Bed and board

In case you're wondering what the Georgian East Nursing Home and the Original Pancake House have in common, both made the top of the list for their specialties, according to Good Housekeeping and Metropolitan Detroit magazines.

Georgian East was selected as one of the best long-term nursing facilities in the country, according to Good Housekeeping. The magazine surveyed nursing homes in 10 metropolitan areas and then selected the best in their field.

The Georgian East came into a three-way tie for third place in our area with Luther Haven and Evangelical Homes, both of which are in Detroit.

Now, as for the Original Pancake House, it was chosen as the best breakfast restaurant in the metro area, according to the Metropolitan Detroit magazine.

Readers were asked to submit their choices with ballots published in the magazine's January 1985 issue. Other categories included Greek, German, Polish, steak, Sunday brunch, soul food, deli, Italian, Mexican, Chinese, continental, French and best overall.

Winner of the best overall? The Lark, in Bloomfield Hills. Yeah, sure, but can they serve crunchy hashbrowns with onions?

On the runway

Forget Tinkers to Evers to Chance. The trio to watch will be Bergman to Castillo to Grubb in a fashion show at Lakeside Mall on Friday, Aug. 2, when the three Detroit Tigers and their families participate in a fashion display with a baseball theme.

Dave Bergman, Marty Castillo, Johnnie Grubb and their families, all residents of the Pointe, will model fall fashions and back-to-school garb along with 37 professional models.

Color commentary will be provided by local sportscasters and other local celebrities, and signed game balls and tickets for Tiger games will be awarded through the drawing.

Showtime is 12:30 and 2:30 p.m. and is free to the public. Another Grosse Pointe resident, Lisa Carrato Parrott, is helping to coordinate the event.

Together again

All right classmates, it's time to polish up those forbidden black patent leather shoes and party hearty with the 1965 graduating class of Our Lady Star of the Sea High School on Saturday night, Aug. 3, at the Grosse Pointe Hunt Club.

Mass will be celebrated at the church at 6 p.m., with an open house at the school afterwards. Then it'll be on to the club for cocktails.

Tickets are $25 and remember not to dance too close.

Farms boaters to parade — on terra firma

The Grosse Pointe Farms Boat Club parade will begin at 1 p.m. Sunday, July 28. It will proceed down Kerby from Mack Avenue, Kerby to Chalfonte, Chalfonte to Moran, Moran to McMillan, McMillan to Kercheval, Kercheval to Moross, and Moross into the park.

The Farms fire department will lead the parade followed by convertibles, a calliope and antique cars. At Kercheval and Moross, the St. Andrew's Bagpipe Band will lead the parade, proceeded by the U.S. Marine Corps Color Guard, which will entertain with a mini-concert in the park.

The Banjo Belles will then entertain until 4 p.m. at the pavilion.

Leads in O'Brien fire slow

By Tom Greenwood

Farms police and members of the Michigan State Police arson squad are meeting with frustration in their attempts to solve the arson deaths of William and Mary Jane O'Brien.

"Frankly, the case has really slowed down," said Farms Detective Mark Brecht. "We've interviewed dozens of friends, acquaintances and family members of the O'Briens, but we can't establish any motive or suspects in the case."

The O'Briens were killed in a pre-dawn three-alarm blaze at their Lakeshore Road home May 8. A neighbor returning from a local restaurant spotted flames and called the fire department before trying to rouse the O'Briens.

Even though police and fire units were on the scene within minutes, rescue efforts were useless because of the intense heat and smoke.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien were later found on the second floor of the home. Autopsies determined that both had died of smoke inhalation.

Arson investigators established that the fire was deliberately set, starting almost simultaneously in the family room and breakfast nook on the first floor of the dwelling.

A combination fire/burglar alarm, which had been installed in the home in 1969, was found to be in good working order, but apparently wasn't activated the night of the blaze.

Reports say there were hand marks on the blackened wall of the two bedroom switches, where someone had tried to activate the system. A phone on a nightstand near the bed was still on its cradle.

Laboratory tests from the Michigan State Police lab in Madison Heights were unable to determine the substance used to start the fire. Officials believe the fire was so intense, and started so quickly, that the substance was consumed before it could saturate the home's floor.

Fingerprint samples from Mr. O'Brien didn't provide police with any information either.

"We've been following up on leads that have been supplied to us, but they haven't gone anywhere," Brecht said. "We've even interviewed persons from out of state. It looks like it could be one of three possibilities — murder/suicide, although there's nothing to really suggest that or they might have been killed by mistake. Somebody set the wrong fire in the wrong house. Maybe there was a burglary and someone set the fire to cover their tracks. But there's no real indication of that, because the fire was so extensive, it's hard to tell if anything else was there or if anything is missing."

"We have another meeting coming up with the state police," Brecht said, tapping four blue folders crammed with information on the fire. "We aren't about to close this case, but our leads are running out fast."

Boat mishap claims life

By Tom Greenwood

St. Clair Shores police said electrocution was the apparent cause of death for 24-year-old Woods resident Craig D. Lanstra who died while working on his family's cabin cruiser last Thursday afternoon, July 18.

Police and fire units were called to the Harbor Nine Marina at 2:25 p.m. after boaters leaving the harbor reported seeing Mr. Lanstra prostrate over one of the engines.

He was declared dead at the scene. Police say an electric drill that apparently became wet was the cause of the accident.

According to reports, Mr. Lanstra and a friend drove to the marina to work on the family boat, christened "I Spy," in reference to Mr. Lanstra's father's private investigation firm.

The friend reportedly left at about 1 p.m. Boaters pulling out of the harbor nearly an hour and a half later reported seeing Mr. Lanstra lying across on the engines. His car was found parked in front of the boat with the radio playing.

According to a family spokesman, Mr. Lanstra was an honors student at Grosse Pointe North High School. He graduated in 1979 and attended Michigan State University on an academic scholarship. He graduated from college with honors and a degree in

Three seek mayoral seat in Park

By Pat Paholsky

Park voters will go to the polls Aug. 6 to eliminate one candidate each in both the mayoral and council contests. The rest of the field will then compete in the November general election.

The city charter requires a primary election when there are more than double the number of candidates as there are vacant seats. There are three candidates for mayor and seven candidates for three council seats.

About two weeks ago, all 10 of the candidates came to the Grosse Pointe News' office to be interviewed by a reporter and editorial writer. They were all asked the same questions. Following are the responses of the mayoral candidates who are in alphabetical order. Council-hopefuls are on page 1A. Endorsements are on page 6A.

Palmer Heenan, 63, is finishing his first term as mayor and says he wants to be re-elected because there are many things he wants to accomplish.

"I've started so many projects that I think it's absolutely necessary to run again," he said.

Public safety, or the consolidation of the police and fire departments, is at the top of his list. "After 1½ years of struggling with the council, I appointed a committee which came out 11-2 in favor of consolidation and the council finally acceded to ask for a plan," he said.

Implementation is more important than the program itself, he said, adding that "it's imperative that I and the council supervise. I can do it in two years. It's vital that I be there to supervise and audit this process. It's gotten to be a political issue," he added.

He lists leadership and making the police department attentive to those areas where incidents are highest as the city's primary concerns. "If the public safety program is adopted, we'll have 10 to 12 more people," he said. "We just

He and his wife live on Bishop. They have three children and they've been park residents for more than 40 years.

John Prost

John Prost, 48, was first elected to the council in 1979 and re-elected in 1983. He said he is seeking election as mayor in order to give the city the positive image it deserves.

"It's a great place to be," he said. "It's the only place in the Pointes with two parks, the variety of services are excellent and we still have access to all the metropolitan facilities, whether it's baseball or the symphony or the Michigan Opera Theatre."

He believes residents are concerned with maintaining its residential community. "Because it's the older of the Grosse Pointes, there are special problems, particularly keeping up the homes that are there," he said. The occupancy ordinance has helped insure that houses are up to code, he said.

He views the consolidation of police and fire departments carefully. "We will know after we see the plan whether we should have full consolidation. My view is for whatever will serve the city best both in cost and services."

Prost said the public safety departments of all five Pointes should be consolidated. "There have been three studies saying the same thing," he said. "We are looking at central dispatching and the five Pointes have entered into an agreement regarding computer equipment."

Prost is regional sales manager for Manufacturers Life Financial Services. He serves on a number of

Dr. Canty and Lewis maintained a private practice in downtown Detroit in the last two years. Both are also licensed marriage counselors.

A memorial service will be held Sunday, July 28, at 2 p.m. at the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home. He is survived by his wife, and mother, Gladys Canty. He was the son of the late Dr. Alan Canty.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Michigan Humane Society or the Detroit Historical Society.

Cremation will be at Forest Lawn Cemetery.

High divers high and dry

As would-be divers discovered early Tuesday morning, there is no more high diving at the Farms city pool. The council July 22 ordered the three-meter board closed "immediately" following a warning from its insurance company that the depth of the pool beneath the board could pose liability problems.

The pool is 12 feet deep, according to standards prevailing when the pool was built. Current standards require 14 feet under a three-meter board.

Legally, the pool is probably "grandfathered," that is, acceptable because it pre-existed the standard. However, the council decided, the standard suggests that the 12-foot depth could be hazardous to divers.

local commissions and boards. He and his wife are 17-year Park residents. They live on Pemberton and they have two daughters.

David Zukowski, 33, in his first try at elective office, admitted he is a political unknown. "I'm just a working-class guy who is aware of the issues," he said.

"It seems to me that the council and mayor don't know the issues. All this ballyhoo about public safety is ineffective."

The solution is to hire at least six more officers, he said, not firemen who are cross-trained, but genuine law enforcement officers.

"I'm tired of hearing the word, 'alleged crime problem,' because there's nothing alleged about it. We are losing property and having property damaged and it's pointless, yet it seems to take a back seat to the Beautification Commission."

He believes the issue of public safety has been proposed in order to keep up with the other Pointes.

David Zukowski

"We can't be the only one without public safety," he said.

Zukowski, who describes himself as the "cabbage patch candidate," said he hopes there will be a debate.

He believes the city is well-managed as far as the "cosmetic application, but when you start talking about property value, traffic — that's where they're lacking."

Zukowski said he will be bringing out some facts later in the campaign and he hinted at "cynicism between Park employees and city council."

Zukowski attends Wayne State University and is working in the Wayne County Medical Examiner's office. He has been a resident of the Park for three years and he, his wife and two sons live on Wayburn.

Mack Avenue businesses receive another grant

Directors of the Mack Avenue Renaissance Alliance (MARA), a sub-corporation of the Grosse Pointe Business & Professional Association of Mack Avenue, announced that they have received another $30,000 block grant from Detroit to be used for facade renovation of businesses along the Detroit side of Mack Avenue from Alter Road to Outer Drive.

These funds are in addition to a $50,000 block grant they received in October 1984 from the city. This grant is also being used for facade renovation of businesses in the same area.

Business owners who submit applications for facade renovation which are approved by the Economic Development Department of Detroit will be reimbursed 50% of the cost, up to a maximum of $5,000. Improvements included in facade renovation are roof repairs, lighting, painting, redesign, landscaping, awnings and parking lot repairs.

Cindy Ligan, a director of MARA, says they are encouraging an "awning treatment" for all the businesses along the street so that they would be tied together in an attractive theme.

Both Ligan and Wahib Mashini, also a director of MARA, emphasized that business owners should request their applications as soon as possible in order to participate in the program. Applications can be obtained at the First of America Bank at Mack and Cadieux.

The facade improvements along this part of Mack Avenue are part of the Grosse Pointe Business & Professional Association of Mack Avenue's over-all plan to keep the business strip along Mack Avenue a pleasant place to do business and to prevent blight from spreading along Mack Avenue into the residential community.

Dr. Edward Kane, president of the GPB&PA, said that he is very pleased to know that the tide of blight is being turned back. He said it is a monumental task and it begins with one step at a time.

Free Press marathon to start earlier

In accordance with the request by a group of eastside Detroit ministers, the Detroit Free Press International Marathon, scheduled for Oct. 13, will start two hours earlier than usual.

The starting time of 7 a.m. was approved by the councils of the Park, the Farms, and the City during the last three weeks. Traffic along the marathon route will be stopped or delayed between approximately 8 and 11 a.m.

Lakeshore /Jefferson will be partially closed with traffic reduced to one lane during the morning, and traffic crossing the route will be stopped for about one hour while the runners pass.

Park council contest not lacking in candidates

By Pat Paholsky

Lee Carrick, 41, said he is running for a seat on the city council, "because Mayor (Palmer) Heenan asked me to run. In the past, I offered to help and he took me up on my offer."

He said fear of crime appears to be the major concern in the community. "We have the overall problem of trying to preserve the community and maintain it. What threatens it is blight that exists on the borders of Detroit and the fact that some people feel very threatened by it."

Carrick said he is in favor of consolidating the police and fire departments. "We ought to be able to increase the number of patrol persons on the job by about 200 percent without (tax) increase to the residents," he said. "One good way to prevent crime is to have more uniformed officers present and moving around."

He said the Park is a beautiful community. "We have neighbors who care about preserving trees, parks, the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation. That's the kind of community anybody would like to live in."

Although he is running independently of any slate, Carrick said he believes Heenan has done a good job and he would support him.

He is an assistant professor at the Wayne State University School of Medicine. Carrick, a lifelong resident of Grosse Pointe, attended local schools. He and his wife, Katherine live on Jefferson Court.

Lynn Crissman, 43, said her experience as an attorney would enable her to work with budgets the size of the Park's and to negotiate contracts.

The most important issue now is public safety, she said. "I think consolidation is long overdue and I would like to see it implemented. It would provide increased police visibility and patrol in the Mack/Wayburn area and it will provide faster response to fighting fires."

Other problems that need to be addressed are high-density traffic areas, such as Berkshire, she said, adding that she doesn't believe in street-closings. "It's inequitable to residents on streets that stay open."

Crissman said she is impressed with Kercheval in the Park and the improvements on Mack. She said the city should buy vacant property in the border areas for retail. "It's a long-term approach. I would like to see trees planted on Mack commencing on Wayburn to soften the approach in that area."

Crissman said she is disappointed with the council's action regarding elm trees. "We are Tree City, U.S.A. and we do not have an isolated elm population. We are next to an elm graveyard. I recognize that spraying is not a cure, but it does impede the bark beetle."

Crissman, who practices law in the City, is also a registered nurse. She earned a bachelor of science degree at Case Western University and a juris doctorate at St. Mary's University in San Antonio. She lives with her husband and two children on Balfour. They have been residents for four years.

Carroll Evola, 46, who was first elected to the council in 1981, said she has enjoyed serving and she believes she can contribute.

The council's primary concern, she said, is to give the residents the best service for their tax dollars.

The most important issue now, she said, is the manner in which a public safety department will be implemented. "There are five different levels of public safety and I agree with some of the recommendations of the majority and minority reports." Levels can range from nominal to full consolidation, she said, adding she was in favor of cross-training and the concept of one chief over two departments.

"I don't agree with those people who say crime is out of control," she said.

Another area that must be addressed is traffic as well as communication between residents and the city.

Evola, who grew up in the Park, said, "I love it. It's a great place to raise children and I would like to see a more positive image."

She is not running with a slate of candidates, however, she said she would support John Prost for mayor.

Evola is a licensed home administrator. She and her husband have three children. They live on Audubon.

Arthur Getz, 67, said he is seeking to be elected because he is devoted to the community and he feels he can add something.

"I have been asked to run for 25 years, but I was running a business and a Little League program. Now that I'm retired, I can give it almost full-time."

Getz said he is in favor of combining the police and fire departments for two reasons. "One of the problems is the crime in the western end and it would immediately put more police on the street. Second, it's just good business practice to have them combined. I think it will save money."

Asked what he would like to promote in the Park, Getz said, "I want to make certain our way of life is continued, making certain we have ordinances on the books and that we comply with them."

Getz said he is pleased that Mayor Heenan has involved more citizens in government. There are more people on various commissions, he said, adding that the city has been vitalized from that standpoint.

Getz, who had been involved with Little League for 25 years, recently retired from a family-owned medical equipment company. He and his wife have lived on Buckingham for more than 30 years. They have three sons and five grandchildren.

John Hibbard, 36, said he is hoping to gain a seat on the council in order to see consolidation implemented. "You might call me a one-issue candidate at this time," he said, adding that he saw the Jefferson-Chalmers area where his parents lived, deteriorate.

"There are two or three cracks in the dam and now is the time to patch it up before the dam bursts," he said.

"We also have a hideous traffic problem. Lakeside and Beaconsfield are tragedies waiting to happen," he said, due to the amount of traffic and the bars in the area.

Robson said he is in favor of street-closings. "If it is intelligently planned, it would be a boost to said, "I'm an advocate of free market and governing only when necessary."

Some of the benefits of living in the Park are the accessibility of cultural facilities in Detroit and Windsor, he said. The Park provides a wider variety of citizenry than the other Pointes, he added.

Hibbard believes he is qualified to serve on the council, because he majored in economics at University of Michigan and studied urban law and urban planning while he was at the University of Illinois Law School.

"Too many times we're overly concerned with the here and now," he said. "We have to consider the next 15 years or so, for example, housing values. That's a long-term view."

Hibbard, who grew up in Grosse Pointe, is a practicing attorney. He lives on Nottingham.

John Hibbard

James Robson Jr., 37, in his first try for elective offices, said he would like to stop what he sees as parallels between the Park and the Jefferson-Chalmers area.

"The muggings, the break-ins, the occasional rape — I see the beginning of the same pattern and that worries me very much," he said, adding that he saw the Jefferson-Chalmers area where his parents lived, deteriorate.

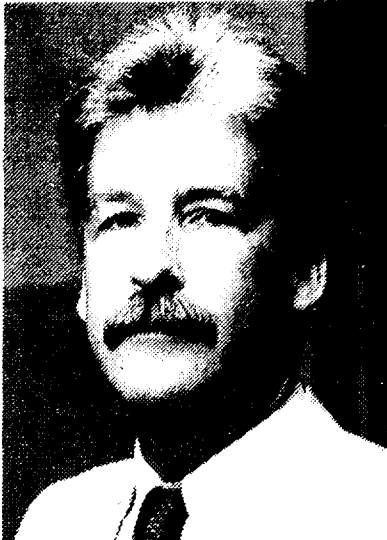

"There are two or three cracks in the dam and now is the time to patch it up before the dam bursts," he said.

"We also have a hideous traffic problem. Lakeside and Beaconsfield are tragedies waiting to happen," he said, due to the amount of traffic and the bars in the area.

Robson said he is in favor of street-closings. "If it is intelligently planned, it would be a boost to the city."

He is also in favor of public safety. "It will have the effect of three additional officers on our streets per shift and I like that."

Robson, who has lived in the Park for 10 years, said, "The school system, city services, garbage collection, police response time is magnificent. The parks are the best in the world and the people — the neighbors are great people."

He is one of the founders of Pointers for the Park, an organization which he says advocates pride in the city and a common sense of approach to problems.

Robson, a Wayne County deputy sheriff, has a bachelor of science degree in secondary education from Wayne State University and a master of arts in criminal justice from the University of Detroit. He, his wife and two children live on Beaconsfield.

Mark Valente III, 29, is finishing his first four-year term on the council. He is running for re-election because, he said, "I like to think the type of representation I can contribute is the type the people in the community deserve."

People are concerned with property values. "Anything we can do to affect those positively is a plus," he said, with street improvements, trees and parks.

The public safety issue is being pursued in the best way possible.

Valente said, "That was my motion and I lobbied very hard for it. We have approved the city manager along with Chief (Richard) Caretti to see what's the best way, if there is a good way, to implement it. We do a disservice to the people if we go ahead without seeing costs."

"I think the Grosse Pointes sooner or later will have to come down to one fire department, one police department, one public safety department," he said. "Before we can merge, we have to have five apples, not four apples and one orange. To that extent, it's good."

Valente said he is proud that

there hasn't been a tax increase in at least four years that he's been on the council. "It is something we work toward with a lot of diligence. We're very fortunate to have somebody like Nunzio (Ortisi, the city comptroller)."

Valente, who is a lifelong resident of the Park, said it's a fantastic place to live. "There's nowhere that I have seen that offers the positive attributes of Grosse Pointe Park. The pluses are the atmosphere, the aesthetically pleasing nature, the parks, the city benefits, street-plowing."

He is the comptroller for Valente Men's Formal Wear. He earned a bachelor of science degree in accounting at Villanova University and a juris doctorate at the University of Detroit. He lives in the same house on Whittier that he grew up in.

The primary in the Park

Grosse Pointe Park, we were told, has the most diverse population of any of the Pointes. Perhaps that explains the high degree of interest in community problems that helps fill the city hall chamber at every council meeting. Parents that diversity also explains the filing of so many candidates — three for mayor and seven for council — that a primary will be required Aug. 6. It will be the only one among the five Pointes holding elections in November.

As always, the emerging issues are those that directly affect the individual taxpayer and his pocketbook as well as the community as a whole. Among them are city leadership, the crime problem, the proposed consolidation of the police and fire departments into a public safety department, and the continued improvement in the city streets, parks and other facilities that contribute to the quality of life in the community.

The candidates agree on one issue: All are interested in and concerned about improving their community. They are running for office because they believe they can make a contribution, possess the background and experience that qualifies them for service and want to try to solve specific problems. Their differences are chiefly over what those problems are and the ways they would seek to solve them.

As usual, there are no formal slates. However, Mayor Palmer Heenan told the Grosse Pointe News he had encouraged several people to file for the council and four candidates told us the mayor's encouragement had helped them make up their minds to run. Three council incumbents in the campaign — two seeking re-election and one, John Prost, running for mayor — are tending to stick together in support of each other.

Heenan and Prost for mayor

In the mayoral contest, Park voters will have a choice among two experienced candidates and a third who has never before sought public office. He is David J. Zukowski, who works in the Wayne County Medical Examiner's office. He identifies himself as "a lone wolf," contends that the Cabbage Patch gets little consideration from the city administration and sees his opponents as two sides of the same coin.

It appears to the News, however, that the contest will be between Heenan, who was elected mayor two years ago by upsetting the then-incumbent, Douglas Graham, and Prost, who has served on the council six years, was re-elected two years ago and is running in mid-term for the mayor's post. In discussing their candidacies in separate interviews with them, the News concluded there are fewer differences between them on issues than on the ways they would go about achieving them.

After taking office, Heenan apparently felt he was regarded as an outsider by the council because on occasion he could not get his own way. Perhaps as a result, he has been aggressive in seeking his goals and in trying to get council support, and he has not been bashful about criticizing his opponents. Prost is more conciliatory in his approach, tending to accentuate the positive both in his council actions and his aims for the city.

The mayor told the News he wants to be re-elected because there still are "a lot of things left to do." Chief among them, in Heenan's mind, is the completion of the consolidation of the police and fire departments. The council has directed the city administration to "proceed in preparation of an operational plan" for the consolidation and then report back with an estimate of costs and consideration of other factors. The mayor reads this action as approval of the idea, but says the implementation of the program is even more important than its adoption.

The mayor also points to other achievements such as the creation of the Economic Development Corp., promotion of the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation to provide private capital for park and other community improvements, modernization of the pumping station and the recruitment of prominent business and professional people to work as volunteers on community problems. He also emphasizes that the city spent $1,444,000 on its roads in 1984-85 with no tax increase.

Prost says he is running for mayor because he wants that office to be a positive force for the Park. In his view, it is a great community, its services are excellent, it is a part of the metropolitan area with excellent access to downtown Detroit and it is attracting many young people with families. So, Prost says, the Park deserves leadership to emphasize a more positive image.

The challenger also wanted to maintain and improve city services, including police and firemen's services, refuse pickup and maintenance of parks, trees and streets. He supported the council vote on taking another step toward a public safety department, but warns against seeking a single solution to a complex problem. In his view, crime needs the cooperative effort of public officials and citizen involvement. Once the council sees the administration's report on the proposed public safety department, including the effect on current labor contracts and future costs, he expects the council to act in the city's best interests.

In his interview with the News, Zukowski stressed that he felt that neither the mayor nor the council has addressed the issues. He opposes the consolidation of the fire and police departments, but says what the Park needs is six more law enforcement agents, "not cross-trained firemen." In his view, problems are handled only on "a cosmetic basis," and people in the Cabbage Patch in particular get insufficient protection against arson, theft and property damage. Instead, he charged, "our problems take a back seat to the work of the Beautification Commission."

The News believes Heenan and Prost speak about the concerns of a majority of the population and, in our opinion, deserve to be nominated. That doesn't mean the Cabbage Patch does not have the grievances that Zukowski mentions. But it does mean that the mayor should represent all of his constituents and pay attention to the problems of all. This newspaper believes Heenan and Prost should be nominated on the basis of their background and experience in serving all of the Park residents.

Six endorsed for the council

Not surprisingly, the issues among the candidates for the council tend to be similar to those in the mayoral race. The challengers, and especially those encouraged by Mayor Heenan to run, emphasize the importance of the creation of the public safety department, while the incumbents, Carroll Evola and Mark Valente, stress the overall problems of getting the best possible services for the lowest cost of the taxpayer. A third incumbent, Patricia Forster, is not seeking re-election.

Both Evola and Valente supported the council's recommendation with respect to the proposed public safety department and, in fact, it was Valente's motion that was adopted. But Evola does not agree with critics that crime is out of control in the Park. And she wants to know the costs as well as the other details of the plan for consolidation that will be brought back to the council. She points out also that there can be varying degrees of consolidation, ranging from nominal to full consolidation of the police and fire departments.

Because all Pointe residents are concerned about their property values, Valente favors actions the council and city administration can do to affect property values positively. He cites such matters as street improvement, maintenance of trees and parks and combatting crime. He does not put as much emphasis on the crime problem as some candidates, but quoted with approval the comment of the new police chief, Richard Caretti, who said if the people have a perception of crime in the community, it must be addressed.

Evola and Valente both told the News they are running independent campaigns and not getting involved with other candidates. Both said, however, that they had worked with Prost on the council and felt he would do a better job than the incumbent mayor.

Among the challengers, the News was impressed with the qualifications and the responses to questions of John W. Hibbard, an attorney who served on the Park's Public Service Commission; Lynn B. Crissman, another attorney who has been interested in community problems and has expertise in negotiating labor contracts; Arthur H. Getz, a retired businessman who has served as chairman of the Park Recreation Commission and in other civic capacities, and Lee Carrick, a Wayne State University assistant professor in the medical school, who has become interested in civic issues as a result of his lifelong residency in the Pointes.

Like the other four challengers, James E. Robson, the seventh council candidate, who is a Wayne County deputy sheriff, endorses the proposed public safety department, but tends to believe the current council is ignoring the crime problem and not giving the street closing concept a fair shake.

The News gives its top endorsement to Evola and Valente on the basis of their experience on the council, but believes that Hibbard, Crissman, Carrick and Getz also offer backgrounds and qualifications that recommend them for nomination. The latter four indicated to the News that they had been encouraged to run by Mayor Heenan, but we take them at their word that they are not running as a slate and not participating in the mayoral campaign.

Old Kerby story stirs memories

To the Editor:

Thank you for the article on the Old Kerby School which appeared in the July 4th edition of the paper.

My family lived on the corner of Kerby Road and Grosse Pointe Blvd. from 1942 to 1959. Although I attended St. Paul's during elementary school years, Kerby schoolyard was the official community center for our neighborhood during the war years and into the fifties.

We played a lot of scrub softball there in the summer. The neighbors from Cambridge, Muskegon and all the streets and lanes near Kerby Road gathered for early evening baseball games in the schoolyard. We "chose up" teams after climbing our hands up the bat to see who would get first "dibs." The ages ranged from 8 to 18, and we rotated through position to get our at-bats. I recall neighbors coming over to watch our games while they were home on leave during the war years, and there were as many spectators as players as girls in the neighborhood came to be seen rather than to participate.

Some of us tomboys were encouraged to play. I remember striking out one of the macho hitters in a crucial situation: he suggested we form our own team and leave the neighborhood game to real men. (I wonder if he eats quiche now!) There was no Little League in those days and we always pressed the worst athlete into service as an umpire. We played until dark every night and it was a distinct advantage to be up at bat, hit to the outfield, and see the fielder drop the ball in the darkness. That was the official last play of each game.

Another activity which occupied us in the spring was marbles. We had a regular competitive track laid out and practiced by the hour. We traded colorful marbles and carried our sacks around all spring.

I became interested in tennis after the school closed in 1949. The rear of the schoolyard had a narrow collar of pavement which afforded me an excellent practice surface. I would hit the ball against the building, let it bounce on the cement, and then whack it back against the building. There were windows covered with wire mesh on this backwall surface, so I became adept at moving the ball around them. This practice effort required placement skills, and it helped me develop ball control at an early age.

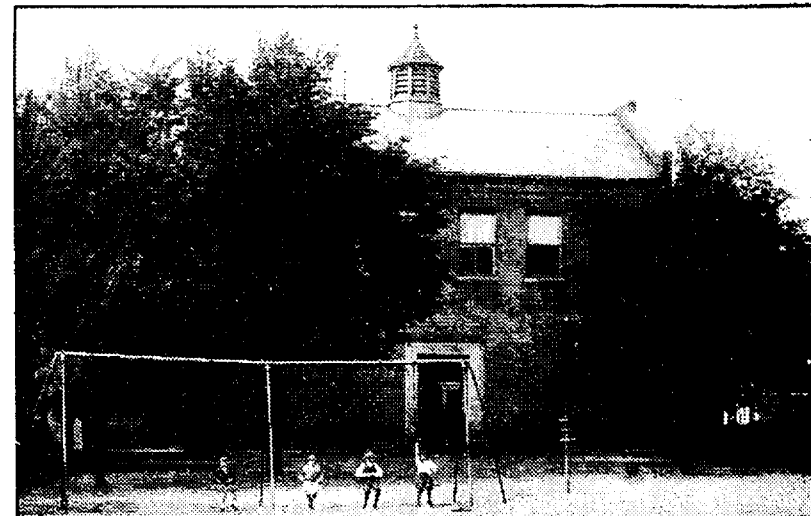

The police and fire stations were hubs of activities. Located near the schoolyard, we always knew what was happening in the Farms. The library had a small branch on the second floor of the police station; we would scurry up the stairs on the afternoon when the library was open and steal a view of the jail cells whenever possible. We always expected to see a John Dillinger type behind bars. The police station had a courtyard around back which we must have been able to see from the schoolyard because our games were delayed whenever action picked up around the police station.

The firemen pitched horseshoes in the sideyard of their station. We watched them on our way to and from the schoolyard as they were very skilled and enjoyed talking about their pitches as much as making them.

I live in the east now and our children have played on organized teams. Sports to them involves uniforms, managers, scoreboards and cheerleaders. I wish that they could sample the life we knew at Kerby schoolyard: everyone played, no one cheated, bad tempers were punished by banishment, and the game ended when the sun went down. Those were the good old days, and there was a lot of sports history made in that schoolyard!

Thank you

To the Editor:

The Class of 1985 and the committee for the All-Night Graduation Party held at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial on June 14, would like to extend some very generous thank yous to the parents of the Class of 1985, the administration at GPSH and the Grosse Pointe Public School, the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, the Grosse Pointe Farms Police Department, the community, and the wonderful shop-owners in Grosse Pointe.

Without your support and generosity, your endless time and fabulous donations, this party would not be possible. Thank you for giving the chance to share some of the "Times of our Lives" to this terrific group of students.

Photos are great

To the Editor:

I can't help but comment on your increased photographic coverage of so many of our community's excellent events.

With their cameras, Tom Greenwood and Elizabeth Carpenter are serving the Pointes in many ways: Their pictures serve to heighten awareness of all our community has to offer, to attract potential residents and shoppers to the Pointes, and to increase community pride.

Keep up the good work — there are many who appreciate it.

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

Feeling good! It comes with the season. Warm sunny days, long hours of light, the opportunity to shed bulky clothes and get out and roam. Summer is release time. If only it could be like this the year around!

Being from Michigan, you know that's not possible. Michigan has its seasons, some of them more temperate than others but each with its own special beauty.

Autumn glows red and brown and fans the air with cool, crisp breezes. Winter is chaste and white and silent, wearing the first untrodden snow like an ermine wrap. Spring breathes air, soft and sweet with a gentle promise of summer's glory; a maiden pledge that all the anticipated joys of Michigan's most bountiful season will soon be fulfilled.

When it comes, we know that summer was worth the wait. We relish it more because we look forward to it during the long, dreary hours of winter.

Each day is a blessing. As we dream in the warmth of the sun, flood our senses with the fragrance and colors and shapes of summer gardens, listen to birds herald morning's awakening, savor the freshness of vegetables brought to market from nearby farms, watch sailboats skim over the lake or walk in the purple twilight, we do indeed feel good. If only we could bottle up this resurgence of well-being and put it aside to ease the doldrums of closed-in winter days.

We live in a climate of change and we accept the good with the bad and realize that Michigan weather is like the little girl with the curl in the middle of her forehead. "When she was good, she was very, very good, but when she was bad, she was horrid."

In a way we can store the summer elixir in our hearts and minds to be brought out to lift our spirits in the dull, drab debilitating days of winter.

In a more tangible way we can keep a picture portfolio of summer joys to pore over and remind us that in the circle of seasons, we will once again be part of, and immersed in, the summer rejuvenating process.

There is yet another way to reap the benefits and to store up reserves for the days ahead when we sit and long for the lazy, hazy days of summer.

While our spirits are high, and our bodies more compliant when it comes to physical activity, and we are more willing to abstain from those comforting rich foods that help to chase away the doldrums of winter's inclement weather, we can begin to keep all those promises we made to ourselves about living a more healthful life.

Exercise, diet and attention to ailments before they become major health problems are the ingredients necessary to maintaining vigor the year around.

Exercise need not be strenuous or punishing. Walking can have the same good effects as jogging if you walk vigorously. You will need to walk farther than if you jogged, but you will avoid the strain that jogging puts on joints and muscles.

Dieting is much easier in the summer. There is no need to stoke the body with hot, heavy foods. Menus made up of light, refreshing, low-calorie foods satisfy and taste wonderful. Summer is the only season when many of the foods we like best are available locally. Michigan is a land of plenty at this time of year; raspberries, blueberries, melons, peaches are some of the fruits and berries that fill the stores and produce stands with color and the promise of good eating.

Not to be overlooked are the home-grown corn and tomatoes, two of summer's favorite bounties, along with every other vegetable needed to toss a vitamin-filled salad or a combination vegetable plate.

It is true that most of these foods are shipped in year-round, but have you ever tasted a tomato in January that even came close to the incomparable goodness of a vine-ripened tomato? And that goes for the rest of the list too. Home-grown is better. Enjoy it while you can. It's good and good for you.

You exercise, you eat more healthful food, but you still don't feel as well as you think you should. Only your doctor can help. Now while it is easier to get out, is the time to make an appointment.

There are those who try to ignore symptoms of health problems, hoping they'll go away. If there is something wrong, they don't want to know it. They remember friends who were cheerful and carefree until they visited a doctor and discovered they had a problem. In some cases the problem had reached a stage when little could be done, or it was serious enough to place such limits on the individual that the once cheerful person became depressed and querulous.

Like the good news of summer, the good news in medical advances is that illnesses that were once untreatable or limiting are now much more likely to have an encouraging prognosis.

Prevention is the keyword, prevention from serious illnesses by heeding warning signals and preventing accidents by avoiding, as we used to say about sin, the near occasions.

First on the 'near' occasion to avoid injury by accident, is one that we have heard promoted recently in all forms of media and is now a Michigan law — wearing seat belts.

For those who have never worn seat belts because they feel constricted and tied in by them, it is going to take some getting used to. For some unexplained reason, bad habits are easily formed. Good habits are not.

It will take a planned personal campaign to overcome the aversion to clamps and canvas wrapped around your person, not to mention the natural hatred you will have towards that ugly relentless buckle that refuses to free when you stop the car and try to get out without first remembering to unsnap the nuisance.

But it is a necessary evil. The most common cause of injuries in older persons is automobile accidents, many of which can be prevented by wearing seat belts.

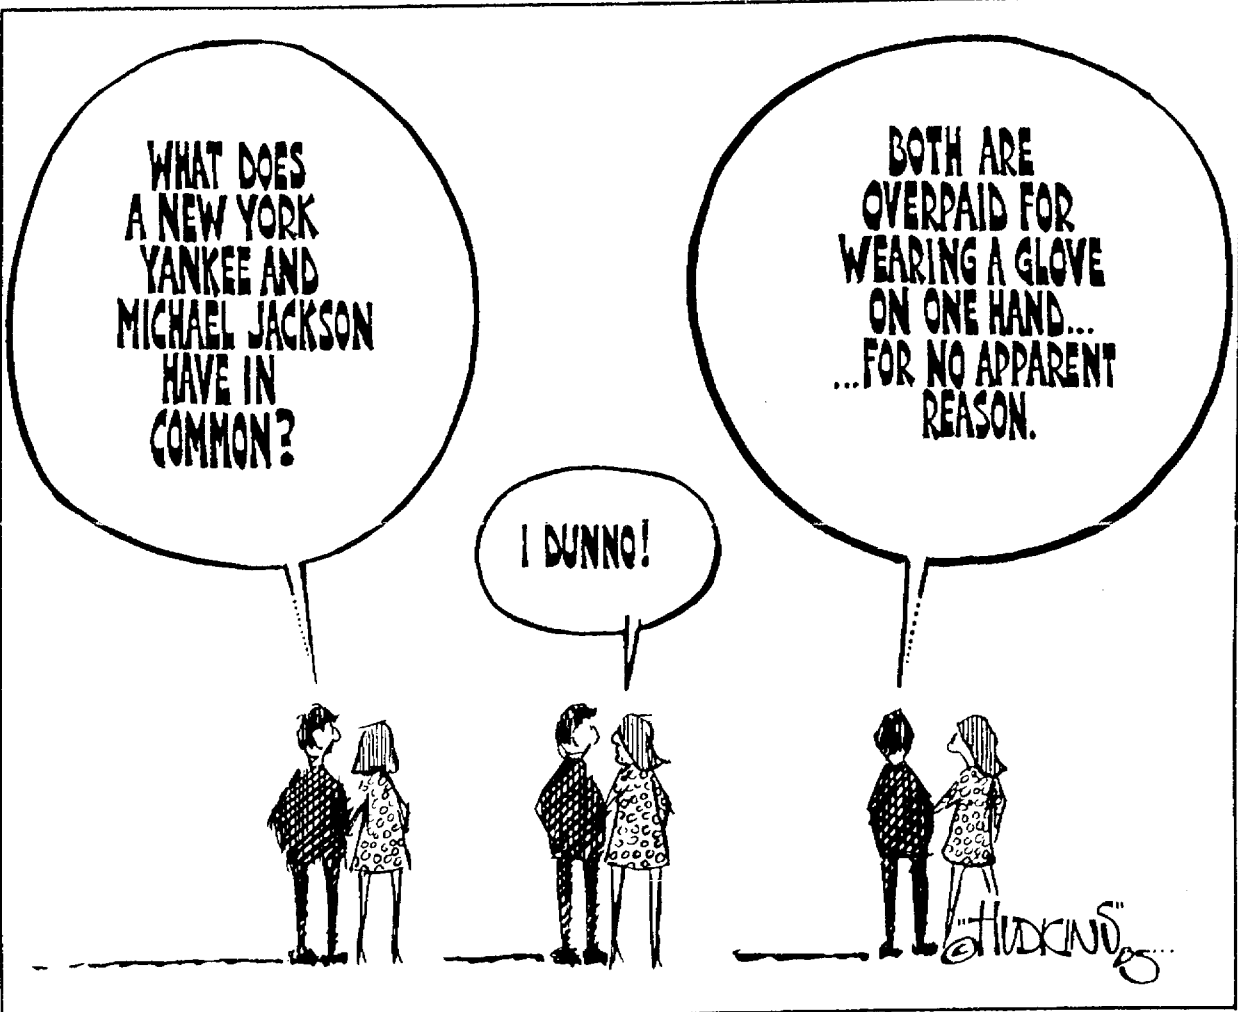

Falls, the second cause of injury, may be prevented by following such precautions as bannisters on stairways; adequate lighting on stairs and doorways, being careful on ladders — if you get on them at all.

One of the best reminders that minds stay young but bodies get old is joints. Not the kind you smoke nor the kind you hang out in, but those parts of the anatomy that keep us agile.

Joints will take so much, and no more — weight that is, before they fight back. Obesity places added strain on weight-bearing joints and can accelerate osteoarthritis.

Arthritis is a problem that needs a doctor's advice. Relief is available but because there are more than 100 different diseases considered to be arthritis, only you and your doctor can determine what combination of treatments is the correct therapy for you. Pain can be relieved. Crippling can be avoided. Twenty years of research has resulted in treatments and combinations of treatments to provide help for arthritis.

I say

An aunt is an aunt is an aunt

I love kids. As long as they're someone else's.

Don't get me wrong. I really do love kids. Especially when they're someone else's. Like my sister's or my brother's. Because that makes me an aunt and after seven years in the position, I can heartily recommend it to anyone who isn't quite ready to have children of her own.

Oh sure, there are a few details to be worked out. You have to have a brother or a sister to begin with. But once you make sure of that and he or she is willing to go the whole route for you — get married, buy the house, have the children — you've got it made.

Take me, for example. I grew up with nine "regular" aunts (although I will admit that some of them were a little irregular) and eight aunts by marriage. Aside from making my uncles nicer people to be around, my aunts came in awfully handy in lots of other ways. I had an aunt whose second husband worked in a candy factory and who never showed up at our house without bearing bags of candy for each of us. Another aunt was a great storyteller with a treasure-trove of tales from years past. And another was the always-there-when-you-need-her steady type. I loved every one of them.

Which is why, when I got old enough, I decided to go into the aunt business myself. And so far, I think I've done pretty well in the job, although written critiques from Sarah, 7, Briana and Stephanie, 6, and Michael, Casey and Alex, all 4, have not been forthcoming. By the same token, they haven't complained (the only rule is that they must never call me AUNT Peggy — yuk) and if THEY ever consider being aunts (or uncles in the cases of Mike and Alex) I think I can give them a reason or two why it would be a wise choice. Here's a few:

Aunts are people who love kids, have fun with them, take them places and buy them things... and who can, without feeling too guilty, breathe a sigh of relief when parents come to take the little dears home.

Aunts are people who always

have plenty of room on their refrigerator doors for their favorite kids' artwork.

Aunts are people whose friends must sign a pledge that they will never tire of looking at refrigerator artwork, school pictures and nieces' report cards.

Aunts are people who pinch cheeks and get away with it.

Aunts are people who get the second best seats at the school play... and can sneak out without attracting too much attention after their favorite niece or nephew has appeared.

Aunts are people who will take a kid to a scary movie a parent wouldn't... laugh at a semi-dirty joke told by a child who would get soap in his mouth if he told it at home... and hand out ice cream or M & M's 15 minutes before dinner.

Aunts are people who spend all year long paying off Christmas toys charged on their charge accounts... and spend it laughing because they're not the ones who have to put the toys away.

Aunts are people who can't remember when they paid the paper boy or changed the oil in their cars, but have perfect recall when it comes to birthdates.

Aunts are people who worry almost as much as a parent does about sore throats, the chicken pox, a broken arm or an "F" in math... even if they don't admit it.

Aunts are people who occasionally seem more like friends the older they (and you) get.

Aunts are people who can send silly birthday cards... as long as they stick a $5 bill in it first.

Aunts are people who can push a 40-pound kid on a swing for nearly an hour before they start yelling for any uncles who happen to be handy.

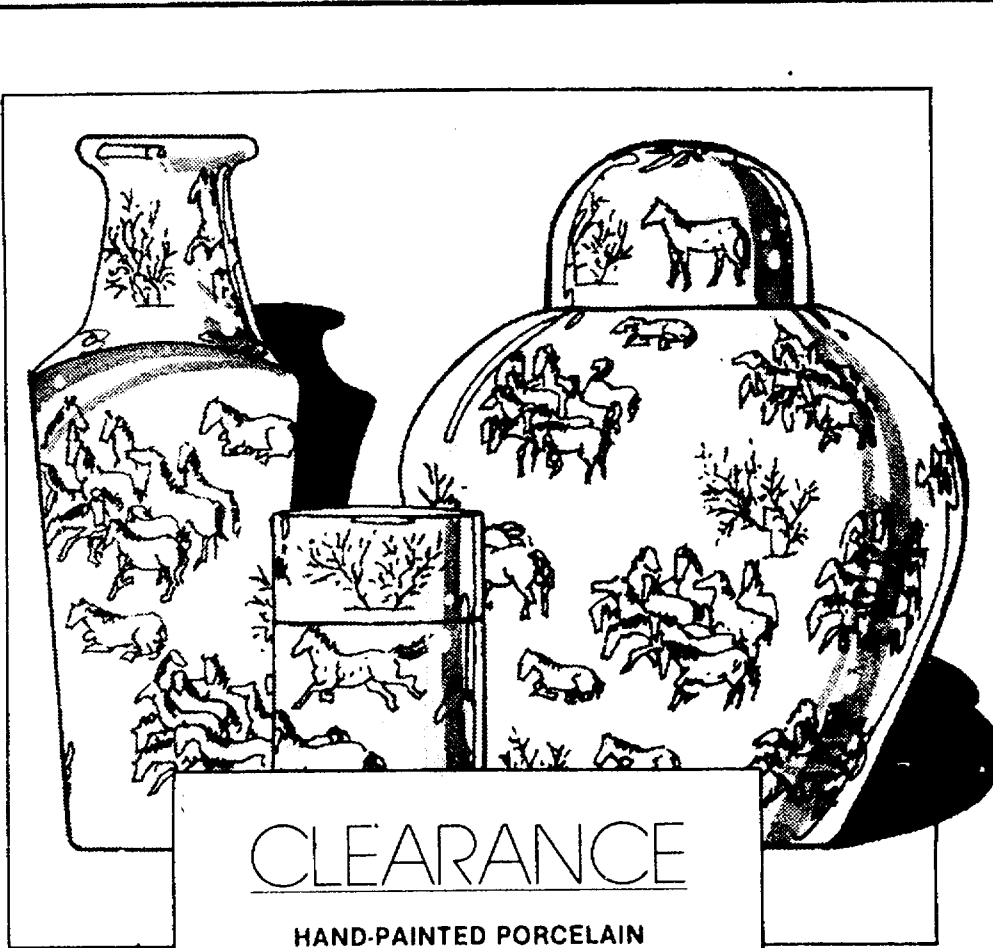

Aunts are people who love it when they can borrow a niece or nephew for a few hours and go do silly kid things like ride a merry-go-round, watch Smurf cartoons, build a snow fort or play jump rope.

Aunts are people who always know the funniest and most embarrassing stories about what a kid's mom or dad did when they were kids... and tell them in front of a roomful of people.

Aunts are people who get funny looks from friends who find Huggies in the aunt's glove compartment.

And aunts are people who, when they are gone, quite often leave an emptiness that is almost impossible to fill.

Most of all, aunts are people who don't mind screen doors slamming, fingerprints on the walls, crayons in the garbage disposal and the crushed petunia beds that comprise the wake of a small person... just as long as the small person doesn't forget to leave a hug around the neck or a peck on the cheek before they go.

Farms, Park earn top safety honors

Grosse Pointe Farms and Grosse Pointe Park have earned awards from the American Automobile Association for their pedestrian safety programs.

The Farms won the fourth-place Special Citation for Outstanding Pedestrian Program Activities. The award is given to cities after an evaluation of their accident records system, specific pedestrian-control legislation and enforcement of pedestrian and driver behavior. Also evaluated are community traffic safety coordination, school traffic safety and public information and education.

The Farms competed with 1,007 cities in the 10,000 to 25,000 population group to win the citation. The city had no pedestrian deaths last year and had a rate of 18 pedestrian injuries per 100,000 population vehicle titles.

The Park earned the fifth-place Pedestrian Safety Achievement Award in the 10,000 to 25,000 population group for going 16 years without a pedestrian fatality.

City officials will receive a plaque in September.

New ULS headmaster learning the community

By Nancy Parmenter

The gray man poking into all the corners at University Liggett is the new headmaster, John ("Ted") Whatley. He says he likes what he finds.

"I'm very stimulated by the whole environment," Whatley said. "It's fascinating to learn a little more every day. I'm edging into the synthesizing stage now."

The school Whatley is studying is a changing one. ULS has been trying to broaden its appeal beyond the limits of Grosse Pointe. Only 64 percent of the current enrollment lives in the Pointes, compared to 75 percent five or six years ago, Whatley said.

"Independent schools, since they don't have any geographical boundaries, have the capacity to reach out," he said. "That is one of their assets."

Whatley would like to see the school be more assertive about getting its message out. He sees positive implications to the school to having students from metropolitan Detroit. A more diverse student body also brings with it challenges.

"It puts the challenge to the faculty to make those students feel part of the community. But there are actually fewer social pressures in a school where the emphasis is on academics and there is a wide variety of opportunity," he said.

Whatley himself is a product of public schools, which he calls "great acculturating agents" for their role in assimilating new immigrants into the American mainstream. But he defends the variety found in independent schools.

"There's more diversity in an independent day school than in the public high school I went to," he said. "The diverse group of families helps keep the school changing and alert. It's a productive stimulus."

Schools, and especially independent schools, have carved out a man-sized order for themselves, in Whatley's view. They are determinedly liberal arts-oriented, generalist in emphasis in a way that "goes against the grain" of a society that is increasingly specialized.

"The basic profile of an independent school teacher is of a liberally educated person with wide intellectual and humanistic interests, whose reason for being is to see children grow and become something admirable," he said. "They must be able to fill a variety of roles."

As is the custom in many independent schools, the ULS headmaster teaches at least one class in order to stay in closer contact with the students. Whatley will teach a history class.

"In a way, it's cosmetic, but it does help (one) keep in touch," he said. "I've been very reinforced by the recent management books that say that the closer you are to the assembly line, the more effective you are. I've always believed that."

Whatley has taught history to all age levels, in keeping with his history degree from Harvard and his years as a history and English teacher at the Hill School in Pennsylvania and the Albuquerque Academy in New Mexico. His experience has shown him that the important qualities in teachers are the human ones rather than the paper credentials.

"The humanity of teachers is what stays with you," he said. "That's what I'd like to see permeating the life of this school. The more didactic you are, the more you lose them, because you're not respecting their intellect, their capacity to judge."

"You can't separate the intellect from the heart. Thinking and feeling are one and the same. It's unfortunate that in our culture, the rhetoric divides them. To me, the intellect is a warm, enriching part of the human spirit. The school needs to express that."

Whatley comes to ULS from a headmastership at the Catlin Gable School in Portland, Ore. He and his wife, Melba, a third-year law student at the University of Detroit, live on the ULS campus, an intimate arrangement that he said fits exactly with the way he wants to do the job. They have seven children between them, all grown except for two who are in high school in Texas.

The Whatleys seem to typify the advantages of a liberal education: The interests of the children range from specializing in 12th and 13th century French musical instruments to the hands-on repair and construction of chimneys, while Melba Whatley hopes to connect her knowledge of the law to her abiding interest in art and artists and Ted Whatley likes to backpack in New Mexico.

"I also read a lot," he said, "and I'm passionate about the arts. But the thing I like best is backpacking, particularly to remote archeological sites. My favorite place in all the world is Canyonlands in Utah. It is beautiful arid scenery."

Since Whatley is geographically separated from his favorite pastimes, now that he lives on the Great Lakes, he is "determined" to learn to sail.

But before he starts learning the genoa jib from the spinnaker, Whatley wants to learn ULS from the bottom up. He plans to spend much of the summer interviewing every member of the upcoming senior class to find out how they see their school, what they like and what they would change if they could.

"I want to know what they're thinking," he said. "It's part of the constant process of building a community."

Science, nature camp returns

A second session of the Science and Nature Camp held the week of July 8 by the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe public school system and the Living Science Foundation has been slated to start Monday, Aug. 12.

The adventure day camp experience will again be provided by the group that made such a hit initially with Grosse Pointe children with their presentation in all the system's elementary schools in the late winter and early spring, and again in the July camp.

During the week of Aug. 12, elementary children will have an opportunity to meet all their animal friends again — Julius Squeezer the python; Kirby the blue and gold Macaw; Eureka the Amazon parrot; Buto the toad; and Taffy the skunk. They will meet — even ride — Phyllis the horse!

Emphasis in the week-long Science and Nature Camp program will be on natural history presented in an understandable form by professional teachers. The daily program includes attention to the basic animal classifications of fish, amphibians, reptiles, birds, and mammals.

In the July camp, there was one teacher for every four students. Also, eight student volunteers were on staff.

Students will spend time the week of Aug. 12 with Hero the Robot, for an introduction to the world of robotics. During the week-long camp, each student will learn videotaping procedures and will assist in producing a videotape. There's also a unit on astronomy.

Because of the individualized nature of the program, students who enroll in July, as well as newcomers, will benefit from the experience.

The Science and Nature Camp, ages 5 to 12, will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily Monday through Friday. Fee for the week-long session is $125. Students bring a sack lunch, with beverages and snacks provided.

A videotape of the July camp experience is expected to be available soon for those interested in a preview.

The camp will be held in room 101 and on the grounds of Barnes School, 20090 Morningside Drive, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Call 343-2178 for space availability.

ULS students place in national exam

How do Carolyn Seydel, Andrea Piotrowski and Mara Vorhees feel about the recently announced results of the National French Exam? "C'est bon!"

These three University Liggett School students placed in the national competition after vying with more than 72,000 middle and high school students on the examination administered by the American Association of Teachers of French (AATF). With six levels of competition, the test is given to students at all levels of study.

The three competed against students a full year ahead of them in school. Carolyn Seydel, an eleventh grader, placed third in Level 4 (in the competition for grade 12 students); Andrea Piotrowski, a tenth grader, placed third at Level 3 (in the competition for eleventh graders); and Mara Vorhees, an eighth grader, placed seventh at Level 1 (for ninth graders).

Sailor's car stolen

In the you-can't-win department: One of the Pointes' Mackinac sailors came home from the race to find his car missing.

A friend drove it home from Port Huron and parked it in the street beside the house. In the middle of the night Saturday, a man wearing a red shirt was seen getting into the gray Oldsmobile Toronado and driving it away. Farms police reports said navigational equipment worth several thousand dollars was in the trunk.

NECK PAIN

The cervical spine or neck is a frequent site of pain and discomfort. The cause of the pain is usually due to misaligned joint movement (subluxation) in the cervical spine. The neck has 7 vertebrae (bones) which support the head, allow us to move our heads in all directions, and also protect the spinal cord and nerves which pass out between the bones. Straining signals of neck trouble may begin with a sorely aching head, easily in all directions of movement. An example would be difficulty in backing your car out of the driveway. When the condition advances, other symptoms can occur. Common symptoms are: headaches (including migraines), nausea, muscle spasm, stiffness, dizziness, loss of balance, pain or numbness in the arms and hands. Chiropractic corrects these problems by restoring normal movement to the spine. Brought to you by a community service by Dr. David Jantz, D.C. If you have any questions or need more information, please call Dr. Jantz at 881-7677. All insurance accepted.

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss

No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe: it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that? It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed, you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

Best of all, ordering Amitol is simple, fast, and reliable! Simply call Dyna Labs Toll Free: (1-800-441-5454) Ext. 911, and order with your credit card. If you don't have a credit card Dyna Labs will also accept C.O.D. orders right over the phone! All orders are shipped immediately by UPS, which means no delay and no orders lost in the mail!

Retiring retailer ready for 'second big adventure'

By Michael McConnell

On July 30, Richard D. Sterr of the Carl Sterr clothing store will retire and begin what he calls his "second big adventure" in life.

The Carl Sterr store, located on The Hill, was started by Sterr and his father in 1957. And now that Sterr is retiring, his son, Richard Sterr Jr., will take over.

"He's buying the business on his own," said Sterr of his son.

In between straightening sweaters on display and waiting on customers, Sterr talked about the business he would soon be leaving.

"This is an inventory-oriented business with a slow turnover," he said. "You have to be careful about how much you buy and always keep a good cash reserve."

"The buying philosophy of men is more stable than that of women," he said. "If a man joins a store, he stays with it out of convenience and loyalty. I don't want to get the women mad at me, but it's just that they tend to seek more variety and so they go to many different places."

Sterr also said he is looking forward to moving into his new home in the mountains of North Carolina with his wife Marianna.

"When you get to be 60 or more," he said, "time becomes the premium asset of your life. I want to enjoy myself."

Richard Sterr Jr., 25, doesn't intend to make any changes in the store. "I'll only make changes dictated by the customers."

"If I had to characterize my father," he said, "I'd say he was a very straight shooter. He never really lectured me and I think I've learned more from watching him and his professionalism."

"I have a lot of respect for a man who brought up six children and had enough insight not to force them into the business, but still received them with open arms and let them make their own choices."

When Sterr retires, his 22-year residence in the Woods will come to an end. "I've enjoyed meeting the people and taking care of them," he said.

Sterr said he is ready for a whole new adventure.

"My first big adventure was meeting and marrying my wife, having kids and starting the business. My second big adventure is going to be moving to our place in North Carolina."

When he gets to his new house with his wife, Sterr said he plans a re-enactment of a ritual he performed when first married. "I'm going to carry her across the threshold," he said.

Proud Heritage

Concours of Mercedes-Benz, "Proud Heritage VII," will be held Saturday, July 27, from noon to 5 p.m. on the grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in the Shores.

Proud Heritage VII is the largest concours of Mercedes-Benz automobiles in North America planned and produced by a separate, non-profit organization, Proud Heritage, for the benefit of Children's Hospital of Michigan.

The show will feature more than 100 vehicles built from 1906 to 1984, all displayed on the lawn of the Ford House on Lake St. Clair. This is a national show, with cars currently registered from as far away as New York and Colorado. Last year's Concours winner and best in show came from Chicago.

The value of the vehicles on display will be more than $7 million, with several of the cars on display valued at more than $250,000 each. Several other cars will display extreme performance potential, capable of reaching speeds in excess of 150 mph.

The show is open to the public. Tickets are $5 adult, $2 for children, and are available at Magnetic Sight and Sound in the Village and at the Ford House gate the day of the show. Ticket price is tax-deductible.

Incinerator overflow could go to Macomb

By Nancy Parmenter

The plan announced Friday to construct an incinerator in Macomb County could have implications for the Pointes. Gordon Sutin, vice president of Energy Answers, said the new facility would have the capacity to burn the excess from the Grosse Pointes-Clinton incinerator.

"They can send us their whole waste stream," added his assistant, George Latos.

The Grosse Pointes-Clinton facility has the capacity to burn 600 tons of garbage a day. During the summer and fall, increased amounts of trash and incomplete incineration of wet grass force the authority to landfill large amounts of the end product.

Energy Answers' planned facility, to be located at the old Marsack sand and gravel pit near 14 Mile Road, Little Mack, and Masonic in Roseville, is projected to burn 1,000 to 1,500 tons of municipal, commercial, and "selected industrial" waste every day.

Cities intending to send their waste stream to the new incinerator will be expected to guarantee amounts, Sutin said. If they do not, space will be available at higher prices, in what could be compared to the oil spot market, he said.

"We would always have room for their excess," Sutin said of the Pointes-Clinton incinerator, "but they would get a better price with guaranteed amounts."

Energy Answers' projected tipping fee is $25 per ton. Sutin explained that the fee would rise with the cost of living for the first five years, when a system of rebates would come into play and gradually reduce the fees until they were back to the original level at the end of 10 years.

Communities in the Pointes-Clinton Authority are charged proportionate shares of the incinerator's operating costs. Current operating cost is $21.05 per ton, according to authority Chairman Ledyard Mitchell.

The more waste an authority community commits to the incinerator, the less it is charged per ton. Mitchell said the average tipping fee would translate to approximately $27 or $28 per ton. In 1983, Clinton Township, the authority's largest contributor, estimated its cost per ton at $30-$35, according to a refuse committee.

Authority general manager Edwin Whedon said that when the Energy Answers incinerator is built, he would be open to proposals. "We'd be interested in anything they had to say," he said. "If we ever outgrow our facility, instead of spending millions to build an addition, we'd take a look at sending the excess there."

Sutin repeated Friday that Energy Answers had offered to buy the Pointes-Clinton facility lock, stock and barrel, close it down for use only as a backup, and build their own incinerator on the site. He said Energy Answers would have accepted the entire waste stream at a saving to the authority communities.

Whedon said he has no recollection of such an offer. Reports of conversations about sharing facilities are not false, he said, but give more substance to the talk than they deserve. The authority has received proposals on everything from burning chicken manure for power to feeders from Macomb County and the South Macomb Disposal Authority.

"Talk is cheap," Whedon said. "Nobody has come in and made a specific proposal to our board. There has never been anything concrete offered." He confirmed that he has met Sutin and talked with the SMCA's Greg Carpenter, "but that's all it was — talk."

Energy Answers already has received waste stream commitments from six northern Macomb communities and plans to canvas the other 20 communities soon, Sutin said. He projects that the facility will have the capacity to burn refuse from the entire county, although other estimates place county refuse as high as 2,000 tons a day.

The plant will use a "shred and burn" technology that more completely mixes the wet and dry waste for thorough incineration, according to Sutin. He said the anticipated 1,800-2,000 degrees in the furnaces will also aid in complete burning and is expected to destroy dioxins created in the burning process as well.

The Pointes-Clinton furnace has the potential to burn at 1,800 degrees, but critics charge that it rarely reaches that level, pointing to the incomplete burning of the grass as proof.

There are no established levels for the destruction of dioxins, according to Tom Maki, district engineer for the air quality division of the Department of Natural Resources. "There's no doubt that dioxins are created in the combustion process, but research has not established a national standard," Maki said. "The permit (for Pointes-Clinton) does not speak to it."

The incinerator permit covers only "dust loading," or particulates, Maki said. Since the installation of the tall stack and the electrostatic precipitators, by order of the state, the incinerator has been performing well, he said.

"It's one of the best precipitator installations on a municipal incinerator in the country," Maki said. "It's well designed and very reliably operated." Maki stressed that the precipitators remove only dust particles, not toxic emissions, which are still under study.

The Energy Answers plant will extract ferrous metals before incineration, which is expected to reduce the bulk of the waste by 90 to 95 percent, according to Sutin.

Sutin claims that the ash residue will be usable as a gravel substitute, although he said the firm has not yet received a state permit for it.

Energy Answers still has all the permit procedures ahead of it. The plant is expected to go on line in 1989.

Vodka made in this country must be passed through charcoal and stored in special containers to ensure it will be tasteless. That's not just the custom, it's the law.

How sweet is it?

Did you know that a 12-ounce can of cola contains 10 teaspoons of sugar?

Or that about half the calories in most presweetened cereals come from the sweet stuff?

Most people are surprised to learn how much sugar their favorite foods contain. Now, "Sugar Scoreboard," a colorful 18 inch x 24 inch wall chart published by a non-profit consumer group, answers the question: "How sweet is it?"

Here at a glance are the sugar contents of more than 250 commonly eaten brand-name and natural foods. The chart lists sugar both as a percentage of total calories and in another useful unit — teaspoons per serving. Did you know that a cup of a popular fruit yogurt contains almost six teaspoons of sugar?

We're eating more sugar than ever before, says the Center for Science in the Public Interest (CSPI), publisher of the "Scoreboard." According to one method of estimating sugar consumption, Americans eat 125 pounds of sugar per person each year. That's the sugar equivalent of consuming 100 scoops of vanilla ice cream a week!

"A good goal," says CSPI executive director Dr. Michael Jacobson, "would be to cut in half the amount of sugar we eat. Our teeth and waistlines would be the better for it." The chart gives tips on where to find and how to reduce the amount of sugar we eat.

On average, sugar provides about 12 percent of the calories in the typical diet, but many people consume much more.

The largest single source of the sweet stuff is soft drinks, accounting for 25 percent of all the sugar consumed. That's more sugar calories than people get from cakes, cookies, pies, and candy combined!

"Sugar was never much of a problem when people ate only the natural sugars in dairy foods and fruits," Jacobson explains. "But once efficient manufacturing processes were developed in the 1800s, production of refined sugars soared. It climbed from 10 pounds per person in 1820 to the current level of 125. Once people started treating their taste buds — and their teeth — to an almost constant bath of sugar, tooth decay became rampant," he says.

A more subtle nutritional problem is that sugar provides calories in the diet, but no vitamins, minerals, dietary fiber, or protein, says CSPI's director of nutrition, Bonnie Lieberman. "These 'empty calories' either replace more nutritious foods or add extra calories that promote obesity."

"Sugar Scoreboard" hangs neatly on a refrigerator door or kitchen wall. To get a copy, send $3.50 (or $7 for a laminated, damage-resistant version) to Sugar Scoreboard, Box 66300, Washington, D.C. 20035.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest is a non-profit consumer group seeking to improve the public's health by offering reliable consumer information and working to reform the nation's food and health policies.

Boat night in Port Huron

Shores residents Shirley and Steve Gagne relaxed on their boat, Triumph, Friday night as more than 100,000 spectators came to look over the boats and join the excitement. The 61-foot boat was prepared for its third Port Huron to Mackinac race, placing second overall at its best in 1983.

Detroit CB patrol aids Pointes

By Tom Greenwood

Citizen crime fighters on the Detroit side of Mack Avenue are trying to help Grosse Pointe keep its crime rate down.

Armed with spotlights, CB radios and full tanks of gas, members of Defenders East, a citizen action group that patrols several square blocks of Detroit, are also keeping an eye on the Pointes.

"We live in the last little part of Detroit that's worth saving," said Chris Tocco, 32, of Detroit. "I live just across the border from Grosse Pointe. If we can help clean up the garbage in our section, it can only help the Pointes as well. Our patrol area, from 7 Mile and Mack to 7 and I-94, and from 94 to Whittier and then up to St. Clare Parish, abuts on Grosse Pointe. We act as a buffer. We all live in that area and we're going to stay."

Tocco and fellow member Richard Robb estimate their group has about 20 members currently, but they're looking for more. "We have a number of ex-cops, ex-firemen and more than a few Grosse Pointers," Robb said. "We also have a number of senior citizens. Currently they're trying to organize the older members into daytime patrols since they're retired and are at home during the day. Eventually we hope to increase our numbers to 35 members."

Tocco said that Defenders East was formed about six months ago from a number of other patrol groups that dissolved their membership.

"Right now, we're trying to incorporate ourselves as a non-profit group," he said. "The papers are due back from Lansing anytime. With incorporation, we will present ourselves to the Detroit Police Department and qualify for funding from the city. The funds will be used mainly to purchase CB equipment."

"But that hasn't prevented us from patrolling in the meantime. We check the neighborhoods, businesses and the car lots on Mack Avenue. We aren't armed and never will be. Our only strength is in numbers. We average about six to eight cars a night on the road, more on the weekends. Each car has a driver and a spotter. If anything suspicious goes down, we call to our base unit and they in turn notify the police department, and that includes the Grosse Pointe departments as well."

According to Tocco, the patrol members have observed break-ins, car thefts and vandalism.

"We've also broken up fights, spotted fires and car accidents," Robb said. "We even receive hot sheets from the police with numbers of stolen cars. Anything we observe we call in. We've helped the police in the Park, Farms and City as well as Detroit. However, one of the problems we face is that we're new. If a homeowner sees us parked on a deserted street, he often thinks we're up to no good. The word will get out with time."

In the past, the group has even helped get drunk drivers off the street.

"We call 2:30 a.m., when the bars close, the witching hour," Tocco said. "Boy, the weirdos really come out then. Drunks are all over the place. We cannot and do not pull drunks over. That's the job for the police. But we can call the license numbers in."

Farms Chief of Police Robert Ferber said his department is aware of the group's existence.

"I think it's an excellent idea," he said. "We like the concept of cooperation between the citizens and police. It helps us to fight crime. We appreciate these kinds of involved citizens."

In Grosse Pointe City, Director of Public Safety Bruce Kennedy said he wasn't personally aware of the group, but reported that some of his men had contact with the organization.

"Apparently a few months ago they flagged down one of our cars and reported seeing three youths breaking windows at a gas station in our city. They gave an accurate description and our men were able to effect an arrest.

"I have no problems with groups of this sort as long as there's a need for them, there's discipline and they're well-organized. Citizen CB patrols can be a good idea if they're properly formed."

Park Police Chief Robert Caretti said he was unaware of the group's existence, but didn't rule out the possibility that the citizens had aided the men of his department.

"I'm still pretty new here," he said. "No paper has crossed my desk that I'm aware of, but I'm sure they may have met us at one time or another through individual officers."

"I think the idea of CB patrols is exciting. We have one here in our city and we're trying to pick up the level of the people involved. We hope to intensify the awareness of crime prevention in our citizens and CB patrols fall within that purview."

Officer Larry Hanlin, coordinator of civilian radio patrols for Detroit, estimates there are about 30 such groups in the city. "This program has been in existence for about 10 years," he said. "This particular group just recently contacted me. They will have to be incorporated as a non-profit group before receiving any accreditation from us."

"We have guidelines they must meet which are presented in the form of a city ordinance. If they violate the guidelines, they're violating the ordinance. We don't control these groups. We merely act as consultants."

Hamlin confirmed that the citizen patrols can be effective as the "eyes and ears" of the department.

"If they're organized properly, have a large number of cars on the road and strong leadership they can make a difference," he said.

Those interested in joining Defenders East must fill out a membership application and they are then investigated by the police department.

Prime Time

Cancer is a disease that hovers over us like a plague and one that has been headline news because of President Reagan's colon operation. Every story detailing his ordeal contained a gospel that has been preached for years — prevention by early detection.

We are told that one in every four Americans will die of cancer. The true causes of cancer are not known. It is suspected that there are many causes. The air we breathe is polluted. Our fish die in waters contaminated by toxic waste. Our food is altered with chemicals to preserve it and the chemicals fed to animals that provide it. Our diets are suspect because of the high quantity of fats we consume.

The high mortality rate of cancer could be reduced if early signs of it were heeded. Each organ has its own signal of trouble; a lump in the breast, blood in the stool, a persistent cough. Fighting cancer is a constant, personal cold war that can only be won by striking down the invading enemy before it establishes a stronghold.

One of the most encouraging battles being waged is the one against heart disease. Education has played a big part. The public has bought and heeded well-publicized warnings of heart attacks and followed the advice. Science and research has come forward with clot-dissolving drugs, by-pass surgery, electronic implants and heart transplants. Those seeking information on the subject can find it at the Detroit Science Center where the Ayerst Heart Study has an information-packed display through Sept. 11.

Summer is a time for relaxation, reverie and reveling in picture-perfect weather. It is also a time to strengthen the body with exercise, good diet and taking time out to make sure we are free of any potential health problems. Health problems, when caught early can be opportunities for cure and a longer, happier life.

Summer jobs are available

There's still room for local 18- to 21-year-olds who haven't found summer jobs elsewhere to enroll in this year's Michigan Youth Corps, local officials say.

At last count, there were 20 openings for local teens in the state jobs program, which provides minimum-wage work in a variety of jobs, including clerical and groundskeeping.

Some of the blame for the lack of interest may be because of this year's better job market for young people, one city official said. More likely, however, was the political jockeying that delayed funding for the program until two weeks before its starting date, leaving cities in a bind on how to get the message out, the official, who requested anonymity, added.

Interested youths can apply for the positions at the Grosse Pointe Board of Education offices, at 389 St. Clair, according to Assistant Director of Support Services David King. Bring a Social Security card along the day you register, officials advised.

For more information about the program, call the Department of Support Services at 343-2046.

State establishes new school rules

By Mike Andrzejczyk

State education officials have put together new rules following two U.S. Supreme Court decisions made earlier this month.

The rules may cost public school districts some extra money, because they will no longer be able to send teachers into religiously affiliated non-public schools for special education services, but will have to transport the students to a neutral site or a public school building to receive such services, according to the state director of special education services, Ed Burch.

"According to our understanding of the rulings, public school employees cannot provide therapeutic or educational services in religiously affiliated non-public schools," Burch said. "Those services will still have to be provided, however... The burden (of transportation) is on the public school system."

The public school system does not maintain its own bus fleet and it leases whatever transportation is needed, school officials said. How the district would provide the necessary transportation or what form it would take is still unknown.

Under Michigan law, students are eligible for special education services in the public school district in which they attend school, even if they don't attend a public school. Locally, Grosse Pointe public schools provides teacher-consultant aid, reading and speech therapy and social-workers services to the area's non-public schools.

But in cases involving the use of federal money and teachers from public schools in non-public schools, the Supreme Court ruled in early July that programs in religiously affiliated non-public schools violated the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment by excessively entangling government in religion.

The cases involved programs in New York City, which provided Chapter One programs in public schools for parochial school students. Chapter One programs are federally-funded programs for students of low-income parents to aid them in the education process.

The court ruled 5-4 that such programs unduly advanced religion and were unconstitutional.

In a similar case involving Grand Rapids public schools, the court ruled 5-4 that sending public school teachers into non-public schools that were primarily religiously affiliated also unnecessarily advanced religion and are unconstitutional. Grand Rapids had discontinued the programs, shared time and community education in 1982 due to lack of money.

The state education department decided Tuesday, July 16, that public schools will have to transport non-public students who receive federally funded remedial reading and math instruction to the public schools where they will receive the services.

State Superintendent Phillip Runkel, in the letter to all local superintendents, said the two cases would "have a significant impact on Michigan public and non-public school program operations in coming years."

"As you all know, there is no appeal of a U.S. Supreme Court decision," he said in his letter. "Compliance with the rulings of the Supreme Court decisions is mandatory and has immediate effect."

The education department is consulting with the Attorney General's office to decide what impact the decisions will have on shared time, Chapter One and auxiliary service programs involving non-public schools.

Grosse Pointe doesn't offer a shared-time program with its non-public schools. It has a shared-time program with Harper Woods public schools. Also, the only Chapter One programs in the district are in public schools, according to the department of special education services.

The state said there are services the public school can still provide to parochial and independent non-public schools.

Under provisions of the Michigan School Code, non-public school students may still receive medical and diagnostic services, public school teacher consultant services with non-public school teachers in non-public schools. Teacher-consultants may not meet with non-public schools students, however, in religiously affiliated schools.

The public school district may also provide administration of state prepared tests and crossing guards for non-public schools, according to the state education departments.

But, according to Runkel's letter, "Local schools districts cannot provide (any) therapeutic or remedial auxiliary service on non-public school premises. These services must be provided by the public school on public school sites and public schools must provide the transportation."

The state has set up two hotlines for school administrators who have questions about the programs. Administrators with questions about Chapter One programs can call 1-517-373-3666, and those with questions about special education may call 1-517-373-1695.

Runkel also said he plans to hold an informational meeting in Lansing for local school district staff Tuesday, Aug. 13, from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Law Building Auditorium.

Runkel ended his letter by saying, "I recognize that compliance with these Supreme Court decisions may cause some difficulties in some instances. Be assured we will do everything possible to make the necessary changes as manageable as possible."

Bible school

The First Christian Reformed Church will offer a daily vacation Bible school, "In the Footsteps of Jesus," from 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. Monday to Friday, Aug. 5 to 9, at the church, 1444 Maryland in the Park.

For more information about enrolling children ages 3 through grade 6, call the church at 821-5466.

FACTS OF LAW

A homeowner is usually allowed to keep his home safe from the reach of creditors on the theory that preservation of the homestead is of greater importance than the payment of debts. Most states have homestead exemption laws to reaffirm this principle.

District considers computer ed study

By Mike Andrzejczyk

As Grosse Pointe public schools head into the fourth year of a five-year plan for computer education, administration officials say it may be time to look at computers once again to see what the system has and where it is going.

The evaluation of the computer program for K-12 is one of 15 topics Superintendent John Whritner listed for board members July 8 when he set forth seven areas to be considered goals for the coming school year.

Computers have received a lot of attention in the past year. The 1985-86 school system budget contains funds for the purchase of computers for the elementary, middle and high schools.

When students come back to school next fall, they will find three computer labs at the high schools, with computers out in departments as well; one computer for every 12 or 13 students at the middle schools; and a ratio of one computer for every elementary school classroom.

The school system is working on teaching its employees to repair some of the brands of computers used to further reduce costs. New books are also under consideration for secondary schools to teach students how to use IBM personal computers, which comprise two of the three high schools' labs.

The 1982 study that built the system's computer education program addressed a number of topics, including a philosophy of computer education, computer-assisted instruction, curriculum continuity and definition of careers for students who were interested in computers, according to Robert Welch, director of secondary curriculum.

Although the system is on target for its equipment needs according to the 1982 study, it has gone beyond the report in other areas, Welch said. The system has added introductory classes for computers and computer languages that have more applications in certain subject areas, he added.

The system will offer a number of in-service workshops for staff to teach them how to use the computers in the classroom in social studies and language arts for record-keeping and in other ways, Welch said. The system has four in-services planned, with more than 20 instructors signed up for each. That kind of participation shows the commitment of the staff to computer education, he added.

One problem the district was faced with was deciding whether to put its computers in departments throughout the buildings, giving each area a shot at its own machine, or locating a number of computers in laboratories, where whole classes could come in to use them.

The system came up with its own solution by forming the first computer labs at the high schools, using Apple and IBM computers. The response was amazing, Welch said.

"We were packed, absolutely jammed," he said. The system added more equipment allowing it to network the IBM labs, which allows each of the consoles to access a single software program, cutting tremendously the cost of programs for the machines, Welch said. This fall, the system will network its Apple labs as well, he added.

The idea of networking came from the system's two computer consultants, Harvey Richardson and Edward McKeenan, who broached the subject and helped install the networking equipment, Welch said. Now that the system has its laboratories networked, it can begin moving equipment out to the various departments for their use, he added.

The middle schools also have two labs, and equipment there can be moved in and out as it's needed, Welch added.

While the system has made a sizable investment in computers, the equipment it has is still usable, Welch said. Some of the machines at the elementary schools are outdated, according to a report made to the board in spring, but they are still usable.

Even deck writers are on their way back in certain uses, Welch said. "The newer computer models are usually better, but everything we have is still functional," he added.

Computer education has come a long way in the near-20 years it has been taught at the schools, Welch said. In the early days of the program, the system used main computers at the intermediate school district to run programs for students.

Those days meant a lot of headaches for the local system, because the main computer at the ISD often broke down. Conversely, the system only had one networking problem with its secondary school labs, and that was cleared up quickly, he added.

As the technology has improved, the cost of equipment and software is coming down. There are now programs available that will help teachers in daily record-keeping work, he added. There is also software being developed that will aid administrators in filling out the reams of federal forms that have to be completed for certain programs, he added.

Software for the classroom is coming along as well, Welch said. Debate still rages nationally among educators about how computers should be used in the classroom and what is it the machines can do best, he added.

With the right software, there are a number of uses for the computers in departments throughout the secondary schools. Teachers in sciences can use the computers to predict the outcome of experiments, or use them to monitor and simulate those experiments, he said.

English uses include word processing, Welch said. There are programs available to teach children grammar. Foreign language students may someday learn by repetition reproduced on computer consoles, he added. The quality of software has hurt the mathematics department, of which computer education is a part, Welch said.

Business education and drafting are also using the computers for word processing and computer-assisted drafting uses. Drafting techniques of a decade ago aren't used anymore, Welch said, and the system's addition of computer-assisted drafting equipment will bring the vocational education departments closer to the state of the art.

Because computers have become a part of almost every department in secondary schools, one matter the system will need to look at is whether to form a computer department to handle all the functions of computer use in buildings. There are also security problems that will have to be discussed, he added.

The system has already developed a curriculum that builds on skills learned in previous grades, Welch said. The elementary program is more a matter of becoming familiar with the machine and its function, while middle schools begin to teach programming and career possibilities in computers.

By the eighth grade, computers become elective courses, with students able to choose computer language classes. As high school freshmen, students can begin to branch out, choosing more esoteric applications.

Computers have become big at the high schools, Welch noted. The system this year added advanced placement testing in computer education at the high schools and 35 students took the class and test. The number of students who scored satisfactorily on the exam is a tribute to the quality of the programs, he added.

In the North Central evaluations for the high schools, evaluators commented on excellent computer classes. At North, evaluators called the programming classes excellent and the applications class especially valuable, but added the computers were all tied up in the math department and aren't being fully used throughout the building.

One North Central recommendation for North's program was for the math department to consult with other departments throughout the schools to determine their computer needs.

The South program was also lauded as "an excellent example of the willingness and ability of the staff and administration to maintain an up-to-date department and provide adequate preparation in the computer sciences."

The report went on to say the math department at South needs to put together a plan for the use of computers in all the courses in the math curriculum.

One problem with certain software is reliance on a lock-step teaching procedure, Welch said. It moves in a logical progression, but uses a single interpretation of events that locks out all others. The complexity of varied interpretations is beginning to be dealt with in some newer software, he added.

There are two possible futures for computer education being talked about nationally, Welch said.

One says that computer use has hit its peak and will now slip back into the background of education because staff and administrators are unable or unwilling to take steps necessary to bring computers into use fully.

The other possibility is a brave new world of education, where computer literacy is the norm instead of an elective.

"I personally am optimistic," Welch said. "I have never seen so much teacher interest in computers."

The local program's future will depend on the system's making what it does have available work, Welch said. "We're going to continue to work on doing so," he added.

How to babysit

About 30 girls attended St. John Hospital's two-day workshop, "So You Want to be a Babysitter," held recently. The girls learned child development, diet, first aid, common illnesses, fire safety and CPR. Grosse Pointe resident Arline Reinking, R.N., is shown instructing Shelly Collins on the proper way of taking a child's temperature. It was the first time the hospital presented the program and plans are to repeat it in the fall. More information is available by calling 343-3870.

Woods ratifies five contracts

Woods Mayor George S. Freeman announced July 1 ratification of the last of the city's five union contracts covering its 115 full-time and permanent part-time employees.

Three-year agreements have been reached with the Woods Police Officers' Association, Sergeants' and Corporals' Association, Lieutenants' Association, and Local 1121 of Council 25 of the American Federal of State and Municipal Employees (AFSME). AFSME members include public works and clerical employees, clerk dispatchers and emergency medical technicians (EMTs).

All of the contracts will expire June 30, 1987 and are retroactive to July 1, 1984. Negotiations were aided by the advice and counsel of the labor relations firm of Keller, Thoma, Schwarze, Schwarze, DuBay and Katz.

According to City Administrator Chester E. Petersen, this is the first time in the history of the city negotiations that all of the unions received exactly the same percentage of increase in salaries and/or wages and the equalizing of all fringe benefits.

Qualifying employees received a salary or wage increase of 4.25 percent for the first year of the contract, 4.5 percent for the second year which began July 1, 1985, and 4.25 percent increase in the third year.

Other terms of the new contracts include a negotiated reduction of the allowable amount of accumulated sick leave and 90 days continued Blue Cross and Blue Shield coverage during a leave of absence.

Under the new pension agreement, an employee may elect to retire three to four years earlier, using a formula which combines age plus years of service. Normal retirement requires that an employee reach 55 years of age and 25 years of service.

The supplemental annuity for retirement has been increased from $350 to $400 per month. And, persons who retired prior to 1973 will now receive a 2 1/2 percent annual cost of living allowance which previously has been paid only to those who retired after that year.

Among the most significant contract improvements is the disability retirement benefit which guarantees that an employee will receive approximately 60 percent of his or her base pay, including the supplemental annuity benefit. The former contract allowed for disability pay of 2 percent for each year of service.

Improvement in the dental insurance program increases the maximum benefit from $600 to $1,000 per year and adds orthodontic coverage per family member. Spouses and minor children of deceased employees also will receive paid Blue Cross and Blue Shield benefits under provisions in the new contract.

Public safety officers with 20 years or more of service will receive three additional vacation days and one more holiday under their new contract. Maximum pay for a patrolman has been set at $28,960 for contract year 1984, $30,263 for 1985, and $31,549 for 1986.

Artists Market will party in the park

Plans are under way for the Detroit Artists Market's annual Party-in-the-Park, set for 5:30 to 11 p.m. Friday, Sept. 13, in Detroit's Harmonie Park. The event marks the fifth year the Detroit Artists Market will herald the opening of the autumn season with this popular party.

The Party-in-the-Park committee is co-chaired by Liz DuMouchelle, of Grosse Pointe, and John Bloom, of Southfield. As in past years, a tent will be in place over Harmonie Park's sunken garden. This year, in keeping with the "Lucky 13th" party theme, the Detroit Artists Market's display artists will create a lighthearted look at the supernatural with displays of cracked mirrors, full moons, zodiac signs, rabbit's feet, magic charms and more.

Entertainment will complete the mood, with palm readers, crystal ball gazers and astrologists joining the strolling musicians, two bands and harpsichord.

As always, the Party-in-the-Park will offer plenty to eat and drink and along with the merriment, will give Detroiters an opportunity to preview the Artist Market's fall art exhibit.

You've gotta have art . . so Meadow Brook does

Take heart, Grosse Pointe lovers of fine art. The summer's art show offerings did not end with last month's "Art On The Pointe." August will bring another not to be missed art event . . . even though art lovers will have to journey to the "west side" to find it.

It's "Art at Meadow Brook," the eighth annual invitational exhibit and art sale of fine arts and crafts, set for Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 17 and 18, in the courtyard of majestic Meadow Brook Hall on the east campus of Oakland University. Show hours will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; admission is free. Refreshments will be available.

Grosse Pointe's own Bette Prudden will be among the 100 artists whose work will line the circle drive and courtyard of the 100-year-old Tudor Mansion, former home of Matilda Dodge Wilson. The home was built in 1929 at a cost of $4 million and is now operated as a cultural and conference center of Oakland University.

"Art at Meadow Brook" will feature such diverse media as fiber, quilting, photography, painting, glass, soft and hard sculpture, pottery and basketry. Entrance to the show is off Adams Road, south of Walton Boulevard, or I-75 to Oakland University exit, follow the signs.

Further information may be obtained by calling 377-3140.

There's a new face at VINTAGE POINTE

Hi, my name is Fred Dinger. I have spent the last few years working with Dick Scheer at Village Corner in Ann Arbor. I left what I consider to be the best wine shop in the state, to accept the exciting challenge of building Vintage Pointe into a similar shop with equal ambitions for quality and value in wine selection.

In conjunction with the beginning of my tenure, Vintage Pointe announces the most drastic price reductions in our store's brief three year history. To create a fresh new start and make room for extensive new fall arrivals we are closing out approximately 200 different wines, from every wine-producing region in the world, up to 50% off their normal retail price. Supplies of many wines are very limited, so stop by soon before you get closed out on these great bargains.

Drop in and say hello. I'll be happy to help you hunt through the variety of labels to find those selections which are exceptional buys, reflective of your tastes, and suitable for your needs.

So if you haven't checked us out recently, here's a great chance to clean up some outstanding deals.

Hope to see you!

Shopping Tips for Europe

by Margaret Zellers

Whether it's called Mehrwertsteuer, Imposta Valore Aggiunto, VAT or something else, the effect is the same. A hefty tax has been added to the merchandise you buy in most countries of western Europe. Mehrwertsteuer is the German word, Imposta Valore Aggiunto is Italian for value-added tax: the system of adding on a tax at each level of production for a total that can be well over 20 percent.

In theory, you're entitled to a partial refund of the tax when you take the merchandise out of the country of purchase. In practice, except on very high-priced items — a German car, Austrian skis or a Swiss watch, for example — it may not be worth the effort.

It's a fact that at today's rates of exchange, when a United States dollar buys about 21 Austrian Schillings . . . or over 3 German Marks . . . or 2.6 Swiss francs . . . and almost 2,000 Italian lire, most merchandise is so inexpensive by U.S. standards that, even with the tax, "everything" is a bargain.

What to buy? Since each country has its specialties, research before you leave home is helpful. The Alpine Tourist Commission, for example, includes shopping tips in its free booklet, "The Alps — Europe's Top Attraction," available from Dept. D, Box 1137, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10101.

In the Alpine countries, ski and other sport apparel is among the world's best. In Austria and Germany, Loden coats and suits are popular purchases, as are hats, dresses and other parts of traditional Tirol attire. Knives, cameras and precision instruments are quality buys in Germany and Switzerland, and Swiss watches come in elegant and sporty styles.

Yugoslavia's Zajecar crystal joins leather goods and wool sweaters as prize purchases from that country. Italy's designer fashions include clothes, scarves, ties and accessories that are easy to pack, plus shoes, wallets, gloves, purses and other leather items that are wise buys.

The general procedure for obtaining a VAT refund is as follows: when you make your purchase, ask whether or not VAT has been added. (Most major city stores understand the term "vat.") If so, the store probably has a central area where you apply for the refund. You will need your U.S. Passport and proof of purchase, usually your receipt.

The clerk will give you an authorized refund form, properly stamped. You must have that form — and the merchandise — with you when you leave the country. At the airport, or some train stations and most border crossings, it's your responsibility to find the appropriate customs official to file your form, and to show the merchandise if requested to do so. In the mail at some later date you will eventually receive a refund, usually in the currency of the country where you've made the purchase.

That's the procedure as it should work. The fact of the matter is that, in many cases, it's not worth the trouble. Even on purchases mailed by the store, where the refund is applied at time of purchase, the packing and mailing costs can add up to an amount close to the VAT you would have paid if you had carried the item with you.

The U34 form with an OeAMTC overprint, you can get an immediate refund when you present the form to the correct official as you leave the country. There's a service fee of AS40 (about US $2) or 3 percent of the refund if it is over AS2000 (about US $100) for the OeAMTC system.

Switzerland's Warenumsatzsteuer, known as WUST, is refunded on very costly purchases such as watches. Ask if you think your purchase warrants the refund, which will be mailed to you (in Swiss francs) at a later date. If you leave from Geneva's airport, you'll have to talk to a customs official who appears on a closed-circuit television screen, holding up your authorized form received from the store for his perusal.

In Italy, where the dollar exchange for Italian lire keeps costs down, the time-consuming administrative procedures make applying for a refund more trouble than it's worth. In addition, you can bargain for the final price in many stores — but not if you also ask for a tax refund.

In Germany, a refund can be obtained — but some stores prefer to deposit the amount into a German bank which, for most American vacationers, makes the system difficult. Only major stores maintain a refund policy for purchases you carry with you, although some stores will apply the refund, if you ask for it, on items mailed out of the country.

Yugoslavia's northern province of Slovenia, easily visited from southern Austria and northwestern Italy, is one of Europe's best places to shop for handcrafts, crystal and native art. Yugoslavia does not have the VAT, but it does have very inexpensive prices according to U.S. standards. US $1 bought about 270 Yugoslav dinars in May of '85, and 270 dinars goes a long way at the street markets and for the handcrafts that are sold at the government-owned DOM stores.

Among the best places to find unusual purchases in the Alpine countries are department stores, where household departments can yield interesting small items and first floor accessories are often fun, and street markets, usually held in smaller villages on a specific day. Each town has its tourist office, which is your best source for on-the-spot shopping and craft information.

Remember that U.S. customs allows for $400 per person duty free, with a flat 10 percent on the first $1,000 over that amount and duty assessed at the discretion of your U.S. customs officer for items over $1,400. Contact your nearest customs office, listed in your telephone book, for a copy of "Know Before You Go," a free booklet explaining U.S. customs procedures for your return home.

Japanese enjoy Pointe hospitality

A delegation from the Japanese Red Cross recently visited the American Red Cross Blood Services, Southeastern Michigan Region, as part of a study of blood operations in America. A highlight of their visit was a barbecue at the Lakeshore Road home of Dr. and Mrs. A. William Shafer (couple at right, center). Fellow Farms residents Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Vinci (couple at left) also welcomed the visiting Japanese, who wore their Tiger caps and sweatshirts to the picnic and — of course! — brought their cameras, which they put to great use post-supper when they went to the Farms Pier to watch a race regatta. Dr. Shafer is director of the local Red Cross Blood Services. Vinci served as chairman of the board of directors of the American Red Cross Southeastern Michigan Chapter from 1983 until mid-June, when he was succeeded by yet another Pointer, Peter P. Thurber. The new SEM board of directors lists still another Pointer, John B. Ford III, among its members. Ford is serving as second vice-chairman.

DIA to focus on Donatello

The Detroit Institute of Arts will celebrate the 600th anniversary of the birth of Donatello with a major exhibition, "Italian Renaissance Sculpture in the Time of Donatello," opening Oct. 23 and remaining on view through Jan. 5, 1986.

The show will feature approximately 100 works by Donatello and related 15th century sculptors never before assembled in a single United States display.

Organized by the DIA, it is an important event in the museum's year-long celebration of its centennial and, following its Detroit showing, will travel to the Kimbell Art Museum, Fort Worth, Tex., where it will be on display Feb. 17 through Apr. 27, 1986.

The exhibition is made possible by the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities, both Federal agencies; the Founders Society Detroit Institute of Arts and the Kimbell Art Museum. Sole corporate support is being provided by the American Express Company.

In the early 15th century, Donato di Niccolò di Betto Bardi (1386-1466), called Donatello, led Italian art away from the religious abstraction of the medieval Gothic period to a direct humanistic connection with man and nature. Recent scholarly research and discoveries have resulted in a redefinition of Donatello's work.

Donatello and his teachers, colleagues, contemporaries and followers will be represented in the DIA exhibit by portrait busts, Madonna and Child groups and other religious subjects, reliefs and medals. In addition to Donatello, exhibit artists will include Jacopo della Quercia, Nanni di Banco, Ghiberti, Alberti, Vecchieta, Luca della Robbia, Antonio Rossellino, Desiderio da Settignano, Mino da Fiesole, Bellano, Bertoldo, Adriano Fiorentino, Pollaiuolo and Verrocchio.

Sculpture in marble, bronze, terracotta and polychromed stucco, drawings and other works of art have been committed for loan by major museums and private collections in Italy, Austria, Germany, France, England and the United States.

A comprehensive catalog of the unprecedented artistic activity of period, including essays by leading international specialists on Italian Renaissance art, will be published by the DIA to coincide with the exhibition.

The newly emerging concept of sculpture in the time of Donatello will be the subject of an international symposium Oct. 18 and 19 at the DIA.

Dr. Alan P. Darr, curator of European Sculpture and Decorative Arts at the DIA and the project director of this ambitious scholarly survey, conceived the exhibition more than seven years ago.

Pointe Braille ends good year

Members and friends of the Braille Volunteers of Grosse Pointe gathered recently at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial for the Volunteers' annual spring luncheon. This year's party for 34 Volunteers and guests was planned by Mrs. John McNamara, with the assistance of Mrs. Dale Steiger.

Among the special guests were Anne Wheatley, her sister Lucy Papa, Alicia McKibben and Harriet Helms, retired Grosse Pointe librarian and long-time Volunteers' supporters.

Per tradition, the program began with an invocation, given by Mrs. George Betzing. Guest speaker was Margaret Smith, the Rehabilitation Institute's director of Communications, a native Detroit, graduate of Marygrove College, who received her Masters degree from Marquette University.

Ms. Smith discussed her third book, "If Blindness Strikes — Don't Strike Out." It is a storehouse of information on daily life for the visually impaired and those around them. The author, a frequent and much-enjoyed speaker at the Volunteers' luncheons, took her audience through her newest book's chapters, which deal with coping with problems posed by visual impairment and blindness.

The Braille Volunteers have transcribed 4,000 pages during the past year, including textbooks, poetry, scripts for musicals, cookbooks, letters and fiction for adults and children.

They are deeply indebted to Mrs. Earl Peeler, Mrs. Gerald Fitzgerald, Preceptor Alpha Eta of Beta Sigma Phi, Mrs. Catherine Gibbons, Miss Ethel Osborne and

Mr. and Mrs. George Santoro, whose generous contributions during the year have helped members not only to produce a greater volume of bound books, but to do so without interrupting their work for the solicitation of financial aid.

Braille Transcription classes resume in September on Thursday mornings at the War Memorial, with Mrs. John McNamara, volunteer teacher for the past 19 years, again serving as instructor. Persons interested in donating their time to this worthwhile and rewarding project are invited to call 881-9566.

August rites are planned

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Facciobene, of Melbourne, Fla., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Ann Marie, to Daniel Joseph Schwarz, son of Catherine Schwarz, of Barrington Road. The wedding is planned for the latter part of August.

The bride-elect holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in Education from the University of Florida. Her fiancé, a Grosse Pointe South High School graduate, is serving with the United States Air Force, working toward a degree in Computer Electronics.

Short and to the Pointe

Among Albion College students who reached the gallon donor goal at the Red Cross Blood Bank held in April on campus are Grosse Pointe North High School graduates Robert Roney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Roney, of Lakeshore Road; and Mark Palazzo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Palazzo, of Lakeshore Road.

Charles G. Kosanke, son of Charles and Catherine Kosanke, of The Woods, received a Master of Divinity and a Master of Theological Studies degree from St. John's Provincial Seminary in Plymouth of June 7. He was ordained a deacon, a preliminary step in the ordination of the Catholic priesthood, for the Archdiocese of Detroit, on June 6. Mr. Kosanke is a graduate of De La Salle Collegiate and completed his undergraduate studies at Sacred Heart Seminary College.

The Shores' Edward Deeb, executive director of the Associated Food Dealers, represented the AFD in accepting donations by telephone at the 1985 Easter Seal Telethon. Deeb is active in local school activities serving for four years as president of the Grosse Pointe PTA-PTO Council, a board member and president of Parcels Middle School PTO, and a member of the Grosse Pointe North High School Parent Organization Board.

Miss Scott to be bride

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson T. Scott, of Aline Drive and Boca Raton, Fla., are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Sandra Ann, to Timothy Ruthenberg, son of Mrs. Margaret Benson, of East Detroit, and Marvin Ruthenberg, of Prescott.

Miss Scott is a graduate of Grosse Pointe North High School and Sibyl Beauty School. Her fiancé is employed by Gallagher-Kaiser Corporation.

Miss Endicott will be bride

Mrs. Charles M. Endicott, of Stratton Place, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Elizabeth Jean, to Nathaniel Erick Leonard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Leonard, of Hudson, Ohio. The wedding is planned for next July.

No retirement plans in his future

By Pat Paholsky

Some people look forward to retirement and they plan for it, but not Dr. Alfred E. Seyler. Uh-uh. No way. He just plans to keep doing what he's been doing for the past 51 years and that's the practice of dentistry and writing about it.

"My patients are asking me when I'm retiring and I don't know if they're worried or anxious," he said.

Dr. Seyler, who practices in an office near Warren and Mack, treated only children until about 10 years ago when he also began accepting adults as patients. When he began practicing in 1934, there weren't any pedodontists on the east side of Detroit.

He got into the specialty when, following graduation from Marquette University Dental School, he was hired as a faculty member at the University of Detroit School of Dentistry. He was assigned to the children's clinic and worked with Dr. Walter C. McBride, who he said was one of the earliest specialists in dentistry for children.

"He was a fine person, a nice teacher and the kids liked him," Dr. Seyler said. "Through him I lectured in Europe. He suggested I speak to the American Dental Society of Europe which is composed of dentists who practice in England, France and Germany who received their education in a school in the United States."

And when Dr. McBride left, Dr. Seyler became director of the children's clinic. In 1944 he took on another job, as editor of the Journal of Dentistry for Children. He did that for 19 years and when he left, the magazine had increased in page size from 32 an issue to an average of about 100 pages. The quarterly became a bi-monthly and circulation increased from 550 to 12,000.

During this period, in 1962, he began writing a weekly newspaper column called, "Ask the Dentist." It is published under the aegis of the Michigan Dental Association and now, 23 years later, it still appears in the Detroit Free Press every Tuesday and in more than 50 newspapers in the U.S. and Bogota, Columbia. Dr. Seyler writes the column free of charge except for a token amount for secretarial service and mailing.

For two years in the '70s, he wrote a monthly column on dentistry for Today's Health magazine, published by the American Medical Association. He admitted that "it gets rather pressing when you have a deadline."

But it's not only printer's ink that got into his blood. The doctor also did a half-hour radio show every Saturday for years at WXYZ. It was during the time the Lone Ranger was broadcast from the station and Seyler fondly remembers dropping in at their studio when he was finished with his broadcasts and "chewing the fat with the producers" of the popular show.

He also did a radio show at WJR and says he enjoyed it all. "I'm an egotist."

He teamed up with Theodore Berland to write "Your Children's Teeth: A Complete Dental Guide for Parents" which was published in 1968. And until 1974, he was chairman of the Pedodontics Department at U of D.

All of this, however, has been in addition to his lifetime career as a children's dentist. He says the presence of fluoride in the water has resulted in "less dentistry needed for children these days. I was chairman of that committee in Detroit 12 to 15 years ago when it (fluoride) was placed in the water supply," he said, recalling that "there was a fair amount of antagonism generated mostly by allergists" opposed to putting the chemical in the water.

That's the major difference between treating children then and now — fewer cavities, he said. He also cites the advances in dental equipment which has resulted in quicker and less painful treatments. Also parents are bringing their children in for their first visit at about 2½ years old, whereas years ago, a child saw a dentist only when he or she had a toothache.

"Children are a challenge if you like challenges," he said. "To make a cooperative child out of an uncooperative child gives any dentist satisfaction."

And in the case of anyone who has worked long enough, Dr. Seyler is treating the children of former patients. "It's nice to have a mother bring in her little kid and tell me I was the dentist who first worked for her."

Dr. Seyler has received numerous awards, and was recently presented with the Seyler Award of Special Recognition. He is the first recipient of the Eastern Dental Society's highest award, named for him. The society has about 300 members who represent the east side of Detroit.

He admitted that his pace leaves little time for watching TV, but he is upset with the decision to remove T.J. Hooker from the lineup of shows. "I'm going to write (the network) and tell them I'm mad at them."

His office is decorated "like home," as he describes it, with a beautiful maroon area rug applied with flowers, a fireplace that is used, a fish bowl and some ceramic pieces, including a dragon he bought in British Columbia. "I have a bigger one like it at home." There was a helium-filled balloon inscribed Happy Birthday floating in his office. It was given to him by a young patient.

He's lived in Grosse Pointe since 1934 and on Balfour for the past 40 years. He and his wife, who died years ago, had a daughter, who now lives in British Columbia with her two children.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

Summertime . . .

The way I see it, we can split this typically hot, humid, stormy Michigan summer into three parts. We'll call them the first part, the middle part and the last part. Pretty clever huh? (Hey, that's what they pay me for). And like all good reporters, I've got a notebook full of fond memories of the first part, current happenings of the middle part (meaning now) and looks forward to the last part. (Stay with me, it gets better).

Fond memories:

A Friday night Tiger game in April . . . the only month this season a person could depend on getting a good seat.

A ride on Steve Thomas' Wind Sprint in early May, during which I got two valuable lessons: bring a sweater and learn to move fast because the weather is cold and booms do not have eyes.

Watching the girls at North and South play softball in the rain on a chilly, May Saturday. Competition? Rivalry? Forget it. That day, the girls were out to have fun.

Pulling a 16-hour-shift on a May Tuesday. Tuesday is our press day and after I completed the layout for the sports section, dashed to the print shop for an afternoon of proofreading, ran over to Brownell Field for the North-South soccer game at which the league title would be decided, hurried back to the office to write the story and THEN back to the print plant to get it in the paper . . . I rested. Know what the best part of the whole day was? When North coach Guido Regelbrugge walked to the sidelines after the soccer game and said "Thanks for coming to watch, it really means a lot to all of us." Made the whole, hectic 16 hours worth every minute.

Seven hours in the sun watching North, South and Bishop Gallagher slug it out in the district championships. I got a sunburn, but it also reinforced my longtime belief that North is just about the best place around to watch a baseball game.

Current happenings:

Win or lose, it's great that Grosse Pointe was represented in the state Babe Ruth tournaments. The Park's 14-15-year-old All-Stars played in Lansing last weekend for the state (Continued on Page 2C)

Local teams hot in play-offs

Next stop: Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

That's where the 13-year-old Babe Ruth League All-Stars from the Woods/Shores are headed after winning the Michigan state championship in Ypsilanti last week.

"It's great. The kids are ecstatic about it," said Woods/Shores manager Phil Hage. "We just have a very talented team, kids with a lot of skills."

The Woods/Shores will face Illinois this Saturday, July 27, in Eau Claire, in the first game of what the team hopes is a championship quest in the eight-team Midwest Regional tournament.

To get there, the Woods/Shores won the district tournament, 7-3, over the Farms-City; then beat Lansing, 5-3, last week.

In the state title game, Grosse Pointe took a lead before falling behind, 3-1. The Woods/Shores rallied in the fourth on a double by Kevin Endres and a clutch single by John Cartwright. In the sixth inning, the Woods/Shores scored again on a double to the fence off the bat of Scott Schorer and another double down the line by Christ Meathe which tied the score.

In the seventh inning, Jason DeYonker led off with a single, was sacrificed to second by Mark Zoltowski and scored on a shot to centerfield by Kevin McCarron. Tony Jaboro followed with another base hit to score McCarron and Kevin Endres and Cartwright pitched the Woods/Shores to the win, holding Lansing to just three runs and two hits.

The district and state championships were a team effort, Woods/Shores coaches say, including the great play of outfielders Brad Hea, Pat Kennedy, Dave Monette, Scott Bernhardt and Bobby Rinaldi and infielder Mike Rancilio. Phil Guastella and Dave Hea are manager Hage's assistant coaches.

The Park Babe Ruth All Stars were still alive as well in their state tournament in Lansing as of press time, winning three of four so far.

The local nine defeated Ypsilanti

13-9 Saturday, with Doug Lucas and Bryan Jones sharing the pitching duties. Lucas went the first four frames, fanning six while allowing no walks, no earned runs and only a single base hit. He aided his own cause at the plate, popping two hits and two RBI.

Jones also chipped in three hits and a pair of RBI, with Dave Salkowski, Matt Montagne and Marcus Wysocki each tallying two safeties.

Dowagiac turned four All Star errors into three unearned runs, which were enough to edge the All Stars, 6-5. Wysocki, who went the first four innings, was tagged with the loss. Mike Paull had two hits for the All Stars.

The Park bounced back to beat North Farmington-West Bloomfield, 8-2, Monday morning. Lucas pitched four shut-out innings to tally the win. He also stroked three hits, including a double. Marty Saad also had three hits and three RBI as well.

The All Stars kept up the winning tempo Monday evening by pasting a 9-2 loss on Canton Township. Marcus Wysocki went the first four frames, giving up four hits, one unearned run, three strike-outs and two walks. Jamie Cimini relieved Wysocki and went the final three innings for the Park.

Jones had three hits for the All Stars and five other Parkers had hits in the win.

The All Stars were to face Durand Tuesday morning, with the winners to go up against Dowagiac that evening. A win over Dowagiac Tuesday would have meant a rematch against the squad on Wednesday.

The district champions Park All Stars include Marcus Wysocki, Jason Whelan, Christopher Markos, Jamison Cimini, George Ayrault, Bryan Jones, Martin Saad, David Salkowski, Nick Saros, Matthew Montagne, Michael Paull, Eric Zihlman, Douglas Lucas, Eric Nord and Ferit Mazarko.

The All Stars are led by coaches Ronald Lucas, who called in results of the Monday games, and Joseph Pellerito and manager Paul Pellerito.

Get in shape at home

Starting a home exercise program can be as easy and inexpensive as picking up a telephone or stretching a rubber band while watching TV. Those items are the key to "Fitness Five '85," an exercise program developed for home or office by the Auto Club Life Insurance Company.

"Keeping up with the latest exercise trends can be expensive, especially if it includes installing a home gym," said Jim Zwick, Auto Club Life Insurance general manager. "However, you can have it all — fun, exercise, equipment and cost effectiveness — by looking closely at items in your home and office."

"You will be surprised how easily you can create exercise machines and routines out of what seem to be passive objects," Zwick added.

To design a cost-effective gym from components available at a home or office, Auto Club Life suggests the following:

- A telephone receiver can help build shoulder and back muscles. Isometrics are the key to this home "machine." Grasp the receiver at each end with elbows bent in front of you. Compress inward. Hold for six seconds and relax. Repeat. For variation, instead of pushing inward, try pulling the receiver apart in a single action. Hold for six seconds and relax. Repeat. Varying exercise positions from side-to-side and overhead affect different upper body muscle groups.

- Cost: Nothing.
- A large or No. 107 rubber band (which is 7 inches long and 5/8 inches wide) can add resistance and increased muscle development. Add it to a leg lift/kick routine by placing the legs into one or more bands and lift/kick against them. Upper body muscles can be strengthened by taking the rubber band in the hands and pulling it in the opposite direction. Be careful about the rubber band breaking.

- Cost: A box of 10 No. 107 rubber bands costs less than $1 at office supply stores.

- A clothesline jump rope can improve strength and stamina when used for jumping for 10 minutes or more three to four times a week. Variations include running and jumping, a two-step (two hops for every revolution of the rope) or twisting and jumping.

- Cost: $3 or less for 100 feet of heavy clothesline. Professional jump ropes are available at sporting goods stores for under $20.

- A regular bicycle can be converted to a stationary bike for year-round indoor use by adding a conversion stand, which is available at sporting goods or exercise equipment stores. A multi-speed bike can develop leg muscles and increase cardio-pulmonary capacity by creating resistance by shifting to higher gears.

- Cost: The stand sells for approximately $30. An odometer to measure mileage sells for less than $20 at a bike shop.

- A family member or friend can help create a human rowing machine. Start with partners sitting on the floor, facing each other with legs widespread, shorter legs inside and touching the longer. One person rolls back while the other rolls forward. Continue action as if rowing a boat. Varying speed to faster rates will increase cardio-pulmonary capacity.

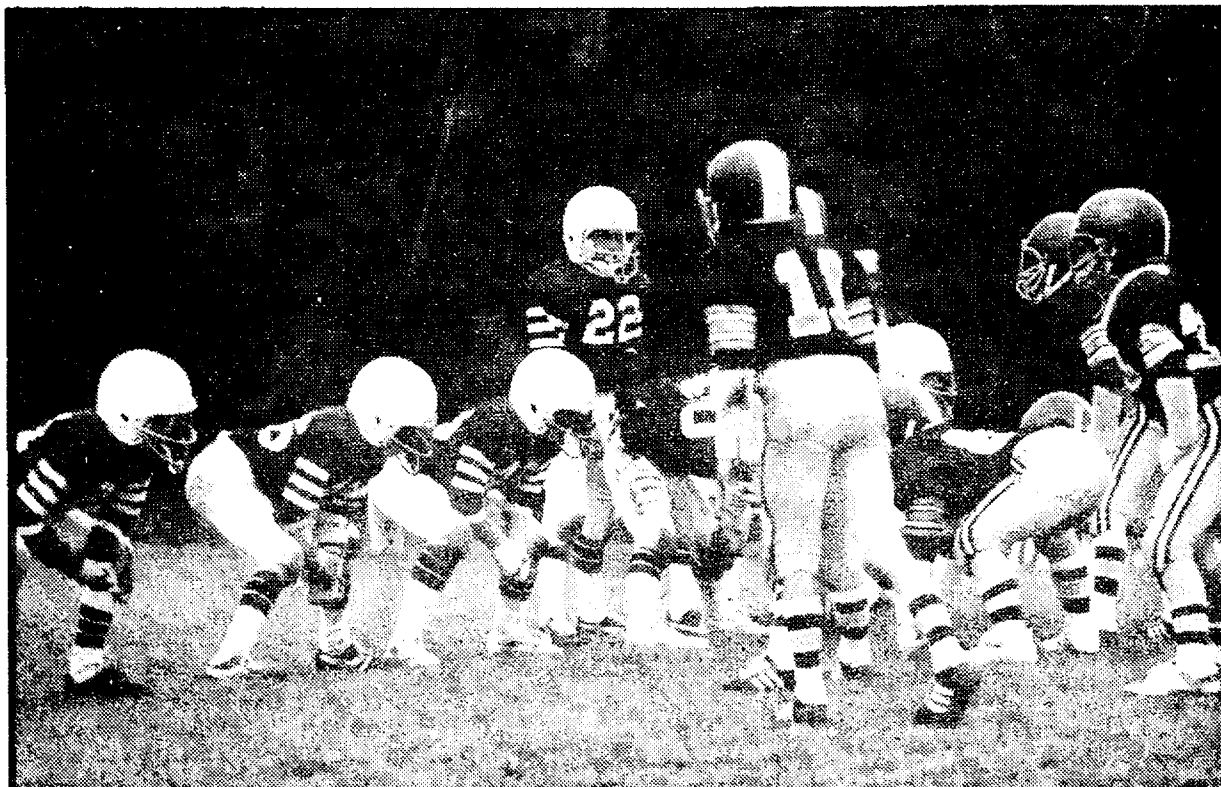

- Cost: Nothing.

Other suggestions for home or office gym equipment include running or walking up and down stairs (begin slowly at first); using door jacks for shoulder and calf development and using books as weight substitutes.

Whatever components make up a home gym, the location should be appealing enough to draw family members to it. "Make sure it is light, airy and has plenty of ventilation," Zwick said. "In warm weather, most of the exercises can be done in the backyard or patio."

Before beginning any strenuous exercise program a person should check with a physician, he said.

"While the home fitness program is good for general conditioning, it is not designed to replace such activities as walking and running," Zwick pointed out. "Individuals also should participate in golf, tennis, softball, swimming and cycling for all around fitness and fun."

Sports Week

title and last week, the Woods-Shores 13-year-olds played in the state tournament in Ypsilanti. Way to go, guys!

The consensus around the Grosse Pointe News Classified Advertising/baseball experts department is that Detroit Tiger Lou Whitaker hasn't quite "come to the party" this season, or for the last few, for that matter. Voted to the All-Star team, in the top-10 in batting in the American League and widely recognized as the best second baseman in baseball, Whitaker forgets his uniform when he goes to Minneapolis for the All-Star game last week. Lou brushes it off, the TV guys laugh it off and everybody else chalks it up to "that's Lou for you."

Sure. That's like heart surgeon Christian Barnard forgetting to wash his hands before he starts surgery. Oh well, "that's Christian for you."

My favorite story of recent days? From area resident Tim Foley Sr. Foley managed the Park Cardinals Babe Ruth team back in 1971, a squad for which his oldest son, Tim Jr., 24, played for three years. This year, Tim Jr., managed the Park Cardinals in the 9-12-year-old Babe Ruth squad to a league title. For luck, he brought his old Cardinals jersey and hung it on the fence. It worked, Foley Sr. says, as his son pitched more than one "perfect" game back in his playing days. But it never did bring Tim Jr. what he most wanted: to hit a home run. Seems all the home run talent went to young Tim's brother, Rick, who averages three per game, thanks to the hanging jersey (or a few hanging curves) no doubt.

So, if you happen to see a "Cardinals" jersey hanging on a fence around these parts, stop by and watch the prolific and sometimes-perfect Foley brothers "hanging in there," as their father says.

Looking ahead:

Heading into summer's home stretch, followed by a Michigan fall (roughly lasting from Sept. 22 through 30), I'm counting on experiencing a thing or two.

Like staying up late to catch the Tigers on late night radio when they head for the west coast in late August.

Watching the football drills (no pads) at South and North next month.

Getting in a swim or two at the Woods' Lakefront Park. (I know somebody who lives there, okay?)

My first fishing trip, scheduled tentatively for Sept. 7 at around 4:30 a.m. (Which may turn out to be my last fishing trip. 4:30 a.m.???)

A week on Mackinac Island.

The Detroit-Toronto series Sept. 9-11. That makes it or breaks it, boys, even if you do take a month or so out for a strike.

Donkey basketball is quite popular in these parts during the winter, and now donkey baseball is being revived in the metro area to raise funds for the non-profit Junior Little League World Series. The event is this Sunday, July 28, at 7 p.m., at the Sheridan Community Center on Pardee Rd., between Northline and Goddard roads in Taylor. Admission is $3, with proceeds going to benefit the Junior Little League World Series, set for Taylor Aug. 12-17. Each batter hits the ball, mounts a donkey and attempts to ride around the bases without being tagged out.

Little League Park All Stars win in tourney

In the first game of the Sixth District Little League tournament, Lance DeBets pitched five straight shut-out innings after being tagged for four runs in the first to lead the Park 11- and 12-year-old All Stars to a 7-4 win over Clinton Valley.

The All Stars got things going in the first with three straight hits from Tim Gramling, Bill Saylor and Kelly Graves. Fred Turner and Pete Griem followed with solid run-producing hits as the All Stars jumped off to a three-run lead.

After C-V scored four in their half of the inning, Gramling walked to start the second, Saylor singled and Graves followed with an RBI shot to center. Saylor scored with Graves stealing second, and Graves later scored on a Griem hit, followed by a Josh Cummins home run to run the tally to 7-4.

Park centerfielder Jason Benavidez made the fielding gem of the game with the sliding stab of a Texas Leaguer and a throw that doubled off the C-V runner at third to kill a sure rally. Other sparkling defensive plays came from Gramling, Griem, DeBets, Hoye, Saylor and catcher Cummins.

In the second game of the tourney, the All Stars fell 3-2 to L'Anse Creuse North, an extra inning thriller that saw Gramling get the All Stars' first hit in the last at-bat. Graves drove a long home run over the center field fence to knot the game at 2 and send it into the extra frames.

Graves also pitched a terrific game which featured outstanding plays from Griem, Matt Recht, Dam Cummins, Don DeSeranno, Benavidez, Kyle Hoye, Fred Turner, Jon Haise and Josh Cummins, who hit a long drive in the first with one on that the LCN left fielder stabbed to kill a bid for a two run homer that proved to be the difference.

The play of Graves for the All Stars deserves special attention. Jim Pote missed the first two games because of an injury.

The All Stars next played Monday night at Harper Woods, after press time.

'Piaf' is a paean to life

By Pat Paholsky

The human spirit transcends tragedy, pain, humiliation and even death: That's the message of "Piaf," the Attic Theatre's current offering. And while the play chronicles the heartbreak in the life of France's legendary chanteuse, it is a paean to life.

Sheri Nichols as Edith Piaf is superb. She does not physically resemble Piaf — she's about a half-foot taller than the 4-foot, 10-inch singer who was known as the Little Sparrow, and her features are different, and yet, she has the same look of vulnerability, of determinedness and especially when she's just plain sassy.

Nichols has captured the mannerisms of Piaf, but has wisely kept her own voice instead of attempting to impersonate the distinctive vibrato that was Piaf's trademark. And does Nichols have a voice and can she belt it out. It will give you shivers.

There is a discordant note in the play, however, that distracted me until the end. It's the bloody Cockney accent. I have been a Piaf fan since the '50s and she is, in my mind's eye, as French as Maurice Chevalier or an apache dancer. And she was a true Parisian — she was born there and she died there.

But the actors are saddled with the Cockney accent and slang. That's because British playwright Pam Gems wanted to show the differences in social class between Piaf and her friends and the upper and middle class. That's okay for English audiences, but I think it's too jarring to American ears.

Toine, Piaf's best friend, is played by Bethany Carpenter, who turns in a wonderful serio-comic performance as a prostitute. She has a great walk and each step defies her hip to come out of its socket.

There are other good performances by James Lawson, Glen Allen Pruett, Brian Schulz, Chuck Greenia and Mary Bremer. Joy Kelly plays Josephine Baker with presence. She also gets to wear the only glamorous outfits in the show.

But it is the music that is the heart of this play with nearly a dozen songs. Each one seems to be better than the last and when Nichols finally sings "Non, Je Ne

'Regrette Rien' (No, I regret nothing), she holds the audience in her palm. No easy trick at the end of three hours either.

The play opens with her singing in the streets of Paris as a teenager when she is discovered by Louis Lepree, the nightclub owner, who first brings her to the public's attention. From there, vignettes of the high and low spots of her life are strung together in this stylized play — her great love, Marcel Cerdan, the challenger for the world's middleweight championship who is killed in a plane crash; her friendship with Josephine Baker; her many accidents; her drug addiction; and finally the cancer that killed her.

"Piaf," directed by Daniel Yurgaitis, will run until Aug. 18. It plays Thursdays and Fridays at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 5:30 p.m. and 9 p.m., and Sundays at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $8.50 to $10.50, depending on the night. The Attic is located at Third and West Grand Boulevard. Call 875-8284 for tickets and information.

DOWNTOWN WEEKEND

The Standard Five: High-energy senior citizens

By Chris Dellas

She's known around Grosse Pointe as Helen the Happy Booker. She's in her seventies, but has more spunk and ambition than many people half her age. And the motto of her five-piece swing band, the Standard Five, comprised of all retirees, is "We would rather wear out than rust out."

She is Helen Adams, of the Woods, and when one of her bands plays (she manages three), who ever happens to be in the audience for making music.

"I found out some of the girls had their horns in the attic and I told them to get them out and dust them off," Adams said.

Since then she has also formed a spin-off band, the all-female Banjo Belles, who also perform regularly around the metro area.

But her main project remains the Standard Five, who rehearse every Tuesday at her home. Is it a problem with the neighbors to have a band rehearse on their street? On the contrary, she says. They enjoy it.

"The neighbors tell me to make sure my garage door is open so they can hear the music."

The local wildlife has also taken a liking to the band's music. "You wouldn't believe how much the animals around here like our songs," Adams says. "The birds and squirrels gather 'round and come right up to the window and I swear they seem to hop to the music. We've even had a rabbit or two and once even a quail stopped by."

The band which has earned such a diversified audience is made up of Adams on bass keyboards and assorted instruments such as the kazoo, piano instructor Laurine Mayes on keyboards, Betty Bekay on vocals and violin (who has recently completed a book on Gospel music and has written a musical which is under consideration for production), and two more recent male members; Andrew Frost on drums and Nicholas Balester on saxophone and clarinet.

Frost has taught dancing and has played with many of the big bands in his time, including Bob Chester's. Balester moonlights with several other metro area bands.

Adams acts as manager, booking agent, and also as a choreographer of sorts. She sees to it that a Standard Five performance goes beyond typical notions of seniors doing stodgy waltzes.

"We have one number that I came up with called The Sheik," she explains. "We pick a gentleman from the audience and fix him up in a bearded costume that I made."

"Then we sit him on a chair and pass out veils to the audience. A sort of Dance of Veils goes on from there," she laughs. "It's good fun. I've also found that people are very patriotic. We do a medley of Yankee Doodle Boy, Give My Regards To Broadway, and Grand Old Flag.

"I've made a makeshift Uncle Sam costume with flags sewn into a pair of designer jeans my granddaughter gave to me. It's corny, but it works."

The Standard Five doesn't take their job lightly though. They are all skilled musicians and have a repertoire of more than 700 songs. And if that isn't enough, they even haul their own equipment and set it up.

To cut down on some of the weight of the equipment, the band has invented some customized hardware, like a music stand made of very light wood.

"We've found that shopping carts do quite well in moving equipment," Adams says. "We just load 'em up and we're off."

The Standard Five is booked solid through the rest of the summer and into fall. Some of their shows coming up are: Friday, July 26 in the Village in front of Kresge's at 7 p.m.; at Eastland's "Senior Power Day" Tuesday, July 30 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.; at Ferry School Wednesday, Aug. 14 at 7 p.m.; and at Cottage Belmont Nursing Center Monday Aug. 19.

Good versus evil defined in 'Pale Rider'

By Chris Dellas

Clint Eastwood is back in the saddle. America's favorite vigilante is once again the avenging gunfighter in his newest release, "Pale Rider."

The film tells a conventional tale of Good versus Evil in the Old West true to the tradition of the original American westerns by directors like John Ford. The myths of the West as a place where good and evil were as cut and dry as the black and white clothing the good guys and bad guys wear are brought to life again by Eastwood.

"Pale Rider" is similar to past Eastwood films like "Dirty Harry" in that injustice is dealt with in swift vigilante fashion, but is unlike some of his previous work in that his character, known only as The Preacher, purely embodies the forces of Good in an even Biblical sense. Whereas Dirty Harry was just out to eradicate bad guys, The Preacher is also out to help the good guys.

The film begins with a typical scene of a gang of hoodlums charging into a small troupe of independent gold miners and terrorizing them by destroying their makeshift cabins and ruining their meager equipment. Eastwood makes it very clear that these miners are wholesome family people unjustly terrorized by the marauding band of thugs.

How bad are Eastwood's bad guys? These guys are so bad that they even shoot a cow and a young girl's dog. Now smashing huts and firing into the air is one thing, but when you go shooting peoples pets, you are despicably evil.

We learn that this group of miners, who are panning for gold the old-fashioned painstaking way in a place called Carbon Canyon, are in the way of an evil mining company, led by C.J. Lahood, that uses hydraulic mining to blast away large areas of mountainside. Lahood's method is way more efficient than the independent family miners, but is much less ecology-minded.

After the attack, the girl whose dog was killed, young Megan Wheeler (played by Carrie Snodgrass), prays over the animal's grave for "just one miracle" and in comes Clint to the rescue riding a pale appaloosa through the virgin snow.

Eastwood takes up with the girl's family and begins to sympathize with their plight. He becomes their spiritual catalyst and their physical hero. After he thoroughly roughs up four of Lahood's goons, the bad guys realize they are in trouble and come up with an offer to buy out the miners' legal claims for $1,000 each.

After some soul-searching and some heavy speeches, all done with Eastwood looking on, the miners decide to stay and fight Lahood. The show of solidarity is led by Megan's mother's fiancé, Hull Barrett (played by Michael Moriarty).

The plot thickens in a predictable way when one of the miners named Spider strikes it rich with a huge gold nugget and goes into town to drunkenly bait Lahood, who has now enlisted the aid of a notorious band of gunslingers led by a man from The Preacher's past named Stockburn.

Stockburn and his men fire at Spider's feet to make him dance and shoot him dozens of times after they goad him into going for his gun. This is when Eastwood's Preacher turns in his white collar for his big gun and commences to distribute Justice.

Throughout the film we never know who Eastwood's Preacher really is. It is hinted that he is Death himself, or possibly that he is an avenging Angel risen from the dead, but his true identity remains a mystery.

And, unfortunately, that is all that is a mystery with "Pale Rider." Eastwood utilizes all the cliches of the Old West (did they really make people dance?) but adds no new twists. This makes for a very predictable plot (we know, for example, that The Preacher is going to save Megan while Lahood's son is attempting to rape her) and not much real excitement. The bad guys wear black, the good guys read the Bible, the meek gain courage with the support of their hero, and evil is defeated outside of the law.

And that is a point that has been attacked by some critics of "Pale Rider." In the film, the miners have a legal claim to their land, the government even has legislation in the works to ban Lahood's destructive methods of mining. If real justice were to be served, Eastwood's character would have been a good lawyer who took Lahood to court and won the miners their land and a nice settlement to boot. But I suppose that would not have made for a very exciting film.

Philosophy aside, "Pale Rider" is like watching an old late-night Western on television and with the price of admission to theaters these days, you're better off checking your TV Guide and staying home.

Disney's 'Black Cauldron' bubbles with entertainment

By Tom Greenwood

If a favorite childhood memory has you on the edge of your movie seat, imploring the oh-so-beautiful Snow White to refuse that poison apple clutched by the bony fingers of the Evil Queen, then "The Black Cauldron" can transport you back to that long-ago moviehouse where Saturday matinees were magical.

Based on "The Chronicles of Prydain" by Lloyd Alexander, this spectacular Disney production culminates a 10-year, $25 million venture touted by the studio as their most ambitious animated production since "Pinocchio."

Disney films in recent years have suffered in their head-to-head competition with the fantasy/adventure formulas churned out with incredible success by Lucas and Spielberg.

In short, movie patrons were spoiled. Films like "Dragon-slayer," though filled with solid acting by the likes of Sr. John Gielgud and riveting in their special effects, never received the credit or patronage they deserved.

The Disney studios may have changed their luck by returning to what they do best — full-length animated features that appeal to nostalgic adults and children ready for their first trip to Fantasyland.

Like all good tales, the story pits good versus evil when a young boy named Taran sets out to destroy the Black Cauldron, an evil vessel that possesses supernatural powers.

Taran is added in his quest by the beautiful Princess Eilonwy, a furry creature called Gurgi, a traveling minstrel, and a clairvoyant pig named Hen Wen.

Opposing them all is the ultra-evil Honored King. Intent on conquering the world, he needs the power of the cauldron to raise an unbeatable army of supernatural warriors who long ago left the world of the living.

Remember the bony fingers possessed by the Evil Queen? Well this guy has them in spades, and when they reach towards the audience and fill the screen, well, your five-year-old may suddenly decide to peek at the film from your lap.

More than 200 employees worked full-time on the film, including 68 animators and assistant animators. Their efforts shine through in every aspect of the film. The color, shading and three-dimensional aspects of the film are spectacular, especially in scenes around campfires, in the eerie castle and around the bubbling cauldron.

The film was shot in 70mm wide-screen format that necessitated nearly twice the animation of the regular full-length feature. An added bonus is the complicated process of stereo-surround sound.

So grab the kids, turn off the MTV and take a trip down memory lane. Don't forget the popcorn and JuJubees, because nobody does it like Disney.
