INSIDE

■ The Grosse Pointe Farms City Council approves a new contract with the public safety department. The four-year contract calls for annual 3 percent pay increases. It also gives employees the opportunity to opt out of the health care plan if they want. This option, which is worth $2,000 in cash, is for employees who may already have health coverage through a spouse.

Farms council approves public safety contract

By Jim Stickford Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Farms takes care of the public safety department until 2004. The contract calls for a 3 percent increase in wages every year, retroactively starting in 2000, said Farms assistant city manager Shane Reeside.

"This is a mutually beneficial contract for both sides," Reeside said. "The contract talks really didn't start until last year at the end of the previous contract. This kind of thing is fairly common in negotiations of this kind. We didn't reach a tentative agreement until last month. Then the contract had to be approved by the union. Once they approved, it was presented to the Farms council on June 11, and they approved the deal."

The contract, Reeside said, provides, in addition to the yearly 3 percent pay increase, a health insurance $2,000 in cash to employees

The way the 457 plan works, Reeside explained, is that if an employee puts money into his or her 457 plan, the city would match that amount up to 1 percent, now 4 percent, of the employee's base pay. So if that employee makes $50,000 a year, that employee can now put away $2,000 a year into his or her 457 plan and the city will match that amount. If that same employee were to invest. say, $3,000, the Farms would still only be obligated to put in 4 percent, or $2,000, into the employee's 457 plan.

This contract, Reeside said, covers patrol officers, dispatchers, sergeants and parking enforcement officers. The five lieutenants in aepartment are mem bers of a different union.

"I was a classic unmotivated student. Because of the draft, a lot of people really wanted to go to college. With my grades I went Macomb Community College. I got my first introduction to Grosse Pointe working summers cutting grass. I saw the nice boulevards and well-maintained lawns and I guess I filed that information away for future reference. I don't know how different my life would have been if I had gone to college. I went to Macomb, but I didn't have a strong sense of what to do. I knew that I liked television. I wanted to be Al Acker.man. I saw myself as an on-cam-

At Fraser High, Trudel won a radio broadcasting contest. They sat a student down and gave him or her 30 minutes to prepare a fourminute broadcast. Doc Andrews of Dick Purtan's radio team was in the class ahead of Trudel.

"But I got off the path," said Trudel. "I wasn't motivated and ended up enlisting in the Navy in 1974. I am now considered a 'Vietnam era' veteran, but I never went near combat. I joined because of the excellent GI benefits.

Trudel said he had a great time in the Navy. By this time his parents had divorced and his stepmother's brother was a military man who advised Trudel how to work the system to maximize his experience in the service. He trained in San Diego instead of at the Great Lakes base in Illinois. He enjoyed sunny San Diego and knew that if he applied to be a submariner, he could extend his stay in the city learning Morse code as a radio operator.

'I was 20 years old," said Trudel. "Class started at 7:30 a.m. and was over by 11. I got to play golf at the

Smog by any other name is still smog

By Kenneth Van Dellen

found the column by Harold Johnson titled "Environmental Economics" (May 17) to be very disturbing. The identifying information at the end of the column gives some idea of who Mr. Johnson is, but it is a little misleading.

Mr. Johnson and his organization are part of the "Wise Use Movement," which purports to be in favor of "balanced environmentalism." However, they are very much pro-industry and anti-environment. The column gives a good example of the kind of misleading information these folks put out.

It is well established that ozone in the troposphere, the lowest zone in the atmosphere where we live, is harmful. That is not to say that it provides no benefits down here, but they would be far outweighed by the harm

Most tropospheric ozone is a secondary air pollutant, one of the components of a noxious mixture of air pollution known as photochemical smog. This smog is produced by chemical reactions between hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides (NOx), both of which are released when we burn fossil fuels, such as coal, petroleum products and natural gas.

These chemical reactions occur more readily when the sun is strong and temperatures are higher. This is why we sometimes have Ozone Action days at this time of the year, during which we are asked to reduce our consumption of fossil fuels. We aren't trying to reduce our production of only ozone on those days, but all of the pollution that makes up smog.

It should be noted that the hydrocarbons and NOx are hazards to health, too.

By Mr. Johnson's logic, we should consume more fossil fuel so we could emit more hydrocarbons and NOx so we can generate more photochemical smog, including ozone.

A variety of short-term illnesses result from ozone exposure, including eye irritation, upper respiratory irritation, cough, shortness of breath, wheezing, nausea, and headache. A peculiar chest pain is also associated with ozone pollution. People who spend more time outdoors are more vulnerable, and children are particularly at risk.

There is mounting evidence that ozone produces permanent lung damage over time in humans. Animals are also affected, and some food crops have significant reductions in yield when exposed to ozone. Even materials such as rubber are damaged by ozone.

Do we want more of this?

Mr. Johnson is critical of the EPA, saying that they "proposed stricter limits on ground-level ozone - while ignoring its health benefits. Although ground-level ozone can cause respiratory problems in some people, it also provides a shield from ultraviolet radiation that can cause cancer. A Department of Energy study suggests that the proposed ozone reduction would increase skin cancer incidents by 11,000 and contribute to up to 50 deaths per year."

It was news to me that ground-level ozone protects against ultraviolet radiation, so I decided to see if I was ignorant about something.

A query to the Department of Energy brought this response: "As you probably know, ozone in the upper atmosphere protects us from UV radiation... I've never heard of ground-level ozone providing this benefit. The EPA may know..."

This supports my suspicion that Mr. Johnson was confused or ignorant about the effects and benefits of ozone. It's the ozone in the stratosphere, the second zone of the atmosphere, that we want to keep because it protects us from UV radiation. That's good ozone. Ozone down here does far more harm than any good it may do, and it's doubtful that it does much.

Can you believe the rest of what Mr. Johnson says if it's based on such a poor understanding of science? I can't.

The lesson here is that we should all be cautious when folks who are not very knowledgeable about science, and may even have a low regard for it. attempt to use it to support their pet issues and positions. Instead of bolstering the arguments and providing credibility, the opposite can occur; although some people may be fooled.

Kenneth Van Dellen of Grosse Pointe Park was on the faculty at Macomb Community College, where he taught geology for 34 years and environmental science for 25 years.

Ban all capital punishment?

By Wilbur Elston

ichigan, the first state to ban capital punishment for state crimes, would be an appropriate place to start a new campaign to outlaw capital punishment by federal authorities.

True, the public opinion polls currently show strong public support for the continued use of capital punishment for federal crimes. Yet a new campaign to end such punishment nationally seems to be under way as a result of the death of Timothy McVeigh.

Public television offered an excellent debate on the subject the day before McVeigh was put to death. We thought the two authorities who proposed a ban on executions for federal crimes had the better arguments, but perhaps we were swayed by our own previously held views.

McVeigh became somewhat of a hero in some quarters for the crimes he committed at Oklahoma City, and he seemed to get better press as more and more time elapsed after the blast six years ago for which he was convicted.

Indeed, it can be argued that a solitary life in prison plus a guarantee that he never would be eligible for parole would be regarded in many quarters as a worse punishment than death.

If that is so, as many people contend, then the guarantee of a life in prison could be regarded as more of a deterrent to crime than an execution even six years after the performance of the act, as occurred in McVeigh's case.

A Los Angeles Times dispatch from Berlin reported that the execution had shocked Europe and was widely viewed as a vengeful throwback in a civilized area.

Even in Eastern Europe, where death penalty proponents are a majority, the manner of McVeigh's death drew reproach for the ghoulish media attention and the public curiosity surrounding it.

The low value of human life that seems to characterize Americans, and even the difficulty of penalizing youth killings in some American schools, adds to the European belief that basically we are a nation of barbarians.

But would a good and intelligent debate change many American minds? Who knows? Yet it is a subject that deserves more light than heat, and conceivably we might discover that, as we did in the 1960s, the United States might even favor a ban on capital punishment at any level, whatever the

Random thoughts from my journal

Men never take as long as women think they should to complete household tasks.

They do laundry in half the time it takes women to do it, for instance.

This is probably because men don't bother sorting colors or presoaking and they forget to shake out the soggy lumps of clothing before transferring them to the dryer. I know a man who picks up the whole washerload of wet stuff and plops it into the voracious maw of his electric dryer, then sets the dial on "cook.

The People vs. Timothy McVeigh

In all the frenzied rhetoric about the death penalty, one important fact seemed to get lost. Those who were morally bound to oppose the death penalty insisted that it was no deterrent, that it didn't bring any of the victims back and that it did not constitute "justice."

If the execution of Timothy McVeigh was not justice, what was it? It was called "retribution," "revenge," an unworthy motive, an act unbecoming a great and civilized nation.

The developed democracies of Europe - England, France and Germany looked down their respective noses at us. In these European nations, the crime rate is relatively low. the number of firearms owned by private citizens is also low, and there is no death penalty.

They seem to love to talk about us as if we are a primitive, wild nation, taking into account our history and our movies. They love our shoot-em-up Westerns and cops and robbers movies, but reading accounts of our school shootings and our relatively high crime rate, they think we are truly wildly out of control.

They don't seem to realize that World War I, World War II and more recently the Balkan War originated in Europe, and despite their low crime rate, their low ownership of guns and absent death penalty, they are capable of following genocidal dictators and murdering people by the tens of millions.

In truth, considering the larger sweep of history of the 20th century, the United States has been and remains a beacon of enlightenment and civilized reality. Much American blood has been spilled to quell European and Asian violence. The number of child and accidental gun deaths including those murders connected with crime, especially related to drug traffic, however unfortunate and theoretically unnecessary dwindles into nothingness compared with the recurring epochs of mass violence on the European and Asian continents.

Beware the surface appearance of niceness and the holier-than-thou atti-

In America, there is civilization and there is civilized justice. The execution of Timothy McVeigh is a prime example.

He was born and raised in the United States. He was a citizen who took exception, as is his right, with certain policies and practices of the federal government. He had the constitutional right to render his complaints, his dissatisfaction, his disagreement by letter to his elected representatives, whether they be in the Congress or Senate or the Oval Office of the United States.

He could have written letters and submitted editorials to local and national newspapers. He is entitled to demonstrate peaceably in the street.

McVeigh was not entitled to blow up a federal building and kill hundreds of his fellow citizens to make a point. McVeigh was not entitled to personally declare war on the government. That would be treason. People who commit treason were usually shot at dawn by a firing squad.

McVeigh was captured, and he was arrested and tried and found guilty by a jury of his peers. Due process was observed. He was found guilty beyond a shadow of doubt.

Murder in the first degree demands the death penalty, even if it is just one person who is the victim. In the case of Oklahoma City, there were 168 dead and thousands aggrieved and scarred, thousands of his fellow Americans.

Wè are a civilized people, but when there is a murderous madman in our midst, we must not only protect and defend ourselves, but we are entitled to seek ret-

There are thousands of us who have lost a loved one. We cannot abide their murderer having three meals a day, television, a library and workout room while our precious loved ones are deprived of their lives.

They say executing Timothy McVeigh won't bring our loved ones back. True enough, but it gives us satisfaction that McVeigh is also deprived of life.

They say the government executing one of its citizens is a travesty, and stooping to the violence of the perpetrator, which is unbecoming a civilized government.

But the truth is that lethal injection is not violent. It is very peaceful. It is so peaceful that many victims felt he got off too easy. The truth is, lethal injection is not cruel or unusual.

The electric chair has been deemed cruel and unusual, hanging and the firing squad have been deemed cruel and unusual, along with being drawn and quartered, boiled in oil and burned at the stake. Crucifixion is cruel and unusual. Lethal injection is kind and usual. It is the method of euthanasia, which we afford our beloved pets to put them out of their misery. It is an act of kindness. Others would have wished McVeigh to be sentenced to a chain gang so that he could suffer hard labor for the rest of his life, but that is cruel and unusual and so it is forbidden.

In the trial it was The People vs. Timothy McVeigh. The People is us. He said he was waging war against The Government and that "collateral dam-

Congratulations to Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officers David Younk, Ron Coste, Steve Murphy, Gary Kirkley and Mike Kortas for their excellent marksmanship on behalf of Fraternal Order of Police No. 102, which encompasses the five Pointes and Harper Woods.

The five officers, in a statewide FOP sponsored shooting contest held on Saturday, May 5, finished third in the Class A rankings, which includes FOP branches with 275 or more members.

The team was required to shoot 162 rounds - 132 in combat mode and 30 in bullseye target shooting. In addition to the team score, Officer Younk finished third in the Class A sharpshooting individual category.

House Party broken up

Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officers were sent to a home in the first block of Sunningdale at 1:56 p.m. on Thursday, June 14, to investigate a report of an underage house party.

When officers arrived at the scene, they found several youths in the rear yard.

He was a recent patient at nearby hospital and the suspect is believed to have been involved in other incidents of a similar nature that recently took place in the neighborhood.

Identity theft

A resident of the 700 block of Washington in the City of Grosse Pointe reported to police on Monday, June 11, that she had been contacted by Eastpointe police concerning identity theft.

Eastpointe police, when investigating an automobile accident, had discovered the driver of the car in possession of a credit card in the victim's name. The account had been opened in April. The suspect also had the victim's Social Security number. Police urged the victim to notify her bank and other appropriate credit and financial service providers to see if other accounts have been taken out in her name police ran into trouble when they ran into (not literally) a 42-year-old City man who was hitchhiking on Jefferson at 10:15 p.m. on Wednesday, June 13. When police confronted the man, he told them, using extremely obscene language, to leave him alone. He appeared to be drunk and refused to cooperate with police efforts to determine if this were true.

Police were finally forced to handcuff the suspect, who screamed more obscene suggestions as to what the police could do with themselves. When he was taken to the public safety station, he refused to cooperate with police and kicked several holes in the walls inside the station. Police eventually maced the suspect to get him under control. A check of his background revealed he was already out on bail from Grosse Pointe Park, where he was facing two charges of being drunk and disorderly.

The City added another charge to his record. He is free on $1,500 bond.

Cleanup nets 42 tons

Lake St. Clair is 42 tons cleaner than before May's Nautical Coastal Cleanup. The tonnage represent a morning's work by 565 volunteers who scoured 26 cleanup sites. In addition, scuba divers cleaned 15 locations. This year, work extended from Detroit to New Baltimore. Low water levels allowed the Farms' Carol Smith, above, to collect debris at the base of the seawall north of Moross. Jill Wrubel, a Grosse Pointe Woods resident and owner of Advanced Aquatics Diving on Jefferson in St. Clair Shores, founded the cleanup six years ago. She's already preparing next year's event.

Designing a garden? Plan

By Brad Lindberg

Unless you live in a cave, your house isn't part of the natural landscape. To visually connect a man-made dwelling to its natural them through the season and environment — to ground the structure — ornamental residen-

At its highest level, the job is orchestrated by a landscape architect. The title requires a degree from an accredited school, plus a few years work experience before passing a state licensing

Landscape architecture involves a different method of designing, however, because it must concern time. A landscape scheme's vitality hinges on a designer projecting how the landscape concept will evolve over time - how the garden will

In short, when planning an ornamental garden, think ahead. "People never space their plants appropriately and give them time grow," said Linda Boyle, a landscape architect from Grosse Pointe Park. "People plant evergreen trees three feet from the house. In five years, the tree is going to be one-sided." From amateur-hour doodlings to sub-par professional renderings, many designers fall short because they value immediate gratification over long-term aes-

"Designers often plant trees too closely together for immediate effect," said Brian Colter, the Park city forester. "They do that to make their clients happy, especially with evergreens used in beds. Unfortunately, in the long run, trees grow quite large. Austrian pines and white pines might be six feet upon planting, but they can get to 70 feet tall.

Boyle focuses on large-scale planning. She's helping develop the new master plan for Belle Isle, which was originally designed in the 1880s by landscape architect Frederick Law Olmstead, who also created New York's Central Park. Boyle has designed hundreds of residential landscapes.

"You can tell a house that has been professionally landscaped," A well-conceived garden has

Plants that produce bright, vivid flowers often require more sun than shade-loving specimens. For low maintenance yet colorful gardens, Boyle advised using day lilies or black-eyed

Boyle and Wakely consider landscaping as an extension of a building's interior floor plan.

"That's incredibly important," said Wakely. "There needs to be a transition from inside to outside. In many of my designs, l create views through the build ing by lining up archways and doors to a window. I extend the concept of the room outside to an ornamental mode. That's the kind of thing I don't think amateurs are aware of."

Boyle said, "You want to bring the outdoors in. You can use elements that tie into a house, like an arbor and trellis."

For new homes, Boyle said year's municilandscaping should be part of pal beautificathe overall project. She said, "As a general rule, spend 10 percent on landscaping to match the quality of the house."

She added, "Landscaping takes a lot of thinking. My biggest thing about landscape architecture is people don't understand what we do. They hear 'landscape' but not Don't forget maintenance. Low

"A design should include different textures, from fine, feathery leaves to something big," she explained. "You want to contrast shades of green, including greengreens, blue-greens and variegated leaves."

Designing landscapes is harder than it looks.

"Even I hired a landscape architect to design my garden," said Grosse Pointe architect Robert Wakely. "I don't know the botany. A really good landscape designer needs to know when things bloom, what grows in the sun or shade - it's not a matter of throwing a bunch of bushes

He added, "Amateurs tend to just fill up space with growing stuff. A good designer will manipulate the space with plants." A short-sighted design is easy

This past weekend's Hill Happening Made me amazingly aware again How children get into heaven More easily than most adults.

Children don't worry about it too much. Living with their hands and hearts open More than with fists and lives clinched, They are, says Frederick Buechner somewhere,

"So relatively unburdened by preconceptions That if somebody says there's a pot of gold At the end of the rainbow, they are perfectly Willing to go take a look for themselves.

Children aren't necessarily better than Other people. Like the child in "The Emperor's New Clothes," they are Just apt to be better at telling

Services for Older Citizens meets needs of Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods seniors

By Sharon Maier

Executive director, SOC

As Services for Older Citizens grows, our departments grow to meet the needs of Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods seniors. Call SOC at (313) 882-9600 if you need a service or would like to help provide a service here's who to

Information and Assistance. Extension 247 — Barbara Aiello and Mary Weis

If you have a general question, this is the place to start. Information and Assistance has a wealth of knowledge that they are happy to share with seniors and their families. Information is really only the beginning of this department. The assistance is when they really work magic. They go by the motto- "No job's too big, no job's too small."

Last week Betty Rusnack needed to sign important papers for a friend. The only catch was that the papers were in Waterford and she was sitting in her livingroom in Grosse Pointe Woods. Feeling stress from the thought of having to drive to Waterford late on a hot day, she called the SOC office for assistance. We had the documents faxed to us, she signed them and faxed them back.

A small amount of assistance went a long way to make her day. Sometimes we invest a great deal of time and energy to offer assistance. Recently a senior called requesting help with her electric bill. While looking over the bills, Aiello realized they were way out of proportion and inquired about a variety of things that might be wrong. After some careful digging, the client confided to Aiello that her refrigerator was ducttaped shut. Aiello called a few resources and secured a new refrigerator for the client.

We don't have a hidden closet full of refrigerators but we do have a staff that is willing to go beyond the call of duty to meet the needs of Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods seniors.

Minor Home Repair Extension 246 — Maryanne

From leaky faucets to snow removal, minor home repair covers a wide vari-

The number of calls for gutter repair have been incredible this spring," Judge said. "We try to help every client that qualifies for the program.'

This is a federally funded program that uses Community Development Block Grant money. The government sets up the guidelines and we help as many seniors as possible. Judge is available to assist with paperwork and answer questions Monday through Friday from 1 to 4:30 p.m.

We've noticed many seniors who don't qualify for this program but would like assistance with minor home repairs. We are creating a list of people interested in a fee-based minor home repair program and if the need is here, we will answer it. Call our office if you would be interested in this type of program.

Food and Friendship Extension 242 — Marilyn O'Bryan and Phyllis Johnson

The title says it all. We offer food with friendship three days a week. A complete meal is served at lunch time and plenty of conversation tops each meal. One of my favorite Food and Friendship stories is the senior that wouldn't get dressed or out of bed until her caregiver insisted that she get up and come to Food and Friendship. She's been coming for more than a year now and has taken computer classes, joined seminars and always tops off every meal with friendly conversation.

Case Coordination Extension 241 — Nina Mondalek, BSW and Susan Kopf, MSW

Our social workers work hard to enhance the well-being of seniors. Clients are referred for a variety of reasons, the biggest being concern that no one is looking out for them. Case Coordination always focuses on the client's self-determination, empowerment, dignity and confidentiality. Mondalek and Kopf take special care of seniors to assure that they get the services they need.

Escort Service Extension 245 — Lucy Wright We have a small army of volunteers who provide rides for seniors who cannot use other transportation. We are always looking for more volunteers. This is one of the most rewarding volunteer opportunities.

Meals on Wheels

This program delivers balanced meals to seniors five days a week. We also deliver meals on Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter as part of the holiday meal program. Many families add delivering meals to their current holiday traditions to give extra meaning to the holidays. It's a fun and rewarding experience.

Loan Closet Extension 245 — Lucy Wright If a hospital stay or recent injury brings you home with durable equipment needs, call our loan closet to borrow what you need. We have everything from wheelchairs to canes. If you have equipment that you no longer use. we would be delighted to add it to our

Medicaid Waiver

Extension 243 — Della Davis The Medicaid waiver program offers an alternative to nursing home care for eligible seniors who qualify by government standards. This program is a lifesaver when clients need in-home care and are unable to secure the resources on Channel 5 every day at 11:30 a.m. Schoenenberg discusses topics of interest to seniors. She has a wide variety of guests and always provides new information in an informative manner. If you have ideas for a show, call our office and share them. Schoenenberg is open to suggestions and is always anxious to meet the needs of the seniors of Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods.

Executive Director Extension 248 — Sharon Maier

If you have ideas, concerns, compliments or complaints, ask for me. We're always looking for ways to improve. Let us know how we're doing.

Raise your hand if you grew up in Grosse Pointe

In pursuit of career advancement, interests or preference, families in this mobile world move from one community to another, from state to state and country to country. It is unusual to find people who remain in the area where they grew up.

If you don't think this is true, the next time you're in a group of people ask them how many are native to Detroit or Grosse Pointe. Don't be surprised if you don't find many who belong to the club. To those who have remained in the same area, adjusting to a new environment does not appear to be inviting. But those who are used to moving around accept and live with what comes with a transient life. They put down roots wherever they go. Friends are made, left behind and remembered with greeting cards. Parents, sisters and brothers are visited on holidays. If the distance is not too far, the telephone becomes an important line of communication linking families and special friends. Time and technology move forward not backward. It is not likely that those who rate opportunity, chance and new experiences higher than stability and sense of permanency will change their way of thinking - nor should they. But those who would not care to embrace ambience feel just as strongly about their preference. They value the sense of permanence, of belonging, of being a "part of" that comes with remaining in the same community.

The environs may change but that is a gradual change and it allows them time to adjust. It is very different from being uprooted and thrown into a whole new environment. The change can be accepted more readily if familiar remains.

In Detroit, only Belle Isle remains. Tiger Stadium and the Western Market have disappeared. As it happened, they were Need Apply." The story is told that one Irishman who desperately needed work added the following message to the notice, "What you words are also written on the gates of hell."

There were others, like him, who settled in the area which became know as Corktown in Detroit because most of the newcomers were from the county of Cork. Their refuge and hope was the church. Thus from the very beginning Trinity Church became known for its ministry to the poor.

Lower your risk for cancer

By Dr. Jadranka Dragovic Special Writer

Most Americans are familiar with risk factors and steps they can take to prevent heart disease, hypertension, diabetes and osteoporosis. But cancer, it seems, is the wild card waiting in the wings to trap even the most health-conscious among

Dr. Jadranka Dragovic

If hearing the word "cancer" sends chills up your spine, you don't need to feel totally out of control. Cancer occurs when genes regulating cell growth and division go haywire. In five to 10 percent of cases, an inherited gene makes a person more vulnerable to certain cancers, but that does not mean that individuals are predestined to get cancer. Most cancers are caused at least in part by damage to genes that occurs throughout life and can be controlled by lifestyle choices.

Virtually all cancers that result from smoking are 100 percent preventable and account for about one third of total cancer mortality.

Another third of cancer deaths may be directly or indirectly related to poor diet or insufficient physical activity.

And about one million skin cancers diagnosed last year could have been prevented by the use of sunscreen, wide-brimmed hats and other means of protection from the ultraviolet rays of the sun.

As busy as most people are these days, simple changes in diet and lifestyle can play important roles in helping to reduce the risks for cancer. The importance of fresh vegetables, fruits and legumes as well as daily exercise cannot be overemphasized. Scientists believe that one third of cancers could be prevented by dietary changes.

Cancer experts suggest: • Reduce alcohol consumption. People who consume multiple drinks each day, combined with smoking cigarettes or using smokeless tobacco, risk increases for mouth, throat, larynx, esophageal and liver cancers. Women who con-have an increased risk of breast cancer because alcohol boosts estrogen levels. To decrease your risk for breast cancer, reduce alcohol consumption to 3 drinks a week.

• Eat more fiber. Select wholegrain breads and cereals that contain at least 5 grams of fiber per serving. Increasing fiber may reduce your risk for colon cancer.

• Eat less fat to lower your risk for developing breast, colon and prostate cancer. Moderate your fat

• Eat more fruits and vegetables.

· Limit salt-cured, smoked, and nitrite-cured foods. Researchers believe that these foods may increase risk for stomach and esophageal cancer when eaten frequently.

In addition, some foods seem to facilitate the growth of tumors while others have an inhibiting effect. Red meat has been linked to cancers of the colon and prostate. Doctors recommend that, if you have an inherited risk of one type of cancer, the trick is to find foods that will give you the best odds of beating that cancer. For example, the American Cancer Society recommends eating more foods high in vitamin C while avoiding salt-cured and nitratecured foods to head off potential development of stomach or esophageal cancer.

obesity can significantly increase the death rate from cancers of the gall bladder, bile duct, breast, uterus and ovaries.

It also makes good health sense to worry about the proven risks that affect overall health, such as smoking, diet, exercise and sun exposure. An estimated 60 percent of cancers in American women and 40 percent in men can be attributed to diet and exercise choices.

Most cancers occur after age 55, and age is a risk factor for many cancers. Cancer is the second leading cause of death in the United States after heart disease.

Also take heart that 8 million cancer survivors - still alive more than five years after diagnosis - are living proof of the steady progress being made against this major killer. Don't wait a day longer to make positive lifestyle changes and help reduce your risk for cancer.

Entertainment

'Twelfth Night' features Shakespearian hijinks

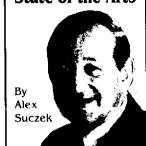

Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" supposedly was written to satisfy Queen Elizabeth I's request for an entertainment at the Feast of the Epiphany, 12 nights after Christmas. The title and the occasion have no significance for the play, however.

To borrow a phrase from the script itself, the play is an amusing, "improbable fiction." Its characters are mistaken identities and lost or estranged wanderers who amuse us by their mixups as they fall in love and discover who they are.

The play has also been enduring: Audiences ever since Queen Elizabeth have loved it. It is unlikely, however, that many audiences have seen it transformed into such a rollicking, enchanting fantasy as the Stratford Festival is presenting this summer.

Following the lead of Shakespeare, who located the story in a mysterious Balkan country on the shores of the Adriatic, Director Antoni Cimolino kept the location. He chose the 1920s as the time frame. Costumes range from Greek folk-style to flapper dresses, white suits and wide- brimmed fedoras. Bouzouki music in a Taverna atmosphere provides a throbbing uplift to the action and it fairly makes the performance dance. In this context, elements of farce and slapstick come naturally to the goings-on.

The story not only survives in this guise, it thrives, running the gamut from pining poignance to hilarity. Three hours of delightful make-believe fly by in a rapid succession of laughter, surprise, tender sentiment and an occasion-

We first meet a Duke named Orsino. He is drowning his sorrow with ouzo at a Taverna because his love for Olivia is spurned. Then we meet Olivia. She is dedicated to mourning her late brother and she refuses to talk to Orsino.

Viola is a survivor of a shipwreck in which Olivia believes her twin brother Sebastian drowned. Viola is disguised as the page boy Tesario Dressed un as a handsome young man, she is employed by Orsino to woo Olivia for him. She (he) makes an eloquent messenger of love.

The confusion begins as Viola-Cesario falls in love with Orsino and Olivia falls for Cesario, creating a troublesome triangle. It becomes even more confusing late in the play when Sebastian appears on the scene and he and his disguised sister are mistaken for each other. Olivia suddenly finds her shy messenger is a willing lover.

The most fun is provided by Olivia's household. Her tippling cousin Sir Toby Belch holds late night revels with his guest, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, abetted by Sir Toby's sweetheart, the maid Maria, and scolded imperiously by the Steward Malvolio. All of them are linked by the subtle wit of Feste the clown, Olivia's Jester

A famous high point of the script is the way that Maria and Sir Toby dupe Malvolio into thinking that his mistress, Olivia, loves him and would welcome his advances. In that role, Peter Donaldson creates a wonderfully pompous, overbearing steward who can barely be pitied as he becomes the embittered vic-

But his performance. cross gartered and in yellow stockings," and his mad tango with the horrified Olivia as he gets amorous are great moments of theatrical hijinks.

Michael Therrault's Sir Andrew and James Blendick's Sir Toby are no less memorable. Sir Andrew, egged on by Sir Toby, puts on airs as a dancer, a suitor to Olivia and a swordsman. The act invariably ends in failure and disgrace. But with the expert help of Domini Blyth as the Machiavellian Maria, they engineer the classic putdown of Malvolio lured by the message: "Some are born great, some achieve

And then there is Feste. Perhaps Shakespeare's most wise yet enigmatic fool, Feste, as played by William Hutt, is touching and masterful. He preserves a wistful, low-key manner that contrasts elo-quently with the rest of the show. And he sings softly and sweetly some of the loveliest new settings of the play's famous songs. For those, Stratford's longtime musical director Berthold Carriere deserves special credit.

Hutt also provides a perspective that this has been a magic world where identities and mysteries have unfolded with music and laughter to bring about a happy ending.

Cool summer salad combines greens, strawberries, almonds

The hot weather is finally upon us. Cool your family down with a different take on salad, the obvious choice on a warm summer

This week's recipe tosses romaine greens with strawberries and other fun stuff. The finish is a refreshingly delicious dressing that will have them coming back for seconds. My gal pal Lisa Gresens of Grosse Pointe Farms turned me on to this terrific recipe. It was passed on to her from her mother-in-law Karen Gresens, who lives in Grand Blanc.

Summer Salad Toss with Strawberries

2 heads romaine lettuce, washed and finely chopped (or 3 to 4 hearts of

12 large strawberries, hulled and finely diced 1 cup sliced almonds, romaine)

toasted 1 to 1-1/2 cup shredded (fancy) colby jack

2 cups shredded purple cabbage

Dressing

1/2 cup vegetable oil 1/3 cup sugar 1/4 cup cider vinegar 1/4 teaspoon salt 1/4 teaspoon paprika 1 heaping teaspoon minced garlic 1/8 teaspoon black pepper

Toast the sliced almonds in a toaster over or on the stove top, tossed in a non-stick skillet. Either way, don't walk away from the almonds or they will burn As soon as the almonds begin to brown, lower the heat. Remove from the heat when at least half of the almonds become a golden brown. Set aside to

In a large bowl, combine the lettuce, strawberries, almonds, cheese and cabbage. Cover with a damp paper towel and place in the refrigerator until ready to serve.

To prepare the dressing, whisk together all the dressing ingredients in a small bowl or place the ingredients in a tightly sealed jar and shake well.

To serve the salad, start with a small amount of dressing and begin to toss. Add dressing until all of the lettuce mixture has been evenly coated. You may end up with extra dressing, depending on the actual amount of lettuce you use and how lightly dressed you like your salad. Extra dressing can

Garden Club of Michigan to hold Flower Show competition

By Bliss Caulkins Clark and Anna D. Warren Special Writers

Flower Show - a concept not fraught with relevance to one's daily existence, yet evocative of so many images and emotions: women's guilds in England; the overwhelming stimulation of Chelsea or Philadelphia; Hercule Poirot with his mallows; the joy of time out of frenetic schedules to treasure temporal sculpture; the naive excitement of the novice exhibitor; the terror of the seasoned competitor aware of the tyranny of the judges; the superior confidence of the spectator in knowing "I can do that!" and the wonder at the myriad forms in which plants have evolved.

Why do it? Any show is a tremendous undertaking for the sponsoring group. Mostly it is about sharing and educating, but it really operates on two levels. For the public (the reviewers), a show provides an opportunity to enjoy special kinds of beauty, to see different plants and flowers than those to which they are accustomed, to learn what grows in one's own microclimate, to study the optimum form of house plants and cut specimens, to gather ideas for one's own endeavors and to have fun doing something different.

For the individual (the exhibitor), a flower show presents an intellectual and physical challenge, a venue in which to showcase ideas and talents, a stretch to expand creativity and lots of fun in working with others bent on the same goals.

For both the public and the individual a show offers new knowledge about plants and flower arranging as an art form. Informative judges' critiques, correct botanical nomenclature and conservation displays all

A flower show also provides the chance to agree, question, argue or know more than those awarding the prizes. (It also gives flower show judges something to do.)

What about the judging? Most flower show judges are highly qualified and well-trained persons from plant societies or national garden organizations. Usually they see things from a perspective that may elude the average viewer. The uninitiated may think an arrangement is a lovely bouquet of flowers, but judges consider plant material and other components organized according to balance, contrast, dominance, proportion, rhythm and scale.

Occasionally judges are flawed, have sore feet and miss the point of a contributor's efforts entirely. Their comments are of necessity brief, but they should tell both the public and the exhibitor what the judge saw at the time of judging — remember, flowers tend to wilt. Judges tell what is commendable in the entry

Few, if any, teams in the state played a tougher regular season schedule. South played four games in the Cincinnati area during spring break, including contests against Cincinnati Moeller and Dublin Coffman. Coffman won the Ohio state title in its division this year.

"We came back from the trip with a 5-6 record but we won 22 of our last 28 games," Griesbaum said. "We knew we had played good teams so we weren't concerned with our record early in the year. The biggest concern was that we hadn't been consistent. We beat CC (Redford Catholic Central), but then we'd lose to a lesser team. But we

South won the Macomb Area Conference White Division with a 9-1 record. It was a strong division with teams like Utica, North and Dakota challenging the Blue Devils for the title.

Among South's nonleague foes were some of the better Catholic League teams like Brother Rice, Notre Dame, Catholic Central, De La Salle and Divine Child. The Blue Devils also had weekend tournament games against Blissfield, Garden City, Grosse Pointe North, Detroit Country Day and Utica Eisenhower.

"After playing all of those teams, we weren't intimiby anyone," dated Griesbaum said. "Grand Ledge finished 39-4 and we knew they were a very good team, but we also knew they probably didn't play as tough a schedule as we did."

Every season since he has been at the helm of the Blue Devils, Griesbaum has set goals for his team.

"Winning the league and advancing to the final four in the state are always our goals," he said. "Obviously, some years they're more realistic than others. "We lost only six seniors from last year's team, so accomplishing those goals seemed more likely than other years. But everything has to fall into place and you need some luck. This year we had both and we won a lot of close games."

South trailed in every state tournament game except the 3-0 win against North for the district championship. And in that game, the Norsemen had the bases loaded with one out in the seventh inning.

Like coach. anv Griesbaum enjoys winning. But he insists on doing it the right way. "We try to do a lot of teaching," he said. "We want our kids to play the game the way it's supposed to be played. We also try to teach good aportsmanship and to treat people the way we want to be treated. "You don't win games with your mouth. We don't allow trash talking and that's something you have to stress more and more each year. We tell the kids that whether we win or lose. we should get something positive out of the experience."

Griesbaum realizes that it takes the support of several people to build a successful program.

"We're so fortunate here to have the Dugout Club and the school administration willing to help and allow you to do what it takes to be successful," he said. "It takes the efforts of a lot of people. And this championship is the culmination of all of their hard work and support."

The championship was also a fitting sendoff for South's retiring athletic director, Jo Lake.

Many of the South players also played on Little teams. "We're also blessed with outstanding Little League, Babe Ruth and Federation programs in Grosse Pointe, Griesbaum said. "Dave Bergman has done so much for baseball in Grosse Pointe after the kids have left Babe Ruth."

Griesbaum also thanked his assistant coaches -John Hackett and Bill Mogk at the varsity level. Mark Orr and Mark Jacob on the junior varsity and freshman coaches Dick Swarthout and Bruce Pelto — for their contributions.

South will lose several seniors, including starters Vlasak, Pat Michels, John Halpin, Gohlke, Mark Peppler and Sean McLeod and key reserves Heath Schollenberger, Paul Stevens and Todd Lorenger.

Among the returning players are juniors Getz, Middleton, Hackett, Ian Milhouse, Geordie Mackenzie, Andrew Scavone, Bob Danforth, Tom Jahnke, Mark Boynton and Pete Kostiuk and sophomores Dan Keogh and

Taylor Morawski. "We're losing nine seniors, but the juniors and sophomores will have the opportunity to step up and make an even bigger contribution next Griesbaum said. "And we have good kids at the JV and freshman level. The JV team was 23-4 and the freshmen finished 16-6. Some of them will also have League state championship to contribute next season."

It's summertime — and the myths are flying!

There are a few myths that get repeated every summer, so I thought I'd devote a column to these tales in order to get the facts out there.

Is it true that if you touch a baby bird or its nest, that the mother won't return? Nonsense — the sense of duty to their nestlings won't stop the parents from returning and caring for their young. Birds don't have a well-developed sense of smell and won't detect your scent in the area. However, this doesn't mean that nests should be investigated frequently. Your attention to the area may draw notice by predators, so watch from a safe distance.

The baby bird scrambling along the ground is an orphan — true or false? If the baby has bare skin only, it has accidentally fallen from the nest. Place it back in the nest if you can locate it. If you can't find the nest or it is too high, put the bird in a cardboard box lined with soft plant material and place it in the tree closest to where it was found. The parents should respond to the calls of the baby. If the bird has pin feathers, it is most likely not an orphan. The bird has simply entered the teen years and is learning how to drive (fly), with the parents calling all around the baby with cries of "warning, warning!" Leave these babies alone and encourage the neighbors to keep their pets indoors or attended if out of doors for the few days that the baby bird is learning a successful takeoff.

If I start feeding the birds now, when I go on vacation it might be harmful to them to have empty feeders, or they may become dependent on me and not find their real food! Neither of these statements is true. Their sense of survival does not allow birds to become dependent on only one feeder or place where natural food is available. Birds forage all day long, on the constant lookout for good food sources. Your feeder is only one place on their list of stops. They will survive while you vacation and return soon after you are back to filling the feeders again. In times of plentiful ripe berries and mature seeds, birds will always take advantage of these fresh food sources. We notice a great decline in the number of birds feeding at feeders when these food sources are available, proving that they do not become dependent upon us for food offered in feeders.

The plastic owl I put out will scare all of the pigeons away! Put away your cash — this is not true. We've seen pigeons sitting on top of the owls! The only thing that keeps pigeons away is to remove the area at the feeder that they can access.

I read about this great product that will keep the water in the birdbath fresh for up to a week! If birds are using the birdbath to bathe, this couldn't be possible because birds do something that we wouldn't do in our baths. When they bathe, birds relieve themselves of waste right into the water. No amount of additive to a birdbath will keep water fresh. Droppings from the birds need to be dumped out every day or every other day, followed by a good rinse and fresh water. This is the best way to keep a birdbath fresh, utilizing a brush to "scrub the tub." Regular maintenance will neip you to avoid algae buildup.

Purple martins eat thousands of mosquitoes a day! This can't be true given the fact that mosquitoes are out at night while purple martins are sleeping. Studies of the stomach contents of martins revealed that they eat larger insects including dragonflies, the primary predator of mosquito larvae! If you want to eliminate mosquitoes, put up a house for bats.

Those blackbirds, blue jays and crows are mean — they eat baby birds. This is false as birds do not eat in response to a mean streak. Birds eat because they are hungry. Chickadees eat caterpillars that could have become butterflies. Hummingbirds eat arthropods including spiders, the good guys in the garden. I know that it is harder to view an egg or baby bird as being equal to a caterpillar, but in the mind of that bird the egg or baby bird means nothing more than a meal. There is no malice involved, only a survival instinct.

Use caution when recoating a hardwood floor

Q. Mr. Hardware, I recently had my hardwood floors professionally sanded and refinished. In some areas the grain of the wood shows through the finish as if the finish soaked in and didn't cover. How should I prepare the floor for additional coats? Should I consider any particular products for recoating? Dave S. of Mt. Clemens

A. Dave, one problem you could incur is using a product that is not compatible with your existing finish. There is nothing worse than applying a finish to an area only to find it melting with the old. The effect is like using a paint stripper, only without the intentions of stripping the old finish.

First, attempt to purchase the same product the professional used. They could provide some insight when using their product.

For the Birds ———

I hope that you have had some fun reading these myths and the realities involved. Make sure that you catch next month's column on planting for hummingbirds — just in time for their fall migration. In the meantime, keep the birdbath clean, use safflower in your feeders if the blackbirds are monopolizing it, and have a great time watching the baby birds visit your yard with their parents. Enjoy your birds!

Rosann Kovalcik is a certified birdfeeding specialist and the owner of Wild Birds Unlimited located at 20485 Mack Ave. in Grosse Pointe Woods. ing it if it has been some time since the job has been done. Dirt or grease can ruin a job from the very start. Use a mild solution of Simple Green or Dirtex and water. Make sure to rinse well, soap residue can be disastrous to the new finish.

Sand lightly with 220 grit sandpaper once the floor is dry. Only "dust" the surface to remove the shine of the old finish. Three or four passes over an area should leave the area whitish looking. Always sand with the grain of the wood. It is also a good idea to cover the heat vents during this step. This will help prevent the dust from coating the ductwork and blowing onto the finish during application.

Clean, clean, clean. After vacuuming up the dust first, wipe the floor with a clean rag with a small amount of solvent in it, paint thinner if you are using an oil-based finish. If you are using a waterbased finish, use a rag dampened with water. As you are wiping the floor, it will appear wet-looking as though it has just been finished. This is a good time to check for imperfections in your prep work. Anything you can see now will show when you apply the finish.

Do you think you are ready to apply the finish? I do not think so! Go change out of those dusty clothes you have been cleaning in and put on some clean ones. Nothing worse than having dust drop off your clothes while you are finishing.

Think I have gone too far? How about using a tack rag, gummy cheesecloth used by finishers, and wipe the floor down again. Do not forget the baseboards and anything else near the floor. When the finish is applied, all dust nearby will jump on to your perfect job—one of Murphy's laws.

Apply the finish following the manufacturer's instructions. Try not to spread the product too thin as this usually shows brushmarks. One of the best applicators is by Flecto; it is like a fancy wax applicator. One kind for waterborne finishes and another for oil. Of course, most all floor products can be brushed — my aching back!

Prepare for termite swarming season

Each year, termites damage millions of homes and other structures in the United States. Nationally, termites cause more than $2 billion in treatment and repair costs annually.

Drywood termites are found throughout the United States, typically in southern coastal regions, causing a significant amount of damage. Drywood termites are just what their name implies — they like dry wood, live inside the wood and do not require contact with the soil.

Annually, drywood termites spread their destruction when male and female insects leave established colonies to look for a new home — usually a crack, hole or other surface defect in the structure. They enter the wood and begin feeding.

In northern California, termites typically swarm in June and July, whereas in the southern part of the state, swarmers may take flight in September through November. They can usually be found on warm, sunny days after a rain.

In addition to swarmers, other common indications of a termite infestation include:

• Piles of six-sided pellets, typically found on window sills and floors, and in attic spaces;

Discarded wings and dead termites near light sources;
 Severely blistered wood or woodwork with pinhead-sized kick out holes; and

• Hollow sounding wood.

When termites are discovered, pest management professionals can recommend several treatment options depending on the extent and location of the infestations. However, in most structures, 80 percent of wood is hidden, leaving many areas inaccessible for inspection.

A whole-structure fumigation with Vikane gas fumigant is the only way to ensure 100-percent control of drywood termite infestations through the structure, including those hidden in inaccessible wood. The effectiveness of Vikane is confirmed by 40 years of university research.

To learn more about drywood termite treatment options, visit the University of Florida's web site at www.ftld.ufl.edu/drywood.htm.

How to make the most when selling your home

Many do-it-yourself projects can help homeowners save money, but selling your own home may not be one of them.

Answering a few questions may help you decide if you want to sell your own home:

- 1. Can you assign your home a market value, meaning the price that accurately reflects what a buyer will pay?
- 2. If your listing price is not in line with comparable properties and market trends, are you prepared to let your home linger on the market?
- 3. If your For Sale by Owner sign attracts a bargain hunter, as many do, are you prepared to lower your asking price?
- 4. Are you prepared to show your home to everyone who is interested?

If you don't want to wait, don't have the time to show your home and are not flexible about your asking price, you may want to consult a real estate professional.

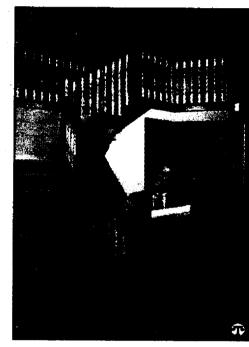

A recent survey by the National Association of Realtors showed that 80 percent of home sellers in 1999 chose a real estate professional to sell their home — a percentage that has remained fairly constant over the years.

According to Gee Dunsten, CRS, president of the Council of Residential Specialists, there are several advantages to using an agent and more benefits to using a certified agent.

First, real estate professionals can walk you through the process of selling your home. Then they can price your home accurately by doing a market analysis, advertise your home for maximum visibility, hold an open house, and suggest ways to make your home more attractive to potential buyers.

They can also help you explore alternative financing methods that may help cement a sale. They act as a third-party negotiator between you and the buyer to negotiate the best price and terms, plus they screen prospects so you don't have to open your door to strangers.

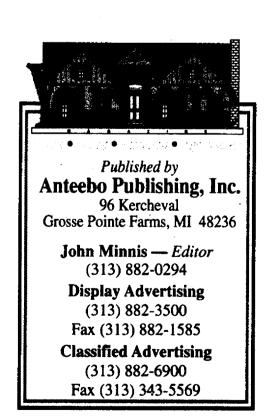

When choosing a real estate agent, either to help you sell or buy a home, it's important to know that not all agents are certified by the Council of Residential Specialists.

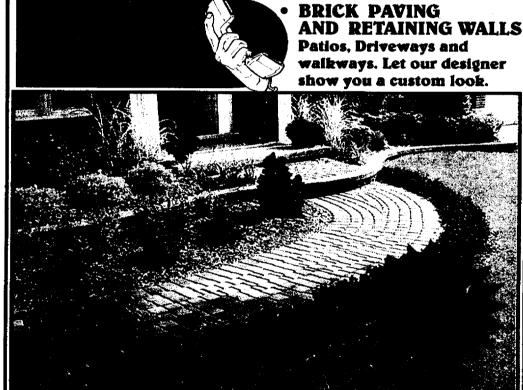

The CRS designation that's conferred by the Council stands for Certified Residential Specialist. It is the industry's highest professional designation, signifying a proven track record of handling residential real estate transactions, plus advanced professional training and education in related areas such as finance, technology and marketing. For more information, visit www.crs.com.

Property value may be difficult to determine and do-it-yourself sellers may not get what their home is worth.

Adding central air to your heating system

Welcome back. This is the Furnace Doctor visiting you again. Summer has arrived! 90-degree temperatures are sure to follow, along with high humidity. You won't be able to sleep at night, the children will be irritable, it's time for central air conditioning.

Who should you call? What do you look for? What questions should you ask? These are some of the things that run through our minds when we become interested in purchasing central air condition-

The type of heating system you have in your home will determine the kind of air conditioning system that can be installed. Air conditioning can be installed to either forced air or steam/hot water heated homes. This month we are going to talk about adding air conditioning

if you a have forced-air heating system.

First, locate two or three contractors you are familiar and comfortable with. Make sure they are licensed and insured. Ask for a copy of their licenses, both mechanical and refrigerant handling, and a certificate of insurance. This costs them nothing and if they're reputable they will be happy to oblige. Check into which brands they carry and stick with a major brand such as Bryant. The major manufacturers require their dealers to go through training programs and require they stock replacement parts. Be sure your contractor selections are approved by the manufacturer as many contractors can supply the product by buying from sources other than the manufacturer, then they are unable to offer service. Bryant at (810) 779-1730, has a local factory branch you can call and check with.

Once you have received quotes from the contractors you choose, call your city building department for feedback on the dealer and the product they are proposing. Don't forget to ask the dealer for references of others who have purchased from them in your neighborhood. Any contractor worth his salt will be more than happy to supply you with a list of satisfied customers. He should even offer to take you personally to visit with customers he has taken care of in your area.

Tips on avoiding home-buying mistakes

With the home-buying season under way, many consumers are looking for ways to lessen the frustration involved in the process.

"Buying a home is a major investment and there is no substitute for taking time to educate yourself," says David Weekley, president of David Weekley Homes. Here he lists 10 common home buying mistakes and suggestions for avoiding them:

- 1. Not doing your homework. Enter the market well-prepared by researching location, school district, deed restrictions and taxes.
- 2. Trying to make a shrewd investment. Focus on finding the best place for you and your family to live rather than trying to predict the real estate market.
- 3. Choosing a poor location. Consider what part of town you would like to live in and avoid homes located on busy streets.
- 4. Overlooking an inferior floor plan for an attractive exterior. Choose a great floor plan over a great exterior because you'll spend far more time inside the house than outside.
- 5. Overlooking how the home will function for your family. Consider features that are most important to your family and choose a home that will meet those needs.
- 6. Not having the home properly inspected when buying a resale.

Avoiding common mistakes can make the home-buying process simpler and less stressful.

Hire a state-licensed, professional inspector to evaluate the home's true condition, which could save you thousands of dollars in repairs and maintenance.

- 7. Not having the home properly inspected when buying a new home. Research the number of homes sold, homeowner satisfaction, years in business, industry recognition and warranties offered.
- 8. Not getting what you want because you're impatient. If it's a used home, allow time to negotiate and get the best deal possible. Refusing to rush the process could save you $5,000 on the purchase price.

9. Waiting for a better time to buy based on the market and interest rates. History shows that those who purchased homes and kept them for three to five years or more did better than those who didn't. Waiting is one of the biggest mistakes a home buyer can make.

10. The biggest home-buying mistake is not buying at all. Buying a home will give you a place to call your own and allow you to take advantage of tax breaks and build equity.

Ensuring sound real estate purchases

A growing number of home buyers are warding off potential real estate problems with a proactive type of insurance. Title insurance can make it easier to buy land by helping consumers identify a potential problem before it becomes a costly issue.

Owners title insurance can offer home-owners protection against many legal hazards (such as incorrect notary acknowledgements, previously undisclosed heirs to the property and even counterfeit land deeds) that can emerge, usually after the completion of a real estate purchase.

Title insurance emphasizes risk elimination before insuring. This means it can give the insured the best possible chance for avoiding title claim and loss. In fact, a recent survey found that title insurance agents identified and corrected 1.5 million problems with real estate titles (or 25 percent of all transactions) before issuing insurance — helping to save landowners money and aggravation.

Title insuring begins with a search of public land records for matters affecting the title to the real estate. Most, but not all matters that don't clearly pass title are found in the history of ownership and are corrected before a title is conveyed.

Planting techniques for successful results

Q. Can you explain the correct way to plant shrubs and trees?

A. Shrubs and trees must be planted correctly if the plant is going to survive and flourish. The success of your landscape plants depends on a number of factors: adapting to the new site, planting techniques, the quality of the plant and maintenance after planting.

Selecting the right plant for that certain spot in your yard is very important. Many trees and shrubs need specific environmental conditions to grow right. Too much or too little sunlight or moisture can mean death to your new plant. Ask the experts at your local garden center if the tree you are considering will grow in the location you wish to plant.

Without enough sunlight, many flowering plants will have few if any flowers. How wet the location is needs to be considered also. It is best to build up the level of the soil to improve the drainage in very wet sites with poor drainage. Dry areas need mulch and extra water for new plants. Choosing the right plant that can grow in a hot, dry area will also help you plant successfully.

Trees and shrubs come in all sizes and types. You want to choose a plant that will fit in the area that you want it to grow. This is where the professionals at the garden center can help you. There are trees that only grow to 8 feet tall and some that grow to 60 feet. Shrubs are also available in dwarf sizes as well as large privacy growing types. Picking the right tree or shrub now will allow you to have years of enjoyment from that plant.

Balled and burlapped plants can be planted throughout the growing season. While at the garden center, these plants are usually healed into planting beds to help keep the roots damp until it is purchased.

To plant, first measure the size of the root ball of the plant. Dig the hole the same depth of the root ball so that the top of the ball is even with the topsoil level. Remember to crown the planting beds so the excess water will run off. You may want to raise the level of your whole planting bed if the area you choose to plant in has poor drainage.

The width of the hole should be 1 1/2 to 2 times the size of the plant's root ball. This will allow the roots to extend into the loose soil around the plant.

After the plant is in the hole, cut off any twine around the trunk and open up the burlap around the top. If the burlap is made of a synthetic material you need to remove the whole burlap. Then backfill the hole with a combination of loose planting mix and the soil you removed from the hole. Lightly compact the soil around the plant and water.

Container plants are planted similar to the balled and burlapped plants, only you must remove the container it comes in.

Small plants can be turned upside down with your hand over the top of roots to catch the plant as it comes out of the pot. With larger plants, you may want to cut the pot so you can lift the plant out. If the roots on the plant are rootbound in the pot, it is best to make some vertical cuts around the sides of the plant's roots to loosen them up before planting. This will help the new roots to grow out into the soil.

After planting, mulch covering the surface around the plants will help conserve moisture and reduce the amount of weed growth. Two to three inches of mulch will help protect the plant.

Water the new plants as the soil dries out. The best way to know when to water is to check the soil to see if it is damp. After a few checks, you will be able to tell how fast the soil dries out and how often you need to water.

Also fertilizing the new plants with a plant starter food helps promote new root growth. The liquid plant starters are easy to use and are formulated just for new plantings.

Gush along with the flow of flow blue china

Jan Jan State Stat

Flow blue china brings expectations that the more smeared and dark the flow of blue, the more the piece looks antique and characterfilled.

Flow blue is a term used when cobalt blue ink transfer-printed designs are applied to white china, which when fired bleeds into portions leaving a blurred-blue effect. The blue varies from dark cobalt to navy or steel blue. The flow also varies from slight to heavy, which may dramatically distort the pattern. Most flow blue was made inEngland from 1830 to 1900, coinciding with Queen Victoria's reign from 1837 to Josiah 1901. Wedgwood is believed to be the first to produce flow blue in the Staffordshire area of Other England. European potters joined production in the 19th century; U.S. potteries produced flow blue wares near the end of the 19th century. Early flow blue was usually ironstone china, while later pieces were made of delicate semi-porcelain. Flow blue becomes characterfilled when I picture the dinnerware daily used over a century ago. The table service was by no means "poor man's china," which prompts me to imagine a wooden, lace-covered table being set by a well-postured, Gibson-hairdo arrayed woman wearing a long dress with a crisp white ruffled apron — to think she actually held those colorladen plates. Also, think of the journey those flow blue pieces withstood. Like the ancient and priceless maimed Greek statues, even chipped flow blue should be highly valued.

Willow ware

Willow pattern wares are greatly collected and many flow blue pieces can be found. Willow ware was first developed in England at the end of the 18th century. Its delicately arranged pattern of Chinese-style trees, pagoda, bridge and a pair of doves was inspired by hand-painted blue and white Chinese export porcelain.

It's exciting to behold flow blue The dish below's floral pattern frequented the late Victorian period circa 1891 to ntiques and Collecting

For many years, retiring public officials took some government office furniture with them when they left. Collectors like the pieces because the historic ownership adds to the prestige, value and "aura." The White House was redecorated over and over again by presidents, and the old pieces were either sold or given away. In 1873, the desks used in Congress were replaced by more modern ones, and all of the Victorian desks were sold. often to the congressmen who used them. A desk that had been used by a representative during his term from 1869 to 1872 was auctioned recently at Weschler's Washington for $14,950. In the 1960s, when the Kennedy administration redecorated the White House and the State Department rooms, a law was passed that made sure the old, discarded furnishings remained the property of the government and were kept in storage. Today, retiring politicians are not supposed to take any government furniture to their new homes.

Q. While we were cleaning out our grandparents' kitchen drawers, we found a small, folding, singleblade pocketknife with an off-white handle that's engraved with the words "Corn Knife." The blade is thin, and narrower at the bottom than at the top. Was this knife specially made to take corn off cobs?

A. No, it was specially made to slice corns off human feet, one layer at a time. Corn knives became popular in the late 1800s, when fashionable women wore very narrow-toed shoes. Corns became a widespread podiatry problem — which led to the development of corn knives.

Twin dormers add charm

Fits a country setting

This modest-sized one-story home is a good plan for tighter budgets, but still packed with firstclass features. A covered stoop directs your guests into the volume space of the activity room with a tray ceiling. Double garage access is from a corner of this room.

The activity room and dining area blend together nicely, providing a more comfortable overall feeling. The easily-accessible rear terrace encourages you to make the most of backyard activities.

An organized kitchen is complete with a walk-in pantry and convenient laundry facilities.

All of the sleeping quarters are sequestered in one area in this plan which combines function and appeal.

The master suite is particularly impressive and includes a Hollywood bath featuring a sunlit tub.

Two additional bedrooms share a central hall bath. Linen storage, disappearing stair to attic storage and a utility closet are also central.

The nostalgic exterior is accentuated by an appealing entry and dormers. Multiple gable roof lines, horizontal siding and shutters top off the exterior, All W.D. Farmer plans include construction details for substituting brick, frame or stucco exterior finish.

Plan No. 491 includes only 1,407 square feet of heated space and is available with either a crawl space or slab foundation.

Making your garden 'pet-healthy'

If you have a garden, you understand the joy of digging in the dirt, deciding which flowers to plant each year and watching new bulbs blossom. You may also be aware of the reisons that his within the the poisons that lie within the the poisons that lie within the beauty, and if you have an outdoor pet, some plants could be harmful.

Don't let lurking dangers in your garden stop you from enjoying it with your pet. Here are tips to help keep you and your pet safe:

• When selecting new bulbs, try to familiarize yourself with each variety of plant, understanding

• If it doesn't stifle your creativity, try to avoid planting common plants such as buttercups, irises, ground ivy, poppies and wisteria as they are poisonous for your pet if

• If your dog or cat tramples on your newly planted azaleas, don't get angry. He or she is just enjoying being outside.

· Have fun outdoors with your pet, just be careful.

While you're outdoors for longer periods of time, your pet will likely be frolicking about with you. And, with warmer weather comes fleas.

Is your pet protected?
There are several flea control products available on the market. Novartis Animal Health US Inc. offers one option, Program (lufenuron) Flavor Tabs, that is proven effective in controlling flea populations. They do not leave a pesticide residue on the pet or in the home. In addition, there is no mess, no odor and no drying time mess, no odor and no drying time associated with using Program Flavor Tabs. And while your pet is running through the spray of the gardening hose to "help" you water your new plants, you don't have to worry about Program Flavor Tabs being washed off being washed off.

This summer, as you're enjoying the garden and your beautiful new blooms, take special care of your pet. Keep him away from poisonous flora and make sure he's on a monthly flea product, like Program Flavor Tabs. He may even thank you for it. Don't make poisonous plants your "pet peeve."

"There was a time when the kitchen was a small, dark room that guests weren't supposed to see," says O. Franco Nonahal, president and owner of station Studio, Inc. in Birmingham. "Now, the kitchen is the result of the home."

If you've thought about adding beauty, style and functionality to your kitchen, maybe you should visit Kitchen Studio, talk with their designers, and see the possibilities.

People who are considering a new kitchen often say that they want to change the look of the room. Nonahal says, "what they really mean is that they want to change how they use their kitchen. We can make a kitchen unique, pretty and functional." He adds, "a traditional looking the can be equipped with modern appliances."

Parathal describes himself as a Persian-born, Italian Architect, having earned a bachelor's decrees by a himself as a Persian-born the University of Florence balore sorning to the term of the totem pole," he says.

"I worked nine days a week." He says that it is often difficult for European designers who come to the United States to adjust to non-metric measurements. "I was lucky in that Downsview, a manufacturer that Kitchen Studio represents, is a Canadian company that uses the metric sy measurement." Nonahal worked his way and, in 1995, bought the company.

Kitchen Studio prides itself on creating European kitchens. "Our forte is the kitchen," Nonahal says, describing design inspired by Italian fireplaces such as tumble and classical columns. Attention to detail distinguish Kitchen Studio's designs, who custom mouldings and columns or handmade wood carvings. At Kitched designers take into consideration such hide risked decided that you want to make changes to your kitchen, you will sit down with Nonahal. "It's a two-way street when I talk with customers. I get their impressions and then I go to their home to see the kitchen," he says. "I ask questions such as the cooking habits and the heights of those who will be using the kitchen. We go into detail regarding practicality, as well as aesthetics. Since I cook, I am aware of what is practical. A lot of form is actually function. And since I am also an architect, I know what is physically possible." After he has gathered this information, Nonahal draws a rough, three-dimensional sketch of how the kitchen will look.

What is unusual is that Nonahal sketches upside down. That is, upside down from his perspective but right side up to the customer sitting across the table from him "I'm the only one I know who does this," he says. "In about two minutes I can give the customer a quick impression of how the finished kitchen will look. I put their ides on paper." This saves time as opposed to going back to the studio to create a computergenerated drawing. "The first thing I look at is the layout. Then we discuss what form it should take," he says. "Then colors and materials come last. We work with the customer to come up with the ultimate design. We also work with builders, interior designers, as well as with homeowners."

Kitchen Studio has won Sub-Zero's prestigious Design Competition Award the last six years in a row. The company was featured last year in the premiere edition of Great American Kitchens.

Kitchen Studio is located at 353 S. Old Woodward Ave., between 14 Mile and Maple roads. Stop in for a cup of coffee and browse through their showroom or call for an appointment at (248) 645-0410. You can also visit their web site at www.kitchenstudiomi.com.

Get an extra-large load of laundry's latest spin

Washing machine manufacturers are coming clean about what consumers really want in fabric care technology — and they're creating machines to meet those expectations.

Cleaning larger loads is high on many priority lists. Busy consumers would prefer to have a huge washing machine that can clean enough soccer uniforms for a whole team, a family's weekly collection of jeans, and the larger items that may need to be taken down to the laundromat.

Some of the new models with the latest laundry technology, such as the Kenmore Elite with Calypso Wash Motion, have the capacity for items that often do not fit into most traditional washing machines such as rugs, curtains, stuffed animals and comforters.

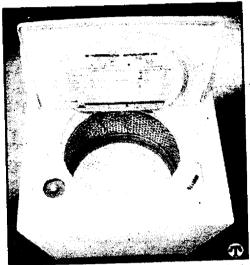

One of the machine's most unusual features is one that is missing. It has no agitator. No agitator means there's more room to get clothes cleaner. In addition to increased capacity, the new machine also shares many of the benefits of European front-loading machines for energy efficiency and fabric care.

The unique top-loading machine was developed by Whirlpool in response to consumer demands where eight out of 10 Americans said they preferred a top-loading machine.

While washing more laundry than most other machines on the market — two baskets in one load - this machine also delivers a gentler wash, so fabrics last longer. The Calypso Wash Motion technology cares for delicate fabrics like silk and cashmere by gently bouncing the garments around the basket rather than wringing or twisting them as in the hand wash process. With this gentle method of cleaning, hand-washables and even some clothes that might previously have been sent to the dry cleaners can now be tossed into the washing machine.

earned the The machine Department of Energy's Energy Star rating for its substantial savings in energy. The new machine saved 65 percent on energy costs and 45 percent on water compared to an average conventional washer.

Throughout the wash cycle, rather than filling the wash tub to capacity with water, a safe concentration of detergent and water is repeatedly showered to clean clothes and help remove stains. With this new technology, clothes don't swim in dirty water, since a filter traps dirt and particles, flushing them away from the wash tub. With the water saved by doing fewer washes, there's plenty of warm water left for a luxurious, scented bathtub soak.

The birth of a new quick action tablet is putting some spirit into cleaning up after the holidays.

Take out the agitator and some washing machines have more room to get clothes cleaner.

Laundry tips

Cleaning up after a party needn't ruin the day after. Just follow these simple tips:

• As you toss your dirty clothes into the hamper, empty your pockets. Turn down cuffs on pants and shirts and turn your jeans inside out if you don't want them to fade as quickly.

 When sorting, read and follow labels. Consider these little tags your own personal laundry cheat sheets. Apparel care labels make sorting foolproof. Separate dark colors from light colors from whites. Sort delicate fabrics from heavier ones and keep lint-producing fabrics separate. Wash very dirty clothes separately (as dirt can pass on to less soiled clothes in the washing machine).

• A new way to do laundry has been introduced by the leading brand in the laundry category. Called Tide Rapid Action Tablets, they are reported to be the first and only laundry detergent tablets to release a burst of effervescent energy as soon as they hit the water. The tablets have a unique water-activated coating that enables them to begin dissolving when they enter into water. The tablets break apart to a soft-core center that releases powerful Tide cleaning technology. The tablets are quick and easy and there is no mess and no worry about whether you have the exact dose, because you always do.

 Choose temperature and cycle settings on your washing machine. This will vary, but a simple rule to follow is: Hot - whites and very dirty clothes. Cold - darks and colors that run. Use warm water for everything else.

Here's a drying hint: Remember that drying a small load reduces the tumbling effect and prolongs the drying period. Add three to four already clean and dry white towels to speed up drying.

Protecting valuables from fire and theft

Theft and fire are two of a homeowner's greatest fears. Insurance provides some protection, but not for those things that money can't replace.

One practical solution is a wall safe that can be easily hidden, yet is readily accessible. Choices range from small security safes, about the size of a medicine cabinet, to larger fire safes that offer dual protection.

Installing a large wall safe is best left to a construction professional. However, safes that are no more than 14.5 inches wide and 8 inches deep can be easily installed by the do-it-yourselfer. Here's how:

1. Select a convenient location where you won't encounter electrical wires or plumbing. If the safe is deeper than four inches, it will protrude through the wall behind it, so choose a spot that is backed by a closet.

2. Using a stud finder, such as the Zircon StudSenso SL, locate and mark the placement of two adjacent wall studs, generally about 14.5 inches apart from edge

3. Position the opening template that comes with the safe between the wall studs so the top shelf

Finding the stude behind your walls is the essential first step when installing a wall safe.

inside the safe is at eye level. If the safe is narrower than the space between the studs, position the template flush with one stud.

4. With a utility knife or key hole saw, cut the opening.

5. If the safe opening is smaller than the space between studs, nail plywood or 2- by 4-inch shims to the far stud so the surface is even with the opening edge.

6. If the safe will protrude through the back wall, use a level to mark a straight line across the wall studs from each corner of the opening to the back wall. Because this is a low-light situation with awkward visibility, the Zircon VideoLevel, with audio level indicator, is a good choice for this job. Caution: If the safe protrudes more than four inches through the back wall, additional support may be necessary; consult a construction professional.

7. Carefully poke a hole through the back wall in each of the four corners with an awl or ice pick.

8. On the other side of the wall, connect the corner holes and cut the wall. Add shims if necessary. (See step No. 5.)

9. Insert the safe and anchor to the studs per the manufacturer's instructions.

10. Hang a picture or other object over the safe to obscure it from view.

Choosing sides: Working with fiber cement

For your next remodeling project, consider using fiber cement, a material that is rapidly growing in popularity with homeowners. Made of Portland cement, sand, wood fiber and select additives, fiber cement is an excellent choice to revitalize your home.

While wood and hardboard have been the traditional choices for building projects, the use of fiber cement is expected to outpace those materials within the next four years. In fact, according to CertainTeed Corporation, one of the nation's leading manufacturers of innovative building products, fiber cement is expected to comprise 20 percent of the siding market by 2005.

The main reasons for the popularity of fiber cement are that it looks like real wood; is fire-, rotand insect-resistant; and is easy to work with. In addition, certain products, such as CertainTeed's WeatherBoards FiberCement Siding, come with the added bonus of a 50-year warranty.

"With fiber cement, you get all the features of wood siding without the headaches,". says WeatherBoards' marketing director Steve Booz. The product's manufacturing process, called DuraPress, protects it from freeze/thaw cycles and gives the siding its authentic wood grain

For WeatherBoards provides a choice of styles and natural surface textures, including cedar, smooth and textured finishes, as well as clapboard, dutchlap and beaded sidings. Accent your gables with cedar shakes, half-rounds or vertical panels.

The siding also comes sealed from the factory with FiberTect, which protects against unwanted moisture and bonds to paint for a longer-lasting, better-looking finish. While you can opt to paint fiber cement yourself, you don't have to. CertainTeed will do it for you with one of its 10 prefinished standard colors or any of its array of custom colors.

"WeatherBoards is a fantastic product," says David Child, president of Precision Exteriors in Vancouver, Wash. "You can install it in the dead of winter, and you don't have to paint it right away. That's how durable it is.'

Child adds that the DuraPress system helps the siding stand up to any climate, especially those where the weather rules — such as Vancouver, where it rains nine months out of the year.

Cat Tip contest

What makes your cat purr with delight? How do you train your fearless feline to stay off the kitchen counters? How do you make sure she gets enough exercise?

Cat lovers around the country are invited to enter the Purina Cat Chow "Cat Tip" contest to share their best advice for caring for their cats' emotional, physical and nutritional health. The national contest kicks off the second annual Purina Cat Chow Way of Life tour, a traveling community of resources that provides free education and training to cat enthusiasts around the country. The tour began pawing its way across the United States in March, visiting approximately 30 cities in 2001.

"A universal truth among cat lovers is their desire to share information and advice to help one another provide the best possible care for their feline friends," said Arry Shojai, national feline expert and spokesperson for the Purina Cat Chow Way of Life tour. "The 'Cat Tip' contest recognizes the devotion cat owners have to their pets and their vast knowledge in caring for their needs."

Cat enthusiasts are invited to enter the contest by sending in the best cat care advice they have ever given or received in one of the following four categories: • Emotional — best advice to care for their cats' emotional health and happiness.

- Physical best advice to care for their cats' physical health and well-being.
- Nutritional best advice to care for their cats' nutritional health and wellness.
- Other best general advice to care for their cats' overall health.

Entries must be 50 words or less and will be judged on the quality and originality of the tip being provided. The Purina Cat Chow Mentors, a panel of feline behavior, nutrition and vet experts, will judge the contest.

The Grand Prize winner will receive an all-expense-paid trip for four to San Diego to be an honorary mentor on the Purina Cat Chow Way of Life tour, $2,500 cash and a year's supply of Purina Cat Chow, Senior Cat Chow or Kitten Chow brand cat food. The winner and his or her "words of wisdom" may also be featured on the Cat Chow web site. The Top 10 winning tips will be featured in a Cat Chow training brochure that will be made available free to consumers.

Entry forms and the complete set of rules are available on the Cat site web Chow www.catchow.com. Entries can also be submitted via mail to Purina Cat Chow "Cat Tip" Contest, P.O. Box 81388, Chicago, Ill. 60681-0388. The contest runs from March 19 through August 31, 2001. No purchase is necessary.

Renewable power for your home

Competition within the electric industry is creating new power options and related products for consumers, according to Edison Electric Institute. One new option is "renewable" energy.

What is renewable power? Renewable power is power that is generated from an energy source that is renewed by nature, such as water (hydro power), the sun (solar power), or the wind (wind power). Although renewable power usually costs more than electricity from traditional sources, power sellers have found that some consumers like to have renewable power as a

Keep in mind that if you choose to purchase renewable power from an energy supplier, it doesn't mean that the electricity powering your home comes directly from a renewable power source. Here's why:

Once electricity is generated, it's sent to a "grid." The grid carries power from many electric companies, in part to ensure that the power demanded by homes and businesses gets to them, even if one supplier can't produce for some reason. The power in the grid can be generated by so-called "fossil" fuels such as coal, oil, or natural gas, as well as renewables.

You can be confident, however, that by buying from a renewable power provider, you are helping to add to the amount of electricity in the grid that was generated by a renewable energy source.

For more information on renewable power, contact your energy company.
