms how important the Friends are to the library," said Friends board member George Esler, the Friends' liaison to the library's technology committee.

In addition to providing approximately one-fifth of the cost of the project's hardware, the Friends will sponsor workshops for residents on how computers can be used for genealogical, medical and financial research.

The organization also worked for the passage of the library millage when the library system separated from the school district a few years ago.

Helping pay for the technology upgrade is the latest in a run of improvements that the Friends have donated to the library system, since the volunteer group was founded under the leadership of their first president, Mrs. Lloyd G. Hooker, in 1948.

These days, card catalogs that typified libraries are nothing but memories for all but the youngest generation of Grosse Pointe residents who have used the library since it was established in 1922.

In 1944, Joyce McCormick began her 42-year career with the library system. She worked in the library's first home, the basement of the Grosse Pointe Park police station. "The Friends have been a big influence on the library. They've helped me deal with improving the system," she said.

McCormick worked at numerous library locations, including the former main branch, now the Park branch, and a storefront library on Mack in the Woods. The former confectionery building had a tin roof and big picture window that let the sun in and made it hotter than you-know-what in the summer and colder than you-said-it in the winter," said McCormick.

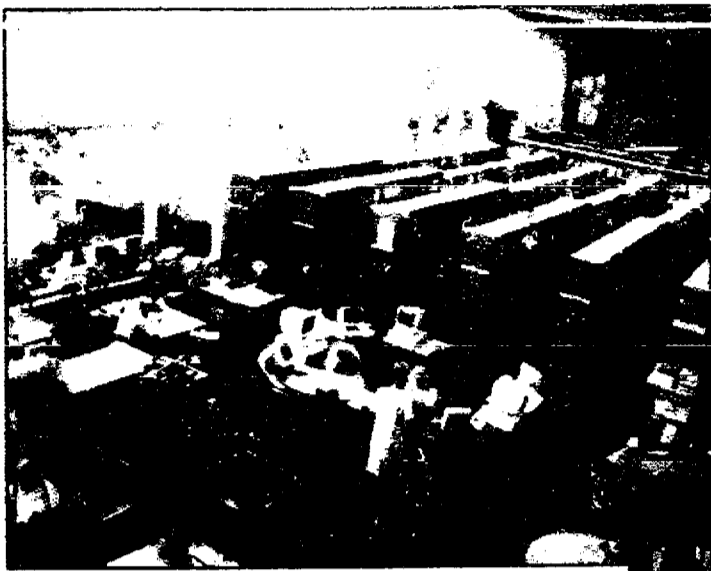

She also drove the bookmobile, a converted station wagon that was parked at the corner of McMillan and Moran under the shade of an umbrella.

"I remember one day it rained and the kids who had come by to check out books all piled into the vehicle to stay dry," she said.

These days, storefronts, basement locations and bookmobiles are history. If the library's computers are to keep from being surpassed by newer technology, they have to be upgraded and connected with other systems.

With a little help from the Friends, Grosse Pointe residents will soon be able to access the latest information through fast-working computers hooked up to neighboring databases and the Internet.

Helen Gregory, a reference librarian at the Central Branch, said the upgraded system will also provide greater access to periodicals

In the vintage photograph of the Central Branch taken shortly after it opened on Jan. 26, 1953, at the right, many of the bookshelves that seemed to be missing from the main reading room were actually in place in a back room that is now used for audio visual services and newspaper storage.

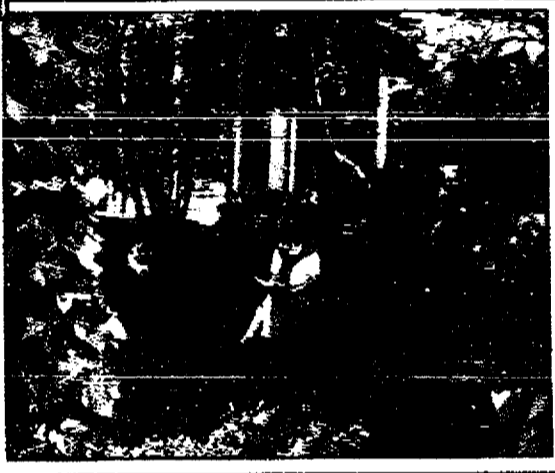

In a recent view, above, additional books fill the reading area and computers have replaced racks of card catalogs, yet the reference librarians seated near the center of both images remain the focus of the room.

As the library acquires more material there is less and less space for reading under the red, yellow and blue fins of a Calder "Mobile." The artwork has hung from the ceiling since being specially made for the building. An abstract tapestry by the Russian-born avant-garde artist Wassily Kandinsky hangs on the far wall in both vintage and modern photos.

Carolyn Campbell, at the lower right, takes a morning break from her job on the Hill to read a book in the courtyard of the Central Library. The courtyard is one of many enhancements to the library system made possible by bequests to the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library.

"The Boy and the Bear," above, is a small bronze sculpture by Marshall Fredericks that is located in the children's room. The work was adopted as the Friends' logo and is a reminder of the connection between a well-educated community and the future of its children. Nearly 38 percent of the library's holdings are in the juvenile collection.

Friends

stored on CD-ROMs.
To celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library, the organization has designated Saturday, Sept. 12, as Triple Play Weekend.
The event will be attended by the Friends' new president, Thomas Nowinski, who will begin his two-year term in September.
Triple Play Weekend will feature a used book sale and anniversary celebration on the terrace of the Central Library.

Central and Woods branches of the library system checked out nearly 216,000 books. Add more than 71,000 magazines, compact discs, videos and tools donated by the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club, and help from a dedicated group of concerned citizens can be appreciated.
Last year, the library added 15,465 volumes to its book collection, bringing the total to 153,450. Some of the new books were purchased with $10,000 raised since 1990 by the Friends' used book carts located at the three branches.

Vintage photos of the Park branch, above, and the Woods branch, below, of the Grosse Pointe Public Library were provided by Friends of the Grosse Pointe Library.

A silent auction is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the same location. The technology gift will be dedicated during the celebration.
The library system has proven itself to be self-sufficient since separating from the public school system a few years ago. But no matter how strong or rooted in the community, the organization can always use a little help.
Operating a library is a lot of work in a community where nearly 70 percent of the residents have library cards.
As of June 1998, the Park,

The system served 187,000 patrons. Reference librarians answered the questions of nearly 33,000 patrons. Nearly 6,000 people attended 200 special events.
The average annual donation to join the Friends is $50 and includes a subscription to the library's newsletter, "Library Pointes," the Friends' publication, "Friends News," a calendar of events that take place at the library each year, including discounts on art rentals and first chance at used book sales.

Eye exams important for children starting school

Many children don't know they have a vision problem because what they see appears normal to them. And even the most conscientious parent may not identify symptoms of an eye problem in their child, according to Patrick Dennehy, M.D., a pediatric ophthalmologist at Henry Ford Health System.

"Vision problems may be simple to correct or a sign of a more serious health condition," Dr. Dennehy says. "The earlier an eye problem is detected, the greater the chance that it can be effectively treated."

Nearsightedness, or myopia, which can be corrected with eyeglasses, is the most common problem ophthalmologists see in children. But children also may be born with eye disorders including congenital cataracts and glaucoma which may require more complex treatment. If not treated promptly, these conditions can lead to long-term vision impairment.

Dr. Dennehy recommends eye examinations for children at birth, 6 months of age, 3 years of age and 5 years of age (before starting first grade).

These screenings are performed by the pediatrician or by the school system. If there is any suggestion of an abnormality at any of these screenings, the child should visit an eye care professional.

Between routine screenings, parents may look for signs of eye problems in their children and if necessary seek the advice of a pediatrician or eye care professional. Warning signs include:

- wandering eye;
- crossed eyes;
- red, bloodshot or encrusted eyes; or
- spots on the pupil.

Parents should take note if a child complains of or demonstrates:

- difficulty seeing;
- headaches;
- burning or scratchy sensation in the eyes;
- squinting;
- excessive blinking;
- rubbing of the eyes; or
- problems reading or learning in school.

Dr. Dennehy emphasizes that routine eye exams are important because children's visual development generally occurs in the first four to seven years of life. Timely treatment of any vision problem is therefore crucial.

The Pastor's Corner Spiritual hunger

By the Rev. David H. Wick
Grosse Pointe Baptist Church

"People have so little, but are so willing to share."
"Everyone seems so gracious, so happy; faces are open, smiling."

"Vacation Bible School, 150 children, 700 square feet of space — you've got to be kidding."

"Hey, who ate all the tamales?"

"Everywhere you look Beetles and micro buses — it's like a trip back to the '60s."

"No habla Espanol."

These were some actual comments from the group of five teenagers and three adults (including me) from Grosse Pointe Baptist Church who traveled to Mexico City to help Moises and Carolyn Ruiz and their congregation put on a Vacation Bible School July 23-30.

Each day the Mexican pastor and members of his church led an hour-long opening program. We were amazed at how quietly even the youngest children sat through this session for all ages which included a missionary story, a Bible lesson, songs from the puppet team and group songs.

Following the first hour session came crafts, snacks and games. I led crafts with help from our music director Jim Wells and recent South grad Christy Johnson. I learned that even tiny Mexican children are frighteningly good at making things out of clay. At an age when I was making snakes and lumps, Mexican little ones 4 and under are making pots, people, flowers and elaborate animals like a ram with curly horns.

My son Jesse led game time with help from Steve Michel, North students Randy Faust and John Seator and South student Shane Boon. Mexican children and teens were fascinated by tall Americans — so good at basketball. We owned the boards, but basketball is not so easy when played at an elevation of 7,500 feet. And (ouch!) soccer is really rough when played on concrete pavement. We learned that you make the best of what you have, even if the "park" you play in fronts on an open ditch and you play basketball in a quarter inch of water left standing by the afternoon rains.

At the closing program, 200 people packed the rooftop sanctuary. Latecomers had to be turned away. The Mexican church youth presented Bible teaching through a clown show and puppets and the pastor explained the Gospel and gave an invitation to trust Christ for salvation. Five adults and seven children responded to the invitation and made decisions for Christ.

We returned home elated, not exhausted in spite of our hectic schedule. We felt blessed to have been part of work that God is doing in the working-class Jardines de Morelos neighborhood, northeast of Mexico City. A young man named Jesse spoke to the first day of our visit and told of his disaffection with tradition and his experimentation with native religions. He is searching for God. His search seems to me to typify the people of the Jardines area. In the midst of material hardship, they have honed a spiritual hunger that is quick to respond to the truth of the Gospel.

That is a hunger that is wealth indeed, the only kind of wealth we do well to covet.

How your body reacts to stress

By Dr. George Wilson
Special Writer

Life can get in the way of "living" in these turbocharged '90s. We are confronted with corporate downsizing, longer work weeks, increasing traffic

Dr. George Wilson

Understanding these demands and their effects can help you recognize your own "stress response," as well as ways to counteract distress to lead a healthier life.

Basic stress response

The body responds to all stress, both positive and negative, by trying to get back to normal. Depending on the stress or its cause, hormones, like adrenaline, may surge. The heartbeat and blood pressure will probably increase. Blood sugar rises. These physical responses helped prehistoric humans survive by allowing them to run away faster or fight harder. By the time they were done, their bodies had discharged the tension of the moment and their stress responses were followed by relaxation.

Physical effects

Today, we experience stressors which are very different from those in prehistoric days. Yet positive stressors, such as getting married, or negative stressors, such as family conflicts, still cause the same physiological fight or flight response.

If a stressful situation goes on for too long without any relief, you might experience diseases and disorders such as colds, ulcers, asthma, heart attack or stroke. You may feel tired, irritable, depressed or anxious. You may have trouble with sleeping, eating, drinking or smoking.

The mind-body connection

Your mind and body are connected. When your mind is healthy, your body can better resist illness. When your body is healthy, your feelings are more positive. During stressful times, take care of both for maximum health and satisfaction.

There are many ways to keep all the negative effects of different stressors to a minimum. They include:

- Taking time to relax daily.
- Exercising regularly, after getting your doctor's OK.
- Learning to "let go" of things which are outside your control and "adapt" to change.
- Learning to take action when you can make a difference.
- Avoiding excessive alcohol, caffeine, fats and sugar; and not smoking.
- Giving your time to something or someone you believe in.
- Going away for the weekend.

Change your work style

Everyone has a bad day at work now and then. But if you feel hurried, irritable and frustrated most of the time, you may be suffering more than you need to from workplace stress. Here are some tips for switching to a low-stress work style.

Set priorities

Much on-the-job aggravation comes from having too much to do in too little time. Take a few minutes each day to list priorities. Put the "must do" tasks at the top of the list and save the others for a slow day.

Use your skills

Few things are more stressful than doing work you're not suited for. Make a list of your job's requirements and your skills. If there's a gap between your skills and the requirements, ask your supervisor what you can change.

Be open to change

Much stress is simply a result of change we feel we can't control. If you adopt an attitude of expecting things to change, you can be ready for the change and work with it to your best advantage.

Take control

How can you take control of your life? The first step is to get organized. Figure out what's important, then do it. Learn not to waste time on little things that don't matter. Many of us put off organization because it does take time and energy at first, but the benefits of being in control of your time and energy outweigh the initial investment.

Taking care of yourself also puts you in control. Try to follow a healthy, well-balanced diet and avoid junk food. Stick with foods that are high in energy-producing complex carbohydrates and low in fat and sugar.

Get energy from fresh fruits, vegetables, soups, natural snacks and sandwiches that are light on mayonnaise and other fatty dressings. Skip the extra cup of coffee or cocktail; they just increase stress. Set aside some time every day for your own mental and physical health.

Two Gents gets clever interpretation at Stratford

With the opening this month of William Shakespeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," Richard Rose demonstrates once again his imaginative eminence among the Stratford Festival's directors.

His treatment of this generally underrated and problematical script turns aspects of the play that have always troubled actors and directors into advantages that support a cogent and consistent approach. Instead of approaching it as another classic situation comedy, Rose reinterpreted it as a portrayal of the journey toward adulthood. The result is so convincing that one is tempted to believe this is the interpretation originally intended by the author. Shakespeare was himself still young in his career when he wrote it.

In this treatment, the play becomes an experience of growing up. It is about young people learning the hard way how to behave like adults. The issue, naturally, is competition between two college buddies for a girl.

Proteus woos Julia at home in Verona. Valentine meets and falls in love with Silvia when he travels to Mantua. But when Proteus visits Valentine he gets a crush on Silvia, too, and uses dirty tricks to eliminate the competition. That competition, incidentally includes Thurio, an older suitor chosen by Silvia's father and repulsive to all the young people.

Wayne Best makes him a marvelous caricature of an all too garrulous Scotsman in full kilt regalia. Meanwhile, the spurned Julia, in male disguise, follows to Mantua and joins the fray. Anger, frustration and recrimination generate high feelings.

Performed as adults, these characters seem juvenile. But played as insecure youths, they are real and their experiences ring true.

Initially, both Julia and Silvia, like tongue-tied teenagers, display a familiar reluctance to express their feelings for their suitors. Melody A. Johnson as Julia creates a delightfully adolescent image as she disdainfully shreds a love letter, then secretly retrieves it and presses it to her lips. Tamara Bernier as Silvia, imperiously carries out a device that only a teenager could believe to avoid responding directly to Valentine's advances. Then she obscures her affection behind scorn for his innocent failure to recognize that she wanted him to write the love letter that she should write to him.

What would be silliness in the mature is very serious for the young.

David Jansen, as Proteus, is a disgustingly smug, opportunistic and amoral youth until he finally recognizes the enormity of his betrayal of both his sweetheart and his close friend Valentine.

Graham Abbey in that role is Proteus' antithesis as he glows with youthful innocence, loyalty to his deceitful friend, ardor for his love and a freedom from guile that is awkwardly teenage. It is all wonderful to watch and remember from one's own experience.

State of the Arts

By Alex Suczek

Not that this performance lacks adult sophistication and wit. Touches that seem attributable only to a very alert director abound.

The opening scene of the school hockey team being photographed, with Valentine Roller Blading confidently along the edge of the stage while chatting with Proteus, is riveting, especially for any adult who is insecure on blades. Throughout the play Rose sustains a feeling of more action than actually resides in the script by keeping the performers in motion and by keeping more of the cast on stage than is actually called for.

Julia repeats Valentine's circling of the stage, this time not on skates, in a long dialogue with her companion Lucetta, played archly by Chuck Reid.

At other times, soliloquies and dialogues are delivered blithely with other actors grouped nearby, not involved and ostensibly not listening. The play gains an air of intense activity as a result.

Rose also has a knack for repeating symbolic situations. He winds up the play, for example, with another portrait photo take, this time with the family group of all the reconciled lovers. It ties things up neatly.

And lest we take it all too seriously, the performance pokes indulgent fun at all this ingenious behavior. There are subtle notes of satire in the portrayals and laughable affectation of innocence and youthful pomposity in the characterizations. The script gives rise to them, though not always by Shakespeare's intent. The cast has found ways to give modern meaning to Elizabethan plays-on-words. This is enhanced greatly by Charlotte Dean's carefully exaggerated Edwardian costumes. Placing the action in recent times, but still an era of more mannered formality, the costumes facilitate the impression of combined reality and fancy that prevails.

The overall result is an evening of entertainment that charms and fascinates for its superb stagecraft and remarkably clever interpretation.

"Two Gentlemen of Verona" plays in repertory at the Festival Theater through Nov. 7. For tickets and a visitors' guide call (800) 567-1600.

Recipe for a hot day — cold pasta salad

As we reach out to grab these precious few days that summer has yet to offer, the thought of eating as many outdoor meals as possible comes to mind.

We're not quite ready to warm up inside with spaghetti and meatballs or a roasted turkey dinner. I certainly am not.

I search instead for cooling recipes. Insalata Di Spaghetti (cold spaghetti with anchovies and olives) is just such a recipe. It was pulled from the International Dining Cookbook compiled by the Newcomer's Club of Mexico City. My sister Christine Maccio (a member of the NCMC International Dining Committee) first introduced me to this delicious take on cold pasta salad.

Don't let the anchovy part scare you. The tiny salt-cured fish tend to turn the majority of us off, but when used in a recipe like the following, your friends won't even know they're eating anchovies.

What they will taste is a delicate saltiness that is the perfect complement to the Greek-style olives.

Insalata

Di Spaghetti

1/4 cup olive oil, plus 1 Tbs. for final seasoning
 10-12 flat anchovy fillets*

1 dozen black Greek-style olives pitted
 2 Tbs. fresh Italian parsley, chopped very fine

1 lb. pasta (spaghetti or capellini) — Barilla is an excellent brand

Cook the pasta in 3-4 quarts of salted, rapidly boiling water. Do not overcook it. It should be firm to the bite, al dente.

Drain the pasta thoroughly and transfer it to a bowl. Toss at once with 1/4 cup of olive oil. If not well-coated with the oil, the spaghetti strands will stick together and become gummy. Set aside to cool completely.

Slice half of the pitted olives into thin 1/4-inch slices. Chop the rest of the olives into a fine pulp. Chop or cut the anchovies into small bits. Do not chop them so fine as to make a paste of them. You should have tiny but firm individual pieces of anchovy in this dish. Add the anchovies and all of the olives to the pasta. Toss well.

Let stand for 30 minutes in order for the pasta to soak up the rich flavors. Just before serving, add the chopped parsley and the tablespoon of olive oil. Toss and serve.

Top with freshly grated Parmesan or Romano cheese.

* Anchovies that are packed in oil and covered in an air-tight container can be stored after opening for up to two months in the refrigerator. Be daring — go buy a jar of anchovies, and toss up a little more summer.

You're gonna be surprised.

Most of Oakland Grill's specialties pass 'Oh wow' test

By David C. Bloom
Special Writer

Saturday was a very bad day to go to Royal Oak. Woodward Avenue was a crawling parking lot of restored antique cars and hot rods: the "Dream Cruise." But it was a good day to visit the shiny Oakland Grill, whose slightly peeling metallic diner exterior, with chrome and neon detailing, was a good match for the day's festivities. Situated on Woodward just south of 14 Mile — in the very eye of Dream Cruise — O.G.'s window tables were a chorus of "ohs" and "gees" as car after classic car paraded by: an armada of Lincolns, a pack of Dodges, a clutch of Vettes.

The Grill's choice rooftop was booked for a private party on Dream Cruise day, but I snuck up just to steal a vista. It was a vision from vehicular Valhalla: miles and miles of chrome, glinting fenders, flaming paint jobs and... bananas?

The whimsical unrippable fruit was designer Ron Rea's leitmotif for the Oakland Grill's interior. You're greeted at the door with a Kong-sized ceramic specimen — on wheels, no less — whose slightly erotic stem directs the eyes upward to the rest of the bunch: rococo banana frescos, fruity fixtures, and a 14-foot ricepaper banana canoe suspended from the cove-lit ceiling. We get the point.

Chef-owner Louai Sharkas is bananas about the fruit, which he sneaks into appetizers and bombasts into desserts.

Following his new-moneyed clientele, he opened the Oakland Grill last summer after five years at Birmingham's Townsend Hotel. Since that time, he's toned down the menu and the price-point to make the Grill appeal to a broader range of the Royal Oak locals, Bloomfield commuters, and Birmingham shoppers who cruised by the destination diner when it was called "Jukebox," and later "America."

Unlike its fey diner predecessors, Oakland Grill serves serious food.

While the restaurant clientele run from khakis to couture (the roof is barfood casual) the entrees are strictly top-drawer: veal chops, "bronzed" chicken, beef bourguignonne. The plates are dressed to thrill with colorful garnishes, sauce drizzlings and wacky flourishes like shoestring potatoes cut fine as angelhair, anchovies unrolled into a heart-shape atop the Caesar.

There are no rules in New American Cuisine, so Chef Louai sets his own, following a vaguely tropical Asian influence in his creations.

Sauce reductions are spiked with liqueur. Fruits and nuts pop up unexpectedly, but are not unwelcome. And there's a delayed-action heat, a slow spice to the food that creeps up on you like a good Jamaican jerk. It's not that hot when you eat it, but after you swallow... mmm. We were bowled over on our first visit by a potent lobster bisque ($4.95), a smooth ochre magma of saffron and shrimp.

Bermuda onion soup ($4.25), combined with salty bread and a rich Pernod-fortified broth, this made for a thirsty appetizer.

Gazpacho was a chunky V. 8, with plenty of celery and carrots, but we were disturbed to find a long blond hair in the soup. In all my years reviewing restaurants, I'd never experienced this old joke firsthand. We smothered our laughter and returned to our soups, only to find a second hair. It wasn't funny anymore. The gazpacho was whisked away with a flurry of apologies from the server.

Chicken potstickers ($4.50) were fall-apart wonton dumplings smothered in a tart hot-and-sour sauce, which also appears in the succulent tiger shrimp appetizer ($9.50): three giant shrimp, encrusted in pistachios and delicately tempura-fried.

Islanders should steer clear of the conch fritters ($4.50), little fried conch-cake balls with too much filler. Al dente soba noodles ($7.95) are ritzy ramen, tossed with dried cherries, pine nuts, and sliced peppers in a fruity black bean vinaigrette.

Dining as we were, with small children, the two girls made a meal of the noodles. Almost half the entree featured seafood (another nod to the islands), and these are the better part of the menu. A plump and tender salmon filet is bathed in an aromatic, grainy mustard sauce on a bed of mushy spinach ($14.95). The hot-and-sour sauce reappears on jumbo shrimp ($15.95), steamed in coconut milk and served up with crispy rice, though I might have preferred just the coconut treatment, or maybe a little curry?

Following the success of his nut-crusted shrimp, Chef Louai coats his mahi-mahi in pistachios, pan fries it golden, marries it to buttery mashed sweet potato, and ladles both with a fruity high-proof vanilla sauce — once again with that signature delayed-action prickle of spice.

Pork loin is also big this year. Chef Louai's is rubbed with a mild jerk spice, oven-roasted, and glazed with a boozy molasses sauce ($13.95). A veritable tennis ball of meat, this one could have been butterflied, which would cut cooking time as well as eliminated the need for the steak knife.

No utensils are required for the Louisiana-style ribs ($16.95/slab, $8.95/half). The tender meat separates from the bone with a breath, and the smoky BBQ sauce is seriously addictive. The only dish that failed the "Oh wow" test was Chef Louai's pesto fettucini ($10.95). The pasta was cooked one minute too long, the roasted garlic upstaged the basil and smothered the spinach, and the skinned fresh tomatoes were cooked to mush — a wash.

Dessert is a big deal at the Oakland Grill. Banana splits are de rigueur and can feed two or three people. The splits' house-made vanilla ice cream is whipped smooth and light. For a more reasonably sized encore, get the vanilla with fresh strawberries or sandwiched between two chewy chocolate chip cookies, drizzled in caramel. Skip the frosting on the cakes — it's Crisco and powdered sugar. The two layers of the double chocolate cake are separated by a good inch of chocolate ganache. And the "cappuccino" torte lacked the desired mocha bite: more ice cream here, please!

Service gets high marks for good intentions, but we suffered mis-steps on every visit. The crowded dining room seldom leaves room for a tray-jack, so you may get jostled at delivery time. Utensils disappeared, glasses went unfilled — little stuff. One night we broke in a new waitress — always a treat — who recovered from the aforementioned hair-in-my-soup incident with a deadpan, "I didn't know gazpacho had hair." Always a good time at the Oakland Grill.

Runner-up finish caps Redbirds' year

The Grosse Pointe Redbirds 16-year-old baseball team wrapped up its season with a second-place finish in the recent Ameritech Mobile International Tournament in Sterling Heights.

The Redbirds beat the Sterling Heights Stingrays 15-4, downed Eastpointe 13-7 and nipped the Anchor Bay Angels 8-7 before losing to the Metro Hawks 10-7 in the championship game.

Grosse Pointe overcame a five-run deficit to beat Eastpointe and scored the winning run against the Angels in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Pete Paterek hit .636, scored six runs and drove in three during the tournament.

Mike Hodgis hit .583 with six runs and five RBI, while Tim Pierce hit .429, scored five times and collected four RBI.

Mike Janis, Rob Karlik and Paterek turned in some quality pitching during the tournament.

The Redbirds, under first-year coach Matt Wysocki, finished 9-7 in the Mickey Mantle Division of the Macomb Amateur Baseball Federation and posted a 14-12-1 record overall.

Pointers help Steele's win two tourneys

Several Grosse Pointers were on the Steele's 16-year-old baseball team that won two recent tournaments.

Steele's defeated all seven of its opponents in the Fire Cracker Classic in Warren. Scott Koerber, who plays for Grosse Pointe North, led Steele's with a .650 batting average, six homers and 13 RBI.

Jim Deliz, who played for De La Salle, also batted .650 with four homers and 13 RBI.

Steele's beat the Michigan Indians 13-1 in the championship game behind the pitching of Jonathon Kowalski and Todd Wojciechowski.

Earlier, Steele's won the Mayor's Invitational Tournament in Battle Creek with an 11-6 victory over the Springfield Statesmen in the title game.

Crescent set for annual regatta

Crescent Sail Yacht Club will host its 65th annual regatta Saturday, Aug. 29.

The Crescent Regatta is part of the Detroit Regional Yachting Association (DRYA) summer series. Some 200 sailboats participate in the race, making the Crescent Regatta one of the best attended DRYA events.

It is also one of the most colorful regattas of the summer with the race often ending in a flood of bright spinnakers rushing to the finish line.

Sailboats ranging in size from 15 to more than 50 feet will compete on one of three courses which start and finish in front of the club, located at 276 Lakeshore near the foot of Kerby Road in Grosse Pointe Farms. The courses range from five to 19 nautical miles in length.

After the race an awards dinner will be held for regatta sailors and their guests. Advance reservations are requested. The awards dinner schedule and menu information can be found in the regatta sailing instructions.

The race is open to registered DRYA sailors as well as a limited number of non-registered DRYA sailors on a first-come, first-served basis.

Non-DRYA sailors who want to enter the regatta should pick up an application at CYSC, fill it out and return it to the club by Aug. 27.

tactical, fitness and psychological aspects of the game.

Beginning with the fall 1998 season, registration fees will be waived for the children of licensed GPSA coaches only — in the under-10 and older age groups.

Anyone interested in attending should call Michael Bannon at (313) 822-1380.

Those attending the course should bring a ball, pen and pencil and wear comfortable clothing.

Fall sports athletes getting ready for their seasons

The excitement of another fall sports season has already begun for nearly a quarter of a million student athletes with eight sports sponsored by the Michigan High School Athletic Association. Practices for all fall sports began Aug. 10, except for a few football teams, who began Aug. 5. Nine schools, including seven in the Upper Peninsula, were given permission by the MHSAA to begin competition a week earlier to help them secure a full schedule of games.

ing Michigan teams that end in a tie after regulation, be decided by the MHSAA-approved tie-breaking procedure.

National federation rules changes in soccer include that a goal may be scored from a kickoff or goal kick, a goalie may no longer touch the ball after receiving it directly from a teammate on a throw-in, an allowance for lateral movement by a goalkeeper during a penalty kick and an adoption for a provision that the placement of the ball on the line for corner kicks is legal.

All football schools conduct three required conditioning days of practice before beginning contact.

Houghton, Ironwood, Kingsford, Menominee, Stambaugh West Iron County and Stephenson begin their football seasons Aug. 28, while Powers North Central, Indian River Inland Lakes and Maple City Glen Lake play their opens Aug. 29.

The council also revised the mercy rule in football so that a running clock will be used at all levels, for regular-season and playoff games, whenever a 35-point score differential is reached after the first half.

The clock will run continuously except during called timeouts, the break between the third and fourth quarters, following a score, during penalty enforcement and for safety reasons, such as injuries.

Fall sports championships begin with the Upper Peninsula girls tennis finals on Oct. 2 and wrap up with the girls basketball finals on Dec. 5.

All other football schools can begin varsity play Sept. 3 or 4. Grosse Pointe South opens at home Sept. 3 against Notre Dame, while Grosse Pointe North and University Liggett School each hold opens at home the next day.

Normal timing procedures resume if the differential is reduced to fewer than 35 points.

Notable national federation rules changes in basketball include a change in substitutions during multiple free-throw situations and how a team calls a timeout.

Here are dates for Lower Peninsula fall state tournament play:

Girls basketball: Districts, Nov. 16-21; regionals, Nov. 23-25; and finals, Dec. 1, 3-5.

Cross country: regionals, Oct. 31; finals, Nov. 7.

Football: pre-regionals, Nov. 6 or 7; regionals, Nov. 13 or 14; semifinals, Nov. 21; finals, Nov. 27-28.

Boys golf: regionals, Oct. 9 or 10; finals, Oct. 16-17.

Boys soccer: districts, Oct. 19-24; regionals, Oct. 26-31; semifinals, Nov. 4; finals, Nov. 7.

Girls swimming and diving: diving qualifiers, Nov. 17; finals, Nov. 20-21.

Girls tennis: regionals, Oct. 9-10; finals, Oct. 16-17.

Middle school coaches needed

There are openings for several coaches at University Liggett Middle School.

Applications are being taken for a boys soccer coach and girls volleyball and basketball coaches.

Interested candidates should contact Bruce Pelto at (313) 417-8007 during business hours.

Bulldogs on the ball

The Buscemi Bulldogs completed their first season of play in the Macomb Amateur Baseball Federation with a co-championship in the 14-year-old A Division. The Bulldogs, who were made up of several Grosse Pointers, finished 16-4 and beat every team in the league at least once. The other teams in the upper division were East Side Sports, Michigan Knights, Shelby Greyhounds, West Macomb White Sox, Macomb Expos, Coughlin Cubs, Mount Clemens Baseball Club, Michigan Rebels, Anchor Bay Angels and the Mount Clemens River Bandits. In front, from left, are Paul Buscemi, Dan Keogh, Scott Schaft, batboy Johnny Hackett, Geordie Mackenzie, Chris Getz and J.R. King. In the middle row, from left, are coaches John Keogh and Art Getz, John Matteson, Adam Post, Mike Whateley, Chris Cooley, Mike Hackett and Steve Rhodes. In back, from left, are coaches Bob Cooley, Sean Bruce, Joe King, John Hackett and Art Post. The team was sponsored by Tony and Nina Buscemi.

North hosts Port Huron Northern, while ULS plays Harper Woods.

Other fall sports also began practice Aug. 10 and all but three were able to start competition that day.

The first game for boys soccer is Aug. 21, girls swimming and diving can open Aug. 22 and girls basketball begins Aug. 24.

Two safety issues are addressed under National Federation of State High School Association rules changes in football.

The first prohibits the use of eye shields with less than 100 percent light transmission. The second prohibits defensive players from using their hands to slap a blocker's head.

Also the MHSAA Representative Council took action in May that requires all varsity football games involv-

When a differential of 40 or more points is reached after the first half, a running clock will be used.

The running clock will revert to regular time schemes if the differential is reduced to 30 points or fewer. In all cases, the clock will stop for called timeouts and breaks between quarters.

Four Grosse Pointe Woods lifeguards won trophies at the recent Michigan Recreation Park Association lifeguard competition in River Rouge. From left, are Rachelle Atrasz, Tony Atrasz, Beth Janutol and Missy Warnack. The Atraszes were first in the co-ed division, while Rachelle also took a first in the women's division of the monster variety event. Tony was second in the men's division.

Woods lifeguards do well in competition at River Rouge

Four Grosse Pointe Woods lifeguards make a strong showing at the fourth annual Michigan Recreation Park Association (MRPA) lifeguard competition at Brennan Pools in River Rouge.

Tony and Rachelle Atrasz took first place in the co-ed division, while Beth Janutol and Missy Warnack were runners-up in the women's division.

Rachelle Atrasz won the monster variety event in the women's division, which includes running, swimming and jumping off a five-meter diving platform. Her brother was second in the men's division.

Janutol promised better things next year.

"Missy and I were pretty nervous, but we did well in both the technical and physical parts of the competition," she said. "Second place is good, but we will bring home first place next year."

The Atraszes expected to do well.

"Rachelle and I would have been disappointed if we didn't get top three," Tony said. "It seemed as the competition went on, we were more and more confident of victory. During the tug-of-war, other teams expected to lose to us."

Tennis tournament returns to Lochmoor

The main draw will be 16 players. Qualifying rounds will be held Sept. 26-27.

The main draw will begin Friday, Oct. 2 at 3 p.m. That is also Kids' Day with anyone 17 and under admitted free.

Friday's matches will continue through 9 p.m.

Quarterfinal rounds will begin Saturday, Oct. 3 at 10 a.m. and continue through the day. Semifinal rounds are scheduled to begin at 5 p.m.

The finals will be held Sunday, Oct. 4 at 2 p.m. The winner receives $3,000.

Highlights

A steady rain throughout the championship game didn't dampen the spirits of Bolton-Johnston Associates as it won its second straight Neighborhood Club Women's Softball League championship. Bolton-Johnston won the title with an 8-2 victory over Little Salamander.

Lynn Damman, who had an outstanding defensive game, and Shelly Gillette, who was the winning pitcher and went 2-for-3 at the plate, led the way in the championship game.

The winners jumped ahead early with a four-run first inning, featuring hits from Julie Miller, Michelle Kowalkowski, Lisa Bradley, Jodie Collard and Amy Kish.

The four-run inning overcame a 2-0 lead by Little Salamander which got a homer from Doreen Balkowski after Charisse Vreeken's hit. Margie Gatliff hit a two-run double for Bolton-Johnston, which also got key hits from Kerri Kelly, Damman and Gillette.

"We would not have gotten to the finals without a clutch hit from Carolyn Dietz with two outs and two runners on base in the last inning of an earlier playoff game," said John Deever, who won his third championship in four years as coach of Bolton-Johnston.

Marguerite Johnston added solid defense at catcher, Betsy Bernard was steady in right-center field, while Peggy Mahoney backed her up in right field as well as backing up throws to first baseman Mary Kay Weston.

"We have a couple of home run hitters in Kelly and Kish, but our team always got the job done with contributions from everyone," Bradley said.

"We really love playing ball and enjoying each other's company."

ULS senior makes state Junior National girls basketball team

It was a moment to remember last winter when University Liggett School senior Holly Morrison got the invitation from the United States Junior National basketball team.

The 5-foot-6 guard, who is starting her fourth varsity season on the ULS girls basketball team, was one of about 150 players invited to the USA Junior National tryouts at Eastern Michigan University.

A few weeks later, Morrison got the word that she had been chosen for the Michigan team.

That meant Morrison was going to have a busy summer.

Last month the Michigan team competed with 33 other state teams in a tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

"The first day each team went through six hours of practice," Morrison said.

"The next three days we played four games a day. And the next day we went into the double elimination round. It was very challenging and exciting to compete with the best girls in the country."

Now Morrison is looking forward to the start of her final high school season.

"We should have a pretty good team," she said. "We lost three seniors, but we have a lot of good players back."

Coaches group honors Blue Devils

Grosse Pointe South's boys basketball was a success both on and off the court last season.

Senior Steve Howson and junior Adam Hess each made the Michigan High School Basketball Coaches Association All-State team.

The team as a whole also received a high honor when it posted the second-highest grade-point average in the state.

"It's the second time in the last four years we've had the second-highest average and the fifth time in the last six years we've been in the top 10," said Blue Devils coach George Petrouleas.

Okemos had the best GPA in the state with a 3.58 and South was a close second with a 3.5.

"All but one of our players had a 3.0 or better and the one that didn't was at 2.9," Petrouleas said.

"The kids take a lot of pride in this. We emphasize getting good grades, but the kids have to do the work."

University Liggett School senior Holly Morrison won a spot on the Michigan team that played in the recent United States Junior National basketball tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

One word can describe the 1997-98 high school sports year — parity.

Eighty-seven different schools won Michigan High School Athletic Association tournament championships, 21 more than the 66 who won titles in 1996-97.

The increase might be partially due to the MHSAA creating equal division of play in six more sports last year — baseball, softball, boys and girls tennis and boys and girls soccer — which has created a more competitive environment for high school teams throughout the state.

The 1997-98 school year saw a record 110 team champions crowned, which is an increase of one from the previous year. This year, the minimum number of titles will increase to 111 when a third division of competition is added in Lower Peninsula girls golf.

Schools winning their first MHSAA titles in any sport were Elk Rapids in boys soccer; Muskegon Oakridge, football; Novi, girls gymnastics; Plainwell, boys swimming and diving; Quincy, baseball; Traverse City Central, boys and girls skiing; and West Branch Ogemaw Heights, football and wrestling.

There were also 36 schools who won tournament championships in a sport for the first time.

Eighteen of the 87 schools winning titles in 1997-98 took more than one crown, led by Calumet and Marquette, which won four championships apiece. One of Calumet's titles came in ice hockey.

Menominee was next with three championships, while 15 schools won at least two.

Madison Heights Bishop Foley, Southgate Aquinas, Traverse City Central and West Branch Ogemaw Heights each won two titles in unified tournaments.

Eleven of the MHSAA's 24 championship tournaments are unified, involving teams from the Upper and Lower Peninsulas, while separate competition to determine titlists in both peninsulas is conducted in the other 13 sports.

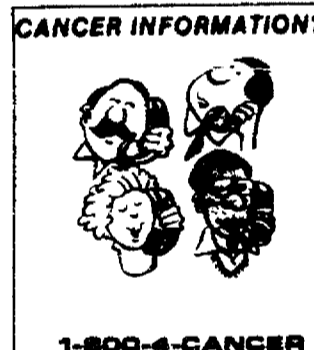

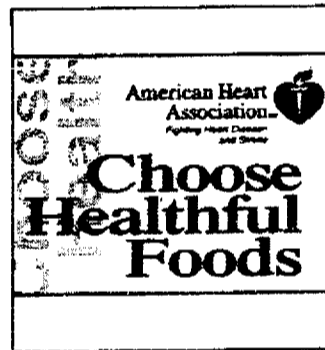

The most unique occurrence in 1997-98 came with the cooperative girls gymnastics program from Northville and Novi winning the Lower Peninsula crown. It's the first time a cooperative team has won an MHSAA championship since the program began in 1987.
