Good times-good cause

Wow, wasn't that a party! The Premier Center was the place to be last Friday evening as 1,500 party animals came to drink, dine and dance to aid the needy of Detroit.

The event was the fourth annual Souper Summer Celebration aiding the Capuchin Soup Kitchen on Mount Elliott. The celebration is the brainchild of Grosse Pointe's own Ahee family and has grown in size and success every year.

It's first year, the event raised $5,000 for the kitchen. Last year the total was $18,000 — enough to provide meals for one month. This year the Ahees will present a check for $70,000 — enough to provide four months of hot meals to the needy.

The celebration proved to be a ton of fun, both inside the center and out in the parking lot where partygoers were treated to hot air balloon rides.

Inside, the Jerry Ross band kicked out the jams all night long. Enjoying the show were Edmund and Betty Ahee and their children Ed Jr., Chris Lowell, Greg, Peter, Pam and John, who invited 200 of his closest personal friends to the event.

Plans for next year's celebration are already under way and it looks to be even bigger than this time around. It has to be. Mr. Ahee has already set his sight on raising $100,000 for the Capuchins.

Naval maneuvers

Hey, Orlando isn't Buckingham Palace, but then what is? What am I talking about, you might ask? It's just that Hawthorne Road resident Peter W. Jacobus, son of Dr. and Mrs. Wayne Jacobus, recently graduated from the University of Southern California with a degree in electrical engineering and also received his commission as an ensign in the U.S. Navy.

Ensign Jacobus' first assignment is with the Naval Nuclear Power School in Orlando.

You might also recall that Peter was the subject of a story in our paper about a year ago when, as a Naval ROTC midshipman first class, he ended up being wine and dined for a luxurious weekend at Buckingham Palace as the guest of H.R.H. Prince Andrew.

How did he get there, you might ask? He was assigned to Andrew's vessel as part of an American-British naval exchange program.

Anyhow, Peter is now in the land of oranges instead of the palace of limeys. Just thought you might like to know.

Police grab thief

Farms Detective Earl Field just happened to be in the right place at the right time Friday. He was driving down Mack when he saw a man chasing a youth. Field slammed on his brakes as the youth was running across the street, and threw him against the trunk of the car, according to police reports.

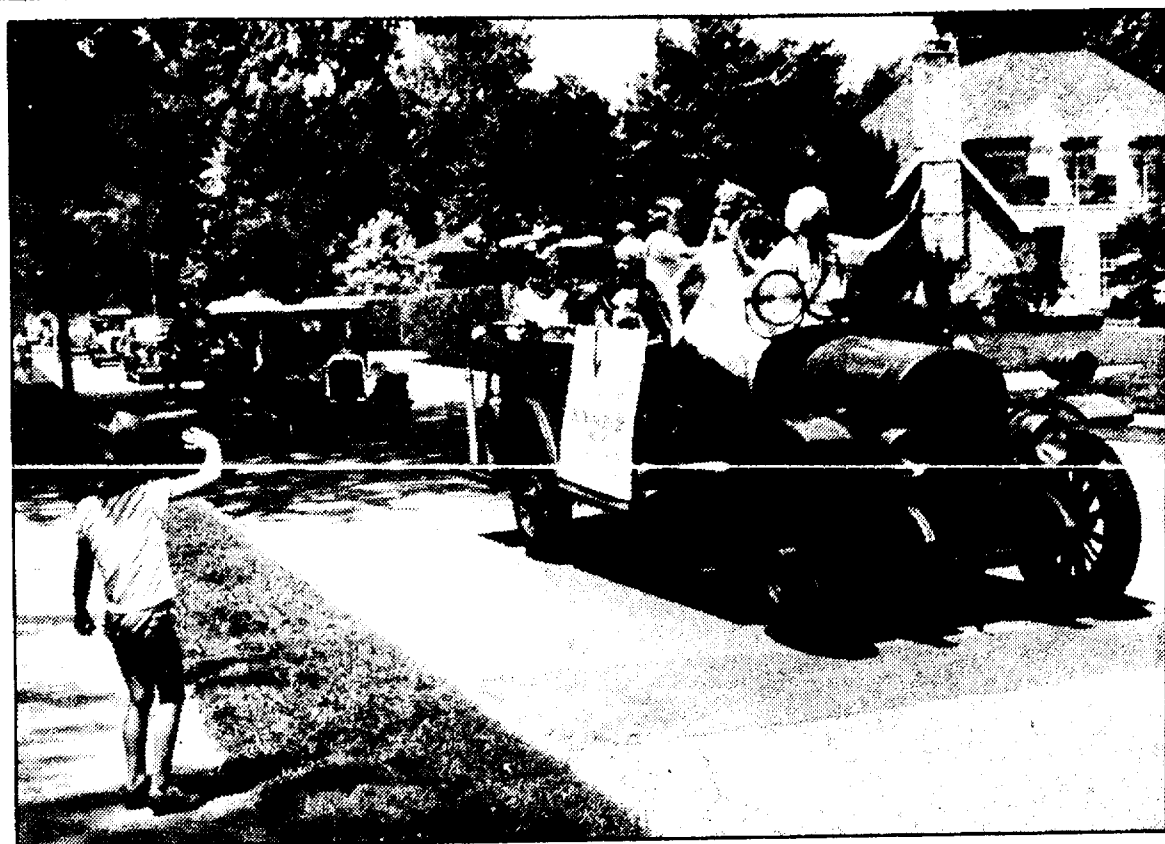

The youth leaped over the trunk, ran across the street and down an alley. The chase led down Maison, through some backyards and over fences to a six-foot masonry wall, where Field "grabbed (him) in flight."

The youth had been trying on sunglasses in the JC Penney store when he bit the tag off a pair of red, plastic-rimmed, mirrored woman's sunglasses, put them on and left. The store security guard gave chase, which is where Field came into the picture, according to the reports.

The youth was turned over to the Woods police department.

Shores says no to program

By Nancy Parmenter

The July 23 decision by the Shores council not to participate in the proposed Pointes-wide youth assistance program may spell the end of the project. The Woods, the Farms and the school system have all predicated their approval upon the participation of all of the communities. The Park council Monday night also agreed to participate contingent upon total community involvement.

"Needless to say, I'm disappointed," said Woods Municipal Judge Patricia Schneider, one of the sponsors of the program. But Schneider said she isn't ready to give up.

"I'll go ahead," she said. "If the Shores turns out to be the only one (refusing), maybe we can go back and talk to them. My inclination at this point is to see if they will reconsider."

When Schneider originally proposed the program in May, she said she hoped to have funding in place by late summer so the program could begin when school starts. The City is currently studying the proposal and is scheduled to make a decision in September. The Shores' lack of participation complicates the problem further.

"It would be better to have it late than not at all," Schneider said. If the Shores declines to reconsider participation, "we might try to rework it without them."

Park councilman Vernon Ausherman, the other sponsor of the proposal, agreed. "In the event we're turned down by anybody, I guess it's back to the drawing board," he said. Ausherman also held out hope that the plan could be reworked to include fewer communities.

The mood in the Shores did not seem to favor reconsideration.

Public Safety Director Joseph Vitale said the commission did not consider possible needs of the other Pointes when it made its recommendation.

"I can't predicate my action on what another community wants," he said. "I just look at whether I have a need."

Village Manager Michael Kenyon said the cooperation problem has gotten to be "an annual thing." Every time a joint program is proposed, "it's like who's going to be the bad guy first," he said.

In addition to expressing the Shores-wide satisfaction with the current youth program, operated by the public safety department, Kenyon expressed some reservations about the youth assistance program as proposed.

"I would question the legality — our local judges aren't supposed to hear juvenile cases in the first place. I'm not sure it's legal for the judge to order a kid into this diversion program," he said.

Kenyon also said he fears the proposed program doesn't have enough teeth. As proposed, youths could end up in the program through voluntary participation or through referral by the police, the courts or the schools. But Kenyon said there is nothing to force a youth's participation once the police have funneled him into the program.

But the overwhelming factor in the Shores' turnaround of the proposal is the prevailing satisfaction with their program as it stands. The public safety department has three officers in its juvenile division, which has existed since 1979. The division is affiliated with the Michigan-Ontario Youth Officers Association and the Wayne County Youth Bureau.

"We unanimously feel that we can take care of the youth of our village better for less money," said village. Councilman John Huetteman III, a member of the public safety commission, which studied the proposal before presenting a recommendation to the council.

"We're not spending a penny and we're doing it internally. It's Grosse Pointe Shores taking care of Grosse Pointe Shores' problems."

Huetteman said the study committee took time to look carefully at the question. "I personally talked to each of the three youth officers," he said. When the study was complete, "every single person (on the commission) had the same exact opinion."

Commission Chairman C. Bradford Lundy pointed out that the Shores has a qualified youth officer in every shift. "We're a pretty close-knit family," he said. "The policemen know everybody on every street. We just take care of it in-house."

Commission member Patricia Galvin said the information provided by the public safety director and the youth officers during the study period was "enlightening" and she was surprised to discover that the other Pointes do not have similar programs.

"It would dilute the effectiveness of the Shores program to combine it with a larger program," Galvin said. "It's the same reason that the Grosse Pointe area doesn't want to be part of a larger program." She suggested that the Shores department could share its expertise with the other Pointes.

The program works in an informal fashion, Vitale said. "We meet and discuss with the parents the best way to handle the problem. In some cases, we would remain involved by filing a complaint with the county juvenile court system."

Board may fill South's top post

By Mike Andrzejczyk

At a special meeting this morning, the Grosse Pointe Board of Education was to consider Superintendent John Whritner's recommendation to fill the principalship of South High School.

The board was to consider approval of the recommended appointment of Edward Shine, 42, currently headmaster of Roger Ludlowe High School in Fairfield, Conn.

During the extensive interview process undertaken by the administration, "one candidate stood head and shoulders above the rest; that was Edward Shine," Whritner said. "We are pleased to have attracted such a qualified candidate as Mr. Shine."

Under the terms of the recommendation, Shine would take over the top office at South Oct. 1 if his appointment is approved by the board. Frances French, who was to have retired at the end of last school year, will be asked to stay on until Shine starts to aid in the transition, Whritner said.

Both actions need the approval of the board.

Shine has an extensive background in Connecticut schools. Ludlowe High in Fairfield is comparable to Grosse Pointe South, Whritner said.

Shine began his career in 1966 as a social studies teacher at J.M. Wright regional vocational training school in Stamford, Conn. In 1969, he became a guidance counselor at the school, a position he held until 1971, when he left to take the guidance coordinator's job at Windham Regional Vocational Training school in Willimantic, Conn.

In 1972, he took a leave to become a full-time student at the University of Connecticut, and in 1973, became assistant principal at RHAM Region 8 High School in Hebron, Conn. In 1974, he took a position as guidance headmaster at Roger Ludlowe High School, became assistant headmaster that year and was named headmaster in 1978.

Married and the father of three children, Shine holds a bachelor's and master's degree from Fairfield University. Major areas of study include history, philosophy, theology and secondary education.

Shine also received a certificate of advanced study from Fairfield University in guidance and counseling. He has been working on his doctorate at the University of Connecticut since 1972, where his major areas of study have included administration, secondary school curriculum and vocational education.

He holds a number of honors for his Connecticut work, including Educator of the Year, awarded by the Fairfield Junior Chamber of Commerce, and is a member of a number of professional organizations. He holds a teaching certificate for social studies at the high school level, guidance counseling certification for grades 7 to 12, and is also certified as an intermediate administrator.

Shine has also been active in community organizations and state and regional education issues.

If Shine is appointed at this morning's meeting, it will end a search process that began with French's announced retirement last spring. The district collected resumes from dozens of candidates and interviewed a number before making on-site visits to districts in which candidates worked.

The interview process included meetings with administrators, parents and student groups as well as board members.

Under the district's administrative salary plan, a high school principal has a starting salary of $48,714 minimum with a possible maximum of $67,442 this year. The report recommends that administrators be hired at at least below the midpoint of their salary range, which is $57,807 for high school principals.

Park voters asked to amend charter

An abundance of candidates in Tuesday's primary election in the Park has nearly overshadowed another choice voters will be asked to make, and that is to approve an amendment to the charter.

The charter now provides that expenses more than $1,000 must be approved by the council and must be let for bids. The amendment would eliminate the $1,000 maximum and leave the amount up to the discretion of the council.

"The basic problem has been emergency repairs," City Manager John Crawford said. He cited water main breaks, snow removal, sewer collapse, pump failure, street repairs — anything of an emergency nature.

"We can't wait to go out for bids and we can't do the type of work that has to be done for $1,000 anymore," he said.

The $1,000 limit was written in the charter 35 years ago when the charter was adopted in 1950, Crawford said.

"The city council still has final control," he said. "They also review, on a monthly basis, every purchase made."

The amendment deliberately does not set a dollar amount, so that it can be raised or lowered, according to the council, as the times permit.

The council in April unanimously approved putting the matter on the ballot.

Residents remember that first real job

By Tom Greenwood

Nearly everyone stores up a million memories along the highway of life. Some good, some bad, but definitely all ours. Everyone remembers their first car, first kiss and first broken heart. Indeed, sometimes the three go together.

But what about the first "real" job? The first time someone pointed a finger and growled, "Hey kid, wanna make some money?"

For some of the notables in our town, that first real job was a lot of fun.

J.D. Owens, man about town and founder of J.D. Owens public relations firm, recalled "Oh, that's easy. I used to work at the Eagle Laundry, but I had to quit after awhile. There just weren't that many eagles to launder. Then I moved onto the Universal Corset Co. where I pulled down about 50 a week. Sorry. Those jokes are old, just like me."

"My first real job was driving a flower delivery truck for Indian Village Florist," said Owens. "As I recall, I neglected to get a driver's license first. This was back in 1941 and I earned $2.50 a day and worked five days a week. Plus all the flowers I could eat. The work wasn't difficult, but God, the pay was minuscule."

Lionel Linder, editor and vice president of The Detroit News got his journalistic start early in life.

"I grew up in Gallup, New Mexico," he said. "It was a pretty tough town. I used to sell papers for a nickel each in the middle of town at 7 a.m. I'd catch the train from Albuquerque and race downtown to beat the other paperboys. I also worked unloading watermelons and crates of lettuce 'til I was blue in the face."

"I also toiled as a swamper on a Coca Cola truck. I picked up the bottles and counted them while the driver made out the bill. He stayed nice and clean in his uniform while I got dirty in the back. That was a long, long time ago."

For editorial cartoonist Arkie Hudkins, it all began in Topeka, Kansas.

"I was a ball-shagger," he said. "I'd go down to the ball park where a semi-pro team called the Topeka Owls played. They were called the Owls cause they couldn't hit worth a hoot."

"Anyhow, the stadium owners were so poor, they'd pay us to give the foul balls and home runs back. They didn't care how scuffed they were, it was cheaper paying us than buying new. My God, I was young then. This was before my first divorce even. I used to run like a crazy man trying to outrace five other kids doing the same thing. Times were tough in Topeka."

TV talk show host and television personality Marilyn MacKay has sweet memories of her first pay-producing job. "I worked in a Windsor dimestore called the Metropolitan," she said. "It was like a Woolworth's. I was 16 and worked behind the candy counter. Talk about temptation! It was such fun because it was also a social thing. All my friends from St. Mary's Academy came in to get their sweets."

"I don't remember what I was paid, but I'm sure it wasn't much. I do recall my nun instructors telling me to slow down because I was working, playing athletics, dating and was president of the student council. I had to go on a strict diet at the end of the summer, but it was worth it because the job taught me responsibility, discipline and how to organize my time."

Neal Smith, ex-Marine and chef de cuisine of The Golden Coffeepot restaurant started his workday early.

"I worked as an assistant on a milk truck," he said. "We started at 5 a.m. I was 12 or 13 years old and remember that it was dark in

Former resident Philip McM. Pittman signed copies of his book, "The Les Cheneaux Chronicles," at the Book Shelf on the Hill recently. Botsford Inn seeks memorabilia

Did your grandmother ever attend one of Henry Ford's square dances at the Botsford Inn in Farmington? Is there a dance program in your attic, or maybe a theater stub from the days when the Inn offered its famous theater-in-the-round? Have you wondered what to do with that old chipped cup that your uncle obviously stole from the Botsford Inn when he was a boy?

The cup is yours forever, with the Inn's blessing, but owner John Anhut would like you to lend it to the Inn, along with that old dance program and that old theater stub, so that the Anhut family and the community can celebrate the Botsford Inn's 150th anniversary in 1986.

The Botsford Inn was built in 1836, and is now the oldest operating lodging facility in the state. It was a stagecoach stop on the road between Detroit and Lansing before Henry Ford put the country on wheels. Ford met his wife Clara at the Inn. He bought it as a romantic gesture in 1924 and operated it as an historic inn for 27 years. It was sold to the Anhut family after Clara's death in 1951.

Anhut hopes that residents of the area will search their memories and their attics for information and memorabilia of the Inn's early years. He would also like to talk to the people interested in joining the Sesquicentennial Planning Committee, a group of local citizens appointed to gather old treasures, research historical information and plan a year-long schedule of special events for the anniversary year.

If you have either artifacts, or memories, contact Angel Bakos at the Botsford Inn, 2800 Grand River, Farmington Hills 48024, (telephone 474-4800) or Jo Ann Soronen at the Farmington Chamber of Commerce, 33201 Grand River, Farmington 48024 (telephone 474-3440).

Shoplifters apprehended

Farms police caught three female shoplifters with bags of cosmetics from the A.L. Price store on Mack Avenue Sunday afternoon July 21. A store employee reported the theft and the suspects license plate number, and the police apprehended them several blocks away.

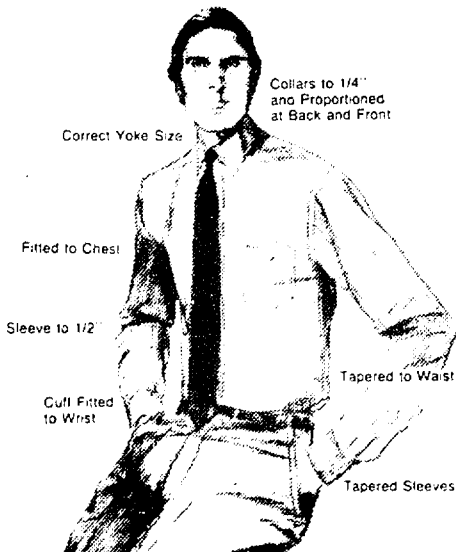

One of the women was wanted by the Harper Woods police, who picked her up at the scene. The other two, each with a string of aliases, were booked by the Farms police and released on bond.

Police reports stated that the stolen cosmetics were worth about $200.

Hill merchants favor proposed office building

By Nancy Parmenter

Members of the Hill Association appeared at the Farms city council meeting July 22 to express their support of the Standard Federal/Peter Bologna project.

The project, an office and retail building, has been in abeyance since the refusal of the state last month to permit Cottage Hospital to construct a parking garage and patient service facility. Standard Federal relied on the hospital's parking structure to supply the required amount of parking spaces. Without the structure, there is no parking available.

Since the denial of the Cottage request and the news that Cottage plans a merger with Henry Ford Hospital, hospital officials have released no information on their plans. Joan Ratliffe, a representative of the state Department of Health planning department, confirmed that Cottage has taken the necessary steps to keep the appeals process alive. Under standard procedure, the state would be required to hold an appeals hearing within 60 days, but Cottage has waived that requirement, Ratliffe said. There is now no specific timetable for the appeal.

Peter Bologna declined to comment on his current plans for the project, beyond saying that "we are still hopeful of completing our original proposal." Bologna said he hoped to have his proposal together for presentation to the Farms council within weeks.

Neither of the Hill merchant group's top officials attended the council meeting, but Hugo Higbie, an association member, spoke.

"We appreciate the time and effort the city has spent on the project," Higbie said. "It is critical that the city understand the Hill's position. Anything you can do to make the building a reality (will be appreciated)."

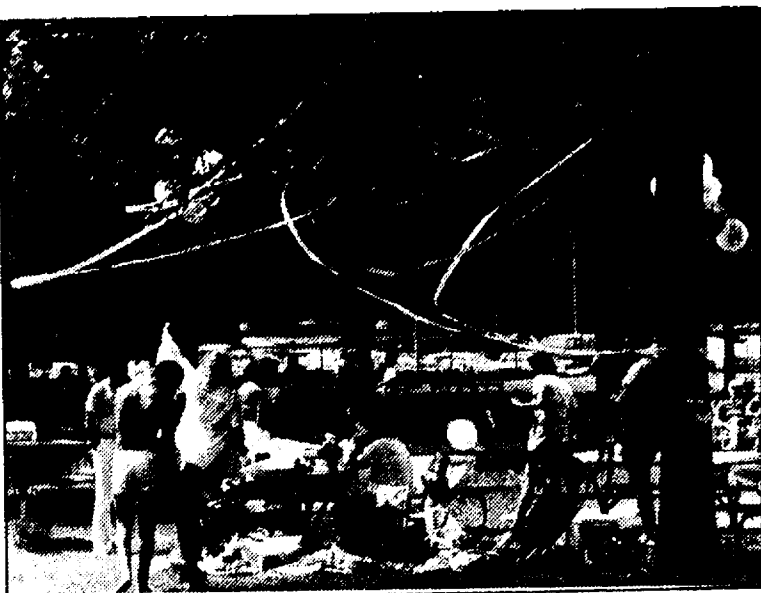

Higbie said he and the association recognize that the parking and development problems on the Hill are a challenge to the city and expressed concern over the alternatives if the office/retail project fails to be approved.

"The dangers vastly outweigh the gambles," he said. "The Hill hopes you will push ahead. We see damaging results if the building is put off. Standard Federal and Bologna are very much under the gun."

Farms Mayor James Dingeman said the city has not received a formal proposal for the property since the previous project lapsed. "We need something quickly," Dingeman said. "We can't say we'll support whatever comes in without knowing that it will be."

Bologna received a site plan approval from the city about a year ago. That plan was submitted in conjunction with the Cottage parking garage and would presumably require a parking variance to proceed without the garage.

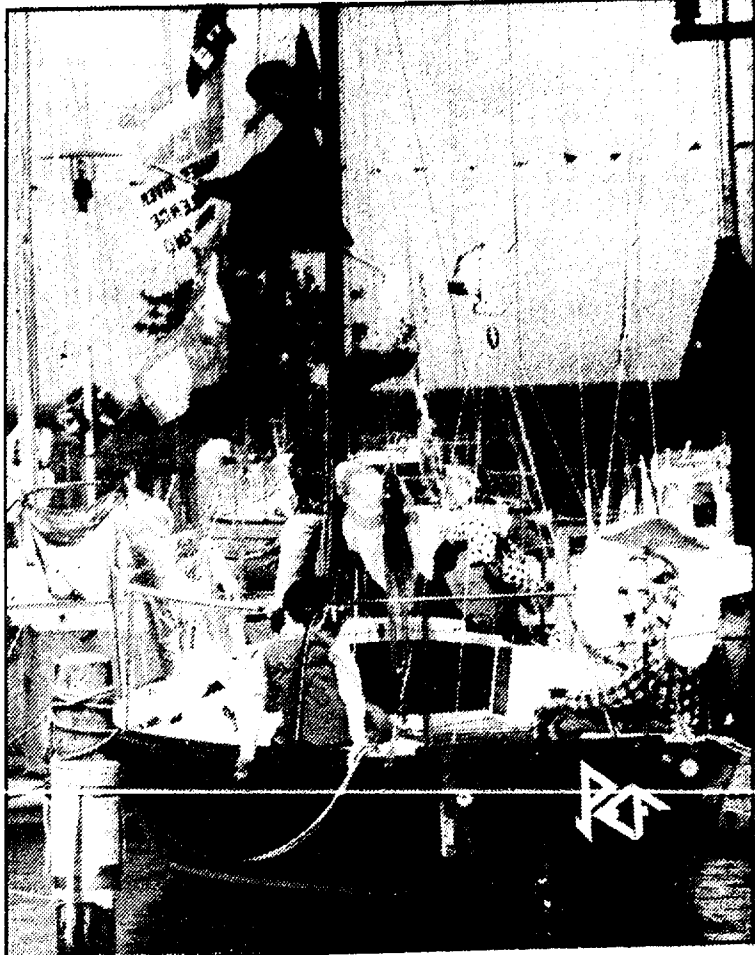

Acting council chairman Nancy Waugaman assured Higbie that the project remains in the forefront. "We are working diligently on the problem," she said. "There isn't anybody in this room who doesn't want progress."

Boat club celebrates

Hundreds of persons jammed Pier Park last weekend to enjoy the perfect weather and help the Farms Boat Club celebrate its 33rd annual regatta. Picnic tables were in short supply as families rolled in to enjoy hot dogs and hamburgers prepared on an open grill. Settled in under a tree festooned with streamers and helium-filled balloons, this family must have thought they were celebrating New Year's Eve in July. Entered in the boat decorating competition was this Oz-inspired vessel owned by Paul and Corinne Franks, who provided sea legs to Dorothy, the Tin Man, the Cowardly Lion and the Scarecrow.

City trees get trim job; could cut electrical outages

By Nancy Parmenter

Tree-trimming crews have been moving through the City since May, working on city-owned trees along the streets and privately owned trees in residents' backyards. The work is being done by Asplundh Tree Experts under contract to Detroit Edison.

Unlike some past years, residents do not seem to be reacting adversely to the program.

"We haven't had a single complaint," said Jeanne Darlington, secretary to City Manager Thomas Kressbach. "I think the residents are glad to see them. They haven't been through here in years."

Darlington said the city had earlier received numerous complaints of trees touching electrical wires, with requests for the city to take action. But the city could only refer the problem to Edison, she said.

Melinda Jones, Edison's general foreman for the tree trimming division, said it has been just over four years since trees in the City have been trimmed. The crews moved into the City two months ago after finishing the Park, where she said residents had also been cooperative.

"Some customers have had concerns about trimming elm trees," Jones said. "They are afraid that the open cuts will encourage the bark beetle. But if the trimming is done correctly — and it is — and the tools are cleaned, there shouldn't be a problem. Trees that aren't trimmed get the disease too."

The crews take special precautions when trimming elms, Jones said. All of the cutting tools are cleaned between elms in order to avoid carrying the infestation. For the same reason, if crews remove an infested tree, they leave it on the premises for the resident to dispose of.

The elm beetle is worse this year than usual because there was no killing frost in the spring to kill off the first batch of beetles, Jones explained. "They're moving around well enough on their own — we don't want to give them any help."

Edison is sending two people door-to-door in advance of the trimming crews, looking at the work that should be done. They target large trees for trimming, and fast-growing "junk" trees, like silver maples and Chinese elms, for removal, Jones said.

"We need written permission for removal and we like to get verbal permission for trimming," she said. If residents are not at home when the advance men arrive, a card will be left at the door.

The tree trimming is being done according to recommendations by the National Arborist Association. The "drop-crotch" technique is used, in which the branch is trimmed back all the way to the main branch instead of leaving stubs. Stubs encourage insects and disease, according to Jones.

"We like to cut back to a five-foot clearance," she said, "but on fast-growing trees like some maples, we have to cut further. We only come around every four years." Jones said that trimming wounds are treated with a black creosote-based paint containing growth inhibitors.

Edison has received some requests for "haircuts," or trimming trees equally all the way around, like shaping a hedge. But haircuts are not good for the trees, Jones said, because they encourage weak new growth.

The crews will remove small-to-medium trees, cut them to 18-inch lengths for firewood or grind them into wood chips according to the resident's preference. They will also take the wood away on request, unless it is diseased elm.

Infested elm is cut up and placed at the curb, where the city trucks pick it up for disposal at the Pointe-Clinton incinerator.

Jones said that Edison receives fewer complaints now than it used to because people have come to understand that trees and wires don't mix.

"In the Pointes, there is a large number of outages because there are so many trees," she said. "Trimming them can help customer safety and increase reliability — maybe save somebody a refrigerator full of food or a trip to a motel."

"We realize you're proud of your trees. They're beautiful. We have handpicked tree trimmers — we're not tree butchers."

Residents with questions, requests for tree removal or an informational booklet, "Plant a Tree," may call Detroit Edison at 237-7500.

Comcast may buy Storer

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Comcast Cablevision expects to be hearing from the board of directors of Storer Communications, Inc. soon on the company's response to Comcast's offer of merger.

The Pennsylvania-based Comcast tendered the offer to Storer two weeks ago, offering each holder of Storer common stock $82 a share in cash, 1.2 shares of preferred stock of the surviving corporation with a liquidation preference of $25 a share and 1.2 warrants to purchase stock in the surviving company.

The merger offered by Comcast is an increase in $7 a share and 20 percent in preferred stock and warrants over those provided for in Storer's merger agreement with certain affiliates of Kohlberg Roberts & Co., according to Comcast.

Comcast proposes to finance the merger and continued operations of Storer and to refinance Storer's debt as required with a total of $2.3 billion. Of that, $200 million comes from Comcast, $900 million will be provided by a bank syndicate led by the Bank of Montreal and $1.2 billion will be supplied by Merrill Lynch & Co. from the proceeds of the sales of Storer's television stations, which include the local CBS affiliate, WJBK Channel 2.

This is the third merger offer tendered by Comcast in the last couple of months, according to company treasurer Bernard Gallagher. The company also made large acquisitions in 1984 in Baltimore and Michigan, Gallagher said. The company has been expanding through acquisition over the past 10 years, he added.

By selling off Storer's over-the-air channels, Comcast will stay clear of the Federal Communication Commission's cross-ownership rule, which forced Cox Cable last year to sell its cable holdings in southeastern Michigan after the company acquired Kaiser Broadcasting, which operated Channel 50 in the local market.

Comcast was the successful bidder for Cox's southeast Michigan cable franchises, which included one serving St. Clair Shores, Fraser and Grosse Pointe Shores. Comcast now has 10 franchises in southeast Michigan and is planning to consolidate the operation.

Comcast is the nation's 16th largest cable television company with ownership interests or management responsibilities for systems serving more than 450,000 in eastern, midwest and southern states. In addition, the company also owns the largest independent network of background music systems operating under the Muzak name and also installs commercial music system.

Storer, headquartered in Miami, is the nation's fourth largest cable provider. A merger between the two companies would create the nation's third largest cable television system, with more than 2 million subscribers, according to reports.

Although Storer is the larger of the two, it has been in the financial doldrums of late, leading to a sentiment among some stockholders to liquidate the corporation and merge its segments with other communications companies, Gallagher said. Comcast is in great shape going into the merger, with a strong cash flow, open lines of credit and solid financing for the deal, he added.

Gallagher and Comcast President Ralph Roberts both said they expected Storer to accept Comcast's merger bid over KKR, since the Comcast bid was materially to the benefit of Storer stockholders.

AARP offers cancer kit

An educational kit on colorectal cancer is now available for groups and organizations interested in presenting programs on what has been identified as the nation's second greatest cancer killer. Education on colorectal cancer and early detection of the disease could change that.

Developed by the AARP (American Association of Retired Persons) in cooperation with the American Cancer Society, the kit contains a timeline for conducting a cancer risk reduction program, a poster and sample flyer, information on providing a high-fiber meal and stool blood tests for the program, a listing of American Cancer Society resources, and more.

The kit is available, at no charge, from: AARP, Health Advocacy Services, 1909 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20049

Police scooter makes its crime fighting debut in Park

By Pat Paholsky

What's silver and blue and glides down the road and up the alley with the greatest of ease? It's the new Park police motor scooter and it made its debut a week ago.

As the first person to patrol the streets last Thursday morning, Officer Tim Mink was clearly enthused with his department's new vehicle.

"It's really nice," he said. "I took it right down to hardly any speed at all and it's really maneuverable. And it's not loud," he added.

Mink, with 17 years on the force, said it's a break from driving around in a scout car. The couple of hours he had already put in patrolling the streets brought reactions from residents. "People were waving and saying, 'Hey, that's nice,'" he said.

The scooter, designated as Motor One, will be operated during daylight hours and the primary patrol area will be the business district and the western part of the city, from Ballfour to the city limits, according to Police Chief Richard Caretti. Officers will also check school playgrounds and later, when classes resume, all school areas.

The primary purpose of the scooter patrol, Caretti said, is to promote positive police-community relations. "Officers assigned... are the foremost representatives of this department and must have a positive outlook in promoting this city and its future," he wrote in an interdepartmental memo, adding that officers are encouraged to stop and speak with residents.

The scooter will be an effective tool in crime prevention, Caretti said. "The message we want to get out is there's high risk involved in getting into crime in Grosse Pointe Park. We're looking for real high visibility."

An officer on the scooter can park the bike and perform foot patrol functions, Caretti said, without being restricted to a couple of blocks.

"We don't want to limit ourselves to strictly police matters," Sgt. Randall Cain added. "If an officer sees a health hazard, he can report it."

Some of the things an officer on scooter patrol will not do is pursue a motor vehicle. The officer will not be responsible for parking enforcement unless he observes flagrant violations and he will not stop a driver unless it can be done safely.

Officers will be assigned to the patrol on a voluntary basis and according to seniority, Caretti said, adding that the response from his department has been enthusiastic. He said he was "pleasantly surprised to find so many high class officers" in the Park department and added: "I would be comfortable putting any officer on that assignment."

The American-made Honda Elite 150 cost $1,161.95 and includes a windshield for $81 and a rear trunk for $135, for a total of $1,377.95.

What's next? It's down the road, Caretti admitted, but he'd like to get an unmarked police car which would be operated by an officer dressed in street clothes. The officer would "lay back and observe. It's a very effective method," he said.

Narnia program offered to youngsters

Elementary students can enter the magical Land of Narnia from Monday, Aug. 12 through Friday, Aug. 16, 9 a.m. to noon at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Presbyterian Church, 16 Lakeshore Road.

The children will find Eustace and Jill escaping from angry boarding school bullies into the fantasy land of Narnia only to discover they must rescue Prince Rilian, son of Prince Caspian, who has been prince-napped by a wicked queen who can turn into a green monster. With the help of a marvelous marshwiggle, Puddleglum, talking animals, and (inadvertently) some hungry giants, the Prince is found magically bound to The Silver Chair and only the children's faith and trust help all of them to escape to safety with Aslan the Lion's help.

C.S. Lewis, a British theologian, wrote about several Christian themes in his seven books called, "Chronicles of Narnia." "The Silver Chair," presented this year, is the fourth book in the series.

Lillian Goodwyn, from the Grosse Pointe schools, is coordinating a lively group of adult teachers to enliven The Journey Through Narnia.

Anne Berry has immersed herself in casting and costuming a group of dramatists and storytellers who will present a portion of the story each day.

Linda Lloyd and Carol marks will coordinate the daily story presentation.

Children will have their own Journey Guide from a group of high school students who will give each group their own name and banner.

Dr. Stanton Wilson, Parish Life pastor, will lead mid-morning worship each day, relating biblical themes to the Narnia adventure.

Phyllis Webb will enliven music time with her special piano talents.

Activities include: muffinry, sensory sachets, sun prints, fingerprint critters, Aslan masks, silhouettes, Silver Chair puzzles, fishing, Puddleglum puppets, Jill & Eustace baglems, rubbings, banners, calligraphy, tie-dyed eggs, stained glass ornaments and snowflakes.

All children in the area are invited to participate. The program is free. To register, pick up the registration form in the church office and return it by Aug. 5.

The planning team is the Special Events Committee of the Christian Education Council.

Kathleen Peterson is the director of the program.

A departure from the norm

The front page of the Grosse Pointe News last week was an unusual one, not only for the News but for any weekly newspaper. It carried three stories about the violent deaths of four Grosse Pointe residents.

One story told of the murder of a Grosse Pointe Park psychologist, another reported the death of a young Grosse Pointe Woods resident in a boating accident, and the third covered the continuing efforts to solve the arson deaths of two Grosse Pointe residents.

Community newspapers usually do not report much crime news and not many stories about fatal accidents simply because there usually isn't much crime or many accidental deaths in any small residential area. As a result, such newspapers differ most weeks from the metropolitan dailies. For the News, last week was an exception.

In her column in the News two weeks ago, reporter Nancy Parmenter quoted the late Henry Beetle Hough, the long-time editor of The Vineyard Gazette on Martha's Vineyard in Massachusetts, who said "weekly newspapers are a sustained chronicle of the life which they report and represent. Most often the best front-page stuff is acutely typical rather than violently exceptional, a respect in which the weekly newspaper differs radically from the daily."

Careful readers will note that Hough said "most often" the best front-page stuff is typical but he didn't say that it always was the typical story that made the front page. Occasionally the "violently exceptional" becomes front-page news even in residential communities such as the Grosse Pointes. And that's the reason last week's front page was a departure from the norm.

Let's hope "the acutely typical" stories that constitute "a sustained chronicle" of the life of the Pointes remain the norm and that violence remains an exception in this community.

A quiet primary campaign

From all indications, it is going to be a fairly quiet primary in Grosse Pointe Park next Tuesday, even though three candidates are seeking the nomination for mayor and seven are in the race for council. So far as this newspaper has been able to learn, there are few controversial issues in the campaign.

It is traditional, of course, for the voter turnout to be light in primary elections and yet it shouldn't be. True, only one candidate for mayor and one for council will be eliminated on Tuesday, but it would be disappointing if a light vote deprived the community of one or more of its best candidates.

In its editorial endorsement last week, the News supported Palmer Heenan and John Prost for mayor, along with Carroll Evola, Mark Valente III, John W. Hibbard, Lynn B. Crissman, Arthur Getz and Lee Carrick for the council.

The News published its endorsements a week early so that people who disagreed with the paper's opinions or its coverage of the candidates would have the opportunity to provide a rebuttal in the letters column today. As of this writing, at least one Park resident has taken advantage of that opportunity to differ with the News' endorsements for council.

We respect the writer's right to an opinion different from our own and, in fact, we know from prior experiences that a number of voters will vote for candidates not endorsed by this newspaper. Yet as a community newspaper that covers public affairs in the Park as well as elsewhere in the Pointes, the News feels it has a responsibility to pass along to its readers its views on the candidates. As we pointed out last week, we arrived at our views through interviewing the candidates, from covering the activities of those now in public office and from evaluating the background and experience of all the candidates.

Now it is up to the voters. We hope that there will be a good-sized turnout so that the nominees for the November general election — two candidates for mayor and six for the council — will reflect the choice of a representative cross-section of the voters in the Park.

Those early opinion polls

Two recent public opinion polls offered both good news and bad news for some Republican candidates for public office.

A Detroit News Poll showed Wayne County Executive William Lucas as the leader in the race for the 1986 Republican nomination for governor. He ran five percentage points ahead of Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson and 13 points ahead of Oakland County Executive Dan Murphy when pitted against incumbent Democratic Gov. James Blanchard.

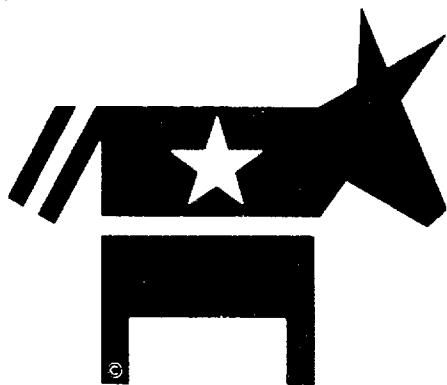

That was the good news for Lucas.

But the bad news was that the county executive did not do well among blacks and other non-whites. The poll showed Blanchard leading Lucas 76 to 16 percent among non-whites and 80 to 15 percent among blacks, although the county executive did do better than either Patterson or Murphy among these categories of voters.

The poll appears to indicate that at this time blacks would be more likely to vote Democratic than Republican even if the GOP nominee himself were a black. Since Wayne County is more than 35 percent black, Lucas' chances of winning the country would not appear to be bright at this time.

with 95 percent of the Republicans questioned saying they had heard of him and 82 percent adding that they know something about him.

On the other hand, only 40 percent of the Republicans said they had heard of Kemp and 27 percent said they know something about him. In a trial heat for the GOP nomination, Kemp placed a distant fourth behind Bush, former Sen. Howard Baker and Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole. Only 10 percent of the GOP respondents expressed a preference for Kemp as their first or second choice for the GOP nomination, while 58 percent chose Bush, 19 percent favored Baker, and 15 percent wanted Dole.

Bush retains much of the support that made it possible for him to win Michigan's Republican presidential primary in 1980 against Ronald Reagan, but the Kemp forces are reported to be making gains even at this early date.

The consolation for people who don't like the poll results is that while polls predict the consequences if the election were held today, they do not mean much more than straws in the wind for either the 1986 or 1988 elections. Furthermore, events have a way of changing the assumptions — and sometimes even the candidates — that are being considered early in the race.

All of which means that Lucas, Kemp and other GOP stalwarts who are already campaigning for office will continue their efforts despite the portents of the early polls. And if even more serious obstacles arise in the future, they know that practical politics often consists of ignoring facts.

Pro-Soviet groups behind protest

To the Editor:

Regarding the letter in the July 18th issue of the (Grosse Pointe) News, which carried the headline, "Stop the War machine!"

Unquestionably peace is the desire of the great majority of the world's people, including the Soviets, but before giving the Soviets any credit, one must understand their definition of peace. They believe that peace will only exist when Soviet rule is supreme and all of the world's people, including their own, are slaves. Further the Soviets believe that there is no means too vile or horrible to use in promoting their goal for, after all, the non-communist people have no rights and their leaders and property owners must be killed. Therefore deception, lies, fomentation of revolutions, invasions, the use of gas and germs, starvation (Ethiopia is the current example), assassinations, mass murder and terrorism are quite proper in their minds. It has been estimated that, based on what has happened in countries they have taken over, there would be minimum of 100,000 assassinations within the first few days if they took over the United States; it is believed that the list of names already exists.

The Soviets do not want a major war, but they spend to maintain superior armed forces; the United States does not want superiority, but must have parity in order to prevent a direct Soviet takeover.

Now to get to the Stop the War Machine letter; what are the Soviets doing to gain their goal? They know that if the free countries can be persuaded to reduce their weapons, the war will be won. They follow the precepts of the 6th century Chinese military strategist, Sun Tzu, who wrote that to take a state intact without fighting is the best policy and that to subdue an enemy without fighting is the acme of skill.

The Soviets and their agents have organized and supported hundreds of pro-Soviet groups who work in every possible way to weaken the defenses and the will of the people in all non-communist nations; the World Peace Council is their principle communist front organization and many lesser groups are affiliated with it. A book titled, "The War Called Peace, The Soviet Peace Offensive," published by Western Goals, devotes 50 pages to this WPC and its infamous work.

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, whose Detroit area president is (or was) a resident of Grosse Pointe Park, is reported in that book to be affiliated with the WPC.

It follows that those people who carried a sign reading, "Affirm life stop the war machine," in front of the Woods Theater on July 12th were very apparently there at the instigation of a pro-Soviet group and their message and supporters must be judged accordingly.

Council needs Robson

To the Editor:

In this brief time prior to the primary election of mayoral and council candidates for Grosse Pointe Park, I feel it is my responsibility to comment on your July 25th endorsements.

It was obvious that you found it necessary to eliminate one candidate from each category. The problem is that this particular resident and taxpayer does not agree with you. My specific concern is with the position of councilman.

Your interviews with each of the seven candidates seemed reasonable, but I fail to understand why you chose to eliminate James Robson. I have attended many city council sessions and also the specific neighborhood meetings held in the "cabbage patch" regarding crime prevention and traffic problems.

Mr. Robson's attendance and involvement in the council meetings demonstrates his active concern for the Grosse Pointe Park community. His concerns include his position on such issues as upgrading property values, decreasing crime traffic management, street closings, adequate lighting and the public safety merger.

I feel you did a true injustice to the voters of Grosse Pointe Park by eliminating Mr. Robson from your endorsement. Is it possible that your people are intimidated by the "squeaky wheel" and isn't it also possible that that is precisely who the Park council needs?

Editorial is gratifying

To the Editor:

Your editorial on the Group Home series was most gratifying! We appreciated the space you gave us in the paper to try and educate the public about community placement of developmentally disabled citizens, but the editorial was icing on the cake.

Thank you for taking a stand in favor of a group home in Grosse Pointe ("in communities wherever we may live"), and for pointing out the rights of mentally retarded adults. Acceptance comes slowly but it will come, thanks to people like you.

Correcting defense spending fraud

By Dennis Hertel
U.S. Representative

Responsibility is the key building block of any democracy. Congressmen, Senators and even Presidents are held responsible for their actions at every election. Recently, the U.S. House of Representatives took a major step in holding another segment of our government more accountable for its actions, the Department of Defense.

For years, the nation has had to face recurring reports of rampant fraud in defense expenditures. Examples abound including the $12,333 spent for two season tickets to the Los Angeles Forum sports arena and nearly a thousand dollars spent for a single day's golf fees. Hard-earned taxpayer money has been used for questionable costs rather than for improving our national defense. It seems that the more money the government has spent on defense in the last few years, the more our tax dollars have been wasted on questionable items.

It soon became clear that these practices must be stopped. The House Democratic Task Force on Waste, Abuse and Fraud in the Department of Defense, which I chair, introduced a series of amendments to the 1986 Defense Budget to help stem the fraud and abuse we have uncovered. These steps would allow more competitive bidding in defense contracts and study the possibility of establishing a civilian agency to perform all military procurement functions. In addition, the waiting period between leaving a job in the Defense Department and entering a private firm that works with the Defense Department has been increased, reducing the revolving door employment of DOD contractors by defense firms.

Finally, I authored an amendment that establishes criminal penalties for corporations and individuals who knowingly submit bills for prohibited expenses as part of their defense contract expenditures. The House overwhelmingly approved seven of the eight reform amendments offered.

Risking the national defense for personal gain has always been considered criminal. Some people risk national security by passing secrets to the Soviets for pay and are punished with severe prison terms. While billing the government for personal expenses may not have the same direct implication of harm to national security, it has the same long range effect. Given the size of the defense budget, even a small percentage of misappropriated funds could damage our national security.

My amendment specifies that after the second time an individual has been found guilty of illegal billing, that individual faces a fine of up to $250,000 or a prison term of up to five years. Corporations could also be fined up to $500,000 for such offenses. I feel that we need stiff penalties to deter future misconduct.

The steps taken by the task force will help hold both the Defense Department and defense contractors more accountable for defense spending and, in the long run, will help strengthen our national defense. These measures are now in a conference committee with the Senate version of the defense budget which does not go as far as the House version in trying to cut waste. Let's hope that the Senate and House conferees see their way clear to keep intact these reform measures.

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

The past is forever a part of the future. Often it recedes so far into the dim recesses of our consciousness that we seem to forget past happenings, big and little events, joys and sorrows, triumphs and failures, friends and neighbors. But dusty and remote as those memories are, they live forever on the shelves of our memory.

Some of them are treasures that we like to bring out to cheer us when we are lonely or depressed. Some of the painful ones we push away back in memory's deepest corner. Others are casual happenings, seemingly not too important in life's repertoire, but pleasant to recall.

It is one of life's kindest gifts that we can voluntarily call back precious moments in the circle of time.

But what is truly amazing are those that come tumbling back without bidding. An incident will occur and there they are, waiting to remind us that they too deserve to be brought into being and appreciated for the part they have played in our lives.

Such memories as these are often those related to our childhood. In the annals of years, as we make our way through one passage of time to another, we close doors. There is so much of the present that must be attended to. We don't have time to go back to open doors and retrace the steps that brought us to the point where we now live.

But once in a while something happens that blows those doors open and we look back down those tunnels of time and realize that they were important milestones.

Sometimes it is a chance meeting with a school friend or an old neighbor that works the magic. Sometimes it is a visit to the home of our childhood. Sometimes it is the death of someone we met long ago and never forgot.

This is what happened to me when I read of the death of Arthur Hathaway. Mr. Hathaway was a long-time editor of The Detroit News. My father worked with him as a reporter and later as an editorial writer.

I didn't meet Mr. Hathaway until after my father's death, but I remember my father talking about "Art's six boys" and the great times they had as a family.

My father was a young man when he died and I was a young child. It was then that I first saw this famous father and hard-working editor — Mr. Hathaway — in person. I was properly impressed. Even then I knew editors were important people. It was an impression that remained with me all of my life. Later I came to know that often under a rough exterior, they were kind and compassionate people.

That was certainly true of Art Hathaway. This tall, soft-spoken man, totally unlike the popular movie version of the gruff, hard-driven, barking editors portrayed in movies and television, efficiently, calmly and with solicitude helped my mother and I get through the first difficult weeks after my father's death.

It was many years later as a grown woman that I met him again. He was retired and his boys of whom he was so proud were successful men. His health was failing, but his mind and spirit were those of a young man. We attended the same church and when he would see me, he would say "There's Goody's daughter." My father was Louis Goodnow and his co-workers, friends, mayors, judges, governors, senators, people with whom he came into contact, called him "Goody."

There was something about that greeting — "Goody's daughter" — that magically triggered the locks on memories' doors and I was once again a child, holding my father's hand as we went for our evening's walk. That walk usually ended in the editorial room of the News. Sometimes I would sit there watching the rewrite men with their headphones on typing the news that was being relayed to them or I would wander over to the glassed-in office where teletype machines were noisily clacking out news from around the world.

Sometimes I would be introduced to people I would later come to know from their bylines as feature writers and columnists; George Starke, Vera Brown, Florence Davies. Frequently I would be left in the library on the third floor to amuse myself walking around the stacks of books. I loved going to the office with my father. I could think of no more exciting, glamorous job than working on a newspaper.

I never made it on a full-time basis. The closest I ever came was working summers in the morgue (reference room) of The Detroit Times.

Instead of becoming a reporter, I married one and retired to the sidelines where I, without actually being involved in it, could be a part of a world like no other — a world where headlines sometimes evolved in bits and pieces as reporters dug for news or exploded ready-made and staffs had to work furiously to catch up.

I learned that those who lived with the news were larger than life themselves. They were one with cabbages and kings as they mingled with the rich, the poor, the famous, the unknown. They observed those in high places who were less than they ought to be and with those who would never have been in the paper except for the tragedy and hardship who nevertheless displayed dignity and nobility of character in their misfortune. The

Everytime I call someone only to hear that person is on vacation until whenever, I get a little envious.

It doesn't matter that I don't consider summer the greatest of vacation seasons. Just the thought of someone relaxing while I put in my 40-per is enough to start me chewing on the telephone receiver.

Me, I like autumn in Michigan, and every year I try to plan my vacation for mid- or late-September, so I can head up the Lake Huron salmon coast for a couple weeks and spit, swear and eat out of tin cans; you know, real man stuff.

This year, I even considered leaving my beloved Michigan autumn behind for, dare I say it, the wilds of California. There, as fate would have it, my little sister, brother-in-law and niece, my second, live happily on Edwards Air Force Base.

I had the whole trip mapped out. With two weeks, I could take Amtrak cross-country, seeing sights I couldn't see from the air. Then, there would be a week to relax in the California sun and see if the people out there are really half as off-the-wall as they are supposed to be. To cap it off I could take a red-eye in from the coast and slink in to work on a Monday.

Only three things stop me from heading to the Wild West this fall; I don't have the money, I don't want to leave Michigan and I don't think I'm going to last until then.

Money's my fault. I have all the thrill of a sailor on leave from an Algerian oil tanker. Money in my pockets seems to disappear. If I have two nickels to rub together the week before pay day, I consider myself lucky.

The greatest money-eater in my life is my car. It's a 1981 American Motors Eagle Kamback that my mechanic is fond of telling me should never have been built. My mechanic, but the way, is vacationing this year in the south of France.

Then there's the boat. The person who said a boat is a hole in the water you throw money into wasn't fooling around. No sooner do you think you have everything you need for a pleasurable day chasing walleyes off the Delphine than you see someone in another boat pass by with something you just have to have; something that usually has a price tag in three figures.

Not wanting to leave Michigan may be my fault as well, but I have too many fond memories of this state. My family has logged more miles in Michigan than the Department of Natural Resources. Every summer, we would pack up the car and head Up North, not stopping until the Keeweenaw began to recede in the background. We've been around the coasts of Superior, Michigan and Huron, spit into the Soo Locks and gawked at the Lake of the Clouds, to name just a few.

Summer not being my favorite season is probably a direct result of being piled into a 10-year-station wagon against a 12-year-brother (who's now 30) who had never heard the words "personal hygiene." My father thought the best time to leave on a trip was before sunrise, because you always beat the crowd. You always ended up sitting at the gas station behind a half-dozen other vacationers who also left early to beat the crowd.

My mother felt the first six hours of the drive were the most important. The children (four of us) were going to sleep she reasoned, so Dad could high-ball it to the bridge before we made our first rest stop. Invariably, one of us would wake up an hour into the drive and whine pitifully for the next 200 miles, shredding everybody's nerves.

There isn't a summer that goes by that I don't remember wading into Lake Superior on a 90-degree day or watching my lunch carried off by a swarm of black flies.

As for not lasting until this fall, that's another subject entirely. Suffice it to say I have unceremoniously crushed eight alarm clocks in the past month that have had the audacity to try to wake me for work.

The Chump-Factor is rising as well. Now, a chump-factor, for the uninitiated, is the number of times a week you fail to do something you told someone you would do. Last week was a four-chumper for me, and I want to send out my heartfelt apologies to Trombly Elementary School Principal Shiela Joyce, Summer Experience '85 Director Kathleen Herschelmann, the Grosse Pointe Farms Municipal Court violations bureau and my mechanic.

Anyway, I'll just spend the next couple of months poring over the old tackle box, making sure all the hooks are sharp and dreaming of sunrise over Lake Huron. Who knows, I may just make it up there this fall to see it.

Prime Time

wonderland of human experience was a reporter's daily beat. They were humanized by living so close to the good and bad in people.

The "tough" city editor, the "ruthless" reporter, those were roles they played in their determination to present the truth and facts of stories -- and there is a distinction. Facts can be presented in such a way as to distort truth just as figures can be manipulated to alter statistics.

Beyond the hard work and endless hours involved in getting the story was the talent and skill that went into writing so that the reader could have a true picture of what was involved. The intricacies of bureaucracy, the details of crime, the sorrow of loss, the pain of defeat, the glory of victory, all of these had to be put into words that clearly explained what was happening and yet betrayed no emotional involvement in the situation. It was a prose tightrope of accuracy without bias.

Newspapers, like all institutions, have changed since I was close enough to watch from a privileged position. There are eight-hour days and 40-hour weeks. There are bureaus and special editors. There are still general reporters, but there are more writers who are experts assigned to specific fields. The thrill of being first with a breaking story is almost nonexistent. Television and radio have stolen that thunder.

But one aspect of the business remains constant. Pride in the product still exists. Those who work in what has to be one of the most fascinating professions in the world, do so with the utmost dedication to provide readers with their best efforts. It's that kind of a business.

And so with that said, it's time to return to the premise of this essay.

So many memories and values lie buried deep in the subconscious waiting to be recognized as important influences in life.

In this instance it was the death of my father's former editor that made me think once again of how wonderful it has been to have lived all of my life associated in one way or another with newspapers and the men and women who work on them.

It's easy to see why the judges in last week's Miss Grosse Pointe Farms beauty pageant had such a difficult time. Striding toward the

Beauty, tradition highlight pageant

By Tom Greenwood

Traditional events are usually a combination of hard work and fun. It's fun throwing out the first ball of the season at Tiger Stadium. It's hard work trying to catch any horsehide launched by the rusty arms of local dignitaries.

It's fun watching Detroit's mounted police leading the annual Thanksgiving Day Parade. It's hard work dodging and dancing the road apples for those following in their wake.

Likewise, it's hard work being a judge in the Farms Boat Club's annual beauty pageant, but it's certainly a lot of fun being a contestant.

At least, that's the opinion of the six young residents who competed for the title of Miss Grosse Pointe Farms at this year's regatta. Held last weekend at the Farms Pier Park, it marked the 33rd year the regatta has been celebrated, which certainly qualifies it as a Pointe tradition.

In charge of the event this year was Regina Bartosiewicz, who was previously a candidate in the contest herself. "First of all, we consider it a beauty pageant, not a contest," she said with a smile. "There's nothing like a bathing suit competition or any of that sort of thing. Basically it's a chance for the girls to display their personalities to the judges. This is my first year chairing the event. I don't know if it'll be my last."

Bartosiewicz has worked on the pageant for months, accepting applications, planning dance routines, and lining up prizes for the contestants.

"I've been working with a $600 budget, which isn't really a lot," she said. "I've approached the local merchants for donations and they've responded beautifully. This year the winner receives $100, a dozen red roses, a facial and other awards. All the contestants receive haircuts, moonlight rides to Boblo, gift certificates to clothing stores. Mumford High School T-shirts just like in 'Beverly Hills Cop,' record albums and ice cream cones. It's been a lot of fun, but a lot of work. I've kept busy."

That's the sentiment echoed by the young women representing Grosse Pointe Farms at the regatta.

"This is my first-time-ever entry into a beauty pageant," said Christina Ciavola, 15, a student at South High School. "I'm both nervous and excited. We've worked at least two hours every night this week on our dance routine. I'm the only daughter in our family and I hope I represent them with pride. I don't think beauty pageants are out of date either. There's nothing sexist like a bathing suit competition. I'm representing Grosse Pointe Farms, the city where I live. It's been a lot of fun meeting all the other girls. We're like sisters now."

Another first-time entrant is Christa Huthwaite, 16, a student at South.

"I heard about the pageant from a friend who competed a few years ago," she said. "I'm the first from my family to compete. My younger sister is very excited for me. I'm both nervous and excited, but it should be a lot of fun."

"There's still a time and place for pageants like this. We're in it for fun. None of us are traitors to the feminist cause, although I would like to see a pageant for the guys as well. Why not a Mr. Grosse Pointe Farms next year?"

Why not indeed is the opinion of another contestant, Amy Bartosiewicz, 18. "It would only be fair to have another contest for the men," she said. "I must admit I've received a little flak from my girlfriends who are opposed to this sort of thing. Also a little teasing, but this is sort of a family tradition for me. I've had three other sisters in this pageant, now it's my turn."

"I received encouragement from my family, friends and sisters. I'm nervous, excited and looking forward to the contest. As for the teasing and criticism. I just brush it off."

Bartosiewicz will be a freshman at Western Michigan University this fall.

Suzi Storen, 18, will be a freshman at the University of Michigan this September. She thinks beauty pageants are okay, as long as their not taken seriously.

"I work down at the park and heard about the pageant from my friends," she said. "I figured 'why not?' I'm the first from my family to enter and I sort of feel I'm carrying the family name into battle. I'm nervous, but it should be fun. That's all I'm in it for."

Maureen Connell, 18, works as a lifeguard at the Pier Park and will attend Northwood Institute in the fall. "I had an older sister who was a contestant," she said. "She told me it was a lot of fun. You've got to remember, a lot of us have watched this pageant since we were little girls. Now we're contestants. It's kind of a thrill to be part of that tradition."

"I have no problems with the sexist image many contests have. I feel good about this, although I'm pretty nervous because I haven't learned the dance routine yet. Hey, how about a Mr. Grosse Pointe pageant next year? We're ready for it."

Wendy Besler, 17, is a "mighty senior" at South High School this year, and nervous about her time on stage.

"Mainly I'm nervous about the dance routine," she said. "But so far it's mostly been fun. I was hesitant at first about entering, but now I'm glad I did. I think the nervousness will go away after a while."

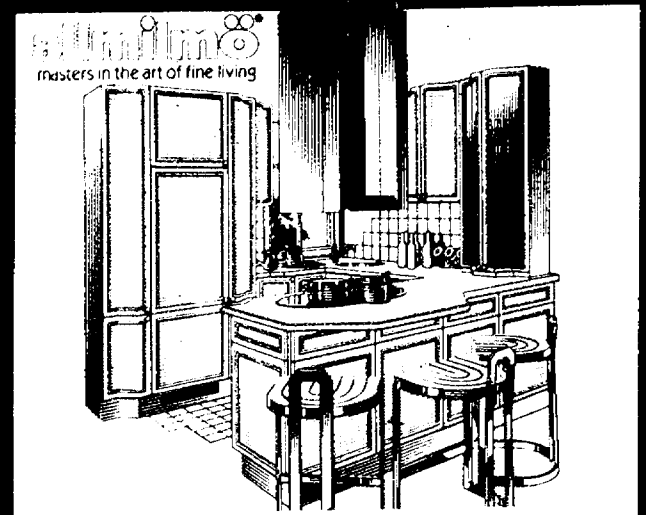

"And I certainly do believe there's a place for the pageant. We're all representing our community — the place where we live and there's nothing wrong with that. I feel good about the whole thing."

The pageant began at 5 p.m. Saturday afternoon and less than an hour later it was all over. The title and crown of Miss Grosse Pointe Farms went to Christina Ciavola, daughter of Rex and Louise Ciavola.

First runner-up was Wendy Besler and second runner-up award went to Amy Bartosiewicz.

The contestants had the fun, but who did the hard work of judging? Look for the license

The Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulation has developed an information brochure about its services to the public, including handling complaints for consumers.

"We license a half-million people in Michigan, so nearly everyone in the state comes in contact with one of our licensees," said Department Director Raymond W. Hood Sr. "That makes it very important that the public know what occupations and services we license and how to contact us for information."

The new brochure features a center page which lists 38 licensing agencies and gives a telephone number for prospective licensees to call; it also includes complaint numbers for the public to call.

Requests for a speaker on departmental activities or requests for a copy of the free brochure should be sent to: L&R Brochure, Department of Licensing and Regulation, P.O. Box 30018, Lansing, Michigan 48909.

Lake level

Lake St. Clair at the end of June was at elevation 576.10 feet or 53 inches above chart datum; this was about seven inches above one year ago, and the June monthly mean of 576.11 feet was 27 inches above its long-term average for June. The Great Lakes forecast shows that Lake St. Clair is expected to be 50 inches above chart datum or at elevation 575.84 feet at the end of July.

Donations sought

The non-profit Bargain Boutique Resale Shop at the Museum of African American History is seeking clothing, furniture and other donations for distribution to people who have had a fire and to the mentally ill and retarded.

Volunteers will pick up goods on Saturdays. For more information, call Ida M. Drewery at 924-9717 or 893-6359.

Felix Resnick

Concert to end series with a bang

The Grosse Pointe Symphony Pops, conducted by Felix Resnick, will conclude the seven-concert Summer Music Festival series with a bang, Monday, Aug. 5. The concert, which will begin at 8 p.m., will be held on the War Memorial green and will feature a fireworks display over the lake while the symphony plays the "1812 Overture."

Tickets are $9.50 for reserved seating, and $5.50 for lawn seating. Other highlights of the program will include "El Capitan" and "Stars and Stripes," both by Sousa, Smetana's "The Bartered Bride," "Prague Waltzes" by Dvorak, "Artist's Life" and "Die Fledermaus Overture," both by Strauss, and the "William Tell Overture." After an intermission, the orchestra will play "Pops Hoedown" by Hayman, selections from "Oliver" and "The Music Man," and Lennon/McCartney collaborations, "Hey Jude" and "Michelle."

Concerts performed by the Grosse Pointe Symphony average 65 musicians each, with about 80 percent of the performers from the east side and the Pointes. Most are trained hobby musicians, non-professionals who perform in a professional manner.

As in the orchestra's beginnings, in 1954, the musicians represent a wide spectrum of ages and occupations including students, retirees, homemakers, lawyers, teachers, nurses, bankers and businessmen. Several of its members have gone on to join major orchestras.

Conductor Resnick, musical director of the symphony since 1959, holds the same post with the Birmingham-Bloomfield Symphony, as well as being assistant principal second violin with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Concertgoers are invited to arrive as early as 6 p.m. to picnic on the lawn or terrace. They may bring their own or order a picnic supper, freshly prepared by the War Memorial's staff, for $6.50 each. Picnic suppers must be reserved at least three days in advance of the concert.

In case of rain, the concert will be held Tuesday, Aug. 6. For additional information, call 881-7511.

Superstar concert to benefit MDA

The War Memorial will be the setting for a concert of Neil Diamond and Barry Manilow, sung and performed by Jay White and Frank Sternett, Monday, Aug. 12. The concert will benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Currently performing with Mr. F's "Salute to the Superstars," White and Sternett overwhelm audiences with their physical and vocal similarities to Diamond and Manilow.

Donation is $10 and advance tickets are available by mailing a check or money order to MDA, P.O. Box 13, Oak Grove, Mich. 48863-013.

For more information, call the MDA office at 779-7860.

South schedules early enrollment

New students will be enrolled at South High School during a special summer enrollment period which will begin Monday, Aug. 12.

High school students who are new to the South High attendance area should call 343-2151 to schedule an enrollment conference with a counselor who will be on duty.

Students who do not enroll during this special summer session will have to wait until the Aug.

26-29 pre-school registration period. At this late date, students may experience more difficulty in scheduling their preferred course selections.

"We encourage all high school age students, new to the South High attendance area, to enroll as early as possible so that they can schedule the classes they prefer," said Russell P. Luttinen, South assistant principal-Student Services.

Grade schools emphasize computer education

By Mike Andrzejczyk

When public school students head back into their elementary school classrooms this fall, they will most likely find a new addition: a computer keyboard, monitor and disc drive.

While the computers aren't something new in grade schools, purchases this year will allow the system to put one unit in every elementary classroom in its nine buildings, according to Dr. Alfreda Frost, director of elementary curriculum.

The emphasis of the elementary school programs is to teach children how to use the machine, its hardware and software, while they learn about what kinds of careers are available. Fifth-graders also get a 10-day section in which they learn basic programming and more about the machine.

A computer in every classroom will mean more hands-on time for all students, Frost said. The computers may not remain in the classrooms all year, but may be collected when fifth grade sections have their 10-day program, she added.

More time each week operating the machines will give students added time to work through the computer-assisted instruction programs that the school system has been collecting in elementary school buildings, Frost said. Students work one-on-one with the software in a variety of subjects to supplement classroom instruction.

As more machines come into buildings, more teachers are taking part in in-service training programs to learn how to help children best use the machines and to do some simple trouble-shooting, Frost said. Also, computer coordinator Edward McKeenhan will be spending more time in each school to help teachers run the machines.

Some things the system is considering is developing a list of competency skills that students should have achieved, Frost said. Such a list would add a little more direction to the curriculum by bringing attention to all parts of the check-listed items, she added.

It may also be time for the elementary schools to begin considering computer networking, a concept that had worked extremely well at the high schools, which now operate two networked labs, with a third to come on-line this fall, Frost said.

The elementary schools may also want to look into more uses for its mobile lab, which travels from building to building.

Schools try to teach children that the computer is a part of the real world and try to teach them simple operations on the machine, Frost said. There's no need for students to know the nuts and bolts of the machines operations in any more than a general sense in the elementary grades, she added, using the analogy of learning to drive a car.

You can safely operate one and enjoy it without learning the difference between the oil pump and fuel pump.

As the technology and program languages change, people are becoming more comfortable in using the machines, Frost said. Elementary school students will begin to benefit from improved technology as more computer-assisted instructional software becomes available, she added.

The district will still use its older Pet computers this year, Frost said. Although the machines are still useful, they aren't supported by good software, she added. The machines were manufactured by the same company that now produces Commodore, with which the elementary schools are now equipped.

The elementary curriculum department did consider two budget requests this year; one to buy new Commodores for the classrooms and the other to buy machines to replace the Pets, Frost said. Like many other items in the process, the request for replacement was deferred while the purchase of new machines made its way into the final budget.

The Pets are still useful machines that may be put to use in other ways. Because of their age, it's difficult to find good software for them, she added.

Buying software for machines at the elementary schools is easier because of the dearth of companies that are putting it out. In addition, the system is trying to catalog what it considers the best software on a recommendation list for its elementary school administrators to make their choice of material a little easier.

The number of buildings makes it difficult to share software from building to building, Frost said. Each school now sets up its own software library and a recommended list of material may cut some of the duplication of effort in finding such materials, she added.

The elementary schools have three different types of machines that are used for instruction, Frost said. The school system maintains Pets, Commodore 64s and Atari 800 equipment.

The software that is used is to provide a different kind of drill for students, not to supplant the role of the teacher, she added.

Much of the software remains of the drill and practice type, Frost said. The child works with the machine to drill in math and logic skills, as well as some spelling and English mechanics, she added.

One possible area that's ripe for consideration at the elementary schools is use of the computer as a word processor, Frost said. The district may be able to start such a program in the upper elementary grades to teach the children how to use the unit as a word processor without deleting instruction in skills related to writing, she added.

The key to the success of computers in classrooms is the skill of the teachers watching over student's operations, Frost said. If a student needs help, the teacher has to be able to answer questions, solve programming glitches and be able to do some minor trouble-shooting to keep the machine operating for as much time as possible, she added.

The better able teachers are to handle machines the easier they fit into classroom routine, Frost said. The system's teachers have shown their interest in learning about computers through their participation in workshops and in-service programs offered by the system.

Rotary awards scholarships

At a recent Grosse Pointe Rotary meeting, 1985 Rotary College scholarships were awarded to graduating seniors from three local high schools.

From North were Julie Blankenhorn of the Woods, Pamela Boesiger of Harper Woods, Paula Harms of Harper Woods, Paul Kent of the Woods, Susan Regalado of Harper Woods and Katherine Thomas of the Woods.

South High School winners included William Colwell, Eric Doelle, Christine Kummer, Alan Price, Margaret Psahos, Michele Sweetman and Barbara Youngs.

Anita Carron and Anne McCarthy were the recipients from Our Lady Star of the Sea High School.

Each candidate was evaluated by the Parents Club, teachers, counselors and the Grosse Pointe Rotary. Merit was determined based on academic standing and need.

Students interested in being considered in the 1986 scholarship program should inquire at the high schools.

A bee sting can create an unpleasant experience during summer outdoor activities, especially for the five percent of the population who are allergic to the insect's venom, says Tod Turriff, manager of the National Safety Council's Public Safety Department.

A strong allergic reaction to bee venom can cause a sudden drop in blood pressure with a loss of consciousness, shock and even death. "Most of the up to two million people in the United States who are allergic to bee stings don't know it," Turriff says. "Those with a history of severe allergic reactions often carry an emergency self-treatment kit (prescribed by their physician) to prevent — or at least help reduce the severity of — the sting's reaction."

An allergic reaction to insect venom can vary from dizziness to headaches, from abdominal cramps to extreme nausea, from breathing difficulties to death. Extreme itching, hives and swelling in a different location of the body are also warning signs of an allergy. Persons who suffer such reactions should see a doctor immediately for proper treatment.

Any sting should be thoroughly cleansed with soap and water to prevent secondary infection. Ice packs can be applied to soothe the skin and minimize swelling.

Turriff recommends a few simple precautions to help prevent getting stung:

- If you encounter a stinging insect, move away slowly. A bee is looking for pollen; it will not attack unless provoked. Slapping at it or making quick movements will only bring on trouble.

- Keep your shoes on when you are outside. A bee understandably resents being stepped on.

- Wear long pants, a long-sleeved shirt and gloves when working in the garden, especially if you are near fruits or flowers.

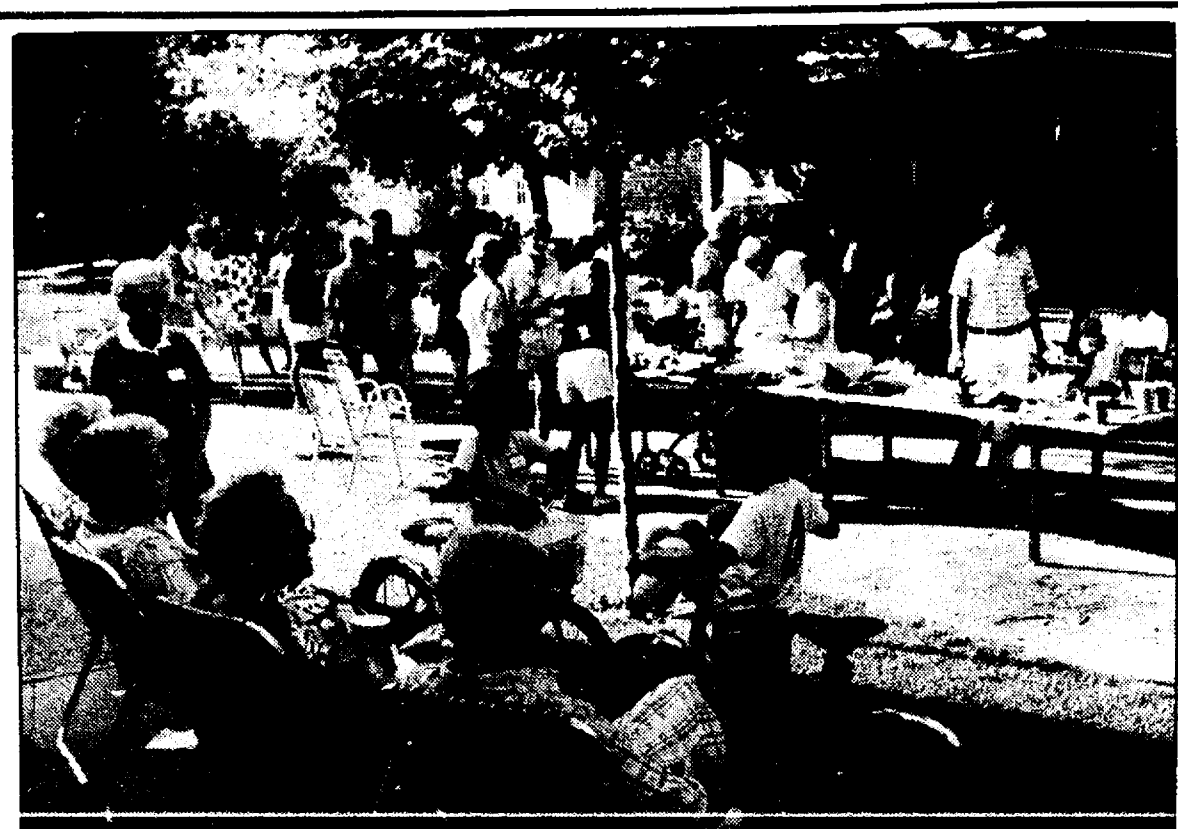

- Be particularly careful after a rain, as pollen is scarce then and insects are more excitable.

- Look and smell as little like a blossom as possible. Light-colored clothing, floral prints or sweet-smelling cosmetics, including some suntan lotions, can attract insects.

- Uncovered food attracts bees and other insects. Keep everything covered, and don't leave garbage in uncovered containers.

- Have an exterminator remove insect hives or nests located near your home.

All these prevention points also apply to wasps, hornets and any other stinging insects.

Old-fashioned block party

It was the sixth annual Mapleton block party and even former residents came back for the reunion. The event was held Saturday from 4 p.m. to dusk and the Farms street was closed to traffic. Photographer Elizabeth Carpenter, who took this photo, said Mapleton, where she resides, is a drop back in the '50s, where residents sit on their porches in the evenings. A wonderful community spirit prevails on the block-long street, she added.

Intruder steals purse

An unknown person entered a house on Kercheval in the Farms during the night on July 26, taking a mesh purse hanging on a door-knob in the kitchen. The residents had gone for a late-evening stroll and had apparently forgotten to lock the door on returning, according to the police report.

The purse contained papers and credit cards, plus $150 in Canadian and $150 in American money. The Farms police are looking for suspects.

Jewelry, TV taken

The residents of a home in the 19000 block of Raymond Road reported to the Woods police that their home was burglarized sometime during the weekend of July 13.

The homeowners said they returned to find the front door kicked open. Among the items missing were a color television, a charm bracelet, two gold chains, a diamond necklace and diamond earrings.

Although the victims are still totalling their losses, they estimated the theft at about $1,500.

Returning adult students focus of open house

The Marygrove College Admissions Office will host an Adult Returning Student Reception and open house Thursday, Aug. 1, from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Marygrove Gallery, 4th Floor Liberal Arts Building, 8425 West McNichols, Detroit.

Adults interested in returning to school will be greeted by faculty, financial aid and academic admissions counselors as well as advising/career services staffers.

Mary Ann Shanahan, a college counselor specifically trained in the needs of adult students, will speak to attendees about "Transitions and Possibilities: How To Make Returning to School a Successful Venture."

For further information, call 862-8000, ext. 220.

Auditions for Warren Symphony

The Warren Symphony Orchestra is currently accepting audition applications.

The orchestra's season will open in November and will include major works such as Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Handel's Messiah, Tchaikovsky's Pathétique Symphony and the 1812 Overture. The orchestra is conducted by Music Director David Daniels.

Qualified players should call symphony manager Dick Eisenstein at 754-2950. Audition requirements, schedules and season brochures are available.

Enrollment open for kindergarten

Enrollments in public school kindergarten for the 1985-86 school year are still being accepted. Parents who have not yet registered their kindergarten-age children for 1985-86 may contact the office of their local elementary schools or the Office of Elementary Curriculum in the Administration Building of the Grosse Pointe public school system at 389 St. Clair Avenue.

Enrollments in other elementary grades are also being accepted for 1985-86. Registration information is available in all elementary school offices.

Treating depression

Dr. Raymond Buck, staff psychiatrist at Saint John Hospital, will discuss the diagnosis of depression, its current medical treatments, psychological and physical causes, impact on the family and available community resources Thursday, Aug. 22, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the hospital. There is a $3 fee.

To register or for more information, call 343-3870.

If you buy a vacuum cleaner, and find later that it does not vacuum, the merchant from whom you bought it is liable for its replacement value, or its proper repair.

The manager or owner of a theatre or other public place cannot disclaim liability for injuries you suffer falling down the stairs, by claiming he did not know of the defective stairs. Such knowledge is automatically imputed to him: he is supposed to know.

Offer contact lens options

Improvements in the design and manufacture of contact lenses are providing freedom from eyeglasses for more Americans today than ever before, Reader's Digest reports in its July issue.

Where once the only choice was hard-plastic lenses, now people can select from varieties of soft lenses which are more comfortable and can be worn for longer periods than conventional contacts — some for as long as 30 days. There are even new soft lenses especially suited for people with astigmatism or those who need bifocal correction.

Technological advances in the works will provide even greater comfort, convenience and vision correction from contacts. Indeed, the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment projects that contacts will displace eyeglasses "as the dominant method of vision correction in the not too distant future."

No matter how good the claims about a particular variety of contacts are, prospective wearers should approach buying a pair "with their eyes open." Specifically, the Digest advises buyers to consult an experienced eye care professional who can help select the best lenses for them from the many types currently on the market:

• Conventional hard contacts: Although the most difficult for wearers to adjust to, some doctors feel these lenses offer advantages soft lenses can't match. They can, for instance, overcome a misshapen cornea, thus providing crystal-clear correction. They're also highly resistant to scratches and are easy to clean and maintain. But they can only be worn up to 12 hours a day.

• Soft lenses: Composed of 32 to 79 percent water, they are very flexible and lie comfortably over the cornea. They're also highly oxygen-permeable. Their large size makes them very stable, since they overlap a substantial portion of the eye and extend well under the lid. But there are some drawbacks. Soft lenses refract light, which can slightly fuzz visual images. They're also more fragile and easily torn, and require elaborate cleanings in special solutions that can cost the wearer $100 a year or more.

• Gas permeables: These lenses, usually made of a plastic-silicon blend, are almost as stiff as conventional hard lenses. Thus they give excellent visual acuity. They also allow as much oxygen to reach the eye as the best of soft lenses, if not more. But gas permeables are more difficult to adjust to than soft varieties and can be dislodged from the eye more easily. Although durable, they're not as scratch-resistant as hard lenses. They also need more thorough cleaning.

• Toric lenses: These are usually the best choice for people who have significant astigmatism. Because an astigmatic cornea is more oval than that in a normal eye, a lens to correct the condition must also be irregular in shape and must remain in a precise position. About a dozen kinds of soft toric or specially shaped lenses are now on the market. Each has a specific design to keep it from rotating.

• Bifocal contacts: Hard contact lenses with two focal zones have been around for 25 years, but most patients have found the thick bottom portion uncomfortable. A common alternative today is the monovision system. The patient is given one lens for distance and another for reading; within a few weeks, the patient can learn to use each eye separately.

E. Normand Giard

Giard steps down

E. Normand Giard, president of the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club, handed over the gavel July 1 to incoming president Thomas Youngblood.

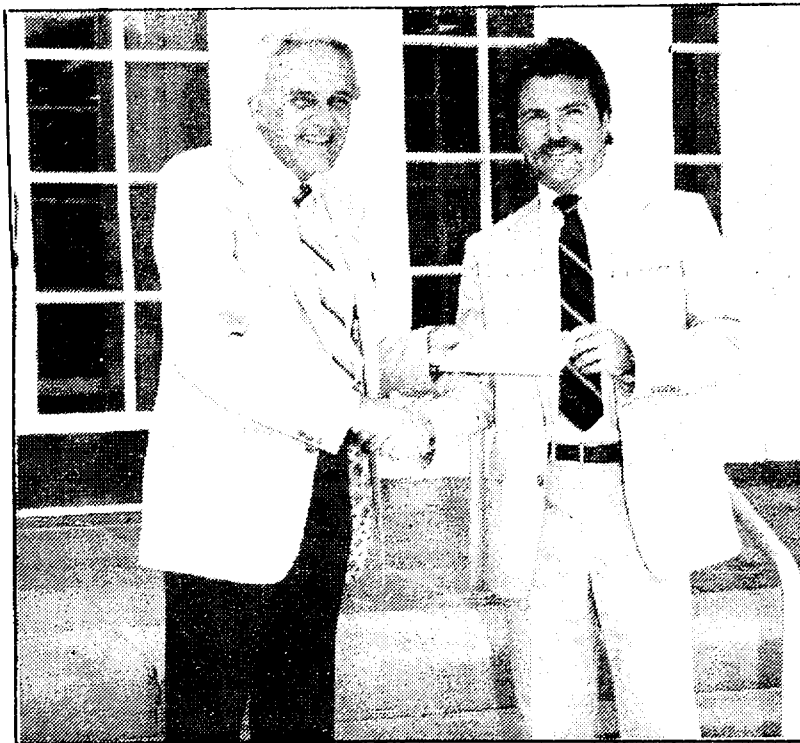

Earlier, the Rotary feted Giard at a dinner dance at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, where master of ceremonies Bill McCourt honored Giard for his fine direction over the last year and presented him with the customary Valente formal coat.

Giard came to Grosse Pointe 12 years ago after a career in the Navy. He has worked for the past 12 years at Saint John Hospital, first as an administrator and today as vice president. His children have all attended Grosse Pointe public schools, the youngest still attending North High School.

Under Giard's direction, the Rotary Club contributed to the district's special education program, along with presenting scholarships to the top students at local high schools. A medical program was also set up in combination with Bon Secours Hospital and a number of local physicians to bring a young Korean girl into the community for medical care.

These programs, along with contributions to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and a medical program in India, have been some of the major service contributions of Rotary under Giard's leadership.

Cable contribution

Woods Mayor George Freeman, left, recently accepted a check from Grosse Pointe Cable General Manager Michael DuFour toward the purchase of a new pumper truck for the Woods fire department. The funds are from a fire safety program initiated by the company in which they provided each new subscriber with a home smoke alarm and additionally donated $5 to the city for each installation.

That First Real Job . . .

the morning and it was during the summer.

"I helped load the truck with ice, then ran the bottles and cottage cheese back and forth. I earned maybe a dollar or $1.50 an hour. My parents didn't mind my working because it gave me extra pocket money and it was only for the summer. We started early and finished early, usually by 11 a.m. Sometimes it took a little longer, because he'd take certain deliveries himself and be gone a long time. I can remember him telling me to deliver on down the street while he was gone."

The early 1940s were a busy time for sixth-grader Mort Crim, now anchorman for Channel 4 news.

"I delivered papers for the Indianapolis News," said Crim in a phone interview. "I think I had 90 people on my route. It taught me responsibility. You had to deliver and collect or you didn't get paid."

"I also had a job loading produce on a traveling fruit truck. I was supposed to receive 50 cents an hour. The first day the driver talked me into taking half my pay in fruits and vegetables. When I got home my folks discovered most of it was rotten and couldn't be sold anyhow. I can't recall if I got my money back or not."

"I also was a pin-setter in a bowling alley," continued Crim. "It was tough work because often there were three alleys I had to cover at the same time. And those pins got heavy after awhile. These were about the only jobs available to kids back then. It was good work."

Beverly Beltaire received inspiration from a female co-worker at her first real job.

"I was a gofer clerk at an insurance firm, Massachusetts Mutual, in the Penobscot Building when I was 17 or 18," she said. "The first woman executive I ever saw was there. She was a model of efficiency. She was one of the first female execs around then. I was just out of high school and the job lasted only through the summer."

"I learned two things then and there. First, that a woman could hold a responsible position. And that I also never wanted to work in insurance again."

Paul Bricker, assistant district attorney, made a lot of dough at his job. "I grew up in Southfield and went to work for Dominico's Pizzeria in Berkley. They're still there, I understand. I delivered pizzas, made them and boxed them for customers. I did this from 1958 to 1961. I could have gotten in on the ground floor with Mike Illitch and Tom Monahan, who were both making pizzas back then. I knew both of them. But the job taught me how to deal with people. You have to learn that in life and that job was a perfect teacher."

Michigan Supreme Court Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley worked for a Detroit institution. "I was attending Wayne State University and represented them at J.L. Hudson's, in their College Shop. We advised mothers and daughters on what would be appropriate clothes for various colleges."

"They hired local people who attended these schools. There were a lot of girls who represented the Ivy League schools and I was there for Wayne. I sold clothes, too. The position started just after the July 4 holiday and lasted through the summer. It taught me to deal with people."

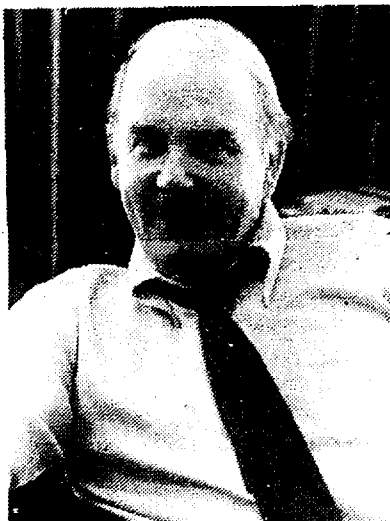

Shores Chief of Police Joseph

Beverly Beltaire

Vitale earned a street beat at an early age. "I had a steady job when I was 12 years old," he said. "I used to shine shoes down at St. Jean and Jefferson by the old car barn. A car barn is where they'd store the street cars overnight. There was a pool hall nearby called Papa Joe's. Next to that was a combination shoe shine shop and store where they blocked hats."

"I shined shoes. I used to work all day Saturday and Sunday. On Saturdays 'til 9:30 at night and until 5 p.m. on Sunday. I'd also work Monday, Wednesday and Fridays. Another crew of boys worked Tuesdays and Thursdays. More people got their shoes shined then, nearly always on Friday and Saturday nights. They wanted to look sharp. I never shined the shoes of anyone famous, but I'll tell you this—I hate to shine my own shoes to this day."

Neal Shine

Neal Shine, senior managing editor of The Detroit Free Press, went to work with a specific goal in mind.

"I used to sweep sawdust in Sullivan's Meat Market down on East-lawn and Jefferson," said Shine. "I'd also spread it. I'd wash up all the eggs fresh from the farms and made hamburger."

"After seeing what went into that mixture, I must admit hamburger is not part of my diet today. I watched the butcher. He took ground round home and that's all I buy as well. I only wanted to work long enough to earn $7.21 and 12 cents bus fare. I had my heart set on an outfielder's glove at the Tool Shop Sports Shop store on Griswold."

When I earned my money, I resigned my position, waived my pension rights and washed the sawdust from my shoes. Then I bought my baseball glove."

Diet & cancer links sought

Almost $500,000 for scientific research into various aspects of the diet, nutrition and cancer relationship has been approved for the spring of 1985 by the American Institute for Cancer Research.

"We're very excited by the possibilities many of these new studies may offer for furthering knowledge about cancer and its relationship to diet and nutrition," commented T. Colin Campbell, Ph.D., professor of Nutritional Biochemistry at Cornell University and chairman of the AICR Grant Review Panel.

The new AICR grants approach the cancer problem from a variety of nutritional concerns. A study to be conducted by Howard L. Hosick, Ph.D., at Washington State University will examine the effects of dietary fat on the growth of breast tumors.

In a second study concerning dietary fats, Selwyn A. Broitman, Ph.D., at the Boston University School of Medicine, will examine the effect of various types of fats on the growth and spread of colon cancer.

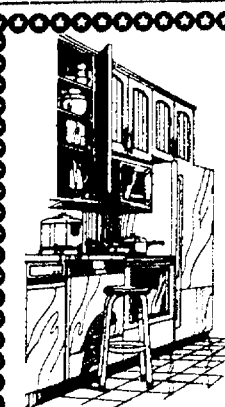

AICR will also be funding a research study at the Cleveland Clinic in which cancer researcher Arthur Flynn, Ph.D., will examine the effectiveness of selenium in increasing the body's defense in patients known to be facing a higher than usual cancer risk.

Developing a nutritional program that will aid in slowing down or halting tumor growth for cancer patients is the aim of an AICR-funded study at the University of California, San Diego. Robert H. Hoffman, Ph.D., will be attempting to develop a nutritional program for cancer patients that will provide adequate nutrition, but that will deprive cancerous cells of an amino acid normally required by cancer tumors for growth.

In addition to these research grants, AICR also approved continuation grants for several other scientific research programs begun earlier. These include an epidemiological study on diet and cancer at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a study of nutrition and breast cancer in Iceland, a study of hormones and diet in women at high risk from breast cancer and a study on dietary factors in cancer etiology in the People's Republic of China.

The American Institute for Cancer Research is a national cancer organization which focuses on the relationship between diet, nutrition and cancer. Dr. Campbell noted that current scientific knowledge indicates that virtually all cancers are affected to some extent by diet. "That is why studies such as these are so important in adding to our knowledge about this vital field," he pointed out.

AICR research grants are awarded on a competitive basis to cancer researchers at non-profit institutions. AICR's total commitment to scientific research has grown to almost $3,000,000 in the past two years, and the research grant program now funds studies at universities and hospitals in some 19 states, as well as Canada and France.

Vitale and Kenyon, who helped start the juvenile program when he was on the police force in the '70s, agree that the Shores has not had any difficulty dealing with the Wayne County juvenile justice system.

"On the rare occasion that we've had a serious problem (with a Shores juvenile), we've had good cooperation," Vitale said.

The Shores' financial share of the proposed youth program would have been $3,325. There is no indication that the cost would have been enough by itself to sink the proposal. "The cost is not outrageous," Kenyon said, "but you have to be budget-conscious."

Home generators pose hazard

Because of the increasing use of home generators, Consumers Power Company has printed a brochure called "Backfeed: The Hidden Killer." The title refers to the potential danger that home generators present to utility employees when generators are not properly disconnected from the utility's power system.

The company has begun distributing the brochure to fire departments throughout lower Michigan.

Home generators, according to the brochure, can be safely operated by observing the following six steps:

1. If your system is equipped with a transfer switch, turn it to the off position. If not, open main disconnects in the breaker panel.
2. Turn off all appliances.
3. Plug generator into a designated generator outlet or an electrical outlet of adequate capacity.
4. Start generator.
5. Turn transfer switch to generator or down position on the manual transfer switch.

6. Now turn on selected lights or appliances.

Utility employees making repairs on the same electric circuit could be in danger of electrocution if a home generator is not properly disconnected from the utility system.

Home generators, which emit carbon monoxide, should be always operated in an area that has proper ventilation, or outdoors.

Health care changes confuse public, doctors

By Nancy Parmenter

The health care system is being stood on its head by the rapid proliferation of health maintenance organizations and preferred provider organizations. Since the 1973 HMO act, in which Congress provided loan guarantees to new health care organizations meeting the act's criteria, aimed at gaining control of runaway health care costs, hundreds of plans have sprung up across the nation. Enrollment in the two types of plans has reached 27 million and is still growing.

Several executives of United Health System and its subsidiaries, all part in the joint health service corporation of Saint John, Beaumont and Oakwood hospitals, met last week for a media information seminar in the new alternative health plans.

Calvin Lippett, executive director of Group Health Plan of Southeast Michigan, said the HMOs and PPOs have created pressure on doctors. "Doctors are very anxious these days," Lippett said. "They're scared to death. Now they all want in."

Lippett said that efforts of employers to cut employee health costs by reducing benefits and demanding co-pays and higher deductibles, combined with similar efforts by government in setting up a schedule of flat payments for a given diagnosis "provoked hospitals in to a competitive attitude. Now you see hospitals advertising, joining the American way — and I think it's good."

HMOs can deliver health care cheaper by imposing controls, criteria and standards and by putting the emphasis on preventive medicine, Lippett said. "Big dollars can be saved in reduced hospitalization," he said. HMOs focus on prevention through immunization clinics, health classes, annual checkups and well baby care, all of which are covered by the premium.

Michael Elliott, executive vice president of UHS's Selectcare PPO, added that the traditional system of covering only in-patient care offered "mixed, confused incentives" to doctors and hospitals. "Doctors got into some bad habits," he said. But testing and over-testing were not the result of malpractice fear, Elliott said.

"That's the biggest bunch of baloney ever perpetrated on mankind." Malpractice risks can be reduced through the group practice aspects of HMOs and PPOs, according to Andrew Dahl, the president of United Health System. He said he expects to see the cost of professional liability insurance drop over the next few years as more doctors participate in the alternative health care plans.

But he agreed that many doctors are confused by the plans. Some have criticized it as socialized medicine. "If anything, it's the opposite of socialized medicine," Dahl said. "Certainly, the issue of national health insurance in this administration is dead. HMOs are privately owned. But there is more organization introduced to medical care (through HMOs). The independent solo style is going out. It doesn't work any more — it's too complex."

Lippett agreed. "Private practice as we knew it — those days are over. HMOs are still private practice — it isn't public — but it's contracted. Lots of them (doctors) don't like it, but they have no choice."

Many Americans are still not eligible to participate in HMOs. In a recent development, Medicare recipients were given HMO eligibility, Dahl said. But the majority of people must rely on HMOs or PPOs being offered through their place of employment.

The changes in the health care scene may be confusing, but they are "part of evolution," Elliott said. "Nothing stays static, just like we're not still driving around in Model T Fords. There are lots of ways to skin a cat."

Keeping drunks off the road

Vanderburgh County, Indiana, has developed a successful program to keep drunk drivers off the road while they pay their debt to society and consider their future conduct. The unusual program makes use of the chemical disulfiram, as well as work release.

Program elements and results are described in a short brochure, "Alternative Treatment for Chronic Drunk Driving Offenders — The Vanderburgh County Indiana Approach." Other brochures available in the same series include "The Drunk Driver May Kill You," which describes what the public can do to combat drunk driving, and two booklets telling of drunk driving programs in Texas and Louisiana that can be duplicated elsewhere.

Brochures may be ordered from the Advocacy Programs Division, Allstate Insurance Company, Allstate Plaza F3, Northbrook, Ill. 60062.

About short-term mortgages

Paying off a mortgage quickly is becoming more popular among home owners and home buyers. An estimated 10 to 20 percent of home buyers are choosing 15-year mortgages, and some lenders are beginning to offer biweekly mortgages. In addition, some home owners are "paying ahead" on conventional mortgages.

Shortened terms on a mortgage can save you tens of thousands of dollars in interest, says the Michigan Association of CPAs. Shorter-term financing is important to home buyers who must choose among the hundreds of mortgages available and it may also bring savings to those paying off a mortgage.

How it works: Shorter-term financing makes it less expensive to pay off your mortgage because it chips away quicker at your principal and fights interest from accumulating.

The typical 15-year $100,000 mortgage currently available saves a home buyer $154,000 over a 30-year conventional mortgage.

Why it works: Because it takes years of mortgage payments to make a dent in the amount you owe, shorter-term financing saves you money. Take a look at the amounts in principal and interest you pay over the life of a mortgage: With a 30-year $100,000 mortgage, assuming a 12 percent interest rate, your monthly payment is $1,029. But, $1,000 of your first payment goes for interest on your loan. Only $29 of that first payment nibbles at the $100,000 principal. Ten years hence, after 120 monthly payments, $935 of your monthly payment is for interest and $94 goes toward the principal. Finally, in the 25th year of this 30-year mortgage, after 292 payments, the majority of your monthly payment, $518, will go toward principal while $511 will pay interest charges. Shorter-term financing, the CPAs say, cancels the worst effects that interest accumulation has on mortgages. A survey of your options can save you money.

Paying ahead: If you are paying a mortgage, ask your lender if there is a penalty for prepaying your mortgage. If not, compare the pay-ahead option with the range of investment options open to you. If you have a 10 percent mortgage, you should opt for paying ahead only if you cannot get better than a 10 percent return elsewhere.

When comparing your mortgage with an array of investment options, keep its poor liquidity in mind. Once you pay ahead on your mortgage, it's expensive to get the cash back should you need it. Tapping equity you've built up in a home can often incur a blizzard of refinancing costs.

Biweekly mortgages: An import from Canada, biweekly mortgages are beginning to show up at some neighborhood mortgage lenders. Biweekly mortgage payments are new and somewhat different. Michael Wilson, who tracks mortgage trends for the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, says he doesn't yet know how many lenders are offering this method of paying a mortgage. Payments on a biweekly mortgage are usually made electronically. Commonly, a borrower's paycheck is directly deposited in a checking account every two weeks and the account is automatically debited for the mortgage payment. The borrower saves by making 26 payments a year, one every two weeks. This is quite a bit different from making two payments a month, which would result in only 24 annual payments. By making payments biweekly and making the extra two annual payments, principal accumulates at a faster rate and interest accumulates at a slower rate. It results in substantial savings.

The cost of a 30-year conventional $100,000 mortgage, assuming the prevailing 13 percent interest rate, is $1,106 a month. With a biweekly mortgage, assuming the same terms, your payment would be $553 every two weeks. You save $138,284 over the life of the mortgage and the mortgage is paid off in about 18 years instead of the full 30-year term.

15-year mortgages: This is emerging as a popular financing method. You may be able to get a discount of one-half percent below the prevailing 13 percent rate for a fixed-rate mortgage.

To qualify for a biweekly or a 15-year mortgage, your monthly housing costs generally may not exceed 28 percent of your gross income and your total long-term debt may not account for more than 33 percent of your gross income. This may require some strict budgeting, but the savings can make it worthwhile.

Driver apprehended

Farms police are seeking a warrant for possession and concealment of stolen property on a Detroit man picked up July 25 with a stolen 10-speed bicycle from the Woods in the back of his pickup truck.

Police first noticed him driving slowly, weaving and backing up. When they stopped him, he jumped out of his truck and came back to the squad car, police reports stated. He spread out his papers on the bed of the pickup and the officer could see a blue Schwinn partially concealed under a sofa cushion.

The man was accompanied by his wife and their three-year-old daughter, riding on the floor of the cab. The woman told police that they had no money for food, so were out looking for some, according to the report.

The man was released on bond, the daughter was released to her grandmother, and the wife was taken to Saint John Hospital emergency room at her own request.

Project Adventure: Testing, stretching, trusting

By Nancy Parmenter
Summer camp is the time to try something new, learn a skill, test one's limits. A small group of campers are stretching their limits on the newly installed Project Adventure rope course at the University Liggett lower school gym.

Project Adventure is a child of Outward Bound, started with federal funds in 1971 in an effort to integrate the goals and techniques of Outward Bound into public schools. The ULS program is open to all — and only two of the campers are ULS students.

The idea is to use physical testing and striving to build confidence, learn how to set reasonable goals, and explore one's limits.

"Project Adventure emphasizes trying," said course instructor Mary Fish. "Outward Bound still has the motto of 'not yielding,' but here the rule is that you have to try everything three times. There is some peer and self-pressure to try."

Camp this summer is a 50-hour pilot program, which will be distilled and incorporated into the ULS fall ninth grade physical education program. It begins with some physical conditioning and a lot of group activities to build trust and cooperation.

The "nitro pit" is a simulated situation demanding that the group work together to overcome dangers. One by one, the campers must cross a "pit" delineated on the gym floor, leap over obstacles, crawl along the top of the bleachers. One misstep and the "nitro" explodes — and everyone has to start over.

"They learn who they can count on, who has poor balance, which kid always forgets the rules, and they learn they have to help each other, or they'll never complete the journey," Fish said. "The beginning activities explore the range of weaknesses and strengths so the instructor can help the students set reasonable goals."

Along with the balance beam and weight training, the students begin to practice on low ropes, learning the safety system of belay ropes. They learn to spot one another, develop trust in the belay system, and support one another physically and emotionally.

The next stage is the rope bridge.

High above the gym floor is a system of three rope bridges. Cables and ropes are strung between the ceiling girders 20 feet above the floor. Balance is the key ingredient here — and the ability to ignore that long distance down.

"There's a vital connection between the climber and the belayer," Fish said. "We spend a long time developing the layers of trust. The kids learn to appreciate the length of time it takes to build trust — and how quickly it can end. (If a child lets somebody down) he realizes he has to start all over again. The instructor has to be careful not to let it be a permanent fall from grace."

Fish believes that the emphasis on goal- and limit-setting helps children set life goals as well.

"It's a reasonable thing with adolescents to let them decide not to do something," she said. "It helps them resist peer pressure to drive fast or to take drugs. They learn which of their friends will be supportive of their decisions. The supportive aspects carry over."

One of the challenges of the course is that the students are not taught how to negotiate the rope bridges or the simulated rock climb of wooden handholds installed on the gym wall. They practice the necessary skills before tackling each obstacle, and they are always secured by the system of safety ropes, but it is up to each climber to determine the best way to complete each crossing.

A boy stood on a tiny platform 20 feet above the floor at the top of the "rock climb" wall trying to decide how to get around leaping through the air to a trapeze about eight feet away. Under consideration was hand-over-handing it along the girder out to the trapeze, then dropping. He tried the theory several times, returning to the platform after each abortive try, before deciding that it would probably be easier just to jump.

The course was built to strict specifications and must use certified instructors in order to qualify for Project Adventure. Fish has taken the training seminar, has a master's degree in sports medicine, and is a nationally certified athletic trainer as well as an emergency medical technician. She is also studying for a master's in counseling and sees the program's greatest benefits in emotional terms.

"There are statistically measurable gains in self-esteem (from this course)," she said. "I believe that if they can learn to trust under these circumstances, it will carry over to their friendships and all of their life relationships."

It's a bird, it's a plane — no, it's super-reporter

It started out as a learning experience.

Mary Fish had convinced me that the physical experience of climbing the walls and wobbling across the ceiling brought emotional benefits, self-knowledge, renewed confidence, and, if done in a group, heightened camaraderie and morale. And it's a challenge, a risk of a different sort.

Funny thing — nobody in the office was attracted by the opportunity to emulate a monkey or a fly, so Wednesday morning found me all alone in the University Liggett gym, cheered on by Doubting Thomas Greenwood, our staff photographer.

The challenge that morning was to compress the entire Project Adventure experience into one hour — no workouts, no strengthening exercises, just me and the ropes. Part of the exercise normally is to figure out how to handle the rope course; Mary Fish helped me along with a few pointers.

The course, she explained, is designed to present challenges in several areas. If a person is strong and accustomed to success through strength, he will find his balance and flexibility challenged. A weakness in one area can be compensated for in the other.

That didn't sound like a problem for me. I have a finely honed physique, conditioned to a peak by years of desk work.

We decided I should start with the rope bridges while I still had my strength. Fish buckled me into a web harness and attached a couple of belaying ropes.

Even the trip up the rope ladder was hard. The rungs are far apart, forcing a complete arm stretch to reach the next one. It was a relief to reach the tiny platform 20 feet above the floor, where I could rest while switching belays.

The course is constructed with three rope bridges in varying degrees of difficulty and equal amounts of shakiness. The first is crossed sideways, with one rope to hold on to. The second is theoretically easier, resembling the rope foot bridges of India or Southeast Asia, with two ropes to hold. The third is a concoction of the devil, forcing the trembling climber to cross sideways and turn around in the middle. That one was tough.

Balanced precariously on the cable, stretching for the hand rope just out of reach, wobbling as I summoned the nerve to turn around, my legs began to shake. Any climber who has been stranded on the face of a sheer rock wall with "sewing machine legs" will recognize the feeling.

But willpower saved me and soon I was belaying down, eyes shut tight to overcome that sinking rollercoaster feeling of jumping out into space. "You wouldn't catch me on a rollercoaster either," Fish agreed, although she has clambered all over the course.

After that, climbing the wood blocks on the wall looked easy. But it took more strength than I had left. Only a few boosts with the belay rope enabled me to reach the platform at the top.

The wood blocks simulate cliff climbing, or "bouldering." Some balance and a lot of strength are needed just to stay on the wall. Just as the climber thinks he is getting somewhere, he may discover that everything will work out if he just puts his left foot over there, but there is not way on earth he can, because he's standing on it.

From the platform, there are two ways down. You can belay down, but if you are a true risk-taker, you will launch yourself into space toward a trapeze that looks about a mile away, but is really only about eight feet out from the platform at head level.

This must be what Reinhold Niebuhr meant by a leap of faith. The longer you stand there, the worse it looks. I stood there.

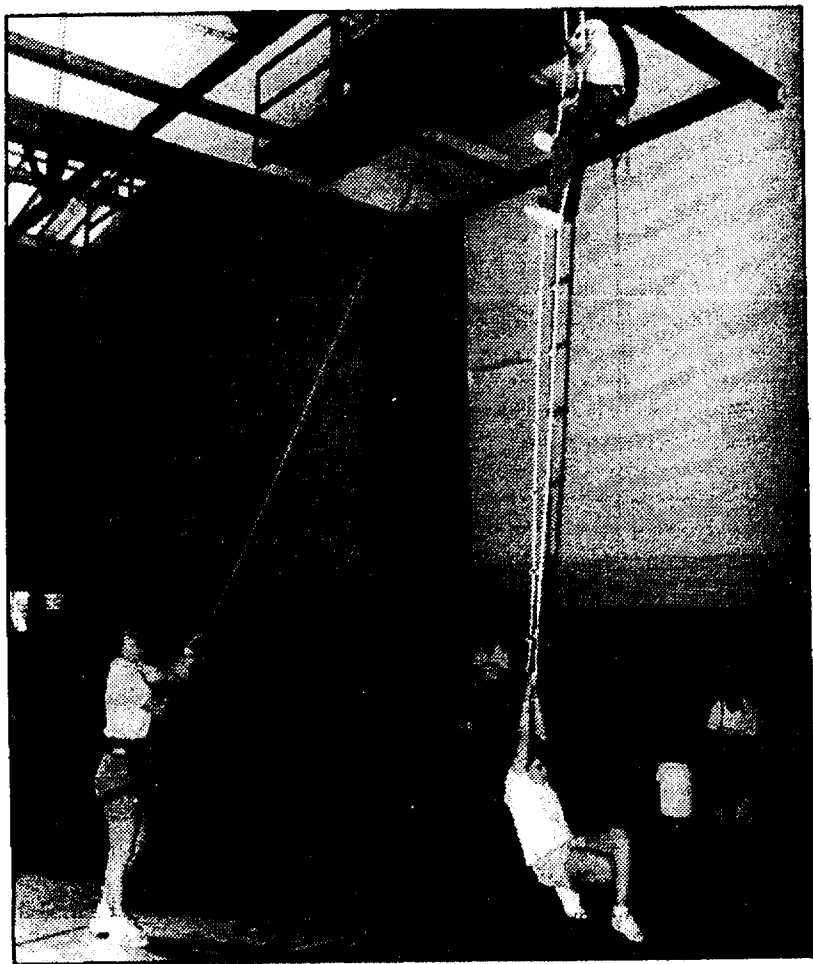

"You tried everything else," Tom Greenwood said.

I jumped. I probably screamed. My hands hit the bar, but down I went with Mary Fish hanging on the belay, letting me whirl down gently.

Earlier, when I arrived, one of the kids was on the platform, losing his nerve to jump. After he belayed down, he said, "Don't put my name in the paper — I was scared."

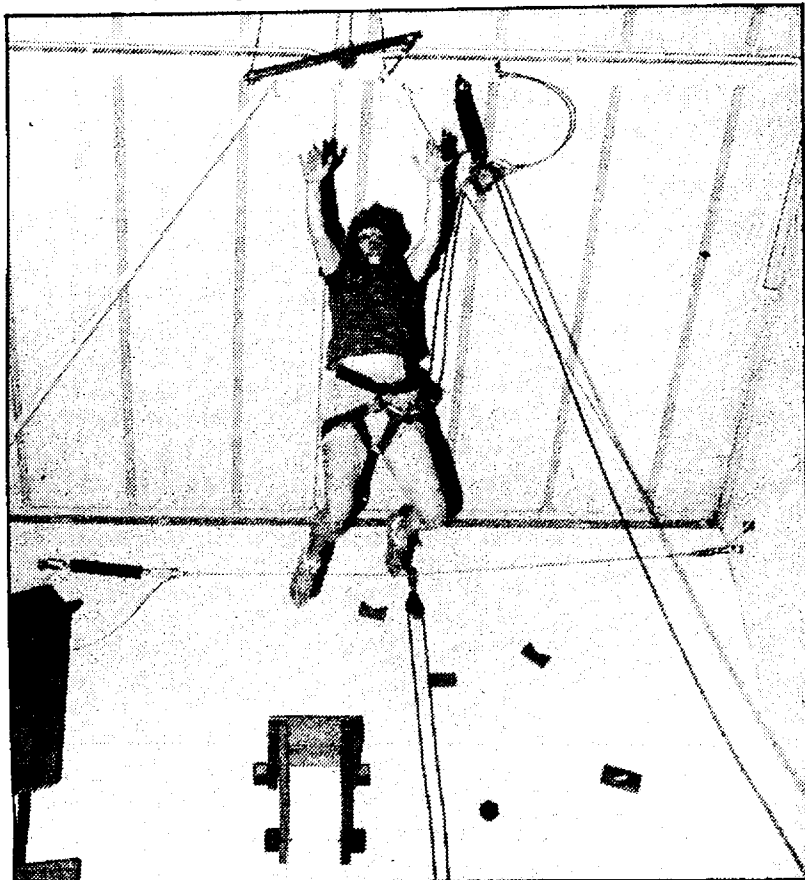

I know. So was I.

Reporter Nancy Parmenter leaps from the wooden platform, reaching for the trapeze bar, a distance of about 7 feet. She didn't make it.

Woods to celebrate 35th

Sailboats collide

Two Cal 20s collided during a race off the Crescent Sail Yacht Club July 17, according to sheriff's marine division accident reports.

The boats were owned by racers from the Farms and the Woods. Both sailors had taken instructions, one from camp and the other through the Coast Guard auxiliary and the U.S. Power Squadron. Both boats were properly equipped.

Damage to the Woods boat was negligible, but the Farms boat sustained an estimated $3,500 damage to the portside cockpit area, the report stated.

Pilots of military transport planes don't last as long on their jobs as do other professionals, generally, and they don't live as long, either. So report the statisticians.

1985 Concours d'Elegance
at Meadow Brook is Aug. 4

More than 10,000 spectators and 168 prestige automobiles from 10 states and Canada are expected to attend the Seventh Annual Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance, Sunday, Aug. 4, held on the rolling lawns of Meadow Brook Hall at Oakland University.

A further-expanded automotive art exhibition and art auction featuring works of some of America's best-known painters will again be a major attraction at the Concours. The creator of the 1985 Concours official poster — always a "must" for collectors — is Californian William A. Matta, art director of Road & Track magazine.

Lincoln is this year's featured automobile, with Lowell James of Lowell James Associates as General Chairman of the Concours.

Stunning automobiles to be seen at Meadow Brook this year will include the Marques, the Packards, the Duesenbergs, the Rolls Royces and V-16 Cadillacs, Cords, Bugattis and Jaguars. It being the Lincoln Year, Meadow Brook Hall's lawns will display the finest collection of classic Lincolns to be seen anywhere in the world.

Last year's Meadow Brook Memorial Award for the Most Outstanding Car as well as the People's Choice Award went to the 1939 Bugatti Type 57C owned by Ernest Stern of Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Dodge Memorial Award went to the 1931 Chrysler Imperial Phaeton owned by James Quinlan of Dearborn.

The President Champagne Award was won by Rick Carroll of Jensen Beach, Fla. for his 1934 Duesenberg Weyman Tapertail Speedster. There were a number of additional awards.

Judges for the 1985 Concours d'Elegance include top automotive designers and key personalities from the automotive and art worlds, past and present.

Meadow Brook Hall is situated on a 1,400-acre estate on the grounds of Oakland University. Completed in 1929, the Hall was built by Alfred and Matilda Dodge Wilson, widow of automotive giant John Dodge. Their estate was deeded to the State of Michigan.

Carillon series continues

There are still four concerts remaining in the summer carillon series being presented by the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. All the recitals are free and are held outdoors — rain or shine.

A pre-concert potluck picnic precedes each recital at 6:30 p.m. Concert-goers are encouraged to bring a favorite picnic food to share. Hot dogs and beverages are provided for $1.

The remaining concert dates are: Aug. 6, William DeTurk, Carillonneur at Memorial Church; Aug. 13, "Music for Two Carilloneurs," four hands, four feet, with William DeTurk and Beverly Buchanan, carillonneur at Christ Church Cranbrook; Aug. 20, William DeTurk; and Aug. 27, "Colleague Collage," Memorial Church carilloneurs in recital.

The Tower will be open to the public following each recital.

Concerts start at 7:30 p.m. at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore Road, in the Farms.

United Methodist to honor visitor

Betty Reas, president of the United Methodist Women, will be hostess at a coffee hour, Tuesday, Aug. 6, at 10 a.m. at the Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church on Moross Road, to honor Sumiko Shigeru from Japan. Mrs. Shigeru is on a 40-day tour in the eastern United States with a college student choir.

She is visiting the Rev. Hugh and Mrs. Doris White, founding minister of the Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church. Mrs. Shigeru was interpreter for Doris White when the Whites were missionaries in Japan and established a church there. In 1957, she was married in the Grosse Pointe church.

Everyone is cordially invited to meet Mrs. Shigeru and the Whites. Later that day, Walter and Evelyn Griffith will entertain Mrs. Shigeru and the Whites for lunch at their South Renaud home.

Backs need not be a pain

Most people begin life with a strong, healthy back, but over the years, without a basic understanding of how the back functions, they may develop nagging aches and pains.

A new copyrighted publication, "Facts About Backs," has been prepared by the National Safety Council to illustrate how the back operates and offer suggestions to keep it healthy.

"Experts agree that one of the most important elements of low back pain or injury is the poor physical condition of the individual," says Steve Herron, director of Occupational, Environmental and Consumer Health programs for the Council.

"It is generally accepted that less than 20 percent of back pain is caused by defects of the spine. The remainder can be categorized as problems with the supporting muscles of the back."

In addition to a regular exercise program that tightens the abdominal muscles, Herron recommends these health tips:

- Keep your knees bent and rest your back against a chair with adequate lumbar support to prevent strain when sitting.

- Sleep on your side with knees bent at right angles to the torso, or lie on your back with a pillow under the knees. Sleeping on one's stomach places too much stress on the back and should be avoided.

- Elevate one foot to a comfortable level, switching occasionally, when circumstances require a long period of standing.

- Use correct technique when lifting an object. Never twist the back while lifting; this is a common cause of back injury.

- "Remember: back pain is a common occurrence, but it is essential to have the cause of serious pain diagnosed," Herron says.

Consider Meadow Brook Hall visit

The millionth visitor to Meadow Brook Hall, the 100-room Tudor home on Oakland University's Rochester campus, is expected to arrive some time during this historic mansion's summer hours, which run through August.

Summers, the Hall is open for public tours from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday as well as from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. The Summer Tea Room is open for light refreshments.

Keep eye out for eye injuries in the home

Be it ever so humble, the National Society to Prevent Blindness warns that there's no place like home for eye injuries.

According to the society, accidents in and around the house account for an estimated 42 percent of all eye injuries treated in hospital emergency rooms each year. Yet 90 percent of these could be prevented if people would wear eye protection.

To promote good off-the-job eye safety practices, the society has just released its award-winning, 16-minute, slide/tape program "Vision: A Treasure to Guard." Developed for use by safety professionals at the workplace and for presentations by clubs and organizations, this program was selected as a winner of the Silver Screen Award at the United States Industrial Film Festival.

"Vision: A Treasure to Guard" alerts viewers to some common eye hazards and offers practical advice on how to control them. Four of the most common but easily overlooked causes of eye injuries — jump-starting a dead auto battery, mowing the lawn, clearing a clogged kitchen drain, chopping firewood — are dramatized in the presentation, driving home the need to fully assess the hazards of any task and to take preventive measures.

"Vision: A Treasure to Guard" is available on loan from the society for a $10 handling charge, or it can be purchased for $240.

The complete kit includes a carousel with 80 slides and an audio tape, a Leader's Guide, Topics for Review, a copy of the society's "First Aid for Eye Emergencies" self-adhesive sticker and a description of the components for conducting a successful off-the-job eye safety and health program.

Established in 1908, the National Society to Prevent Blindness is the oldest voluntary health agency nationally engaged in preventing blindness through a comprehensive program of community services, public and professional education and research.

For further information about "Vision: A Treasure to Guard," contact the National Society to Prevent Blindness, 79 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016.

Mennonites to hold annual relief sale

The Mennonite, Brethren and Amish churches of Northern Michigan will cooperate in the 19th Northern Michigan Relief Sale Saturday, Aug. 3, at a county fair-ground three miles west of Fairview, off M-33.

Last year, $64,000 was raised for world relief. The auction will be held on 75 acres of rolling wooded countryside.

Among the items to be offered this year are handmade quilts, comforters, afghans, a hand-crafted grandfather clock and rustic playhouse, collectibles, furniture, firewood and other items.

There will also be wood carvings by local residents, a calico corner, imported crafts, plants, a country store and a children's world. Apple butter will be made on the grounds.

Many relief sales are held every year throughout the United States and Canada. Last year the sales raised about $3 million which was channeled to the Mennonite Central Committee, a cooperative relief and service agency of North American Mennonite Brethren in Christ church groups. MCC has more than 900 persons working in 51 countries around the world in relief, refugee assistance, agricultural and community development education, peace work and health and social services.

Strong bones need calcium

Lois D. McBean, M.S., R.D.
Nutrition Information Specialist
Dairy Council of Michigan

Close to 20 million persons in the United States have osteoporosis, or brittle bones, according to the National Institutes of Health Expert Consensus Panel on Osteoporosis held last year. This condition is responsible for about 1.3 million fractures per year, especially of the spine, wrist and hip.

There are a number of possible causes of this epidemic, but a chronically low intake of calcium is recognized as one of the major factors. In fact, to help prevent osteoporosis, nutrition experts are recommending a calcium intake of 1000-1500 mg per day.

Unfortunately, most Americans consume only about 450 to 550 mg per day of calcium. This amount is considerably short of even the current Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) of 800 mg of most adults.

It's clear that most of us probably need to consume more calcium. This may not only protect us against osteoporosis but against high blood pressure or hypertension as well; a number of scientific studies suggest that too little calcium is associated with hypertension.

Reviewing the evidence relating calcium to blood pressure, Norman M. Kaplan, M.D., of the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas recommends in a recent issue of the "Annals of Internal Medicine" that for persons with mild hypertension "the wisest course may be to ensure that intake of the dietary sources of calcium, mainly milk and cheese, not be reduced..."

Our best source of calcium, according to most nutrition experts and organizations such as the American Society for Bone and Mineral Research, is calcium-rich foods. Dairy foods in particular offer a number of advantages for individuals concerned about increasing their calcium intake.

Milk and other dairy foods are the major dietary sources of calcium in the United States. According to 1982 government statistics, dairy foods supplied 72 percent of the available calcium in the American diet. A single eight-ounce serving of milk (whole, low-fat, skim) contains about 300 mg calcium. This amount of calcium also is provided by one cup of yogurt, 1½ ounces of cheese (American, Cheddar), 2 cups of cottage cheese or

World's Largest Garage Sale

A 19th century Victorian pump organ will be among the unusual and unique items that will be auctioned during this fourth annual event at Cobo Hall today and tomorrow, Aug. 1 and 2. Shown above are, from left, Abe Cherry, coordinator of the event; Marge Aramian and Dianne Schoenith, garage sale co-chairs for the Central Business District Association; and Lawrence Dumouchelle, of Dumouchelle Art Galleries which will conduct the auction.

The Friends of the Matthaei Botanical Gardens will sponsor a docent preparation course to begin this fall.

The volunteer docent program, a major link between the Gardens and the public, is aimed at interpreting the collections of the Conservatory and the grounds to visitors. Upon acceptance in the program, docents serve a three-year commitment, which includes class time, leading tours to groups of all ages.

The five-month course, meeting once a week, begins Sept. 25 and continues through March 26, 1986. The month of December will be off as a holiday recess. The course will include a review of basic botany, special topics pertinent to the Garden's collections, tour techniques and practice sessions.

All persons interested are urged to call the Gardens as soon as possible for an application and further information, requests to Marian Gatsball, 764-1168. After Sept. 1, call 763-7060.

Nobel-Lindberg vows spoken at Academy Chapel

At home on Brys Drive are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Charles Lindberg, who vacationed in Hawaii following their spring wedding in the Grosse Pointe Academy Chapel.

Mr. and Mrs.
Robert C. Lindberg

Mrs. Lindberg is the former Barbara Ann Nobel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Nobel, of Colonial Court. Mr. Lindberg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Lindberg, of Deerfield, Ill.

The 4:30 o'clock ceremony Saturday, April 13, at which the Reverend Gary Bueche, of St. Germaine Church, presided, was followed by a reception in the Alger House of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The bride wore a gown of white silk chiffon and Venice lace, featuring a cathedral length train, Queen Anne neckline, full bishop sleeves over lace and a bodice of lace, pearls and iridescents. A tiara of lace and pearls held her pearl-studded, fingertip length veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white orchids, roses, stephanotis and ivy.

Honor matron for her sister was Nancy Allen. She wore a floor length gown of rose chiffon, styled with a side drape and cape neckline. Dressed identically were bridesmaids Donna Brown, of Renton, Wash., and Judy Rafajko of Kendall, Wis., sisters of the bridegroom, and Gail Kansier, of Houston, Texas. Attendants carried Colonial bouquets of mixed flowers in rose tones. Flower girl Shannon Allen, the bride's niece, wore a floor length dress of white embroidered eyelet over pink taffeta and carried a basket of pink and white daisies.

Edwin Feys acted as best man. Ushers were Stephen Dausch, of Cincinnati, Ohio, John O'Brien, of Chicago, Ill., and a brother of the bride, Dr. Gary Nobel, of San Diego, Calif. The bride's nephew, Michael Allen, was ring bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a floor length gown of coral crepe chiffon, draped at the neckline. Her corsage was a single gardenia. The bridegroom's mother chose a floor length dress of pink and coral printed silk and carried a single rose.

Bible readings were given by Susan Setty, of Cincinnati, and by James Cronk.

The bride is a Registered Nurse at Cottage Hospital; the bridegroom, an assistant vice president in the Funds Management Department of Comerica Bank.

July vows exchanged

Linda D. Post and Joseph R. Pehrson were married Saturday, July 13, at Christ and St. Stephen's Church in New York City.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pehrson of Harvard Road. He graduated from Grosse Pointe University School and received his doctorate in musical composition from the University of Michigan.

The bride is a University of Minnesota graduate and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Post of Minneapolis.

The couple resides in Manhattan, N.Y., where he is a freelance composer and pianist and she is an actress and model.

New officers for symphony support group

At the annual meeting of the Grosse Pointe Symphony Women's Association, held in late May at the Country Club of Detroit, a check in the amount of $10,000 was presented to George Coury, retiring president of the Grosse Pointe Symphony Society.

As the Pointe Symphony Women's retiring president, Mary Evelyn Self, was unable to attend due to surgery, the presentation was made by Mrs. Bogdan Baynert, new president of the symphony women's support group.

Serving with Mary Baynert in the coming year will be Dorothea Bush and Marjorie Fahim as first and second vice-presidents, respectively, and Marilyn Cotichio and Sylvia Rutkowski as recording and corresponding secretaries, respectively.

Treasurer is Ellen Wiseman. Assistant treasurer is Jane Charvat. Directors are Constance Foreman, Margaret Stehr and Dorothy Sutter-Cook.

President Baynert entertained her new board at a luncheon in late June at her Woods home, to introduce them to Felix Resnick, the Pointe Symphony's conductor, and his wife.

Business bankruptcies decline

Business bankruptcies in Michigan declined by 8.9 percent in 1984 as compared with 1983, according to the U.S. Small Business Administration. Raymond L. Harshman, Michigan District Director of the SBA, said the bankruptcy decline reflects the increasingly favorable economic conditions in Michigan.

Harshman said the study showed that business bankruptcies declined in about half the states, with the most widespread declines in the Northeast, the Middle Atlantic states and the far West.

On the other hand, bankruptcies rose sharply in the Farm Belt, where farmers and farm-related businesses face declining prices and sales. Bankruptcies also rose in the Pacific Northwest, where the fishing and lumber industries have not shared fully in the nation's overall economic health.

The SBA study showed that there were 63,378 business bankruptcies in the country last year, compared with 61,612 in 1983 and a record 68,447 in 1982.

Retired telephone lineman Blackie Sorrels of Williams, Minn., celebrated his 95th birthday by climbing a 35-foot pole.

Wolverine Jass Band

Dixieland comes to War Memorial

Grosse Pointer Chet Bogan and his Wolverine Jass Band will return to the War Memorial, Wednesday, Aug. 7, to perform an outdoor Dixieland concert. There will be dancing under the stars, and tables and chairs will be available for those who want to picnic on the War Memorial green.

The grounds will open at 6 p.m. and the concert will be from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Admission is $6 per person if purchased in advance, or $6.50 at the door. In case of rain, the concert and dancing will move into the Fries Ballroom.

Bogan, a dentist by profession, has been a musician, composer and arranger for more than 30 years. He has created nearly 300 arrangements for the Wolverines. Reliance on arrangements is necessary for his band, whose members are skilled readers, but seldom gather for a rehearsal.

The group has played in dozens of jazz festivals, including the Montreux Festival in Detroit and Steamboat Days in Burlington. They are regular performers at Lido on the Lake in St. Clair Shores.

The carefully arranged and hard-driving dixieland style of the Wolverines will be highlighted by vocalist Dixie Belle (Elma Santa). The redhead, who has been likened to Teresa Brewer, adds a captivating presence to the band's performances.

On two occasions, at major festivals in Detroit, the Wolverines were last on the program and were apprehensive about following other non-traditional powerhouse bands. But they got standing ovations each time as they finished the programs with a musical flourish.

Two albums have been produced by the Wolverines, and dentist Bogan has shamelessly created the Bicuspid label, titling one of them "Painless Jazz." That album, released in early 1983, leads off with Dixie Belle singing "My Sweet Tooth Says I Wanna, But My Wisdom Tooth Says No."

To reserve tickets, send full payment to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236, or come to the Center in person.

Couple weds on West Coast

The University Church of Our Savior, Los Angeles, Calif., was the setting Saturday, June 22, for the wedding of Mara Beverlyanne Sherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherman, of Culver City, Calif., and Giacomo (Jack) Bommarito, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bommarito, of Lakepointe Avenue.

The Rev. Don Duplesis officiated at the 4 o'clock ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Amfac Hotel. The newlyweds vacationed in Cancun, Chiapas and Oaxaca, Mexico, and will make their home in Los Angeles.

The bride purchased her strapless, white wedding gown in Spain. It featured a sweetheart neckline and was worn with a cape, of chapel length, which was accented with floral lace appliques. Her tiara was fashioned of rhinestones, pearls and silk flowers. She carried two dozen long-stemmed white baby roses.

Joselyn Curtis-Levine was matron of honor. She wore a tea-length dress, dusty rose, which featured a sweetheart neckline, empire waist and puffed sleeves worn off the shoulder. Dressed identically were bridesmaids Maria Pelayo, Maria Cendan, Karen Bodziak, Peggy Sotelo and Teresa Antczak, and Carmen Linn, of the Park, a sister of the bridegroom. Each attendant carried a presentation bouquet of long-stemmed white roses with dusty pink baby's breath.

Mr. and Mrs.

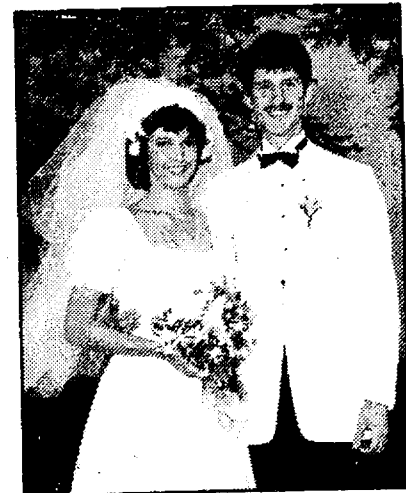

Giacomo Bommarito

Flowergirls were Marie Levine and Chelsie Bain.

Mr. Bommarito asked Don Palazzolo to serve as best man. Ravi Singh, Tom Tobin, Marty Buszek, John Sherman, brother of the bride, David E. Linn, brother-in-law of the groom, and David Raba seated the guests.

Pair exchange vows in June

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial Lakeside Terrace was the setting Saturday, June 29, for the wedding of Jami Sue Mackintosh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mackintosh of Shoreham Road, and Robert Francis Webb, son of

Mr. and Mrs.
Robert Webb

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas H. Webb of Fulton, Ky. The bridal party was ushered to the ceremony by a Scottish piper in full dress.

The 1:30 o'clock ceremony, at which the Rev. Ervin A. Brown presided, was followed by a reception at the Alger House of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, after which the newlyweds left for a wedding trip to Florida. They are at home in Lansing.

The bride wore a gown of white batiste and lace. The Empire bodice and puff sleeves had rows of Valenciennes lace inserted with pleated batiste. The full-length skirt was bordered with two rows of gathered batiste separated by lace and pleated fabric which flowed into a chapel-length train. The cap was of matching lace and rosettes with four tiers of fingertip veil flowing from it. She carried a white orchid and her grandmother's prayer book.

Nancy Olen, honor attendant, and bridesmaids Kathleen Aro, Kathleen Henkel and Teresa Allen, the bridegroom's sister, wore mauve plaid chintz sundresses and carried English bouquets of daisies, baby's-breath, pink carnations and ruby astromeria. Gretchen Sazama was the flower girl.

David Horton of Lansing acted as best man. Lynn Heezen, Steven Johnson, and Randall Sebring seated the guests.

The mother of the bride wore street-length mint-green silk accented with a gardenia. The bridegroom's mother chose light blue chiffon and wore a gardenia.

Jeanne and Carl Reichert stand among some of the handcrafted items they are making for the Christmas Fair at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

Their home is Christmas in August

By Johanna Gilbert

Carl Reichert, M.D., walks into his Farms house, heads for the basement and assumes a new identity: wood craftsman. He and his wife, Jeanne, have set a project for themselves — to furnish the Christmas Fair at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church with a potpourri of handcrafted wooden items.

A village of four painted buildings serves as a clothes rack; a kneeling angel with flaxen hair cheerfully holds a candle; old St. Nick, in the European tradition, waits expectantly for Christmas; while rolling past him is a train with the name "Andrew" painted in bright colors; a St. Nick's sled to delight any youngster's heart.

"I've always been mechanically inclined," said Reichert. "My father had a wrought iron business and crafted beautiful objects."

Reichert's interest started at school in Philadelphia where he had an outstanding woodshop teacher. It continued during military service at Fort Wayne. After work, the craft shop on the base beckoned and with supplies and ample tools, Reichert whiled away many hours.

Jeanne Reichert, also a Philadelphia native, became interested in art during school outings to the Pennsylvania State Museum. Her earliest projects were not on canvas, however, but on metal — demonstrating a skill in tool painting. This became an enjoyable sideline as she pursued her nursing career.

The whole family works together on projects as diverse as sand castles and painted shirts.

A favorite Reichert family project has been the wooden Christmas tree Advent calendar. Twenty-four days before Christmas, an ornament is hung on the carefully numbered tree. By Christmas day, the tree is festively decked with a colorful array of ornaments.

"It would be impossible to find all the ornaments in one spot," said Mrs. Reichert, "so we shop all the time for our Memorial Church project. We've bought ornaments in Las Vegas, Frankenmuth — wherever our travels take us."

In addition to working on their Christmas Fair projects, the Reicherts have also taken classes in stained glass. An accident started this hobby. A motorcycle was badly injured in an accident and to pay for his care, he offered to teach the art of stained glass-making to his doctor. The doctor thought this was a wonderful exchange of services and he took on the project, with his wife, of course.

The work has expanded. Needing a shade for a window, they framed one of their stained glass creations and fit it to the window.

Working together has been a strong tie throughout the Reicherts' married life; working on the Fair was included in their activities in 1971. The first year of Mrs. Reichert's participation, she hand-painted purses and did decoupage. Knowing her husband's skill in woodworking, she decided that potpourri — a can-do anything, will-try anything — would serve as a broader umbrella for their collective talents.

Reichert laughs when asked how it feels to be working for his wife.

"We're very democratic; Jeanne thinks of the ideas and if I like them, a sample is quickly turned out. If I don't like the idea, well, she just has to wait... and wait... and wait. She can't get along without me."

This fall, the Reicherts will take a trip to Europe to visit his grandfather's birthplace. But "between now and then," Mrs. Reichert said, "we'll be working on our projects and we'll be back in plenty of time for the Country Fair in November."

Elegant Eating

A selection of recipes from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol — and pennywise — collection of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth featuring, this week, dishes to top a roast.

The lowly roast becomes the piece de resistance when spread with one of these toppings; the leg of lamb takes on an epicurean status when accompanied with grape-mint conserve; or team your favorite selection with peanut butter for the favorite All American sandwich!

PEACH-PEAR JAM

A truly divine jam, especially on hot fluffy baking powder biscuits.

2 cups finely chopped ripe peaches, peeled (about 1 lb.)
2 cups finely chopped ripe pears, peeled (about 1 lb.)
4 tsp. finely shredded orange peel
1/4 cup orange juice
3 Tbsp. lemon juice
7 1/2 cups sugar
1 pkg. (6 oz.) liquid fruit pectin (2 foil packages)

In a 10-quart kettle, combine peaches, pears, orange peel, orange juice and lemon juice. Carefully stir in the sugar, bruising the fruit as little as possible. Bring the mixture to a full rolling boil; boil uncovered hard for one minute, stirring constantly. Remove from the heat and stir in the pectin. Quickly skim off the foam with a metal spoon. Ladle jam at once into hot, clean half-pint jars, leaving 1/4-inch head space. Wipe jar rims; adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath for 15 minutes (start timing when water returns to a boil). Makes 7 to 8 half pints.

GRAPE BUTTER

4 pounds ripe grapes
1 cup water
2 cups sugar

Wash and stem grapes. Add water and cook until tender. Rub through a sieve. Add sugar and cook until thick and clear. Pour into sterilized hot jars and seal. Makes three jars (8 ounces each).

SEEDLESS GRAPE MINT CONSERVE

1 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
1 cup seedless white grapes (not too ripe)
3 Tbsp. fresh mint

Wash grapes and put into preserving kettle with water and sugar. Cook until thick, then add three tablespoons washed and dried fresh mint that has been very finely chopped. Cook a few minutes longer. Place in jelly glasses and seal with paraffin before closing. Most delicious with lamb to replace mint jelly. *Do make sure that only the leaves and no stems are used.

APRICOT-PINEAPPLE JAM

1 pkg. (2 cups) dried apricots
1 can (20 oz.) crushed pineapple, undrained
1/2 lemon, thinly sliced and quartered
4 cups sugar

Rinse apricots. Simmer, covered, in 2 1/2 cups water until tender. Mash apricots; add pineapple, lemon and sugar. Simmer, stirring frequently, until thick and clear, about 45 minutes. Ladle into hot sterilized jars, seal. Makes about six 1/2-pint jars.

ORANGE, LEMON AND GRAPEFRUIT MARMALADE

6 oranges
1 grapefruit
2 lemons
1 1/4 lbs. sugar

Wash fruit, slice, remove seeds and put through food chopper. To a pint of fruit add a pint of water and let stand overnight. Boil one hour and let stand until the next morning. Measure mixture, bring to a boil, and add 1 1/4 pounds of sugar. Boil one hour, stirring frequently until of the right consistency. Ladle into sterilized jelly glasses and cover well with paraffin.

WINE JELLY

Especially delicious as a condiment with poultry and game birds. A real favorite of pheasant lovers!

1 1/2 cups medium dry port, red or white wine
1 cup currant or white grape jelly
3 whole cloves
1/2 stick of cinnamon
1 Tbsp. lemon juice
1 envelope unflavored gelatin softened in 1/4 cup water

Simmer wine, jelly, spices and lemon juice, uncovered, 10 minutes; add gelatin and heat, stirring constantly until the gelatin is thoroughly dissolved. Strain through cheese-cloth lined sieve and pour into hot sterile jelly glasses. Serve either chilled or at room temperature. Makes 2-3 cups.

Baseball strike?
Who cares?

Okay, so it's Aug. 1 and the Major League Baseball strike date is Aug. 6. Are we worried? Do we wonder what we'll have to do to fill all the empty time we're sure to have on our hands? Petrified that we won't be able to survive without baseball?

Nah. But just in case, I've come up with a few ways everybody can keep busy in case of a baseball strike...

1. According to published reports, the Detroit Tigers are the second-highest money making organization in baseball. So, if the players go on strike, the Tiger organization can open the stadium gates and let fans in to watch them count their money.

2. As for the players, some of the Grosse Pointe residents among them might see if they can get one of the many local Youth Corps jobs available this summer. Just to tide them over, you know?

3. Turn off the air conditioner, open the front door and look outside. While you've been glued to the tube watching balls and strikes, the sun has been shining, the grass growing and your neighbors wondering where the heck you are.

4. Get a VCR, rent tapes of the 1984 World Series and enjoy. It'll probably be better baseball than anything we've seen this year.

5. Marty Castillo, if you're not busy picketing at Michigan and Trumbull, come on down to the Grosse Pointe News and see the News' own Eve Marie Burcar. You're HER "Choice."

6. Have a baseball card party. Invite some of your friends weird enough to still have their baseball card collections lying around the house. The combination of good friends, good refreshments and hours of dickering over whether Carl Yazstremski is worth four Bill Freehans is almost as good as the prospect of four box seats to a Tiger-Yankee game. Maybe better.

7. Get up a challenge match between a combined Park 14-15-year-old Woods-Shores 13-year-old Babe Ruth All-Star team and the Tigers who live in Grosse Pointe: Kirk Gibson, Darrell Evans, Dan Petry, Marty Castillo, Dave Bergman, et al. Have it at North High. Sell tickets. Make money.

8. Tune into cable TV's ESPN, the total-sports station which is sure to carry games like Nashville vs. Podunk in Triple A baseball, or Tokyo vs. the Yokohama Mamas in Japanese League baseball. Don't know about you but that would sure cure my baseball fever.

9. Take all the baseball tickets unused during the duration of the strike glue them together and give Tiger Stadium the kind of dome we can be proud of... at least until it rains.

10. Start a new baseball league. Maybe we can call it the United States Baseball League.

11. Get them to open up Tiger stadium to the fans on Thursday nights, when Magnum P.I. is on. Every time Tom Selleck is shown wearing a Tiger cap, everybody in the stands has to take a swig of low-alcohol beer or a bit of the crummy nachos they sell there, whichever will make them sicker.

12. Start Red Wing training camp a month early.

13. Go watch the (yuk, yuk) Lions in their training camp.

14. Put seats around golf courses and make golf a spectator sport. It's got great possibilities. I can see the headlines now: "Lochmoor Club closes bleachers after fan rowdiness on the fairways"

15. The best idea of all — have the Players' Association and the owners' representative (who is probably a nephew of George Steinbrenner, or his dentists' cousin's son or something like that) conduct negotiations in the middle of each of the 26 major league stadiums. One, we'd have something to see when there's no baseball to watch. Two, we'd show kids how the wonderful world of sports really works. And three, the whole thing would probably be settled a lot faster.

Besides, can you just imagine the principals in this matter "slugging" it out in front of 60,000 screaming fans in Yankee Stadium? Or 50,000 baseball crazies in Detroit? I can hear it now, the chants from the stands as the two sides bicker back and forth about who is telling the truth about what in the negotiations: "Owners are broke!" "No, they're lying!" Might even get Bob Uecker to referee the whole thing.

These are just a few suggestions for folks who were worried about having enough to do if their summers are ruined by a baseball strike. I have many more interesting suggestions for the owners and players who have let the whole situation get into the sorry, greedy mess it is... but I can't print them in a family newspaper.

Sailors weather rough Mackinac

Nobody liked the weather for this year's Port Huron to Mackinac race, especially race officials, who called this year's sailing classic "the worst ever."

Local captains took a number of first, second and third place finishes in IOR class A, C and E, and PHRF classes A, F, I and J.

But local sailors are split in how much the wind affected their run this year, with one boat reported down, numerous de-mastings and a couple of mainsails split as well.

Bill Alcott of the Woods took his 36-foot Ericson "Tinkertoy" to a fifth place finish in his class and a 27th place overall in the PHRF run. Although the boat suffered no structural damage and the crew of seven came through without mishap, he added, "It wasn't the kind of weather I would have liked to race in."

All it took was "one bad tack and that was the ball game," he added, saying the competition in his class didn't allow for a single slip. On the crew of seven were his son, Bob, Jeff Webb and David Holme from the Pointe, with Holme a master helmsman.

The boat came through without structural damage in what turned out to be a great race, he added. "Everything went well for us; we just didn't win," he added.

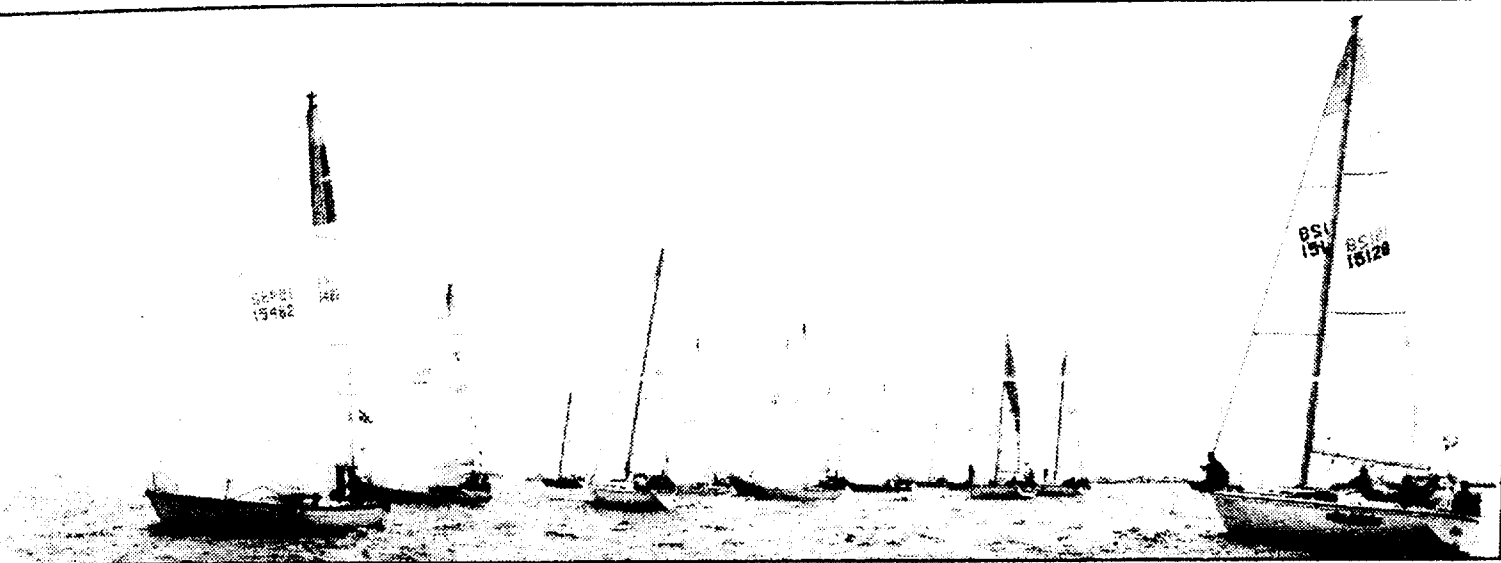

The weekend run to Mackinac has become a 61-year tradition and attracted more than 300 entrants this year, compared to 25 in the 1925 race. The race committee this year contains almost as many people to handle the logistics as the first race had captains handling boats. This year, there were 20 separate committees with about 150 people who helped with the details of the running of the race. The first race saw a committee of six.

Dr. Richard Lootens, making his 19th Mackinac race and sixth aboard his 35-foot Santana "Asylum," said he was doing well until Monday morning when the wind split his mainsail, forcing him to drop out in Rogers City. Lootens, with his daughter Ann, recently ran the first ever Huron Double Handed Challenge Yacht Race which ran from Sarnia, Canada to Rogers City. Ann also crewed with him to Mackinac, her eighth trip to the island.

"I've never seen weather this bad," Lootens said of the Mackinac race. The continuous wind over the lake lasted for such a period to make for some very rough running, he added. The mainsail was a Mylar-Kevlar blend, one which he didn't expect to split, Lootens said. The boat was only carrying an old cruising sail when the mainsail split, so Asylum dropped from the race.

Besides Ann, there are a number of local crew members, pretty much the same crew that has made the race for the past couple of years, Lootens said. The crew came through without mishap as well, he added.

If the main hadn't split, there's no doubt Asylum would have finished the race, Lootens said. The boat was running well in its class when the sail gave way, he added, saying "I'm just glad no one got hurt, and there was no structural damage to the boat."

This was the sight at the start of what race officials are calling the worst Port-Huron-to-Mackinac race ever. Of the 56 local boats entered, only 44 finished the race.

Earlier this month, the Lootens took the double-handed challenge sponsored by the Great Lakes Single Handed Sailing Club, covering a course of some 200 miles running from Sarnia to a mark at Goderich, Canada and then to the finish in Rogers City. The 43 hours the Lootens spent racing included times of little wind, a stormy Saturday night with high winds and five-foot seas and Sunday night's heavy rain, lighting and thunder. That could have been a harbinger for the Mackinac race.

There were approximately 60 entrants for the double-handed race, which was divided into nine classes based on boat size. The Sunday of the race was Ann's 21st birthday.

One boat that sustained more than a little structural damage was Tom Lowry's Tomahawk, a 35-foot C & C that went down off Cove Island in 200 feet of water. The crew spent about a half hour in the water before being rescued by Charles Bayer's "Old Bear" out of Bayview Yacht Club.

Lowry's crew included J. Patrick Wright, author of "On a Clear Day, You can See General Motors," who chronicled the boat's sinking in the Sunday, July 28, Comment section of the Detroit Free Press.

Herbert Mainwaring, also of the Shores, said he and his crew aboard the 31-foot Chance "Easterly" came through the race unscathed. He said the weather wasn't that bad, although the boat did run through the full extent of the high winds and rough seas.

Easterly took second in her class this year, adding to a string of 11 flags that include two first and a smattering of second- and third-place finishes, Mainwaring said.

The crew of seven on the Easterly has a combined 100 years of Mackinac experience, Mainwaring said. They handled the boat well without gear trouble or personal injury, he said, adding Easterly runs well in bad weather.

The crew included Phillip Bertelsen of the Woods, Maynard Ruppe, Jo Dan Hartingh and Gene Bertelsen. Gene Bertelsen with wife Jeanne recently captured the Cal 20 championship for Lake St. Clair, in races sponsored out of Crescent Sail Yacht Club.

Robert Beck of the Farms brought his 46-foot Pirana to a 17th place finish in IOR class A and a 60th place finish overall despite a little seasickness. The crew ended up a little tired and cold after the 44-hour run, but that could have been because the crew had prepared hard for the race, leaving it a little overtired at the start, Beck added.

More than 50 local boats took part in the race and 12 of them were unable to finish the 259-nautical mile race, taking refuge in ports along the Huron coast.

Since the first race, the course has changed a number of times, using the Cove Island lighted buoy as a mark for the course in the mid-30s.

He's looking for a boat for some family sailing and fun

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Hey, anybody out there have a used sailboat lying around the back yard they're looking to unload?

William Horner's interested; so interested, in fact, that he's run a classified advertisement in this paper for the past two weeks under Articles Wanted. The ad reads "Free sailboat wanted for father and daughter project. 882-2737."

Horner, who with his wife and two children lives on Buckingham in Detroit, is a grinder for a tool and die company and has spent the last couple of years on disability because of a ruptured disk in his back. One operation has been done on it so far and a second may be coming up this summer, he says.

The father-and-daughter project is as much a family project, he adds. "I'm looking for a yacht," he adds, saying he's only looking for a sailboat that he and his daughter, Christine, can use every so often to learn more about sailing and to bring the family a little closer together. His wife isn't a water enthusiast, but son John McLean is a recruiter for the U.S. Coast Guard, working out of the Federal Building downtown, Horner adds.

"I'm looking for a sailboat that my daughter can have fun on... something the family can learn about sailing on," Horner says. "This is going to be something that will bring our whole family closer together."

The idea came to him after he was looking to buy a boat through the classified ads, Horner says. He checked out one for a catamaran for sale, but the seller wanted $200 and was looking to get the boat sold right away, since there was some trouble over storage of the cat in the back yard.

The price tag was a little much to swing on a fixed income, so he had to pass up the boat, Horner says. It did start him thinking, though. He remembered that some time ago, a woman in California ran an ad asking for a free Ferrari as a graduation present. A car dealer saw it and thought it might be a good stunt, and so turned over the keys to a $45,000 car to the woman.

He's not looking for anything elaborate, Horner adds. A sailboat that may be in disrepair or that a family has moved up from will be fine with him.

"At least I can try. I can't afford one," he adds. "If it needs work, that's fine."

He got hooked on sailing about five years ago, when the family went out on a rented boat at Stoney Creek Metropark, Horner says. Right now, the family takes the small boat out of Metropolitan Beach, he adds.

Park wins state tourney

The Park's Babe Ruth All-Stars staged a dramatic 12-run, come-from-behind rally in the seventh inning to defeat Dowagiac, 14-9, last Wednesday, and capture the State Babe Ruth championship.

The victory qualifies the Park for the seven-state regional tournament which opens Saturday at Owensboro, Kentucky. The local team faces Zanesville, the Ohio champion at 4 p.m., in its first round game at the Kentucky Wesleyan College stadium. The tournament continues through Wednesday.

The local aggregation could muster only one run on five hits in the first five innings, leaving eight men on base, and trailed 9-2 going into the final stanza.

Doug Lucas opened the seventh by drawing a walk in an inning that saw 16 Park batters come to the plate. Marcus Wysocki followed with a single, and Matt Montagne reached first on an error, loading the bases.

Jamie Cimini walked to force in Lucas. After Dave Salkowski popped to short, relief pitcher Nick Saros reached second on an over-throw, scoring Wysocki and Montagne.

Bryan Jones then doubled to score Cimini and Saros, and Mike Paull walked to once again load the bases. Marty Saad reached first on another infield miscue, scoring Saros. Lucas, up for the second time, singled to score Jones and make the score 9-8.

After Wysocki popped to second for the second out, Montagne hit a slow roller to third, beating it out by a step and scoring Paull with the tying run. A wild pitch followed and Saad came in with the go-ahead run.

Three more hits and another error followed to produce four more runs, but it wasn't needed, as Saros, who had relieved starter Wysocki in the third, set down the final three batters and the Park emerged with its first-ever state championship.

To reach the final round, the Park had to win two games Tuesday, July 23. Saros went the first five innings, giving up four hits and one run, as Durand was defeated, 10-3. Ferit Nazarko went the final two frames. Cimini's four-for-four was the top offensive effort of the game.

In the day's nightcap, unbeaten Dowagiac was handed its first setback, 6-1, forcing Wednesday's showdown. Lucas handled the mound chores, yielding five hits and one unearned run, while fanning four. Lucas, Saad, and Salkowski notched two hits apiece for the winners.

CSYC hosts Cal 20 invitational races

Crescent Sail Yacht Club hosted the 19th Annual Cal 20 Lake St. Clair Championship Saturday and Sunday, July 13 and 14, with 16 boats competing. Winds were southwest for Saturday's four races and Sunday's pair of races.

First place for the series wasn't decided until the last weather leg of the sixth race when Sirius staved off a late challenge by Lorax. The two boats tacked more than 30 times on the final beat.

Sirius' victory was the seventh Main and Job championship for Gene and Jeanne Bertelsen from the Woods since they joined the fleet in 1977.

Lorax took second overall and Park resident George Peterson's Spectrum took third.

The Saturday races were followed by a steak roast at Crescent Sail. Jack Staats of the Farms, Dick and Carol Green of the Park and Walt and Vi Zimmerman served as race committee.

Acid rain

Acid rain readings taken in Mount Clemens showed acid levels 33 times greater than that of unpolluted rain water, according to data collected by the Michigan Acid Rain Watch.

Rain falling on Mount Clemens the week of July 15 to 21 had a pH reading of 4.08. Unpolluted rain water has a pH of 5.6. The pH scale is used to measure acidity.

While no specific research has yet been done to study the effects of acid rain in southeastern Michigan, it is known that acid rain in other parts of the country and the world has sterilized lakes and killed trees.

The Michigan Acid Rain Watch is funded by a grant from the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation, according to Steve Forgacs of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs. The data is collected weekly at 12 stations throughout the state, with the results sent by mail for tabulation in weekly and monthly charts, he added.

Acidification charts are unavailable for Lake St. Clair, Forgacs said, adding the Great Lakes are in luck when it comes to acid rain because of the amount of alkaline in the surrounding soil. Alkaline materials neutralize acids.

Farms-City All-Stars end season in playoffs

Farms-City Little League All Stars, under the direction of Jim Bellanca and Bob Johnston, placed fifth in the district play-offs played at Harper Woods. The spirited and aggressive players gave 100 percent effort in each and every game.

Every player on the team played in the tournament and, except for injuries, every player played in every game.

All teams in the Farms-City League were represented on the All Star team; the players including Jimmy Bellanca, Mike Bell, Peter Bourke, Jim Bunn, Brian Downs, Nick Johnston, Robert Khoenle, Katie Kolp, Billy Liens, Tim Malloy, Tim Miller, Mike Oliver, David Reed and Dave Vier.

The All Stars opened up the play-offs against L'Anse Creuse Americans losing a heartbreaking 5-4 decision. Farms-City fell inches short of going ahead in the sixth inning when Johnston was robbed of a game-winning home run by the L'Anse Creuse right fielder who made a running catch only inches before Johnston's ball would have cleared the right field fence. Liens led the All Stars with two hits. Downs and Malloy pitched for the All Stars, striking out six and giving up only three base-on balls during the game.

On Monday, July 22, the All Stars started their second game on the play-offs against Hamtramck. The game was delayed at the top of the fifth inning because of darkness and continued on Tuesday afternoon and played until completion.

At the time the game was called, the score was 13-13 and was dominated by strong hitting from both teams.

Farms-City jumped off to a 9-0 lead in the first half of the first inning, but as Coach Bellanca said, "When you see these kids from Hamtramck hit, you'll know nine runs may not be enough." Hamtramck hit two grand slam home runs during the game which was finally won by Farms-City in the sixth inning with hits by Malloy, Downs, Johnston and Oliver, scoring four runs and icing the 19-18 victory for Grosse Pointe.

After a two-hour break after completion of the Hamtramck game, Farms-City took on their regular season rivals from Grosse Pointe Park. Malloy pitched for Farms-City in this Farms-City 3-2 victory. Oliver, Liens, Kolp, Downs, Reed and Johnston led the way in the hitting department. Johnston's one-run single in the bottom of the sixth drove home Downs for the winning run. Malloy struck out six and walked only two, turning in an excellent performance on the mound.

Farms-City had the opportunity Wednesday, July 24th, to revenge its Game 1 loss to the L'Anse Creuse Americans and took full advantage of the opportunity in pounding out a 13-8 victory. Along the way, Farms-City collected 15 hits, including a long two-run homer by Liens in the second inning and a grand slam home run over the center field fence by Kolp in the third inning, capping the 10-run explosion.

Brian Downs and Robert Khoenle pitched extremely well for Farms-City, striking out 11 L'Anse Creuse batters while only walking five and giving up eight hits. Vier had three hits for Farms-City as did Liens. Downs and Khoenle each added two hits. Oliver, Malloy and Bunn also hit well for Farms-City.

On Thursday, the Farms-City All Stars ran into an excellent fielding and hitting team from Clinton Valley and were finally eliminated from the tournament, 9-3.

Clinton Valley's nine runs came in the first two innings, with Oliver coming in relief to shut down Clinton Valley with two hits and no runs over the last four innings. Oliver also had two hits, including a double, and Kolp had two singles. Khoenle, Vier and Downs added hits for Farms-City.

The showing by this 12-year old All Star team capped another year of baseball in the community. More than 280 children participated in three leagues enjoying the national pastime.

Park mayor wins CCD tournament

Palmer Heenan, the 63-year-old mayor of Grosse Pointe Park, has just won his third golf championship at the Country Club of Detroit, defeating Kevin McMahon two-up in the 36-hole final match.

Heenan first won the Country Club title 39 years ago back in 1946 when he was just 24 years old. He added his second title in 1963 and his third this year, defeating three under-30 golfers enroute to the championship.

The mayor, who is running for re-election in next Tuesday's primary, attributed his victory to good legs from plenty of walking, good putting and getting out of sand traps with a minimum of trouble. Heenan has been playing golf since he was nine years old.

Local swim team sends 52 to state championships today

Grosse Pointe Swim Club swimmers have completed their final weeks of training for the U.S. Swimming age group long course championships that start today at the Southfield Civic Center in Southfield.

Of the 68 long-course swimmers in the summer program, 46 are entered in individual events and an additional six round out the club's relay teams, making 52 swimmers for the four-day event that runs through Sunday.

"This is the largest contingent of Grosse Pointe Swim Club swimmers we've ever sent to the state championships," coach Scott Teeters said. "We have an excellent chance of winning. In the past, our best finish was fifth place."

The three strongest threats to GPSC are the Livonia Spartans, the 1984 champion Royal Oak Penguins and the Birmingham-Bloomfield Atlantis swim club. Last year, GPSC placed sixth at the four-day statewide competition.

Two recent meets drew a large percentage of Grosse Pointe swimmers who turned in outstanding performances. At the Ann Arbor Senior Meet July 13 and 14, two Grosse Pointers made Junior National times, qualifying them for the national competition in Tuscaloosa, Ala. in mid-August.

Ron Howard, 15, broke two state records — boys' 100 meter back (1:01.8) and 200 meter back (2:10.8). Sandy Smith made the cutoff times for the girls' 100 meter breaststroke with a 1:18.5, breaking her own state record set last year. She also went 2:49.0 in the girls 200 meter breaststroke, also a Junior National cut.

At the same Ann Arbor meet, Katie Young, 14, took second place in the 50 meter free. She missed first by .04 second, while touching out the 18-year-old state Class A champion.

Carrie Champion, who swims for Bradley University during the winter, took fourth in the girls 100 meter butterfly and 200 meter butterfly.

Ron Yokubison, 14, won fourth in the boys 200 meter butterfly with a time of 2:20.1. Heidi Mader, 13, took fourth in the girls 100 meter back with a 1:13.9 Tracy Cunningham and Kathy Kish placed in the top eight in both the 800 meter and 1500 meter freestyle races.

At the McDonald's-Midland Junior Olympic Swim Festival July 19 to 21 in Midland, GPSC placed second overall out of 43 participating swim clubs. The Livonia Spartans edged out the local swimmer by 68 points to take the top spot.

According to Coach Teeters, 50 swimmers attended the three-day Midland meet, and, of those, 34 placed in the top eight in their events.

Bill Thompson earned a trophy for the 13-14 boys second high point scorer, as did Leah Puidokas for the 11-12 girls high point scorer. Greg Cooksey set a meet record in the Boys' 200 meter back with a time of 2:27.2.

Smith took firsts in girls breaststroke events and Howard took first in boys back events. In the girls 11-12 400 meter free, Karen Ellis, Leah Puidokas and Wendy Mader scored in the top eight. Grosse Pointe's 13-14-year-old boys scored three places in every event.

Ted Stedem, 12, took firsts in Boys' 11-12 50 meter breast, 50 meter back, 100 meter breast, and 100 meter back. Nancy Vettorello was first in girls 15-18 50 meter free. Katie Young won Girls' 13-14 50 meter free, Zak Rogalski won boys 15-18 200-meter breast, Bill Thompson won boys 13-14 meter back, and Ian Thompson won boys 100 meter butterfly.

The club won four of the five freestyle relays with outstanding performances by Erika Teige, Yokubison, Kish, Wendy Cunningham, Laura Verona, Helen Mikelic, and Tracy Cunningham.

Qualifying with AA times and going on to the state championship meet for the first time are: Ann Llewellyn, Sue Llewellyn, Mike Owens, Cammy Mader, and Paul Reaser.

The club's strength lies with its 11-12 girls and 11-12 boys, according to Coach Teeters. "Plus — 10 of our 13-14 boys have qualified," he said. "Bill Thompson, Ian Thompson, Ron Yokubison, Greg Cooksey, Cameron Maynard, and Jim Singelyn will be strong competitors. Ted Stedem is strong in the 11-12 age group."

"It's been a good summer. The whole team has trained with a common purpose — the state championships," he added.

The prelims for the Long Course Championships in Southfield this weekend begin at 8:30 a.m. each day. Finals competition begins at 6:30 p.m. each day. "This is the first time in five years we'll have the full team gearing up and competing together," said Teeters. "It should be an exciting weekend because the Grosse Pointe Swim Club has an excellent chance of winning first place."

"Bill Thompson, Ian Thompson, Ron Yokubison, Greg Cooksey, Cameron Maynard, and Jim Singelyn will be strong competitors. Ted Stedem is strong in the 11-12 age group."

"It's been a good summer. The whole team has trained with a common purpose — the state championships," he added.

The prelims for the Long Course Championships in Southfield this weekend begin at 8:30 a.m. each day. Finals competition begins at 6:30 p.m. each day. "This is the first time in five years we'll have the full team gearing up and competing together," said Teeters. "It should be an exciting weekend because the Grosse Pointe Swim Club has an excellent chance of winning first place."

Tri-county biking maps available

A series of maps that show and rate roads by their suitability for bicycling in Oakland, Macomb, and Wayne Counties is now available through the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

For Oakland County the maps cover general Oakland County with more detailed maps covering Troy, Commerce and West Bloomfield; Southfield, Royal Oak, Novi and Farmington Hills; and Pontiac, Avon, White Lake and Waterford.

For Macomb County there is a general Macomb County map with more detailed maps covering Shelby and Sterling Heights; and Warren, St. Clair Shores, Clinton and Harrison.

For Wayne County there is a map covering general Wayne County with more detailed maps covering Detroit, Downriver, and Southern Wayne; Northwestern and Western Wayne; and Detroit — Northeast and East areas.

Designed to provide useful information, the maps are for use by anyone who travels by bicycle in the tri-county area. Because most bicyclists ride on residential streets, the base maps for urban and suburban areas were selected to show those streets, in addition to the main roads.

Those who travel several miles at a time by bicycle frequently make use of collector streets and main roads, but because conditions vary considerably on such roads, those have been rated using a scheme which is designed to be meaningful to bicyclists.

The ratings are derived from data on measured and estimated traffic volumes, roadway width, and traffic speed maintained in a SEMCOG computer file. Ratings of paved through roads not in the computer file were estimated by bicyclists of the Greater Detroit Bicycle League, GDBL.

Other features of the maps include listings of area bike shops and clubs, as well as bicycling laws and tips. The maps can be obtained at no charge by picking them up in person at SEMCOG's offices, 800 Book Building, 1249 Washington Boulevard, Detroit, 48226. Or send $1 — c/o "Bike Maps" to the same address. Specify the maps and quantity when making a written request.

Hockey clinics start this month

The East Suburban Hockey Schools will hold their power skating and hockey school clinics at the Grosse Pointe Community Rink from Monday, Aug. 12, through Friday, Aug. 23.

Jeff Johnston, assistant coach at Michigan Tech, is the school director. He is being assisted by Wayne Presley who played Jr. "A" hockey with Sault Ste Marie last year and has been drafted by the Chicago Blackhawks. Joining them will be other local players who have combined hockey and education at the university level.

The E.S.H.S.'s curriculum and staff provide an opportunity to improve hockey skills before the regular hockey season begins. Those interested in exposure to more advanced and scientific instructional techniques can call 885-4100.

Local film maker shoots 16mm short, 'Singing Bird'

By Michael McConnell
Michelle Poulik of the Woods stood next to the sound man as partner, Kimberly Conely, checked the script they wrote. The assistant director asked for quiet on the set as the actors positioned themselves in front of the camera. Action.

Poulik and Conely, both 29, are making their first movie "Singing Birds" a story of Lithuanian immigrants in Detroit during the Prohibition era.

"The story is basically about two Lithuanian families in 1928," Poulik said, "It's a period piece." Currently being shot on locations around Detroit, the movie will use old sets, cars, costumes, music and hairstyles.

"We want the style of that period," said Conely. To get the particular aura of the period, some earlier filmmaking techniques, such as prime lensing are being used.

Cameraman Jim Viola said there will not be any zoom lens shots. "The prime lens gives you a fixed focal length," he said, "We're shooting this in black and white with low lighting to give the feel of the period."

Both Conely and Poulik work full time as production assistants in order to finance the filming they do on weekends. The cast and crew are local professionals, who have donated their time to the film. Most of the equipment and props have also been donated.

The film is being shot in both English and Lithuanian to help add to the authenticity of the scenes. And the lead is played by Asta Jurgutis, an attractive young actress-singer of Lithuanian descent.

Conely and Poulik, both of Lithuanian heritage, said they started writing the script last January.

And some of the characters are based loosely on ancestors of Conely's. "It's the story of two Lithuanian families who are both bootleggers, but on different social and economic levels," she said.

The tension for the romantic interest is provided by Peter Tocco who plays Danielius in the film.

"I play the part of a romancer, a playboy type," he said, "Asta Jurgutis plays Jura, the girl I'm after."

"There are 13 principals in the film. It was tricky at first trying to learn the Lithuanian dialogue, but Asta helped me out. Everybody has been very professional and it has been a terrific experience for me."

Tocco said he is out of college and works as a musician on cruise days. Saturdays usually start at 8 a.m.

"We were here last night until 10," she said, "building this set for the scene in the cellar of the house."

The set for the cellar was small

"We will probably show the film at national and international film festivals," said Conely.

Besides her film work, Poulik is a painter and sculptor with a bachelor's degree in printing from ships and sometimes Las Vegas. As with many of the people involved in the production of "Singing Birds," Tocco is willing to work for free in exchange for the experience.

Poulik, who is co-scripter/producer and production designer, said that their weekend shooting schedule often consists of 13-hour and dark. There was a door to the right and shelves laden with bottles of bootleg alcohol.

The building where they now work is set off of Gratiot on a short brick road just outside downtown Detroit.

The scene they were shooting July 13 had the Danielius character exchanging Lithuanian dialogue with Jura after she enters with a tray. Danielius, who is obviously on the make, wheedles a kiss out of Jura before she rushes out of the scene. Danielius calls her back. "Don't you want to hear the good news?" he asks in English. Finally, he sits down, exasperated, his chin in his hand.

The scene, which ran no more than a minute, was shot over and over. In between takes, people fussed with the actors' makeup, checked the lighting and adjusted the camera angles. Just before they would run the scene again, a man would come in and add smoke to the set. "More smoke," Conely would request, who is the film's director.

Later, Conely explained that she was using the smoke to add a dusty and softer tone to the scene. "We use either a blue/gray tone or a sepia tone, which is softer," she said, "It all depends on the emotional context of the scene we're shooting."

They finished with the scene just before lunch. "Very nice," said Conely to the actors.

The cast and crew relaxed and ate a buffet style lunch of sloppy joes, macaroni salad, crackers, cheese, chocolate cake and iced tea. Poulik wandered around talking to the crew, offering her bottle of Excedrin to any who might need it.

Poulik said "Singing Birds" will be a 16mm short film when they finish. She and Conely hope to complete their post-production work by November.

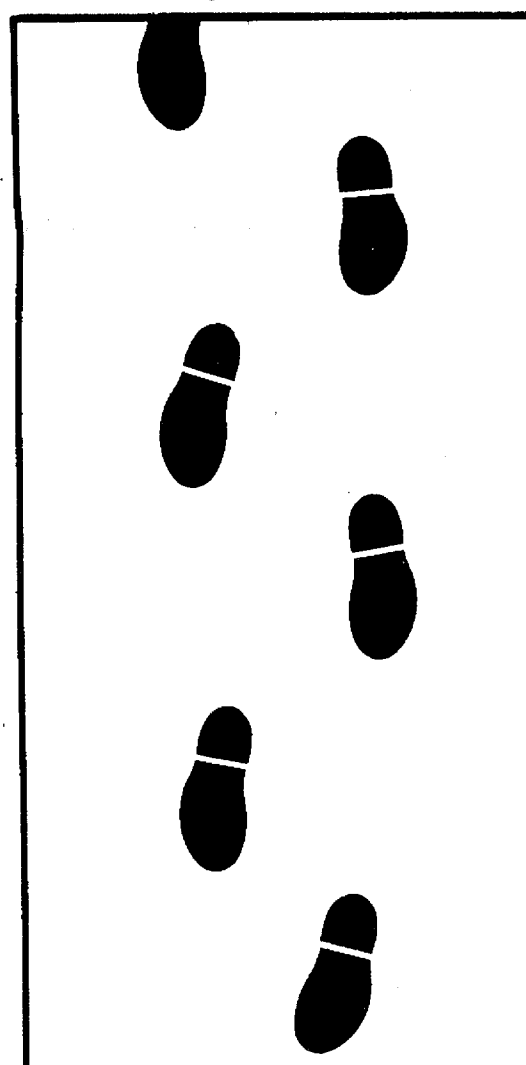

Wayne State University. She recently did wardrobe, props and makeup for "Stryker's War," a locally produced feature.

Conely, who holds a master's degree in film, was a location manager for the Detroit shooting of "Beverly Hills Cop." Her other credits include a segment of "Ripley's Believe It or Not" and commercials for the Detroit Free Press, Channel 2, Channel 7, WMJC-FM and Farmer Jack supermarkets.

After working through the weekend, Conely and Poulik finished up their work on the set Sunday afternoon. Most of the cast and crew were visibly tired as they began drifting out of the building into the bright afternoon sunlight. Some of the crew were heading over to Greektown for a late lunch. And until the following weekend at least, it was over.

Mike Quatro ready to go for the gold — again

By Chris Dellas

There is a fable school children learn about the struggle of a tiny locomotive trying to make its way up a very steep hill.

In the elusive entertainment industry called rock 'n' roll, Grosse Pointe Michael Quatro personifies that little engine that could.

The achievements and accolades he has received in his 30-year career are endless. A child prodigy, Quatro was playing classical piano at places such as the War Memorial when he was 7. By age 12, he was a regular on the Lawrence Welk show.

He has acted in four films, appeared on the Tonight Show, the Ed Sullivan Show, the Mike Douglas Show and more than 380 regional and syndicated television shows in the United States and Canada. He has toured in more than a dozen countries and released eight rock albums.

In the late '60s and early '70s, Quatro was in the forefront of the classical rock genre along with groups like Yes and Emerson, Lake and Palmer. Those bands blended classical arrangements with pop sensibilities to create a new trend and hit records.

While Yes and E.L.P. produced

several gold records in the U.S. market, none of Quatro's eight albums ever achieved that coveted status here. (They did, however, in countries like Canada and Italy, where the volume of records needed to be sold to attain gold status is much lower.)

It's been almost two decades since the beginning of his recording career and Quatro, now 42, is once again saying, "I know I can, I know I can..." and taking another shot at the big time.

"The people behind this album have chosen to take very deliberate steps to insure that the marketing of this product is going to be proper," says Quatro.

"In some of my previous eight albums, everything was not done right, in virtue of the fact that I am not sitting here with a gold record today."

Quatro's latest attempt at success is an album tentatively titled "Dreams Of Lust" and it is like his previous work in that it has some classical leanings (although not nearly as obvious), but is unlike his past work in that it transcends the technology of the old albums with the aid of an incredible new computerized keyboard/synthesizer known as the Kurzweil.

The ultra-modern system enables the player to sound like a heavy metal rock band at one moment and, with the flip of a switch, sound like the Boston Philharmonic the next.

Another asset that Quatro has on his side this time is his new singing partner, a striking 31-year-old German blonde named Claudia Hoffman.

Hoffman is responsible for 35 percent of the songwriting and 50 percent of the business end. And upon hearing the finished tapes, we discovered that her voice is truly as amazing as Quatro boasts.

"She is, in a word, the most talented partner I've ever worked with and I've never really had a real partner before," said Quatro, referring to past female singers who served as both back-up vocalists and focal highlights of his live shows and album covers.

Quatro refers to Hoffman as a "budding superstar" and admits that the prospects of a gold record seem almost anti-climactic after the months of hard work they have shared in the preparation of the album.

"We're both just literally frazzled. This business is 24 hours. It never quits. We get a call at 11:30 on Saturday night concerning distribution or some legal matter... we have no time to unwind," Quatro says, becoming increasingly animated.

Quatro says this album also differs from his past work in that every track has been scrutinized to the extreme and gone over with a fine-toothed comb.

"Claudia will not allow me to do anything but my best," says Quatro. "She's got two ways to keep me in check. She's got an early warning system and a late-warning skillet system."

"The early warning system is a small iron skillet, the late warning one is about this big," and he holds up his hands like a sportsman describing the one that got away, "and the final threat is to set my hair on fire."

Quatro's overt enthusiasm and aggressive communication skills have got him in fragile situations in the past, but he seems to sincerely want to succeed without offending anyone this time around. He admits it takes a concerted effort to keep his anxious personality in check.

"I move at the speed of light. Claudia calls me Spazmo," Quatro says. "I am constantly running, running, running."

"But my sponsors want me to walk," he adds.

"I have an image in this community as being a little crazed. I'm not really," he says. "I have the same feelings everyone else has."

Quatro cites the fact that he has recently become active in local organized sports, both playing and coaching football and hockey teams.

I've known Mike Quatro for several years and it seemed during our conversation that he's sincere in his efforts to legitimately earn a gold album.

And with the aid of Claudia Hoffman's capable vocal ability, the technology of the Kurzweil, and a little luck, he might just do it.

'Cocoon' is more than a movie, it's an experience to enjoy

By Marian Trainor

Long ago and far away, an English writer, J.M. Barrie, wrote a classic called "Peter Pan." It was a delightful tale of children who were transported to a wonderful never-never land where they would never have to grow up.

Not knowing the trials and tribulations of adulthood, they chose to return home, where in the course of natural events, they would leave behind the joys of childhood and take on the responsibilities of the grown-up world. That story with its gossamer magic has lived through generations of readers, movie fans and theater-goers.

In "Cocoon," Ron Howard, who gave us that delightful mermaid comedy, "Splash," does in reverse, for a group of senior citizens living in the Sunny Shores retirement community in St. Petersburg, Fla. that same area where Ponce de Leon came searching for the Fountain of Youth, what Barrie did for his children in Peter Pan.

The children in Peter Pan made a blind choice when they chose to leave never-never land. The group in "Cocoon" knows what they are doing. They have tried living in the retirement world. They don't like it there and they choose to leave. Although they have all the niceties of retirement, attractive living quarters on the ocean, the companionship of peers, planned recreation, they still find life monotonous and boring.

Three old-timers, Hume Cronyn, Wilford Brimley and Don Ameche, three adventurous spirits, put a little novelty in their lives when they trek across the fields to sneak into an abandoned mansion for a swim in the pool.

On one particular day, they find barnacled pods — cocoons — at the bottom of the pool. When they emerge from that swim, they find themselves as lively and full of spirit as college boys on the prowl during Easter break.

The women in their lives, Jessica Tandy, Maureen Stapleton and Gwen Verdon, are pleasantly surprised by the renewed interest in them by the "boys." They all have a wonderful time reliving the glorious days of their youth.

Meantime, out at sea, four strangers led by Brian Dennehy are lifting more of the strange pods off the ocean floor. Steve Guttenberg, the boat's captain is puzzled by the operation. He is also smitten by Tahnee Welch (Raquel's daughter). He is surprised and not a little terrified to discover that his love object and her friends are aliens from outer space who have returned to earth to transport their friends in the cocoons back to outer space. They are kindly aliens, cast in the same mold as E.T. who won so many hearts with his benign presence and wisdom.

"Cocoon" is a science-fiction comedy about old age and impending death and the opportunity of reshuffling the deck that nature has dealt.

It is a wondrous mixture of special effects, hilarious warm human incidents as the characters relive the days of their youth, poignant moments that reveal the special bonds of love that exist between those who have spent their lives together, and a gentle reminder that while youth is fleeting and death inevitable, eternal life lies beyond.

There is so much fun in this movie as the characters act out their suppressed desires and experience all the joys of their youth once again. There is so much to admire in the superb acting of the outstanding performers who know so well how to handle both comedy and pathos. There is dazzle and wonder in the special effects.

"Cocoon" is more than a movie. It is an experience to enjoy, to recall with a chuckle and to ponder its wisdom in the quiet, reflective moments of our lives.

Buying, selling a car?

A new pamphlet to help individuals who buy or sell vehicles is now off the press, according to Secretary of State Richard Austin.

"What You Must Do When You Buy or Sell a Vehicle in a Private Sale" tells both buyers and sellers how to fill out forms and what to do to transfer vehicle ownership.

Austin said the pamphlet was developed both to help individuals who buy and sell vehicles privately and save time answering questions in branch offices.

The pamphlets will be available in all branch offices and will be mailed with individual vehicles titles.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen.

Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. M.B.

THE BEST JAGUAR EVER BUILT:
 Breeding tells. While trends in automotive design come and go, the 1985 Jaguar XJ6 remains defiantly true to its heritage:
 lithe, graceful and utterly distinctive.

It is the nature of automotive styling to be transient. And it is the nature of Jaguar to create cars of classic grace: cars whose beauty endures long after the fads are forgotten.
 Such a car is the Series III. Combining beauty of form with quick response and notable luxury, the XJ6 rewards its driver in many ways.
 Come in and experience the pleasures that have been bred into the best Jaguar ever built.
