G.P. News staff mourns former owner, Bob Liggett

Robert G. Liggett Jr., 76, of Grosse Pointe Shores, former owner of the Grosse Pointe News, died Friday, July 12, following a battle with cancer. He is survived by his wife, Victoria, and four daughters, four grandchildren and one on the way.

Liggett purchased the Grosse Pointe News in May 2007 from the Edgar family. Ten years later, he sold it to former editor and general manager John Minnis and his wife, Terry, of Grosse Pointe Woods.

"We are grateful for Bob and Vicki Liggett keeping the paper locally owned and a viable community asset for the past 12 years," said the Minnises. "We and our staff will work our hardest to keep the tradition alive in memory of Bob and the paper's founders."

The Grosse Pointe News was founded on Nov. 7, 1940, by Robert B. Edgar, who ran it until his death in 1979. Son Robert G. "Butch" Edgar took over as publisher. He served in that capacity until May 2007, when he died of a rare lung disease prior to completion of the sale of the paper, which was finalized by Lauren Chapman, daughter of the paper's founder, and Michele Rambour Edgar, widow of Butch Edgar.

Acquiring the newspaper at age 64, Liggett had already spent a lifetime in the media business, primarily in radio. A 1961 Utica High School alumnus, Liggett graduated from Wayne State University Law School in 1969. He remained in the business he loved — radio — and founded the Liggett Broadcast Group in late 1970.

Liggett's involvement in broadcast began when he was 14 years old as a DJ and announcer throughout his high school years. He later worked for WJR-AM, WXYZ-AM/FM/TV and WJBK-AM/FM/TV in Detroit. He also was the PA announcer for the Detroit Red Wings from 1963 to 1971 at Olympia Stadium.

Headquartered in Lansing, Liggett's company became the state's largest radio broadcast group. The company also owned and operated AM and FM stations throughout the United States.

GROSSE POINTE SHORES — For the next week or so, Grosse Pointe can count on seeing an influx of visitors as hundreds of young sailors, their parents and coaches converge on the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club for the 2019 Optimist Nationals.

And while the sailors compete — in addition to the national championship, the event also includes team sailing and girls' championship racing — organizers hope the people they've traveled with will take in the unique sights of the community.

Regatta Chairman Blaise Klenow said people from across the United States and other countries have signed up for the event, set for Saturday, July 20, through Sunday, July 28. "This truly is an international event," he said. To accommodate sailors, their families and coaches, the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club set up a website — gpcusoda.org — that includes details of the event, a selection of lodging and sights to see in the imme-diated area. Organizers encourage out-of-town visitors to stay close and check out the unique sights and businesses Grosse Pointe has to offer.

"There are quite a few hotels on the list," Klenow said. "These folks have set up blocks of rooms and are offering attractive rates."

"Aside from the fact people are going to be staying in the area, everybody's got to eat," he continued. "We feed the kids breakfast and lunch, but they're traveling with their parents or coaches. They need to eat and entertain themselves."

Guests are welcome to spend their time at the yacht club, but also are encouraged to visit The Hill, The Village, The Avenue in the Woods and GROSSE POINTE FARMS — Around 5 a.m. Saturday, July 13, Farms public safety received a call that there had been malicious destruction of property regarding the gate at Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park.

The first two officers on scene arrived to see two cars speed away from the park, which was the first clue a lot more had been going on.

The incident began a bit earlier that morning at a gas station on Hoover and Seven Mile where some sort of altercation resulted in shots fired.

A pursuit then started from the gas station with at least two cars chasing a white Dodge Charger down Moross with more gunfire.

The Charger crashed through the gates at Pier Park, ending up in the parking lot with the other two cars. One of the gates took out a light pole.

Farms public safety reported shots were then fired at the Charger by several suspects.

Provençal properties petition to be annexed

GROSSE POINTE FARMS AND WOODS — Representatives from the State Boundary Commission and Wayne County, Farms and Woods city officials, petitioners and other interested parties gathered at Farms council chambers Thursday, July 11, to make a case for whether or not seven Provençal homes, currently in the Woods, should be annexed into the Farms.

The homes, located in the middle of the private, 32-house, Provençal neighborhood and on the southern edge of the Woods, have had divided properties since their creation in the early 1900s, with the houses in the Woods and the front yards in the Farms.

Since 1955, the two cities have had an agreement, which could be broken at any time with 90 days notice, enabling the Farms to provide all municipal services to the homes in return for the Woods contributing 10 mills to the Farms out of the residents' taxes. Over the years this has grown to most recently 14.95 mills.

The seven homes first began seeking the cur-

Senior Building Department official retires after 32 years

By Eddie B. Allen Jr.
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE WOODS — Seasoned building inspectors don't retire. They just work on standby.

In the case of 92-year-old George Washnak, retirement from the Grosse Pointe Woods Building Department became official June 26, but he returned to his desk at Grosse Pointe Woods city hall to help with a staff shortage just a few weeks later.

Answering the call of duty for 32 years as a city employee helped Washnak build a solid professional reputation and endear himself to colleagues.

Even as a property maintenance inspector, while enforcing residential codes that sometimes led to out-of-pocket expense to homeowners, he often used humor in the moment.

"I tried to make light of my inspections because the people probably thought, 'Oh, here he comes,'" said Washnak.

Born in Twin Rocks, Pa., he grew up in nearby

Revloc, which he jokingly describes as "an exclusive residential district — nothing but coal mines."

On April 12, 1945, the day President Franklin Roosevelt died, Washnak enlisted in the Air Force cadets. Heeding a parent's wisdom, he moved to Detroit two years later, boarding at the home of a friend's sister.

"My father said, 'You don't want to have anything to do with the coal mines,'" Washnak recalled.

So he went to work on the Cadillac assembly line from 1948 to 1950.

His next job at the former Eight Mile Road Chrysler tank plant lasted just four days when he learned his personality conflicted with a supervisor's.

"He said, 'I'm not gonna teach you guys how to do anything. You're going to have to learn on your own.' He was a prince of a fellow," Washnak said, laughing.

After graduating from the former Michigan Technical Institute where he studied electrical maintenance, Washnak became a licensed contractor. Years later in 1987, he met a colleague who encouraged him to apply for a job as a temporary-permanent employee in Grosse Pointe Woods.

"On a lark I decided to do it and pretty soon I had my photo ID," Washnak remembered. "I said, 'Wow.'"

"That's the best thing that could have happened to me, so I'm real happy." A mild heart attack slowed him down a bit in 1992, but he recovered and went back to work with the same good humor intact.

During his 32 years with the city, Washnak approached the job with a sense of fairness.

"I treated everybody the same. I don't care if it was a city councilman or a regular resident," he said.

He formed a bond of friendship with Buildings Department Official Gene Tutag, who Washnak called "the greatest boss in the world."

"I joked with Gene that I should have my name in gold letters on the door until one day he put my name there and added, 'Chief Electrical Inspector,'" said Washnak. "'Chief!' I'm the only one!"

Tutag described Washnak as a standard-bearer for his generation.

"He's a hardworking guy. Whatever task he was assigned, he did it without complaining," said Tutag.

Tutag is glad he'll still be able to call on Washnak, even during Washnak's retirement, if the inspector's undiminished skills are needed.

"He's been loyal, he's a friend and I consider him a part of my family," said Tutag.

A resident of St. Clair Shores, Washnak lived in Detroit until his wife died about eight years ago.

"When the wife and I got married, we moved into a new home and we lived in the same home for the 61 years we were married," he said, noting the couple wed in January 1951.

In retirement he said he'll tackle crossword puzzles and other activities that keep him mentally engaged.

"I'd like to keep my mind going," he said. "It's very seldom that I turn the TV on. Once you stop using your mind you can go downhill fast."

He described his time with the city as personally and professionally rewarding.

"I'd like to thank the city employees who've been so nice to me all these years," he said. "They've been fantastic."

Marais Market proposal, community development program approved

By Laurel Kraus

CITY OF GROSSE POINTE — In an entirely incidental sequence of events, Marais Market & Cafe brought forward a proposal to council Monday, July 15, to redo its outdoor area, just days after a distracted driver crashed into the planters outside the market.

"I did not pay the girl to destroy all the planters, that wasn't me," owner David Gilbert joked.

Marais Market, off Kercheval in The Village, is moving forward with plans to put an enclosed outdoor seating area next to the business along St. Clair to serve alcohol and food from the restaurant.

The market will relocate its existing tables and chairs into this area, so they will no longer be accessible to the public.

This will replace both the farmer's market and original outdoor seating area immediately adjacent to the building. Amenities such as the five benches will remain.

The enclosure will encapsulate a 12-by-30-foot space and include three tables and 12 chairs, which will be stored during winter months.

The operation will be limited from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., which is typical of outdoor seating areas in The Village, according to City Planner John Jackson.

Next year the market may be interested in putting more seating in the enclosed space and could revisit the farmer's market as they move forward, Gilbert said.

Additionally, the City voted during Monday night's meeting to move forward with participation in the Redevelopment Ready Communities program through the Michigan Economic Development Corp.

According to the resolution, the program is meant to help in "identifying and strengthening weak areas in a community's development process and highlight opportunities in the community."

Passing the resolution has started the process of City staff reviewing city-wide development processes compared to the best recommended practices the state has. The suggested changes then will be brought before council.

City Manager Pete Dame reported it is a requirement to participate in this program if the City has interest in being in the Michigan Mainstreet Program or if it wants to get redevelopment funds from the state.

The next council meeting will be Monday, Aug. 19.

Seat to be filled Delegates from Pointes will make their voices heard at national NAACP convention

By Laurel Kraus
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE FARMS — Following the death of Councilman Peter Waldmeir Friday, June 18, the Farms is adding a partial-term election to the Nov. 5 ballot to fill the seat.

“Peter passed away just short of the timeframe where we could have appointed somebody for the two and a half years,” Mayor Louis Theros said. “But because of the timing of his passing, there has to be an election to fill his position.”

Petitions for the two-year term ending November 2021 can be found at city hall and must be submitted to the city clerk’s office by 4 p.m. Tuesday, July 23.

If candidates insert their names and decide not to run after that, they have until Friday, July 26, to withdraw their name.

There will be no primaries, so if a number of people run, all will be on the ballot come November.

Currently there are already three city council positions on the ballot for the full four-year terms as well as the mayor seat, so there will be a separate block on the ballot for the partial-term seat.

During the council meeting Monday, July 8, City

Attorney William Burgess emphasized a particular nuance the public should be aware of in what he called “a rather unusual ballot situation.”

Since the time for submission of petitions and withdrawal of the four candidates who have already applied for the four-year terms has closed, an individual will not be able to have his or her name in both races on the ballot.

“(You) cannot, under state law, have your name appear as a candidate for one of the four-year full terms and simultaneously appear on the ballot as a candidate to fill the remaining two years of Councilman Waldmeir’s seat,” Burgess said. “If that were to happen, state election law would take the names off of both ballots.”

As for a separate partial term to fill the vacant seat from now until the election, Theros suggested during Monday’s meeting, with council approval, they pass on the interim placement until the Aug. 12 council meeting.

This will allow the time to potentially see if any former council members would be willing to fill the space for the few meetings until the election, so there can remain a full council for the short period of time.

THE GROSSE POINTE AND HARPER WOODS —

When more than 10,000 members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People attend the organization’s annual convention in Detroit this week, delegates from the Grosse Pointes-Harper Woods chapter will be among them for the first time.

Cynthia Douglas, chapter president, will participate in the conference Saturday, July 20, through Wednesday, July 24, accompanied by First Vice President John Clark, Second Vice President Valerie Kindle and Secretary Beverly Perry.

The event, expected to be widely publicized during a year when multiple civil rights issues are in the political spotlight, marks the first time Grosse Pointes-Harper Woods representatives will vote on the NAACP’s national agenda since the chapter formed four years ago.

“I’m really excited,” said Douglas.

‘That’s still the mission of the NAACP: to stand together as one community.’

CYNTHIA DOUGLAS
President, NAACP Grosse Pointes-Harper Woods chapter

The theme of the convention is “When We Fight We Win,” a sentiment reflecting the countless legal, educational and social battles toward equality the NAACP has waged since its formation in 1909.

“That’s still the mission of the NAACP: to stand together as one community,” said Douglas.

While the local chapter’s aim is to assist the national organization in developing positions and policies for which it will advocate, Douglas said the delegates also will report significant developments to residents of the Pointes and Harper Woods.

“Our biggest role is to gather information we can bring back to the community,” she said.

Douglas, who began her term as local president in January, said she saw a need for greater social advocacy in the community when rights also are expected to be part of the national agenda’s discussion.

On the heels of Trump’s recent Twitter statements suggesting several women of color elected to Congress should leave America, questions of race and immigration also must be addressed, Douglas said.

“He’s telling these women to go back to where they came from,” said Douglas. “Where exactly is that? We have a representative (Rashida Tlaib) from Michigan. He wants her to go back to Michigan?”

While the NAACP’s role in influencing policies always has been prominent, more people of all racial and class backgrounds are needed to make conditions more equitable, locally and nationally, Douglas added. The local chapter has 85 members, but her goal is to increase the number to 100 by the end of 2019.

“We want people to know the history behind the NAACP,” she added. “It didn’t start out with all black people. It started out with white and black people, to make the country a better place.”

rent annexation attempt November 2018.

On Feb. 11, the Woods City Council Committee of the Whole convened in a closed session for 28 minutes to discuss pending litigation regarding the petition before the State Boundary Commission and reconvened with a unanimous recommendation to end the agreement.

Two weeks later, during the Feb. 25 council meeting, Councilwoman Victoria Granger made a motion, seconded by Councilman Michael Koester and passed unanimously, to end the agreement, effective June 30, and provide municipal services to the seven homes, fully integrating them into the Woods.

Granger was contacted regarding the council’s reasoning behind terminating the agreement, but did not reply by press time.

Woods City Attorney Charles Berschback began his remarks at the hearing by citing Michigan Assistant Attorney General George Elworth’s 2017 opinion that, “the SBC (State Boundary Commission) would not have authority over such a boundary adjustment.”

The opinion continues to say the annexation could only happen with a referendum or if both city councils agreed to it. The petitioners attempted annexation in 2013 through this structure and were denied by the Woods.

The petitioners have rallied around the claim that they have always considered themselves residents of the Farms. They reported their only connection to the Woods has been property taxes twice a year and voting, which they said is on matters that don’t affect them since their roads, municipal services, schools and even designated park have been in the Farms.

“If it’s possible for us to get this property annexed all into the Farms ... (the petitioners) will be able to live in, vote in, pay taxes to one community and that’s the community that provides my clients their municipal services,” said William Fahey, attorney representing the petitioners.

During a major home renovation, petitioner Dr. James Fox reported, “... There were times when we would present ourselves to the Woods municipal offices and be told by their employees that our home was not in the Woods and that we needed to go to the Farms with our questions.”

However, from the perspective of the two cities, this is largely an economic issue revolving around taxes.

In 2018, the Woods collected $171,980.81 in taxes from the seven Provençal properties. Since 2000, it has paid out $731,137 to the Farms.

Initially not planning to speak, Farms Mayor Louis Theros took the podium at the end of the hearing to bring forward that concern that the Farms would now be expected to offer services for free should the homes stay in the Woods. While the Woods would handle rubbish collection and public safety protection, the Farms would still be plowing the street, fixing water mains, treating rainwater in the sewer system, etc., he said.

However, while Fahey reported the Farms has indeed been providing snow removal and other road and sidewalk services for a number of years, cities are not responsible for such services on private roads, according to the Farms Public Service Department.

Provençal between Chalfonte and Kercheval, where all seven homes sit, is a private road.

Additionally, the petitioners voiced no interest in paying Woods taxes, which are more than 6 mills higher than the Farms and until the beginning of this month did not go toward their properties beyond the percentage paid to the Farms, according to Fahey.

Emergency response time also was debated as it was shown that the Farms public safety station is 1.4 miles away from the homes, while the Woods public safety station is approximately 3.4 miles away. This would more than double the response time, Farms Public Safety Director Dan Jensen confirmed.

Woods Public Safety Director John Kosanke said 3.4 miles was no farther than the current farthest jurisdiction the station serves and the cities’ mutual-aid agreement would allow for the Farms to meet them at an emergency situation.

Berschback noted both the Farms and the Woods have contracts with MedStar Ambulance making EMS response time the same.

Other discussions included the fact that the petitioners would have to wheel their bins to the end of the driveway for Woods rubbish and recycling collection, unlike their Farms neighbors who have it collected from their backyards.

Alex Lucido, of Lucido Real Estate, also said property values will plummet should the homes stay in the Woods now that it’s common knowledge and Farms properties are worth $37 more per square foot.

“It’s an anomaly certainly, but it doesn’t change the fact that they bought a house with their homes located in Grosse Pointe Woods,” Berschback said.

The commission will determine its recommendation Wednesday, Aug. 28, which will then go to Orlene Hawks, director of the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs, to make the final decision.

State park commissioner proud to serve community

By Amy Fortune
Special Writer

Phillip Pierce is a very busy gentleman.

He is the managing member of Pierce, Monroe & Associates LLC, a thriving consulting firm in downtown Detroit that has been in business more than 30 years. And, recently, he was appointed to serve on the Mackinac Island State Park Commission.

As one of only seven park commissioners, Pierce and his colleagues manage the park's budget and expenditures and serve as advocates for the park within their respective communities. When asked how he feels about his appointment, Pierce said, "I understand that this is a coveted role and a number of luminaries have served before me. I am honored."

One only needs to speak with Pierce a few minutes to know he is passionate about his communities — where he lives and where he works. As proud residents of Grosse Pointe Shores, Pierce and his wife support local businesses and frequently patronize the restaurants and parks. When asked about what is best about living in Grosse Pointe, he replied, "I have good neighbors and the residents here have easy access to great retail options and restaurants. And, of course, there are the parks."

Pierce also likes having the opportunity to live in Grosse Pointe Shores and work in Detroit, because he feels it enables him to enjoy the best of both worlds. He loves many things about the city of Detroit, including its infrastructure, people and architecture.

"Many of the homes in Grosse Pointe were designed by the same architects who created the concepts for some of the most famous buildings and homes in Detroit," he said.

In addition to serving as a commissioner for the Mackinac Island State Park, Pierce is chairman of the Chandler Park Conservancy and heavily involved with the Downtown Detroit Partnership, a group dedicated to maintaining the infrastructure of the city's growing and thriving downtown area. "The Renaissance is really happening," Pierce said. "You can see the growth. You can see the development and it is an exciting time to be in Detroit."

Both Pierce and his wife, with whom he works, regularly participate in numerous civic activities. They also are avid moviegoers and travelers. They recently returned from a trip to South Africa and are looking forward to taking a cruise to Barcelona soon.

However, while they both enjoy seeing different parts of the world, the couple always strive to take advantage of the local opportunities available. For example, they recently talked about visiting The Henry Ford museum.

"As Michigan residents, we are lucky to have access to so many wonderful places," Pierce said. "We have parks, museums and other places that we occasionally forget about because we are so accustomed to them being there."

Pierce said he would love to see more Grosse Pointers take advantage of in-state opportunities when planning their next vacation. On his last trip to Mackinac Island and the Mackinac Island State Park, he was pleased to see some of his friends and neighbors. But, of course, he would like to encounter more familiar faces because active support and contributions from his friends and neighbors will serve to maintain and grow the park for generations to come.

LIGGETT:

Liggett Broadcast Group was sold to Citadel Communications Corp. in June 2000. At his death, Liggett still owned five radio stations serving the Port Huron area.

Greg Theokas, former Grosse Pointe Park mayor, met Liggett when they were both starting out in broadcasting in the 1970s.

"He really understood the broadcast business really well," Theokas said. "He bought an FM radio station in the early '70s when no one thought it would go anywhere. But Bob knew that once it got into car radios, it would take off. He really went out on a limb."

Theokas added that Liggett was very helpful to him when he built a new classical music radio station in Grand Rapids during the mid '80s. "He leased us space on his radio tower in Grand Rapids, even though we would be in competition with his stations," Theokas said.

Upon his "retirement" in 2000, Liggett was approached by Big Boy Restaurants. The then-60-year-old restaurant chain was in bankruptcy proceedings and the surviving management was seeking an investor to save the local company and its more than 180 employees.

Liggett was aware of the strong brand identification Big Boy enjoyed throughout the country. After meeting the people and assessing the potential growth, Liggett purchased the Big Boy assets and supported management and its efforts to stabilize and expand the company.

"Big Boy may have gone to an outside company," Liggett said at the time. "We kept it under local ownership." In failing health, Liggett sold the Big Boy chain just this year.

Seven years later after acquiring Big Boy, he also stepped up to keep another institution locally owned — the Grosse Pointe News.

"It's a community newspaper," he said of the acquisition, "and should remain responsive to the community rather than just one of a large company's lineup."

After working on his high school newspaper and minoring in journalism in college, "he got a taste" of commercial newspapering in his early 20s when he started his own publication, the Sports Reporter, while working as a disc jockey at a Flint radio station.

Liggett said a reporter's job is "to give both sides' point of view and let the readers make up their minds, to get information and present it in a fair and balanced way.

"I like balanced political reporting," he said. "Whether in business or politics, I'm always interested in learning where the other guy's coming from."

"I've always had an avid interest in politics," he said, "and I have supported individuals from both sides of the aisle. I want government to work for the people."

While Liggett served as the savior and benefactor of Big Boy, the same, fortunately, was not necessary with the profitable Grosse Pointe News.

"It wasn't broke," he said of the newspaper. "The business was solid. It clearly isn't broken and we certainly want to continue that well-established tradition."

Liggett said he learned the value of community orientation while working at WJR and continued that tradition at his Port Huron radio stations.

Liggett owned Big Boy Restaurant since 2000, selling it just this year.

"In the tradition of WJR, our stations in Port Huron, Big Boys and our relationship with the Grosse Pointe News, we will continue to be a community service," he said at the time. "We hope in every possible way to make it better and live up to the expectations of the community which has been supportive of the paper for a long, long time.

"It's the people's paper and we want to continue its tradition. I look forward to meeting the challenges of the industry and the community."

In 2001, Liggett founded Speed Net, a provider of wireless, high-speed modem service for rural areas of Michigan, and in 2010, he founded Speed Connect, also a provider of wireless high-speed modem services to seven states, including Michigan. The companies were sold in 2009 and 2018, respectively, to Sprint.

The Liggetts have lived in the Grosse Pointes since 1989. An avid boater, Liggett was a member of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club since 1987. He also was a member of the Country Club of Detroit and a lifetime member of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society. He was a supporter of the Eastside Republican Club and political action committee.

"He was always a great friend and generous supporter of the ERC and the ERC PAC," said John Stempfle, chairman of the ERC PAC. "My condolences to his family. He will be missed by his many friends."

Liggett was a member of the Ascension St. John Hospital Foundation and founder of the Liggett Breast Center at Ascension St. John Hospital Van Elslander Cancer Center. He had been a member of the Michigan State Bar Association since 1969.

Bruce Ferguson, who served as chief financial officer for Liggett Holdings and the Grosse Pointe News, said, "Bob was in many ways timeless. He could recount history, making it applicable to current events, while at the same time voicing a 21st century idea that left you thinking, 'Why didn't I think of that?' He was a good friend, a charitable soul and truly wanted the best for people. I will miss him."

other local areas to find restaurants, shopping and entertainment. Stops at The War Memorial, Edsel & Eleanor Ford House or the area's countless buildings on the National Register of Historic Places could be in store for visitors looking for a unique view of Grosse Pointe history. Anyone struggling with ideas of what to do is welcome to stop by the Grosse Pointe Chamber of Commerce, 63 Kercheval, Ste. 16, for a few tips.

The presence of these visitors could mean a great deal to the community, said Grosse Pointe Youth Nautical Education Foundation President Jim Morrow.

"We're talking 350 to 400 kids, 8 to 15 in age, so they don't come alone," Morrow said. "Parents drive in from around the country and spend the week here — in the community, at the club — spending money.

We're rolling out the red carpet."

Morrow said an economic impact study for the event estimated roughly $2.5 million coming in, with visitor spending and local recycling of visitor dollars bringing about a gross impact on local spending around $4.2 million.

"This is the biggest deal the USODA (United States Optimist Dinghy Association) does in a year," Morrow said. "It's a huge event; it consumes the club."

To best handle the influx of visitors, the club and neighboring Osius Park have formed a partnership. The fence between the two has been removed to handle parking for 300 boats, Morrow said.

Parking for parents, coaches and other spectators will be available at Grosse Pointe North High School and shuttle bus service is offered by University Liggett School.

The club also anticipates an influx of volunteers for the event, which welcomes the helping hands of as many people as possible. The website includes a SignUpGenius link that lists jobs and takes volunteer registration.

"Anybody that wants to be involved, we'll show you what to do," Morrow said. "The more people involved, the better it is." "It's a fun event," Klenow added. "It's a great opportunity to see some really world-class sailors. Some of these sailors are going to be our next Olympians."

Grosse Pointe Farms

Christmas in June

On Friday, June 7, a 39-year-old Farms man began receiving credit cards in the mail that he had not applied for.

Four accounts had been opened in his name at different stores. Only one had charges, totaling $3,687.23.

No doctor's note

At 5:03 p.m. Monday, July 8, an officer observed a vehicle at a gas station on Mack with heavily tinted side windows, a broken brake light and an expired registration.

The 43-year-old Detroit driver admitted he did not have a prescription from a doctor or the restriction on his license for the front tinted windows. He said the Secretary of State most likely canceled his registration since he stopped paying the insurance company and his policy was canceled.

The man was cited and the vehicle impounded.

Piracy on land

When a 66-year-old Farms man left his home at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 9, his white boat sail and teak boat ladder were on his driveway near the garage.

He returned to his home on McKinley at 6:30 p.m. to find them missing.

Alexa accident

While attempting to connect his iPhone to Alexa Tuesday, July 9, a 75-year-old Farms man called a number from a Google search and assumed he was talking to an Amazon representative.

The alleged representative told the man to purchase two Google

Play cards valued at $200 each to pay for the time needed to connect the two devices.

The man provided the number on the back of the first card, but became suspicious of a scam before providing the second.

Friend did it

A vehicle was seen at Mack and Moross with its high beams on moving from the far-right line over multiple lanes of traffic to turn left at 12:15 a.m. Wednesday, July 10.

At a traffic stop, the officer observed red wine stains in two plastic cups in cup holders as well as on the outside of the driver's door.

The 31-year-old Detroit male driver had bloodshot eyes and his behavior was erratic. A small bag of cocaine was found in his pocket, which he first claimed was a friend's and later admitted to having used 20 minutes prior. An open bottle of alcohol also was found.

He was arrested for cocaine possession and liquor transport.

Social Security scam

Around 3 p.m. Wednesday, July 10, an 85-year-old Farms man received a robocall on his landline from a caller claiming to be AT&T.

After attempting to reach a representative to remove his listing from the call database, he was connected with a man claiming to be an AT&T employee, who offered a tempting service cost.

The caller claimed he was having trouble retrieving the man's account information and needed his Social Security number.

The man gave it and grew suspicious later when he did not receive a confirmation email for the service charge.

Coin theft does not pay

While patrolling The Hill on Kercheval at 10:54 a.m. Friday, July 12, an officer noticed the 69-year-old Farms man mentioned in last week's public safety reports, who is known to tamper with and remove coins from parking meters.

A warrant for breaking and entering coin-operated machines recently had been issued, so after the man was seen approach and touch a meter, he was arrested.

Drawing the line

Officers were called to Calvin Avenue regarding a dispute at 1:50 p.m. Friday, July 12.

A 60-year-old woman said for the past year her 42-year-old male neighbor has been consistently parking his truck partially on her front lawn.

Upon asking him on numerous occasions not to, he became defiant and verbally abusive.

When the woman decided to widen her driveway to alleviate the damage, the man began walking across her lawn daily.

The woman then placed fiberglass poles on her lawn as markers and found them missing last week. Her security cameras show the man stealing them.

When she confronted him, he called her obscenities. The woman fears the interactions will worsen.

Evil twin brother

An obstructed license plate caused a man to be pulled over at Mack and Moross at 1:20 p.m. Saturday, July 13.

He identified himself as a 31-year-old man out of Southgate and said his license was expired because he never renewed it. However, the photo on his ID did not match him.

When the officer observed a credit card in the man's wallet, he asked to see it and it had another name. The man claimed it was his brother, but further searching proved the name to be his.

He was issued a citation for driving while license suspended, giving a false ID to an officer and improper plate.

City of Grosse Pointe

Under the influence

An officer discovered a 34-year-old Detroit woman passed out behind the wheel of a running car in a lot on Waterloo at 2:31 a.m. Tuesday, July 9.

The vehicle was not in park, so the officer reached through the open window to shut it off, noticing the driver was clutching a pint of vodka.

MedStar was dispatched and eventually the driver awoke with no idea where she was. She refused a preliminary breath test and failed other tests.

She was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol and brought to a hospital.

Sleeping on the job

A report of a possible intoxicated driver brought an officer to Jefferson and Rivard at 8:07 a.m. Tuesday, July 9, where a 22-year-old Chesterfield woman was found asleep behind the wheel of a running car parked in a driveway.

Upon being awakened, she said she was tired and driving to Panera Bread for breakfast. A preliminary breath test registered no alcohol; however, a LEIN/Secretary of State check showed a criminal bench warrant for a probation violation out of Harper Woods.

She was arrested and a vehicle search turned up a bag of cocaine and a bag of Xanax pills, for which the driver said she had a prescription.

Paint thief

Between 2:45 and 3 a.m. Monday, July 15, painting supplies were stolen from a table on a Cadieux driveway, when the 34-year-old resident went inside his home and backyard. He didn't see anyone or any vehicles in the area at the time.

As it attempted to get away, the Charger drove down the park service drive to the recreation building, seemingly realized there was nowhere else to go and turned right into Lake St. Clair.

The driver and passenger bailed out of the car as it entered the water and later were taken to the hospital with nonlife-threatening injuries.

"As our cars are responding, they see one car go past them on Moross and one car make a right on Kercheval, but further information is there's a car in the lake," Farms Public Safety Director Dan Jensen said. "So both those (public safety vehicles) then went to the lake because that's life saving — (it) takes priority."

Additionally, the officers were told it was a malicious destruction of property call, which has a no-pursuit policy.

As other Grosse Pointe officers drove down Lakeshore to respond, they spotted three men, believed to have been in the first car, which they ditched.

"They looked goofy. They were sweating, they were running, they were covered in spiderwebs and wet grass," Jensen said.

dence of a shooting were found in the car on Kercheval.

The second car was found driving down Moross at Chester with a flat tire, but no one from that car is in custody yet, Jensen said.

He also reported public safety does not yet have any idea what caused the altercation in the first place.

"The most important thing is, this was spillover," Jensen said. "This was a Detroit spillover, so our residents are in no more danger today than they were on Saturday morning. It just happened to come this far."

No bystanders were injured and the investigation is ongoing.

One small step for man

Throughout the Grosse Pointes this week, many people of a certain age will be remembering where they were when the lunar module landed and when they saw Neil Armstrong take his first step onto the moon on July 20, 1969.

The landing was the pinnacle of the 1960s effort to put men into space. Children and young adults — today's people of a certain age — often got to watch the many efforts on televisions brought into their classrooms.

For the Apollo 11 moon landing and moonwalk, though, there was no school. It was July, it was a Sunday.

"The Eagle has landed" were the first thrilling words that afternoon, reassuring people throughout the world the astronauts had descended safely to the moon's surface. At the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club, a swim meet came to a halt during the landing, heard via a poolside radio.

"We ... delayed completion of the contest during the actual landing," Tom Mertz of Grosse Pointe Shores said as he recalled the event in the following week's Grosse Pointe News. The 20-year-old pre-med student was coaching the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club team.

"When the Eagle reported that it had landed and that all was well, everybody — adults and kids — responded with cheers."

Well into the evening, people huddled around televisions for the broadcast that would show the first step onto the moon, which came at 9:56 p.m. here (10:56 p.m. for most of the Eastern Time Zone, but Michigan was not on Daylight Saving Time that year).

"I watched in awe and wonder," William Butler, then the mayor of Grosse Pointe Farms, told the Grosse Pointe News at the time. But he and another Grosse Pointer noted that the country must also keep up with its responsibilities here on earth.

Indeed, a counter-narrative had been building — that money spent on space could get better use fighting poverty and other pressing problems. American cities had seen riots in the two summers before the moon landing. The assassinations of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Robert Kennedy in 1968 still felt fresh. More than half a million troops were in Vietnam.

But, perhaps unexpectedly, Mr. Armstrong's "one giant leap for mankind" gave Americans and the world a morale boost and a much needed reprieve from the turbulence of the decade.

"We all felt a real swell of pride," the young Mr. Mertz said when recounting the day.

The space program had prevailed, partly as the legacy of the late President John F. Kennedy. He laid down the challenge on Sept. 12, 1962, saying, "We choose to go to the moon in this decade and do the other things, not because they are easy but because they are hard, because the goal will serve to organize and measure the best of our energies and skills."

That organization and investment paid off. The advances rooted in the space program remain mind-boggling; they reach far beyond the initially touted Teflon and Tang. Rocket and satellite technologies have delivered weather information, communications options and global positioning systems that were barely dreams before the 1960s. The launches kicked the computer era into a higher gear.

As Buzz Aldrin joined Mr. Armstrong on the moon's surface, the future for people in space seemed ripe for advances, too. Yet only 10 more American astronauts left their footsteps on the moon. The era of human activity there lasted just three and a half years.

What endures is the thrill of that first landing — memories forged in tension and then in relief, joy and wonder. The now Dr. Mertz of the Farms represents a lot of people here and around the world when he says, "I remember that day very well."

The above editorial cartoon by Grosse Pointe South High School graduate and Madison (Wis.) Journal editorial cartoonist Phil Hands appeared in the June 7, 2007, issue of the Grosse Pointe News following the purchase of the newspaper by Bob Liggett.

FROM THE PUBLISHER

Radio man turns to newsprint

In the recent past, we've paid tribute to newspapermen who have passed — Gene Chambers, former publisher of the Macomb Daily, and Gil Demers, of Grosse Pointe Park, founder of the C&G Newspapers with his wife, Charlotte. C&G publishes the Grosse Pointe Times, among a dozen and a half other weekly shoppers.

This week we pay tribute to another "newspaperman," Robert G. Liggett Jr., of Grosse Pointe Shores, who died July 12 after a short, courageous battle with pancreatic cancer.

Mr. Liggett made his mark in radio. As his good friend and radio competitor from the 1970s, and fellow Grosse Pointer, Greg Theokas pointed out, Mr. Liggett saw the future of FM radio before his mainstream AM competitors did. He took a gamble and bought an FM station in Lansing. Thirty years later, he sold the Liggett Broadcast Group of 29 stations in five states to Citadel Communications.

Mr. Liggett then went on to form high-speed wireless cable companies, that he ended up selling to Sprint. He also managed to rescue Big Boy Restaurants — which held a special fondness to the Liggetts — from bankruptcy in 2000. Hence the reference to Big Boy in Phil Hands's editorial cartoon, above.

When the Edgar family sought to sell the Grosse Pointe News in late 2006 and early 2007, Mr. Liggett already had a standing offer to Publisher Robert G. "Butch" Edgar to buy the paper if it ever became available. Ever the good businessman, Mr. Edgar sought offers and, fortunately, Mr. Liggett, the "local guy," came out on top.

Mr. Edgar, however, succumbed to a rare lung disease before the sale was completed, so his sister, Lauren Chapman, and widow, Michele Rambour Edgar, were called upon to complete the transaction.

Having come from broadcast, not print, Mr. Liggett called his good friend, Mr. Chambers, out of retirement to serve as CEO of Pointe News Group, the corporate parent of the Grosse Pointe News. Mr. Chambers brought in his son, Scott Chambers, as advertising director and, later, publisher.

Under Mr. Liggett's decade of ownership, the Grosse Pointe News survived the biggest financial crisis since the Great Depression. With the St. Clair Shores Connection, the paper left its longtime home on The Hill, moving into space on Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods.

As former Grosse Pointe News editor and general manager, and founder of the popular Grosse Pointe Magazine, I, with my wife, Terry, was fortunate to purchase the paper from Mr. and Mrs. Liggett in August 2017.

Soon after acquiring the paper, the five-year lease on Mack Avenue was expiring, which afforded us an opportunity to look for a location closer to the center of the Pointes. We found such a place above the Village Grille dining room on Notre Dame at the Kercheval Place alley. It is great to be back in "the heart of Grosse Pointe."

In memory of the paper's founders and Mr. Liggett's stewardship, we are humbled to take over the awesome responsibility of shepherding the Pointes' "paper of record" into the coming years and challenges that lie ahead.

Rest assured we and our staff will do our utmost not to let them or our readers or our community down. As Mr. Edgar used to always say in closing, "onward and upward."

OUR VIEW

Coming full circle in the Park

Q. When is it good to go in circles?

A. When Grosse Pointe Park fully opens the traffic circle near its Detroit border, allowing vehicles to leave as well as enter along Kercheval.

The current three-quarters of a circle never really made much sense — although it was an improvement over the structures that at one point blocked the intersection entirely and served as a slap in the face to Detroiters on the other side.

If the point of the circle was to confuse people, it succeeded. If it was merely to slow traffic down in a walkable business district, a full circle seemingly would have had about the same effect (aided now by a new set of stop signs in the business district).

Now it's time to celebrate a modicum of neighborliness. By Aug. 1, if all goes according to plan, drivers can test a fully functional circle. The opening was approved by the Park City Council July 8.

The change does not affect the hopes that the west end of Grosse Pointe Park — now perhaps with some participation of businesses on the Detroit side — will continue to blossom as a walkable area filled with restaurants and small businesses. That holds true not just for the commercial blocks on Kercheval, but for Charlevoix, Mack and Jefferson, too.

Part of the Jefferson activity includes plans for a performing arts center on a piece of property that lies in Detroit. A foundation, the Urban Renewal Initiative Foundation, will purchase the property as part of a multi-pronged agreement between Grosse Pointe Park and the city of Detroit that included the opening of the Kercheval circle. Another piece: widening a section of Jefferson within the Park to help accommodate Detroit buses, which reach the end of their route at the cities' border with each other.

It all seems to bode well for an improving era of cooperation between the two cities, which also has included consultation on Mack Avenue streetscapes. The neighborhood there has gained a much more lively feel over the last several years.

Part of that is due to a housing grant program started in 2011 by the Grosse Pointe Housing Foundation. It offered help with rent for college students in an effort to attract younger people and introduce them to living in the Pointes — while shoring up the rental market in the Park in the aftermath of the 2008 housing crash.

And — to come full circle — the benefits can multiply when neighbors work together across borders, too.

I SAY By Laurel Kraus

Here's to the quiet people

In today's American society, it is no secret that more often than not, extroverts are viewed as the ideal successful person, while introversion is viewed as an unfortunate personality trait meant to be overcome.

Extroverts equal happy, outgoing, go-getters. Introverts equal shy, mellow, background noise.

I'd like to preface this by pointing out how terribly inaccurate such labels are. Introverts can be go-getters, extroverts can be shy and every personality type has the same capacity for happiness.

The actual definition of the word "introvert" is simply a person who needs time alone in order to recharge their batteries. Extroverts, in turn, are energized through having others around.

Both, believe it or not, are entirely acceptable and sustainable ways of living.

So why does American society seem incapable of seeing it that way?

I've often wondered why it is perfectly acceptable to turn to an introvert and say, "You're too quiet; you should speak up more," yet considered blatantly rude to turn to an extrovert and say, "You're too loud; you should speak a little less."

Where did this standard come from? When did "quiet" earn such a negative connotation? We seem to praise the idea of taking time to listen and then squint suspiciously at those who actually do.

In an age when progress has been all but stalled by the sheer surge of voices screaming every thought at the top of their lungs, why are we teaching our children to be ashamed of being labeled quiet?

To be quiet is simply to take the time to understand where those around us are coming from, to consider how what they say fits into our worldview and to formulate a statement that both serves a purpose and leaves no room for misinterpretation.

Why is this something that ought to be overcome?

How does it make sense for elementary teachers to remark, "Her grades are fantastic, but she's just so quiet."

Is the concern that we can't possibly be successful in this extroverted country unless we force ourselves into something we aren't and won't ever be? Tell that to Albert Einstein, Rosa Parks, Bill Gates, Eleanor Roosevelt and J.K. Rowling, who make up only a handful of incredibly successful introverted individuals.

And while we're mentioning introversion in school, I might as well dive into the terror that is participation grades.

The purpose of this grading system is to hold the students' attention, yet introverts often face exactly the opposite of the desired outcome.

Give an introvert a participation grade and there's a fantastic chance they'll spend the class period concentrating on when, how and what to say rather than really grasping the lesson content at all.

The motto of youth development is to be comfortable with yourself, yet they're simultaneously being told to adjust their nature if they want that 4.0.

Perhaps being quiet would be less frowned upon if assumptions were not made on why people are quiet.

In general, introverts are not quiet because we're conceited, depressed, uninterested, friendless or even shy.

We're quiet because we like to observe. We're quiet because we're thinking. That's it.

A few final thoughts: My quiet nature in no way means I'm not enjoying myself. My preference for a quiet night in does not mean I'm lonely, bored or unfulfilled. My quality of life is not somehow lessened by the amount of time I spend living in my head.

As postmodernist author William S. Burroughs once said, "Silence is only frightening to people who are compulsively verbalizing."

Most seriously injured was a 17-year-old St. Clair Shores female who suffered second-degree burns when the bursting explosive ignited her blouse.

Four other people suffered minor burns and several public safety officers while rendering aid.

TEACHERS IN THE SUMMERTIME

These articles are part of a series on teachers spending time in the summer to enhance their knowledge and enrich their classrooms for the benefit of their students.

North science teacher trains fellow teachers

By Mary Anne Brush
Staff Writer

Science teacher Don Pata knows he's making a difference each year in the lives of his students. But as a trainer of teachers, he's making a difference in the lives of students he has never met.

The 20-year Grosse Pointe North High School teaching veteran said he was trained in student engagement as a young teacher and has been practicing that methodology for about a decade. In 2010, he was offered a position teaching a summer class.

For the past 10 years, Pata has joined physics, chemistry and biology teachers across the state in hosting training workshops as part of a group called the Modeling Instruction in Michigan. Professional learning is designed as an immersion model where teachers learn from national facilitators and Michigan practitioners using the same techniques and materials they will use with their students. Participants rotate through roles of student and instructor as they practice and engage in guided inquiry and cooperative learning.

Pata has traveled all over the state to conduct this training. This summer he led a three-week, eight-hour-a-day workshop June 17 to July 3, in Cadillac. The intensity of the workshop — not counting lunches, it's about 105 contact hours, Pata said — is intentional.

"If you really want to institute change in teachers to help them do something more progressive, more geared toward student learning, it takes this kind of long and sustained professional development effort," Pata said. "... That's why we insist on these heavy workshops. Teachers need both content help as well as methodology help. You can be an expert in your content inasmuch as you understand what you're teaching, but to really teach it well, you need a deeper understanding.

"After teachers take a workshop like this, they can't even go back to thinking about teaching the way they did," he added.

Feedback from teachers reflects this.

"What we hear from the teachers (is) not only do they enjoy the experience, but for many teachers — up to 70 percent — they have a wholesale change about what they think about teaching and learning," Pata said.

The workshops challenge the traditional notion of teacher as expert, Pata said.

"If I model expertise, they will become experts. It turns out that's not true. That's not how students learn. Students learn when they are in charge of their own learning."

Later this summer, Pata will go from leading a workshop to taking one. This one is hosted by code.org and will prepare Pata to teach the advanced placement computer science principles class at North as a pilot class. The class will be offered first hour so Grosse Pointe South High School students may attend as well.

According to Pata, the administration was open to his idea to offer the class for the upcoming school year.

"The district is amazing," he said. "I went to the curriculum director (Director of Secondary Education Maureen Bur) and suggested (it) and she said, 'That is a wonderful idea.' I said 'I haven't learned it yet and she said, 'I have complete trust in you.'

"This is another great opportunity where I'm going to do a little work over the summer and the kids are going to benefit," he added. "And the district was great enough to say: we trust you; go for it. We just want to provide the best opportunities for the kids in the 21st century."

In addition to time with his family — wife, Amanda Pata, North's media specialist, and four children, ages 9, 7, 5 and 2 — the Grosse Pointe Park resident typically spends about four weeks in the summer either training others or taking a workshop or class for his own professional development.

"I don't think there's been a summer where I haven't done some sort of training," he said. "That's how we get rejuvenated. That's how we get better at the practice. That's how we serve the students better."

Parcells teacher engages in research excursion on Lake Erie

Chris Geerer, a science teacher at Parcells Middle School, recently stepped off the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency research vessel Lake Guardian.

Geerer was one of 15 educators chosen from more than 40 applicants to collect data alongside scientists from July 8 to 14, as part of the Center for Great Lakes Literacy's

Chris Geerer spent a week on the RV Lake Guardian, working with EPA scientists to gather water quality data for Lake Erie.

Lake Erie Shipboard Science Workshop.

"The experience exceeded my expectations," said Geerer. "I learned so much about scientific research and about Lake Erie that I can take directly back to my students and fellow educators. We live in the Lake Erie watershed and what we do on land here affects our own Lake St. Clair as well as everyone downstream."

Thanks to facilitators from Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana-Illinois Sea Grants, the workshop provided teachers an opportunity to work alongside four scientists on current Lake Erie research projects. Dr. George Bullerjahn from Bowling Green State University, Dr. Lorena Rios Mendoza from the University of Wisconsin Madison, Elizabeth Whitmore from Cornell University, and Ben Alsip from the US EPA Great Lakes National Program

Office guided educators in learning about the impact of human activities on water quality.

Teachers evaluated the presence of microplastics and microbial DNA and RNA in surface water and sediment, enumerated zooplankton as a proxy for productivity, and measured chlorophyll to determine phytoplankton concentrations throughout Lake Erie's basins. Samples were analyzed in onboard laboratories or preserved for later processing in researchers' laboratories. Ultimately, educators will be able to take their experiences back to the classroom and inspire their own students to want to do scientific exploration of the Great Lakes.

"Educators were immersed in an intense week of Great Lakes science. They assisted with authentic data collection and processing that can be used to provide insight on the quality of Lake Erie's water. Using innovative sampling and monitoring equipment, teachers were provided with a once-in-a-lifetime professional learning experience to explore science up-close and personal," said Angela Greene, Ohio Sea Grant Education Specialist, who helped facilitate the workshop.

In addition to gathering and synthesizing data aboard the ship, participants had shoreline experiences in Erie, Pa., and Put-in-Bay, Ohio. They collected and sorted litter from a beach clean up, learned how to implement stewardship projects with students and practiced Great Lakes classroom lessons.

The Lake Erie Shipboard Science Workshop was supported by the EPA through funding from the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative and Center for Great Lakes Literacy.

South student gets early start in early music

By Mary Anne Brush
Staff Writer

Like many rising seniors, Ian Plansker is working on his college applications this summer. But unlike his Grosse Pointe South High School classmates, Plansker was only a freshman last year.

Having taken biology and geometry at South while an eighth-grader at Pierce Middle School, Plansker was already on an accelerated track when he arrived for his first year of high school. The idea of skipping two grades and graduating early grew out of his interest in studying early music at the collegiate level.

"I want to get into collegiate music earlier. Early music doesn't exist at the high school level," he said.

He needed only to complete several online classes freshman year while juggling a full regular schedule. Doubling up on science and English classes next year will earn him the remaining credits he needs to graduate on track with the class of 2020.

While the 15-year-old wrote an opera performed this summer at Oberlin's Baroque Performance Institute, his collegiate interest is performance rather than composition. The latter is something he hopes to incorporate into his professional career.

Plansker already has a plan. After attending a conservatory at the undergraduate and graduate levels — top choices offering strong early music undergraduate programs are Oberlin Conservatory of Music in Ohio, Peabody Institute of The Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, the Schulich School of Music of McGill University in Montreal and Indiana University Jacobs School of Music in

Bloomington — he hopes to open up a modern opera company. His vision is to make opera more accessible to modern audiences.

Plansker's formal musical instruction began in fifth grade. A student in Defer Elementary School's magnet program, he learned the flute as part of the school's instrumental program. Exposure to music composition — and the arts in general — began even earlier at home with his father, Christopher, a professional musician, and mother, Stephanie, a dance teacher.

"My dad is a jazz pianist and composer," Plansker said. "I've always been around music and he was very helpful as I first began, teaching me the basics of composition and theory. Afterwards, I started teaching myself. As I ran into the historical styles — 16th and 17th-century music — I read a lot of primary sources on the era."

This included a book — translated into English — on the theory of tonal and rhythmic order used by Leopold Mozart to teach his son, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, "considered a standard for instruction of the day — a dialogue between teacher and student teaching them all the basics," Plansker said.

YouTube also proved a valuable source for Plansker to listen "to all the music I could find. Baroque music was very appealing to me because I loved all the different textures they were achieving. Also, it's mentally stimulating because there's a very methodical way to doing everything that's very meticulous. Studying the music and listening to it you'll always reproduce the same results in terms of how things are done, but the way that they're put together is very interesting to look at. And since they didn't always have that same sort of order in later music, you don't really get that same satisfaction."

Plansker compared baroque to jazz, particularly the improvisational nature of it.

"Jazz would probably be the best parallel to baroque music nowadays for a couple of different reasons," he said. "One of the biggest aspects of baroque music is improvisation. On paper, it's very structured, but actually, you're supposed to do all sorts of flourishes and ornaments over the line."

After learning the flute followed by piano and violin, Plansker ventured into early music instruments, taking lessons in harpsichord and studying baroque flute in the summer at Oberlin. He even had a baroque flute made by a builder in Montreal — a replica of a 1725 Naust flute made out of boxwood. This 8-keyed "simple system" flute was used in instrumental compositions by Mozart and Hayden.

In the 1800s, Theodore Boehm completely redesigned the flute to allow for both improved intonation and ease of finger placement. The new flutes were manufactured out of metal rather than wood, with the number, dimensions and arrangement of holes modified.

"On a baroque flute there are no keys at all except for one key at the end," Plansker said. "Everything is done with finger work to get everything in tune. As the 18th century progressed, people started adding keys to get notes in tune."

"Boehm took that idea and translated it into a fully keyed flute that is much more chromatic than the simple flute system," he added.

Plansker plays the modern flute as a member of South's orchestra. He also plays piccolo.

"It's been a great experience," he said. "South has a very good music program and I love playing in their orchestra. What makes me very happy about doing it is we play a lot of real repertoires — Tchaikovsky and Shostakovich and Beethoven and a lot of big composers you don't usually see done in a high school orchestra."

James Gross, who teaches instrumental music at Pierce and South and directed Plansker in orchestras at both schools, attests to the young musician's talents.

"Ian has prodigious gifts for music," Gross said. "I have been a witness of these gifts manifested by Ian on the flute, harpsichord, violin and in his musical compositions. He makes all of those surrounding him better. I am thankful to have him in my classroom."

Plansker's middle school and high school experiences combined with playing at Oberlin with a blend of musicians — from other high school students to master's and doctoral students and even professionals — have prepared him for his accelerated start at a music conservatory.

Also giving him an edge is his composition performed at this summer's institute, "The Spectres." The hour-long ballad opera is written in the English Galant style fashionable in the 1720s to the 1770s for two violins, a bass and harpsichord and two singers — a soprano and tenor. Plansker played the harpsichord for the performance.

A ballad opera, according to Plansker, includes spoken dialogue, vaudeville and comical elements and more accessible plots than the "standard operas of the day" based on Greek or Roman myths or historical events. They also are written in English.

"A lot of people may not like classical music, but even people who like classical music don't necessarily like opera," he said.

His vision for a modern opera company is to reform opera from what his generation views as "stuck up, boring, old-fashioned entertainment" by writing it in the target audience's native language, replacing recitatives, or sung dialogue, with less cumbersome spoken dialogue, creating a contemporary setting and reinventing the art form as a musical using classical rather than popular music.

"The Spectres" reflects many of these elements. The cautionary tale about a betrothed couple, Lucy and Thomas, begins with a prologue by the village

Camp Invention builds innovators

Camp Invention, a summer program offered June 24 to 28 at Brownell Middle School, brought science, technology, engineering and math to life for participants. Campers, led by local teachers, had the opportunity to become innovators through teamwork and immersive, hands-on creative problem-solving.

This year's theme was Supercharged. Campers took on four exciting challenges — Innovation Force, Deep Sea Mystery, Farm Tech and DIY Orbot.

In Innovation Force, children teamed up with a group of National Inventors Hall of Fame inductees transformed into superheroes to battle the evil Plagiaterizer, a supervillain who is out to steal the world's ideas. As children created a device to retrieve the stolen ideas, they learned about the importance of collaboration and patents.

In Deep Sea Mystery, children embarked on a research adventure at sea, but soon found themselves stranded on an island. Using lessons and advice from NIHF inductees, they worked in teams to invent island-survival tools and underwater equipment and navigate their way back home.

In Farm Tech, campers managed their own farm as they learned the basics of running a business. With the help of Bot-ANN-E, a programmable robot, they learned fundamental coding techniques to maximize their time and profits and perform mock DNA experiments to check the health of their cattle.

Finally, in DIY Orbot, campers explored frequency, circuit boards, motors and gears as they used real tools to reverse engineer a remote-controlled DIY Orbot.

On the last day of camp, parents were able to witness and experience their children's creations at an Inventors' Showcase.

apothecary and ends in tragedy when the young groom, who has "commitment issues," is lured into the forest and danced to his death by a group of spectres.

"The plot is a little far-fetched, but this kind of goes with ballad operas," Plansker said. "They tended to write kind of crazy plots, but that was what made them entertaining."

While Plansker will not yet have turned 17 when he begins his conservatory experience in the fall of 2020, he's not concerned about adjusting or fitting in.

"After spending the two weeks at Oberlin with primarily conservatory students, I think that's something I don't need to worry about too much," he said. "In terms of socialization, I've gotten along perfectly with people even if they're twice, three times my age."

In addition, he has his parents' full support.

"They're always open to listening to all the different things I come up with, all the different music I write," he said. "I've loved going to watch all the different ballets with my mom and all my dad's performances."

"They're very supportive parents," he added. "They've been supportive of everything since the beginning. I'm very grateful."

South thespians perform in international festival

By Mary Anne Brush
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe South High School's Thespian Troupe No. 49 had an opportunity this summer to participate at the International Thespian

Festival in Nebraska. Under the direction of South drama teacher Meaghan Dunham and student director Riley Barbour, the cast, made up of rising senior Andrew Fleming and rising juniors Kerrigan

Dunham, Quinn Sahutske and Campbell Stencel, traveled to Lincoln, Neb., to re-stage their fall production of "Why We Like Love Stories," selected by the Michigan Chapter as a Select One-Act play. Accompanying them were production team members Sarah Camp and Gigi Niforos and parent chaperone Laura Sanom.

"It's basically a crazy theater summer camp for a week," Dunham said of the festival held June 24 to 29. "You've got 4,000 kids from all over the world in Lincoln, Neb., from 8 o'clock in the morning till about midnight, taking classes of their choice, seeing Main Stage adjudicated productions," among other options.

Criteria for selection as a Select One-Act was a play performed in 30 minutes or less. The production itself, according to Dunham, was bare bones.

"You perform in this beautiful little space with minimal costumes, set, props," she said. "It's to celebrate the acting performance itself and it's especially great for schools that don't have the means. Taking a MainStage show can cost $40,000 by the time you get the kids and the set and the technicians halfway across the country. This is a way to celebrate on a smaller scale, but still know the quality of the performances is going to be amazing because only one is selected from each state."

The troupe's production of "Why We Like Love Stories" grew out of an invitation from Dunham to playwright Stephen Gregg. Gregg, who lives in California, had posted on the Educational Theatre Association's open forum that he was seeking a California high school to workshop a new play. Dunham had worked with Gregg professionally. On a whim, she sent him a quick note saying if no one in California took him up on the offer, he was welcome to come to Michigan. Later that day she received Gregg's response: he was in.

A year later, that correspondence generated six months of preparation, collaboration between the student actors, their director and the playwright and a new understanding of what it takes to produce new or revised theatrical pieces. Gregg came to South in October to work with the students in a process known as "workshopping" in which students play a role not just as actors, but in shaping the play as a work in progress. Gregg has published more than 20 plays for secondary schools to perform.

The cast performed four of Gregg's one-act plays in November and was invited to take two of the pieces to the Michigan Thespian Festival in December, earning them the invitation to perform

"Why We Like Love Stories" at the international festival.

At the performance in Nebraska for an international audience, Dunham said she noticed a lot of growth in the students, both emotionally and physically, since their fall debut of the play.

"The show grew with them," she said. "It was so much fun and such a challenge. It was great for everybody involved."

According to Sanom, the students performed to a packed house, including Gregg.

"One theater director in attendance called it one of the best performances she had seen at the festival," Sanom said.

50 beds for 50 kids

Furniture Bank of Southeastern Michigan celebrates half century

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

Incorporated in 1969 by a network of Birmingham and Bloomfield volunteers, Furniture Bank of Southeastern Michigan this year celebrates its 50th anniversary of providing furniture to families living at or below poverty level.

"Of the 100-plus furniture banks across North America, we're the oldest," said Robert Boyle, executive director. "It's a wonderful thing. More than 65,000 families have been served in metro Detroit in the time we've been serving the community."

The Grosse Pointe Woods resident, who has been at the organization's helm since 2009, has seen countless families living in empty homes and has helped thousands regain their dignity with help from Furniture Bank.

"We're looking forward to 50 more years," Boyle said. "And we hope to reach 100,000 families."

"We wanted to do something to celebrate 50 years, so we launched a special campaign," he continued. "We'll be raising $10,000 to provide 50 kids with 50 beds."

Ezekiel received a new bed and bedding from Furniture Bank.

"Fifty beds" includes the whole kit and caboodle — box springs, mattresses, bed frames and bedding, Boyle said.

"We're identifying kids who don't have a bed to sleep in. We want to help them get a healthier start in life."

Boyle said so far this year, more than 400 beds have been delivered to children as part of Furniture Bank's usual efforts.

"We'll reach 800 this year and, with this campaign, we'll be closer to 1,000," he added. "Getting beds to kids is the core of what we do. I couldn't think of a better way to celebrate our 50th anniversary."

Already on the way to his $10,000 goal, Boyle noted the recent support of an anonymous donor, who pledged a $5,000 challenge grant to Furniture Bank.

"For every dollar we're able to raise up to $5,000, our supporter will match — and we'll get 50 beds to 50 kids who desperately need them," he said. Furniture Bank expanded its service route to include the Pointes and all of Wayne County in 2015.

"Since we added the Pointes to our pickup routes in the fall of 2015, the Furniture Bank has picked up 586 items from 104 Grosse Pointe homes," Boyle said. "We began serving families in Wayne County at the same time and have provided beds and furniture to 634 Wayne County families — or 2,004 Wayne County residents in total — including five families from the Pointes."

Furniture Bank always needs furniture donations; monetary donations are welcome as well.

"We do need stuff — beds, dressers, sofas and dining sets," Boyle said, adding the organization also will pick up items such as pots, pans, blenders and other small household goods that are in working order and could be of use to Furniture Bank clients.

"We're just starting to take other things, too, as a service to donors, like desks and bookshelves," he added. "They get a tax receipt and get rid of their item (for a small fee). ... It supports our mission and it keeps things out of the landfill. Furniture is one of the least reused and recycled items. Not only do we help people with their basic needs and get them on a healthier path, but we're also keeping larger items out of landfills, so it has social benefits as well."

Boyle said the organization averages 3,000 furniture pickups per year. One challenge Furniture Bank faces is being limited to three trucks. Boyle said he's hopeful to add a fourth to the fleet, "in the foreseeable future."

People thinking of donating furniture should make sure what they're willing to part with is in good condition.

"We want items that make families feel good about themselves," Boyle said. "We want people to feel good about where they live and invite people to come over."

Of all the cities it serves, Detroit is second only to Pontiac, Boyle said, where Furniture Bank is located. He said he hopes to add a second location in the metro area to better serve Wayne County.

"Our goal this year is to provide furniture to 2,000 families total," Boyle said. "That's 6,000 individuals and 15,000 items. At the halfway point, we're a little behind. In the first six months of the year, we're at just over 900 families served."

"Sleeping on the floor is a greater challenge," he added. "Families without a table, eating a meal on the floor, is a greater challenge. They say that basic needs are food, clothing and shelter. But for someone with no bed who's sleeping on the floor, it's not a good existence. Kids will not do well in school. People can't establish careers and are not able to establish a healthy life and family. These donations are foundational — not creature comforts."

Those interested in making a donation may schedule a pickup by calling (248) 332-1300 or visiting the organization's website, furniture-bank.org.

"I'm thrilled to have him back," Executive Director Robert Boyle said.

The evening includes a full buffet dinner, 50/50 raffle, live auction, cash bar and the show.

A variety of sponsorship opportunities are available.

Tickets are $60 and may be purchased at furniture-bank.org.

Seniors sought for new bowling league

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

Men and women ages 50 and older are invited to join the Tuesday Senior Bowlers for its new season, which begins in September.

Organizers hope for 30 or more bowlers and so far have fallen short of their goal.

"I'm trying to do a community service by getting seniors out and about," said organizer Toni Urso-Salvador, of Grosse Pointe Shores. "I know The Helm offers a lot and other places, too, but bowling is such great exercise."

The league, she said, is the reinvigoration of a church-formed bowling league whose members either passed away, moved away or decided they were too old to participate. With dwindling numbers, the league could no longer sustain itself.

Urso-Salvador asked if there would be interest if she started up a whole new league — and received positive feedback.

So far she has 10 to 15 willing participants, but several more are needed. Ideally, she'd like to see 10 teams of three. Even better: 10 teams of four.

One bonus is that experience is not required.

"We want to welcome new bowlers, those who've never bowled," Urso-Salvador said. "We help each other out. We're all friendly and it's fun to join."

Apart from the social aspect — "Everybody has something to share and talk about," Urso-Salvador said — bowling is great exercise.

"If you are active, you know you want to keep your balance," she said. "Bowling is a good sport to keep you in line. It also is good exercise for your legs and for your arms; it strengthens that upper body. You use your whole body when you're doing this."

After describing the bowling prowess of a current 93-year-old participant, Urso-Salvador said there's no excuse to not get out and about.

"Some people felt they were too old to come back," she said. "I can appreciate that, but there are some of us who still want to try ... and get healthy doing it."

The league will meet weekly September to April at 12:30 p.m. Tuesdays at Harbor Lanes, 25419 Jefferson, St. Clair Shores.

Cost is $10 per week. The deadline to sign up is Thursday, Aug. 1.

For more information or to join a team, call (313) 655-9100.

Contest hopes to brand downtown St. Clair Shores

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

Calling all aspiring and established artists: Your work is needed.

Roy O'Brien Ford is sponsoring a design contest to make the area at 9 Mile and Mack stand out.

"We're part of the 9 Mack Merchants Association," said Justine Yalch, the social media manager at Roy O'Brien Ford. "We were at a meeting and talking about how to make downtown St. Clair Shores more attractive. I had an idea for a sign contest."

With approval from Mark O'Brien and St. Clair Shores Mayor Kip Walby, the idea was presented in early June to St. Clair Shores City Council, who loved it, Yalch said.

The call has been made for artists to design signage for the four main arteries — Greater Mack Avenue, between 9 Mile Road and Cavalier Drive and 9-Mack Drive — that led to what will be known as "downtown St. Clair Shores."

"Once we decide whose artwork we want, it's going to go on signs," Yalch said.

The top three finishers will receive cash awards as well.

Yalch said she's hopeful for a strong influx of entries. She's received lots of inquiries about the contest, which is open to anyone and all ages.

Entries are due Tuesday, July 30, then will be judged by three people, including Yalch. The winner will be announced Thursday, Aug. 15.

Yalch said the project is important to her, since she went to high school in St. Clair Shores and has been employed in the community for years.

"I've seen downtown St. Clair Shores go through lots of changes," she said. "There's been a lot of transformation. There's a lot coming up in the area to improve the city. I want to make it official — much like the Nautical Mile is."

Contest entry forms are available in this newspaper, as well as on the Roy O'Brien Ford Facebook page. Entries may be submitted electronically or at the dealership, 22201 9 Mile, St. Clair Shores.

"We're very excited and we hope we get some really good entries," Yalch said. "We're excited to see what comes of it and excited to establish downtown St. Clair Shores."

For more information, call (586) 776-7600, Ext. 214 or email jjalch@royobrien.com.

SummerFest features free concerts, movies

SummerFest, The War Memorial's festival of family-friendly concerts and movies, returns to the historic estate for two weeks on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, beginning July 22.

Concerts take place on the lakefront lawn while movies are shown in the Patriot Theater. All events are free and open to the public.

A special encore performance featuring Dave Bennett and Band takes place Tuesday, Aug. 6.

The War Memorial grounds open at 6:30 p.m. for all events; double-feature movies begin at 7 p.m. Mondays and live performances begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Wednesdays. "The War Memorial's summertime festival of family-friendly fun is a highlight of our programming, filled with live performances and films guaranteed to inspire," said War Memorial President and CEO Charles Burke. "Seeing the metro Detroit community come together on the grounds of the historic Alger Family-friendly fun is expected during this year's SummerFest.

Estate, enjoying the simple pleasure of summer on the lake, reminds us just how special a place The War Memorial is. Our SummerFest motto is, 'Our backyard becomes your backyard,' and it's truly an honor to produce this festival."

The War Memorial's culinary team, led by Executive Chef Natalia Tarnavsky, provides food and beverage services during the seven-day festival. This year's menu features hamburgers, hot dogs, black bean burgers and "Walkin' Tacos." Captain Kool Ice Cream, a SummerFest sponsor, will be onsite offering desserts for purchase. A full bar, including soda, beer, wine and liquor, also will be available.

Guests are welcome to bring their own picnic to the festival, but by Michigan law, no outside alcoholic beverages are allowed.

"It's such a treat to craft the menu for The War Memorial's SummerFest," Tarnavsky said. "It's a privilege to know that, in some small way, the food we offer is helping to create summertime memories for our guests. We hope to provide the magic of a classic American picnic, with a little bit of that War Memorial flair cooked in."

SummerFest sponsors include major sponsor Ascension St. John Hospital; stage sponsor Beaumont; patron sponsors George Johnson & Company and Mary and Ron Lamparter; and friend sponsors C K Corporation of Centerline and Captain Kool Ice Cream.

Sponsorship opportunities still are available. Contact The War Memorial's Department of Institutional Advancement at (313) 332-4075 or email jrussell@warmemorial.org for details.

Peter C. Duffy

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Peter C. Duffy, 86, died Wednesday, July 10, 2019.

He is survived by his wife, Mickey; son, Kevin Duffy; cherished granddaughter, Madeline Duffy and several nieces and nephews.

He was predeceased by his daughters, Karen, Mary and Therese Duffy and sister, Ann Louise Gervasi (Anthony, surviving).

Pete grew up on Detroit's eastside in the family home where he was born. The home's backyard was transformed into a skating pond every winter, making Pete the envy of the neighborhood. He had hockey skills, but Pete's favorite sport was football. He attended St. Bernard Catholic School 12 years, where he captained some respectable teams on the gridiron. He'd also been an altar boy.

Immediately upon graduating high school, Pete joined the U.S. Navy, where he toured the Pacific four years during the Korean War. Ever inscrutable and a devout Catholic, Pete followed his call within the Carmelite Order of Brookline, Mass., for two years before returning to Michigan.

Pete earned a degree in business administration from Michigan State University and worked within the Social Security Administration more than 30 years before retiring in 1988. It was between his days at MSU and the start of his career that he met and married Mickey.

Together, Pete and Mickey raised two children to adulthood and along the way collected many friends and happy memories. They took up tennis in their 30s and much of their social life outside of family centered around the game. Pete continued to play more than four decades until he could no longer hold the racquet firmly. He remained a fan of all sports and often could be seen in the stands, behind the fences or along the sidelines at various games, matches and events. He was a great supporter of local high school sports and rooted for both South and North.

Pete will be remembered for his sense of humor and contagious laughter.

A funeral Mass was celebrated July 15 at St. Paul on the Lake Catholic Church, Grosse Pointe Farms.

Donations may be made to The Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology HFHS, Philip C. Hessburg M.D. Endowed Lectureship, 15415 E. Jefferson, Grosse Pointe Park, MI 48230.

Paul Pierron

Paul Pierron, 85, passed away Tuesday, Oct. 2, 2018.

He is survived by his daughter, Debbie Bryhl (Donald); granddaughters, Jackie Dougherty (Ric Ryhne) and Cindy Geyer (Jason); great-grandson, Corey Geyer; brothers, Frank Pierron (Marguerite), Dr. Donald Crandall (Nancy), Marvin Crandall (Peg) and Ron Crandall; sister, Marilyn Belans (Milan) and many loving nieces and nephews.

Paul and the love of his life, Shirley, were married in 1954 and spent 62 wonderful years before her passing. He also was predeceased by his parents, Daniel and Helen Pierron; brothers- and sisters-in-law, Daniel and Elise Pierron and Richard "Dick" and Jane Pierron and sister- and brother-in-law, Doris and Peter Kinsey.

A veteran of the U.S. Army, Paul earned a master's degree from Wayne State University in 1968. He spent the majority of his teaching career in the Grosse Pointe Public School System. He taught most of his career at Grosse Pointe North High School, where he placed many students in their first jobs in area communities through the Office Co-op Program. He ran both the Business Office Education Club and the Interact Club at North. In fall 1985, he made the move to the Traverse Bay Area Career-Tech Center, which put him up in Northern Michigan full-time, which had been a dream of his and Shirley's for a long time. In 1987, he made another move to teach in the business division of Cypress College in Cypress, Calif., where he spent nine years.

Paul was active in his church, where he spent time on various sports teams, committees and ushering duties. He enjoyed reading, golfing, driving his '65 Mustang and '46 Willys Jeep, wood working and playing cards and other table games with friends and family. He also enjoyed his life on Birch Lake in Elk Rapids, where the family owned a home more than 40 years. He also was a partner in a boat rental business in Elk Rapids. Even in retirement Paul stayed busy. He was chairman of the board of directors at Pacific College in Costa Mesa, Calif.

Paul will be remembered for being a great father, supportive, caring and kind teacher and friend and for his positive outlook, great smile and outgoing nature.

A memorial service and interment will be at 10 a.m. Saturday, July 20, at Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church, 211 Moross, Grosse Pointe Farms.

PASTOR'S CORNER By the Rev. Jim Rizer

Challenges, storms and faith

Several years ago my family was trying to travel from our home to a family wedding in Chicago later that day. All the details seemed to come together for us to make the trip that just days before looked impossible. We left with ample time, anticipating the normal Chicago traffic. We were not even an hour into our five-hour trip when traffic came to a complete standstill. We began to wonder if we were meant to make it to the wedding after all.

I imagine this is how the Israelites felt as they were departing Egypt. After years of bondage, God finally set his people free and provided a pillar of cloud by day and fire by night to guide them on their journey. Barely into the journey and this newfound freedom they hit their first road block, the Red Sea (Exodus 13). They looked back only to discover that Pharaoh had changed his mind and sent his troops to recapture them. While walking the road of faith they found themselves in a place they never imagined.

I wonder if this doesn't speak to a larger assumption we often make about the Christian faith. The assumption is that if we are faithfully following Jesus, then we will not face challenges such as these. We often surmise that we must have made a wrong turn somewhere on the road of discipleship to have ended up somewhere like this.

Yet as we honestly consider the biblical witness, we discover it is often the exact opposite. The Israelites followed the pillar precisely to this place. As we think about some of the challenging moments for Abraham, Joseph, Moses, Paul, Peter and Jesus, they came as a result of faithful following, not because they had made a misstep.

As Jesus closes the Sermon on the Mount, he reminds us of the truth that even those who build their lives on the rock will still face stormy challenges (Matthew 7:24-5). Jesus wants us to know the truth that the road of faith is not an escape from the obstacles and storms, but rather a sustaining foundation to make it through them.

ASK THE EXPERTS By Veronica McAtee

Helping your child overcome fears

Q: My daughter is scared to use public restrooms and often refuses. I think it's the loud sounds that bother her. She has a language delay so it's hard for me to truly understand what is bothering her. I keep reassuring her she'll be OK, but that doesn't seem to help. I know it's important for her to use public restrooms, so how can I help her overcome this fear without stressing her out too much?

A: This is a common fear for children. Public restrooms are loud and the sounds often are unpredictable. Some restrooms have automatic flushers that go off when the child is using the toilet and one or two experiences like that might be enough for a child to avoid them altogether.

However, the more you avoid the sounds, the bigger the fear becomes. Be prepared when you're out and proactively visit different types of bathrooms to get used to the sounds. Tell your child using simple language that you are going to just visit the bathroom and walk in and then leave after a short time without requiring her to go in the stall. Praise her for staying calm and being brave. The more she is exposed to the sounds, the easier they will be to handle. If you practice this when she doesn't need to use the restroom, she might be calmer and more relaxed. If you're using a toilet with an automatic flusher, cover the sensor with something and remove it when it's time to flush. You also can tell your child to cover her ears before you flush and stand outside of the bathroom stall so she is able to tolerate the sound from a distance. Set small goals along the way and reward your child when she is brave and accomplishes those goals.

Q: My son hates to get his hair cut. I haven't been able to take him to a salon in years and I try to cut it at home, but it's getting harder as he gets bigger. How can I help him so I can cut his hair?

A: Getting a haircut can be stressful for many kids because of the way it feels and sounds. It's also something that doesn't happen often, so many kids don't get to practice this skill frequently. Work on gradually exposing your son to the different things involved in a haircut — wearing the cape, listening to the sound of clippers and looking at scissors. Create a simple story about getting a haircut that lists the steps along with pictures and review this with your child. You might also show your child a video of someone getting a haircut so he can learn to tolerate the different sounds. Set up some play scenarios to work on this, but don't actually cut his hair. For example, you can pull out the clippers and let him listen to the sound and then briefly touch them to his head and praise him for staying calm. If you break it up and practice frequently in small steps, over time he will learn to

UNIVERSITY LIGGETT SCHOOL

Brusilow takes talents to NMU

By Bob St. John
Sports Editor

The dream is now a reality.

City of Grosse Pointe's Izzy Brusilow knew in middle school she wanted to play college soccer.

After years of traveling to several states to play with and against top-notch competition, that dream became a reality when Brusilow was offered an athletic scholarship by Northern Michigan University women's soccer head coach Sonia Basma.

"I love Northern so much that I told my mom after my first visit that I want to go here even if coach Basma didn't offer me a scholarship," Brusilow, 18, said. "I'm glad I was offered the scholarship. I can't wait to play for coach Basma at Northern. My dream came true. Northern has the academic degree I'm interested in (zoology or wildlife and fisheries), a great campus with the outdoors I love, and I get to play the game I love, soccer, for a great coach."

"I'm really proud of Izzy," Brusilow's mother, Cindy, said. "She made the decision to go to Northern and follow her dream. She just didn't pick a school because the coach offered her a scholarship. She really thought this out and picked the school that best fit her loves."

Brusilow spent four years playing soccer for head coach David Dwaihy at University Liggett School. She was a freshman when the Knights won a state championship. She enjoyed a great career, earning All-State First Team, All-Catholic First Team, All-District First Team and All-Region First Team during her high school career.

She also played travel soccer for the Michigan Burn and now is a member of the Rebels FC, which allows her to stay sharp on the field and stay in shape before her NMU workouts start in the middle of August.

"I have a workout schedule from coach Basma, and it is intense," Brusilow said. "I'm going to enter my freshman year in great shape and ready to contribute wherever I'm asked."

This season, she led the Knights in goals with 23 and added seven assists. She said she enjoyed taking the role as one of three team captains. She thoroughly enjoyed her high school soccer experience playing for Dwaihy and his assistant, James Knot, plus playing alongside best friends Kate Birgbauer, Nicole Rivera and Mary Weiermiller.

"Coach Dwaihy and coach Knot were great mentors for me, and they helped me become a better soccer player and leader," Brusilow said. "I loved playing soccer at Liggett. I loved being a teammate of my best friends, Kate, Nicole and Mary. I will miss them."

"Statistically and otherwise, Izzy is far and away one of the most talented, accomplished soccer players to grace the girls' program at Liggett, and I can't overstate how impressed I have been with her vast array of contributions since her freshmen year," Dwaihy said. "She loves the game and she absolutely thrives in a competitive environment. She's as complete a player as they come, and I suspect she will make an immediate impact on her team at Northern Michigan with her fighting spirit and many fine qualities as a player. Izzy Brusilow was a program-defining player; fiery play and bold personality will be sorely missed by her teammates and coaches."

Brusilow was one of the top strikers in the Catholic League. She has a rocket shot kicking with either foot, and has headed in several goals off corner kicks from Birgbauer this past season. She was a weapon for the Knights, and the opposition knew to beat stop Brusilow, or at least slow her down.

Brusilow is the youngest of three children. She has twin brothers, Nick and Sam, who were also soccer standouts at ULS, and played lacrosse for their father, Bill. Sam attends Washington University in St. Louis, while Nick goes to Carlton College in Northfield, Minn.

"Izzy will be the closest of our three children," Cindy said. "It's only a seven-hour drive to Marquette."

It's a 10 1/2-hour drive to Carlton and 8 1/2-hour trek to Washington.

With high school in the rearview mirror and orientation completed, Brusilow has about a month before she has to move into her dorm at Northern.

Classes start near the end of August, and her first collegiate game is at 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 6, against Minnesota Duluth.

The final regular season game is Friday, Nov. 8, and the GLIAC tournament is the following week if they qualify.

NMU is a member of the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, and faces Grand Valley State, Ferris State, Saginaw Valley, Ashland, Michigan Tech, Parkside, Davenport, Purdue Northwest and Northwood. The Huskies finished 1-8 in the GLIAC last year and 4-11-2 overall.

When Brusilow has down time, she plans on skiing and hiking around the campus, enjoying the tranquility offered by NMU.

Volunteer opportunities at USODA nationals

From Saturday, July 20, to Sunday, July 28, the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club hosts the United States Optimist Dinghy Association National Championships, in partnership with the Grosse Pointe Youth Nautical Foundation.

The regatta includes three major events: the USODA Team Race National Championship, USODA Girls National Championship and USODA Open Fleet National Championship. Each event showcases the nation's best young sailors using Optimist dinghies, the biggest and fastest-growing sailboat class in the world. Former Optimist sailors make up more than 85 percent of Olympic medal winners.

To ensure this national event is a success, volunteers are needed to assist. A variety of positions are available. Most positions do not require experience and all members of the community are welcome.

Optimist dinghies take to the lake during a previous racing event.

Following is a list of volunteer opportunities:

- ◆ Check-in: Volunteers assist with arriving sailors at the outdoor welcome station by distributing race packets, directing coaches and parents to parking areas and directing sailors to the Opti storage area.
- ◆ Traffic and Foot Control: Volunteers assist the traffic control director by handing out instructional materials, keeping traffic flowing, answering questions and helping direct all non-essential vehicles to their designated storage area.

- ◆ Measurement: Volunteers assist the measurement director by measuring equipment for race qualification.

Training time will be needed. This requires prior training at 6 p.m. Monday, July 22, at the club under the measurement tent.

- ◆ Sailor Information and Check-in: Volunteers assist the check-in director by checking in sailors to ensure all waivers and registration documentation are correct and complete, handing out goody bags and answering questions.

- ◆ Flag Distribution Tent: Volunteers hand out appropriate flags to coaches, safety boats, spectators, judges and race committee members. All flags will be distributed from the USODA with a deposit.

- ◆ Launch and Recovery: Volunteers assist the launch/recovery director by helping competitors put their boats into and retrieving them from the water, securing launch dollies and maintaining a safe and smooth flow throughout launch area. Volunteers will get wet and need appropriate boating shoes.

- ◆ Race Committee Boat Personnel: Volunteers assist the race committee pros by performing flag lowering and raising, line calling and counting start boats on a race committee start boat or calling finishing sail numbers and writing down order of finish on a finish boat. Full-day shifts on race days include lunch.

- ◆ Safety Boats: Volunteers assist race committee members to ensure the safety of all sailors on the water from launch to retrieval. A tie-up area will be provided to keep safety boats at the GPYC as needed. Full-day shifts on race days include lunch. Volunteers should indicate if they have an inflatable dingy or small maneuverable boat available.

- ◆ On-the-Water Boat Measurement: Volunteers conduct on-the-water measurement of the top three boats after all girls and championship fleet races. Full-day shifts on these race days include lunch.

To sign up, visit gpyc.usoda.com and visit the Volunteers tab.
