By a process of elimination and common sense, the finger has been pointed at the concentration of waterfowl that have virtually staked claim to the breakwalls and tanning docks bordering the Pier Fark beach area.

Farms officials, working with civil engineers, experts from the University of Michigan and officials from nearby communities, have ruled out such likely sources of pollution as upstream sewage discharges, local rainwater overflows and nearby sewer leaks. Earlier this year, the Farms flushed the park's sewer system with fluorescent dye in an "extensive" test to see if there were any leaks. None were found, said Richard Solak, Farms city manager.

In a related water quality analysis conducted this year by the Farms' engineering con-Clark, no correlation was found between heavy rainfall and fecal bacteria in the area. Scratch sewer overflows as a problem

However, the study considered "anecdotal evidence that near-shore runoff from the beach and bathing pier play a significant role in elevated fecal bacterial levels."

Our nominees for governor take low road

that Republican and Democratic state conventions have completed their state tickets, the question is whether Democratic nominee for governor Geoffrey Fieger can make a realistic race against Gov. John Engler.

After a Detroit News public opinion poll last week, some people thought the campaign for governor was over. Republican Engler led Democrat Fieger by a 2-1 margin.

But while Engler led, 55 26, the poll also showed that almost 20 percent of the voters were still undecided. Equally significant, another Detroit News poll later in the week found higher percentages of unfavorable impressions for both candidates.

Yet Fieger's fortunes rose when he made a rousing political speech that impressed the Democratic convention that raised delegates' hopes that their man had at least a chance of defeating Engler.

A theater graduate of the University of Michigan, Fieger used his acting talents to deliver what one delegate called "a bravura performance" and another said she was "very impressed with what he had to say."

Unfortunately, however, both sides continued on the low road of politics in convention speeches.

Betsy DeVos, the GOP state chair, blamed Fieger and others like him tor "the moral dumbing down of our institutions and culture" and called him "a religious bigot '

Fieger did not let up on Engler, charging the governor with a record of "cronyform, waste and corruption" without citing any facts to support those accusations.

But Hugh McDiarmid, Detroit Free Press political writer, contended that of the two nominating conventions, the Democrats "had won, hands down," with Fieger and the convention's choice as their attorney general candidate, Jennifer Granholm, winning rave reviews.

On the GOP side, however, Engler and party leaders were on the losing side when Scott Romney lost his bid for the attorney general nomination to John Smietanka, who was defeated by retiring Attorney General Frank Kelley in the 1992 election.

Fieger has been hammered by the Detroit press for his supposed name-calling and excessive verbosity, but last week the Engler forces persuaded two Southern governors to join them in calling Fieger a racist.

Worse, they dropped even lower than Fieger by comparing Fieger to David Duke, a Louisiana politician and former Ku Klux Klan leader who has proclaimed an anti-affirmative action platform while bidding for governor, Congress and the presidency.

Engler promptly got a deserved public spanking both from columnist McDiarmid and a Freep editorial, which concluded that "by trying to brand Fieger a racist, they (GOP leaders) are using the same racial tactics they condemn in Duke."

But why should Engler get involved with two Southern governors? Because the Southerners now control the Republican Party and Engler still has the itch to be on the GOP ticket in the year 2000.

We suspect there are other reasons for Engler's 37 percent unfavorable rating. One could be his support for charter schools and the unfavorable citations about some of those Michigan schools in a recent national magazine article.

And just Monday, the Detroit Free Press, in an article by its education writer, Tracy Van Moorlehem, acknowledged that while charter schools are thriving, "questions remain about the quality, oversight and financial responsibility of charter schools."

Oversight is obviously missing when charter schools under the state law do not elect their school boards. Instead, the agency that chartered each school appoints the board from the local community.

With Fieger's choice of a former school superintendent, James Agee, as the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, education promises to be a major theme in the Democratic campaign.

Other critics have found fault with the Engier administration's handling of weifare clients, who in too many cases are forced off the rolls, and mental patients, whose care often reverts to counties which lack funds to care for them proper-

We cite what we regard as legitimate issues arising from Engler's record because we think the people of Michigan deserve an honest discussion of the problems still facing this state.

To date, they are not getting it from either the Republican incumbent or the Democratic challenger.

There still is plenty of time for such issues to be debated, but on the basis of the early political going, we are not optimistic about the caliber of the rest of the campaign for governor.

Joint venture links 2 hospitals

n a move to enhance health care services on the east side, Bon Secours Health System and Henry Ford Health System have announced the signing of a joint venture agreement.

A new company -- Bon Secours Cottage Health Services (BSCHS) - was formed after discussions between the two systems, their local boards and representatives of the hospitals' medical staffs.

Working together, our vision is to develop the east side's most preferred and efficient health care system, and a work environment that will attract and retain the finest health care professionals," Bon Secours Cottage Health Services Chief Executive Officer Rick Van Lith said.

Bon Secours brings to the joint venture the 290-bed Bon Secours Hospital, seven anibulatory care sites, two diagnostic centers, three pharmacies, and home care, supplemental staffing services and durable medical equipment companies.

The joint venture also includes, from the Ford side, the 175-bed Henry Ford Cottage Hospital, the Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine and Physical Therapy Center, two-outpatient rehabilitation sites and an outpatient psychiatric center.

The joint venture will enable the two hospitals to trim costs in providing care by eliminating duplication that often now occurs in offering such services.

It also calls for a coordinated management structure to enable the hospitals to use the experience available in order to grow and expand.

Funding will come from foundations and the normal source, patients, in the institutions. Auxiliaries of both institutions are being defined and together will create a new foundation of service

Leaders in the new organization are confident, however, that patients still will remain loyal to their old hospitals. And they expect that the reconfiguration that will occur will expand services that neither hospital now can provide.

In a further move to improve services, the joint venture also calls for Bon Secours Hospital and a panel of Bon Secours physicians to participate with Henry Ford Cottage Hespital physicians in providing health services to eastside families enrolled in the current Health Alliance Plan (HAP).

All in all, the joint venture appears to be a move that should benefit patients in the Grosse Pointes as well as the rest of the hatever the intent of both prosecutors and defense lawyers, the county's investigation into the criminal sexual conduct charges filed against four former North High students continues to haunt the Grosse Pointe community.

Sex case haunts the Pointes

At the same time, one of the defendants, Daniel Granger, has faced the possibility that the University of Michigan would suspend his fall admission to the university, pending a full review of the matter.

The U-M student code of conduct perraits university officials to suspend a student on an emergency basis if they determine the student's conduct poses an immediate threat.

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Timothy Kenney, after reviewing material collected by North officials in their investigation, said he would rule today, Sept. 3, on whether to order North officials to release sensitive documents to the attorneys involved.

In a preliminary hearing in Woods municipal court, Judge Lynn Pierce had ruled that the notes made by school officials in their investigation were confidential.

However, she also ruled that the notes made about the three girls who had testi fied about their involvement were not privileged because they were testifying in

But the prosecution then sought subpoenas to obtain the notes, and argued their demand in a hearing before Judge

ı

Kenny. It was then that Judge Kenny said he needed more information before issuing a ruling and continued the hearing on Aug. 31.

On that date, he said he would review the notes in camera, meaning he will read the notes alone before deciding today whether any or all of the communications will be turned over to the lawyers.

Whatever his decision, the trial of the four young men on the sexual misconduct charges is scheduled to begin Oct. 14. unless the lawyers involved find new reasons to seek continuances.

Meanwhile, defense lawyer William Bufalino II, in a letter to the Grosse Pointe News, contends among other things that "groundless charges and false allegations are being made against my client, Daniel Granger."

In response to the News editorial view that he had not offered any evidence to prove his allegations, Bufalino wrote that when the time is right, in a court of law, I will present admissible evidence that various students were offered spending money, clearance of attendance records and return of honors.'

As we have said earlier, Bufalino is obviously using the news media to try to make the school officials defendants in

So while we await any evidence he presumable will offer, we continue to express confidence in the integrity of the public school officials involved in this case.

A good-enough parent

Recent visits by grown children and their children have stirred my interest in the details of parenting.

Years ago, a famous British psychoanalyst, D.W. Winnicott, came up with the concept of the "good-enough parent." By that concept, he conceded that parenting is difficult and complex and that no one can be a perfect parent. Given our fallible nature, we will inevitably do our children. These will not plex emotional lives of chilnecessarily be traumatic, by which we mean doing signifipersonality of the child.

We all have a tendency to feel alone and unloved at times, unappreciated, small, helpless. These feelings are the residual of childhood happenings, and there is no doubt but that a child will feel small and helpless and sometimes isolated and unprotected, given the vicessitudes of real life. It is part of the human condition to needs for solace.

The concept of the "goodenough" parent is Winnicott's way to explain "normal" everyday life. He is one psychoanalyst who is more interested in what's normal than what is abnormal. He was kind of a audience enthralled. At the end British Benjamin Spock, very down to earth and sensitive at and one lady asked him to the same time. He assumes that most people are "normal," that is, without significant emotional disturbance. We all have our quirks, but these are usually considered within the range of normal.

If a person grows up with relatively little psychopathology, about SUPERLATIVE childis functional and adaptive, can love and work, then he or she child-rearing. He wanted optihad a "good-enough" mother. The child needs adequate ordinary care, which leads to mothering, but fathers can do this too. With his knowledge of their development and unconscious, he wrote a book using Winnicott's phrase, "A Good Enough Parent — (A Book on Child-Rearing)." This came 10 years after his landmark work, "The Uses of Enchantment — The Meaning and Importance of Fairy Tales.

A year or two after his book on the good-enough parent, I was privileged to hear him lecture. He was a dynamic and eloquent man, holding his there was time for questions, expound on the concept of the 'good-enough mother.'

Amazingly, shockingly, he shouted angrily, "good enough is NOT good enough!" This seemed to be a contradiction, but I quickly realized that his book on child-rearing was truly rearing, not just "good-enough" mal care of children, not just Psychiatry, ordinary neuroses, which cause symptoms and saps energy and

So one must acknowledge reality and realize that the principles are more of a goal to be striven for, not necessarily a recipe for a perfect child. The fact is, no one is perfect, neither parent nor child. The question is, what accommodations are to be made to a child that will help him or her to optimal development. I will try to illustrate these in future articles.

Our present understanding of the result of "optimal development" is not only a person who has no major emotional disturbance, who can love and be loved, and who can work effectively, but a person who is autonomous, adaptive, moral and ethical, and realizes his or her intellectual and creative potential fully.

Such a person, whose instincts are not excessively dammed up, is a person with abilities to console him or herself in adversity and to be empathic with others, Such a person is spontaneous, open and honest (authentic), feeling secure within and having a good opinion of one's self.

The latter is what we call "self-esteem." Self-esteem comes from the internal representation (memory) of a good (loving) parent. If the parent is endlessly patient and tolerant, accepting and understanding, using creativity to solve the numerous daily misunderstandings and disagreements, the child will grow to be a superlative person and parent.

'Woodward's the cake, but Harper Cruise is the frosting

By Richard Wright

"This was the third Harper cruise," said Dick Forton, of Grosse Pointe Park, owner of Forton's Mower Service in St. Clair Shores and long active in the Michigan Hot Rod Association.

Wednesday, Aug. 26, the city of St. Clair Shores blocked off Harper from Nine to Ten Mile roads from 6 to 9 p.m. for owners of special interest vehicles to cruise and for everyone else to come and watch. A surprising number did — both cruise and watch.

"It's mostly the car clubs that got behind this. It has grown rapidly and is quite an event." Forton is a member of Competition Cars, which is affiliated with MHRA.

"It's a little more informal than Woodward, more for just fun. It's a charity thing, started by Bill Callahan, ex-mayor of St. Clair Shores, and Sam Cipriano, who owns Motor City Antique Auto Supply on Harper."

"Woodward's the cake, Harper's the frosting, said

This is the 'cruiser's cruise.

And if you headed up Harper from Vernier on Wednesday, Aug. 26, you would have run into a spectacular traffic jam, beginning just south of Nine Mile. The Kmart parking lot was the southern terminus of the cruise.

For an event that didn't get a lot of publicity, it drew very well. Cipriano estimated that about 5,000 special interest cars - street rods, customs, classics, old cars - cruised Harper and a lot mere than that came out to watch the fun

In 1996, Bill Callahan, exmayor of St. Clair Shores, then a councilman (now state representative for the area), and Cipriano decided there should be a cruise on Harper. "Callahan said he would get the city to cooperate if I would get the cars out," said Cipriano, So we went to Cipriano said fliers announcing the event were distributed at car club meets and that first year about 1,200 special cars showed up for the cruise and $3,000 was raised.

The second year, with more promotion, about 2,500 cars showed up and $7,000 was raised for the children's charities. "This year, we had about 5.000 cars and raised $12,000," Cipriano said.

There are no charges, no registration, just people who love cars having fun. And Cipriano was one of those people who love cars and was having fun. He has a sizable collection of rods, customs, muscle cars and old-timers in a barn near his home in Columbus, Mich.

Harper was jammed with beautiful and rare automobiles. "The mix of cars was fantastic," Cipriano said. "There was everything from a Stanley Steamer to street rods from the '30s and '40s to muscle cars. There were a couple of old fire engines. There was even a military Jeep with a machine gun mounted on it. The owner had to get permission from the city to drive it on Harper."

Cipriano said his son John runs the parts store on Harper.

The cruise was not a quiet affair. Fire engine sirens were blaring, muscle cars and rods

If you run a small business, here are four tips to help you ensure its longevity

1. Join trade associations. Most professional and trade associations have a wealth of information on everything from average industry sales, to new products and services, to details on your competitors.

Many associations also offer group discounts on expenses that may include health, life and auto insurance, as well as a shopping, office supplies and telephone service.

Also, trade associations are a great way to meet people in the same industry as yourself who may help you grow your business, or run in more efficiently.

2. Avoid impulse buying. Almost everyone has bought merchandise or services that they really didn't need simply because they got caught up in a convincing sales pitch.

As a small business owner, you need to consider all purchases carefully, especially large ones. If you are a sole proprietor, meaning that you have no partners and your company is not incorporated, you have added protection against impulse buying. In fact, the law allows you three days to nullify a contract. So, if you hastily signed a contract for office space, professional service or purchases, you have three days to change your mind. 3. Don't skimp on professional services. Shortchanging yourself on the professional services of attorneys, accountants or business advisers could end up costing you more money in the long run.

For example, it you fail to investigate all angles of a business deal, you could be headed for trouble. This especially holds true if you're just starting up or expanding your business.

4. Ruild your credit rating. Consider borrowing $1,000 to $10,000 from your bank every 90 days or so and place the money in an interest-bearing account. Then pay the money back at least a month or so before it's due.

This strategy increases your borrowing power and strengthens your ability to obtain needed financing on short notice.

It also helps you establish a good relationship with your bank, which is valuable if you run into a cash flow problem later on

WINDSOR LASER EYE INST

In today's fast paced world, where each of us strives daily in the competitive arena of life, most often we are focused on achieving the highest quality of living in every area of our lives...for ourselves and for our families.

The happiness and comfort level that is achieved by pursuing our respective dreams, and achieving them, lays the groundwork that helps us view our lives in a positive light on a day to day basis.

When you think about the importance of life - the pre-cious minutes and the hours each one of us are given to accomplish our goals - isn't it really the simple pleasures surrounding us daily that give us the greatest amount of happiness? Or, is it seeing those simple pleasures clearly that beautifies each aspect of our lives.

Take a moment while reading this editorial and in your minds eye, envision waking up to an absolutely beautiful sunrise...seeing the deep pinks, reds and purple hues when you focus on the breathtaking masterpiece of nature in all of its splendor. Or can you really see the sunrise?

Envision openng a window on a gourgeous summer morning, feeling the warm breeze against your skin and catching a quick glimpse of the crimson beauty of a nearby cardinal perched upon a sturdy apple tree branch. Could it be the delicate and exctic yellow finches that find you in awe at the wonder of nature and the intricacy of its beauty and all that you've seen ... or is this a part of your life that has been missing - and if so, ask yourself why

If you are a sports eathusiast, picture the thrill of attending a Detroit Tigers game. You have box seats and you are entertaining your best client, the excitement level is high and suddenly with the loud crack of a bat you see the ball tly into the upper deck of the stadium for a homerun. Or do you just cheer with the crowd and miss the true magic of the moment? Why miss anything!

Did you actually see the homerun...or just cheer because you knew something good just happened for the home team?

Imagine that you are going for that all important job interview. You've worked so hard to get to this level by obtaining your degree, networking with all the right people and waiting so many years for this defining moment. You know your resume is impressive, your suit finely tailored and appropriate. Then why the anxiety as you look across the room at your competition? Could it be your cumbersome eyeglasses that make you feel insecure and less confident? You could take them off, but it's too important to focus. Afterall, it's the interview of a lifetime and you certainly can't afford to miss a thing...or, in fact, to be anyone but yourself. Right?

Dr. Tayfour - The Medical Director Of The Windsor Laser Eye Institute

Settlers' plants' roots are deep İ American SOI

The story of our country's early gardens lies before us as a locumentary of history when we travel along our highways and observe the roadsides and meadows, especially in New England.

We see the descendants of the plants the earliest seathers brought with them, living clues to the daily life of this country's founders. Called "adventives" or "escapes" or described as "introduced" by botanists or wild flower collectors, these flowers were brought to a new world by reople who know they would have need of them.

came from medieval monestery gardens and were traded from caravans from Turk.y or Armenia. They were grown all over the Old World, and when the New World became a reality they came to these shores in tall ships like the "Santa Maria" and the "Arabella" and the "Mayflower" and were grown in the gardens of our first settlers for use in inedical and cultinary conceptions Some of them go back in time to antedate bronze or stone ertifacts of an earlier civilization. Some traveled on Norse barges and on Roman and Greek ships. Some

and prized by Samuel Sewall of Boston Towne; bouncing bet, brought by the fullers of cloth as their special tool; and tensel, unexcelled to this day for fluffing wool. There is St. Johnswort, oldest of all charms against witches and a remedy for rheumatism, and the scarlet pimpernell, a long-time reme by for whooping cough. They and many others are all there, some even today dignified by modern medical use. How sad to think that so often we pass such history by and furbish historic houses with gardens planted with herbs and flowers their original owner; never knew.

Gardens were of great importance to the early settlers here. Perhaps the first garden to be planted by a newcomer to our shores was that of Champlain who has lett us an account of what he planted, and a sketch of the superstition. One example is the plant called stoneorop, which grows on roofs. The thinking is that it will keep off lightning because, since it grows on stone roofs, it must be there for a purpose and that must be to keep the house from being struck by light-

There are many plants to ward off witchcraft. Among them were rue and snakeroot. Collecting magic plants and plants to be used in remedies and for couking was called simpling. A marvelous book, "The Art of Simpling," published in London in 1657, like many books of that period, rejoiced in a very long, and extremely convoluted subtitle, which was, "An Introduction to the knowledge and gardening of plants which teacheth the understanding of alldruggs and physical ingredients but especially plantes, their divisions, definitions, differences, descriptions, places, names, times, vertues, uses, temperatures and signatures." So there!

Of course, it was not only the French and the English who infinenced the gardens of early

A few years later, Captain John Smith planted a garden upon a rocky island near the coast of Maine, which grew while he was salling down the coast claiming the land for England, and where he discovered cranberries, which he thought would be good to make dye. The earlier Norsemen were so charmed by these same berries and their culinary uses that they named the land Vineland, which actually did not have anything to do with grapes. One very primitive belief, which may even be of prehistoric origin, that governed the choice of medicinal plants to be cultivated and cherished was a conviction that whatever the affliction, the remedy would be found close by So, for rheumatism, aggravated by living in damp and swampy areas, there was willow bark. This is a discovery which has paid off, since the aspirin we know today contains as a main ingredient the chemical substitute for the salicylic acid in willow bark. Digitalis, used in treating heart conditions, is derived from foxglove flowers. However, some plants used in this way have been absorbed into mere

The only bad aspect of athletics is the haunting use of steroids, which is becoming more prevalent in the high schools.

Stereotypes of steroid users include body builders who take the illegal drugs to build bigger muscles.

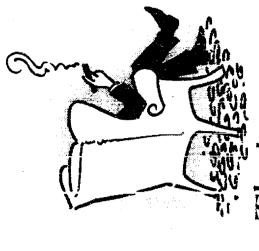

Unfortunably, a 1989 survey estimated that there are 500,000 adolescent teroid abusers nationwide. I'm sure those numbers have increased as the importance of winning has taken precedence in the 1990s — even at the high school level. When released at the appropriate time, testosterone has the natural effects of creating body size, body hair, sex organ maturation and muscle tissue development. Steroids come in either oral (tablet) or injectable forms. Orals do more damage to the liver than injectables, but they re more effective.

Tablet forms of steroids include anadrol, anavar, dianabal and winstral, while injectable types include decadurabalin, testosterone cypionate and growth hormone. Teenagers who use steroids come from all walks of life, all races and all nationalities. The common link among teens is the desire to look, perform and feet better

For the record, anabolic steroids are synthetic chemicals that mimic those produced by the body. The hormones control bodily function and are separated into various classifications such as adrenal, cortical, cardiac, bile salts, vitamins and sex

Athletes who take steroids in large amounts often take more than one type at the same time, which is called "stacking."

These athletes usually take high doses of steroids for long periods of time. Instead, they take large amounts of steroids for four to 18 weeks, then stop taking them for one to 12 months. This is called "cycling." Combinations of stacking and cycling vary greatly from one abuser to the next.

In moles, excess anabolic steroids are metabolized into female sex hormones, leading to growth of the breasts in men, known medically as "gynecomastia." While dramatic breast growth does not occur in ever case of steroid abuse, it is an irreversible side effect.

One of the more noticeable problems associated with steroid abuse is mood swings, euphoria, guilt feelings and a phenomenon called "roid rage."

xack on the academic track, Before tomework and tests overwhelm you these study tips into practice:

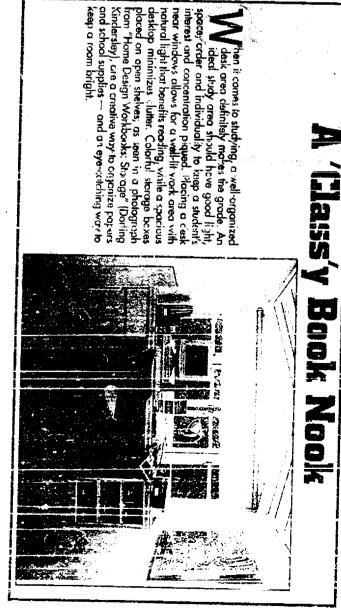

- Get enough sleep! A rested mind is sharper mind. Light to 10 hours of ep a night will aid both attention and concentration.

Read every day; elementary students should begin with a minimum of 15 minutes. Take short breaks every 30 to 60 minutes (the older the student the longer he/she can go between breaks).

Whenever appropriate, encourage children to do their homework independently

- Eat healthy med's and snacks. Just as with adequate slices, nutritior can influence performance.

Choose a quiet, comfortable place for study where basic supplies, such as paper, sharpened pencils, erasers, sissors, dictionary, etc., are handy. Again, consistency is helpful. Turn off the television and any loud music.

Schedule study/hornework sessions for the same time each day A consistent schedula makes it easier to establish study time as a daily habit.

Grosse Pointe's newest teachers look forward to fall semester

By Liz Ferszt Staff Writer

It took him three years and perseverance, tenacity and ingenuity to get to what professionals call "the big leagues" of education.

What is this goal and where is it played out?

For Mark Sabella of Harper Woods, the answer is a fifth-grade classroom at Kerby Elementary School in Grosse Pointe Farms. Sabella is one of approximately 40 new teachers hired this summer by Grosse Pointe Public Schools. The first day of school is Wednesday, Sept. 9.

For Sabella and many of the other teachers - rookies and those experienced in other systems -- this is a professional dream come true.

"I am really excited about this opportunity; it's a chance for me to give back to the community that educated me," said Sabella. His father. Guido Sabella, is a retired teacher of fifth grade at Maire Elementary School. Sabella's mother and girifriend are also educators.

This is a community that values education," he said.

Sabella attended Defer Elementary School, Pierce Middle School and Grosse Pointe South High School. He graduated in 1995 from Western Michigan University, and did his student teaching in Kalamazoo. He also subbed extensively in Grosse Pointe. and taught full time last year at Woodward Academy, a charter school in Detroit.

"I loved it (at Woodward Academy) but I wanted to come back to Grosse Pointe," said Sabella, who started applying for a teaching position in Grosse Pointe in 1995. "Charter schools are a fledgling thing," he said.

Parents with students in Sabella's classroom can expect a discipline plan consistent with the other two fifth-grade classrooms, where they establish a "universal culture" in preparation for middle school next

"Fifth grade is an intermediate step to middle school," Sabella added.

Colleague Nan Lewis, a skills resource teacher at Brownell Middle School said of Sabella, "He is an excellent new teacher who has worked all summer long in preparation for this September."

Sabella is one of many new, energetic, . enthusiastic teachers, competent in technology and the integration of the computer in the classroom," said Kerby Principal Deborah Hubbell about the new crop of teachers that the district has hired.

While interviewing him, Hubbell said, Sabella presented a portion of his professional portfolio electronically. Hubbell underscored the competiveness for teachers to enter the district. She was looking for a fifth-grade teacher with a math concentration, she said, and Sabella fit the bill. Hubbell is still interviewing candidates for a first grade position, with less than two weeks until school starts. "Our children deserve the very best," she said. Personnel representative LoAnn

Dillenbeck said that Grosse Pointe has hired approximately 38 faculty the district hiring is slightly down. Approximately 50 new teachers were hired in 1997-98.

A partial list of other new GPFS teachers and staff include:

Mark Sabella a new fifth-grade teacher at Kerby Elementary School, shows off some math manipulatives that he will use with his class. Sabella taught at Woodward Academy in Detroit and has substituted in the Grosse Pointe system.

and staff, with some personnel openings still under credentials review.

There are also seven postings for new teaching positions due to increased enrollment," she said. Compared to last year, she added,

Mark Mulholland, principal at Parcells; Jennifer Ellsworth, Spanish teacher at North; Catherine Forcillo, kindergarten teacher at Maire: Michelle Heimbuch, math teacher at Pierce; Sandra Smith, grades 4/5

magnet to licher at Defer; Jennifer Vandenbrooks, English teacher at Pierce:

Also: Susan Blomberg, special needs teacher at North, Elizabeth Burton, English teacher at Pierce:

Christine Crawford, social worker at the district offices; Michelle Davis, business education/ITV teacher at North and South; Corey Ernst, fourthgrade teacher at Richard.

More are: Karen Gallagher, grade-five teacher at Poupard; Christine Geerer, science teacher at Parcells; Brent Hall, physical therapist at the district offices: Christina Justice, social worker at the district offices: Karen Lavery, grade-three teacher at Trombly; Elizabeth Lavigne, grade-four teacher at Monteith; Kathleen McClanaghan, grade one teacher at Trombly.

More are: Michele Pemaranski, grade four teacher at Trombly: Daniel Quinn, social studies teacher at North; Shelly Rothenbuhler, science teacher at North and South: Jill Saunders. grade- five teacher at Poupard; Sarah Smith, science teacher at Pierce; Stacey Taplin, special needs teacher

The Pastor's Corner

Open letter to Geoffrey Fieger

By the Rev. John Corrado Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church

Dear Mr. Fieger:

Though you are not a member of any church, you denominate yourself by the church of your childhood:

Since you choose to call yourself Unitarian, I call upon you to more nearly live up to some of the basic principles of Unitarianism — namely reason, toler-ance and respect for the inherent worth and dignity of all human beings.

These are qualities we all hunger for in leadership. Your speech is bold and often quite critical. Those qualities -- when tempered with reason, tolerance and respect - can be powerful, attractive and benefi-

But criticism is not epithet. What is gained in either debate or humanity by calling Gov. Engler "the product of miscegenation between barnyard animals and human beings?"

What makes it hard for you to accept the fact that "assisted suicide" is a complex moral issue, and that religious people of good will are going to differ on it?

Are you so insensitive to human worth that you can't understand how people who may agree with you on the matter of death by choice do not find a corpse in the back of an old Volkswagen bus "death with dignity?

From what religious or philosophical value do you label Archbishop Adam Cardinal Maida a "nut," or compare Orthodox Jewish rabbis to Nazis just because they disagree with you?

I know of no Unitarian Sunday Schools that teach such bigotry.

I can imagine adolescent religious searchers comparing Christianity to the cult of Elvis, but I can't imagine anyone who hopes to govern a religiously diverse state doing so — and being so bold about it. I am sure there is more to you than such careless statements.

I'd like to see the "more." It would start with a repudiation of the kind of sophomoric religious bigotry such statements imply

Can you do that? Can you do it without threats or bullying or grandstanding or lawyerly circumlocution?

You could then get on with discussion and debate about the important issues, issues that concern Michiganders who want something more important than Geoffrey Fieger as the issue.

We hunger for solid, viable choices for public office. If you can't govern your tongue, you make it hard to believe you can govern the affairs of a great state.

Please show that you can do the former so that we can at least entertain the possibility that you can do

Meanwhile, the faith of your childhood is still there for you to draw upon, gain consolation in and even learn from.

Epilepsy is misunderstood

By Dr. Veronica Sosa Special Writer

Epilepsy is one of the most misunderstood medical disorders. Although it is widespread, the myths about this disorder persist. Read on and learn the facts

Fact: Epilepsy affects millions of people of all ages. The disorder affects about 2.5 million people nationwide, including an estimated 90,000 people in Michigan. Epilepsy usually first appears in young children or in the elderly. The causes are variable.

Fernaps as many as half of children with epilepsy have it because of inherited genetic factors. In the elderly, the causes are often due to strokes, head injuries, Alzheimer's disease or tumors. In both groups, epilepsy often goes undetected and untreated.

Fact: Epilepsy is treatable and, on occasion, curable. Neurologists and neurosurgeons rarely speak of "cures" for migraines, strokes, multiple sclerosis or epilepsy. The focus is on treatment. The goal of epilepsy treatment is to stop seizures from occurring without causing unacceptable side effects. In many patients this goal can be achieved with drugs. For some people, drugs may be needed only for a few years, whereas for others the need for medicine may be lifelong. For those whose seizures are not controlled by drugs, epilepsy surgery may be an option.

Fact: Epilepsy may have an unknown cause. Anyone who has epilepsy naturally wants to know the cause of the seizures.

Unfortunately, in many patients, no cause can be found. Just about anything that can cause mury to the brain has the potential to cause recurring seizures. A history of a serious head injury, a brain tumor, a stroke, alcoholism, infection of the central nervous system, or a birth injury may all contribute to the development of epilepsy. Others may have a genetic predisposition (family history) of seizures. Roughly, 50 percent of adult patients with seizures have no known cause of their epilepsy despite a full Fact: Individuals having epileptic seizures may experience a broad range of symptoms, with varying outward physical signs. The symptoms of a seizure depend on where the abnormal electrical activity occurs in the brain, how fast it spreads through the brain and how much of the brain is affected. Seizures that involve only part of the brain are called focal or partial seizures. Most people with adult onset epilepsy have partial seizures.

A simple partial seizure, often called the aura or "warning," does not involve any alteration of consciousness. Symptoms may involve a variety of sensations, such as a peculiar odor or taste, visual or auditory experiences, or a feeling of having "butterflies in the stomach." A complex partial seizure involves the alteration of awareness or loss of consciousness. Common clinical signs may include lip smacking, picking movements of the hands and unre-

Seizures that involve the entire brain at one time are called generalized seizures. In this type the whole brain is suddenly engulfed in synchronized electrical activity. The person experiencing a generalized, convulsive seizure, (a grand mal seizure,) will fall to the ground unconscious, and have whole-body stiffening and jerking.

Generalized seizures may also be non-convulsive, (petit mal seizures.) The person experiencing this type of seizure may appear to be daydreaming or staring blankly. It begins and ends within seconds and is most common in the childhood epilepsies.

Fact: Epilepsy is not typically related to mental retardation. Many patients wonder if epilepsy and mental retardation are related. About one of every three individuals with mental retardation has epilepsy. However, the majority of people with epilepsy do not have mental retardation, and frequent seizures do not generally cause mental retardation.

Fact: Treatment options may include drugs or surgery, depending on the severity of the disorder. Once a diagnosis of epilepsy has been determined, the neurologist develops a treatment plan appropriate for the patient, based on information collected. For most patients, treatment consists of one or more anti-seizure medications. Seizure control may be with a combination of drugs or with a single drug. For others, epilepsy surgery may be an option if medications have failed to control the seizures or if a brain lesion is found.

Union Street keeps tavern roots; but sports new look, new menu

By Laura McReynolds Special Writer

This place used to look different," said a dinner companion of mine one night at Union What?" I yelled.

"I said, this place used to ook different!" she hollered. "WHAT?" I screamed. Over the years, Union Street has made the transition from dark, sinoky beer-andburger-bar to jazzy-looking neighborhood hister with upscale cuisine.

One thing remains unchanged: the ear-splitting noise level.

Union Street's high, curvaceous ceiling, carpetless floors and wood wainscoting bounce the sounds of music, laughter, conversation and clinking cutlery from corner to corner. This is not the place to come for an intimate tete-a-tete. Which is to say - this place is popular. You can get a table right away before 7:30 p.m., but by 9 p.m., the joint is jumping with a young, diverse crowd that always includes a generous sampling of Harper Hospital med students.

Tables get dragged around to accommodate large groups; the bar is standing-room-only, three layers deep. Your best bet for getting a table is to come a little early, and hang onto your chairs. By the time things really get rocking, you may be able to auction off those seats to the highest bidder in the waiting line at the door.

Union Street looks great, with a retro Art Deco feel that is both stylish and comfortable. The formerly dark ceiling has been repainted a rich peach warmed by sunset pink cove lighting, and it blends down to the pubby, mirrored wainscoting in several layers of elegant, scalloped molding.

This is not as fancy-schmancy as it sounds. The tables are still covered in vinyl; the napkins are still paper Thankfully, the old Bentwood chairs have been replaced by

sturdier, more comfortable accommodations. The menu is a little confusing. There are two different appetizer sections, for instance: one on the page headed "Union Street Dinner Specials, and another on a different page with breakfast items and sandwiches. As might be expected the latter is mostly bar food - beer-battered mushrooms, nachos,

chicken wings. The dinner appetizers are considerably more elegant, and include excellent crab cakes served with a sweet pepper curry sauce ($8.95), a lush shrimp scampi served, rather idiosyncratically, with a Creole sauce over rice ($6.95), and an oyster, portabello and shiitake mushroom medley that is undermined, unfortunately, by great hunks of nearly raw garlic ($6.25). Someone in the kitchen needs to learn how to mince. You can still get a burger, a club sandwich or a plain old steak, just like the old days, but woah! The menu now includes ambitious fare like bomemade egg and spinach ravioli ($10.25), shrimp and linguine in chardonnay cream ($13.25) and a blackened catfish sandwich with remoulade ($6.95). The dinners come with a pleasantly ordinary tossed salad of mixed greens, cukes, tomatoes, red onions and carrcts. For another buck, you can upgrade to a small Caesar, but the dressing is bland and watered down, and not worth even the modest additional expense unless you are a true Caesar fanatic

Union Street serves some wonderful entree salads. though, like a refreshing, fennel-marinated shrimp tossed with roasted red peppers and greens in a balsamic vinaigrette ($8.95), or the festive spicy Kung Pao chicken salad featuring peanuts, poultry and mandarin oranges in a soymustard dressing over mixed lettuces ($7.95).

The Insalata con Gorgonzola ($7.25) is a standout. It's a generous bed of mixed greens topped with minced garlic, roasted pine nuts, sundried tomatoes, red onions, grapes, and nice, big hunks of cheese. Any surplus cheese you have left over - and you will have cheese left over - is wonderful spread on the accompanying wedge of grilled focaccia.

Union Street jambalaya ($11.95) is a classic chicken, shrimp, sausage and pepper stew served over rice. The night I tried it, it wasn't as spicy as I'd have liked, but it was nice and hearty. Rainbow Trout Bellaire features delicale brook trout sauteed with pine nuts, scallions, dried cherries and white wine. It's light and appealing, a good buy at $12.95.

My favorite entree, apricot chicken strudel ($13.95), is a real crowd-pleaser with tender chicken, portabellos, bacon and spinach baked together in a flaky phyllo dough and served with a dollop of apricot cream on the side.

Among the entrees I tried, there was only one real failure: tenderloin New Orleans, described on the menu as tenderloin medallions "blackened Cajun style and served with Creole sauce" ($13.95). Instead of truly blackening th meat (i.e., dredging it in Cajun spices and ran-searing it over high heat to "blacken" the outside and seal in the juices) the kitchen had simply slapped the beef onto the grill, producing black griddle marks. Not the same

As for the medallions themselves, they might have been fine, had they arrived medium rare as we'd ordered them, instead of overcooked to medium well. (To be fair, the medallions had been sliced so thin whaddyn expect for $13.95? — that it was probably impossible to cook them any other way ) Finally, the Creole sauce the meat was supposed to be served "with" turned out to be a thick soup the medallions were virtually floating in, like buoys bobbing in a vast and endless sea. Subtle, this ain't.

Union Street may have a fancier menu, but it hasn't forgotten its tavern roots. There's a wonderful beer selection, decribed in a beer menu modeled after Dante's seven circles of heli. The mildest beers -Bud Lite, Miller Lite, and a few other hapless American brews -- comprise the first circle. Unfortunately for those who wish to order one of these, the menu calls these beers "for wimps."

The beers progress through the circles in complexity and intensity, and there are some doozies: Guinness Stout, Bell's Eccentric Ale, Atwater Block Brewing Company Voodoowater Dopplebock, the latter - surprisingly - avail-

There's a nice wine list, too, featuring Guenoc "Langtry" Meritage, the impeccable '95 and '94 Stag's Leap chardonnays, and for the high rollers, Moet et Chandon Cuvee Dom Periguon '88 for $150.

Or you can get a modest little Bouchard chardonnay, under 25 bucks a bottle.

Union Street's Woodward Village location equidistant from Mack and Warren puts it in a bit of a rough neighborhood. It's not unusual, for easurple, to be accosted by panhandlers outside the door. Fear not. Management does a good job of keeping the street life on the street; you won't be bothered inside the restaurant. And there's a well-lit. bonded and manned parking lot next door.

Classic Caesar salad (It's easier than you think)

Caesar salad was created in 1924 by an Italian chef named Caesar Cardini (or so the story goes). Cardini owned a restaurant in Tijuana, Mexico. Over the years, especially more recently, Caesar salad has become popular on restaurant menus everywhere. Even fast-food chains are popping up with their own versions of this classic

It's really quite simple: romaine lettuce, garlic and lemon- based dressing (anchovies optional), crou-tons and Parmesan cheese. Caesar salad can be the appetizer of your meal or the main course when topped with a piece of freshly grilled chicken or seafood. Pita bread is often served as a garnish.

This week I would like to share with you my version of this popular dish. The secret is in the croutons (nothing but homemade) and of course, in the dress-

Just recently I took my first stab at Caesar dressing and I was pleasantly surprised at not only how delicious it tasted but also how easy it was to prepare. The dressing recipe is a combination of several different interpretations. The croutons are a little time-consuming, so follow the recipe and make a lot of them at one time.

Croutons 20 cups of cubed stale bread or rolls (any vari-

2 tablespoons fresh basil, chopped (or 1 Teaspoon dried)

oregano

1/4 cup olive oil 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese (optional)

Cut stale bread into one inch cubes and place in a very large mixing bowl. Slowly melt together the butter and garlic over low heat. Meanwhile, wash the fresh herbs (you may wish to add your own variety) and chop finely with a sharp knife. Slowly drizzle 1/3 of the melted butter over the bread cubes. Stop and toss the cubes to evenly coat them. Toss in 1/3 of the fresh and dry herbs. Repeat until all of the butter and herbs are in the bowl. Add the clive oil by again using a slow drizzle to make sure that all of the cubes are moist. For cheese croutons, toss in the Parmesan.

If the bowl has a sealed lid, cover and shake. Place the cubes onto two 9x13 (or so) baking pans and bake in a 425 degree oven for 30 minutes or until the cubes are golden brown (or as dark as you wish). Check the even and toss the cubes every 6 or 7 minutes. After allowing time to cool, place in sealed plastic bags.

The tasty croutons have a long shelf life and you'll probably catch someone eating them right out of the

Dressing 1/2 cup clive oil 1 tablespoon white wine vinegar 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice 4-5 anchovies 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce 2 teaspoons Grey Poupon mustard 1 garlic clove, chopped fresh ground black pepper to taste

In a food processor chop the anchovies and the garlic (you may also throw in a few croutons) until smooth. Add the remaining ingredients (except the cil), using short pulses. Finally, add the olive oil. Using a food processor will give your dressing a creamier texture. A raw egg may also be added to your dressing. The ingredients can also be chopped and combined using manual tools from your kitchen. This recipe made enough dressing for approximately 4 small dinner salads.

To make a Caesar salad. wash and tear (or chop) a head of romaine lettuce and place in a large salad bowl. Toss with homemade Caesar dressing and 1/2 to 3/4 cup of freshly made croutons Top with gratings of fresh Parmesan cheese and fresh ground black pepper.

What I think is neat about Caesar dressing is that the portions of the ingredients (and the ingredients themselves) can be altered to suit your taste. For instance, red wine vinegar can replace white wine vinegar. Canola oil can replace the olive oil, and anchovy paste can be used instead of whole anchovies. You may substitute dry mustard for the Grey Poupon. Chances are, you'll make it a little different each time.

I will never buy bottled Caesar dressing again. You'll never buy boxed croutons again.

Angels arrive at DIA; Stratford announces next season's plays

How the Rev. Allen Duston assembled the remarkable and fascinating collection, "Angels from the Vatican," now on exhibit at the Detroit Institute of Arts has to be one of the great achievements in art for this century.

Duston ascribes much of his success to prayer, but on hearing his stories about digging through Vatican storerooms, cellars and private apartments, it is obvious that he was as intrepid as an archaeologist in his threeyear campaign to bring this show about.

He virtually unearthed treasures buried in dust and oblivion. Some required months of cleaning and restoration, only to be rediscovered as masterpieces of

The resulting collection includes many pieces never before open to public view. It is so eclectic that it far transcends its significance as religious symbols.

Here are winged spiritual creatures depicted in stone, metal and other media from Assyrian, Etruscan, Greek and Roman pre-Christian cultures that represent mankind's early vision of divine spirits.

The word angel itself is from a Greek word for messenger. The pre-Christian examples obviously provided inspiration for the concept of angels that evolved in Western culture and remain popular today.

And setting aside the religious significance, here is an impressive collection of art in every medium. Some of history's finest talents have made important contributions representing every age from prehistory to the present. As a perspective on art and spiritual vision throughout the ages, this show seems allencompassing.

Most recognizable as great and famous art are works by well-known Renaissance figures. A Nativity on wood by Ghirlandaio dates from 1492. Gilded wooden statues come from the studio of Bernini. Fra Angelico is represented with a Madonna and Child and Veronese with The Vision of St. Helen. An the Expulsion of Heliodorus ie by Raphael.

From other eras and parts of the world there are icons of the Byzantine tradition, and Grecian-style urns decorated with painted, winged figures:

From more recent times in the Vatican there are ritual furnishings like papal keys, a tiara and a processional cross, all bearing images of angel-like figures.

The 20th century is also represented. A surrealist treatment called Angelic Landscape is by Salvador Dali and an abstract Miserere is by the French painter Georges Rouault.

The exhibit is organized in a way to call attention to the various contexts in which these heavenly spirits were depicted, reflecting the powers ascribed to them by the faithful. They appear most popular as guardians and messengers, but their versa tility is not so limited.

In one of the show's most beautiful paintings an angel is inspiring St. Matthew to write his version of the Gospel. In others they make music, stand in attendance to saintly figures, bring comfort to persons in distress or serve as functionaries and decorative figures in alters

The imaginations and faith of the artists have helped up to visualize angels as available in every need. One of the most unusual portrayals depicts God holding the body of Christ with the Holy Spirit hovering above, all surrounded by angels in a heroic-sized painting by Carracci.

Most forcefully this exhibit demonstrates how artists unusual fresco fragment and brush sketch of a Youth from document mankind's visions and ideals and give us images that help to perpetuate powerful ideas in our culture. Detroit is fortunate to have been able to bring this exhibit here on its limited

Even while the current season is still going strong, the Stratford Festival's artistic director Richard Monette has just whetted theatergoers appetites with next year's list of 10 plays. Continuing the Festival's traditional emphasis, four of Shakespeare's greatest and most popular plays are on the list.

Topping it is "The Tempest," believed to be the Bard's last play. The role of Prospero in many ways symbolizes the figure of the playwright himself. It incorporates all of the sense of humanity in an idealistic romance with the theatrical magic for which he is famous.

A much earlier work rich in poetry and also filled with comedy, fantasy and lots of fun, "Midsummer Night's Dream," is also scheduled. These will contrast with the ever-popular psychological drama of "Macbeth" and the court intrigue with some of Shakespeare's most famous patrictic speeches about England in Richard A contemporary of Shakespeare's is represented in the person of Ben Jonson. whose Jacobean comedy, "The Alchemist," is also on the bill and then an 18th century successor, Richard Sheridan, with his comedy of manners, The School for Scandai."

A new undertaking will be a stage adaptation of Jane Austen's 19th century novel "Pride and Prejudice," with emphasis on this classic story's family appeal. The musical next year relates back to Shakespeare, with a new Festival treatment of Leonard Bernstein's famous version of "Romeo and Juliet" --- "West Side Story."

Another welcome addition is the inclusion of two original Canadian scripts. The first is "Gienn," by Canadian playwright David Young. It chronicles the life of Canada's world-famous pianist, Glenn Gould, whose superb artistry and personal idiosyncrasies are legendary. The second is a Gothic romance, "Dracula," which the Festival describes as a "chamber musical" based on a book by Bram Stoker. Original Canadian plays offered in recent seasons have provided exciting insights into current Canadian values and the outstanding talents among our northern neighbor's writers.
