Me and Charley

One of the drawbacks of working for a weekly newspaper is our inability to get news to the readers once our deadline has passed. It takes us another week to produce the information a daily can submit the next day.

By the time you read this, Charley Manos will have been gone a week. His obituary has been read by millions of people in this state. TV newscasters have eulogized him and columnists from the major dailies have remembered him in print. Now it's my turn to talk briefly about Charley. I'm a week late, but it seems I was always late with the good Mr. Manos.

The first time we met was at the Detroit Press Club. I had just landed my first real job in journalism and was hot to rub shoulders with the "big boys." I needed two signatures to submit before the membership committee.

My sponsor was a friend of Charley's. He called him over, introduced me and asked for Charley's signature to complete the form.

Charley looked straight at me and refused to sign. He explained he wouldn't vouch for anyone he didn't know. Then he walked away.

Later, as I sat alone, he ambled over with two drinks and slid one across to me. He patiently explained it was nothing personal.

He was sure I was a nice guy and good risk, but he respected the club too much to take a chance on someone who could prove to be a yo yo. I liked his candor.

He must have stayed an hour, all the time saying hello to friends that dropped by our table. Finally, he said he'd keep an eye on my career, wished me good luck and left.

To my surprise, he kept his promise. Every once in a while I'd receive a call from out of the blue, complimenting me on a story or photo. Whenever we met at some function, he'd always have a big smile and hearty handshake. He was the most popular columnist in Detroit, but he always had time to make this drone feel important.

On a few occasions, items I had penned for the Grosse Pointe News appeared in his column. One was the one-liner from a story titled "You really know it's cold when..." I said it was really cold when you had to defrost your dog in the microwave after taking him for a walk outside. Talk about a bad line!

Charley loved it. The corner the joke, the more he ate it up. Another time I wrote about why I loved being a reporter. I finished the story with the line "God couldn't be everywhere at once... that's why he made reporters." Charley ran it in his column as "the strong quote of the week."

I can't tell you the response I received. My story ran Thursday, Charley's column on Friday. Friday morning there were four copies of his column on my desk when I came into work. All dropped off by Charley's fans who stopped by our office. I must have received a dozen phone calls and one week later I received a one-line letter from a former college instructor.

Written in beautiful script on a single sheet of expensive bond was the line, "Intellectualism is not dead." Charley's column accompanied the letter, my quote underlined in red.

I called Charley two or three times to thank him for my brief moment in the spotlight, but he was never in. With a schedule like his, it wasn't surprising. I never left a message of thanks because I wanted to tell him personally what it meant to me. I eventually moved on to other things and never did follow up those calls.

I also meant to have a sweatshirt imprinted with the quote. I was going to wrap it and send it to Charley with my thanks. You know, sort of make a big deal of it. I never got around to that either.

Now Charley's gone and there's no chance to thank him for his friendship.

I'm sorry, Charley, it looks like I'm late again.

Bi-county chop shop task force formed

By Nancy Parmenter

A massive undercover task force against auto chop shops in Wayne and Macomb counties began operations Monday, Detroit and suburban police announced. The task force is a three-year cooperative effort between police departments, the prosecutors in both counties, and the private sector.

Wayne County Prosecutor John D. O'Hair announced the active participation of 10 suburban police forces, among them the Woods and the Farms, Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores. Each department will subsidize the effort by donating the services of one or more police officers.

Participation is more theoretical than actual, however. Both the Farms and the Woods said Friday that severe manpower shortages will prevent their participation in the foreseeable future.

"By the first of the year, we would hope to come up with one person between the Pointes," said Farms police Lt. Ignatius Backman, "but right now, we just don't have the manpower."

The Farms police force is down two positions, Backman said. Even though the department has been conducting testing, by the time applicants are selected and academy completed, the task force will be well under way.

Funding is a major obstacle in a small department, Backman said. "It's a good program. It's too bad the state doesn't fund it. In a small department, if you put someone on every task force that comes along, you wouldn't have any manpower left."

"We can drop in (to the program) at any time," Backman went on. "We all help each other as much as we can anyhow. But if everybody (in the Pointes) doesn't participate, we won't either."

Participation looked only slightly more likely in the Woods. Director of Public Safety Jack Patterson said he would not base his decision on the participation of the other Pointes. However, at this time, manpower shortages are a problem in his department as well.

Under a public safety set-up, Patterson explained, donating the services of an officer is more complex. "He's not only one less policeman on the street, he's also one less firefighter," he said.

The Woods department saw the retirement of four people last week. Replacement will require months, Patterson said. "Even when they're on board, you have a bunch of people with just academy experience and no street experience at all. They have to spend time riding with other officers."

Patterson said he had originally hoped to contribute one-fifth of an officer through a cooperative effort with the rest of the Pointes. Now several of the communities have said they have no desire to join in.

Richard Caretti, the new police chief in the Park, said his department is "very favorably inclined" toward the task force, but that any support would have to be moral only.

"We can't commit any manpower," Caretti said. "We're in the process of moving toward public safety, and we have other problems equal to or greater than auto theft. That's not to downplay the importance of the problem, however."

Caretti said he plans to institute scooter patrols to provide a police presence, as well as unmarked cars at high crime times. These programs would require a redistribution of Park manpower.

"If I could see any way clear to spare a person, (the task force) is where it would be," Caretti said.

The car theft problem is not great enough in most of the Pointes to warrant the task force expense, most of the departments agree. Making an informed guess at the statistics, Patterson said there are about 60 auto thefts in the Woods, 120 in the Park, 75 in the Farms, 10 to 15 in the City, and only two or three in the Shores on an annual basis. And no one believes there are any chop shops operating in the Pointes.

Shores Director of Public Safety Joseph Vitale said his department has no intention of participating. "We don't have the manpower, the finances or the problem," he said.

In Harper Woods, where the auto theft rate runs about 10 times as high as the Woods, Police Chief Gary Ford is high on the task force. He plans to commit one officer, while he will sit on the board of directors.

What a crowd, what a show!

Bang! Pow! Ooooooh! Ahhhh! That was the reaction of thousands of fireworks fans who turned out at Parcels School and the surrounding area Sunday night for the second annual Mack Avenue USA fireworks display sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue. Lawn chairs, picnic hampers and children snuggled in their parents' arms were the rule of the day while waiting for the display to begin.

GP Theatre turns loss into big win

By Nancy Parmenter

The man hosing down the sidewalk put me in mind of Holland. But he was John Guadagnoli, demonstrating the spirit of volunteering at Grosse Pointe Theatre — and on Cloud Nine as he did it.

The theater group had just returned from a week of drama in Racine, Wis., where its production of "Agnes of God" was competing to go to the international festival in Monaco. They didn't win, but Guadagnoli was still happy.

"We didn't win, but we didn't lose," he said. "We were one of only 10 groups in the United States."

The groups came from such unlikely places as Topeka and Walla Walla. Most of them have paid artistic directors and technical staff, according to "Agnes" Director Donna DiSante.

"Grosse Pointe Theatre accomplishes an awful lot with all volunteers," DiSante said. "We're doing all the same kinds of things."

Pride in accomplishment aside, DiSante said volunteer groups are luckier than professionally staffed groups. "We have the opportunity to design a set or direct a play. Other groups don't get to do the creative part of it — make the artistic decisions."

Cheered by the overheard rumor that they "came close," the Pointers came away with a theory about the play selection for the international festival.

"The judges had to deal not only with which was the best play, but with what play they wanted to represent the United States in Monaco," group member Theresa Selvaggio said.

DiSante agreed. "The adjudicators were after three pieces of Americana," she said. The winner was "Lone Star," a play about Texas good old boys and Vietnam, a comedy with tragic overtones. The runners-up were "Bubbling Brown Sugar," about the Jazz Age in Harlem, and "I'm Getting My Act Together and Taking it on the Road," a play about women's liberation. "What's more American than that?" DiSante said.

"Agnes of God" revolves around the dilemma of a young nun's unwanted pregnancy and the efforts of her mother superior and psychiatrist to help her deal with it. The competition version was a one-hour cutting — as required by contest rules — done by DiSante.

"The adjudicators made a point of commenting on the excellent cutting," said Guadagnoli. "I think that's what won it for us in the regional."

Thirty-six members of the Grosse Pointe group made the trip to Wisconsin, almost all of them as rooters. The competition was set up as a learning experience cum convention, with the opportunity to view all the presentations and hear professional critiques by the adjudicators.

As the winners of the five-state regional competition, the Pointers were surprised to discover that they had taken on a home-team aura for theater people from the rest of the region. "They were like a cheering section, sitting in the front row, supporting us, rooting for us," said DiSante.

Even though "Agnes" won't be making the trip to Monaco, the group agrees it is pleased with the national exposure provided by the Racine competition. They have been asked to present the show at the fall convention of the Community Theatre Association of Michigan at Boyne Highlands.

"Considering it wasn't even part of our regular schedule, we're getting a lot of mileage out of it," said Guadagnoli with a delighted laugh. "It's just great."

House busy with other matters

No action on SEMTA bill until fall

By Mike Andrzejczyk

School officials say they are watching the progress of legislation in the state House Appropriations Committee that will, if passed, reorganize the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority.

Grosse Pointe has an arrangement with SEMTA that the authority will offer bus routes to and from the two high schools before and after school, according to Assistant Director of Support Services and Personnel David King. It's not known how many students ride the buses to and from the schools during the school year.

"We're watching (the legislation) to see what effect it will have on the district," King said.

Both reorganization bills, a Senate-passed version sponsored by Sen. Richard Fessler of West Bloomfield and a bill introduced last week by Rep. John Maynard, whose district includes Lake Township, would change the management authority for the regional transportation system that has come under increasing pressure in past months.

Maynard's bill would amend the enabling legislation that created SEMTA to change membership on its governing board to county executives in Wayne and Oakland counties and chairman of the Board of Commissioners in Macomb County, according to an aide of state Rep. William Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe Farms.

Other members of the new governing board would include a person appointed by the governor and one member named by the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments.

The current 15-member SEMTA governing board has been called unwieldy and too political to achieve anything, the Bryant aide said.

Also under Maynard's bill, the state's Department of Transportation would, beginning in 1986, receive all federal money meant for the transportation authority and distribute them directly to SEMTA and the Detroit Department of Transportation.

Currently, federal money all goes to SEMTA, which then passed part on to D-DOT.

Fessler's bill would set up a regional transportation coordinating authority, which would oversee the operations of a suburban transportation system and a Detroit system essentially the same as the current D-DOT program, a Fessler aide said.

The suburban transportation commission would handle the coordination and direction of the transportation in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties, the three currently served by SEMTA.

The RCTA board would include the county executives in Wayne and Oakland counties, the chairman of the Macomb Board of Commissioners and Detroit Mayor Coleman Young.

The regional authority would receive state and federal funds, which it would allocate to the suburban commission and the Detroit system, according to Fessler's legislation.

The RCTA would also be given taxing authority, something SEMTA has tried unsuccessfully in the past to receive. The authority would be able to ask voters to approve property or income tax increases to fund mass transportation. Total property tax levies for RCTA could not exceed five mills and total income tax levies could not exceed 2 percent, according to the bill.

Neither Fessler's nor Maynard's bill is expected to come out of the Appropriations Committee before early fall, a Bryant aide said. The committee is currently wrestling with the tax package submitted by Gov. James J. Blanchard.

Rep. Bryant said he would support SEMTA reorganization "if the politics are such that it has to be reorganized," but he would rather see D-DOT become a part of SEMTA.

"My preference has been, and still is, that SEMTA continue and D-DOT be taken over by SEMTA," he said, adding he didn't expect that to happen.

Dodds honored by SAC²

The Substance Abuse Community Council of Grosse Pointe honored Christine A. Dodds for her contributions to the community and the organization at a recent board of directors meeting.

She was presented with a crystal vase in recognition of her efforts on behalf of SAC² over the past four years. She and her husband, J. McGregor Dodds, were among citizens who initiated the formation of the council in 1981.

Since then, she has served as vice president of the council and as a member of its executive steering committee. In addition to making the arrangements for both the Torma and Betty Ford programs in Grosse Pointe, she designed and planned most of the educational events sponsored by the group in the last four years.

She is also a certified Henry Ford Hospital-Maple Grove volunteer educator and has been teaching about alcohol, drugs and chemical dependency in classrooms, workshops and to community groups.

Part of the testimonial presented to her read: "Chris is an idealist with a vision and a commitment that few people have. We are indebted to Chris as an organization, as a community, but especially as individuals."

Newly elected directors of SAC² for 1984-85 are: David Sessions, president; Suzie Decker, recording secretary; Florence Miller, corresponding secretary; Sarah Flynn, treasurer; Vernon Ausherman, legal advisor; Ruth Zinn, past-president; Jane Barry, choices representative; Catherine Brierly, publicity; Jerry Keeney, curriculum liaison; Laurie Lightbody, alternative activities; Tom Morawski, law enforcement liaison; Joanne Murphy, SAC² publications; Jan O'Leary, educational events; Marge Price, newsletter; Dr. Louis Prues, clergy representative; Barbara Saari, educational resources; Hon. Patricia Schneider, at-large; Betsy Schooff, at-large; Lucy Smith, school teams coordinator; Lynn Wargo, mailing chair; and Dr. John Whritner, school liaison.

Planting city hall

Members of the Park Beautification Commission spent four hours one day adding color to the city office grounds. They worked into the soil a quarter of a ton of fertilizer and peat moss and planted hundreds of red geraniums, red rocket snapdragons, impatiens and winter green pachysandra. Some of the gardeners included, from left, Mary Romig, Jerome Abbs and Sheila Farrant.

Principals discuss North Central evaluations

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The administration has put together a six-member committee to study some of the concerns raised by the North Central evaluations done this year at North and South high schools.

Principals from the two schools made presentations about the reports to the school board Tuesday night, June 11. North Central Association prepares evaluations of schools' programs once every seven years to be used by the schools as a way to improve themselves.

North's Dr. John Kastran said the schools "lived under a microscope for a couple of years" during the evaluation process. The schools were required to do a year-long self-study which was sent on to the North Central people, he added. North Central visiting committee members, made up of teachers and administrators from schools in southeastern Michigan, spent three days at the two schools talking with staff.

These schools' self-study committees are chaired by a teacher who coordinated the programs and self-analysis of staff, Kastran said. The visiting committee then reviews the self-study, does its on-site interviews and then issues a set of recommendations listing strengths and weaknesses it finds in the school programs.

Both Kastran and South's Frances French briefly outlined the 60-page reports for their respective schools, touching on the strengths and some of NCA's recommendations for improvement.

One facet of the NCA report is a follow-up report after a year, Kastran said. Both he and French said their schools are working on the recommendations raised in the reports.

Departments have prioritized recommendations from the South report and are ready to begin looking at solutions in the coming school year, French told the board. North has taken care of a number of physical suggestions from the report, Kastran said. New electrical outlets have been ordered for the science labs, safety glasses have been ordered and other work has been done. Some philosophical recommendations will require more input, he added.

In the summaries of both high school reports, it was recommended the system develop a way for staff to become more involved in decision-making on system-wide curriculum matters and that greater vertical articulation of curriculum for elementary, middle and high schools occur.

In his school and community evaluation of South Russell Baker, assistant superintendent of Midland-public schools said "an inordinate amount of time, energy and expertise is being wasted on resentment on the part of South staff toward central administration. It is recommended a serious study take place cooperatively with central office and building administrators and teachers to effect morale and communications between these groups."

North's summary included a recommendation that "an attempt should be made to develop a more effective process for providing teacher input on system-wide curriculum matters. Perhaps some of the concerns over curriculum variations between North and South can then be worked out without stifling creativity."

Other matters raised in the studies included the need to evaluate the seven-period day, how to address the needs of low-ability students and necessary evaluation of the schools' attendance policy.

Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli, secondary curriculum director Robert Welch and Director of Research and Development Roger Caig have begun meeting with secondary school teachers to begin addressing these problems, according to Superintendent John Whritner.

Some concerns of high school staff may have applications at the middle and elementary school level, he added.

The district is looking for a process that will get everyone involved in the development of curriculum at all levels, Whritner said. It is also looking to better communications between staff and central office.

While the reports put the problem in writing, it has been sensed for a while that communication was a problem, Whritner said. Central office personnel felt the same way as many teachers about the lack of communication, Whritner said.

Part of the problem is lack of procedures for communicating concerns to the central office, Whritner said. Without formal procedures in place, there is a perception that central office doesn't care.

Communication is a real problem that needs to be addressed, Whritner said. The summer break will allow administration to make some plans to improve the situation, he added.

The reports were not all negative, Whritner said. The evaluations showed the system to have "two superb institutions," he added.

Summaries for each of the schools pointed to excellent facilities that were well maintained, highly motivated and well-qualified staff, comprehensive instructional programs and auxiliary services as strengths.

There was divided response to the seven-period day in the reports. While North's summary listed it as a strength, South's curriculum evaluation called for a study to see if the lost class time was made up for by the benefits of the extra class each day.

The loss of minutes to a class period is balanced by the hours a student receives in a different subject by opting for the extra class, Kastran told the board Tuesday night.

The district is looking into possible review of the seven-period day, Whritner said. The district will put together as much objective data from before its institution and compare it to the results after a year in the program.

The district wants objective data on the seven-period day, not likes and dislikes, Whritner said. The system is more interested in data that can be measured and compared like scores on Advanced Placement or Scholastic Aptitude Tests, he added.

The district does know that fewer students opted this year to enroll in a seventh class, showing the thrill is gone in a way, Whritner said. At the same time, the same arguments that helped lead to the institution of the seven-period day at the high schools — extra time for enrichment through non-academically directed offerings — is being heard at the middle schools, he added.

The summer break will give administrators a chance to look for ways to improve the system at the two schools, Whritner said. "Some things need improvement, but you're starting from a very strong foundation," he added.

Teacher retirement bill may affect local schools

By Mike Andrzejczyk

As many as three dozen local teachers may qualify for early retirement under a bill that is now before Gov. James J. Blanchard for his signature.

The bill, which passed the House in April and the Senate two weeks ago, changes retirement qualifications for public school teachers to 30 years of service, removing the minimum age of 55.

School officials said the proposal won't affect Grosse Pointe until the end of next school year, because few teachers opt to retire in the middle of a school year. An unofficial estimate of the number of the district's teachers who would be able to retire under the new rules was set at between three dozen and four dozen.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Joe Conroy, D-Flint, and Rep. Mary Brown, D-Kalamazoo, will set an extra tier of retirement benefits for teachers who contribute 4 percent of the gross income to the program, a state Management and Budget official said.

Beginning Jan. 1, 1987, teachers who contribute to the program can retire after 30 years of service, regardless of age, or at age 60 after five years in the classroom. Final benefits will be calculated on the last three years of income instead of the last five. Liberalized survivors benefits will be added as well, officials said.

A second part of the program would increase equity for part-time teachers, officials said. Also, starting Jan. 1, 1986, all retirees in the system will receive an 8 percent benefit hike and will afterward receive either an annual 3 percent adjustment or a supplemental lump sum payment depending on which is larger.

The lump sum payment will be based on how well the state's pension fund is doing and is a kind of profit-sharing program, officials said.

Of more immediate impact is a three-year "window" that will open in January, state officials said. The bill will allow teachers whose ages and years of service total 80 to retire before the compensation fund contribution is put into place.

Also taking effect in October is a substantial increase of health care benefits for the dependents of retirees. The new plan will cover 90 percent of the health care benefits. Currently, retirees' dependents receive no health care benefits from the state.

The state is unsure how many teachers will opt for the retirement improvements, but it is expected to exacerbate a growing teacher shortage in the area, education department officials said.

The increased retirements will not significantly increase costs to local school districts, Management and Budget officials said. Districts pay a proportionate amount to the state's retirement fund based on the number of people they have on the payroll, the department said. Health costs are funded differently.

Teachers who choose not to contribute the 4 percent gross income after 1987 will not be eligible for the improved benefits.

An aide for Sen. Conroy said the original Senate bill stalled in the Senate Appropriations Committee. Aides then took the package to the House, where Rep. Brown introduced the measure, adding some increased benefits for older employees.

The bill is sitting on the governor's desk and is expected to be signed as soon as a ceremony can be arranged, a Conroy aide said. The governor has already said he supports the bill, the aide added.

The school system last year offered a retirement inducement of $300 above the state's retirement benefits to teachers with 15 years of service and age 55.

Board grants salary hikes

The Board of Education Monday night, June 24, hiked salaries of 15 non-instructional supervisors by five percent and gave all district employees the day after the Fourth of July off.

Non-instructional supervisors include secretaries for administrators, maintenance and cafeteria supervisors and certain purchasing and data processing department employees, Superintendent John Whritner said.

The salary increases average about $1,240 for each of the employees and total $18,600, school officials said.

The board also decided to give employees the day after the Fourth of July off. The Fourth falls on a Thursday, so employees will have a long weekend.

Board Vice President Jon Gandelot said he was concerned about granting the day off, but voted with the majority in approving it.

Overseas travelers keeping their plans

Only a small percentage of Grosse Pointers who have booked trips overseas have cancelled due to the recent hijacking and bombing, according to local travel agents.

Claudia Gordon of Greatways Travel in the Farms said they had one couple cancel a long-planned Greek Isles cruise "with great disappointment." Other than that, the agency has not received any cancellations.

"We have people booked to Israel over the Christmas holidays and so far, they are keeping their plans," she said.

Jamie Maniere of Travelworld in the Woods said she estimates that their three offices have cancelled 10 to 15 percent of all European trips. She said she has one customer who is planning a seven-day Greek island tour and "he's not cancelling."

One of the agency's managers is scheduled to go to Athens, however, and has doubts about it, Maniere said.

"We haven't had any cancellations yet," said Leigh Willmore of Wallace Travel in the City. "We do have people on a (Greek) cruise and the cruise line is changing the point of embarkation from Athens to I don't know where yet."

"People who are going to Europe are very concerned, however, we haven't had any cancellations which has been marvelous," she added.

Sue Hatcher of Travel by Hatcher in the Woods said they have booked a couple of Greek island cruises and have not received any cancellations.

"I've had people thinking of going to Greece, but they're changing their plans," said Betsy Schulte of Mister Q in the Woods. "I do have people going to Europe asking questions, just general concerns, but no cancellations. I've had a lot of people buying extra insurance," she added.

Schulte said she would not travel to Greece of the Middle East now, while Hatcher said she would go to Greece, "but not Iran or Iraq."

Willmore said she's going anywhere "if the right trip came up. I'm pretty adventuresome and you have to have a sense of adventure, that nothing is totally safe and you have to use some caution.

"I'd go to Greece right now," she said, "because if anything, the security there has to be so tight right now."

Maniere said she wouldn't send anyone to the Middle East. "I'd say you're insane. I'm supposed to go to Frankfurt and I'll probably go, but the question will be in my mind — will something happen? It's happening everywhere."

If extra security measures have been instituted at domestic airports, the consultants say they haven't heard about it.

Police alert businesses

Businessmen and women are advised that not all callers soliciting money for law enforcement-supported programs are affiliated with the Fraternal Order of Police or local police agencies.

David A. Hiller, president of the FOP, Grosse Pointe Lodge, says that a police labor organization, representing bargaining units in the metropolitan Detroit area, has been implying to business that it is associated with the Michigan FOP and its local lodges.

"People who are contacted by callers claiming to represent police organizations are urged to learn exactly who is calling, whom they represent and how the money raised will be used," Hiller said.

The FOP has set up a telephone hotline to receive complaints about such solicitation programs. The number is 424-9666.

Solicitors have been telling people they are supporting a drug education program and going into local schools. "We are unable to find a single instance where this is being done," Hiller said.

The state and local FOP lodges do undertake phone solicitations, but only with the knowledge of local police agencies, Hiller said.

New Lions president is young, involved, blind

By Tom Greenwood

Perhaps the only thing more busy and crowded than Michael Patten's office is his schedule.

Patten, 29, works with the visually handicapped at Detroit Receiving Hospital. He's also been recently installed as the president of the Grosse Pointe Woods Lions Club.

Patten, who lives with his parents, Virg and Pat, on Manchester, is legally blind and has been since birth.

"People are usually amazed when they find out I was born totally blind," Patten said. "I can see now after seven operations. I had cataracts as a baby. My first operation was at six months. I was wearing glasses at nine months of age."

"So many people believe that blind people spend their lives sitting around in darkened rooms, and that's just not so. The vast majority, perhaps 80 percent, of the blind persons in this world have at least some type of vision. Even if they can only distinguish between light and dark, or barely make out the lines of a cross walk, that little bit of vision can make a big difference. That's what I hope to teach people here at the hospital and during my term as president of the club."

It's ironic that Patten joined the Lions, long noted for their work with the blind. Ironic, but not intentional. "I had a friend who just happened to belong to the Lions and he asked me to join," Patten said. "If it had happened to be any other club, then I might be a Rotarian or Moose today. But I'm glad it was the Lions because of their work with the blind. The Lions of Michigan started the Leader Dogs for the Blind program in Rochester. They also provided canes to people for years. But I want to try and expand on that."

"How about other vision aids for the blind? What about low vision watches instead of braille watches? Diabetes causes a large percentage of the blindness we encounter here at the hospital. Diabetes can also lessen the sensitivity of the fingertips, so for that person a braille watch is useless. A vision impaired watch is perfect. I'm also going to see about distributing magnifying glasses to the blind. High quality glasses, the kind not available in most stores. I'm trying to educate people about loss of vision and about blind persons in general."

Like many blind persons, Patten takes pride in getting out and around on his own. "I get involved," he said. "I take the bus wherever I want to go. I'm planning a trip by myself to San Francisco and recently returned from visiting my brother in Africa."

Mike's brother is Father Pat Patten, a missionary who was in Grosse Pointe two years ago raising funds to purchase a used airplane to provide medical relief to the bush people of Tanzania.

"I went with my mother," Patten said. "I stayed three weeks and she stayed nearly two months. Pat took us everywhere. The country is unbelievably rugged and beautiful. The plane is the only way to bring help to those people. When the regular pilot came down with hepatitis, my mother flew in his place. She learned to fly a long time ago."

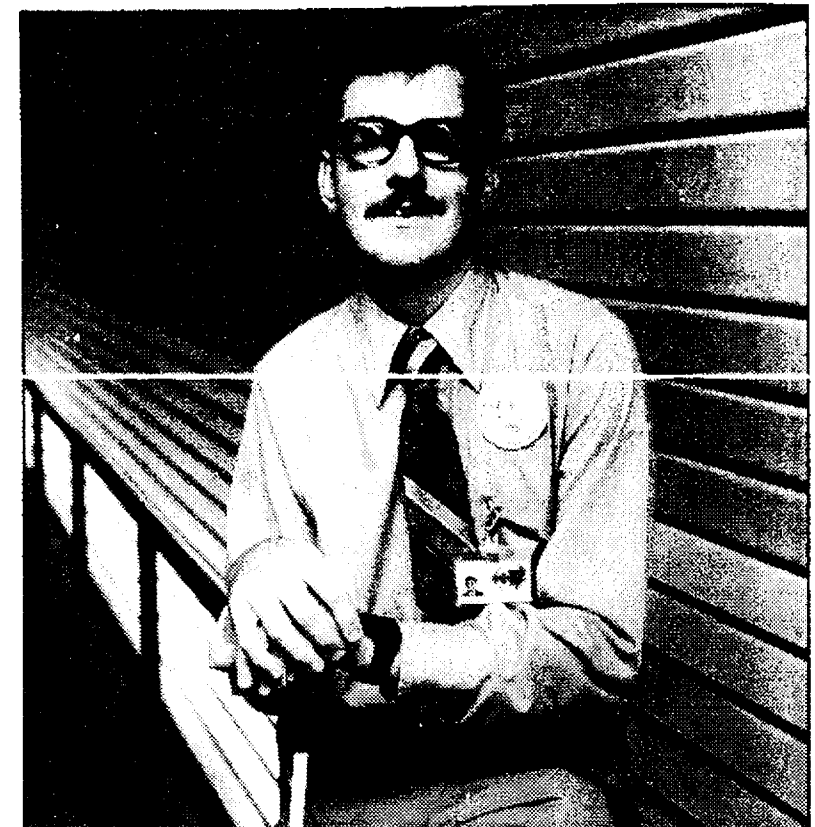

Helping others seems to be a tradition in the Patten family. Mike's sister, Colleen Patten, works with learning disabled children. At Receiving Hospital, Patten teaches the correct use of the white cane, taking his students up and down stairways and through the hospital for trial runs before facing the real world.

"I deal mostly with adults," Patten said. "And strictly on a pre-vocational level. I'm not qualified to teach vocational training to the blind. Other instructors here teach braille, typing, etc."

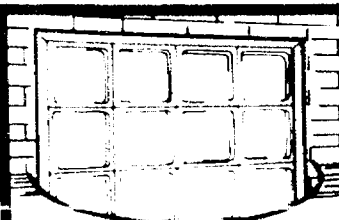

"I've also got my work cut out for me at the Lions," he said. "We've got to find a new meeting place since our old building was recently sold. It would be nice too, to increase our membership. We only have 24 in the club. Our membership comes from the Woods and we like to give back to the city. We contribute to the fireworks, the city's bike safety program and to the city parks. We'd like others to help us in our efforts to aid the blind."

"The most important thing is to teach everyone that the blind are pretty much like anyone else," summarized Patten. "I tell people I'm blind, and I've been on safari in the bush, I flew over the Serengeti Plain, and sat around campfires with Masai warriors. If I can do anything, I'll do it. And that goes for all blind people everywhere."

Case moves offices to Park

David R. Case of the Farms has moved his consulting firm to offices in the Park. Case & Company is a human resources consulting firm specializing in employment and executive search services. Case spent 16 years in the field of human resources management, including personnel, executive recruitment, employment, training and labor relations before forming his own company in 1983. He is a graduate of Wayne State University.

Dumke named president of association

The Association Executives of Metropolitan Detroit have selected Rae Dumke of the Woods as its new president. Dumke is the executive director of the Michigan Society of Architects, where she has been on the staff since 1967. She is a recent graduate of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce's Leadership Detroit program, designed to develop informed community leaders. The organization of executives was formed to give the opportunity to executives in all fields to exchange ideas, opinions and experiences.

Cappy named AMC v.p. for operations

Joe Cappy of the City has been named executive vice president for operations of American Motors Corp. He moves up to the position from group vice president of sales and marketing, which he had held since 1984. Prior to joining AMC in 1982, Cappy was general marketing manager of the Lincoln-Mercury Division for Ford. He earned his degree in accounting and marketing from the University of Wisconsin.

Warner appointed Ford v.p.

Robert D. Warner has been appointed executive vice president for international operations of Ford Motor Credit Company. When he returns to the United States from his current position as vice president for Ford's European Credit Operations, he will live in the Farms. Warner joined Ford Credit in 1961 as a financial analyst. He holds a bachelor's degree in sales and finance from Western Michigan University.

County medical group picks McCabe as head

The new president of the Wayne County Medical Society is Dr. Peter McCabe of the Shores. Dr. McCabe has been on the staff at St. John Hospital since 1973. He is also on the staff of four other local hospitals. Dr. McCabe teaches surgery at Wayne State University's School of Medicine and acts as a consultant for the Detroit Institute for Children and the Michigan Crippled Children program. He earned his undergraduate degree at Harvard and his MD at Cornell University.

Announcing... Glenn A. Wesselmann of the Shores was elected to the board of trustees of the Southeast Michigan Hospital Council. Wesselmann is the president and chief executive officer of the St. Clair Health Corp., the parent company of St. John Hospital. Woods resident Carlos Perez, a pre-med student at University of Michigan, is participating in a summer internship program at Cottage Hospital. He will be assigned to various departments as an introduction to all facets of community hospital activities. Forster's Interiors of the Woods announces the appointment of a new manager, Diane Feldpausch. She has been employed by the firm for 10 years and is an associate member of the Interior Design Society. — Nancy Parmenter

The North High achievement

The pursuit of excellence is one of the major aims of the Grosse Pointe public school system. In recent months, the Grosse Pointe News often has called attention to the system's achievements, whether in new plans for earlier childhood education, improvement in test scores in basic subjects or broadened opportunities for special education courses within the system.

The announcement last week that North High School had been selected for national honors as part of a program to give special recognition to outstanding secondary schools is further evidence that the Grosse Pointe system is not only pursuing excellence but often achieving it. True, South High won similar honors two years ago but the recognition for North means that both of the system's high schools have been designated for the honor. That is a claim that few districts can make since only 23 Michigan schools have received the honor since the program was started.

In his statement, the North principal, Dr. John Kastran, paid tribute to the entire community for the school's achievement. That was appropriate. True, the recognition is especially rewarding to the North High community, including parents, students and faculty, but the honor won by North reflects the entire community's dedication to excellence in education.

Fewer than half of the homes in the Pointes now send students off to public school every day.

Some are homes in which young people already have completed their schooling. Others are childless homes. Still others are homes whose children attend parochial or private schools. Yet all of those homes contribute to the support of the Grosse Pointe public schools and they do so in the main without complaint because they appreciate the importance of excellence in public education to the entire community. They know that investment in good schools pays dividends outside as well as inside the classroom.

So in expressing appreciation of the support that made possible the latest achievement at North, we would be remiss if we did not mention all of the taxpayers — which include the non-parents as well as the parents, school board members, teachers and staff who contribute with their taxes as well as their services to the achievements of the Grosse Pointe district.

That comment does not mean we think the school system achieves excellence only by increasing its annual budget. Not necessarily. But the wise allocation of resources is obviously important to the achievement of excellence in any endeavor. And those citizens who have so unstintingly supported public education here now can take new satisfaction from the national recognition of North that proves excellence is being achieved in Grosse Pointe.

The fate of the UN at 40

Staring out from the picture on the front page of the New York Times the other day was the face of an old friend who is the lone survivor of the eight Americans who signed the United Nations Charter on June 26, 1945. He was Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota and many times candidate for president who was in San Francisco to join in the 40th anniversary of the charter signing.

The picture and the story about the anniversary aroused memories for this writer not only about Stassen, but also about the battle over the U.S. Senate ratification of the charter that came on July 28, 1945, following a series of hearings completed just before the Japanese surrender ended World War II on Aug. 15, 1945.

The U.S. ratification was the successful culmination of the efforts of the new American internationalists to overcome the historic isolationism of the Middle West. In Michigan, the victory was won as it was in Minnesota, but the battle lines were not so strictly drawn as in Minnesota where the youthful internationalist, Stassen, won a convincing victory over an aging isolationist, Sen. Henrik Shipstead, an early Farmer-Labor Party leader who had returned to the GOP in 1940.

As a long-time member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Shipstead took part in the charter hearings in July 1945, but made clear by his questions and attitudes he didn't think much of the charter. In fact, prior to Pearl Harbor, he had viewed World War II as simply a rerun of World War I and even after Dec. 7, 1941, he voted against conscription and selective service. In Washington's enthusiasm for the new UN charter in that summer, Shipstead's views sounded naive and outdated.

So, when the charter vote finally arrived, it was no surprise that Shipstead was one of only two senators — the other was William Langer of North Dakota — to vote against ratification. Sticking to his beliefs, Shipstead voted according to Henry L. Stimson's description of Midwestern pre-war sentiment: "We have a little ring of fresh-water statesmen who have tried to exclude the fact there was a world outside the salt water."

That vote sealed Shipstead's political fate, as he probably realized it would. In the Republican primary the next year, Stassen supported his former colleague, Gov. Edward J. Thye, who defeated the aging Shipstead by a vote of 238,210 to 160,619. Shipstead blamed his defeat largely on his vote against the charter, ignoring the Stassen-Thye campaign against him and saying only that after 24 years on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, "I could not do otherwise than oppose it."

In fact, Shipstead made the vote a major issue in the senatorial campaign but the old isolationism simply no longer had much appeal in Minnesota or the Midwest. Shipstead died on June 26, 1960, appropriately on the 15th anniversary of the signing of the UN Charter.

That 1946 campaign in which Stassen guided Thye to his Senate victory was one of the high points of the former UN delegate's career. Stassen became a candidate for president time and time again, actually being the most popular Republican early in 1948; later served in a series of important Washington posts in the Eisenhower Administration, but never achieved the national following required for a successful presidential campaign.

Over the years many of his friends contended that Stassen has missed his chance in 1946. He was then the popular young governor just home from naval service in the Pacific and his duties at the UN conference in San Francisco. He was the logical candidate to take on Shipstead. Instead, he said he was an administrator, not a legislator, and that he would prefer to run the high risk of campaigning for president from outside government. Years later, he still insisted he had made the right choice even though most of his supporters thought he was wrong in 1946 and still think he made the wrong decision.

As the world turns its attention to the UN charter anniversary, Michigan's memories of the classic confrontation between isolationism and internationalism are often tied to the late Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, the Michigan senator who like Stassen was both a delegate to the 1945 charter writing session and a potential candidate for president.

Vandenberg was often identified as an isolationist until a Senate speech on Jan. 10, 1945, in which he called for not only an early victory in the war which then was winding down in Western Europe but clarification among the allies on their postwar security aims, even to the extent of a treaty guaranteeing future disarmament of the Axis powers. His speech drew widespread praise as an expression of American hopes for peace and postwar cooperation, with full regard for legitimate self interest that had not been adequately expressed by an ailing President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

From that speech also sprang F.D.R.'s invitation to Vandenberg to attend the UN drafting session at San Francisco where he played an important role, especially in taking an early tough line against the Soviet Union. Vandenberg long had suspected the Soviet Union's motives, especially after Stalin had convinced Roosevelt at Yalta that his nation deserved three UN votes, one each for the Ukraine, Byelorussia and Russia, as an offset to the British dominions and the Latin American nations supposedly in the U.S. pocket.

Vandenberg's son, Arthur H. Jr., who edited his father's private papers, once wrote that his father had declined a draft for the vice presidential nomination in 1936, was an unsuccessful nonactive, isolationist candidate for the presidential nomination in 1940 and refused to yield to a formidable demand that he become an internationalist candidate for president in 1948. So was Vandenberg really an isolationist converted to internationalism, as some Eastern writers said, or what was the explanation for his apparent shifts in viewpoint?

His son offers a rational answer: "It seems to me that my father can fairly be described as a symbol of the average American mind, which, prior to Pearl Harbor, honestly and conscientiously believed it was possible for the United States to confine its responsibility to our own hemispheric shores, but which gradually faced up to the hard realities of a changing world and became converted to the concept of collective security among free nations everywhere on earth."

That's a pretty concise explanation of the shift of Midwest opinion as well as the development of the Michigan senator's view about world affairs. One question now, on the UN's 40th anniversary, if whether the high hopes for the international organization were justified back in 1945 — and most Americans now probably would say they were not — but the more important issue is whether the UN still can serve a useful purpose in developing an effective system of international security even though nations still retain their sovereign status. On that issue, unfortunately, the jury of world opinion is still out.

Yet Vandenberg, a pragmatist and a realist, had felt the UN did have a chance of promoting enduring peace. He once said the United States has "no enemies unless aggressors nominate themselves as such. Our common cause is human rights, fundamental liberties and a free world of free men. So long as we preserve and strengthen and expand that fraternity, we labor in the vineyard of the Lord and dare to believe he will bless our dedications."

As for Stassen, the once-youthful idealist, he showed up at the San Francisco celebration last week with copies of a "Stassen Draft Charter for a New United Nations," which, according to the New York Times, describes proposals for weighted voting in a new assembly, an international police force and a new international court. He told the Times he had sent copies to the 159 member countries "with humility and a bit of determination." In short, Stassen still believes the UN can work if improvements can be made. Still an optimist, still an idealist, Harold E. Stassen is still worth listening to, and especially when he talks about the UN.

The making of Fireworks '85

To the Editor:

Mack Avenue USA, the fireworks event and orchestra concert in celebration of the Fourth of July, began as a thank you gesture to the community.

The Grosse Pointe Business and Professional Association of Mack Avenue was looking for a way to thank patrons for their support. The event has come to be more than a thank you.

It was Dr. Michael F. Lahey who christened the event "Mack Avenue USA", and at a planning meeting last spring said, "Anytime you can get thousands of people together just to have fun, you've got an idea worth nurturing."

Nearly a year of planning has gone into this project. Last fall, contacts were made throughout the area for the proper approval of the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council, the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, and the Lochmoor Club.

As last year, the Grosse Pointe Woods Council enthusiastically endorsed the celebration and promised its support.

Chester Petersen, city administrator-clerk, advised that all funding for the project would come from its Parking Enterprise Fund (the meters throughout the Woods) not from tax dollars. Jack Patterson, director of public safety and coordinator of the auxiliary services necessary — police, fire, and public works — has been in close contact for the last six months.

Following the municipal approval, a letter of intent was sent to the Grosse Pointe Board of Education. On behalf of the board, Assistant Director of Support Services David King authorized the use of Parcels Field as venue for the pre-fireworks musical program.

Of invaluable assistance was the manager of the Lochmoor Club, Peter Behr. Last spring, a series of meetings were held at the club at which contracts were drawn, ideas were exchanged, and principal donations pledged. It was Behr who acted as intermediary in securing the donation of sound technicians and equipment from Slone Barbour of Pointe Electronics. Barbour's contribution makes him one of the major benefactors of the event.

Other patrons of note are Pointe Plaza Shopping Center, Lochmoor Chrysler-Plymouth, Dr. Michael F. Lahey, Forster's Interiors, Grosse Pointe Real Estate Exchange, and the remaining four Grosse Pointes. In addition to his own donation, Gus Russo of Lochmoor Chrysler offered the use of his dealership for telephone solicitation of funds. He also encouraged other auto dealers to participate in this community event.

In May, a meeting was held at Forster's Interiors at which the professional talent and committee members exchanged ideas. As master of ceremonies this year, the association was fortunate in securing the services of Gene Taylor. As producer of the Dick Purtan Show on WCZY radio and entertainment editor for Channel 7 News, Taylor exhibits his talents daily. This resident of the Park is truly an asset to the team.

James Hohmeyer, musical director at University Liggett School and conductor of the Rochester Symphony, has been an unequalled delight. His quick wit and infectious enthusiasm have provided the musical portion of the program with style and class. Mr. Hohmeyer is a resident of the Woods.

It would be an embarrassment not to acknowledge the support and encouragement offered by the following individuals: Lee Meyer, Dr. Edward Kane, Dr. Michael F. Lahey, Mayor George Freeman, Jean Rice and Mike Andrzejczyk. We salute the civic consciousness of the area Boy Scouts who manned the clean-up efforts.

We thank all who have contributed to the success of our efforts, but most of all to our husbands and children who may have, at times, felt somewhat neglected.

WHEW! It's over.

South grads exceptional

To the Editor:

My wife and I recently had the privilege and pleasure of chaperoning the 1985 Grosse Pointe graduation party held at the War Memorial.

It was a treat to observe such well-mannered and well-groomed men and women.

The respect and attention of about 300 of the students at the sunrise service conducted by Monsignor Canfield at the conclusion of the party was most impressive.

Kudos to the parents who arranged the party and kudos to the parents who raised these exceptional young men and women.

To the Editor:

While I agree with M. Ashley Lauve (June 20) that the Grosse Pointe Woods Memorial Day service was "a beautiful tribute to the veterans who served our country for us," I must amend Lauve's recognition of the committee. Lauve states that the ceremony was "very well planned by John Hammel and his committee." Dr. Albert C. Howe also served as co-chairman with Mr. Hammel. Dr. Howe has been instrumental in planning the ceremony since its inception three years ago, and he has also contributed substantially to the memorial on Vernier Road.

The flight of the eagle

In a Fourth of July address in 1851, Daniel Webster, then secretary of state, paid tribute to the American inheritance "of our own peculiar American liberty" in remarks that have special meaning this week as the nation celebrates the freeing of the U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

True, Webster was warning about the threats of secession and disunity which already were being heard in the land even though the Civil War was still a decade distant. But what he had to say about liberty, about fanatics and critics, and about "the steady flight of the American eagle" are as appropriate on July 4, 1985, in our 50 states as they were on July 4, 1851, in the then-31 states of the Union.

"That liberty is characteristic, peculiar and altogether our own," Webster said. "Nothing like it existed in former times nor was known in the most enlightened states of antiquity; while with us its principles have become interwoven into the minds of individual men, connected with our daily opinions and our daily habits until it is, if I may say so, an element of social as well as of political life. And the consequence is that to whatever region an American citizen carries himself, he takes with him, fully developed in his own understanding and experience, our American principles and opinions, and becomes ready at once, in cooperation with others, to apply them to the formation of new governments."

There were critics of our government then as now and Webster was somewhat impatient of them.

"Fellow-citizens," he said, "we must sometimes be tolerant of folly, and patient at the sight of the extreme waywardness of men; but I confess that, when I reflect on the renown of our past history, on our present prosperity and greatness and on what the future hath yet to unfold, and when I see that there are men who can find in all this nothing good, nothing valuable, nothing truly glorious, I feel that all their reason has fled away from them and left the entire control over their judgment and their actions to insanity and fanaticism, and more than all, fellow-citizens, if the purpose of fanatics and disunionists should be accomplished, the patriotic and intelligent of our generation would seek to hide themselves from the scorn of the world and go about to find dishonorable graves."

And then he concluded, in words that still apply today:

"Fellow-citizens, take courage; be of good cheer. We shall come to no such ignoble end. We shall live and not die. During the period allotted to our several lives, we shall continue to rejoice in the return of this anniversary. The ill-omened sounds of fanaticism will be hushed; the ghastly spectres of secession and disunion will disappear, and the enemies of united constitutional liberty, if their hatred cannot be appeased, may prepare to have their eyeballs seared as they behold the steady flight of the American eagle, on his burnished wings, for years and years to come."

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

One cannot, with good conscience, live in the world and not be part of it. Sometimes it is tempting to ignore some of the goings-on out there. So many of events are not worthy of more than a passing notice.

But there are serious stories that command our attention and thoughts, enough to make us want to do something about them.

Perhaps the reason they don't arouse our concern lies in the fact that the events are repeated so often that the importance and relevance of what we are seeing loses some of its impact.

Of course we are horrified by senseless murder, violence, injustices, starving nations and scurrilous officials who betray our trust.

But the effect of constant repetition, beginning with early morning broadcasts and proceeding through the day at regular intervals until bedtime sign-off serves to dull the edge of the very serious impact of the news rather than arousing us to do something about the implied threats to our nation's safety that much of the news contains.

Laws are passed but crime escalates. Prisons are built and criminals walk the streets because there isn't enough prison space. Technology is where it's at, but utilities are higher than ever. Schools are built but graduates come out without the skills necessary to enter college or to get an entry-level job. Welfare perpetuates itself from generation to generation because it seems to be more expedient to give handouts than to reach out a hand to help those so long mired in the system by providing decent housing, training and job opportunities. We spend untold amounts on military support, but must stand helplessly by as our countrymen are held hostage by terrorists.

On July 4, we celebrate the birthday of our country. The birthday of a nation should be the proudest holiday of that nation. No country in history has had more reason to be proud of its beginnings than our own. Born of the desire for freedom, nurtured by faith and courage, founded on the highest ideals conceivable to man, it has faced and fought wars and civil strife, economic depression and political scandals. Nowhere else in the world have individuals the freedom and opportunity that belong to an American citizen. Our Constitution states that we have certain inalienable rights "that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Yet today, more than 200 years later, without being facetious, Americans are apparently being denied a right implied in the Declaration of Independence, the right to travel abroad without fear.

Why are there parts of the world where Americans are in danger when they travel? Is it unrealistic to expect that our government can protect us wherever we go?

On June 14, TransWorld Airlines, Flight 847 took off from Athens. After the plane lifted off, a band of Shiite Muslims commandeered the plane forcing it across the Mediterranean between Beirut and Algiers.

The passengers were severely beaten and one, Robert D. Stetnam, 23, a Navy frogman who was returning home from a repair job on a Navy sewage plant, was brutally beaten, shot and thrown on the runway.

It is frustrating to deal with Middle East adversaries ready to sacrifice their own lives if necessary to carry out their aims.

Since the 44-day embassy siege in Tehran, security has been intensified at American installations around the world. The Pentagon has stepped up training of commandos skills in rescue and strike tactics. But such measures did not prevent the two attacks on the American Embassy in Beirut and the car-bombing in which 241 marines and sailors died.

To add to the situation, four off-duty Marines and two American businessmen were machine-gunned to death in San Salvador along with seven other people. Just hours before, the bomb went off in the Frankfurt airport killing three.

It appears, as President Reagan declared, the criminal acts are not a domestic problem but an attack on all Western civilization.

It is imperative that pressure be put on countries where airport security is erratic or non-existent by such organizations as the International Federation of Airline Pilots Association. If more is not done, then the airlines should refuse to fly there.

It has been indicated that while terrorists are supported by an Iranian-Syrian hegemony, it is likely also, that while Moscow does not control the terror network of Palestine, Libyan, Iranian and Eastern Europe terrorist training concept, it does encourage it. Terrorists' disruption prevents democratic tradition from taking root. It keeps Washington off balance.

Another question arises. Why are Soviet citizens never the object of terrorist hijacking? There are Soviet and East bloc airlines flying into Athens every day. Soviet officials travel. There are Soviet embassies in every capital. Is it because of the KGB, which is swift and sure with reprisals?

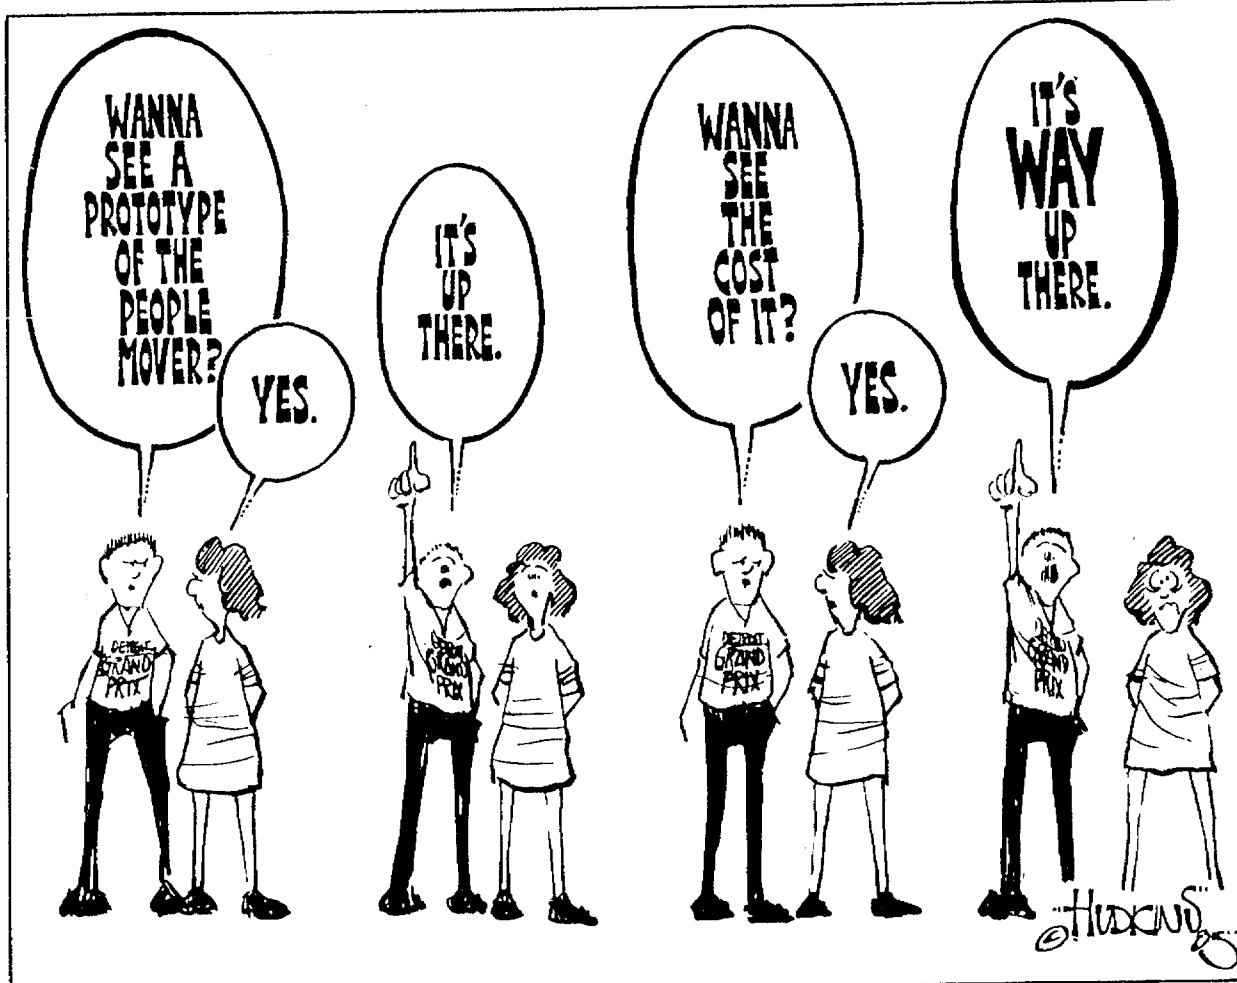

Americans are not terrorists. Up to now America has not made terrorism against Americans terrifying to those who restrain it.

Agreed that now is not the time for reckless action. It would endanger the Americans still held captive. Nor do most Americans want concessions made to the terrorist groups by asking Israel to release the Lebanese Shiites from the Israel prison.

What remains? Patience, hope, prayers, and the knowledge that American warships standing off the coast of Lebanon could attack Lebanon's Bekkaa Valley where the Shiite factions have set up bases under Syrian protection.

Hopefully, also, all the intelligence and assets necessary in co-operation with other nations to identify, apprehend and punish those responsible will be employed, no matter how long it takes.

As long as Americans can be humbled by terrorists who take innocent Americans prisoners to gain political ends, there will be a cloud over the celebration of the birth of American Democracy. On this July 4, we should do all we can to make certain that this latest breach of American freedom will be the last. The voices of older citizens has never been stronger. As a legacy to America and future generations, we should raise our voices, not in reprimand, but in insistence that when we gather together next July 4, all Americans, wherever they are, will be free to celebrate the birthday of our country.

I say

My brother in California sent me an article that had appeared in a local newspaper's Sunday magazine section. It was a long cover story about my former boss and it brought back lots of memories of another world.

He was an actor from the '30s through the early days of television. He was also a director and a land baron — at one time he owned most of what is now Canoga Park in the San Fernando Valley. I had answered an ad for a secretarial position, and as I drove the winding driveway to his house on the top of a hill, I had a feeling it would not be a normal interview. I was right.

The first thing he did was kiss my hand. Now I was wearing white gloves — an absolute necessity when going on an interview — and I wasn't sure if I was supposed to remove my glove or what. I mean, being taught by nuns in the Midwest did not prepare one for those continental niceties.

Then he asked me, nay, demanded to know, "vair" did I get my name. From my husband, I stuttered. Well, if turned out he was from Czechoslovakia and he thought my last name was Czech. It was the first and only time I got a job on the basis of my last name.

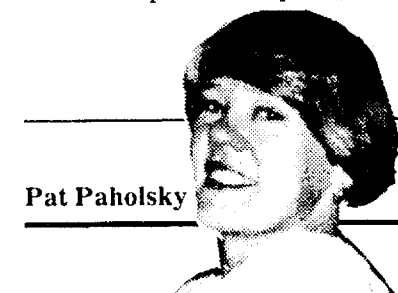

There was a small, very cluttered office in the house and I loved going in to work. I left myself in through the kitchen door, the only door in the house with a key lock, and I had to walk through a number of rooms before I got to the office.

The house was a marvel. Later I found out he tried to buy the San Fernando mission, but the padres wouldn't sell. So he had a house built exactly the way the missions were built in the Old World. The walls were made out of stone that had been quarried from nearby hills and they were at least a foot thick. That eliminated the need for air conditioning and it was always cool inside and slightly damp, almost like a cave.

The hand-painted tiles were imported from Portugal and as they were laid down, some of them were deliberately chipped and cracked to give the illusion of a floor that was centuries old.

All of the doors, except the kitchen door, were massive, hand-carved beauties that also came from Europe. They were hung in pairs throughout the house. The living room had eight. Every morning the boss walked through the house opening all of the doors wide and every afternoon before I went home, I closed those babies. It was better than lifting weights. I had to get behind each one and push. Then when each pair was in place, I had to lift an iron bar and lay it across the mid-section. Used to take me 20 minutes to close the doors.

Because the house was meant to look hundreds of years old, details such as electricity and telephones had to be concealed. That went for electrical outlets and wires, too. In fact, when they gave a party, the only place electric lights were used was in the kitchen for the cooks. The rest of the house was lit by candles — 300 of them. That's what the housekeeper, who had to light them all, told me.

But the art is what made this house unlike anything I've been in before or since. He and his wife traveled extensively and they collected extensively. Most of the house was filled with religious paintings and statues in keeping with the architecture. There were niches in the walls for life-size statues. There was a Della Robbia in the kitchen, and an altar and refectionary tables in the living room and ancient manuscripts in the library. The bathroom was another experience — it was like being in a small Chapel with the Madonna.

I enjoyed just walking through the house and I never got over the feeling that I might round a corner and bump into a conquistador. The house matched its owner completely. He was Old World through and through and he kissed every woman's hand in greeting and in parting. He believed in living on a grand scale, like Hollywood in its heyday of which he had been a part. When he came to this country in mid-1930, he was an established star in the capitals of Europe. Here he was a leading man to actresses like Claudette Colbert and Joan Bennett. Probably his most recognizable movie that still plays on the late show occasionally is "The Bridge of San Luis Rey."

The daily routine for me was to get messages from the answering service and open the mail. By then, he would meander in, look over the mail, return calls and leave me directions for the day's work. Then he'd take a shower, put on a suit and leave for his many appointments. He had an incredibly busy schedule.

He's still young

Anyway, he was the consummate gentleman, very courtly, but he was also an actor, and show biz people are wonderfully different. He'd come to the office every morning wearing a Mexican wedding shirt and a pair of thongs on his feet and that was it. He had a great fondness for the Mexican shirts, which were made of white cotton and elaborately embroidered. The shirt hit about mid-thigh. I never gave it a second thought. He was in his own house and why should he get dressed to come to an office where he lived?

Well, once when my husband came to pick me up, it was a day my boss didn't have any appointments. I got in the car and we started down the winding road, when Rich hit the brakes so hard, I bumped my head. There was my boss, running down the side of the hill, shirt flapping in the wind, thongs flip-flopping on his feet, trying to head us off. He forgot to ask me something. Well, it was a ruse; he only wanted to meet Rich and he had a tendency to do things in a round-about way.

Rich was so stunned to see a man wearing only a long-sleeved white shirt — remember, this was 20 years ago — and even more incredulous when I told him that's how he came to the office every day. I still laugh when I think about my boss thrusting his arm in the car window to shake hands, and Rich, who is never at a loss for words, trying to find his voice.

He's an amazing man, my former boss, still teaching and still dreaming of establishing a national theater. He's the founder of the National Academy of Performing Arts, the only one of its kind chartered by Congress. What's more amazing is his age. When I worked for him 20 years ago, he was 69 for at least three years. I guess it was hard to make that leap to 70. The article my brother sent says he's now 79. I'm glad to know that he hasn't changed, that he's still literally and figuratively younger than his years.

Those of you who remember Francis Lederer may enjoy hearing that he's still going strong.

The Farms auction

... June 8 attracted some 40 to 50 people who came to get a deal on unclaimed bicycles, mopeds, office furniture and other items. Here Leonard MacEachern of the Farms walks away with a bike he bought for $60. Daughter Meghan behind him is in a child seat ready for Dad to pedal away. The auction raised $887 for the city, said Lt. Ignatius Backman, who was in charge of the event.

Brighton to begin program series

Brighton Hospital's new series of free community education programs which began July 2 will focus on helping family members to understand alcoholism and chemical dependency and learn how this disease can be treated.

The hospital hosts the education program on the first Tuesday evening of each month beginning at 7 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

The series begins in July with a film and discussion of how family members may be inadvertently helping a loved one to keep drinking. On Aug. 6 the series continues with a showing of "Intervention," a film that depicts how family members, acting as a team under the direction of a trained counselor, can confront their loved one and insist that he or she obtain treatment.

Other topics to be covered from September through December include how parents can talk with their children about alcohol and substance abuse, how family members are affected by the disease, and what families need to know about alcohol, marijuana and cocaine.

Each year Brighton Hospital treats more than 1,000 people for alcoholism and related chemical dependency through its inpatient program and another 1,000 on an outpatient basis. The hospital is located northwest of Detroit just off the I-96 freeway and is within an hour's drive of most communities in southeast Michigan.

A complete schedule for the free Community Education Program through December 1985 can be obtained by calling 227-1211, ext. 276.

Connie Stella, at the left, and Karin Montag offer a personalized grocery shopping service to residents.

They'll do the shopping

By Nancy Parmenter

That shiny red Beetle convertible with the white top nipping around town is the delivery van of the new Market Basket Grosse Pointe Personal Shopping Service. Connie Stella and Karin Montag, both of the Park, recently organized their enthusiasm for good food into a service offering advice on selection and preparation and the legwork involved in tracking down common and uncommon items for their clients.

"We're still fledgling," said shopping service partner Stella.

"We've got so much energy — we're just waiting to help our customers," added Montag.

Montag, a vegetarian, brings an expertise in vegetable preparation to the service. "She's the produce woman," said Stella. "She knows how to do all the things you see people doing in produce aisles."

Montag shied from giving away too many trade secrets, but did hint that knocking on melons doesn't do much good unless you know what to listen for. "It has to have that hollow sound. It just takes experience — you can't describe it." A more dependable method is to smell the stem end, she said. If it smells like melon, it's ready to eat.

"I've always had an interest in natural foods," Montag said. "People are more conscious of nutrition and additives now. I can suggest so many ways to prepare vegetables."

Whether a client wants advice and assistance in preparing unfamiliar dishes, or just needs someone to shop while he or she is working on the next big deal, the Market Basket shopping service will oblige. For an hourly rate, Stella or Montag will run errands around town, pick up a few things at the local supermarket, or scour metropolitan Detroit for an elusive, exotic must have for an elegant party.

"So far, our customers are an even mixture of people who do a lot of entertaining, but don't have time for preparation, and people who just need us to run some errands," Stella said.

The errand service is designed to help people without transportation, the elderly, and the homebound, like new mothers. "Maybe they just need some Pampers," Montag said. "We're offering our services with a gift certificate — hoping it will catch on as a gift idea at baby showers."

Both women have lived in Europe. Montag spent much of her childhood in Germany, and Stella attended college in England. "We're both interested in European cooking," Stella said. "I gained 20 pounds when I lived in England." The stodgy English steak-and-kidney-pie image is misleading, she said. "They make great pastries."

Although the focus of the service is on shopping, the partners are willing to lend a hand with other phases of party preparation. "Both of us like to see a project all the way through," Stella said. "We can help with menu-planning, purchasing, and preparation. But that's not the main direction we're going with it now. We'd like to do more of the shopping."

Their flier offers to travel to local specialty shops and Eastern Market to select produce, meats, breads, pasta, cheese, wine and specialty foods.

"It's a luxury, but it's also a convenience," Stella said. "It's nice to have somebody show up at your door with what you need."

Painting, cartooning for youngsters at War Memorial

The War Memorial will offer a special summer painting class for youngsters aged 6-9, Monday through Friday, July 8-12. From 9:30 to 11 a.m. students will be able to explore possibilities in paint media by using a variety of methods and activities.

Another class, "Cartooning," will be offered to 10 to 13-year-olds on the same days from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. The class is an introduction to cartooning techniques that will develop the unique insights and imagination of children. While learning the methods of producing comic strip art, students will acquire some of the history of political and entertainment caricature.

Both classes are $18 each and include all supplies. They will be taught by Margaret Hall who holds a master's degree in art education and for 14 years has taught art to children throughout the Detroit area, including the Grosse Pointe Academy and WTVS-Channel 56.

Hall will also teach "Printmaking" for ages 6-9, Monday through Friday, July 15-19. A variety of processes will be used to produce compositions incorporating repeated color, texture, and pattern. The class will meet from 9:30 to 11 a.m.

On the same dates, from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., she will teach "Papier Mache" for ages 10-13. These classes are $18 each.

Registration may be made in person or by mail.

Moped operators need license

Moped operators must be registered and the operator licensed to ride on public roads and streets, according to Secretary of State Richard Austin.

Austin's advice follows numerous complaints from the public and law enforcement officials that many individuals mistakenly believe they can operate mopeds on highways without either a license or registration.

Operators of these vehicles must have a driver license or a special moped license, be at least 15 years of age and register the vehicle with the Department of State. In addition, all operators under 19 years of age must wear helmets.

Under the Michigan Vehicle Code, mopeds are prohibited on freeways, must share a traffic lane with other vehicles and are prohibited from operating on sidewalks. The code defines mopeds as two- or three-wheeled vehicles, with no more than two-brake horsepower and a top speed of 30 miles an hour.

ON THE JOB INJURY

Lower back injuries have become a headache for both the employer and employee of many companies. These types of accidents are the most common and costly of all. In many comparative studies chiropractic has returned the injured worker more quickly and at less cost than medical treatment. Lower back injuries have almost reached epidemic proportions in the work place. In addition to specific treatment, a "low back school" is presented to our patients to teach the proper mechanics of posture and lifting to avoid re-injury. Note: After 10 days from date of injury you may see a care from any professional you choose. In the first 10 days, authorization must be obtained from your employer and workers' compensation dept. to receive care from anyone other than the company doctor.

Brought to you as a community service by Dr. David Jantz. If you have any further questions call or write the clinic, Grosse Pte. Wds. Chiropractic Clinic, 20217 Mack GPW, phone 881-7677. All insurances accepted.

Centenarian

About 40 members of the Dossin family helped Edith V. Dossin, seated in the center, celebrate her 105th birthday recently at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. A lifelong resident, she was born June 12, 1880.

Bi-county Chop Shop task force formed

"We began to work on it eight months ago," Ford said. "We compiled the statistics and saw that the problem was particularly bad on the east side." While Ford downplayed his role in forming the task force, he did admit to making the initial contact with O'Hair.

"I was quite surprised it worked," Ford said. "I didn't think it would get off the ground." He said that with the limitations in manpower and resources of a relatively small department, "we could never have done it by ourselves."

O'Hair and Macomb County Prosecutor Carl Marlinga held a press conference Friday to announce the task force. The two counties account for 76 percent, or 59,090, of the auto thefts in the state. Both counties have experienced huge increases in the last year: 17 percent in Wayne County, 19 percent in Macomb.

The prosecutors plan a crack-down in the justice system. "We are not going through this yeoman effort only to see them back on the street," O'Hair said.

"Limited, careful use of the grand jury could be advantageous," Marlinga said. He said grand juries could be used on people convicted of UDAA (unlawful driving away of an automobile), a relatively minor crime. "We could require them to tell us who their sources are, who their connections are," he said.

The two prosecutors have also donated staff personnel to the effort. They urged residents to report suspicious information to their local police department, who would pass it along to the task force.

Task force activities will include surveillance and infiltration of salvage yards and suspected chop shops. Because of the undercover nature of the operation, the police declined to give specific details on the numbers of personnel or the exact activities.

The private sector has already helped by donating $200,000 to the project. Three insurance companies — Allstate, State Farm, and AAA Michigan — were instrumental in creating the task force through ACT, a coalition of insurance companies, law enforcement agencies, auto manufacturers, and banks interested in fighting car theft. Hudsons and the Eastland Security Police Department are also participating.

In recent months, companies have taken steps of their own to combat the problem. Car manufacturers will step up the marking of car parts at the factory. Allstate announced that it will no longer permit the use of used sheet metal parts in car accident repairs. This will increase the initial cost of car repairs, O'Hair conceded, but will put a crimp in the market for used parts from chop shops.

An estimated 60 percent of cars stolen in metropolitan Detroit end up in chop shops, where their parts fetch as much as $22,000, O'Hair said.

"The key to this is coordination," said Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano. "This problem knows no geographical boundaries."

Marlinga, too, cited cooperation as the most important factor of the project. "I'm proud of that new spirit of cooperation," he said. "We have the job of showing that south-eastern Michigan can work together in a united effort."

FACTS OF LAW

by Ellen C. Wallaert

Fish living in public waterways belong to the state and its people, but become the property of the licensed fisherman once he has removed the fish from the water.

The owner of an automobile will be liable for damage caused by a family member who is driving the car for family or pleasure purposes.

It is illegal to burn woods or prairie lands without giving notice to adjoining owners that the fires are about to be started.

Food labels that promote low sodium content must by law explain the precise salt content of the food product.

Teen trips

You and your friends want to go to Cedar Point but have no way to get there? You're feeling bored and which you could do something a little out of the ordinary?

If that's the case, then you're in luck. The Grosse Pointe War Memorial has planned three bus trips to summer fun destinations for Grosse Pointe teens who will be entering grades 7 to 10 in the fall. The deadline to sign up for any of the trips is Monday, July 8, at 5 p.m.

The first trip will be to Cedar Point Wednesday, July 10. The bus will leave the War Memorial at 7:30 a.m. and return at 9 p.m. The $30-per-person cost includes transportation and ticket which includes all the rides and live shows.

The second trip is scheduled for Wednesday, July 17, when staff from local bike shops will take the group on a 30-mile round trip bicycle ride to Metro Beach. Once there you can enjoy swimming in the pool or lake, roller skating, volleyball, tennis, shuffleboard, miniature golf or just lounging around enjoying your friends' company.

Cyclists will depart the Center at 9:30 a.m. and return around 5 p.m. Adult escorts will accompany the group, both front and rear, and a truck will be on hand in case any repairs are needed. Cost is $7.

The third trip, Wednesday, July 24, will be a day at Four Bears Water Park where the featured activities include swimming, picnicking, a water slide, miniature golf, paddle and bumper boats, go-carts and batting cages.

The bus will leave the Center at 10 a.m. and return at 5 p.m. The $27-per-person cost includes transportation, admission ticket and use of the water slide. Go-carts and batting cages are extra, so anyone wishing to participate in these activities should bring extra spending money.

A rain date of Thursday, July 25, has been scheduled, and since there are no refunds, registrants should be sure that they can go on either day.

All three trips require a signed, parental permission slip. Once you've reached your destination you will be on your own until it is time to leave. You may pack your own lunch for any of the trips, or take advantage of each area's concessions.

Any parents who can chaperone any of these special day trips for teens, are urged to call the War Memorial at 881-7511 by Monday, July 8.

Boat Club meets

Jean Dodenhoff, curator of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, will speak at the general meeting of the Farms Boat Club Wednesday, July 10, at 7:30 p.m. in the Pier Park recreation building.

Farms residents may attend. Refreshments will be served.

Heat illnesses

To inform the public of some symptoms of heat-related illnesses, first aid measures to take and when to seek medical help, Henry Ford Hospital has set up its annual summer-time "Cool-It Line," a three-minute taped message which can be heard 24 hours a day. To learn more, call 876-7100.

Antique boat show

In August the War Memorial will take boat enthusiasts to Hessel, Michigan's annual Antique Boat Show to see more than 100 beautifully maintained vintage speedboats, many of them dating back to the 1920s.

The bus will leave the Center at 9 a.m. Friday Aug. 9, and return Sunday, Aug. 11, around 5:30 p.m.

First night lodging will be at Travelers Motel in Mackinaw City where there will be a beachfront steak cook-out. On Saturday travelers will have the option of taking the bus to Hessel, or for an additional $15, being transported to the juried show via Mackinaw's Arnold Ferry service.

In addition to the boat show, the quaint town of Hessel in the Upper Peninsula will host an arts and crafts show. Saturday night's lodging will be at the Park Place Hotel in Traverse City. Following a leisurely brunch Sunday morning, the group will begin their journey home, stopping in Frankenmuth for a mid-afternoon meal.

Grosse Pointe and boating enthusiast Tom Candler, who has attended the one-day show in previous years, describes the day as a "festival of polished, wooden hulls," the largest collection in the Midwest.

The $199 cost per person, based on double occupancy, includes transportation, motel accommodations, all meals except Saturday dinner, and a guide. Additional cost for single supplement is $64.

Reservations may be made by sending a check or money order for full payment to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

GP Singles

Mal Sillars, WDIV-TV Channel 4 weatherman and meteorologist, will be the featured speaker Friday, July 5, 7 p.m. when the Grosse Pointe Singles convene in the library of the War Memorial.

An afterglow dance will immediately follow the general meeting at the Jefferson Yacht Club, 24504 Jefferson Ave., St. Clair Shores, with live music of the Doug Di Maria duo.

Members will receive information about the Widowed Group, Let's Talk Group, and the potluck BBQ party planned for the 13th of July.

Any single adult 39 and up living in the area is cordially invited to attend.

For information, call 882-0316 or 445-1286.

Hungarian picnic

The Hungarian American Cultural Center will hold its seventh annual picnic Saturday, July 13, from 1 p.m. to midnight and Sunday, July 14, from noon to 10 p.m. The picnic will be held at 26257 Goddard Road, Taylor.

The picnic will feature home-made Hungarian food and pastries and there will be refreshments, entertainment and live dance music.

Admission is $1. For more information, call 326-7750 or 946-6261.

Protecting against drinking drivers

A new pamphlet "How to Protect Yourself from Drinking Drivers," is available at all Secretary of State branch offices. It tells how to recognize drivers who may have been drinking, when drinking drivers may be encountered on highways and what can be done to avoid them.

Secretary of State Richard Austin said that a total of 1,331 highway deaths occurred in Michigan in 1983 and 1,551 in 1984. Alcohol was involved in more than half in both years.

Despite efforts of public and private agencies, law enforcement and safety organizations, alcohol-involved highway deaths have increased, he said.

Labor facts

The Age Discrimination in Employment Act in 1967, as amended, prohibits help-wanted advertisements which indicate preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on age. For example, terms such as "girl," and "35-55," on age, according to "A Working Woman's Guide to Her Job Rights," published by the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Trombly gets slide as PTO donation

The Board of Education Monday night, June 24, accepted a $2,700 gift from the Trombly PTO.

The gift will purchase a "Zoom" slide for the school's playfield, school officials said. The slide is described as seven feet high, with a full spiral turn. It is also considered completely safe for children's use, according to information provided to the school board.

The board accepted the gift with appreciation.

Ban the tan

Summer is the time to look healthier by getting a suntan, but there is nothing "healthy" about a tan. Tanned skin is damaged, and sunburn can lead to a higher risk of developing skin cancer.

To learn how to protect your skin from summer's sun, call Henry Ford Hospital's Health Care Hotline at 876-2800.

The King of Thailand is into jazz. He said to be a sax and clarinet man of note, and his own compositions include "Friday Night Rag" and "Hungry Men's Blues."

"Thieves' ears" are ears without earlobes.

Old Kerby

Someone said there isn't much history to a school.

When Old Kerby School goes this summer, whatever history it does have will go with it.

The building, constructed in 1908, will be razed this summer to provide the Farms municipal offices with more parking. The city bought the school in 1981 and made the final payment in May.

The school was closed to students when the new elementary school of the same name opened in 1949. Its fate had been sealed 20 years earlier when the fledgling Grosse Pointe Public Schools' Board of Education decided on the sites for the system's new school buildings.

Old Kerby will end up like other schools from the days before the consolidation of the five fractional school districts into a single unit. Old Trombly was used for storage before it was razed. Cadieux School is now the system's administrative offices. Vernier school, built in 1916, now belongs to the village of Grosse Pointe Shores, which used the building as a voting precinct and administrative offices while the village hall was renovated.

What history there is of Kerby School comes from former students at the school.

Lt. Ignatius Backman of the Farms police department said he attended school at Old Kerby for three years. The area around the school was farm land where the parking lot and homes on Cambridge are now, he added.

Some of those who attended school at Old Kerby have said they may be interested in obtaining a brick from the building, something he doesn't think he wants, Backman said.

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society has little information about the school and the new Kerby's Heritage Hall is also devoid of information about its namesake building. New Kerby does have a half-moon window that was once in Old Kerby and has been promised another, now over the front entrance of the building, before demolition begins.

The best information about the school comes from oral history tapes collected by the historical society and now catalogued by the public library.

Residents talking about the early days of the area remember horse-drawn wagons along the two-rut road that was then Kerby, the rarity of automobiles, and using the well to keep perishables fresh. And they remember the farms.

The school was built on a corner of property once part of the Beaupre Farm. Two teachers at the school, Ethel and Ellen Tucker, came from a farm farther down Kerby Road. Ethel Tucker was the first principal of Mason School, according to oral histories.

Those who went to Old Kerby remember 30 to 40 students to a classroom, often with more than one grade in each. The curriculum took students through the eighth grade before sending them off to high school, which, before South was built in 1928, was held in another part of Cadieux School on St. Clair.

Since it was closed to students, the building has served a number of functions, including as the schools' Instructional Material Center, which has moved to Barnes. Maintenance functions once down in old Kerby are now handled out of South.

There is a penciled message on a clipboard hanging on the wall in Old Kerby that reads "3/15/85 Maintenance department never to return."

When the school system vacated the building, it left behind film cases and slide reels canisters.

One room also holds desks once used in typing classes. The rooms principally used by the maintenance department have been stripped of anything useful.

The historical society did get a chance to go through the building and came away with a few documents, according to curator Jean Dodenhoff. One of the documents found was an architectural rendering of Grosse Pointe High School. Also found was a photograph of the 1928 All-Star all-girl baseball team, she added.

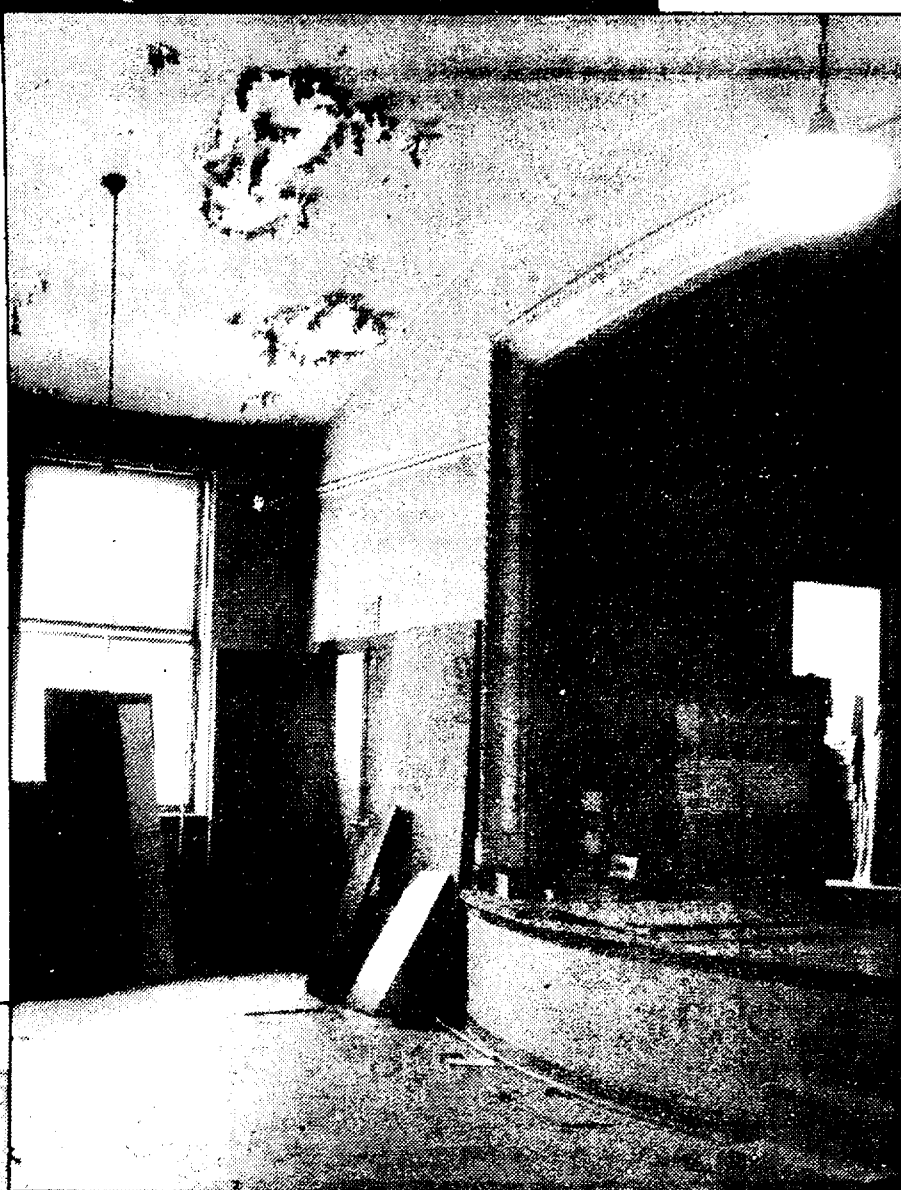

The Farms is still putting together the specifications for the bid proposals for demolition of the building and building the parking lot.

Farms officials said. The city has federal block grant funds available and can back some of the work with an allocation from its coming budget, officials said.

From Another Pointe Of View

By Janet Mueller

Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp's International Exchange Program began in 1970, when a 90-voice choir toured England, Belgium and Germany. Since then, nearly 3,500 high school musicians wearing the red, white and blue uniform of the camp operated each summer at three sites about six miles east of Whitehall, Mich., have visited 300 communities in England, France, Italy, Germany, Austria, Luxembourg, Belgium, The Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland and Liechtenstein.

In return, over 5,000 members of 80 European and Japanese band, orchestra, choir and dance groups have come to Michigan to perform in communities throughout the state. This year, one of those groups — the Bremerhaven Jugend-Sinfonieorchester of Bremerhaven, West Germany — is coming to Grosse Pointe.

Members of the 46-piece orchestra will stay in private homes while they're here, reports Nathan Judson, chairperson of the committee making arrangements for the group's visit. He conducted the Blue Lake International Orchestra during its 1984 European tour, which included a stop in Bremerhaven last July. Blue Lake groups stay in private homes while touring Europe, foreign groups do the same when visiting Michigan, and some young Grosse Pointers, members of last summer's Blue Lake International Orchestra hosted by the Bremerhaven Orchestra in 1984, will be hosting the West German young people whose families they stayed with then.

The Bremerhaveners arrive in The Pointe next Wednesday, July 10, and depart on July 14. They will appear in concert here next Thursday, July 11, at 7:30 p.m. at Grosse Pointe North High School, performing outdoors, weather permitting. There will be no admission charge, but donations will be gratefully accepted.

The audience is advised to come bearing lawn chairs and/or blankets, as North High will provide the concert setting, but not the seating. Anything more you want to know about the Bremerhaven Orchestra's visit? Mr. Judson may be reached at 886-4914 or 343-2240. He'll be happy to answer any and all questions about the German Orchestra, one of several musical groups scheduled to visit Michigan during 1985 as part of Blue Lake's International Exchange Program.

Pointe Garden Tour Details

As promised a few weeks ago, here are details on the Grosse Pointe Garden Club Council's 12th Annual Garden Tour. It's a three-day event, running from 1 to 5 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 19, 20 and 21. It features eight private gardens, plus the Herb Garden at the Grosse Pointe Academy and the Trial Gardens at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

They had a ball . . . at the Grand Prix Ball for Music Hall

Grand Prix Week was kicked off in high fashion at the third annual Grand Prix Ball to benefit Music Hall Center for the Performing Arts. Over 750 of metropolitan Detroit's civic and business leaders attended or contributed to the gala evening at the Westin Hotel, which raised more than $100,000 to benefit Music Hall's operating funds.

The elegant black tie charity party added to the international ambience of race week.

Among the guests were Michigan Governor and Mrs. James Blanchard, Detroit Renaissance's Robert E. McCabe and Mrs. McCabe, more than 20 drivers from various teams participating in the race and many, many Pointers, among them Dr. and Mrs. Kim K. Lie, pictured dancing at right, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Beltaire pictured at left below, chatting with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kuhn, and (far right below) Mrs. Thomas Lee Schoenith.

Immediately following the cocktail reception, race car driver/spokesman Jackie Stewart offered a toast to the drivers, welcoming them to the 1985 Detroit Grand Prix and hoping this year's race would be as safe as those of previous years.

Robert P. Roselle, chairman of Music Hall's board, also welcomed the guests, who danced throughout the evening to the music of J.C. Heard and his orchestra.

A highlight of the ball, co-chaired by Grosse Pointe's Mrs. Joseph A. Vance Jr. and by Mr. and Mrs. R. Jamison Williams, was Hattie Belkin's presentation of the American premiere of the Saint Laurent rive gauche 1985-86 fall/winter collection.

Pair exchange vows in May

Saint Charles Borromeo Catholic Church, Port Charlotte, Fla., was the setting Saturday, May 25, for the wedding of Susan Marie Ray, daughter of William E. Ray, of Memphis, Tenn., and the late Mrs. Ray, and Archie D. King Jr., son of former North Oxford Road residents Mr. and Mrs. A. David King who now make their home in Sarasota, Fla.

The noon ceremony at which Father David Arle presided was followed by a reception at the North Port Country Club, North Port, Fla., after which the newlyweds left to cruise to Nassau in The Bahamas. They are at home in North Port.

The bride wore a traditional, white gown, layered with Chantilly lace and designed with a Queen Anne neckline. Matching lace trimmed the cuffs of her bishop sleeves. Her full skirt fell into a chapel train, edged in lace as was her fingertip veil caught by a Camelot cap trimmed with lace and pearls. She carried an arrangement of white gardenias and baby's-breath.

Linda Graver, honor attendant for her sister, and bridesmaid Marguerite King, the bridegroom's sister, wore tea length dresses, pale blue in color and covered with a layer of lace and illusion. They carried bouquets of silk gardenias and greens.

John D. King acted as best man for his brother, Randy Kamlay, Mike Schomer and Craig Barker seated the guests.

The mother of the bridegroom accented her long-sleeved, tea length dress, soft pink in color, with pink and white accessories. Carnations and baby's-breath formed her corsage.

Among the out-of-town guests were Janet King, the bridegroom's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Evans (Mrs. Evans is another King sister), and James Motschall, all of Grosse Pointe.

Others included the bridegroom's aunt, Mrs. Mary Hengstebeck, of Royal Oak, Douglas Krizanik, of Allen Park, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Erwin, of Mount Clemens, and Robert Nichols, of Minneapolis, Minn.

Camp Cavell set to open

The YWCA's Camp Cavell, largest girls' camp in Michigan, is taking reservations for its 72nd season which opens July 14 and runs through Aug. 10, offering four general and specialized camping sessions ranging in length from six to 14 days.

Girls between the ages of 7 and 17 are eligible to register for programs at Cavell, located near Lexington, where much of the activity is centered on 1800 feet of Lake Huron waterfront.

Living accommodations are year-round cabins arranged in three units. Campers are housed by age and grade levels, six to eight campers and a counselor per cabin. The staff, under the direction of Jill Laidlaw, administrator, includes qualified counselors, a Food Services supervisor, a nurse, grounds and buildings superintendent, skilled riding instructors from England and a Waterfront Activities instructor.

Water sports are the most popular activity, closely followed by English Style Horseback Riding. Nearly 90 percent of the campers participate in the latter "additional charge" feature.

Other activities include softball, tennis, volleyball, badminton, dramatics, dancing, campcraft, nature study, music and ecology, plus special events and campfire sessions highlighting each girl's camping experience. There are overnight camp-outs and hikes, and spontaneous projects conceived and carried through by the girls and their counselors.

Fees at Cavell, fully licensed by the State of Michigan, vary according to the length of the session. YWCA membership is required and included in the camping fee. Partial campships are available through local YWCA branches for girls needing financial assistance.

Additional information may be obtained and registration made by calling the YWCA Camp Cavell Office, 961-9220, Extension 13.

Send Kid to Moon campaign begins

George N. Bashara Jr. is chairman of "Send A Kid to the Moon," the Detroit Science Center membership campaign launched early in June that allows a sponsor to choose a school or classroom in the metropolitan Detroit area to receive 35 student memberships to the center.

With the cooperation of the Math and Science Department of the Detroit Public Schools, each sponsor will visit his or her school to present the memberships which entitle the students to free admission to the Science Center for one year, discounts on workshops and at the Gift Shop and invitations to special events.

A grant from the Hudson-Webber Foundation has enabled the DSC to develop the campaign, which has a goal of 50 sponsors for a total of 1,750 new student members. Further information may be obtained by contacting the center's director of Development, Elaine Block, at 577-8400.

Maureen Sullivan

Miss Sullivan to be married

Dr. and Mrs. Michael Richard Sullivan, of Bedford Road, are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Maureen Margaret, to Thomas Arthur Phelps Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Arthur Phelps, of Union Lake. A September wedding is planned.

Miss Sullivan, a Grosse Pointe South High School graduate, received her Bachelor of Arts degree in Communications from the University of Michigan this May.

Her fiancé, who holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Actuarial Mathematics from the University of Michigan, is employed by League General Insurance Company of Southfield. He is a Walled Lake Central High School graduate.

Make August wedding date

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Dennehy, of Kensington Road, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Nora Marie, to Gary R. Glenn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Glenn, of Northville. A mid-August wedding is planned.

Ms. Dennehy, a 1980 graduate of Our Lady Star of the Sea High School, expects to receive a Bachelor of Arts degree in Speech Communication, Theatre and Journalism from Wayne State University in December. She is employed part time at the law firm of Philo, Atkinson, Steinberg, White, Vigliotti and Keenan.

Her fiancé holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in Economics from the University of Michigan and was graduated from the University of Michigan Law School. He is currently practicing with the firm of Jaffe, Snider, Raitt and Heuer in Detroit.

Make dates for Meadow Brook music

Former Detroit Symphony Orchestra Music Director Sixten Ehrling and pianist Andre Watts will help the DSO celebrate the Fourth of July weekend in Meadow Brook Music Festival Chrysler Concerts at 8 p.m. tonight, Thursday, July 4, and Sunday, July 7.

Tonight's concert features two works by American composers: William Schuman's American Festival Overture, written in 1939 for Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony to perform at the American Festival, and Howard Hanson's Symphony No. 2, commissioned by the Boston Symphony and performed on that orchestra's 50th anniversary in 1930. The program opens with Beethoven's "Lenore" Overture No. 3.

Sunday's concert opens with Richard Wagner's Overture to "Rienzi." The second half features the last work Sergei Prokofiev ever completed, his Symphony No. 7.

Watts will play Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto No. 5 at both Meadow Brook performances. Tickets, ranging in price from $10 (lawn seating) to $16, are available at the Meadow Brook box office, 377-2010, Hudson's and other Ticket World locations and all AAA branch offices.

To chair speech contest for ITC

Grosse Pointe's Mary Evelyn Self, a member of the Mid-Century International Training in Communication (ITC) Club, will serve as on-site chairman, speech contest, at the ITC convention running next Wednesday, July 10, through Saturday, July 13, at the Detroit Westin Hotel.

The event will bring ITC (formerly International Toastmistress Clubs) members together from almost every state and many countries throughout the world.

Individual training and development of communication and leadership skills are ITC's goals. "ITC has been invaluable to me in helping make me a more efficient and competent executive in the many organizations I have been affiliated with over the years," says Mrs. Self.

"It has made me a better conversationalist and more sensitive to others."

Mrs. Self's community activities include the United Community Services Tribute Fund Council, the Grosse Pointe Symphony Society and the Health Education Council of Grosse Pointe.

Art-ful talent combinations

Grosse Pointe Artists Association members joined forces with Grosse Pointe Garden Center members for the Garden Center's recent "Celebration of the Seasons" salute to the Detroit Institute of Arts' 100th anniversary.

Among those combining their talents for presentations at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial during the celebration were watercolor artist Margaret Collins and monotype artist Kay Bessel Smith. Watercolor artist Elizabeth Dulmage combined her work with an arrangement by The Pointe Garden Club's Sally Schueler. Rose Marie Mebus did an arrangement, and collage artist Corinne Dolega complimented her own work with flowers.

Watercolor artist Rita Fincham's work was shown with an assemblage by Matina Hall. Watercolor artist Erin Hile displayed her work with an arrangement by the Windmill Pointe Garden Club's Sue Abbott.

Corinne Dolega and Amy Rowe, of the Grosse Pointe Shores Farm and Garden Club, created an arrangement to compliment the work of watercolor artist Pat Penoyar.

Watercolor artist Clara Peters' work was shown in combination with a display by the Orchid Society's Carolyn Butcher and Karen Muir.

Watercolor artist Hortie Senter's work was presented in combination with a display by Doris Woerner, of the Windmill Pointe Garden Club. Watercolor artist Carol A. Sinclair, who also had three paintings at the Detroit Artists Market's Annual Garden Sale during "Celebration of the Seasons" week, showed her work with a garden arrangement by Sue Russell and Vicky Haydon.

Don't place infant in auto 'hot seat'

If your child lets out a cry this summer when you're placing him/her in a child safety seat, don't assume it is merely a case of infant irritability. The youngster may be getting burned, says the National Safety Council.

The safety seat's belt buckles and metal frame can become excessively hot during the summer months, especially when the temperature is in the 90s. Cases of small children suffering actual burns because of hot seats have been reported.

Learn financial planning skills

Learn about tax shelters, fixed and variable returns and how to set personal financial and investment goals at a Financial Planning and Investments workshop conducted by Frances Twiddy, of Offerman & Company, on three Wednesday evenings at Assumption Cultural Center.

Fee for the classes, which start Wednesday, July 3, and will run from 7:30 to 9 p.m., is $15. The number to call for registration information is 779-6111.

View Manet prints at DIA

The first major exhibition of Edouard Manet's prints continues in the Detroit Institute of Arts' Schwartz Graphic Arts Galleries through Sunday, July 21. The exhibition is a Centennial event on the DIA's 100th anniversary celebration schedule.

It was organized by International Exhibitions Foundation of Washington, D.C., and includes approximately 80 outstanding works, primarily from the George A. Lucas Collection of the Maryland Institute, College of Arts, which is on indefinite loan to the Baltimore Museum of Arts, and from the Samuel P. Avery Collection of the New York Public Library.

The Rouart Collection of the Detroit Institute of Arts is represented by 11 rare and beautiful sheets.

Manet (1832-1883) was a consummate draftsman who appreciated the possibilities of the etching medium. He worked and reworked his plates to achieve the effect of spontaneity. His prints are not slavish reproductions of his paintings, but rather interpretations of them.

His efforts put him at the forefront of the revival of etching heralded by Baudelaire and other critics in the 1860s.

Manet's lithographs are more impromptu, drawn directly on the lithographic stone with a grease crayon and often based on compositions from his paintings. Many of the final results have the freedom associated with drawings.

"The Prints of Edouard Manet" includes his major lithographs and a group of his most important and rare etchings. The majority are impressions made in Manet's lifetime. They include some multiple impressions that illustrate the intermediate states of his plates.

Among the noteworthy works in the exhibition are The Absinthe Drinker (1861), one of the artist's earliest efforts to translate a full composition into the etching medium; The Spanish Singer (1961-62), one of several etchings that show his enthusiasm for Spanish art of the time, especially Goya; and Dead Christ with Angels (1866-67), the largest and most fully realized etching of his career.

Lithographs include Manet's first, The Balloon (1862), which documents his interest in daily life, and The Races (1865-68), a marvelous sketchy and loose print that is considered one of the greatest lithographs of the 19th century.

Special additions to the Detroit showing only include three rare first states of Manet prints: The Toilette, 1862, etching, lent by R. Stanley Johnson, of Chicago; Dead Christ with Angels, 1866-67, etching and aquatint, from the DIA's permanent collection; and Les Courses, 1865-72, lithograph, from the collection of the Indiana University Art Museum.

Also in the Schwartz Graphic Arts Galleries is an adjunct exhibition of prints by Francisco Goya (Spanish, 1746-1828) whose works were an important influence on Manet. Included are loans from the Meadows Museum of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., of selected etchings — notable for Goya's use of aquatint — from the Caprichos, including Goya's well-known masterwork "The sleep of reason produces monsters."

On view from the DIA's own permanent collection are selections from Goya's Tauromaquia, representing the bullfight, and his enigmatic Disparates. The Bulls of Bordeaux (1825), praised as the first great work of art in lithography, is on loan from the Toledo Museum of Art.

Guest director Jay McKean Fisher, curator of prints, drawings and photographs at the Baltimore Museum of Art, wrote the fully-illustrated scholarly catalogue which accompanies the exhibition (128pp., $14.50 at the DIA Museum Shop).

The Manet exhibition is open to the public without charge during regular museum hours: 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday. Following Detroit, the show will travel to Berkeley, Calif., St. Louis, Mo., Huntsville, Ala., and Toronto, Canada.

Warren shows art of Forterek-Kaiser

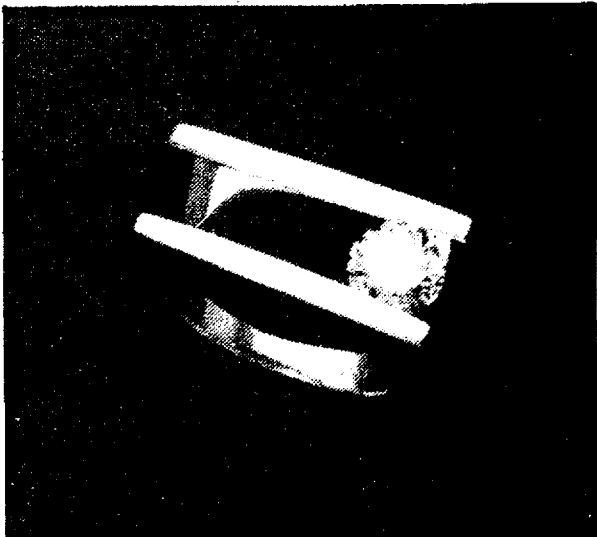

A one-woman art exhibit in Warren City Hall running through July 31 spotlights the work of Woods resident Kasimira Forterek-Kaiser, a graduate of Viktoria Schule, Breslau, Germany, who moved to the United States in 1956.

She is a member of the Progresssive, Warren and Grosse Pointe Art Associations and the Macomb Arts Council, and of the Newman Studio Agency Inc., Grosse Pointe, and works primarily in oil.

Included in her Warren exhibit are realistic portraits, landscapes, seascapes and florals.

Woman's Health

Be Alert for Ectopic Pregnancy

By William T. Mixson, M.D.,
President

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

The female reproductive system is remarkable, especially in its role during pregnancy. Normally, the system produces and releases a healthy egg from the ovary, then sets up a rendezvous with active sperm from the male. For the next five or six days the fertilized egg almost nonchalantly moves down the fallopian tube and into the uterus, where it clings to the uterine wall and begins to grow.

That's the scenario for about 99 of every 100 pregnancies. But Mother Nature doesn't always play by the rules — and in about one pregnancy out of every 100 the scenario is dangerously altered.

Instead of reaching the uterus, the fertilized egg either is unable to make it out of the fallopian tube or, in rare cases, slips outside the tube into the pelvic area, where it attaches and begins to grow. This is an "ectopic" pregnancy, or pregnancy in the wrong place.

The results can be dangerous. If not found soon enough, the enlarging embryo can break open or rupture the fallopian tube, causing heavy internal bleeding. In the pelvic area the embryo can press against vital organs, causing pain and bleeding. Less than 300 women died last year because of pregnancy and childbirth, but hemorrhage due to ectopic pregnancy was the major cause.

Ectopics can be the great pre-tenders, mimicking symptoms of various conditions. Early signs may be that of a normal pregnancy, or a slightly altered menstrual period. As the pregnancy progresses, you may experience

- Pain — either sudden and sharp or a chronic, dull ache that comes and goes.
- Periods of dizziness, headache and general weakness.
- Erratic vaginal bleeding.
- Pain in the shoulder or neck area, caused by blood in the pelvic area.

If you have any of these symptoms, see your doctor. The only treatment for an ectopic is immediate removal. If the pregnancy is in the fallopian tube and the tube has not ruptured, it may be saved, but extensive damage usually requires removing the whole tube.

It's unclear exactly why ectopics occur, but we do know that women who have had pelvic inflammatory disease, previous pelvic surgery, a previous ectopic or endometriosis are more at risk.

Ultimately, however, we must say that the cause is a rare breakdown in a normally extraordinarily efficient system.

Single, free copies of "Ectopic Pregnancy" (p-031) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 600 Maryland Avenue, SW, Washington, D.C. 20024.

Each garden on the tour will be marked with a yellow flag. The private gardens have been selected for variety as well as beauty. In The Shores, those to be seen are The Blumenstock Garden, 30 Moorland Drive, and The Cooper Garden, 24 Edgewood Drive. Complimentary refreshments will be served in The Blumenstock Garden.

In The Farms, you're invited to view The Dolega Garden, 366 Moross Road, where the Upstairs Shop from the Detroit Garden Center will have crafts for sale, and The Earle Garden, 166 Cloverly Road, as well as The Reghanti Garden, just down the street at 94 Cloverly, and The Ruffner Garden, 221 Lewiston Road.

In The Park, you'll be welcomed at The Gies Garden, 821 Harcourt Road, and The McCoy Garden, 1014 Buckingham Road. On your tour, you'll find a profusion of summer annuals and perennials, wildflowers, pools and fountains, trees and shrubs, terraced and sunken landscapes, statuary, intimate places for contemplation and sweeping expanses of lawn.

Garden tour tickets are $5 each. They may be purchased in advance Tuesday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Garden Center Room at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, or by calling the ticket chairman: Mrs. Douglas Borden, 884-2775, and Mrs. Eberhard Mammen, 884-0966. Tickets may also be obtained at any garden during tour hours. A brochure with a map accompanies each ticket.

Representatives of 20 garden clubs comprise the Grosse Pointe Garden Club Council which has, for the past 37 years, had education, conservation and beautification as its prime concerns. The Garden Tour is the Council's annual fund raiser. Last year's tour raised more than $6,000, being spent this year for beautification of the five Grosse Pointes.

General tour chairman this year is Mrs. David Lowe. Her assistants include Mrs. Henry Ledyard, treasurer; Mrs. James Gram, garden procurement and brochures; Mrs. Urban Borech, publicity; Mrs. Richard Mertz, the Mesdames Gram and Borech's "Right Hand Woman"; Mrs. Robert Krueger, scrapbook; George Vincent, map; and Phil DeMaire and Kenneth Cary, flags and signs.

More are Mrs. Howard Harrison, name tags; Mrs. Frances Harrison and Mrs. William Nixon, poster design and distribution, respectively; Mrs. Amesberry Powell and Mrs. Max Gardner, hostesses and cashiers; Mrs. Charles Berman, police liaison; Mrs. Frank Welchenbach, senior citizens liaison; the Grosse Pointe Garden Club, Mrs. Richard Speer, refreshments; and Mrs. M.P. Wiant and Miss Christine Edwards, advisory.

As an expression of gratitude, the committee will have a cocktail party at Mrs. Borden's home for the garden owners prior to the tour. Mrs. A.J. Van Tiem and Mrs. Alex Gill are in charge of party arrangements.

All in The Salvation Army Family

At a recent meeting of the Salvation Army's Detroit Advisory Board, Grosse Pointe's Kenneth B. Hollidge received a Life Membership Plaque and Pin for his 16 years of dedicated service as a member of the board — and his son, Kenneth B. Hollidge Jr., of The Shores, was installed as a new member.

The presentation to Mr. Hollidge Sr., who has served on many committees and as chairman of the board in 1974-75, was made by Major Daniel Boyer, General Secretary of the Eastern Michigan Division of the Salvation Army.

The Hollidges are the second father/son team to serve on the Detroit Advisory Board of the Salvation Army. Walter J.L. Ray and his son, John P. Ray, have been members for 27 and 11 years, respectively. Both Rays are Birmingham residents — Nice to know that now Grosse Pointe has its own "in the family" representatives on that board!

Can You Help in a Very Good Cause?

From Gerry Fisher comes word that Inner City Detroit's Holy Trinity Parish is about to start, for the very first time, a parish newspaper . . . and in order to start it, the parish needs about $5,000 for a copying machine . . . and Father Jay Samoni, 965-6292, would be delighted to hear from anyone who could help Holy Trinity get its copier.

Short and to The Pointe

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Condine, of The Woods, celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on July 4. They were honored at a dinner dance reception at the Fern Hill Country Club given by their children and grandchildren. The couple has three sons, John, Robert and Michael; two daughters, Margaret Parks and Virginia Miller; and 10 grandchildren.

Cheryl L. Nilsson, daughter of Ray J. and Leila M. Lynch, of Ballantyne Court, has been promoted in the U.S. Air Force to the rank of Major. She is an assistant professor at the U.S. Air Force Academy, Colorado Springs, Colo. She received a doctorate in 1978 from Wayne State University Law School.

Paul L. Grifo, of Lakeland Avenue, received a Bachelors degree from Colorado State University at commencement ceremonies May 11.

Janice G. Weitzmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Weitzmann, of Lakeland Avenue, was named "Employee of the Month" for March at Copper Mountain Resort, Colorado, where she is a ski instructor for children. She was graduated from Michigan State University in December with a degree in communications.

Mary J. Cornillie, daughter of Jean and Mary Cornillie, of Grosse Pointe, has been inducted into Sigma Kappa Alpha honor society at Siena Heights College honors convocation. Mary, a 1982 graduate of Grosse Pointe South High School, is a senior Fashion Merchandising major at Siena Heights.

Marietta College sophomore Ed Shrader, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Shrader, of The Park, has joined Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity this semester. He is a 1983 graduate of University of Detroit High School.

Wayne State University students Gregory and Ignatius Fadanelli, of The Park, and their father Romuald, of St. Clair, will travel to Krakow, Poland this summer to participate in WSU's Polish Studies Program. They will be enrolled at the Jagiellonian University from July 10 through Aug. 20. Fadanelli is a freshman majoring in Slavic and Polish studies; his son Gregory is a sophomore electrical and computer engineering major and Ignatius is a senior majoring in chemical engineering.

Jeffrey J. Chancey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Chancey, of Grand Marais Boulevard, was recently awarded a Bachelors degree in Electronic Engineering from Lake Superior State College. He also earned an Associate degree in Computer Engineering Technology. A graduate of Grosse Pointe South High School, Jeffrey has accepted a position with Weldun International in Bridgman, Mich., as a controls engineer.

A Torch Drive job for Joan

Farms resident Joan B. Warren has accepted a top leadership position — advance gifts chairman — for the 1985 United Foundation Torch Drive. She will oversee solicitation efforts on selected market areas which possess a high potential for increased giving.

Joan, an active UF volunteer, is currently a vice-president of the UF and a member of its Central Allocations and Priorities Committees. She served as advance gifts chairman for last year's Torch Drive.

Although the economy has improved, costs have continued to rise — and the demand for UF agency services continues to be great. This year's Torch Drive volunteer team will be asking for increased contributions in order to meet agency needs and respond to the changing needs of metropolitan Detroiters.

The reporting phase of the 37th annual Torch Drive will run Oct. 14 through Nov. 7, 1985. The drive, which raises operating funds for 127 charitable organizations in the tri-county area, last year raised $50.8 million.

Two openings for Hilberry

The last two shows to join the repertory of the Wayne State University Summer Theatre Festival, Ben Travers' "The Bed Before Yesterday" and Athol Fugard's "The Island," open simultaneously in the two theatres at WSU's Hilberry on Wednesday, July 10, at 8 p.m. They will alternate with "Crimes of the Heart" (upstairs) and "Green Julia" (downstairs) through Aug. 3. Complete schedule and ticket information is available from the Hilberry box office, 577-2972.

Baby classes for siblings

Saint John Hospital will continue its "Someone New to Love" sibling class, offered to children of expectant mothers delivering at the hospital. The program is designed to help children prepare to welcome the baby into the family.

The next classes will be held on Tuesday, July 16, and Saturday, July 21. Each runs one hour, and consists of a brief video presentation and a tour of the hospital's nurseries. In addition, each child receives a "Someone New to Love" coloring book and a Big Brother/Big Sister button.

Nancy Rancilio, sibling classes coordinator, says that "there has been an extremely positive response from the families who attend the class."

"When I visit the mothers after they deliver, they say how much their children enjoyed and talked about the class," she continues. "They especially enjoy seeing the new babies in the nursery and wearing the Big Brother/Big Sister button."

"The new mothers have told me that the classes have helped reduce their children's anxiety about separation from mother during hospitalization."

The "Someone New to Love" class is free, open to children ages 3 to 12. Expectant mothers are asked to register their children for the program during the sixth or seventh month of pregnancy.

Registration may be made and further information obtained by contacting Saint John's Nursing Education Department, 343-3380, between 3:30 and 4:15 p.m. Monday through Friday.

WSU alumni look abroad

Two popular Wayne State University alumni events will be repeated this year: a four-day trip to the Shaw Festival at Niagara-on-the-Lake, running Tuesday, Aug. 13, through Friday, Aug. 16, and a one-day visit to Stratford, set for Saturday, Oct. 12.

Shaw Festival plays to be viewed are Noel Coward's "Cavalcade," George Bernard Shaw's "John Bull's Other Island" and Agatha Christie's "Murder on the Nile." Included in the $259 price is round-trip motorcoach transportation, three nights at the Prince of Wales Hotel, tickets for the three plays, meals enroute, a supper and a buffet brunch and two after-theater receptions. Other dining and tour options are available.

Participants in the Stratford Festival trip will see "Twelfth Night" and Tennessee Williams' "Glass Menagerie." Cost, including motorcoach, theater tickets and dinner at the Elm Hurst in Ingersoll, Ont., is $60.

Information on both Canadian events can be obtained by contacting WSU Alumni House, 577-2168.

Fatigue is traffic safety problem

Before leaving on an extended driving vacation this summer, keep in mind that driving a car can be more demanding on your mind and body than your job, says the National Safety Council.

Fred Ranck, the Council's manager of traffic safety, observes that since driving is work — and it demands your constant attention — fatigue can be a traffic safety problem. Emotional stress can also lead to fatigue. "If you're irritated by traffic or road conditions or become angry with anyone, please don't drive," Ranck says.

And alcohol is an all-too-common source of fatigue. Drinking any alcoholic beverage impairs vision, hearing, judgment, reaction time, awareness and coordination.

"Once you have had a few drinks," Ranck says, "you may feel less tense and inhibited — but behind the wheel, tiredness will rapidly come upon you."

Nonstop driving is the primary cause of driver fatigue, Ranck suggests pulling into a rest stop AT LEAST every two hours to exercise, snack, use the restroom or just get out and stretch. If you're traveling on a highway without rest areas, be sure to pull your vehicle completely off the road.

Busy month for Suburbia

Suburbia Garden Club celebrates summer with a tour of Windsor's Jackson Memorial Gardens next Tuesday, July 9, followed by luncheon on the river at Moro's.

Suburbia's newly-elected officers are Mrs. Diamond Phillips, president, Mrs. Bernard Pearce, vice-president, Mrs. James Doll, treasurer, and Mrs. John Zimmerman and Mrs. Victor Breidenbach, recording and corresponding secretaries, respectively.

Club members will be participating as hostesses in the annual garden tour sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Garden Club Council on July 19, 20 and 21.

The 400: a representative sampling

Festival offers nostalgic fun

Nostalgia reigns this week at the Meadow Brook Music Festival where, in addition to tonight's and Sunday's classical concerts, Friday will feature an 8 p.m. reunion of the funny and famous Rovers and The Kingston Trio. This will be the summer's only Rovers' performance.

"Summer Solid Gold" on Saturday, July 6, at 8 p.m. presents Richard Nader's rock and roll spectacular featuring the super-sonic sounds of the '60s with Ricky Nelson, Joey Dee and the Starlighters, the Contours, the Diamonds, the Angels and special guests the Shirelles.

As a tribute to the nation's independence celebrations, Meadow Brook will host a fireworks display following each performance through Sunday, July 7.

Tickets are available at the festival box office, 377-2010, all Ticket World outlets and all AAA branch offices. The grounds open two hours before concert time for picnicking and full service or a la carte dining on Trumbull Terrace.

John H. Nixon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Nixon, of Canterbury Road, has been accepted into the fall, 1985 freshman class at the Berklee College of Music in Boston, Mass.

Take time in July for Bavarian picnic

Admission to the G.T.E.V. Edelweiss Club's Waldfest Bavarian Picnic, running from noon to 10 p.m. Sunday, July 28, at the Austrian Park on Hayes, between 25 and 26 Mile Roads, is $1.50 at the gate for adults, free for children 16 and younger. The picnic will feature an authentic Bavarian kitchen and entertainment by the "Festival" German Band and the Edelweiss Schuhplattlers.

Among Ohio State University students named to the honor roll for the winter quarter are Michael P. Downs, of Muir Road, and Susan D. Price, of Lakepointe Avenue.

Seeking State Fair exhibitors

Prepare your tastiest recipes and best-handcrafted items: it's time to enter them for competition at the 1985 Michigan State Fair. All Michigan residents are eligible to compete for over $18,000 cash awards and special prizes, including State Fair Blue Ribbons.

Premium books outlining more than 600 needlework, canning, baking and fine arts competitions in the Community Arts section are now available. Entry forms are included in the booklets.

In addition, nine Community Arts contests are planned for this year's fair:

- Christmas Tree Decorating — Saturday, Aug. 24.
- Package Decorating — Sunday, Aug. 25.
- Whittling — Monday, Aug. 26.
- Pie Making — Tuesday, Aug. 27.
- Flower Arranging — Wednesday, Aug. 28.
- Fancy Dessert — Thursday, Aug. 29.
- Soft Sculpture Doll — Friday, Aug. 30.
- Sandwich — Saturday, Aug. 31.
- Cake Decorating — Sunday, Sept. 1.

Artists, sculptors and photographers may also enter the juried Fine Arts show, which offers more than $3,000 in cash awards.

To receive a rule book and entry form, call or write the Community Arts Section at the Michigan Exposition and Fairgrounds, 1120 West State Fair Avenue, Detroit, Mich. 48203 (368-1000). Deadline for entries is Aug. 1.

Seek Palmer Park Art Fair exhibitors

The Palmer Park Art Fair, now in its 10th year, invites artists to participate in the 1985 Fair to be held in Palmer Park Saturday, Aug. 3, and Sunday, Aug. 4. The fair will feature more than 100 juried artists plus arts and crafts demonstrations, an art auction, entertainment and natural foods. Applications may be obtained by writing Palmer Park Art Fair '85, 742 West McNichols Road, Detroit, Mich. 48203.

Among Albion College students who participated in the school's annual student phonathon to alumni this spring was senior economics major Susan M. Schnitzer, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Michael N. Schnitzer, of Coventry Lane on behalf of Kappa Delta Sorority.

Summer At Last! ... My winter fur coat needed a trip to Sullivan-Rollins for storage. There I saw a brand new winter-wonderful coat. It's a good quality soft leather coat lined with opossum with a large luxurious opossum collar. You can button out the collar and lining. You then have a leather coat that's traditionally lined. Two coats in one that travel in style and span seasons. It's a bargain at $1,495. Sizes are S, M, L. There are leather and opossum jackets for men and women priced at $895. Buy now! You'll be glad you did next winter. See these fashion-wise, excellent values at Sullivan-Rollins, 20467 Mack Avenue, 885-9000. Closed Saturdays, July and August.

As You Know ... the ruby is the birthstone for the month of July. But do you know that edmund t. AHEE jewelry co. has a fabulous collection of ruby rings, earrings, bracelets and pendants featuring a newly designed pendant with a pear shaped ruby combined with a pear shaped diamond set in 14K gold? See all the beautiful ruby jewelry at 20139 Mack at Oxford and make that July birthday memorable. Open Fridays until 8 p.m., 886-4600.

Pointer of Interest

by Janet Mueller

Angie and Art, Pointe residents for 15 years are both originally from Hamtramck, where his father was a judge and his mother a councilwoman. "Did you know," asks Angie, "that Hamtramck was originally part of Grosse Pointe? We learned that on one of the Detroit Historical Museum's Sunday Strolls."

There are two Rooks' daughters: Helen, married and the mother of a new baby, the Rooks' first grandchild, Christopher, and Rina.

"I've been in school all my life," says Angie. Actually, she was 4 when she first entered a classroom. She teaches elementary school in Dearborn, which has participated in the Back-to-Back Student Exchange with France for four years. This year, for the first year, Angie Rooks participated in it.

She had help, of course. Ruth Bradfield, a substitute teacher in Grosse Pointe served as the group's bilingual counselor. Ruth taught the children "survival French." Paul Bruce, a Dearborn substitute teacher, directed the musical revue. Both went along on the trip to France.

SO DID ART Rooks, despite the fact that he is under treatment for cancer at Harper Hospital. For a while, it looked as if Art would have to stay home — he fell out of remission in February — but his treatments are standard, can be given at any hospital ... so why not in France?

"Why not, indeed?" said Art's doctor, who told him to go to the American Hospital in Paris for the two treatments he would need while abroad and gave him instructions to present there, which Art dutifully did. Only to be told by an insensitive American Hospital staff doctor that the hospital was not equipped to help him, that he had no business traveling in his condition, that his trip to Paris was a great and stupid mistake.

Devastated, Art prepared to take the next plane home. Then something wonderful happened. Literally next door to the St. Cloud elementary school hosting the Dearborn exchange students was a cancer clinic, one of the best in France. "Go there," Art was told, and he did. "No problem," said the cancer clinic staff, and there wasn't any.

And when he tried to pay ... "No way," was the response. "You are a guest of France."

Art had a wonderful three weeks in France. So did Angie. So did Ruth, and Bruce, and the children. Even the ones who got chicken pox. "They were wonderful," says Angie, speaking of the children. "We kept telling them before they went that they were ambassadors, and they were so beautifully behaved that they were complimented everywhere."

"When we were visiting Versailles, Americans came up to our children to say, 'We're so proud of you!'"

ST. CLOUD WENT all out for the visitors, just as Dearborn had gone all out for the 28 St. Cloud elementary school students who spent three weeks there earlier in the year, and for the teachers who accompanied them.

There were parties, one at the home of Maurice Ravel, in the living room where he wrote "Bolero." There were field trips subsidized by the French Government. When the Dearborn children put on their revue in the local cultural center, the town turned out. The applause was deafening.

Theirs was a slightly less spectacular production than that of the French children, who brought costumes with them in 12 trunks and re-enacted the French Revolution for their American host community, but DID IT MOVE!

You'll see for yourself in Grosse Pointe on July 13, at the French Market.

"The Market is basically a family affair, not a big commercial thing," Angie explains. "All the workers were volunteers. The money we make goes to support civic and cultural projects with a French orientation in the Greater Detroit area."

The first of these was the re-enactment of Cadillac's landing during the Bicentennial. French Market-raised funds have since gone to acquire artifacts for Fort Wayne and bilingual historic markers for the Cadillac landing site, to furnish the French Room at Wayne State University and the Moran Cottage at the Detroit Historical Museum.

"This year, we're getting a bust of Lafayette for the Grosse Pointe War Memorial." The bust, a recasting of an original by Houdon, is enroute now and may be here in time for the French Market, depending on how far "en" the route it is. Angie Rooks has her fingers crossed.

BUT THAT'S ALL she has her fingers crossed about, as far as this year's French Market is concerned. She knows the food, from crepes and French cheese sandwiches to homemade patisseries, will be superb, as will the wine to wash it down. She thinks the cooking demonstrations, by Yvonne Gill, Cafe Le Chat's Robert Goodfriend, Hogan's Tom McGlone and the Detroit Athletic Club's John McCormack, will be magnificent.

She's lined up entertainment including a magician, a mime who studied with Marcel Marceau, the Jazzco Dance Company's cancan dancers and the Detroit Historical Museum's Voyageurs.

There'll be songs from "Piaf," opening soon at the Attic Theatre, sung by Sheri Nichols, the Attic's "Piaf." There'll be songs by the French Market's own favorite chanteuse, Jeanette Laurente. There'll be an accordionist and a pianist.

Most of all, there'll be fun, with a Gallic flavor, for everyone. Angie Rooks has no doubts at all about that, and no crossed fingers. Lafayette may not make it to the French Market this year ... but if he doesn't, he'll certainly wish he had!

This time, for the first time, she visited Malmaison. "It's one of the new things I set out to do. We go to France frequently, and each time I try to see something new." Napoleon and Josephine's home was this year's new thing — unless you count the new experience of shepherding 18 10-year-olds (five of whom came down with chicken pox!) across the Atlantic to Paris.

Actually, to St. Cloud, a suburb of Paris, where the American children, participants in a Back-to-Back Campus International Exchange Program, lived with local families and studied in local schools and staged "A Musical Tour of the United States" for the local community. The local community loved it, and them.

So will our local community, for the children will present their

It's poison ivy season

The bad news is that poison ivy and its cousins, poison oak and poison sumac, infest nearly every state in the Union. Only Nevada, Alaska and Hawaii — and regions above 400 feet — appear to be free. The good news? Well, there isn't a lot. The July Reader's Digest reports. A case of poison ivy will run its course within three weeks ... if you don't scratch and start an infection. Doctors can help mask the symptoms but there is no way to stop the underlying process.

"The source of the trouble," the Digest article explains, "is the sap of the plants." They contain an oil, called urushiol, so potent that a single ounce can produce a rash on 28 million people. And poison ivy appears to bother people only: dogs and cats have no problem with it; cows, deer and goats even browse on the leaves.

"Tour" on Saturday, July 13, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial during the 13th Annual French Market, which runs from noon to 8 p.m. that day and from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, July 14 (Bastille Day), at the War Memorial.

You're all invited. Admission is free. In addition to a flea market, a boutique, a street photographer, a caricaturist, jewelry, watercolors and ceramics — and some of the best food in town — there'll be continuous entertainment by performers ranging in age from the 10-year-olds to the Versailles, a senior citizen cancan group.

The Versailles will kick up their heels on Sunday. "They say they can only perform for three minutes at a time," laughs Angie. "But they promise to perform FREQUENTLY!"

SHE'S IN CHARGE of French Market entertainment this year: a switch from the past three years, when French Market food was her major responsibility. Not a complete switch, however; as part of Sunday's special cooking demonstrations, Angie Rooks will prepare her Salade Nicoise.

One year, she worked with fruit. "I cleaned 22 cases of strawberries by myself. After that, I realized the Market needed kitchen help." Last year, her husband Art Rooks made vichyssoise — from scratch, which required peeling 100 pounds of potatoes. "Every drop of it went."

Food is one of the many, many interests Art and Angie share. Another is history: they're presently reading a biography of Mme. Pompadour. Another is travel, especially to France.

"My husband has always been a Francophile," Angie says. "He was the one who first joined the Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe." They're both members now, both active in several French organizations including the French Festival of Detroit, sponsor of the French Market.

"I'm often asked: 'How is it that an Italian is in charge of food for the French Market?' I explain that it was Catherine de Medici who introduced Cuisine to France: she brought her chefs with her from Italy when she married Henry II."

IT WAS ANGIE who finally introduced Art Rooks to Italy. "Every time we went to Europe, I'd say, 'Why don't we visit Italy?'" ... and Art would say, "But there's so much I still want to see in France" ... until finally, in 1977, I did get him to go to Italy. And he loved it!

Elegant Eating

A selection of recipes from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol — and penny-wise — collection of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth featuring, this week, WONDERFUL WAYS with YOGURT.

Yogurt is a milk fermented with a Bulgarian milk culture containing bacteria which lives in the intestinal tract and makes, or synthesizes, B vitamins. It can be used to make delicious dips, sauces and dressings, eliminating or reducing the use of cholesterol-rich mayonnaise or sour cream. It is a delicious compliment to vegetables and fruits.

Dr. George Mann, associate professor of Medicine and Biochemistry at Vanderbilt University, says: "My work has shown that yogurt contains a substance which helps regulate cholesterol levels. We've seen cholesterol reduction as high as 30 percent." Dr. Mann suggests three servings (one-half cup each) daily.

FINNISH YOGURT AND CUCUMBER SALAD

1 cup fresh yogurt
2 Tbsp. snipped fresh dill or 1 Tbsp. dillweed
1 Tbsp. sugar
2 Tbsp. white wine vinegar
2 Tbsp. oil
1/4 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. white pepper
4 cups thinly sliced, peeled cucumbers
In large bowl, mix well all ingredients except cucumbers. Stir in cucumbers and chill at least four hours to blend flavors. Makes 8 servings.
Calories per serving about 63.
Cholesterol — trace.

SAVOY CABBAGE WITH YOGURT

1 head savoy cabbage
3 onions, thinly sliced
1 lemon, thinly sliced
1/2 tsp. salt
1 bay leaf
2 cloves
1 tsp. sugar
2 Tbsp. margarine
2/3 cup plain yogurt
1/2 tsp. cornstarch — scant
1/2 tsp. prepared mustard
Cut cabbage in half and cut out stalk and coarse outer leaves; cut cabbage halves into strips. Peel and slice onions and lemon in very thin slices horizontally.
Place prepared cabbage, onions and lemon in pan with about 8 cups water. Add salt, bay leaf, cloves and sugar. Bring to a boil; cover and simmer 30 minutes. Melt margarine; stir in the yogurt to which the cornstarch has been well blended. Add mustard; allow to heat through, but do not boil. Drain cabbage mixture very thoroughly and place in serving dish. Pour yogurt sauce over cabbage. Serve with boiled or baked pork. Makes 4 servings.
Calories per serving about 138.
Cholesterol — trace.

SOUR-CREAM FRUIT MOLD

2 pkgs. lime gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 1/2 cups cold water
1 cup low-calorie plain yogurt
1 can (8-oz.) crushed pineapple
1 can (8-oz.) pear halves
Garnishes
Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. When thoroughly dissolved, stir in 1 1/2 cups cold water. Drain syrup from pineapple and pears; combine syrups and add 2/3 cup of the gelatin mixture. Stir well and chill until thick.
Dice the pears. Add them, the crushed pineapple and 1 cup low-calorie yogurt to the gelatin mixture. Mix carefully and thoroughly. Pour into a 5 1/2-cup ring mold which has been rinsed out with cold water. Chill until firm. Unmold and garnish with salad greens, honeydew melon and cantaloupe balls and raspberries — marinated in French dressing as a salad — or with sweetened fruit and either salad greens or dressing as a dessert. Makes 6 servings.
Calories per serving about 123.
Cholesterol about 1 mg.

BEETS IN YOGURT SAUCE

1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
1 tsp. Dijon-type mustard
1/2 tsp. prepared horseradish
1/2 tsp. pepper
2 cups beets, cooked and sliced
2 Tbsp. fresh dill or parsley, finely minced
Combine first four ingredients. Spread sauce in serving dish and arrange sliced cooked beets on sauce. Sprinkle beet slices with finely minced fresh dill or parsley. Makes 4 servings.
Calories per serving about 81.
Cholesterol about 2 mgs.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

How do I spell vacation?

One of my favorite TV commercials is the one where the busy, working parents are depicted as feather-brained idiots who are in such a rush they nearly walk out the door in the morning, leaving Junior in his highchair, gumming his Zwieback to death. The ad is for a popular theme park and is supposed to show, I guess, that if Mom and Pop had bothered to check in there for a much-needed vacation, they'd be sharp-witted enough to remember to take the baby with them the next time.

Well, unlike the "Honey, did we forget the baby AGAIN?" pair, I don't need a chunk of amusement park real estate to fall on my head before I know when to go on vacation. So I'm gone. And here's why:

V. V stands for vacuous. V is for vague. After the 10-month-long fall-into-winter-into-spring-prep seasons, I am very much both of those things.

A. A stands for asocial. I know I need a vacation when I don't want to discuss sports with anybody. (Well, maybe a short discourse on the Mackinac Race and the fate of the Tigers).

C. C stands for convertible, which is what I'd like to be tooling around in for the next week. C is also for cash, which convertibles cost plenty of.

A. A stands for athlete. It is something I'm not, but something I write about. And write about. And write about. And right about now, I'm in need of a vacation from that. Give me a week off and I'll be raring (raring?) to go. But I still won't be much of an athlete.

T. T stands for tan, which is something I strive for on every vacation. You want to know how I really spell tan. S-U-N-B-U-R-N.

I. I stands for idle. It also stands for improvement. I will be idle for a while, then I will be improving. . . my car at the service station. . . my kitchen with a new coat of paint, etc., etc., etc.

O. O stands for oversleep, overturn, overboard and overstay. I hope to oversleep every day, but not to fall overboard if the pleasure boat I plan to overstay my welcome on overturns. (I think I've overdone it).

N. N stands for Nassau, for Narragansett, for North Carolina and for Naples. . . all lovely places in their own right but they can't hold a candle to southeastern lower Michigan in late June. At least that's what I keep telling myself.

Well, there you have it, just a few of the reasons why it's vacation time for this kid. (Not the least of which is that this column is beginning to read like a Dr. Seuss book.)

I'm out of here. Be nice to my replacement, Mike Andrzejczyk, while I'm gone. He's still winning a lot over the last time he took over while I was on vacation. (Must have been that nasty business about the death threats).

I'll be back next week with a rested brain, a fresh perspective on sports and a nice, red tan.

Fishing Grosse Pointe - pier to pole

By Michael McConnell

There were big breaks in the clouds but no everlasting sunshine for pier fishermen at Windmill Pointe on the first day of summer as they watched their unflinching lines, hoping for a bite.

Lou Stines of the Park had caught 13 perch the day before but none were keepers. "Mostly, they're catching walleye and silver bass," he said as he looked down the pier at his fellow fishermen.

Like some of the other fishermen, Richard Ware, who was at the park with a friend, wished he had a boat. Still, he was doing better than most that afternoon with a catch of three sheepsheads, a rock bass and a smallmouth bass, using minnows and worms for bait.

Kirby Linder of the Park hadn't caught a fish all afternoon but didn't seem to mind as he leaned back on a green bench, watching his pole and surveying the scene with a cool beer in his left hand. Linder adjusted his hat to shade his eyes and put his feet up on the breakwall and philosophically remarked that: "This here is what you call the life of Riley." An older generation, sharing the bench with Linder, showed snapshots of his Caribbean cruise and talked of the magnificent fish to be caught in those waters.

"I caught these two earlier this morning," said Dave Dawson of the Park, as he held up two walleye. "They run about 16 to 17 inches. I hear the walleye fishing is dropping off in Lake Erie and showing up around here, especially over by Peche Island."

Two men in plaid shirts and baseball caps sat in an aluminum boat in the choppy waters just off the pier. After about 20 minutes they started their motor and took off across the water toward Peche Island. Dawson watched them as they bounced along the waves. "Next year I gotta get a boat," he said.

Not all of the people along the pier were intent on the fishing. One man clad only in shorts and tennis shoes was stretched out on a bench with his eyes closed to the sun and his fishing pole balanced across his bare stomach. A young woman listened to her radio as she spread out on a brown beach towel on top of the breakwall. The wind blew catspaws across the canal water and made the rigging on the sailboats whistle and ring as it slapped against the aluminum mastheads. And out on the docks you could hear the sounds of children playing in the pool.

According to local fishing pundits, such as Park Fire Chief Phil Costa, Windmill Pointe has always been a good spot for silver bass.

"I've had good luck and bad luck," Costa said. "When the wind is against the dock it's good, when the wind is away from the dock it's bad."

Costa also said he hopes to get in on the walleye fishing this year. "From what I understand, the walleye are hitting pretty good off our park."

One Farms park official said all the serious fishermen hit the pier between 5 and 9 a.m. But last Saturday morning not one fisherman could be found on the Farms' park pier. Only the sun rose that early, coming up like a solid red ball.

By last Thursday afternoon the action still hadn't changed much at the Farms park. Almost Taking advantage of one of June's patented good days is this fisherman at the Park's Windmill Pointe Park.

1,000 people visited the park that day, but only three of them were carrying fishing poles. And more than 200 boats sat silently on their wells.

Along the north side of the park in the picnic table area hundreds of sea gulls dotted the fence and hunkered in the shade beneath the trees.

Out in the corner of the breakwall were two boys and a man. One of the boys, Charlie Trowbridge, 9, said he had been there since 8 a.m. "I caught a rock bass about an hour ago," he said. "I used a worm and a lure for bait, and yesterday I caught a big carp with a piece of pizza I found."

The other boy, Gregory Spangler, 11, said he had been there for two hours. Using worms for bait, he said he had caught only sheepshead.

Frank Smode of the Farms said he hadn't caught anything in the two hours he had been there. "I don't come down here real early," said the elderly man, "I like to sleep."

By evening more fishermen had taken places along the pier and were catching bass and walleye on an irregular basis. A few fish could be seen feeding on fish flies in the foamy water along the pier.

"I keep getting too many of these sheepshead," said one fisherman as he cast his line. A few minutes later he had a bass, but it was too small. He threw it back and re-baited his hook with a minnow.

"I fish down here every year and believe me, just about any fish you can get out in the lake will eventually be caught here if we get a good break and some in-shore winds."

Boat fishermen claim that the walleye catches are best around the Delphine channel.

Farms Police Chief Bob Ferber doesn't like to fish in the Delphine Channel, but just off of it. "The channel is a little too deep," he said.

"All I chase is the walleye. When I catch something else like a sheepshead I usually just throw it back."

Ferber said he pursues the walleyes in his 18-foot boat and uses Kwikfish and half a worm as bait on the hook of the pearl white or chartreuse lures.

"I like to fish the area between the Little Club and the Grosse Pointe City park."

According to most of the local pier fishermen, the fishing was better in previous years and the fish were bigger. Some blame the early warm weather, others complain about the changing water levels. And still others say it's too soon to draw any conclusions.

So probably the only way for one to tell is to take a trip down to the park, drop a line, test your luck and hope for a bite.

Lancers finish season with win

It was a storybook finish to an incredible season for the Grosse Pointe Lancers under-12 travel soccer team, who last year won the Minor A championship and this year earned the right to represent the league in the Tournament of Champions organized by the Michigan State Youth Soccer Association.

The first game of the championship featured 60 grueling minutes of regulation time and a 20-minute overtime before the match came down to a shoot-out. Lancers goalie Scott Nesom made four saves while shooters John Ferguson and Andrew Bucciero scored to earn the victory.

The second game was a defensive struggle with both teams playing disciplined ball. The Lancers capitalized on two opponents' errors to take the win, 2-0.

The championship game was played in a stiff wind, with the Lancers playing the first half into the wind. The opponents scored two quick goals, but the Lancers refused to collapse and tied the game 2-2 at the end of the half.

In the second half with the wind at its back, the team showed its explosive offense. Craig Bowman had three consecutive breakaways to score his hat trick. Lancers tallied two more goals to take a 7-2 win and a well-earned championship title.

The Lancers finished the regular spring season travel season with a 7-1-2 record, earning the team a second place trophy.

Softball — police style

There'll only be one Grosse Pointe police representative on this year's Macomb County police officers' softball team taking part in the Dayton, Ohio tournament next weekend.

Farms Detective Mark Brecht is the last of the trio of officers from the Pointes who put their bodies and reputations on the line on the diamond with cops from St. Clair Shores, Clinton Township and Macomb County Sheriffs.

Sgt. Michael VanDeGinste hung up his spikes this year after playing third base with the Macomb County team for a couple of years. Also calling it quits was Shores officer John Trevillian, a first baseman of some repute in the league.

The Macomb County law enforcement officers have put on an enforcement policy of another kind, captured a dozen-odd titles in the past three years in tournaments across the country.

So far this year, the team has taken a fourth place finish in a Houston, Texas tournament in March, a third place in a May tournament and a victory in a tourney last month near Baltimore, Md., Brecht says.

The team has been together for a few years and heads into the Dayton weekend as defending champions three years running. The team had also pounded out wins in a Detroit tournament in the last two years, using the winnings to defer the travel costs of the squad.

The Dayton tournament is one of the biggies on the circuit, Brecht says. Last year, it featured 75 to 80 law enforcement officer teams from across the country.

Besides the travel and camaraderie, Brecht, a right-center fielder

(there are four outfielders in regulation softball), says it's like a dream career. "You get to live a little like a professional ballplayer, traveling around and playing ball," he adds.

What drives him on? "You've seen that old cartoon in the papers, where the guy comes in all dirty and . . . cut up, and his wife says, 'Why do you do this to yourself?' The guy looks at her and

St. Jude hospital benefit

Want to play golf with Bubba Smith, Greg Stefan, Dick "Night Train" Lane or Monte Clark?

Take Monday off and take part in the 14th annual golf tournament to benefit St. Jude Children's Hospital, at the Indianwood Country Club in Lake Orion, Mich.

Celebrities will be a foursome of golfers for $250 a person, or a fivesome can play for $200 a person. Tickets are tax-deductible donations to the hospital, which battles catastrophic diseases in children.

The price of the tickets includes three meals Monday, including breakfast before the 8 a.m. start and dinner and dancing following the day on the links. Refreshments are also available for the ticket price, which pays for green fees and a golf cart as well.

Also Monday night, there will be an auction following dinner.

And, as they say on those television commercials, that's not all. Ticket holders are also welcome for dinner the night before, Sunday, June 30, at the Detroit Race Course, where it will be Children's Night.

Dinner-goers will also get a chance to own a yearling thoroughbred racehorse, to be auctioned off during the evening. Dinner is at 6 says, "Honey, I do it just to prove to myself I still can't do it," he laughs.

Brecht is quick to add that, at 34, he still enjoys the traveling and the game as well.

There is another local team consisting completely of local police, fire and public safety officers. That team's managed by Woods PSO Tom Hunke.

Pointers among top triathlon finishers

A trio of Grosse Pointe residents placed well among the 280 participants who finished the Metro Beach Triathlon on June 8. The third annual event featured a 1K swim, 10 mile bike event and a 4K run.

Richard Pietras, 20, of Ann Arbor was first overall with a time of 45:42. Laura Samuelson, 29, of Southfield was the first female finisher; she was 15th overall with a time of 51:13.

Top Grosse Pointe finisher was Jim Boutros, 15, of the Woods. He was seventh overall (50:27) and first in the men 14-17 category. Third in that category and 61st overall was David Nicholson, 15, of the Farms, (55:53).

Michael Linebaugh, 40, of the Woods, was first among men 40-44 and 84th finisher overall (58:36).

Babe Ruth

League gears for tournament play

The Dodgers clinched first place for the second half in the Park Babe Ruth League, qualifying them for the championship series against the first-half winner Phillies.

Ferit Nazarko scattered seven hits as the Dodgers trimmed the Padres, 7-3. Dave Salkowski and Matt Turner collected two hits each for the winners, while Mike Paull added a home run. Kevin Dietz had two hits and one RBI for the Padres.

Doug Lucas hurled four shutout innings, fanned seven and allowed two hits, to gain the decision in the Dodgers' 12-1 mercy rule decision over the Phillies. He also collected four hits, including two doubles and a triple, scored three runs, and drove in two more.

Paull had three hits, including a home run, and three RBI, while scoring three runs. Mike Coffey (two hits, three RBI) and Nazarko (two hits, two RBI) bolstered the winners' offensive attack. Chris Markus and Bryan Jones had the losers' lone safeties.

The Braves also won two games this week. Jamie Cimini pitched a two-hitter and fanned eight, as Phillies were beaten, 4-1. Cimini also aided his own cause with a double and two RBI.

Marcus Wysocki had two hits for the winners, while Marty Saad garnered a double and scored two runs. Mike O'Leary's double drove in the Phillies' lone tally.

Jay Verlinden scattered seven hits, as the Braves routed the Padres, 13-3, in another mercy game. Verlinden also chipped in with three hits, while Wysocki came through with a single, double, triple, and three RBI. Rodger Hunwick and Joe Tedesco added three hits apiece for the winners, while Marty Saad doubled and scored three runs.

The Park also announced its All-Star team for the upcoming Babe Ruth tournament, which begins with district play at North High School on July 12.

Named to the squad, which is the defending district champion, include: Lucas, Nazarko, Paull, Salkowski, Eric Zihlman, and Nick Saros, of the Dodgers; Cimini, Saad, and Wysocki of the Braves; Jones, Markus, and Matthew Montagne, of the Phillies; and George Ayrault and Eric Nord of the Padres.

Paul Pellerito, manager of the defending league champion Dodgers, is all-star manager. Coaches are Ronald Lucas and Joseph Pellerito, also of the Dodgers.

G.P. Little League

Park Majors

CARDS-DODGERS

Dan Commor, the fine Card center-fielder, made a rare pitching start and led his team to an 8-6 win. Lance DeBets came in relief to preserve the victory. DeBets, with three hits and four RBI, led Card hitters, who included Chip Peterson, Ryan McCartney, Don DeSeranno, Bill Saylor, (each with two hits) and key hits from Commor and Dan Paull. Ed Dorda and Peterson led the cards in the field.

Tim Malloy, Bill Leins, Andy Vanderweghe, Brian Crane, Steden and Sherif led the Dogers at bat and on defense.

ORIOLES-TIGERS

Matt Jacklyn in his first start got some help from Aaron McNally to record a 14-10 win over the Tigers. McNally's grand slam led the hard-hitting Orioles, who chalked up a home run and double by Tim Gramling, a four-for-four effort by Mike Spanich and Darren Havren, and solo hits from Kelly Graves, John Halse and Jason Bailey.

Oriole fancy-fielding included a double play — Jacklyn to Havren to Halse — and a smart put-out at home — Graves to Gramling to Graves.

Katie Kolp continued her fine hitting for the Tigers with a three-run blast. Fitzsimons, Glass, Miller, Wininger, Tracey, Barfield, David, Dunlap, Mayock and Meehan led the Tigers at bat and in the field.

ORIOLES-WHITE SOX

Spanich clouded a grand slam to lead the Orioles to a 14-7 come-from-behind win. Halse's two-run homer and RBI hits from Graves, Jason Bailey, Jacklyn and Gramling completed the Oriole attack.

Jacklyn and Graves combined for the pitching win and a super catch by Joey Michaels highlighted Oriole efforts in the field.

For the Sox, the outcome might have been different if starter Fred Turner had not been hit in the leg by a line drive, forcing him from the mound in the fourth. Turner had blanked the O's until then. He stayed in the game at first base and, along with Josh Cummins, led the Sox with three hits. Tim Nolan and Frank McCarroll had doubles. The Sox kept the game close with the fielding of Jim Campagna. Dan and Josh Cummins, Jason Benavidez, John Roberts and McCarroll.

PHILLIES-YANKEES

The Farms/City Phillies put together an explosive eight-run second inning rally that proved to be too much for the Park Yankees, although the Yanks gave it their best with a six-run sixth to pull within striking distance. Dave Reed struck out the first two Yankees and got the third put on a groundout to preserve the win for Mike Oliver. Final score was 15-12.

Sharing the duty on the mound for the Yankees were George Petersmark and Matt Recht with three innings each. The Phillies scored only one run while Recht was hurling. He struck out one and walked one. Peter Griem had three extra-base hits for the Yankees and four RBI on the day. Petersmark, Kyle Hoyer, Richard Nelson, Recht and Rob McClaren also had RBI. Josh Christ went 2-for-2 and scored three runs. Kevin Rauch doubled.

Jim Belluca, Mike Oliver, Dave

Reed, Brett, Johnston, Keating, Kevin Mack, Peterson and Jamie Mertz did an excellent job offensively for the Phillies.

CARDS-PHILS

The Cards won a protest of the June 17 game, which was continued from the top of the second with Phils at bat, two outs and the score 1-0. Card pitchers Lance DeBets and Jim Pote didn't allow a hit in the remaining innings. The Cards bats came alive to score 17 runs, however.

Ed Dorda had a triple, double and single. Two hit efforts were led by Pote, DeBets, Bill Saylor and a key hit came from Chip Peterson. Dan Commor walked four times, scored twice and Brandon Lulis stole home three times. Sharp defensive plays were made by DeBets, Commor, Dan Paull, Ryan McCartney and Lulis.

The Cards ended up in first place in regular season play.

The Phils are a super team led by the superb coaches Bellanca and Johnson and a fine contribution of Margaret Loomis. Playoffs soon begin.

YANKEES-CARDS

Before a large, enthusiastic crowd, the hot-hitting Yankees, behind the superb pitching of George Petersmark and Matt Recht, defeated the Cards 14-4. Hitting honors were shared by Petersmark, who stroked a home run, double and single, and Josh Christ, who ignited a Yankee seven-run third inning with a two-run blast over the fence. Doubles by Recht, Kevin Rauch, Richard Nelson and key hits by Kyle Hoyer, Peter Griem and Petersmark completed the Yankee uprising.

With the Cards attempting a comeback with runners on second and third with one out, Ed Dorda hit a line drive to left center. Recht in center raced over to make the catch and fired the ball to second for the double play.

The Yankees win gave them the season regular play series over the Cards.

YANKEES-ORIOLES

After an explosive 14-4 win over the Park Cardinals the Yankees had a chance to be first in the standings if they were able to beat the Orioles in a rain make-up game Saturday.

However, the heavy bats of Baltimore put them in second place with a 10-7 loss. The game went 10 innings. Matt Bentley got the win. He pitched the ninth and 10th innings, allowing two runs on four hits with three strike outs. Tim Gramling started the game on the mound for the Orioles and pitched a near perfect five innings.

Matt Recht hit an infield single that took a bad hop and got by the second baseman in the fourth inning. Kelly Graves took over the Gramling and pitched the next three innings. John Halse had two home runs and Kelly Graves had what proved to be the winning homerun in the 10th for three RBIs. Mike Spanich also homered.

Kyle Hoyer pitched the regulation six innings for the Yankees allowing three runs on seven hits, no walks and four strike-outs. Jason Bedsworth struck out 4 in his four innings on the mound.

The Yankees will face the Orioles again Monday in the World Series play-offs.

Park Instructional

AIR FORCE-NAVY

Navy topped Air Force 12-4 in a game punctuated by the fine pitching of Jamie Whitehead and Jim Michaels. Kurt Meyers doubled in the fourth inning for Navy.

Chris Hyatt, Peter Sullivan and Chris Milliken pitched for Air Force. Sarah Brenner doubled for Air Force in the third, as did Pat Worrell and Sullivan.

ARMY-AIR FORCE

It was a real pitcher's duel as Army and Air Force played to a scoreless tie in their last game of the season. Excellent pitching was turned in by Air Force's Peter Feldman and Kevin Schroeder and Army's Justin Brown and Mark Campbell.

Strikeouts were the name of game as only two singles were batted out by Feldman and Joey Wermer. Both teams loaded the bases several times but were thwarted by courageous pitching. The game ended when Army's Joey Suski snapped up a sizzling one-hopper off the bat of Corey Schroeder with the bases loaded and tagged out Alex Bieri coming down the line from second base.

Farms-City Class C

TOLEDO-ROCHESTER

Rochester pounded out a 17-4 win over Toledo Saturday, June 22. Seven Rochester players collected hits: John Rolka, two doubles, one home run, eight RBI; David Gracey, one double; Chris Johnson; one double; Todd Scallen, single; and Geoff Prysak, double and a triple. Mark Albrecht and John Graffus each had singles.

Ryan Locke collected a single for Toledo.

ROCHESTER-ERIE

Steven Strehler struck out seven Erie batters in the final three innings as Rochester took a 9-6 win. Six Rochester players collected RBI: Scallen, three; Nathan Kulh, three; Gracey, Casey Ho, Ian Hall and Jason Rolka had one each. Prysak doubled an Graffus singled.

Erie's Chris Ford doubled, singled and drove in three runs. Karl Trost had a single and RBI as well. Doug Martin, Chris Dely and Nino Melchiorre all collected singles.

Park Minors

MICHIGAN-NOTRE DAME

In a game that went into extra innings, Michigan beat Notre Dame 8-3. Scott McCain pitched the regulation innings and Brian Brenner got the win. Jason Jodway, Don Leal and Mary Meeker all had doubles.

Notre Dame used Sean Recht as pitcher and Brian Urso pitched the extra innings. Matt Ludlow and Pat Jarvis had doubles. Defensively Notre Dame executed a double play — Urso-Jarvis-Groustra.

WISCONSIN-NOTRE DAME

Notre Dame placed second in the standings to Michigan State to gain a berth in the World Series by beating a much improved Wisconsin team 17-12. Tom Rajt got the win. Pat Jarvis and Brad Kimmel had doubles and Mike Tawille had a base hit each time at bat.

Matt Bower started the game for Wisconsin and Chris Hogleung came in in the third. Steve Andre had two doubles and Matt Bower and Brad Crowley also doubled. Jim Dailey and Steve Andre had base hits each time at bat.

lains of their football teams at Grosse Pointe High. Neither of them made valedictorian, though.

Elizabeth Danaher of Cloverly Road in the Farms was one of two students from Michigan to earn athletic awards at Bowdoin College during the spring sports season, according to the colleges athletic director, Sidney Watson. Danaher earned her junior varsity numerals in lacrosse. The Bowdoin freshman is a graduate of Cranbrook School.

Jeff Palms of Grosse Pointe took a fourth place finish Saturday night at the Flat Rock Speedway in the World Wide Auto Racing Mid-gets annual appearance at the track. Mike Fedorak of Indiana recorded the fastest time of the night, overtaking Palms and three other drivers on the straight-away.

Bodenmiller speaks at USTA confab

Gary Bodenmiller of the Farms will be a speaker at the 1985 United States Tennis Association National Tennis Teachers Conference to be held Aug. 28 to 30 at the Roosevelt Hotel in New York City.

Bodenmiller will talk about "Money-making Promotions for Private Clubs and the Teaching Professional" and "Motor Skill Development: Fun for the Younger Player." He is one of the 47 members of this year's faculty who have volunteered their time to share the latest tennis news with the hundreds of teaching professionals, physical education teachers, varsity coaches, recreation leaders, facility managers and USTA volunteers who annually attend the event.

Bodenmiller is now an independent contractor at the Eastpoint Racquet Club in East Detroit and the Grosse Pointe Indoor Tennis Club in Detroit. He is the United States Professional Tennis Association president of the Southeastern Michigan district. He is also co-director, with Bob Wood, of the Tennis Workshop in Chicago and Detroit.

A liaison with the High School Tennis Coaches Association in Illinois and Michigan, Bodenmiller has targeted the Tennis Workshops to a most valuable audience. During the summers, he is the director of the Little League in Grosse Pointe and the University Liggett Tennis Club and Camp. This fall, he will direct the USTA Schools Program in Detroit. Bodenmiller will be speaking at the USTA Tennis Teachers Conference for the second year.

This year's conference will be highlighted with special interest modules, designed to help participants focus in on their specific needs. The module topics are: Mental Training; Professional Development Skills; Team Coaching; The Game; Research Applications; School Tennis; and Nutrition, Fitness & Sports Medicine.

For a brochure containing programming for the conference, as well as registration information, write USTA National Tennis Teachers Conference, 729 Alexander Road, Princeton, New Jersey 08540, or call (609) 452-2580.

'Glitz' author jumps into the story immediately

By Nancy Parmenter

You kinda figure a guy who could write so good would talk interesting too. Sure enough, Dutch Leonard was real good, but there wasn't too many there to notice.

The few hundred people gathered June 27 in the cavernous theater at the Detroit Institute of Arts to hear this modern-day Dickens (as Time Magazine gushed) found a low-key speaker who sneaks up on you like Ernest Hemingway. Just when you think he isn't going to amount to much, he does.

Critics are suddenly noticing this 60-ish writer from Birmingham, who has been producing novels, screenplays, short stories and television series since 1951. All of a sudden he is a second Dashiell Hammett or Raymond Chandler, but all Elmore Leonard does is "leave out the things people skip."

Reading from his earlier works, Leonard illustrated the difficulties all writers experience in searching for a writing style. Setting the scene with colorful and detailed description, he fell a little short of the old "dark and stormy night," but not much.

"You hear all that writing?" Leonard asked the audience. "I don't do that any more. Years ago I still believed you had to set the stage."

Leonard is now best known for the way he jumps right into the story: "Stick said he wasn't going if they had to pick up anything. Rainy said no, there wasn't any product in the deal; all they had to do was drop a bag. Stick said, 'And the guy's giving you five grand?'"

"It makes him feel important," Rainy said, "it's how it's done. Listen, this is the big time, man, I'm taking you uptown."

By now, the opening line of "Glitz" is legend: "The night Vincent got shot, he saw it coming."

Leonard has already cooked up an opening for his next book that is bound to hook anybody: "Frank decided the way to tell it and get their attention was to say I ran into a good-looking nun up at the leper hospital the other day and she told me a story you wouldn't believe."

Believable dialogue requires a fine-tuned ear. Leonard spends hours sitting around police stations and courtrooms picking up conversational fragments and odd characters. He keeps a notebook of remarks like "he's as macho as green pants," real remarks made by real people. In fact, he spends so much time in the squad room that a criminal once identified him in court as the policeman who had interrogated him.

So much listening leads Leonard to an authentic-sounding, hip street style. "I know the rules of grammar," he said, "but if a particular rule interferes with my prose, it goes. I don't want to destroy the beat."

Leonard's only writing rule is to treat his characters like human beings: A man who is planning to kill somebody that evening wonders what to wear. Like human beings, the characters often have their own way.

"In just about every book, a minor character talks his way into a major role," Leonard said. Plots and characters grow and change before his eyes. Leonard doesn't structure his plots beforehand. "I'd rather not know what's going to happen."

A man who writes a book, two or three screenplays and the occasional TV pilot every year can hardly have time to feel sentimental about a finished work. Leonard said he polishes off a book in four or five months.

"I've learned not to make a career out of one book," he said. "But when it's finished, I wonder what all those characters are doing now without me to motivate them."

Much has been written about Leonard's style — the sparse descriptions, the street-wise dialogue. He says writers make a mistake in trying to create a style.

"Style comes out of attitude — it's not just a clever arrangement of words. You write most effectively when you're not trying to write. My style is recognized by the absence of what most people think of as style."

Whatever his style is, critics are now going back to read all the old unsung books for the first time and liking what they see. Which is fine, but "where were they when I needed them?" Leonard wondered.

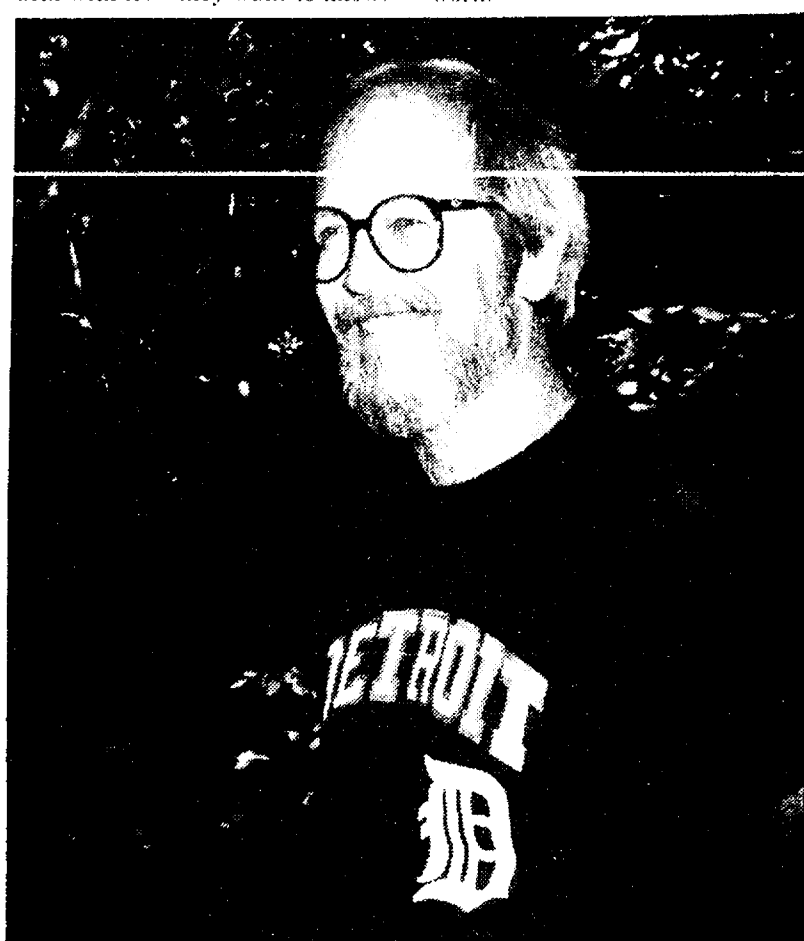

When Leonard came out with "The Big Bounce" in 1968 after a five-year writing hiatus, his agent told him, "kiddo, I'm gonna make you rich." But "Bounce" was rejected 84 times. (Could Leonard be exaggerating?)

Even "Glitz" was described by one publisher (who must now be privately gnashing his teeth) as "completely unpackageable because there's nothing there to hang your hat on." Leonard subscribes to John Steinbeck's theory that the book publishing business makes horse racing look solid and sensible.

Now Leonard has journalists asking him how it feels to be an overnight success. "How do you deal with it?" they want to know.

"What they really mean is how am I spending all that money?" Leonard said. "Samuel Johnson said that nobody but a blockhead would work for no money. But my real satisfaction lies in doing the work."

'Back to the Future' is fun

By Tom Greenwood

Can Van Halen, Darth Vader, Mr. Spock and a DeLorean save the future?

Maybe — maybe not. But they're among the chief allies of 17-year-old Marty McFly when he's suddenly thrust 30 years back into the past and is desperately trying to return to the safety and sanity of 1985.

"Back to the Future," produced by Steven Spielberg and released by Universal Studios, is one of a host of summer flicks aimed at the fantasy world dreamed of by kids, teens and adults with a sense of humor and adventure.

Marty (energetically played by Michael J. Fox, of TV's "Family Ties"), is very much an '80s teen heavily into his rock band, diet Pepsi and skateboards. His family is the pits.

The McFlies are, well, McNerds. Dad is the chief offender. Sporting glasses straight from the stone age, his shirt pocket bulges with pens, a tape measure rides atop his too high pants and he's still under the hairy thumb of his high school bully who's now his supervisor at work.

Marty's best friend is the highly eccentric scientist, Dr. E. Brown, played to perfection by Christopher Lloyd, of "Taxi" fame. If you can imagine the Rev. Jim Ignatowski as a mad scientist with a Klaus Kinski haircut, then the stroll from the garage of the Sunshine Cab Co. to the laboratory is a short one.

Lloyd hopes to travel 25 years into the future in a plutonium-powered DeLorean he's converted into a time machine. He's taking extra sets of cotton underwear along because he's allergic to synthetics.

When a pair of Libyan terrorists (are there any other kind of Libyans?) appear, wanting their purloined plutonium back, Fox makes the journey instead.

Suddenly it's 1955 and everything is the same, but different. TV is merely a curiosity and rock 'n' roll has yet to set teen feet to tapping.

Patti Page is hip, blacks are still colored and Eisenhower is the president.

Marty runs into his future parents. Dad is still a nerd ducking the local bully, but mom is a slimmed-down teen beauty. Heavens to Oedipus, she develops a bad case of the knots for her future son, who she knows only as Calvin Klein, because that's the name on his jeans.

Desperate to get back to the future, Marty seeks out a 30-year younger version of Dr. Brown, who almost doesn't believe Marty's tales of time travel, especially when he discovers Ronald Reagan is president in 1985. "Right," he shouts. "And I suppose Jerry Lewis is vice president!"

If Marty doesn't deflect his mother from himself to his future father, he'll quite literally fade from the scene. Along the way he invents the skateboard, introduces Chuck Berry to Johnnie B. Goode and gives some black musicians tips on how to be hip 1980s-style.

Fox and Lloyd play off each other perfectly in this very worthy film. Both are masters at comedy. Fox's comedic touch is lighter and just right for the desperate spot he's in.

Lloyd, resembling a Dr. Frankenstein on speed, is the mad scientist we'd all love to be.

Spielberg's touch is evident throughout the film, from the mastery of his use of light to the special effects, which are spectacular, but even paced so they don't overwhelm the viewer.

Nice performances are turned in by Lea Thompson and Crispin Glover as the parental McFlies, past and future imperfect. The language is mild, sex is only referred to and the violence is minimally supplied by fumbling terrorists and a high school bully everyone has been threatened by at one time in their life.

"Back to the Future" means back to Spielberg and that means back to fun.

Teen Angels to perform at War Memorial July 11

The Teen Angels will present an outdoor concert for the 21-and-over crowd Thursday, July 11, at the War Memorial.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m. the Angels will recreate the sounds of the '60s, with some '50s and early '70s hits thrown in for good nostalgic measure. Their repertoire includes, among others, songs made popular by the Beach Boys, the Beatles, the Four Seasons and a Motown revue.

Jim Oliver, the group's leader and manager, says they will perform three sets, including an a cappella medley of "do-wop" tunes, a live take-off of the TV video craze featuring Johnny Rivers' "Secret Agent Man" with special effects, and audience participation during Bill Haley and the Comets' "Land of a Thousand Dances."

The group's most recent performances were at Hart Plaza and the Roostertail during the Grand Prix festivities.

The War Memorial grounds will open for picnicking at 6 p.m. and cups, pop and ice will be available to buy. Tickets are $5 each and may be purchased in advance or at the door. In case of rain, the concert will be held in the Fries Ballroom.

HOUSEHOLD LIQUIDATION SALES COMPANY

Dear Friends,

After long and careful deliberation, we have decided to close the retail part of our business. Effective July 1, 1985, our shop will cease its operation.

It is our intention to change the focus of our business, not to discontinue it. We will be available to serve our clients and offer a variety of new services. These will include estate and insurance appraisals, consultations, conducting household and estate sales and assistance in the sale and pricing of private sales. For those who wish to conduct their own sales, we will charge a modest fee for our professional pricing service.

The name of our company will be changed for simplification and recognizability. Henceforth we will be known as Chapman, Williams and Klingensmith Associates.

We will continue to keep records of your "wanted" items and are available to expedite sales and purchases of quality items. You may call for additional information concerning this service at 882-2299.

Beginning July 1st all business calls will also be taken temporarily at 882-2299.

We want to take this opportunity to thank you for allowing us to serve you. It is our sincere hope that we will continue to see many of you and may continue to advise and assist you.

With appreciation,

Charles P. Klingensmith
Lauren E. Chapman
Jill S. Williams
