And while Bettejean and her children have been coping with this major loss in their lives, one very visible change has taken place. There is a new, yet familiar face at the Edmund T. Ahee Jewelers store.

After Edmund passed away in 1999, Bettejean had a major challenge in front of her — trying to create a new life for herself. For so many years, she had been a stayat-home mom raising six sons and one daughter. After her children were grown, Bettejean was involved in charitable work and helping with her 19 grandchildren.

While not previously involved in the day-to-day operations of the store, Bettejean would help Edmund with the store's display areas and offer ideas for promoting products. When she and Edmund purchased the store's current Grosse Pointe Woods location in 1968, she helped design the interior.

Today, however, Bettejean keeps a daily schedule at the store. "After Edmund's death, the children were extremely busy at the store. So with their encouragement, I decided to come in and help out."

"It has been a godsend working at the store. Edmund would always say that he felt very blessed to enjoy his work and to also be surrounded by family. I understand that now," she Edmund himself worked everyday at the store until his death in 1999.

Hunt Club fire calls for stern justice

ineteen horses, 19 years — that sounds like justice to us. By 19 years, we are referring to imprisonment for the criminals who are responsible for the fire last weekend that destroyed the old barn at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club and killed all but three horses there, one of which had to be put down later due to injuries.

The punishment was suggested to Grosse Pointe News reporter Brad Lindberg by Jamee Chancey, a selfprofessed "horse freak" from the Farms.

The cause of the blaze is believed to be fireworks, perhaps a bottle rocket, entering the tinder-dry barn about 3:30 or 4 a.m. Sunday. Rumor has it that reckless youths or young adults are responsible.

If true and if found responsible, we call for quick and severe punishment for not only the youths but for any adults involved. This includes any parents who allowed their children to possess and play with illegal fireworks. If underage youths are involved, then they should be punished as well as their parents.

Nineteen years sounds about right.

The tragedy at the Hunt Club was so horrific that nothing constructive can come from it. But perhaps we can come to terms on just how dangerous fireworks are and take measures to keep them out of the hands of immature amateurs - both young and old.

These past couple of Independence Day holidays have seen a marked increase in the use of fireworks - illegal in Michigan. "Everyone does it, so what's the harm?" we and police tell ourselves. But when our streets resemble the smoke-filled Gettysburg battlefield, it's getting out of hand.

It's time to stop deluding ourselves. Fireworks are dangerous and illegal. Furthermore, they're out in the open. It's not hard to find the perpetrators. Just follow the smoke trail.

All the Pointe city councils should immediately draft strong anti-fireworks ordinances, allowing for confiscation and heavy fines. Nineteen hundred dollars per incident sounds fair. And all Pointe police should be directed to vigorously enforce the anti-fireworks ordinances

Meanwhile, those responsible for the Hunt Club disaster must be found and punished, not only for justice's sake but as an example of the price one pays for engaging in an illegal. potentially lethal, activity.

Sound harsh? We hope so.

But on a more positive note, the Hunt Club vows to rebuild. We're glad. The club's board has set up the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club Memorial Horse Fund "in memory of our 19 beloved friends." We encourage everyone, horse owners, club members, all Pointe supporters to contribute.

Also as a show of support, we encourage everyone to attend two upcoming horse shows at the Hunt Club on Aug. 9-12 and Sept. 8 and 9. Whether you're into horses or not, stop by and say a kind word.

For more information, contact the Hunt Club at (313) 884-9090 or board member Mary Beth Ryan at (313) 885-3606.

Lastly, we would like to thank Hunt Club neighbors Mark Carter and Jim Amori for their timely photographs and all the other spectators and concerned residents who shared their heartbreaking stories with us.

Real life nightmare

didn't sleep much last night. After receiving the phone call from my friend telling me about the fire at the Hunt Club, I just fumbled through the rest of the day, not wanting to believe the horror of that news, unable to accept the reality. As others called to ask if I had driven by the devastation on Cook Road, I numbly replied that I was incapable of confronting the scene and dealing with any more emotions than my mind had already summoned from my past history with the club.

Once bitten by the horse bug, one never recovers. It happened to me when I was about 8 years old. I think my teachers noticed first when all my original stories and drawings were about horses. For years my bedroom had been adorned with everything horse-related imaginable.

My parents finally indulged me when I was 10 by purchasing a retired polo pony named Chico. It was the mid-'40s in Grosse Pointe Woods and there were no houses on Cook Road, just two livery stables and the Hunt Club. I kept Chico at Hill's Riding Stable, next door to Hartz's stable and took the bus each day after school to ride and groom my wondrous pony.

When it became apparent to my parents that this was no passing fancy and their daughter was totally hooked on being an equestrian, they joined the Hunt Club and Chico and I moved down the road to tonier digs.

I was growing older and taller, Chico was not. I wanted to hunt and jump. Chico wasn't able to do those things, so he went to live with another little girl in the country and my parents bought me a serious horse. I thought I would never survive parting with my pony even though the choice had been mine. My parents were unwilling to feed two horses and I wanted to start showing. It was one more lesson in growing up and a sad one.

Briarmint came into my life at the perfect time. He was a working hunter and opened countless doors for me. He ;was a 9-year-old bay gelding with a gentle disposition and for years was my closest friend. Briar gave a young girl confidence when she felt awkward, made me feel proud when I won the club championship and no doubt helped me with the many friendships I established in the years I spent at the Hunt Club.

We were quite a gang of young people and did we have fun! Before we were old enough to drive, we would take the bus to Provencal Road and walk down to the old Ford house and walk up the drive to the back entrance of the club. There we would spend hours goofing off with instructors, grooms and friends, lying in the stalls with our horses, giggling at their silly mannerisms, braiding their manes and tails for shows, mucking out their stalls, feeding them, giving them baths. It is an addiction and it never leaves. You never get over the urge to touch that soft upper lip or scratch behind the ears.

I grew up at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club. Many of my closest friendships were forged on Cook Road. I learned valuable life lessons about winning and losing, about pain and suffering. I watched in horror as a horse died from a heart attack in front of me. I broke bones jumping while preparing for a show, cracked ribs in shows, fell in love several times with riders who came from afar for the big June Horse

I flipped a 1941 Plymouth on what To the Editor: used to be a muddy path and is now a part of Ballantyne. We even pretended board of directors, members we were fox hunting, when in truth it and staff of the Grosse was drag (fox-scented) hunting through the now-developed roads behind the club.

Although I haven't ridden in several years, I still stop by the club once in awhile just to hug a horse or feed one a carrot. A couple of ribbons, a crop, a riding boot and a black velvet hat hang above my computer in an upstairs office. Old habits die hard. Were they wonderful times in an average life that grow extraordinary with the embellishment of memory? I don't think so. This heart aches for every horse, every rider, every animal lover and every member of the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club. I pray there is some way that this community will find a way to salvage this historic treasure. There is still a pulse there.

We have suffered an extreme loss in losing 19 dear friends this past week.

Please remember the following members' horses: Spud, Scotty, Tally, Ziggy, Chester, Prince, Annie, Handsome, Boo Radley, Austin, Indiana and Bayfire; and club/family horses: Phil, Bart, Shasta, Arthur, Eddie and Callie.

The outpouring of support from the community at large has been overwhelming. We are all very appreciative and thankful for everyone's concern. We are very grateful for the local public service and you were so gentle? I support.

The Grosse Pointe Hunt Club is committed to its long-standing history of passion for the equestrian sport and will continue to provide petition.

We are moving forward to August Horse Show beginning Thursday, Aug. 9, through the 12th in the MHJA circuit; and the MHJA Pony Show Sept. 8 and 9. The public is welcome to attend.

Then there was Dan, a gelding who was a former race horse. He didn't know the meaning of whoa, stop or halt, you stupid horse. Once he started running, he couldn't be stopped.

Once my dad was riding him when Dan, quite of his own mind, took off through neighbors' wheat field. Their circuitous route through the field could be followed by the trampled grain — and this was long before today's "UFO" field markings.

After a long ride with my dad standing in the stirrups and pulling on the reins as hard as he could, Dan finally exited the wheat field and circled around the back of the neighbors' house. Once there, he would turn Dan around and race back to the gate as fast as Dan could fly. Near the gate, Dan would slam on all four feet, skidding to an abrupt halt inches from the gate.

Dave would laugh as if it were the best fun in the world, and they would go back for another trip. Dan must have enjoyed it, too.

Sure, this was not show riding, but it sure was enjoyable growing up with horses and ponies. Too bad it takes a tragedy to bring these

No death penalty for Andrea Yates

In my previous column, I hazarded a comparison between Andrea Yates, the young mother who killed all of her young children, and Timothy McVeigh, who killed 168 of his fellow Americans. I volunteered an educated guess that both were mentally ill, without explaining why I thought one deserved the death penalty and the other did Clearly, McVeigh deserved the death penalty and Yates does not. The crimes were very different, impacts on the public mind.

As I stated before, with McVeigh it was a case of The People vs. Timothy McVeigh. The federal government is The People and McVeigh declared war on us. Killing 168 of us, coldbloodedly, maliciously and meticulously planned, the story fits the definition of first-degree murder. He knew what he was doing, he knew that for most of us (99 percent) it was wrong, and he did it anyway, knowing the consequences. He confessed and wanted the consequences, hoping to die a hero and a martyr, a failed cause.

It could have been argued that what he did was the product of mental illness, that he suffered from a condition that gave him an "irresistible impulse." That concept is from a modern derivative of the British McNaughton Rule, the Durham decision.

In McNaughton, the person is not responsible by virtue of insanity if he or she is of such a mental condition as to not to be able to recognize the consequences of his or her action and not to able to differentiate between right and wrong. In the case of the original McNaughton decision, the defendant was clearly psychotic and killed someone because he thought God requested it. It was a product of delusion and hallucination. His total condition made mental illness obvious. The McNaughton Rule was thought to be an advance in civilization, treating a mentally ill person different from a person committing a crime "in his right mind.

McVeigh was not obviously out of his mind, but he s really out of his mind to think that he could wage war or make a point by blowing up a federal building. His psychopathology could be described in many ways: that his feelings were overly intense because of neurochemical imbalance, that his thinking was not rational due to an excess of narcissism or feelings of grandiosity, or that he was working really hard to overcome or hide deep-seated feelings of inadequacy.

McVeigh consciously and deliberately refused to take the insanity defense, and so such a defense, even though it would probably not have been persuasive, was possible. He fired his lawyers and did not cooperate with them because taking his punishment was part of his plan. Considering the magnitude of his criminal act and his lack of remorse, there was little chance a jury of his peers would excuse or exonerate him. In stark contrast with McVeigh was the pitiful creature we all saw on television, a depressed woman clearly out of her mind. What possible purpose could there have been to murder all of her children? It is hard to believe she actually did it, considering the fact that she was described by a credible husband as being a wonderful mother most of the time. Family photographs gave credence to the image of a happy family. As recently as this February, she made cute Valentines for all of her kids. Only psychiatrists and a few other specialists and those who have lived with severely depressed people know the full extent of their misery. What they feel is beyond our comprehension, a mental pain of hopelessness and despair and a pessimism that precludes any possibility of being happy, sane or normal

Such a mental state almost always is connected with a severe neurochemical imbalance, a state which is really on a physical (imbalance of brain chemistry) basis, which is usually inherited and often undiagnosed and out of control.

In this case "postpartum depression" was described two years ago with the birth of her fourth child, but most often this condition is merely the exacerbation of an underlying chronic or cyclic depression, not usually this severe, so in this case the severity could easily have been underestimated.

In severe depression, the condition can spiral down rapidly without adequate ongoing psychotherapy and medication.

Most people wonder what depression has to do with wanting to kill your kids.

When logic and rational thinking are destroyed by the excess of negative feeling, the desperate person thinks like this: I am miserable; I can't live this way; I can't stand it any longer; I'm not functioning as a mother; nobody realizes how bad it is; my kids must be suffering like me; we are all miserable and hopeless; I will do them a favor by taking them out of this world and returning them to God. Isn't it true that this life is only brief and temporary? My children are still young and innocent; they have not sinned; they will go right to heaven and our Lord will take care of them. I may be killing their bodies, but they still have thousand folks from across Michigan, Ohio and other points took advantage of the chance to amble through beautifully landscaped yards that included features like babbling brooks, waterfalls, bog plants, water lilies, founfrogs, goldfish, turtles, koi, comets and even a group playing renaissance music.

Stephen and Nancy Hansen, Bill and Mary Jo Rennolds and Tom Wruble and Connie Harkness of the Woods; Carolyn House and Sam and Virginia Moti of the arms; Paul and Doris Lavins of the Park and Rob and Sue Brown and Russ and Peg Noble of the Shores all volunteered their yards to benefit the senior programs at Neighborhood Club

The Nobles' pond is a good example of the meeting of art and science. Russ Noble spent a career as an automotive engineer and runs his own consulting firm. Four years ago, he got the urge to have a pond in the backyard of their Shores home. So he sat down and designed one.

Then he hired the Charles F. Irish Landscaping Co. to send seven strong men into his yard to dig it, and he got his friend Hansen, who also Great Lakes owns Waterscapes, to help with the waterfalls. The result was a 1,400gallon water garden lined with Canadian ledge rock with two small waterfalls and 50 goldfish and comets (a type of fish). The tour brochure describes it as "an excellent example of a low maintenance, high tranquility pond in a lovely garden.

But listening to Russ Noble explain to one wouldbe "ponder," as they call themselves, about introducing microbes to eat the algae, bubbling the pond in the winter so it won't freeze over and kill the fish and maintaining the lovely plantings makes you conclude "low maintenance" is a relative term.

An asset to community

To the Editor:

For nearly two years, Grosse Pointe Farms residents have been inconvenienced and aggravated by Separation Sewer Project.

We have had to reroute our driving, have our damaged cars repaired, look at torn-up streets and yards for months and, in some cases, find water in our basements. Although we all know this was state mandated, it was, nonetheless, extremely stressful to live under these conditions.

However, the good news is that it is almost over and we have survived. We have survived in good part because of the tireless efforts of Mr. Solak and Mr. Leonard to ease the concerns of the residents. To say that they have endured a difficult two years is an understatement.

Mr. Solak is the most professional, patient, kindest, helpful person anyone could ever hope to know. Throughout all of this turmoil he has never been without a smile, a sense of concern and understanding and, most importantly, an even temper which let the residents know that their problems would be taken care of. He never failed to return a phone call even though his days were very

The same can be said about Mr. Leonard. Having to deal directly with the Ric-Man contractors on a daily basis had to be extremely difficult. He always kept a level head and tried his best to appease the residents while working with these men, who seemed only interested in coming into the city and getting the job done quickly no matter what the cost. After all, they only here. Mr. Leonard never let his professional attitude

Grosse Pointe Farms is indeed very fortunate to have these men working for them. They are a tremendous asset to our community, and we only hope that the next two years (and more) will be much easier and less stressful for them.

Mr. Solak and Mr. Leonard are more than worthy of a public "thank you" for the outstanding job they have done!

think that far. Of course this is all conjecture, but these conjectures are reinforced by many years of clinical experience and reading case reports.

I think a jury of her peers will take pity on Yates and empathize with the magnitude of her loss and destructiveness. They will want to see her eventual recovery and imagine her regret and overwhelming guilt. They will know that she is not a menace to society as McVeigh was.

Psychologically, she didn't kill any of us. We are not her kin. She killed her own. What more punishment can there be but for her to come to fully realize it? I can't imagine an American jury that would want to punish her further.

She might be found guilty of murder, but not likely in the first degree. Americans don't routinely clamor for the death penalty. In the case of Yates, we will want her to have treatment and hope that she will live and recover a semblance of normality.

On the afternoon of Tuesday, July 3, a woman saw a dead rat sprawled in an alley behind the 21100 block of Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods. Police turned up two of the expired rodents in one of the alley parking spaces.

Officers contacted local business owners who said they weren't aware of a rat problem and would keep their eyes open.

Bank robbery

A hardboiled detective writer couldn't have come up with better dialogue than a gunman who last week robbed a bank in Grosse Pointe Woods.

"Give me all the money," he whispered to a teller working in the 19300 block of Mack. The robber pulled back his black denim jacket to reveal the butt of a gun sticking from his waistband. 'Don't make me shoot you.'

The teller reached into her cash drawer. "Give me all the money,"

OUILs in Shores

Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officers arrested three suspects last week on charges of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquors.

The first arrest took place at 9 p.m. on Friday, July 6. A patrol officer spotted the driver of a 1987 Ford traveling Taurus Lakeshore without his seat belt being buckled. When the officer pulled the car over, he smelled the odor of alcohol coming from the driver. The driver, a 30-yearold Grosse Pointe Farms man, failed his field sobriety tests and blew a .191 on his preliminary breath test (PBT). The officer also found a glass of vodka and Squirt in the driver's front seat beverage holder. The driver is free on $200 bond and has also been charged with driving with an open intoxicant.

The next incident took place at 2:04 a.m. on Saturday, July 7. A 2000 Cadillac was seen running a red light at the intersection of Vernier and Lakeshore, right in front of the Shores public safety building. When an officer caught up with the vehicle, he detected the odor of alcohol coming also had difficulty standing

The final incident took place at 11:30 p.m. on Saturday, July 7. A 2000 Dodge Durango was clocked traveling at a speed of 50 mph on Lakeshore where the speed limit is 35 mph. When the officer pulled the car over and asked the driver, a 47-year-old Warren man, to recite the alphabet, the driver got up to the letters EFG and repeated them three times. He blew a .133.on his PBT. He is free on $100 bond.

Disappointed peddler

Grosse Pointe Shores police cited two sisters, one 41-years-old from Riverview and one 43-years-old from Wyandotte, for peddling without a license on Wednesday, July 4, at 10:15 p.m. The sisters had attempted to gain entry to Osius Park to sell "glow rings" while fireworks were being displayed in the area. After being warned off once her young son had given one of the ladies a $20 bill for a "glow ring" and only received a $1 bill in return.

Police later caught up with the sisters as they were trying to leave the area. They were cited for peddling without a license.

City of Grosse Pointe police were called to a store in the 17100 block of Kercheval in the Village at 2:35 p.m. on Sunday, July 8, in response to a report of a shoplifter stealing several hundred dollars worth of clothing. While en route, an officer saw a vehicle that matched the broadcast description of the minivan used to transport the suspect away from the store that was robbed.

The van was parked in front of another Village business only a block away from the original store. When police confronted the driver, a 37-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms woman, they noticed that she seemed very nervous. When they asked her why, she replied that she just got out of jail and didn't wish to return. Police noticed the stolen clothing in the back of her vehicle. Each analyst has a personal idea of value. But consensus will eventually develop a range of possible values: slow growth companies at 8 to 10 P/E, moderate growth at 10 to 12 P/E and high growth at 15 to 20 P/E.

But many tech and Internet companies have not dollars, yet achieved profitability, so, for them, the P/E ratio won't work!

Therefore analysts have developed the price/sales ratio, in which price is the market value of the company (price times shares outstanding) and sales is the company's annual revenues.

Andrew Bary, another feature writer for Barron's (July 9), reports on 12 tech stocks, sourced to UBS Warburg and Merrill Lynch.

The table of those stocks compares their current price/sales ratio with that company's 10-year average price/sales ratio.

Naturally candid photos

Most of us remember the "Candid excitement of "Candid Camera." Well, with a little thought and planning, you too can become an Allen Funt with your camera. After all, people are among the most fascinating of photographic subjects. Posed deliberately in front of the camera, people often become stiff and self-conscious. But caught unaware, you'll end up with shots that are natural in expression and exciting in content.

There are two approaches to candid photography. You can intentionally provoke a reaction by attracting your subject's attention and snapping the camera at that instant, or you can try to be unnoticed and capture life approach will freeze people's snap response to your camera and you'll get expressions that can be very revealing.

He was a man with a degree in real estate law from the University of Michigan. He formed the Burton Title Search and Abstract Co., which required him to search deeds and titles. According to Poremba, Burton's hobby was researching the history of Detroit. He literally went door-to-door asking citizens if they had any old papers and deeds. He donated his private collection and the house it was kept in to the Detroit Public Library in de Cochon, French for Pig Island. A diary, also on display, dates back to 1778-1779. It was written by Norman MacLeod and details his efforts to act as an advance guard for British forces heading to the Illinois territory. MacLeod blazed a trail, but the British who followed ended up getting captured by American forces.

Community Grosse Pointe News Publication traces history of Mariners' Church its guiding form of worship

Publication of the first definitive history of "The Maritime Sailor's Cathedral" was announced recently by Mariners' Church of Detroit.

The book relates in detail how the church, founded in 1842 by a charitable Detroit widow, survived 151-plus years of struggle and neglect and threats to its existence as well as the rehabilitation efforts that have seen the waterfront house of worship become a Detroit showplace.

The book's full title is "Created for the Ages: A History of Mariners . Church of Detroit. Well-known as the church that moved 880 feet in the 1950s, Mariners' is : Detroit's oldest stone church. The physical move took some four months in 1954-55 and created space for the construction of the city's Civic Center. The Rev. Richard W. Ingalls became the church's 16th rector in 1965, marking the beginning of Mariners' Church's resumption of its historic role as both a family house of wor-- ship and (with the subsequent renovations of the building) as the Great Lakes' most enduring religious symbol of concern for the men and women who man the lakes' commercial fleets

In the 1970s, following the loss in Lake Superior of the freighter Edmund Fitzgerald, the church gained new fame as the 'musty old hall" of Gordon Lightfoot's ballad, "The Wreck of the Edmund Fitzgerald."

Annual commemorations of the 729-foot freighter's loss with all hands and the earlier-initiated Great Lakes Memorial Service with a Blessing of the Fleet draw hundreds of worshipers to the church each March.

The Fitzgerald commemorations take place on a Sunday close to Nov. 10, the date in 1975 on which the freighter foundered in a violent storm

Written by William F. Keefe of New Buffalo, the book's 239 pages of text required "thousands of hours (of) culling and assembling the bits and pieces of information that have emerged, after extensive additional effort, as an integrated testimonial to the triumph of the spirit that Mariners' Church represents.'

"Simply put, (the Church's) story exalts," said Keefe in the book's preface. "It transcends all norms . . . In acquiring amenities, attractions and aids to worship, it has emerged as museum and reliquary, as columbarium and religious school for the young, as symbol of compassion and strength for the seafaring community and, perhaps most appropriately, as an expression of Detroit itself.

"This . . . is the city that began as a makeshift fort named Pontchartrain. And here is the church that began as a spiritual refuge for seamen — to become finally a monument to the city's ecclesiastical heritage.

Among the book's highlights are

The story of the

ment of the 1842 will of Julia Ann Anderson, heir to the estates of her husband, a United States Army engineer, and of her unmarried sister, Charlotte Ann

• The church's tentative start in a frame building that gave way, in December 1849, to the completed Mariners' Church, the building that still stands today at 170 E. Jefferson in downtown Detroit.

• The "Days of Struggle' and "Years of Decline" in which the church's fortunes and image sank as the waterfront neighborhood succumbed to blight, with the onetime house of worship becoming a social service agency in the first half of the 20th century.

SOC's Food, Friendship program adds day trips

By Sharon Maier Executive Director, SOC

A recent report released by a half-dozen prominent health and aging organizations, "National Blueprint: Increasing Physical Activity Among Adults Age 50 and Older," indicates that mounting evidence shows that regular exercise promotes cardiovascular health and can reduce the risk of chronic illness.

Nearly 34 percent of people 50 and older are sedentary, according to statistics from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which participated in producing the report. Staying active can help seniors retain the ability to do everyday activities that can become difficult with age.

Services for Older Citizens offers exercise classes on Monday and Wednesday mornings at 9:45 a.m. Carol Piper teaches the classes that are designed to fit a variety of ability levels.

"Some of our seniors exercise in chairs, while others stand," said Marilyn O'Bryan, Food and Friendship coordinator for SOC. "Each senior is able to progress according to his (or her) own ability. Many seniors take a walk down Waterloo before lunch to enjoy the health benefits of exercise and the beauty of our neighborhood."

The report offers quite encouraging news. It's exciting and empowering to know that something as simple and basic as exercise can make a huge difference in the well-being of individuals over the age of 50.

As part of our mission to in warm soapy water. This is a good habit to teach your independence and dignity, program. Exercise is part of SOC's Food and Friendship 3. Don't neglect flu and program which addresses nutritional, social and physical needs of seniors.

The program provides lunch for $1, a hot balanced geared toward the interests of seniors. We think that exercise is important and can be fun. We also think that socialization is important. This fall, we will add trips to the Food and Friendship program. Every Thursday will be trip day, giving seniors a chance to see new things and enjoy each others company. "We have a full travel schedule planned, starting in August. Many of our trips will be on a deluxe motor coach, giving us room to include seniors that might not already be part of our program," O'Bryan said.

"We will be restauranthopping the last Thursday of each month. This is a great way to try a different restaurant every month while socializing. Each restaurant hop will include lunch at the restaurant along with a box lunch to take home.

"I'm looking forward to the last Thursday of each month as a no-cooking kind of day," said Phyllis Johnson, Food and Friendship assistant. 'We've carefully chosen the restaurants for affordability and good food so that any seniors that want to go can join us."

We will also travel to Casino Windsor on Thursday, Aug. 9; the Michigan State Fair on Thursday, Aug. 23; Crossroads Village on Thursday, Sept. 13; Cornwell Dinner Theatre on Thursday, Oct. 4; the Senior Expo on Thursday, Oct. 11; the Irish Hills on Thursday, Nov. 8; Frankenmuth on Thursday, Nov. 29; and Casino Windsor on Thursday, Dec. 20.

"I'm looking forward to all of these trips, especially our first Casino Trip. I'm not a big gambler, but Canada has such a good exchange rate that I think I'll take in some shopping. The tour company gave us a great deal. Each senior pays $15 and they get a $15 lunch coupon, a $10 gaming chip and we provide a box lunch for them to take home," O'Bryan said. Crossroads Village will be the first time we've traveled all the way to Flint on a trip. The motor coach has restroom facilities and com fortable seats so it should be a pleasant trip. The day at Crossroads Village is called Salute to Seniors and it is a yearly event just for seniors. It includes a cruise on the Genesse Belle paddle wheeler, performances by the Flint Banjo Club, music by barber shop quartets, entertainment by the Sweet Adelines, dancing by cloggers, a show in the opera house, carousel and wagon rides, craft show shopping and more.

Trips, food, exercise, and friendship all contribute to the quality of life. "The National Blueprint: Increasing Physical Activity Among Adults Age 50 and Older" told us that our services are headed in the right direction.

If you would like to read this report, it can be downloaded from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation web site at www.rwif.org. It also appears in a special supplement of the May 1 issue of the Journal of Aging and Physical Activity. For a free copy of this issue, write to the department of kinesiology, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, Louise Freer Hall, 906 S. Goodwin, Urbana, IL 61801 or call (217) 244-0823.

Special Writers Dear Jeff and Debra:

This is something I have never thought I would have to do. My wife has informed me that she is addicted to pain medication for the second time in our eight-year marriage. We are in the process of going through a divorce and we have a three-year-old daughter. My problem is I still love my wife very much. She wants me to take her back, but I am nervous about doing that. This last year has been a roller-coaster nightmare. I was thankful when she finally left me.

Jeff and Debra Jay

But I should tell you that the six years she was clean and sober were the happiest years of my life.

My wife is in treatment and counseling right now. During her first time in treatment, I was not supportive. I believed her problem was caused by a weakness. This time I want to be supportive of her, but I don't feel I can take her back yet. She says I am abandoning her when she needs me most. I am not attending counseling with her at this time because I think she should work on her issues first before we work on our relationship. Can you please give me some advice on how to help her through this difficult time without losing our relationship? I know nothing about addiction. Your advice is greatly appreciated. — Unsure Husband

Dear Unsure:

Your wife's addictions counselor can act as a guide for determining the appropriate time to begin relationship counseling. As a rule of thumb, six to nine months of sobriety is a minimum before getting into relationship counseling. But needs are different for different people.

Show your support by attending the family program offered at the treatment center. Begin attending Al-Anon or Naranon meetings on a weekly basis. These are Twelve-step programs for family members. If you go to the resource page on www.lovefirst.net, you'll find information about Al-Anon. Or look for Al-Anon in your local telephone book. Since you describe the years your wife was sober as the happiest of your life, and since you have a three-year-old daughter, think long and hard before throwing this relationship away. Once in recovery, she will be able to maintain a healthy relationship with you and your daughter. Your involvement in Al-Anon will facilitate this

A temporary separation followed by a "relationship review" might work for you. Make recovery the requirement of reuniting your marriage. If your wife works a program of recovery and maintains sobriety, then you can talk about getting back together. This would also set up accountability for your wife in her recovery

For instance, you might separate for three months and then review your relationship. Is she sober? Is she working a program of recovery? Are you going to Al-Anon? If you're not ready to get back together, then wait another three months. Always set a date for reviewing your relationship. Discuss this possibility with your wife and her counselor. If you decide this is the right choice for you, work with the counselor throughout the separation and review process.

We suggest that you read a few books on addiction. "Under the Influence" and "Beyond the Influence" by Kathy Ketcham are excellent. Dr. DuPont's book "The Addicted Brain" is quite good. "I'll Quit Tomorrow" by Vern Johnson is a classic. Our book about intervention, "Love First," gives you insight on the dynamics of addiction and the family's role in breaking through denial. You'll find more books by logging onto www.hazeldenbookplace.org.

Also educate yourself about the family's role in recovery. Learn how a parent's addiction affects children. Your three-year-old daughter needs support, too. The www.lovefirst.net Web site has information about taking care of the needs of children of addicted parents.

Dutch scientists measured levels of albumin, a common protein in the blood, in urine samples from 1,118 healthy post-menopausal women who were followed for up to 18 years. Women in the highest quintile of urinary albumin levels had an age-adjusted cardiovascular death rate 4.4 times that of women without detectable albumin in their urine. Albumin levels are obtained by a urinalysis that is part of a routine medical exam.

"We suggest that urinary albumin is an independent risk factor for cardiovascular mortality in this large group of postmenopausal women," says Dr. Jan Dirk Banga, a co-author of the

A small amount of albumin in the urine (microalbuminuria) indicates that blood vessels in the kidneys are leaking, says Banga, who is a consultant in vascular medicine at the University Medical Center in Utrecht, the Netherlands. Scientists believe that this leakage results from malfunctioning endothelial cells, which line the inside of blood vessels.

Among people with diabetes and high blood pressure, microalbuminuria is linked to an increased risk of developing kidney damage or heart disease.

Smoking, high cholesterol and hypertension are among the well-documented risk factors for heart disease. The known hazards, however, do not give a full picture of a person's heart danger, Banga says. He and his colleagues have been looking for additional markers that would provide better risk estimation.

"A routine urinary analysis will never be able to predict cardiac death in an individual, but it may predict an increased risk," Banga says.

The women studied were among 12,239 volunteers who donated a urine sample between 1976 and 1978 while participating in an experimental breast cancer screening study. # 'Henry IV, Part 1:' showcase for great performances

As though one bright ight at a time is not nough, three virtuoso performances brilliantly illuminate an already shining production at Stratford this summer. The play is Shakespeare's "Henry IV, Part 1," which is best known for its famous Boarshead Tavern scene in which we first meet one of the greatest characters ever created for the stage. Indeed, Douglas Campbell as Falstaff treats us to one of the three truly brilliant characterizations. He has to share the limeight — much to our benefit - with Graham Abbey as rince Hal and Jonathan oad as Harry Percy, called lotspur.

company like Stratford's to pay full respect to the depth of Faistaff's character and the connections and contrasts between him, Hal and Hotspur.

The friendship, banter and play acting with Falstaff are filled with riotous fun, but with underlying portent. In a moving scene with his father, King Henry 'V, even as Hal listens silently to the King's parental chastisement, his expressions and body language speak volumes as to his intentions.

Hotspur is Hal's opposite: heroic, noble, serious, dedicated to his cause, idealistic all the things that Hal seems not to be.

He also earns his nickname. Hotspur's passion for his cause is violent and Goad appears to have been made for the role. He exudes virility to such a degree that in his most impassioned scenes, he makes the whole theater tremble. It is an exciting characterization, bursting with energy.

The frosting on the cake, of course, is Douglas Campbell's remarkable personification of the great humanity of Falstaff. He makes it radiate through the veneer of blustery humor and self-deprecating

"Therefore," says Falstaff with a twinkle in his eye, "I'll none of it."

Much more is wonderful about this production. There is a delightful scene in Welsh — with no subtitles - by a Princess of Wales who is married to one of the rebellious English lords. A battle scene at Shrewsbury is a slowmotion tableaux of knights in shining armor with gigantic swords. Even without strobe lights it achieves the texture of stop action photography. The supporting cast boasts many other outstanding performances. It is hard to believe that there could be a chance to see this play so well-performed again.

"Henry IV, Part 1" is presented in repertory at the Tom Patterson Theater through Sept. 29. For information and reservations, call (800) 567-1600.

Thompson was old school
"Once he was out in front, he had to go a little faster," said Schoenith. "He was one of those. Thompson barreled over the starting line. Miss Smirnoff's bow rose a little, then crashed down in a fatal explosion of water, wood and WWII engine parts.

"That was it," said Schoenith.

Electricity to the disposal takes planning, then begin

Q. Mr. Hardware, not long ago I remodeled part of my kitchen. I added a garbage disposal but I have never been able to figure out how to wire it. — Sparky from Roseville.

A. Mr. Spark, first check the electric code on a disposal circuit at your city building department. They may advise you as to the specifications for this job, but at a cost. It will probably require a permit. The good side of the permit is a professional will inspect the job and assure your safety.

In our area, the disposal must be "plugged in" to a switched receptacle. This way the disposal with a pigtail, a short extension cord, can be unplugged if the switch ever malfunctions and the unit is stuck on. Alternatively, for extra safety the unit can be unplugged before dislodging any debris jamming the grinders.

If there is no switch above the counter, you will have to add one. Using an "old work" box, you can install one from the surface without making an oversized hole. Another hole made in the cabinet below and you should be able to fish romex wire from below up to the switch box.

If the new power comes from below, a switch leg will control the receptacle. This happens when power first goes to the receptacle below the counter, then up to the switch. Turning the switch on completes the circuit of the black wire back to the receptacle.

Consult an expert for exact details for your particular wiring situation. This ranges from home repair books to personal guidance from professionals. With the proper planning, this can be an easy job.

Attach a grounded 16-gauge pigtail to the disposal before installing it to the sink. Use a strain-relief where the cord goes in to the base of the disposal. Connect black-to-black wires, white-to-white wires with orange wire nuts, and connect the ground wire to the metal ground screw.

Make sure the switch is off, install the disposal and plug it in. If all is well the disposal should turn on and off with the switch. Grounded and everything!

Tree-identification guide

"What Tree Is That?," a pocket guide for identifying trees, is available from The National Arbor Day Foundation.

The 72-page guide will help you identify 135 different trees found in the eastern and central United States.

Well-known trees are included: oaks, maples, spruces and pines. Also included are species such as horsechestnut, mockernut hickory, sassafras, shadbush, persimmon, pawpaw, pagodatree and pecan.

Dozens of drawings illustrate the trees' leaves or needles and their acorns, berries, seed pods, cones, and other identifying features. "What Tree Is That?" is organized to make it easy to identify trees in a simple step-by-step fashion.

. "Helping people enjoy and appreciate trees is central to the educational mission of the Arbor Dev Foundation," says John Rosenow, the foundation's president. "Being able to identify trees is important to knowing how to care for them and how to plant the right tree in the right place."

To obtain your tree ID guide, send your name and address and $3 to "What Tree Is That?," The National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, Neb. 68410.

Decorating shortcuts bring vitality to tired rooms

(NAPSI) Seasonal redecorating that once called for a floorto-ceiling makeover has gone the way of the dial telephone for today's househectic holds. Yet, the desire to occasionally freshen home up a remains.

To the rescue have come a variety of decorative accessories that, according to interior designers, can quickly and easily make a significant difference to the look of every. room. There are also places — Waverly like Place paper and borders, they also take the guesswork out of coordinating them. New to the stores are four woven fabrics in five colors to coordinate with the wall patterns. "Introduce a new, bright color by changing the pillows on the sofa," says Joyce Colton, a member of the International Interior Design Association (IIDA) and president of Joyce Colton & Associates, Olympia, Wash. Bright color is back in style, according to the Color Marketing Group, a consortium of more than 1,600 product design experts who annually chart residential color trends.

"A wallpaper border is also a great way to give a room a new look," says Maribeth Jemmott, a member of the American Society of Interior Designers (ASID) and head of Certified Interiors,

Plymouth, Mass. "It doesn't have to go at the top of a wall. It can frame a doorway or be placed at chair-rail height, where it has more impact." she advises. Through Waverly

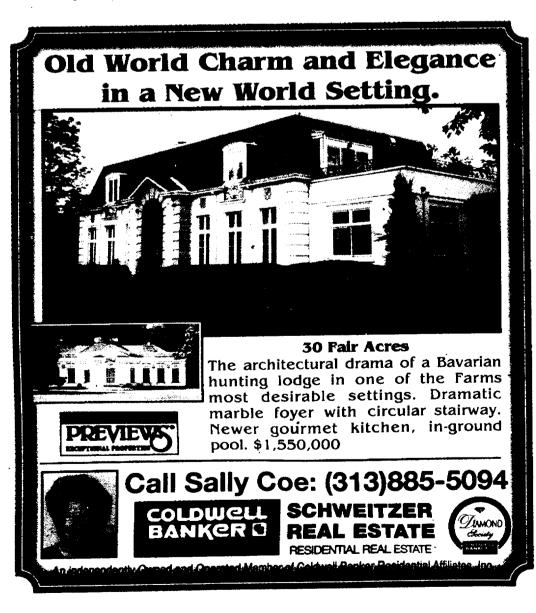

Place retailers, you will also find Village and Gramercy brand wallpapers and borders.

"Exchanging long draperies shorter ones or adding window shades and valances immediately makes a room look new. So does a change of bedding ensembles. Large floral prints, like those in the new Waverly Heirloom II collection, are becoming popular," says Jemmott.

"Even a cluster of colorful candles can change the mood of a room," says Colton. "So can new picture frames or a grouping of two or three small, decorative bottles on an occasional table."

ntiques and Collecting

ink-removing eraser or an

Furniture from the 1950s and 60s is selling for good prices at the Modernism auctions. Famous makers like Charles Eames and George Nelson are known to many collectors, but makers who did a limited number of pieces of custom furniture have been ignored until recently.

One designer of some of the more unusual pieces of furniture is Paul Evans. He was a sculptor who made one-of-a-kind furniture from steel, bronze and wood. Evans studied metalwork and sculpture in several art schools. In the early 1950s he worked at a museum, reproducing colonial silver. In 1954, he began working at his own studio and was soon making large wooden and metal pieces of furniture, many for special orders.

In 1964, he began designing for Directional, a furniture manufacturer. A short time later, he was running the company's factory and managing almost 90 employees. By the 1970s, he was making tables and sideboards that then cost up to $6,000. He stopped working for the factory in the late 1970s, but he continued with his own workshop and designs. He died in 1987.

The unusual pieces, with massive metal doors or cube-like metal bases, are selling today for thousands of dollars. Many pieces are signed and dated. All pieces show his unique style and can be identified.

Q. As a child, I lived in Illinois. We had milk delivered in a creamtop bottle. I told this to a younger friend who collects dairy bottles. He has never seen one and wants to know more.

A. Cream-top bottles were popular in the 1930s. Milk was not homogenized in those days, and the cream would separate from the milk and rise to the top of the bottle. The cream top was made with a bulge at the top for the cream. A special small ladle was used to remove the cream from the bottle. The tops were formed in many shapes. There was "cop the top," a molded man's head with the suggestion of a hat; "toothache," a top with a strange extra bulge; "baby face," which looked like a baby; and others. They now sell for about $35 and up.

Q. I can't find any information about a 9-inch-high revolving brass spool-holder that I bought in 1967. I paid $10 for it at an antiques shop in St. Louis. It holds 24 spools of thread on two tiers. The base has four decorative paw feet. A large, round pincushion sits in a cup at the top.

A. Your carousel spool-holder is also called a reel- or thread-holder. It is a favorite of collectors of sewing tools and equipment. The design originated in England during Victorian times. Spool-holders continued to be made through the first decades of the 20th century. Your spoolholder is worth at least 10 times what you paid for it.

Q. Why is a brass push-up candlestick called a "hog-scraper?"

A. A straight-sided, cylindrical brass or iron candle holder was called a hog-scraper because farmers sometimes used the candle holder's sharp-edged base to scrape the bristles from hogs after the hogs were slaughtered.

Tip: To remove a stain from a polished granite table top, mix the centers of some slices of white bread with 6 percent hydrogen peroxide. Put the paste on the stain overnight. Wash off the next day, and the stain should be gone.

I would like to thank you for the opportunity that you have given me to contribute to our community by writing a weekly column in this newspaper.

Since February of this year, I have done my best to provide quality material for your information and enjoyment concerning mortgages and home finance.

Please be advised that my columns will no longer be appearing in this newspaper.

Subsequently, my family has started a monthly publication called "The Nicholas Times". The Nicholas Times contains many of my past columns, as well as future articles that I will continue to write addressing real estate issues, home finance, business finance and equipment finance.

The Nicholas Times currently has a monthly circulation of 812 and growing. The newsletter is provided free of charge to our family, friends and business acquaintances over the years, and will be provided free of charge to all of our loyal readers and those who are interested in subscribing.

Please email me at: TheNicholasTimes@NicholasCity.com.

Tips on a healthier home during your remodeling

(NAPSI) — According to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the air we breathe inside our homes may be two to five times more polluted than the air outdoors. This can be a major concern for those with respiratory problems — particularly the estimated 36 million Americans who live with allergies and asthma.

Dirty indoor air may pose an even greater risk for those living in the midst of a major home renovation. That's because common renovation and remodeling tasks — such as sanding, sawing, painting and putting up drywall — often release dust and other tiny particles into the air.

The following are tips to help you and your loved ones breathe easier during a home renovation, courtesy of Nathan Yost, M.D., former professional contractor and current adviser to the American Lung Association Health House Project:

 Isolate work areas from the living space with plastic sheeting or zipper doors.

 Use an exhaust fan in the work area to help prevent contaminants from entering the living space.

People with asthma or allergies may want to consider living elsewhere during a major remodeling project. This can be especially important for children.

• If you have pets, limit their access to the remodeling area so they don't track contaminants throughout the home.

• Hire a professional to remove asbestos and lead-based paint. Remodeling or attempting to remove these materials yourself can increase your exposure.

 Do not occupy a recently painted ed room until it's been thoroughly ventilated for several days.

• Use a high efficiency furnace filter — such as a Filtrete ultra allergen reduction filter from 3M. High efficiency filters contain electrostatically charged fibers that capture up to 30 times more allergens and other pollutants than the typical fiberglass filter.

A Guide for Healthier Home Remodeling is filled with practical tips to help people breathe easier at home.

• Run the furnace fan continuously — regardless of the outdoor temperature. This lets the filter capture more dust, allergens and other particles in the air. To ensure that the furnace fan is running continuously, set the furnace thermostat to the "on," rather than "auto" position.

 Vacuum every day during the remodeling project. Use a high efficiency vacuum or a central vacuum ducted to the outside. Be sure to check the warranty of your vacuum before you clean large amounts of construction debris.

 Consider using a respirator to help reduce exposure to dust from sanding wood, drywall or non-lead based paints.

• Don't allow contractors to smoke in the home or on the premises.

As part of an ongoing educational partnership to raise awareness about indoor air quality issues, the American Lung Association Health House Project and 3M are offering "A Guide for Healthier Home Remodeling." # Create magic by placing a garage door opener

By Leon A. Frechette

Installing a garage door opener is something you can handle yourself and is one sure way to cure those garage door blues.

Imagine not having to get out of the car in bad weather to open the door. A click on the remote button will lift that door as if by magic.

A great weekend project

So what are you waiting for? This is a great weekend project, so invite your buddies over to help. You'll be able to automatically close that door as you leave for work on Monday morning. First check to make sure you have at least 7 feet (or more) above the garage floor, which is recommended for installing an opener. Then determine the type of door you have - track operating (straight track or curved, the most popular) or trackless (one-piece with jamb — or pivot-type hardware). Once you reach your local home improvement or hardware store, you will discover that garage door openers come in two styles: chain-driven or screw-type. I personally prefer the screw-type because of the constructed onepiece unit, its overall strength, and quiet action. As long as you're going to install an opener, purchase one that has all the bells and whistles: safety light, hand-held units that accept a personal security code, security vacation lock, etc. A reversing system is an important consideration, especially if you have children. Select an operator that has both non-contact and contact built-in features. Don't forget to compare warranties.

Manufacturers provide a great selection of openers, all accompanied by complete step-by-step instructions, with how-to videos available at your place of purchase. Both help to eliminate the fear that some homeowners associate with home improvement projects. It is important that you follow the manufacturer's instructions during the different phases of the project to achieve a correct installation. It is also a good idea to check the parts against the parts list before getting started.

Check the balance

To extend the life of your new opener, be sure your garage door is properly balanced. Raise the door about 3 feet off the floor; if the door moves up or down on its own, have the door professionally adjusted. Because of the amount of tension on the main door spring, do not work on or remove this spring! A sudden release of spring tension can result in a serious (possibly fatal) injury — call in a profession-

An opener does provide security, so using the manual lock on your door is not necessary. As a precautionary measure, remove all locks and ropes to help prevent motor burnout, especially if the manual lock should accidentally engage.

Before you can actually hang the operator, you will have to install a header bracket. Mount it on a solid surface at least 2 1/2 inches above the highest point of the door's travel. If you have an overhead tension spring and it is in the way, don't worry — install the header bracket above it.

Just like an erector set, assemble the entire unit, motor and track, following the manual as you go. With the help of those extra hands, lift the unit so the front end of the track has been placed into the header bracket and secured with the retaining pin. Lift the motor end and place on a tall ladder. Using wood scraps placed under the motor and on top of the ladder, level the entire unit. With the unit in place, attach an angle iron to the ceiling joist and make the final installation by attaching the motor to the angle iron using the mounting straps.

Do not forget to install the door bracket. It is important if you have a lightweight door or one made of fiberglass, masonite, or metal, that you have a solid backing to support that bracket. Consult the local distributor for your make of door to see if they have backing or bracing instructions for an automatic door operator. Now you are ready to install the door arm assembly to the release carriage located on the track.

Have you forgotten anything? How about the wall control, wall console, and infrared beam (transmitter and receiver)? Remember to hook up the wires to the motor.

Electricity required

By the way, only the hand-held units of your automatic garage door opener run on batteries. The actual operator requires electrical service. You may want to consult with or hire a licensed electrician to complete this portion of the job. __ ToolTalk

Household Help

By Sam Mazzotta

Q. I slammed my window shut and broke one of the lower panes. Can I replace the glass myself? — Mark H., Ocala, Fla.

A. Sure you can. Your main expenses will be the new pane of glass, linseed oil, putty or glazing compound, and a bit of time.

First, put on a pair of work gloves and remove all traces of broken glass from the window frame. If a piece is too big to wriggle out, tap it with a hammer to break the glass, then carefully remove it. Use an awl or screwdriver to pry any stubborn fragments loose.

Save any metal tabs or clips that you encounter during cleanup; these hold the pane in place. What, you threw them away? Well, even though this violates the second law of do-it-yourselfing (save everything, even if it looks useless), the hardware-store clerk will forgive you and help you find replacements. Be sure to tell him whether your window has a wooden or a metal frame; wood frames use the metal tabs (glazier's points), while metal frames use spring clips in preset holes.

Scrape or scour old putty from the frame. Use linseed oil to loosen up stubborn spots and, if the frame is wooden, to treat newly exposed areas. Then, measure the frame. Subtract 1/16- to 1/8-inch from each side; this allows the pane to expand and contract, as is common. Take these measurements to the hardware store and have a new

Now, take a fistful of putty and roll it between your palms to make a "snake" about as wide as a pencil, and press that line along the entire

Insert the new pane of glass, center it, and press firmly against the putty. Keep one hand on the pane to hold it in place while you put on the metal tabs or spring clips. For wood frames, use the blade of a putty knife to help push the metal tabs between the glass and the wood, spaced about eight inches apart. Metal frames usually have preset holes which you snap the spring clips into.

Go outside and secure the pane by putting small dabs of putty around the edge of the pane. Use a putty knife to smooth the dabs out.

Clean up by taking a wet cloth and smoothing away excess putty from both sides of the pane. Let the putty dry for at least four days before repainting.

Q. I just moved into my first home, and I'm worried about dealing with stuff like clogged toilets or sinks. My dad used to handle them. What do I do? — Katie L., White Plains, N.Y.

A. A clogged toilet or sink can usually be dealt with easily, with a tool as simple as a plunger.

tool as simple as a plunger.

In a new home, the plunger is your best friend. Keep one in the bathroom and one under the kitchen sink, and you will be able to solve life's most common emergencies quickly. (My mother found many more uses for this instrument than the manufacturers ever

Sinks often form clogs over time; you'll notice that water drains more and more slowly as grease and food and other gunk builds up. Most sink clogs are not emergencies but annoyances.

However, a clogged and overflowing toilet is an emergency. Your first step is to stop the flow of water. The shutoff valve is normally located on the wall behind and beneath the tank. Place towels along the doorway so that no water seeps into the carpeting. Then, grab your trusty plunger, place it in the bowl at an angle, position it over the drain and give it about 15 greed up-and-down plunges.

This should force the clog out and send the water down the drain; follow up with a few good flushes. The same technique should clear the sink or tub; run hot water down the sink for a couple of minutes.

For stubborn sink clogs, try heating the trap (the U-shaped pipe underneath the sink) with a hair dryer for a few minutes, then plunge again. The heat can melt the accumulated grease so that the clog clears easily.

If these techniques don't work, your task becomes more difficult. The sink clog will require you to remove the trap (or, if you're lucky enough to have one, just the trap clean-out plug). Place a bucket under the trap to catch water as it drains out. Put on rubber gloves and remove the trap (or plug) with a pipe wrench. Use a wire coat hanger to probe into the pipe and clear out any remaining goo. Then, replace the trap or plug and run hot water down the drain.

If this doesn't clear the clog, then your problem is further down the pipe. Use a plumber's snake (available at your hardware store) to try and reach the clog; reopen the clear-out plug or the trap and run the snake carefully through the opening and into the pipe, pushing through any matter you encounter. If this doesn't solve the problem, you've tried all your options; call a plumber.

Building your dream deck and surroundings

By Leon A. Frechette

One of the luxuries of shopping for a new home is searching out just the right floor plan, a plan that will fit your own personal needs as well as the needs of your family. But I'm curious. Just how much of your energy will be directed toward a deck and the landscaping that surrounds the deck?

Because decks are not the "platforms" of yesterday, many families have expanded their living space outdoors. This includes the installation of pools and/or hot tubs into the deck and gazebos, which often create a corner entertainment or eating area for the family gathering. Protection of the environment is also of great concern today, and there are many alternative products on the market, such as those made out of recycled materials, that could make your deck virtually maintenance-free.

If you are having a new home built, the builder can be a great help in constructing that dream deck. However, if you want to take the challenge and build your own deck, then help is here!

Redwood Design-a-Deck Plans Kit

Of the commonly used materials for building decks - redwood, cedar, and pressure-treated wood including alternative materials — I find redwood to be the ultimate wood of choice for decking boards, railing systems, outdoor and furniture, exterior other one ? No uses. knows that better the than California Redwood Association. The association offers a kit to help you design and complete your dream deck. At $19.50 (including shipping), this kit is worth every penny, especially for those individuals who are tackling a project such as this for the first time. To get your kit, write to the California Redwood Association at 405 Enfrente Drive, Suite 200 Novato, Cal. 94949

Careful planning required

As you design your deck, you should take into account how you plan to use it. It is a whole lot easideas into the deck's design before construction than to realize after the deck has been completed that it really doesn't meet your needs. Some important things to consider include:

· Will the deck be used for entertaining?

• Are any special designs planned guardrail?

• Will there be an area for eating?

• Have you considered a spa of some sort? How about a ramp?

overhead structure? · Would planter boxes be an attractive addition?

· Have you thought about an

• Do you have trees in the area where the deck will be built? Have you considered lights for evening entertaining? • Would built-in benches meet your needs?

· Are you restricted on placement and/or height of the deck? A deck should reflect your own personality, help satisfy your needs and wants, and most importantly, not detract from the aesthetics or resale value of the home. Rather, it should add to that value when the time to sell comes. Close attention needs to be paid to attractively incorporate the deck to its surrounding environment.

Gazebos

Gazebos can add a touch of class to any deck, but they are not the easiest structure to build. CaddCon Designs can help with your own design, or you can purchase plans they've designed for decks, gazebos, and screened porches. All their plans include a material list; instructions; construction details; and footer, framing, decking, and handrail plans. To obtain a complete catalog ($3), call CaddCon Designs toll-free at (800) 821-3325.

Landscaping

Attractive and appropriate landscaping should not be overlooked as you plan your deck and once your deck has been completed. Not only will landscaping enhance the deck and provide you with a great sense of accomplishment, but you and your friends and relatives will be treated to an environment worth viewing from your deck.

Have you considered installing a and/or pond waterfall(s) really capture that outdoor feeling? If you have trees, don't be afraid to build the deck around them. You can always build a bench around at least one of the trees. looks Nothing more comfortable than a bench around a big old maple tree. Of course, it can be quite romantic on a starry summer evening. If you do decide to incorporate a tree or two, be sure to allow enough room between the tree and the main framework. Placing two rows of 2- by 6-inch decking boards in an octagon shape around the tree will allow you to remove a row as the tree matures.

Many landscaping projects include railroad ties or some form of treated material, and that's OK. But if you are looking for something different that is easy to install and gives you some flexibility to your design, then consider DesignWood by Thompson Industries Inc. DesignWood is a pressure-treated interlocking landscaping timber available in 4 inches and 6 by 6 inches. What makes this product different is that the timbers are pre-drilled and shaped to interlock with jointpins at any angle through 180 degrees.

DesignWood is great for creating borders, planters, retaining walls, sandboxes, raised-bed gardens, corner planters, and/or a planter/bench top combination as well as a bench top alone. It is easy to achieve angles, curves, and an Sshaped border. This is an appealing alternative product that makes landscaping a real pleasure. For more information, call. Thompson Industries Inc. at (800) 643-5934.

Lighting Your deck looks so grand during the day - but is it useful after nightfall? Have you thought about lighting? Lighting can play a major role in the performance of the deck and how it can be used at night. Lighting is not only functional but also brings out the beauty of the deck. Also, any deck accessories (toys) you choose to use most likely will require electricity. Some of these could include:

Radio or stereo equipment

"Bug zapper"

• Hot tub • Lighting (spot or floodlights)

Rotisserie for the barbecue

Timer.

Some of these items may be hard-wired (direct) or require receptacles, so plan to run 120 volt, 240 volt, or both. Include enough receptacles to cover these items without the use of an extension cord. Also include a switch to activate some of the receptacles, e.g., for the bug zapper. Incorporate appropriate wiring and receptacles during the design stage so wires can be concealed in the framing with conduits (PVC or metal) or buried using UF (underground fused) cable at least 1-foot underground. Be sure to check the local electrical codes concerning electrical installation.

Receptacles need to be placed in outlet boxes approved for outdoor use, i.e., watertight. The outlet box covers need gaskets and the receptacles themselves - ground fault circuit interrupters (GFCIs), of course - should have a springloaded cover with a gasket or a weatherproof outlet cover. I am a firm believer that an electrician should be hired for this part of the job. Besides, your state may require a licensed electrician.

Low-voltage lighting lighting can Low-voltage enhance the natural beauty of the home, driveway, sidewalks, gardens, and finished deck. Consider using low-voltage outdoor lighting. In fact, this is something you can do on your own. To get started, obtain a copy of "Light Up Your Life" from Intermatic Malibu, a company that specializes in lowvoltage systems. This 52-page booklet covers the selection (styles of lights), installation, and mainte-nance of low-voltage lighting systems and an understanding of how low-voltage lighting works. It's available for $1.75 to cover postage and handling. Write to: Lighting Malibu, Intermatic Intermatic Plaza, Spring Grove, Ill. 60081. Or call Thompson Industries Inc., at (800) 643-5934.

A low-voltage outdoor lighting system can have a dramatic impact on a home's appearance. According to Phil L. Kinzer, marketing manager for Intermatic Malibu, setting the proper "lightscaping mood" isn't as difficult as one might think. Kinzer recommends that you select one or two focal points to highlight, such as a tree, pathway, flower bed, etc. Then he suggests using a variety of lighting techniques, such as downlighting, uplighting, and cross lighting, to achieve special effects. Here are some other general recommenda-

• Try to conceal the light source, unless the lights themselves are to be a focal point. • Don't overlight. A little light goes a long way.

• Strive for a natural look. Lighting should imitate moonlight or filtered light without glare. Consider illuminating steps, paths, and changes in the sidewalk level, or any potential obstacles that may cause injury.

• Situate lights so they don't shine into a neighbor's window or cause unpleasant glare when viewed from neighboring homes and yards.

 Keep color in mind. Colored lenses are available for most floodlights. In addition, some companies now offer silicone-colored bulb sleeves to change the color of tier lights, deck lights, walkway lights, and entrance lights.

 Consider the ease of servicing the lights. Make sure they are easy to reach so that changing lamps and cleaning lenses is as simple as possible.

Crosslighting. In this type of application, the unusual interaction of beams of light can yield as much visual artistry as the feature being illuminated. Again, direct any glare away from the viewer and conceal fixtures behind shrubbery for the most natural look.

· Highlighting. Providing imaginative illumination on a broad surface behind a landscaping feature creates a showplace for that feature ture. The larger illuminated area also increases safety and security.

• Floodlighting. Floodlights are versatile for illuminating a wide range of landscaping features. Garden ponds, gazebos, statues, and prized plant specimens all become more visually impressive when properly lit with low-voltage lighting products.

When creating a lighting plan, take a walk both before and after dark around the yard. Observe the different lighting effects created by the sun and the moon on the area where the deck will be built and the surrounding landscaping. Remember to use the three basic lighting techniques when recreating these effects:

home, and landscaping. Select the main element(s) around which to Deck building. design the lighting plan. Choose no more than one or two points. A good focal point may be

Tips for a money-wise summer vacation

By David Uffington

Your summer vacation is coming up, and if you're like me, you can't wait to get to your destination and start slumming in the pool or snoozing in the shade. But just as you take pains to shut down your house before taking off, there are a number of personal finance issues that need to be squared away.

· Check your health insurance. Most HMOs and PPOs have welldefined procedures for seeing outof-town doctors. Knowing those procedures in advance will save you worry and expense on the road. If you have a known medical condition, write it down. If you're planning to travel abroad, translate the information into a handful of languages.

• Review your homeowners policy and check the provisions for replacement of contents in case of a break-in.

 Review your estate-planning documents. Make sure all related documents - your will, your durable powers of attorney for health and finances, and your life insurance policy — are in a safe place, like a safe-deposit box. Also, make sure your trustee has copies or knows where they are.

· Check your automobile insurance. If you plan to rent a car while on vacation, determine whether you ought to buy the rental agency's liability waiver. Most auto insurance policies — and even some credit card companies - will cover vacationers if they have an accident while driving a rental car. Renters who plan to let other drivers use the car should also determine whether they are covered if another driver has an accident in their rental.

· If you're taking a trip that requires prepayment, such as a cruise, you should consider cancellation insurance. While the policies can be expensive — from $200 to $600, depending on the number of people covered and the length of the trip - they can save you the cost of your entire vacation fund in the event that you can't travel.

And while you travel, keep these things in mind: If you're traveling to another country, be sure to manage international currencies. Exchange $100 (U.S.) worth of currency before you leave the country for each country you plan to visit.

 To avoid overtipping — a common mistake among Americans visiting abroad — carry 25 $1 bills (U.S.). Almost everyone is happy to accept U.S. dollars, and you'll know you're tipping the right

Paw's Corner

By Samantha Mazzotta

Here's a great idea for a playhouse that will keep your cat happy, provided by John Anderson of Barre, Vt.:

We have a large yellow tomcat, about 4 years old. When he was a kitten we got a free cardboard box with a couple of openings that became "doors" for him to walk in and out of. For about six months we had many a laugh watching him dive into his toy house.

Be sure the box is upside down with a couple of doors cut at floor level that can be enlarged as your cat grows. You can paint fake windows or other decorations on the outside. When your cat outgrows the box, use it for rubbish and replace it with a bigger one. A wonderful way to recycle old cardboard boxes. Cats love having a special "hiding place" where they feel protected and where they can play. To keep your pet safe, use a sturdy packing box and cut the doors wide enough to give your cat at least two inches of clearance on every side. Place the box in an area that is free of foot traffic so that kitty can nap undisturbed.

Some cats might not take to the idea of a playhouse right away. Don't force a pet into the box. Just place a few toys, a snuggly blanket and a treat inside and let the cat enter at his or her own pace.

Thank you, John, for a purr-fect

Don't let storms 'dampen' your summer

Make sure to take precautions to protect your family and property from thunderstorms and lightning.

"Although most people fear tornadoes, more people are killed each year as a result of thunderstorm winds and lightning," says Lori Conarton, communications director of the Insurance Information Association of Michigan (IIAM). "However, people can take some simple precautions to prevent injuries to their home and family."

An average thunderstorm packs enough power equal to 10 atomic bombs that devastated Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945. At any given moment around the world, there are nearly 1,800 thunderstorms occurring —16 million per year. It is important to remember lightning occurs with all thunderstorms. Lightning often strikes outside of heavy rain and may occur as far as 10 miles away from any rainfall. The chance of being struck by lightning is one in 600,000. Lightning kills between 75-100 people each year in the United States.

Lightning was deadly in Michigan last year. Lightning took the life of one man as he and his son stood on a hill to view nearly continuous lightning nearby. There were at least another 17 people injured as a result of lightning strikes in the state during 2000.

"A good rule of thumb to follow is that if you are close enough to the storm to hear thunder, you are close enough to get struck by lightning," says Conarton.

A severe thunderstorm warning indicates that Doppler Weather Radar or weather spotters have indicated a severe thunderstorm. Take the warning seriously. Severe thunderstorm winds can be as strong and damaging as a tornado.

To help you weather summer storms, IIAM representatives suggest the following safety tips:

· Stay inside and keep away from windows and doors.

· Stay off the telephone and unhook cable television connec-

• If you are caught outside, stay away from tall trees, open fields, open water or small isolated sheds. If you are in a field or open area, get to a clear area and crouch low to the ground.

• Put down golf clubs, umbrellas, baseball bats and fishing rods. Take off metal cleated golf shoes.

 Keep away from wire or metal fences, metal pipes, clotheslines and open water. They all serve as conductors and could transmit a distant lightning strike directly to

• If you notice your skin tingling or your hair beginning to stand on end, a lightning strike may be about to occur. You should drop to your knees, bend forward and put both hands on your knees. Never lie flat on the ground because wet ground is an excellent conductor of electricity.

To protect your property, it is recommended to: 1) install surge protectors to protect electronic equipment; 2) consider the use of lightning rods on your home; and 3) review your insurance coverage with your agent.

If you are struck by lightning, seek immediate medical attention. If someone else is struck by lightning, start CPR immediately and call for medical assistance.

IIAM is a non-profit, public information organization which sponsors a number of consumer information and education programs.

Maintenance can help keep a dream home alive

(NAPSI) — For many Americans, their homes represent the investment of a lifetime. Every year, however, disasters pose a serious threat to that investment. But by conducting annual preventive maintenance, homeowners can protect the value of their home and the safety of their families.

Incorporating preventive maintenance as a part of an annual routine can help consumers protect their investment against damage from a variety of sources, including potential hurricanes, flooding, wildfires, tornadoes and earthquakes.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency's (FEMA) Project Impact: Building Disaster Resistant Communities encourages homeowners to take preventive actions as part of their springcleaning or annual maintenance.

"There is no time like the present for taking preventive measures. There are easy projects that people can do today to prevent damage from disasters that may strike in months or years to come," said Cynthia Ramsay, national public affairs manager for FEMA's Project Impact.

Fannie Mae, the nation's largest provider of funds for home mortgages and a national Project Impact corporate partner, suggests conducting regular maintenance checks on the following:

- mechanical systems (heating, air conditioning, plumbing);
- major structural elements (roofing, gutters, downspouts);
  - exterior siding;
  - cement (sidewalks, steps);
- wood or other materials;the flashing around doors, win-
- dows, chimney and roof;
   doors and windows to ensure
- they are properly caulked; and doors and stairs to ensure they are secure.

Project Impact, a nationwide initiative aimed at getting Americans to think about damage prevention before disasters strike, suggests using yearly maintenance checks as a way to evaluate your home's disaster resistance. Based on the disaster risk you face, home improvement projects that can prevent disaster damage should be conducted.

Potential prevention measures can include:

• installing storm shutters on windows:

• installing anchors, clips and straps to secure your home and roof:

- anchoring heavy equipment, such as water heaters and bookcas-
- elevating the main breaker or fuse box:
- fuse box;
   elevating heating, ventilating
- and cooling equipment; andstoring combustible or flammastoring combustible or flamma ble materials appropriately.

"People make a big financial and emotional investment when buying a home, and they should take the necessary steps to prevent damage to their investment," said Ramsay.
"Taking preventative measures while doing regular maintenance can help ensure that your home and family are safe season after season."

By spending a few hours once or twice a year, homeowners can identify minor problems—which are easier and less expensive to fix before they turn into major repair projects.

For more information about Project Impact or preventing damage, call (202) 646-4117, e-mail project.impact@fema.gov or visit www.fema.gov/impact.

Contest Corner

If at first you don't succeed, keep on pouring

There'll be no crying over a bottle of spilled grape juice for one family. In fact, the Keisling family of Portland, Ore. is celebrating their daughter's kitchen calamity, because it has won them a $20,000 savings bond in the Bounty Messiest Moments Video Contest. Their entry showed that kids will be kids — and are guaranteed to make a mess.

The Bounty Messiest Moments Video Contest searched for America's real-life kids making real big messes...and it was messes Bounty received. Louise, the 2 1/2-year-old star of the winning video, attempts to pour grape juice into a small teacup, but when she misses her target on her first attempt, she keeps trying, pouring most of the bottle on the floor!

"This contest was designed to show what living with kids is really like and to celebrate the messy experiences parents come to expect as their children learn and explore," says Tarang Amin, marketing director for Bounty. "Everyday household mishaps like the grape juice spill are something that most parents probably can relate to."

Dr. Alvin Rosenfeld, child psychiatrist, author of "The Overscheduled Child: Avoiding the Hyper-Parenting Trap" and consultant on the Bounty Messiest Moments Video Contest, says that there is a lot to be learned from a spill and, in fact, spills and messes actually can be considered good if they're the result of a child's exploration.

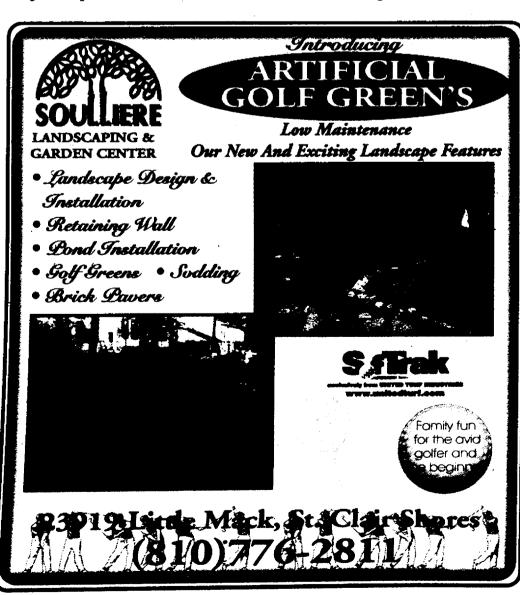

"The little girl in the winning video is not intentionally trying to make a mess; she's trying to teach herself how to pour on her own," says Rosenfeld. "Being prepared with a positive attitude and plenty of absorbent paper towels like Bounty makes it easier to handle the inevitable messes that come with kids."

Rosenfeld adds that most of the messy moments captured in the videos centered around the kitchen and eating. "Almost all little children play with their food," he says. "It's their way of discovering things like taste, texture and color. To a child, pouring a drink all over a highchair tray isn't a mess, it's a fun, interesting adventure."

Additional tips can be found on www.bountyfamily.com, a web site designed to help parents create a more relaxed environment at home where kids can learn and explore and where parents can enjoy family life even more. The winning video, along with other finalists, and information on cooking, crafts, day trips and other fun things to do with children can be seen on the web site.
