They made my day

Just one more story about the Souper Summer Celebration at the Premier Center last month. Something out of the ordinary occurred there and I think it bears re-telling.

I was shooting for our paper when a young woman walked up and handed me a piece of paper. "This is for you, Tom," she said. "I've meant to send it to you for the past seven years. At last it's off my conscience."

I looked and was amazed to discover a check for $50. I stared at the woman and it suddenly came back to me. I had photographed her wedding in 1978 and after placing her order, she and her husband had decided to purchase the negatives as well.

They'd lived on Outer Drive at the time. After I'd dropped off the negatives, she explained they didn't have the funds at the time and would I mind deferring payment for awhile?

"The last thing I remember you saying as you walked away was to pay when I become rich and famous, but we still owed you the money. I read you in the Grosse Pointe News and every time I see your name, it reminds me of our debt. Thanks for being so patient."

I was amazed, to say the least. I tried returning the check, but she wouldn't hear of it.

The lady and her husband have since moved to Grosse Pointe. I won't tell you where they live, except to say it's in the Park. I'd also like to say that it's so nice to meet people with a sense of obligation and integrity. They should be proud.

Hope for the hungry

Detroit auto dealer Joe Ricci, who lives in the Pointe, recently announced his dealership would join the Stroh Brewery, Johnson Products, and the Sony Corp. as corporate sponsors of the Detroit/USA African food benefit.

The bash will be held Friday evening, Aug. 23, at the Westin Hotel and sponsors hope to raise $250,000 to help fight hunger in Africa. Notables such as Harry Belafonte, Jesse Jackson, and possibly Jayne Kennedy, Calvin Peete and Muhammed Ali will be on hand during the event.

Tickets for the event are $100 per person and can be purchased by calling Barbara Bradley of Bradley and Associates at 259-7650, Roger McNeil of Telemarketing at 393-7250 or Joe Ricci Jeep Renault at 885-8000.

Local stars on base

In the right spot at the right time were Steven Chevalier and Michael McHugh, both 9, who helped film a television commercial for the United Foundation at North High School recently.

The action took place on North's baseball diamond and involved movie and television actor Joseph Campanella, who was making a pitch for the fund.

The commercial, which will air this coming fall, shows Michael playing first base, and Steven on second, during a pretend baseball game.

The two were part of a group of about 18 nine-year-olds needed as extras.

Both boys attend Ferry School, where they can be found signing autographs this coming September.

Dutch elm disease losses up

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The season isn't over yet, but it appears Dutch elm disease will claim more trees in Grosse Pointe this year than last. In two of three communities that have tallied losses so far, significantly more trees succumbed this year to DED.

The hot, dry summer and the lack of a killing frost this year that would normally slow the population growth of the disease's major spreader, the elm bark beetle, are two of the reasons being given for the increased number of trees contracting the disease.

The onset of the disease is most evident in summer when normally green, full boughs begin to wither and drop their leaves.

In the Park, which instituted a quick removal plan this year while abandoning spraying, 118 trees on public right-of-way have been destroyed by the disease. There are 70 trees on private lands that have contracted the disease as well, according to the Department of Public Service. Those figures do not include August, traditionally a heavy month for losses to the disease.

For the season last year, the Park reported losing 117 publicly located trees and 45 private trees, according to the public service department.

In the City, 93 trees have been claimed so far by DED, compared to 78 last year, city officials said.

In the Shores, only three trees have been removed so far because of the elm disease, compared with 19 from last year, village officials said.

Grosse Pointe Farms is still counting, and the Woods didn't return phone calls requesting the information.

The disease continues to ravage trees until the first frost, so the Farms continues to mark trees for removal, Farms officials said.

While the disease can be transmitted by the elm bark beetle, an elm tree whose roots contact those of a diseased tree can also become infected, Grosse Pointe Shade Tree Council representatives said. Residents who fight tooth and nail through the summer to keep their diseased tree may actually be dooming every elm on their block, representatives added.

Spraying programs are handled municipally in some of the Pointes, where ordinances require residents to spray in the spring for the elm bark beetles. The Woods discontinued a spraying program in 1983, opting instead for quick removal and reforestation with smaller, more disease-resistant types of trees.

The Park also decided this year to abandon spraying for the beetle, but the losses this year cannot be all put on to that decision, according to Beautification Commission representative Carol Ward.

It may take up to three years for a tree to be lost to DED, so the increase this year isn't a direct result of the ending of spraying, but represents trees succumbing that first contracted the fungal infection in the last two years the city was spraying, she added.

While research in the past has been aimed at developing disease-resistant elm tree strains, they aren't being embraced as a replacement for the elms now falling, a member of the Shade Tree Council said. Disease-resistant is not immune, so cities that use the resistant strains in reforestation may find themselves in the same predicament when the disease-resistant trees become less so.

There are also naturally occurring trees that seem to be able to fight off the disease for some unknown reason.

Park election results

Incumbent Mayor Palmer Heenan and Mayor Pro Tem John Prost will face off against each other in the Nov. 5 general election. Park voters decided in Tuesday's primary.

In the council contest, newcomers Lee Carrick, Lynn Crissman, Arthur Getz, James Robson Jr., and incumbents Carroll Evola and Mark Valente III will compete for three seats.

Of 9,111 register voters, 1,470, or 16 percent, cast votes.

The unofficial tally is: For mayor: Heenan — 741; Prost — 585; and David Zukowski — 80.

For council: Valente — 700; Evola — 598; Getz — 590; Robson — 579; Crissman — 570; Carrick — 305; and John Hibbard — 231.

The charter amendment passed 728 to 524.

Public hearing set on Eight Mile bridge

Communities disagree on bridge improvements

By Elsa Frohman

The Michigan Department of Transportation will hold a public hearing Thursday, Aug. 15, at 7:30 p.m., to receive public comment on proposed improvements to the Eight Mile bridge over the I-94 expressway on the border of Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores.

The bridge, which funnels expressway-exiting traffic onto the residential streets on the western boundary of Grosse Pointe Woods, has long been a bone of contention between the three communities and all three city administrations expect their residents to turn out to argue for or against the bridge improvements.

Harper Woods City Manager James Leidlein pointed out that the Harper Woods City Council voted last fall to support improvements to the bridge — which will alleviate traffic problems that exist west of the bridge in that city.

St. Clair Shores City Manager Roy Stype echoed Leidlein's support for the project.

"Our position is very positive," Stype said. "The case is that the bridge was designed many years ago and the original design called for the improvements that are now proposed. It will now be completed."

Grosse Pointe Woods City Administrator Chester Petersen opposed the improvements.

"Our objection is that all of that traffic will be funneled down our residential streets," Petersen said.

"It amounts to over 5,000 cars a day. We can't live with that and neither can our residents."

MDOT is investigating two options to improve the bridge and exit area. First is to widen the southbound exit ramp from I-94 from one to two lanes. The second is to widen the exit ramp and the bridge. The bridge would be improved to four lanes from its current two.

The MDOT has measured 11,800 cars using the Eight Mile exit ramp each day. That volume is expected to increase to 12,800 cars a day by the year 2000.

Currently, traffic using the ramp backs up on the expressway during peak hours because of congestion at the Eight Mile Road and service drive intersection. Because of cars making left turns onto the service drive from the bridge, traffic often backs up onto Harper in the opposite direction.

Petersen contends that the only practical answer to the problem is in moving the ramp to Vernier Road, rather than improving the bridge.

"In our city's opinion," Petersen said, "the only exit should be at Vernier Road. I don't know exactly why, but that exit is in the wrong location."

Petersen explained that the improvements would only encourage more cars to use East Eight Mile/Brys Drive and Roslyn Road, two Woods residential streets, to cut through to Mack Avenue. Two years ago, the city blocked the same improvement project with a lawsuit charging that MDOT had not completed an adequate environmental impact study on the bridge project.

Today, Petersen contends that the environmental study still hasn't been completed adequately because MDOT has not taken into account the impact on Grosse Pointe Woods residential streets.

"To use federal funds, they have to make an environmental impact assessment," Petersen said. "They contend they have complied with the law. But they are creating a situation that will get worse by their own admission. The state highway people haven't made any design past Harper."

Desi Strakovits, a field operations engineer with MDOT, admitted that the state has not considered the impact on Brys and Roslyn in its plans for the bridge. "In our opinion, it is not needed," he said.

Strakovits said MDOT studies have shown that most of the cars traveling the Grosse Pointe Woods streets belong to people who live in the neighborhood.

"Whatever problems Grosse Pointe Woods have are due to past planning," he said. He pointed to the condominiums that have been built in the path that Eight Mile Road would have followed if it had been extended to Mack.

"It's a local planning problem," he concluded.

In the past 10 years, that local planning problem has led to a series of actions on the part of the three communities that has been called the "Car Wars" by observers. At one point, the Woods barricaded all the streets at the Harper Woods border. At another, the streets in the area were turned into a bewildering maze of one-ways — that might lead to motorist to a corner where all the streets were one way in — and there was no way out.

In 1983, the communities agreed not to alter the traffic pattern in the area without consulting each other.

Petersen said the bridge improvements might touch off another round of traffic routings.

"If the bridge goes through, we may have no alternative," Petersen said. "We may start the wars all over with our neighbors. We wouldn't barricade the streets, we would cul-de-sac them. I have a court opinion that we have the authority. We will take whatever steps are necessary."

Leidlein is taking a softer approach to the problem.

"I think Grosse Pointe Woods, St. Clair Shores and Harper Woods should get together and discuss this," he said. "We wouldn't want to do anything to hurt them and I hope they would act the same."

Petersen is encouraging Woods residents to turn out and speak against the bridge improvements. He said that local residents have already passed petitions against the projects which have been forwarded to Lansing.

Strakovits said that the opinions of the people who attend the public hearing will be taken into account in the project planning.

"Various communities will have the opportunity to address the project and what adverse or positive effects it will have," he said. "We think the project is needed and will benefit the entire area."

Summertime swinger

It's summertime, and the swingin' is easy. At least that's the opinion of Walter Konrad, 16, and his buddy Bill Vanderwyn-gaard, 17, who enjoyed the cool water of Lake St. Clair last week. Our swingers launched their belly smackers from a little peninsula of land that juts out into the lake near the foot of Harbor Hill Road in the Farms. With a little extra push, and a little more imagination, it looks like they could swing onto the deck of that ore carrier passing by.

A study released this month revealed that as many as half of the obstetricians in the state plan to stop delivering babies because of the high cost of malpractice insurance.

Two-thirds of the doctors responding to the survey conducted by a Michigan State professor for the Michigan State Medical Society said professional liability is the most severe of their medical practice problems. Fifty-two percent responded that they either have already stopped delivering babies or plan to do so soon.

There is no evidence that doctors in the Grosse Pointe area are cleaning out their desks. But the problem exists here in the potential.

Of the doctors contacted by the Grosse Pointe News, most were busy with patients and did not return telephone calls. One had moved out of state and one refused to talk to the newspaper. One agreed to discuss the problem if he could remain unidentified.

The problem boils down to what he called "availability and affordability." As everyone attempts to defend himself from costly jury awards, doctors order more tests and insurance premiums rise. Last year, the insurance industry as a whole lost money, Sunday's Detroit Free Press reported.

"Two things are happening," the doctor said. "One is that all hospitals are demanding malpractice insurance, which they didn't in the past. Plus, the cost has doubled. It costs $35,000 and up for basic insurance."

Obstetricians have the second-highest malpractice premiums of all doctors. Only plastic surgeons are higher.

"It's because of high expectations and the fact that things can happen very, very quickly," the doctor said. "Things can go wrong before your very eyes, even when you make all the proper moves."

People have become conditioned to expecting more than can be delivered, he says. "Anything less than a perfect baby isn't good enough. But eight percent of all infants have abnormalities and three to four percent of them are serious. People are born without hands, fingers, eyes — I've seen it all. These are things you have to learn to live with."

Even the practice of informed consent can backfire. Doctors who downplay the seriousness of planned surgery are open to suit if they fail to warn patients of possible consequences. Conversely, covering all the possibilities can frighten a patient out of having necessary surgery.

"It's impossible to tell everything that could possibly happen to

U of D begins major renovation

The University of Detroit unveiled plans for an $8.5 million project to beautify and modernize the school's 66-acre main campus at McNichols and Livernois. The renovation program was launched July 23 at groundbreaking ceremonies.

Thomas F. Russell, Shores resident and general chairman of the U of D capital campaign, said nearly one-half of the funds needed for the project have been raised. "The goal of the Partners in Progress capital campaign is $10.5 million and to date we have raised $5,024,077," he said.

Russell, who is chairman and chief executive officer of Federal-Mogul Corp., explained that $2 million of the total has been earmarked for operations, with the remaining $8.5 million financing a new energy management system and a mall area that will link the two sides of the campus.

The energy management system will replace the campus' antiquated heating, cooling and ventilation systems for a cost of $7 million.

The computerized system will regulate heating and cooling and can be programmed to control lighting and security devices. It includes insulation and will reduce energy consumption, with savings estimated at about $250,000 a year.

The new mall, scheduled to be completed next summer, will connect residence halls with classrooms and at the same time, unify and secure the campus. To be located on what is now a city street, Florence Mall has been in the planning for 18 years. The 8.5-acre beautification will cost $1.5 million.

New video films available at library

A new special interest video collection has just been started at the Wayne Oakland Library Federation (WOLF) Film/Video Library containing informational, instructional and other videotapes not readily available from other sources.

Video collections are not a new addition to public library services — several libraries have been circulating feature videos for many years. This collection, however, is new in focus and will be growing from the current 100 titles in 1/2" VHS format which cover subjects such as cooking, foreign language, sports, first aid and business management.

Among the more popular titles are "Megatrends," "The One Minute Manager," "The 1984 World Series," "Wines of California," and the Massey tape series by Dr. Morris Massey.

A $4 service fee per title is collected at the time the video is borrowed. Videos are available to individuals and organizations at the Grosse Pointe Public Library, which is a member of WOLF.

In addition to videotapes, the Film/Video Library has the largest public library 16mm film collection in the state with more than 12,000 films.

For further information contact the Film/Video Library at 326-8923 or the local library at 343-2074.

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss

No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe — it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

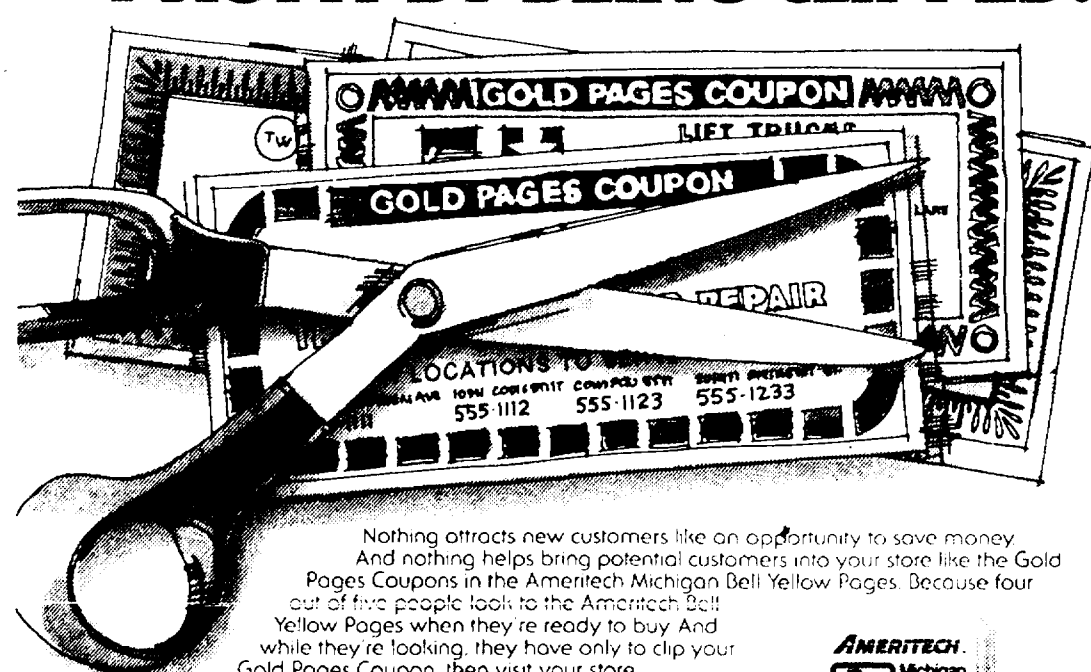

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

Best of all, ordering Amitol is simple, fast, and reliable! Simply call Dyna Labs Toll Free: (1-800-441-5454) Ext. 911, and order with your credit card. If you don't have a credit card Dyna Labs will also accept C.O.D. orders right over the phone! All orders are shipped immediately by UPS, which means no delay and no orders lost in the mail!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95—60 day supply. Operators are standing by and will be glad to take your order. You can order 24 hrs. a day, 7 days a week! Please don't wait to call. You really do deserve to be thin!

There was plenty of action at Salter Park in Harper Woods Saturday when Pointes East, a coalition of 18 restaurants from the area, sponsored its first public event. Darrell Finken, owner of Sparky Herbets, said the six-hour event drew more than 1,500 people and raised about $1,000 for muscular dystrophy, although the figures were incomplete Monday. Finken said the group may have to look for a larger park next year, since many people had to be turned away when the parking lot was filled.

Hertel enjoying chairmanship

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Six months into his second term as Wayne County Commissioner and chairman of the 15-member board, John Hertel says he's a happy man because of things the board has accomplished so far this year.

One was the rewriting of all the commission rules, setting up the chairman as a speaker of the house-type position and patterning the board's rules after those of other legislative bodies, Hertel said.

The board also standardized its appointment procedures by sending all appointments to the administration and rules committee, he said. Also added was a requirement that all committees meet at least twice a month, helping speed up the legislative process.

At the same time the work of committees has helped bring certain departments into line, Hertel said. Three members sit on the county drain commission; Charles Youngblood, Hertel and a third county commissioner. The two board of commission votes are enough to make sure the drain commissioner stays in line, Hertel says.

Some committees were eliminated as part of the administrative shake-up after he was elected by fellow commissioners to the chairman's seat, Hertel said. No longer is there a general government committee, a personnel committee and a committee of the whole.

"That's where all the mischief was done," Hertel said. The committee of the whole was composed of all commissioners who would discuss and make unrecorded votes on legislation to go before the full board for official action. Elimination of the committee of the whole cut two weeks out of the legislative process, Hertel said.

"That's where a lot of things got slowed down, forcing the board to hold emergency meetings all the time," Hertel said. "Since we've eliminated the committee of the whole, we have had to call only one emergency meeting."

The commission is also trying to build better relationships among government bodies, Hertel said. So far, the board has had two joint meetings with the Detroit Common Council, officiated over jointly by Detroit Council President Erma Henderson and Hertel.

Those meetings were to discuss economic development in the area and the Port Authority, Hertel said.

On visits to other cities like Toledo, legislators have learned it is possible for Detroit to turn around crime and other economic setbacks and develop its port authority.

In addition, House Speaker Gary Owens came from Lansing to talk with the commissioners about the process of governing. Gov. James Blanchard has also come informally to the commission, Hertel said.

The board has also eliminated civil service for employees of the board and rewritten job descriptions for the commission staff, Hertel said. The new system applies a powerful incentive to work, where previously "I couldn't even get my phone messages taken," Hertel said, adding, "The hardest working people you are ever going to find are going to be legislative workers."

While the board will have to put a number of things on hold while it begins grappling with the coming year's budget, there are a couple of issues that will cross its desk in coming months, Hertel said.

One matter will be the county executive's proposal to contract out health care for prisoners at the county jail, a program opposed by Sheriff Robert Ficano. Both sides have argued the merits and cost-savings of such a proposal and Hertel added he believed the truth of the matter probably lies somewhere between the two extremes.

While not taking a position on the matter, it will be subject to board approval, Hertel said. When the matter comes from the executive's office to the board, it will be sent to the ways and means and public safety committees for hearings and recommendations.

Hertel said he expects to take part in the questioning during the hearings and expects to get down to the facts of the matter before the commission acts on making the appropriation for the expense.

Under the new system, Hertel serves as ex-officio member on all standing committees.

Another public safety matter is the offer by Lucas of the county's N Building on the Eloise campus to be used by the state to house 1,000 felons. Hertel said he's withholding his response until the state says whether or not it will accept the offer.

The vacant building can be renovated into a functional prison, Hertel said. "It won't be a country club, but it will be a humane facility."

There's the matter of Belleville Lake, which the commission ordered open two weeks after the county health department determined the lake was too contaminated with fecal coliform bacteria to allow any activities on the lake. The board is going to have to continue to monitor the lake while looking for the source of the pollution and find a long-term solution to the health problem posed to residents and users of the lake, he added.

Hertel was originally a compromise candidate for the chairmanship when hard-line suburban commission and urban representatives split their allegiance between two other candidates. When former Chairman Samuel Turner swung his support and votes behind Hertel, a coalition of 10 commissioners, split evenly between Detroit and suburban representation, was born.

The coalition has held, although there were a couple of grumbles during the board's action on Belleville Lake, Hertel said. The coalition has been strong enough to put together two veto overrides of county executive actions as well, he added.

That face-off on veto overrides has had an interesting fall-out, Hertel said. The administration is more likely to seek a compromise with the commission instead of going for the confrontation as it did in the past, he added.

Asked about his own political future should Lucas run for governor in 1986, Hertel said it was too early to make such a decision. Also, throwing his hat into the political ring at this time could jeopardize the work being done by the commission.

The county is on its way to making the charter work, Hertel said. Its success in Wayne County has started a movement in Macomb county by those who'd like to see the 27-member commission there replaced with a county executive form of government similar to Wayne and Oakland counties, Hertel said.

Just as important as making the county operate properly is helping restore the faith of the electorate in its elected representatives, Hertel said.

State short of staff to monitor day care

By Nancy Parmenter

Who sees it that the millions of children in American day care centers are treated properly? States have a plethora of regulations governing everything from the boiler to the kitchen to the electrical outlets, but not enough staff to monitor compliance.

Since Michigan's round of budget cutbacks, day care monitoring and licensing staff is "about 25 percent below where we think it should be," said Ted deWolf, director of day care licensing for the State Department of Social Services.

The only way to handle the normal monitoring, the yearly spot checks and the announced visits to investigate a complaint is to pick and choose. "We have to prioritize so our staff has some clear fix on where to devote their time," deWolf said.

Demand on deWolf's staff are not spread equally over the state. The north, with a smaller population and few centers, not only has fewer complaints but fewer serious complaints, he said.

"For reasons we don't understand, the southwest has a greater number of situations which we consider really serious," he said. "Some of them are the ones you have been reading about."

DeWolf said he has no expectations of receiving a staff increase "unless there's some terrible catastrophe. That's the sort of thing that generates resources."

While staffing has remained fairly level, the complaint load has increased 32 percent during the last fiscal year, deWolf said. The complaints are believed to reflect the public's awareness of problems that have occurred around the country.

About half of the complaints are substantiated, that is, investigated and proved. In many cases, "we may conclude in our own minds that something occurred, but there isn't enough legal evidence," deWolf explained.

Media coverage of sexual abuse at day care centers has had some benefits, he said. It has caused people to pay more attention to the kind of care their youngsters are receiving.

"People spend more time shopping for a new car than they do choosing the place their children will spend every day," deWolf said. "Now we have increasing numbers of parents using the Freedom of Information Act to obtain information on the past problems at a particular center, and using that information to help them choose a center."

The licensing and monitoring staff makes a license-renewal study of each center every two years. In between, there is one off-year inspection. These are announced visits, but deWolf said there are still centers with some violations.

When the staff receives complaints from parents or center staff members, unannounced visits are planned. "We alert them that we have found this problem and we might pop in at any time," deWolf said.

Popping in at any time with an understaffed department is not easy, but deWolf said every effort is made. "Failure to investigate would weaken enforcement," he said. "I don't operate on threats. (When the sex abuse cases came up), that person started working 10-12 hour days and put everything else on the back burner."

But monitoring depends upon parental involvement. "I don't know that (any agency) could ever do enough," deWolf said. "The people who help us with it in the last analysis are the parents."

The staff is not large enough to monitor newspaper advertisements for day care claiming to be licensed. "There is nothing to stop people from just putting an ad in the paper," said Mary Doenges, a DSS licensing staffer. "Some newspapers (monitor) on their own." Parents responding to an advertisement claiming licensing should either check with the DSS or ask the newspaper if it keeps track of advertisers' licenses. The Grosse Pointe News requires day care licenses to be on file in the newspaper office.

But whether a place is licensed or unlicensed, Doenges said there is "an urgency to respond to complaints. Complaints are our highest priority at this point in time."

Complaints about physical conditions at day care centers are handled for the DSS on a contractual basis by the Department of Public Health. Inspections are done regularly for relicensing and on a spot basis for complaints.

"We have concerns for things like screening, ventilation, food service, play equipment, electrical outlets," said chief sanitarian John Schmidt. "We just inspect the physical plant, and we don't do homes with fewer than six children unless there are concerns about the well or septic tank."

There are 14 licensed day care centers in the Grosse Pointe area, according to Schmidt. Seven are in the Farms, two each in the City, the Woods, and Harper Woods, and one is in the Park.

Day care and nursery schools are both monitored by the same DSS department. State regulations determine the ratio of adults to children, the qualifications of teachers, the amount of space per pupil. Since day care involves extended hours, the state also dictates regulations about sleeping arrangements and nutrition.

"Within our community we are blessed with choices for preschool," said Barbara Lawrence, director of the Grosse Pointe Pre-Kindergarten, which operates facilities at the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church and at Barnes School.

"I don't know of any places in our community that abuse their limits. Parents have a right to expect quality care."

Woods police are investigating a smash-and-grab robbery that occurred at the Woods Party Store, 20767 Mack Avenue, sometime Saturday night, Aug. 3.

According to reports, the front door of the building was wrecked when thieves threw a cement block through the plexiglass window of the opening.

Police say the thieves stole a cash register valued at $1,000. The owner of the store said the machine held about $100 in assorted bills.

The owner told police it was his third robbery in 25 years.

Pointes report decline in boat thefts

By Tom Greenwood

Local police departments are crediting increased public awareness of crime prevention measures for the general decline in boat thefts and vandalism at Grosse Pointe's city parks and marinas.

"We had more than a few problems last year," said Farms Detective Mark Brecht. "We had thieves who paddled into the Pier Park or the Crescent Sail Yacht Club on rubber rafts and stole small outboard motors. We lost three or four of them that way. We apprehended one individual and took him through the local courts. He served a small amount of time."

This year the Farms, along with the Shores and the City, has yet to record any boat thefts or vandalism. "This summer we organized the park and the yacht club into Marina Watch programs," Brecht said. "One of our officers, Dan Jensen, worked in conjunction with the Wayne County Sheriff Department's Marine Division and instructed our boat owners on how to protect their valuables."

"Basically, the program is similar to that of a Neighborhood Watch. We've restricted the piers to boat owners only and tell them to be cautious about letting others use their boats. We urge them to get to know the boater berthed on either side of them. If someone looks suspicious or out of place, we tell them to make a report. There's a lot of bad guys out there and there's definitely a market for stolen boat equipment."

In the Park, Crime Prevention Officer Sgt. Randy Cain echoed Brecht's advice. "We also urge our boaters to become involved in our Marina Watch program," Cain said. "Things are very, very quiet this year. We've had a couple of minor problems, mostly involving juvenile delinquents. Last year we had a boat stolen. It was recovered in Fox Creek. We think a 12-year-old stole the boat. The owner left the keys in it."

"The fact that we also have a night-time guard, just like in the Farms, helps a lot. We advise boaters to use common sense. Don't leave portable TVs or liquor in plain view where strangers can see them. Lock items up or better yet, remove them from the vessel entirely."

Cain also urges property owners to write down the serial numbers of all their valuables.

"If something is stolen, we can enter those numbers in our computer. If the property shows up anywhere in the country, we'll find out about it. In fact, this year the Wayne County computer has a completely separate category just for stolen marine equipment. Their marine division checks out a lot more boats than we do. That's why Clair Shores, so crimes there come within our jurisdiction. But the problem isn't just at the Woods park. It's at all our marinas, and we have a lot of them within our town."

Ryan was unable to supply exact figures concerning boating thefts because of Michigan's method of classifying crimes. "We don't code boat thefts as separate items," he said. "For instance, if a boat has a living area, such as a cabin radios and jewelry as items most sought after by thieves. "Liquor is taken too," he said. "Especially by teenagers. If owners would engrave valuables, it would make the goods much harder to fence. The other half of the battle is programming people not to be careless."

"So many owners leave valuables in plain sight, and then forget or neglect to lock up. Especially the owners of really big boats."

Increased vigilance is the key to reducing the number of boat thefts and vandalism, say local police. Officials agree that boaters can cut their chances of being victimized if they organize Marina Watches, list the serial numbers of their valuables, engrave their possessions and restrict the piers to boat owners only, as is the case here at the Farms Pier Park.

listing serial numbers is so important."

St. Clair Shores Crime Prevention Officer Ken Ryan would like to see owners engrave all valuables with their driver's license number as well.

"Yes, we have a definite problem concerning boat thefts and vandalism," Ryan said. "The Woods park lies within the city limits of St.

cruiser, then the crime falls under the same statute as that covering a home."

"If a radio antenna is taken from an open boat, then the crime is listed simply as a larceny over or under $100. Hauling out the record and doing a manual search would be a long, tedious process."

Ryan listed money, fishing equipment, depth-finders, TVs, CB

They've got bucks and they either neglect to lock up or leave it for someone else. It's unbelievable the things they leave on board. Furs, jewelry, money, guns, electronic equipment. Some of the stuff is on board all through the winter, when the boat isn't being used. Then they're shocked when spring rolls around and they find they've been victimized."

FACTS OF LAW

Ellen C. Wallaert

American Indians who live on reservations may be denied their rights of use and occupation only by the federal government, and then only if proper compensation is given in return.

The age of majority, by which many rights and laws become effective, developed during the days of knights in armor; 21 was the age at which it was thought young men could shoulder the physical weight of the heavy armor of the time.

"Truth is the most valuable thing we have. Let us economize it."

IN FORMA PAUPERIS refers to the permission given to a poor person to bring suit without having to pay for court costs.

Politics perils progress

Despite budgetary problems ahead, the chairman of the Wayne County board of commissioners believes progress can continue to be made in revamping county government and making the new charter work.

John Hertel, Harper Woods Democrat whose district includes the Pointes, thinks continuing improvements and reform could prove to the public that changes in government can be more than cosmetic. If this perception is accepted, Hertel says it could raise the level of public participation in government at all levels. We tend to agree with that opinion.

Yet there are potential troubles ahead in at least two areas: the budget for the 1986 fiscal year beginning Dec. 1, 1985, and the renewal of political partisanship that has flamed up since County Executive William Lucas announced his switch to the Republican Party and began an unannounced campaign for the GOP nomination for governor.

In an interview with the Grosse Pointe News, Hertel conceded that the county's immediate budget problems are serious. In fact, he believes the budget deficit is worse than the county executive says it is. Lucas last week proposed eliminating 200 county jobs to cut $9.7 million from the general fund to offset dwindling property tax revenues and higher costs imposed by court judgments against the county. Hertel commented that Lucas "had put good face on a very bad situation" and contended Lucas' deficit figure was "very low."

The board chairman went on to complain that Lucas' approach to the budget was "political" because the county executive glossed over the cut in future federal revenue sharing and failed to give Democratic Gov. James Blanchard credit for up to $80 million in state aid of various kinds to help bail the county out of its fiscal problems.

Up to this point, Hertel has been one of the strongest supporters of Lucas on the county board. In fact, the chairman takes credit for the new spirit of cooperation between the board and the executive that became apparent after Hertel took his new job as chairman. And Hertel claims that the county board has been substantially in accord with Lucas except in two instances when it overrode his vetoes of appropriations. In one case, the board overrode a veto of a $500,000 appropriation to step up the battle against juvenile crime and delinquency. In the second, it overrode a veto of a $300,000 appropriation to fund county court employees until the state starts picking up the tab for their services.

Now, however, the spirit of cooperation may be ending with the budget problems ahead and the indications that both sides are playing politics. Lucas did fail to give the governor any credit for Wayne County's improved budgetary situation in the past two years. And he did fail to mention that the end of federal revenue sharing will put a new burden on the county in the future. Both of these omissions tend to square with Lucas' new Republican stance. But Hertel's direct criticism of Lucas also contains elements of politics.

Another potentially controversial issue is Lucas' recently announced plan to hire a private medical company to care for county jail inmates. The plan already is under fire from Sheriff Robert Ficano who challenges Lucas' claim the plan would save as much as $3.5 million a year by reducing the staff by 58 employees. Hertel thinks a more accurate figure is "somewhere between" those cited by Lucas and Ficano but won't make a detailed study of the issue until it comes before the board.

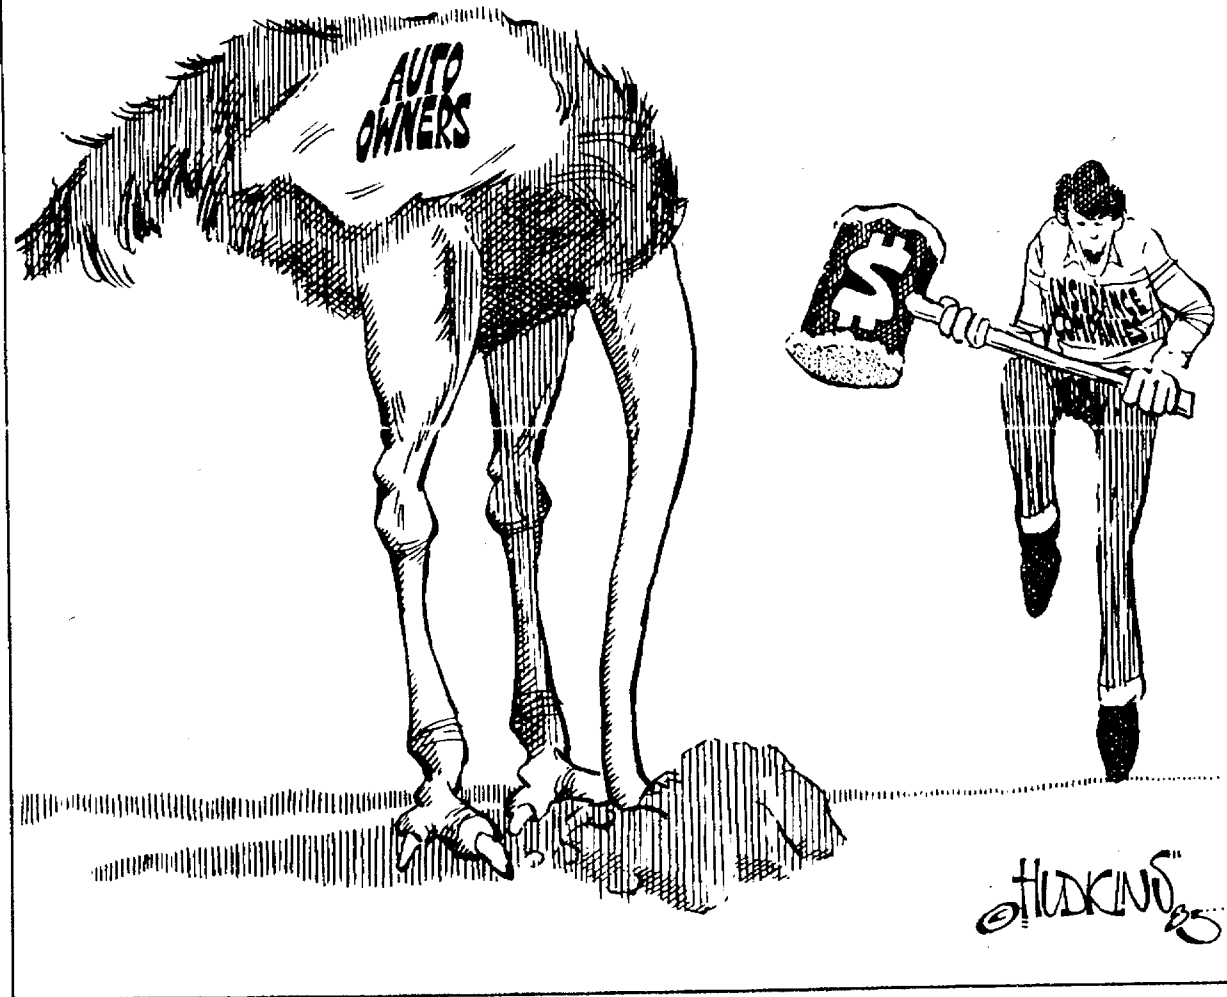

Well, if such controversies are on the horizon, how can Hertel be so optimistic about the future?

It is because of county board achievements since he took over the chairman's job less than a year ago. The board has rewritten its committee rules and reorganized committees to create more orderly procedures and speed results. It improved its relations with other units of government by holding joint meetings with the Detroit city council on crime and economic development and by sessions with both House Speaker Gary Owens and Gov. Blanchard. And it has reorganized its staff and given it better direction through rewriting job descriptions and eliminating time-consuming and otherwise burdensome civil service rules.

There is another reason for optimism. It is the fact that the urban-suburban coalition, made up of five commissioners from Detroit and five from suburban districts, maintains control against the other five who are basically anti-charter and in effect seek to revive the board's old executive powers. The controlling coalition has been strongly supportive of the charter and generally supportive of Lucas, although Lucas' political switch may damage that situation in the future.

From the public viewpoint, the greatest threat to the gains made under the new charter stems from the new political controversies arising between the executive and the board. True, issues naturally become more partisan when the executive switches to the GOP and the board majority remains strongly Democratic. But if would be disappointing to the public — and potentially damaging to the county executive, the board chairman and the entire board — if the county's gains in improved management, organization and services were diluted by a revival of partisan political wrangling.

The steady gains since adoption of the charter are too important to be jeopardized by partisan politics. Both sides ought to cool it — at least until the political campaign starts next year.

Close some schools, sell property

To the Editor:

As the enrollment in the Grosse Pointe School System steadily declines and as the millions we spend for education steadily mounts, the situation is increasingly getting the attention of outside media.

At an afternoon newscast recently on Detroit's Channel 2, a CBS affiliate, Joe Weaver, the veteran and respected newscaster for the station, recently devoted a few minutes to our school system.

Weaver, who is also a long-time Grosse Pointe resident, said, "First of all I think it has to be said that I have a vested interest in what I'm saying tonight."

"But when it comes to the subject of every-increasing property taxes, everyone has an interest or should. Virtually every school district in our region has seen some school decline in enrollment."

"While the average population decline in our suburbs is 11 percent since 1980, property taxes in the five Grosse Pointe communities have climbed about 290 percent since 1971."

"The enrollment then was more than 13,000 students. Coming up for the 1985-86 school year, the number of students will drop to just over 7,000 students. But the school budget for that period will increase by 3 percent.

"Of the remaining 14 school buildings in the Pointes, half of them are less than 50 percent occupied. Six others are pretty close to half empty while only one comes close to 70 percent occupancy. So close to half of all the classroom seats are not occupied in Grosse Pointe."

(At this point Channel 2 showed a chart of each Grosse Pointe school, displaying the incredible number of empty seats. Poupard, for example, was over 65 percent empty.)

Weather continued, "To the school board's credit, they closed one of the district's 15 buildings last year and reduced the teaching staff by one third. But taxes have not been reduced one penny."

"The question is 'Why are taxpayers continuing to pay the costs of keeping 14 buildings operating when a few more than half are needed for the projected school population?"

"There are a couple of options for that school board in Grosse Pointe. The most viable seems to be to close some of those buildings and sell the property. The one school they closed last year sits on 10 acres of property, worth more than $2 million. One developer is reportedly interested in building homes there."

"That would be a way to reduce property taxes. School board members being elected all over the tri-county area today have a responsibility to get into this issue with both feet and begin doing something that should have been done years ago and lower our taxes. I'm Joe Weaver."

Strike force amendment approved

By State Sen. John F. Kelly

Something has got to be done about the automobile theft problem in Detroit and Wayne County, and I strongly believe that one way to do something about it is to keep strong enforcement pressure on the automobile thieves and chop shop operations.

In my opinion, the best way to do that is to create a multiple police agency Strike Force to maximize the pressure.

On July 11, I sponsored an amendment to the so-called Essential Insurance bill (House Bill 4715) which would create just such a strike force, and, apparently, the rest of the legislature agreed. They approved my amendment 20-14, and now it is the law.

Your first question should be — why it has been said that if you were to park all of the 42,505 motor vehicles stolen in the city of Detroit last year end to end, you would have a line of cars, trucks and motorcycles stretching 81 miles, from the downtown Westin Hotel to the Lansing city limits.

Another fact is that Wayne County is second only to the city of Boston in the number of cars stolen annually nationwide. Eighty-one miles of stolen vehicles and second in the nation in stolen cars does not bode well for city-county residents' insurance bills.

That is why I offered the strike force amendment to House Bill 4715, a bill which on the whole, I oppose. I oppose the bill because I feel what it really does is impose a "crime tax" on the victims of automobile theft in the city of Detroit.

Those of us who live in the city already pay one of the highest insurance rates in the state, and if House Bill 4715 becomes law, they are going to raise the rates even higher.

Higher insurance rates do not prevent car theft.

As a city resident, I have lost cars to theft. I take precautions . . .

perhaps more precautions than the average resident, but I do not have any control over how many times my car is stolen. I keep my floodlights on, I keep my car in the backyard behind the fence — I keep a dog. I had a kill switch installed the last time, and I still lost the car. Twice the entire car has been stolen — never to be returned, and twice I have been burglarized from my car.

Will higher insurance rates stop car thieves? Rates do not stop thieves. Police do.

My strike force would be made up of officers from FBI, municipal police departments and sheriffs' departments under the direction of the Michigan State Police. They would augment the police effort already at work in the metropolitan area, arresting thieves, chop shop owners and recovering stolen vehicles.

Is the strike force really needed? Absolutely!

Who 'lost' the Saturn plant?

Now that General Motors has chosen Spring Hill, Tenn., for its Saturn plant, some Michigan Republicans and their media supporters are raising the question, "Who lost Saturn?" They imply, of course, that it was Gov. James Blanchard and the "high-tax Democrats" in the Legislature who were responsible and contend that the "loss" of Saturn will be an issue in the 1986 political campaign.

Well, let's hope not. Any Michigan GOP effort to put the blame for the "loss" on Saturn on the Democrats would be as unrewarding as the national GOP effort to find a Democratic "conspiracy" in the "loss" of China to the Communists 40 years ago.

It is now clear that GM sought a low-cost, low-wage state without a long tradition of union loyalty in order to produce a new small car in a new way that would enable GM to compete successfully with Japanese imports. Japanese auto workers reportedly make only from 41 to 50 percent of what American auto workers earn, and, according to the New York Times, that helps the Japanese produce a small car for the U.S. market at $2,000 less than it costs U.S. car makers. So reducing costs was the bottom line for GM in locating its new plant and in reaching a new contract with the United Auto Workers to reduce beginning pay.

True, GM officials said that Tennessee's "commitment" to education and its "quality of life" factors contributed to the choice of Spring Hill, as did such matters as Tennessee's central location in the nation, its low utility rates, its low taxes on business and other economic issues. So let's take a look at a couple of those factors.

It is true Tennessee has begun upgrading its education programs but surely one measure of "commitment" is the level of teachers' salaries. Tennessee paid public school teachers $17,698 on the average in 1983, according to the Michigan Education Association, while Michigan's average was $25,712. On a national scale, those averages gave Tennessee 38th place and Michigan second in teachers' pay.

An equally significant indication of a state's "commitment" to education is the amount it spends for education per pupil. In 1983 Tennessee ranked 47th nationally with $2,027 spent per pupil, while Michigan ranked 13th with $3,307. In both of these dollar measures of "commitment" — teachers' salaries and per pupil spending — Michigan ranked well above the national average and Tennessee below the national average.

In a third measure of "commitment" to education, the MEA reported that Tennessee high school seniors ranked 21st nationally with an average composite score of 17.7 in the ACT program last year while Michigan students tied for 12th with an average score of 18.8 percent. In this ranking, Michigan also was slightly above the national average of 18.5 while Tennessee was below the national average.

So much, then, for three measures of Tennessee's "commitment" to education as compared with Michigan's.

As for "quality of life," how does GM measure that factor? Like beauty, it is often in the eye of the beholder. True, Tennessee is only about half the size of Michigan in population and its population density was 112.5 per square mile in 1982. Michigan's population density was 160.3 per square mile in that year and it was 70.7 percent urban in 1980, as contrasted with Tennessee's 60.4 percent urban population. In per capita income, Tennessee was among the lowest in the nation in 1982 at $8,906 while Michigan's was $10,956, even with unemployment at 15.5 percent.

What has made Michigan a high-wage state? Among the factors often cited is the heavy percentage of unionized workers, and the fact that the North traditionally pays higher scales than does the South, in part because of higher living costs. The UAW's constant pressures for contract improvements no doubt have contributed to Michigan's high-wage reputation. And in good times, prior to foreign competition of any importance, the industry could and did pass along to buyers higher costs imposed by meeting the UAW's demands. Furthermore, UAW successes led to greater union efforts in other industries as well as among public employees. And unionization tended to raise pay generally in Michigan.

Higher welfare costs help explain Michigan's higher costs of government. In 1982, Tennessee reported an average monthly caseload of 55,783 covering 146,579 recipients whose payments averaged $42.42 per person. Michigan's monthly caseload average in the same year reached 231,720 covering 726,939 recipients whose payments averaged $122.02. In welfare, it is obvious the differences in payments reflect differences in regional attitudes toward meeting minimum needs as well as living cost differentials.

These figures help explain GM's choice of Spring Hill. GM picked a site that appeared to fulfill the conditions and the goals it had set in order to compete with the Japanese and make a profit while doing so. With its different traditions, different attitudes toward social responsibilities, different standards of living, greater urbanization and higher costs and higher taxes, Michigan could not have converted itself overnight into another Tennessee regardless of who had been governor. In all honesty, if we really need an answer to that question, "Who lost Saturn?" we ought to admit we all did a long time ago.

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

Travel to a foreign land has a mystique and excitement that is not present when making a trip in your own country. Even when the destination is many miles away, has a completely different terrain and offers attractions and views different from home base, it still doesn't have the same pizzazz as crossing a foreign border.

For those who dislike plane travel — and there are many more since the recent hostage crisis — it is nice to know that it is possible to visit another country by car and spend as little time there as one day. We, in metropolitan Detroit can do that.

It is true that Canada is not generally thought of as a foreign land. There is no language barrier, except in the province of Quebec where French is spoken. Basically Americans and Canadians share the same mode of life.

Fashions are not that much different. We go there to buy wool. They come here to buy cotton. Tastes in food are similar. Americans cross the border to buy cheese and Canadian bacon; Canadians find staples here are cheaper. We observe the same religions, enjoy common cultural interests and work in similar job markets. The only time we are reminded that we are entering another country is when we go through customs at the border.

This 'oneness' is reinforced in the Detroit area each year with the Freedom Festival. Just recently the people of Detroit and their Windsor neighbors celebrated a week-long plethora of common events. There were opening ceremonies on each side of the river, parades, concerts, tugboat and hydroplane races, the Wheel of Freedom Auto Show and Windsor night at Tiger stadium. It all ended with the glorious Freedom Festival fireworks on the Detroit River.

It is a good feeling to have such cordial relations with a foreign country so close to our border.

However this very closeness and assumed sameness of interests sometimes deters travelers from including Canada in their vacation plans. They want to see something different. But it is a mistake to conclude that because we have so much in common, there is not much that is new to do and see in Canada.

As you go farther inland, the opportunity to experience new sights and sounds is more available. But just across the river in Windsor, tourists can experience the calming affect of a slower, less hectic world as they sit in one of the parks that line the riverfront or wander through the small shops in the area.

About a half-hour drive along Highway 18 out of Windsor is Amherstburg. Stretching out along the river, the town is an interesting blend of the old and new. Houses that have been there for years sit serenely on streets shaded by century-old trees. In contrast, on the edge of the town, new apartment buildings rise into the sky. Small shops thrive in the town's center. Just blocks away, a modern shopping mall offers all the services of large city malls.

Visitors will not want to miss a visit to historic Fort Malden. It was established by the British when they had to leave Detroit. Another place of interest is the North American Black Historical Museum built by slaves who escaped to freedom via the Underground Railroad.

In town is the Navy Yard restaurant where fine lunches and dinners are served. Out of town, along the river is Duffy's Tavern. It has been a favorite eating and watering spot for both residents and the summer people for many years. Duffy's is part of the town's history.

As you go farther along on the river road, past houses as old as the town, you come to the boarding dock of the ferry that takes visitors across the river to Boblo. Once there you can take a train ride around the island, attend live shows, or, if you're an adventure-some spirit, try out some of the 50 rides offered in the amusement park.

Back across the river and on the road again, you lose the view of the river but you are never far from water. There are marshes where there is always someone fishing.

Before you head home, you will want to stop at one of many roadside stands where fruit, vegetables and berries, just freshly picked, are offered.

Another day trip that will be remembered when winter winds blow, is one just 35 miles out of Detroit to Pointe Pelee National Park. It is a 4,000-acre wonderland of marsh, trees, grass, birds — and butterflies, if you come at the right time. Visitors time their trips to see the butterflies fly off in an explosive flutter of color as they leave the island.

There is something on the island for everyone who enjoys the outdoors. There are 14 miles of beaches, nature trails and picnic grounds. A unique attraction is the mile-long boardwalk where visitors can walk out into the marsh to see fish and flora at close range.

If that is too long a walk, you can rent a canoe and paddle around the marsh. Whichever method you choose, save enough energy to walk up the observation towers on each end of the boardwalk. The view is worth the exertion.

Again, make a stop at one of the roadstands. This is melon country. Melons are shipped all over from this area. They are that good. Tomatoes are special too. There are those who say that tomatoes grown in Canada have a goodness that is unsurpassed. That is probably why Leamington is known as the tomato capital of the world. It is also a major canning center.

Once you have explored the attractions that border Lake Erie, you may want to see what Lake Huron has to offer. Over the Blue Water Bridge from Port Huron is Grand Bend, a major resort. Its pine trees, sand hills and wonderful sand beaches draw vacationers from all areas. Other attractions are the Lambton Heritage Museum, a complex containing artifacts tracing Indian and pioneer history of the county, and the Pine-ridge Zoo, 20 wooded acres of many varieties of birds and animals.

If you have more than a day to spend but still don't want to wander too far from home, Toronto would be a good choice for older travelers.

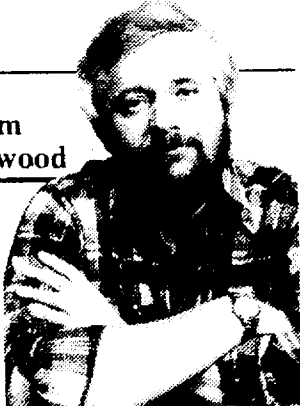

Fans of the "sweetest music this side of heaven" would find it worth the trip to visit the Guy Lombardo museum there.

A big drawing card is The Master's Games, an international multi-sports activity for older athletes. The dates, Aug. 7-25. It is held every four years in the world's major cities. If you go the second week, you can also take in the Canadian National Exhibition which offers 350 acres of events, grandstand shows and displays.

I say

My fine feathered friends

Okay, okay, I admit it. I used to deliver chicken dinners for a living. Well, not exactly a living. Just part time while I attended college.

What, you might ask, brought on this confession? Because last week I wrote about the first-ever jobs of a few notables in our town and consequently fielded a few queries about my virgin venture into the job market.

Actually, my first was as a bag boy for a Detroit supermarket. I was canned before the summer ended, but that's another story. Not nearly as interesting as chauffeuring chickens around Royal Oak.

I'd just been paroled from the Marines and was attending Wayne State University. I needed something part time with flexible hours to fill out the GI bill. At 25, I was years older and more mature than the other drivers. Happily, they managed to bring me down to their level before long.

A favorite trick was to mess up a fellow driver's car while he was inside the restaurant picking up his orders. We'd turn on the windshield wipers, peg the radio dial up full blast, adjust all the stations to a religious program, put the heater into its atomic furnace position, alter the rear and side mirrors, move the seat up or back and put toothpaste on the steering wheel. Immature? Yes, but I haven't screwed with anybody like that since I was 12.

Often in the course of these on-going feuds, we'd forget about the dinners entirely and leave them on the roof of the car while we readjusted the interior. The restaurant owner more than once saw a car peel out onto 11 Mile Road with half a dozen buckets of chicken teetering on the roof.

We also collected our share of strange and funny stories. Trips to shuttered homes where a pair of eyes would peek suspiciously out of a mail slot. Pale hands would push crumpled bills through the opening and a whisper would instruct us to leave the chicken on the porch.

And then there was The Walker. The Walker was one of the walking wounded. You knew he was unbalanced, but was just enough on keel to be kept from permanent confinement. We saw him everywhere, walking and talking to himself. He was tall, gaunt and sported a spotty moustache. What was eerie was his ability to apparently be nearly everywhere at once.

One driver would report him at 12 Mile and John R, while another swore he was at 10 Mile and Main just a few minutes later. Once while comparing notes on his whereabouts, he scared us out of our wits by walking past the store and glaring through the window.

Most of the guys were pretty lucky when it came to receiving tips, but I always seemed to get stiffed. On two different occasions I drove back to homes that had accidentally overpaid me by $20 and returned their cash. They grabbed the bills, turned on their heels and went inside. No thank you, let alone a tip. I had one lowlife actually cheat me out of money, then deny it. The next time he phoned, he ordered a six pack of Coke with his chicken. I shook the daylight out of those babies first. They must have gone off like the space shuttle.

But the best tip I ever earned came from a drunk wearing nothing but a pair of blue socks. I'd pounded on the door, announced why I was there, and waited on the landing.

A door creaked open at the top of a long flight of stairs, and a naked 70-year-old man stumbled down, wearing nothing but blue socks.

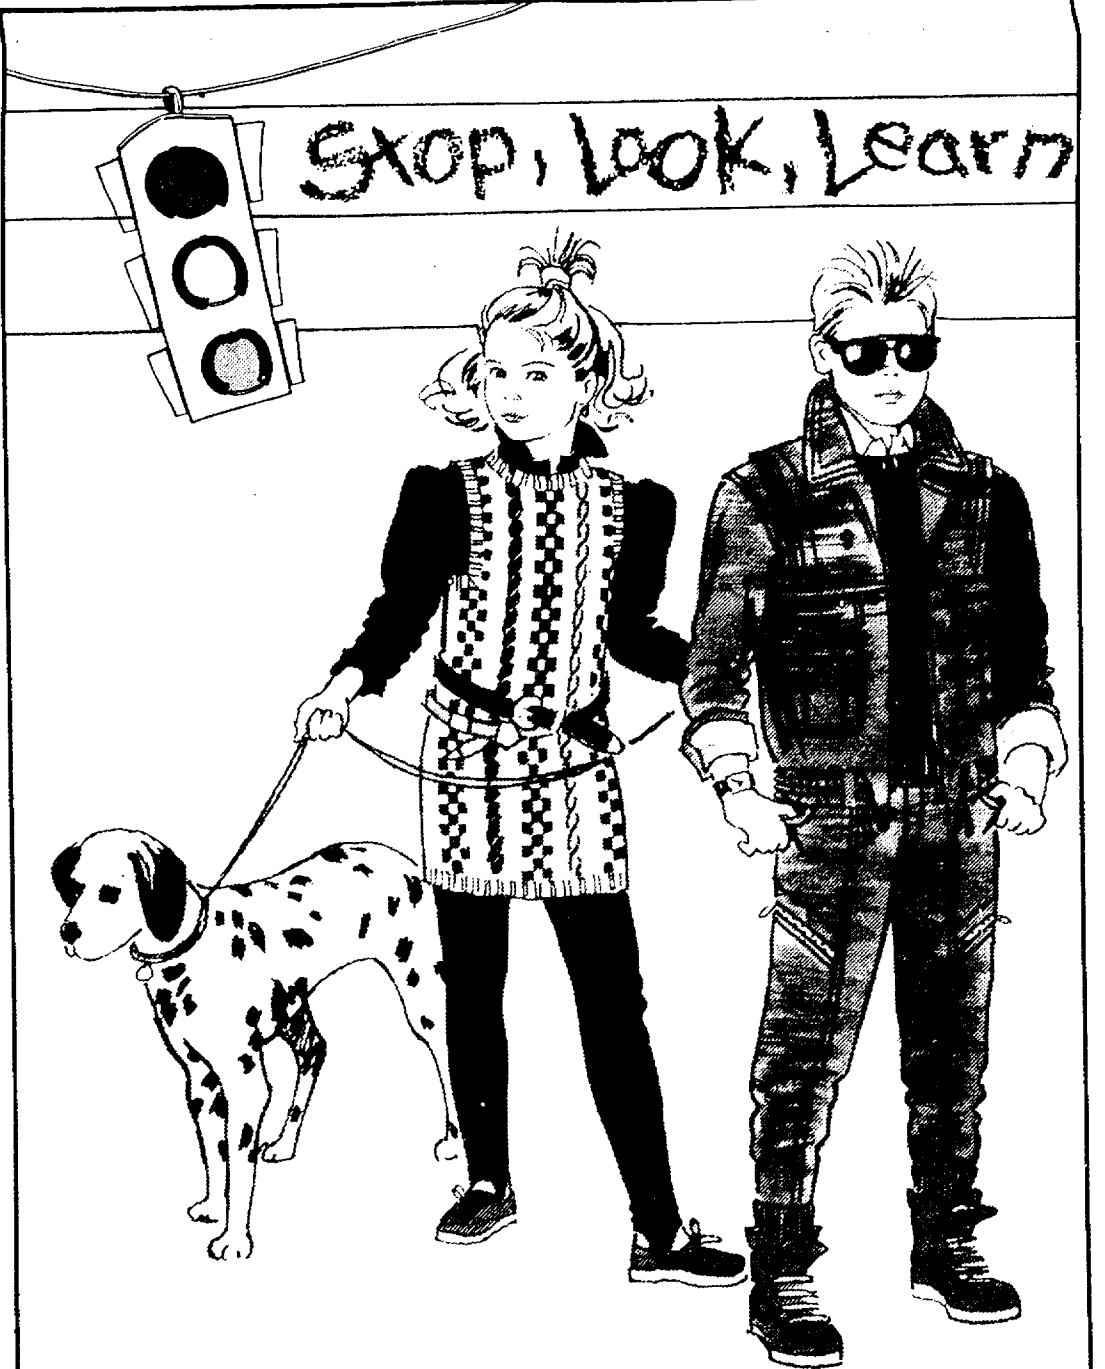

I stammered out the amount owed and watch as he fumbled around, searching for money. He kept slapping the sides of his legs, like he was wearing trousers and feeling for money in the pockets. Finally, he yelled upstairs for his wife to bring him his pants.

I steeled myself. All poise fled as she padded downstairs, equally naked, holding his britches and yelling at him for letting the food get cold. He pushed money at me, peeling off an extra bill, saying it was "for your trouble."

I backed out, not even counting the amount. Back at the restaurant, I discovered he'd tipped me $10. Or maybe it was a drunken oversight. I didn't care and wasn't about to go back.

The way I looked at it, there were eight million naked stories in the chicken business, and they had been two of them.

Police chase

A Farms man was at the Standard gas station at Mack and Moross Aug. 4 looking under the hood of his 1984 Cadillac when a 19-year-old Detroit man approached him, shoved a blue steel revolver in his back and told him to close the hood or be killed, police said.

The man had barely driven the car away when police spotted him and gave chase. Farms police were joined by a squad car from Harper Woods. The two chased him up I-94 to I-696, where he exited and careened around Roseville residential neighborhoods and back on to I-94 at 12 Mile Road. There he was stopped by two cars from the St. Clair Shores police department.

He had a hi-standard .22 caliber revolver with nine live rounds in the cylinder under the driver's seat and an eight-inch switchblade in his back pocket, police reports stated.

Police reports

There seems no end to the inventiveness of people intent on wreaking damage. Someone shoved a bottle rocket through the front door mail slot of a house on Moran Aug. 4. It landed on an upholstered chair, burning the fabric.

On the same day, in an unrelated incident, a youth tried to steal a bottle of wine cooler from Perry's Drug Store on Kercheval in the Farms. To conceal it, he thrust the chilled bottle down his shorts.

Store personnel stopped him before he made it out the door. Farms police took him to the station, where he waited in the "cooler" and passed the time knocking down the cement around the doorway. Police reports state that he was made to clean up the mess before being released.

The newborn porcupine defends itself as soon as it dries out, climbs trees within a day, weans in a week, and is on its own thereafter.

South reports theft, vandalism

A Grosse Pointe school had two police problems last week. Approximately $300 was missing from a cash box in a drawer in one of the South High's offices July 26. Police reported no signs of forced entry to the vault, the office or the desk.

Youth injured

A Farms youth was hospitalized briefly after his moped ran a stop sign at Kerby and Grosse Pointe Blvd. July 29 and was hit by a car. Witnesses said they saw his body fly through the air, missing a fire hydrant and a utility pole. Police said the youth had been drinking and had no operator's license or moped endorsement. A police officer, above, is shown making a report.

South registration Frohman is feature editor

New students will be enrolled at South High School during a second special summer enrollment period, which will begin Monday, Aug. 26.

High school students who are new to the South attendance area should call 343-2151 to schedule an enrollment conference with a counselor who will be on duty.

Students who do not enroll during this Aug. 26 to 29 pre-school registration period, will have to wait until 1 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 4, to enroll. At this late date students may have difficulty scheduling their preferred course selections.

Publisher Robert G. Edgar announced the appointment of Elsa J. Frohman as society/feature editor of the Grosse Pointe News. She replaces Janet Mueller who retired after 23 years with the paper.

Frohman, 33, is a 1969 graduate of South High. She earned a bachelor of arts degree in communications in 1980 from Wayne State University, where she was named the outstanding journalism graduate of the year.

She served five years with the U.S. Navy where she was a second class photographer's mate. In 1975 she was awarded first place, Navy-wide, for feature photography.

Her journalism experience includes three years as the feature editor of the Bellevue Gazette, a daily newspaper in Bellevue, Ohio. VA facts

Q — The courts have appointed me guardian for my father. Does that mean I can now cash his VA checks?

A — No, not until you have been certified by the VA to act as fiduciary. You should send a certified copy of the letter of guardianship to the VA regional office where the veteran's records are maintained.

Q — What constitutes individual incompetency for Veterans Administration benefits purposes?

A — For VA purposes, "incompetency" means that a person is unable to handle financial matters by reason of mental and physical disability.

Q — Can a veteran be considered legally incompetent by the Veterans Administration without submission of medical evidence?

A — Only if there has been a determination of incompetency by a state court. In all other cases medical evidence must be provided.

Q — Is there a way I can be assured a burial in a particular national cemetery?

A — No, graves in national cemeteries are assigned on a space available basis and cannot be reserved prior to death. You should write a statement of wishes and include it among other important documents which will be available to survivors. At the proper time the person making burial arrangements (usually the funeral director) should contact the director of the national cemetery in which burial is desired.

Q — What is a Presidential Memorial Certificate and who can receive one?

A — A Presidential Memorial Certificate bears the signature of the president and expresses the nation's grateful recognition of a veteran's service in the armed forces. The certificate is sent to the next-of-kin of a deceased honorably discharged veteran or upon request to a relative or friend.

County budget scrap shapes up

By Mike Andrzejczyk
It looks like it's going to be a long, hot budget season in Wayne County this year.

County Executive William Lucas unveiled his 1985-86 spending plan last Wednesday morning, calling for cuts of close to $10 million from last year's budget, which could mean the elimination of as many as 200 people from the county payroll.

Board of Commissioners Chairman John Hertel, who represents the First District that includes the Pointes and Harper Woods, said he was very disappointed with Lucas' announcement, saying the document presented Wednesday was not detailed enough to use to begin the budget process.

The county commission is charged with passage of a budget before the end of the county's fiscal year Dec. 1.

Lucas forecasts a general fund of $200.9 million, compared to this year's $195.7 million. But after considering the effects of inflation and certain one-time-only costs, the coming year's general fund is about $10 million less than this year's.

"The budget submitted is more severe than those in the past, but drafted consistent with the public mandate for fiscal reform," Lucas said in his address. "During the coming fiscal year, we will again see revenues drop due to lower property values. While the prosperity our nation has been enjoying has been helpful to state government, the county's property values have continued to decline."

"This decline will persist until the crime problem, which drives investment dollars and jobs out of our county, has been brought under control," he continued. "We have taken steps to alleviate this problem by offering the Governor N Building on the Eloise Campus which could house up to 1,000 felons. A safer community would increase investment and jobs in Wayne County and increase property values."

Although the proposed general fund budget for the coming fiscal year is larger than the previous year's, the actual level of operations and the associated budget decrease by 9 percent, Lucas said in his address.

The reductions can mean the elimination of as many as 200 positions, which Lucas said he hopes could be done through attrition.

Making the reduction necessary are declining property values that have cut revenues by almost $600,000 this year, probate court labor contracts that will cost $5.6 million more next year and court decision that have ordered payments of more than $12 million to eliminate cost of living allowances, Lucas said.

Also, Congress this year voted to phase out revenue sharing, costing the county $2 million in 1986 and $12 million starting in 1987, Lucas said.

"Though we are faced with an austere budget, leadership and imagination on the part of our Wayne County family will enable us to demonstrate our determination to live within our means," Lucas said to conclude his address. "We shall maintain our expectation of excellence for Wayne County and will settle for nothing less."

In an interview that Wednesday, Hertel said he was disappointed with the presentation made by the executive.

"Normally, when you're presented a budget, you're presented a detailed budget. He didn't give us a detailed budget," Hertel said. "What he gave us (Wednesday) lacks almost all details other than to tell us we have to lay off 200 people — he didn't say exactly where."

Lucas has until Friday to present the board with a detailed budget, he added.

There are other issues that will go on hold until the four-month budget process is completed, Hertel said. He added he saw three problems looming in this year's budget work. The first is the loss of federal revenue sharing, which will cost the county "tens of millions" of dollars.

Also, the county has lost lawsuits that may cost it as much as $20 million in back pay, Hertel said. Those lawsuits stem from changes Lucas made in working conditions for employees. One has already been settled to the county's detriment and others may follow similarly because they deal with the same area of law, he added.

Finally, property values in the county continue to decline, meaning less in the way of property tax revenues, Hertel said.

Despite that, "there is no possibility that we will raise taxes; absolutely none," Hertel said. Cuts will come in spending, he added.

There are really only three areas to look at when cutting a budget: personnel, capital expenditure and service.

"I'm absolutely sure we will spread it over all three," Hertel said, adding "it's extremely premature to say anything when I don't have a budget in front of me to see where those areas might be. Besides, it's going to be a four-month process."

Hertel said he was disappointed by what he called the political posturing in the executive's budget announcement. In meetings he had with Lucas after the executive switched parties this year, Hertel said he had told Lucas that it would become more difficult to avoid political wrangling between the Republican executive and the 14 Democratic commissioners.

"(Wednesday morning) I was extremely disturbed at the press conference because the whole thing was political. My response then was it was like none of the budgetary problems had been caused by the loss of revenue sharing from Washington; it was like the Reagan administration didn't exist. That was glossed over."

Lucas also failed to give credit to the state for more than $80 million worth of aid over the last two years to the county to help it balance its budget, Hertel said. That aid came in the form of forgiveness of some loans to the county by the state, reduction of interest rates on others and extension of payment schedules on still others.

That aid came as a result of a very cooperative effort by the governor, county executive and county commission, Hertel said.

"He never mentioned previous help by the state to the county. When he was questioned about that help, it was like we had never received anything from the state," Hertel said. "My comments afterward were, we're going to need the help of the state of Michigan. It would not have hurt Bill Lucas one bit to have said, yes, the governor of Michigan did help us $80 million worth in the past two years and we appreciate it."

"I said afterward that this just makes it all the more difficult by not getting down to the facts and getting into political posturing situations. That's what it was, political posturing. We have enough problems without getting into that."

Bearly hanging in there!

He's neat, he's petite and he's definitely developed a following at the Matthew C. Patterson Park, in Grosse Pointe Park. He is a white, cuddly bear that turned up unclaimed, but not unwanted, at the park earlier this summer. Maintenance supervisor David VanEck, left, and guard Dale Graham, let the little fella grab hold of the crossbar at the park where he coaxes miles of smiles from the dozens of daily visitors to the park. VanEck and Graham are asking visitors to name the bear. They've received more than 50 suggestions so far. They'll make a decision before the summer comes to a close.

Man hired to drive car, steals it

A Farms family got a rude surprise when they realized that the man hired to drive their 1977 Thunderbird to California had made off with the car.

When he failed to arrive in Van Nuys July 21 as expected, they called the police. The man had telephoned them twice en route, asking for money for car repairs. But when the car owner asked him for the location of the breakdown after the second call, the driver hung up and never called back.

In the car were a set of golf clubs, clothing, a drafting table and two lawn chairs, according to police reports.

you," he said. "It's like, when you drive a car, I warn you that you could get hit at the intersection of Moross and Kercheval and again at Moross and Chalfonte. Are you going to get hit with a falling star? Is a trailer truck going to fall over on you? I'm not saying there's no malpractice. But it might be malpractice — and it's still something you could get sued for."

The cost of drugs and vaccines has also risen, as manufacturers charge enough to set aside a fund against lawsuits. According to the doctor, the DPT vaccine against diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus has gone up 10 times, while the cost of polio vaccine has doubled just in the last two weeks.

"How can a person who works in a K mart go to the doctor and pay $50 for an office visit? They begin to feel, 'by god, I better get something for that fifty bucks and it better be good.' I can understand why they get upset."

Some doctors and patients rely on generic prescriptions to help keep the cost down. However, not all generic drugs are exactly identical to the name drugs for which they substitute.

"They legislated generic drugs, but they never legislated bio-equivalency," the doctor said. Doctors can specify generic or non-generic on the prescription, but there is nothing to force the patient to follow that order. And if the patient fails to get results from a generic drug, even taken against the doctor's orders, the doctor is still responsible.

According to statistics he has seen, 28 percent of Michigan doctors have already given up delivering babies. Most of them are in family practice. The doctor sees the problem as worst in a few high-cost states, Michigan among them.

Chances of doctors finally acting to get control of the situation are growing, he thinks. Doctors in 32 hospitals in upstate New York were ready to strike in July, until the governor stopped in at the last minute to freeze insurance costs and availability.

"They're working under a truce, but when's it going to stop?" said the doctor.

A group of Flint orthopedic surgeons took a similar step last week, at a time when the Michigan legislature cannot act because it is not in session, he pointed out. Doctors are not looking at it as an isolated act. "It's definitely going to come here — it's just a matter of time," he said.

The doctor has never been sued. Nevertheless, he has thought about giving up the obstetrical portion of his practice.

"I love my work, but maybe it's time to put my family first," he said. "The rewards, the satisfaction, are not what they used to be. I have a good relationship with my patients, but all it takes is one bad suit. One malpractice suit can ruin your life."

Resident competes in men's pageant

By Tom Greenwood

He's lean, he's clean, he's the All-American teen. But what Tony Petz really wants to be is the winner of the United States Michigan Men's Pageant.

Scheduled for Monday evening, Aug. 12, at the Premier Center, the contest bills itself as the "equivalent to the Miss America and Miss U.S.A. pageants," according to Diana Hunt, state executive director of the event.

"This is not a beauty contest, nor a beefcake contest," said Hunt. "This is part of an all-out, national search for the one man who exemplifies the All-American guy next door. Men who are trailblazers and trendsetters. Men who are able to break away from traditional rules, broadening their concepts of what constitutes manliness and at the same time to be role models for today and tomorrow's American male youth."

Whew! That's a pretty big order, but at 6 foot 1 inch, 176 pounds, blond haired, green eyed Tony Petz would love to fill the bill.

"Well, I heard about the pageant on the radio, and then some girls talked me into applying," Petz, 18, said. "I used to model when I was little and I've always been interested in acting, so I figured 'why not?'"

Petz first underwent a rigorous interview and made the final cut. "Diana was very professional," Petz said. "She wanted to know about my background and future aspirations. I told her I was a lifelong Pointer, and that I was a sophomore at Grand Valley State College where I'm a wide receiver on the varsity football team."

Tony added that he'll be majoring in business administration with hopes of acquiring a law degree.

"During the summer I also worked as an assistant chef at the Cafe Le Chat," Petz said. "I finally got her to laughing and that broke the ice. I was accepted and I'll be going up against a lot of other guys. I wasn't really nervous until we had our first rehearsals. There's a ton of good-looking guys in the pageant. Many of them are models and know how to present them-

"My four brothers have all been pretty supportive. Especially my brother Marty, who's sort of Mr. Everything. He's a junior executive at Chrysler's, but he also a songwriter and has produced a video for MTV. It's part of their basement tape video segment. I selves as such."

Preliminary competitions will be held before the Aug. 12 showdown, with contestants modeling swimwear and evening clothes. "I think my strong point will be the talent category," Petz said. "I'll sing a medley of songs by the Commodores. I have a little less than three minutes to convince the judges of my abilities."

Support from the family has been sort of, well, divided. "My father is kind of old-fashioned," Tony said with a smile. "He doesn't think guys should do stuff like this. He feels it's kind of sissyish. My mother is supportive and she wants me to have a good time. But she's afraid I'll get stars in my eyes and want to quit college."

was in it. Another brother is a writer in New York. He's working on a screenplay right now. If it flies, he said there'd be a part in it for me."

The five finalists in the pageant will receive $25,000 in scholarships and prizes, with the winner being flown to Beverly Hills, Calif. to compete in the national competition Sept. 1.

"I think I have a pretty good shot, if I don't get too nervous," Petz said. "It all depends on what the judges are looking for. If they're searching for the All-American boy next door, then I might have a chance."

"If they're looking for Joe Chic, well, I guess they'll look for someone else."

Strike force . . .

Automobile theft in Detroit has increased dramatically since 1978 when 19,493 vehicles were stolen. At that time, 84 percent were recovered and 8.05 percent of the cases were solved by an arrest. The following year, thefts increased to 21,432, with 18.05 percent solved by an arrest. Thefts continued to climb while recovery of vehicles remained about the same.

Arrests, however, fell off sharply.

In 1983, 35,288 cars were reported stolen. Of those, 85.6 percent were recovered but only 2.20 percent of the cases were solved through arrest.

Of those arrested, only a very small percentage were given any jail or prison time. In fact, if you took all of the car thieves sentenced to prison or jail last year by Recorder's Court judges, you would not be able to fill a Greyhound bus.

There were just 28!

I believe we need a strike force effort, not a transfer of the liability for criminal acts from the criminal to the neighborhood or from the community as a whole, to the victim!

If you believe as I do and as 17 Democratic and 2 Republican senators did with the House concurring, write to the governor and mayor and demand implementation of an Automobile Theft Strike Force on the streets of Detroit and Wayne County.

Dossins gave Detroit a maritime legacy

By Elsa Frohman

It was 1960. Doug Dossin was six years old. He was one of a group of his family members who each turned a shovelful of soil to officially begin construction of the Dossin Great Lakes Museum on Belle Isle. "I remember it was exciting," Doug said. "There were a lot of people around, and my parents and the channel 2 (television) news."

A lot of water has flowed by the Dossin Great Lakes Museum since that day, and the Dossin family — long-time residents of Grosse Pointe Park — have been part of the growth and maturation of the museum.

The museum is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year with a special new exhibit on shipwrecks in the Great Lakes. A birthday celebration was held at the museum two weeks ago to kick off the anniversary year.

The museum bears the name of the Dossin family because the family donated the funds which made the museum a reality. The family gave $125,000, which the city of Detroit matched.

You can't talk about the Dossin museum without mentioning Miss Peps V. The museum was conceived as a home for the retired boat, and while all aspects of boating and shipping on the lakes are featured in the museum, Miss Peps V is still the centerpiece. She resides in her own special wing, a monument to the Dossins' love of the water.

There was a time when you couldn't drink a bottle of soda pop without reading the Dossin name as you lifted it to enjoy the last drops. Dossin Bottling held the Pepsi franchise for this area for many years until the family sold out to the Pepsi company.

But Dossin Food Products, the parent company, was much more than soda pop. E.J. Dossin, the late patriarch of the clan, and his three sons, Russell, Roy and Walter, started out with horseradish and pickles.

Sidonie Knighton, one of Russell's three children, said the family has always had a special love for boats and the water — coming to the Detroit area in 1848, as French traders, via the St. Lawrence Seaway.

It was E.J.'s sons, Walter, Roy and Russell who got interested in hydroplane racing and decided to build Miss Peps V.

Miss Peps V was the result of the brothers' interest. It was an innovative boat, hooking two engines in tandem for more power than had been seen before.

By the way, Miss Peps V was the first of three boats owned by the Dossins. The Roman numeral five was included in the name to make it closer to Peps.

"Commercialism wasn't accepted like it is now," Doug explained. While the boat advertised Pepsi, it raced under the Detroit Yacht Club banner.

Doug's father, Ernest Dossin — Sidonie's brother, was the crew chief for Miss Peps V. He traveled with the boat as it competed on the Unlimited circuit — ultimately bringing the Gold Cup back to Detroit.

With her powerful tandem engines, Miss Peps V ran better in rough water than most of the boats in competition in 1948 — Miss Peps V's glory year. The drivers would take the boat out and "rough up" the course before the race started.

"The other drivers hated that," Doug said. "And they hated getting behind her. They said it was like riding behind the Queen Mary because of the wake she threw up."

When Miss Peps V was retired, her engines were "pickled," filled with oil to preserve them. The hydroplane could be taken from her berth in the museum today and put back in the water to run just as she did in the past.

With Miss Peps V in mothballs, the Dossins began to look for a suitable place to display her. The museum seemed like an ideal showcase for a classic boat.

Though ground was broken for the museum in 1960 it was nearly five years later Miss Peps V was in her permanent home. The original grant ran out before the special wing was constructed and the city came back to the Dossins for more money to build the boat's display place.

The museum has prospered in the quarter century since the Dossins broke ground there. From the paneled room taken from a

Three generations of Dossins gathered recently to talk about the 25th anniversary of the Dossin Great Lakes Museum. From the left are: Jackie Reid, granddaughter of Russell Dossin, Josephine Reid, great-granddaughter of Russell Dossin; Doug Dossin, son of Ernest Dossin and grandson of Russell Dossin; Sidonie Knighton, daughter of Russell Dossin; and Thomas Dossin, son of Russell Dossin. All but Doug are Grosse Pointe residents. Jackie is one of Sidonie's three daughters. Two live out of state.

Great Lakes steamer, to the periscope, to the ship models, to this year's new shipwreck display, the museum continues to fascinate visitors of all ages.

"It's grown a lot," Sidonie said. "There is so much that isn't on display." Many exhibits that there just isn't enough room for are in storage at historic Fort Wayne.

The museum management has plans to expand the display area to make room for more exhibits — if funds can be found. Original plans for the museum also included docks for visitors to come to the museum by water.

The 25th anniversary party held recently featured films of the ground breaking.

"It's real cute to see Doug and my daughter breaking ground," Sidonie said.

Another anniversary activity has been the release in the water of a floating boardgame, Captain of the Fleet. One out of every five of the floating surprise packages includes a coupon for a limited edition print by Jim Clary.

The packages were released from freighters as they passed through the lakes. They include cards to be mailed back to the museum to mark the location where each of the packages was recovered.

The Dossins have made Great Lakes history with Miss Peps V, preserved it with their generous support of the Dossin museum — but they are also an integral part of the Grosse Pointe community.

"The family has been here (in Grosse Pointe) a long time," Sidonie said. "They're getting scattered now. It's kind of sad."

But there are still a good number of Dossins in the community. Donald J. Dossin, son of Walter Dossin, is a deacon at St. Paul Catholic Church — and Mrs. E.J. Dossin, wife of the family patriarch, is one of the Pointes' oldest living residents at 105. Sidonie's brother, Thomas Dossin, and one of her three daughters, are also Pointers.

Sidonie and her family take an active interest in the development of the museum. She is a former president of the Detroit Historical Society Guild and is currently the chairman for the Guild's Patriotic Award. She is also a member of the Navy League of the United States of Michigan and of the Historic Memorial.

Three Leon sisters to give joint concert

Music lovers in the Detroit area will be treated to a unique musical experience on Sept. 7 when three Grosse Pointe sisters, accomplished musicians all, make a rare appearance together. This special performance features the Leons — Stephanie, pianist; Suzanne, violinist; and Kelly, violinist; performing a lively program featuring works by Prokofiev, classical selections, and Gershwin.

Many music lovers will recognize the Leon name. The three sisters are natives of Grosse Pointe, and have each garnered numerous local and national music awards. This year, Stephanie performed as a soloist with the Detroit Metropolitan Orchestra; Suzanne was the featured soloist with the Allen Park Symphony; and Kelly won a WQRS/Maccabees "Quest for Excellence" award.

Not only will this performance be a chance to hear the young women play together, but it serves as a send-off for two of the sisters who will depart for their European orchestral debut: Stephanie, who recently completed her masters' studies in piano at the University of Michigan, and Suzanne, who finished her music studies at the renowned Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Kelly, the youngest sister, is studying violin at the Juilliard School of Music.

The concert is being sponsored by American Citizens for Justice to highlight the positive achievements by these extremely talented young women. Tickets are $6, $15, and $40. For further information call 356-3870.

Tickets are tax-deductible.

Grass is more than meets eye

There are more advantages than meet the eye from a well-kept, attractive lawn — particularly when it is landscaped with a combination of flowers, shrubs and trees, says a noted turfgrass university scientist.

According to Dr. James B. Beard, professor of Turfgrass Science at Texas A&M University in College Station, a more livable environment is a major benefit of well-maintained turfs, particularly for people living in high density urban areas.

"There are several distinct areas in which turfgrasses can make significant functional contributions to the quality of life," says Dr. Beard, who lectures internationally on turfgrass topics and has written five books, including "How to Have a Beautiful Lawn."

For instance: a well-established lawn has considerable dust stabilization value, as anyone who has lived in a newly constructed house knows. Wind-blown dust from yards with bare soil can permeate a house, increasing cleaning problems and making life uncomfortable.

Another valuable byproduct of a green, actively growing lawn is heat dissipation, the result of grasses releasing water into the atmosphere by transpiration. "This conversion of water from liquid to vapor cools the leaf surface and dissipates heat in the process," Dr. Beard explains.

This process is particularly valuable in urban and suburban areas where high concentrations of hard surfaces absorb and radiate heat, causing temperature increases of 10 to 20 degrees F.

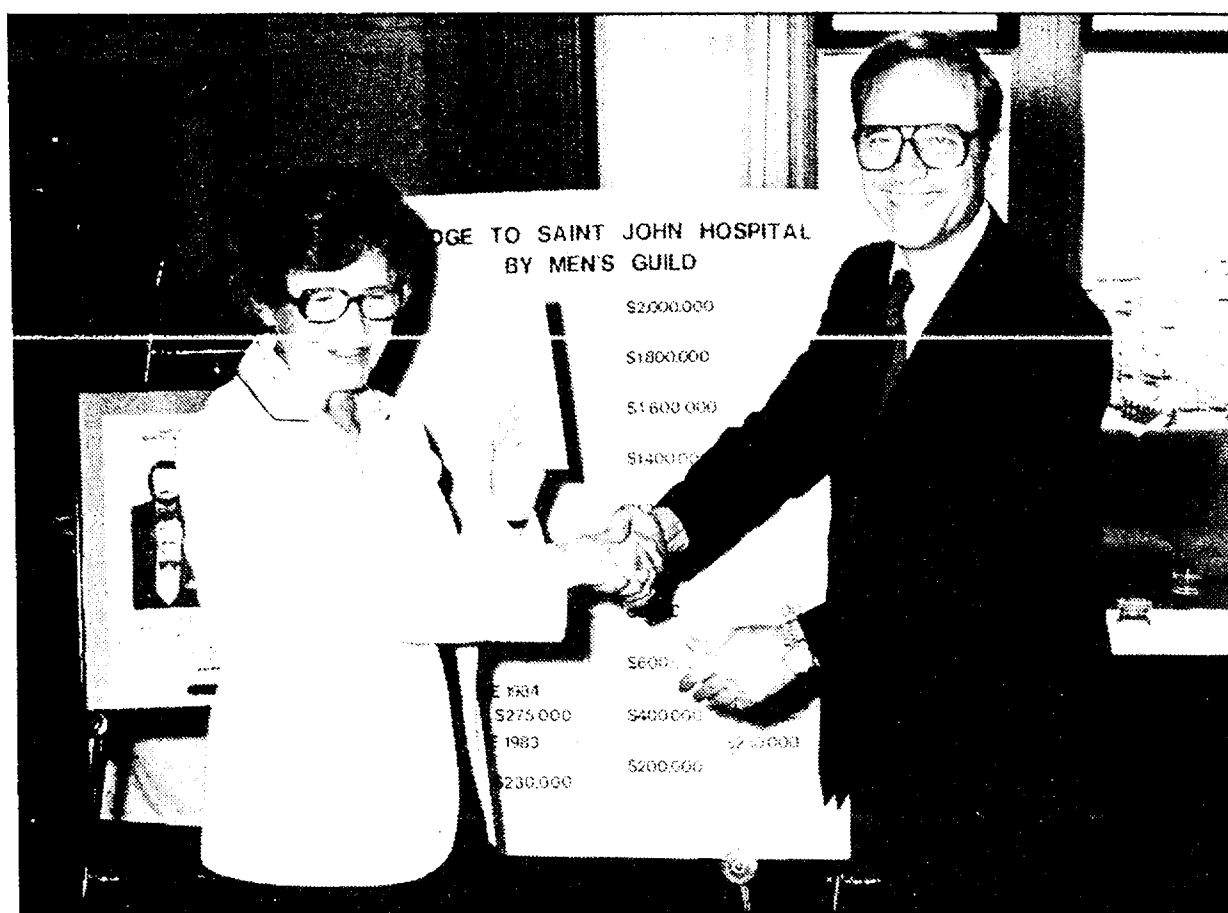

Noise reduction is also helped by a well-maintained lawn, especially when combined with surrounding tree and shrub vegetation. Research has shown that properly placed vegetation along urban freeways can decrease noise levels by 15 to 35 percent over a distance of 30 to 70 feet.

"You'd get less noise reduction than this from a closely-mowed lawn," the scientist says, "but the reduction can still be significant."

Other advantages of well-maintained lawns include less glare and eye discomfort compared to that resulting from relatively smooth surfaces, such as sand and pavement.

Safety, also, is enhanced when lawn turf is thick and well-kept, providing a cushion which reduces shock and potential injury that can result from falls.

Grass is by far the most effective and economical method available to stabilize soil against loss by water erosion, Beard adds. This is true not only for lawns but also for roadsides, parks and institutional grounds.

Sister Verence McQuade, SSJ, vice president for Patient and Community Service of St. John Hospital and director of the hospital Guild, accepts a $285,000 donation from Walter DiGiulio, MD, president of the Guild. The check represents the Guild's fund raising efforts for the past year and is part of a pledge to raise $2 million toward construction of the hospital's new $60.5 million Concentrated Care Building. Guild donations in the past two years have totaled $800,000.

Men's Guild donates $285,000 for Concentrated Care building

The Men's Guild of St. John Hospital recently presented a check for $285,000 to the hospital at its annual meeting held at the Grosse Pointe Club.

The presentation of the check was followed by the election of officers for a one-year term. They include Kenneth Adler, of Grosse Pointe Shores, president; Gennaro DiMaso, MD, of St. Clair Shores, vice president; Robert LeFevre of Grosse Pointe Woods, secretary; and Alphonse Santino, MD, of Grosse Pointe Shores, treasurer.

Directors elected to serve a three-year term were John Adamo, of St. Clair Shores; Sam LaFata, of St. Clair Shores; Steve Flemion, of St. Clair Shores; and Charles E. Stumb, Jr., of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Awards were presented by Walter DiGiulio, MD, of Grosse Pointe Shores, president of the Guild; and Sr. Verence McQuade, SSJ, vice president, Patient and Community Services, Saint John Hospital and director of the Guild, to members who were instrumental in the success of the guild's largest fundraiser — its annual dinner party.

Recipients were George Cueter, of Grosse Pointe Woods, chairman; Anthony Georgio, of Grosse Pointe Shores, and Alphonse Santino, MD, co-chairmen; Kenneth Adler, Walter DiGiulio, MD, Gennaro DiMaso, MD; Richard Filippelli, of Grosse Pointe Woods; Vernon Glendening, of Grosse Pointe Shores; and Leo Kalyvas, Jr., of Grosse Pointe Shores. Others included Robert LeFevre; Alexander M. Nick, of Grosse Pointe Shores; Bryon Perry of Birmingham; James J. Scott, of Grosse Pointe Shores; Lawrence M. Scott, of Harper Woods; and Robert Valice, DDS, of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Receiving awards for other activities included Lawrence M. Scott for the 1984 Golf Outing; Tymon Totte, DDS, of Grosse Pointe Shores, membership; James H. Scott, Eastland Party; and Gerald Pekkari, of St. Clair Shores, Eastland Party.

Those having completed two terms as directors include Edmund M. Brady, Jr., of Grosse Pointe Shores; Clifford Carpenter, of Grosse Pointe Park; W. Peter McCabe, MD of Grosse Pointe Shores; and Tymon C. Totte, DDS.

Today just as in its beginning in 1948, the St. John Hospital Guild is open to all men who wish to help the hospital meet the health care needs of our community. Its nearly 600 members have been paramount in the development of the hospital. The Guild is known nationwide for its philanthropic efforts.

More information is available by calling the SJH Guild office at 343-3674.

St. Clair Shores Symphony to change its name

Beginning its 24th season, the St. Clair Shores Symphony Orchestra announces major changes for the 1985/86 season.

The organization has made a name change, and is now the Lake St. Clair Symphony Orchestra. This will allow the orchestra to intensify its outreach policy and identify more closely with the surrounding communities, in particular, MI. Clemens.

The second major change is the hiring of Associate Conductor Charles Greenwell. Greenwell, a resident of Grosse Pointe Woods, is well-known to the Detroit Metro area classic music audience by his association with radio station WQRS-FM. Remaining as music director, is Michael Krajewski, but with curtailed duties due to his increased responsibilities with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

The orchestra's opening concert of the season will be Oct. 26 at the Lakeview High School, St. Clair Shores, and will feature guest soloist Misha Rachlevsky, violinist. Rachlevsky is well-known to concert audiences as the music director of the Renaissance City Chamber Players. The season finale will be May 16-17 at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts. This joint production of the Center and the Orchestra will be the grand ballet "Coppelia." Principal dancers will be Evelyn Cisneros and Kirk Peterson of the San Francisco Ballet.

Season ticket orders are now being taken. For a brochure or further information, call the symphony office at 776-1012.

Relish these piquant homemade accoutrements

A selection of recipes from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol and pennywise kitchens of Thrya Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth, featuring preserves and relishes this week.

Green Tomato Preserves

A delicacy that is sold only in the most expensive gourmet shops. Don't let the frost take the last of the green tomatoes from your garden plot. Try to have at least two lemon slices that show in each jar.

5 pounds green tomatoes
4 pounds granulated sugar
2 lemons, very thinly sliced with peeling

Core and peel tomatoes and chop fine. Add sugar and let stand overnight. Drain liquid into large kettle and boil rapidly until thickened. Add chopped green tomatoes and lemon slices. Cook until thick and clear. Pour boiling hot, into hot sterilized pint canning jars. Seal immediately. Makes 6 pints.

Calories about 18 per tablespoon. Cholesterol 0.

Beet Relish

4 cups chopped, cooked beets
4 cups chopped cabbage
1/2 cup grated horseradish
2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
2 cups vinegar
1 cup sugar

Elegant Eating

Combine the beets, cabbage and horseradish and season with salt and pepper. Scald the vinegar, dissolve the sugar in it and add it to the first mixture. Cook until vegetables are tender. Seal in hot sterilized jars. Makes five pints.

Nectarine Relish

4 pounds firm-ripe nectarines, peeled, pitted and sliced thin
1 cup sultana raisins
1 1/2 cups firmly packed light brown sugar
3/4 cup cider vinegar

1/2 tsp. ground cloves
5 Tblsp. very finely diced crystallized ginger

1/2 cup silvered almonds (optional)

Place all ingredients in an enamel or stainless-steel kettle, cover and heat very slowly to simmering; uncover and simmer 45 minutes, stirring frequently. Meanwhile wash and sterilize six half-pint jars and closures, stand them on a baking sheet in a 250° oven until needed. If desired add nuts to mixture. Ladle boiling hot into jars, filling to 1/8-inch of tops. Wipe rims and seal. Cool, check seals and store in a cool, dark place several weeks before serving. Makes six half-pints.

PEACH RELISH — Follow above recipe substituting peaches for nectarines.

Calories about 30 per tablespoon without nuts. Cholesterol 0.

Spicy Berry Relish

3/4 to 1 cup cider vinegar
1 1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon
1/2 tsp. ground allspice
6 Tblsp. very finely diced crystallized ginger
Wash and sterilize 6 half-pint jars and closures, stand them on a baking sheet in a 250° oven to keep hot until needed.

Place berries in a large enamel or stainless-steel saucepan and crush a few with a potato masher. Cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, until berries are soft. Mix in remaining ingredients, insert a candy thermometer, and boil slowly, stirring frequently until thermometer registers 218°F. Ladle into jars, filling to within 1/8-inch of tops. Camping trip takes scouts to UP

Fifteen Boy Scouts of Troop 479, Parcels Middle School, and five adults backpacked for six days across the Pictured Rocks National Lakeshore between Grand Marais and Munising last month. They earned hiking, camping and cooking merit badges and scouting's 50-miler award.

Scoutmaster Joe Meining and troop camping chairman Ralph Brody, both Woods residents, planned the High Adventure trip, which supplements the troop's monthly campouts during the school year and a summer week at a scout camp near Metamora in Lapeer County.

How to curb child's mouth

One day, nine-year-old Todd ran into the house and used a four-letter word to his Mom. It was a word his parents had never used in his presence. His Mom was horrified; she sent Todd to his room until his Dad came home.

Together, Mom and Dad decided to wash Todd's mouth out with soap — but when they had some friends over the next evening, Todd used the same word again, in front of their company. He even appeared proud when he said it.

How can parents successfully discourage children from using unacceptable language?

First of all, according to the Growing Up newsletter, harsh treatment won't work. The more severe the punishment, the more the forbidden words seem to fascinate the child.

Even bribery won't work. When one set of parents promised to pay their son a dollar at the end of the week if he didn't use a certain word, he told them he knew another word that would be worth at least five dollars!

One of the reasons children use forbidden words is because it makes them feel grown-up and gives them a sense of power. By using these words, children dare and provoke their parents. They particularly enjoy it when a parent loses composure.

Whatever the child's reason for using foul language, there are ways parents can deal with the problem. The most important of these is for the parents to avoid using the taboo words themselves. The attitude "do as I say but not as I do" will not work.

The Growing Up newsletter follows a child's development through the school years. For more information, write to Growing Up, P.O. Box 620N, Lafayette, Ind. 47902. Include your child's school grade when writing.

Local girl wins PM contest

Ann Eisengruber of Grosse Pointe is one of the Center For Creative Studies team members who won first place in the undergraduate category of the 16th annual Philip Morris Marketing/Communications Competition.

The Center For Creative studies team received $2,000 for its project suggesting the introduction of a new line of freeze-dried dinners called "Fresh Harvest." Their advertising slogan, "the Easy Food For Hard to Please Appetites" stressed the quality of the product and the ease of preparation.

As a competition judge, John A. Murphy, president and chief operating officer of Philip Morris Incorporated said "For the past 16 years our Marketing/Communications Competition for Students has made it possible for hundreds of bright young Americans to conceive and propose marketing projects for Philip Morris' non-tobacco products or operations. This hands-on experience serves as more than an academic exercise. It has provided students with an experience which they say has been very helpful in their careers."

The competition is designed to provide an opportunity for students nationwide to apply their marketing and communications skills. Student committees are invited to identify a marketing communications issue of interest, and to present, in writing, a campaign which could succeed in today's competitive business environment.

The program is open to graduate and undergraduate students currently enrolled in accredited institutions of higher education.

Understanding the hysterectomy operation

By William T. Mixson, M.D., President

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Hysterectomy is one of the most common major surgical procedures performed on American women today. Since there is a 50 percent chance that you will have a hysterectomy by the time you are age 65, you should know some of the medical problems this surgical procedure treats.

The term "total hysterectomy" means removal of the uterus and cervix — the opening to the uterus — but does not include the fallopian tubes or ovaries. With a total hysterectomy, a woman will stop menstruating, but will not go through menopause until her normal time since her ovaries will still produce hormones.

Among the reasons for hysterectomy are unusual bleeding that cannot be controlled by medication, endometriosis — where tissue that is normally found inside the uterus grows elsewhere in the pelvis; and non-cancerous tumors (leiomyomas or fibroids) that cause pain or pressure due to increased size or bleeding.

Hysterectomy also may be recommended for cases where muscles, ligaments, and other tissues around the reproductive organs weaken and sag because of childbirth. If there are indications of cancer of the uterus, a hysterectomy may be necessary. Although the operation ends a woman's ability to have children, it is not recommended as a method of sterilization.

The terms vaginal and abdominal hysterectomy simply refer to where the incision will be made for the surgery. The hospital stay will run about a week, and normal everyday activities, including sexual intercourse, usually can be resumed within six to eight weeks. Because the operation does not involve the outer genitals or vagina, the surgery should not physically affect your sexual response. However, your emotional reaction may depend on why you are having the operation and your feelings about no longer menstruating and not being able to become pregnant.

Hysterectomy is a major operation, but the surgical risk is one of the lowest of any major surgery. Minor side effects are slight fever and temporary difficulty in emptying the bowel or bladder. Major complications include the risk of blood clots, severe infection, hemorrhage after surgery, and even death. Your doctor will review the risks and benefits of the surgery with you.

Single, free copies of "Understanding Hysterectomy" (p-008) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 600 Maryland Ave. SW, Washington, D.C. 20024.

Outdoor cooking

The smell of hot dogs, hamburgers or steaks grilling over a charcoal fire is an essential part of summer time fun for many Americans. To help keep outdoor cooking enjoyable while still reducing cancer risk, the American Institute for Cancer Research (AICR) has published a booklet.

"Facts You Should Know About Outdoor Cooking," outlines many of the problems that recent research has shown to be associated with backyard barbecuing. But this booklet also offers many useful suggestions on ways to still enjoy outdoor grilling while minimizing the health risks that may be associated with it.

The booklet offers a number of tips on how to reduce health risks. Suggestions include using cooler fires for fewer flare-ups from dripping fat, cooking meat without charring it, and covering grill surfaces with aluminum foil with holes punched to let fat drip out, in order to protect the meats from flare ups and smoke. Also included in the booklet are some menu suggestions and recipes that fit the dietary guidelines for lower cancer risk.

Single copies may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-sized envelope to American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. OC, P.O. Box 76216, Washington, D.C. 20013.

"We would tell concerned citizens to enjoy the summer. Stay active. But protect yourselves; 90 percent of all skin cancers develop on uncovered parts of the body. Be aware of what you are doing. Cover up. Wear appropriate clothing and apply the proper sunscreens. Then you can enjoy outdoor activities in the sunshine... your whole life long."

Take it easy under the sun

Great-Grandmother may have had the right idea. In her day, a "proper" young lady carried a parasol and wore hat, gloves and a long skirt to keep her out of the sun.

Today, a deep dark tan has replaced the earlier view of lily white skin as the sign of a beauty, but the United Cancer Council warns that Great-Grandmother was much less likely to develop dangerous and disfiguring skin cancer than are the bathing beauties of 1985.

The UCC is a not-for-profit organization founded in 1963, with offices in Indianapolis, Ind., and Washington, D.C. The Council and its member agencies have long believed that public education is vital to reducing the incidence of cancer in the United States.

"Beauty may be skin deep," asserts UCC Executive Director Michael Hyman, "but skin won't be beautiful for too many summers if abused by overdoses of sunshine. Sunshine is a great thing, but ultra violet rays can be dangerous. We just want people to know they should be careful and treat the sun with respect."

The most common form of cancer — close to 400,000 new cases are reported each year in the United States, alone — is skin cancer. Fortunately, 95 percent of the cases are curable if treated early enough.

People who are fair-skinned are more susceptible, but skin cancer can affect anyone, even blacks. Those with red or blond hair and blue eyes are particularly at risk, for their skin lacks sun-protective pigmentation.

Sun exposure is cumulative in its destructive effect. Most cancers develop in the patient's fifth decade, although the situation may be severe by the age of 20. Skin cancer is particularly prevalent among people exposed to large enough amounts of intense sunlight over long periods of time, such as farmers, fishermen, gardeners, swimmers, sailors and skiers.

Culture patterns also affect prevalence of skin cancer. In the United States, where drivers sit on the left, skin cancer most frequently appears on the left side of the face. Similarly, people living in the south are more prone to skin cancer than people living in less "sunshiny" climes.

Despite its frequency, skin cancer is easily diagnosed and treated. While usually not fatal, it can produce extensive deformity and scarring if not attended properly.

Basal cell variety begins as a small fleshy nodule, most frequently on sun-exposed parts of the face and hands. It progresses slowly, reaching one inch in diameter only after several months. In about one year the lesion ulcerates and begins to bleed, shedding the crust. This process is repeated until treated under local anesthesia by a specialist. Lacking treatment, basal cell cancer can spread to surrounding normal skin and cause serious trouble.

Squamous cell cancer usually appears on pre-existent, precancerous lesions on any area of the skin of a mucous membrane. The lips, mouth and genitalia are likely sites. Treatment is essential, as the lesions will increase in size and spread if unattended. White, thickened patches on the lips and mouth and horny growths in sun-exposed areas of the skin may be premalignant forerunners of squamous cell cancer. The lesions are benign as long as the individual is not exposed to sunlight.

"We are not trying to return to the ways of yesteryear," maintains UCC's Hyman. "Hoop skirts and parasols are long gone. We are, however, trying to alert the public to the potential dangers they unwittingly expose themselves to. They may be trading a day of sunbathing now for years of skin cancer later. And I personally don't believe that is a good deal by any standard!"

"We would tell concerned citizens to enjoy the summer. Stay active. But protect yourselves; 90 percent of all skin cancers develop on uncovered parts of the body."

"Be aware of what you are doing. Cover up. Wear appropriate clothing and apply the proper sunscreens. Then you can enjoy outdoor activities in the sunshine... your whole life long."

Lynn Zwickey: Giving life to clay

By Elsa Frohman

Many of Lynn Zwickey's children have removable heads.

"If I get tired of a head, I can switch to another head," he explained.

He calls them gooks. They are small, intricately crafted ceramic characters steeped in subtle humor. They live in his basement, displayed on an oval table, only a few feet from the work table where they are created.

The interchangeable heads led to the invention of headholders — each an artistic creation in itself.

Pointer of Interest

And headholders led to foot holders.

But the 40-year Grosse Pointe Woods resident wasn't always an artist. His formal education was in veterinary medicine. Though he graduated from Michigan State University in 1930 with a veterinary degree, he never practiced.

"I had no business studying veterinary medicine," he said. "I don't like sick animals. I'm no good with them."

Rather than go into practice as a veterinarian, Zwickey became a teacher, first teaching general science, then later, biology. In the last few years before he retired in 1969, he changed his specialty completely and taught English.

"I switched to English because of the DNA molecule," he said. "They discovered it and I didn't know anything anymore. I didn't like that."

Zwickey took up clay sculpture as a hobby about 40 years ago. He says the need for artistic creation came to him genetically from his father, J. Lorenzo Zwickey, a chalk-talk lecturer on the old Chautauqua circuit.

"If you wait long enough, your genes are going to catch up with you," Zwickey said.

In retirement, Zwickey is a true Renaissance man. His interests range from playing piano, to studying French, to gardening in his distinctively landscaped backyard.

Zwickey placed his garage in the far back corner of his yard, facing to the side, so the drive would sweep back to it in a graceful curve — a curve that is repeated many times in his other works of art. The placement is unusual, but the effect on the environment of his yard is impressive.

Zwickey thrives on human company. He is active in several organizations, including the Grosse Pointe Senior Mens Club and the Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe. Until recently, he made regular appearances in the Detroit Public Schools — doing demonstration of freehand paper cutting in the shapes of animals.

Despite his insistence that he "isn't good with sick animals," his love of animals is evident in his art works. In addition to the humanoid gooks, the shelves in his basement are crowded with his older animal works.

Local artist Lynn Zwickey with some of his little people.

The animals range from a large, forceful baboon, to tiny, whimsical puppies. Each is perfectly proportioned to its species.

"I guess that's my veterinary training," he said. "I know how long each of the bones is."

Zwickey's gooks are accompanied by humorous titles. A sculpture of a gook holding two geese by the neck is called "Gentleman subjugating two geese." He said there was no particular story behind the scene. "I like to make people and I like to make geese. So I made a man with geese."

Another piece depicts three boys seated on a horse. The title, "The Siege of Troy," is a bilingual pun. "Siege" means seat in French, and Troy is a close match for the French number three.

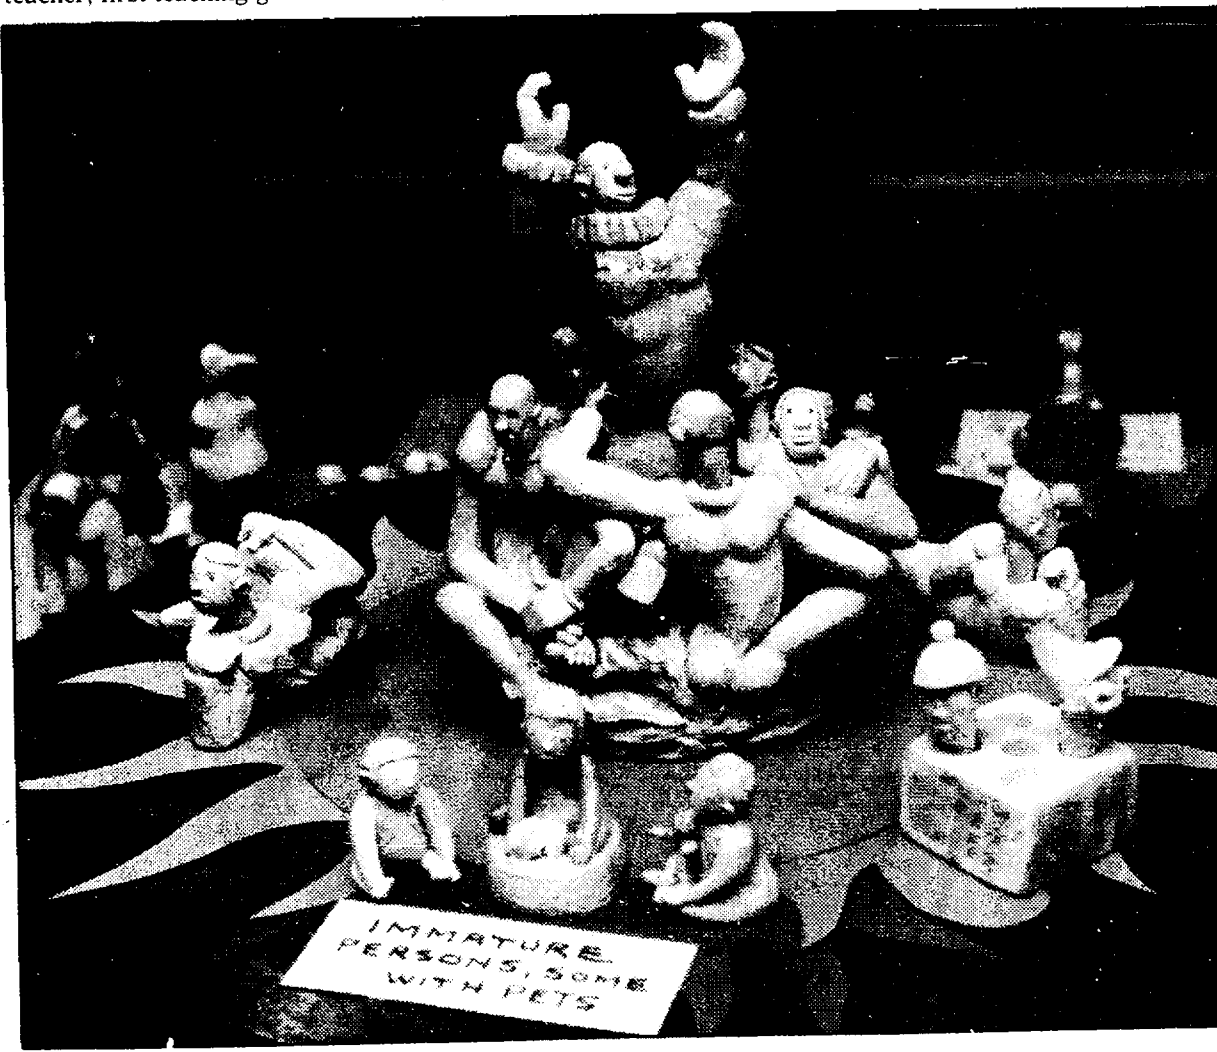

Incidentally, the term gook is not applied as a racial epithet. Zwickey explained that many years ago, a young friend couldn't pronounce Zwickey, and substituted "Mr. and Mrs. Gook" for his and his late wife's names. The name stuck and he later applied it to his ceramic people.

Zwickey's ceramics have been displayed in art galleries as far away as Wisconsin and New York. They have been sold through the gift shop at the Detroit Institute of Arts. But for all their value, Zwickey gives his sculptures freely to his friends — all except the gooks, that is. Gooks are members of the family and are not given away lightly.

"I get very fond of them," he said.

Recently, Zwickey has been working on a book recording the progress of his art over 40 years. He is having trouble with the title, however. He is not sure whether it will be "Heads and Tales," or "Heads and Tails." A minor difference, but a major concern to a perfectionist.

Stella Stone, a friend of Zwickey, suggested and contributed to this article.

Some of Zwickey's gooks have elaborate titles, while others stand on their personal merit.

Blue boat covers? Shocking!

You know what I like about Grosse Pointe? We're never without a controversy here. Oh, we're no Detroit, with major corporations bailing out of the city every other week. But we can hold our own in the "let's-see-what-we-can-get-upset-about-this-week" department.

First it was school closings, then finding a school superintendent. If that wasn't enough, there was always the liquor in the City discussions or "what are they taxing us for this week" debates. Now it's blue boat covers. That's right, the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club is using blue boat covers on its wintering boats.

Oh, the shame, the degradation. Two weeks ago, a reader from the Woods wrote the News a letter to the editor complaining about the "highly unacceptable" blue boat covers at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. Seems a number of folks are up in arms over the GPYC's use of shocking blue covers. (The temptation here is to say that residents are revolting. Maybe they are, but not as revolting as the covers.)

Anyway, what I want to know is, where are Time and Newsweek on this issue? This is big news. I mean, blue boat covers in Grosse Pointe? Next they'll be telling me that Grosse Pointe Shores is going to raze the old Vernier School and put up a Wendy's or a White Castle.

The GPYC, in the form of Commodore James Daoust, was quick to allay fears that the club has gone "video." In a Feb. 14 letter to the News, Daoust explained that the covers were new and not reusable and that blue was the only tint available at the time the present covers were ordered.

That's a relief. For a moment, I had a picture of gaudily striped boat covers that blind becoming permanent Lakeshore Road fixtures. Or boat covers with advertisements on them. After all, you let a few blue covers in and then what have you got? Who wants his view of the lake spoiled by a giant Day-Glo green yacht cover hawking "Cinzano," or "STP" or "Best Burgers in Town?"

Boating is the Pointe's biggest sport and as sports editor, I can understand the feelings of those who caught a glimpse of those Art Deco covers and felt weak in the knees and light in the head. This is the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club we're talking about here; the standard-setters for the Pointe, some say. What if somebody from outside the Pointe should see the covers? Oh, woe. Oh, mortification. Sell the house and send the kids away to military school, Buffy, we've been humiliated.

Why, I'll bet even Birmingham wouldn't be so tacky as to have bright blue boat covers. If they had boats in Birmingham.

And the headlines! "Pointe in Slump, Uses Blue Boat Covers," — Wall Street Journal. "Residents Threaten to Secede from Community, Cite Blue Boat Covers as Cause," — N.Y. Times. "Space Alien Forces Affluent Community to Use Shocking Blue Boat Covers," — The National Enquirer. Just imagine the embarrassment.

In his letter, Daoust hinted that the inconvenient "Blow 'Em Out of the Water" blue covers weren't going to be around forever and gave evidence that the GPYC is doing its level best to beautify its little corner of Lakeshore.

That sure puts my mind to rest. I didn't want to have to drive down Lakeshore Road and have my beautiful view of the lake spoiled by those appalling blue boat covers. And as we all know, the Constitution guarantees us freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and freedom from unsightly blue boat covers spoiling our view of bleak, frozen lakes. Thomas Jefferson saw to that.

I just hope they pick the right colors to replace the shocking blue. Not transparent covers — it'll look like a refrigerator full of leftover boat down there. Or green. Watching a green swathed boat bobbing and bobbing around on that gray lake is enough to produce seasickness in Lakeshore-bound drivers and that could be dangerous. Certainly not white; nothing gets dirtier as fast as white — didn't your mothers tell you that?

Red? RED in Grosse Pointe? Be serious. And not pink or green. We don't want to become cliché, do we?

It's going to be a very difficult choice, that's obvious. But we've taken the first step back to respectability in the boatcovering department — we've admitted that shocking blue just won't do.

What's my suggestion for the new color? How about Tempest-In-a-Teapot Tangerine? I think it fits perfectly.

Metropark sets run

The Huron-Clinton Metropark will offer a number of special events this month, including a distance run this evening at Stoney Creek Metropark near Rochester/Utica.

wood Beach at 6 p.m. today, August 8. There will be six age divisions and distances vary from one to five miles, with awards for the first 10 places.

Local teams make baseball tourney finals

A successful season for the 13-year-old Woods-Shores Babe Ruth Baseball All-Stars came to an end in the Ohio Valley Regional finals. Appleton, Wisconsin stopped a determined GPWS team 6-0, to advance to the National 13-Year-Old World Series to be held in Cranston, R.I.

Eau Claire, Wis., was the site of the Regional Tournament that saw GPWS fall to Elgin, Ill. in the opener, 15-8. Kevin Endres had three hits and Scott Schorer and Tony Jaboro chipped in with a pair each in the losing effort.

In a double elimination tournament, a second loss would send the 14 young men home. Logan, W.V. was the first team to feel the wrath of GPWS.

John Cartwright stopped Logan on four runs and five hits and the Grosse Pointe bats boomed to a 15-4 win. Scott Bernhardt led the offense with two triples and a double, good for five RBI. Cartwright, Chris Meathe and Mike Rancilio contributed two hits each, while Tony Jaboro stole four bases.

"Winning a game in the regional is just great," said Manager Phil Hage. "We've been telling our players to have fun, learn something and any win is a bonus."

Scott Bernhardt got the starting pitching nod against host team Eau Claire. He responded with a five hitter as GPWS won 8-3. Meathe supplied the big blow with a bases-loaded double, driving in three runs in a four-run, third inning uprising. GPWS struck again for four runs in the sixth, with two errors and singles by Rancilio, Kevin McCarron and Endres doing the damage.

"Scottie did a great job for us," said Hage. "This is a fine hitting team that he kept in tow."

A rematch of the opening game saw GPWS take Elgin, Ill. into the loser's bracket with a 3-2 victory.

Endres, who started the first game, got the nod. He gave up just four hits, but two of them and a walk combined to give Elgin a 2-0 fourth inning lead.

That held up until GPWS came to bat in the bottom of the seventh. Rancilio started the comeback with a lead-off single. Patrick Brien Kennedy followed with a double down the left field line sending Rancilio to third. Jason DeYonker was up next and singled to left, scoring Rancilio and sending pinch runner Bobby Rinaldi to third. DeYonker promptly stole second, and the winning run for GPWS was just 180 feet from home.

After a strikeout, McCarron singled to center, tying the game at 2 and pushing DeYonker with the winning run to third base. Tony Jaboro walked to load the bases with one out. Another strikeout set the stage for Endres.

Endres, who took the loss in game one, wanted the ball for this game, stopped Elgin with just two runs, and now stroled to the plate with two outs and the bases loaded, and the contingent of family and friends numbering 65 cheering and screaming. Endres took the first pitch for ball one. The second was far inside, catching him in the ribs, bringing in DeYonker with the winning run.

Next up for GPWS was a matchup with the state champions of Ohio, Springfield. They had also been sent to the loser's bracket by Appleton and were sent back to Ohio by GPWS.

John Cartwright and Scott Schorer shared the pitching duties, but this game belonged to the offense. It took a six-run fourth inning and a four-run sixth inning to allow GPWS to slip past Springfield, 11-9.

GPWS turned 12 walks and six hits into 11 runs. Jaboro and Schorer each had a single and a double; Bernhardt had four RBI, three coming on a bases loaded double; and McCarron contributed a triple and a pair of runs batted in.

The team from Grosse Pointe played a well rested Appleton team. The Wisconsin state champs played two games, had a day off, won again, and another day off before they faced a somewhat weary Michigan championship team.

Shawn Smith was up to the challenge for Appleton, as he limited GPWS to just four singles. His teammates pushed across two runs in the first and three in the second, en route to a 6-0 win, and the regional championship. Smith struck out 13 and yielded hits to Schorer, Rinaldi, Cartwright and Rancilio. "I am so proud of our players," said Manager Hage. "To come up to Eau Claire and play was fantastic. To win four games and make it into the finals is even better. There were six other teams that would have loved to be in the final game, but it was the boys from GPWS that made it. Appleton is a good team and should do well in Rhode Island, but I couldn't be prouder and happier for our kids."

Making up the state champion and the regional runner-up 13-year-old Babe Ruth All Star Team from Grosse Pointe Woods Shores are Scott Bernhardt, John Cartwright, Jason DeYonker, Kevin Endres, Brad Hea, Tony Jaboro, Patrick Kennedy, Kevin McCarron, Chris Meathe, David Monette, Mike Rancilio, Bobby Rinaldi, Scott Schorer and Mark Zoltowski. The team was managed by Phil Hage and coaches were Dave Hea and Phil Guastella.

The Park Babe Ruth All Stars were still alive as of Monday in their quest for a regional tournament title. Team members captured the state championship last week by beating down Dowagiac, 14-9.

The Park All Stars defeated host Owensborough, Ky. 8-1. Monday night to remain the only unbeaten team in the Ohio Valley regional tournament.

The Park was to meet the remaining team of three left yesterday — Owensborough, South Charleston, W.V. and Elgin, Ohio — for the regional title and a berth in the World Series in Jamestown, New York beginning Aug. 17.

Marcus Wysocki went the distance for the Parkers, yielding three hits, fanning three and walking eight in the decision. The Park All Stars scored in the third on a single by Marty Saad, a double by Doug Lucas and a perfect squeeze by Wysocki.

They added what proved to be the winning run in the fourth inning when Matt Montagne singled, stole second and raced home when Bryan Jones was safe on a wild throw to the shortstop.

The Parkers added six more runs to frost the win on six walks, one hit and four Owensborough errors.

The Park won its first game of the regional tournament Saturday in an unusual fashion, scoring a forfeit over opponent Groveport, Ohio. The Parkers got their pass after the Ohio team was ruled ineligible for the post-season tournament because it had not played the required number of league games during the season, according to tournament officials.

Sunday, the local nine scored three runs in the first inning and added another in the fifth to hold out for a 4-3 win over Lexington, Ky.

Lucas went the distance for the Park, giving up six hits and one earned run while striking out three and walking two. Three infield mis-cues for the Park team accounted for the Kentucky team tallies.

Passes to Mike Pauli and Lucas, followed by a Wysocki single loaded the bases with Parkers in the first frame with two out. Jamie Cimini reached base on an infield error, scoring Lucas and Pauli. Montagne then delivered a single up the middle to score Wysocki ore the final tally that inning.

In the fifth, Saad doubled and Lucas walked. They moved to second and third on the sacrifice bunt by Wysocki. Saad scampered home seconds later with what proved to be the winner when Cimini again reached base on an error.

Lexington's scoring came with two on and two out when an infield error allowed a Kentuckian to cross the plate. Two more boots and a balk scored the second Lexington unearned tally. A two out double in the sixth accounted for Lexington's lone earned run.

The Park team includes Marcus Wysocki, Jason Whelan, Christopher Markus, Jamison Cimini, George Ayrault, Bryan James, Martin Saad, David Salkowski, Kick Saros, Matthew Montagne, Michael Pauli, Eric Zihlman, Douglas Lucas, Eric Nord and Ferit Nazarko.

Last Chance has one more

Last Chance, a soccer team on which soccer coaches from North, South and University Liggett play, beat the Bloomfield Nomads in the cup quarter-finals for the over 30 league.

Last Chance, organized by South coach John Case and with players Guido Regelbrugge from North and David Backhurst from Liggett, took the Bloomfield team 6-2. The team continues on in the league championship series, with the next game to be played some time later this month.

Lootens take racing challenge

Ann Lootens and her father, Dr. Richard Lootens, both of the Shores, visited Rogers City twice last month.

The second time was when the main sail on their 35-foot Santana "Asylum" split during the Port Huron to Mackinac classic, forcing the Lootens and six other crew members into Rogers City for refuge.

The first time was Monday, July 8, when Ann and her father ended 43 hours aboard Asylum in the first ever Huron Double Handed Challenge Yacht Race, a 200-mile race from Sarnia to Goderich, Canada, and on to Rogers City.

That first visit was a little more joyous than the second, because the Lootens took first place in their class and fourth place overall in the double handed challenge race, which the sponsoring Great Lakes Single Handed Sailing Society hopes will become an annual race.

For the uninitiated, a double-handed race means there are only two people on board. A normal racing crew is eight people for a boat of Asylum's size, Ann says.

What's the lure of the race? It's the challenge, Ann says.

"In a race such as Mackinac, there are eight people on board and their movements are coordinated in such a way to make the boat perform its best," she says. "In a double handed race, you coordinate your movements based on the easiest and not necessarily the fastest way to do things."

The idea for taking part in the double handed race came from her father, Ann says. Dr. Lootens was considering a short-handed try at the Mackinac pennant, but thought to try for the double handed race to see what was involved, Ann says. To get ready for the two-person race, the pair took Asylum out on Lake St. Clair and performed maneuvers they believed they would have to do during the Rogers City race to come up with the best way to do them, she adds.

The pair got about nine hours sleep all told between them over the race, Ann says. Since there were only two people on board, one would go below for a 45-minute rest while the other stayed on deck. If necessary, the sleeper was called on deck to help with anything that would come up.

Come up something did, with the Saturday night of the race seeing some heavy air and seas. The winds were about 25 knots and four- to six-foot waves kept the evening lively.

Despite the rough weather during the Mackinac two weeks later, Ann says she and her father "didn't feel we were in danger at any time out there."

The heavy winds during the double handed challenge meant she was limited in what she could do, Ann says. It was up to her father to handle much of the muscle work while she helped any way she could, she adds.

The pair decided the race was to be won during the night and they planned their strategy accordingly.

"Anybody can sail when the sun is shining, but sailing at night is more difficult," she says. We were extremely tired when we finished ... but we drank a lot of diet Coke and ate turkey sandwiches and just kept going."

The toughest task for the double handed challenge was jibing the spinnaker, Ann says. On a normal racing crew, most maneuvers only require four people, so four can normally relax. But jibing requires all eight and the task becomes even more difficult when there are only two people to do it.

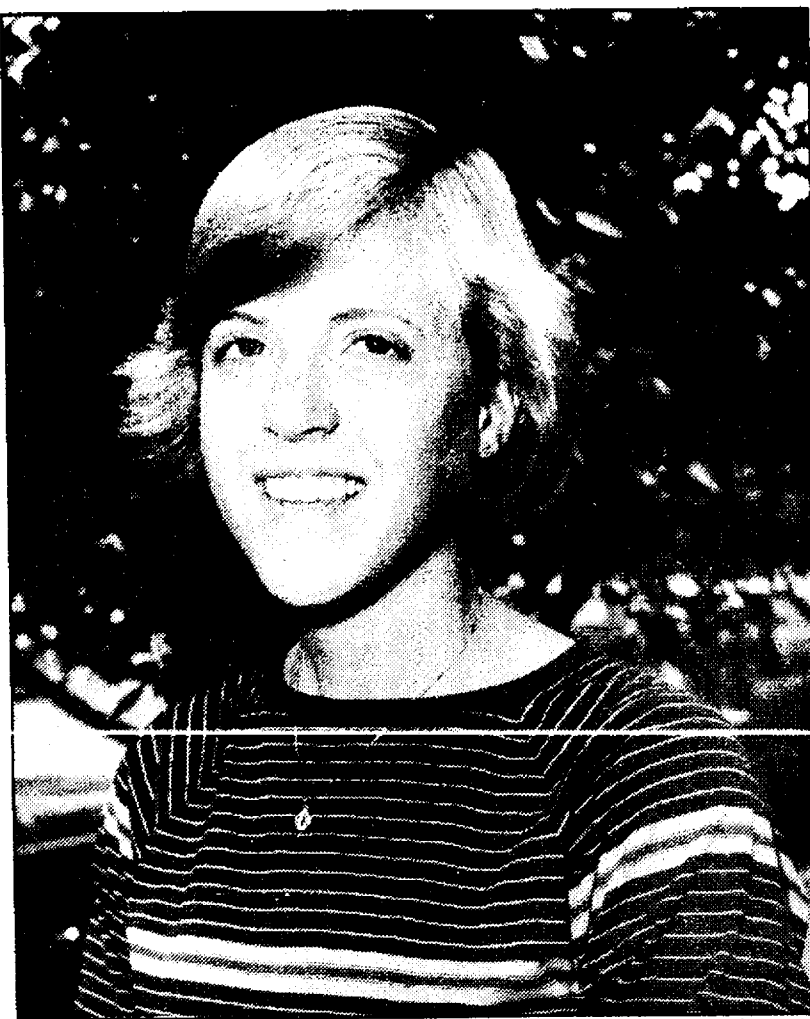

The Lootens did have an auto helm, but there was some battery problems which eliminated the machine's use from Saturday on, Ann says. The auto helm would keep the boat on a course and meant an extra pair of hands for the pair.

Sunday was Ann's 21st birthday, and about 5 that afternoon, her father told her to turn on the radio. Ann says she didn't know what was going on because it wasn't time for the mandatory radio check-ins each racer had to make during the race.

When she turned on the radio, out came birthday greetings from family in Michigan as well as across the country, Ann says. That gave her a good adrenalin rush.

Ann says she's looking forward to making the race next year. This year's contest drew 60 boats and there's a chance the number of entries could double for the 1986 challenge.

As for taking the single handed challenge and racing alone, Ann says she isn't strong enough to handle some tasks that could come up in heavy weather. For the rest of the summer, at least, Asylum will be taking part in the DRYA races and that will keep her busy, she adds.

A graduate of Lutheran East High School, Ann is going into her last year at Hope College before she gets her biology degree. She's looking for a future in technical writing, not medicine, she adds.

Besides sailing, she's taking her last summer of freedom, working and running, Ann says. She is a veteran of seven Mackinac races, a former sailing teacher at the Yacht Club, and a sailor since age 7.

State sets dove season

Hunters have a lot of choices coming up this year, with the institution of a state mourning dove season and with applications now available for Hunter's Choice and Landowner Limited Hunter's Choice deer licenses.

A limited 22-day trial mourning dove season for southern Michigan was given the go-ahead in July by the state Natural Resources Commission. Michigan joins 35 other states that allow the hunting of mourning doves.

The season is scheduled for Sept. 15 to Oct. 6 with a daily bag limit set at six birds. Hunting hours begin one-half hour before sunrise and run until sunset.

Areas open to hunting include the area south of US-10 from Ludington to the Saginaw River in Bay City and the Saginaw River to its mouth at Saginaw Bay. This includes the primary agricultural lands that are the major mourning dove range in the state.

Any person hunting mourning doves this season must possess a special mourning dove permit which is free and can be obtained by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Mourning Dove Permit. Department of Natural Resources Wildlife Division, P.O. Box 30028, Lansing 48909.

The limited hunt of mourning doves, the most popular game bird in North America and a federally recognized game bird for more than 60 years, is part of the department's efforts to increase wildlife oriented recreation in southern Michigan, according to the DNR.

Hackett signs with Cardinals

The St. Louis Cardinals recently signed Farms resident John Hackett to a minor league contract with their New York-Penn League team, Erie. The 6-foot-1 left-handed pitcher is the son of Bill and Helene Hackett.

John wasted no time and made a strong showing his first day with Erie. Pitching against the Niagara Falls White Sox in relief, John went five and two-thirds innings, allowing three hits, one run and striking out three. Rewarded for his strong showing, John was inserted into the starting rotation and responded with two wins, against the Batavia Indians and the league-leading Oneonta Yankees.

Overall John sports a low 1.50 earned run average, a 2-0 record with 18 innings pitched, and 17 strikeouts.

The 22-year-old Hackett pitched well at the college, high school, Babe Ruth and Little League levels over the years to earn his chance at professional baseball. A North High graduate from 1981, Hackett pitched college ball for Birmingham Southern University and Macomb Community College. He also played for the Babe Ruth Farms-City Tigers and Little League Farms Pirates.

College baseball saw John complete two years at Macomb in 1983 with a 8-2 record and an e.r.a. of 1.13, along with being named to the NJCAA All-American baseball team and being named to the MCC Hall of Fame as the school's top male athlete of 1983.

John then accepted a baseball scholarship to Birmingham Southern, from where he will graduate this winter. At Southern, playing under coach Gary Randall, John highlighted his senior season with a 5-2 record, including a NAIA district championship win.

At North, John compiled a two-year record of 14-0 while pitching on the state championship team in 1980. Four other members of the 1980 squad had previously signed professional baseball contracts: Bill Babcock, John Clem, Bob Brown and Tom Shook. While at North, John was coached by Frank Sumner and Dan Griesbaum.

When asked about his son's signing of a baseball contract, Bill Hackett said, "We are happy and excited for John that he has the chance to pursue his interests in baseball at the professional level. However, more importantly, we desire that he continue to set the Christian example for others in this pursuit."

"We feel John's success in baseball stems from the excellent training he received from his coaches such as Dick Gallagher for the Little League Pirates and John Hoben for the Babe Ruth Tigers, and others such as Chuck Campbell, Mike Johnson, and Joe Maul who helped cultivate John's interest in baseball and prepare him for this."

John's greatest fan and supporter over the years has been his former Babe Ruth coach Hoben, who met John at age 12, coached him for three years and has followed his career ever since.

In talking about John, Hoben doesn't hide his pride.

"In 14 years of coaching teenagers, I can honestly say that although John was the first one our Farms-City areas has had sign a professional contract, others certainly had more natural talent," Hoben said. "John made it on hard work and determination. He spent lots of time on his own, always improving. He sets goals for himself; making All-Star teams, making his junior varsity and varsity teams, getting a baseball scholarship and now playing professional baseball. I'm excited for him."

"I've always felt that success in sports comes from hard work and dedication. Certainly, John is a perfect example of this. John has always found time to keep his grades up and earn money to help with expenses. He is truly an outstanding example and one that I am proud to have coached and known," Hoben added.

John will return to Birmingham Southern after the end of the baseball season to complete his degree requirements. Anyone interested in writing him can do so care of Eric Cardians, P.O. Box 1182, Erie, Penn. 16512.

Acid Rain

There wasn't enough precipitation the week of July 22 to 28 to measure the acidity of rain falling on Mount Clemens, according to the Michigan Acid Rain Watch.

Mount Clemens is the only measuring station in southeastern Michigan.

The acidity of rain is measured on a pH scale. Unpolluted rainwater has a pH of 5.6. In the last report, rain falling on Mount Clemens had a pH of 4.08, 33 times more acidic than unpolluted rain water.

Many scientists believe that persistent exposure to rain at pH levels of 4.7 and below will damage man-made structures, fish, lakes, streams, crops, trees and soils, particularly in sensitive areas like the western Upper Peninsula.

Acid rain or snow is formed by the combining of moisture and pollution, sulphur dioxides and nitrogen oxides, from burning coal and petroleum products. Sources of acid rain originate in and outside the state of Michigan.

The Michigan Acid Rain Watch is funded through a grant by the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation. Precipitation data is collected with the cooperation of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and Kellogg Biological Station, Michigan State University.

At North, girl basketball players hold their first practice in the main gym from 9 to 11 a.m. Monday, Aug. 12. Girls tennis team players are to meet at the back courts Monday at 10 a.m. Practice runs until noon.

North's girl swimmers don't start until Monday, Aug. 19, when

Close to 400 Grosse Pointe high school athletes received their physicals through the Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program last year. CHAMP is again offering the athletic eligibility screening on Saturday, Aug. 10, at Grosse Pointe North High School.

CHAMP sets exams for athletes

The Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program, CHAMP, will offer pre-season physical examinations for Grosse Pointe North and South high school athletes Saturday, Aug. 10. All high school athletes must pass a condition screening to be eligible to participate in school sports.

Members of the hospital's athletic medicine team, led by Cottage medical staff internists Drs. Kenneth Dziuba and Richard Joseph, perform eye exams, blood pressure, height, and weight checks, and flexibility testing, along with a basic physical examination.

This eligibility exam should not be confused with a complete physical designed to determine overall health. Athletes currently being treated for a serious, chronic medical condition should consult their personal physicians.

Examinations will be held Saturday, at Grosse Pointe North High School, 707 Vernier Road, in the Woods. Students with last names beginning with A through G should come to the gymnasium at 9 a.m.; H through M at 10 a.m.; and N through Z at 11 a.m. Since locker room facilities will not be available, dress in shorts and a t-shirt.

The cost to students of the Grosse Pointe school system is $5. Checks should be made payable to Cottage Hospital of Grosse Pointe.

Besides offering services such as the pre-season physical exams, CHAMP furnishes year-round support to the high school athletic programs and weekend athletes as well. The use of the Cybex® Isokinetic System, an advanced muscle evaluation and exercise device, provides the most modern technology in sports medicine. Evaluation tion through CHAMP can be arranged by calling 884-8600, ext. 2173.

For more information about the August 10 schedule, contact Cottage Hospital at 884-8600, extension 2173, or Grosse Pointe North and South athletic directors Thomas Gauerke, 343-2214, and Charles Hollosy, 343-2181.

Pistons set pre-season schedule

Two contests against the Houston Rockets with their Twin Towers and the first confrontation with the New York Knicks and their number-one draft pick, Patrick Ewing, will highlight the Detroit Pistons' eight-game exhibition schedule.

Also on the pre-season slate are contests against the defending Central Division Champion Milwaukee Bucks and two against the Indiana Pacers and their top draft pick, Wayman Tisdale.

The Pistons open the pre-season slate on Oct. 5 and 6 with a pair of games in Florida against the Houston Rockets with Ralph Samson and Akeem Olajuwon.

The Pistons will get their first look at the Pacers and their top draft pick, Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma Oct. 9. The team will then play a home-and-home series against the Bucks October 12 and 13. The Pistons will make their only Silverdome appearance of the pre-season against the Bucks on Oct. 12 and travel to Milwaukee the next night.

The Pistons will host the Pacers Oct. 17 at the Pistons' training camp on the campus of the University of Windsor. Detroit will then play the front end of a doubleheader in Madison Square Garden against the Atlanta Hawks.

The Pistons close out the pre-season with their first look at the New York Knicks and their number-one selection, Patrick Ewing of Georgetown. After their Oct. 20 game against Ewing and the Knicks, the Pistons will gear for the regular-season opener in the Silverdome Oct. 25 against the Bucks.

The Dangerous Summer
By Ernest Hemingway, introduction by
James A. Michener.
Charles Scribner's Sons,
New York, 1985. 228 pages, $17.95

"The Dangerous Summer" is a heavily edited work that started as a 120,000-word article for Life magazine in 1959 on the state of bullfighting in Spain.

The editors at Life had asked Hemingway for a brisk 10,000 words. But the writing got away from Hemingway at the same time his life did and the dangerous summer is an apt metaphor for Hemingway's life. The year 1959 was the beginning of the end for America's most publicized writer.

Still, the book as it stands now is a readable and at times exciting piece of Hemingway autobiography. At 45,000 words it has been extensively cut — first by Hemingway's pet subaltern, A.E. Hotchner, and later by the editors at Scribner's.

Hemingway originally wanted to write an updated foreword to "Death in The Afternoon," published in 1932. He returned to Spain to write about the mano a mano, or hand-to-hand competition between two young matadors.

Antonio Ordenez was battling his brother-in-law, Luis Miguel Dominguin, in a contest of skill, nerve and bullfighting artistry. Traveling to the main arenas of Spain, each tried to outdo or, at least, outlast the other.

In his introduction, James Michener tells us that Ordenez was the younger of the two. Both were handsome but Michener considered Dominguin the more artistic.

Hemingway was supposed to be writing journalism. There were too many passions for him to be objective though. Hemingway had used Ordenez's father as the prototype for the bullfighter in his first novel, "The Sun Also Rises." Also, Hemingway was staying with a man named Bill Davis while in Spain. Ordenez was a good friend of Davis. We soon see that Hemingway likes Ordenez better than Dominguin and begins to load the literary dice: "By good luck I had seen all the great cape handlers since modern bullfighting began with Belmonte and I could tell that Luis Miguel was not among them."

His personal dislike of Dominguin notwithstanding, Hemingway gives the reader details on some of the corruption that he sees in the bullfight game. There are the critics who will write favorable reviews of the bullfighter for the right sum of money. There are also the matadors who will only fight bulls with shaved horns. The bull with shaved horns loses his sense of distance, he is more careful about hitting anything and he is "at least ten times as safe to work and kill as a bull with his horns intact."

This is interesting stuff but Hemingway can't help himself — he asks a friend if Dominguin has ever worked with bulls whose horns weren't shaved.

The book works best when Hemingway leaves his increasing bitterness behind and writes of Spain, the country he always said he "loved more than any other except his own."

He crosses the country by car usually meeting Ordenez before the fights and later for dinner and celebration. On the road he has time for observation and the resulting descriptive passages are vintage Hemingway: "I looked at the naked dark trunks of the cork oaks where the bark had been stripped and cut a month before and I looked into the deep crevasses on a turn and at the fields of gorse with limestone jutting out that rolled away to the high stone peaks . . ."

He also evokes the experience of pleasure in food and cold wine as he dines with friends — a talent seen mer to his sixtieth birthday. His insatiable appetite for alcohol and rich food imperiled his precarious state of health. His friends wondered if the two airplane crashes he survived in Africa in 1953 were finally showing their ef-in most of his fictional characters.

By this point in his life, Hemingway was beginning to act like his fictional creations too. His wife Mary became distressed at his self-promotion as he grew older and on one occasion accused him of "being on the skids" from egotism and publicity-seeking.

What we have here is a picture of an old man trying to recapture his youthful exploits. He follows the rigorous schedule of appearances by the matadors, men half his age. He also surrounds himself with young women, but engages them only on a platonic level.

Hemingway sides with Ordenez throughout "The Dangerous Summer." In the introduction, Michener writes: "Hemingway confessed that he had not treated Dominguin fairly and half-apologized, but the damage had been done. This book stands as an unwarranted attack on Dominguin, who was not as outclassed in that long duel as Hemingway claims."

So much was obviously going wrong with Hemingway that sum-facts. By 1959 he was not the ruddy-faced sportsman but rather a white-bearded man old before his time. Within months of his "dangerous summer," he began to exhibit the paranoia that finally blossomed into suicide in 1961.

Similarly, Ordenez would never repeat the glorious triumphs of 1959. Michener says after that summer Ordenez was "invariably disgraceful . . . pudgy and evasive, apparently terrified of any real bull he faced."

"The Dangerous Summer" was the last gasp from Hemingway and he probably knew it. While writing it he complained to his wife of his inability to finish the story: "I can't get it all down," he told her.

This book stands as a coda to the Hemingway collection. It is remarkable chiefly because it is as much about Hemingway's last good summer in Spain as it is about bullfighting. He had written more truly and he had written better prose, but after this book he never really wrote again.

Bluegrass at Greenfield

The grass may be greener on the other side, but at Greenfield Village this weekend, the grass is definitely blue and the sound red hot.

Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 10 and 11, the village will host a Bluegrass and Traditional Music Festival. Daylong programs will feature these two, distinct types of American music — the home-grown sound of bluegrass, as well as its predecessor, traditional music.

Banjoes, mandolins and guitars will accompany the bluegrass show presented on stage at the Activities Field. Headliners will include the nationally known talent of John Hartford (Sunday only), and nine other bluegrass groups and the Cross Town Cloggers.

Out at Town Hall, the sweet sounds of a dulcimer and the wailing of fiddles will evoke the Scots-Irish beginnings of traditional music. Hartford will contribute to this program as well, along with the Musicians of Colonial Williamsburg and eight other traditional music acts.

There is no additional charge for the Bluegrass and Traditional Music Festival beyond regular village admission. Visitors are encouraged to bring lawn chairs, blankets and coolers for a weekend of foot-stomping family fun at Greenfield Village.

Comedy set for Henry Ford Theater

"The Male Animal," a 1940 comedy-hit by James Thurber and Elliott Nugent, springs into action on stage at the Henry Ford Museum Theater from Aug. 16 through Sept. 14.

It's said the "in" people are so described because they're either "in" hock, "in" debt, or "in" trouble.

DOWNTOWN WINDSOR

For the deaf

A new system to answer telephone inquiries from deaf individuals or individuals with a hearing impairment has just been installed by the Department of State.

To obtain information, an individual must first have access to a telecommunications device (TTY) for the deaf. Many such devices are now located in private and public facilities throughout the state.

Individuals desiring information on vehicle registration, titling vehicles, voter registration, automotive repair, location of branch offices, elections, and other department services may dial (517) 322-1477 through their telecommunications device for the deaf. The Department of State Information Services Section (hours 8 a.m.-5 p.m.), receives the information on a screen attached to the telecommunications device located in the Motor Vehicle Division in Lansing.

Answers to the inquiry are then sent on the wire to a screen on the caller's telecommunications device.
