He's our boy

I'll let you in on a little secret. The citizens of Montreal are crazy about hockey. As my Uncle Bob would say, "They're nuttier than a pet 'coon' about their Canadiens, both the pro and junior teams.

I discovered this along with Sports Editor Peggy O'Connor when we attended a game at Verdun Auditorium just outside Montreal last weekend. We were there to cover Woods resident Jimmy Carson, who plays center for the junior team.

We are talking about being a star player from America in the heart of French Canada. Jimmy's teammate and best friend is Serge Sevard Jr. Serge Sevard Sr. is the general manager of the team. Jimmy's coach is Yvon Lambert. He and Sevard were starters on the legendary Montreal Canadian team that won four Stanley Cups. Pretty heavy company for a 16-year-old Yank from Grosse Pointe.

Everybody comes to the games. Mom, dad, the kids and their friends. Couples out on a date, fan clubs, singles and parents of the players.

I even spotted one dignified, serene-looking grandmotherly type well into her 70s. She sat there quietly watching the game while doing her knitting. That is, until she stood up and let fly with a program and barrage of French at the referee.

Lyne Malboeuf, in public relations for both the pro and junior Canadiens, said she once helped break up a press box fight between reporters covering a Canadiens-Nordiques game. What made it special was that it was being broadcast over the radio at the time.

The Canadiens' opponent this night was the hated team from Trois-Rivieres. Actually, any team skating against the home boys in Montreal is a hated group. You could put Wally and the Beaver on double runners and they'd draw boos and hisses.

Trois-Rivieres brought along a large group of fans to cheer their boys, so the pandemonium was nicely balanced. The only thing everyone could agree upon was their mutual disdain for the referee and linesmen. By the end of the evening, the men in the striped shirts were wearing a haunted look.

As time wore on, I noticed that the fans really got into the game. It became an event. They not only insulted the opposing team, but their fans as well. I mean they got downright personal about it.

One leather-lunged Canadian supporter stood up most of the evening in insulting his counterpart on the opposing side. The insults covered his team, wife, clothes and probably the color of his eyes.

They held a dialogue across the ice complete with Gallic shrugs, gestures and expressions. The crowd loved it. It was Rickles and Dangerfield on ice. I don't know what they said, but I know what they meant.

The players got their fair share of insults too. Two words kept flying through the air. One sounded like "poov-yay." The other was "tab-er-nack."

After the game, Jimmy told me "poov-yay" was slang for mashed potato. We were in a restaurant at the time. When I asked about "tabernack," he turned red and almost slid under the table. I figured it out for myself.

To be fair, I should report that both Montreal and Trois-Rivieres

Almost 50 years of service

With the globe of the world symbolically in the forefront, G. Mennen Williams, chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court, reflected on the past and spoke of his hopes for the judicial system in the state. Story is on page 12A.

Tickets: It's a paper blizzard

By Pat Paholsky

If you had a penny for each parking ticket issued in the Pointes last year, you'd have $564.96 jingling in your pockets — not a bad sum considering that you would only receive one dollar for every 100 tickets.

That means a lot of people said a lot of angry words when they discovered a summons stuck behind their windshield wiper, because there aren't too many things more irritating to a driver. After all, who does it hurt when a car is parked a little too long at an expired meter? It's nothing like a moving violation where an innocent person may be subjected to bodily harm, is it?

Well, according to the merchants located on busy main streets, it does hurt them in the place they are the most vulnerable — their cash register. Shoppers who can't find a parking spot near a store may give up and go somewhere else, particularly if the weather is bad. So it's understandable that a merchant begins to get nervous when all of the parking spaces around his store are filled and the inside of his store is empty.

The Woods, with 300 businesses, led the Pointes with 30,513 parking tickets issued last year. Officials stepped up enforcement when they discovered the limited parking was being abused. People would park their cars and take a bus to work downtown, and even if they got a ticket, it was still cheaper than driving to work and parking at a lot there.

"We still have quite a parking problem, not having enough space," said Chester Petersen, Woods city administrator. "One of the reasons we formed a parking commission is to study that and make recommendations to the council to acquire and expand off-street parking."

The fines for parking tickets in the Woods varies. Meter violations are $3 if paid within 24 hours, $5 if paid within 10 days and $10 after that. Parking in a fire route will set back an offender $25, and it's $30 for parking illegally in a handicapped zone. Parking on a street where there are signs prohibiting it carries a fine of $10.

Boy Scouts 75 years old

The Boy Scouts of America will be 75 years old tomorrow, Feb. 8. The local district, with its chairman, the Hon. Thomas Van Tiem, includes 13 Cub Scout packs and eight Boy Scout troops in Grosse Pointe. There are more than 600 members registered to Tiger Cubs, Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, Varsity Scouts and Explorers in this area.

These, along with the Detroit Area Council which serves Wayne and southern Oakland and Macomb counties, will join the nation's other 412 local Scout councils and the more than 4.7 million members of the youth organization in marking the Diamond Jubilee. It was on Feb. 8, 1910 that the group was formally organized in Washington, D.C.

The two oldest Cub Scout packs in the area are Pack 74 at Richard School and Pack 147 at Defer. Both are celebrating 46 years.

The oldest Boy Scout troop, 50 years this May, is Troop 86 at Trombly School. Scoutmaster Steve Linne said the boys are planning a Scout Alumni Reunion and a special celebration of their golden anniversary.

Linne, who joined the troop when he was 11 years old, has been a member now for 19 years. There are 20 boys in the group.

The largest troop, with about 70 boys, is at Grosse Pointe Memorial Presbyterian Church. Troop 96 is the second oldest in the area with a 47-year history.

Scoutmaster David Steele said the troop will attend the 11:30 a.m. service at the church en masse this Sunday.

The celebration observing the 75th national anniversary will be included in a special court of honor this May, when five troop members attain the Eagle rank.

Steele said the boys are looking forward to a trip this summer to Arizona where they will camp at the 200,000-acre Philmont Scout Ranch.

Loretta Hall, the scouting coordinator for Troop 39 at Our Lady Star of the Sea, said the group will enjoy a pizza get-together tomorrow at a local restaurant.

The following weekend, the 10 boys will camp at the D-Bar-A Scout Ranch in Metamora. Each member, to show other boys what scouting is about, has invited a friend to the camp, Mrs. Hall said. Her husband, Dennis, is scoutmaster of the troop.

Scouting strives to build character, instill ideals of good citizenship and foster fitness in young people. The methods of the program have changed, however, in keeping with the times. Stress is being used today to teach young people to make ethical decisions, part of a program called Shaping Tomorrow.

The Diamond Jubilee theme is "Pride in the Past... Footsteps to the Future."

Board may fill vacancies

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The board of education will have a number of appointments to discuss Monday night; a deputy superintendent, principal for South High School and a director of public and school libraries.

If the board adopts the proposed appointments, Dr. Joseph Spagnoli, currently interim superintendent, will be named deputy superintendent effective April 16, the day after Dr. John Whritner takes over as superintendent.

Spagnoli said he didn't think he would be returning to South as principal next school year, but would remain deputy superintendent, depending on Whritner's plans.

Spagnoli was named interim superintendent last fall after the departure of Dr. Kenneth Brummel and the death of Deputy Superintendent James Hoeh. He has been principal at South since 1979.

Frances French, currently acting principal at South, will be named principal and will remain until her retirement at the end of this school year.

Miss French began her career in Grosse Pointe in 1950. She had previously taught business education in the Otsego, Port Huron and Wyandotte school systems. She has been a teacher, department head and administrator.

A graduate of Western Michigan University and the University of Michigan, Miss French spent a year on the staff at Michigan State University doing post-graduate work.

South Assistant Principal Russell Luttinen said he has worked with Miss French since 1968, first as a teacher and then an administrator. "I found her to be knowledgeable, sensitive and considerate in her dealings with students, teachers and parents," he added.

"Fran French dedicated 25 years to the school and distinguished herself as a teacher and principal at South High," Luttinen said. "She knows the administration at the school intimately and will be missed in the coming years."

Spagnoli called Miss French "an absolutely superb administrator. I think the thing I admire most about her is she is always forthright in expressing her views."

Dr. Charles Hanson, currently library director and assistant principal at Ohio State University, Lima branch, will become the director of public and school libraries April 15, the same day Whritner comes to the district. His experience with both public and school libraries made him an excellent candidate for the expanded directorship, according to board President Joan Hanpeter.

Hanson holds a bachelor of arts in English from Eau Claire University, a master's in library science from the University of Wisconsin and a doctorate in English from Bowling Green University.

He started as an English teacher at Wauwatosa High School and became library coordinator and media consultant there. He moved to Michigan in 1971, where he became librarian at Aquinas High School in Grand Rapids, a position he held until 1975.

He became director of libraries for the North Baltimore public library system until 1982, when he moved to his present post with Ohio State.

A published poet, Dr. Hanson has experience in computerization, something the libraries hope to get into in coming years.

A winner joins ULS science staff

By Tom Greenwood

Maybe it's because she's a science teacher, or maybe it's just a case of natural curiosity, but when Juliana Textley met President Ronald Reagan recently, she kept her eye on the man who followed him with a small, black briefcase.

"The case is known as the 'football' and contains the launch codes in case of nuclear attack," Mrs. Textley said, sitting in her small office. "He was never very far from the president."

She was at the White House last October, to be honored as one of only two Michigan teachers receiving Presidential Awards for Excellence in Science and Mathematics. The awards were bestowed by the National Science Foundation and came with a number of prizes, plus a $5,000 research grant. One hundred four teachers received the awards, two from each state plus the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

Since she was teaching at Richmond High School when the award was given, the grant was presented to that school after Textley accepted a position at University Liggett last September as chairman of the Science Department.

While at Richmond, Mrs. Textley initiated a series of independent research projects for the sophomore class. "We were involved in over 90 projects," she said. "Some were quite involved and were worthy of entry into science fairs. Others were simpler, but were very thoroughly researched by the students. And we never repeated any project. Each one was different."

"I was very honored to be considered for the award, but never thought I'd actually win," she continued. "I was nominated by our principal and supported by a letter-writing campaign by the students. I resigned my position in June and forgot about it."

"In July I received a call from Lansing saying I was in the running. Then in October came confimation of the award. I'd worked 14 years at Richmond, and it was bittersweet that the grant went to Richmond High School instead of coming here with me to ULS, but I'm very flattered."

Along with the grant, she also received a calculator, books, magazines and computer software which she uses at ULS.

Dr. Textley received her bachelor of science and master's degree in biology from Oakland University and her doctorate from Wayne State University.

"I'm very happy to be here at ULS," she said. "It's nice to have students who are so dedicated. In addition, there's so many different people here on the faculty from all over the country. They help make this job fun as well as interesting."

For the past four years, Mrs. Textley has also toiled as the editor of "The Science Teacher" magazine, a monthly publication dedicated to science teachers. And she has pretty good qualifications for the job.

"I used to work as a reporter for the Anchor Bay Beacon," she said. "I used the position to help pay for my college education. It was fun. When I left, my editor said I wouldn't be able to get the ink out of my blood and he was right. I love science and I love to write, so I put the two together when an opening on 'The Science Teacher' opened up."

According to her, the magazine had a full-time in-house editor, but felt it needed a field editor to stay in touch with working teachers.

"Since I was a science teacher, had a journalism background and worked actively in the classroom I decided to apply," she said. "I was called to San Antonio for an interview and won the job. I try really hard to stay in touch with the teachers to see what the journal should be doing."

Editing the magazine is a time-consuming job. She estimates that she reads 40 manuscripts a month

Grosse Pointe War Memorial

...as John Lake remembered it

Shortly before his death in 1984, John Lake wrote of his years as executive director of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. For those who knew him, it tells the story in a neo-Victorian style they'll well remember — a little confusing at times, but still vintage John Lake. Others will find a nostalgic and useful contribution to the history of our community. These segments have been edited by Charles V. Hicks, but they retain Lake's original language, and they reflect the unique personality of the man who directed and developed the War Memorial Center in its first 30 years. This is the last chapter.

XV. Goodbye to the War Memorial (John Lake tells of his retirement.)

October 1, 1981. Mr. Lake — who was in his 30th year of service to the Center — retired. He was given a grand send-off and it was very, very hard for him to leave. The major part of his life had been spent at the Center, trying along with so many others to develop it to take its place in the community. But he felt that it was time for a new, younger person to take on the leadership.

As Mr. Lake said when he retired, "All the old elm trees are disappearing from along the drive and are being replaced by young, vigorous maple trees which promise growth for the future. And so it seems time for me to surrender a post which I have enjoyed and which has made me, I hope, a friend of many people in Grosse Pointe."

It was a hard time when the day came for the move; and his heart still remains with the Center. Much has been accomplished in the past; much more will be accomplished in the future.

It remains a unique institution.

Host a European teacher

Families are being sought to host English-speaking European teachers as guests in their homes for a seven- to ten-day period this coming summer.

American Host Foundation is a non-profit, non-governmental program designed to show the American way of life to European teachers. It is a nationwide home hospitality program which is endorsed by the Department of State.

Now in its 24th year, American Host has opened the doors to better understanding to their students, friends and colleagues when they have returned to their homelands.

Host families are required to provide a private room and meals for their guest and to give the teacher the opportunity to meet friends, neighbors and to see local sights.

Potential hosts can write to: American Host Program, P.O. Box 803, Garden Grove, Calif. 92642, telephone (714) 537-5711.

License plates

Michigan residents temporarily living outside the state may now renew license plates within a six-month period before the plates expires, according to Secretary of State Richard Austin.

Previously, individual vehicle owners could only renew within a 45-day period prior to expiration.

Austin said a new Michigan law, effective Jan. 1 of this year, enables the Department of State to renew vehicle registrations early. This early registration is expected to be more convenient to workers, students, retirees and others who are out of state for extended periods of time.

Fathers for Equal Rights set seminar

Fathers for Equal Rights of America, with chapters in 17 Michigan cities, will sponsor its first state conference Friday, Feb. 15, and Saturday, Feb. 16, at the Muskegon Heights Holiday Inn, 3450 Hoyt St., Muskegon Heights.

The conference will address the following issues: how child support is calculated; how custody is investigated; mental health people as witnesses; criminal law issues in domestic relations such as gender free assault shelters, parental kidnapping, and visitation enforcement, changing your county jurisdiction, changing the divorce laws.

There will be a five-person panel to address each issue. The panels will be comprised of people from all areas of state government including judges, state legislators, friend of the court executives and prosecutors.

Yes, We Play Football!

Although University Liggett did not have varsity football this past year, we are planning for it to be alive and well at Upper School come September. It will rejoin sports such as hockey, soccer, basketball, baseball and lacrosse.

ULS is committed to an athletic program that gives all students the opportunity for interscholastic competition and that emphasizes skills they can use throughout their lives.

Our sports program begins in the Lower School with daily classes focusing on fitness and fundamental skills while building self-confidence, trust and teamwork. An after school program starts in grade three, and by Middle School our teams are participating in interscholastic competition.

In our Upper School, our boys' varsity tennis team holds a national record for thirteen consecutive state titles, our varsity soccer team has been state champion twice in the last three years, and our girls' field hockey, tennis and lacrosse teams are always a threat.

While we like to win, we also like every child to have the opportunity to play. If this is your philosophy too, investigate University Liggett School.

Come and learn more at our Open House on Sunday, February 24th, from 2:00 - 4:00 p.m.

Whritner's salary more than Brummel's

Dr. John Whritner, Grosse Pointe's new school superintendent, will get more money than his predecessor under a contract approved recently by the board of education.

The three-year agreement, running from April 15, 1985 to June 30, 1988, will pay the 49-year-old Whritner $60,000 a year, $7,000 more than his predecessor, Dr. Kenneth Brummel, who left the Grosse Pointe post for one in California.

Whritner's contract also calls for accrual of $3,000 yearly, to be paid in a single payment at the end of the three-year contract if he remains superintendent.

The clause is a "pair of golden handcuffs," according to board President Joan Hanpeter. The board in other contracts sought ways to grant the superintendent extra yearly compensation and decided to link it to longevity, she added. The $9,000 may persuade a superintendent to remain in the position more than three years.

Brummel's last contract called for payment of $2,000 "for and in consideration of the understanding of the parties that the level of effort to be expended by Brummel during the school year be commensurate with Brummel's performance during the school year ending June 30, 1983," according to the document.

Changes in state law have made that kind of payment illegal, Mrs. Hanpeter said.

Whritner will also have five more vacation days a year than did Brummel. Whritner may take up to 25 paid vacation days a year and must use them before Dec. 31 of the following school year, according to the contract.

Whritner requested and received a clause in his contract that provides that if the board of education decides Whritner can find his own home instead of the board-provided one on Grosse Pointe Boulevard, his salary will increase by $10,000 a year.

Both contracts call for their signers to receive a yearly physical examination, undergo yearly evaluation of performance by the board and discuss increases in salary.

Medical benefits in both contracts are roughly equal, with life insurance set at twice the agreed-upon yearly salary, and disability and sick leave similar to other administrative personnel.

Both contracts call for compensation for reasonable expenses incurred when attending conferences, reimbursement for use of the family car on school district business, payment of moving expenses and a tax-sheltered annuity which the board pays. Brummel's was set at $500 a year. Whritner's is to be set by the school board, according to the contract.

Cupid loads his arrows with sweets and flowers

By Harriet Nolan

Roses are red. Violets are purple. You're as sweet as maple syrup could be the Valentine's message you receive next week, according to local merchants who feel the trend is toward the whimsical.

"A lot of people treat the day with a touch of light humor," says Gwenn Samuel, owner of Grosse Pointe Book Village. "We sell a tremendous number of Boynton cards featuring animals with semi-humorous or cute sayings."

"When they really get serious, they give flowers, jewelry and throw in a book to lighten it up," she adds.

And for those who choose to indulge the day commemorated by hearts of all shapes and sizes, cupids with bows and arrows and candy that can reach sugar overdose proportions, the pocketbook's the limit.

Carol Marchesi, of Valente Jewelers, says Valentine Day trade has more than doubled since she started in the business 26 years ago. And real jewelry is fast replacing requests for costume pieces.

"More men are buying for their wives and they're spending anywhere from $125 or more on heart-type jewelry or pierced earrings," she says.

Over at the Mole Hole, Susan Radtke says men come in and head straight for the Valentines table. "They're here on the very last day and traditionally think of candy."

"The women are more fussy and browse for the appropriate gift," she adds.

Ladies seem to prefer cards to get their message of love across, says James Hoeberling, president of Fischer's Hallmark Card Shop. "They make up most of the business and the trend is toward smoother humor."

While women say I love you with cards, men know that candy is dandy, according to Chris Kokenos. At Sanders they go for the big boxes while the ladies like the sentimental cards.

Even the flower industry is changing, according to David Spyma, floral designer of Scribner-Jean Flowers in the Woods. Some customers pass on the dozen red roses and settle for a lone flower in a gift box.

The promotion arrangements that offer a basket, cup or vase with flowers is gaining in popularity, he says. "This way people can get two gifts in one."

"As they get older, the men pick out a corsage and take their wives out to dinner. Whatever they do, they all consider it an I love you type of holiday," he adds.

Lucas plans for county's future

Photos by Elizabeth Carpenter/Lions Gate Unlimited

By Mike Andrzejczyk

It looks like a good two years ahead for Wayne County, according to Executive William Lucas. It's time to flesh out the framework of reform put in place in the previous two years with improved service to residents, he adds.

One item that bodes well for the next two years is a spirit of co-operation pledged by board of commissioners chairman John Hertel. Recent actions by the board show it is more willing to accept its legislative role, Lucas says.

A recent failure to override the executive's veto of the commission's appointments of three commissioners to the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority shows the board's new direction. Refusing to override his veto and approving his appointments means the beginning of better relations, Lucas says.

There have been times when the board has been willing to "recklessly spend county dollars" to seek court opinions which it hopes will be political instead of based on the charter, Lucas adds.

The board has helped him accomplish some things, however. Commissioners Hertel and Arthur Carter wrote and steered to the primary ballot last August a proposal to abolish the Road Commission. Lucas had started a petition drive for a similar proposal which stalled because of lack of signatures.

The board has also given ground on other proposals Lucas hoped to have put on the ballot. Compromises have been worked out to change contract approval procedures and appointment powers, he says.

That doesn't change the almost two years during which a majority of commissioners sought to block him at every turn, Lucas says. Lawsuits and political maneuvering blocked the lease of Wayne County General Hospital and abolition of the Road Commission for almost a year-and-a-half, he adds. Both changes have benefited the county, he says.

The formation of a body of administrators with a can-do attitude has also helped, Lucas says. Management and labor changes have enabled the county to cut its outstanding deficit by $82 million and better organize departments and available equipment, he adds.

The next two years will see the better delivery of services to residents, according to him. The framework of reform has been put in place in the last two years and the next two will see the county flesh out the skeleton of county reorganization.

The Department of Public Service was formed to handle the public works, drain and road work in the county. While not formally a part of the department yet, Drain Commissioner Charles Youngblood has cooperated with the administration in bringing that office into the public service fold, Lucas says.

That won't stop the administration's attempts to abolish the drain commission the same as was done to the road commission, he adds.

The old road commission has become the Roads Division and is working out just fine, the executive says. This year, there are even complaints the division is cutting grass too often, instead of not often enough as in years past, he notes.

Other improvements include a winter program of activities at county parks for the first time in years. More important is formation of substance abuse programs for indigents.

When the county leased the hospital, it signed an agreement to handle indigent care at local facilities. Now, indigent substance abusers may be first treated in hospitals at one-quarter the cost of Wayne County General, and clinics will help abusers stop the abuse, saving the county more money because it won't have to again treat them, he adds.

Long-term plans for the county were developed at a Strategic Planning Conference held for four days in Dearborn. The executive staff will plot the county's course for two, five and 10 years as well as share management techniques, Lucas says.

Looking at the impact of building and providing prison space is a 35-member commission started by Lucas, the executive says. The commission has been able to find space for 2,000 prisoners through the conversion of buildings at Eloise Center and renovation of the Detroit House of Corrections.

Another matter taken up by the prison commission is cost and economic impact, Lucas adds. The commission recommended a 50-50 state and local funding for facilities started before January 1986, and also looked at ways to sell prisons to communities.

"There have to be efforts to maintain a good-neighbor relationship between the facility and the state and the community," Lucas says. "We can't simply put it there and forget it."

One proposal might be for the state to reimburse homeowners for property value loss caused by location of the facility in their area, Lucas adds.

"Interestingly, as I have traveled around the state, I have found several municipalities that are anxious and eager to have a facility built in their vicinity. Some of those areas depend very strongly on that prison industry," he adds.

One thing that has to be considered is what he calls the "crime tax" on everyone, Lucas says. Security guards, protective glass and safes mean higher cost passed on to consumers, he adds.

Speculation about Lucas' switching political parties and running for governor in 1986 has raged in recent weeks. Lucas has started a statewide tour, presumably to promote the county as a changed and better place.

Speculation about his political future has always been a hot topic, Lucas adds. When he was sheriff, there was talk he would run for executive, a post he adds no one believed would ever come about.

"I think the conjectures now are because of the moves I have made and the treatment I have received from the leadership of the Democratic party," Lucas says. There's also the continued trend among the Democratic leadership to fail to see the change in the public's mood, according to him.

The party seems to be taking its power base for granted and hasn't changed its policies to be in step with the times, Lucas says. The Democratic leadership doesn't seem to be trying to get into step, either, he adds.

It's too early to make a decision to run for governor in either political party, Lucas notes. The earliest possible time he would be able to make a decision would be the middle of this year and until then, he will do all the things a potential candidate does to assess his chances, Lucas says.

Changing parties is almost superfluous, he notes. His record as a Democrat will be the same record under a changed political tag. Voters should look at the record, not the party label, Lucas adds.

If he runs for a second term as executive, party affiliation will also be of little concern, Lucas says. As either Republican or Democrat, he has shown he can do the job, he adds.

Vets treat geriatric pets

Veterinarian James Reaume administers an intravenous needle to Bayla with the help of lab assistant Andrea Maceri. About 2,500 pets are treated at Harper Woods Veterinary Hospital each month, according to him.

By Harriet Nolan

Buster once had eyes and legs that danced. Now arthritis has made even the smallest movement painful.

Cindy looks great, but has been diagnosed a diabetic, and will require insulin injections the rest of her life.

All hospital patients, they're in a ward most would feel leaves much to be desired. Absent are televisions, colorful curtains, flowers and visitors. Instead, accommodations are steel cages, a bowl of water and food fit for a dog or cat.

But Buster, an 11-year-old beagle, and Cindy, a 15-year-old cat are being treated for human-type illnesses routinely seen in older animals, according to James Reaume, D.V.M.

"While it's not uncommon for cats to live into their 20s, dogs are considered getting up there at 10 years of age."

In the 25 years he's been treating animals, the Woods resident has found that pets have been elevated in status.

"Before they used to be considered property to be fed and cared for, but not with a lot of sentimental attachment," he says. "Now they're companions and even people substitutes."

"In the past when a pet got ill, the owner would have it put to sleep. Now they say 'I care, go ahead and do what you can,'" he adds.

To keep up with the 2,500 pets Reaume says pass through Harper Woods Veterinary Hospital's doors monthly, he and his associates use diagnostic and operating equipment similar to that used to treat humans.

In Cindy's case, a blood chemistry test pinpointed her diabetes within a few hours. An in-house laboratory can also test blood counts and skin cultures for infections and anemia, stool samples for worms and proper food digestion, and for liver and kidney disease.

"Rather than trial and error, the processes are simple and practical," says Reaume. "Kidney disease can be fatal if undetected. If a dog has to undergo an anesthetic for an operation, it can run the risk of not waking up."

The more extensive tests are sent to commercial labs or to Michigan State University's Veterinary School for analyzing.

Buster's arthritis was discovered after X-rays showed the site of his problem. It also told that the dog had earlier suffered a slipped disc which Reaume says probably happened when he jumped off the bed or couch.

A few rows away from Buster sits Pixie, a gray cat with enormous green eyes. She had alarmed her owners with continuing bloody stools until a barium enema and X-ray confirmed an abnormal bowel. Her next stop is surgery.

Muffin, origin unknown but ferociously loved, was passing bloody urine which didn't clear up with normal treatment. According to Reaume, her problem is bladder stones, the same as kidney stones, but dogs usually form them in the bladder.

To treat all of these problems, Reaume and his associates have specialties of interest that include dermatology, cardiology, orthopedics, clinical pathology and ophthalmology. They all take turns operating in a room scaled down to small animal size.

Since the object is to keep pets living as long as possible, owners have to co-operate by keeping them in their own yard and feeding them major brand pet food, not people food.

"The number one killer for dogs and cats is cars," says Reaume. "An awful lot go with cancer, and allowing a dog to get fat is another one of the biggest health hazards."

As for generic food, he adds, "Some dogs might be all right with it, but some don't do well on it."

Just as a car that runs with daily maintenance, regular physical exams, dental care and immunizations all keep a pet from dying at an earlier age and Reaume also feels bad about the number of dogs that are destroyed each day at local animal shelters after owners die or decide they don't want the pet anymore.

"Some just don't make good pets for someone else, either because of heredity, being spoiled or undisciplined. It's a shame," he adds.

A recently released vaccine for feline leukemia, a virus previously without cure, will help cats live longer, says Reaume. He feels a vaccine for feline infection peritonitis (F.I.P.), a virus that also causes death, will be developed in a few years.

"Also distemper, rarely seen anymore," he adds. "If everyone keeps their pets immunized, it may be totally eradicated."

Noteworthy lines from country western tunes: "My wife ran off with my best friend and I miss him." "I've always been a little crazy, but it's kept me from going insane." "I used to call her my little dream boat until her cargo shifted."

Hospitals add MHA satellite

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Cottage and St. John have joined 77 other hospitals in the state as subscribers to the Michigan Hospital Association Communications System, Inc., which is providing medical staff education programming by satellite.

Cottage's satellite dish has been in place for some time and St. John hopes to hook one to the wiring that's been laid. Bon Secours administrators are discussing the possibility of receiving the programming, a hospital spokesman said.

The hospitals will receive a variety of medical education programs from a number of national sources, including Cable Health Network, Health Telecommunications Center, Continuing Medical Education Satellite and College of Human and Osteopathic Medicine, Wayne State University.

In addition, the Michigan Hospital Association will provide eight hours of live programming monthly and the American Hospital Association will broadcast its teleconferences.

"Our goal is to bring staff education into the hospital," Addian Hinds, director of MHA Communications System said. Continuing education credit is available for many of the programs that will be carried, she added, so medical personnel may be able to complete as much as half their required 52 hours of continuing education through the system.

MHA Communications System was formed last year as a for-profit company wholly owned by Michigan Hospital Insurance Agency, a for-profit part of the Michigan Hospital Association, a non-profit association of state hospitals.

The MHA insurance agency surveyed its members and found a need for satellite-provided programming, Ms. Hinds said. So far, 77 hospitals have signed up for the system and three-quarters have their equipment ready to go, she added.

Cottage hopes to begin monitoring the programs in February, according to a hospital spokesman. The hospital has a closed-circuit television system and will use a video-cassette recorder to tape programs for later use by hospital staff.

St. John Hospital will expand its in-house television system by two channels with the addition of the MHA programming. The hospital will also be able to monitor and tape programs from the satellite programming.

Hospitals have three choices when subscribing, Ms. Hinds said. They may purchase the equipment and decoder from the provider at a one-time $16,900 cost and pay $3,990 yearly for the programming.

Or hospitals can contract for the total service package for an annual $7,140 fee. The MHA will maintain the equipment and provide the programming for that yearly price with a 5 percent inflation factor after the second year of the contract, Ms. Hinds said.

The third choice offers hospitals the choice of buying the programming for $3,990 and using their own equipment and decoders, which may or may not be compatible, she added.

Michigan is "way out ahead of all the other states in terms of providing this kind of programming," Ms. Hinds said. Other states are developing similar systems, opening up possibilities for sharing or trading programming in the future.

Lucas leaning toward GOP

Just past the mid-point of his first two years as Wayne County executive, Democrat William Lucas is riding the crest of a wave of popularity that could bring him to the governor's chair as a Republican in 1986.

In a wide-ranging interview with the Grosse Pointe News, Lucas said he probably would make up his mind by mid-summer whether to switch to the GOP and whether to run for governor instead of seeking re-election as county executive. Whatever he decides to do, Lucas appears to have a bright political future.

To his interviewers it appeared that Lucas currently is leaning toward a party switch and a race for the state chief executive's job. He was openly critical of the state's Democratic leadership for being "out of tune" with the public, especially with the people's desire for "fiscal integrity," and seemed himself to be more sympathetic to GOP views.

Lucas believes that people are willing to pay taxes and even tax themselves when given the opportunity to do so, but they want the money to be well spent. And when Democrats criticize Lucas for promoting fiscal integrity and call it a "Republican trait," the county executive raises strong objections and believes he is expressing a view the public wants to hear.

Even if Lucas switches to the GOP, it is not clear that he would necessarily run for governor. When asked whether it would be possible for him to run for re-election as county executive as a Republican, his response was only, "Why not?" Normally, Wayne County is a Democratic bastion, but Lucas obviously believes his personal popularity goes beyond party boundaries. He may be right.

While obviously enjoying the attention being paid to him as the "state's hottest political property," Lucas is still looking ahead for the next two years of his term as county executive. He believes he has made a good record since his election in 1982 — and this newspaper and a majority of the public seem to agree with that assessment — but he points to additional problems still ahead.

He does see hope for increased cooperation with the board of county commissioners whose new chairman, John Hertel of the 1st District, already has pledged support to such a policy. Now that Lucas has established the new responsibilities of the county's first executive, he feels that county government will enter its second phase. That will be to implement improved and more efficient service to the people of the county.

Lucas still is critical of the "obstructionist" efforts of the majority of the county board, who for the past two years tried to serve special interests rather than the people who elected them. Some of the bosses who previously ran the county still are seeking to do so, but Lucas insists that the public has a right to expect good government from the board as well as other county offices. He feels that Hertel's pledge of cooperation should ease his task in the next two years.

The chief executive says he now has a "can-do" administration with many capable executives who met with other elected county officials last week at a long-range planning session that he described as highly successful. The meeting concentrated on increasing efficiency, better understanding of county resources, greater use of innovative techniques and improving the spirit of camaraderie among the elected officials and the county executive's own staff.

Among the issues still ahead is the elimination of the county drain commissioner's office and its consolidation with the department of public service. Lucas, however, gives Charles Youngblood, the drain commissioner, credit for cooperating in the consolidation of some services. Hertel has pledged to put the issue of the abolition of the drain commissioner's office on the ballot next year, just as Hertel led the fight to put the abolition of the road commission on the ballot last year. Lucas praised Hertel for both moves.

Lucas says his traveling around the state talking about crime, fiscal integrity and other issues has benefited Wayne County's image as well as his own political fortunes. While he still is planning for the future as county executive, two recently scheduled events can be seen as straws in the wind indicative of his thinking about the GOP. One is his scheduling of another meeting with Vice President George Bush and the second is his plan to give his annual "state of the county" report on Feb. 12, Lincoln's birthday.

The Democratic Party, which has tended to spurn Lucas, now seems to be stepping up a new campaign of denigrating him. Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths charged last week that the Republicans are using Lucas to lure black votes in 1986, that the "whole thing is a farce," and that "you know damn well they (the Republicans) won't run him for governor."

If the Democrats take that line, they might not only convince Lucas that his lot lies with the Republicans. They also might elect him governor.

A welcome crackdown

Two recent developments in state government are worthy of special attention this week. One is the governor's request for an increase of $300 million in spending for education. The other is the state's crackdown on welfare cheaters. There is a relationship between the two.

Most people will support increased appropriations for education because state spending for this purpose had been cut back sharply during the recession. Primary and secondary as well as higher education took a financial beating when the state cut back on appropriations as its revenues declined. Since most people regard our young people as our greatest state asset, the public tends to go along with restoration of a higher level of funding for education now that the economy in Michigan is improving again.

The relationship between education and welfare occurs because the better education people have, the less likely they are to wind up on the welfare rolls. So an investment in education does serve as a preventive against welfareism. But the state must see to it that the opportunities for education not only are open to every youngster, but that the quality of education is equalized to some degree by the state. The state's investment in education without regard for its quality otherwise tends to be wasted.

The welfare crackdown by state officials is welcome and long overdue. But it must be kept in perspective. There are too many cheaters on the welfare rolls, as the early results from the state's drive for better enforcement indicate. And the more cheaters on the rolls, the less money is available for the truly needy. But the number of cheaters found in the current campaign still is a small proportion of those receiving welfare assistance. Most people on welfare are needy, not cheaters.

Several of the cheaters who were interviewed on television explained that they had gone on welfare because they were working only part time or in poorly paid jobs. Yet they had sought and taken illegal payments on the grounds they needed the extra money. There may be some truly needy cases among such people, but one wonders why they were not qualified for welfare if they really needed public help.

The problem has been not only the cheaters but the state which has failed to prevent cheating. Now with greater use of computer records, the state is checking Social Security payments against welfare payments and hopes to improve its checking of earnings in private employment against welfare payments. Without such checking, it is clear that too many unqualified welfare applicants have been collecting state payments. In Wayne County alone, the first 549 residents charged with cheating reportedly collected $6.3 million in illegal welfare payments in 1982.

With better education, an improving economy and better enforcement of welfare regulations, Michigan ought to be able to reduce its welfare rolls. But despite society's efforts, there always will be some poor people who will need help. Michigan, however, will serve both the public and the truly needy if it makes certain that the cheaters are eliminated.

Blue plastic boat covers unacceptable

To the Editor:
I have procrastinated long enough in bringing an issue to your attention and I can no longer be silent after reading one of your featured front page articles of last week titled, "Group to beautify Lakeshore."

Having been a Grosse Pointe resident for 18 years and making Lakeshore Road a frequent destination for the evening of walking or bicycling, I find the BLUE PLASTIC BOAT COVERS at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Boatyard highly unacceptable! How is it that this new boatyard obtained no application or permission for storage from the village council, let alone any coding provisions for it or for sailboard storage? This type of loose governing certainly is not consistent with the city of Grosse Pointe Woods — a model city of which I am a resident. Our council has made and yearly re-evaluates many recreational codings in order to improve the quality of life and appearance of our city. With their dedication and insight the citizens of Grosse Pointe Woods hopefully will never have a worry of being "slimed" by the BLUE MONSTER of the Shores.

Grosse Pointe Shores is certainly one of the most beautiful, unique small cities around the Great Lakes. The two-and-a-half miles along Lakeshore Road is most picturesque in all seasons, and the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club is one of the finest around the world. Sailing into this club is a thrill I'll never tire of. No yacht club around the Great Lakes they say can compare to the architectural beauty and history of this one, and I feel fortunate to live nearby. But how on earth can a city spend $1.5 million recently on renovating an Albert Kahn building and expanding carefully all details, but yet the appearance of a boatyard on Lakeshore Road pops up and pulls its blue winter blanket up for the season and no residents complain? I can't believe that! Inconsistency is the word at hand.

We can do without it

To the Editor:
As an 18-year resident of this community, I feel I must speak on this problem that your newspaper has of printing worthless and we-can-do-without news stories. I have read your paper for years and I must laugh at your weekly "Short and to the Pointe" installments. I know this is a very well-to-do and close-knit neighborhood, but do we really have to hear that Mr. Somebody's son or daughter has a major part in a college play, or that they got accepted to Phi Delta Kappa at U of M? Or the write-up in last week's paper of the man who got his snowblower stolen. Big deal. Does he want us to look for it? That is between him and the police. Come on, you can find better things to write about.

Cottage is great

To the Editor:
To follow upon Mr. Brinkman's "Cheer from Bon Secours" (Jan. 24), I would like to raise two cheers for Cottage Hospital.

I have had the occasion to spend many hours at Cottage, visiting a patient over the last year. I observed the operation and maintenance of this hospital, and in my view, it could not be better!

All personnel have been most thoughtful and helpful — from the pink uniforms, blue uniforms, nursing care and wonderful medical staff.

The meals for the patients and the cafeteria are unbelievably good. We are very lucky to have such a fine institution in our midst.

Inauguration lends continuity

By Dennis Hertel
U.S. Representative

Our nation has endured through times of peace and times of war, through depression and prosperity. One of the events that has lent a continuity to our transient way of life is the presidential inauguration. This tradition has been repeated 50 times; 40 men have taken the oath of office to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States" passing the torch to a new era of leadership.

I recall President Reagan's first inaugural in 1981, the first time an inauguration was held on the West front of the Capitol overlooking the monuments. It was later that day that the American hostages were released from Iran.

This year, the record cold weather forced the cancellation of all outdoor events. It was the first time all such events have been cancelled. Hundreds of thousands of people had traveled across the country to take part in this historical event. Disappointed, but determined to make the best of it, many people attended receptions in their Congressional offices. I hosted an informal get-together in my office where people from the 14th District gathered to visit and watch the swearing-in ceremony on television while just an arm's length away from the actual ceremony.

Among the visitors from Grosse Pointe were: Bill and Diane O'Keefe and their children Carrie and Billy, Darlene and Tony Soave, Tom and Judy Sieber, Marlene and John Boll, Dr. Ivan Anderson, Beverly and Craig Curtiss, and Joan and Amy Woodhouse.

I joined other members of the House, Senate, Supreme Court, the White House Cabinet, a few diplomats and the President's family and closest friends in the Rotunda of the U.S. Capitol Building to witness the swearing-in ceremony. The Rotunda could barely hold 1,000 people, much different from the 140,000 expected to gather in front of the Capitol had the weather not forced the proceedings indoors.

After the ceremony, I took a group of constituents over to the Capitol for a tour of the House of Representatives. Standing on the floor of the House, the visitors were able to see the historic place where laws are made and the President gives his State of the Union address each year before a joint session of Congress.

By late afternoon, most of the visitors had left the Capitol to get ready for the inaugural balls later that evening or to prepare for their journey home. Although the ceremony was far from what they had originally anticipated, it still managed to maintain the spirit and sense of tradition that such a historic event demands.

One view from the Capitol

By William R. Bryant Jr.
The Legislature is getting cranked up for its 1985 session. High on the Blanchard list are what our governor calls "tax loopholes."

Put that together with his statement as quoted recently that he would not increase the income tax rate in his next term, if re-elected in 1986. I suppose that's possible.

The combination says, in effect, that the governor would never raise taxes on Democrats again. He would only tax Republicans who had any bucks left over because of "loopholes."

A loophole, to a Democrat, is a Republican dollar they missed. A loophole, to a Democrat, means an opportunity to get more money and give it to someone whose vote they need.

Tax-related matters look like the hottest items to be considered in the early parts of this session. There are claims being made to capture all or part of the 10-cent cigarette tax soon to go to the general fund.

And the governor has floated his political proposal to pay a property tax credit bonus largely to those voters he has lost but needs the most in 1986, the blue collar, conservative, suburban homeowners.

Official talks about board's role

Editor's note: Woods resident Joseph Callahan has written numerous letters to the editor regarding the Grosse Pointe school system. He recently conducted a two-hour taped interview with Joan Hanpeter, president of the school board. The topics covered during the conversation will be of interest to parents and taxpayers.

Due to its length, it is being printed in installments. This is the third segment.

Q: Have you been especially active in the school system this year?

When the chief executive officer is missing, the board has to step up to different kinds of responsibilities. When the new person gets in place, you kind of fade back. That's even more true this year with Dr. Hoeh's death. I try to be careful that I stick to my role as a school board member and don't get into administration. It's become a gray area. We've been very thin on administrators this year and it's put extra work on a lot of people, including board members because of the search process. Fortunately, we haven't been in negotiations this year.

Q: There was a report that you were adding two administrators. Is that correct?

A: No. We not only cut 4½ administrators, but we had the death of Dr. Hoeh. He was not replaced. And Dr. Spagnoli was not replaced at South High School, so we actually lost 5½ positions this year. I can't imagine where that rumor came from.

Q: Are there plans to hire a deputy superintendent?

A: The board hasn't decided on that. I really don't know if that position will be filled.

Q: Thirty-plus teachers were hired this year. Will more teachers be needed this year?

A: I doubt it. But I got a call today about one school. It was the president of one of the parent organizations who was complaining because one of the elementary schools has had a fifth grade that has added students since the beginning of the year. These classes are up to 30 or 31 students. This president was requesting a full-time aide for these teachers. Well, that's more money, but not as expensive as a teacher. Incidentally, the entire school system staff consumes over three-quarters of our entire budget.

Q: What was the rationale for the new seven-class-a-day program in Grosse Pointe high schools?

That came as a recommendation from a professional study committee for both schools. The thinking was that, as we moved toward a better program for high school students, we wanted to increase the requirements at the high school level — require four years of English, two years of math, more social studies — for graduation and to increase electives.

If a student was going to be involved in things like band and the school newspaper, he needed an extra period in the day to take all the academic courses. This seemed to be the way to do several things — increase our graduation requirements, provide a better program and really force the students to take more academic subjects. And at the same time, give the kids an opportunity to take a few electives along the way so that they can take some things that they might not have an opportunity to take later in life.

Q: Haven't the students had this opportunity in the past?

A: Yes, but in increasing the graduation requirements, we narrowed the opportunities for electives.

Q: But doesn't that result in about a 16 percent increase in the number of teachers required, going from six to seven classes?

A: No. It isn't that many because our high school offered a little more than we anticipated. I think we added about 10 teachers at the high school level. Now, because of retirements in the past year, we've had a cost savings in salaries because every teacher who has been added has been down at the bottom of the wage scale.

We're talking $20,000 or less, compared to $35,000 or more. Most of the teachers who retired were probably making closer to $40,000 a year. So it was a cost saving.

Q: But isn't that going to catch up with us down the road when these teachers reach the higher pay levels?

A: That's true. But if our enrollment does continue to decline, we'll release teachers. I want to emphasize that really you can talk about cutting grass seed or whatever you want to talk about in terms of cutting tax dollars, but until you start talking about cutting personnel, you're really not talking about anything significant.

Q: But wasn't the rationale for providing those retirement incentives for teachers to really reduce the teaching force, especially in view of the strong public support for economy in the system represented by the recall vote and the recent defeat of Proposal C in Michigan?

A: But that's been somewhat offset by the fact that the elementary school parents particularly have been so adamant about reducing class size. Here again class size is an issue. We've hired several teachers this fall just in response to elementary parents demanding that classes of 33 or 34 were too big. This has been a difficult thing to cope with. We have never had as many requests for smaller class sizes as we've had this year, or as much discussion about it.

Q: Yet, it has been reported that the Grosse Pointe School System has one adult employed for every 13-plus children, including the teachers, maintenance and cafeteria workers?

A: I don't know if that's a correct figure. It probably is. I know at the high school level, the ratio for professional people is one for every 18 students. That would probably not include the custodial staff.

Q: Three parents have complained that the Ferry Elementary classrooms are too crowded. Is that a temporary situation?

A: Actually the Ferry School for the most part has 22-23 students per class. We did have the fifth grade there that had 34 students in it. That was complicated by the fact that some learning-disabled students were mainstreamed — taking a special class there and we had to put them in the fifth grade. That was one of those situations where the parents came to board office, sat in Dr. Hoeh's office and just made a case for having smaller class sizes. Finally we responded to that by hiring an additional fifth grade teacher.

Q: There seems to be some confusion. Is the Barnes Elementary School closed or open?

It's being used for our adult education program that was formerly housed at Brownell, as far as offices were concerned. This left a little more room there for the sixth graders who were moving in. That (adult) program has been basically a night-time program for adults in the community, and pretty much self-supporting. The costs of the instructors are paid by the fees which the people paid.

Now that they've had that facility at Barnes, they've been able to offer day classes. Classes are going on almost from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m. It has meant there is now a central location. It has expanded our adult education program a great deal. Now I suppose people would quibble over that. Obviously, it's filling a need in the community or people wouldn't be responding to it.

Q: Wasn't that need filled without using Barnes?

A: No, because we never offered a day-time program. Also our instructional material center has now been moved to Barnes. It was located in the old Kerby School which we sold to the Grosse Pointe Farms a couple of years ago, but we hadn't vacated it. Now we still have some available space at Barnes and we're negotiating with an outside concern that may be using some of that space. If that works out, it will be very beneficial financially to the school system.

Q: What kind of a firm is that?

A: It's education-related but not in competition with our kindergarten through 12 program — a private enterprise. The rent they would be willing to pay would be very beneficial to the system.

We closed Barnes as an elementary school, but we're still using it as an educational facility. I think we made a commitment to the people in that area, at least initially, not to sell the building. They seem to have the belief that there will be a population turn-around in that area.

Free dental exams

The Children's Clinic of the University of Detroit Dental School, will offer free screening exams by appointment only to children accompanied by parents or guardians.

Children will be screened for the general health of their teeth and mouth. Those with decay will be accepted for treatment and will receive free teeth cleaning and a free fluoride application.

These exams will be for scheduled weekdays and are available to anyone who calls 446-1919 throughout the month of February. Ask for "Free Children's Dental Health Month Examinations."

All children up to age 12 are accepted. There are no income or residence requirements. If your child's teeth do need dental treatment, the U of D Dental School's fees are less than half of private practice fees.

The U of D Dental School was founded in 1932 and is one of only 60 dental schools in the country. U of D has trained nearly half of all the practicing dentists serving Michigan, and it has nationally recognized graduate programs in orthodontics and endodontics.

I say

Ever wonder how it works?

By Nancy Solak

Last month, staff writer Mike Andrzejczyk offered to rent this space to a member of the community who wanted to write on any subject. Nancy Solak, publicity coordinator for the War Memorial, met the challenge. Following are her observations of the Center.

Others who would like the opportunity to write a column are welcome to submit their copy for consideration.

"We know that the Lone Ranger's horse was named Silver," the caller began, "but we can't think of what Tonto's horse's name was. Would you happen to know so we can go on to other things?"

Five years ago, long before the trivia craze swept our nation, I was asked that question on the first day I was left alone to man the front desk of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Of course, not yet into trivia, and somewhat nervous being alone there, I didn't know the answer, so I referred the caller to Central Library. Bet they'll never forgive me for that one.

The front desk is the pulsating nerve center of the War Memorial. The staff answers all kinds of questions, including some about our current programs. They also make referrals to other agencies when appropriate, give directions to 32 Lakeshore Drive, and divvy out hundreds of calls each day to all the other departments. They wait on patrons from 9 a.m. to almost midnight every single day except Sunday.

• The Kitchen: Meanwhile back in the kitchen, chicken jokes abound as cooks, waitresses and dishwashers buzz about their business. Since the Center is famous for its freshly cooked stuffed chicken, many patrons choose that dish to be served at their function. And as every good host and hostess knows, it's always better to have a little extra on hand just in case some unexpected guests arrive. So what happens to all the leftovers, you ask? The staff eats them, and eats them, and eats them.

One day I had stuffed chicken for lunch and came back in the evening to attend a wedding reception, and I ate it again. There should be an award for that kind of dedication.

Some staff members swear that long-term employees develop a slight cackle in their laughs as the years go by.

• The Maintenance Crew: The housemen and housekeepers are responsible for setting up the proper equipment for each function, keeping the place spiffy, and making the landscaping look like there's no work involved, that it's natural. Their jobs are particularly difficult on days when there are four weddings, two in the afternoon, and two in the evening. From 4-6 p.m. there is a mad dash to tear down the rooms, clean them and set up again. All of the restrooms, lobbies and hallways must be re-cleaned too, so when the second set of guests comes in, it looks as though no else has been there before them.

• The Development Office: This office is charged with the duties of recording contributions, keeping the 20,000-name mailing list up to date, and sending out the bi-monthly activity cards. They're the ones who have to figure out if "Leslie" is a man or woman and how to address him or her.

• Programming: Each War

Memorial sponsored program begins here, sometimes seasons in advance. While patrons are decorating their Christmas trees, the programming department is thinking about Easter. The job is a juggler's nightmare because they have to be thinking way ahead while simultaneously working on the day-to-day details, such as making sure the buses for that day's ski trip will arrive on time, and at the same time, that there is someone to introduce a speaker that night.

• Accounting: I really don't know what accounting does except that they give me my check each week. The accounting office staff is my favorite.

• Function Coordinator: With only so much space and more than 3,000 functions each year, the function coordinator must see to it that each group's needs are met and that a room is never overbooked. Unlike the airlines, bumping is taboo.

• Executive Director: At the helm, Dr. Mark Weber sees that the ideas and policies set by the board of directors are carried through. Although he has his doctorate in continuing education, he also holds a degree in zoology — a fact some staff members find bitterly-sweetly humorous on particularly busy days, when circumstances seem to fit more into the zoo category than the cultural.

Most patrons I've talked to say, everything always seems to run smoothly, almost effortlessly, and that's just what the staff strives for.

Oh, almost forgot. Scout. That's the name of Tonto's horse. Now you can go on to other things.

When do schools close?

Three weeks ago, arctic air and high winds drove the wind chill factor to almost 50 degrees below zero. Some school districts decided to close for the day. Grosse Pointe didn't.

"That was a judgment that had to be made," interim Superintendent Dr. Joseph Spagnoli said. Once administrators decided the weather wasn't going to keep staff and parents from getting to school safely, there was no reason to close the district, he added.

Unlike districts that closed, Grosse Pointe doesn't have large numbers of students who have to stand outside and wait for buses, Spagnoli said. Many of the students have short walks or are driven to school, he added.

Some irate parents did call the administration building to complain, Spagnoli said. "I can appreciate their opinion; on the other hand I had people call ... who said it was a good decision."

None of the schools reported a cold-related injury, he added.

Closing the district's schools for a day is "a matter of judgment," Spagnoli said. Much depends on whether the weather is severe enough to hinder staff and parents from reaching the school.

"If we can keep the parking lots and driveways clear or at least get them clean enough so faculty can get into the buildings, then parents can get to the buildings and we'll have school," he said.

Once the children are in school, they are there for the day. Children in elementary school would never be released in the middle of the day in severe weather unless a parent came to pick them up, he added.

Employees working at night and early morning are to alert administrators of conditions that may cause a closing, according to the district's closing procedures. Administrators then confer with the superintendent, who decides to stay open or to close.

Once the decision is made to close, local police departments and radio and television stations will be notified. An announcement will also appear on Grosse Pointe Cable Channel 16.

When schools close, the Central Library may remain open, unless the superintendent decides it is unsafe or impossible for staff to get to work, according to the closing procedures. The library, once closed, will remain closed until the library director and superintendent decide to reopen. When Parcels and Pierce schools close, the branch libraries there also close and stay that way until the schools reopen.

Although students and staff will have the day off should the district's schools close for the day, administrators and their secretaries, high school principals' secretaries, central maintenance staff, high school building managers, middle and elementary school head engineers and all shift engineers will be expected to report to work, according to the closing procedures.

Teachers sought for overseas jobs

Married couples who are both certified teachers may qualify for teaching positions in the Kuwait, Karachi and Saudi Arabia international schools.

The Wayne County Intermediate School District is assisting the overseas administrators in locating couples who might qualify for various teaching positions at the K-12 level. A delegation from the schools will arrive in mid-February to conduct interviews.

Married couples specifically are being sought since the schools provide housing for the teachers and they must agree to a two-year contract.

Armed robber strikes again

Farms police believe the same man is responsible for two armed robberies at the 24-hour bank teller machine at the National Bank of Detroit, 460 Moross road, this past week.

According to reports, a Stanhope Road resident was robbed at gunpoint at about 7:30 a.m. Sunday, Jan. 20 by a man who entered the glass enclosed booth after the victim had withdrawn $30 from the machine.

Armed with a nickel-plated revolver, the suspect took the money, an additional $35 and the keys to the victim's car, which was nearby. He was last seen driving the vehicle toward Detroit.

His description matched that of an armed robber who stole nearly $70 from a Detroit man at the same machine on Saturday evening, Jan. 19. At that time, the suspect also tried to steal his victim's car but was frustrated when the vehicle failed to start because of an ignition kill switch.

The suspect in the latest robbery was described as a black male, 6 feet tall, medium build in his mid-20's. He was wearing an Army fatigue jacket and a hooded grey sweatshirt.

North sends three to writing contest

Three juniors have been chosen to represent North High in the national writing competition sponsored by the National Council of Teachers of English.

More than 70 students were nominated to compete for the award, and 60 students participated in a write-off to determine North's representative to the competition.

Students became eligible by assessment test scores and/or nominations from current or former English instructors.

After the write-off, in which students wrote impromptu papers, North instructors Robert Reimer, John Miller and Gael Barr selected Nick Nahat, Susan Kunert and Liz Rohan to represent North, with Keith Peltz as an alternate.

"This award enables the student to advance to national competition," said Reimer, English Department chairman.

In national competition, students will be asked to submit an impromptu paper, as well as an out-of-class (polished) piece, to test students' revision and thinking skills.

In March, the national impromptu topic will be announced, and in April, the students' prepared and impromptu papers will be submitted. These papers will read of the summer by educators from throughout Michigan. In October, the student and the school will be notified of national winners.

Build self-esteem

The Trombly PTO invites parents from Defer, Maire and Pierce schools to attend a program on promoting self-esteem in children on Wednesday, Feb. 13, from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Trombly School auditorium.

The speaker will be David R. Groves, Ph.D., who has been asked by the Michigan Department of Mental Health to pilot a program for 3,500 students called "Choices in Positive Living." The program is to develop self-esteem and teach problem-solving skills.

Dr. Groves will explore communication skills, discipline, problem-solving and effective limit-setting. He will explain how these parenting techniques effect the child's self worth.

Student writers invited to apply

Students in the 8th through 12th grade who want to be writers can compete for a chance to be invited to attend a three-day conference at Interlochen Arts Academy in April.

Twenty students who submit outstanding essays, editorials or feature stories to the academy's Creative Writing Department will be selected to take part in "The Business of Writing." The conference will feature professional writers and editors from throughout Michigan.

Debate winners

Maria Casquejo, a sophomore at Our Lady Star of the Sea, placed first in the Detroit Catholic Forensics League tournament held Jan. 28 at Mercy High School. Michelle Moran, also a sophomore at the school, was awarded fourth place at the tournament.

There will be six more district competitions and a national tournament that will be held in Florida this year.

The deadline is Feb. 22.

Manuscripts should be typewritten and include the author's grade and teacher, who will also receive an invitation to the conference. Submissions, which will remain the property of the academy, should be sent to: Michael Delp, Director of Creative Writing, Interlochen Arts Academy, Interlochen, Mich. 49643.

Winners will be notified by March 17. For more information, call 616-276-9221, ext. 422. The project is funded in part by a grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

Two South students honored for writing

Two students from South High placed third in the 1984-85 Michigan High School Journalism Contest sponsored by the Michigan Press Women.

They are Kea Joan McKinney, junior, for features, and Stu Whitney, senior, for sports. They will receive certificates.

Chairman's coalition passes its first test

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The coalition of central city and suburban commissioners that put him in the chairman's seat of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners has survived its first trial by fire and appears to be gaining strength, according to First District Commissioner John Hertel.

The first eastside commissioner to be named chairman, Hertel says the hard work and accommodation among the nine commissioners who put him in charge of the commission may turn that body into the legislative check and balance envisioned in the county's two-year-old charter.

Hertel was elected chairman of the 15-member body in early January when six Detroit commissioners joined three suburban representatives to give him the majority. Samuel Turner, a Detroit commissioner, threw his support behind Hertel when Turner's bid for the chairmanship was thwarted by Edward Plawecki, a suburban commissioner.

At the first meeting of the commission, when Hertel and the vice chairman was elected, much of the other business was acted on perfunctorily, according to the eastside commissioner. One of the matters that slipped through was the commission's appointment of three commissioners to the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority, setting the stage for a showdown on administrative appointment powers, Hertel said.

County Executive William Lucas vetoed the action and sent the veto and his appointments back to the commission for action. The commission then defeated an override attempt and then affirmed Lucas' appointments by the same 9-5 votes, Hertel said.

"This is historic because it sets a precedent that the board recognizes it doesn't have the power to make administrative decisions," he said. "This is a legislative body."

There have been some changes in the legislative process since he became chairman, Hertel said. Three were eliminated and another added to the commission's list of standing committees, and membership was increased from three to five commissioners each, allowing more input and ease in getting a quorum to meet.

Elimination of the personnel and general government committees and creation of the administration and rules committee, which he chairs, is part of the streamlining of the process of county government, Hertel said. More important was elimination of the committee of the whole because it cuts a week out of the legislative process, he added.

Under the old system, reports of various committees were sent to the committee of the whole for action and recommendation to the full board. Since votes weren't recorded, legislation could be killed without anyone knowing who voted for or against, Hertel said. Now, all reports go directly to the full board for action and debate, eliminating the week wait between the committee of the whole meeting and the board meeting.

Also speeding the process is the administration and rules committee, which will be responsible for administration of the commission and screening and interviewing of all executive appointments, Hertel said. The state legislature has a similar committee.

Changing the structure hasn't meant as much as the attitude that commissioners have brought to their new positions, he said. The new chairmen "have taken off at a dead run" and cleared through committee a backlog of matters left over from last year, he said.

That attitude may have been fostered by what Hertel calls accommodation. After being elected chairman, Hertel said he called all the commissioners to find out the committees on which they would like to serve. Appointments were made without favor to those who had supported him for the chairmanship, he added.

"I can't get this job done without a lot of cooperation," he said. "We have an opportunity here to improve things for the people. The next two years could be significant ones, if we can finish the good work of Bill Lucas."

The executive has done an excellent job with the county, evidenced by speculation about which offices and party Lucas may try for next, Hertel said.

"I don't think if he had done a poor job over the last two years, these things would be happening," he added. "What makes him stand out is because he has been effective where they said he wouldn't be."

"He's done an excellent job and in reality, he had done a great deal public relations wise for the county through his travels," Hertel said.

He wouldn't comment on Lucas' possible change of party affiliation, adding it wasn't his business. Reports that Hertel may become a Republican are without basis, he added.

Part of that speculation may come from his criticism of the policies and direction of the Democratic Party, which state and national elections showed to be out of step with people's views, Hertel said. One of the reasons he remains outspoken is because he sees no change in direction by the state party, he added.

He remains a Democrat and representative for the Pointes, Harper Woods and northeast Detroit, an area almost identical to the one he represented as a state senator.

The duties of the chairmanship are in addition to those of his representation, Hertel said. The increased authority will help him better represent his district, but he won't use that authority at the expense of other districts, he added.

"I have a responsibility to be fair to all the commissioners, even those who opposed my election," Hertel said. "I can't remain chairman if I treat matters in my district differently than matters in other districts. I can work to extend the improvement of services throughout the county."

As a commissioner, he began meeting with city managers from the Pointes and Harper Woods and members of the old Road Commission. Hertel said he hopes to extend those meetings county-wide and use the results to determine if the eastside is getting its fair share.

One of the topics for city managers at a spring meeting will be the kind of service being delivered by the new Road Division of the Office of Public Service, the old road commission.

There won't be a significant change in service delivery since the reorganization of the road commission, Hertel said. There is change-over time that needs to be taken into account, he added.

The road commission was abolished by popular vote in the August primary, part of a proposed reorganization of divisions under the executive branch. The Office of Public Service was to take control of the old road commission, drain commission and public works department. So far, the public works and road commission have been consolidated.

Proposed legislative action to eliminate the drain commission is moving ahead and will be one of the topics when Hertel talks with the county executive in the coming week to 10 days. Other topics include county activities to improve the economic climate and attempts to solve the crime problem, he added.

While the county may be limited in what it can do to improve the local business climate, becoming an efficient government in a safe area can boost development prospects, Hertel said.

Another matter that will be discussed and may see the commissioners' initiation of legislation is the county's infant mortality rate. In some areas, the infant death rate is almost that of some Third World nations, something that won't be tolerated, Hertel added.

While cooperation with the executive branch is important, the commission is still a check to that power, Hertel said. The board won't involve itself in administrative details, but will oppose Lucas should he go "off in the wrong direction," he added.

Although his slogan has been "government by cooperation instead of confrontation," the six urban and three suburban members of the coalition could end up being split by any number of weekly issues. That they have held together is a demonstration of the spirit of the commissioners involvement, he added.

Through more than two decades, while Detroit declined, urban and suburban commissioners battled. "What I'm saying now is, we have more than enough problems to go around, so we need all of our energies to solve them," Hertel said.

Instrumental in working to maintain the cooperative spirit is Samuel Turner, Hertel said. The last chairman of the old 27-member board, Turner has supported the coalition and worked hard to get things done, he added.

"I want to create a situation where the city and suburbs act cooperatively instead of constantly being at loggerheads," Hertel said.

There aren't any issues in the wings that will temper the coalition, the chairman said. Like everything else, there are ebbs and flows to legislative bodies and the commission is heading for an ebb period.

The added load of the chairmanship means he's working harder now than during his eight-year tenure in the Senate.

"I have a whole county to represent and to be responsible for," he said.

Ophthalmic Surgeons group to build office in Park

By Harriet Nolan

The Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology (DIO) got Grosse Pointe Park City Council's approval to sell land, previously chosen as the site for a $5 million, three-story joint venture between itself and Bon Secours Hospital, to Ophthalmic Surgeons, P.C.

Plans, approved at the Jan. 28 meeting, call for the $2.7 million, one-story building to share a cul-de-sac entrance off Jefferson Avenue with the AAA building.

The surgeons group will pay the cost to close Nottingham and relocate easements, according to William Fox, its representative, who said the 14,000-square-foot building should be completed by the end of the year.

James Candler, a lawyer for the DIO, agreed to put in writing its commitment to landscape and restore the exterior of the AAA building within a year. He said future plans include renovating the interior after Ophthalmic Surgeons, a major tenant leaves for its own use, keep Benson Optical as a tenant and offer the rest as rental.

This plan replaces one approved last year by council to build a 45,000-square-foot medical complex that would have housed the DIO, Bon Secours Ambulatory Surgery Center, offices for Ophthalmic Surgeons, P.C. and other private medical offices.

But that bit the dust last November when the surgeons group, citing increasing involvement of government, industry and third-party payers in health care, backed out of the deal.

William McCauley, a spokesman, questioned the uncertainty of any long-term relationship with one large organization as serving their best interest.

Wildlife art contest open to students

Fourth and fifth grade pupils in all elementary schools in Michigan are invited to enter the Tracks Magazine Wildlife Art Awards competition sponsored by the Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC).

"It is MUCC's goal that this contest will encourage young people to learn about wildlife and the importance of wildlife habitat," Catherine M. Rustem, editor, said. "MUCC also hopes to encourage promising young artists to explore the fields of wildlife art."

It is recommended that schools conduct their own contests to select the entries during National Wildlife Week, March 17-23, which is conducted in Michigan by the National Wildlife Federation and MUCC each year.

Only the first place entry in each grade level from any school will be accepted in the statewide competition. Entries must be received by MUCC by April 19.

Prizes will be awarded to the first three winners in each of the two grade levels. A $500 U.S. Savings

Plans to close Somerset Road to Jefferson Avenue traffic have been scrapped due to construction changes. Park councilman John Prost said, however, that a possibility exists that it could be made into a one-way street at a later date.

Bond will be awarded to the first place winners in each grade level. Second prize will be a $100 U.S. Savings Bond and the third prize, a $50 Savings Bond.

The first, second, and third place entries in each grade level will be reproduced in Michigan Out-of-Doors, the monthly magazine published by MUCC.

Further information about the competition or National Wildlife Week may be obtained by writing Catherine Rustem or Teri Littrell, MUCC, Box 30235, Lansing, Mich. 48909 (phone 517/371-1041).

Hardy's robbed

Two men, one armed with a sawed-off rifle, locked three Hardy's employees in a cooler and fled with almost $1,000, according to Farms police.

Witnesses said one of the men came to the restaurant at 10:30 p.m. Feb. 3, and asked the clerk for a glass of water and the location of the telephone and then left.

She said he returned about 10 minutes later with another man. One went behind the counter. The other went toward the kitchen where he met two more employees and then demanded the money in the safe.

After taking the money, the two men locked the three employees in the cooler with the warning not to come out for a long time. The trio called the police about 11:08 according to reports.

The victims, who were unhurt, described the robbers as black males in their mid-20s. One, dark skinned, had a thick mustache and was about 5 feet, 10 inches tall. He was wearing a short natural haircut, a tan three-quarter-length hooded jacket and blue jeans.

The second robber was about 6 feet, 2 inches, of medium complexion with short natural hair and wore a green hooded army jacket. They fled in a light blue or gray 1975 Ford LTD, said witnesses.

Increased state spending won't affect local schools

A proposed $200 million increase in spending by the state for K-12 education next year will have little or no effect on Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods public schools, according to officials. Both districts will be passed over for the lion's share of the budget boost proposed last week by Gov. James J. Blanchard.

Blanchard proposed spending $178 million more next fiscal year for K-12 education. Republican officials said they thought the increase is too small and an additional $15 million to $20 million may be tagged on, according to published reports.

But because the two districts are out of formula, they will probably see only small increases in state aid.

Most of the increase will go into state aid payments, which are returned to districts according to formulas based on the amount they collect per student and how much they spend, according to Grosse Pointe schools' director of business affairs Christian Fenton.

The state sets a "gross allowance per student" at $2,312. From that is subtracted the local revenue collected for each student. If the revenue is larger than the allowance, a district is considered out of formula.

Grosse Pointe collects $4,662 for each student, Fenton said.

Harper Woods is in the same situation, according to Superintendent James Toth. Its tax base is large and valuable, so it collects more than the state's figure for its 800-odd students. "We're not looking for great things from the state," he added.

Both districts receive money from categorical grants for special education program and transportation costs as well as vocational education programs, Fenton said. Those payments are based on a percentage of expense. A deduction is made by the state for the other revenue a district collects.

Fenton added he expects little more than the $125,000 Grosse Pointe schools budgeted this fiscal year in 1985-86.

State funding makes up 4 percent of the district's $34 million in revenue.

G. Mennen Williams: A man of many titles

By Pat Paholsky

He was 23 years old and a student at Princeton when he decided to be governor. And 15 years later, G. Mennen Williams fulfilled his goal when he was elected governor of Michigan.

He went on to be re-elected five times, setting a record at the time of serving the greatest number of consecutive terms of any governor in American history.

Now as chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court, Williams is winding up nearly 50 years of government service. He will be 74 this month and cannot run for another term on the court when this one expires in December 1986.

Williams was born Feb. 23, 1911 on the dining room table of the family home at 91 Merrick Ave. The property is now part of the Wayne State University campus.

He said when he was attending prep school in Salisbury, Conn. and studying history, he became dismayed at the lot of children during the Industrial Revolution in England.

"I decided then to help people and determined to go into government," he said.

After receiving his undergraduate degree from Princeton, Williams enrolled at the University of Michigan where he earned a law degree. His first job was a lawyer with the Social Security board in 1936.

He then went on to become an assistant state attorney general, a lawyer in the criminal division of the Justice Department, a deputy director of the Michigan Office of Price Administration and a liquor control commissioner. Williams also served as lieutenant commander in the navy during World War II from 1942 to 1946.

After his six terms as governor ended in 1960, he was appointed assistant secretary of state for African affairs by President John F. Kennedy. In 1968 he served as ambassador to the Philippines.

He was elected to the state Supreme Court in 1970 and was named chief justice in 1983, a post to which he was recently re-elected by the justices.

Occupying the fourteenth floor of the Lafayette Building in downtown Detroit, the law offices of Michigan's Chief Justice G. Mennen Williams are large and comfortable. His office, filled with memorabilia from his travels and years of service, is lined with windows on two sides, making it appear more spacious.

Williams points to one of the many autographed pictures of presidents and other world leaders on his walls.

With a long record of service and many titles behind him, Williams was asked which position he enjoyed the most.

"I've been very lucky," he said. "I've hit some of my positions at a time when they were most appropriate. I was in Africa at a time when all the new countries were reaching independence and that was the most exciting time in the world to be in Africa."

"Similarly when I ran for governor, Michigan was just coming to the end of a fairly long period of reaction and was looking for a new liberal leadership. We turned the state from a hide-bound Republican state which it had always been — almost like a company town — and there's nothing the matter with Republicans, but complete domination is something else."

"We were able to turn it into a two-party state," he continued. "And it was in the best interest of the people, because neither party was in a position to take the people for granted. You have to work with the people to keep in power."

While he has fond memories of the past, Williams is more interested in the present. He spoke at length about the state Supreme Court.

"We get about 2,500 appeals a year that we have to consider whether or not we can hear them," he said, adding that of that number, about 100 cases will be heard.

The court is also responsible for setting rules for all of the other courts in the state.

"It also means sometimes we have to actually go into a court and perhaps appoint somebody as an executive director of the whole court, as was the case with the Records Court in Detroit a couple of years ago," he said. "We do have a pretty broad jurisdiction."

As chief justice, Williams has added duties, such as meeting regularly with various judges' associations and about a half-dozen bar associations.

Most nights he takes work home, and he says, "I'm very fortunate because my wife is very supportive. She and I sit in the library in the winter — she likes a fire — and she watches TV. Our son gave us a set with earphones and she plugs in and does needlework while I'm working. We spend many nights together in this fashion."

He and the former Nancy Quirk were married in 1937. The longtime Grosse Pointe residents have three children and eight grandchildren.

There are a number of things Williams would like to see occur regarding the judicial system in Michigan. One is a reform of the method of paying judges' salaries.

"We have a peculiar system in which the state pays part of the salary and some communities pay and some don't," he said, which results in an irregular salary schedule for judges. The way to rectify the matter, he said, is to have the state finance all of the courts.

He is also opposed to part-time judges who are permitted to practice law on the side.

"We were trying to get the Legislature to remove that conflict of interest."

Another thing on his and the other justices' wish list is a Supreme Court building.

"We are now in three different buildings in Lansing and that's very inefficient," he said. "It's not a very dignified operation."

His law offices on the fourteenth floor of the Lafayette building in Detroit are both dignified and comfortable. His office at the end of a book-lined corridor is filled with memorabilia from his travels, and the walls are covered with photographs, cartoons and certificates. An almost-dead tree in a clay pot near the center of the room prompted the chief justice to say that despite efforts to save it, he supposed he would have to get rid of it. He doesn't appear to be a person who gets rid of too many things.

Visitors to the high-ceilinged, sprawled-out offices are greeted by Tiffany, a tiny Yorkshire terrier, who spends her days in the large waiting room just outside the chief justice's office. Tiffany belongs to Williams' longtime secretary, Barbara Patterson, and was in fact a gift to her from him and his wife 12 years ago.

The little dog stays within the boundaries of the waiting room, according to Ms. Patterson, and keeps the staff mellow by greeting everyone with a furiously wagging tail. Mindful of the dignity of the office perhaps, the tiny Yorkie "doesn't yap," according to Ms. Patterson.

"She thinks that everyone who comes here, comes to see her and she's usually right."

K-12 programming may be added to cable

By Mike Andrzejczyk

As soon as the details are worked out, Grosse Pointe Cable will begin broadcasting M-Star, 30 hours weekly of education programs for students in elementary and high school.

The cable advisory board last month allocated six hours weekdays on Channel 21 to accommodate the programs, produced in Chicago by Central Education Network and paid for with a grant from the state education department. The company will also find out how much additional equipment it needs to bring in the signal and who's going to pay for it, according to those at the meeting.

Pro-Am Sports System broadcasts on Channel 21 in the evenings, according to cable company President John Rickel. Although PASS is a pay service, the channel isn't "scrambled" from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. when M-Star is to be shown, he added.

The advisory board didn't put M-Star on Channel 19, the education channel, because College Cable occupies the lion's share of the channel's time. Local schools in the Pointes and Harper Woods show their programs from 6 to 9 p.m. weekdays.

Representatives of public and non-public schools and WTVS, which sponsors College Cable jointly with a consortium of universities, said they were pleased the cable company was adding M-Star.

"I am encouraged by the cable company's decision to provide space for this exceptional educational programming," Bruce Kergen from Grosse Pointe public schools said. The company will be able to provide high-quality programming to more than 9,000 students in its broadcast area, he added.

Bishop Gallagher High School's Brother Glen Neiner said the Association of Non-Public Educational

Community, of which he is president, will meet Feb. 13 to discuss the network. Adding it to the cable line-up could be a tremendous benefit to the community, he said.

Some of the private schools are still without cable, although the franchise agreement said they were to be hooked up, Neiner said. AN-PEC plans to meet with the cable company's new general manager, Michael DuFour, to talk about the problem, Neiner added.

Schools that are hooked up will be able to monitor and record programs for later use, he said.

Eugene Stroebel, with WTVS' education department and representing College Cable, said he was pleased the company will carry both M-Star and College Cable, which began a new semester of classes recently.

College Cable was added to Channel 19 in 1983 as part of a compromise agreement between local schools and Grosse Pointe Cable because the area's schools weren't producing programming to fill the channel. Since then, public and private schools have expanded production, adding new programs and taping board of education meetings.

The franchise agreement called for two channels for educational use. One of those was shifted two years ago to carry Lifetime programming, from Cable Health Network.

Ten to 12 universities have enrolled 1,700 students statewide in this semester's College Cable program, Stroebel said. Sixty-two east side residents have signed up through Wayne County Community College for the programs, according to Debbie Fiedler from WCCC.

Cutting six hours daily out of College Cable to accommodate M-Star on Channel 19 could hurt enrollment in the credit and non-credit college classes, Ms. Fiedler said.

"What we find is that the fewer viewing times available, the fewer students that are able to participate in the program," she said. "We see the enrollment decline when there are fewer times for repeating tele-courses."

M-Star is paid for through a grant received by the regional educational media center of the Wayne County Intermediate School District from the state education department. The state agency provided $280,000 to buy CEN programs for 10 months beginning last October and continuing through June, according to Dennis Brier of the intermediate school district.

Unlike locally produced programs, CEN is professional, high quality programming on a par with Nova, Brier said. The Public Broadcasting System, to which WTVS belongs, carries some CEN-produced programming.

The programs are meant to supplement teachers, not replace them, Brier said. Guides are available to help teachers work programs into the curriculum.

Schools have one year "recordability rights," Brier said. If a show is on at an inopportune time, it may be taped and stored for rebroadcast but must be destroyed after a year.

Countywide, seven of the 35 school districts are ready to begin receiving the programming through their local cable company, Brier said.

The CEN signal is picked up by an Archdiocese of Detroit satellite dish and rebroadcast to cable operators. Antennas to aid companies to pick up the signal were purchased through a volume bid by the intermediate school district for about $233 a piece, Brier said.

At last month's meeting, the cable advisory board decided to investigate what equipment was needed. It may cost the company

$3,500 to pick up the signal, Rickel said.

Grosse Pointe Cable needs to buy a "tunable modulator" to change the frequency of the M-Star signal so it may be rebroadcast, Rickel said.

Who's going to pay for the extra equipment remains unanswered. Rickel said the cable company would consider paying half the bill. School officials aren't commenting on what they will do.

It is hoped local school districts and cable companies can reach agreements on purchase of the extra equipment, Brier said.

Since the space has already been allocated, the company can begin sending out the signal as soon as the equipment is purchased, Rickel said.

Persons wishing to renew membership and those interested in joining the chapter are reminded to bring their national AARP membership card to the meeting.

Why the New Orleans lawmakers differed in their interpretations of teeth is unknown, but they made it simple assault to bite a person with real teeth and aggravated assault to bite a person with false teeth.

University Liggett Middle School students welcomed Ted Whitley, the newly appointed headmaster, at an informal reception Monday.

ULS names new headmaster

The Board of Trustees of University Liggett School has appointed John Theodore (Ted) Whitley as the school's new headmaster. Whitley, who is currently the headmaster of the Catlin Gabel School in Portland, Ore., will assume his new position July 1.

His selection is the result of a search that began when former headmaster Ray Robbins announced his June 1984 retirement.

Born in Austin, Texas, Whitley graduated from Harvard College with a bachelor of arts degree in history in 1955. He also earned a master of education degree from the Harvard Graduate School of Education in 1967.

A holder of an NROTC scholarship while an undergraduate at Harvard, Whitley was captain of the varsity swimming team during his senior year.

After three years in the Marine Corps as a first lieutenant, he accepted a position on the faculty of The Hill School in Pottstown, Pa., where he taught history, coached varsity swimming and cross country, and served on the Admissions Committee.

In 1962, he received the first of two calls from St. Mark's School in Dallas. For four years he served as chairman of the history department and as coach of varsity swimming. From 1966 to 1969 he performed the same duties at Albuquerque Academy in New Mexico. In 1969 he was asked to return to St. Mark's as its headmaster, a position he held for 13 years.

Ruth Glancy, president of the board of trustees, said, "Ted takes justifiable pride in some of the more visible accomplishments at his previous schools. However, he gains his greatest satisfaction from the relationships he was able to build with faculty and students and from the educational leadership he was able to provide to already well established institutions. We are satisfied that he will bring the same skills and the same goals to University Liggett School."

ULS is the oldest independent college preparatory school in Michigan. It serves approximately 900 students from pre-kindergarten through high school from more than 26 communities in the metropolitan Detroit area.

Good employees keep city operating

By Harriet Nolan

Dealing with the public every day is no easy task, but three Grosse Pointe Park employees are doing the job right, according to their bosses.

"She's my right arm," says City manager John Crawford of Erma Nyiri, his executive secretary. "She expedites services to residents and doesn't burden me with a lot of details."

Crawford says Miss Nyiri is top-notch in dealing with council members, various boards and commissions and residents. She's also responsible for recording lengthy bi-monthly council meetings, making many small city purchases, such as fire hydrants and attending to all of the details that make retirement parties memorable occasions.

One of the more difficult jobs Miss Nyiri has is keeping residents, who are anxious to get a spot at the park marina, satisfied. She says "some get real upset when they can't get a boat well."

"One man felt so guilty calling me all the time about a well, that he apologized and sent me flowers," she says.

Being a 19-year veteran with administration, she's seen a lot of people come and go including having council meetings shifted from 5 p.m. to evening sessions so more people could attend.

"All of the administrators and mayors have been great," says Miss Nyiri. "While each may present things differently, they're all tough and put in good performances to get the job done."

She's also noticed a trend toward residents taking a more active part in government decisions.

"People are talking about public safety now and they've also formed recreation and beautification committees," says Miss Nyiri.

"Keeping up property values is big here and people realize we have a lot of services, including our parks and marinas, and they want to live here," she adds.

Notifying people of the cost to live in this upscale community is the job of Pam Kondziolka, it's city treasurer. Her department oversees tax and water bills, voter registration and permits.

"She takes on all responsibility and then some," says Nunzio Ortisi, comptroller. "She's indispensable."

While Mrs. Kondziolka has only been with the Park about six years, she's no newcomer to city government, having begun as a co-op student in high school in Centerline. It was there she first met City Manager Crawford, then one of its administrators.

Marriage, children and a job move kept her career fluctuating until she accepted a job as secretary to the Park administrative assistant. She was promoted to administrative assistant a short time later and then treasurer.

She, too, has seen an awareness among citizens to increases in taxes and water bills and says "When there is an increase in their pocketbook, they're apt to call."

One of the hardest jobs, however, belongs to Stella Esperti, a tiny lady with a big smile and a dry sense of humor.

"She has a tough job, but is a great representative with people on the street who are in a complaining mood," says Henry Coonce, police chief.

As a meter maid, Mrs. Esperti is out in wind, rain or snow checking expired parking meters and chalking tires to make sure drivers haven't overstayed their parking limit.

She says she writes about 30 tickets a day and also serves as a crossing guard for kids at the corner of Jefferson and Beaconsfield.

"It's not easy giving out tickets," says Mrs. Esperti. "Sometimes people say God will punish me or say since they've lived in the Park 35 years, they shouldn't get a ticket."

But she plays no favorites. Park Mayor Palmer Heenan, City Manager Crawford and ever her husband have made her list. She does admit that a recent ticket to a 95-year-old man left her speechless, a rarity.

"I look at it that it's my job," says Mrs. Esperti. "Most of the time I just let them talk when they're mad."

"This morning I had to brush snow off a windshield and license plate to get all the information to write a ticket. After I finished, the owner came out and thanked me and said it was worth the $2 charge."

"In this weather, it would be worth $2 to me, too," she adds.

Taking time out from Grosse Pointe Park administrative duties are, from left, Pam Kondziolka, city treasurer; Stella Esperti, meter maid; and Erma Nyiri, executive secretary to the city manager.

Shores changes permit procedures

Recent appeals have forced the Shores to change some of its procedures for issuing building permits.

Under recently enacted rules, contractors or builders will be asked to sign a form saying they are aware of all ordinances pertaining to the construction when building permits are issued. Those who don't know the provisions may obtain copies of the ordinances.

When the village building inspector sees a non-conforming structure under construction, he will red-tag the work, halting construction. The builder will then be required to appear in municipal court to answer the ordinance violation before requesting a variance from any zoning ordinance, village officials said.

Appellants have come before the village's planning commission and zoning board of appeals to request variances after construction has been completed, saying they were unaware of ordinances governing their type of construction, village officials said. The recently enacted procedures will change that.

Fun run approved

At their regularly scheduled meeting Monday evening, Feb. 4, the Woods council unanimously voted to approve the seventh annual Grosse Pointe Fun Run.

The date for this year's run is Saturday, Sept. 28. The 6.2-mile event is sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association, Mack Avenue Inc.

Shores residents get more lakeshore

Some Shores residents have taken the first step to gaining deed over land that has formed beyond their breakwalls, caused by accumulated silt and sand.

The Shores council voted 6-0 to approve the form of application made by Lakeshore homeowners Robert Songe, Bernard Mullins and trustee Robert Roney to the state Department of Natural Resources for conveyance of submerged lake land bottoms. Roney didn't vote on the matter.

The land in question has been built up above the lake's high water mark over many years. The property is now almost always above water and has sprouted grass that fixes it in place, Roney said.

The application for deed over the emerging property will give them the right to clean, grade and maintain the property, the residents said. The property in summer is a health hazard as well as an eyesore, they added.

The land has been formed over the past years because prevailing winds on the lake have pushed the water against a breakwall south of the affected properties, causing silt and sand borne in the water to drop to the bottom, Roney said.

Twenty years ago, Roney made application to get deed over 30 to 40 feet of land that had formed beyond the breakwall. Now, the property extends almost 100 feet into the lake, according to the Village.

Homeowners in the same area will also be affected in coming years as silt and sand accumulate to form more land, Roney said.

If the three gain title over the land, they will have to pay property taxes on it, village officials said.

Farms robber strikes again

Grosse Pointe Farms police suspect the person who robbed a customer at the National Bank of Detroit automatic teller booth at 7 Mile and Mack on Feb. 2 may be the same one involved in two similar holdups.

The victim, who was unhurt, told police a man brandishing a two-inch snub-nose revolver demanded his wallet as he left the teller booth at 6:30 p.m. Instead, the man offered him about $85 in cash which the robber took.

The Farms resident told police he then returned to the teller booth to tell the next customer what had happened. When they looked back the robber was attempting to get into the second customer's car.

Unable to get inside, he was last seen running into the Pointe Plaza Shopping Center at 7 Mile and Mack.

Police described the thief as a black male between 25 and 30 years old, of medium build and over six feet tall with Jeri-curl hair. He was wearing dark clothes, green leather high-top boots and a hooded sweatshirt under his coat.

Alcoholism council plans survey

The National Council of Alcoholism, Michigan Division, is attempting to identify parent, student and community groups currently involved in substance abuse education and prevention efforts in their communities. NCA/Michigan will provide assistance to these groups to support a network of strong, viable volunteer organizations throughout the state.

Volunteer groups will be asked to participate in a survey to determine their needs for training, information and networking. Professionals and providers will also also be surveyed to determine the resources they can provide to volunteer groups.

Information from both surveys will be made available through NCA/Michigan. In addition, results of the surveys will guide the agenda for Volunteer Resource Development conferences to be held in four areas of the state in the fall of 1985.

In February, requests for proposals for community education/prevention projects will be solicited from volunteer groups. A limited number of these grants will be awarded for specific projects.

Volunteer groups wishing to receive additional information can call NCA/Michigan at (517) 337-8417 or 1-800-344-3400, or write NCA/Michigan at 1405 South Harrison Road, Suite 308, East Lansing, Mich. 48823.

applied those names to their opponents and their own players. If a home boy screwed up, he became a mashed potato, or worse.

As usual, my rubber magnet was working perfectly that night and a puck soon whistled by within a foot of my head. I just watched it bounce off a wall. If it isn't a direct hit anymore, I don't even flinch.

The puck fell at my feet and every kid within 70 feet was pleading with me in French. I tossed it to one group of boys who bobbed it, then let it fall back at my feet.

As I bent over, I felt a cold liquid hit my back. A cup of Coke had been knocked over in the ensuing scramble. This time I threw it about 20 rows up. I was a sodden hero to them all.

Anyhow, the Canadiens won 4-2. Jimmy had a good night, scoring a goal and an assist. He's now within nine points of breaking the club record set by Mario Lemieux. Lemieux was the number one draft pick of the NHL in 1984 and now skates for the Pittsburgh Penguins.

After the game, Carson joined family and friends for a post-game meal. As he left the arena, he received handshakes, pats on the back and even signed a few autographs.

"Boy, they really love the game here," he said, crunching through the snow. "I'd rather be called a 'pov-yay' here than anywhere else on ice."

A winner . . .

before selecting 10 to be published. These are in addition to another 80 manuscripts culled by her and two review aides.

"The manuscripts are submitted by teachers from all over the country," she said. "The hardest part of the job is writing rejection letters, but it has to be done."

She and husband Gary live in New Baltimore. He's employed as a school counselor in Anchor Bay. They have two sons, Eric, 11, and Greg, 6.

"I sometimes work as a ghost-writer and have assisted three Nobel Prize winners," Mrs. Textley said. "Sometimes I'll receive a call at home and my 11-year-old will answer the phone, then call me. When I finish I ask him 'Did you know you just talked with the man who discovered Plutonium?' It never fails to impress them."

Mrs. Textley was busy helping two ULS students prepare science projects they hope to propose to NASA for inclusion on an upcoming space shuttle flight.

Besides winning presidential awards, editing magazines, teaching science and math and proposing projects to NASA, are there any other plans on Dr. Textley's horizon?

"Please, please just don't ask me to be the first science teacher in space," she laughed. "I'm so afraid of heights, I just couldn't stand it."

Advanced ultrasound

An advanced ultrasound machine that can diagnose certain internal organ abnormalities has been installed at St. John Hospital. Only three such units are available in southeastern Michigan and this is the first on the eastern side of the Detroit metropolitan area. Karen Hutton-Motter, above, radiology technologist, scans the seven-month-old fetus of patient Fran Schmitt with the new equipment, which provides an image so clear, non-medical people can look at the screen and recognize what they're seeing, according to Dr. Vjeko Mikelic, radiologist at the hospital.

Headaches

Grosse Pointe Woods
Chiropractic Clinic
881-7677

Q. Can you help my wife with her migraine headaches?
A. Headaches can vary in intensity and location. There can be many causes of headaches including eye strain, digestive trouble, elimination problems, kidney and heart trouble, meningitis and low blood sugar.

One of the more common causes of headaches is misalignment and improper function of the spinal vertebrae (bones), resulting in nerve cord pressure. Unfortunately many people have overlooked the benefits of chiropractic treatment. The Doctor of Chiropractic will correct the nerve pressure that exists and relieve the chronic headaches thus eliminating the underlying cause of the problem.

Brought to you as a community service by Dr. David Jantz. If you have any further questions call or write the clinic, Grosse Pte. Wds. Chiropractic Clinic, 20217 Mack GPW, phone 881-7677. All insurances accepted.

From Another Pointe Of View

By Janet Mueller

If you can't wait for the flowers that bloom in the spring, a visit to Jacobson's Store for the Home next Thursday, Feb. 14, may help to get you through winter's remaining weeks. The Garden Club of Michigan's Flower Show will be blooming throughout the Store for the Home in-the-Village on Valentine's Day, from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Actually, the Flower Show will begin blooming Wednesday evening, at an invitational 6 to 8 p.m. Sponsors Preview. Co-hostesses are Mrs. Charles B. Begg Jr., Mrs. John O. Hastings, Mrs. James W. Grace, Mrs. Gordon A. Weller, Mrs. David M. Bogle, Mrs. Thomas H. Jeffs II, Mrs. William Y. Gard, Mrs. J. Otis Wardwell, Mrs. J. Boyer Candler and Mrs. Henry B. Kinzie.

Mrs. F. Lewis Barroll is general chairman of the project, which will feature displays in two divisions: Artistic Arrangement and Horticulture. Mrs. William S. Hickey and Mrs. Lloyd A. Semple are horticulture chairmen. Mrs. E. Scott Rumely is conservation chairman. Mrs. Peter P. Thurber is in charge of hostesses, Mrs. Richard H. Turner of judges. Mrs. Hastings heads the passing committee. Mrs. Marcus W. Smith is responsible for registration, Mrs. Francis W. McMillan II for photography.

The Garden Club of Michigan is a member of The Garden Club of America, founded by 12 clubs in 1913, now comprised of 185 clubs, with over 14,000 members, in 38 states and the District of Columbia. Its purposes are to stimulate the knowledge and love of gardening; to share the advantages of association by means of open meetings, conferences, correspondence and publications; and to restore, improve and protect the quality of the environment through programs and action in the fields of conservation, civic improvement and education.

The Garden Club of America does this by awarding fellowships and medals, including an Interchange Fellowship in Horticulture, administered jointly with the English-Speaking Union, which provides one academic year of graduate work in landscape architecture, horticulture or botany for an English and an American student.

Garden Club of America civic improvement projects range from a 5,130-acre Redwood Grove in California to vest pocket parks. Its educational programs include "The World Around Us" packet used by teachers and students. Its services and information to members range from the GCA Bulletin to the GCA Water Project, a three-year program to raise the level of awareness on critical water issues.

'Pens for Peace' is AAUW project

SHEILA OSANN (seated, right), chairperson of the Grosse Pointe Branch of the American Association of University Women's "Pens for Peace" essay writing contest for seventh and eighth grade students in the Grosse Pointe School District, meets with her committee to ready "Pens for Peace" brochures, instruction sheets and resource packets for distribution. Committee members are (left to right) BARBARA MARKUS, CHRIS CRAMER, KAY FULLER and ANN NICHOLSON. The contest is open to public, private and parochial school students. The project is made possible by an Issue Implementation Grant from the Educational Foundation of the AAUW.

"The purpose of this contest," says Sheila, "is to stimulate young people to examine the issue of peace and how it relates to them. Students will be encouraged to change their perception of peace as dull and passive, of war as dramatic and exciting," continues Mrs. Osann, a former teacher who is presently a consultant for conferences and education for the Engineering Society of Detroit.

Participants are invited to develop, in 500 words or less, one of three major themes: "Peace: Its Meaning," "Women in History: Peacemakers in Their Time" or "Resolving Conflicts Peacefully Rather than Violently." Each essay will be judged on creative expression, feelings and emotions, use of research, structure and basic language skills. The top three winners in the seventh and the eighth grades will receive a cash prize and a plaque, presented at a special recognition ceremony to which parents and school representatives will be invited.

Five honorable mention certificates will also be given in each grade level, and schools with first place winners will receive specially-engraved school plaques. All entries must be submitted by the school, rather than by the individual contestant. Deadline for entries is March 15, 1985.

A Valentine for Fine Arts in February

Fine Arts Society of Detroit will feature a Valentine this month: the tender comedy "Rich Is Better," presented on The Players' Playhouse stage tomorrow, Friday, Feb. 8, and Saturday, Feb. 9, for Fine Arts' members and their guests.

It's a tale of love, and of marital devotion that is nearly wrecked by a series of humorous incidents stemming from well-meaning white lies and Italian exuberance and cuisine. Barry Trombley, Maureen Bruce, Annette Balian and Kevin Krease comprise the four-person cast.

Producers are Dorothy and Bill Ludwig. Fine Arts President Steve Shrader is doubling as aide to director Ken Kurtz and as stage manager. Susan and Bill Ouelette, assisted by Tom Schulte, are doing the set and set dressing. Lighting is by Bob Davis, sound by Art Gohle.

Mildred Avedisian and Gail Weber are in charge of make-up. Yolanda Turner, responsible for costumes, is also assisting Pearl Linder with Program Notes. Props are being handled by Carole and Aaron Drucker. Sally Van Deventer and Aileen Kurtz, who has also done publicity for the Valentine production. Martha Ann Kurtz did the publicity photo and rehearsal slides.

Dorothea and Ross Bush are in charge of reservations. Friday evening receptionists will be Alger Sheldon Jr. and Gail and Bob Weber. Ken and Aileen Kurtz, Art and Norma Gohle and Muriel and Jerry Stoetzer will greet the Saturday evening audience.

The evenings begin with music, arranged by Mel Stander, and will conclude with more of the same for dancing after a post-play "Night at the Opera" presented by Joe Maniscalco

and Company. Fine Arts' Gourmet Group will serve a light supper.

And there's still another treat in store for the "Rich Is Better" audience: an Artistry in Glass exhibit in the Founders' Room of The Playhouse, located on East Jefferson Avenue. This collection of hand-crafted glass objects created during the past century shows the infinite range of possibilities the medium offers. It is exhibited by the Lafer Family, with the cooperation of Jacobson's.

Fine Arts celebrated Christmas in its traditional manner, at a dinner-dance held on Dec. 14 at the Grosse Pointe Club. Rae and Don Kuhn chaired the elegant affair. Their party committee consisted of Maureen Bruce, Johanna and Ed Hoot, Aileen and Ken Kurtz, Amy and Eric Ryberg, Gail and Bob Weber, Marilyn Whims and Christine Young.

The Society's first function of the New Year was a revival of the Fine Arts Auction, on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 27, at the Old Place. This event, sponsored by the Special Activities Committee, headed by Susan and Terry Davis, as a means of supplementing Fine Arts' budget in a very pleasant way, was monetarily successful — and great good fun. Ken Kurtz served as auctioneer. Reservations were taken by Marge and Diamond Phillips.

Miss Worrell speaks vows

Christ Church, Grosse Pointe, was the setting for the wedding of Cynthia Clare Worrell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Calier Hood Worrell, of Stratford Place, and Joseph Albin Slajus III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Albin Slajus II, of Grand Haven.

Presiding at the 11 o'clock rites Saturday, September 1, was The Reverend Bryant Dennison. The Scripture Lessons were read by Susan Slajus, the bridegroom's sister, and Lieutenant Robert W. Worrell USN, the bride's brother. Frederick DeHaven, Christ Church organist and choirmaster, provided the organ music.

Prelude was the Fugue in G Major by J.S. Bach. Processional and Recessional were the Trumpet Voluntary in C and Trumpet Tune and Peal, respectively, both by Henry Purcell.

The morning rites were followed by a reception at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club, after which the newlyweds left to vacation in the Grand Traverse Bay area of Northern Michigan. They are at home in Grosse Pointe.

The bride wore a short-sleeved gown of white silk taffeta, trimmed with white silk roses at its sweetheart neckline, hem and chapel length train. Her French tulle veil fell from a circlet of matching roses trimmed with seed pearls. She carried an arrangement of white roses, stephanotis, baby's-breath and ivy.

Honor attendant Laura Klein, of Calvin Avenue, in a floor length dress of pale pink taffeta styled to match the bride's gown, carried a nosegay of pink and white roses, stephanotis, baby's-breath and ivy.

Bridesmaids, dressed identically and carrying identical bouquets, were Jennifer and Susan Slajus, the bridegroom's sisters, and two college friends of the bride, Karol Krohn, of Plymouth, Ind., and Molly McGill, of Chicago, Ill.

Flower girls were the bride's nieces, Allison B. Worrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Worrell, of Nottingham Road, and Erica L. Worrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calier L. Worrell, of Saginaw.

They wore short, pale pink dresses, smocked in white, and carried white wicker baskets filled with pink and white Sweetheart roses. Wreaths of baby's-breath and pink Sweetheart roses were pinned in their hair.

Best man was Brett Conway, of Ann Arbor. Ushers were the bridegroom's brothers, Christopher, Paul and Steve Slajus, all of Grand Haven, and Scott Slajus, of Denver, Col. The bride's brothers, Calier L. Worrell and Lee M. Worrell, also seated guests.

The mother of the bride wore an afternoon length dress of periwinkle blue silk. The bridegroom's mother also selected an afternoon length dress, slate blue in color, with a matching jacket.

Mrs. John F. Ball, of Beaconsfield Avenue, maternal grandmother of the bride, wore a lavender silk dress with a matching jacket. Mrs. Francis Ivanowski, of Carney, the bridegroom's paternal grandmother, selected a dress of pink chiffon. The mothers and grandmothers all wore corsages of gardenias and white Sweetheart roses.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Robert W. Worrell, who came with

Spring, and that sets you Thinking Spring Fashions (I don't know about you, but along about this time of year, just looking at wool makes me itch), you might want to check out the Historic Memorials Society in Detroit's George Washington Luncheon and Fashion Show.

It's set for noon Friday, Feb. 22, at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, and will feature spring fashions by Walton-Pierce, modeled to the melodies of pianist Freddie Paxton. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. George F. Ryckman, president of the Society in its 94th year, or Mrs. John N. Makara. Reservations may be made through Monday, Feb. 18, with Mrs. John A. Pamer, 882-7879.

Mrs. Heyward J. Knighton is fashion show chairman. Mrs. Walter Frenz is in charge of decorations. There will be prizes, of course, along with the luncheon and fashion fun and the feeling of satisfaction that comes from knowing that funds raised from the fun you're having go to a good cause. The Society gives support to Moross House, the Detroit Historical Museum, the White House on Belle Isle and the Detroit Public Library's Burton Historical Collection.

Antique Show to Benefit Choir Trip

Looking beyond the first flowers that bloom in the you-know-what, be advised that on Saturday, June 1, and Sunday, June 2, an antique show — the first significant one in Grosse Pointe in five years — will be held in the gymnasium of Grosse Pointe South High School. It's expected to draw 50 major dealers from Michigan and other states around the country.

The show is a benefit for the Christ Church, Grosse Pointe, Choir of Men and Boys, invited to sing in France and England in June and July. The Christ Church Choir's first stop will be Paris the weekend of Bastille Day. Continuing on to England, the Choir has been invited to appear at Westminster Abbey, York and Canterbury Cathedrals.

Conservation Summer School at Higgins Lake

Moving on from spring into summer, note that plans are being made for the 1985 summer sessions at the Ralph A. MacMullen Conservation School on the north shore of Higgins Lake. Four one-week programs, designed to give participants an understanding of environmental problems statewide and to provide them with the tools for teaching environmental education, will be offered.

The sessions will be coordinated by personnel from the Department of Natural Resources and staff from six state universities. The courses, which may be taken on a credit or non-credit basis, combine classroom work with field study, data gathering and analysis, all with an emphasis on group study. There is free time daily, for students to spend in the library, at the beach... wherever.

The Grosse Pointe Garden Club council serves as a coordinator between available Higgins Lake Conservation School scholarships subsidized by local garden clubs and applicants for those scholarships. Teachers, community and Scout leaders and persons interested in environmental education are urged to apply. Mrs. Kenneth Stekette, 881-7988, may be contacted for information regarding course descriptions, registration and scholarship availability.

Han Suyin to Talk at Pointe War Memorial

Dr. Han is an expert on her native China. She has written more than 20 books depicting its spirit and policy, from the start of the 20th century to Mao's death in 1976. Practicing medicine by day, she wrote books by night. In addition to "Love Is a Many-Splendored Thing," her published works include "And The Rain My Drink," about the guerilla war in Malaya; "The Mountain Is Young," a love story set in Nepal and India; "Winter Love," "The Crippled Tree," "A Mortal Flower," "Birdless Summer," "Till Morning Comes" and "My House Has Two Doors."

Tune in today to Marathon airing for DSO

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra-WQRS Radio Marathon 1985 is underway, and will be broadcast daily from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. through Sunday, Feb. 10, from the Masonic Temple studios of WQRS Timeless FM 105.

The Marathon, a community project to raise funds for the DSO's Youth Education and Outreach Programs, is co-sponsored by the Detroit Symphony League and the Women's Association for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. It features live entertainment and celebrity interviews, a celebrity phone bank, musical selections by DSO musicians and a live auction.

Among this year's special premiums, available via telephone pledges (833-2400) throughout the Marathon, are copies of the Detroit Symphony League Cookbook, photographed by Maestro Gunther. Herbig, music director of the DSO.

The cookbooks are offered for a Marathon pledge of $25. They contain directions for such delicious dishes as the following MUSHROOM-BARLEY SOUP, contributed by Diana Wise, who advises serving it with a crisp green salad and crusty French bread.

INGREDIENTS

1 lb. fresh mushrooms, rinsed and drained
6 Tbsp. butter, divided
1 cup chopped onions
1 clove garlic, minced
3 cups strong beef broth
1 1/2 quarts water
3 Tbsp. tomato paste
1 tsp. salt
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
1 bay leaf
1/2 cup barley
1/4 cup chopped parsley
1 1/2 cups chopped celery with leaves
1 1/2 cups chopped carrots
1/4 cup dry Sherry or Port wine
1 pint sour cream

Chop half the mushrooms and slice remaining half pound. In a large saucepan, melt 4 Tbsp. butter. Add the chopped mushrooms, the onion and garlic and saute until onions are soft and transparent. Stir in broth, water, tomato paste, salt, pepper and bay leaf. Heat to boiling; stir in the barley. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer over low heat for 1 hour.

Add the parsley, celery and carrots. Cook, covered, for 30 minutes longer, or until the carrots are tender and the barley is cooked. In a medium skillet, heat the remaining 2 Tbsp. butter. Add the reserved mushroom slices and saute for 5 minutes. Add mushrooms and sherry to the kettle.

When ready to serve, ladle into large bowls and serve with a dollop of sour cream. Serves 8.

Hawaiian trip for Mantays

At home in Northville are Mr. and Mrs. Dale Robert Mantay, who vacationed in Hawaii following their Saturday, November 24, wedding in Our Lady of Victory Church, Northville, and a reception at Meadowbrook Country Club.

Father Donald Veffese, S.J., presided at the 7 o'clock candlelight rites for which the bride, the former Julie Lelia O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E.G. O'Brien, of Northville, chose a Renaissance style gown of white brocade, its fitted bodice featuring off-the-shoulder, puffed sleeves, its skirt extending into a chapel train.

Her illusion veil fell from a pouff headpiece fashioned of antique, handmade Venetian lace purchased by her mother last summer at St. Mark's Square in Venice. She wore diamond earrings, the bridegroom's gift, and carried an arrangement of dendrobium and cattleya orchids with bridal white roses.

Judi Pejisa, honor attendant for her sister, and bridesmaids Gail Harvey, Sandra Merrill, Denise Paciotti and Louise O'Brien, the bride's sister-in-law, wore waltz length dresses of ivory silk. Flower girl Emily Thompson, the bridegroom's niece, wore a short dress of ivory lace and organza.

Thomas Bommarito acted as best man for the bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Mantay, of Harper Woods. Groomsmen were Albert Ellis, Gary Klink, E. Gerald O'Brien II and Mark Ortman. Ushers were James O'Brien and David Pejisa, who also gave readings during the nuptial mass.

Organist was David Heinzman. Soloists were Beth Jones and John Meddaugh, grand-uncle of the bride, who has sung at family weddings for 50 years.

The new Mrs. Mantay, a graduate of the University of Michigan-Dearborn, is in the sales department of Digital Computer Corporation in Novi. The bridegroom, a Western Michigan University graduate, is a building and wood products industry manufacturer's representative.

Mr. and Mrs. Dale R. Mantay

Celebrity Kiss Print Auction benefit slated

The Myasthenia Gravis Association and WNIC-FM Radio are joining forces to make Valentine's Day extra-special this year for metropolitan area residents — with the assistance of national and local celebrity kisses.

A Celebrity Kiss Print Auction starting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 14, at the Oakland Mall, with Steve Gannon, Jim Harper and Ricki Nederlander serving as guest auctioneers, has been designed to promote public awareness of the incurable neuromuscular disease resulting from a lack of communication between nerves and muscles, and to serve as an MGA fund raising benefit.

Over 1,000 requests for kiss prints and autographs were mailed to celebrities in every field: sports to business, entertainment to politics. They were asked to apply lipstick and kiss the enclosed card, sign it and return it to be matted and sold to the highest bidder in either the on-going silent bid auction, running in conjunction with a Feb. 9 through 14 Kiss Print display at Oakland Mall, or the live auction on the evening of the 14th.

Among those who have already sent in their Kiss Prints are Tony Randall, Joan Collins, Ann Margret, Wilt Chamberlain, Ann Jillian, Lee Trevino, Steve Garvey and Mary Lou Retton.

During the Kiss Print display, people can submit silent bids on individual prints. The highest bid at each day's conclusion will be posted the following day, and the bidding will continue from that price. Updates on the bids will be reported on WNIC's "Harper-Gannon and You" morning show.

Other items, including photographs, record albums, Detroit Pistons and dinner theater tickets and a large, chocolate Kiss, will go up for bids along with the prints at the live auction. All proceeds benefit the MGA which provides a multitude of services, ranging from patient education and support groups to a monthly newsletter to financial assistance for patients and support of Myasthenia Gravis research.

Myasthenia Gravis strikes men, women and children of all ages and races. It is frequently misdiagnosed. Breathing, chewing, focusing, swallowing, walking, grasping or speaking become impossible in Myasthenia Gravis patients without medication.

There is no cure, however proper treatment enables many patients, although disabled, to live limited but fuller lives. Untreated, Myasthenia Gravis can be fatal.

A challenging Theatre Arts double bill

Members of the Theatre Arts Club enjoy challenges. For their second performance of the 1984-85 season, on Friday, Feb. 15, at The Players Playhouse on East Jefferson Avenue, director Sharon Conti will present two one-act plays — each with the same cast, including herself as a last-minute replacement.

The double-duty actresses are Julia Keim, Joann Koch and Sally Jay, augmented by Mary Belanger and Amy Adam in one of the plays. Holding script for both is Maggie Johnson.

In between the two plays, "The Bell" and "Apple Pie," The Variations, a singing group, will present "Musical Slices of Life." Members of The Variations are Dorothy Allison, Mary Belanger, Ann Diebel, Irene Gracey, Monica Locke, Cindy Pangborn, Karen Quarstrom, Trudie Rhoades, Rita Stormes and Johanna Gilbert, with Audrey Jennings as accompanist.

Producer Rosemary Hastings will be checking on all the backstage preparations before the afternoon performance, including properties, under the direction of Lillian Forrest, Nancy Mizer, Kathy Billotti and Doris Erickson, and costumes, created by Mary Krueger and Betty Kackley.

Margaret Lindner is in charge of sound effects, Lynn Turner of lighting, Kathy Phillips and Mary Blain are doing make-up. Hostesses for dress rehearsals Tuesday and Thursday are Polly Weckler, Nancy Kosinski, Jean Johnson Lackey, Mary Louise Moser, Amy Adam, Yolanda Turner and Susan Kearney.

Ushers will be Polly Weckler and Winifred Longley. The committee planning the post-performance tea at The Players, when members of the all-woman drama group and their guests meet and mingle with the cast, is headed by Mary Ann Ort. Her assistants are Priscilla Schaupeter, Louise Dexter and Shirley Worthman.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a DSO Overture Series

Accardo, orchestral performer, recitalist, recording artist and competition winner, has a massive repertoire and performs in cities throughout the world. The concerts will open with the DSO performing Haydn's Symphony No. 35 in B-flat Major. The second half of the program, following Accardo's performance of the Stravinsky Violin Concerto, is comprised of Mexican composer Silvestre Revueltas' "Sensemaya" and the Suite No. 2 from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe."

Atherton, music director of the San Diego Symphony, completes his two-week engagement with the DSO at these concerts.

Install Church Women's new 1985 officers

The Women's Association of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church held its installation of 1985 executive board officers in mid-January, in Memorial Church's Barbour Chapel. Presiding at the installation was Catherine Vernon, wife of the late Reverend Harold Vernon, of Detroit's Trumbull Avenue Presbyterian Church. Communion was served by Memorial Church's new Senior Pastor, The Reverend LOUIS J. PRUES II (pictured above) flanked by outgoing Women's Association President MARY GRACE ADAMS, at left, and incoming President ANN HATHAWAY, right, and The Reverend Stanton R. Wilson, President Hathaway's first and second vice-presidents, respectively, are Ruth Collins and Julia Keim.

Among exhibitors in the Northern Michigan University Senior Art Exhibit held on the campus Nov. 26 through Dec. 14 was Julie Backman, daughter of Ignatius Backman, of Moross Road. Julie is a design major at NMU.

Honor Marilyn for volunteer's Heart of Gold

Grosse Pointe Shores resident Marilyn (Mrs. C. Bradford Jr.) Lundy was honored for outstanding volunteerism last Tuesday, Feb. 5, at the United Foundation's 18th Annual Heart of Gold Luncheon at Cobo Hall.

She and 11 other metropolitan area volunteers received gold heart-shaped charms bearing the "Spirit of Detroit" emblem, in recognition of their voluntary services performed through cultural and civic activities. They were congratulated by UF President H. Clay Howell, Women for the United Foundation President Marilyn (Mrs. Henry M.) Domzalski, of The Pointe, and Richard P. Kughn, chairman of the Central Business District Association.

Approximately 1500 tri-county residents attended the event, co-sponsored by the Heart of Gold Award Council and Women for the United Foundation. Guest speaker was Shirley Eder, syndicated Hollywood gossip columnist for the Detroit Free Press and a regular on WXYZ-TV's "Good Afternoon Detroit."

Marilyn Lundy was nominated for her Heart of Gold by the League of Catholic Women of Detroit, of which she has served as president for 16 years. She also carries out LCW responsibilities normally handled by a chief operating officer, and is active on the boards of five LCW social service agencies.

She personally headed the renovation of Casgrain Hall, the former LCW residence for single men and women of limited means. The building was scheduled to be demolished — but Marilyn's work with the Michigan State Housing Authority resulted in Casgrain Hall's conversion to an apartment complex with subsidized rent for low-income elderly and handicapped. Casgrain Hall still houses the LCW offices.

Marilyn has also been directly involved in a number of outstanding programs in the fields of housing, child abuse and delinquency, for several different agencies. As a member of New Detroit's Public Safety and Justice Committee, she has worked with the police and community representatives to reduce crime and make the streets safer for residents.

She has served as national president of Citizens for Educational Freedom, and in that capacity has testified before congressional committees in Washington, D.C. She is a founding member of the Orchestra Place Development Corporation, a coalition of approximately 50 businesses, organizations and citizens' groups working to beautify that historic area of Detroit.

Heart of Gold's history stretches

MRS. C. BRADFORD LUNDY JR.

back to 1962, when the Women's Advertising Club of Detroit sponsored its first "Women Who Care" project to recognize volunteers. It was created because the highly successful "Salute to Women Who Work," sponsored by the Central Business District Association, recognized only employed women — and it was felt that both groups, employed and unemployed, contributed time and services to improve the quality of life for those less fortunate in the community, and should receive recognition for their efforts.

In 1965, the CBDA approached the UF for "Salute" sponsorship, since Women for the United Foundation had a large roster of volunteers who might assist in the project. It was suggested to the Women's Advertising Club that it, too, join forces, so that a meaningful project representing all woman volunteers could be organized.

An umbrella council consisting of representatives of 39 major women's organizations was formed in 1967, and a year of planning, during which the Heart of Gold Council was so named, followed. The Council's program and aim was and is:

• To recognize and honor those volunteers who live or work in the metropolitan Detroit area and who are unselfishly involved in programs for the betterment of the community.

• To have these volunteers receive general public acclaim and a symbolic Heart of Gold award at a luncheon to which all residents of the tri-county area are invited.

• To call attention to the importance of voluntary citizen participation in community affairs as a bulwark to the American way of life, and to encourage other prospective volunteers to take part in community affairs.

The first Heart of Gold awards went only to women, but in 1977 the nomination form was changed to read that "any person 18 years or older" is eligible to become a nominee. Both nominations from the public and those submitted through the umbrella council's organizations have always been welcome.

The nominations are screened and submitted to a panel of community leaders. Amount of time and personal effort involved, excellence of work accomplished, results of service in terms of people helped, amount of money raised and impact on the community are considered in the selection of six to 12 winners each year.

This year's judges included a pair of Pointe residents, Mrs. Wilber M. Brucker Jr. and William T. McCormick Jr. Another pair of Pointers, Mrs. Peter R. Fink and Mrs. Walter B. Fisher, served as screening and judging chairman and vice-chairman, respectively.

Elegant Eating

A selection of recipes from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol — and penny-wise — collection of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth featuring, this week, FINE FISH DISHES.

 FILET OF SOLE VERONIQUE
2 Tbsp. minced shallots or green onions
6 filets lemon or gray sole (about 2 lbs.)
Salt
Pepper
1½ cups dry white wine
1 Tbsp. lemon juice
Water
1 can seedless grapes (water packed - 16 oz.)
½ cup unsalted margarine
2 Tbsp. flour
½ cup evaporated skimmed milk

Sprinkle shallots or green onions over bottom of large, oiled, enameled or stainless steel skillet. Sprinkle filets with salt and pepper; fold in half; arrange in skillet (wide part to outer edge of skillet, pointed tail to center). Add wine, lemon juice and water to just cover fish. Cover with a circle of wax paper in which a small hole has been cut in the center. Bring liquid to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer 3 to 5 minutes, or until fish flakes easily.

Remove filets gently with spatula to serving platter (warmed). Add grapes to liquid in skillet. Simmer 2 to 3 minutes. Remove grapes with slotted spoon. Arrange over filets, or reserve to garnish finished dish.

Cook liquid left in skillet until reduced to about 1 cup. Melt 2 Tbsp. margarine in small saucepan; blend in flour. Stir into liquid in skillet, a small amount at a time. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add milk. Cool. Return to heat and bring to boiling. Add remaining margarine, a little at a time, rotating skillet to melt gradually. Drain platter. Spoon sauce over filets. Broil a few minutes to glaze. Serves 6.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

They take their hockey very seriously in Montreal.

Very seriously.

They name their streets after hockey players. They name their kids after hockey players. And when those kids aren't playing hockey or talking about hockey, they're thinking about it and reading about it.

And when they're done playing hockey in Montreal, they can coach hockey. Or become hockey broadcasters. Or open up a travel agency and travel the world as famous hockey players.

That's why I didn't mind spending 20 hours on a train last weekend coming to and from Montreal. See, I take hockey pretty seriously myself. I watch it, read about it, enjoy it when it's played properly. Not like some folks from Toronto do. I spent four hours on a train from Toronto to Montreal with a group of over-30 hockey hackers whose teeth were younger than they were and whose I.Q.'s probably didn't match their skate size. They thought they were serious about hockey, too, as they headed into Montreal to play their yearly match-up with a Quebec squad.

I'm sure they learned a lesson or two from the Montrealers. I'm just sorry I couldn't see it.

I was busy getting a couple of classes in serious hockey myself.

My first lesson came from a 16-year-old professor by the name of Jimmy Carson. He's a determined kid from Grosse Pointe Woods who's left his home, his buddies, his school and his family behind to take the first step toward a pro hockey career — playing junior hockey in Montreal. (His story is on Page 2 and 3C.)

I found Jimmy to be polite, witty, mature and absolutely crazy about hockey. At one point during our conversation, I asked him what he did for fun, when he wasn't playing hockey. He looked at me kind of strangely and told me he went over to the Montreal Forum to watch hockey. For fun. Of course. How silly of me.

And I did my best doubletake when Jimmy explained that he dealt with this major change in his life by saying: "Sure it's hard, but this is what I want. When I feel like I miss my home and my family, I remember what I'm up here working for."

Headly stuff for 16.

Sure, Jimmy is well-cared for and his outlook seems rosy. After all, he's an excellent hockey player with a bright future, quite likely as a pro. But he knows that it's also very possible that things might not turn out that way. Still, he's taking his shot. He's serious about hockey.

The day after I met Jimmy, I was introduced to his coach, former Montreal Canadiens' star Yvon Lambert. Lambert was a little grayer than I remembered him from watching him play on TV's Hockey Night in Canada all those years. And I didn't tell him that I used to get mad at him when he would sit next to teammate Guy LaPointe on the bench and laugh when the Canadiens would score an easy goal.

He was very patient and kind to his visitor from Grosse Pointe. He asked most of the questions. Where was I staying in Montreal? Did I like the city? Will I have a chance to see the sights? And where did I learn so much about hockey?

As a matter of fact, coach, I learned a lot more about the sport in two days in Montreal than I knew before. Like from Lambert, who talked with this female stranger about his own career and his hopes for the future.

"It's been a difficult year for me," he said. "It's not like when I coached in the minors. Those players are already pros, they have to play, to do what you say. In juniors, if you punish a kid he just laughs and says he'll go back to school."

"The kids today are spoiled. You have to have years of dedication to be a good hockey player. Many kids today don't have that. It makes it tough on the coach," Lambert said, shaking his head. "In Montreal, when I played, we had that dedication. That's why we were a great team. Where do you find that today?"

If you're a Montreal Junior Canadien like Jimmy Carson, you probably already have it. If you don't, you might look to North cagers slip, drop two straight games

By Bill Hoover
North High

North's varsity cagers let two games slip away from them last week. The first loss was on Jan. 29 to the Lakeview Huskies, 45-42, followed by an overtime loss to the Dearborn Pioneer's, 63-61.

The Huskies established a slow-paced tempo from the start, setting up half-court offenses and defenses while hitting their shots from the perimeter. At the end of the first quarter, Lakeview led 12-6.

The Norsemen opened the second half strong; and with 4:06 left in the quarter, Lakeview called a timeout with North trailing only 30-26. When play resumed, North took control on the boards; and with 1:45 left, Kevin Weidinger put North up 32-31 on a baseline jumper. The Norsemen scored twice more before the quarter's end, giving North a 36-31 lead.

North, which had the momentum going into the fourth quarter, slowed things up, enabling the Huskies to chew away at the lead in a halcourt game again. With 4:11 left in the fourth quarter, Lakeview knotted the score at 38-38. Both teams exchanged baskets. With under a minute to play, the score was tied at 42-42. Lakeview, which had the ball stolen, stole it right back and was fouled to prevent the easy layup. The Huskies missed the first foul shot but buried the second, putting Lakeview up 43-42. A missed jumper by the Norsemen and a pair of Lakeview free throws wrapped up the win for Lakeview and ended North's three-game win streak.

North was led by Weidinger, who scored 18 points and collected 10 rebounds. Art Szymanski added 10 points and three rebounds.

On Friday, Feb. 2, North traveled to Dearborn for a non-league game versus the Pioneers, losing 63-61 in overtime.

Szymanski led North with 30 points. Weidinger added 13 points and nine rebounds while Dan Kopitzke finished with 10 assists.

North's next game is Friday, Feb. 8, at South Lake. Tip-off is at 7:30 p.m.

North's JV cagers picked up two wins last week. One was a 45-40 victory over Lakeview on Jan. 29, the other a 40-36 triumph over Dearborn.

David "Little World" Justice led North versus Lakeview with 16 points while Tom Shehab collected 14 rebounds.

Justice led North again versus Dearborn with 23 points.

North's freshman basketball team was victorious in both of its games last week, defeating Lakeview, 52-38, on Jan. 29 and beating East Detroit Kelly, 74-62, on Feb. 2.

In the win over Lakeview, Steve "Little Art" Szymanski led North with 15 points. Steve Langs added 12 points while Todd "The Tower" Des-

University Liggett's basketball mark is 4-8

The University Liggett School varsity basketball team split two games last week to run its record to 4-8. The young team has been improving steadily. Coach Tony Gallaher feels, "This team is now ready to put together several wins in a row."

The Knights lost a tough game Tuesday, Jan. 29, when they traveled to Ann Arbor Greenhills. In the first meeting between the two teams, ULS lost by 29 points. However, this time ULS came out inspired, and was down only one, 13-12, at the end of the first quarter.

ULS continued to play well for the next six minutes, and trailed by three as the half approached. However, a loss of concentration by the Knights in the last two minutes allowed Greenhills to lead by seven at the half.

Ann Arbor increased its lead to 13 early in the third period, but ULS cut it to nine by the end of the quarter, where it stayed until the last few minutes of the game when the Knights were forced to start fouling intentionally to try to get back in the contest.

Captain Harold Colby paced the Knights with 15 points and 10 rebounds.

ULS bounced back three days later on Friday, Feb. 1, to secure a 67-55 win over Lutheran Northwest.

The score wasn't indicative of the total control the Knights had over the game, often leading by over 20. Coach Gallaher's Knights set the tone of the game early, by flying out to a 19-6 first quarter score, 30-15 at the half.

Surprisingly, ULS came out dead in the second half, not playing up to its ability. The Knights led 45-26 at the end of the third quarter and finished the game strongly.

ULS had a balanced scoring attack led by Colby and Brian David with 16 and 13 points, respectively. Junior Keith Calcagno had a season high 12 points.

ULS will play Friday, Feb. 8. (By John Travis)

Jimmy Carson — the Woods' best icer is breaking

By Peggy O'Connor

It's nearly 7:30 p.m. on Friday night, one-half hour before the Montreal Junior Canadiens are scheduled to play Trois-Rivieres and the Verdun Auditorium is only about one-half full.

The fact doesn't escape members of the Junior Canadiens' front office. Canadiens' public relations man Eric Taylor is walking nervously around the arena, checking last minute details and his associate Lyne Malboeuf is shaking her head and explaining the poor turnout to visitors from Grosse Pointe.

"Usually we have 3,000 people," Ms. Malboeuf says in her French-Canadian-accented English. "But the people might not want to come because the team is not doing very well. It has lost four games in a row and the people might not like that."

The Junior Canadiens' coach, Yvon Lambert, a former member of four Stanley Cup teams with Montreal, isn't too crazy about the losing streak himself. Fans discuss his two-day practices, his shifting of lines and his benching of different players in an effort to get the team moving. In the meantime, the gap between first-place Shawinigan and the Junior Canadiens doesn't get any smaller.

This night, one of the Junior Canadiens who will not be in uniform is Bill McKittrick, of Detroit. McKittrick, Jim Nesich and Jeff Smith are three of four Detroit-area players on the Junior Canadiens' roster. The other is Jimmy Carson.

Carson, 16, is from Grosse Pointe Woods. He began playing hockey in the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association at age 5 and for the next six years, collected hundreds of goals at the Grosse Pointe Community and McCann rinks while playing for the Blue Devils and Titans. After five seasons of travel hockey with Birmingham-based Computware travel team, Jimmy Carson finished his sophomore year at University Liggett School, packed his hockey gear and headed for Montreal.

He was the first draft pick in 1984 of the Junior Canadiens, who play in the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, a league which has produced hundreds of pros, including such outstanding hockey talent as NHLers Marcel Dionne, Guy Lafleur, Waterford-born Pat LaFontaine and the NHL's 1984 No. 1 draft choice, Mario Lemieux.

At 16, Jimmy Carson is playing in a league where players range from 17 to 20 and include a number of NHL draft picks who played a few games in the pros before being sent back to their junior teams to sharpen their skills. It's a league in which, until recent years, American players had little success even cracking a lineup.

It is a league which Jimmy Carson is well on his way to owning.

TRIOIS-RIVIERES comes into the brightly-lit Verdun Auditorium with a poorer record than the 25-22-3 Verdun Junior Canadiens on this cold, clear Friday night. But it is coach Andre Dupont's team which takes the early 1-0 lead. The Trois-Rivieres fans engage the Verdun followers in an across-the-ice shouting match which is interrupted by wild cheering when Verdun finally scores. Left winger Francois Olivier puts one in from the slot after taking a beautiful centering pass from his linemate — Carson.

Carson is a smooth, almost effortless skater. His passes seem crisp, but even he is having a problem following through on plays this evening. That might have something to do with the two or three opposing players who seem to always be draped around him, defending his every move.

Trois-Rivieres seems to sense that the Junior Canadiens might be looking ahead to their Sunday night showdown with Shawinigan. The Junior Canadiens can't get anything going and while the fans don't boo, they let their displeasure become very apparent.

One fan sits in the stands, chain-smoking cigarettes and shaking her head. "They've got no life. Usually they play better, but tonight they just don't have it," she says. She's also a little miffed that her two "boys" — a pair of out-of-town players billeting with her for the season — are among those Lambert has benched for the evening.

After two periods, Trois-Rivieres leads, 2-1, and the Junior Canadiens are making sloppy passes, not executing on the power play and in general, not playing well.

But whatever Lambert says to the team between the second and third period works. The Junior Canadiens come out flying and score three goals in less than 1:02 to take a 4-2 lead before five minutes pass in the period. One of those is Carson's 30th goal of the season. It comes when he follows a winger to the net, grabs a rebound and pops it into the net while falling down. In a moment, he's jumping jubilantly into the air. The happy look on his face mirrors that of the 1,241 spectators who are beginning to think their team is finally coming around.

There are still 15 minutes to play, but the game gets rough and chippy and with men in the penalty box. Lambert chooses to play more defensively and leaves Jimmy on the bench most of the time. The referee bears most of the brunt of the fans' anger and Trois-Rivieres coach Dupont joins in the jeering whenever a penalty is called. Time runs out and Verdun wins, 4-2.

AFTER THE GAME, a crowd gathers in the hallway outside the Verdun Auditorium. They stand under photos of former Verdun players like NHLers Guy Charron and Jimmy Mann, and former coach Scotty Bowman, who went on to some success as the coach of the big league Canadiens. But this crowd waits for current heroes.

Carson walks out of the dressing room dressed in a neat brown suit, looking taller than his 6-0 frame and more mature than his years, his hair still wet from a shower. Three or four girls with starry looks in their eyes stop him to compliment him on his two-point performance. He talks with them briefly, signs autographs, then leaves for a local restaurant with his mother, some coaching friends and visitors from his hometown.

There, he makes a plateful of food disappear as only a hungry 16-year-old can, in between asking questions about former Grosse Pointe teammates and checking the TV set over the bar for late hockey scores. He and a family friend use glasses and salt shakers to diagram a power play. Carson is polite and mature. He laughs easily and converses in French with the head of the family he billets with in Verdun, Serge Fournier. He laughs even harder when he tells an unsuspecting visitor to ask Fournier to explain the English equivalent of a word which the fans had shouted during the game. It turns out to be a not-so-nice equivalent. Jimmy has a sense of humor.

But more than anything, Jimmy Carson has determination.

These stands will be jam-packed when Carson breaks Mario Lemieux' scoring record sometime this month.

'Big Al' leads South

paced South with 12 points and Jim Johnson contributed eight in the win.

Skaters win

The South varsity hockey team snapped its four game losing streak last week, beating Brother Rice 3-2, and improving its record to 7-9.

Swimmers win two

Two wins last week increased South's swim record to 7-2. The Devils began the week with a 97-74 win over Brighton. Winning for South were the medley relay team of Jeff Clark, Rick Leonard, Sean Hoyer, and David Bailey; Billy Thompson in the 200 freestyle and the 100 backstroke; Rich Soltis in the 50 freestyle; Matt Smith in the 100 butterfly; Leonard in the 100 breaststroke; the 400 freestyle relay team of Bailey, Scott Frame, Smith, and Hoyer; and diver Peter Nicholson.

Last Saturday the swimmers beat Birmingham Seaholm for the first time in four years, 87-84.

Seaholm led going into the last event, the 400 freestyle relay. South took first and third, scoring enough points to win the meet.

The crosstown swim war will be this Saturday, Feb. 9, at North, at 2 p.m. In the past two years, both North-South meets have been decided in the last event, and this meet should provide the same excitement.

Gymnasts win

South's gymnastics team outscored Lakeview, 108.40-99.60, to improve its record to 2-1.

Placing for South were Patti Lep-pala with a third on the vault with a 7.70 and a first on the beam with a 7.85; Jenny Tyrer on the bars with a second and a score of 7.65; and Carin Seiller who took third on the floor with a 7.40.

The gymnastics team will be at home Feb. 11 against Troy Athens, at 7 p.m.

Tigers on PASS

Pro Am Sports System, PASS (offered by Grosse Pointe Cable TV) has scheduled seven Detroit Tiger exhibition games to be televised beginning March 9. The games are in addition to 80 regular season games PASS will carry.

and pucks since. "He kept getting better. He's always been playing higher than his level. His first game here, all I could think was 'my gosh, he's supposed to be playing Midget and here is playing Junior with players already drafted in the NHL'. But so far, so good," Maria Carson says.

So far, all Jimmy has done is score 31 goals and 54 assists in 51 games. He is nine points away from breaking Mario Lemieux's league scoring record as a 16-year-old — 96 points in 70 games — with 19 games to go.

So far, so good.

BEFORE PRACTICE on Saturday morning, Jimmy checks in with his coach, poses for some photographs and sits down to chat. He talks about the pressure of breaking records and living up to expectations, all the while looking as if he doesn't know the meaning of the words.

"When I came up, all the papers said I was the next Pat LaFontaine. Pat was a lot of help to me in dealing with the pressure. I'm glad I've been able to live up to some of that publicity.

"As for breaking the record, I feel it's an honor because of the type of player that Lemieux is. It's been fun chasing a record and having the fans cheer when I get a goal," Carson says.

He says he has taken LaFontaine's advice by entering junior play at 16 in order to compile experience. He doesn't regret it. "I had a good Midget year with Compuware last year (approximately 80 goals and 85 assists) but if I'd stayed, I think all I'd be doing is scoring goals. I wouldn't be learning. Here, I'm learning."

Jimmy knows he has a lot of learning to do before the June 1986 pro draft. That's when pro scouts and other experts have predicted that he will be picked in the top three by the NHL. "I know that I can work on my skating — that always helps — and definitely on defense. I think that will come as I get older," he says.

When he's not playing hockey, practicing hockey or plotting power plays in between bites of dinner, Jimmy is in the 11th grade at Verdun Catholic High School. For fun, he gets together with his best friend, Serge Savard Jr., and they "putz around." That translates to going to the Montreal Forum to watch — what else? — hockey.

He says he also realizes that he's taken on quite a load for a 16-year-old. That doesn't bother him much, either. "A lot of people thought I'd burn myself out, that all I thought about was 'hockey, hockey, hockey.' But it's been my decision and so far, it's worked out just fine."

HIS COACH thinks so, too. Yvon Lambert sits in his office reflecting on Jimmy's career and junior hockey in general.

"I'm very pleased with Jimmy's play. He's got a good attitude, a good approach to the game. He wants to be a hockey player and the way to do that is to work hard, hang around hockey, talk hockey. He's got a lot of work ahead of him, but he's got a good start on it, too," Lambert says.

"He will have to work on his defense, maybe learn to do a little more interference to help get the puck out of his end. But right now, he's just 16, that will probably come with age."

Lambert says he feels that Jimmy's natural talent is responsible for putting him so far ahead of his peers. That's not the way it is for many players, he cautions. "I don't believe that if you're drafted at 18, you should go to the pros unless you are going to play. You don't learn by going to the pros and sitting, you learn by playing. With Jimmy, we'll have to see how well he develops this next year. But playing time is the key," he adds.

Detroit-area hockey expert and long-time Little Caesar's coach Chris Coury agrees. "I think he's an excellent prospect with tremendous natural ability. He has the unusual innate talent that Lemieux did. Only so many players ever have that. But he will have to improve his play in traffic and improve his checking ability. That extra year should help with that," Coury says.

THAT JIMMY CARSON, at 16, is well aware of the tough road ahead of him is not surprising. Neither is the fact that he accepts living so far from home, his Grosse Pointe friends and his family, including his sister, Kalli, 15. That's part of what is special about Jimmy, his dad says.

"Before we let him go, we wanted to make sure that he wasn't just a good junior prospect. The pro scouts say he is a good NHL prospect. He will get a college education out of this. It's a gamble, but what we've always done with Jimmy is to let him experience these things, let him learn," Chuck Carson says. "He learned a lot in Grosse Pointe as a kid, he had some good coaches like Clark Whitney, Dave Seaver and Alan Henchell.

"We're very proud of him. He's a good son, a good person, a good Christian. It's almost too good to be true, but that's just the way he is."

JIMMY GLANCES at the clock while talking to his visitor from Grosse Pointe. He's already checked in, but practice is 45 minutes away and he doesn't want to take a chance on not being ready.

That's what next year will be about, too, getting ready. After a trip to Europe with his parents this summer, he'll work on a Nautilus program and get in shape for his second year as a junior.

"That's the big year for me because the next summer is the draft year. It's hard not to think ahead to then, but I have to keep reminding myself to take one year at a time," he says.

It's Jimmy's dream to be drafted by the big league Montreal Canadiens, a team he has always followed and whose finest player, Guy Lafleur, was Jimmy's idol. But the NHL draft goes in reverse order, from the worst to the best teams, and the chances of Montreal, an excellent team, getting the No. 1 pick are slim. Jimmy understands that.

"Just being involved with the Montreal Canadiens as a junior has been exciting. It's the best-run, most organized team in the world. It's been fun playing in front of these crowds and seeing myself compete with 19- and 20-year-olds.

"But it's my dream just to play in the NHL... no matter who it's with. That's what I'm working for, that's why I'm up here — because it's my dream."

Against Shawinigan at the Verdun Auditorium last Sunday night, a much happier group of Junior Canadiens' fans packed the rink to watch their team beat the first-place club, 5-4. Jimmy Carson got the winning goal and moved one point closer to the record.

And one game closer to realizing his dream.

The record-chasing Carson is never alone — at either side of the net. Finally, he skates loose and scores (above).

singer finished with eight points and six rebounds.

Karl Schultz led North with 19 points and nine rebounds in the victory over Kelly. Todd "The Tower" Dessinger scored 18 points, Domenic Martilotti scored 16 points and dished off 10 assists while Steve Langs added 13 points and 11 rebounds.

Spikers win

Last week, both the North varsity and JV volleyball teams beat Bi-County rivals Lakeview and Brablec.

The Lakeview contest saw the JV team triumph over the Huskies, 15-8 and 18-16. North used excellent serving to come back and win a close second game. Missy Preston served 11 service points.

The varsity team followed that lead, beating Lakeview, 15-12 and 15-8. Cindy Bowman served six points in the first game and Virginia Sanders served seven points. Against Brablec, the JV team used strong hitting and good defense to earn their 11th victory of the season. The Norsemen prevailed, 15-6 and 15-12.

A very good team effort and excellent serving and spiking lead the varsity Norsemen to victory over Brablec, 15-5 and 15-10. The coach cited the effective spiking of Celeste Sartor and Paula Harms. The varsity Bi-County record is 5-1.

North's varsity volleyball team traveled to Grand Blanc High School last weekend for the Grand Blanc Classic. Placed in Pool A along with Ainsworth, Grand Blanc, Hartland, Lake Orion and Marshall the Norsemen faced a tough day of round robin play consisting of two games per team.

The first team that North conquered was Marshall, 15-6 and 15-9. With no break between contests, the Norsemen split their games against the host, Grand Blanc, 15-5, 14-16.

The Norsemen had a weak start but beat Hartland, 16-14, in the first game. They also triumphed in the second game, 15-5. The long day began to take its toll when North lost to Ainsworth 13-15 in a close game. The Norsemen sprang back when they won the second game, 15-7.

Only one opponent remained waiting at the high school. North played Lake Orion, the final team in Pool A, and won both games 15-5, 15-11. With the best record in the tournament North entered the playoffs seeded first of 18 teams, then met eighth-seeded Belding and lost, 9-15 and 15-17.

Gymnasts fall

North's gymnastics team lost to Edsel Ford on Jan. 30, 127.75-113.4. Nicole Lehmann placed third on the vault (7.9) and Cindy Dundon had scores of 6.8 and 7.8 on the bars and balance beam. Dundon was first in floor exercises (8.6) and Lehmann received a 7.8 (By Allison Jones)

Matmen finish strong

North's varsity wrestlers finished out the bulk of their regular season this week with several high points.

North was runner-up in the 13-team Bloomfield Hills Andover Tournament. Brian Reid was third at 98; Dave Fleming was the champ at 119; Pat Armstrong was the champ at 115; Steve Taugher was second at 157; and Ken Werenski was second at 198.

The Norsemen beat Lake Shore in dual meet action last week, 42-26. Reid won on a void; Kevin Mack pinned his opponent at 105; Dave Delancey lost a tough, 3-1 match at 112; Fleming pinned his man at 119; Thill won by a pin at 126; Lewis got pinned at 132; Phil Shefferly lost a decision at 138; Doug Schmidt was pinned at 145; Armstrong won on a pin at 155; Taugher won at 157; Selmo was pinned at 185; and Werenski won on a void at 198.

North is second in the Bi-County with a 1-1-1 mark.

North drops two in hockey

Despite playing their best hockey of the season, North High dropped two Metro League contests last week, falling 6-3 to Fraser and 4-3 to Allen Park Cabbini. In each contest, one bad period of sloppy hockey killed the Norsemen's chances for an upset.

Against Fraser, North built a 2-0 lead on goals by Peter Guzzardo and Bob Rogers. John Andary made a nice effort to set up Guzzardo's tally and captain Greg Henschel fed Rogers in front when the Norsemen were on the power play. But Fraser bounced back to lead, 3-2, after two. Excellent forechecking by North early in the third period produced another North goal as Henschel scored unassisted on a 40-foot slap shot. Fraser dominated the play and scoring late in the game to take the win.

Reflecting on a tough loss to Cabrini, coach Mike Manzella said "I wish I could predict when the bad period is coming... maybe we could make some adjustments and change the outcome."

North had a horrible first period against Cabrini, taking four early penalties and falling behind, 4-0. Cabrini held off late Norsemen pressure to seal the win.

THE BEST JAGUARS EVER BUILT.

There is no formula for the creation of a classic. Yet, for more than 50 years Jaguar has given the world classic after classic.

Here are two of the finest Jaguars ever built: the magnificent Series II sedan and the awesome V-12 powered S-type GT.
Both share the inimitable Jaguar qualities of graceful design, quick response and agile handling. Both are equipped with precise power rack and pinion steering, racebred four-wheel independent suspension and decisive four wheel power disc brakes.

Inside Jaguars provide a level of luxury and quiet seldom, if ever, equalled in a high performance motor-car. Test drive them today.
