Officers verbally attacked at urgent care

By Ted O'Neil
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE WOODS — According to a letter from the Fraternal Order of Police Labor Council, two Woods public safety officers were met with insults and verbal harassment Tuesday, July 5, at the Michigan Urgent Care — Grosse Pointe, 20311 Mack. The letter from FOPLC sent to City Administrator Frank Schulte and Public Safety Director John Kosanke Friday, July 8, said an officer, while on duty, went to the medical office for a required annual medical appointment.

It further stated the officer was asked by an employee why he needed to come in with his "get up on," and how many people the officer had killed. When the patrol officer summoned his supervisor, that person, too, was met with similar hostility and was asked "how many people he was going to beat up tonight."

"The officer was on duty, which is why he had his uniform on," Kosanke told the Grosse Pointe News. "He was there for a required annual TB test."

Kosanke also said he has been in touch with a regional manager from NextCare Holdings, which owns 155 urgent care facilities in a dozen states, including eight in southeast Michigan.

"They were very apologetic and said corrective action would be taken," he added. "I don't think it reflects on their business as a whole."

Jesse Henderson, vice president of sales and marketing at NextCare, said in a statement to the Grosse Pointe News that the employee involved in

Lieutenant retires after 23 years of duty

GROSSE POINTE FARMS — Just three weeks into his promotion to Farms detective in 2016, Tom Shimko worked on the infamous homicide case of a handyman killing a local interior designer in front of the designer's home. The team of officers was able to secure a confession from the suspect, David Corzilius, who later was sentenced to 30 to 60 years in prison.

During more than 23 years in the Farms department, Shimko, who retired in early June as lieutenant, also served as fire inspector, detective, sergeant and member of the Wayne County Regional S.W.A.T. team. At the time of his retirement, he was tied for the most award hours in the department at 132.

"Simply put, Tom is one of the most relaxed, funny and good-natured people I've ever met in or out of law enforcement," Farms Director of Public Safety John Hutchins said via email. "His life experience working in several different vocations made him a well-rounded officer and his observations of people and life in general kept us

Although void of a happy ending, Shimko received a medal of valor in 2014, for his bravery in the attempted rescue of a sewer worker trapped in a collapsing 20-foot hole.

While working to dig the man out from the initial collapse, in an effort with dozens of officers from regional response teams, a second collapse occurred and the rescue ultimately was unsuccessful.

"I could see the fissure in the wall forming... and they said, 'Get out of the hole,' and that's when we had to climb these ladders to get out and it was falling in on us, (a) big column of clay," Shimko said. "It was just a terrible thing."

On a lighter note, the lieutenant also once thwarted a breaking and entering in the Woods while at home for his lunch break.

Neighbors witnessed the suspect kick down the door of an elderly woman's home and leave, walking down Allard, with stolen items. When the call went out on police radio, Shimko, who lived close by, jumped in his car and arrested the man before Woods officers arrived.

Dutch too much for elm trees

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE PARK
— Replacement elms aren't taking root against Dutch elm disease.

Every elm planted to repopulate the city has failed.

While efforts are ongoing to protect surviving American elms from the invasive disease introduced to North America from Europe in 1928, attempts to return the community to an elm-canopied shade garden have fallen flat.

"So, I'm not planting elm trees anymore," said Brian Colter, Grosse Pointe Park's city forester for nearly 30 years.

The Park's inventory of city-owned elms, meaning those on municipal property, from sidewalk medians to parkland, has dropped more than 95 percent, from 4,009 to 196, since Dutch elm was diagnosed in the city in 1952, according to Colter.

Nearly 90 percent of those losses, or 3,512, are due to Dutch elm. Colter credits the rest, 497, to other causes, including storm damage and old age.

There remain 197 mature American elms on city property.

Colter planted several alternate elms in the Park trying to fill gaps, both spatial and nostalgic.

"About seven varieties of disease-resistant elms have been developed," he said. "I've experimented with all of them. It's been my experience that they're all susceptible to Dutch elm."

Liberty elm, a cultivar of American elm (ulmus americana), once was considered a likely savior of the landscape.

"In my experience, once they get about 10 to 12 inches in diameter, they're only about 50 percent disease resistant," Colter said. "The most recent is the Princeton elm, which I tried. It also is 100 percent ulmus americana, so it mimics the shape of our historic American elms. Those, too, died from Dutch elm."

Colter presumes losses in the Park are even greater on private property due to the cost and nearly inviolate persistence required of annual fungicide injections to help trees stave off infection.

Although Colter wasn't hired by the Park until 1994, he researched city files to calculate elm losses predating his employment through now.

"1986 was the last year we had firm data showing how many elms we cut down each year," Colter said. "But I know how many elms we had at the end of 1986, and how many in 1995. So, I averaged out those losses."

The most losses in one year, 205, happened during 1982.

"The elms were big, too," Colter said.

"Everybody who lived here at that time tells me during summer, when they were out of school, they heard chippers all day."

Last year was noted for its silence.

"The year 2021 marked the first year in the 70 years since we've had Dutch elm disease that we did not lose an American elm to Dutch elm," Colter said.

The trend hasn't continued into 2022.

"This year, we already lost one in the 800 block of Barrington," Colter said.

A municipal contractor cut down the second elm of the year in April, in the 1000 block of Somerset. Its four-foot diameter trunk and main branches fashioned a vase-like silhouette that for decades withstood fungi spread by bark beetles.

Many elms were topped during the straight-line wind storm of 1997.

"We lost 197 trees," Colter said. "Roughly half were healthy American elm and half silver maple. There were a couple cottonwoods and other casualties."

Many unhealthy elms scarce of leaves withstood the storm. Healthy trees were more vulnerable due to the thickness of their canopies.

"Their leaves caught the wind like a big sail," Colter said. "Wind blew through the dead ones."

Despite decades of losses and dwindling examples of elms nationwide, Elm Street is the fifth most popular name among neighborhoods tracked by Living Places, a website linking home buyers with more than 3,300 historic and 7,000 newer primarily residential neighborhoods in the United States.

Don't believe, however, that George Washington took command of the first American army during a ceremony July 3, 1775, under an elm on Cambridge Common, Mass.

Although an existing elm on the campus of the University of Washington in Seattle was cut from an elm growing on the commons during the historic event, there's no proof the ceremony took place under the Washington Elm of lore.

"The tree was there at the time — that was manifest from its rings when it fell in 1924 — but there is no proof that the transfer to Washington occurred there or nearby," according to Douglas Southall Freeman's biography of Washington.

Openings in the urban tree canopy due to elm losses were made worse by over-planting the desirable species.

To avoid the aesthetic consequences of a single species being wiped out within a short timeframe and the sudden, unexpected costs of replacement, arborists and

"Obviously, keeping downtown vibrant and activities that keep people engaged in the community are so important, but I don't have any specific projects that I'm focused on. At the moment, I'm just listening and learning and looking for opportunities to get involved."

With his appointment to fill Stempfle's seat for the remainder of his term, Krupp anticipates running for election to council in November 2023.

He and his wife, Julie, share three children — 6-year-old Millie, 9-year-old Cici and 11-year-old Sam — who go to Richard Elementary School and Brownell Middle School.

was to decide between several significantly qualfied candidates.

Now, with John Stempfle resigning from a more than 18-year run on council to move to Holland, Mich., the process to fill his seat has been successfully tackled by revisiting the pool of applicants from two years ago.

Seth Krupp, M.D., was unanimously approved for appointment to council Monday night and will be officially sworn in during the August council meeting.

"I value and really enjoy the nice community we have and what a great place it is to raise a family," he said of his interest in joining council, "and I feel like I have the time and talent at this point in my life to help contribute to continuing to make it the great place that it is. I really value it and I want it to be around for my kids to enjoy at the level that I've been able to enjoy it as well, so I thought it would be a good opportunity for me to give back at this time."

Krupp has lived in the City eight years — in the Park five years prior to that — and has worked as an emergency physician at Henry Ford Hospital downtown since 2009.

He also serves as the vice chairman of operations for the Henry Ford Emergency Department, a role he hopes will translate to helping improve the City with his skills in bringing efforts to fruition and helping people feel empowered to succeed in their positions.

"In the short term, I'm looking forward to building relationships and seeing where my skills and efforts will be most utilized," Krupp said. "I certainly just want to get out and meet the folks who are involved in city government, get to know them better and see how I can help them continue to be successful managing the city."

While he does hold a personal interest in ongoing forestry efforts throughout the Pointes, "I have an open mind about what I'm going to get involved in at this point," Krupp said.

Damaged boat sinks off Osius Park

GROSSE POINTE SHORES — A boat that became trapped against an underwater object sustained enough damage that it began to sink around 6:30 p.m. Saturday, July 9, near Osius Park and the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, according to the Grosse Pointe Shores Public Safety Department.

The 34-foot Wellcraft Martinique banged up against the seawall several times and began taking on water.

The eight occupants were safely transported to land by the Wayne County Sheriff's Office Marine Division and the boat was towed by a private company.

Social media posts showed several other boats grounded in shallow water the same evening off of Ford Cove.

GROSSE POINTE SHORES — A water main and sewer project on Oxford exposed what city officials knew was coming: water service lines that have to be replaced.

"We found two that are cast iron that will need to be replaced with copper or plastic," DPW Director Mike Way said. "We thought we'd find some, so in this case we didn't have to guess."

An administrative rule change in 2018 at the Michigan Department of Environment, Great Lakes and Energy, which took effect in January, requires municipalities to replace any water service lines that are made of cast iron, lead or galvanized steel. Water providers must have an inventory of such lines completed by 2025, then have 20 years to replace them.

The change came in response to the Flint water crisis. Lead can cause damage to the brain and nervous system and can cause behavior, learning and speech problems in children.

The replacement cost is about $10,000 each. The good news for the city is that only two of 26 houses on Oxford were found to be in noncompliance.

"We added a contingency fund in the bonds we sold to do the work on Oxford and Lakeshore that will cover any others we find," Way said.

A third, found on Lochmoor, is galvanized.

"They requested a water shut-off because they were having some plumbing work done and our guys saw the service line coming into the house," Way noted.

Under normal circumstances, if a service line breaks or has to be replaced for any other reason, the cost is the responsibility of the homeowner. Way said DPW usually gets reports of five or six such instances each year. If the line is one of the three materials that are banned, the city will bear the cost.

The next step is figuring out how many more need replacement.

"We're doing a meter upgrade program, so we'll be able to see what kind of service line comes into each house," Way said. "We're also going through historical paperwork, old building permits and such, to see what we can find."

Homeowners do, however, have an option.

"We have a form they have to sign to allow us to come on to private property and they can always say no," Way said. "Although I can't imagine anyone saying they're OK with having lead pipes."

landscape designers preach a diverse tree inventory. No one type of tree should compose more than 5 to 10 percent of the whole.

The irony of replacing over-planted elms with ash trees hit home early this century when emerald ash borer, an invasive insect from Asia, arrived in metropolitan Detroit and began wiping out the replacements.

"To date, 1,312 city ash have been cut down in the Park," Colter said.

Upon completing undergraduate studies at the University of Michigan, Colter studied forestry on the graduate level at Michigan State University.

"At MSU, they taught us the 10-20-30 rule," he said.

The rule states an urban forest should consist of no more than 10 percent of a single species of tree, 20 percent of a genus or 30 percent of a family.

"There is some debate that that is not diverse enough," Colter said.

"The mantra of urban forestry today is sustainability and species diversity, and it is a wise one indeed," wrote Thomas J. Campanella, a Cornell associate professor of urban planning, in "Republic of Shade: New England and the American Elm."

"However well intentioned, the Yankee tree planters of the past committed a grave error in planting their cherished elms as far as the eye could see. But what a glorious error it was. And what magic, what magnificence, their recklessness bestowed."

CRASH:

fice on Mack, went airborne before hitting a flagpole and came to a harsh stop against the south side of the building around 10 a.m. Saturday, July 9.

"The brick wall essentially shattered, sending bricks flying everywhere, and the wall launched the vehicle up in the air," Farms Lt. Vincent Finn said. "... It was kind of amazing how far those chunks of brick flew. It looked like an explosion happened, because there were just bricks everywhere."

Two people and nine cars were hit with the falling debris after the vehicle, moving at a high rate of speed southbound on East Warren, went through the Mack intersection and continued straight into the wall without any indication of braking or attempts to swerve.

Its collision with the building knocked concrete blocks and bricks loose, as well as sent filing cabinets toppling over within the post office. One such filing cabinet fell onto a postal worker and, ultimately, two postal workers were taken by ambulance to an area hospital with one additional injured person seeking treatment separately.

While the vehicle began to smoke with flames coming from the hood after it came to a stop, officers were able to retrieve the semi-coherent 31-year-old Detroit man from the driver's seat with only minor injuries.

"It appears as though he had a history of seizures and that's what caused the accident," Finn reported, "... which corresponds with the evidence at the scene where there's no indication of braking or anything like that."

It is unknown how fast the vehicle was traveling, as that typically is determined by skid marks when braking. At press time, the department still was waiting to access the post office's surveillance footage.

While beer cans were found in the vehicle, it is unclear whether they were old. A blood sample has been sent to the Michigan State Police Lab to determine if intoxicants were involved.

"Regardless of if there was drugs or alcohol, it appears as though it's more seizure related than alcohol at this time," Finn said.

The driver is not facing charges at this time, he added, unless the drug screenings come back positive.

As a result of their efforts in the incident, three Farms officers will be nominated for life-saving awards.

Fundraiser hosted for family after fatal crash

By Laurel Kraus

Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE FARMS — The untimely passing of a well-known and longtime Country Club of Detroit employee has led Grosse Pointers to rally together the past week in grief and in support of the family he left behind.

Anthony Ford was leaving a second job as a bartender at a gathering on Provencal when a car crash took his life at approximately 12:30 a.m. Sunday, July 3. While traveling southbound, his vehicle left the road at a curve and struck a tree, resulting in an extensive fire.

As of Tuesday, and within seven days of the fundraiser's creation, $146,795 had been raised toward the goal of $150,000.

The comments on the page are reminiscent of how beloved Ford was in the community.

"Anthony was such a kind, funny and gentle soul," one reads. "We will miss him so much. May God bring comfort to his family, his friends and all those who are suffering his loss."

Others echo memories of his contagious smile, thoughtfulness and warmth.

"Anthony, you were an old soul whose time here with us was cut far too short," another comment reads. "Your electric smile instantly lit up every room you entered. You touched so many different peoples' lives in so many different ways. You were an amazing person. I will miss you."

Nat'l forensics expert finds perfect fit in Farms

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

As the founder of USAForensic, LLC, Bryan Neumeister is a contracted forensics expert for the U.S. Department of Defense, as well as a contracted technical expert for the U.S. Department of Justice and U.S. District Courts. He works with defense, law enforcement and government agencies, providing technical work such as computer drive recovery, cell phone forensics and a host of other audio and video services.

Additionally, he has earned 39 Emmy Awards for technical excellence, racked up more than 14,700 hours of helicopter photography, appeared as a forensic analyst on several national news media outlets, given several Audio Engineering Society lectures and appeared in numerous publications — and this barely scratches the surface of his nine-page CV.

With 42 years of professional experience and having worked in 23 countries, Neumeister has seen a great deal of the world. But when it came time to find a new home, he and his wife, Shannon, were quick to pick Grosse Pointe Farms.

They moved from Phoenix in December, partly to have a lab closer to the East Coast and Washington, D.C., and partly for shorter flights to Europe if needed, but also for the chance to experience four seasons and live near Lake St. Clair.

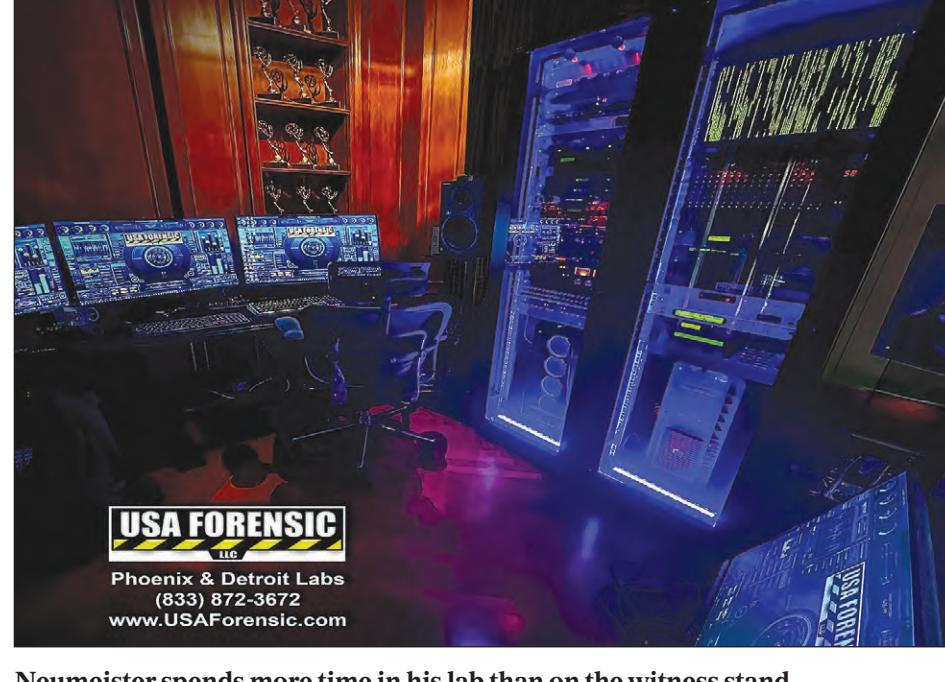

When they found a 1937 Hugh T. Keyes-designed house in the Farms, the decision was easy.

"We fell in love with Hugh T. Keyes, the architect who built this house," Neumeister said. "We love his work.

Neumeister spends more time in his lab than on the witness stand.

Everything in this house was brought in from France, from the fireplaces to the floors. Even the staircase is from 1782."

The Neumeisters are in the midst of what they expect to be a two-year remodel to restore the house to its original charm. "It's built like a tank, but it takes a lot of TLC to bring back a house like this," he said. "We want to do it right."

Precision is the name of Neumeister's game.

Through USAForensic, he has participated in hundreds of court cases — several of them precedent-setting — usually behind the scenes, but sometimes on the witness stand. He's been involved in high-profile cases including the Jodi Arias trial and more recently testified as a photo expert during the highly publicized Johnny Depp vs. Amber Heard case in Virginia.

Newsweek ranked photo forensics as the No. 2 reason Depp prevailed in the trial. Those photo forensics were done in Grosse Pointe Farms and, early on, in Phoenix, by USAForensic.

"We call the cell phone the dumpster of the human soul," Neumeister said.

"People do stuff on cell phones they would never do on anything else ... Most of our area is what's been deleted from cell phones: What actually happened?

Where has the cell phone been? Did they try to cover something up? Most cases start with cell phones. Once we get into a cell phone, we kind of know where the case is going to go.

"... We do computers, cell phones, cell towers, photography, which is, in the Johnny Depp case, what we were called in for — mainly binary data behind the photographs to see if they'd been modified."

Neumeister said he typically testifies in two out of 100 trials. Oftentimes, cases end in a plea bargain or other arrangement before making it that far.

"The way to get a good plea is to get good evidence," he said. "We just had a case Monday go from a murder charge to no charge, because our evidence ... proved it was self-defense by tearing down the video frame by frame and enlarging it using artificial intelligence to show what actually happened.

"... Our motto is, 'Data is data,'" he added. "It takes no side. It doesn't matter if it's for law enforcement or defense, we don't take a side. We just do data. ... In this (Depp) case, it was pretty crucial to the trial to analyze the photo evidence, so we did testify."

Neumeister broke down his role in the Depp trial, in advance of which Depp's legal team reviewed 65,000 to 68,000 "photos of interest."

"From there, we narrowed it down to 1,100 that our legal team thought were pertinent," he added. "Then the other side narrowed it down to 15. We did not know which photos they were going to use until they brought them in, but we knew we had the data."

Of the 15, three photos were selected to present in court, "so the jury was able to wrap their heads around it," Neumeister continued, noting jury fatigue. "... They'd been in for a long time — they were five weeks in when we got there — so we kept it simple."

Because of the technical nature of his job, making sure a jury understands the data is important.

The Depp trial, like many high-profile trials, garnered a lot of media attention, as well as became a social media frenzy. Neumeister said it's his practice to stay away from social media during a trial.

"In order to stay unbiased, we ask not to meet the clients, too," he added. "Everybody's got a narrative. We don't do narrative. We do data. ... We just work with the attorneys. It only makes sense for what we do."

Sixteen days after the Depp verdict was announced, from his home in Grosse Pointe, Neumeister already had put the case behind him.

"Johnny Depp was 19 cases ago," he said. "We do around 200 cases a year."

"We stay very small," he continued. "It's just four of us. We do high-tech, high-end stuff. We take on Department of Defense stuff and Fortune 500 companies. We do a lot of stuff that other companies can't do. Like if there's a smashed mobile phone, we will rescue those and get the deleted data. It's an interesting scenario that we have, what we do."

There is no typical day for USAForensic. Just weeks after the Depp trial, Neumeister was working two cases — one with the National Traffic Safety Board involving a helicopter crash in Alaska, the other a serial killer case

Grosse Pointe FarmsFalse homicide

A 66-year-old Farms man called dispatch at 5:20 p.m. Saturday, July 2, stating he wanted to turn himself in for murdering his brother.

When officers arrested the man at his home, they were unable to find a body and ultimately spoke with the brother, who was alive and well, on the phone.

The man then told officers he hadn't eaten, slept or taken his medication in days. He was transferred to an area hospital for a mental health evaluation.

Husband to the rescue

After two teenagers stole an unlocked vehicle with the key fob inside from the 400 block of Calvin at 5:12 a.m. Sunday, July 3, the owner's husband chased them in his vehicle until they abandoned the car at Canyon and Rockcastle. He then retrieved the stolen vehicle and later went back for his own.

Oh, the irony

Illegal dumping at the public works garage was reported after several black trash bags were left directly under the "No Dumping" signs posted on the building at 12:15 p.m. Tuesday, July 5.

Federal scam

A 36-year-old Farms woman was contacted by suspects claiming to be federal agents at 11:53 p.m. Wednesday, July 6.

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

They stated a package with her name on it containing $94,000 in cash and 15 pounds of cocaine had been seized in Texas.

They then told the woman her Social Security information and identity had been compromised and she needed to withdraw the money in her PNC account immediately and transfer it to Bitcoin so it wouldn't be stolen.

The woman used a QR code provided by the suspects and lost $7,073.

Reckless driving

While being pulled over for speeding 52 mph on Lakeshore at 9:32 a.m. Thursday, July 7, a 63-year-old Romulus man drove over the curb, stopped in the middle of the road, taking up both lanes, and then drove over the curb a second time.

A preliminary breath test showed his blood alcohol content to be 0.31 percent and an open bottle of whiskey was found in the vehicle, for which he was arrested.

Thefts from unlocked cars

Ring doorbell footage picked up two unknown suspects stealing $60 from an unlocked vehicle in the 100 block of McKinley at 12:07 a.m. Friday, July 8. Later that day, it was discovered $25 had been stolen from an unlocked vehicle in the 200 block of McKinley, as well.

Drunken driver

A 40-year-old Sterling Heights man was arrested for operating while intoxicated after he was pulled over for speeding on Lakeshore at 5:53 a.m. Sunday, July 10.

A preliminary breath test showed his blood alcohol content to be 0.177 percent.

Grosse Pointe ShoresToo much tequila

A 45-year-old Redford man was arrested for drunken driving early Wednesday, July 6.

A patrol officer spotted a vehicle parked on northbound Lakeshore near Woodland Shores, half on the curb with its lights on at 12:06 a.m. A man and a woman were walking back to the vehicle from the seawall when the officer approached. The male driver had slurred speech and bloodshot eyes, and there was a half-empty bottle of tequila in the vehicle.

The driver failed several field sobriety tests and registered a 0.203 blood alcohol content on a preliminary breath test. He was lodged in the Grosse Pointe Woods jail on a $500 bond.

Stolen Ford Escape

An unlocked 2011 Ford Escape with the keys left inside was stolen from the 400 block of Lincoln between 11 p.m. Monday, July 4, and noon the next day.

Unlicensed speeding

A 19-year-old Detroit man was found not to have a valid driver's license after being pulled over for speeding 40 mph at Kercheval and Fisher at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, July 5. He was cited for driving while license suspended and his vehicle was impounded.

Two steps forward, one step back

When confronted while stealing three bottles of wine from a business in the 16000 block of Kercheval at 11:50 a.m. Tuesday, July 5, a suspect set two of the bottles down and fled with the third.

He is described as an approximately 30-year-old white man with a dark beard, gray hair in a ponytail and black jacket.

Involuntary gifting

Several gift cards were stolen from the center console of an unlocked vehicle while it was parked on Kercheval in The Village around 7 a.m. Wednesday, July 6.

Drunken trail

After driving slowly, disregarding a red light and stopping on Jefferson, a 63-year-old Detroit resident was pulled over and arrested

OUR VIEW

Local newspapers need subscribers, supporters now more than ever

Extra, extra, the ability to read all about it is becoming more difficult, as newspapers throughout the country — especially the local variety — continue to fold at increasingly alarming rates, a new study has found.

While the pandemic did not level the newspaper industry as feared, researchers tallied that 360 newspapers, accounting for more than a quarter of the nation's publications, have shut down since the end of 2019, according to a jarring new report from Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism, Media and Integrated Marketing Communication.

What the researchers found even more worrisome — and Grosse Pointers should too — is that local newspapers are shutting down for good at a rate of two publications per week in the U.S. Of the 360 that folded, all but 24 of them were weekly newspapers serving small communities.

That's right, local. Like the type of paper you are reading at this moment. Researchers predict this trend will continue and we will lose one third of our country's local newspapers by 2025.

In Michigan, we have seen the newspaper business shrink. Small-town papers like the Boyne City Gazette, which permanently shut its doors in July 2020, are becoming a thing of the past. The Midland Daily News has reduced its news staff to seven, including only one photographer and one sports writer, to cover daily news tasks. Most locally, C&G Newspapers, a chain of 19 newspapers covering Oakland and Macomb counties, temporarily suspended its newspapers in March 2020. The weekly newspapers eventually resumed business, but now are published bi-weekly.

The report includes other alarming statistics about the news business, including:

* The U.S. had 6,377 newspapers at the end of May, down from 8,891 in 2005, leaving us with about 2,500 fewer newspapers.

* Today, 31,000 journalists work in the newspaper industry, down from 75,000 in 2006.

* In no coincidence, annual newspaper revenue slipped from $50 billion to $21 billion in the same time frame.

We are extremely lucky at the GP News to have an owner as committed to upholding a community news presence as we do in Sean Cotton. In return, we are fortunate as a community to have a weekly newspaper that aims to keep public officials accountable, as we simultaneously report news, good and bad, and feature the people and places unique and newsworthy to our hometown.

Imagine not having a front page exclusively about Grosse Pointe to peruse each week. Or not getting to read a feature story about your neighbor who is making the community better. Or no longer getting to run a loved one's obituary or comb through your city's crime blotter. Or not having the chance to cut out your daughter's or son's photo in Pride of the Pointes or in our sports section, all because there is no longer a local paper here.

A.A. Milne's beloved character Winnie the Pooh once famously said, "How lucky I am to have something that makes saying goodbye so hard." Read more about why Grosse Pointe News owner Sean Cotton finds this quote appropriately fitting on page 7A.

This is why supporting local journalism is vital. It is why subscribing to the Grosse Pointe News matters. This is why advertising your business inside of our pages and on our website matters. It is also why buying a fresh copy at your local store or following us and sharing our stories on social media counts too.

When newspapers go away, an essential community forum departs with it. It also matters when local papers die, the report noted, because it creates news "deserts," where extended geographical areas have no local news access.

If you think news deserts don't affect you, keep this in mind: When reliable news resources dry up, communities lose transparency and accountability, said Penelope Muse Abernathy, visiting professor at Medill and the report's principal author. Additionally, surveys have consistently shown the public tends to trust local media compared with national outlets.

No local paper = the loss of a trusted information

"And when you lose a small daily or a weekly, you lose the journalist who was gonna show up at your school board meeting, your planning board meeting, your county commissioner meeting," Abernathy told Poynter.org, a nonprofit media institute and newsroom that provides fact-checking, media literacy and journalism ethics training to citizens and journalists.

Whether you view all of this as a shameless plug for our newspaper or not, there's no debate it is. But the current reality is very harsh for the newspaper business. We have no shame in asking the community we cover for its support, financially and figuratively. As always, we will work our hardest to earn your trust and your business.

Afterall, the Grosse Pointe News has served as your local news source for 82 years and counting. We are fully committed to seeing that continue. We hope you are too.

Why does GPPSS board limit discussion in meetings?

To the Editor:

If you've seen recent Grosse Pointe Public School System Board of Education meetings (or read about them), then you know a faction of the BOE likes to limit questions from other fellow trustees at public meetings. In fact, Board President Joe Herd told fellow Trustee Ahmed Ismail to stop asking questions about the budget in the June 27 meeting — even though discussion of that budget was on the meeting agenda. His style of governance is to require trustees to submit all their questions on matters on the agenda BEFORE the public board meetings.

Why would the BOE president try to limit discussion in this way?

It's odd that the GPPSS Board of Trustees that constantly claims to be "transparent" is so uninterested in any open discussion and questions from members of its own board.

Joe Herd might say he's not afraid of these questions. But if he was, would he be acting any differently than he has at the last few meetings? The bottom line is this: GPPSS board believes it should be accountable to improvements at all three branches. The history of our Central branch gained recognition as a National Historic Landmark, with an addition that will enhance the design and service offering for generations to come.

Our libraries are a true gem and the role the staff and administration play does not go unnoticed. Library Director Jessica Keyser reconfigured the operations of our library system to meet community needs throughout the pandemic and is an advocate on the Michigan Library Association Board of Directors.

The accolades span across the ranks of the GPPL, as Retired Asst. Director Peggy Kitchel received MLA's Lifetime Achievement Award; Annie Spence championed the Thoughts to Action Book Club, which has gained broad community involvement; Miss Jane continued her successful children's storytimes that have touched generations; and so many more amazing team members made significant contributions.

During this time, our community strongly supported the renewal of the library's supplemental millage, allowing the board to undergo significant updates and

Thank you for the opportunity

To the editor:

June 30 marked the end of my four-year term as Grosse Pointe Farms trustee of the Grosse Pointe Public Library, which I served as treasurer for my first year and president for the remaining term. I am grateful to GPF council for the appointment, my fellow trustees for entrusting me to lead and the GPPL team for their exemplary stewardship to this community.

During this time, our community strongly supported the renewal of the library's supplemental millage, allowing the board to undergo significant updates and

I SAY By Sean Cotton

See you in the funny papers

Afamous silly bear once said, "How lucky I am to have something that makes saying goodbye so hard." Today, I say goodbye to my time as the publisher of your newspaper. I will still own the paper and I promise you the Grosse Pointe News will be here for many many years to come — I set my watch and warrant on it.

I have been part of more than a few businesses and organizations, and my goal is always to find the right capable and inspired people to run the day-to-day operations of an organization. I have that now in our paper's vice president, Anne Gryzenia, whom I am naming publisher.

Additionally, her new role is only possible with Editor in Chief Jody McVeigh and Associate Editor Meg Leonard. These three women have my complete and total faith in their abilities and truly are the ones who have been making the GP News what it is. The credit is all theirs and the paper is theirs to run and operate.

The paper also is bolstered by a top-notch group of reporters and staff whose integrity, grit and industry expertise will allow the paper to continue delivering the level of excellence you have come to expect.

I really enjoyed my time as publisher. This paper is rewarding in so many ways that I think you can imagine. The stories we have published are yours, as they are about you and the extraordinary community in which we live. They are personal to all of us. This is your community paper and we are here to encapsulate the news and stories that happen around us.

I have been involved with many nonprofits, but none have felt more true to the spirit of public service as this paper. The reason I bought it was to ensure we always had a community paper in Grosse Pointe and my commitment to that is as true today as it was the day I became owner. We must have a paper that is local, with reporters in our community who provide readers with a snapshot of what is newsworthy and who tell stories about the people, places and things you care about.

The whole world is going digital and if you have not noticed, finding local anything is harder and harder to come by. My commitment to you, constant reader, is that I will make sure the trends that are decaying the newspaper industry do not happen in Grosse Pointe. And the team to keep our paper's presence strong is the one we have in place in our newsroom.

I will sign off with this. I love Grosse Pointe more than anywhere else I have lived. Most of us who live here do. It is a special, one-of-a-kind town in which we all choose to live. We look out for and care for each other. I have lived all over this great country and still know this is the only place I would want to live and raise a family.

The GP News is just one piece of what makes the Pointes unique. We have to cherish and protect those things that make us the exceptional town we are, always standing up for what we believe in. I will always be one of the people who stands up for Grosse Pointe.

Thank you for your continued support. See you in the funny papers.

ELECT WICKING PRESIDENT OF SCHOOL BOARD: At the organization meeting of the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, Bert H. Wicking was elected president, succeeding Charles A. Parcells who refused to run for re-election to the board this year. He had been a member for 22 years and president for the last 15.

NEIGHBORHOOD CLUB BASEBALL STIRS PROTEST: A first-class controversy has been raised by a couple of residents on Neff, facing the Neighborhood Club baseball diamond. These citizens claim that foul balls are constantly popping over onto their properties and they object to the retrievers coming onto their lawns. In a recent case, a small girl riding on her velocipede was hit on the head by a foul ball.

BLAZE GUTS E-Z MARKET: A five-alarm fire of unknown origin completely gutted the Shop E-Z Supermarket on Mack on Sunday. Firemen from four Pointes and Detroit battled flames for more than an hour before bringing it under control, according to information released by Park Assistant Fire Chief Dave Taylor.

STORM KILLS 5, LEAVES DESTRUCTION IN ITS WAKE: Life is slowly returning to normal after Grosse Pointe Farms had the misfortune of being the epicenter of a vicious storm that claimed the lives of five family members picnicking at Pier Park. Thanks to the help of dozens of volunteers, the city is removing the debris and repairing damaged structures as quickly as it can.

POINTERS RESPOND AS DISASTER STRIKES HOME: The Grosse Pointe community will long remember July 2, 1997, for tragedy but also for community support. In the aftermath of the July 2 storm that killed five people, injured eight others and caused widespread damage in the Grosse Pointes, residents this week are expressing their concern for the families involved. But they also are hailing the many acts of heroism performed by employees of Farms Pier Park, other Pointe officials and private citizens who leaped into Lake St. Clair to help rescue victims, performed CPR on many of them and later helped where they could.

"We'll start two other cases over the weekend," he said. "We do the seven-day-a-week thing because there's not a lot of us doing what we do. There's a lot of demand. If you don't love it, you're in the wrong business."

Forensics isn't the business Neumeister first pursued after graduating from California State University in 1980, with a degree in political science. His first pursuit was writing music. After meeting Eric Bloom — co-lead vocalist, guitarist and keyboardist for Blue Oyster Cult — Neumeister co-wrote the band's "Eye of the Hurricane" and "I Just Like to be Bad" on its album, "Curse of the Hidden Mirror." He also has written music for hundreds of commercials and five video games, as well as mixed and mastered hundreds of national, international and regional television shows.

"Then I got kind of bored with that and went into cinematography," he said. "I ended up in aerial photography for a decade. I loved that. But there comes a time when you get a little complacent about doing something."

During his days as a documentary, Neumeister amassed an assortment of state-of-the-art equipment, which helped him learn video forensics.

"It got us a lot of federal jobs because we could do things faster than they could do, because the private sector has access to faster machines because we don't have the budget constraints they do," he said.

"... Because I was a photographer and did audio and had a lot of equipment, people in law enforcement would call up and say, 'You've got all this equipment. Can you do this?' And I'd say, 'I don't know. I'll give it a try.'

Neumeister began researching and studying and learning. From this, USA-Forensic was born.

"I still will very occasionally shoot something," he added. "I just did a program for BBC, 'Planet Earth,' the third installment. I shot some of that. They asked me to do again, but I can't. I'm too busy."

Neumeister books cases a year in advance. He put two years into the Depp case before it went to trial.

Safety, (313) 886-3200.

Grosse Pointe ParkCar problems

A car was stolen and another targeted for theft during successive nights last week within three blocks of each other below Jefferson.

Hours before in a nearby neighborhood, two other vehicles were broken into.

◆ Starting with the latter, around $5 in change was reported taken from two unlocked vehicles parked overnight Tuesday, July 5, to Wednesday, July 6, in the driveway of a house in the 1000 block of Buckingham.

◆ At 1:53 a.m. Thursday, July 7, a 2017 Kia Sportage was stolen while parked in front of a house in the 800 block of Bedford.

"A small silver SUV and a second dark-colored sedan (were) seen on surveillance video arriving to the location together," according to police. "Two subjects exit the silver SUV. One of the suspects enters the Kia and drives it away moments later."

◆ The next night between midnight and 8 a.m., someone broke the driver-side window of a car parked in the 700 block of Trombley.

"(The) ignition had been tampered with," police said. "The area is seeing a spike in attempts to steal Kia and Hyundai vehicles."

Bad brickwork

At 12:30 a.m. Tuesday, July 5, a 25-year-old woman of unknown residence got into an argument with her boyfriend's father in the 900 block of Beaconsfield.

"(She) became angry and struck the victim's car with a brick, causing damage," according to police.

Officers logged the incident as malicious destruction of property.

Speeding drunk

A 31-year-old female motorist from Detroit was the subject of a curb-side investigation for speeding on Mack at Three Mile Drive shortly before midnight Friday, July 8, during which an arresting officer raised the ante to drunken driving.

Late to the party

Last Saturday night's Charlevoix Street Party wrapped up an hour before a suspected drunken driver allegedly crashed the scene at 12:05 a.m. Sunday, July 10, and drove away. There were no injuries.

Police arrested a 39-year-old Park man.

"(His) vehicle had run over tables and chairs that had been set out for (the) festival," according to police. "(The) driver and vehicle (were) located and a follow-up investigation revealed the driver to be intoxicated."

One man, two bikes

Bicycle theft isn't a crime normally associated in police blotters with sexagenarians, but a 60-year-old Detroit man is accused of doing so at 7:46 a.m. Sunday, July 10, in the 1300 block of Berkshire.

"(A) victim witnessed (him) remove a bike from her open garage and ride away," police said. "(A Park sergeant) located the suspect in the area, with the stolen bike. (The man) was also in possession of a second bike that was recently stolen in the area."

The second bike, a $2,236 Specialized Sequoia men's model, reportedly was taken the prior afternoon from a garage in the 1300 block of Lakepointe.

Arrested

The Wayne County Jail is the latest habitat of a habitual offender police arrested Sunday, July 10, for breaking into a business in the 15000 block of Jefferson the previous night.

The suspect is a 56-year-old Roseville man.

"Video surveillance captured the suspect that entered the location and stole the cash register drawer," police said. "(A) Park public safety officer identified him from the video."

The man is charged with breaking and entering.

"(He) is a habitual offender with a lengthy criminal history," police said.

around 3:20 p.m. Tuesday, July 5, that she parked her 2012 Ford Fusion in the Ascension St. John Hospital parking lot and left it unattended 20 minutes.

When she returned and started the vehicle, she noticed the exhaust was louder than normal. A family member arrived and discovered the vehicle's catalytic converter had been stolen.

Invalid license

A 35-year-old Highland Park man was pulled over around 11 p.m. Thursday, July 7, on Mack near Bournemouth after an officer noticed the license plate on his 2019 Honda was expired.

A LEIN check also showed his driver's license was suspended. He was ticketed for driving with a suspended license.

Dog day afternoon

The owner of a business in the 20100 block of Mack reported the afternoon of Friday, July 8, that a man concealed two bottles of liquor in a backpack and created a diversion near the cash register. He also took a collection jar for the Grosse Pointe Animal Adoption Society with an unknown amount of money in it.

The suspect is described as a black male with braided hair wearing a red shirt with plaid shorts.

Missing bike

A resident in the 1500 block of Anita reported his bike was taken from his front yard around 7:40 p.m. Sunday, July 10.

The man said he left the bike, a blue Avigo BMX, unattended around 30 minutes while he was fixing his bike helmet. The report did not indicate the value of the bike.

Blake's cider, doughnuts coming to The Village

By Laurel Kraus
Staff Writer

CITY OF GROSSE POINTE — With a concept of bringing what people love about Blake Farms to the city, the newest Bakehouse 46 location is gearing up to open in late September at 17118 Kercheval in The Village.

The neighborhood cafe and bakery is a collaborative experience between Blake Farms and Cupcake Station, named for the former's 1946 establishment.

Its offerings will include Blake's cider and doughnuts, 26 varieties of baked-daily cupcakes that include seven rotational seasonal flavors, an espresso and coffee program with many styles and flavors, bagels, cookies, cheesecake and more.

"We get the same cider shipped in from Blake Farms," said Chelsea Smith, brand and marketing director for Bakehouse 46. "Of course we've got their recipe so we make the doughnuts onsite every single day, every couple hours, so they're always fresh and warm."

Hours of operation at Bakehouse 46 will be 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sundays. An order-ahead option via an app currently is in development, while curbside pickup and a loyalty program also will be offered.

Similar to Blake Farms where "you create memories with family," Smith said, Bakehouse 46 is created to be "warm and inviting and (a) perfect place to study, meet up with friends (and) catch up with family. And then of course who can say no to sweet treats and sandwiches?"

With the brand established in March 2020, about two weeks before the first COVID shutdown, Bakehouse 46 has locations in Plymouth, Ann Arbor, Birmingham and Rochester. Along with the Grosse Pointe location, plans are in the works to expand to Ferndale and Macomb County.

"Looking at the map of (the) metro Detroit area, we just thought that Grosse Pointe would be the perfect community to join," Smith said. "We feel that Grosse Pointe's very in touch with each other. It's a great spot to meet.

"For example, when you go to our Plymouth location, three of the 10 people in there will know each other and that's the kind of energy that we like to create," she added, "and so we really got the sense of that from Grosse Pointe and are just really excited to become a part of the community."

As for a grand opening, on dates yet to be announced, the cafe will give the first 46 customers on its first two days a $46 gift card and 15 percent off for life. Paired with face painting and doughnut-eating contests, there also will be happy hour from 4 to 6 p.m. during which all items are 46 cents.

Faircourt Dental turns 35

By Ted O'Neil
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE WOODS — For Dr. Mary Sue Stonisch, dentistry is about relationships as much as it is about teeth, and Faircourt Dental Smile Studio's 35th anniversary open house bore that out.

"It was so much fun," Stonisch said of the Wednesday, June 22, event. "I was so honored by all the people who came. It was perfect."

That included three patients, including a 97-year-old woman, who she treated July 15, 1987, the day her practice opened.

"They've all had a range of treatments, including smile enhancements and preventative care," Stonisch said. "And, of course, health-centered dentistry, which is so important."

Stonisch said she was around 10 — about the time her family moved to Grosse Pointe Farms — when she realized she wanted to be a dentist.

"My fifth-grade science project at St. Paul's was about dental instruments," she laughed.

After graduating from Grosse Pointe South High School in 1980, Stonisch went to Albion College, then earned her D.D.S. from the University of Detroit.

"My parents were my biggest supporters," she said. "They told me I could be anything I wanted to be."

Her office, 20040 Mack, Grosse Pointe Woods, had been a proctologist's office, so it had to be remodeled.

"My dad, (the late Rudolph Stonisch) was amazing," she said. "He took a year off in 1986 to renovate what was to become Faircourt Dental. We traveled all over to conventions and visited other offices to make sure we were state-of-the-art. It was a great bonding experience."

Not only was the office revamped, but living quarters were added.

"I think that's part of our success," Stonisch said, especially when the kids were little."

Stonisch's mother, Glorie, was her dental assistant, receptionist and marketing manager the first two years the practice was open.

"My dad bought my mom a classic car for her 50th birthday," she recalled. "Only problem was it had electrical issues. She got stuck one winter night on the way home and a Good Samaritan, the late Randy Abud, happened by and helped her, but he wouldn't take anything in return. So mom told him to at least come in for a free cleaning!"

Abud's wife, Tony, and family are still patients to this day.

Stonisch also credits her husband, Dan Monaghan, and her three staff — Ann Marie Vitale, Missy Poynter and Theresa Teltow — for the practice's longevity.

"We call ourselves the fab four," she laughed. "We work hard and we play hard."

Liggett inaugural golf classic raises $122,000

Nearly 90 golfers teed off at the inaugural University Liggett School U Club Golf Classic, presented by Ray Laethem Motor Village, at the Country Club of Detroit on June 27.

"The U Club Golf Classic is the perfect example of the community coming together around a common goal — supporting athletics and club activities at University Liggett School," said Cressie Boggs, director of development and alumni relations. "We are so grateful for all those who came out to play and volunteered at the event, which is sure to become a new tradition for our school."

The golf event raised $122,000, which included more than $90,000 in sponsorships, to support University Liggett School's U Club. The U Club supports students and their participation in athletic teams and clubs at the school.

Nearly 90 golfers enjoyed picture-perfect weather at the Country Club of Detroit for the University Liggett School Ray Laethem U Club Golf Classic.

Golfers had the opportunity to earn prize money for the longest drive and closest to the pin. A hole-in-one on the par-three fifth hole meant winning $25,000. Although a couple golfers came close, no one took home the big prize. Top finishing teams were:

◆ First place: Colin Degnore, Tommy Gebeck, Jack Estes and Bennett French.

◆ Second place: Jeff Laethem, Alyria

Laethem, Matt Jankowski and Tripp Tracy.

◆ Third place: Kyle Johnson, Ryan Conley, Eric Knoll and Scott Thomas.

Boggs said the event would not have happened without the invaluable help and input from parent co-chairs David Katz and Clark Standish, alumni co-chairs Lore Moran Dodge and Bill Shelden Jr., and the entire committee.

Dragon statue dedicated

Friday, June 10, on the Defer Elementary School front lawn, communities joined together.

To commemorate the event, Patrice Arend, outgoing PTO president at Trombly, used the remaining funds from the Trombly PTO to donate a dragon statue to Defer — home of the Defer Dragons and Trombly Terriers.

The statue will be placed in the new butterfly garden on which the Grosse Pointe Garden Center and Defer Beautification Committee are working. Defer students watched the butterfly life cycle for a few weeks in class and during this celebration released the ones they had raised.

The Trombly PTO also is donating three new benches, which will be installed next fall and personalized with a dragon and a terrier — for the Defer Dragons and Trombly Terriers.

Analysis: What did the 2022 GPPSS capital assessment report reveal?

By Michael Hartt
Schools Reporter

Schools Reporter
Michael Hartt is supplementing his regular coverage of Grosse Pointe's private and public schools with analysis of commonly asked questions regarding schools in the community. Email him at mhartt@grossepoincenews.org with questions that you would like covered.

At the June 27 Grosse Pointe Public School System Board of Education meeting, board members listened to a capital assessment report of the district's buildings from Robert Stempien of Plante Moran Cresa.

His team found that during the next 10 years, the district's buildings will need more than $250 million of construction work or materials purchased for them, and some of the district's buildings are being used at a capacity as low as 50 percent, an analysis of building use found.

A majority of the work described in the needs analysis portion of his presentation — $173 million of the $252 million total — is critical needs work that will need to be addressed in the next one to three years; $34 million of the total is deferable maintenance, which will need to be completed in the next four to six years; and a final $44 million of the $252 million total is property enhancement work, which will need to be completed in the next seven to 10 years.

Some of the notable projects included in Stempien's presentation were roof replacements, fire alarm replacements, heating system upgrades, water mitigation services, parking lot pavement, air conditioner installation, technology upgrades and the purchase of new furniture.

Although the list of needs is long, Superintendent Jon Dean said the board may choose to not address some of the projects because of their costs. Another option he mentioned for reducing the cost of the needs was substituting some of the projects for less expensive ones, such as replacing a slate roof with an asphalt one.

Dean said depending on how the board chooses to address the report's findings, decisions about the scope of the work likely would be decided from districtwide listening sessions. He also assured that a small portion of the work can be done through the district budget's annual sinking fund.

In conjunction with discussions about the critical needs analysis, questions were posed regarding the district's building use figures. Trustee David Brumbaugh noted that during the 2018 reconfiguration process, building use of 80 percent was the goal for all of the district's buildings. He questioned why the building use numbers — 50 percent at Grosse Pointe North High School and 66 percent at Grosse Pointe South High School; among middle schools, 73 percent at Brownell, 67 percent at Parcells and 63 percent at Pierce; and among elementary schools, 76 percent at Defer, 53 percent at Ferry, 74 percent at Kerby, 59 percent at Maire, 65 percent at Mason, 74 percent at Monteith and 69 percent at Richard — were far below the previously outlined goal.

Dean said while the technical use numbers are low, the district has many policies and course offerings that use classroom space in a less traditional sense than this type of analysis can ascertain. He also noted that, in regard to elementary school classroom use, the board previously noted it likes class sizes to be smaller than the 27 pupil size a use analysis would classify as being fully used.

Overall, Dean said although many questions are being raised about these concerns now, decisions or discussions about the problems likely will not begin until later.

"We're not at that point of figuring out what the next step is in terms of funding these sorts of things," Dean said. "That's a future conversation. It's not a June 27 conversation. It's not even a this-year conversation because we're still involved in our current bond issue from 2018."

He also noted that through conversations with board members, he understands neither the administration nor the board is interested in school closings to address problems of low building use.

Stempien, in regard to the possibility of deferring critical needs projects, noted that until decisions are made on some of these issues, the cost of solving them will continue to increase. The cost of the capital needs projects are expected to escalate at a rate of 8 percent in the next one to three years, 5 percent in the next four to six years and 4 percent in the next seven to 10 years.

'Sneak-a-Peek' of 2022 Designers' Show House

The House on the Hill opens July 15-17

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

In anticipation of this fall's Junior League of Detroit Designers' Show House reveal, the Junior League of Detroit is opening the doors of 205 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms so interested parties can check out the house prior to its facelift.

Every other year the JLD selects a prominent local estate and curates a team of local and national interior designers to transform the home into a Designers' Show House.

"From pre-renovation to the finale is a stark and amazing contrast," JLD President Kimberly Burke said.

Also known as The House on the Hill, 205 Lakeshore is a 5,985-square-foot estate perched on a half acre that features five oversized bedrooms, 6.5 bathrooms and wellportioned living spaces. Built in 1988, this manor-style house is set on the city's highest elevated parcel of land, affording privacy and priceless views of Lake St. Clair.

"I was driving down Lakeshore and saw a house that had the best view and it was for sale," said Gabriella Boddy, who is serving as co-chair of the Designers' Show House with Shelia Minetola and Dianne Bostic Robinson. "I thought what a great opportunity."

After speaking with

Realtor Tom Lipinski, the homeowners were asked if the Junior League could use their house for the show.

"The wife was excited about doing something that would support the league," Boddy said. "She has been following what the league does in support of girls."

The sellers packed up and turned over the keys

July 1, and meetings already have begun at the property, where renovations soon will begin.

Before they do, the curious minded are invited to Sneak-a-Peek Weekend, to see what the house looks like before it is transformed.

"Some people totally want to see what it looks like now," Boddy said, "but the big thing the show house provides is inspiration for what you can do with your own house. ... They'll do things you can't even imagine if you don't have that eye (for design). They go the extra mile. And this house lends itself to all kinds of changes."

Hand-picked designers, who will transform 18 interior spaces, have had access to the show house since July 11, so

Sneak-a-Peek guests may see a few paint cans while they check out the space. Work is slated to be complete the second week of August. The "big reveal" takes place posted on the JLD Facebook and Instagram pages @JLDetroit.

"Proceeds help fund, primarily, scholarships to women; we do 10 per year," Burke said. "Also, ing the last 108 years, has had a tremendous impact on me in both ways and in so many others. ... It gives me opportunities to learn and grow."

"It's amazing to think our organization has been around this long," Burke said. "Show House helps us be successful. It gives us the funds we need to fund community impact projects. ... Our first show house was in 1976. It's a tradition we've maintained all these years to help us be a successful organization."

Added Boddy, "I joined the league because it's all women. I felt like I was that bridge, that I could complete the gap between the sustainers — the older women from a different generation — and the younger members. ... To me, the league means I get to go with my friends of all ages to work on something that will make a difference. It's where I can learn from my mentors and teach what I know to other people."

This year's sponsors include Benjamin Moore Paint and Cambria Stone.

The Designers' Show

House Sneak-a-Peek

Weekend takes place 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, July 15; 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, July 16; and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, July 17.

Tickets are $20. For tickets or more information, visit jldetroit.org.

2022 AT THE HOUSE ON THE HILL

at noon Sunday, Sept. 18, with a gala planned Saturday, Sept. 17.

"It's funny, when you talk to people about Junior League, they always ask, 'When is the show house?'" Burke said. "It's the thing we're known for in the community. People really rally behind it and get excited about it."

Those who hope to witness the process along the way are invited to visit the JLD YouTube channel, which will feature behind-the-scenes footage throughout the renovation period.

"We'll go through the makeover experience," Boddy said. "People will be able to be connected to the whole process as it happens."

Updates also will be

we give grants to other nonprofit organizations and for the volunteer projects we do."

An example of the JLD's work in the community is the establishment of the Empowerment Pantry at The Empowerment Plan, which teaches life skills to a specific sector of Detroiters in an effort to break the cycle of homelessness. The pantry provides free, healthy meals to 50 participants and since 2019 has worked up to providing 25,000 meals annually, Burke said.

The pantry follows the JLD-supported Project EAT, providing education, access and tools to fight food insecurity.

The JLD has funded countless projects in and around Detroit duractive. The others are

"sustainers," who also

are a dedicated group,

Burke said.

"I joined this organization a little over eight years ago as a way to meet people and get involved in volunteer work," Burke said. "It

Support needed as Operation Justice for Zion enters fifth week

The Detroit Public Safety Foundation is asking for additional support from the community as Operation Justice for Zion enters its fifth week. The multi-jurisdictional search is to recover the remains of 17-year-old Zion Foster, believed to be in a Lenox Township landfill. The tedious work of searching the landfill involves 65 to 70 first responders daily searching the landfill in various shifts. The cost to provide food and water for the workers is approximately $450 to $500 a day.

The Detroit Public Safety Foundation is helping coordinate donations to cover this daily expense. The DPSF is asking for organizations, churches and/or restaurants to reach out and coordinate a meal or delivery. Breakfast foods, lunch, snacks and drinks are needed for the employees on site each day. In-kind donations may be coordinated directly with Patti Kukula, who can be reached at (313) 434-2761.

Monetary donations also are being collected on the Detroit Public Safety Foundation website — detroitpublicsafety.org/donate — by clicking the tab, Justice for Zion.

Checks, with "Justice for Zion" in the memo, may be mailed to Detroit Public Safety Foundation, 1301 Third Street, Ste. 547, Detroit, MI 48226.

The Detroit Public Safety Foundation is a nonprofit organization and all donations are tax deductible.

"We are grateful for the generosity of the community, but as this endeavor continues, we need additional support," said DPSF Executive Director Patti Kukula. "This is a heartbreakingly operation, but the first responders remain committed to finishing the task and finding justice for Zion Foster. By providing these resources, the community can support this operation in a tangible way."

'Sound' success

Grosse Pointe Theatre patrons donate supplies to Samaritas

"The Sound of Music" tells the story of the von Trapp family, who had to leave their homeland of Austria in 1938, to escape the Nazi takeover.

Noting the parallels between the play and present day events in Ukraine and other areas, the cast and crew of Grosse Pointe Theatre's production of "The Sound of Music" wanted to do something to help.

At each of the theater group's eight performances, personal hygiene items were collected for refugee families resettling in southeast Michigan, who often arrive with very little. Thanks to the generosity of patrons of all ages, a total of 15 boxes of personal hygiene items were filled and will support refugees who will make metro Detroit their new home through Samaritas' New Americans refugee resettlement program.

Grosse Pointe Theatre is honored to shine a light on others as it continues to connect, create and inspire communities through theater. Its 75th anniversary season begins later this year.

Longtime Grosse Pointe Theatre volunteers earn national honors

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

Tim Higgins thought he had prepared for everything before the curtain rose on the June 26 matinee performance of "The Sound of Music." However, the Grosse Pointe Theatre veteran, who served as director and choreographer for the production, was in for a surprise.

Minutes before the production began, he received a text message telling him he was needed backstage. From the shadows, he watched GPT President Danielle Caralis tell a crowd of more than 500 — including 40 of Higgins's own family members — about his recent accolades.

Just recalling her words — "We are very honored to share with you ..." — stir up emotion in Higgins, who recently received the 2022 Distinguished Merit Award from the American Association of Community Theatre.

The award is presented to individuals and organizations in recognition of contributions made to promote and develop the highest standards for community theater.

"By then, I knew I had won it," he admitted, noting he'd received congratulations from GPT board and general members. "But it was really sweet that my family was there and to celebrate with them. That was a surprise. I wasn't planning on that."

"... When you put this in a national perspective, it's humbling and I'm grateful for the honor," he added. "I'm so thankful that our organization picked up some national recognition."

Higgins, who currently serves as director of strategic planning, joined GPT in 1985, "to meet new people," he said. "The fun went to friendships that went to family. The work we do — whether as an actor onstage or behind the scenes — that's my passion.

Taking something from an idea to a concept to a design to a performance is an amazing process."

Since he joined, Higgins has acted in, directed and choreographed more than 30 productions, most recently, "The Sound of Music." He also directed 2019's "Annie." With a degree in education from the University of Michigan, Higgins said educating children is what it's all about.

"I love teaching responsibility, the importance of commitment and, most of all, kindness," he said. "If I make just a little difference in young people's lives — or adults' lives — these are the attributes that come: Kindness, respect and collaboration."

"We work hard," he continued. "There are a lot of people and a lot of energy involved. We're all volunteers. We do it because we love the arts."

Along with Higgins, 51-year GPT member Emmajean Evans also received national recognition for her love of the arts. She was awarded the Robert E. Gard Superior Volunteer Award, presented to individuals older than age 65 who have faithfully served community theater more than 25 years.

But she almost missed the opportunity.

"I didn't know I had been nominated or anything about this award," she said. "In fact, I had never heard of this award. So when I received the email stating AACT would like to honor me, I thought it was spam or fraudulent ... until I received a congratulations email from (GPT Executive Director) Linda (Zublick). Then I thought I should re-read the AACT email. My first thought was, 'OMG' and 'What did I do?'"

She's done plenty.

During her time with GPT, Evans has provided support in expanding nearly every aspect of the organization. She has worked in numerous capacities, including acting, directing, producing, makeup, props and costumes. She is a past board president, chair of social events and has served on several committees, including currently leading the outreach committee and working on the 75th anniversary committee. Evans has helped build and foster the Youth on Stage program by teaching leadership and theater skills to hundreds of students over the years.

"I love encouraging people to be the best they can be and, in turn, they bring out the best in me," Evans said. "I stay involved with theater because it is the fuel I need to keep my mind and body intact. I am still growing and learning. Each time I am involved in a show, I experience something new. Many times this brings about challenging moments, but it's all worth it. For 51 years I have been able to share my experiences with others."

"Theatre brings joy to me, especially the youth program," she added. "To help a student realize, 'I can do it,' that's my joy."

While Higgins received his award on the GPT stage before "The Sound of Music," Evans picked up hers at the AACT WORLDFEST 2022 conference in Venice, Fla.

"I am honored and truly humbled that Grosse Pointe Theatre nominated me for this award," she said, "and that AACT recognized my lifelong work."

"Grosse Pointe Theatre congratulates these two pivotal members of our organization," Zublick said. "It is their remarkable talent and dedication that continues to make Grosse Pointe Theatre a beacon in the community."

BethAnn McKeown-Lang

BethAnn McKeown-Lang, 70, of Grosse Pointe Woods, passed away Monday, the Fourth of July, 2022, at Sunrise Memory Care Facility.

Beth was the beloved wife of Donald Lang for 35 years; mother of Christopher Paul Novak Sr. (Brie); grandmother of Christopher Paul Novak Jr.; and daughter of the late William and Mildred (nee Springfield) McKeown. She is survived by her sisters, Heather Schneider (Eric), Alexis Magill (Marty) and Jean Gates (Jack); brother, Robert McKeown; step-grandchildren, Nathan Lipka and Kylene Kipka; nephews, Cody and Tyler Magill; sisters-in-law, Lorrie Calvano (Conrad), Kathy Stricker (Maryann) and MaryLou Lee (Rick); brother-in-law, James Lang (Diane); nieces and nephews, David Sargent, Jamie Hendrix, Justin Lang and Meredith and Megan Lee; great-nieces and great-nephews, Nick, Jolene, Madison, Gabrielle, Clare, Mya and Autumn; and many dear friends.

Beth will be remembered for her genuine smile, laugh and making anyone she met feel like they were the most important person in the world by celebrating their success, no matter the size. Beth was a lover of the humanities and generous with her talent and time, introducing children to the arts and an array of cultures, as reflected in her eclectic art collection and constant perusal of National Geographic.

Beth was a devoted physician liaison at St. John Hospital for 25 years, welcoming doctors to the area and ensuring their families were integrated into their communities so they would not just work in the area, but truly thrive.

She took a leave of absence to devote her energy to the Coalition on Temporary Shelter as a successful fundraiser and, moreover, an empathetic support person for many people facing some of life's most difficult challenges, bringing her ever-positive attitude and advice. She loved her work and all the lives she impacted along the way.

A celebration of Beth's life will take place at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, July 30, at Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church, 467 Fairford, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Donations in Beth's name may be made to Coalition on Temporary Shelter, cotsdetroit.org;

Ascension St. John Hospital, healthcare.ascension.org; or the Capuchin Monastery of Detroit, solanuscenter.org.

Joseph Thomas Coughlin

Joseph Thomas Coughlin of Grosse Pointe Park passed away Friday, July 1, 2022, at age 73.

Joseph was born June 11, 1949, in Detroit, to Francis and Ellen (nee Whelan) Coughlin. He attended Austin High School in Detroit.

After graduating in 1967, Joseph went to Dayton College and Wayne State University and joined the National Guard. He served as a CEO of a logistics company in Taylor, the F.X. Coughlin Company.

Joseph was a member of many clubs, including the Detroit Athletic Club and Country Club of Detroit.

When he wasn't spending time with his family or running his company, Joseph could be found enjoying his interests and hobbies, which included Detroit sports, golf, horse racing, travel and youth baseball.

He is survived by his wife, Donna (nee Sims); sons, Francis (Catherine), Kevin (Molly) and Carl (Meagan); grandchildren, Chloe, Margot, Mary Catherine, Everett, Penelope, Lucy and Joey; and sisters, Mary Ellen Stevenson and Michaela Hector. He was predeceased by his parents, Francis and Ellen; sister, Anne Chevalier; and brother, Francis Xavier "Rip."

A funeral service took place July 6, at St. Ambrose Catholic Church, Grosse Pointe Park.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Coughlin Family Foundation St. Louis Children's Hospital through Fickle: bit.ly/3utPgPA.

The family added, "He is, however, still alive in today's Pick 6 at Gulfstream Park."

A celebration of Beth's life will take place at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, July 30, at Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church, 467 Fairford, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Arthur Hoover Engstrom

Grosse Pointe Park resident Arthur Hoover Engstrom, 102 years old, passed away peacefully Monday, July 4, 2022.

He was born June 5, 1920, in Duluth, Minn., to Oscar Peter Engstrom and Ebba Svensen Engstrom. Arthur developed his work ethic as a young boy delivering newspapers in Duluth in addition to working for the Civilian Conservation Corps. Arthur attended the University of Southern California, studying mechanical engineering. He fondly remembered his summers as an undergraduate working as a lineman at the newly constructed Hoover Dam.

During World War II, Arthur was selected by the Henry Ford Naval Training School in Dearborn to be an instructor of diesel engine operation, maintenance and repair. After the war, he built his career around his love of diesel engines, working in several lead engineering positions at companies, including Ready-Power (generators), Packard Marine Division (mine sweepers) and Continental Motors (marine and tank engines). Arthur and his family moved to New Jersey where he was chief engineer at Purolator Filters. Later he and his family happily returned to Grosse Pointe Park when Arthur became a chief engineer at Teledyne-Continental Motors. Professionally he was active in the Engineering Society of Detroit and Society of Automotive Engineers.

Arthur and his wife, Marilyn, met at the Detroit Boat Club while she was teaching children to swim. As active members they enjoyed dancing, dining, swimming and raising their three daughters, Lynn, Margie and Wendy. He served on the board of directors for the club and they were swim team chairs. Arthur and Marilyn later became members at Lochmoor Club, enjoying many social activities and dining. In 1996, Arthur joined the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club and the Woodworkers group.

He greatly enjoyed the friendship and camaraderie of the Woodworkers until his passing.

Thomas Rafaill, D.D.S.

Thomas Rafaill, D.D.S., 87, of Grosse Pointe Shores, passed away Saturday, July 2, 2022. He was born Feb. 27, 1935, in Detroit.

Thomas was survived by his beloved wife, Katie, to whom he was married for 62 years; his loving children, Dr. Dennis T. Rafaill (Jocelyn), Dr. Nicholas T. Rafaill (Lia) and Cynthia Rafaill Czech (Robert); and loving grandchildren, Nicholas D. Rafaill, Lucas G. Rafaill, Andrew D. Rafaill, Dr. Thomas N. Rafaill, Christina L. Rafaill, Alyssa C. Czech, Joseph T. Czech and Anna R. Czech.

Thomas graduated from the University of Detroit and went on to earn his Doctor of Dental Surgery degree from the University of Detroit School of Dentistry. He then furthered his orthodontic specialty at the University of New York at Buffalo, where he obtained a master's degree.

A memorial service will be announced at a later date.

Glen Burkett

A Celebration of Life for Glen Burkett, who died Thursday, May 5, 2022, will be held Saturday, July 23, at Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church, 211 Moross, Grosse Pointe Farms. Family will receive guests in the parlor at 10 a.m. with service to follow at 11 a.m. His obituary appeared in the Grosse Pointe News May 12, 2022.

New Hope Center hosts children's grief camp

Thursday and Friday, July 21

and 22, New Hope Center for Grief Support is offering its seventh annual Kids Camp at Maybury Farm, for children who have lost a loved one. Camp runs from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day and is packed with activities such as yoga, equestrian horse therapy, obstacle courses and art. Each activity is designed to open a dialogue about the emotions of grief.

The tools Kids Camp provides not only help children through their grief journey; they also can be applied to other challenges and lead to overall improved mental health outcomes for children affected by grief.

While grief is a universal experience everyone shares, the way in which it is experienced, however, is unique to each person and each relationship lost. The mission of New Hope Center for Grief Support is to bring hope, healing and new beginnings to children, families and adults grieving the loss of a loved one.

At Kids Camp, children engage with others their age with similar experiences, learn about the emotions of grief and healthy coping skills, and grow through the experience with a stronger support system. They have the opportunity to share their stories and hear others, so they know they are not alone.

This year, the theme for Kids Camp is "Ruffled Up in Grief." It is a common misconception that birds ruffle their feathers when they are upset or distressed. This is not the case. Birds ruffle their feathers to regulate their temperature and keep themselves comfortable. Campers this year will learn to cope with grief, regulate emotions and comfort themselves and others too.

Kids Camp is free and open to any child ages 5 to 14 affected by a loss. Teens who have experienced loss are encouraged to volunteer at camp. Visit newhopecenter.net or call (248) 348-0115 to register or for further information.

Learn to recognize and avoid scams

"Oh, that'll never happen to me."

That's what so many think when they read about people losing money to phone and online scams. Yet, it keeps happening and older adults are more likely to be the victim.

From 11 a.m. to noon Tuesday, July 26, Grosse Pointe Farms Public Safety Detective Roger Wierszewski will be at The Helm to teach participants how to recognize scams, as well as simple tips to avoid becoming a victim. He also will discuss the most current scams, as well as seasonal scams—the ones that pop up around the same time every year. Knowing what to look for, paying attention to who is doing the asking and what is being asked are keys to avoiding financial loss through these types of activities.

This lecture is free to members and future members. Registration is required at helmlife.org or by calling (313) 882-9600.

Historic Fort Wayne open for season

The Historic Fort Wayne Coalition recently announced Historic Fort Wayne is open for the 2022 season, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, at 6325 W. Jefferson. Onsite, secured parking is free.

The coalition is working with the City of Detroit Recreation Department to offer 90-minute walking tours at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturdays. Tours are $8 per person. All monies raised will stay on site to continue to help the coalition and city with interpretive efforts at the fort. Due to limited capacity, reservations for Saturday tours are required and must be booked at least 24 hours in advance by emailing historicfortwayne@detroitmi.gov. Place "HFW Tour" in the subject line. City staff will reach out for information and provide an invoice. Tours are capped at 15 participants.

The guided tours include the Star Fort and barracks built in the 1840s, as well as the Spanish-American War through Historic Fort Wayne as a place of induction to United States military service. It helps the fort's caretakers, the City of Detroit Recreation Department, with this effort.

Built in 1845, Fort Wayne was strategically located to guard and protect the Detroit River during a period of tension with the British. Once that threat diminished, its role changed to a U.S. Army induction and training center. During World War II, the fort served as the primary motor vehicle procurement and parts depot for the Allied war effort throughout the world. After 1945, the fort continued as an induction center for troops during the Korean and Vietnam conflicts. In 1948, the Army began decommissioning buildings and transferring them to the City of Detroit Historical Department. In the 1970s, Historic Fort Wayne opened to the public as a multifaceted attraction with exhibits, outdoor programs and special events.

Right, nearly 100 children celebrated God's monumental love for all during Vacation Bible School at St. Paul on the Lake Catholic Church. The week was filled with Bible story adventures, Red Rock games, arts, crafts and daily snacks at the Cactus Cafe. This year, there was a wonderful sense of community and family, with children attending from at least four local Catholic parishes. The program also was blessed to have helpers from six junior high and high schools participating together.

Fundraiser a fourth-year success

The fourth annual Run, Walk 'N Roll 5K, which took place June 18, at Grosse Pointe South High School, showed an outpouring of love, generosity and support from the community.

More than 770 people registered and more than 50 volunteers lent support at the event. Other tallies included 600 donations, 120 chip-timed runners, 73 corporate and family sponsors, 67 donated auction items, nine Warrior Awards for palliative care patients and more.

All proceeds benefited Elizabeth's Courage Fund at C.S. Mott Children's Hospital. Palliative care is a comprehensive approach that focuses on the physical, psychological, social and spiritual needs of patients with chronic or life-threatening illnesses, to improve the quality of life for patients and, in turn, families.

Run, Walk 'N Roll was established in 2019, by Claire Sheeren, whose sister, Elizabeth, has an incurable immune disease and has greatly benefited from the work of the palliative care team at Mott.

"This group has had a profound impact on Elizabeth and our family. We are honored to support the important work they do," said Julie Sheeren, Elizabeth and Claire's mother, in an email. "We are so honored to have this chance to support other families facing difficult battles. Together we

In 2022, the Sheeren family has raised more than $185,000 for Elizabeth's Courage

Fund.

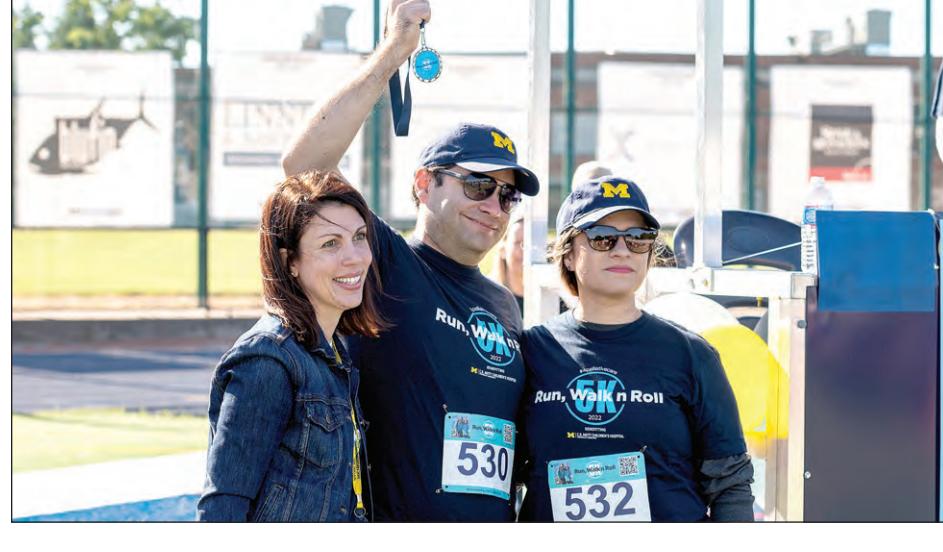

This year, Claire Sheeren presented medals to children from the palliative care program who attended the event.

At least six families from Mott came with their medically fragile children and 2022 Warrior Awards were announced during the opening ceremony.

Also during the ceremony, Mott COO Luanne Ewald announced that Elizabeth's Courage Fund is officially fully-endowed.

ASK THE EXPERTS By Newport Academy

Slowing down for summertime

Q: What are some ways our family can unplug, slow down and enjoy the summer together?

A: Spending time outdoors is healthy for mind, body and spirit. Maybe you've experienced it yourself: Taking a walk or a swim when you're feeling irritable or blue can totally transform your mood. That goes for grumpy teens and restless kids as well. There are scientific underpinnings to these positive effects.

The Proven Benefits of Time Outdoors

◆ Research shows spending time outside reduces anxiety and depressive thoughts.

◆ Time in nature has been shown to reduce stress by lowering the stress-associated chemical cortisol.

◆ Scientists at Stanford University found that memory and cognitive function are improved by outdoor activity.

◆ Physical exercise improves mental health in adolescents.

◆ One study showed that extended time in nature, away from social media and email, enhanced creativity and problem-solving ability by 50 percent.

◆ Unplugged time in nature helps regulate mood disturbance and nervous system arousal caused by too much time in front of screens.

◆ Studies show that nature activities reduce the symptoms of ADHD in children.

During the school year, when everyone's on a different schedule for work, school, sports and activities, eating together can make family dinner a priority by planning it a few days in advance and involve kids in the process of deciding the menu, setting the table and helping in the kitchen.

Finally, remember summertime is meant to be enjoyed. Rather than policing the family's activities, approach each day as an opportunity to bring more fun, curiosity and connection into your life together.

The Pulse Of The Pointes

Take the money and... hide it?

Dear Gabby: My husband is spending too much money, while not saving nearly enough.

The kids only have a few years left before college and I don't know how we will pay for it, and at this rate we will never be able to retire.

I don't know what to do at this point — please help. — Panicked in the Park.

Dear Panicked, Gabby: This must be extremely unsettling.

There are many reasons why some people choose to overspend and undersave, and chances are your husband has not grasped the consequences. The time is now to get back on track (or get started on the right track).

Number one, find a financial planner whom you trust and who you feel your husband will respect and listen to. Sometimes an outsider is the best way to get both parties aligned and it doesn't feel like a personal attack.

Number two, though many of us hope to take on the financial burden of college for our kids, it is not something worth doing if you do not have the means. Allow yourself to unload this from your mind — plenty of people put themselves through college and many find they appreciate the importance of college more when they are footing the bill themselves.

Number three, talk to your husband about the things you see yourselves doing after retirement. Visualizing what you want and realizing what you will need might just be enough of a kick in the pants to stash some cash rather than burning through cash on things you don't actually need.

We love problem-solving and giving advice! Please send us your questions & problems to advice@grossepoincenews.com.

Classic Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for alerting careless waitresses and waiters to the fact that caffeine can be harmful to some people. In your list of conditions that make coffee a threat, you missed one. I have Meniere's disease, and my doctor is firm about no caffeine. It promotes dizziness.

I get around the problem by using coffee substitutes. A small plastic bottle of instant decaf is practically weightless, and I carry one in my purse. If I don't feel like herbal tea, I can order hot water and make my own coffee. Then, I know I'm safe. — Dizzy Dame in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada

Dear Dizzy: I had no idea that caffeine could be such a nemesis for some people. Read on for more:

West Caldwell, N.J.: Thank you for calling attention to the problem of caffeine. Not only is it a big headache for some coffee drinkers; it also aggravates a serious condition suffered by many women — cystic breast disease.

During my last year as a regular coffee drinker, I had to have seven breast cysts aspirated or drained. Women who have had this procedure will testify that it can be excruciatingly painful. I decided the rush from caffeine wasn't worth it.

Now that I have been caffeine-free for several years, I have not had a single cyst problem. I can tell within 15 minutes if I am served caffeine by care-

Reedley, Calif.: May I add to the comments from "Caffeine-Free in Indianapolis"?

I was a waitress for nearly 30 years and often witnessed the mixing of decaf and regular coffee when the pots ran low.

There are so many health problems that are made worse by caffeine. I know because I suffer from interstitial cystitis. Those of us with this bladder problem should refrain from ingesting caffeine. Although it is not life-threatening, caffeine can irritate the lining of the bladder, which results in pain and the constant urge to urinate.

Please, waiters and waitresses, take note. A little caffeine CAN hurt — a lot.

Chicago: Please tell your readers that coffee isn't the only substance that contains caffeine. Some soft drinks, chocolate, tea and pain relievers also have caffeine in them. People should always check the ingredients.

Omaha, Neb.: One thing you didn't mention about coffee is that caffeine also affects glaucoma patients.

have eye trouble and can tell immediately when I am not served decaf, as requested. I hope those people who work in restaurants and coffee shops will have mercy on us and take the time to prevent us from having unnecessary sary pain and suffering.

New Bedford, Mass.: I'd rather have a problem with caffeine than alcohol. "Let's have a cup of coffee" is a lot more sensible than "Let's meet for a drink." It's also a lot less hazardous.

If you have "one too many" and the beverage is coffee, you may wind up in the bathroom more often than you'd like, but you will not end up in the morgue.

Gem of the Day (sent in by Constant Reader of the Estevan Mercury in Saskatchewan, Canada): This fellow who was sitting next to me, eating his soup, leans over and says, "Hey, Mac, do you need any help?" I asked, "What kind of help are you talking about?" He replied, "From the slurping sounds you were making, I thought maybe you wanted to be dragged ashore."

Family struggles to grow roots amid frequent moves

DEAR ABBY: My husband, my child and I have moved six times over an eight-year period. Some of the moves were within months of each other. All of them were for financial or emotional reasons. The last one took us an hour and a half away from where we had been living for many years.

We had formed relationships there, and our child had built friendships. We loved the area and school. We decided to buy a house after renting, but we struggled to find a place in our price range. Instead, we found one back in an old area we liked.

We have been here three months now, and we all regret the move. We miss our old friends, our child misses the old school and we are unhappy in the new house. I think my child and I may have developed depression. Our child's grades have slipped, and they have made no new friends.

We are debating returning to the area we loved so much. Family and friends are giving us grief about all the moves, and I know they'll do it again.

We are at a loss as to why we moved away and would like an outside honest opinion. Is it OK to move back to an area we loved and established roots in? — WANDERING IN INDIANA

DEAR WANDERING: You state that finances had a lot to do with your nomadic lifestyle. That's a valid reason for moving. I do not think you should quickly move again. All of the moves you mentioned may be the reason your child is having difficulty establishing friendships, which takes time.

The administrators at your child's new school may be able to help if you explain to them what you think is going on.

As to your own depression, if you can afford it, I'm suggesting some sessions with a licensed psychologist or social worker for the time being. If, after that, your family still cannot adjust, return to the community from which you came without making apologies to anyone (and with my blessing).

DEAR ABBY: I have been working with a therapist on creating healthy boundaries with my family.

I moved out of state with my husband to ensure that those boundaries are met because my parents have alcohol and verbal abuse issues.

My younger sister "Maya" became engaged recently, and she is at a very exciting time in her life, planning her wedding.

Here's the thing: I have no interest in hearing about, helping to plan or being a part of the wedding because Maya and I have nothing in common other than our parents. She's self-absorbed and rude.

Her fiance is an introvert, so getting to know him is incredibly difficult.

How do I politely convey this to Maya or (more importantly) my mother without causing hurt feelings? — MOVED AWAY IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR MOVED AWAY: You may not be able to avoid hearing about the wedding if you are in communication with your mother and sister. But you have the advantage of living far away from them. If you are asked to assist in planning Maya's wedding, politely, logically (and regretfully) explain that your busy schedule AS WELL AS THE GEOGRAPHIC DISTANCE make your involvement impossible. You should, however, attend if you're invited.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

'Your puppy or your job' is not the answer

Q: I wasn't allowed a dog in my childhood, so as soon as I found a job and moved out, I got one. I didn't know anything about taking care of a dog, but I wanted one for so long that I felt I had to.

I took off a couple of personal days to get him settled and went back to work. When I got home that day, I had a nasty note on my door saying he screamed and cried all day.

I called work that next morning explaining I had to stay home for a few more days to calm down the puppy. My boss was worse than my parents. He said, "I can't tell you what to do but you should have thought about that before getting a dog. I need you at work." I agreed with him and apologized, but also told him about my childhood. He wasn't sympathetic and said I can't keep taking off since I didn't have any time coming to me. Then he asked, "What are you going to do?" I told him I'll figure it out and I'll get back to him. I really don't know what I am going to do. It's a job. Not a great job but it's in an area I am interested in, and I could grow with the company.

A: Your boss is right; you should have planned everything before you bought or adopted the dog, but that doesn't solve your problem now. It sounds like you think playing it by ear will work with your boss. It may for a day or two, but only if you can tell him of a plan.

You also sound like you believe your choices are to give up the dog or to find a new job immediately, but both are extreme and unnecessary.

You absolutely want and need to keep the dog, so that is the condition to work with. You also need a decent job, which you have, at least for the immediate future.

Returning to your parents' house is out of the question, plus it would not be good for a few reasons.

No. 1: Your parents are not dog people. No. 2: Turning them into dog-friendly people might be possible, but that would require a well-developed strategy and time to implement. No. 3: Even if See AT WORK, page 8C

Summer inspiration

Traveling during the summer is very inspiring for me, foodwise.

Recently I came across the best mussels I have ever tasted. Fresh mussels are sweet, succulent and best of all cheap.

My kids are expected to eat whatever I make for the entire family and mussels are always a win. It's a fun and interactive way to eat.

One of the kids sticks her nose up at this dish which is why I chose to include lots of sliced sausage. The sauce has a good amount of lemon and white wine to enhance all the flavors of the mussels and sausage. Fennel, tomatoes and garlic add great body, depth and texture to the sauce.

Village Food Market has 2 lb bags of fresh mussels for $9.99 each. Also, they sell my favorite sausage which is the New York style. It has lots of green, red and yellow peppers in it which really pairs great with everything else in the dish.

You can use any sausage you like. Sweet, hot, chorizo and kielbasa will all be delicious.

I use the tried and true Boston method of cleaning mussels (see directions below). When you get the mussels back home, take off the plastic covering so they don't suffocate. Place the mussels in the netted bag, on a plate, in the fridge until you're ready to cook. A cold salt bath lets them open up and release any sand inside.

Call Blue Bay Fish &

Company or Village Market. They are tender and absolutely worth the effort for a wonderful outside dinner.

Cheers, Mombeau

Mussels with Sausage and Fennel

2 lbs of fresh mussels

4 sausages

1 large fennel bulb, core removed and sliced

3 vine tomatoes, chopped

4 minced garlic cloves

¾ cups dry white wine

Juice of 2 lemons

2 tbsp chopped parsley

1 tsp salt

Pinch of red pepper flakes

Good bread for serving

Start by cleaning your mussels. Pick out any mussels that are open or damaged. Keep the closed ones and place in a large bowl with two tbsp of salt and cover with water. Soak in the fridge for 15 minutes. After 15 minutes, strain everything in a colander and give them a good wash. Set aside.

Meanwhile, in a large stockpot, brown the sausages until mostly cooked through. It takes about six to seven minutes. Remove the sausages and set aside.

Add the sliced fennel and cook for another 5 minutes or until softened.

Next add the tomatoes, salt, garlic and red pepper flakes. Let everything simmer for another five minutes.

Garnish with fresh parsley and serve in large bowls with lots of bread for soaking up the delicious sauce.

Once everything is incorporated, slice the sausages and set aside.

Beyond's new frozen lemonade is infused with a summer flavor

By Clare Ramsdell and Grace Cueter
Grosse Pointe News Interns

Looking for a fresh summer drink to keep you cool? A frozen infused lemonade from Beyond will give you the delicious, refreshing boost you need in the current 90 degree temperatures. This customizable frozen drink is Beyond's newest addition to their summer features.

The base of the drink is a cold pressed lemonade made with organic cane sugar. The lemonade is infused with your choice of fruit: blueberry, strawberry, pineapple, peach, mango, raspberry, ginger, mint.

We tried one infused with strawberries, mango, and peach and it was the perfect summer drink.

It tasted fresh and was packed with flavor, but wasn't quite as thick as a smoothie. No part of the drink is hidden. The lemonade flavor is recognizable, but does not overpower the variety of blended fruits. The combination created an ideal level of sweetness, making the drink something that we could both finish without being overwhelmed by the flavors.

Our choice of strawberries, mango and peach, combined with the ice and lemonade, produced a vibrant pink/orange color. It was definitely instaworthy, as the look of the drink itself screamed summer. The beverage's appearance matched that of the juiciness.

Beyond's aesthetic and atmosphere is simple, clean, light, and uplifting. This description goes hand in hand with the frozen lemonade, fresh and mood-boosting. Along with the positive environment, the service was quick and the employees were friendly.

Beware of the brain freeze. The drink comes how it's advertised: frozen and I think I experienced at least five brain freezes from the one drink. Although, that could have also been in part due to my fast eating tendencies. However, if you are outside in the hot weather it's better to drink it fast, as it did not take long for the slush to melt into a liquid. While this may seem like a negative, even when melted, the drink remained chilled and refreshing.

The drink is $5.50 for a regular size and $7 for a large. You can add as many or as little amounts of different fruits from the list of selections to your drink. The regular cup size is not stingy, and we thought it contained the perfect amount to go along with a wrap or salad.

Naturally, we both chose the strawberry, mango and peach flavor combination because those were our favorite fruit choices and the flavors blended seamlessly together. But, if you're not as big of a fan of this blend of fruits we have some other flavor combinations we think would be a delicious pairing.

If you are looking for something similar to a classic smoothie in taste, a strawberry, blueberry, and raspberry blend may be perfect.

For a cleansing and healthy option you could go for a mix of mint, ginger and pineapple. But truthfully, there is no way to go wrong with any fusion of flavors.

The next time the Michigan summer heat gets to you and you need a drink to refresh you, head over to Beyond and pick up one of their new frozen infused lemonades. Area locations and menus can be found at <https://beyondjuiceryeatery.com>.

almost never see leafy characteristics from.

In spite of the fact that I've been judging wine for 41 consecutive years now, none of this surprised me. No matter how good a taster is, Mother Nature has a way of confounding the best of our visions and sensory memories.

Learned wine knowledge is a shifting target. No matter how experienced a person is, there is only so much that the brain can retain and adjust for — such as vintage variations, winemakers' aberrational strategies and the human factor. We're all imperfect.

There is thus a benefit in knowing that no matter how much wine knowledge we acquire, it will be inadequate in many cases to draw any particular conclusion. Especially if a wine was served to us blind.

Woods hosts Music On the Lawn

Grosse Pointe Woods held its first of three Music on the Lawn events June 18, on the front lawn of city hall. The event included a food truck, games, music and dancing.

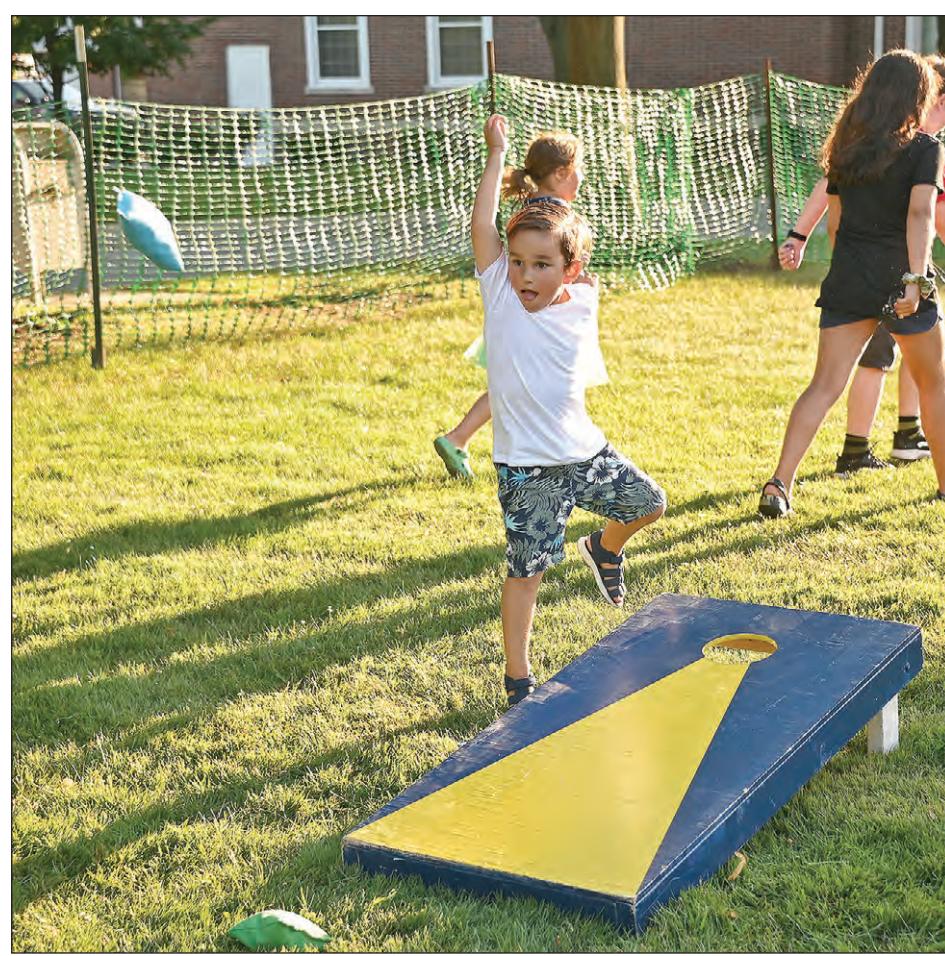

David Staperfenne, Lucy Belvedere and Savannah Gyi play Connect Four.

Vin, Myles and Madison Listenbee take a break on a blanket before running around with friends.

Lynn and Jerry Wiszowaty dance to the music of Vavoom.

K.J. Craig gave it his all when he tossed the bean bag playing cornhole.

Finnegan Merkel had more fun stacking the rings on his arms than playing the game.

We Tried It!

I originally discovered Babe Lash on Instagram when a blogger I follow suggested it. I'm usually a little skeptical of influencer content because it's usually sponsored. Sponsored content means the user gets paid to promote a certain product, which means their reviews aren't usually that honest.

But, as usual, I am willing to try any product once. I ordered Babe Lash via Amazon and it showed up on my front porch later that afternoon. I have always had super short eyelashes and with my wedding coming up in a few short months, I figured I should try it out. The instructions couldn't be simpler: You apply the serum every night directly to your lash line on clean, dry skin. Seems too good to be true, right?

Well, I have been using Babe Lash around three months now and all I can say is WOW! My lashes have seriously never been longer. We are talking two to three times longer. The other day at the grocery store, I actually got asked if I had eyelash extensions, so I definitely know it's working. My eyelashes have never looked better and the change is noticeable.

Every night, I put one swipe on each eye. I keep it right by my toothbrush so I don't forget to apply the serum and that's it. A few years ago, I tried a similar product that claimed to have amazing results, but it irritated my eyes and made my eyelids itchy and red. This serum has absolutely no side effects for me and I cannot rave enough about it.

It's not super cheap — it costs around $65 for a three-month supply on Amazon — but it's way more affordable than some of the alternatives, like eyelash extensions.

I love how easy this product is to use, how incredible the results are and that it actually works. I will continue to use this product for the foreseeable future and I recommend it to all of my friends and family. I rate this product 4.5 out of 5 alligators because it is a bit pricy, but, in my opinion, it is totally worth it.

We LOVE testing out new things! Tell us about your favorite item or something you want us to try for you! Drop us a line at media@grossepoincenews.com.

MOVIE REVIEW "To Olivia" 2021 - Not Rated 1 hr 39min

I have many fond memories of reading to my two daughters when they were growing up. I especially enjoyed reading them the books of Roald Dahl, including such creative and imaginative works like "James and the Giant Peach," "Matilda," "The BFG" and, of course, his epic, "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory."

Dahl is played by Hugh Bonneville (Downton Abbey) and his wife, the famous American actress Patricia Neal (played by Keeley Hawes). We first encounter the couple at a pub, where Dahl plays a prank on one of his friends.

mate peek into Dahl's life, during the period leading up to the writing of "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory."

seemingly idyllic life in rural Buckinghamshire, England. Dahl spends his day working on a new book and playing with his daughters. He loves fabricating stories for them and we get a glimpse of his creative mind at work.

Then, tragedy strikes. Olivia is stricken with the measles. When her fever doesn't subside, she's taken to the local hospital. At this time, little was known about treatment for this disease, and a vaccine was a couple years away. Her illness turns into encephalitis and she dies.

The Dahl family is absolutely devastated. Neal has to work through it and bravely carries on. Roald simply can't deal with it and takes to drinking heavily. He is so effected he can't even say her name out loud.

It's during this period when Hollywood begins courting Neal to play in the film "Hud." The director pays her a visit and tries to convince her to take the part. She's reluctant at first but realizes she has to get on with her life. And the part is perfect for her.

She eventually agrees and heads to Hollywood to begin filming. Sam Heughan plays the young Paul Newman and I have to admit, the resemblance is quite striking. Especially when you consider what a unique face he had.

During this time the couple's relationship was strained to say the least. They quarreled, but there were also long periods of silent brooding, and the feeling you get as a viewer is unsettling.

Both Bonneville and Hawes do a remarkable job pulling it off. The young Tess also adds to the tension, lashing out because she felt Olivia was her father's favorite and ignored her. She and Ewart deliver noteworthy performances.

Of course this film has a happy ending. No spoilers here since everyone knows what a huge success "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" became. Not only did the book sell millions of copies and became a beloved classic, it was turned into two immensely popular blockbuster movies.

And anyone who's a movie buff knows what a hit the film "Hud" became. And did Ms. Neal win the Oscar for her role in the movie? Well, I'm not going to give everything away. You'll just have to see this little gem of a film and find out for yourself.

Grosse Pointe style!

Check out these friendly neighborhood mixologists' creations, designed to quench your summertime thirst and make this the best season ever:

WILLIE'S "KILLER JOE" PUNCH

Talk about summer in a glass! This Dirty Dog Jazz Cafe creation has all the elements of a dog day afternoon: The mix of Amaretto, Southern Comfort, Watermelon Pucker, orange juice, pineapple juice and a splash of Grenadine will remind you of summer picnics and lazing on the grass.

THE BRICK'S BONNIE COCKTAIL

When you're ready for a summer break, it's time to hit The Bricks. Their "Bonnie" cocktail hits the spot on a hot day. Made with Blanco Tequila, thyme simple syrup, grapefruit, lime, and soda, it's a refreshing surprise for yearning taste buds. The Bricks is open to quench your thirst at 5 p.m. daily for the remainder of the summer.

IRISH COFFEE

Experiencing an AC overload? Sometimes that happens, and when it does, that means its time for a nice, warmup drink like an Irish Coffee from (you guessed it!) Irish Coffee. Nobody does it better, and paired with a famous burger, you'll be warm down to your toes in no time.

These cocktails are something to celebrate

It's hurricane season at Fishbones, and that's a good thing! Their fruity Hurricane cocktail, above, is Fishbones' signature drink, best enjoyed on their beautiful patio on a warm summer day with some delicious appetizers. Laissez les bon temps rouler!

Park Grill is taking on summer thirst one delicious cocktail at a time! Pictured above is their so-pretty Grapefruit Gimlet with vodka and a delightful Cucumber Smash with gin. Can't you just taste that icy coolness? Park Grill really knows how to do summer.

Ford speeds toward all-electric, connected future in Europe, Valencia Spain

COLOGNE, Germany – Ford announced another important stride toward an all-electric future, confirming that it has chosen its plant in Valencia, Spain, as the preferred site to assemble vehicles based on a next-generation electric vehicle architecture. Pending product approval, the Valencia plant could produce breakthrough electric and connected vehicles beginning later this decade.

Ford is also moving forward with a $2 billion conversion of its Cologne, Germany, operations to begin producing electric passenger vehicles starting in 2023. Ford's European strategy calls for an exciting line-up of electric vehicles, including an electric version of the popular Ford Puma and extending its leadership in the commercial segment with electric Ford Pro vehicles and connected services. By 2026, Ford in Europe plans to sell 600,000 electric vehicles annually.

"We are committed to building a vibrant, sustainable business in Europe as part of our Ford+ plan, and that requires focus and mak-experience, ultra-lean operations and a talented and motivated team."

Continent-wide electric vehicle sales continue to grow rapidly (up 65 percent to 2.3 million in 2021) and the European Parliament voted earlier this month to set new CO2 targets for light-duty vehicles, including a requirement that new sales be 100 percent zero emission vehicles by 2035.

"We are accelerating our transformation in Europe, reimagining how we do business and building a future where amazing vehicles and relentless focus on customer experience goes hand-in-hand with protecting our planet," said Stuart Rowley, chair, Ford of Europe and chief transformation & quality officer, Ford Motor Company.

"Bringing our all-new electric vehicle architecture to Valencia will help us build a profitable business in Europe, secure high value employment and increase Ford's offering of premium electric, high performance, fully connected vehicles that meet the demand of our

Ford Focus passenger car, while the company is also evaluating options for future site concepts.

Ford reiterates its commitment to Germany

Ford also reiterated its commitment to Germany as the headquarters of its European Model e business and the site of its first domestic European electric vehicle production. The state-of-the-art Cologne Electrification Centre will start production in late 2023.

"Ford is investing heavily in electric vehicle manufacturing operations in Germany, and we are committed to the country as our headquarters location in Europe," said Rowley. "We look forward to progressing this work with our partners in Germany and across the whole region. To secure new product in Europe we need winning product designs, outstanding technology and engineering, optimized sourcing and an evolution of our industrial operations to ensure they are fully oriented to an electrified world."

Next generation architecture a critical component of Ford's all-electric future in Europe

The next generation architecture is a critical step in the transformation of Ford in Europe to achieve an all-electric future and build a thriving business while making a positive contribution to society and reducing emissions in line with the Paris Climate Agreement.

Pricing will depend on the location and conditions of the dog day care facilities, but in this situation, you may have to cut down on expenses in other areas of your life.

The safety of the children, and in this case, dogs, is the main feature. Paint color, furniture style, and room decor are meant to impress the clients. Dog day care necessities are different from those for children, but for both types of day care, safety is critical.

Here's a list to follow when calling to compare. The safety and security of the location — secure drop-off and pickup so if a dog outside play areas only in favorable weather conditions; separating dogs by similar ages and sizes so large dogs don't accidentally injure small dogs; and testing the temperament of each dog before allowing them to mix with other dogs.

Last, the quality of the employees. Jobs with the fewest requirements are known to pay less, but less pay doesn't mean a lower quality of employee; meet the employees taking care of the dogs.

Are they mature enough to rescue your dog if a conflict arises? Do the employees seem alert and aware or are they holding their phones in one hand to read Facebook? If you don't feel good about them, find another dog day care center.

If your salary just covers your day care, it is worth it. You get to keep your dog and your job for now. As you get into your routine, you can evaluate your job as well and make changes as you see fit.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Paul Soloway, Jeff Meckstroth, Eric Rodwell, Nick Nickell and Richard Freeman, and Brazil's Gabriel Chagas, Marcelo Branco, Ricardo Janz, Miguel Villas-Boas, Joao-Paulo Campos and Roberto de Mello.

The final was a virtual runaway for the Americans from the very outset. Today's deal resulted in a 12-IMP pickup for the winners.

At the first table, Meckstroth, playing in four hearts, won the king-of-diamonds lead with the ace and led the spade four to dummy's king. East won and returned a club to West's ace, whereupon West cashed the queen of diamonds and continued with the deuce.

Meckstroth trumped the diamond with dummy's king and ruffed a spade, felling West's queen. Declarer then drew trump, crossed to the club queen and discarded his remaining diamond on the spade jack to make his game.

At the other table, Chagas, one of the world's great players, became declarer at the same contract. He had played nearly every deal for two weeks and showed signs of his fatigue by making the fatal mistake of drawing three rounds of trump after taking the diamond ace at trick one. He then guessed the spade position correctly, playing the jack after West followed low. But East took the ace and returned a club to his partner's ace, and West's Q-10 of diamonds set the contract one trick.

South boys swim and dive wins dual meet national championship

By Michael Adzima
Sports Reporter

The Grosse Pointe South boys varsity swim and dive team made a major splash this month as the Blue Devils were named the Class 2 Dual Meet National Champions from the National Interscholastic Swimming Coaches Association (NISCA). NISCA released its end of the year honors and rankings, not only naming South national champs, but also awarding four swimmers and one diver with All-American honors for their performances in the pool this season.

"We knew that this was something we were capable of because we've gone for the dual meet championship before, and have finished in the top ten and even got second one year," head coach John Fodell said. "This is about not just the state qualifiers, but the third and fourth swimmers (too). I knew we were good, I knew we were really good and that this could be interesting."

The Dual Meet National Championship is determined by NISCA using a system of "power points," based on the fastest dual meet times submitted by a coach throughout the season.

Placed in Class 2 based on school size, the Blue Devils finished first in the 2021-22 rankings, out-pacing runner up Western Albemarle High School in Charlottesville, Va., by more than 100 points.

Finishing in its class as the country's best in this year's rankings is a first for South's program. The Blue Devils also placed 25th overall out of six different classes.

For Fodell, seeing his swimmers reach an accomplishment like this is a testament to the team's hard work and dedication to the sport.

"It would take more than just four or six or ten guys," he said. "It was the whole season that made the team come together and train really tough and create a culture that drove us to get to where we wanted to get."

Some of the key pieces of South's national championship-winning team also were honored by NISCA when the association released its 2022 list of All-Americans. Blue Devils junior Logan Hepner was named All-American in one-meter diving, an impressive follow-up to the state championship he won in diving at this year's Division 2 state finals.

South's 200 medley relay team of Keiran Rahmaan, Tucker Briggs, Jake Vallan and Drew Vandeputte can add another All-American line to their resumes as NISCA also honored them for their achievements in the event. The team captured the state championship for the relay, set a new state record for Division 2, and swam the fastest time among all divisions this year.

"When my teammates and I earned our All American status I couldn't have been more excited and proud of what we had accomplished," Briggs said. "It reflects all of the dedication and hard work that we have been putting in since our first time in the water freshman year.

"Our competitive team culture created the perfect environment for our relay to go as fast as we did," he added. "The status is the final piece of our legacy that we've paved at GPS and we couldn't be any more pleased with our results."

The team of Briggs, Rahmaan, Vallan and Vandeputte also received a second All-American nod from NISCA in the 200 freestyle relay. The foursome placed 54th overall out of 100 teams nationwide that made the list.

Athlete of the Year contest sparks voting frenzy

Grosse Pointe News

In less than one week since the Grosse Pointe

News kicked off its inaugural Athlete of the Year scholarship contest, nearly 4,000 votes have been cast by readers in support of their favorite male and female athletes.

The contest will crown four local athletes with Athlete of the Year honors, each of whom will win a $500 scholarship. Winners will be determined by two methods: The Grosse Pointe News staff will name one female winner and one male winner, while you will determine one male and one female winner as "Readers' Choice" selections.

Voting takes place

now until 5 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 4. Votes can be submitted one of two ways:

Electronically at grossepoinenews.com/athlete. Or, by filling out a ballot and dropping it to our offices, located at 16980 Kercheval, in The Village. You may also send a photograph of your completed ballot to media@grossepoinenews.com, found this week on page 11A.

Thanks to the buzz and excitement of the contest, the Grosse Pointe News is now offering framed and matted PDFs of your favorite Athlete of the Week from 2021-22 for purchase. There also is a PDF-only option available. Head to our online store for this and other GP News merch at <https://www.grossepoinenews.com/gift-shop>.

GROSSE POINTE SUMMER SWIMMING

Get set, go!

The Lakefront Swimming Association includes six teams from Grosse Pointe and St. Clair Shores, who compete against each other throughout June and July. The Grosse Pointe Farms Barracudas, City of Grosse Pointe Norbs, Grosse Pointe Park Mutants, St. Clair Shores Sea Serpents Grosse Pointe Shores Sharks and Grosse Pointe Woods Warriors battle for bragging rights at season's end, where one of the six teams is crowned Swim Finals champion.

This week's featured teams are the Mutants and Warriors.

Park makes a splash

By Clare Ramsdell and Grace Cueter

The Grosse Pointe Park Mutants are one of six swim teams that compete in the Lakefront Swimming Association. The team has practices Monday through Friday at Windmill Pointe Park, where approximately 220 swimmers are competing for the team this summer. The Mutants always are looking to enjoy their time in the water and take home a win whenever they can.

We asked Mutants assistant coach Dailey Jogan to tell the Grosse Pointe News a little more about the 2022 team:

Name: Grosse Pointe Park Mutants

Team colors: Red, white and blue

Coaching staff: Head coach Jackson Jogan and assistant coaches Tommy Drawbaugh, Joey Drawbaugh, Millie Gates, Claire Zaliwski and Dailey Jogan

Favorite tradition: Coaches dressing up for finals and revealing the theme to the kids

Biggest rival: Grosse Pointe City Norbs

Claim to fame: Winning against Grosse Pointe Farms by 0.5 points in the finals meet when it was hosted at Grosse Pointe Park

Goal(s) for the 2022 season: To win while having as much fun as possible

Mutant swimmers dive into the water at the start of an individual medley race at Windmill Pointe Park.

Mutant coaches lead the pre-meet team song with their swimmers to show Park pride before they hop in the water for their meet against the City.

A Warrior pulls herself out of the pool on the starting block after practicing each of her four strokes in preparation for an upcoming meet.

Warriors ready for battle

By Clare Ramsdell and Grace Cueter

The Grosse Pointe Woods Warriors are one of six swim teams who compete in the Lakefront Swimming Association. The team has practices four times a day for different age groups, Monday through Friday, throughout the summer at Lake Front Park. This summer, 220 swimmers are competing for the Woods.

The team makes sure to focus on maintaining positive attitudes and prides itself on sportsmanship.

We asked Warriors head coach Greg Wolff to tell the Grosse Pointe News a little more about his 2022 team:

Name: Grosse Pointe Woods Warriors

Team colors: Green and white

Coaching staff: Head Coach Greg Wolff and assistant coaches Alex Agius, Sydney Agius, Gabe Loper, Ava Boileau, Jaden Payne, Katerina Pirker and Andrew Peabody

Favorite tradition: Cheers before meets

Biggest rival: Whoever they are against on meet day

Claim to fame: Good sportsmanship

Goal(s) for the 2022 season: Win the league meet (also known as finals)

Grosse Pointe Woods Warriors work in pairs to perfect their relay starts, diving off the block at the exact moment their partner reaches the end of the pool.

Woods swimmers await their turn on the starting blocks, listening to head coach Greg Wolff's advice on how to improve their dives.

State tournament shines spotlight on local Little League softball

By Michael Adzima
Sports Reporter

The eyes of Little League in the state of Michigan are once again on the Pointes.

After Grosse Pointe played host to Little League baseball's 12U state tournament last summer, the spotlight switched to softball this past week, when the Pointes hosted the Little League softball 12U state tournament July 8 through 13 for the first time in league history.

After years of growing the program, Grosse Pointe Little League softball feels like it is finally capable of playing host to such a large tournament. Winning last year's state championship was certainly a major boost as well. Bringing the eyes of the state's softball community to the Pointes is giving even more pride to a growing organization.

"Hosting this tournament where everyone in the state comes to you, Grosse Pointe now has a bigger footprint on the softball map in the state of Michigan," said Nate Dodson, president of Grosse Pointe Little League Softball. "It puts more spotlight on our program. Our girls don't have to travel anywhere and knowing that all the teams in the state are coming to their hometown, it gives them a lot of pride."

The tournament began on Saturday and ran through Wednesday, with the championship game scheduled for after press time.

Despite the recent upgrades and renovations to some local Little League softball diamonds like Field 2 at Elworthy, Grosse Pointe Little League Softball made the decision to have all state tournament games hosted at University Liggett School.

"The facility has everything we need and we want to make sure we put on a first-class event for every team," Dodson said. "People invest a lot of time and money in this tournament...We've spent a lot of money over the years to develop our Little League fields but we don't have enough fields together with parking, bathrooms, concessions and stuff like that.

Liggett helped host the boys state tournament last year and got rave reviews so we figured if it's not broken, don't fix it."

Last year's 12U state baseball tournament was scheduled to take place at newly-renovated Kerby Field in Grosse Pointe Farms, but a massive rainstorm on July 16 flooded its grass fields the day before the tournament's start. The flooding forced a move to University Liggett, whose facilities have field turf and are capable of draining and clearing rain.

Regardless of where in town the games are being played, hosting this year's Little League softball state tournament is another testament to the role that sports like baseball and softball play in the community.

For softball especially, it is a way to showcase how the game has grown on the youth level in recent years here in the Pointes.

Grosse Pointe Little League softball includes players from all of the Pointe communities. For Dodson, community is really what hosting this year's tournament is all about.

"Our program is made up of all the Pointe communities," Dodson said. "Having it here and knowing the way our program is, it helps bring what's already a close community program even more united as one community and one team."

Junior sailors navigate way to victory

Sailboats of all shapes and sizes dotted Lake St. Clair July 6 and 7 when local junior sailors from Bayview Yacht Club (BYC), Crescent Sail Yacht Club (CSYC), Detroit Yacht Club (DYC), Grosse Pointe Yacht Club (GPYC), and Pontiac Yacht Club (PYC) competed in the annual GPYC regatta.

Sponsored by the Detroit Regional Yacht Racing Association, these junior regattas have graced Lake St. Clair and the Detroit River since 1956. Officiated by U.S. Sailing-certified judges George Griswold and Ed Theisen, this year's GPYC regatta saw 100 competitors, ages 7 to 18, racing 79 boats in six different classes on three different courses.

Forced to contend with Michigan's ever-changing weather conditions, these skilled, young competitors adjusted their sails to navigate their way through light rain and strong wind on Day One to sunny and light wind conditions on Day Two.

The next regatta in the DRYA Junior Championship Series is July 13-14, hosted by Crescent Sail Yacht Club.

'Tri' hards: Grosse Pointe family pushes each other to racing greatness

By Clare Ramsdell
and Grace Cueter
Staff Interns

Continuously trying to keep up with her two older brothers, Rebecca Caulfield has always had a competitive spirit at heart.

In 2008, the then 32-year-old took her love of biking and running to the next level when she decided to compete in a sprint duathlon, a race that combines running and cycling in a run, bike, run format. A typical sprint duathlon event might look something like a 3.1-mile run, followed by a 12.4-mile bike, finished with a 1.5-mile run.

"I loved biking and then I started running," said Caulfield, who lives in Grosse Pointe Park. "So I thought, oh, maybe I'll give this a try. I did one and was like, okay, this is kind of fun, and I got hooked on it."

Six years later at the age of 38, Caulfield added swimming to her list of skills when she competed in her first triathlon. Similar to a duathlon, a triathlon combines running, cycling and swimming. There are two different types of triathlons: sprint distance and Olympic distance. Sprint distance is typically a 0.5 meter swim, a 10 to 13 mile bike, and a 3.1 mile run. The Olympic triathlon is a more intense competition with a 1.2 mile swim, followed by a 25 mile bike, and finishes with a 6.2 mile run. After hours of swim practice, Caulfield took on both of these types of triathlons with confidence.

After tackling triathlons, Caulfield decided to take it up one more notch by competing in a few half Iron Man competitions, which consist of a 1.2 mile swim, 56 mile bike, and a 13.1 mile run. Her first one being the Michigan Titanium half ironman distance (70.3 miles) in August of 2018.

These multisport events give Caulfield the opportunity to tie multiple aspects of her athletic life together. Biking has always been an activity that she enjoys. She bikes throughout all seasons, including winter, and even teaches spin classes. As for running, she makes sure to maintain her speed and endurance, running throughout the winter and competing in half marathons to train her mind and body for long distance racing. Out of the three skills required for a triathlon, swimming has always been Caulfield's weak point.

She didn't know how to swim when she began training for her first triathlon, so she enrolled in adult swim lessons at the Neighborhood Club to learn.

Now, during the off-season, she swims at Three Mile Park in a wetsuit, as the water remains cold until summer months. Additionally, she works to perfect her swimming skills at the Neighborhood Club's indoor pool.

"I'm lucky enough to work at the Neighborhood Club," Caulfield said. "So in the winter, I take advantage of the pool there as much as I can. Swimming is not my favorite thing. It's my weak, weak, weak part and I don't love it."

In contrast to her mom, Caulfield's 14-year-old daughter, Chloe, has been a swimmer from the start. She swam for the Grosse Pointe Park Mutants summer swim team and the Grosse Pointe Gators swim club in the winter months. Last September, Chloe Caulfield decided that she wanted to take part in her first triathlon for her 14th birthday. They settled on a relay rather than committing to a full triathlon. Chloe swam, Caulfield's son, Tommy, a runner for Grosse Pointe South's cross country team, took on the running leg, and Rebecca biked.

Putting all their strong suits together, the team came out in first place.

"She was, like, so impressive," Rebecca Caulfield said. "This tiny little thing. (Chloe) went in with all these big guys, and was right up in front with them. She comes running out of water, yelling at me. She's like 'GO!'

"She's a good swimmer," her mom added. "I would say swimming is definitely her strength. Biking is definitely my strength. And for my son, running is his strength, so it was the perfect team."

After seeing how well her daughter performed in the relay, Rebecca Caulfield felt confident that her daughter could take on her own triathlon, so they signed her up for the Tri Goddess Triathlon.

The Tri Goddess Triathlon is an all-women race in Grass Lake, Mich. The course features an inland lake for the swimming portion, a welcoming environment for first time racers, but the nerves were still present as Chloe got ready to take on her first triathlon.

"She was nervous when I said you know what, I still get nervous," Rebecca Caulfield said. "No matter what, I still get nervous before and she crushed it. She did awesome in the water."

"(The) Bike (portion) was really good, considering she has my old road bike. And then her run was awesome too. So she did really good."

While each race is different in its own way, there are many constants in the process including, training, eating habits and mindset. The night before a race, Rebecca Caulfield eats her signature pre-event meal: a pasta dish with hard boiled eggs, tuna fish and peas. Although a strange combination, the meal combines all forms of energy that she needs: carbs, hard boiled eggs and tuna for protein, and peas as a source of vitamins and fiber.

Nerves are a given for any athlete before every event. Even experienced triathletes feel nervous before a race. Those nerves can be little jitters, butterflies or even stomach upset. Once the race begins, those feelings can turn into pain, numbness and exhaustion, according to Rebecca Caulfield.

However, as a personal trainer and health coach, she knows that those feelings are mental, and can be overcome. The feeling of crossing the finish line ends the sense of pain experienced during the race, she said, while adding she always feels accomplished and proud of herself at the end of an event, as she successfully pushed her limits.

"The pain is only temporary, it's not going to last forever," she said. "You're prepared just to push a little bit harder than you usually do."

Rebecca Caulfield is incredibly humble when it comes to her huge feats and top standings when she competes in any race. She usually makes the podium, which means she ended in the top three of her age group. But in many cases, including the relay she competed in with her family, she has won races overall.

She recalled a time a few years ago, when she took first place in a race that seemed almost impossible to finish. She was in the middle of a trail run during a triathlon when she fell and began to feel what she thought was a sprained ankle. However, she persevered, getting up and winning the race.

Thankfully, she had a friend with her at the race, who also happened to be a foot doctor, to get her help after the event. She later found out that her injury in fact was not a sprain, but she had actually torn all the ligaments in her ankle – yet she still won the race.

"I ended up having

From left, the Caulfield family, including mom, Rebecca, son, Tommy, and daughter, Chloe, bask in the glow of taking home first place in the Motor City Relay. The family team capitalized on its strengths with Chloe taking on the swimming leg, Rebecca competing in the bike segment, and Tommy rounding their team with the running leg.

surgery a couple of weeks later and was in a boot for like three months," Caulfield said. "So yes, I'm not a huge fan of trails. I mean, it was a nice change of scenery, but I'm just always a little leery when we're running trails."

When Caulfield is in the zone, she doesn't hesitate to give everything during every race, regardless of the circumstances. Each duathlon, triathlon, or Iron Man in which Rebecca Caulfield competes becomes a new challenge that she must conquer.

She is excited to keep racing, especially now with her daughter by her side, continuing to fuel her competitive spirit. She hopes to maintain her speed over her daughter, as Chloe has been training with daily swim practice at the park, followed by a bike ride to South for a cross country run.

"Seeing my kids do it and Chloe get the bug, now I've been able to focus on her and I think that's gonna be my goal, actually, for this last one was just to beat Chloe," Caulfield said. "So we were pretty close but I still managed to get it."

Rebecca Caulfield cheered on her daughter, who competed in the Grand Haven triathlon on July 10 and finished first in her age group with a time of 1:28. Rebecca will then compete in the Michigan Titanium event on August 14 near Grand Rapids.

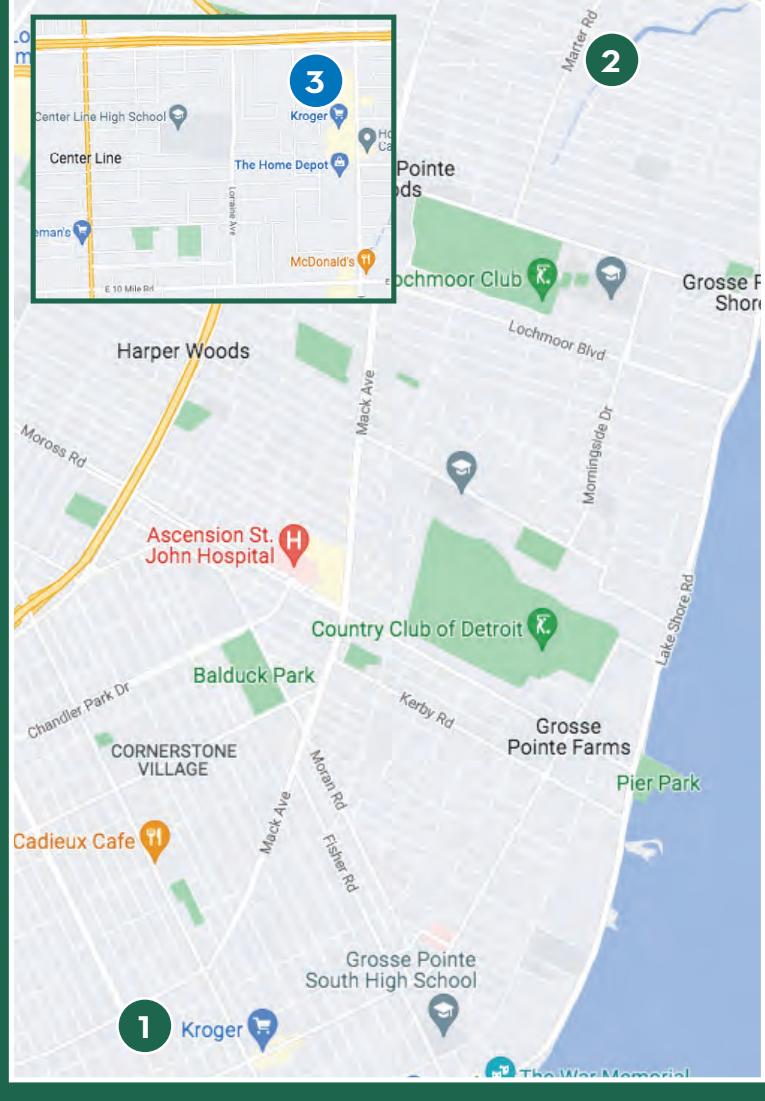

As the true competitor she is, she doesn't see an end in sight, she said, and will continue to maintain her "game on" mentality.
