H.W. Library summer program a page-turner

By Jason Sweeney
Staff Writer

Crowds of over 100 children and parents have been gathering the last few weeks at the Harper Woods Public Library for magic, juggling, crafts and reading as part of the Summer Reading Club.

Wednesday, July 18, was craft day at the library and Nancy Maxson, one of two Directors of Youth Services for the library said she's been very happy with the success of the program so far this summer.

Each child that either reads five books to a parent or has five books read to him or her by parents or siblings as part of the 'Read-to-me' program gets a chance to win prizes for the accomplishment and receive a certificate of merit at the end of the program.

"My whole neighborhood is here," said Tammy Ivers, a Harper Woods resident who had brought her son, Axel, 7, and daughter, Erin, 5. Ivers' daughter-in-law had brought her own son, James, 7, to the event, and both mothers were able to point out most of the other children attending by name.

"Coloring isn't my everyday thing," said 9-year-old Bona Chabi, who came with her mother and two little brothers, "But I'm

Fire cleanup at Hunt Club rests for defense

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Hunt Club has been ordered to delay cleanup of the July 8 fire that killed 19 horses.

Grosse Pointe Woods municipal Judge Lynne Pierce on Monday granted a request by the attorney for Stephen Richard Fennell, the 23-year-old Woods resident charged with throwing fireworks into the 100-year-old wooden barn.

The charred remains must be preserved through July 31, by which time Fennell's private arson investigator is expected to have sifted through the site.

Neil Rockind, Fennell's attorney, said, "We have a need on behalf of this young man to go to the scene, have our own cause and origin experts make sure the government's experts have done their job."

Michigan State Police arson investigators have completed their survey of the fire scene.

Pierce's order detailed club plans to start clearing the fire scene Wednesday. Officials of the 90-year-old private club are preparing to hold their most important and profitable horse show of the year Aug. 9-12.

"We have a serious time problem," said Wallace Glendening, the Hunt Club's legal counsel and board member. "The area (of the fire) has to be plowed and prepared well before (the show). Demolition takes about a week. There is another week's work, at least, to prepare the ground for the show."

Rockind said, "I'm defending a person whose liberty is at stake, whose reputation is currently trashed. (Glendening) is defending people who want to ride horses. He's talking about an event. I'm talking about a life."

He added, "I'm not trying to offend sensibilities, nor am I trying to offend the sensitive nature of the injury. But, unfortunately, at times we have to say things that may hurt others in the protection of our client."

have health and safety concerns. Nineteen horses died in the fire. The carcasses were removed, but there are animal remains in there."

Ken Simon, the Wayne County assistant prosecuting attorney handling the case said, "We have no objection to (Fennell's) expert going to the scene and doing his own investigation. I will pass that order to the Grosse Pointe Woods police."

Rockind has retained an arson investigator from Indiana.

"He indicated the earliest he could have someone inspect the scene is Monday, July 30," said Rockind. The investigation could take two days.

"If we can find somebody to go out there earlier, we will," said Rockind. Stephen Brownell, president of the Hunt Club board of directors, said, "We're disappointed. This will cause substantial hardship in terms of putting on our annual show, our single biggest money-making enterprise of the year. But we'll abide by the order and do our best to put on a top-quality show — not only for members of this community, but all our guests from around Michigan and surrounding states."

In the weeks since the fire, the area around the old barn has been fenced in and draped off.

"The only work I know of on the site subsequent to the fire was related to the removal of the remains of the horses," said Brownell. "Beyond that, as far as we know, there has been no intrusion and no work."

H.W. library shows new face to the world

By Jason Sweeney
Staff writer

"Libraries and change usually don't go together but the iBistro® system installed three weeks ago has taken the Harper Woods Library a few steps further into the information age.

"The system, iBistro®, is a graphical and web based catalog system that replaces the old and all too familiar yellow text on a blue screen interface of the past. The system gives title, author and subject searches a facelift while adding a listing of current hot titles at the library and more impressively, category searches, web access, and easier access to more materials.

The category searches use both pictures and topic headings to lead users in the right direction. Dale Parus, Harper Woods Library Director, said this interface is helpful, especially to children with projects from school. "What do you want to be?" Parus asked, then clicked through a few quick topics to find several books on jobs.

Other topics like home improvement, science, geography and genealogy offer a wide variety of possible choices. Parus said genealogy has become a popular pastime for many people and iBistro offers these roots seekers a specialized category linking to documents such as birth and burial records along with harder to find topics such as ship manifests or citizenship documents.

The new interface is compared to Amazon.com in the accompanying literature, and just like Amazon, iBistro® is available on any computer with a modem. "You can do this from Hong Kong or Harper Woods, as long as you can find us on the Internet," Parus said.

This ease of access makes what Parus said was one of the more exciting features possible. The new method of placing a reservation on books only requires your library card number and a pin code, just like the one for ATM cards. You can then access a list of the books you have on hold, and see if they are ready to be picked up.

"You could look up a book at work and place it on hold," Parus said, "and we'd have it waiting for you behind the desk for you to pick up on the way home."

Every search through the system can be limited just to the Harper Woods branch of the library, or can be broadened to search all 21 libraries in the Suburban Library Cooperative ranging from Armada to Warren just by clicking a box on the web page. "You can access everything from elementary to master's (degree) level through the system," Parus said.

As with any changeover, there is a period of adjustment, but Parus said, "It's been a smoother conversion than those in the past. Most people have taken well to the new interface." Parus added that even the older library patrons were able to find the system effective with minimal guidance.

Parus said that half the loyal e-mail patrons in the library are of retirement age and have given a positive response to iBistro.

"We think the new system could definitely promote the library and gain more visitors," Parus said, and invites everyone to try out the new system for themselves.

If you're curious to find out more, stop by the library, located at 19601 Harper Ave., call the library at (313) 343-2575, or see the new iBistro® system from home at <http://catalog.libcoop.net>.

having fun. I want to make it (my mask) look like a real bear."

Maxson said that it isn't too late for more people to join in on the activities this summer. The children will be receiving their certificates on Wednesday, August 1, while being entertained by magician Bafflin Bill. Anyone not yet enrolled in the summer program is still welcome to come out to visit the library and enjoy the festivities. For more information this event or other on upcoming programs call the Harper Woods Library at (313) 343-2575.

Cleanup

The field outside the destroyed barn, on which a jumble of charred debris has been strewn for nearly three weeks, is used during competitions as a warm up ring for horses and riders.

"We don't know if the court has left us with enough time to clear the debris, excavate the ring and restore it with clean, fresh, uncontaminated sand in time to properly prepare it for the show," said Brownell.

About 100 horses from Michigan and adjacent states are expected to enter the jumping competition.

Rockind commended Pierce's decision.

"This is a victory for all the little people against, not just government, but the establishment," he said. "This is about our ability to understand what happened that day (of the fire). We know that Stephen, like thousands of people who have accidentally started a fire by burning leaves or burned themselves with fireworks, did not foresee that damage would occur through his mischief. But I want to know what an expert sees by taking a look at the scene. It may be nothing, it may be everything."

Fennell is free on $1,000 bond. His preliminary examination will take place in Grosse Pointe Woods municipal court in Aug. 22, at 1 p.m.

Park's Caretti retires; Hiller new chief

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

David Hiller, a 29-year veteran of the Grosse Pointe Park department of public safety, has been named director. He replaces retiring director Richard Caretti.

Hiller, the department's former deputy director, said, "I've reached the pinnacle of my career. It's a wonderful feeling."

Hiller, 51, began his police career right out of high school in 1968.

"I've been doing it my entire life," he said. He spent four years with the Detroit police department before joining the Park. "My ultimate goal when I came here was to have a position of authority within the department. I've been lucky enough to work my way up through the ranks. I've worked with some great people, including director Caretti for the last 16 years."

Another longtime Park official, mayor Palmer Heenan, was sad to see Caretti go.

"I'm happy that we've had Dick Caretti for 16 years," said Heenan. "He's not only been of great benefit to the community, he's been a personal friend. It's also a day of sadness because this is the culmination of his career."

At the top of Caretti's accomplishments, Heenan cited combining the city's former police and fire organizations into a more efficient public safety department. The arrangement has put more officers on the street at less cost.

Heenan credited the move with helping reduce major crime in the Park by two-thirds during Caretti's tenure. Heenan also praised Caretti's emphasis on training. The mayor added that department morale is high because Caretti based promotions on ability, not personal preference.

"Our detectives are the experts in the Grosse Pointes," said Heenan.

Councilman Vernon Ausherman, who like Heenan was on the council when Caretti joined the Park, went one step further:

"Our public safety is the envy of the Grosse Pointes."

"With all these kind words, I might decide to stay," joked Caretti.

Caretti stepped down last Friday. The council voted unanimously to promote Hiller.

Hiller said, "We're going to go forward. Call us anytime. We're happy to help."

The promotion was one of many announced last week:

- John Schulte was named deputy director. A 23-year veteran of the force, Schulte holds 18 department commendations and citations. He's an EMT and was the first team leader of the Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods special response team.

- James Smith was promoted to lieutenant from detective sergeant. He will be in charge of the detective bureau. He's been with the department for 23 years, and has received 25 citations and holds the directors award.

- "His skills and abilities to deal with juveniles are widely recognized," said Hiller.

- James Chopp has been promoted from sergeant to lieutenant. Chopp is a 19-year veteran, an EMT, and holds 14 department commendations and citations.

- James Hoshaw has been promoted to sergeant. A former public safety officer, Hoshaw joined the department 10 years ago. He holds six commendations and is an EMT. He is also one of the department's field training officers.

I scream for ice cream

You'd have to be some sort of clown to miss the Grosse Pointe Farms annual Ice Cream Social at the Farms Pier Park on Saturday, Aug. 4, between 1 and 4 p.m.

The Social will feature a full lineup of activities for Farms residents, including carnival games, a dunk tank, a moonwalk, an inflatable maze and face painting. There will also be a clown, a juggler and, oh yeah, ice cream. The social is free to Farms residents thanks to the support of volunteers and several local sponsors, including Grosse Pointe Radio & Television, Art Tucker Excavating, Shock Brothers Tree Service, The League Shop, Medstar Ambulance Service, Coleman/Wolf Sanitary Supplies and Marshall Landscaping. Those interested in helping sponsor the event should call Dick Huhn at the Farms parks and recreation department, (313) 343-2405, during normal business hours.

Shores gets 100 percent triple-trained public safety officers

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Shores officials believe that the village was the first community in the United States to combine the services of police and fire into a single public safety department in 1911.

Mayor John Huettelman III believes that in 2001, the village has achieved another first by having all its public safety personnel be triple-trained in the fields of police, fire and emergency medical protocols.

"We now have advanced life support," Huettelman said. "What that means is that all our officers are triple-trained. Our emergency medical service was provided by American Medical Response. They did a fine job and we had no complaints. But now we can say that we know how all our staff are trained. Before, we just knew what we were told."

Shores public safety director Gary Mitchell said that since 1995, all the public safety officers hired by the Shores have also been trained emergency medical technicians (EMTs).

There are two levels of emergency medical providers, said Mitchell. There are paramedics, who can contact a local hospital by radio, speak to a doctor, administer medications at the scene, start intravenous drips, use a defibrillator and are capable of stabilizing severely impaired or heart trauma patients.

EMTs can stabilize, prepare a patient for transport as well as transport to the hospital.

"Right now there are nine officers that have been trained as paramedics," said Mitchell. "We have eight officers that have been trained as EMTs. We will always have at least one EMT and one paramedic on duty at all times. Depending on the scheduling, there will be times when there are two paramedics on duty. That's 24/7."

Paramedics train for 53 weeks, said Mitchell.

"In addition to better serving the residents of Grosse Pointe Shores," said Huettelman, "this move will also save the village money. For the first year, we had to retrofit our ambulance with $80,000 worth of equipment to bring it up to code for what we want to do. But after that, it's estimated that the village will save about $120,000 a year by having our public safety officers triple-trained."

The village, said Huettelman, has been working on this project for the past nine years. The push has lasted through changes in the village board of trustees and a change in the head of public safety.

"This gives us complete control," Huettelman said. "We now know who's been trained and who needs additional training. Who needs to spend time in the emergency room. We can now get the best staff and train them. We know what we've got and save money at the same time. It's a win-win situation for the residents of Grosse Pointe Shores."

Farms to help sheriff fingerprint

Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano has deputized two Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officers to help reduce the backlog of requests for concealed weapon permits.

Farms public safety director Robert Ferber and assistant director Sam Cardella were the two officers deputized. They are now available to take the fingerprints of residents of the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods who wish to obtain a permit to carry a concealed handgun.

The new law, which went into effect earlier this month, required those seeking to obtain a permit to be fingerprinted at their county sheriff's office. This created a huge backlog in Wayne County. In July, the sheriff's department was scheduling for fingerprinting appointments into November. Ferber and Cardella are acting voluntarily.

The fingerprinting will be done by appointments on Saturdays, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. and is for residents of the Pointes and Harper Woods only. To make an appointment, call (313) 885-2100.

Mayor, two on council seek re-election in H.W.

By Matt Barry
Special Writer

Three city council positions and a mayoral position are up for grabs when Harper Woods holds elections in November.

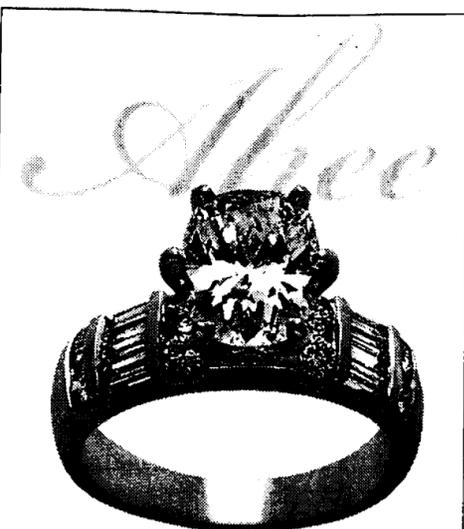

Incumbent Mayor Ken Poynter will run unopposed in the November election. He is seeking his third term as the mayor of Harper Woods.

Council members John Szymanski and Vivian Sawicki will also run for re-election in the same elections. The third seat open was held by Richard Eisengruber, who will not be seeking a new term.

There are five challengers to the three open seats on the council. Running against the incumbents are Craig Hodges, Russel Myers, Dino Mocerri, Carl Bahr and Daniel Palmer.

With only seven candidates running, a primary election will not be held. Harper Woods City Clerk Mickey Todd said a minimum of nine candidates is necessary for a primary election to take place.

The elected mayor will serve a term of two years. Elected council members will serve a term of four years.

Joan Gehrke: Always where the excitement is

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

In 1969, Joan Gehrke wanted to be in one of the most exciting places in the world: the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The then-recent Creighton University political science graduate was determined to lead a much more cosmopolitan life than the one she grew up with in Des Moines, Iowa. NASA had an opening for an internship in its budget department. At first she was turned away and told she was too young for the job. Then she convinced the people at NASA they needed diversity in their program.

"I was there for Apollo 13. I was there for the first moon landing. I got to sit in on meetings with Werner VonBraun. It was really amazing," she said.

Today, Gehrke has been part of another groundbreaking part of science. This time she just didn't sit in on meetings, she helped make things happen as chair of the development committee of the executive committee of the Detroit Science Center.

Gehrke's connection with the Detroit Science Center began in 1979. She was instrumental in the Junior League of Detroit's efforts to make a significant contribution to the science center's new building in the Cultural Center. Through her contacts at NASA, she was able to procure a manned module trainer.

It wasn't until 1990 that Gehrke came back to the science center, this time on the center's executive committee. She had been recommended by a colleague of her husband, who knew of her work as president of the Junior League, on the lower and middle school boards at the Grosse Pointe Academy and a handful of other Detroit-area organizations.

Her decision to jump on board with the Detroit Science Center was an easy one.

"My father-in-law, Hans Gehrke Jr., was on the first Science Center board," she said. "He was my mentor and taught me how to care about Detroit."

It was also Gehrke's commitment to education, not just for her children, but for all children, that was another impetus to become involved.

"Education was always a big part of my family's life and with my children," she said. "It's the key to everything. You can't make anything happen without it."

"Back when we brought the manned module trainer in, the kids came to it,

POINTER OF INTEREST

With a hard hat and construction shoes in hand, City of Grosse Pointe resident Joan Gehrke literally gets into the excitement of the construction of the Detroit Science Center's expansion and renovation project. She rejoined the Science Center after a two-year absence to oversee its development campaigns.

turned around to their parents and said, "Oooh! Look Mom! This is neat! That's what it's all about."

In her first year, as vice chair of the executive committee, Gehrke led the center's Omnimax (now IMAX) theater renovation campaign.

"It seemed like we might be turning around some corners," she said.

However, the corner the Science Center turned into was a deep, black hole. After the Omnimax reopening in 1991, the state cut its funding to arts and cultural organizations. The Science Center was forced to close its doors for 11 months.

"I took it personally that we had to close it down," she said. "I couldn't imagine a major city like Detroit, which is so dependent on technology, without a science center. Clearly, we shouldn't have been so dependent on the state, but the Science Center never had the support an institution like this should have. We had no support from the city. It remains a private non-profit entity."

The difficult times led to determination and invention as Gehrke took on the role of fundraising chair for the Detroit Science Center's reopening in 1992.

"I found a professional fundraiser; his name was Don DeRosen," she said. "Our phone numbers varied by one digit. We decided it was fate. He worked on our project pro bono. And one of our board members, Leonard Smith, was instrumental in getting the bridge funding."

"It was a challenging time, but a half-million dollars later, we were able to open."

For her efforts, the United Way of Southeastern Michigan gave Gehrke the Heart of Gold Award in 1993.

Gehrke said the years following the 1992 reopening were a time of survival, then stabilization.

In 1998, Gehrke left the center's executive committee, feeling like she had done all there was for the science center. Her professional life, which she had put aside to raise her three sons, was in full swing again, first as director of community relations for PVS Chemicals Inc. then as director of regional public policy for the Detroit Regional Chamber.

However, Detroit Science Center board of trustees chairman Francois Castaing didn't think Gehrke had done everything she could. He persuaded her to come back in 2000 to assist with the $30 million capital campaign for the renovation and expansion project of the Science Center.

"A lot of the money had been raised when I came on board," she said of the $20 million Castaing brought in through his corporate and state contacts.

"But sometimes the last money to be raised is the hardest," she continued. "We've worked hard at expanding the (development) committee. We're looking for new ideas. Fundraising is important, too."

Currently, the science center is $7 million away from its capital campaign goal. Continued endowment contributions and operating support still needs to be maintained.

"The more money we get, the more we can do," she said.

On the cusp of the Science Center reopening, Gehrke is confident the momentum is at an all-time high.

"When Francois Castaing came to the Detroit Science Center, all of the right elements at one place and at one time were in place to make this happen," she said. "There's been incredible dedication to get this done. The building is fabulous and we finally have a staff with the skills we need and haven't been able to afford."

Now that her children are grown and her corporate life no longer beckons, Gehrke also serves as vice chair of the Matrix Human Services board, trustee of the United Way Community Services of Metropolitan Detroit and the Crosse Pointe Education Foundation boards and sits on the advisory board of the Holley Ear Institute and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's society committee. She is also chairing this year's St. John Hospital and Medical Center's Fontbonne Auxiliary White Christmas Ball.

GPW hosts nighttime swim

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Special teen and family nighttime swimming sessions will take place Friday, July 27, from 9 to 11 p.m. at Lake Front Park in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The lighted pool will be staffed by a full shift of lifeguards. Free refreshments will be served near poolside. A disc jockey, the same one who played music during teen nights at the park's activities center, will "spin you favorite tunes," according to Woods officials.

The first-time events grew from a meeting between the Woods recreation commission and city recreation supervisor Melissa Warnack.

"We were brainstorming to come up with something to do for the teens," said Warnack. "Then we thought it would be nice to do something for families."

The weather could play a role. "It will be canceled if there's thunder and lightning," said Warnack. Residents can register at the park pool office or by calling (313) 343-2479.

All winners in the Farms primary vote

With four seats open on the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council and only one incumbent running, it looks like a time of change is coming.

But rather than fearing change, we should look at it as a time of opportunity. And after personally interviewing each of the 10 candidates running for office, we're happy to report that all of them would be good additions to the council.

Lisa Gandelot, who is running for her third term, is the only incumbent on the Aug. 7 primary ballot. Incumbents not running for re-election are John Danaher, Peter N. Waldmeir and Martin West.

Newcomers entering the fray are Charles "Terry" Davis III, Jim Farquhar, Elaine Hartmann, Therese Joseph, Allen Ledyard, Christopher Maiorana, Richard Russell, Louis Theros and Michael Titterington.

(There are too many candidates to list all their qualifications and backgrounds here. More complete write-ups appear elsewhere in this week's paper.)

Davis, 57, is a lifelong Pointer. He is married with three grown children. He is an investment adviser with an office in the Punch & Judy Building on the Hill.

Opinion

Farquhar, 42, is well known in the community, having grown up here and as a member of the Grosse Pointe Florist family. He is married and has a daughter.

Gandelot, 56, is married to Jon Gandelot, former president of the Grosse Pointe school board. They have two children. She is active in the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, though she says she is beholden to no single special interest.

Hartmann, 71, is married with a grown daughter. Like Gandelot, she is very involved in preservation efforts. She is known as the woman whose tenacity saved the Cadieux Farmhouse at Jefferson and Notre Dame from destruction.

Therese Joseph, 43, is a nursing manager with Henry Ford Health Systems Community Care. Though back in the Farms for seven years, she points out that she is a fourth-generation Pointer.

Allen Ledyard, 67, is a retired trust officer from the former National Bank of Detroit. He is married with two grown children and one grandson.

Maiorana, 33, is married and has one daughter. He is a patent attorney with his own office in St. Clair Shores.

Russell, 47, is married with four children. He is a successful developer with many projects in the Farms. He is currently planning a new retail/office building on the Hill to replace the Optical Library and Upper Crust buildings. His 4,000-square-foot building was held up for a year while the Farms council hired a consultant to study parking and retail needs on the Hill.

Theros, 37, has lived in the Pointes nearly all his life. He is married with two sons. He is an attorney with Dickinson, Wright.

Titterington, 45, is married with two children at South High School. He is a territory account manager for Oki Data-America Inc., specializing in computer printers.

The key issues facing the candidates this year were the disposition of the Mack and Moross property and the future of the Hill.

None of the candidates favored the 40,000-square-foot building proposed at 130 Kercheval. Most thought it was too big for the Hill, while some thought it may be acceptable if parking and traffic problems were addressed and alleviated.

Concerning Mack and Moross, none of the candidates had one single plan for the site. All agreed that the residents should be given an opportunity to voice their opinions and all believed whatever is done should be in the best interests of the Farms.

There was one burning issue that is being promoted by three of the candidates — Russell, Theros and Davis — and that is the purchase of a leaf truck for the Farms. Russell was the first candidate to mention a leaf suction truck, and Davis said he has suggested it several times over the years.

We think the time for an "elephant truck" has come and that the city should overcome its objections to the purchase of one. After all, just because the city picks up our rubbish in the back doesn't mean we forfeit the convenience of raking our leaves to the curb for city collection!

While we are waffling on making any firm endorsements at this time, we have to admit we were impressed with the homework put in by candidates Maiorana and Theros. And we found candidate Davis' views intriguing.

But with 10 highly qualified and likable candidates running for one of eight spots on the November ballot, we find it too difficult to rule out two of the candidates.

We'll leave that call to the Farms voters where it belongs.

But no matter how the primary — and general election for that matter — turns out, all the candidates are winners for stepping up to their civic responsibilities and running for office in the first place.

Good luck to all of you. And, everyone in the Farms, do vote Aug. 7.

3 vie for Park bench

Besides the Farms, the only other primary Aug. 7 in the Pointes is for municipal judge in Grosse Pointe Park.

Incumbent Judge Carl Jarboe is being challenged by Frederick Bellamy and Dean Valente.

Bellamy, 63, has more than 35 years experience as a trial lawyer. He has tried or handled cases in all the Pointe courts and in nearly every county in the state. He has argued not only in the federal courts, but as far as the U.S. Supreme Court as well.

With his years of experience, he knows how a court should be run, Bellamy says, and he believes the Park court has room for improvement.

He says the Park court needs to be more user friendly. He also believes the judge should use his power to affect policy in areas such as parking and ordinance enforcement.

He would go easier on parking fines in order to spur Park business, for example, and he would root out illegal parkers of RVs and inattentive absentee landlords.

Bellamy accuses the municipal court of being a revenue source for the city — to the detriment of justice.

As a senior partner with Vander Male, Bellamy, Gilchrist, he said he is at a point in his career where he can devote the time necessary to be the Park judge.

At age 42, Valente is married and has three children, who are the fourth generation of Valentos to live exclusively in Grosse Pointe Park.

Valente says he loves the Park and wants to see the community remain as good for his children as it was for him growing up.

As the managing partner of Valente, Scharg & Associates, Valente brings 17 years' experience to his bid for judge.

His chief complaint is that the current judge, Valente believes, is not as accessible as he should be and doesn't put in the time the job — albeit part-time at $15,000 a year — requires. He vows he can put in the necessary hours.

Valente also proposes taking advantage of the recent Wayne County Circuit Court reorganization by making youthful criminals locally fall under the jurisdiction of the municipal court. The rationale is that juveniles committing felonies in the Park would be held to Park standards, rather than being dealt with less seriously downtown among more serious offenders.

Valente was also instrumental in years past in introducing students to the legal system through mock trials, such as prosecuting the Big Bad Wolf for breaking and entering, and through other fun but instructional exercises in conjunction with Law Day and Law Week.

He says such programs have fallen by the wayside.

As an active Grosse Pointe Rotarian, Valente played a major role in raising funds to construct the tot lot at Elworthy Field and in providing each of the Pointe fire departments with thermal imaging cameras.

Incumbent Jarboe has been the Park judge for seven years. He looks you straight in the eye when answering his critics' complaints.

He said traffic fines are high, particularly for running red lights, because he doesn't want people to do it again. He is just as strict with unlicensed or suspended drivers.

"I'm not looking for repeat customers," he said of those convicted in his court.

As justification to tough traffic fines, he points to the Park's all-time low in traffic injuries.

Jarboe counters his opponents by saying he is as accessible as any judge could be. He has fax machine by his bedside for late-night and early-morning warrants. He schedules court dates as necessary, even on Christmas Eve, if necessary, he said.

He did move traffic court cases to once a month, he said, so that Park officers would spend fewer days in court and more days on the road, not to mention saving the city the officers' salaries spent waiting instead of patrolling.

Married with six children, Jarboe finds himself extremely active with Pointe sports. At age 45, he is a partner with Abbott Nicholson, a business law firm in Detroit.

He is being endorsed by Richard Caretti, the Park's recently retired director of public safety, and by Mayor Palmer Heenan.

We can find no fault with the way Jarboe has run his court and we, as is our custom, stand by his incumbency.

As for his challengers, both men are qualified and capable of sitting on the bench, but we give the nod to Valente as the candidate to face the incumbent in November.

Accused's uncle takes exception

To the Editor:
As an uncle and godfather to Stephen Fennell, I would like to point out two instances where the recent coverage in the Grosse Pointe News of the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club fire was unfair.

First, the editorial cartoon is absurd because it depicts him as a thug, which he most certainly is not. Second, you quoted a 16-year-old (who I believe does not know my nephew), who cites the accomplishments of her 24-year-old cousin, and then by comparison makes a judgment as to the value of Steve's life.

I simply cannot see the merit in publishing a disparaging statement which confuses irrelevant issues regarding accomplishments with potentially relevant issues of character.

While I have no difficulty dismissing the comment, I seriously question the judgment of the Grosse Pointe News in publishing it.

If it was the papers' goal to publish a quotation regarding Steve's character, please accept this one from someone who actually knows him:

"Steve is a good person from a good family."

Non-replaceable

To the Editor:

At 7:30 a.m. on Sunday, July 8, as I was just about to leave the house to prepare my horse, Indiana, for the therapeutic riding program in which we helped teach children with special needs to ride, I received the most horrific telephone call of my life. "There's been a barn fire at the Hunt Club and Indiana didn't make it out."

I raced over to the barn to see the smoking remains where only the night before I'd hugged Indiana good-night in his cozy home. Seeing his charred body the next day left no room for denial.

Burning to death is the worst thing that ever could have happened to Indiana. Having a horse murdered is one of the worst things, if not the worst thing, that has ever happened to me.

Indiana was the culmination of my life-long dream of owning a horse. I loved him with the ardent fervor of a 10-year-old. He was gentle and kind and had a warm sense of humor.

In spite of having been a schooling horse for many years before I came along, he remained willing to work hard and learn — to always do his best. He taught me to ride and to trust, and in turn he learned to trust me.

He saw me through career uncertainty and postpartum depression. He took care of my children, never minding their darting, yelling and jumping. He looked like a stuffed animal and was great for hugging and leaning on. Our family focused our energy and activities around his care and enjoyment. We saw him just about every day.

And now Indiana's gone, a victim of crime; killed by a man who not only didn't restrain himself enough to let the horses, each of whom was loved, live. But killed by someone who went out of his way to harm innocent animals for humor's sake.

We will love other horses, but we can never replace Indiana or the other victims of this malicious crime. We loved and will always miss Indiana.

Mack/ Mack and the Hill

By John M. Rickel

I have received a surprisingly large number of very positive comments supporting reasonable limitation of additional building on the Hill. Residents really like "small town" Grosse Pointe congeniality, which includes a low-stress, no-tension, low-traffic, walk-around atmosphere.

At the same time that we enjoy our small-town Grosse Pointe, it is important to remember the goal we all had at the time of the Grosse Pointes-Harper Woods Futuring Project.

When we looked at the economic future, we realized we needed more high-value jobs in or near Grosse Pointe (e.g., General Motors and Compuware), producing high-value incomes which support and produce high/increasing residential home values; incomes which pay high/increasing city taxes; incomes which pay taxes to produce fine city services; excellent education; excellent security; excellent parks; excellent quick, easy access to Lake St. Clair, which services in turn produce even more high demand for those desired high/increasing residential home values.

We need to really, truly focus our thought, and our effort, to keep that circular movement going in the improving direction.

Improvement does not happen by itself. Failure can occur; witness the past City of Detroit sharp real estate value decline, and now, some improvement when the economic cycle produced some jobs.

Do not underrate the

importance of high-value jobs to our community. On the East Coast, move-ins of international headquarters of Fortune 500 companies transformed bucolic crossroads into gorgeous small-town campus and resort lifestyles.

Mack/Moross

While the road and parking and other infrastructure on the Hill may be fully or over-utilized, now may be the opportunity to add facilities in under-utilized areas if commercial opportunities exist (commercial development is a cyclical market and may need to be subsidized to require use for the purposes the municipality prefers).

Although offices for CPAs, chartered financial analysts/investment firms, attorneys, bankers and corporate headquarters are sometimes sniffed at as not being as historic as "retail," those occupations should be highly sought after for their high potential to support demand for high-value residential housing in which Grosse Pointe specializes after all.

Mack/Moross has excellent I-94 access, no problems with roads/infrastructure, and self-sufficient parking could be designed into any development.

The City of Grosse Pointe Farms has been looking for a use for the Mack/Moross acreage; a campus of (below ground) parking decks, commercial office space, residential condominiums, medical-related activities/housing, and a revolving restaurant on the top of the tower (well, maybe, maybe not) in a mixed-use, multi-story, high-value building (occupancy for high value jobs, producing high-value incomes, producing demand for high residential Grosse Pointe home values) may have a place at this point in economic history ("Grosse Pointe Tower?"). The desire for development on the Hill is an indication that demand exists. Mack/Moross is the place for development.

For those of us who have worked on the Hill for the last 10 years, we have gone from clear traffic to congested traffic, waiting now for three traffic lights to turn on McMillan from Kercheval when school lets out.

I don't have a problem with current conditions, but I do have a big problem with exacerbating present circumstances further, adding an aesthetically challenged multi-story (two levels) parking structure directly in front of my office picture window. That's not my view, not where I'm going to be buried in an office. I like the flowers and bushes and trees that I see now.

A.I. — 'Artificial Intelligence'

There is a long-heralded movie by that name. Maybe it is still showing. There is also a concept of "artificial intelligence" that goes back to the early days of Alan Turing and the beginning of the computer.

The concept of the computer started before WWII when English counter-intelligence experts were working hard at breaking the Nazi "enigma code." It was a hard code to crack, because it kept changing and the British sleuths could not keep up with the rate at which it changed. What it required was a machine that could calculate probabilities speedily, fast enough to keep up with the pace of quickly changing codes, but finally it was developed by Turing, who invented an electrical device, a very fast calculator, faster than any before, and the German code was finally and secretly cracked.

And this fact had to be kept as a military secret in order gain an intelligence advantage. In a previous column, I reviewed the Hilberry play about this milestone, "Breaking the Code," which can be found on my website.

The name Turing is important in the concept of artificial intelligence because he came up with a definition, the first, of A.I. He said the real test of artificial intelligence is that a reasonably intelligent adult person could not distinguish the mechanical device from a real human being.

The early experiments with artificial intelligence — that is, programming a computer that would "learn," seem to have emotions, use language and relate on an interpersonal level — led to a computer program named Eliza.

In the experiments, subjects would "converse" with Eliza by typing messages to "her" and getting responses back that would seem to come from a real human.

Eliza was primitive and crude by today's standards; therefore, many subjects new right away that the responses were not coming from a "normal" or real human. But there was an interesting observation, namely that some subjects did think they were "talking" to a real human.

The computer program for artificial intelligence was refined over time by being programmed with ever more nuanced and varied replies, more colloquial speech, more pertinent and personal retorts. The percentage of subjects "fooled" by the computer rose, and finally an intelligent robot named Parry often passed the Turing Test.

It is quite another thing to have a computer with artificial intelligence housed in a "body" that looks and feels like a human, moves and talks like a human, complete with nonverbal mannerisms, such as good eye contact and voice inflection, together with appropriate facial expressions.

Theoretically, all these qualities can be eventually discerned and emulated. These possibilities are already ubiquitous in the realm of science-fiction, with numerous stories inhabited by humanoids who walk and talk and work and participate in all sorts of relationships.

In Stanley Kubrick's monumental "2001— A Space Odyssey," the central computer of a super inter-planetary spaceship was named, "HAL." He or "it" was the most highly developed computer at the time and was programmed to have encyclopedic knowledge, and at the same time be user-friendly and personable to a remarkable degree. It (he?) was the central nervous system of the elaborate spaceship.

Despite his calm and soothing voice, HAL brooked no interference with his super-intellectual life-and-death decisions, and he (it) had to be destroyed.

Since Kubrick created HAL, he was known to have spent the last 10 years discussing A.I. with fellow director Steven Spielberg.

The professor in the movie "Artificial Intelligence" lectured to a rapt audience that he was devising a robot that would achieve the ultimate A.I. That would be one which was like a human in every respect, but in order to be "real," it would have to be programmed to have feelings and, ultimately, capable of that magic word — love.

Kubrick died last year and left the completion of the film to his longtime friend and collaborator, Spielberg. If it were possible, Kubrick would be turning in his grave, because Spielberg, disappointingly and unfortunately, botched this "labor of love."

If you want to see samples of Kubrick and samples of Spielberg film-making genius and you are a movie buff, by all means see the film. But if you are expecting a coherent and moving work of art, stay home.

If anything, the movie proves that programmed artificial intelligence that truly passes the Turing Test is truly a fantasy. It's impossible. A human really is a "piece of work" that cannot be replicated by computer programming, however ingenious and clever.

It is clear that the little boy, David, who was programmed in the movie to be able to love and be loved, does not pass the Turing Test.

In further columns, using concepts in A.I., I will try to explain psychiatry's best understanding of what is love and how we pass "it" along from generation to generation.

Cuba? Si!

Bob and Myrtle Everett want you to meet Cubans — not the expatriates from Miami who go ballistic when you mention Fidel Castro. They want you to meet the friendly folks who live 90 miles from U.S. shores and don't understand why we boycott trade with them while planning to send Olympic athletes to China.

Ben Burns

Bob, the retired Grosse Pointe dentist who moved to a St. Clair Shores condo a few years back, has been there and done that and he wants you to share in the experience.

So on Sept. 27, a group of 25 to 30 of us will fly from Miami to Santiago de Cuba with the approval of the U.S. State Department. We will tour the island, from Camaguey province, where the revolution started, to San Juan Hill, where Teddy Roosevelt supposedly led his famous Rough Rider charge. Then we will head for Havana and several days of deluxe accommodations at the Hotel Nacional de Cuba, where we will also enjoy fine small restaurants, open-air markets and sightseeing before returning to U.S. soil Oct. 6.

I have been asked to lead this expedition, which still has a few vacancies, but never fear, those of us who go will be in good hands. Bob and "Myrt" — as she is known — have been to Cuba 35 times.

I was there last October with a group of journalists, businessmen, educators and average citizens, led by former Grosse Pointers Neal and Phyllis Shine and Mort and Reni Crim. We had a wonderful time from the moment of our arrival at Havana Airport to view a parking lot filled with vintage 1950s automobiles to visiting one of two golf courses in Cuba at Varadero Beach. There you can see posters of the dead revolutionary Ernesto Che Guervara dressed in military fatigues with a golf club in his hand.

This time we hope to meet with politicians, librarians, journalists, religious leaders, historians and just plain folks.

"This will be an almost complete view of the island," Bob said. "I want to show people how wonderful the Cuban people are under difficult living conditions and how much they love Americans."

While the trip is carefully organized and travel is on a modern, air-conditioned bus, participants with special interests have time to pursue them and rejoin the group. Last year, some of our group met with women leaders, others with religious leaders and several with nature-area experts. Fishing expeditions are possible at Hemingway Harbor not far from Havana.

Neither Bob, 76, nor Myrt ("she is much younger," according to Bob) look like adventurers and pioneers, but they are. Bob started guiding delegations to various parts of the globe when he was a practicing dentist and his group put on professional presentations.

You could say he did his part to open China, the old Soviet Union and the Eastern European countries. Over the years since he founded U.S. Exchanges in 1982, he has taken 25 groups to the Soviet Union and perhaps 50 groups to China.

He'll be along on the trip I lead to Cuba in September and will go back again in November and several times in 2002. On each trip, Bob and Myrt make a contribution to a Cuban charity, hospital or church and encourage delegates to bring along school supplies and books to pass out to children along the way.

One time a semi-pro baseball player was a huge hit when he started lobbing baseballs over the fence onto a scrubby field where some Cuban youths were playing the game.

We still have a few vacancies. If you are interested in coming along, send me an e-mail or give me a call. Or you can call Bob direct at (810) 445-3005.

King update

A couple weeks ago "America's Most Wanted" aired a show about the slaying of former Grosse Pointer Stephen King, an up-and-coming heavy-metal musician, and two others in an apartment five floors above a busy mid-town Manhattan deli in early May. They reported that police were looking for a suspect named Sean Salley, who had been identified by his partner as the shooter in the senseless crimes.

The day after the show aired, a resident of a Miami homeless shelter turned in a fellow resident whom he had seen pictured on television. As Richard Wright, WSU journalism professor and long-time friend to Jenny King, Stephen's mother, put it: "America's Most Wanted" may be smarmy in its presentation, but it gets results.

Accountability begins at home

To the Editor:
When I read the Grosse Pointe News report on the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club tragedy, it caused a lump to swell up in my throat. It was a story of great contrasts. As I read about the brave actions taken by Mr. Ray Neal, the night watchman, I thanked God for his responsibility, courage and compassion. As I learned more details about the alleged actions of Mr. Fennell and his friends, I thought that they redefined irresponsibility, cowardice and sadism. I applaud Mr. Duggan, the county prosecutor, for planning to bring the full weight of the law against Mr. Fennell and his friends. I applaud the Grosse Pointe News for publicizing the heroism of Mr. Neal.

Yet the contrast in the actions of the people involved causes me great concern.

Our country was founded by Christian people who wanted religious and economic freedom. But John Adams recognized that in order for a free country to survive, its people must be guided in their individual behavior, not by government but by the Ten Commandments.

There are not enough police or soldiers to force free people to live justly. People must make moral decisions based on the Bible and the presence of God in their lives.

The outrage that our community feels about these evil, senseless and sadistic actions is righteous anger.

The courage of Mr. Neal is an inspiration to us all.

I hope each of us will reflect upon what lessons we are teaching our children at home and at church. If we are to remain free, we need more people acting like Mr. Neal and fewer people acting like Mr. Fennell and his friends.

Malicious destruction

To the Editor:
The following is my opinion on the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club arson and malicious destruction of horses.

A stall is home to a horse; it's where the horse goes for rest, food, water and, in some instances, healing. It's their safety net, their private retreat.

Can you imagine being comfortably enclosed in your stall and then begins the intimidation of the sounds of exploding firecrackers? But those sounds are "out there" and you're "in here" — locked in, safe and sound. Then the noise becomes terrifying flames racing through the stable engulfing you and your stable mates.

The terror these animals felt is incomprehensible as they struggle to free themselves and fight for breath. We can only pray suffocation came before the agonizing pain of burning to death.

This destruction was not a childish or immature act. The person in question is an adult; age of reason is 7 years; Stephen Fennell is 23, not a "kid." He intentionally set out to frighten the animals (this he admitted).

Hasn't Stephen ever been frightened? Has Stephen been in a situation where he was trapped? What is so amusing about fright, agony and torture? Was this because he could inflict it on a trapped creature unable to resist or fight its way out? I fail to see the humor, the amusement.

Why didn't he and or his friends call for help when they saw what his "prank" had initiated? Was 911 too advanced for their immature minds to press? Perhaps it was amusing to watch the fire and hear the death cries of the animals.

Hopefully those sounds will haunt Stephen and his friends throughout their lives.

Stephen Fennell must pay for the consequences of his actions and his charges must result in trial with conviction and severe sentencing.

Punishment

To the Editor:
The Grosse Pointe News should be commended for its comprehensive coverage of the tragic fire at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club. I have been a guest at this club on a number of occasions.

John Minnis' editorial headline of July 12 said it all, "Idiots and their fireworks."

As far as Wayne County prosecutor Mike Duggan's charges and statements in this case are concerned, let's put this in perspective for a moment.

On the American frontier in the 19th century, the crime of "horse theft" was punishable by "death by hanging."

Given Mr. Duggan's long affiliation with his mentor and "godfather" Ed McNamara, whose expertise at political manipulation and ability to play on public fear and emotion is almost legendary, I am a little surprised that Mr. Duggan did not find some obscure judicial precedent to charge the accused Stephen Fennell, with a capital offense and demand his execution.

There is a good reason why fireworks are nominally illegal in Michigan. It is because a small number of idiots abuse their gift of living in a largely free country. There is no question that if Mr. Fennell is indeed guilty, he needs serious psychiatric intervention for whatever demons possessed him to perpetrate such a sick, inane act. In addition, he should seriously consider moving to another state.

The misdemeanor penalty for illegal fireworks in Michigan is a maximum of 90 days in jail and a $500 fine. If it is proven in court that Mr. Fennell acted with premeditated malice, then punishment well beyond the maximum for use of illegal fireworks is totally appropriate.

Heart wrenching

To the Editor:
I'm writing this with much sadness in my heart for all the horses that died, for their owners, for their caring people who worked at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club, and for all the young children who took the riding lessons and came to love the horses so much.

My two granddaughters finished their riding lessons in March. They are 10 and 12 years old. They truly loved their lessons, the horses, Carolyn the instructor and Emily, who got the horses ready for the riding lessons. I loved being at these lessons with them and also feeding and talking to the horses.

My granddaughters hadn't heard about the fire because they were on vacation. Today I had to tell them about the fire. It was a heart-wrenching experience seeing their faces, and through their tears, answering their questions about which horses died, and why would someone throw a firecracker to scare the horses. Together we cried for all the horses we came to know.

I want to say to Stephen Fennell, I hope you realize the heartache and anguish you have subjected all these people to. You will have to live with your actions for the rest of your life.

Local youth winning leukemia battle

Matt Barry
Special Writer
Four-year-old Harper Woods resident Cody Jackson is winning a battle many people will never have to face, especially at his young age.

Jackson was recently awarded the Young Heroes Medal of Honor by the 127th Wing of the Michigan Air National Guard. Jackson was diagnosed with leukemia in May of 2000 and has been battling this disease ever since.

"We were all very excited for him," his mother, Lynne Jackson, said.

Cody was nominated for the award by a nurse, Betty Mill, who helped treat him and then he was selected as this year's recipient. Lynne said only one or two kids are selected each year.

The award is given to kids who have distinguished themselves with outstanding courage in their battle to overcome a life-threatening illness.

During the ceremony, Cody received the medal of honor and watched a military fly over in tribute of him. He said the best part of the ceremony was going into the planes and pretending to fly them.

The diagnosis for Cody's leukemia came in May of 2000, right after his younger brother Griffin was born.

"When we found out about it, it was the most shocking thing and the worst thing I've ever experienced," Lynne said. "I just wanted to go in the parking lot and scream."

Not knowing anything

Harper Woods resident Cody Jackson, right, gives a thumbs-up prior to accepting the Young Heroes Medal of Honor. Cody was diagnosed with leukemia in May of 2000 and has been fighting the disease ever since. Cody, pictured with members of the 127th Wing of the Michigan Air National Guard, received the Young Heroes Medal of Honor for distinguishing himself with outstanding courage in his battle to overcome a life-threatening illness. The award states he has shown great strength, courage and love for life in heroic proportions.

about leukemia, Bill Jackson, Cody's dad, said they did not really know what to expect. What was even harder to deal with is the doctors did not know what was the cause of the leukemia, they only had theories.

"Because we didn't know anything about leukemia, we had the doctors explain it to us like they were to explain it to Cody," Bill said.

After a two-week stay in the hospital following the diagnosis, Cody has been receiving his treatment on an outpatient basis. Currently, he visits the hospital once every nine weeks for a spinal treatment, Lynne said. He also receives medication on a weekly basis and has a medaport in his chest where medication is distributed to his body.

"The hospital is a lot of fun," Cody said.

For a young kid, Cody is very aware of what he is going through and experiencing. Lynne said they were very open with him from the beginning about the disease and explained to him the best they could to someone his age.

"The nurses and doctors have been great also," Lynne said. "They have taken him in as part of their family, too."

Following the diagnosis, Lynne said it was very devastating for the entire family, especially just on the heels of the birth of their second son.

"Our families are very supportive and we could not have gotten through this without them," Lynne said. "Everyone steps in and takes shifts with Cody—everyone is very active."

Cody has become very close to both of his grandfathers in the time since his diagnosis, Lynne said.

Either accompanying Cody on his hospital visits or taking him on trips to Eastern Market, he spends lots of time with his grandfathers.

Since his diagnosis, Cody has improved and dealt with the illness very well, Bill said. With all of the treatments, Cody was upgraded to the low-risk category.

Although there is not a 100 percent cure, the Jacksons are confident that with the treatments Cody will stay healthy.

"One of his nurses was diagnosed with leukemia when she was nine and she is in her thirties now and we have heard lots of stories like that, so we are pretty confident he will stay healthy," Lynne said.

After a year of treatment, Cody is living life like any other kid his age. He said he likes to go swimming, play video games with his dad and watch Scooby Doo.

He also has high hopes for his future, too.

"When I grow up I want to be a policeman, a cowboy, a pizza man and an ice cream man," Cody said.

Cody said he is also looking forward to starting school in August when he begins kindergarten.

Farms voters have variety of choices in Aug. 7 primary

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

On Tuesday, Aug. 7, Grosse Pointe Farms is holding a primary to select candidates for the November city council election.

There are 10 candidates on the primary ballot. City clerk Shane Reeside said that voters can cast a ballot for up to four candidates. The top eight vote-getters will be placed on the November ballot.

There are four council seats open this year. Only one incumbent, Lisa Gandelot, is running for reelection. As a result, the Farms council will have at least three new councilmembers.

There are a number of controversial issues that have been recently debated by the Farms council, including the fate of city-owned property at Mack and Moross. A recent proposal to build a large office building at 130 Kercheval, where the street intersects with Hall Place, has also raised considerable public interest.

Following are brief candidate profiles presented in alphabetical order.

Charles "Terry" Davis

Charles "Terry" Davis III

Candidate Charles Davis III, known to his friends as Terry, is 57. He and his wife Susan have three children, Chip, Susan Grace and Jonathan. He is an investment adviser and maintains an office in the Punch & Judy building on the Hill.

Parking on the Hill is an issue he knows something about. Davis feels strongly that putting a parking deck on Richard municipal lot is a bad idea. There are questions of student safety and traffic visibility. And he believes a deck alone won't solve the Hill's parking problems.

Davis would also like to see the Farms council work with the school board to solve the parking problems around South and Richard. Those problems can only be addressed by different governmental jurisdictions working together.

"The first thing I'd like to do is apply common sense to the problem," Davis said. "We have to separate the working population from the shopping population. Keep the meters in front of the stores and in the back parking lot for the public. Then take the workers and move them farther away. If we expand the Hill, and I'm not opposed to expanding if it's properly planned and reasonable, I think the growth should come from adding second stories to the buildings that don't have them."

Davis suggested that the Farms council consult with Cottage Hospital representatives to see if it's possible to build another deck on the land behind the hospital's current parking deck. Perhaps some sort of local bond could be used to pay for it, he said.

He also suggests raising the rates in municipal lot. He would also like to reserve the rows in the lot closest to the stores for customers. Every step a customer has to take before getting to the stores works against retailers, he said. Davis doesn't want to attract any kind of retail. Rather he believes that the retail should be attractive to the people who live nearby. As for 130 Kercheval, Davis said he thinks the council is being misled by the developer.

Davis said that Ed Russell is using the lowest possible averages to determine the number of parking spaces needed.

"We need businesses that will benefit from walk-by traffic," said Davis. "The city doesn't have the right to restrict economic rights by zoning laws, such as retail on the first floor. I believe we can maintain enough of a retail presence to make retail viable. Right now it's marginally viable."

Davis believes the community loses part of its spirit when there isn't retail on the Hill. He sees the council's job as protecting the gems of Grosse Pointe and the Hill is such a gem. That's why he isn't opposed to expanding the number of two-story buildings on the Hill, as long as they're not too tall.

"I'm not saying I know the answers," Davis said. "The city has to be willing to bear the cost of this. There is no free ride. I believe the council's been responding to the group that's loudest at the expense of the rest of the city."

At Mack and Moross, Davis said he believes there are a variety of interests competing to use the space. Whatever goes there has to be an attractive gateway to the city. And it can't attract the kinds of problems that the city wanted to get rid of when it bought the land, he said.

"Whatever goes at Mack and Moross should benefit a substantial portion of the public, either by its use or perhaps by getting money back through rent," Davis said. "To me the solution is to put out a request for proposal (RFP). That way the developers pay for all the research. I would hope that we would get six or seven proposals in response to such a request."

This might include building a four or five story building on the site. It's really the only place in Grosse Pointe where such a building could be constructed, he said. The upper floors might be commercial, with the lower floors having a mixed use.

"We have to plan for the future," Davis said. "We have to move with the times, but prevent the times from changing what we love about the community."

James C. Farquhar Jr.

James C. Farquhar Jr.

Candidate James C. Farquhar Jr. is 42. He is president of Grosse Pointe Florists on Kerby Road. He has been married to his wife, Elaine, for 18 years. They have a daughter, Leigh.

Farquhar said he wants to serve on the council because he believes in community involvement. He has served on the Farms Beautification Committee since 1987, as both president and acting president. He has also served on the city's Parks and Harbor Committee since 1986. During that time he was involved with many projects, including the development of a master plan for Pier Park.

Farquhar is proud of the fact that he is a third generation Farms resident.

"I have a lot at stake when it comes to the future of the Farms," Farquhar said. "My home and my business are here. I want to improve the quality of life for my daughter. The council can help by maintaining infrastructure like sidewalks and the park. It's important to keep up."

"Before we developed a master plan for Pier Park, people didn't go there just to walk around. We wanted the park to be a walking site and we put the path in after the big storm in 1997. Now people go there all the time to walk, or watch the boats go by. We put in more gazebos, plantings and trees."

Farquhar said he was against the Kerby curb cut next to Kerby school. He believes it will make driving down Kerby more difficult and likens it to when people parallel park on Mack. A whole lane is lost. He believes the school and parents should encourage students to walk or ride bikes to reduce car traffic. That is his daughter's school and it's a neighborhood school that really isn't far away from where most of the students live, he said.

When asked about the fate of Mack and Moross property, Farquhar said that it's been a tough question since the retail shopping buildings were torn down six years ago.

"The community has needs," Farquhar said. "I don't think we have enough recreation space. I think we could use another quality soccer field. I don't think what we're going to do has to be done right away. I can envision both indoor and outdoor recreation facilities there. I don't see anything being done until the Krogers is gone. I do believe that any major project would require a vote by the citizens of the Farms, especially if there were to be a divided council."

When asked about police and fire relocating at the corner, Farquhar said he's on the fence. Is crime really that bad on Mack? Is the current city hall really that bad? He said some people think a station at the corner would reduce crime in the city, but he doesn't know if crime is really bad enough to justify such a move. He also wonders if the corner is a better location to place fire and police vehicles when compared to the Kerby location of the current public safety building.

"If the city hall is to be moved, I need to see the reasons why," Farquhar said. "I've heard valid points from different people on all sides of the issue. Whatever goes at the corner has to improve the lot of Farms residents, all Farms residents. I'm not opposed to a facility that would be open to others because such a facility would still benefit Farms residents. I do believe that all the Pointes have to work together on projects. A strong Woods helps make the Farms strong."

As for the Hill, Farquhar said he can't see people spending a lot of money for a parking garage. He's heard the figure of $20,000 per new parking spot quoted. And he said that women don't like to use parking decks if they can help it. He said that while people may want retail stores, small "mom and pop" stores have a hard time producing enough revenue to make Hill rents.

But he does enjoy having brokers nearby and he and his wife enjoy going to the Hill's restaurants. "Why do they have to change the Hill?" Farquhar asked. "Things will take care of themselves. The Hill is not sick. The buildings are full and the businesses are doing well. Should taxpayer dollars be used to solve the problem of private businesses? As a taxpayer, I don't want to pay for a parking deck. And business owners don't seem to be in agreement, so why do it? Until we figure out who pays for parking and where it should go, why do it? I love the Farms. I want to be here for 50 years. That's why I want to be on the council."

Lisa Gandelot

Lisa Gandelot

Lisa Gandelot, 56, is the only incumbent on the primary ballot. She is married to Jon Gandelot, a former president of the Grosse Pointe school board. They have two children, Nancy and Michael.

Gandelot believes that she is a good listener and is her own person, beholden to no special interests, whether that's an individual or a group of people.

"This is my third election," Gandelot said. "I've always been that way in my thinking and in my actions. I want to what's right for the residents of Grosse Pointe Farms."

As the only incumbent, Gandelot admits to being uncomfortable with the fact that there will be so many new councilmembers. She believes that experience and institutional memory count.

"The council has purchased the property at the corner of Mack and Moross," Gandelot said. "Even though we still haven't determined what should go there, it was a good idea to buy the property. It's stemmed the tide of blight and crime. That was the main purpose of the purchase."

"I've learned that doing something about the corner isn't as easy as you'd think. Situations aren't always what they appear to be."

"As an incumbent, I'm proud of the work we've done to preserve the Farms' heritage. I see people rehabilitating older homes and I think that's wonderful."

The council during her tenure has worked to beautify the Hill and she's proud of the reaction of Farms officials following the terrible storm of 1997, when power went out and people were killed. After the storm, the city didn't waste any time in reforesting the park, she said.

While there were glitches with the sewer separation project, she says there were things that couldn't be anticipated. She voted against completing the project in a year and said that in milling down all of the streets at once and then leaving them alone for months on end was a bad idea.

Gandelot is in favor of a mixed retail/office use for the Hill. Maintaining the district's vibrancy and viability is only to the advantage of Farms residents and the Pointes at large.

"People are going away from shopping malls," said Gandelot. "We need to cherish what we have. It's neat to see people walking the streets. We've had stores that are viable. We need a good mix or the community loses something. We'll lose a friendliness. I think it's important to have that. If we do nothing, the Hill will be only business. I don't think it's in the best interests of the community. But it boils down to parking. If we don't have it, no big projects."

She said, in reference to Mack and Moross, that she favors a survey to learn what people want. Gandelot said she opposed the previous survey, which she said was biased, about the property. She didn't vote to accept the report. Whatever goes there should be for Farms residents.

"I think the council should have organized citizen input on what to do with the property," said Gandelot. "I ran for office in 1993 and 1997. Both times I said we don't have options for our senior citizens. I would like to see, as part of a mix, some sort of housing option for people in their later years."

"As for public safety at the corner, I think we have to do our due diligence and look at all the options. But I think putting a station there is kind of putting it at the outside of the community. It wouldn't be as centrally located as it is now. I'd have to see if it would make financial sense to move to the corner."

Elaine Hartmann

Elaine Hartmann

Elaine Hartmann, 71, is married to Joseph Hartmann. They have one daughter, Amy Taylor, and a grandchild. She is retired teacher who taught first and second grade in the Detroit public school system. She also maintained, until last year, the antique shop "Birds of A Feather" in Grosse Pointe Park for several years. She has run for public office in the past, and was the Democratic candidate for Andrew Richner's seat in the state House of Representatives in the mid-1990s.

When asked why she was running for office, Hartmann said that she was concerned about the future of Mack and Moross and the Hill. She also believed that the council lacks a general plan for the Farms.

"There is no senior housing in the Farms," Hartmann said. "People with large houses have no place to downsize if they want to stay here. I think that could be done at Mack and Moross if we found the right architect. It could face toward the interior, away from Mack. I don't think we need a community recreation center at that location."

She also attended a recent council meeting concerning the proposed office building at 130 Kercheval. At that meeting, a Radnor Circle resident spoke. Hartmann said it appeared to her that the council didn't listen to his concerns. Only mayor Ed Gaffney mentioned that before any project could be approved, the question of parking would have to be settled, she said.

"I felt that if no one was there that night, the council would have approved the 130 project," said Hartmann. "I don't think the proposed building at 130 Kercheval should be approved. It's a 'bigfoot' building. Why do they need such a large building? I feel they can renovate the building and come up with a building that fits the area." Hartmann also strongly supports retail business on the Hill and believes there should be new zoning regulations that would require buildings on the Hill be zoned for retail on the first floor.

"The Hill used to have more retail business and that added to the ambience of a small town," she said. "That's why people moved to this community. When I heard about a plan to build a parking deck on the lot in front of Richard Elementary, my heart almost stopped. To make small children walk by a covered structure, while not allowing Jumps to get a beer and wine license makes no sense."

She believes the lack of parking on the Hill is a deterrent to new retail business and admits that she doesn't know the solution.

Hartmann also strongly opposed "bigfoot" housing and believes the council should enforce its zoning. She said that far too many of the recent variances approved by the council have resulted in homes that have fences that are too big, or houses that are too close together or are too big for the lot. Strict zoning is all a part of preserving the Farms' ambience, she said.

Hartmann has worked as a preservationist who has served on the Farms Preservation Committee and the current Preservation Commission. She is proud to have worked to restore the Cadieux House at Notre Dame and Jefferson in the City and is currently working on the rectory at Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Corktown.

She approved of making Beverly Road a historical district. She believes public safety shouldn't move from its present location.

"People in the area like the fact that the public safety department is there," said Hartmann, who lives next door to the city hall. "It's centrally located. Maybe they can put some sort of substation at Mack and Moross."

Therese Joseph

Therese Joseph

Therese Joseph, 43, is a nursing manager at Henry Ford Health Systems Community Care at Nine Mile and I-94. Part of the job is doing home care for the elderly who use Henry Ford services. This includes Cottage and Bon Secours hospitals. She is married to Ed Joseph.

"I want to make a contribution to the Farms," Joseph said. "This is my first time running. I've served on many different community services. I like to apply what I've learned from these experiences and apply that knowledge to working on the council."

When it comes to Mack and Moross, Joseph said she knows the issue is big with a lot of factors involved. She does see a need for senior housing. Her work experience has shown her that there are plenty of Pointers who want to stay in town, but could really use some sort of housing more appropriate for their age.

Joseph does not like the idea of building a parking facility in front of the Richard school. Whatever is done about parking has to be fair to the merchants and all the businesses on the Hill, she said.

If a building owner wanted to build a second story, would there be parking available if the 130 project were approved? she asked. She also worries about traffic flow on the Hill.

"I think the free market should decide what goes on the Hill," Joseph said. "I don't think retail should be forced. It can be encouraged if it's profitable."

Joseph would also like to promote communication between the council and residents. Perhaps through special public forums or newsletters, she said. What ever is done must be affordable.

Joseph believes her work experience has given her the people skills needed to be an effective council member. She said she's enjoyed going door-to-door and meeting with farms residents.

"I've learned to be even more grateful about living in Grosse Pointe Farms," said Joseph. "I've learned what the people's concerns are concerning Mack and Moross. I've learned that people are concerned about parking and traffic flow on the Hill. People want to maintain the services and safety standards that make the Farms great. I want to promote dialogues between people involved in the various issues before the council, whether it's Mack and Moross or the Hill."

Allen Ledyard

Allen Ledyard

Allen Ledyard, 67, is a retired trust officer at the old National Bank of Detroit. He and his wife Polly have two grown children, James and John, and one grandson. He also has a law degree from Wayne State.

"I'm running for the council because I think it's a job worth doing," Ledyard said. "I've lived here all my life. There are some things I'd like to see done and I think I have the time and the qualifications to do it well."

"I've always wanted to run, I've been talking about it for 20 or 30 years. I'm enjoying going around and talking with people. When I've said that I want to talk about the Farms, there hasn't been a single person who didn't sit down and talk about the issues."

What people wanted to chat the most about, said Ledyard, is Mack and Moross. But he doesn't think that's the most important issue before the council. He believes that the recent proposal for an office building at 130 Kercheval is.

"That's a potential bombshell," Ledyard said. "It has a lot of potential to look like an inside deal. If the council doesn't communicate with the public, they could look bad. I think this project will affect people. I don't think Mack and Moross will in the same way. That area is rather isolated. The Kercheval project will directly affect homes and businesses that are nearby."

Ledyard said that people, for the most part, don't walk to the Hill, they drive. He said that to build a parking deck by the Richard school is a very bad idea, expecting people to park there and then trek to the shops. People will park where they're parking now, he said.

He's also worried about the size of the project. Just imagine the problems with a building as large as the one proposed at 130 Kercheval, he said.

"If I'm going to stretch parking laws, I want to do it in a way that doesn't adversely affect innocent people. There are a lot of things that would be nice to do in the Farms that we can't do because the city's basically filled and there's no room. That's a legitimate question, have we built enough big buildings in the city?"

He said that's where his thinking has led him in regards to the Hill. He said that the 130 building would have relatively high rents. That means smaller offices. Smaller offices mean more offices, which mean more people. More people mean more parking. That affects the smaller shops on the Hill. He believes developer Ed Russell should find parking using his own money and the city shouldn't bail him out.

Ledyard would like to work to attract more retail business to the Hill, but he is hesitant to legislate some solution.

As for Mack and Moross, he believes that determining what goes there isn't "rocket science." Have a scientific poll to see what the people want, he said.

He doesn't believe a senior facility will work at that busy intersection.

"It's not big enough," Ledyard said. "Go to any senior center built in the last five years and look around. They're huge, with walking paths and gardens. The Mack property just isn't big enough for what is being done with senior centers these days."

The residents he's talked with seem to like the idea of some sort of public safety building at the corner. What they'll say when a clearer idea of the costs involved might be another story, Ledyard said, but for now there seems to be support for public safety there.

"Not many people realize that the city really can't do anything with the property until all the land is clear," Ledyard said. "Kroger's lease still has a few years on it. I think if you're going to build some sort of facility you should know where the driveway is going to be placed."

Ledyard believes the Farms has been a blessed community. With at least three people leaving the council, he'd like to see good government perpetuated.

He said he has no axe to grind. He believes the council should make sure that there are good people in place at city hall. Then leave them to do their jobs, he said. If the council doesn't like the job that's done, well that's what year-end reviews are for.

Christopher P. Maiorana

Christopher P. Maiorana

Christopher P. Maiorana, 33, and his wife, Lisa, are the parents of a daughter, Jennifer. He works as a patent attorney in St. Clair Shores.

Maiorana is running because he feels there is a need to fill the council with strong council people. He feels that with his academic and business background, he's such a person. He and his wife have made a commitment to live in the Farms and wants the city to be the best community that it can be.

When asked about Mack and Moross, Maiorana said that his research of the property and the city's history with it turned up interesting items, including the fact that the land was purchased without a clear idea of what to do with it.

"I understand that there were reasons to buy the land, including crime and blight," Maiorana said. "But a single mill or 7.3 percent of the city's taxes go to that property. It's now 10 years later. With Proposition A in effect, every time a house is sold that property's taxes are increased. We need lower millages."

For now, Maiorana believes some sort of soccer field on the Mack property is the least expensive alternative until a more permanent plan is decided. Because the land was purchased, he said, through a threat of condemnation, putting a business there will be difficult.

Whatever goes there, Maiorana said, he's leaning toward some sort of facility that won't further drain the public coffers. He believes some sort of mixed use with a commercial facility would be ideal. It can't be totally commercial, but the main thing is to minimize costs. Perhaps some sort of commercial entity could build a new city hall or public safety building in return for getting to use that property he said.

As for a new city hall, Maiorana believes that it's probably cheaper to fix up the current building. But that has to be investigated. He doesn't believe the current city hall is centrally located within the Farms, but Mack and Moross doesn't seem to him to be an improvement, location wise.

The kind of commercial building being proposed at 130 Kercheval, said Maiorana seems more appropriately located at Mack and Moross than on the Hill.

"From what I've heard about the 130 Kercheval building, it doesn't seem to fit on the Hill," said Maiorana. "As part of my business, I travel a lot to places like Silicon Valley. Talk about traffic, you don't know about traffic problems until you've been there. I think it's dangerous to overdevelop. I'm not saying we're there yet when it comes to the Hill, but we're getting close. I think we have a good mix of businesses there right now. I'd have to look pretty hard before making any major changes."

While Maiorana wants to cut taxes, he's not opposed to major projects if the public support is there. But before he makes a decision, he wants to see all the facts. He believes that it's a good idea to use the talents of local residents. The Farms has a wealth of experts in a variety of subjects that the council can tap.

At some point, Maiorana would like to see the Farms update its technological base. He runs his law office and said that the payoff can be huge. He'd also like to see the Farms get some sort web page, and perhaps councilmembers could post their views on topics and use it to communicate with the public.

"I recently used e-mail to get a paper copy of my car registration from the secretary of state's office," said Maiorana. "That's really convenient. That's good government."

Richard C. Russell

Richard C. Russell

wife, Nancy McDonald, have four children, John, 18; Mark, 16; Brian, 15; and Lauren, 13. Russell is a developer and has built many homes in Grosse Pointe Farms over the years. He is currently developing two lots on the Hill where the old Optical Library used to be located.

"I've had a lot of experience working in the Farms," said Russell. "I've worked with the council and the administration. I just think I've seen some deficiencies in the upper level of government. I think I bring practical experience to the table."

"A majority of the council's time is spent on zoning issues and the granting of variances. I see the council losing focus as a policy board and it is migrating toward micromanaging more and more. This hampers the administration. The council should set policy and the city manager should carry out the policies set forth by the council."

Russell feels strongly that the zoning definitions are deficient and are conflicting as well as having a number of loopholes. He wants to whole of the Farms zoning ordinances to be reviewed by the council, with members receiving sound advice from zoning experts. Russell also acknowledges that as someone who does business in the Farms, he has to be careful to avoid conflicts of interest.

"If there is a conflict, say something is coming before the council in which I have a financial interest, I will be the first to say that I have to recuse myself," said Russell. "But other than that, I don't see why I should worry. There are many issues in which I have no financial or business interests. The downside to recusing myself is that it's the same as a no vote on a zoning question. The law requires a two-thirds majority of the council to approve variances. That's five out of seven councilmembers, period."

Russell added that over the years, as zoning laws have changed, more and more houses built under old laws have become non-complying with the new zoning rules. That's why it's important for the city to consider variance requests on an individual basis.

"There has to be some sort of relief," Russell said, "that allows the administration to act without having to go to the council for a variance all the time. The problem with our zoning ordinances is that the council has reacted to specific conditions and applied a general fix. I don't see this as leadership. But we must decide what we'll be in the future, and craft our ordinances to get that result."

As for Mack and Moross, Russell believes that any property that needs development needs an anchor. He thinks a city hall might be that anchor.

"That property was bought and rezoned for a reason," Russell said. "But finding something to put there has taken too long. I think the new anchor should be city hall. But a city hall won't take up the entire seven acres."

"I think the land should be divided into 'pads' like any property. If the library wants to expand or the Neighborhood Club wants to build a facility, we can sell them a pad to develop. We can take the current city hall property and develop that so it fits in with the neighborhood. The court house doesn't belong in a residential area, it belongs in a commercial area like Mack and Moross."

Russell doesn't think senior housing fits well with the intersection. It's busy and the potential for crime is there.

As for the Hill, Russell believes it's become a haven for offices for a reason. About 20 years ago, the City passed an ordinance demanding first floor retail in the Village. This resulted in office users going to the Hill, helping revive the business district, he said. He's in favor of retail, but also sees offices as a good use for the properties. He sees the question of the Hill as a property rights issue.

"As for parking on the Hill, it's full," Russell said. "Before anything is done, we have to address the parking question. This is a complicated issue and it needs careful attention."

Russell also volunteered that the Farms ought to get a leaf vacuum. While he appreciates the fact that trash pickup takes place in residents' garages, he feels that residents want and deserve to have a leaf vacuum pick up leaves from the curb during the fall.

"I really want that," Russell said. "Bagging leaves, forget that. I really support this idea."

Louis Theros

Louis Theros

Candidate Louis Theros, 37, has lived in the Pointes for over 30 years. He and his wife Patti are the parents of two boys, Jonathan and Evan. He works as an attorney for the firm of Dickinson, Wright.

"My wife and I picked the Farms to live in," Theros said. "I know that during the next four to eight years, big decisions that will affect the long-term future of the city have to be made. I want to be a part of that decision making process."

While preparing his campaign, Theros has talked with many residents and said that they hold a host of opinions concerning the Mack and Moross property and he believes that a decision as to what will go on the property won't be easy.

"I spent the Fourth of July reading all the papers the Farms has on Mack and Moross," said Theros. "It seems there are as many opinions on what to do with the land as there are residents in the Farms. I also learned that the other Pointes have given opinions as what we should do with the land. It's a large issue that's been analyzed for 11 years."

"One of the things the next council will have to do is bring things to a head. I'm not a believer in paralysis by analysis. The council must make decisions. Public hearings must be held so that the various interests can be heard. Then a final decision must be made."

Theros said he's not adverse to some sort of public referendum, but he wants to avoid the Farms becoming like Detroit, where issues like casino gambling get voted on four times before a final decision is made to the contrary.

When he first decided to run, Theros thought some sort of city hall building at the corner might be a good idea. But after having read all that has been written about the property, he found out a city hall will be more costly than expected.

"I have to say that I don't know yet what should go there," Theros said. "Whatever is built will be built with taxpayer dollars. Only commercial developments would pay us, and that land has been rezoned away from commercial development."

Theros has also learned that the property was bought, in part, with money from tax-exempt municipal bonds. That means that whatever goes there can't be solely a commercial enterprise.

As for the Hill, Theros said he's been reading the Robert Gibbs report that was commissioned by the council two years ago. So far, he recognizes four groups with interests on the Hill. They are the landlords that own the property, the tenants that rent the property and run the businesses, the residential neighbors who live by the Hill and Farms residents at large, whose property values are affected by the health of the Hill.

"The neighbors are concerned about what happens to their property if the Hill expands," Theros said. "Farms residents want to make sure their property values increase. Landlords want higher rents and retail tenants want more retail. People like the small-town atmosphere. They like going to the Hill to pick something up. But we're not going to change consumer spending habits."

There is a balance the Hill needs to strike. I think restaurants and such enhance the community. I think the Hill needs to be mixed-use between retail and office business. But what's the answer? I don't know. We are dealing with property rights issues and free enterprise issues."

Theros went on to say that the professional businesses, such as law offices and brokerage firms, wouldn't be here if they weren't patronized. He believes the council will have to make a decision about the future of the Hill in the next few years.

"My education began when I picked up the petitions to run for council," Theros said. "I believe in character of neighborhood issues. I want to see copies of all the zoning ordinances. I'm sure there are a lot of things that need fine-tuning. I believe in protecting neighborhoods. I have nothing against big homes, but we have to preserve a neighborhood's character."

Theros said that he also wants to purchase a leaf vacuum. He was surprised to learn, when he moved to the Farms, that unlike the other Pointes, the Farms doesn't vacuum up the leaves.

"I've been thinking about this for a while," Theros said. "I don't see this as expensive. I've heard about problems with storing such a truck during the months it's not in use, but I have to believe there are ways around it."

An attorney, Theros said he reads papers all day. It's his job to be diligent and make sure that all the bases are covered. He wants to bring that training and dedication to the Grosse Pointe Farms council.

"I think it's healthy to have 10 candidates running for a seat on the council," Theros said. "I encourage people to seek office. This is what I enjoy doing, getting out and talking with people. Whoever wins will have to spend time with his or her fellow councilmembers. They are the ones with the institutional memory and knowledge. That you can't learn just by reading."

QUIL in Shores

It was a quiet week for Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officers. They only had one drunk driving arrest.

The incident took place at 2:37 a.m. on Saturday, July 21. A Shores patrol officer spotted a 1999 Dodge Intrepid crossing the center line on Lakeshore while heading toward St. Clair Shores.

When he pulled the vehicle over, he asked the driver if he had anything to drink.

The driver, a 33-year-old St. Clair Shores man, said, "I've had three beers." When the officer asked the man to recite the alphabet, he failed to do so — three times.

The driver blew a .175 on his preliminary breath test (PBT). He is free on $100 bond.

Dog nab it

A resident of the first block of Deeplands in Grosse Pointe Shores reported on Friday, July 20, that a 70-pound statue of a Dalmatian was stolen from his property.

He also told police that he found the dog smashed to pieces in the area of Ballantyne and Cook Road.

Didn't pay

Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officers were called to a store in the 18800 block of Mack at 1:40 p.m. on Sunday, July 22. The manager witnessed a 43-year-old Algonac woman attempting to leave the store with merchandise she didn't pay for. He confronted her and held her for police.

A search of the bag turned up about $100 worth of expensive groceries. A search of the suspect turned up a pipe often used in the consumption of crack cocaine.

A search of the suspect's past revealed two previous convictions for shoplifting. She was cited for retail fraud and illegal possession of drug paraphernalia.

Armed robbery

Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officers received a report of an armed robbery in the area of Mack and Manor at 2:09 p.m. on Wednesday, July 18.

According to police, a 50-year-old Northville woman was in the alley behind the offices of a local attorney when a bright red late model Ford pulled up beside her.

The vehicle had two men, one of whom produced a small caliber handgun. The man told the woman, "I mean business. I have a gun; tell me what you have."

The woman asked to keep her driver's license. The gun-wielding suspect told her they were just going to dump it anyway. He then grabbed her purse, which contained her wallet, keys, credit cards and other forms of personal identification. He also demanded her wedding rings. The suspects fled east onto Mack.

QUIL in City

A City of Grosse Pointe public safety officer spotted a 2000 Dodge Intrepid traveling west on Mack at a speed of 40 mph at 2:13 a.m. on Thursday, July 19.

Unfortunately for the driver, a 25-year-old St. Clair Shores woman, the speed limit on that portion of Mack is 30 mph.

When the officer pulled the car over, he noticed that the driver had bloodshot eyes and her speech was slurred.

He asked her if she had anything to drink. She replied, "about 2 1/2 glasses of wine."

When asked, as part of a field sobriety test, to count down from 89-61, she got as far as 69 before stopping. She blew a .192 on her PBT. She is free on $100 bond.

Child rescued in City park

An ambulance was called to Neff Park in the City of Grosse Pointe at 6:37 p.m. on Sunday, July 22. A 7-year-old Detroit girl had been spotted by lifeguard Sean Danaher face down in the City pool.

He immediately pulled her from the pool and noted that while she was breathing her breaths were labored.

At this point a passerby called 9-1-1. Mary Gushee, a nurse happened to be in the park at the time, and came over to lend her medical expertise.

The victim had stopped breathing, so Danaher and Gushee began to administer CPR. By the time the ambulance arrived at the scene, the girl was breathing on her own. She was taken to

Left flat

A woman's silver 1999 Mustang let her down the morning of May 24 after having been parked in the street overnight on the 19200 block of Rockcastle. She found two of her tires had deflated, and upon taking them to be repaired, the staff told her they had been intentionally punctured by a blade-like object.

they have two children, Theresa, 17, and Samuel, 15. They both attend South High School. He works as a territory account manager for Oki Data-America Inc. He specializes in computer printers.

"I am running because I serve as a member of the emergency support unit," Titterington said. "I believe I could further enhance my service to the community by being elected to the council."

"I've lived in the Pointes all my life. My mother's maiden name is Brys. My grandmother's maiden name is Vernier. Mom still lives at her house on Brys Drive which her father built. I think I have a unique insight into how things operate. I know what manpower we need for the annual fireworks show. I know what we did when the storm hit a few years ago."

Titterington said he'd like to enhance what the city's been doing. The council is going to have a great turnover and he believes now is the time to join.

"I want the best public safety department possible," Titterington said. "I can bring my experiences to the table. The nice thing about the Pointes is that we emphasize police and fire, not police or fire service. I want us to have the latest equipment and the best trained staff possible."

"I support the idea of public safety at Mack and Moross. But it has to make sense dollar wise. We have time to investigate this. I also think the property will have multiple uses. Perhaps some senior housing. If we moved city hall, the Kerby property would be available for development. I also think just moving public safety to Mack would be a doable idea."

Titterington said that he's served on the board of directors for Red Baron Football and that he's on the board of the South Booster Club. The idea that recreation fields or facilities could be built at the corner of Mack and Moross is not a bad one, he said.

He also feels that with the Kroger lease having the potential to extend to 2007, he could serve a four-year term on the council and still not to have to make a decision about the property.

"I don't think the council has communicated well with the public about this property," said Titterington. "But I do think they've moved prudently. That having been said, should residents have a say in what goes there? Maybe the public should vote, but I'd still be one vote on the council. Government has to work by consensus. That's not always the case, but that's what I'd like to see."

As for the Hill, he believes that the council can't legislate a retail future. He believes in encouraging retail, but it's vital that the question of parking be resolved before any major project is undertaken.

"If someone wanted to come to the Hill and needed help with signage, that's something I'd consider," Titterington said. "But the main issue is who pays for parking."

Students at Pierce are 'Looking Good'

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

Before the end of the school year, a handful of students at Pierce Middle School were styling and profiling at a first-ever fashion show.

The premise behind the show wasn't just about looking good, it was about feeling good, too.

The 10-boy, four-girl group that put on the fashion show were part of a group called Looking Good, a self-esteem support group established by school social worker Pam Rocheleau and school psychologist Dona Johnson-Beach.

Once a week for eight weeks, Rocheleau and Johnson-Beach met with the students and led a variety of activities to get the students more accepting of themselves and others. Activities involved things as simple as drawing pictures and blowing bubbles to gathering into teams to make the opposing teams laugh.

The fashion show, Rocheleau felt, would be a powerful and safe self-esteem builder.

"They were thrilled," said Rocheleau. "They went to pick out their own clothes at Marshall's and Hot Topic. They picked the music for the show. It was about doing things their way. It helps with self-esteem when they get to make their own decisions."

The show was a hit with the parents and staff who attended.

With more mental health staffing being added to Pierce and other schools in the district next school year,

Students in the Looking Good group at Pierce Middle School show off clothing they selected for a recent fashion show. "They were thrilled," said school social worker Pam Rocheleau. "They picked the music for the show. It was about doing things their way. It helps with self-esteem when they get to make their own decisions."

Rocheleau said that Looking Good, and other programs like it, would be added.

"Without a doubt," said Rocheleau. "I'm developing programs as I speak."

Three compete for G.P. Park municipal judge

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

On Aug. 7, a primary election for municipal judge in Grosse Pointe Park will decide which of the following three candidates will face off in the November general election.

The Park municipal judge serves a four-year term at $15,000 per year.

Frederick B. Bellamy

Frederick B. Bellamy brings more than 35 years experience as a trial lawyer and legal administrator to his pledge to devote as much time as it takes to the Grosse Pointe Park municipal court.

"Having made the commitment to do it, I'll do it," said Bellamy.

His legal practice has taken him to each of the Grosse Pointe municipal courts, virtually every county in Michigan, federal court and the U.S. Supreme Court.

"I know how a court should operate," he said.

He believes in an active rather than passive municipal court.

"The court has a lot of opportunity to affect community well-being," he said.

Bellamy said a court shouldn't levy fines to produce revenue, nor "ride roughshod over citizens."

He doesn't believe in issuing a maximum fine for the sake of it, yet would employ the court to make absentee landlords maintain property according to community standards.

"Owners who are not present in the area are encouraged to do the right thing," he said.

He's impressed with housing improvements in Park neighborhoods along the Detroit border, and wants the trend to continue.

"Those homes look so much nicer than they did 10 years ago," said Bellamy.

If elected municipal judge, Bellamy said he would try to make the Park's commercial districts more attractive to shoppers.

"The court can address parking on Kercheval and, to some extent, Jefferson," he said. "I've been told merchants in the Village don't have the same problem with parking enforcement. The court can influence the city council to reduce fines for parking enforcement."

Yet Bellamy won't abide traffic scofflaws: "If they are legitimate violations, they should be enforced. The court has a lot of discretion."

Bellamy is senior partner with the law firm of Vander Male, Bellamy, Gilchrist in Detroit. His legal background includes civil law, general litigation and handling plaintiffs and defendants in personal injury cases. His firm also represents health care providers in matters dealing with, but not limited to, Medicare and Medicaid.

Bellamy has lived in the Park for 30 years and wants to give something back to the community.

He supports the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation and 100 Club of Detroit, which assists the widows of police officers slain in the line of duty. He belongs to the Detroit Institute of Arts Founders Society and supports the Wayne State University School of Law through its free legal aid clinic. He is also a competitive sailor and member of Bayview Yacht Club.

If elected, he said he will make himself readily available to help police with warrants. "Police deserve nothing less," he said. He will hold court more frequently and show dignity and respect to parties involved with court matters, he said. "The court needs to be more responsive than it has been," he said. "It is the judge who sets the tone."

Under his judgeship, Bellamy added, the court will adopt a helpful attitude toward the public and not treat people like they're bothering the administration's daily routine.

He said he will listen to residents and take complaints about code and ordinance violations seriously.

For instance, recreational vehicles are not to be stored in front of homes.

"It's an appearance that falls below neighborhood standards," he explained.

Standardized fines will not be used to fatten city coffers, he said, nor will maximum fines be issued as a matter of habit.

"I've perceived that court operations are a revenue source for the city," he said. "Many traffic fines are out of line. If the maximum fine is $500, that is not necessarily appropriate."

Bellamy said, "The thing I want to say to voters is, I will devote the time that the court needs to do the job thoroughly and thoughtfully."

Bellamy, 63, is married with two children.

Carl Jarboe

Grosse Pointe Park's incumbent municipal judge has a different take on customer relations.

Concerning people convicted in his courtroom, Carl Jarboe said, "I'm not looking for repeat customers. I don't want to see you again."

Jarboe, who has been the Park's municipal judge for seven years, wants people who are found guilty in his courtroom to learn their lesson. He said the goal of sentencing is to discourage repeat offenders.

"I'm not trying to ruin their lives or punish them," he said. "I'm trying to make sure the conduct, either by them or someone hearing what happened to them (in court), won't repeat."

He's known for handing out stiff fines.

"I make no bones about it," said Jarboe. "I don't want to see those people again who run a red light, commit assault and battery, braking and entering, steal a bike or break into cars. Does the court make money on fines? Yes. Are fines designed to get money for the city? Absolutely not. Are the fines designed to say we don't want to see you again? Yes."

Jarboe makes use of standardized fines, including $150 for running a red light.

Frederick B. Bellamy

Carl Jarboe

Dean Valente

"That's to make sure you don't do it again," he explained. Jarboe said Michigan has the nation's third highest per-capita fatality rate from people running red lights.

"The Detroit rate is twice the Michigan rate," he said. "There are a lot of factors contributing to a lot of things, but I'm pleased to say that in 1999 Grosse Pointe Park had the lowest rate of injury traffic accidents in our 60-year recorded history. The following year, that dropped another 32 percent. I like to think that has a large part to do with the policy we've taken against unlicensed drivers and people running red lights."

Jarboe said he wants voters to know of him as a judge who is fair, efficient and does the best job he can. Uniform fines are a way of treating everyone equally.

"It's like being an umpire," he said. "You don't want somebody calling a ball or strike because they know you. You just want the game called fair. That's how I approach the court. I call a fair case. It's best that everybody gets a fair shake when they come to court."

Jarboe said he has made court operations more efficient.

fic backups due to construction. Around 6:40 p.m. the driver's 2001 Audi collided with a piece of concrete debris that had fallen from the Allard Avenue bridge under construction. The driver's side air bag deployed. The car came to rest on the shoulder where most of the oil from the engine spilled onto the concrete. The man was unharmed, but the vehicle was towed away with approximately $4,000 of damage.

Car blaze

Two officers were not enough to douse the blaze of a green 1998 Neon that crashed into a home at 19200 block of Kelly the night of Thursday, July 19. Two female witnesses called an officer to the scene after hearing a crash and coming out to find two males running south on Kelly toward Moross after exiting the vehicle, which had come to a stop against the house.

The officer on the scene called in backup when the car burst into flames, and had to dispatch the Harper Woods Fire Department to finally extinguish the car.

Officers entered the home after there was no reply at the door to make sure that the smoke that had entered the house through a broken back window had not ignited a fire inside the home. Upon further investigation of the area, the out of control vehicle also damaged a black 1999 Neon parked in the street, but no one was harmed.

Attempted Theft

Two men scared off a pair of would-be thieves from the garage of a home on the 20200 block of Elkhart around 11 p.m., on Thursday, July 19. The two men, both between 6-foot-1 and 6-foot-2, escaped into a black Chevy Lumina with red striping driven by a third man. The car had no plates and disappeared from sight after crossing south of Moross. There was no report of items missing from the unlocked but closed garage.

A Harper Woods store on Kelly doesn't seem to believe the old saying about possession being 9/10 of the law.

Woods Sunday ice skating expanded

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

A family event that is growing in popularity in Grosse Pointe Woods has been renewed for a third year.

The Sunday night ice skating program at McCann Ice Arena on Cook Road will resume Sept. 9. Skating will be scheduled on Sundays from 5 to 7 p.m. through March 31.

The upcoming program has been expanded to 30 hours of ice time, up about 10 percent from last year.

"Attendance is outstanding. We average 160 skaters each Sunday," said councilman Eric Steiner, who proposed the program three years ago.

Early concerns about scheduling ice time during the dinner hour have been resolved.

"A lot of families juggle their dinners around it," said Steiner. "It's a great family get-together, like the old Sunday night movies. But now we have Sunday night skating at University Liggett School."

Woods officials will rent the arena from University Liggett School for $195 per hour, the same as last year. This year's skating budget is $11,700, up nearly $2,000 from the year before.

but one of their customers must. The morning of Friday, July 20, the store reported to Harper Woods police that a man had failed to return 10 tools that he rented from the store. The value of the missing equipment was estimated at a total value of $2,989.70.

— Jason Sweeney

Puppy unstuck

On Friday, July 20, at 5:50 a.m., three Grosse Pointe Woods policemen aided a small puppy that had gotten into trouble.

A woman living in the 700 block of Anita said her dog had gotten stuck under her bedroom dresser. Two officers lifted the heavy piece of furniture while a third grabbed the pet.

Scary Snoopy

Awakened by his child, a man living in the 1100 block of Anita called police last week about a suspicious sound coming from the basement.

On Wednesday, July 18, at 4:47 a.m., two officers checked the house.

An officer descended into the basement, he said, "only to find a Snoopy toy to be turned on somehow and making the noise."

Break-ins and tracking dogs

Grosse Pointe park police called in the Eastpointe tracking dog to help find someone who tried but failed to break into a home in the 1000 block of Audubon.

The crime was reported Monday, July 16, at 2:40 a.m. The dog was unable to locate the unknown suspect, who apparently removed a window screen but failed to enter the home.

In the early afternoon of Friday, July 20, someone broke into a home in the 1400 block of Balfour, stole cash, a laptop computer and jewelry.

A police dog from St. Clair Shores tracked the suspected perpetrator to the 1400 block of Somerset before losing the scent.

Car thefts

Two cars were stolen last week in Grosse Pointe Park.

Sometime during the night of July 15-16, a black 1999 Jeep Cherokee was taken from the street in the 1300 block of Nottingham.

During the night of Thursday, July 19, a 1996 Ford wrecker was taken from a business in the 15000 block of Jefferson. The keys had been left in the vehicle.

Water ban

Numerous warnings were issued last week regarding water use in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Public safety officers cruising the community advised residents not to water lawns in violation of the Wayne County water ban.

The ban lets property owners water lawns every other day according to whether their street numbers are odd or even.

Habitual offender

A habitual offender was arrested last week for stealing two bicycles in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The 30-year-old man gave police two home addresses, in Detroit and Roseville, upon being spotted in the 1900 block of Broadstone on Monday, July 16, at 1:37 a.m. He was riding a boys mountain bike and carrying another. The arresting officer said the man appeared intoxicated.

"I recognized him as a pedestrian I had seen at about 12:30 a.m. on Bournemouth in Harper Woods," said the officer. "He was unsteady afoot at the time."

The man was wanted on an outstanding warrant and, police said, "has a lengthy criminal history."

Three bicycle larcenies took place during the night of Thursday, July 19, in the same neighborhood of Grosse Pointe Park.

A boys G.T. mountain bike was taken from an unlocked garage in the 800 block of Lakepointe. In the 900 block of Pemberton, someone took a Kona green mountain bike.

Also, a 26-inch Roadmaster bike was reported missing from the front porch of a home in the 800 block of Barrington.

In addition, on Tuesday, July 17, a girl's green mountain bike was taken from the rear yard of a house in the 1000 block of Wayburn.

The night before, July 16, a 26-inch boys mountain bike was stolen from the rear yard of a house in the 800 block of Beaconsfield.

Rugs ripped off

On the afternoon or early morning of July 15-16, someone stole two floral rugs from the rear balcony of a house in the 1500 block of Hampton in Grosse Pointe Park.

Beer run

Two 17-year-old male youths from Grosse Pointe Woods have been issued citations for violating alcohol laws.

On Saturday, July 21, shortly after 9 p.m., the pair plus a 16-year-old male, also from the Woods, were found driving a black 1993 Ford Thunderbird on northbound Mack. The car's license tab was obstructed.

A patrolman stopped the car and found an open can of beer, plus many others in a case. The 17-year-olds admitted responsibility, but because they showed no signs of alcohol consumption, got by with a ticket. The third youth wasn't cited.

Wheel covers

At noon on Thursday, July 16, a resident of the 600 block of North Rosedale in Grosse Pointe Woods told police someone had taken the wheel covers off his Cadillac. The car had been parked overnight in his driveway.

Rooftop trio

Three boys aged 13-14 years old have been told to stay off the roof of Ferry Elementary School.

On the evening of Tuesday, July 17, the trio were on the roof collecting tennis balls when police were called to the scene.

"I advised the three of their wrongdoing," said the officer. "All stated they would never do it again."

They were sent on their way.

Traffic arrest

On Tuesday, July 17, at about 12:30 p.m., a 28-year-old Detroit woman driving west on Vernier sped by a stationary Grosse Pointe Woods traffic officer at 52 mph.

The woman had two driving suspensions, was arrested and given a court date.

MORATORIUM ON BUILDING STRUCTURES UTILIZING EXISTING SETBACK REQUIREMENTS IN ZONING ORDINANCE

WHEREAS, the Village Council is desirous of reviewing the current ordinance provisions pertaining to front yard setback requirements; and

WHEREAS, the Planning Commission and the Council need time to study the matter while at the same time avoiding any construction which may create problems or inequities with respect to maintaining existing defacto setbacks; and

WHEREAS, the existing zoning ordinance contains provisions pertaining to front yard setbacks that may not now be in the best interest of residential development in order to maintain the character of the neighborhoods in the community; and

WHEREAS, the Council believes there is both a possibility and a likelihood that attempts may be made to build structures in compliance with the existing front yard setback requirements which may in turn create and cause inequities and disruptions in the character of the neighborhoods, while this matter is under consideration;

NOW THEREFORE, IT IS RESOLVED by the Village Council as follows:

1. There is hereby declared a moratorium on the following activities within the Village of Grosse Pointe Shores:

- a. The receiving or processing by the Village of any building permits which comply only with the minimal setback requirements as currently set forth in the ordinance while at the same time creating a situation where the proposed structure would actually be located closer to the street than adjacent structures, disrupting the established line of setbacks for existing structures and causing disharmony in the character of the neighborhood.
- b. This moratorium is effective at 10:00 p.m. on July 17, 2001, and shall terminate at the conclusion of the regular September Council meeting unless terminated or extended by the Village Council prior to that time.
- c. This moratorium shall not affect any pending building permits which have been properly issued by the Village prior to July 17, 2001.

Issued effective as of 10:00 p.m. July 17, 2001 by vote of the Village Council.

A Gathering of Fighters

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

A string of P-51 Mustangs fly through the sky, playing the ultimate game of crack the whip. It's called a tail chase, something Chuck Greenhill and his fighter pilot cohorts like to do between air shows.

"The leader will set up a pattern and we'll fly in trail about 500 yards behind each other," said Greenhill, 67, of Illinois. "Whatever he does, we do. It's the neatest thing in the world."

Full-throttle climbs turn into barrel rolls and nose dives as the fighter planes slip through the air.

"It's a lot of fun, particularly if you're fifth in line and see four Mustangs in front of you doing the same technique," said Greenhill.

Greenhill and his World War II P-51 Mustang will be in Michigan Aug. 4-5 for the Gathering of Fighters. The air show is sponsored by the Yankee Air Museum at Willow Run Airport in Ypsilanti.

On Saturday evening, Aug. 4, a symposium will take place featuring pilots from the 56th fighter group, the highest scoring United States fighter group of all time.

Speakers include Col. Francis "Gabby" Gabreski, America's highest scoring surviving ace with 28 victories in WWII and 6 1/2 in Korea.

Some of the best military aircraft from aviation's golden age will dominate the skies over Willow Run as thoroughbred Mustangs, burly P-47 Thunderbolts and a shark-mouthed P-40 Warhawk share airspace with Navy counterparts F4U-5 Corsair and F8F Bearcat. The world's only flying SB2C Helldiver will be on display.

The air show will trace the evolution of fighter aircraft from the Fokker DR-1 triplane of Red Barron fame, to a Soviet MiG 17 to a supersonic F-16 Falcon.

There will also be two B-17 Flying Fortresses and British Spitfire. A rare C-121 Constellation is also scheduled to land, plus a P-3 Orion similar to the type of surveillance aircraft whose crew was interred in China a few months ago.

Greenhill was too young to serve in WWII. The flying bug caught him in the 1970s. His airplane, Lou IV, is named and painted in the colorful likeness of a P-51 flown during WWII by Col. Thomas Christian of the Army Air Corps. The airplane's fuselage, wings and tail are blue and silver. The nose is bright yellow.

"During the war, they used whatever paint they had," Greenhill explained. He loves his airplane.

"Mustangs are the all-American baby doll. There's nothing like them," he said. P-51s were designed under wartime conditions to outperform anything in the sky.

"It has a quick roll rate and is totally agile," said Greenhill. "Move the stick and the airplane is going wherever you put it."

The P-51 prefers to be put through its paces.

"Flying it straight and level is like trying to stand on a ball. It wants to move around a bit," said Greenhill. "But it's manageable. You can't say enough about how it flies. It makes anybody look good."

Lou IV will join other fighter aircraft at the Gathering of Fighters Aug. 4-5 at the Yankee Air Museum at Willow Run Airport.

"As you go faster, the controls become stiff. You have a hard time getting it to turn above 400 or 450 mph," said Greenhill.

Airplane buffs argue over which fighter was the best of WWII.

Greenhill said, "The Mustang was not the best of anything. It wasn't the fastest fighter of World War II. It didn't have the longest range. It couldn't reach the highest altitude. It wasn't the most agile. But it was the best combination of everything. It gave you all of those features in one airplane."

There's one category, he said, where debate is futile. The Mustang is the best-looking fighter of all time.

"Absolutely," said Greenhill.

The Yankee Air Museum at Willow Run Airport presents the Gathering of Fighters Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4-5, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is $10 for adults 17 and older, $5 for children and $5 for Yankee Air Force members.

The WWII fighter symposium, Aces of the 56th Fighter Group, is Aug. 4. Doors open at 5 p.m. Dinner is at 5:30 p.m. The presentation begins at 7:30 p.m. Tickets cost $50 in advance and $60 at the door. Last year, the symposium sold out. Call (734) 483-4030, extension 202.

Louis C. Bruno, Sr.

Louis C. Bruno, Sr.

Louis C. "Louie" Bruno, Sr., a resident of Grosse Pointe Farms, died at St. John Hospital and Medical Center on Saturday, July 21, 2001, succumbing to complications from cancer. He was 80.

Mr. Bruno graduated from Southeastern High School in Detroit. He served with the U.S. Navy in the Pacific during World War II. Following his honorable discharge, he returned to Detroit. After a short stint as an electrician and a member of Electrical Workers Local 58, he decided to become a retailer and opened Bruno's. Bruno's was one of the pioneer discount appliance retailers in the Detroit area, with stores on East Warren and Harper. Unlike its contemporaries, Bruno's remained family run, and continues to operate with two stores. The company remains in family control, operated by two of his six children, Steven Bruno and Judi Idris.

Mr. Bruno was a fixture in local business, civic affairs and politics. A rare individual whose winning personality and ease among all generations made him welcome in all circles. He was a long-time supporter of organizations such as the Fraternal Order of Police, the Grosse Pointe Lions Club, the Grosse Pointe Crisis Club and St. John's Men's Guild. He was not an active campaigner for any political party, but a generous supporter of local candidates. His personal life was centered around his family, boating and helping others.

Boating on Lake St. Clair remained a passion throughout his life. He even sponsored an entry in a Gold Cup race, Miss Bruno's Appliance.

His family called him an "ubiquitous fixture in the shoreline community and will be sorely missed after 80 colorful years."

There are numerous stories of the help provided to extended family members, employees and others. Mr. Bruno was always there with a helping hand. He was a tireless worker and promoter. He was an owner in many businesses, including retail stores, bowling alleys and restaurants.

Mr. Bruno is survived by his wife Joyce; two daughters, Judi Idris and Doris Babcock; Four sons, James, Steven, Louis Jr. and David; a brother, Joe; and 13 grandchildren.

A prayer service for Mr. Bruno was held on Wednesday, July 25 at Verheyden Funeral Home. Interment is at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, in Detroit. Memorial gifts may be sent to the St. John Hospital Van Elslander Cancer Center.

No midsummer rally yet — earnings disappointing

The stock market continued churning last week — up one day, down the next. Summer is half gone and the traditional summer rally is long overdue.

First-half 2001 earnings announcements continue. According to Thompson Financial/First Call, second-quarter earnings for the S&P 500 will be down 17 percent from year-ago levels.

For last week, the DJI crept up only 34 points, or 0.4 percent, to close at 10,576. The NASDAQ Composite did the opposite, it slid 55 points, or 2.6 percent, ending at 2,029.

Last week's NYSE volume was about 6 billion shares, mostly institutional trades, which is above year-ago levels of 4.7 billion shares traded weekly.

Are stocks too high? Or too low? Or just about right? Barron's (July 23) calculates weekly statistics for the DJI. For the 30 Dow stocks, their average P/E last Friday was 25 times, and their average yield was 1.7 percent.

Last weekend, LTS conducted an in-depth study of the DJI and found the 30 stocks had 67 billion shares outstanding, as of March 31, 2001. Using last Friday's closing prices, these shares had a cumulative market value of $3.3 trillion.

Five Dow stocks now have a market capitalization

(price times shares outstanding) over $200 billion: 1) General Electric, (GE, about $463 billion); 2) Microsoft (MSFT, about $372 billion); 3) Citigroup, (C, about $254 billion); 4) Wal-mart (WMT, about $243 billion) and 5) Intel (INTC, about $201 billion).

Eight Dow stocks now trade with a 35 or higher P/E (price divided by earnings per share): 1) Microsoft (MSFT, about 50 times); 2) Home Depot (HD, about 45 times); 3) Intel (INTC, about 38 times); and Wal-mart (WMT, about 38 times).

Continuing: 5) Coca-Cola (KO, about 35 times); 6) General Electric (GE, about 34 times); 7) General Motors (GM, about 33 times); and 8) Johnson & Johnson (JNJ, about 31 times).

Dividend yields (dividend per share divided by price) are nothing to write home about, averaging 1.7 percent for the 30 stocks. Only five Dow stocks pay cash dividends over 3 percent.

The highest DJI yields are 1) Philip Morris (MO, about 4.6 percent); (2) Eastman Kodak (EK, about 3.9 percent); and three others all yielding 3.1 percent: 3) du Pont (DD); 4) General Motors (GM); and 5) J. P. Morgan (JPM).

Microsoft (MSFT) has never declared a cash dividend to shareholders. Since its founder and largest stockholder, Bill Gates, is the world's wealthiest person, it might be reasonable to assume MSFT will not pay dividends in the foreseeable future.

Let's talk...STOCKS

The S&P "Stock Guide" (June 2001, with May 31 data) presents two additional statistics worth noting: 1) the EPS five-year growth rate, and 2) the 12 trailing months total return.

The EPS five-year growth rate is an annualized percent which smoothes out the good and bad years. This is a key determinant of a "growth stock."

LTS found a correlation between high EPS growth rates and high P/Es, as you would expect, in these six DJI stocks (the first number is the five-year EPS growth rate, and the second figure is the current P/E):

- 1) Microsoft (MSFT) - 35 (EPS growth rate) vs. 50 (current P/E);
- 2) Home Depot (HD) — 23 vs. 45;
- 3) Wal-mart (WMT) — 18 vs. 38;
- 4) General Electric (GE) — 14 vs. 34;
- 5) International Business Machines (IBM) — 13 vs. 23; and 6) Intel (INTC) — 12 vs. 38.

The trailing 12-months total return (cash Dividends per share plus or minus 12-months change in market price) shows, as of May 31, 2001, the shift in investor preference, often called momentum.

The biggest DJI total return loss was Intel (INTC, off 56.6 percent); then AT&T (T, off 37.7 percent); Disney (DIS, off 24 percent); American Express (AXP, off 21.5 percent) and Eastman Kodak (EK, off 17.5 percent).

Of the 30 DJI stocks, what looks cheap? For decades, analysts have agreed a P/E of 12 times was "good"; 15 times was "excellent" and 20 times, indicated a "growth stock."

Today, among the DJI, Philip Morris (MO, about 46) trades with a P/E of 12 times; Boeing (BA, about 51.79) at 15 times; Exxon Mobil (XOM, about 43.36) at 16 times; Eastman Kodak (EK, about 45.51) at 17 times; SBC Communications (SBC, about 42.90) at 18 times; and McDonald's (MCD, about 27.52) at 19 times. The other 24 DJI stocks trade at a P/E of 20 or better. For you, are these stocks a "buy," "hold" or "sell"?

X-Dividend Club forecasts

As is its custom every summer, the X-Dividend Club offers its retired and semi-retired members an opportunity to forecast stock market levels this winter.

The club is 42-odd, and some not-so-odd, members who were brokers, stock-traders, managing partners, investment bankers, et al — members who monthly meet for luncheon, spirits and hearty conversation.

This year's contest, and wagers, are the same as years past. The June luncheon site was the Country Club of Detroit, hosted by John V. ("Jack") Renchard, our member and the club's member, on June 13 last. (P.S., of course the X-Div members paid.)

The contest ballot consisted of five categories to be priced as of Dec. 7, 2001, (Pearl Harbor Day) prior to the X-Div's gala Christmas luncheon on Dec. 12.

Category No. 1 was the DJI close; No. 2 was the yield on the Treasury "Long Bond"; No. 3 was Comerica stock close; No. 4 was General Motors stock close; and No. 5 was Masco stock close.

Twenty-five X-Div members participated, so the wagers will pay each category winner $25, to be split if there are co-winners.

Here's how the forecasts were received:

No. 1, DJI close on Dec. 7: High=12,308; Low=9,500; Average=11,495.

No. 2, Yield on "Long Bond": High=6.23 pct.; Low=5.00 pct.; Average=5.66 pct.

No. 3, Comerica close: High=72.10; Low=54.10; Average=60.92.

No. 4, General Motors: High=68.32; Low=49.00; Average=59.74 (If GM-Hughes stock is spun off to GM shareholders, its Dec. 7 price will be added back on an adjusted basis.)

No. 5, Masco Corp: High=32.00; Low=19.50; Average=26.11.

How would you have voted and wagered?

Hackers, crackers and 'The Blue Nowhere'

By Mike Maurer

After my column about the personal computer (PC) rule of never letting kids touch any computer used for business or home financial purposes, I received a couple of e-mails regarding the subject. They asked about other rules for PC use I may know.

Well, I have a bunch for you relating to travel on the Internet. They apply to businesses, as well as home use.

First, it is wrong to create, transmit, store, download or display any offensive, obscene, indecent or menacing images or data. That's a mouthful! And, like any rule, it's subject to interpretation. In other words, if you apply this rule at a business, you'd better give examples.

Next, it is wrong to create or transmit information designed, or likely to cause, annoyance, inconvenience or anxiety to another person. Why did the terms "e-mail" and "spam" pop into my mind?

I receive some 10 to 15 junk e-mails, called spam, every day. I could live without the annoyance. I've considered changing my e-mail address, but I know "they" will find me.

One nice thing about my Internet service provider (ISP) is they have a filter program designed to eliminate e-mail from any particular source I identify for them. But I only use it for companies that send clumps of useless information.

And, as I've said before, I never reply to any sender's offer to remove my name from their mailing list. That just tells them they are reaching a real live person. They can sell that information to other e-garbage senders.

An obvious corollary is that you shouldn't send mass e-mail yourself unless the recipients have indicated an interest in receiving the information. You can buy mailing lists of millions of e-mail addresses if you want to. But if you do, don't brag about it to me, or in public for that matter; you might get whapped on your nose with this newspaper, or worse.

The next one is a no-brainer. Never send any defamatory information to anyone about any individual or organization. Bottom line? If you wouldn't say it in public, don't say it on the Internet.

Here's a word you should be aware of — copyright. Intellectual law is the fastest growing and most lucrative segment these days. Why? The Internet makes it easy to steal ideas. If you can think it, it's on the Internet. This reminds me of the old college axiom: If you steal an idea from one person, it's plagiarism. If you steal ideas from a bunch of people, it's research.

Next is hacking. This is an Internet term for someone who uses a computer to gain access to other individuals', school's, government's or educational institution's computers.

Contrary to what most people believe, hackers are not destructive. They just want to see if they can do it and perhaps leave a cute message claiming credit. The computer wizards who want to gain access and do destructive things inside a computer network are called "crackers."

I always wonder what fantastic things hackers and crackers could accomplish if they put their minds to it. But I guess the same thing can be said for any master criminal.

Here's a side note. If you're into computers and like murder mysteries, visit the public library and ask for "The Blue Nowhere" by Jeffery Deaver. "The Blue Nowhere" is another name for the Internet, and the book has to do with social engineering personalities on the Internet in order to do dastardly deeds.

Other rules include never corrupting other users' data and not violating the privacy of others.

And then there's the biggie. Never introduce or transmit a computer virus to any computer or network. Most people who create or deliver viruses are caught, no matter how hard they cover their tracks.

A corollary I've mentioned before is to never open any attachment to any e-mail unless you are certain it is legitimate, no matter how appealing.

I think everybody knows this rule, but there are always people whose curiosity overwhelms their common sense. This will not only lead to loss of data on your PC, but the virus can use your e-mail address book to send itself to all of your friends and co-workers. You'll be as popular as a closed garage in our recent heat wave.

My last rule for this column has to do with inappropriate use of a computer network at the office.

Quite a few people have taken to listening to their favorite radio station through their Internet hook-up at work. If one person does it, there's no problem. If a hundred employees do it, it takes space and speed from the office Internet connection.

I know specifically of one company in the process of ordering a new high-powered connection because the one they had was slow due to data traffic. The vendor company selected to install the new line first checked the company's data stream to see what the first line was carrying. They found over 60 percent of the data stream was from incoming radio programs.

A management memo telling employees to bring a radio into the office and stop using the Internet connection solved the problem.

As you can guess, there are more rules for correctly using a computer on the Internet, but not enough space or time for them all. Besides, I have to turn off my computer's connection to a radio station and send this column to the Grosse Pointe News.

National Financial Aid Services has opened on the Hill Grosse Pointe Farms.
The new business provides a free service to see if a person qualifies for financial aid. The firm also provides a free report, "New Techniques to Beat the High Cost of College."
"A lack of understanding of how the financial aid system works can cause hardships for a family of a college-bound student," said Michele Kiafoulis, financial coordinator NFAS, "including having to use savings or retirement money, having to remortgage a home, getting student loans which can leave parents and a student with a huge debt sending a student to a mediocre college or not going at all."
If a person qualifies for financial aid, NFAS offers a report that establishes to what degree the person qualifies and reveals several techniques to receive additional financial aid. The interview and report cost $295.
Of the $54 billion available annually for financial aid through the federal government and other institutions added Kiafoulis, $8 billion is never used.

Grosse Pointe Farms officer-actor-baseball player writes his own ticket

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Whoever gets a ticket from parking enforcement officer Mark Jacob might want to keep it. A citation bearing Jacob's signature could become a Hollywood keepsake.

Jacob, a member of the Grosse Pointe Farms department of public safety, is a movie actor.

He's also a real-life athlete. Jacob, therefore, specializes in sports films. He appeared in the recently released "61*" directed by Billy Crystal. The movie was filmed, in part, at Tiger Stadium.

Jacob's latest work, "Hardball," another baseball movie, has been wrapped. Release should take place this fall.

He also appeared in the 1998 baseball production "Out of Sight."

Jacob's biggest role so far has been as a Mafia hit man in "Divine Circuit." The movie has joined the independent film circuit after playing major theaters last summer.

Jacob's gunman caps the main character in the final scene.

"I put a bullet in his forehead at close range," said

Jacob, whose easy manner on the streets of the Farms contradicts his playing bad guys.

"Divine Circuit's" director has asked Jacob to help promote the movie at the Colorado Film Festival.

In the real world of sports, Jacob will soon try out as a warmup catcher for the Detroit Tigers.

Last year, he missed the cut by one player.

"At least that's what they told me," said Jacob.

Judges

"It's important that we conserve people's time," he said. "Nobody wants to spend their whole day waiting around for their case to be called. In order to reduce waiting time for parties, officers and witnesses, I've scheduled cases throughout the day."

He also set up a schedule for public safety officers to come to court once per month for traffic cases, rather than twice a month.

"Instead of sitting in our courtroom, officers are patrolling the streets," said Jarboe. "We pay officers for their time in court. This (new policy) reduces the city's expenses."

Jarboe is a partner with Abbott Nicholson, a business law firm in Detroit. He's been with the firm since 1983. He's married, has six children and is involved in community activities.

"Everything I'm involved in has something to do with my family," he said. He was president of the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association. "My kids play hockey," he said. He's managed Little League. "My kids play baseball," he said.

"As my family gets into things, I tend to take a service role in those things as well," he explained. "Grosse Pointe Park was built on people volunteering their efforts, treasures and resources. It's a stewardship, and I feel I'm part of building a city in which we can raise our families."

Although the job of municipal judge is part-time, Jarboe said he is available whenever needed.

"I was in court last Christmas Eve," he said. "I've often been in court Saturday and Sunday."

He has a fax machine in his bedroom. If police need a warrant signed at 2 a.m., they call, he said.

Jarboe, 45, is married with six children.

Dean Valente

If elected municipal judge in Grosse Pointe Park, Dean Valente would do all he can to maintain local control over legal proceedings, particularly juvenile matters.

"Cases that arise in Grosse Pointe should, whenever possible, be resolved here," he said.

Valente's not proposing to coddle youthful offenders nor sweep their wrongdoings under the rug. Rather, he wants to assure local offenders they'll be held to tough local standards, with an eye toward putting wayward kids on track.

"I have no problem with giving a youthful offender the opportunity to make amends and not have a permanent record following them for a first mistake," said Valente. "But it's important, in addition to learning a lesson for the mistake, that you get to the root of the problem."

If family issues, drug or alcohol abuse seem to play a role in a convicted party's misbehavior, Valente would hand down a sentence that includes appropriate counseling services.

Valente's proposal regarding juvenile cases comes after the Michigan Legislature last year gave local courts the ability to take over certain juvenile felony matters. Previously, such cases were handled by the Wayne County Juvenile Court in downtown Detroit.

"Downtown, it's easy for a juvenile offender to fall through the cracks," said Valente. He cited a juvenile justice system overwhelmed with youngsters charged with capital crimes, serious assaults and weapons violations. By comparison, the types of offenses local youth typically commit don't measure up.

Yet locally, there are a number of programs to take control of a youthful offender.

"We have good probation programs in the Grosse Pointes," said Valente. "They're much more hands-on. People in our probation departments have the kind of compassion and involvement we should take advantage of."

Broadening the municipal court's involvement would add "a certain degree of bureaucracy," Valente said. "The objective is to help the youth, not make them feel like they're being dragged in 10 different directions."

Valente, an attorney with 17 years experience, is the managing partner of Valente, Scharg & Associates, a general litigation firm on Mack in Detroit. The firm focuses on matters of real estate, small business and criminal law. Valente has lived in the Park his whole life.

"It may sound trite," he said, "but my children are the forth generation of my family to live in Grosse Pointe Park. That's significant. I love Grosse Pointe Park. I want to raise my family here and make sure it's a community I'm proud of."

Among his active memberships in numerous community and professional organizations, Valente was the Grosse Pointe Park Rotary Club's 1999 Rotarian of the Year. He helped raise thousands of dollars for the tot lot at Elworthy Field. Money he helped raise outfitted the Grosse Pointe public safety departments with thermal imaging cameras.

About 10 years ago, Valente worked alongside a previous Park municipal judge to create educational outreach programs. The goal was to help school children understand the legal system and the roles police and the courts play in the community.

"We started mock trials using nursery rhyme characters to teach third-graders about the law in a context they could understand," said Valente. They put the Big Bad Wolf on trial for breaking and entering.

"It was wonderfully successful," said Valente. "One of the things I'm disappointed about is a lot of those outreach programs have gone by the wayside. It's easy for youth to go astray. You have to start them off teaching values. The court can play a role in that. We're not just there to handle traffic tickets."

Valente, 42, is married with three children.

It's not just the

it's new!

By Bonnie Caprara

Staff Writer

Forget everything you remember about the old Detroit Science Center.

Forget about the small, dark exhibit space. Forget about exhibits that were as fun and functional as a Commodore 64 computer. Forget about the demonstrations that didn't reach beyond a typical classroom science lab.

There's a reason why the Detroit Science Center is promoting itself as the New Detroit Science Center. And after a year since it closed its doors for construction and renovation, it's well worth the wait.

When the science center opens its doors to the public this Saturday, it will have over 10 times the exhibit space, brand new interactive displays, more demonstration areas and a five-room Ford Learning Resource Center. The center's IMAX theater has been completely renovated. The Digital Dome Planetarium will open in the fall.

The $30 million redo is very much in the spirit of the late Grosse Pointe philanthropist Dexter M. Ferry III, who opened the first Detroit Science Center in an old auto dealership on John R in the heart of the Cultural Center in 1971 and kicked in $2.5 million for the original current location on John R and Warren. It was his dream to have a center in the heart of the city where children could learn about science by touching and doing, not just by reading and being lectured to.

Ferry's son, Mason Ferry, a member of the Detroit Science Center's board of trustees since 1987 and a Grosse Pointe Woods resident, said, "One of the things we had to do was hook into the educational community. The original focus was on physical science and interactive exhibits. Now all of our exhibits are aligned with the state's recommended science curriculum."

The motion laboratory, exposed floor to ceiling from the new front entrance, is full of 30 interactive exhibits that feature classical mechanics and compare motion, speed and direction. One of the newest hands-on exhibits is a pulley swing that will allow even the smallest child to lift an adult with ease. The lab is wide open and provides balcony viewing for the DaimlerChrysler mainstage below.

A rainforest replica, complete with a waterfall visitors can manipulate with sensors, leads visitors down the stairs into the life science laboratory on the bottom floor. It's no mistake that the rainforest theme is set against the outdoor backdrop of the urban frontline of the Detroit Medical Center.

"There's been an effort to display an urban environment to help people understand the ecology system," Ferry said.

A new molecular motion tornado chamber bridges the life science laboratory into the matter and energy laboratory, complete with 30 exhibits that allow visitors to manipulate electricity, magnetism and wind. The Sparks Theater, caged and grounded for safety, features a Tesla coil which emits 6-foot lightning bolts.

A wide variety of tabletop exhibits will allow visitors to catch a wave — be it sound, light, micro, radio or x-ray waves — in the waves and vibration laboratory.

Even the youngest scientists can learn about science the best way they learn about anything else during the toddler and preschool years, through play, in the Ameritech Children's Gallery. The seven exhibits in the cheery, light-filled room are also designed to enhance social and motor skills.

The old exhibit area will now host temporary traveling exhibits. "Beakman's World on Tour," inspired by the Emmy-award winning television show, is the first scheduled exhibit. It features a variety of displays from plants and animals that lived during the time of dinosaurs to how the human body works.

While the science center is a natural field trip destination on its own merit, the new five-room resource center provides on-site classrooms geared for space, Earth, life, physical and applied science instruction. The center plans to accommodate 100,000 students a year for field trips and science camps.

"Teachers can bring their classes in for one day or for a whole week," Ferry said. "We piloted half-day classes on the scientific method for fourth-graders. It was phenomenally successful."

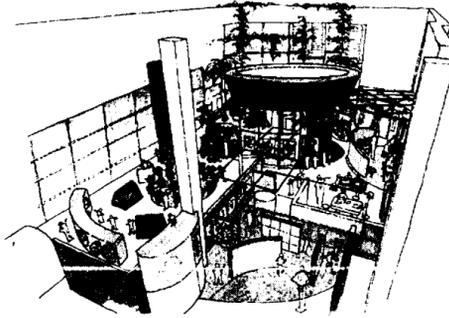

Already, the science center is a success, especially in spite of its funding and construction challenges.

When former Chrysler vice-president Francois Castaing came on as chairman of the Detroit Science Center's board of trustees, he spearheaded a $30 million capital campaign. Through his charisma, contacts and confidence in a new vision for the Detroit Science Center, he won the commitment of $20 million, including a $5 million grant from the state.

"He (Castaing) is an incredible leader and responsible for this is a big way," said Bob Bury, the Science Center's vice-president of development and external affairs and Grosse Pointe Park resident.

"People have respect for his judgment," Bury continued. "He's very connected to the people and what's going on in southeast Michigan and the auto industry. His vision is absolutely right and it's absolutely sincere."

While $30 million may sound like a mind-boggling amount of money, $16 million went into the 67,000-square-foot expansion and renovation of the existing 51,000-square-foot building. The total construction cost breaks down to $115 per square foot, about what would be spent on new home construction, not a high-traffic public facility packed with technology. "One of the things that was important to us was to hire someone local," said John Miller, co-chair of the science center's construction committee. "We interviewed several architects from out of town — Boston, Washington, D.C. — who had experience with building museums. Not too many of them were excited about the challenge of building a facility at under $120 a square foot."

The Ameritech Children's Gallery is filled with seven different learning stations to foster toddler and preschool science, motor and social skills.

Miller and his co-chair, longtime friend and fellow Park resident Paul DeGalan, selected Neumann Smith and Associates as the architects, BEI as the building engineers and Walbridge-Aldinger as the general contractor.

As a team, they not only preserved the integrity of the original tile, glass and corrugated metal building, but built around and below it. Even the interior, with much of the building's infrastructure turned inside-out, exposes the science of architecture and gives the Science Center an eye-popping, neo-industrial look. "This truly fulfills the vision of what we had intended," Miller said. "It's because of the cooperation we had. There were no shortcuts; it was doing a good job of value engineering."

While Miller lauded the people and efforts involved, he mused: "And just to think, most people thought we'd fall flat on our face." Yet another misconception about the Detroit Science Center most people will have to forget.

The Detroit Science Center is located at 5020 John R, at the corner of Warren, in Detroit. Hours of operation are Monday-Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.; Friday, 9:30 a.m.-9 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m.-9 p.m. and Sunday, 11 a.m.-5 p.m. General admission is $7 for adults, $6 for seniors 60+ and $5 for children 2-17. There is an additional charge for the IMAX theater and the Digital Dome Planetarium (opening fall 2001).

32 hours of fun!

By Bonnie Caprara

It's a grand opening so big it will take 32 hours to pack it all in.

Marshall Field's will host the Detroit Science Center's Weekend of Wonder, from Saturday, July 28, at 10 a.m. until Sunday, July 29, at 5 p.m.

"We wanted to open the Science Center with a bang and to give everyone an opportunity to experience it," said Dr. M. Cathy Nowosielski, Detroit Science Center board trustee, grand opening co-chair and Grosse Pointe Farms resident.

The grand opening festivities kick off with a ribbon cutting ceremony featuring FIRST Lego League robots at 10 a.m.

In addition to free admission to the Detroit Science Center all weekend long, there will also be special outdoor activities on Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., featuring a science experiment tent, face painting, mural painting, a Team Pi car event and an Arts and Scraps bat making project.

Kids young and old can seek their thrills on a rock climbing wall and a gyroscope ride at a nominal cost. The adjacent Hudson's Art Park will offer Project Imagine photo opportunities.

Joining in the parking lot festival will be exhibits and representatives from the Ann Arbor Hands-On Museum, the Charles H. Wright Museum of African-American History, the Children's Museum, Cranbrook Institute of Science, the Detroit Historical Museum, the Detroit Institute of Arts, The Detroit Zoo, the Detroit Public Library, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, the Michigan Opera Theater, The Scarab Club and the University of Michigan. The Detroit Science Center's IMAX theater will host the premiere of "Journey Into Amazing Caves" at a special reduced rate throughout the opening weekend festivities.

Throughout the 32-hour celebration, the center's IMAX theater will show the premiere of "Journey Into Amazing Caves" at a reduced charge. Nancy Aulenbach, one of the film's featured climbers, will lead a question and answer session before select viewings on Saturday and Sunday. She will also be on hand for a book signing of the film's companion book, "Exploring Caves: Our Journeys Into the Earth," in the center's gift shop, and a special demonstration to be announced.

If free Krispy Kreme donuts and Mountain Dew or Fruit Works drinks aren't enough to whet the appetite, the Motown Barbecue will be open during the day-long festivities.

Since science never sleeps, neither will visitors who can Dance 'til Dawn from Saturday at 8 p.m. until Sunday at 6 a.m. The event features a disc jockey, finger foods and a cash bar.

With the same bang the weekend will start off with, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Civic Jazz Band with special guest Marcus Belgrave will put the ending notes on the weekend on Sunday from 4 to 5 p.m. "We think we'll make a nice end to the Detroit 300 celebration," Nowosielski said.

The Pastor's Corner

Spiritual famine

By the Rev. Scott Davis
Grosse Pointe United Church

"The days are coming," declares the Sovereign Lord, "when I will send a famine through the land — not a famine of food or a thirst for water, but a famine of hearing the words of the Lord." — Amos 8:11.

It seems that you can't go anywhere today without hearing: "This country just isn't like it used to be," or "Things have really gone downhill." There is a commonly held belief in our country that standards have been in decline.

The object of morality and its implications for social interaction have been the focus of intense debate in the cultural wars of the last decade. Some see our Western culture as "slouching towards Gomorrah," while others envision the tentacles of a "vast right wing conspiracy" ensnaring the hearts and minds of innocent, hard-working Americans.

Regardless of their ideological position, many people in our nation believe that something within our moral fabric is not quite right. And then there are others who believe that something is missing in our national discourse, but at the same time, they do not find hope in the words of those who would storm the barricades.

Maybe consumerism is not the ultimate enemy and gluttony our greatest sin. Perhaps the immorality of this present age, with its ever declining standards for behavior, is not the root of the issue. Rather we might ask ourselves if the lack of moral action we perceive is due to our current relationship with God. As a people, do we value the wisdom of the great spiritual truths recorded in the Holy Scriptures?

You could look at a number of Gallup polls that have revealed that most Americans believe in God. But as a nation, can we say with confidence that we seek earnestly the words of the Lord? Can we say as a people that we seek to see God's will done on Earth, not for the promulgation of our own ideology but for the well-being of our neighbor? In the traditions of his ancestors, the great prophets of Israel, Jesus Christ called his disciples to do that very thing. Today Amos would ask the same of us: to pray for one another, to care for the foreigner among us and to be responsible for the welfare of those who can't care for themselves. The Lord does not seek to be a God of famine but a God of abundance. The prophetic call searches our hearts, enjoining us to love God, to seek God's Word and to love His people and all His creation.

This day we have a choice before us: We can choose to be a people of scarcity or we can choose to be a people of abundance. If we choose the former, we can expect spiritual famine. But if we strive to be faithful by valuing justice, mercy and compassion, the harvest we shall reap shall gladden our hearts even as it strengthens our community.

The day is here and the choice is ours. I pray that we choose wisely.

Note: Come join us for an ecumenical Vacation Bible School experience to be held the week of Aug. 13 through 17. The theme this year is "Beach Trek." Our sponsoring parishes are Christ Church, St. Paul Lutheran and Grosse Pointe United Church. For more information, call (313) 884-3075.

Capuchin Celebration

The 20th annual Capuchin Souper Summer Celebration held on July 13 raised more than $200,000 for the Capuchin Soup Kitchen. Sponsored by Edmund T. Ahee Jewelry Co., the event drew more than 6,000 people. In the 20 years since the Ahee family began organizing the event, it has raised more than $3.7 million to help Detroit's less fortunate people.

Website helps find senior housing

St. John Senior Community and Father Taillieu and DeSeranno Residences in Roseville, have signed onto an Internet search service (www.senior-housing.net), to help people find senior housing alternatives.

The service offers a comprehensive guide to retirement communities, assisted living residences, Alzheimer's facilities and nursing homes nationwide.

These St. John Senior Living facilities recognize that family out of town often help make decisions for an older adult and that services like these can aid those family members in allowing them to continue living in a familiar city, near friends, conveniences and other comfortable surroundings.

The web site offers a quick evaluation tool to determine which type of housing or care may be most suitable. Users learn about different types of housing and care. Accessing a checklist allows review of what is important when evaluating a senior community or care facility. There is also a link for information about Alzheimer's disease and other health care topics.

Visitors to www.senior-housing.net will find detailed descriptions, lists of amenities, rental fees, color photographs and easy ways to communicate directly with on-site staff at the various facilities.

For more information on the service, call (877) 421-3863.

DSOH Volunteer Council

The St. John Senior Community offers residential, assisted living and skilled nursing care at 18300 E. Warren, east of Mack Avenue. Father Taillieu Residence at 18760 13 Mile Road; and DeSeranno Residence at 17255 Common Road, both in Roseville, offer independent living for seniors in private apartments in a variety of sizes and layouts alongside landscaped grounds and gardens.

Rental rates include daily meals, light housekeeping, free self-laundry, utilities except phone, social activities, and health education on site.

10 ways to live longer

By Fred Stransky, Ph.D.
Special Writer

In the year preceding the new millennium, there were numerous media reports on societal accomplishments of the past 100 years. During this relatively short period of time, many Americans experienced the advent of electricity, the automobile and airplane, radio, television, computers and many other technological advances.

One of the most impressive accomplishments of this era was rarely discussed. From 1900 to 1999, Americans experienced an incredible increase in life expectancy. In just 100 years, life expectancy increased from 47 years to almost 77 years.

The fastest growing element of our population is centenarians, followed by Americans 85 and older. Americans age 65 and older now outnumber teenagers. Clearly, life expectancy will continue to increase in the United States.

As you review these 10 steps, determine the degree to which your current lifestyle is consistent with these recommendations.

1. Maintain a regular program of physical activity. Of all the lifestyle factors related to disease prevention and a functional existence, I believe physical activity is the most important. A comprehensive program of exercise would include an aerobic component (walking, cycling, swimming, or aerobics), range of motion exercises (flexibility) and resistance training (weight lifting). Preferably, your exercise program would be performed on most days of the week.

2. Avoid tobacco products. If you smoke over an extended period of time, your life expectancy is unequivocally reduced.

3. Achieve and maintain an optimal lipid profile (cholesterol, HDLs, LDLs, triglycerides and cholesterol/HDL ratio). Current research suggests that if these aspects of your blood profile become optimal, you become part of a population where coronary artery disease (heart attack) is virtually unknown as a public health issue.

Ask to review your blood lipid values with your primary care physician. An optimum lipid profile is defined as the following:

- A. Cholesterol level of <170 mg%
  - B. Triglycerides < 75 mg%
  - C. LDLs < 100 mg%
  - D. HDLs > 50
  - E. A cholesterol/HDL ratio of 3.4 or below
- An optimum cholesterol level becomes 150 for people with low HDLs.

4. Optimal nutrition. Maintaining a dietary plan that minimizes animal fat consumption should be emphasized. Therefore, a plant-based diet that includes an emphasis on fruits, vegetables and grains is clearly advantageous.

5. Weight control. The major cause of latent weight gain in America is lack of physical activity. Nutritionally, maintaining a low-fat diet that also has adequate fiber will give you the best chance of controlling your caloric intake. Consider a goal of restricting fat consumption to no more than 25 grams a day. In addition, attempt to consume at least 25 grams of fiber a day.

6. Abstain or minimize alcohol consumption. Recent research has demonstrated a reduced risk of developing coronary artery disease in people who consume alcohol moderately. Unfortunately, what many Americans fail to appreciate is the increased risk of other health and behavioral problems linked to alcohol consumption. Hypertension, gastrointestinal problems, cirrhosis and numerous other problems have been linked to alcohol consumption.

If you consume alcohol, attempt to restrict intake to only two days each week. In addition, don't allow the total amount of alcohol you consume to exceed six beers, 28-30 oz. of wine or 3-4 mixed drinks a week.

7. Manage stress effectively. Our inability to manage stress frequently induces behavior that is conducive to disease. People who are under significant amounts of stress tend to be less active, deviate from an optimal diet, consume too much alcohol and smoke more frequently. Exercise is one of the most important interventions available to you for stress management purposes. Avoiding alcohol, caffeine and nicotine is essential in preventing your nervous system from being over-stimulated.

8. Minimize use of stimulants. This step is important in order to achieve and maintain the highest quality of life. For too many Americans, occupational and monetary success results in the use of stimulants like caffeine to achieve specific goals. Allow your body to tell you when you have reached an overload situation.

9. Achieving and maintaining a spirituality. I have defined spirituality as maintaining a purpose for existence that goes beyond occupational and monetary accomplishments. If you were physically disabled, what would be your purpose for living? If you are unable to answer this question, then exploring spiritual options should be considered.

10. Completing annual comprehensive physical examinations. An important reason for completing annual comprehensive physical examinations, irrespective of age, is the need to monitor risk factors for the major causes of death. Annual physicals can serve as barometers of physiological and lifestyle change.

How many of these steps have you already taken? It's never too late to begin a program of health enhancement. If you haven't started, consider completing a comprehensive physical examination that can serve as a basis for initiating a program.

ASA has striking news about strokes

The American Stroke Association program helps seniors recognize warning signs and risk factors.

From stop lights to sirens, ignoring a warning sign can have dire consequences for personal safety. The same is true when it comes to ignoring warning signs for our health. For example, many seniors — more than any other population — don't know the warning signs for strokes or the risk factors associated with them.

As a result, many don't realize they are having a stroke and often wait too long before they seek medical care.

Fortunately, the American Stroke Association has responded to the problem by creating a program that educates seniors about stroke.

The materials — which are distributed to senior centers across the country — explain the warning signs and risk factors associated with stroke through interactive worksheets and a video presentation.

The early results of the program are promising, with 89 percent of the women and 83 percent of the men who participated in the program reporting they can now recognize the warning signs of a stroke.

These stroke warning signs include:

- Sudden numbness or weakness of the face, arm or leg, especially on one side of the body.
- Sudden confusion, trouble speaking or understanding.
- Sudden difficulty seeing in one or both eyes.
- Sudden trouble walking, dizziness, loss of balance or coordination, or
- A sudden severe headache with no known cause.

age 55, the incidence of stroke more than doubles with each successive decade.

While 22 percent of men and 25 percent of women who have an initial stroke die within a year, the percentage moves higher among people 65 and older.

Studies also reveal that the rate of symptomless or silent strokes increases with age. These silent strokes do their damage over time, gradually blocking the delivery of oxygen to the brain.

For more information, visit the American Stroke Association web site at www.StrokeAssociation.org. — NAPS!

Kiwanis donates to SOC

Services for Older Citizens recently received two new wheelchairs for their loan closet, donated by Grosse Pointe Kiwanis. SOC's loan closet includes wheelchairs, walkers, canes, shower chairs and other durable equipment.

"When you come home from the hospital or experience an accident that requires temporary use of durable equipment, it helps to know that we are here," said Lucy Wright, SOC's loan closet coordinator. Donations to the closet are welcome.

Substance abuse problems in elderly are often denied

Older adults are often overlooked when it comes to addressing the misuse and abuse of alcohol and other drugs. Even when adult children suspect that a parent is drinking a bit too much, the attitude tends to be either "Why bother to change things now?" or "A little alcohol won't hurt, and it may make the days a little kinder for Mom or Dad."

Denying or dismissing is an unfortunate response to an otherwise treatable problem.

"The truth is alcohol and other drug abuse among older people leads to great physical and emotional deterioration and deprives them of the chance to enjoy their later years," said Carol Collearant, director of Older Adult Services at Hanley-Hazelden Center at St. Mary's in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Determining the incidence of older adults who abuse alcohol or other drugs, particularly prescribed medications, is difficult. Given that about 10 percent of the general population has a substance abuse problem and that older adults have numerous factors that put them at risk for alcohol and other drug abuse/misuse, it's probably safe to say that about 10 percent of the elderly population experience a substance abuse problem. Some estimates suggest that the majority of older adult problem drinkers go undiagnosed.

The number of older adults who abuse alcohol and other drugs today is no match for what's ahead. By the middle of this century it is estimated that one-quarter of the population in the United States will be over 65. In seven years, the leading edge of the Baby Boomers will be eligible for Social Security, so an unprecedented number of individuals will face health problems related to substance abuse and addiction.

What factors contribute to older adult abuse of alcohol and other drugs?

Older adults are more prone to unintentionally misusing prescription drugs because of memory loss, impaired thinking or not understanding dosage instructions.

Older adults also suffer from higher rates of depression, grief and loss, physical pain, reduced mobility, poor social support and boredom. These factors contribute to alcohol and other drug dependency because older adults may seek chemicals to help cope with physical and emotional problems.

Age-related changes, though perfectly normal, make older adults more susceptible to chemical dependency and other negative consequences. One example is the change in body mass and lowered efficiency in processing alcohol or prescription drugs.

When older adults increase alcohol consumption, negative consequences result much more quickly. Chronic illnesses and use of medications complicate the picture for older adults. Combining prescription drugs with alcohol can be extremely dangerous because alcohol can quadruple the effect of a prescription drug.

Barriers to getting good care are plentiful for older adults. Physicians often do not have time to ask the questions necessary to identify older adults who are experiencing substance abuse problems. Family members often don't want to confront elderly parents. Friends and neighbors don't want to interfere.

What's more, older adults may well view their own drinking with shame and guilt. They can be sensitive about confrontation and what they might view as invasions of privacy. In addition, few treatment centers offer elder-specific services that address the unique issues of older adults.

However, when treatment is provided, older adults tend to do very well, at least as well or better than their younger cohorts. Older adults tend to comply with requests to go to treatment and they finish treatment at a greater rate than younger adults. And because more people are living far longer lives, the flawed argument that someone is too old to change or too old for treatment is even more flawed.

It's never too late to get help. Physicians, treatment centers and other helping professionals can provide resources for getting help. To get a free copy of the Hazelden pamphlet, "How to Talk to an Older Adult Who Has a Problem with Alcohol or Medications," call (800) I-DO-CARE or link to it online at www.hazelden.org/newsletter-detail.dbm?id=174

*Alive & Free is a chemical health column provided by Hazelden, a nonprofit agency based in Center City, Minn., that offers a wide range of information and services relating to addiction and recovery. ## SOC Options

Volunteering has its rewards

By Sharon Maier

SOC Executive Director
Did you know that volunteering boosts self-esteem and energy and gives Americans a sense of mastery over their lives, particularly in later mid-life?

According to a recent Cornell study, volunteering does all these things and more. I don't have to refer to Cornell to get these facts though. Day and day out, our Services for Older Citizens (SOC) volunteers reap the benefits of volunteering and share the rewards with our community.

SOC has more than 250 volunteers performing a wide range of services. We have children as young as first graders and seniors in their 80s serving the community through SOC.

The Cornell study said that Americans would like to spend as much time doing volunteer work as they now spend on their leisure activities. The surprising thing about the study was that only 44 percent of the people surveyed actually seek out volunteer opportunities. Most people wait to be asked.

That's why, every chance I get, I invite people to join our organization as volunteers. If you haven't been asked yet, consider this a personal invitation to you to improve your life.

The benefits of volunteering affect not only those currently working as volunteers, but also people who have volunteered in the past, especially those in formal volunteering capacities, such as serving on boards of directors and for service and religious groups. That means you can volunteer today and reap the rewards for many years to come.

SOC offers a variety of formal volunteer opportunities, as do many non-profit organizations in our area. By volunteering, you strengthen your commitment to the community and enhance your sense of identity.

Another factor that shouldn't be overlooked is the network of social relationships you foster by giving your time to a worthwhile cause.

Volunteering helps you try new things and succeed. It's especially important if you aren't working. The Cornell study pointed out that "we become what we do — volunteering gives a sense of ourselves as engaged in meaningful, productive activities that help change the world." It also gives us a wider view of our possibilities.

At SOC, we pride ourselves in having a wide view of our possibilities. Over the past year, we've grown by 80 percent. Our growth wouldn't be possible if volunteers hadn't stepped forward to help us widen our view.

A fact I found interesting and hope to improve on is that "people who volunteer early in life are more likely to volunteer later in life. Individuals who don't volunteer while they are employed are unlikely to volunteer after retirement."

The first thing that SOC is doing to assure volunteers for the future is to invite young people to volunteer.

I like to tailor volunteer projects for individual interests. We had Brownies make cards for homebound seniors; high school students create flyers for us; college students organize events; professors work on our planning committee; and adults serve on our boards. Everyone has something to give and finding a volunteer job that fits you is important.

If you're retired and haven't volunteered yet, it's not too late to get started. There is no time like the present.

The University of Michigan found, as a part of a 10-year MacArthur Foundation study, that "continued engagement with life" is crucial.

Your senior years shouldn't be about disengaging, they should be about engaging in activities that stimulate and reward. If you are looking for the Fountain of Youth, it could be just as close as the SOC offices. The U-M study indicated that doing regular volunteer work, more than any other activity, increases life expectancy. The study also found that people who spend a lot of time reading, listening to the radio or watching television had a higher than average mortality rate. You can draw your own conclusion, but some people think it goes back to the old adage, "people need people," and just not for mental health, but physical health as well.

Our community can only be as healthy, vibrant and active as we are willing to make it. As the generation that made Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods what they are today, we need to model the values and behaviors that will make Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods a community we will want our children to live in tomorrow.

I can't help but think that volunteerism should be modeled so that it can continue to improve the quality for future generations and ourselves.

SOC offers a variety of volunteer opportunities in each of its departments — Minor Home Repair, Escort, Loan Closet, Food & Friendship, Meals on Wheels, Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers, Case Coordination, Special Events and Clerical.

You can ask the SOC office to help you find your fountain of youth by calling (313) 882-9600.

A stroke can be a mind-blowing thing

'Virginia' examines dysfunctional relationship

to Martha. Her father is college president and she expected George to succeed him. George shows no such promise. She has to live with what she perceives as his failure, and he with her disappointment.

Both are brutally frank and vengeful in expressing their dissatisfaction.

Following a party at her father's home to welcome new faculty, she invites Nick, a new young instructor, and his wife Honey to join her and George for late night drinks. Nick, played by Sean Arbuckle, is in the biology department. His wife, Claire Jullien, seems particularly shy. They have problems of their own and when they arrive, they find themselves, willingly or not, drawn into the game.

They are all distorted personalities reflecting, we are led to believe, the unhappy or perhaps the confused early life of Albee. He is reported to have admitted that he did not consciously write the dialogue, but rather put it down as it came bubbling up. Either way, his characters speak vengeful and spiteful words and rapid-fire repartee. Nonetheless, the performance always sustains its believability.

Henry plays the game not so much viciously as intensely. She gives her role a vulnerability that keeps her character human. But she does it subtly so that it takes time to realize that much of what she says is not really true. It is only a game, albeit a rough one.

While it seems unfeeling to laugh at other people's misery, the action is regularly very funny.

As part of the character, Martha exudes sexuality both to her husband and, provocatively, toward Nick. She does it with animal power and falls into a cadence and tone of voice that recall some of the great vamps of stage and film in our time. Amazingly, the one that she brings to mind the most — as almost a burlesque of a sex symbol — is Mae West. While it may well be a coincidence and whether intentional or not, it is tremendously effective both as humor and as a manifestation of the game.

There is a redeeming quality to Peter Donaldson's treatment of George. He seems to restrain himself to avoid being vindictive. He appears almost protective of his wife and appears to be playing the game more to gratify her than to compete.

As she presses her advantage, however, he finally gives in to the pressure and plays to win. He manages to create a feeling that through all the indignity and spite, he truly cares for his wife.

As he and Martha become acquainted with their guests, they are able to use gained insights to engage and even attack and make strategic use of Nick and Honey. The game expands to a foursome and no holds are barred, including Martha's efforts to seduce Nick as a way of provoking George.

He, on the other hand, fulfills her own observation that he is always resourceful in the game and comes up with a counterattack that devastates her.

Arbuckle and Jullien have only supportive roles, but they enter the fray under full steam, laying bare their characters' conflicts and maladjustments. Unwittingly, Honey becomes a pawn in George's strategy, while Nick has to face a challenge to his masculinity from Martha.

They are particularly interesting to watch as they demonstrate their awakening to the nature of the game in which they have become ensnared. Nick does so consciously. Honey only reacts defensively.

The experience of watching this game alternates between morbid fascination, considerable discomfort and then, the indescribable relief of a really big laugh.

Can such a relationship be true to life? Led by Henry and Donaldson, the foursome make it seem so. As uncomfortable as it is to watch, it has a hypnotic effect.

Certainly this performance projects a genuinely high degree of human sensitivity that can easily be obscured in more vitriolic performances, as we saw in the film. Along with the fact that the play is really great theater, the sensitivity of this performance makes it a worthwhile and even edifying experience mingled with intense psychological suspense.

There is a relationship between this play and another troubling comedy of manners on this summer's program — Noel Coward's "Private Lives." After seeing both, the strongest impression is the enormous difference that three or four decades have made in the way we look at relationships.

Carry it a step further. Compare these two modern plays about couples who profess to be in love, with the love relationships in Sakespeare's "Twelfth Night," which is also offered at the Stratford Festival this summer.

As different as these plays are, there are some fundamental commonalities that are basic to our nature and our relationships. It is an interesting and worthwhile exercise to see all three and make comparisons.

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" is presented in repertory at the Avon Theater through Nov. 3. For information and reservations, call (800) 567-1600.

State of the Arts

By Alex Suczek

Along with the psychological interest, Martha Henry and Peter Donaldson make the relationship painfully real and often agonizingly funny in this summer's revival at the Stratford Festival.

The relationship is actually highly creative. They are a couple whose frustrations regularly drive them over the line of reality into a fictional world, carrying the play beyond a Comedy of Manners to Theater of the Absurd. It gives Martha and George relief from the harsh realities of their life together.

In effect they enter the world of gaming where they spar according to special rules with make-believe situations and characters of their own creation. The game is a love-hate relationship and is highly competitive. By playing it well and inventively, they help each other to purge, at least for a while, the bitter energies of their frustrations.

Everything's coming up lemons

You can't say enough things about lemons. Lemonade. Lemon pepper. Lemon juice.

Lemons are the pick-you-up fruit that will add a fresh flavor to anything you have on your plate.

By Annie Rouleau-Scheriff

This week's feature brings the snappy taste of lemon to the dessert table. Tangy lemon bars are quite simple to prepare and make a perfect dessert on a warm summer evening.

Tangy Lemon Bars

Topping
1/2 cup powdered sugar
1 teaspoon grated lemon zest

Crust

1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup powdered sugar
3/4 cup (1 1/2 sticks) butter, cut into pieces, room temperature

Filling

6 eggs
1 cup sugar
3/4 cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon grated

lemon zest.

Place 1/2 cup powdered sugar and 1 teaspoon lemon zest into a small bowl. (This will need to sit an hour before sifting over the final product.)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine 1 1/2 cups flour and 1/2 cup powdered sugar in a large bowl. Add the butter and 1 teaspoon lemon zest and cut until the mix resembles coarse meal. (I found a few pulses in my food processor to be the most efficient.) Press the mixture into a well-greased (sprayed) 9 by 13-inch glass baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes, until the crust becomes golden brown. Remove from oven and allow to cool. Maintain oven temperature. In a large bowl, beat together the eggs, sugar, lemon juice, flour and 1 tablespoon lemon zest.

Pour over baked crust and return to the oven for another 20 minutes until filling is set.

Remove from oven, transfer to a cooling rack and allow to completely cool. Sift the lemon with the lemon zest powdered sugar. Cut into 1-inch squares and place on a fancy serving tray. Top with additional powdered sugar. Yummy! This recipe makes a lot of bars.

I was recently called upon to make Tangy Lemon Bars for a very special Grosse Pointe North High School graduate. Congratulations to Reilly O'Toole of Grosse Pointe Shores and good luck at De Paul University.

To your good health

The world can be a dizzy place

By Dr. Paul G. Donohue

Q. For six weeks I have been dizzy. Every time I turn my head or get up, I feel like I am on a merry-go-round going 90 miles an hour. My doctor says it is benign positional vertigo. Benign? Far from it — I can't get out of my house. I am going to a specialist soon. What can he do?

— T.R.

A. The salient feature of benign positional vertigo is a dizzy spell usually provoked by moving the head. The inner ear is what keeps us in balance. Tiny sensory fibers there act like radar keeping us from feeling like we're lost in space. Those fibers can become detached from their moorings and float in the inner ear fluid to places they don't belong. Then the inner ear transmits garbled messages to the brain, giving the sensation of a whirling dervish. The future for you looks bright. Often a doctor can coax the misplaced fibers back into the inner ear chambers where they belong. And often equilibrium returns.

With the patient sitting on an examining table, the doctor turns the head 45 degrees to one side, holds it there for one to four minutes and then lowers the patient down onto the table with the head extending beyond the table edge and at a height slightly lower than the table. The routine is repeated and varied depending on the patient's particular symptoms. This technique is called the Epley maneuver.

I hurry to add that benign positional vertigo is not responsible for all cases of dizziness. Its causes number more than 26. Treatment hinges on what the cause is.

Dizziness (vertigo) is one of the most-asked questions I receive. There is a special report devoted to dizziness. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — SR 110W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

A lump in a man's breast should serve as the same warning that a lump in a woman's breast does. It should prompt the man to see a doctor quickly. Quite often, breast cancer lumps are not painful. In men, the lump is most often found directly beneath the nipple.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

The Dodgers of the Farms-City Little League capped an outstanding season with a 4-2 victory over the Marlins to capture the AA division playoff championship with a perfect 3-0 playoff record. The Dodgers were also the regular season champions, posting a 14-1 record.

As they did throughout the regular season, the Dodgers used a combination of solid pitching, tight defense, aggressive baserunning and timely hitting to win their three playoff games.

In the championship game against the Marlins, the Dodgers prevailed for a hard-fought 4-2 victory. The Dodgers jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a single by Chris Shirar that scored Mike Shook and Andy VanderSchaaf. The Marlins struck back for one run in the second inning as nearly tied the game on an RBI single by Alex Koski. On the play, the Marlins Jack Bernard attempted to score but was cut down at the plate on a perfect relay throw from Dodger shortstop Bobby Peltz to catcher

Danny DeFour to protect a 2-1 lead. Behind the strong pitching of VanderSchaaf and Shirar, the Dodgers maintained their narrow one-run lead into the fifth inning when the Marlins tied the game on another clutch two-out single by Koski, scoring Bernard.

In the bottom of the fifth, the Dodgers responded to the challenge as they had done all year. With one out, Charlie West reached first base on a walk and was advanced to second base on a key single up the middle

Sectional victory puts Harper Woods softball team in state tournament

The Harper Woods/Grosse Pointe Girls Major Softball Team won the Sectional Tournament held at Johnston Park the week of July 16.

The team, comprised of 11- and 12-year-old girls, beat the St. Clair Softball Team to qualify for the State Little League Softball Tournament being held in Taylor.

St. Clair came out strong in the first game, leading Harper Woods/Grosse Pointe 5-0. The Harper Woods/Grosse Pointe team came back by scoring three runs. St. Clair then put another run on the board to lead 6-3.

After four innings, Harper Woods/Grosse Pointe closed the deficit to 6-4. In the bottom of the sixth, Harper Woods/Grosse Pointe was able to score three runs to win the game 7-6. Taking the win was Mary Kate Peltz. In the second game, St. Clair again came out strong with a commanding 6-0 lead. Harper Woods/Grosse Pointe again bounced back with seven runs in the second inning. St. Clair was not done though, scoring three runs in the fourth and one in the fifth.

That did not stop the Harper Woods/Grosse Pointe team, which scored two in its half of the fourth and secured the win in the bottom of the fifth with three runs.

The final score was 12-10 in the second game, with Alexandra Cheolas earning the victory for Harper Woods/Grosse Pointe.

The team received contributions from the entire team both offensively and defensively, according to the coaching staff.

He also won an Olympic Gold Medal, leading the Czech Republic to the top spot in the 1998 Winter Olympics in Nagano, Japan.

"I am here to win the Cup," Hasek said in his press conference in front of the Detroit media.

He also said that his entire focus is to play the best he can and help the Red Wings win the Cup.

Hasek will get $8 million this upcoming season with an option to play two more years in Detroit if he chooses.

During his 11-year NHL career with the Chicago Blackhawks and Buffalo, Hasek has a 247-174-72 overall record with 56 shutouts and a 2.24 goals against average.

Robitaille agreed to a two-year, $9 million contract, which was less money than the Kings offered.

His quote to the media was, "The one thing I have left to do in my career is to win the Cup, and now I'm going to a team that has that chance."

Ironically, Robitaille played a huge part in the Kings' playoff run this season, leading them to a seventh game loss to eventual Stanley Cup champion Colorado in the conference semifinals.

He has 590 goals and 648 assists in 15 years in the NHL, playing for the Kings, Pittsburgh (1994) and the New York Rangers (1995-97).

Holland's moves immediately made Detroit a front-runner to capture the Stanley Cup.

The Wings decreased their overall age by not resigning Larry Murphy, 40, Todd Gill, 35, Pat Verbeek, 37, and Doug Brown, 37.

However, their roster still has several key players who are at least 30 years of age. They are Sergei Fedorov (31), Nicklas Lidstrom (31), Brendan Shanahan (32), Brent Gilchrist (34), Yzerman (36), Steve Duchesne (36), Chris Chelios (39) and Igor Larionov (40).

The Hasek move means the Red Wings will likely trade goalie Chris Osgood and keep Manny Legace as the No. 2 goaltender.

Trading Osgood should allow Detroit to get a top defenseman it needs.

Detroit will once again be one of the NHL's top teams, but it must remain healthy to contend.

In the first-round loss to Los Angeles, the Red Wings played a majority of the series without Steve Yzerman or Brendan Shanahan, who were injured in the first game.

What about the rest of the NHL?

The Dallas Stars acquired Pierre Turgeon and Rob DiMaio, who played at Michigan State.

The Philadelphia Flyers were able to land Jeremy Roenik and will likely trade disgruntled star Eric Lindros and get some quality players.

The New Jersey Devils remain solid and is a threat to win the Cup for the third time in a decade, while the Toronto Maple Leafs signed unrestricted free agent Alexander Mogilny from New Jersey.

Others to watch are St. Louis and San Jose.

In the Eastern Conference, New Jersey and Philadelphia are the team's to beat, while Ottawa, Toronto and the Washington Capitals, who traded for Jaromir Jagr, are contenders.

Red Wings fans should be excited about the upcoming 2001-02 season because Detroit has a great shot to win another Stanley Cup.

They should be strong offensively with four goal scorers, plus a tough defense will make Hasek's job much easier than his years in Buffalo.

Detroit should earn between 100 and 115 points during the season and will contend for the President's Trophy, which is won by the squad with the best record in the regular season.

I hope Detroit fans will have to trek downtown once again for another Stanley Cup celebration.

It would be great to see Yzerman hand off the Cup to Hasek, who skates around Joe Louis Arena before handing it off to Robitaille.

At least Red Wings owner Mike Ilitch cares about the Red Wings. Thankfully they aren't the Tigers.

"These players worked extremely hard all season to develop both their individual skills and our team game," said coach Mike Peltz. "They should be very proud of their accomplishments. This team had great chemistry, led by tri-captains Austin McClung, Brian Dempsey and Eddie Barclay. They exhibited strong leadership all season that was instrumental in the team capturing the division crown and making its playoff run."

McClung led the pitching staff as he posted a 7-0 record with one save. Kyle DeBets was 3-1 with four saves.

Ryan Maynard, Brendan Howe, Billy Matouk and Dempsey also made key contributions on the mound.

McClung also paced the hitting attack with a .605 batting average and .780 on-base percentage. Other top hitters were Dempsey, who had averages of .432 and .632, DeBets (.395 and .500), shortstop Tommy Peltz (.351 and .556), second baseman Jeff Stephens (.344 and .548), left fielder Jay Strother (.343 and .548) and catcher Barclay (.341 and .522).

Rob Heide, Matt Handley, Kyle Kondrat, Mark Lepczyk, Matouk, Maynard and Howe also provided timely hitting throughout the season.

Wings' moves raise fans' optimism

The Detroit Red Wings made some bold moves during the past few weeks, which strengthened its chances to win another Stanley Cup.

General Manager Ken Holland traded Vyacheslav Kozlov to the Buffalo Sabres for the best goaltender in the world, Dominik Hasek, plus he signed free agent Luc Robitaille away from the Los Angeles Kings.

The Wings did lose free agent Martin Lapointe, but who cares because Robitaille is the goal scorer the Wings need and Hasek, who had 11 shutouts last season, will solidify a position that has been shaky in the playoffs since Detroit won its last Stanley Cup in 1998.

During the past three post-seasons, the Red Wings lost to Colorado in the Western Conference semifinals in 1999 and 2000, plus was embarrassed in the first round this season, losing in six games to the Kings behind Robitaille.

Both Hasek and Robitaille said they are thrilled to become members of the Red Wings.

They are in their mid 30s and winning a Stanley Cup is the one thing that is missing from Hasek and Robitaille's resumes.

Hasek has won six Vezina trophies as the National Hockey League's (NHL) best goalie, plus two Hart trophies as the league's most valuable player.

He also won an Olympic Gold Medal, leading the Czech Republic to the top spot in the 1998 Winter Olympics in Nagano, Japan.

"I am here to win the Cup," Hasek said in his press conference in front of the Detroit media.

He also said that his entire focus is to play the best he can and help the Red Wings win the Cup.

Hasek will get $8 million this upcoming season with an option to play two more years in Detroit if he chooses.

During his 11-year NHL career with the Chicago Blackhawks and Buffalo, Hasek has a 247-174-72 overall record with 56 shutouts and a 2.24 goals against average.

Robitaille agreed to a two-year, $9 million contract, which was less money than the Kings offered.

His quote to the media was, "The one thing I have left to do in my career is to win the Cup, and now I'm going to a team that has that chance."

Ironically, Robitaille played a huge part in the Kings' playoff run this season, leading them to a seventh game loss to eventual Stanley Cup champion Colorado in the conference semifinals.

He has 590 goals and 648 assists in 15 years in the NHL, playing for the Kings, Pittsburgh (1994) and the New York Rangers (1995-97).

Holland's moves immediately made Detroit a front-runner to capture the Stanley Cup.

The Wings decreased their overall age by not resigning Larry Murphy, 40, Todd Gill, 35, Pat Verbeek, 37, and Doug Brown, 37.

However, their roster still has several key players who are at least 30 years of age. They are Sergei Fedorov (31), Nicklas Lidstrom (31), Brendan Shanahan (32), Brent Gilchrist (34), Yzerman (36), Steve Duchesne (36), Chris Chelios (39) and Igor Larionov (40).

The Hasek move means the Red Wings will likely trade goalie Chris Osgood and keep Manny Legace as the No. 2 goaltender.

Trading Osgood should allow Detroit to get a top defenseman it needs.

Detroit will once again be one of the NHL's top teams, but it must remain healthy to contend.

In the first-round loss to Los Angeles, the Red Wings played a majority of the series without Steve Yzerman or Brendan Shanahan, who were injured in the first game.

What about the rest of the NHL?

The Dallas Stars acquired Pierre Turgeon and Rob DiMaio, who played at Michigan State.

The Philadelphia Flyers were able to land Jeremy Roenik and will likely trade disgruntled star Eric Lindros and get some quality players.

The New Jersey Devils remain solid and is a threat to win the Cup for the third time in a decade, while the Toronto Maple Leafs signed unrestricted free agent Alexander Mogilny from New Jersey.

When training camp begins in September, Detroit and Colorado are the team's to beat in the Western Conference with Dallas being a serious contender.

Others to watch are St. Louis and San Jose.

In the Eastern Conference, New Jersey and Philadelphia are the team's to beat, while Ottawa, Toronto and the Washington Capitals, who traded for Jaromir Jagr, are contenders.

Red Wings fans should be excited about the upcoming 2001-02 season because Detroit has a great shot to win another Stanley Cup.

They should be strong offensively with four goal scorers, plus a tough defense will make Hasek's job much easier than his years in Buffalo.

Detroit should earn between 100 and 115 points during the season and will contend for the President's Trophy, which is won by the squad with the best record in the regular season.

I hope Detroit fans will have to trek downtown once again for another Stanley Cup celebration.

It would be great to see Yzerman hand off the Cup to Hasek, who skates around Joe Louis Arena before handing it off to Robitaille.

At least Red Wings owner Mike Ilitch cares about the Red Wings. Thankfully they aren't the Tigers.

GP Flames roll, claim back-to-back spring hockey titles

The Grosse Pointe Flames hockey club wasn't satisfied with just finishing first in the 2001 Mount Clemens Spring Hockey League Bantam Division standings. As the defending playoff champs, their goal was to stay hot right on through the finals and stake their claim to back-to-back spring league championships.

And that is exactly what the Flames did, rolling up three straight playoff victories en route to their second consecutive Mount Clemens Spring League playoff title.

The Flames racked up a record of six wins, three ties and only one loss in the 10-game spring regular season. In the playoffs they battled past tough quarter- and semi-final playoff opponents before their winner-take-all showdown against the Mount Clemens Wolverines in the division title.

Flames head coach John Rose warned his team not to take the Wolverines lightly in the title game. "We need to shut them down defensively in the Flames Zone," Rose cautioned before the game.

Sure enough, the game turned out to be a defensive struggle in which the Flames refused to budge even an inch for a 2-0 victory.

After a scoreless first period that saw each team get 10 shots on goal, assistant coach Pete Poirier urged more physical play from his big defensemen, including Casey Kline, Aaron Ott and Adam Wojciechowski. Assistant coach Joe Clor told his speedy forwards to turn up the forechecking and shoot the puck at every opportunity. Fired up with a revised game plan for the second period, the Flames quickly broke the deadlock with a picture-perfect goal from Captain Tylor Clor, set up by linemates Eric Memminger and Danny Bogosian.

The Flames then proceeded to carry the attack for the rest of the game. With the game still on the line in the third period, the Flames and Wolverines traded exciting end-to-end action but there was no getting past the defense of Flames enforcers Ryan Stephens and Will Poirier. After missing on some great scoring chances by Flames snipers Frankie DeLaura and Pete Maniaci, Grosse Pointe finally got an insurance goal when winger Brad Constant pounced on a rebound from a shot by centerman Andrew Weathers.

Hard hitting from forwards Jason Gula, C.J. Rose and Davis Smith, to go along with timely penalty killing from Phil Tomaszewski and Shane Mallon, kept the Wolverines at bay from then on. Flames goalie Jeremy Clor racked up 17 saves for his sixth shutout in 14 spring contests.

The victory emptied the Flames bench in celebration, except for Flames power forward George Fink who was out of the lineup with an injury and missed the festivities.

The bantam Flames are comprised of 13- and 14-year-olds from all five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods who all play at the house level in the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association.

Before competing for their second straight championship, the Flames disposed of The Rage in a 3-1 quarterfinal win on goals by Memminger, DeLaura and Wojciechowski. Weathers had two assists.

The semifinal battle against the Mount Clemens Red Wings was a real barn-burner. The Flames came out on top 6-5 thanks to two goals by Memminger and one each from Bogosian, Poirier, Stephens and Tylor Clor.

The Flames out shot their three playoff opponents by a whopping 95-46 margin.

"After winning the spring title last year, then going on to capture both the state district playoffs and the Grosse Pointe house championship in the winter, we were wondering just how much desire the Flames had left for this spring season," assistant coach John Clor said.

"Taking back-to-back crowns says a lot about the focus, character and chemistry of this team. For the players and parents of the Flames, this is sure going to be a summer to savor."

The victory emptied the Flames bench in celebration, except for Flames power forward George Fink who was out of the lineup with an injury and missed the festivities.

The second-round playoff game saw the Diamonds matched up with the strong Finesse Fastpitch team. The game featured a strong defensive effort by both teams, eventually won by Finesse 4-0.

The Diamonds held Finesse scoreless through the first four innings, led by the strong pitching of Simmon. Finesse eventually broke through with two runs against Simmon en route to the victory.

Also contributing to the attack was Kelli Labara, Meredith Walling, Julie Borushko and Lindsay Koerber. All four collected two hits apiece.

Christie Laethem, Shelby Simmon and Katie Labara each had one hit.

Strong pitching performances were turned in by Simmon and Stephanie Smith. Simmon pitched six innings and gave up one earned run and struck out

Air can be installed with many heating systems

So you've been up every night because of the high humidity and record high temperatures. Rumor has it that with your steam and/or hot water heating system you can not have air conditioning. Well that's a total falsehood. Air conditioning is available to all.

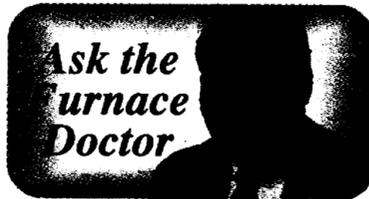

By having a boiler type (hot water and/or steam) heating system you can still have air conditioning. There are three main types of air conditioning systems that can be used:

1. Space Pak
2. Unico
3. Conventional Ducting.

Before deciding which of these systems to choose, first select a contractor. Be sure to review their years in business, get referrals and talk with other satisfied customers. Get copies of their licenses and certificates of insurance to make you feel totally comfortable with your selection. Make sure of your decision because they will be in your home for over one week and will be cutting holes in your walls and ceilings.

After you've selected a contractor, get their opinion and cost estimate on each of the three types of systems. The Space Pak and Unico are very similar. Both are "high pressure," typically installed by setting a blower coil in the attic and running fiberglass board trunk lines throughout the attic. Then off each linear trunk are 4-inch-diameter supply lines to the individual rooms. The outlet termination of the supply lines looks similar to a mini-porthole that is virtually invisible. These are mostly located in the ceiling.

At the same time one central cold air return will be installed in the ceiling. This is normally located in a main hallway. With a conventional duct system, all of the ducting will be sheet metal with insulation placed on the inside or outside of the duct. This system has conventional supply registers located in the ceiling. These registers will be of a size larger than the "portholes" of the high pressure systems, more typical with a forced air system, which means that with the conventional duct system, you have the potential in the future to add humidification, air purification and forced air heating.

Make sure to discuss all of these with your contractor and get his/her recommendation as to which would be best for you.

If you have any questions regarding these systems or anything relating to your heating and/or cooling systems, feel free to call Flame Furnace Co. toll free at the number provided below, or visit our web address at www.flamefurnace.com.

Flame Furnace Co. is located at 2200 E. 11 mile Road in Warren. Call toll free at (888) 234-2340. Flame Furnace Co. is also Kopke Heating of Riverview and Trimaster of Mount Clemens.

Home Tips

• Set the temperature of your water heater to 120 degrees F (low or warm setting on some units). You'll save money on heating bills, and the lower temperature will keep you (and your family) from being accidentally scalded.

• I keep a piece of foam rubber with me almost every time I work around the house. I use it as a kneeling pad when pulling weeds, place my tools on it to keep them from rolling away (especially when I'm on the roof), and so on. It's really versatile. — Jason L., Arcadia, Fla.

• I discovered that I can remove burn marks, stains and scratches from my composite sink. Just place a few drops of turpentine on 400-grit, wet/dry sandpaper and rub the damaged surface lightly. Clean up with soap and water. — Joyce L., Canton, Ohio.

Revitalize a tired kitchen by adding a new floor

(NAPSI) — If your kitchen looks tired and run-down, it may be time for a quick pick-me-up. An easy way to take your kitchen from blah to beautiful is to change the floor.

Most people don't realize what a dramatic difference a new floor can make, or how affordable it can be. In a national kitchen remodeling survey, when homeowners were asked what they thought would be the easiest, most cost-efficient and most visually appealing way to revitalize their kitchen's appearance, 31.8 percent, answered "change the cabinets." Only 25.1 percent said "change the floor." Other replies included changing the lighting and appliances.

"Contrary to popular opinion, our research shows that changing the floor is actually the smartest remedy for an ailing kitchen," said Diane Martel, a design expert at Domco Inc., the flooring manufacturer that commissioned the survey. "Replacing a floor is much less expensive and hassle-free than replacing cabinets. Best of all, a beautiful new floor can transform the room, brightening the kitchen and your spirits.

"Even if you don't have a millionaire's budget you can buy a floor that looks like a million dollars. One of the most economical — and attractive — flooring choices for the kitchen is vinyl. It not only costs less than replacing the cabinets, it also costs less than other hard surface flooring."

Natural beauty is the inspiration for today's vinyl flooring. For example, Nafco luxury vinyl tiles, a product brand of Domco, mimic the colors and textures of real ceramic tile, wood and stone so well even Mother Nature might have a hard time telling them apart.

A new vinyl floor can bring your kitchen to life.

Vinyl has many practical advantages too. It's easy to clean. It's soft, quiet and warm under foot. It's durable thanks to new high-tech wearlayers. And unlike other hard surface flooring, vinyl is inexpensive and easy to install.

Even many do-it-yourselfers can put in a new kitchen floor with a vinyl tile such as Nafco's Elements which resembles a naturally-fired clay tile. Each product carton contains tiles in three distinct shades so you can create a realistic custom look.

Don't be afraid to repair that leaky faucet

Q. Mr. Hardware, I recently installed a single-handed "Delta" repair kit in my guest bathroom. It worked fine until a guest used it and water spurted out under the handle! It does not leak all the time, but it has its "Old Faithful" moments now and again. How can I repair this situation? — Sam G. of Boulder

A. Perhaps I hope you used a genuine Delta repair kit. Many after-market repair kits are made to inferior standards. We have found some of the "cheapo" kits to fail within one year. The effort one spends shutting off the water, removing the handle, removing the top cap nut and replacing the parts greatly exceeds the money and effort acquiring original parts.

When a single-handed faucet leaks from under the handle, it is because of a worn cam assembly (No. 6) or the adjustment ring has loosened. The adjustment ring is on the top of the upper cap nut (No. 3) that retains the parts in the faucet. If you look closely, you will see little dents inside the top of the hole in the center. These dents control a threaded ring that pushes down on the cam washer assembly.

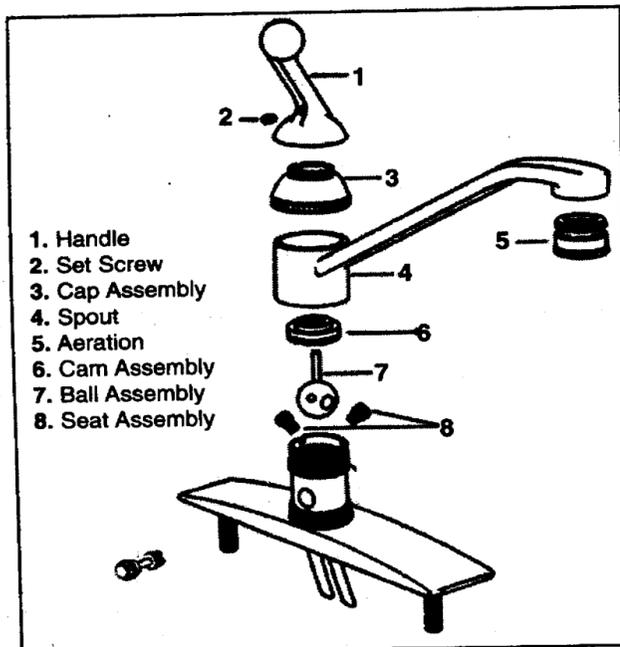

More pressure here prevents water from leaking past the top of the ball.

A Delta repair kit contains a spanner wrench made to "notch" into the adjustment ring. Test the ball stem tension by moving it around. It should be a little tough to move without the handle. Increase the tension by tightening the adjustment ring clockwise until the stem is uncomfortable to move. If the ring is frozen, clean it with several drops of vinegar. PB B'laster works well, just give it time to loosen up the calcium deposits around the adjustment ring.

If the adjustment ring is frozen and will not move, turn off the water and remove the cap nut.

Soak it in vinegar or a rust/lime remover for a few minutes and then try to loosen the ring. Once tightened, the upper cam should not leak again, at least not for many years to come.

Trees in danger during lengthened drought

Recent drought conditions have created serious challenges for natural vegetation, including trees. For many regions a continuation of drought will put enormous stress on suburban trees. For a variety of reasons, trees in the forest are better able to withstand drought stress. Single trees isolated on a lawn or park are more susceptible to damage caused by a lack of natural rainfall.

The lack of rain showers and high temperatures is sure to create more hardships for trees. Water is required for all biological processes of plants and trees. When there is an adequate supply, water seeps down through the soil, gradually saturating each layer. Trees depend on water and moisture in the upper layers of soil — usually the top 6 to 12 inches where the root system is located. Water that seeps beneath the upper layers eventually becomes available for use by people as well-water. In severe drought conditions, more water is required to keep the upper layers of soil moist.

The first signs of water stress in large shade trees is a flagging, or wilting, of foliage. It can be difficult to notice. Next the leaves become "scorched" as they gradually curl, become dry at the edges, and begin to die. Eventually, trees will drop their leaves in an attempt to "save" themselves. It is important to remember that defoliated trees are weakened, but not dead. Many of these trees will survive.

What can you do?

Apply 2 to 4 inches of mulch around trees. This conserves soil moisture and keeps soil temperatures cool. Water trees in the evenings. Lower temperatures result in less evaporation and better conservation of water. This means more water for the trees.

Do a home soil moisture test. Remove a small amount of soil near the roots of a tree and squeeze it. If you can form a sticky ball, the soil is too wet. If it breaks like chalk, it is too dry. If your trees do need watering, use proper watering techniques. Light sprinkling only settles the dust and evaporates quickly in the sun. Give the plants a weekly, deep soaking with a lawn sprinkler, allowing the water to seep at least 5 to 6 inches down. This helps the water to get below competitive grass roots, and reach the tree's deeper roots.

In fact, if you water in too shallow a manner, the tree's roots could turn upward in a search for the lightly sprinkled water. When the soil then dries, the new, shallow roots will be killed more readily.

Over-watering can be just as bad as under-watering. Do not water if there has been adequate rainfall.

Let the soil get somewhat dry between watering to avoid "drowning" your trees.

Consult a professional arborist to perform a quick health check and recommend good watering techniques for your trees. For a list of professional arborists in your area, or to get information on the care and maintenance of trees, contact the National Arborist Association at (800) 733-2622 or by a zip code search on the NAA's web site www.natlarb.com.

An ounce of prevention can stop burglaries

One of the easiest ways to protect your home is by locking your doors and windows before leaving home. Seems easy; however, more than 600,000 burglaries in 1999 were committed without forced entry because people forgot this simple safety measure.

What else invites burglars into your home? Some unintentional welcoming signs include overgrown shrubs covering a home's entry points, a message on the answering machine offering the date of your return, a mailbox over-stuffed with mail or a driveway full of snow with no tire marks.

Referred to as a "target of opportunity" by the police, a home that appears unoccupied offers a burglar an open invitation to enter. "It's easy for people to forget the simple, common sense steps to safeguard their residence," says Lauren Russ, executive director of the Burglary Prevention Council (BPC), a nationwide non-profit organization dedicated to educating the public on crime prevention measures. "The key is to create an illusion of everyday activity. A burglary occurs every 15 seconds in this country — this is an alarming statistic that no one should take lightly. People need to know, however, that there are a number of easy and cost-effective security measures that can protect them and their homes."

The BPC recommends the following 10 steps for safeguarding your home against intruders:

1. Close and lock all doors when leaving, even for short periods. This includes garage or connecting doors. Burglars want easy jobs, that's why they scan homes for the weakest point of entry.
2. Secure sliding glass doors. By placing a metal rod or piece of plywood in the track and installing vertical bolts, you can help prevent burglars from forcing the door open or lifting it off the track.

3. Never leave clues that you are away on a trip. Have a trusted neighbor gather your mail while you are away so items do not accumulate.

4. Keep some shades and blinds up and curtains open while you are gone. This will help to maintain a normal everyday appearance in your residence.

5. Use automatic timers. Timers can be set to turn on and off lights, radios and televisions at varying times of the day. Also, use them when on vacation or away for an extended period of time to give burglars the impression that someone is home.

6. Illuminate the yard area. Darkness is a burglar's best friend. Doorways and the rear of the house should be lit with cost-effective, low voltage lighting to minimize dark spaces.

7. Trim trees and shrubs surrounding the home. If overgrown,

Best teen chef cooks up a scholarship

(ARA) — For 17-year-old high school senior Anthony Tabb, the hours spent in the family kitchen watching his dad and grandmother cook has paid off in a big way. Tabb is this year's winner of The Art Institutes National Culinary Scholarship Competition and the official title of "Best Teen Chef in America."

Open to high school students from all over the country, the cook-off offers more than $180,000 in scholarships to The Art Institutes Culinary Arts programs.

According to recent statistics, the number of high school students entering culinary school is on the rise, and with good reason, says Joseph Shilling, a chef director for The Art Institutes and a judge at this year's cook-off. "There's a rosy job market in the food service industry predicted through the year 2006."

At this year's event, 24 students participated in a grueling two-hour cook-off, preparing a menu of tenderloin of beef, crab cakes and Caesar salad under the watchful eyes of six judges, including three master chefs who teach at The Art Institutes. For his considerable culinary skills, Tabb won a full scholarship to The Illinois Institute of Art Chicago, worth approximately $29,000. As the top winner, he also took home an induction stove with a complete set of professional quality stainless steel pots and pans, valued at approximately $1,500.

Now in its second year, the scholarship competition requires that interested students submit a notebook of information, including a two-course meal menu, recipes, photographs of each course and the meal, and a cost analysis of the menu. Additionally, students were asked for a descriptive paragraph of why they want to enter the culinary profession, along with a resume, transcripts and letters of

For his application, Tabb submitted a menu of original recipes that illustrate his culinary philosophy so far. "I love creating art out of raw material and an idea," explains Tabb. And Tabb was not alone in his concern for "presentation," or how food appears on the plate. The students at this year's cook-off had "a terrific sense of how food should taste and appear," says Shilling. And according to Chef Shilling, that's a hallmark of a great chef. "People eat with their eyes, not just their palates," he explains.

Among Tabb's signature dishes are linguine with light pesto, spicy mussels in cream sauce, Tabb's artichoke hearts and seasoned steak rolls. "You have to eat everyday — why not make mealtime enjoyable, delicious and beautiful to look at," says Tabb.

High school students interested in next year's competition can contact The Art Institutes at (888) 328-7900 or visit www.artinstitutes.edu/nz and look for the Culinary Scholarship Competition link.

these areas serve as perfect hiding places for burglars and allow them to work undetected.

8. Start a neighborhood watch program. Local police departments can provide materials and assist in getting a program started. In the meantime, it helps to build a good relationship with your neighbors, so each one can watch the other's home while they're away.

9. Use window and door alarms. Alarms vary in their degree of sophistication, ranging from a door alarm that makes noise to silent alarms patched into your local police station. Burglars will typically leave when any alarm is sounded. In addition, an inexpensive alarm system also creates valuable piece of mind.

10. Take a complete inventory of your valuables and place valuable jewelry and documents in a safety deposit box. Videotape or take photos of all valuable possessions. These should also be marked with an engraving pen to help police trace and recover them if stolen.

Summer most common period for burglaries

Vacationing residents are urged to protect homes while away. Most communities will experience a 10 to 18 percent increase in home burglaries during June, July and August. The greatest number, according to FBI statistics, tend to occur in August, with July a close second. The stage is set again this summer with millions planning trips throughout these few months.

In the United States today, burglars enter a house, apartment or condominium every 15 seconds. Two out of every three burglaries are residential in nature and 60 percent of residential burglaries occur during the daytime. In 1999, an estimated 2,099,739 burglaries were reported with losses totaling $3.1 billion.

"The average burglar has only two options for entering a residence: doors and windows," says Russ. "Approximately 30 percent of all break-ins are by unlawful entry, which means no force. That statistic tells me homeowners continue to make a burglar's job too easy by leaving doors and windows unlocked. Especially during the summer, taking a quick walk around the block could end up costing thousands of dollars."

Tips and approaches to home security are described in detail in the BPC's booklet, "Safe & Secure."

Intermatic Programmable Digital Timer.

Intermatic Wireless Alarm with keypad.

The new booklet also provides valuable information on evaluating your home's current safety measures, evaluating your neighborhood, assessing your home's entry points, what attracts and discourages burglars and how to implement a cost-effective security program. The guide also contains a vacation checklist to help protect your home while away and a list of home protection products that can be used in any home.

The free booklet can be obtained by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope plus $1 for postage and handling to the Burglary Prevention Council, 221 North LaSalle Street, Suite 3500, Chicago, Ill. 60601-1520, or downloaded from the BPC website at www.burglaryprevention.org.

The Burglary Prevention Council is a nonprofit organization designed to educate the public and lower the rate of residential burglaries.

Antiques and Collecting

Royalty has influenced fashion for centuries. When Queen Victoria went into mourning, she wore black clothing and black jewelry. Elegant women of the world turned to jet necklaces and black silk dresses. Jacqueline Kennedy did not like hats, so she wore a small pillbox hat at the back of her head. That became the rage.

Q u e e n
Louise of Prussia, who lived from 1776 to 1810, was a popular monarch. When she first became queen, she had a swelling on her neck, perhaps a goiter, so she always wore a gauze scarf around her neck. Soon every fashionable lady twisted a scarf around her neck. Even after the swelling disappeared, the scarf remained popular. There are many plaques and portraits that picture a woman with a thin scarf around her neck. Most of them picture Queen Louise.

Q. My grandmother has a collection of colorful pots, pans and other kitchen utensils. Most are swirled in blue and white. A few are white with brown, green or red swirls. She calls the pots "graniteware," but she doesn't know why. Can you help?

A. Graniteware is metal coated with one or more layers of enamel glaze. Some collectors refer to the cookware as enamelware. The industry began in the early 1800s in Europe and by the middle of that century here. Many cooks preferred the lightweight, colorful kitchenware to heavy cast-iron. It was also easier to clean. Graniteware is popular with collectors. Reproductions made today are lighter in weight.

Q. Could you please explain the differences in the terms bamboo, cane, rattan, rush and wicker?

A. Bamboo is shaped like a long stick with interspersed joints. It looks like an old fishing pole and can be bent to form a chair frame. Rattan is the scraped stem of a tropical palm tree. Larger pieces look like bamboo.

Early wicker is made of long pieces of willow or rattan palms.

By the late 19th century, a less expensive type of wicker was created by wrapping brown paper tightly around a wire core. Either type of wicker was wrapped around a maple or birch frame to make a piece of furniture. There are also two types of rush — it's either twisted, wet cattail leaves or twisted paper with no wire core. It is used mostly as seating material.

Finally, cane is made from the outer skin of the cane plant. It is often woven in thin, flat strips to make a strong seat. Fake cane is now made from woven flat strips of paper surrounding a nylon cord. Of course, much more can be added to each definition, but we hope this gives you a little help.

Q. I recently bought a large black-and-white aerial photograph of a gathering of people unlike any I had ever seen before. It was taken around 1920 and shows thousands of people standing to create an image of the Statue of Liberty. Have you seen this sort of thing?

A. Aerial photos of thousands of people dressed in different colors and arranged to form a patriotic or familiar symbol were an early-20th-century fad. The photos were often taken on military bases, because that's where a large number of people could easily be gathered together. Collectors look for photos by Mole & Thomas. Some sell for as much as $600 to $800.

Laundry rooms gain 'real room' distinction

(ARA) — The laundry room, once relegated to a corner of the basement, has moved upstairs and upscale. In a new survey, "The Next Decade for Housing," conducted by the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB), the laundry room ranks among the five amenities that are "most in demand" in homes today. All across the country, builders and Realtors confirm that this once-humble workroom has risen dramatically on homeowners' most wanted list.

With its ascent, the laundry room has gained visibility. In single-story homes, it's usually located in the path most traveled: alongside the kitchen or in an entryway between the garage and the kitchen. In two-story houses, the trend is to place it in the second-floor hallway, close to linen closets and bedrooms.

Now that the laundry has become a real room, the time has come to give it its decorating due. And, in tribute to its rising status, there are wallpaper patterns designed especially for that purpose.

Whimsical wash day images in Coordinates, a new collection from the L.V. Emmert division of S.A. Maxwell Co., bring cheer to your chores and wring smiles from those who pass by. A scatter of colorful clothespins, cushioned hangers, blossoms and butterflies dance across bleached block letters that spell out "squeaky clean," "all washed up" and other apt phrases to amuse you.

To make a small-scale laundry room seem more spacious, create horizontal planes through the use of two or three different, coordinated patterns. Place the novelty wallpaper print along the most visible, middle level of the wall, where it shows above the washer and dryer. Beneath it, use a clean, crisp plaid that has the same colors as the print, and run it, like wainscoting, up to about 36 inches from the floor. Separate the two patterns with a strip of painted wood molding. Where the wall meets the ceiling, top off the theme with a companion border that shows kids' bright clothes on a clothesline, wafting in the wind.

You can also add a shelf above the appliances, not just for stacking hangers or holding the starch, but also to prop up a photo or a child's drawing that you'll like to look at while you work.

Remember when the laundry really did dry in the sun? The popularity of scented "linen water" for our irons; a new best-seller in bed and bath catalogs and stores, is testimony to our nostalgia for those long-gone summer days. Country Chic, another S.A. Maxwell collection, depicts that relaxed retro comfort in images of soft wooden clothespins, washboards and faded, checkered tea towels on the line.

To take the cool edge off shiny white appliances, install the over-all label-and-clothespin pattern up three-quarters of the wall, starting at the floor. Cap it at eye-level with the companion border that adds detail to the old-time motifs. Above the border, add the quiet contrast of a faint faux-marble pattern. Why not carry it all across the ceiling, for a truly finished look?

All the wallpapers, borders and fabrics in collections from S.A. Maxwell Co. are coordinated to take the guesswork out of combining patterns, not only in your laundry room, but in every room and all through the house.

To find the nearest retailer carrying Coordinates, Country Chic and other collections from this leading producer of fine wallpaper, borders and fabric, call (847) 932-3700 or visit www.samaxwell.com on the Internet. Every collection is an idea book for you.

New invention promises improved candle safety

(ARA) — Consumers have driven many safety issues in our culture: toy safety, children's car seats, infant crib construction and automobile seat belts, to name a few. From the Wall Street Journal to the network news, candle safety is becoming an increasingly important issue to consumers.

It is estimated that candles are used in seven out of 10 households in the United States. Consumer retail sales for 2000 totaled more than $2 billion in an industry that has averaged a growth rate of 10 to 15 percent annually since the early 1990s — until recently, when that number doubled, according to the National Candle Association. Increased candle usage has resulted in increased candle related fires, injuries and death. According to the National Fire Protection Agency, candle fires account for 2.4 percent of all fires.

More than ever, candle makers are being called upon to make the safest candle possible. And one solution may be as simple as raising the flame above the base of the candle.

The growing interest in candle safety may be the next movement to revolutionize an industry, and Hearth & Home Traditions Ltd., creator of The Original Cake Candle, may have just lit a flame to fuel the cause with their new, patented Wick Pedestal.

The problem is simple — candle users sometimes leave burning candles unattended or burn them all the way to the bottom against the recommendations of most manufacturers. The pool of wax at the bottom of a candle can catch fire (flashover) when matches, wick trimmings or other debris are permitted to remain in a candle while burning.

invented by Hearth & Home Traditions Ltd., in Norwich, Ohio, addresses this issue. The new Safe at Home Wick Pedestal raises the candle flame sufficiently above the floor of the container or the bottom of a freestanding candle to help prevent flashover. A seal of glue prevents the candle wax from being drawn up the wick once the depth of the fuel falls below a predetermined level. The risk of candle fires is greatly reduced.

Both of these features are more forgiving when a customer allows matches and wick trimmings to accumulate or allows the candle to burn all the way to the bottom. Products offering these features will be identified by the Safe at Home trademark.

While these improvements will decrease the chance of a candle fire, it is not a guarantee and customers should still follow the burning instructions provided with each candle.

The industry has been reluctant to produce candles that go out by themselves. The fear is that consumers will come to rely upon this feature. Hearth & Home cannot guarantee that each and every candle will self extinguish, because no one knows what the consumer will ultimately do with a candle.

We cannot promise every candle will self extinguish. However, this is the safest candle we have made to date, and in most cases, it actually will be more forgiving if it is misused. Hearth & Home continues to lead the industry with research to make candles safer for consumers.

Control unit takes care of spa, lighting and more

(NAPSI) — Prior to 1975, pool and spa operation was an entirely manual process. Then, a company named Compool, now a brand of Pentair Pool Products Inc., became the first to bring a microprocessor into the home to automatically operate a pool pump, filter, heater and lights.

Now not only can a control unit take care of all that, it also can be easily programmed to raise or lower the temperature of a spa, and turn on special water displays such as fountains and dramatic pool/landscape lighting.

You can even fire up the spa from a cell phone on your way home from work. And in the near future, computers will network so you can access your home control from the office via the Internet.

An automated control also helps ensure safe operation and extend equipment life. With the correct pump scheduling, you can reduce energy consumption and take advantage of off-peak electrical rates. Also, consider purchasing a two-speed pump for increased energy efficiency.

The price range for various control units varies. Ask your contractor about the convenience options available.

You can often get longer term warranties if you purchase your pump filter, heater, controller, lights, and automatic cleaner from the same manufacturer.

Additionally, if you purchase from a single source manufacturer, a trained factory technician can expertly service all of your equipment needs.
