South's new athletic complex now has a new name.

At the September monthly meeting of the Grosse Pointe Public School System Board of Education, President Brendan Walsh proclaimed the addition to be named "the John and Marlene Boll Athletic Center" in recognition of their gift of $500,000 to the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Public Education.

the John and Marlene Boll Foundation. The GPFPE is a non-profit organization that procures financial donations to benefit the Grosse Pointe Public School System. The Boll's gift is the largest the 2-year-old school foundation has received.

Of the half million dollars donated, $200,000 will be used to complete the natatorium, gym and fitness center located at South High School. The $300,000 balance will be used in support of other initiatives, said Bob Bury, GPFPE vice president.

The Boll family cited past successes of the GPFPE in its work to enhance various academic and enrichment programs for the school district's students and staff as the reason for the gift.

"After giving the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Public Education our first gift — a $50,000 challenge grant in support of the F.A.S.T reading program - and seeing how quickly the foundation was able to raise another $50,000 from the community, we were very encouraged," said Kristine Boll Mestdagh on behalf of the family.

Fire damages Vernier home

A fire virtually destroyed a recently sold vacant historic house on Vernier Road Tuesday morning.

The fire was reported at 9:43 a.m. by a Grosse Pointe Woods Public Safety officer on routine patrol. He saw smoke and flames tearing through the roof of the cedar wood structure.

Units from Grosse Pointe Woods, Shores, Farms and Park and Harper Woods responded. The cause of the fire had not been determined by press time.

stood out for its ultra-modern smoke and turned up Vernier design, which belied its beginnings as a farmhouse that dated back to the early 1900's. According to a former owner, it was built on Ford Estate property and moved to its present location by the Van Assche family in 1920.

Mary and Larry Black bought the house in 1970 and extensively remodeled it, creating a definitively modern exterior covered in cedar siding with a cedar shake roof.

Black's daughter, Arabella Black Wujek, of Grosse Pointe Woods, was jogging on

The home at 528 Vernier Lakeshore when she saw to see were it was coming from.

"I was shocked when I realized it was the house I grew up in," she said. "When we were kids, my mother would always tell the babysitter that if there was ever a fire in the house, not to try and extinguish it because the house was all wood. She was to just get the kids out."

Wujek said her family, including her parents and two brothers, lived in the house until 1982.

◆ POLIO SHOT CLINICS TO OPEN: The Wayne County Health Department will set up clinics in the Grosse Pointe Health District to administer the Salk vaccine in the fight against the polio epidemic threatening the metropolitan area.

The clinics will be held at Brownell, Parcells and Pierce junior high schools. County health officials will be on hand to administer the vaccine to those who have never had any shots, must yet get their second and third shots, or who might want booster shots.

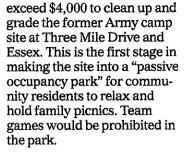

So far this season, six cases of polio have been reported, compared to seven for all of last season.

♦ VILLAGE MERCHANTS BACK PARKING LOT PLAN:

Some merchants of The Village shopping district are backing the hotly-contested Rosenfeld Parking Proposal, recently passed by the Grosse Pointe City Council. The approved measure will convert parking lots No. 3 and No. 4, like No. 5 into attendent-operated lots, thus affording the public additional space for allday parking.

City maintenance crews are removing the meters from the area and repaving the lots. City officials are working now to set the rates which are anticipated to run about 25 cents for all-day parking.

Park decides to suspend pit bull ban

By Kathy Ryan Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park pit bull owners are breathing a sigh of relief.

On Monday, the city council voted to suspend a ban on the breed it approved last month and tabled action on a breedspecific ban.

The new ordinance was designed to give the public safety department the leverage and discretion it needed to deal with dangerous dogs. But sections of the ordinance that specifically banned pit bulls raised the ire of several pit bull owners and caused the council to revisit its earlier decision.

The newly passed ordinance

A dog will be considered dangerous if it, "causes injury to a person or domestic animal, chases or menaces a person or domestic animal in an aggressive manner, or acts in a highly aggressively manner within a fenced or enclosed area, and appears to a reasonable person able to jump over or escape."

Also, any dog that is running free and is picked up by the police or animal control two or more times in a 12month period can be considered dangerous by the city and the owner fined.

"I own three pit bulls," said Penelope Hale. "I love my dogs, and if the council had done its research on the breed, you wouldn't be banning them. They are loyal and intelligent animals. What you're proposing is breed specific legislation and there is not a single organization involved in animal welfare work that supports that kind of legislation. It's a slippery slope when you ban one breed."

Herzog also spoke against the the 40 or 50 dogs each year that are impounded by the police departments because they attacked someone. I see every breed, not one specific breed. I also place 150 stray dogs a year, many of them pit bull mixes, and I have no problem placing those dogs with families. What you have to realize is that people who want mean dogs will figure out a way to get it.

"But my concern is that there is a very limited population that wants a vicious dog and the dog they pick is a pit bull. Certain events of late, including an incident in Detroit where a pit bull killed its owner, raises legitimate concerns. We need to address this issue before a terrible tragedy occurs. The appearance of Michael Franck in southern U.S. Army bases is a disappointment to some.

Construction equipment mechanics were expecting a visit from MSgt. Half-Mast, a square-jawed bespeckled lifer dressed in fatigues. They weren't expecting this civilian armed with a camera and notepad, dressed in work boots, a durable shirt and jeans to answer their mechanicallyrelated questions.

The product has worked, Franck said, because of its accuracy and the thousands of calls he and Half-Mast receive and its ability to keep up with changes in society.

Comparing a publication from the early 1950s and a July 2008 issue, the changes are obvious.

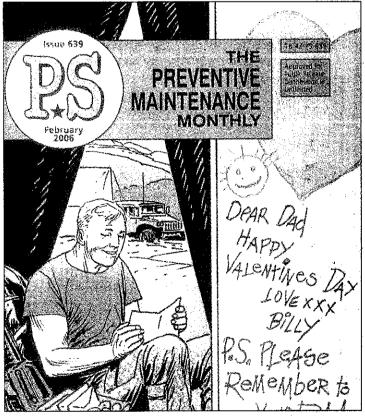

Franck pointed out the magazine has gone four color and characters have been dropped, added and modified.

Good memories returned

Two things happened to Laura Wutka this month she never imagined.

On Sept. 10, someone broke into her Redford home shop sales slips, I kept coming and stole her jewelry, including her 1981 class ring from Redford Union High School.

On Sept. 19, she received a telephone call from Grosse eastside. Although it became Pointe Shores Sgt. Dan Pullen clear that he didn't commit saying he'd found it.

"I really wanted my ring back," Wutka said. "It has a lot of memories. You only graduate once."

Pullen found the ring while the initials LAW. rooting through pawn shops and second-hand jewelry stores for more than $25,000

Pullen told Redford Detective Sgt. Sean Porter about the Detroit suspect.

"I'm sure the guy's involved," Porter said.

The man is wanted on three outstanding warrants, including auto theft in Detroit and contempt of court in Eaton County.

"I'd been checking pawn shops in Redford and found nothing," Wutka said. "Someday, I can tell the story to my grandchildren."

mouth because, Franck said, the Army doesn't promote smoking.

Connie Rodd, another continual character, has gone from a pin-up blonde clad in short shorts to a blond wearing casual business suits. Both were created by cartoonist Will Eisner.

Perennial screw-up Private Joe Dope was dropped because the Army wants a positive image of its men and women.

Cartoonist Joe Kubert now draws many of the illustrations, but it's up to Franck to put the words in the characters' mouths and write text from his desk at the U.S. Army Tank - Automotive and Armaments Command in Warren.

After visiting various Army installations, he comes back with stories and not just for the magazine.

He said he has gotten to know soldiers who have taken two or three tours to Iraq. He stops and blinks remembering some with whom he was acquainted who didn't return.

And there are stories of single mothers, who say they wouldn't be making a life for their families without the Army.

Part of his job, in a roundabout way, is to help bring the soldiers back by reminding them through cartoons and short narratives equipment maintenance is critical.

"The kids have changed. Who changes the oil in their cars any more? Who changes spark plugs? The Army must emphasize maintenance because there aren't any backyard mechanics," he said.

"Here's what you have to remember, what to do and here's why," he said.

mound for a tank to take cover, he takes a picture of what mechanics say is the problem and their fix.

His job is to find out if this is the problem or a symptom of a problem.

"Equipment must be ready when they need it. The last thing you want is the equipment breaking down when you are under fire. War brings up (the) problems."

Between the mechanics fixes, his knowledge and contacts made during the past 20 years, Franck and Half-Mast come up with an answer.

Not only does he look at equipment used stateside, he looks at equipment returning from combat zones. He looks at the functioning equipment with 20 rounds of ammo in it and the non functioning equipment, for the cause and effect.

Back in Warren, Franck, who is a Grosse Pointe South High School graduate, writes the story, it's corrected and sent to the artist for layout. Proof sheets are reviewed. Technical art is added and everything is sent to the Alabama, where PS is headquartered, to be checked for accuracy and corrections made. Between three and four months pass before the problem and its solution are published in cartoon form.

That is one part of Franck's job.

A second part is to answer mail on behalf of Half-Mast. As questions come in, Franck answers them within a week. He e-mails the answer and, if necessary, adds a phone number of an expert who will more thoroughly address the question.

When not answering questions on construction equipment, Franck can be found teaching tennis at the school where he and his wife, Jeannette, send their children, C.J. and Ryan.

Franck played singles at South and was an alternate at Western Michigan University, where he earned a Bachelor of Business Administration in technical writing and marketing. He had his eye on working for the auto industry, but began his career at a marketing firm on the west side of the state until in the early 1980s.

A family friend mentioned a technical writing position was opening up. As hard as it is to find a job today, Franck said, it was as difficult to find one in the '80s. He took the civilian job with the Army. The position on PS magazine opened up in February 1989.

"It's a different job. I never thought I would be doing, going in this direction," he said.

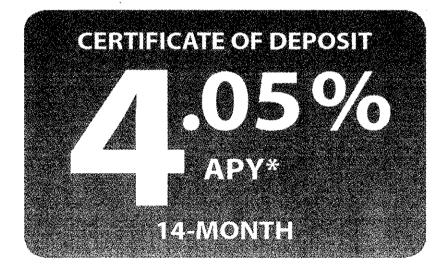

Since then he has earned a Business Master of Administration and Master of Science degree from Florida Institute of Technology with an emphasis on contract management. He is also a graduate of Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., one of the few civilians to complete the eight-year course. He started with a class of 80 and seven graduated.

It appears Franck enjoys dispensing information whether in written or verbal form. Though his PS work has limited distribution to civilians, his work of "Elmwood Endures: History of a Detroit Cemetery" in 1996 is available for all to read. He also is writing the forward to a coffee table book featuring street scenes of Detroit in 1889 for general purchase, soon to be released.

From the streets of Detroit to "I haven't picked up a racket the back roads of Army installations in Alabama, California or Missouri, Franck and Half-he recent Michigan Court of Appeals ruling that keeps a sweeping reform of state government off the ballot has focused attention on the ballot measure process itself.

Eight new ballot measures

The proposal, called Reform Michigan Government Now, was rejected for technical reasons but it also was extraordinarily bad public policy. However, that doesn't mean citizen-led initiatives are bad. The right ballot measures would let voters go "over the heads" of legislators, who are proving themselves unwilling or unable to fix Michigan's urgent fundamental problems.

Here are eight ballot measures that would offer voters a single, honest, straightforward opportunity to fix something that's not working well in Michigan. For many years Mackinac Center analysts have recommended each of them as good policy.

◆ Right-to-work. A right-to-work law means employers cannot agree to fire a worker for not supporting a union. Unions retain their monopoly bargaining status, but right-towork protection is one step toward workplace fairness and state economic recovery. From 2002 to 2007, Michigan lost 5 percent of its jobs while the 22 right-to-work states increased their payrolls by 9 percent.

◆ State spending limitation. Allow state spending to increase, but only in proportion to growth in population and inflation. If a version of this plan had been in effect, it would have retarned about $8 billion to Michigan taxpayers from 1995-2007 and built a $2.5 billion rainy day fund.

◆ Universal education tax credit. A plan we proposed in the late 1990s would leave intact the constitutional prohibition on vouchers while allowing parents to choose the safest and best public or private schools for their children. The tax credit would be available for income earners, property owners and businesses who support the education of a child attending the school of his or her choice. The credit would be limited to half of the state's per-pupil spending allotment, which we estimated would have saved the state's School Aid Fund more than $500 million in the 10 years prior to 2008.

◆ Compensation for regulatory taking of property. Property regulations can be an invisible tax that chases businesses from the state or keeps them from locating here in the first place. For example, overzealous wetlands regulation can effectively "take" property from its owner by severely restricting its use. One way to better balance the public benefit and private cost of such regulations would call for govern-

Greatest block party success

To the Editor:

The Village, downtown Grosse Pointe, knows how to throw a party and in the face of some of the worst weather conditions in recent memory.

Grosse Pointe's Greatest Block Party was a real success. True to the show business mantra, "The Show Must Go On," the block party was staged and people did come de-

But this year, the greater success lies in the almost superhuman dedication of our volunteers, sponsoring organizations, exhibitors, merchants, performers, artists, city personnel, restaurants and event chairpersons who refused to buckle under the weight of record rainfall and persevered with a smile for the benefit of those who attended. The show did go on!

It will only invite the inevitable possibility of exclusion to attempt to thank each and every individual or organization for their efforts on our behalf.

Suffice to say in the truest sense, we could not have done it without you. Thank you all.

Political signs

To the Editor:

Last night two Obama/Biden signs were stolen from my front lawn.

The result will be that the Obama campaign gets another contribution for replacement signs. More importantly I became mad and now I will be actively campaigning for Obama.

When I reported this to the police I was told there have been "several" such incidents.

It is unfortunate that in a law abiding community such as Grosse Pointe, stealing is becoming part of politics.

LINOS JACOVIDES Grosse Pointe Farms

New adventures of an old citizen

ments to either compensate a property owner for legal restrictions placed on property, or let the owner use the land as intended.

◆ Paycheck protection. When unions take dues right out of worker paychecks, some of those dollars inevitably get spent on politics. For example, the Michigan Education Association took $66.6 million from school employee paychecks in 2007 and it spent $2.3 million on politics that year — not counting PAC money, which is separate. Paycheck protection would require the union to get workers' consent first.

◆ Right-to-work, limited to public school teachers. Gov. John Engler told the Legislature in October 1993 that no teacher should lose his or her job for deciding not to support a labor union. MEA disbursements in 2007 totaled $124.7 million, of which it reported spending $16.4 million on representation and $56.3 million on overhead.

◆ Supermajority or voter approval of tax increases. Sixteen states have at least some sort of legislative supermajority requirement to raise taxes. One innovative proposal would require voter approval of all tax increases unless passed by a 3/5 supermajority of both houses. This likely would have prevented last year's highly unpopular $1.4 billion tax hike.

◆ Part-time Legislature. Little evidence suggests that Michigan would be less well governed with a part-time Legislature like those in 40 other states. In 2007 our state lawmakers became the second-highest paid in the nation.

Michigan is one of just 27 states where residents can vote directly on constitutional and certain legislative questions, and one of only 15 states that lets the people enact and overturn laws and constitutional amendments. Yet, most Michigan voters aren't aware they can wield such legislative power.

Michigan lawmakers are unlikely to pass any of these eight ideas into law any time soon, even though a case can be made that each one would help turn around Michigan's moribund economy. Sometimes the people have to act when legislators won't.

ne of the bright spots in an otherwise bland TV season features an alumnus from the successful "Seinfeld" program, namely Julia Louis-Dreyfus who stars in the "New Adventures of Old Christine." The sitcom monitors the lifestyle changes of a divorcee attempting to re-enter the world of dating and socializing. Its humor is sophisticated and yet somewhat zany.

Watching Christine attempt to acclimate herself to new challenges impacted with me as I entered 2008 looking forward to turning 65 years old.

The benefits inherent in reaching this milestone seem to outweigh the downside of creaking bones and other ailments too many to enumerate.

There is the advantage of Medicare wherein most of my medical expenses will be handled by our benevolent government.

And of course this is the year that Social Security benefits again have been increased without my having to endure a performance review. So all signs pointed to reaping the fruits of old age.

On the other hand, I have always prided myself in being in tip-top shape evidenced by more than 30 years of daily five-mile runs and competing in duathlons so Medicare would hopefully just be something to hold in abeyance.

The first six months of the year have grounded me back to reality when it comes to avoiding illnesses and ailments that heretofore have been a stranger to me. Little did I know the milestone of turning 65 would become a Right now, this whole disclosure has elevated my spirits and physical well-being to a stage higher than if I were being medicated by the multitude of pill bottles in my medicine cabinet.

The parade of maladies began first with a biopsy taken from my nose which I always considered part of my panache and mystique. Fortunately I learned that it was not malignant but the timeframe awaiting for results is always disconcerting. So for the time being, my honker is safe.

My next adventure came with the onslaught of pneumonia. This curtailed my running and as such my waist started to expand without the daily pounding of the pavement. To make matters worse, the medication gave me an unexpected yet truly unforgettable case of severe constipation, the dreaded hinder binder, which necessitated a trip to the hospital.

Once there I was treated to the Rolls Royce of enemas, namely the unforgettable molasses enema. Yes, molasses. From here on, gingerbread cookies will not be a part of my nightly snacking.

On a positive note, the weight I had packed on during this nightmare painstakingly yet gleefully disappeared. Losing seven pounds almost put me back to my fighting weight.

Having completed that experience I moved on to have a creatine kidney test. Fortunately it proved to be uneventful but provided just another journey in turning 65.

Then to round out my weekly schedule of doctor and hospital visits, my ultrasound prostate exam came back positive. That put me in a search of a methodology for treating what I'm told is a relatively uneventful situation if discovered and addressed early on.

There are myriad treatments for this rather common condition, so I quickly accumulated a new treasure trove of reading material. And offspring, relatives, friends and associates offered names of health care professionals, who specialize in prostate cancer, so I was confident that this hurdle would pass.

As a daily runner, I enjoy a good hurdle every now and then as long as I can land on my feet.

So after all this research and thought provoking conversations with physicians, on June 21 I entered Henry Ford Hospital for robotic surgery. Needless to say with more than 5,000 such procedures under their belt — so to speak — the doctors and nurses at Henry Ford are not only the pioneers of this type of surgery but they are the experts.

While at the hospital we met people from London, England; Kansas; and Georgia undergoing the same procedure.

My six months of agonizing over this ailment came to a pleasant ending when the doctors told me that the operation was a success and that I would "not be dying of prostate cancer."

So I crossed that off my list of maladies. And after a month of rest I continued my daily five-mile runs, maybe moving a little faster now that I had that pesky prostate removed which obviously was weighing me down. In fact I just recently competed in a 10mile race where I finished 60th out of 81 runners in my age group. The team at Henry Ford Hospital in the Vattikuti Urology Institute are not some of the best — they are the best.

The physicians and nurses and assistants are remarkable. Their caring and sensitivity is unparalleled.

Dr. Peabody and his team of caring health care professionals and their exemplary bedside manners are top notch. He, like me, is a runner and I look forward to going headto-head with him one day.

I obviously would allow him to beat me so as not to embarrass him among his colleagues. Seriously, he managed to make the whole surgery experience and the aftermath uneventful with his calming mannerisms.

And a very special plaudit and tip of the hat to Nurse Andrea Simone who, despite the time of day or night or the repetition of our questions, was always there to assist us.

Her sensitivity and followup is unparalleled and it gave us great confidence knowing that if we had a question we could depend on her.

We know she juggled her schedule to accommodate us on several occasions when we needed some direction on an issue. There is none better than Ms. Simone.

I realize many of you will conclude that this is too much information and perhaps a bit maudlin. But as someone who writes for a hobby, I find it cathartic. In fact, right now, this whole disclosure has elevated my spirits and physical well-being to a stage higher than if I were being medicated by the multitude of pill bottles in my medicine cabinet.

So just like Christine, I am attempting to acclimate myself to the new world of senior citizens turning 65.

Oh, for the days of a simple runny nose.

I SAY By Karen Fontanive

A trip is worth a thousand memories

fter years of discussion and several months of planning, my family and I visited Italy this past summer. The idea started percolating about four years ago. Our youngest was 8 at the time and my husband and I felt she was a little too young to appreciate and remember such a trip. Every factor, other than the value of the dollar against the Euro, converged to make this the best time to go.

So my husband, now 12year-old daughter, 15-year-old son, mom, mother-in-law and I spent 12 days in Italy. It was a whirlwind. Our hope was that our children would gain an appreciation for the enormity of the world and where their ancestors hailed. We took a quick tour of Rome visiting the major spots — and taste-testing gelato.

Then Florence. What a beautiful, quaint town. We didn't take any formal tours, but walked around the city, shopped the many street vendors, traversed the Ponte Vecchio - and taste-tested gelato. We went to Lake Como and experienced one of the most beautiful places I'd ever seen. The city of Belaggio was breathtaking with its hillside gardens and villas, stores and restaurants and its view of the lake and surrounding mountains and towns. We also tastetested gelato.

We visited Venice and took the required gondola ride and taste-tested gelato. In between the hectic travels we rented a car and drove to Canale d'Agordo, the town where my paternal grandparents were born. My cousin, Alfonso, who grew up and still lives in Canale, lived in the United States for a couple of years. It was wonderful to see him again.

Alfonso, his wife, Yvonne, and their mothers welcomed us, inviting us into their homes. They took us around the area: to the home where my grandfather was born, to a park with a waterfall and to the little towns on the mountainsides above Canale. We stayed in the town's pensione — bed and breakfast — and ate some of the best food. Gnocchi and ravioli, no taste-testing gelato.

While the history, art and architecture of the large cities was spectacular, it was this simple town, my ancestral home, that was my favorite part of the trip. So different from where I call home, yet so familiar. Maybe it was because we spent the most time here and therefore had some time to relax. Perhaps it was because we could finally have conversations with people other than ourselves (my cousin, his wife and her mother all speak English very well). Or perhaps it was because it seemed familiar and comfortable.

My parents had told stories about the town and the people they'd met there so it was like I'd been there before. But it was also familiar because I could see features of my relatives from here in the faces of the people I saw there.

My dad often told the story about when he visited while he was serving in the Army. The bus dropped him off in the center of town and a person looked at him and said, "You're from the family of Paoi" and took my dad to his relatives.

I could understand that now. In one person's face I saw my cousin, Alan, and in another person's face I saw my cousin, Natalie. It was familiar.

We went to the cemetery where five or six last names dominated, including Fontanive and Bramezza, my grandmother's maiden name. It was familiar.

The Fontanive name was everywhere, including many a store window. Even a town there is named Fontanive. As one gentleman from Padua with whom I was speaking to in a souvenir shop said when I told him my last name, "Half the town is named Fontanive." It was familiar.

As I reflected upon this trip, finally enjoying what my parents had spoken about so often, I wondered what my children would remember, what would be their favorite memory. I hope they will remember the Colosseum and the gondola ride, as well as playing cards on the train and scratching instant lottery tickets in Como. I hope they'll remember the Sistine Chapel and throwing coins in the Trevi Fountain as well as giggling about posing their grandmothers below a shop sign that they thought said "antiques." I hope they'll remember the beauty and simplicity of Canale which gave them part of their roots.

I asked my 12-year-old daughter what she remembered most about the trip.

"Throwing up." Trip tip No. 1: Be sure to give children susceptible to motion sickness Dramamine before they get in a stick-shift automobile driving up and down winding mountain roads.

But then, she turned to me and said, "I'll remember all of it."

From woods to cities, part deux ast week we left off on the time line with business as almost usual for farmers despite the siege of Detroit by Pontiac. 1774 Captain Alexander Grant, commander of the British Navy on the Great Lakes, married Therese Barthe, a 16-year-old French Catholic from Detroit. Grant served in the same army with George Washington at the surrender of Fort Duquesne and with Lord Amherst on Lake Champlain where he had been detailed to Naval Command.

In about 1775, Grant bought a 640 acre farm in Grosse Pointe and built a house know as "Grant's Castle."

It was described in an early newspaper as being 60 feet wide and 280 feet long, just south of where the unfinished John Dodge house now stands. Grant bought the farm from his brother-in-law, John Askin. Askin later became the fatherin-law of Elijah Brush, the founder of the well-known Brush family, also associated with Grosse Pointe.

Grant was also lieutenant governor of the county which led him to entertain the great Tecumseh and other Indian chiefs at his Grosse Pointe estate. He was also a member of the Governor's Executive Council that for many years ruled nearly half the continent.

In addition to his son and 11 daughters, who are described in an existing letter as the finest girls in this part of the country, Grant purchased from the Indians a 3-year-old boy who had been stolen from his home in the Ohio country. He adopted him and when he married Judith Campau, Grant gave him the farm later owned by T. P. Hall. It is still a mystery how Grant was able to continue in Grosse Pointe after the United States took over Michigan in 1796. He lived there until his death in 1813, a few months before Perry's victory on Lake Erie.

• 1775 Gregor McGregor and Francois Millehomme, both owners of Grosse Pointe property, figure in the records as being involved in brawls in the city.

• 1789 William Forsyth, whose sons later owned a large amount of Grosse Pointe property, petitioned for the sum of 381 pounds in damages for a "ball alley" destroyed to make room for an extension of the Fort.

• 1796 Detroit was taken over by the United States; this led to the establishment of a Land Board, which determined the ownership of all private claims out to Gaukler's Point.

• 1796 The following families, still well known in Grosse Pointe, were already in possession of farms: Poupard, Campau, Socia, Rivard, Ellair, Vernier, Renaud, Allard and Kerby.

• 1798 Father Gabriel Richard came to Detroit and later to the Pointe as a visiting priest in 1800.

• 1805 A crucifix 20 feet in height, which had been carved by an Indian, stood on the bank of the lake just beyond Vernier Road.

• 1819 Pierre Provencal retired from business in Detroit and built a house in Grosse Pointe. He and his wife ran a small free kindergarten and school in their home. Part of the house still stands, but was moved in 1899 to the southeast corner of Lakeview and Kercheval, a block beyond Moross. Between 1825 and 1833 a log hut was built at the

• 1846 The four-acre site of St. Paul's Church was bought for $200.

• 1851 The Detroit and Grosse Pointe Plank Road Company built a toll road with gates at Meldrum, Van Dyke and just east of the present City of Grosse Pointe limits.

• 1850-1860 Summer homes were built in Grosse Pointe by D. Bethune Duffield and Francis Palms. Before 1860, the brick house which still stands at the corner of Three Mile Drive and Jefferson, once owned by H. F. Wardwell, was built by Henry Seitz. This is the oldest brick house in Grosse Pointe.

• 1862 Theodore H. Hinchman, a leading merchant in those days, built where the Grosse Pointe War Memorial now stands.

• 1866 Dudley B. Woodbridge, son of former Governor and United States Senator William Woodbridge, built a year-round home by Lochmoor Boulevard.

• 1871 Charles and Edward Moran of Grosse Pointe reclaimed the Grand Marais, about 900 acres of land between Jefferson and the lake and river, by throwing up a dike and using a steam pump. • 1875 Joseph H. Berry, president of Berry Brothers, Inc. bought a piece of lakefront property (adjoining the Alger house) and an old house which he used summers until 1882 when he built the large brick and stone house there.

• 1875 John S. Newberry and James McMillan, later a United States senator, built quite similar houses on property known as Lake Terrace. They owned together with their neighbor, Brush, a long dock where the Newberry yacht, "Truant," and Brush's yacht, "Lillie," were moored.

These boats were used partly for pleasure, but also as the best way to get to Detroit in the summer months. Driving a horse and buggy to Detroit in muddy weather was, at this time, likely to take between four and five hours.

• 1876 A non-denominational Protestant Church was built at the southwest corner of Kerby and Lake Shore.

• 1876 Rufus M. Kerby was operating the Grosse Pointe Post Office and a small store next to the church. In 1893, the building was moved back on Kerby and used as the first village hall until 1912.

• 1879 A bicentennial celebration was held in Grosse Pointe to commemorate the christening of Lake Sainte Claire. It included a sailboat regatta, speeches, poems and songs.

• 1879 Grosse Pointe Village was organized and included only the property between Fisher and Weir.

• 1880 Theodore P. Hall, a banker, built a home which he called "Tonnancour," with a frontage of 600 feet on the lake, where Tonnancour Road is now. • 1882 William K. Muir, engaged primarily in the railroad business but also interested in shipping and manufacturing, built "Otsikita Villa" near where the Waldo Avery house now stands. Otsikita was the Indian name for Lake Sainte Claire. Next to it was the cottage of Cleveland Hunt, one of Detroit's foremost attorneys, which had been built a few years earlier.

• 1882 The yacht, "Leila," owned by a dozen summer residents, was used for a number of years to get to their offices in Detroit. • 1882 Henry B. Ledyard and Hugh McMillan built almost identical houses on property known as "Cloverleigh" and later occupied by the houses of L. D. Buhl and Robert Kuhn. Ledyard was president of the Michigan Central Railroad and McMillan was associated in business with his brother, the senator and John S. Newberry.

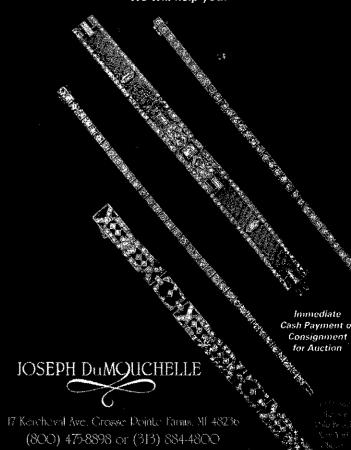

• 1882 W. B. Moran, prominent both in law and manufacturing, built his summer home "Bellevue" on the lake a little south of Moross.

Ice rink construction

By Brad Lindberg Staff Writer

A shallow, pear-shaped excavation next to the new warming building at Pier Park marks where an ice skating rink is expected to be ready for action this December.

In spring, when recreational interests switch to warmweather activities, the rink will double as a basketball court.

The courts and nearby building (which will serve as a warming or cooling center depending on the season), paddle tennis courts and tennis courts result from the latest Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation drive.

Foundation members invite Farms residents to survey the improvements during a classic car show at the park noon to 3 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 28.

Matthew Tepper, Farms assistant city manager, said the basketball court will relieve congestion from other areas of the municipal park.

Detroit has been difficult to deal with. The latest rate we got was a 21 percent increase. We⁴re upset about that. We have to look at saving water costs and if we didn't at least study the feasibility of it, we would be remiss in our duties."

City Manager Dale Krajniak explained the city has been studying the possibility of building its own water treatment facility for four years. Some of the city's recent actions, he said, were pro-active steps to ensure that if the project was to go forward, the process would be easier.

"We have had talks with council and it was the sense from council that we should proceed with studying the idea of separating from the Detroit water system. As part of that process, we have submitted requests for permits, just so we have an idea of what our costs will be. For several of those permit requests, 60 percent of the design needed to be submitted. We have looked at several locations for the plant if we were to build one," he said,

"We looked at the area at Mack and Alter and also Jefferson and Maryland, but it appears that the area at Barrington and Windmill build the plant there? No."

Several residents weren't convinced, especially as it relates to the purchase of the vacant home and the possibility of the city demolishing the house and using the lot for parking.

"It causes me concern that you would buy a piece of property and remove it from the tax rolls," said Windmill Pointe resident Paul Lavins. "That tells me you have a hidden agenda somewhere."

Councilman Greg Theokis voiced an objection to Lavins' statement.

"I can say categorically that there is no hidden agenda," he responded. "It would be wrong for us not to study this and it would be wrong for us not to be proactive."

Residents were responding to the city's purchase of the vacant home and its overture to other homeowners with property adjacent to the home in question who had been approached about possibly selling their homes to the city.

"In fairness, it was premature on my part to approach those residents," Krajniak said. "But as we study the plans, we knew we should consider providing for parking. But we don't have to use the lot for parking, and we can always sell the lot after knocking down the house."

That caught the attention of Windmill Pointe resident Paul Schaap, who offered to purchase the property from the Pointe Drive would be our city for $1 more than it paid for

"We love our area, and the "But are we certain we'll idea that you would pave over that lot with all that beautiful vegetation is unbelievable," he said. "What I want to see is a clear statement from the city indicating that the property will not be used for a parking lot."

Theokis called for residents to allow the city to go ahead with the study, and promised to keep the residents informed as it proceeds.

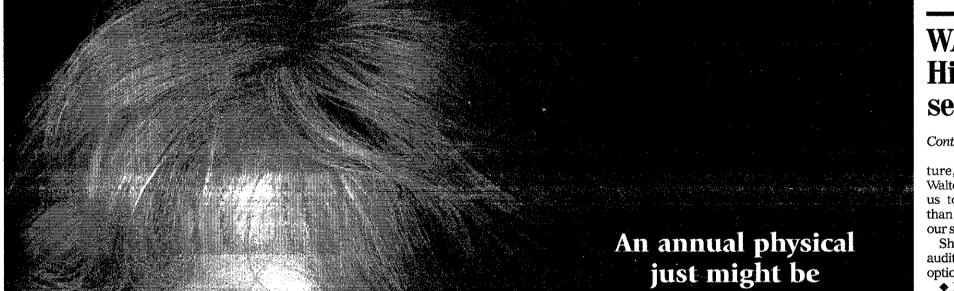

"Everyone has taken the study and the house situation and blown it way out of proportion," he said.

"That's because we haven't been informed," replied Lavins.

Theokis then proposed a motion that would not allow for the closing of Barrington or for residential lots to be used for parking on Windmill Pointe or Barrington should the water treatment plant, go forward. The motion passed unanimous-

Barrington resident Carol Rodriguez thanked the council for its actions and encouraged city administrators to keep residents informed as the city studies the feasibility of separating from Detroit.

"We're not opposed to something that would reduce our water bills," she said. "But it has not been proven to us that we need a separate water treatment plant. We're also concerned over our property values and the quality of life for Barrington and Pemberton residents. We're concerned that decisions are being made without input from residents. We encourage more public meetings.'

◆ Increase rates in 2010-11 by $10, then by $6 the following year and the following year by another $5.

Kenyon recommended a third option, based on uncertainty about additional Detroit price increases, if any.

"I recommend we increase our water rates now by 10 percent, which is less than half of what Detroit assessed us, so we can make sure our water fund is stable," Kenyon said. "Ten percent is 10 percent, but if you don't do it now, it could be 15-20 percent next year."

In comparison with the other Grosse Pointes, which is hard to do because cities compile water bills differently, Kenyon placed Shores water rates at the bottom. His ranking, based on using 1 1/2 units of water, is:

- ◆ Park, $136.59,
- ♦ Woods, $112.05, ◆ City, $87.48,
- ◆ Farms, $85.21 and
- ◆ Shores, $76.06.

The Shores increase went into effect Wednesday, Sept. 17, yet didn't guarantee price stability. Detroit still sets the base rate for water and sewer service.

"The sewage rate's going to go up about 4 percent,' Kenyon said.

Gas logs look natural and burn much cleaner than wood-burning fireplaces. No more treks out to the garage for more wood, just open the valve and your fire is started. Soon you will see the glowing coals and embers and feel the room warming up. Heat from gas logs is up to 45% efficient compared to wood (23 percent). Conversion to either a single- or triple-burner gas log system is easy. Michigan Fireplace and Barbecue can make a gas line connection to your existing water heater or furnace and run it to your fireplace. Then the grate carrying the gas logs is set in place. Gravel and decorative accessories like chunks of wood or pine cones complete the look.

Telling the stories of America

By Beth Quinn Staff Writer

"Works of art are more than mere ornaments for the elite, They are primary documents of a civilization. A written record or a textbook tells you one thing; but art reveals something else. Our students and citizens deserve to see American art that shows us where we have come from, what we have endured, and where we are headed."

--- Bruce Cole National Endowment for the Humanities chairman.

In 2007, the National Endowment for the Humanities launched Picturing America to help teach American school children about the country's history and culture through art.

Three Grosse Pointe Public schools - Trombly Elementary and Brownell and Parcells middle schools — are among the first group of more than 26,000 schools and public libraries nationwide to participate in the free program.

According to Cole, an unprecedented number of schools and libraries applied during the first application period which was from January to April of this year.

We are so pleased and feel so blessed to receive this grant," said Trombly art teacher Natalie Zoufal. "We are so lucky to have use of these materials without spending extra money."

Zoufal applied for the program on behalf of Trombly after receiving an e-mail from the NEH.

Prior to the start of school this year, the three schools received huge boxes containing 40 24-by-26-inch reproductions of American art. Since each piece is double-sided, 80 different images are shown.

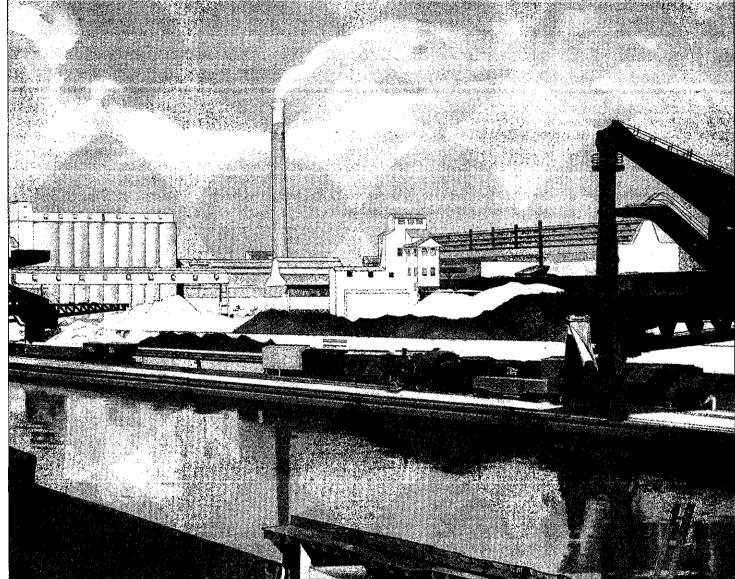

"They are very high-quality and huge. I am 5'3" and they are almost as big as me," Zoufal said.

The NEH selected "masterpieces that bring us face to face with the people, places and events that have shaped our country. The images are just a small sample of significant works. They serve as a starting point for learning about our nations's history and artistic legacy."

Included in the works are Gilbert Stuart's portrait of George Washington and Alexander Gardner's photograph of Abraham Lincoln.

The posters also depict historical events such as Grant Wood's "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere," American crafts such as guilts of the 19th and 20th centuries, and architecture including Frank Lloyd Wright's Fallingwater.

The images also depict

"The material is really great for cross-curriculum activities,' Zoufal said. "They can be used for library media, American history and social studies."

She also noted that she received a lot of positive feedback from parents about the reproductions during Trombly's back-to-school night.

The long and boxy 2009 Ford Flex built on a car chassis with carlike characteristics, has a one of a kind 'polarizing' design. This crossover has room for seven passengers.

This 2009 Ford Flex is a head turner

he new Ford Flex looks: Like a child's toy? Like a small, black-and-silver school bus? Odd? Old-fashioned? New?

Interesting? Unusual? Familiar? Or should we say, as parents sometimes do when questioned about who the baby looks like in the family: It looks like itself.

The 2009 seven-passenger Ford Flex doesn't resemble anything in its immediate family. Or anyone else's, but dare we say for mini-van or sport utility interior capacity, it is certainly different. So much so that Ford describes its design as "polarizing.'

Perfect adjective for an election year. no?

Flex bowed this past summer in these parts. You likely have seen few, usually black and always with a bright white or silver roof, plying our highways and byways.

See FLEX, page 23A The 2009 Flex pays a visit to the restored Ford Piquette Avenue Plant in Detroit — birthplace of its most famous relative, the Ford Model T.

TEST DRIVE By Greg Zyla

The 2008 Nissan Armada is ready for off-road battles or for the daily grind. It also combines tough and classy in a redesigned exterior and interior.

All-new 2008 Nissan Armada SE 4x4 his week we set sail in Nissan's biggest model, the Armada, a beast of an SUV whose starting price is, by comparison, notably small — base price: $38,050; price as tested: $42,330.

Nissan has the eight-passenger Armada ready for all terrain with features such as allmode four-wheel drive, 18-inch alloy wheels, rear sonar, oil-pan skidplate and an E-85 compatible fuel system.

Armada has a redesigned exterior and interior. Notables include privacy glass in second and third rows, chrome-finish power heated side-view mirrors, and chrome front door handles to match a large chrome grille up front.

Not even the "Heroic Capability" tag Nissan gives Armada's $3,500 option package, however, can save it from low fuel-mileage numbers. This 5,993-pound truck, which stretches a total length of 207.7 inches, or more than 17 feet, is rated at 12 miles per gallon city and 17 highway.

However, in Armada's defense, good fuel mileage isn't what this SUV is built for. A 5.6liter, double-overhead cam V8 produces 317 horsepower and 385 pound-feet of torque, which allows towing of up to 9,000 pounds. The engine mates to a five-speed automatic transmission with a tow/haul mode and a two-speed transfer case including 4-Low and Auto 4x4 settings

Nissan stops Armada using big four-wheel disc brakes that work in tandem with an antilock braking system. Front and rear stabilizer bars help limit the sway of this tall structure 6 feet 6 inches, and further control is gained through an independent rear suspension.

The Armada offers consumers a truly formidable look for 2008 that combines to shout, "get out of the way." If this is Armada's exterior message, the interior says, "come on in." Surprisingly, the tough exterior reveals a more soft design that is brightened by our tester's almond color.

The captain of this ship sits in an eight-way power chair, has power-adjustable pedals and a 7-inch information screen. There are three rows of overhead consoles and six lights, and the rear flip-out quarter windows are an appreciated touch for third-row passengers. We also enjoyed the illuminated entry system with light fadeout, a feature that's both aesthetically pleasing and practical for the climb in and out.

The six-CD, MP3/WMA CD playback, eight-speaker audio system that comes standard was replaced by an 11-speaker and subwoofer Bose audio system with XM satellite radio. It is part of a $2,500 "Driver Package" addition in the Heroic Capability package. That same $2,500 buys a rear-view monitor (recommended), front fog lights, front sonar — combining with the rear sonar to help with parking and back-up alerts ---- and auto-dimming rear-view mirror with compass and Homelink universal transceiver, and a power lift gate.

The Armada protects its troops with roofmounted curtain side-impact and rollover support air bags for outboard occupant head protection, as well as the Nissan Advanced Air Bag System and front-seat active head restraints. It features Vehicle Dynamic Control and a tirepressure monitoring system that includes individual tire readout. In addition to the Driver Package, other extras that are part of the Heroic Capability include $115 for splash guards, $220 for a six-piece floor and cargo mat set, $50 for a cargo area tray and $650 for the SE tow package that includes a receiver tow hitch with seven-pin wiring harness, heavy-duty battery, 3.36 final drive gear ratio and auto-leveling suspension. There's also a $745 destination charge.

Other important numbers include a 28-gallon fuel tank and 123.2-inch wheelbase.

It's noteworthy that among two of its competitors, the Armada plays second fiddle in the fuel mileage category. The Toyota Sequoia gets 13 city and 18 highway and its sixspeed transmission with overdrive, while the Chevy Tahoe with a four-speed with over-larger capabilities, cast off with the Armada and enjoy the ride. We give it a 7.5 on a scale of 1 to 10.

Likes: Interior comfort combined with mechanical capabilities and size creates ultimate driver confidence. Dislikes: Shouldn't splash guards and fog lamps be standard on a $38,000 SUV? Greg Zyla is a syndicated automotive columnist.

FLEX: Seven passengers

Darkened windows which cover pillars supporting the roof add both to the mystery of the Flex and to its horizontal lines.

One extremely nice surprise is the ease of getting in and out of the front and second-row seats. You neither are climbing up nor dropping down to the driver's or front passenger's seat.

The rear passenger doors are extremely wide and open way out. This might be a problem if you are parked close to another vehicle or do not have a spacious garage. This is the kind of thing that can surprise and disappoint a buyer once a vehicle is purchased.

But for our purposes, those wide opening doors are spectacular forgetting into the second row seating where leg room is nothing less than astonishing. Even the third row seats are fairly comfortable for an adult, though reaching them is a bit of a hassle. One of the second row seats must be folded and tumbled forward, an act we did not execute with much grace or speed.

The Flex may be ordered with room for six or seven passengers. The 2009 models include SE, SEL and Limited, Our SEL had front drive. Allwheel drive is an option.

Ford's 3.5-liter 262-horsepower V-6 with a six-speed automatic is the standard powerplant. The all-wheel-drive Flex is rated at 16 miles per gallon average in the city and 22 mpg on the highway. The front-drive version weighs less and is a little more efficient: 17 mpg city/24 mpg highway.

The SEL front drive test Flex had a sticker price of $32,070. It was modestly equipped with extras including an $895 lighting package that allows you to choose a color for interior lights like the nifty ring around the inside of the front cupholders; the silver two-tone roof tacked $395 to the bill; and the wireless SYNC package was another $395.

Flex SEL and Flex Limited models offer an optional Vista Roof with four glass panels that provide natural light to occupants of all three rows of passengers. The forward panel is a moonroof that opens to let in fresh air.

Flex also offers an optional refrigerated console. Mounted between the second row captain's chairs in the six-passenger vehicle, the available compressor-driven refrigerator can cool up to seven 12-ounce cans, four half-liter bottles or two 20ounce bottles from room temperature to 41 degrees in a little more than two and a half hours --- 40 percent faster than a standard home refrigerator, Ford said.

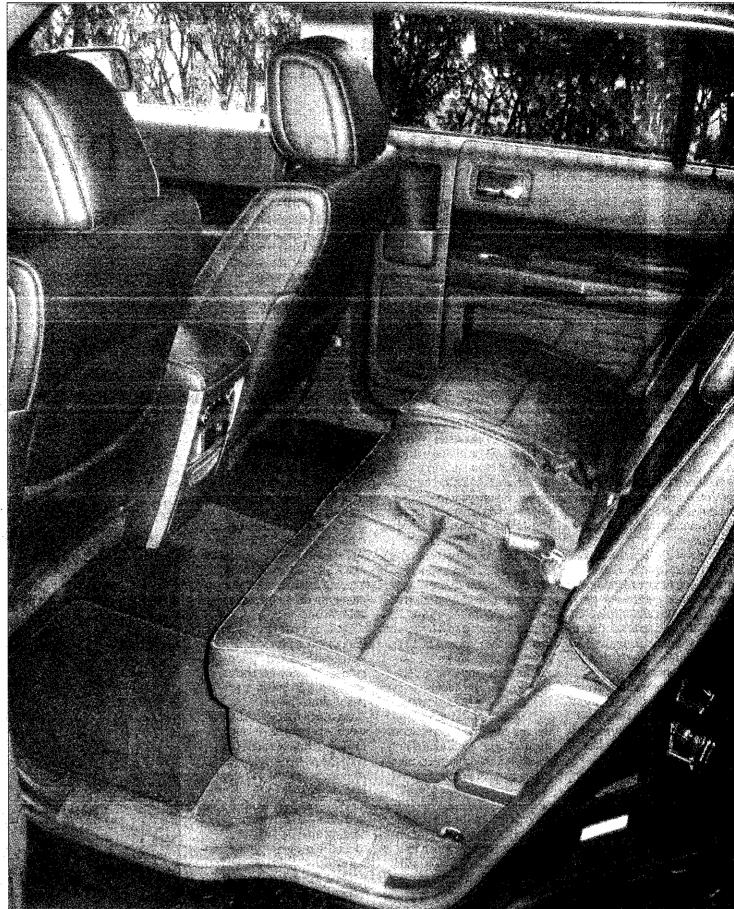

A reverse camera system that displays the area behind the vehicle on the navigation system screen when the vehicle is in reverse is another option. The camera is mounted in the bottom of Flex's liftgate badge. These systems are a great feature, though the overall visibility for the driver in the Flex makes one less of a necessity that in something like a full size sport utility.

All Flex models incorporate the new no filler cap EasyFuel, where you'll put the pump nozzle directly into the neck of the gas tank without unscrewing a cap or lid, and leaving it on the pump or pavement by mistake.

Flex is easy to park for a seven passenger vehicle and it offers a tight turning radius.

Interior controls follow the general trend of black buttons with tiny white letters or icons. We were surprised to discover, after several days in the Flex, there were additional buttons hidden from casual view by an overhang at the edge of the instrument panel.

Flex is assembled at Ford's Oakville, Ontario plant. It joins the smaller, five-passenger crossover Edge and the larger crossover Taurus X in the lineup Strikingly clean and modern inside and out, the new Audi TT Roadster offers quick and light handling with comfort. Today's 2.0-liter engine gives plenty of extra oomph.

Audis are meant to be premium vehicles udi's little two-seat sports car created a big impression when it arrived along with the 21st century.

The Audi TT Roadster made the most of its modest Volkswagen platform and won a whole new set of fans for Audi. After years of minimal change, the TT has been redone.

Although it is still a diminutive two seater, the new TT now stretches 5.4 inches longer on a 1.8-inch longer wheelbase. It's just more than three inches wider too and a fraction of an inch taller. That means more comfort for driver and passenger, but still keeps the quick, tight handling that a compact car delivers.

Weight at 3,131 pounds, is kept in check by clever use of Audi Space Frame technology. The car's body utilizes 58 percent aluminum and 42 percent steel. The steel parts are distributed for weight balance and also to provide rigidity in this open-roof vehicle.

Audi's engineers passed on a hard folding top and chose to stick with the old-fashioned cloth top for the TT. Although it permits more sound to enter the cabin, the cloth top is lighter and gives the car a low center of gravity. It drops in just 12 seconds. A hydraulically operated top is standard on upper level models and is available on the base 2.0-liter model, which uses a manual top with a central catch.

Regardless of how it drops, the top folds in a Z shape, with the topmost section taking the place of a tonneau cover. It's quick, easy and lightweight. And if you feel at all enclosed by the top, once it's down the TT's interior is as big as the whole outdoors.

You can get a 2.0-liter turbocharged four-cylinder engine or a 3.2-liter V6. Horsepower ratings are 200 for the four and 250 for the six. The four-cylinder version with the only transmission you can get on it, a sixspeed automanual, gets from zero to 60 mph in just 6.3 seconds. The V6 will do it in 5.6 seconds.

I, however, have a problem. I want my TT Roadster with the 2.0-liter engine mated with a six-speed manual. Sorry, you can't have that in the United States. If you want to shift for yourself you have to order up the 3.2-liter 6. That's hardly bad news, except for the higher price and lower fuel economy.

My Sahara Silver Metallic tester averaged 25.4 miles per gallon, excellent for a sports car. The EPA numbers are 22 city, 29 highway, so it hit pretty much in the middle. The EPA's green vehicle ratings are 7 for air pollution and 7 for greenhouse gas, good enough to earn the "smartway" classification.

Despite its close accommodations, the interior is welcoming and as an Audi, exquisitely rendered. Gleaming accents on door grips, latch, steering wheel, transmission housing and vents are set perfectly into the satiny plastic panels. The steering wheel features an unusual flat bottom, which increases thigh room, it can feel a little odd as you turn it into a sharp curve. The seats are deeply bolstered, and in my tester, wore a rich saddle brown leather.

The first generation TT, particularly with its 1.8-liter turbo engine, was sometimes maligned as not being a serious sports car. I didn't buy that, considering how many modestly powered twoseaters have delivered more than satisfactory performance over the years. But today's 2.0-liter engine has plenty of extra power, and with the 3.2-liter V6, there's nothing to cry about. My tester's optional Magnetic Ride Suspension gave me a choice of how I wanted the car to handle. This high-tech damping technology employs shock absorber struts with a special fluid in them that contains magnetic particles. With the touch of a button you can apply voltage to the fluid, altering its viscosity, thereby changing the suspension in a split second.

Options can help you build the perfect TT for you. My tester, with its four-cylinder engine and front wheel drive, started at $36,800 plus a $775 destination charge.

On top of that was $12,900 worth of options. The long list included the Premium Package with the power top, leather steering wheel, and 10-way power seats with heat. There was fine leather on those seats and a navigation system, including an iPod interface tucked away in the glove compartment.

The Bose premium sound system included a six-disc changer and Sirius satellite radio. The wheels have been bumped up to 18-inchers. That beautiful silver paint cost $475 extra. All of this put the TT's price at just under $50,000. Suddenly, that seems like a lot for this car as good as it is. Audis are meant to be premium vehicles and the new TT is that and more. You'll need to drive one to see if it does the right thing for you.

TEST DRIVE By Greg Zyla

The 2009 Pontiac Vibe still has the unique, quirky look that turned heads when it debuted in 2002, but it definitely matures into a tougher, bolder ride for 2009.

Feel the vibe of 2009 Pontiac Vibe AWD e're feeling the 'vibe" of a fresh effort from Pontiac - base price: $19,495; price as tested: $22,615.

It's the all-new 2009 Vibe, a small crossover with a more athletic look than the previous generation. This new Vibe also offers more power and the return of both the popular allwheel drive and GT models, which were absent for several years.

While the AWD Vibe starts in the mid-$19,000 range, the base Vibe is less than $16,000, a terrific value for those looking for more economic transportation.

Vibe has all new sheet metal, the windshield has a longer, faster-looking slope, and there are new lighting elements all around, including a glistening, three-tier, 16-inch high taillight assembly.

Setting off the handsome exterior on our AWD Vibe are upgraded, racy, five-spoke 17-inch chrome-clad wheels, a $650 addition from standard steel 16inchers. Fighting the likes of the Nissan Versa and Mazda 3 5-door, the five-passenger Vibe, as with so many models, seeks to grow in size, stature and engine power, so as not to be weak in a macho category, while maintaining good fuel mileage.

The engine options on Vibe's

2009 Pontiac Vibe AWD

long, new-for-2009 list, includes either a more powerful 2.4-liter, 158 horsepower double-overhead cam powerplant as standard on AWD and GT models, while a smaller 1.8-liter DOHC is the choice for base models.

transmission is standard on the -function

AWD, while customers of the 2.4-liter-equipped base or GT model can choose between a standard five-speed manual or a new, five-speed electronically controlled automatic transmission featuring Driver Shift A four-speed automatic Control, with "tap up/tap down"

- West - State - Constrained -

On our AWD model, the 2.4liter, four-speed automatic combination delivers an estimated 20 miles per gallon in the city and 26 on the highway. Meanwhile, with the 1.8-liter engine and the standard manual transmission, EPA fuel economy is estimated at an attention-grabbing 26 city and 32 highway.

Other new performance features on the redesigned Vibe include standard electronic vehicle stability control and tirepressure monitoring systems. Four-wheel disc, anti-lock brakes are standard.

While it was rethinking the exterior, Pontiac tore up the old look inside, creating a driver-focused cockpit with controls and gauges we found easy to use. The high dash-mounted positioning of the gearshift lever is a negative, we believe, since it robs storage space and makes some dials harder to reach. However, Pontiac makes the interior flow nicely together. And the combination of lowgloss materials, varied grains on the instrument panel and satin-metal accents create a premium look.

Standard interior features include air conditioning with rear air ducts, carpeted floor mats, rack and telescopic steering wheel, AM/FM stereo CD player with auxiliary input jack, XM Satellite Radio (first three months paid), 115-volt, three-prong household-style outlet, fold-flat front passenger seat, 60/40 fold-flat rear seat and rear cargo storage system.

You'll note some regular features missing from that list, things like remote keyless entry, power door and window locks, cruise control and front and rear variable intermittent wipers. This will cost you an extra $1,070 in the Preferred Package. We'd prefer something as simple as cruise control to be standard.

Another upgrade option is a

Sun and Sound Package, and these are items you'd expect to be extra on a sub-$20,000 crossover. Included are a power sunroof, seven-speaker Monsoon Premium Sound system that includes MP3 format, leather-wrapped steering wheel with audio controls and leather-wrapped shift knob.

That package is $1,285, while the final option on our '09 Vibe tester is fog lamps for $115.

The Vibe's standard safety package is impressive, highlighted by front, side thorax and pelvic air bags as well as front head curtain and side air bags. The One-year OnStar service Safe and Sound Plan is included.

Other important numbers for the Vibe include 3,295pound curb weight, 102.4-inch wheelbase, 1,500-pound towing capacity and 13.2-gallon fuel tank.

We like the look of the new Vibe and feel it has a worthy combination of function, power and strong mileage numbers. With that, we give it a 7.5 on a scale of 1 to 10.

Likes: Exterior oddball look has had a successful makeover.

Dislikes: Standard features it lacks significantly, even on the higher-priced AWD model.

One expert says drivers can cut down on fuel use, save money and go "green" by dri-. ving a little smarter.

"When it comes to lessening our impact on the environment, every little bit helps," said Steve Short of Enterprise Rent-A-Car. Here are a few of Short's tips:

◆ Lighten the load: On road trips, it's smart to leave behind heavy, unnecessary items. Even for your day-to-day travel, take a few minutes to clean out your car to eliminate extra weight. Pack only what you need, keeping a few items that can come in handy in an emergency.

◆ Reduce speed: For every 10 mph the speed is reduced, drivers improve the fuel economy by four miles per gallon. Staying at or a bit below the speed limit can have a big impact on the environment and vour bank account.

Dog bite

A rottweiler left unattended lot on Mack Avenue, lunged out of an open car window and bit the arm of a passerby, breaking the skin and drawing blood.

The incident occurred at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 21.

The dog's owner provided proof of vaccination and a license. She also indicated the dog was very sick and was expected to live only another month.

Leaving the scene

While responding to a report of a hit and run traffic accident at 1:40 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 18, police pulled over a car with a damaged front end driving somewhat erratically at Cook Road and Ida Lane, the area of the accident.

A breathalyzer test of the driver revealed a blood alcohol level of .275.

The driver did not recall striking another vehicle, but the damage to his car seemed to indicate otherwise, police said.

To varying degrees, young people need help growing up and moving on. Angels' Place offers young men and women homes, training and social opportunities to move out of their parents' house.

Securing a future

By Kathy Ryan Staff Writer

It's dinner time at the sprawling, neat ranch house in Clinton Township. Chicken is on the menu tonight and the talk around the table centers on sports and the day's activities.

It's not unlike dinner tables anywhere else.

Six men come together every night at this table, a family in nearly every sense of the word. They don't share parents, but they do share a brotherhood, a bond forged when each first walked through the front door of this house.

Thanks to the efforts of an organization called Angels' Place, it is now their home.

These men, like the residents of 14 other Angels' Place properties, are developmentally disabled. For 16 years, Angel's Place has offered homes, training and social opportunities for men and women ready to do what others their ages have always done - move out of mom and dad's house, go to work and enjoy time with friends. They just need varying degrees of assistance.

Angels' Place is a private, non-profit agency that provides an extensive array of services to developmentally disabled adults in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. Based in Southfield, it provides residential care, supported independent living and transitional services for its clients as well as support services for families.

Long a patron of Angels' Place, Grosse Pointe Shores resident Mary Ann Van Elslander is determined to make sure the organization's mission continues of providing exceptional residential care. She is spearheading a campaign to establish a $6 million endowment fund for Angels' Place, ensuring a home will always be available for those who need one.

"What we have to understand is that residents of our homes can be with us for as long as 40 years or more," she explained. "Some come to us at age 26, some later in life, but they all have many years ahead of them.

"The purpose of the endow-

CANDIDATE FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE

September 25, 2008

Dear Friends,

Some people have asked me why I focus so much attention on the home foreclosure crisis. I tell them: "A receding tide lowers all boats."

As I have walked door-to-door in our district, I have encountered a distressing number of homes sitting vacant with "For Sale" signs in their front yards. These are homes in the Grosse Pointes as well as in Detroit and Harper Woods neighborhoods. Often, these are homes on my candidate walk-list, so I know a voter lived there in November, 2006.

Many of these homes will eventually be sold at auction, sometimes to brokers who intend to turn them into rental properties. This action will affect the value of all other homes in the community resulting in decline. Downward pressure on home values in adjacent communities will be felt as well.

However, here is the key point: we CAN do something about foreclosures. In many cases, there are problem-solving solutions between the homeowner and the lending institution that can keep people in their homes. What we need is an intermediary to actively pursue those solutions, and if elected, I will use my office and staff in that way.

Frankly, better financial literacy must also be our goal. In the long term, we need to teach better financial management skills and to better regulate the mortgage industry. But in the short term, over the next few years, we must focus on minimizing the damage to our communities from the foreclosure crisis.

My very best regards,

"If elected, I will use my office and staff to work to reduce the number of foreclosures Tim Bledsoe said so!

who may need limited assistance to live on their own and social activities. But it is the residential component that will be the focus of the upcoming gathering.

"I would love to see Angels' Place open a home in this community," said VanElslander. "I know the need is here."

For more than 35 years, Van Elslander has been teaching catechism classes to the developmentally disabled at St. Joan of Arc Parish in St. Clair Shores.

"I got a call when my own children were in school, asking if I could help teach catechism, but with 10 children. I didn't have much spare time during the week," she said. "Then they asked if I could teach in a Saturday morning class for children with special needs, and that was how I started. That was 35 years ago, but the program actually started in 1956. Our oldest student is 65 years old."

While many of her students continue to live at home with their families, Van Elslander and the staff at Angels Place knows that is not always possible. "The families of our residents play a very important role," said Mona McSwain, house manager for MAVE. "Most of our residents go home on weekend visits with their families and for holidays. But we also have residents who no longer have families, either because their parents have died or their siblings have moved from the area. Those residents will go home with a staff member. We always make sure no one spends a holiday alone. They will always have a family." Judging by the calendar on the wall, MAVE residents and those at other Angels Place homes have a lot to do. Their days are spent either at employment opportunities within their communities or at workshop programs. After work, they have regularly scheduled recreational activities including bowling, swimming, baseball and golf. They spend their Saturdays like just about everyone else with haircuts and shopping on the agenda, returning home in time to catch football and baseball games on the big screen television. Sports team banners and memorabilia dominate the living room décor, while trophies won by the residents in Special Olympics competitions decorate the mantle. Each resident has his own bedroom, and a visitor can't help but be struck by how neat and tidy the rooms are kept, not to mention the entire house. House manager McSwain smiled and pointed to the job chart on the wall. "It's a joint effort," she pointed out. "They all share in the cleaning, laundry, cooking and shopping. It's just like home." A home that Van Elslander wants to make sure is always there. For more information on Angels' Place or the endowment campaign, call (248) 350-3577.

Proving that you can teach an old scout leader new tricks, the Lakeshore District of the Boy Scouts of America's Detroit Area Council brought together several leaders from the eastside to teach fellow leaders some new ways to attract boys to scouting.

About 100 leaders turned out for the session held recently at Our Lady Star of the Sea. They were able to visit with experienced scout officials in order to put together strong programs for the upcoming year.

"This is a great way to bring everyone together, and it's a great way for leaders to share ideas for scouts of all levels and all ages," according to Rich Shetler, a Grosse Pointe Woods resident and membership chair for the Lakeshore District.

PASTOR'S CORNER By Rev. Tim Tyler God's extraordinary use of ordinary women, men

Christians: You are ordinary. There is nothing unique about you. You were born the same way everyone else was. You put your pants on the same way everyone else does. There is no sin or temptation that has seized you except what is common to man. All have sinned and fallen short of the glory of God.

One of the worst concepts that ruins us for God is the need to be something special. People spend millions of dollars each year on self esteem books to believe they are unique.

The sooner we learn that we are not important, the sooner we will be available to God. We are not unique; God's grace is. Paul well understood wo simple truths for this when he said, "To me, the very least of all saints, this grace was given." Ephesians 3:8, NASB.

God is extraordinary.

God uses sticks and arks, slingshots and harps, stones and swords, whales and donkeys, fisherman and thieves, tax collectors and prostitutes, housewives and businessmen to do his work. He is extraordinary, we are not.

The key to being used by God is the fact ordinary people are used by an extraordinary God. Abraham, Moses, Joshua, Gideon, Samson, David, Isaiah and all the rest of the Bible hero's were flawed people.

The unique thing about them was that God used these ordinary people in extraordinary ways to show himself through them. This was done so that God was glorified and not man. Don't be deceived, he is the one that is exceptional, not you.

Paul said, "For I am the least of the apostles and do not even deserve to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace to me was not without effect. No, I worked harder than all of them ----yet not I, but the grace of God that was with me." 1 Corinthians 15:9.

God uses the ordinary in extraordinary ways. Let's be ordinary people available to an extraordinary God and see what happens next.

Annual kitchen tour spotlights design

To accommodate large family gatherings, Jim and Joan Tobin on Heather Lane in Grosse Pointe Woods, opened up their family room and kitchen.

The newly-remodeled home will be included in the annual Henry Ford Cottage Hospital Auxiliary Kitchen Tour from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 28.

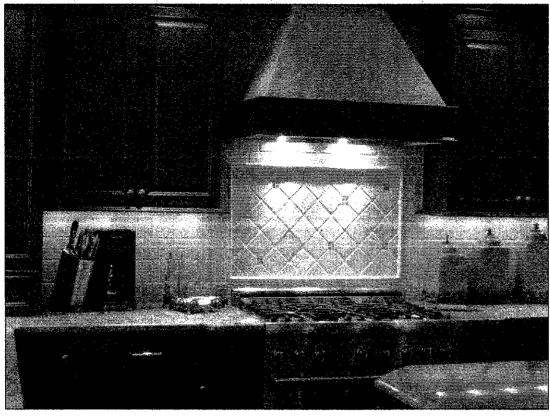

The Kitchen Tour Preview Party is from 4 to 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 27. It includes a tour of all eight kitchens plus hors d'oeuvres, wine and cheese, a light strolling supper and desserts at select homes.

The Tobins removed walls to open up the living space and added 500 square feet to their contemporary kitchen and family room. Jim is one of 13 children and the couple hosts large family gatherings. According to Joan, the couple wanted a large, flowing space to accommodate everyone.

Their living/entertaining space includes a newly renovated outdoor blue stone patio accessible through sliding glass doors. The kitchen has all Thermador built-in appliances and a raised panel ceiling.

Another home on the tour is the home of Drs. Mark Herman and Shiva Marlani on Cloverly in Grosse Pointe Farms.

ASK THE EXPERTS By Glen Clark, M.D. Halloween safety precautions

To keep Halloween a happy event for the children, safety is so important. I know most of the precautions we take as parents are common sense, but a "refresher" course is always crossing only at designated street crossings and looking both ways before crossing. Walk, don't run.

Flashlights and/or reflective clothing are also helpful. Reflective tape can be applied to regular clothing to create a unique costume.

Parents should carry their cell phone in the event of an emergency.

Be sure to dress children appropriately for the weather.

Discard any unpackaged products including fruit. Remember, it's always safest to discard anything in question. It's also important for parents to check the ingredients for potential allergies or reactions to medications. Carving jack-o-lanterns

Allow children to draw the face and clean out the pumpkin seeds. Even kits on the market that claim to be safe

A. on our dad's old jeans and flannel shirt to head out the door to trick-or-treat are gone. Today's elaborate costumes can present some challenging moments for parents. Masks and head gear that inhibit a child's vision should be reserved for small house or classroom parties. Maneuvering dark streets and curbs while wearing restrictive masks could translate into trips and falls that lead to unnecessary visits to the emergency room.

As always, parents should accompany their younger children. If children are old enough to be out alone at night, they are probably too old to trick-or-treat. Be especially diligent in fol-

If purchasing a costume, buy it a few sizes larger so coats and sweaters may be worn underneath.

A good walking shoe is also suggested. A knit headband that covers the ears can be worn under masks and costume hats.

Make sure props such as swords, knives or pitchforks do not have sharp edges. Warn children that even unintentional jabs or pokes with these props can cause injury and that the props are just for show.

Before the little ones enjoy their goodies, parents should be sure to check that the packaging is intact.

If using a candle to illuminate the carved pumpkin, be especially careful not to place it near any flammable object. Keep candle-illuminated pumpkins out of the path of trick-or-treaters to avoid costumes catching fire.

SENIORS

SENIOR SCENE By Ruth Cain

Use caution when driving at night rash of armed robberies in which the victims were elderly and followed to their houses have taken place in metro Detroit these last few weeks.

These attacks took place in Milford, Commerce Township, Dearborn and Farmington Hills. The most recent involved a group of senior citizens, who were tied up and forced to the ground.

Another elderly couple was robbed at gunpoint at their Farmington Hills home as they pulled into their garage. The robbers stole the couple's cash, credit cards and jewelry. All these robberies took place between 10 p.m. and 2 a.m. I'm relaying this story not to alarm anyone, but to warn that in the Grosse Pointe area such things happen.

I know because it happened to me many years ago. I had gone with friends from work to dinner and to a play at the Hilberry Theatre. We took off in separate cars after the play.

I got home about 11:30 p.m., relieved that I had safely traveled the expressway and 15 minutes on surface streets. I. had an unattached garage and never drove into it at night. I parked in the driveway and went in the side door. I had the key out, ready to open the door, when someone tapped me on the shoulder. When I turned around, a man who looked to be in his late teens or early 20s, slipped my purse off my shoulder and ran to a waiting car parked in the street at the end of my driveway.

I yelled and my son came bursting out of the house, running as fast as he could after the robbers. They sped off before my son could reach them or get a license plate number. We called the police and they said the robbers were probably well out of the area.

The police told me of several similar robberies. Their modus operandi was to drive around the Grosse Pointes in the late evening looking for a car entering a side drive. With the vehicle's headlights turned off, they'd look for an easy robbery.

If the passenger was a woman, especially an older woman, or a noticeably older male, one robber would rob the person, return to the waiting car and be off before police had even been notified.

The police emphasized to me the importance of always being on the alert, especially at night. Be alert to anyone following your car for a long period. Don't get out of the car if you notice a strange car parked on the street near your home, especially if you can see someone inside the car.

If you notice anything suspicious, drive directly to the nearest police station. Be sure you know where that station is located. Today a cell phone can be used, but I would feel much safer getting out of this dangerous place as quickly as possi-

Several days after the robbery, the police called to say someone had found my wallet in a trash can in Detroit. There was no money in it and my credit cards, driver's license, etc. were gone. I had already called and closed my accounts.

I was called many weeks later by the police. "We've got the guys. They were robbing a woman when the next door neighbor just happened to be looking out her window. She called the police and they were able to arrest them in the act. Means you won't have to come in and identify them."

That was good news, but I still wanted to see a picture of the guys arrested. I'm not very good at such details as age, height, weight, clothing, or other characteristics. The only thing I remembered clearly was the face. But would I have been able to pick that face out of a lineup. When I saw the picture, I was grateful the face was exactly as I remembered it.

However, had this been a case that didn't get resolved for months, would I have remembered the face so vividly? Fortunately, I've never been in that situation.

I don't mean to frighten anyone, but constant alertness to our surroundings is essential as we get older. It can save us from falls, driving accidents, and many other dangers. Contact Cain at ruthcain@comcast.net eatloaf remains an American favorite decade after decade. Chefs have tried to fancy it up over the years but nothing ever compares to the meatloaf you grew up with. This week I'm sharing my recipe for meatloaf, which starts with ground turkey instead of beef. A taste difference you'll agree with, for sure.

A LA ANNIE By Annie Rouleau-Scheriff An American favorite — meatloaf

4 Tomato Turkey Meatloaf

(for a crowd)

- 2 1/2 to 3 lbs. ground turkey 16-oz. can tomato paste
- 1/2 cup chopped sun dried tomatoes
- 1 tablespoon
- Worchestershire sauce
- 1 cup panko (Japanese bread crumbs)
- 1/3 cup dried minced onion (or 1 cup finely minced fresh onion) 2 tablespoons dried parsley, toes, sliced

4 eggs 1 teaspoon dried oregano

plus more for garnish

1 teaspoon dried basil

pepper

Grease a large glass baking dish (such as a 9 x 13) and set

Place the ground turkey in an extra large bowl. To the turkey add all ingredients, except ketchup and tomatoes. Using clean hands toss and mix the meat with the other ingredients until everything is very well blended. (The process takes about five minutes.)

Turn the mixture into the prepared baking dish as evenly as possible.

Spread the ketchup over the meatloaf.

Arrange the tomato slices over the ketchup, side by side but not overlapping. Sprinkle some dried parsley over the tomatoes for a pretty presentation.

Bake the meatloaf at 350 for about an hour, until browned on the edges and cooked throughout. (A deeper baking dish may need a bit more time.)

This turkey meatloaf is moist going into the oven and moist when it comes out.

A perfect weekend meal idea with leftovers that will make your mouth water on Monday.

Sliced cold turkey meatloaf on really good bread with a light smear of mayonnaise. Yummy.

Trust me, you wont' miss the beef.

South christens pool with a win

Swim team drubs Ike to open pool

By Bob St. John Sports Editor

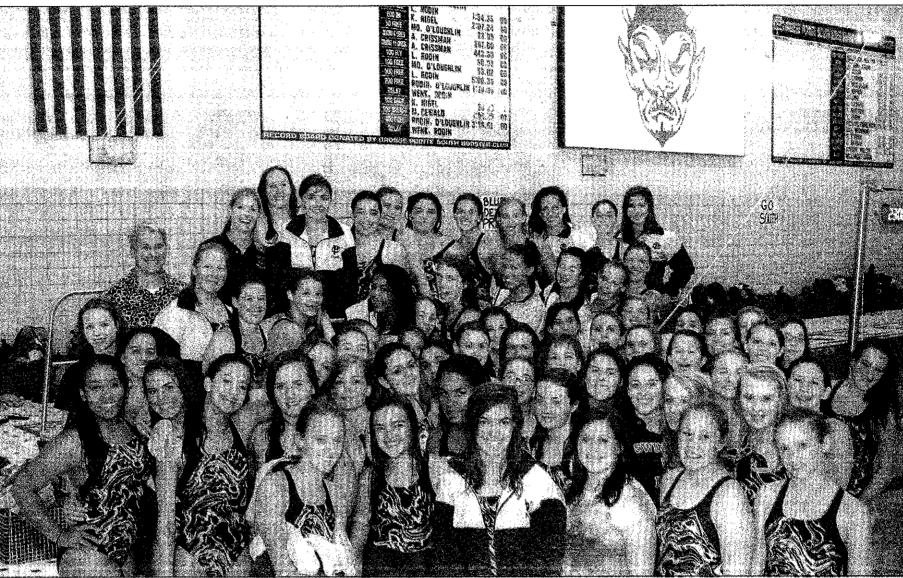

Grosse Pointe South's girls swim team finally competed in its first home meet in more than two decades Tuesday, Sept. 16, hosting Utica Eisenhower.

The Lady Blue Devils put a win in the books, beating Ike 114-69

"It was a little nerve-wracking before the meet, making sure everything worked properly and getting the officials and parents in place to make the meet run smooth," South head coach Todd Briggs said. "The girls were also a little nervous because they knew they are part of history at this school.

"Everything went well and we won the meet, which was great for us and the officials who worked hard to make this happen."

A near full house witnessed the event. Those in attendance included two representatives of Barton Malow, which han-

South has just enough to defeat North

By Bob St. John Sports Editor

The Grosse Pointe North vs. Grosse Pointe South boys tennis rivalry nearly had its second straight 4-4 tie.

That might have occurred if North standout Doug Zade played, but he is rehabilitating an injury and will not return until next week at the earliest.

Despite Zade's absence, the Norsemen played well, but it was the host Blue Devils who played a little better, coming away with a 5-3 victory.

"When it is all said and done, this is still North against South and it brings out the best in Tom Berschback said. "This match, making sure they would has been a great rivalry and it continued today.

"We had some outstanding matches and we were able to get the win."

"Our kids played very hard today and they knew they were up against an ever tougher team without Doug in the lineup," North head coach Drew Mascarin said. "That didn't stop our kids from believing they could win because they gave it their best effort and it the match, Keane took a threewas a little short."

finish no lower than second in the regular season standings.

"Winning these tough matches is important because of seeding time for the state regionals," Berschback said.

The best match of the afternoon was won by North junior Joe Scott, who needed two hours and 45 minutes to beat South sophomore Matt Keane 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 at No. 3 singles.

Just two points from winning minute injury timeout to quickly ice down his right forearm.

The medical treatment didn't Area make a difference as Keane hit net and the match was over.

Junior Dean Butts also won his No. 2 singles match, defeating South senior Kevin Jones 6-3.6-4.

"I was trying to use my forehand as much as possible and force Kevin to use his backhand," Butts said. "It worked pretty good because I won the match.

It was the first time in his career Butts beat his South opponent.

"The facility looks great and it's nice to see everyone so happy and ready for this to open," South Athletic Director and Assistant Principal Brandon Slone said. "I can't thank everyone enough for making this truly one of the best facilities in the state."

It didn't take the Lady Blue Devils long to win their first event in their home pool as the 200-yard medley relay team of junior Tori Bruce, junior Molly DeWald, senior Kendall Effinger and sophomore Ellen Henrichs won with a time of 1:56.27.

Eisenhower's foursome of Alex Malfroid, Kei Cze Prentis, Alex Lange and Maria Berger was close, finishing at 1:56.93.

North wins

By Bob St. John Sports Editor

Winning championships is all about defense.

Grosse Pointe North's football team is getting a close look at how this works because its defense posted its third shutout of the season Friday, Sept. 19, beating host Warren Cousino 14-0.

"I was proud of how well our kids played on defense," North head coach Frank Sumbera said. "Cousino has an explosive offense, but our kids shut them down tonight.

"This is a big division win and it gives us a leg up on the competition."

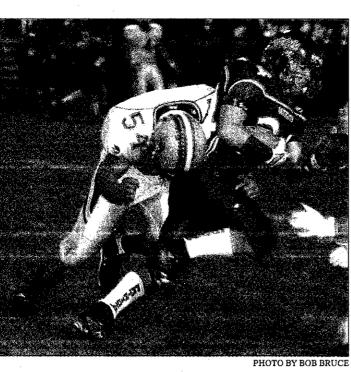

The Norsemen defense held the Patriots to only 122 total yards, while netting an interception and fumble recovery that ended scoring drives.

In the second quarter, North scored on a 21-yard touchdown pass from senior quarterback Aaron Cisco to senior wide receiver Jeff Simon, who made an over-the-shoulder catch with 11:09 left.

Willis finished with 94 yards on 21 carries and senior fullback Tommie Watkins had 26 yards on 10 carries.

Cisco threw only six passes, completing one to Simon and one to senior Darius Wilcox.

Both defenses were strong as North could only muster 153 total yards.

The Grosse Pointe North football team improved to 2-0 the Macomb Area in Conference White Division and 4-0 overall.

Coming up for the Norsemen is their homecoming game at 7 p.m., Friday, Sept. 26, against L'Anse Creuse North.

GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

Win No. 20 didn't come easy for Grosse Pointe North's girls volleyball team.

Visiting Macomb Dakota made the Lady Norsemen sweat a little more than they thought in a 20-25, 25-17, 25-20, 25-20 win that improved North's mark to 3-0 in the Macomb Area Conference Red Division and 20-3 overall.

"We didn't have it together in that first game," North head coach Kim Lockhart said.

"For some odd reason, we always seem to get off to a slow start and then pick up the pace after that.

"It was no different tonight, but once the girls got it all together, they played very well."

Nothing went right in the opening game. Serves went long or into the net and spike attempts were off target. Even the Lady Norsemen's usual crisp passing was awry.

"I told the girls after the first game that every team wants the attempt. to come in our building and beat us," Lockhart said. "I found out we're ranked No. 8 in the state and I didn't want that going to our heads because I don't want the girls to be overconfident."

That talk worked wonders as the host team came out determined to make it a short game two.

Junior Elizabeth Defour had two blocks that got the Lady Norsemen rolling. Senior Madie Kent began her dominance, thanks to perfect passes from senior setter Allison Liddane.

Senior Teresa Nagel carried North to the win in game three and Kent was the team's leading attacker in the final game.

Since the beginning of game three, every time Kent and Nagel approached the net for a spike attempt, Dakota's players would back up two steps farther than earlier in the match and only one girl the second half of the season was at the net to try to block begins.

For the game, Kent finished with 20 kills and 17 digs, while Nagel had 15 kills and 10 digs.

Other outstanding performances were turned in by senior Jillian Kulka, 33 serve receptions, and Liddane, 55 assists.

Junior Sara Tignanelli earned several service points, thanks to her improved jump serve, and senior Jasmine Kennedy was playing well at the net before leaving the game with an injured ankle.

"I couldn't believe it when Jasmine went down in pain," Lockhart said. "I was hoping nothing was serious. She had a slight limp after the match and it looks like she will be ready to go for our next match.'

BOYS TENNIS

ULS faces a little bit of everything

By Bob St. John Sports Editor

Head coach Chuck Wright watched his University Liggett School boys tennis team play the best of both worlds last week.

The Knights opened the week with a 6-2 loss to Ann Arbor Greenhills, ranked in the top 10 in Division IV, and 8-0 to Bloomfield THills Kingswood, Cranbrook ranked No. 2 in Division III, before beating St. Clair Shores South Lake 8-0.

"Our kids had an opportunity to play teams in different divisions, which definitely helps their overall game," Wright said.

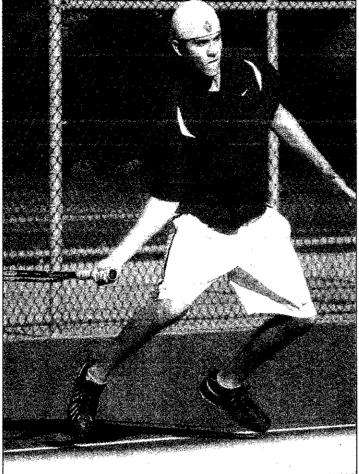

"I saw some good things from all of our boys, even in our couple of losses.

"Each match is a learning experience."

Against Greenhills, the Knights' No. 2 doubles team of seniors Mike McLaughlin and Andrew Malaski won, as did the No. 3 doubles squad of seniors Christian Redding and Blake Chouinard.

Their No. 4 doubles team of sophomores Ian Quinlan and George Park played well, but lost a tough three-set match 7-6 (7-0), 3-6, 3-6.

GIRLS FIELD HOCKEY ULS nets two victories

By Bob St. John Sports Editor

So far, so good for the University Liggett School girls' field hockey team.

Last week, the Lady Knights came to the halfway point of their division schedule after beating Birmingham Detroit Country Day 1-0 and the Washtenaw Whippets 5-1. "The girls have been playing very well the past few games, moving the ball on offense and playing good defense in front of Janaya (Gripper)," head coach Tamara Fobare said. "We like the position we're in heading into the second half of our division schedule."

University Liggett School's boys soccer team ended its three-game losing streak last beating week, Livonia Clarenceville 2-1.

"The game was much closer than it shoud have been." head coach David Backhurst said. "We dominated the game, but could only muster two goals.

"We were in Clarenceville's end of the field the entire second half and pounded away. Luckily we won."

Senior Jack Fisher scored the Knights' first goal, assisted by junior Dan Zukas. Fisher added an insurance goal.

Next was an impressive 7-0 victory over visiting Harper Woods.

Spikers net win

By Bob St. John Sports Editor

University Liggett School's girls volleyball team earned a nonleague victory over Detroit Marvin L. Winans Academy last week.

"The girls played very well and we were able to win in three games," said head coach Dan Sullivan. "We moved some people around and gave others a chance to play significant minutes."

Sophomores Mariah Passalacqua and Nimet overall.

Williams led the Lady Knights with backrow defense and serving, respectively.

In other action last week, the Lady Knights lost in four games to Rochester Hills Lutheran Northwest.

"We won the opening game and we're playing great," Sullivan said. "Then we started making too many mental mistakes and eventually lost the match."

The ULS volleyball team dropped to 0-1 in the Metro Conferece, but improved to 2-9

Grosse Pointe South's girls field hockey team played its worst game of the season last week, losing 1-0 to visiting Birmingham Marian.

"They beat us to the ball and they wanted it more than we did," head coach Meg Atwood said. "Our girls don't like to lose and this didn't set too well during our postgame talk.

"I told the girls they have to wake up and play with more emotion."

Marian scored the only goal at the 18:53 mark of the first half.

Atwood's speach worked as the Lady Blue Devils traveled to Bloomfield Hills Academy of the Sacred Heart two days later and won 1-0.

South improved to 7-1 overall and sits 1-1 in the Michigan Field Hockey Association Division I standings.
