Drink this and drive

With school starting next week, can Christmas be far behind? Not as far as the Automobile Club of Michigan is concerned. They're sponsoring their non-alcoholic drink contest — "Zero Proof Mix-Off" now and winning recipes will be included in a Great Pretenders party booklet.

The booklet, which will be distributed free at 60 AAA offices statewide in early December, is designed to promote the sensible use of alcohol over the holidays.

Top prize is a $1,000 trip for two to Florida. Second place receives $250; third place, $150; and fourth place $100.

Entry deadline for this year's contest is Sept. 16 and it's open to anyone 18 or over. The top 20 finalists must serve their drinks to a panel of judges at the Roostertail on Oct. 2. There is no entry fee.

Entries, neatly printed or typewritten, should be sent to AAA Michigan, Great Pretenders Guide, Public Relations Dept., 1 Auto Club Drive, Dearborn, Mich. 48126.

Last year's winner was mixed by a Grand Rapids bartender. Called a "Tropical Snowball," it contained vanilla ice cream, chocolate syrup, cream of coconut and a pineapple wedge.

Hold the olives and cocktail onions pulllease.

Sign of the times

They definitely have a divine sense of humor over at St. Paul's Catholic Church.

New signs in the driveway along side of the church read "Thou Shalt Not Park" and are intended to cut down on the chance accidental encounters between parishers.

The signs were a donation from Joe and Beverly Fromm. He's mayor pro tem of the Farms, as you may know, and now has an assured parking spot with his name on it in heaven.

He's got talent

A couple of weeks ago we ran a story about a local looker who competed in the 1985 Mr. U.S. Michigan Men's Pageant at the Premier Center. At that time we thought our subject was the only Grosse Pointer in the event.

Wrong, Mr. Greenwood. Another Grosse Pointer was entered and made it into the finals. He was Jim Rothis, 23, son of Dr. and Mrs. Emanuel Rothis, of the Woods.

Jim won first place in the talent competition, singing "You and I" by Stevie Wonder.

According to reliable sources, (his mom), Jim is a graduate of North High School, has attended Michigan State and Albion colleges and has two years of dental school behind him.

You'll win it next time doc.

Meet the champ

This is one fish that didn't get away: Solemnly clutching what turned out to be the biggest game fish caught at the recent Farms/City Fishing Rodeo is Joel France, 3, of the Farms. Joel captured this 17.5 inch walleye with a worm and won a trophy for best fisherman at the rodeo. For more photos on the rodeo, turn to Page 3A.

Peace Corps — hard work, rewards

By Nancy Parmenter

Thatched-roofed mud huts straggle along a dusty village street. Women wrapped in yards-long "pangas" carry five-gallon jugs of water from a spring five kilometers away. The water is fairly pure.

Last year, the women carried brackish water infested with giardia and amoebae. The villagers were afflicted with dysentery, not unusual for rural Zaire. But progress is creeping steadily across the African countryside, thanks to the efforts of local governments, world relief agencies and individuals like Maureen Duffy of Grosse Pointe Park.

Zaire: country of contrasts

Duffy decided a couple of years ago that two years in Africa preaching public health was a logical consequence of a bachelor's degree in English literature. She joined the Peace Corps, learned two new languages, trained in public health education and headed for Zaire, the former Belgian Congo.

She was needed even more than she expected. "Everybody has worms," she said. "Hookworm, pinworm, amoeba (the cause of amoebic dysentery), giardia — everything."

The rural lifestyle is the primary contributing factor to the disease. The huts have dirt floors and the water supply is distant. Often it isn't clean. Babies wear no clothes and, in the time-honored fashion of babies, relieve themselves where they will. Worm eggs flourish and bare feet pick them up, along with "chigoes."

"Chigoes are little insects that burrow into your skin and lay eggs," Duffy explained. "You have to pick them out. One of the health programs at elementary schools takes an hour to open the children's

Lightning bolts are shivering their timbers

By Tom Greenwood

Barbara Watts and Tom Munson have a rather unique hobby. They collect lightning bolts, and so far they have three in their collection.

Actually, it's their sailboat, Black Diamond, a 39-foot Erikson, that does most of the collecting.

"The first time the boat got hit was sort of an offshoot of another craft that was hit first," Munson said. "I was on board and it was raining. I looked out just as another boat here at Emerald City Marina got hit. It was about 60 feet away and I saw this puff of yellow smoke and heard a loud noise. The charge traveled through the water and knocked out our alternator and depth finder. This was just before the Mackinac Island single handed race and I had to rush out and replace my equipment." This was in 1984.

The second time Black Diamond caught a direct hit. Luckily no one was on board. "There was a pretty bad storm that night and the boat was all locked up," Watts said. "We came back the next day and everything electrical on board was out. All our instruments, the radio, battery charger and the refrigerator."

"We had dockside electricity and the bolt blew the insulation off the cable before it was discharged into the water. I'm glad no one was on board." This happened in May of this year.

Lightning visited Black Diamond again this month. Watts, a Farms resident and employee at St. John Hospital, and Munson, a Southfield dry cleaner, were hosting five Sea Scouts on Aug. 18 and were trying to beat a storm system back to the marina.

"We were half way between Metropolitan Beach and Emerald City and saw this system about half a mile off," Munson said. "We figured we'd just make it back before the storm struck. We could see jagged bolts of lightning off in the distance and thought we were safe."

"Suddenly there was this tremendous cracking sound," Watts said. "We didn't see anything. It struck the top of the mast and once again blew out the refrigerator. But our motor kept going. We took precautions this time."

The precautions consisted of attaching a thick electrical cable to the keel and letting it trail behind the boat. "I think it helped a lot," Munson said. "If it hadn't been there, I think the damage would have been much worse. It was bad enough as it was. It's gotten so my insurance man won't answer my calls anymore."

And how did the Sea Scouts feel about the entire adventure? "They didn't even blink an eye," Watts said. "The first thing they asked was 'when do we eat?'"

Munson and Watts are taking their lightning bolt collection pretty much in stride. Some might even call them blasé. Not so their friends visiting the Black Diamond.

"They tend to get a little nervous when they find out our history," Munson said, with a laugh. "Especially when I tell them I'm thinking of re-naming the boat. I think 'Target' is an accurate name, don't you?"

Park sergeant shoots burglar

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Park police say they may clear a number of break-ins against Robert Turner Shealy, a 35-year-old Detroit man shot and killed early Saturday morning by Park police while involved in a burglary.

Police Chief Richard Caretti said it is possible the department will clear a number of break-ins with similar methods of operations against Shealy and an investigation continued to determine if Shealy had an accomplice.

Shealy was pronounced dead at Bon Secours Hospital at 1:45 a.m. Saturday, just about 45 minutes after police received a call of a possible break-in in the 500 block of Pemberton.

A sergeant and officer, whose names are being withheld pending the outcome of a review of the incident by the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office, responded to the area and found a broken kitchen window at one of the homes.

The officers heard a noise at the front door of the house and went to investigate and found the front door unlocked, Caretti said. The officers entered and heard a loud crash from the kitchen.

It appears that Shealy tried to flee the officers by running through a door at the rear of the home, Caretti said. The door was steel-framed and withstood Shealy's rush, Caretti said.

Officers got a look at the suspect as he was moving through the home and saw he was carrying a handgun and a bag which contained articles collected from the home, Caretti said. Shealy was ordered to drop his weapon, but instead ducked behind a wall away from officers.

Officers continued to pursue Shealy through the home when they heard a crash from the front of the home, where Shealy apparently tried again to leave the home by breaking through a window, Caretti said.

When confronted by officers, Shealy whirled and brought the handgun to bear on the sergeant, who fired four rounds at the suspect, striking him in the left shoulder. The bullet passed diagonally through Shealy, Caretti said.

A Park ambulance was called. When it arrived, Shealy was already in full arrest. Medical technicians inserted an airway and began cardio-pulmonary resuscitation while administering oxygen as they took

... "our officer acted in a very brave manner and ... placed himself in great personal danger."

Shealy to Bon Secours Hospital, where he was pronounced dead later that morning.

The officer involved "performed heroically in a very, very difficult circumstance," Caretti said. "It was a matter of shoot or be shot."

"I'm very proud of the way this officer responded in this incident. While you hate to see a death result, our officer acted in a very brave manner and ... placed himself in great personal danger," he added.

Farms creates traffic study committee

By Nancy Parmenter

The Farms city council considered the long-awaited traffic volume and pattern report at its Aug. 26 meeting. A packed house contributed resident input and came away with the generally expressed feeling that the meeting had been productive, even though no decision was reached.

The council did accept the recommendation of a resident that a traffic study committee be appointed. On the advice of traffic consultant Brian Bowman, it was decided to keep the committee membership down to eight, representing all the streets with the biggest traffic problems: Fisher, McMillan, McKinley, Moran and Kerby.

The meeting was marked by cooperation and restraint, earning a compliment from Mayor pro tem Joseph Fromm, who characterized previous get-togethers as "raucous." Afterward, a resident agreed that the meeting had not been divisive. "This was the first time it hasn't been McKinley versus McMillan," he said.

Several residents seemed to recognize that the traffic problem is spread all over the Farms and it will be difficult to solve without creating new problems somewhere else. Upcoming Hill development was pegged as one of the factors in the problem.

"We realize that there's a conflict between the safety of our streets and the development of the Hill," said June Nelson, a resident of McMillan. "Some compromise is needed between the two."

"It's a growing issue," agreed another McMillan resident, Michael Clynne. "Hill development is moving apace. Development of the Punch and Judy will bring more traffic, and I hear they're proposing an entranceway on McKinley."

The biggest problem is that the Grosse Pointes were designed as a

Maureen Duffy holds one of the three masks she brought back from her two years in Zaire. It is a new one made for export. The other two are used and have a pervasive burnt odor — the smell of Africa, Duffy says. Wood artifacts with burned-on designs are a popular Zairian artistic expression, although embroidery and crocheted work adapted from the European are also in most native homes.

Lose weight with Cottage

Learn how the Weight No More System can help you lose weight and keep it off without sacrificing physical or mental well-being. Cottage Hospital will offer a free introductory session of Weight No More Tuesday, Sept. 10, or Thursday, Sept. 12, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The sessions are held in the Nurses' Residence at the rear of the hospital parking lot. Cottage Hospital is located at 159 Kercheval Avenue, between Moross and Cadieux in the Farms.

The Weight No More course approaches weight control by teaching participants how to prevent and eliminate the desire to overeat. It explores the physical, psychological, social and behavioral motivations involved in weight loss and helps each individual to develop a lifetime eating plan — a well-balanced mix of all the basic food groups, appropriate and pleasing to the whole family.

Weight No More uses education, stress management, behavior modification, attitude alteration and patented negative eating techniques in an intensive program of training and actual weight loss. Those who enroll in Weight No More lose from 2 to 3 pounds per week — the amount of weight loss that is to be expected from a nutritionally sound program.

Followers of the plan are able to keep this weight off and continue to lose additional weight after the program has ended.

Barbara Youngblood, registered dietician, will teach the 10-session Weight No More System. For more information, attend one of the introductory sessions at Cottage.

Shoplifters take jewelry from Hill shop

Three young men in dirty blue jeans managed to lift a tray of jewelry from the S.L. Schuetz store on the Hill Aug. 21. They entered the store in a group and distracted the clerk by asking about a Mrs. Smith and discussing some handmade jewelry on display. Farms police reports stated. When the youths left, store employees noticed that a tray containing five or six rings and a pair of earrings was missing. The worth of the missing items was estimated at $1,500.

Fishing fun for everyone

By Tom Greenwood

What's 37 years old and consumed 700 hot dogs, 500 doughnuts and drank 1,000 cups of pop at the Farms Pier Park recently?

No, it wasn't Hulk Hogan. It was 300 avid young fisherman participating in the 37th annual Farms/City Fishing Rodeo. As usual, spirits were high and the competition was stiff between the younger residents of the two cities, as they competed to see which municipality would snare the most fish overall.

The Farms won the tussle this year, pulling in 20 fish to the City's 15.

"This used to be a national event," said rodeo chairman Dick Graves. "Fishing rodeos used to be held all over the country, but it sort of dwindled down over the years. But we sure put on a good show here in the Farms. Each year we see hundreds of kids and everyone leaves with a prize. Everyone's a winner, and the entire event is free."

The prize for first fish of the day went to Farms resident Susan Llewellyn who hauled in a 7-inch rock bass after a terrific tussle. Susan and her sister Ann also walked away with a prize for the most fish by a Farms resident. They caught four fish each.

Other Farms winners were: biggest fish, Colleen Lennon, 7, with an 18-inch sucker; youngest fisherman, Brian Schrage, 2, who pulled a 7-inch bluegill from the lake; biggest game fish, Joel France, 3, with a whopping 17-inch walleye lured from the water with a tasty worm. Smallest fish honors went to Liz Moran, 5, who finally subdued a 3-inch minnow.

On the City side, first fish and largest fish honors went to Ryan Plunkett, 7, who landed an 11-inch sheepshead, Jeff Gyman also captured double honors with the most fish caught — two, and the largest game fish, a 5-inch perch.

Youngest fisherman was Erin Smith, 6, who also hauled in a 5-inch perch and the smallest fish was captured by Ben Serace, 10, with a 4-inch perch.

Overall winner of the fishing rodeo was Joel France, 3, who was nearly dwarfed by his 17-inch walleye and his trophy as the rodeo's best fisherman for 1985.

Mike Chase, 4, settled for a doughnut instead of a fish.

"It was a pretty good rodeo this year," said Farms Sgt. Joseph Miller, who fired the starting gun for the event. "We caught a lot of fish — 27 alone in the first half hour. Nothing too unusual came out of the water this year. Two years ago one of our youngsters hauled in a 24-inch eel. That got everyone's attention. I can tell you."

Also giving and getting attention at the park was a 41-foot cruiser provided by the Coast Guard and a vessel from the Wayne County Sheriff Marine Division.

Both cruised up and down the pier making sure any youngsters hauled into the lake by hard-lighting perch and bluegills would be rescued to fish another day.

Farms Sgt. Joseph Miller made sure Lenny Strutz and this 17-inch sheepshead were captured on film.

Classes start Wednesday in public schools

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Students and teachers will have many new things to look forward to when classes start Wednesday, Sept. 4, in Grosse Pointe public schools. New equipment, curriculum recommendations, science consultants and expanded full-day kindergarten are just a little of the new in the coming school year.

But don't look for new classes at the secondary level, according to secondary curriculum director Robert Welch.

"We're not trying to add a lot of new program. What we're looking to do is consolidate courses," Welch said. "This consolidation has meant a more coherent direction to education."

This will be the first year for the district's program recommendations for high school students that plan four years of college. The program, approved in December by the Board of Education and part of this year's program of studies, is based on what colleges and universities say they expect of incoming freshman, according to Welch.

The recommendations say a student should take four years English literature and skills courses, three years of science, including one each of biology and chemistry, three years of social studies, two years of a single foreign language, and 1 1/2 years of fine and practical arts.

While the program recommendations will apply to all students, freshmen and sophomores can start looking at their graduation requirements as well. The requirements took effect last school year for the Class of 1988.

The recommendations are meant to help students plan their education and offer opportunities for a number of electives during four years of high school.

The school system is trying to foster its high ability students in other curriculum areas, Welch said. Last year, the system added English as an advanced placement program at the high school level and there's a possibility of adding some advanced work in social studies as well, he added.

One problem the district found was that middle school high ability students in programs like English would get through two years of challenging work and head into introductory English in the freshman year. There wasn't a challenging program for freshmen in high school, Welch said.

The school system will enter the computer age with a bang at all its buildings in the coming school year. Not only will there be more equipment for students in labs and classrooms, some microcomputers have been moved into the various offices to help with record keeping and other functions.

The equipment was supplied by the Wayne Intermediate School District and may eventually mean a school district with electronic links between all its buildings and libraries.

In the classroom, teachers will be trying for work more computer assisted instruction into the day, Welch said. The system is looking now for good software.

In Home Economics, teachers who participated in a workshop offered by the state will use some new approaches to home economics instruction to include some social and consumer issues, Welch said. Curriculum aids and other material for the program was furnished by the state.

In grade schools, two science consultants will be available to work with teachers to help them better teach science, according to elementary curriculum director Alfreda Frost. The program was piloted last year with good results, she added.

The district will offer two full-day kindergarten programs this year instead of one. The program will be held at Ferry and Defer and will draw students from other elementary districts as well, Dr. Frost said.

Two programs returning this year are the after school activities and latchkey, Frost said. The after school activities were piloted successfully last year, offering students a chance to join computer clubs, Junior Great Books or put together a school newspaper among other activities.

The system will go ahead and offer latchkey programs at its elementary buildings even though it has yet to hear from the Department of Social Services about requested exemptions from DSS licensing requirements, Frost said.

The Attorney General ruled last year that latchkey programs needed to be licensed by the state, so the school system put together applications and asked for exemptions from certain requirements set by the state, Frost said. Since the state has yet to respond to the district's request, schools will go ahead and offer the programs as they did last year.

An October in-service is planned for music teachers in the district as part of the system's purchase this year of a new book for its music program for students in K-6, Frost said. Teachers will be able to learn how best to use the text and records, she added.

There is a possible study coming this year for the math program in grade school, Frost said. Chapter One programs are being reinstated this year at Parcels and Pierce middle schools, joining Poupard and Defer which also offer the federally-funded programs.

There appears to be enough money available to offer the programs for a couple of years at both middle and elementary schools, Frost said.

North's planetarium will be visited more often by the system's elementary school students in the coming year. Normally, first-, third-, and fifth-graders visit the facility once a year as part of their science instruction. Third-graders will make two visits this year as they fit in the curriculum.

New for elementary teachers this year is a curriculum overview card that will give each teacher a very brief overview of all areas.

Stockboy catches shoplifter

A stockboy at Sears gave chase to a shoplifter Aug. 24 and retrieved a stolen AM-FM pocket radio. Several employees at the Seven-Mack Sears store watched as the suspect, a 63-year old retiree, took a radio from the top of a showcase, dropped it into a Sears bag and walked out of the store. A stockboy followed. The two ran through the concourse dividing Sears from A.L. Price. Observed by a passing police car, the suspect stopped, appeared to threaten the pursuer, and finally handed over the radio. Police officers placed him under arrest. The stockboy told police that the suspect had reached for his pocket, threatening with a knife. A police pat-down discovered a closed pocket knife, according to the report. The suspect had a receipt for a previously purchased radio. He told police he did not know why he had taken another.

The upbeat Middle West

Pollster Lou Harris offered Michigan and the rest of the Midwest some welcome and optimistic views when he addressed the 24th Midwestern Governors' Conference at Mackinac Island last week.

In a nationwide survey of public opinion, Harris found that Midwesterners scored low on his "despair index," meaning that they are the most optimistic people in the country except for Southerners. That is a recent trend, according to Harris, who reported that for most of the past four years the Midwest had led the nation in gloom and doom.

The Midwest, according to Harris, has "come back a long way, an incredible way back to the point where states such as Michigan and Minnesota are not only cited as fascinating examples of states which came back from the deepest kind of trouble, but now are rated as having the most healthy outlook both from the standpoint of being fiscally under control . . . and having the brightest futures of any states."

Harris' remarks no doubt pleased Gov. James Blanchard and the rest of his administration. Blanchard still is under GOP fire for his 1983 recommendation for a 38 percent increase in the state income tax that was adopted by the Legislature, then under Democratic control. But Harris' comments tend to support the Blanchard administration contention that the tax increase was needed at the time to restore the state's fiscal integrity.

The fact that more people in other parts of the country than in the Midwest believe they will go hungry, that additional factories will close or that they will have a harder time making ends meet next year tends to indicate that Midwesterners have a healthy and optimistic attitude toward the future, despite their setbacks in the recent recession. And while Michigan and the Midwest still face many problems, financial as well as social, that upbeat mood that Harris detected should itself serve to promote continued recovery, economic and otherwise.

Lucas vs. Blanchard

Even though the 1986 election is more than a year away, it looks more and more as if the gubernatorial contest will pit Wayne County Executive William Lucas against incumbent Gov. James Blanchard.

At this early stage, nobody has yet formally announced for governor but it appears clear that Lucas is already campaigning for the Republican nomination and Blanchard is getting ready to seek a second term.

Lucas' recent trip to Florida with his staff to work out campaign strategy and positions on major issues prompted some criticism on the grounds he ought to have stayed in Michigan to work on this state's problems. But we suspect most people will regard that as nit-picking and will be more interested in what Lucas comes up with as campaign issues as a result of his Florida sojourn.

In a recent interview with Pete Waldmeir of the Detroit News, Lucas defended his Florida trip on the grounds it gave him an opportunity to try out on his staff his ideas and his positions on a number of topics, and to meet with experts in different disciplines, all in an isolated setting in Florida.

The Wayne County executive also defended his travels around the state, including the Upper Peninsula which ordinarily goes Democratic, on the grounds he is able to point to common issues, such as the need for more jobs and other similarities between Wayne County problems and those in other parts of the state.

Not that Lucas is likely to win the GOP nomination without a contest. Oakland County Executive Dan Murphy and Brighton businessman Dick Chrysler are still considering making the race and both have been attacking the Democratic governor for his lack of leadership, his failure to win the Saturn plant for Michigan and his supposedly anti-business attitudes.

Yet Lucas is obviously the front-runner despite the two major questions that remain about a black candidate for governor on the Republican ticket. They are: Will blacks in Wayne County and elsewhere in Michigan who ordinarily go Democratic vote for a black Republican candidate for governor? And will white outstate residents who ordinarily vote Republican go for a black gubernatorial candidate on their ticket?

If Bill Lucas continues to show that he is a credible candidate so far as the issues are concerned, the answers to those two questions are likely to determine whether he will be nominated and be able to make a serious challenge to the incumbent governor next year.

Columnist Waldmeir, after interviewing Lucas, reiterated his opinion that Lucas "is walking the political plank" and "doesn't stand a chance." But he could be wrong — and so could those Republicans and Democrats who agree with him.

Iacocca for president?

A new nationwide poll that shows Lee Iacocca defeating either Vice-President George Bush or Rep. Jack Kemp for the presidency has apparently not changed the Chrysler board chairman's opposition to the idea, even though several Michigan Democratic leaders endorsed it.

A spokesman told newsmen last week that Iacocca was still reiterating Sherman's quote: "I will not accept if nominated and will not serve if elected." Those were the words Civil War Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman used in 1884 to spurn a Republican appeal to become a candidate for the presidency.

Yet Gov. James Blanchard still sees the possibility of a draft of the Detroit automaker to get him to run on the Democratic ticket. The governor last week told newsmen he sees Iacocca as an "economic Eisenhower" in capturing public popularity but admitted the talk of his candidacy is "wishful thinking" by people other than Iacocca himself.

U.S. Sen. Carl Levin added in a separate interview on the public television program, "Off the Record," that Iacocca is his candidate for the 1988 Democratic nomination. Levin expressed the view that Iacocca could make such issues as America's trade and federal budget deficits "come alive to the general public." He thinks Iacocca "has great appeal" in the country but "couldn't assess" the odds of Iacocca changing his mind about making the race.

Strangely enough, a Detroit Free Press Sound-off, an unscientific poll based on telephone calls to the newspaper, showed that more than half of the respondents opposed an Iacocca bid for the presidential nomination. The critics said he would be "the worst possible solution to our problem," contended they would prefer Mickey Mouse and claimed that if Iacocca ran the country, "we would all end up with pay cuts." Those sound like GOP or UAW responses, however.

Yet there is something in Blanchard's comparison of Iacocca with Eisenhower. Ike was a popular national hero as a result of his exploits in World War II and Iacocca emerged as a kind of folk hero as a result of his actions in saving Chrysler from bankruptcy and his appearance in Chrysler ads. Eisenhower, in addition, was one of the few recent presidential candidates who was not a professional politician, although Wendell Willkie, the utility magnate who made a strong run against Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1940, was more in the Iacocca mold.

In fact, the great majority of presidents in the 20th century have come from Congress or from governorships. During periods of public concentration on domestic affairs, the conventional wisdom has it, the American people elect governors such as Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan but in periods when foreign affairs provide the dominant issues, the public turns to members of Congress such as John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon for national leadership.

Perhaps Kirk Cheyfitz, editor of the magazine Metropolitan Detroit which sponsored the Iacocca poll, offered the ultimate put-down of those who support the Chrysler leader for president. In a separate editorial comment in the magazine, Cheyfitz said he was "appalled" by the poll results because so little is known about Iacocca's stand on programs and issues. His own answer to the poll, Cheyfitz wrote, would have been: "Vote for him for president? I don't even know what he stands for. You gotta be kidding!"

Or do Blanchard and Levin know something that Cheyfitz and the rest of us don't know?

Disillusioned with legal system

To the Editor:

This week I experienced, firsthand, the procedures of our judicial system.

In July I received a ticket in the City of Grosse Pointe which was undeserved. Being an honest citizen I felt I should go to court and tell the truth about the situation, knowing justice would be on my side.

I received the "Notice to Appear in Court" a week or so before the date I was to appear. The notice said to be there at 8:30 a.m., which I was (along with six or eight other people who had received citations for whatever). Each of us checked in and were seated in the courtroom by 8:35 a.m. Three police officers, one meter maid, the court reporter, the honorable Stan Kazul (as the sign in front of the judge's bench indicated).

We waited. Finally at 9:10 a.m. the judge came into the courtroom . . . with his coffee cup . . . only to go into a room off of the courtroom for another 15 minutes! The honorable Judge Kazul came out to begin court proceedings at 9:25 a.m.!!

Meanwhile the people who were waiting for the judge had already been waiting 55 minutes! I was appalled, as were the other first-time court-goers. And as we sat there, waiting, we began to realize that it is the tax dollar paying this judge for his early coffee break and his tardiness. It is also the tax dollar paying the officers and meter maid to be on time, only to wait nearly an hour for things to get rolling.

I have talked with many people, some police officers (not in Grosse Pointe) about this ordeal. All have confirmed reports that this waiting goes on from the lowest court to the highest court.

Although I am not a Grosse Pointe resident, I am a concerned citizen. I am also very disillusioned with the court proceedings at the municipal level, and hate to even think of what might go on in the higher courts.

Incidentally, I did not win the court. Judge Kazul was condescending and patronizing, and evidently felt I needed a lecture concerning the nature of my ticket. It was a humiliating experience for me, at 32 years of age, for him to ridicule my reasons for feeling the ticket unjust.

The additional fine I had to pay was of no consequence to me. I continue to believe that I did not deserve the ticket in the first place, no matter what the honorable judge had to say.

Wonderful experience

To the Editor:

On July 17, the Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Babe Ruth 13-year-old All Star team won the state championship in Ypsilanti. With this title came the chance to compete in the Ohio Valley Regional Tournament to be held in Eau Claire, Wis., the following week. With the financial support and sponsorship of many local businesses and friends, these boys went on to win their way to the championship game and the title of runner-up of the region. It was a wonderful experience for all concerned and one that will hold special memories for years to come.

Many thanks for all your support — we couldn't have done it without you!

Transfer policy is changed

The school board recently changed the system's policy for industrial student transfers. Parents will no longer have to apply annually for permission for their children to attend a school outside their normal attendance area.

Students are expected to attend classes in their own attendance area, according to the policy. Exceptions will be made on a principal's recommendation and parental application to the Support Services Department if:

- A student is attending a special education program not available in his or her attendance area.

- A student has completed the 11th grade at the high school in one attendance area and subsequently moves out of that area but wants to complete 12th grade at the high school.

- A student who moves after the start of the school year and wants to continue in that school.

- A student's best emotional and instructional interests will be served by the transfer while not disrupting other aspects of the system's total educational program.

Transfers for emotional reason will be made after approval by a committee composed of the deputy superintendent, the elementary or secondary curriculum director, a school psychologist and the director of support services. The process will include review by the principal of the school the child is leaving.

Although tentative approval for transfer may be given on request, the school system may rescind transfer requests until Aug. 1, according to the new policy. Request for any September approval for elementary transfers should be made by May 1, while secondary school transfers must be made by March 1, according to the policy.

After approval, a student will remain in the new school unless it becomes necessary to return him or her to the old attendance area to make adjustments for class sizes, staffing, student grouping and so forth. The transfers will no longer be reviewed annually after filing of a yearly application.

Assignment of a student to a particular classroom will be done by the building principal in the school the child has transferred to, and transporting the child to and from the new school is the parents' responsibility. Teacher preference and non-educational reasons are considered unacceptable reasons for transfer, according to the policy.

Decisions on transfers for family convenience will not be made until Sept. 1, if class size, staffing or student grouping are to be adversely affected by the move.

For more information, call the system's Department of Support Services at 343-2047.

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

When you mail your check this month to pay bills, you will be able to send them with a special issue stamp that celebrates Social Security's 50th anniversary.

For those who depend on Social Security to pay bills, it is an appropriate issue. For those who are still working, it serves as a reminder that when that final paycheck is cashed, they have assurance that there will still be a monthly income. Paychecks end with retirement, but bills keep coming. Social Security helps to pay them.

Because it is a cushion for so many Americans, it is disconcerting when changes are made in Social Security benefits, particularly to those who remember the desperate times of the depression when it was enacted out of dire need.

Banks were closed, cities were paying their employees in scrip, people were selling apples on the street. Farm prices had reached new lows and hundreds and thousands of farmers faced the loss of their land through mortgage foreclosures. State, local and private relief funds were practically exhausted. To be old back then was to be without hope.

The Great Depression lasted more than 10 years. Its effects were felt worldwide. The poverty it caused in the United States had never been experienced before. It was thought that if the Depression had gone on another six months, the system would have collapsed.

And then along came President Franklin Delano Roosevelt who promised to wage war on the Depression as if it were an enemy invasion.

Americans look to their president to solve complicated national problems, to lead them through crisis and to set priorities that will affect their everyday lives.

President Roosevelt did not disappoint them. He began with imbuing them with hope:

"This nation will endure as it has endured," he declared in his inaugural address.

"The only thing we have to fear is fear itself," he asserted.

His words were backed up by measures that started the country going again.

Between 1933 and 1934 national income rose about 25 percent and employment increased by more than 2,500,000.

It was in June 1934 that the president told Congress that the emergency of the Depression had passed and the government could now turn to long-term reforms. One of these was Social Security.

Now in its 50th year, Social Security gives 36 million Americans some monthly protection against old age, disease and accident.

Despite the fact that it has helped so many older citizens to maintain their independence and freedom from want, Social Security has not been without its critics.

Some wage earners who are now contributing to the fund are fearful that when it is time for them to collect benefits, the fund will be depleted. They worry despite the fact that last year President Reagan signed into law a $167 billion Social Security rescue package — a measure the president described as historic.

That bill came out of a National Commission on Social Security Reform aimed at putting Social Security on a sound financial basis. Eight Republicans and seven Democrats served on the bi-partisan committee.

Most see no need for any major legislation in the foreseeable future which should set minds at rest.

There were those who disagreed with some of the reforms, but most conceded that they were needed.

The tax on wages was increased. However, polls have shown that most workers did not object. The retirement age at which full retirement benefits will be received will be gradually increased from 65 to 67 starting in the year 2000. However, in the same period it is projected that tomorrow's older citizens are likely to remain productive throughout their lives. Many will work full or part-time until they are well into their 70s.

Bernice Neugarten, professor of education and sociology at Northwestern University, sees society moving into an era of high technology in which the wisdom, judgment and experience of older people will be valuable in the workplace.

The tax on half of Social Security benefits for high income participants is a sore point for some, but the government estimates that only 10 percent of the population will pay this tax.

Social Security has more supporters than detractors. There are those who predict that if Social Security were abolished today, this nation would have more than an additional 15 million people living in poverty. And that it would throw at least another 10 million people on welfare.

It is true that there are more people moving toward providing for their own future.

Retirement systems and IRAs are making it easier for workers to build up enough resources to live comfortably after they retire.

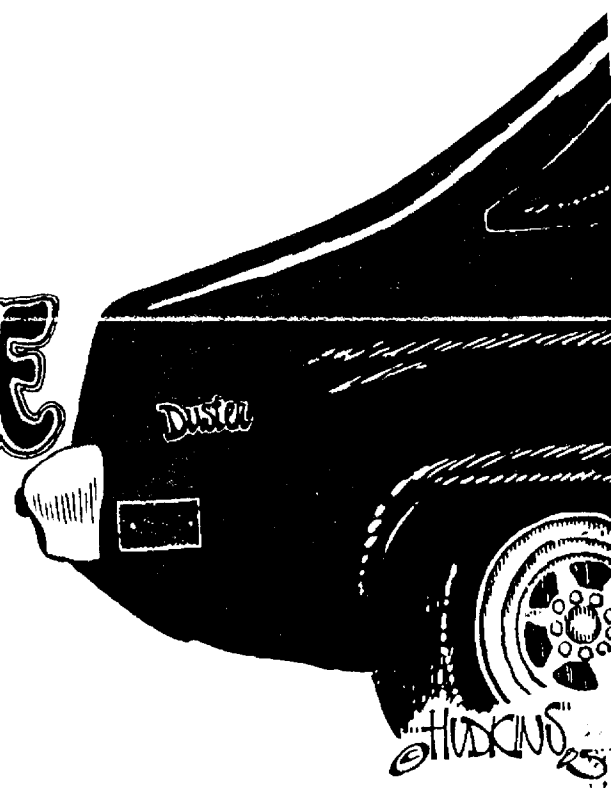

What should be remembered is that IRAs and pension systems are recent innovations. There is a whole segment of people approaching retirement age who will have little vested interest in retirement plans or IRAs.

And what of the displaced workers whose company has moved to another area, shut down or is cutting back? Where will his pension come from and how much will he realize from an IRA plan which he will have to cash in to survive?

In a way, it is sort of mind-boggling to think of an economy where retirees will be operating on a generous pension plus a hundred thou-

I say

Double-dare you!

I ran across something the other day that gave me something to think about: "Almost anything is daring if you've never done it before."

We have become accustomed to believing that risks, dares and challenges have to be of the physical variety — the more dangerous, the better. I'm probably not the only person who has been intimidated by television commercials implying that the way I'm going around once isn't the best. Those of us who don't skydive or scuba dive or drink beer with ball players can hardly hold our heads up in society. "You're always reading," my school pals used to complain. Well, we all have our flaws.

Actually, I'm getting gratifying feedback from my family and friends over my recent daring deeds on the rope course at University Liggett. They all thought I had used up my quota of derring-do when I went to Europe by myself and spent a summer as a dishwasher. Now they are kind enough to suggest that I am endowed with that portion of the male anatomy that is supposed to be the seat of courage. Acts with a certain amount of physical risk really are good for one's self-confidence. Everyone says it, and the few gutsy things I have done bear it out.

But the idea that most previously untried things feel daring bears repeating. We need to remember that it isn't only danger that is daring. Deciding to change careers is daring. Getting married is daring. Remember how scary it was when you were 14 to pick up the phone and call someone for a date?

Nancy Parmenter

Outside Magazine's August feature focused on "Daring Women," detailing their exploits rafting down wild rivers, trekking in the Himalayas and leading expeditions in Peru. It pointed up the fact that one woman's routine is another woman's dare.

"The first time (a) climber roped up; the first time (a) kayaker shot through a stretch of white water; the first time a woman traveler stepped off of the tarmac into a macho, third-world culture — they were daring. But dares have a way of doubling . . . It's not enough to climb rock at a high level now; she wants to try other terrifying pursuits, like writing."

Hey, I'm a writer. Every day I roll a blank piece of paper into my trusty IBM and print words on it. The thing I do every day without half thinking about it terrifies a rock climber. Wow.

One is always impressed at the degree of daring called for in the transcontinental treks of the last century. Leaving all they held dear, abandoning much of their material wealth, enduring extreme weather and terrain, those pioneers demonstrated physical courage. An intriguing corollary to all that is the effort some of them were willing to expend to bring some civilization along.

Think of the newspapers printed out west. Some hardy character loaded an old press in his Conestoga wagon and dragged it thousands of miles across mountains and through rivers raging in spring flood. I'm very fond of an old photograph taken at a Nevada mining camp. A ragtag newspaper staff stands dutily in front of their office — a large tent. Now that was a tough beat.

Another tough character was the pioneer woman who abhorred the fact that her children were growing up without any musical training. A resourceful mother, she painted a board with two octaves of piano keys, explained their theoretical function to the kids, and taught them to play the imaginary instrument by singing the correct note when they struck a key. (Don't ask how she sang chords. There is a point to this story, but it quickly becomes absurd when carried too far.)

Daring grows on a person. The more you dare, the more you want to dare. As the dare doubles, so do the rewards. Dares stretch the psychological horizon. So go on, try it. I dare you.

Assert yourself

Do you have difficulty expressing your needs, thoughts, and feelings? Do you set aside your rights and allow others to impose upon you? Do you have a hard time saying "no" without feeling guilty? If so, you could benefit from the Assertiveness Training Workshop offered by Cottage Hospital of Grosse Pointe.

The workshop is conducted in three sessions beginning on Wednesday, Sept. 11, 7 to 8:30 p.m., and continuing Sept. 18 and 25. The group sessions are held in the Nurses' Residence at the rear of the hospital parking lot, 159 Kercheval Avenue, Grosse Pointe Farms.

There is a $15 fee for the workshop and reservations should be made by calling 884-8600, extension 2165.

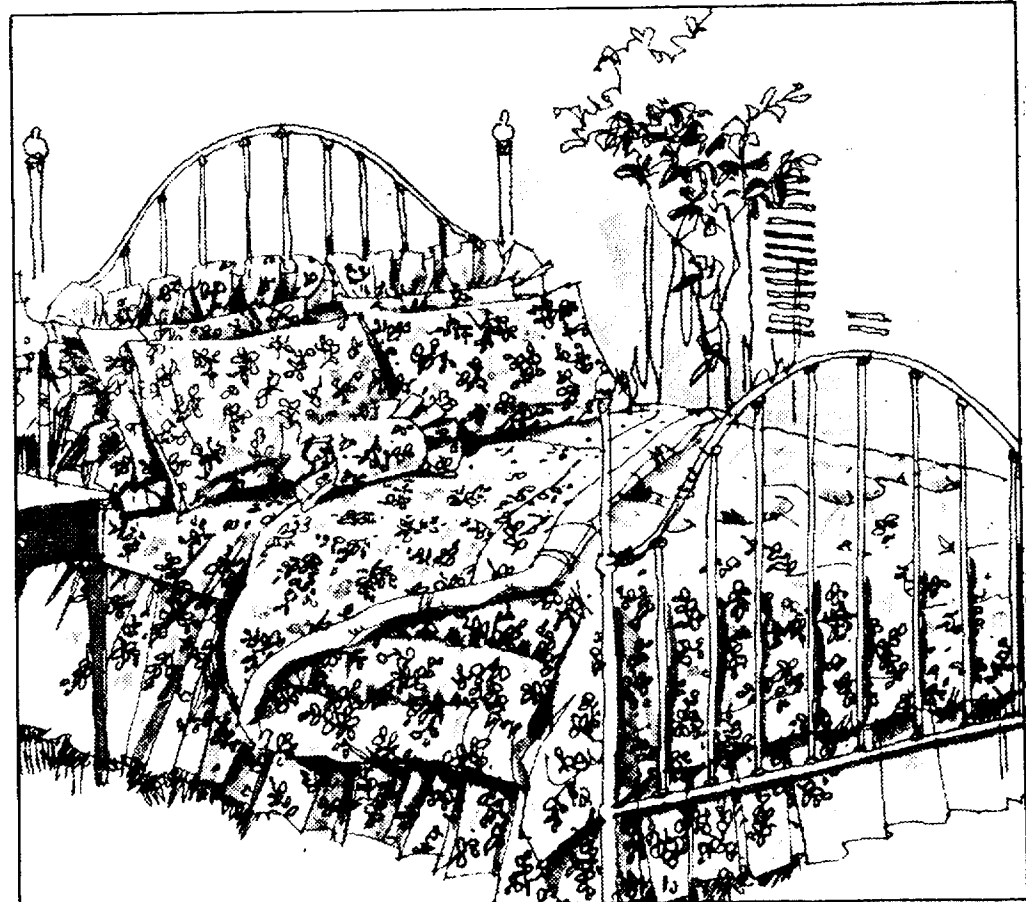

Assertive behavior enables a person to act in his or her own best interest without undue anxiety and without infringing on the rights of others. Assertiveness training seeks to improve communication, problem solving skills, and self esteem. Relationships can be less stressful and more rewarding when assertive behavior is understood and used by the individual.

The Assertiveness Training Workshop is conducted by Joseph Manuszak, A.C.S.W., a staff social worker at Cottage Hospital who has been teaching and speaking on assertiveness for the past three and one-half years.

Registration for the Assertiveness Training Workshop is limited. For more information or to enroll for the class, call 884-8600, extension 2165.

Clean up efforts at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial include the grounds as well as the inside of the structure. Here a workman chops down one of the flowering trees that graced the front of the

Sushi makes a hit in area

All right, Grosse Pointe, let's talk about eating raw fish. That's right, we're talking about the Japanese delicacies of sashimi and sushi.

Now don't make a face. We're not offering a whole mackerel sitting astride your plate, staring up with accusing beady little eyes. We're talking about thinly sliced filets of salt water fish artfully arranged in combination with rice and sea weed.

Anyone who has handled raw clams or oysters, steak tartare or kibbee nyee can easily approach sushi or sashimi. Although these dishes have been around in Japan for centuries and have been popular on the west coast for years, they're rather new here in Motown.

There are perhaps half a dozen restaurants offering sushi, mostly as a sideline. The Kyoto Japanese Steak House, 1985 W. Big Beaver, Troy, has taken it one step further and devoted a large portion of their facility exclusively to sushi and sashimi.

Chrestened "Benisushi", the restaurant is light and airy and can seat perhaps 30 persons. The sushi chefs are all carefully trained experts and are happy to guide first time adventurers through the delights of these dishes.

Perhaps brief explanations are in order. Sashimi is selected thinly sliced strips of assorted fish artfully arranged in a bowl. It's accompanied by pale orange, tart, pickled ginger and shredded vegetables, usually cabbage and radish. Along with the sashimi, you'll receive a little mound of wasabe.

Pale green and rather innocent looking, wasabe is a Japanese horseradish and their answer to nuclear power. A little goes a long way. A lot instantly clears up your sinuses. Put a dab on your chopsticks (sashimi is eaten with chopsticks; sushi is finger food), dip the sashimi in soy sauce and enjoy. The ginger, usually eaten a slice at a time, clears the palate for the next bite.

As mentioned earlier, sushi is finger food. Thin slices of tuna, mackerel, squid, octopus, abalone, shrimp, and caviar are wedged with sticky rice that's been cooked in a special vinegar flavored water. Incidentally, the shrimp, squid, octopus, and abalone have all been cooked beforehand.

Don't be upset by the idea of eating seaweed. This isn't help we're talking about, but a crispy, crackly product that looks a lot like carbon paper.

Sushi also comes with pickled ginger and usually extra wasabe. The trick is to pick up the sushi, which is really quite firm, and dip it fish side down into your soy sauce before popping it into your mouth. Sushi chefs become distraught when they see their creations dipped rice side first into the sauce. It tends to fall apart on you.

The combination of cold vinegar rice, tender fish, crispy seaweed, and salty soy sauce is wonderful. Then comes the extra kick from the wasabe applied beforehand by the sushi chef.

Benisushi's Lily Kim offers a selection of sushi.

Wash it all down with an ice cold Kirin beer, and you've got a real treat.

Ask the chef to make up a combination plate, just so you'll get a taste of everything. A special treat is smoked eel. Dry and slightly crumbly, the delicate tobacco colored morsel is both smoky and sweet. It's eaten without wasabe, which would overwhelm its delicate flavor.

For strict vegetarians, there's sushi made with egg and assorted vegetables.

For those unwilling to motor over to Troy, there's a Benisushi located in the RenCan. Don't think of it as tide pool food, but as fish with flair.

Lee Bryce, second from the left, chairman of the Grosse Pointe Woods Beautification Advisory Commission, presented Mayor George Freeman, second from the right, with the new stained glass window in the foyer of council chambers on Aug. 19. Brass artist Richard Novak and glass artist John Ellwood, who both worked on the window, were on hand for the presentation.

Woods gets stained glass window

The Grosse Pointe Woods Beautification Advisory Commission has presented the city with a stained glass window for the lobby of council chambers at City Hall.

The presentation was made on Aug. 19 before the regular city council meeting. Commission Chairman Lee Bryce was accompanied by the two artists who designed the window and its frame — John Ellwood who did the glass and Richard Novak who created the brass words which form the frame.

"The Beautification Advisory Commission of Grosse Pointe Woods chose to do something unique to commemorate the 35th anniversary of our city," Bryce said.

"The tree in the center of the circle, taken from the city seal, is made of melted green glass on top of wispy cathedral white glass. The outer circle of royal blue flash glass, imbedded with sand blasted stars, was incorporated into the design from the city flag."

Funds for the window came from the commission's May flower sale.

The Beautification Advisory Commission carries out a variety of projects throughout the year. The commission administers a Memorial Tree program whereby residents can purchase a tree to be planted in the name of a departed family member. The group also plants flowers in the center strip of Mack Avenue and maintains the planted berm at City Hall. Currently, the group is developing an arbor on the City Hall grounds that will eventually include 72 varieties of trees.

The group raises part of its funds privately and also receives money from the city budget.

"We couldn't do what we do without city assistance," Bryce said.

Another function of the commission is to present awards to businesses and individuals who have improved the city's appearance.

Audubon residents get flood relief

The Park city council Monday night decided to use a 30-year-old suggestion to help relieve flooding in basements of homes on the 1300 block of Audubon.

The council unanimously voted to spend about $16,500 to install an 18-inch sewer line to service St. Clare of Montefalco Church and School and cross-connect the new line with the current 18-inch sewer that serves the homes on Audubon.

According to City Manager John Crawford, a number of problems combined to exacerbate the situation. It appears that that church and school, at the head of the Audubon line, was sending enough sewage down the pipe to limit accessibility to residents, he said.

Also, there appears to be intrusion of tree roots into the line that at one point cuts the diameter of the line to 10 inches, Crawford said. The city will use a foam to begin dissolving the roots and try in a couple months to cut the weakened pieces away to fully clear the pipe, according to Public Service Director James Ellison.

A number of residents appeared before the council to complain of the flooding. The flooding problem, they said, has been a recurring one and they first came before the council in 1972 seeking relief.

Crawford said the addition of the 18-inch relief sewer and the cross-connection, which would be triggered automatically when either line reached capacity, was first suggested in an engineering report for the 1950s.

Adding the new line, which could take about two months after bids are let, is the cheaper of two solutions to the problems, Crawford said. There is about 10 linear feet of pipe that may be obstructed by tree roots along Audubon, and it would cost between $3,000 and $4,000 just to dig down to either end of the obstruction, he added.

If the section of pipe was sufficiently blocked to need replacement, the cost would be significantly more than laying a new line, he added.

The city should also consider amending its ordinance concerning connection of downspouts to sewer leads so it leaves that connection to the discretion of the homeowner, Crawford said. Such a move could have cost benefits to the city and decrease the flow in the sewer lines, he added.

Before council voted on Mayor Pro Tem John Prost's motion to construct the sewer, Mayor Palmer Heenan asked residents if they wanted to speak.

Jeff McDonald told the council he had polled 15 neighbors and found that 13 of them had experienced some kind of flooding during the past heavy rains, that have dumped as much as five inches of rain in southeast Michigan. McDonald added he had had water in his basement three times in the last week and a number of times since he had moved on Audubon in February.

Russell Nutter, Jr. told the council he was "tired of paying sewer taxes when I store it in my basement. If you don't do something about this, I would like to ask for a one-third rebate on my taxes because I can't use one third of my house."

"This isn't just a situation of a lot of rain coming very hard very fast, another resident complained. "It's gotten to the point where if you spit on the street the basements flood."

School starts Wednesday — drive carefully

To reduce accidents and fatalities involving school buses, AAA Michigan is holding a series of statewide traffic safety education programs as part of its 1985 "School's Open — Drive Carefully" campaign.

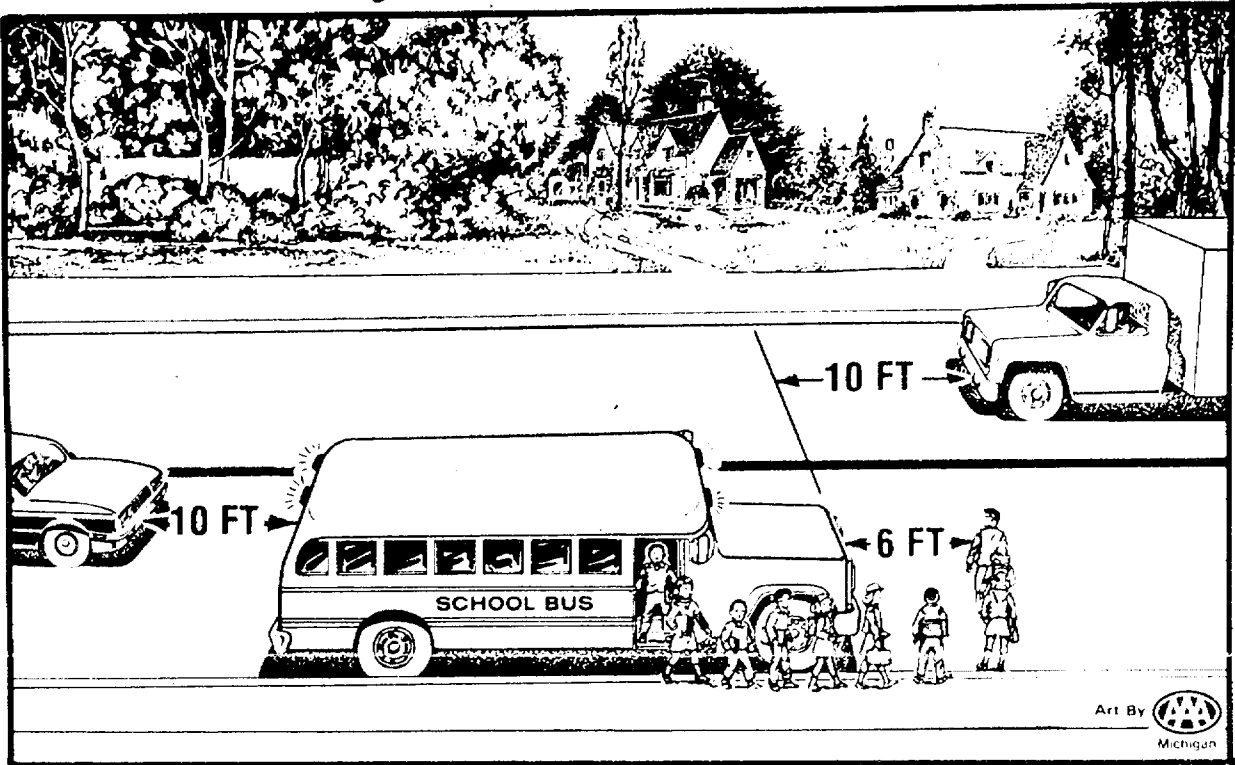

"Most deaths and injuries involving school buses occur after students leave the bus and are struck by a passing vehicle or by the bus," said Grosse Pointe District Manager John Anderson. "The major reasons for the mishaps are carelessness by the student of bus driver or the failure of passing motorists to halt for red flashing lights when the bus is stopped."

There were seven fatalities involving school buses during the 1984-85 school year compared to eight the previous year and an average of six over the last eight years. There were 1,448 school bus accidents in 1983-84. No figures are available for the 1984-85 school year.

"In Michigan, 11,000 school buses transport some 985,000 students each school day," he said. "The purpose of our program is to show motorists the correct procedures to follow and to show both parents and school-aged children how to enter and exit the bus and cross the street safely."

The school bus safety program is co-sponsored by AAA Michigan and the Michigan Association For Pupil Transportation and will be held at elementary schools throughout the state.

Anderson pointed out the Michigan law requires motorists in both directions to halt at least 10 feet from a stopped bus displaying alternating flashing lights as it loads or unloads students and not to proceed until those lights stop flashing.

To cut down on traffic mishaps involving school buses, AAA Michigan advises motorists and student pedestrians to follow certain safeguards. Michigan law requires motorists in both directions to halt 10 feet on either side of a stopped school bus displaying flashing red lights. Students should always cross at least six feet in front of the bus in clear view of the bus driver and be alert for all traffic. Several persons died in accidents involving school buses during the 1984-85 school year. AAA and the Michigan Association for Pupil Transportation are co-sponsoring a series of statewide traffic safety education programs on school bus safety.

The school bus stop law has not been adopted in all communities, but motorists should slow down and use caution whenever students are loading or unloading even if lights on the bus are not flashing," said Anderson.

Youngsters should be cautioned that cars do not always stop for the buses' flashing red lights and they should check traffic carefully before crossing the street.

Youngsters should be advised by parents to cross at least six feet in front of the bus and never walk behind the bus or near the wheels so they can be seen by the bus driver at all times.

Other safety tips for students to follow include: Wait for the bus in a safe place and away from the roadway; follow the instructions of the school bus driver, and never retrieve anything near the bus wheels until first alerting the bus driver.

AAA Michigan also will provide safety belts, badges and training booklets to 1,700 Michigan schools.

Free "School's Open — Drive Carefully" bumper stickers are available at AAA's 54 full-service offices statewide.

School board discusses traffic problems

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The Board of Education likes the idea of a drop-off area for Mason School. It was less excited Aug. 12 with a proposed pedestrian light in the Park and even less thrilled with requests that the school system pick up some of the costs of both programs.

Mason School has been a sore spot for traffic problems for a number of years with parents dropping off students from Vernier, according to the administration. Alternate solutions, such as asking parents to drop off students elsewhere, have been encouraged by the school system and the Woods Department of Public Safety.

Almost annually, Mason parents have asked the city and the school system to come up with a solution to the problem. In February, the Woods Council, City Administrator-Clerk Chester Petersen, Public Safety Director Jack Patterson, school board members Catherine Brierly, Dr. Ernest Buechler and Jon Gandelot, Dr. Joseph Spagnoli, William Mestdagh and William Christofferson met to discuss the problem.

Following that meeting, Spagnoli, assistant Support Services Director David King and maintenance supervisor Furrel Fontaine visited the school. Spagnoli recommended a drop-off site on the school. Spagnoli recommended a drop-off site on the Charlevoix side of the building, which can't be used now because it is posted as a fire route.

The Woods, after studying the problem, sent the school system a proposal for an eight-foot wide parking bay that would run along 200 feet of the school's Charlevoix side, accommodating between 20 and 25 vehicles. The cost of the project, which would mean removing the existing sidewalk and doing some sewer work in the school grounds, carries an $18,000 price tag.

While board members said they were interested in the construction, the work was to solve a safety problem under the jurisdiction of the city. Trustees instructed the administration to continue its negotiations with the Woods.

The board's response to a proposal from the Park that the system pay half the cost of installing pedestrian crossing signal at Jefferson and Westchester and Somerset roads was cool. The signal would accommodate the students crossing to Pierce Middle School, according to Park City Manager John Crawford.

Although the price tag of its involvement would be $5,025, the school system should not get into a situation of paying for every traffic device that a city wants to install, board members said. The cost of the program wasn't as important as the precedent that would be set, other board members said.

Board members also questioned the need for the light, since students could travel a couple of blocks farther and cross at the existing traffic light.

Installation of the pedestrian signal is more convenient for students than the traffic light and would be installed to work in conjunction with the light, Crawford said. Although the city will go ahead to have the signal installed, Crawford added he would hope some support for the payment of the $5,025 could be found among board members.

Since the two items were brought up during the discussion part of the agenda, the board took no final action on them. The administration will return to the board when it has a recommendation on the proposals.

Radar detector stolen

A radar detector and a watch were taken from an unlocked car inside a closed garage on Sheldon Road in the Farms sometime during the night of Aug. 20. When the resident went out to the garage early in the morning, he discovered the doors to all three vehicles in the garage standing open, police reports stated. Nothing was missing from the other cars.

E.W. Erl the Clown will do "Don't Talk With Strangers" at 11 a.m., 12:30 and 4 p.m. that day. The program teaches children about strangers without making it a frightening experience and is appropriate for preschool through elementary school children.

E.W. Erl was trained at the Macomb County Child Abuse/Neglect information council.

Get cooking in September

Beginning the week of Sept. 16, the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe Public School System will offer a full array of cooking classes in its fall program of non-credit activities for adults.

Heading the roster again will be Charity Sucek, Grosse Pointe's master cooking teacher. Her fall program includes a total of 10 scheduled offerings, both day and evening.

She begins with "A Sample of French Regional Cooking: Alsace-Lorraine." This new-for-fall three-week class was inspired by an invitation last spring to the Strasbourg region of France to judge in a food competition. Sucek reacquainted herself with the culinary delights of eastern France in the area known as Alsace-Lorraine.

In addition, Sucek, Cordon-Rouge-trained in Paris, will present a four-week class, "Highlights of French Classical Cuisine."

Sucek's popular single-session classes include "Basics of Bread," "Herbs and Spices," "The Secrets of Sauces" and "Highlights of Spanish Cuisine."

Other single-session classes to be presented in the fall program by Sucek include "A Holiday Dinner," "Tips on Cooking with Wine" and "More About Fish."

Another popular cooking instructor, Pat Pompei, of Pat Pompei's All Natural Cuisine, has also scheduled a wide variety of classes. She will repeat "Vegetarian Cuisine I" and "Vegetarian Cuisine II," and has added "Vegetarian Cuisine III," a new-for-fall offering.

Her single-session offerings include "Holiday Baking with Whole Wheat Flour and Without White Sugar," "More Baked Goods with Whole Wheat Flour and Without Sugar," and "Pizza with Whole Wheat Flour."

Pompei's other offerings includes the new "Satays and Spring Rolls," and she is repeating her popular "Terrific Appetizers" and "Real Soups" classes.

Inga Calloway of Party Fare Planner has planned a series of classes again for the Department of Community Education, including "Get Acquainted with Metric Measure," "Gifts from Your Kitchen," "Holiday Treats" and "New Chocolate Desserts."

Repeating their popular classes, Vincent McCallum and Associates will present "Food Processor Cookery," "Basic Microwave Cooking" and "Holiday Gifts from Your Microwave."

Other cooking classes to be offered this fall are "Beginning Chinese Cooking," a seven-week class taught by Mei Chen.

Other cooking offerings this fall include "Make Bread in Your Food Processor" with local cookbook author Dona Reynolds, who has also scheduled a time-saving "Make Your Holiday Dinner Easier." Reynolds will present "So Now You Own a Food Processor" and "So Now You Own a Food Processor — for Men Only."

Retired school principal Richard Kay will offer his popular single-session class, "Wok Cooking," again this fall.

In December, Dorothy Newhouse will offer a single-session class, "Bake a Bouche de Noel," teaching the correct way to create a traditional French yule log.

'West Side Story'

Michigan Opera Theatre will hold final auditions Monday, Sept. 9, for dancers/singers for "West Side Story," opening at the Fisher Theatre Nov. 15.

Dancers must have a three- to five-year background in ballet, jazz and modern dance in addition to possessing strong singing talents. All dancers who are accepted into the production must be available on a full-time basis for approximately six weeks of employment. Applicants should come prepared with two contrasting musical selections and be prepared to participate in various production dance routines.

All applicants must call the Michigan Opera Theatre Production Office, 963-3717, weekdays, for an appointment no later than Friday, Sept. 6.

One-day trips planned by War Memorial

The War Memorial's September/October calendar of events was just mailed to Grosse Pointe residents and already two of their day trips have been sold out.

In order to accommodate the demand to see "Detroit's Incredible Salt Mines," a second trip has been scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 24. A third trip may also be planned.

The bus will leave the Center at 10 a.m. and return at 3 p.m. Included in the $23 per person cost is transportation, the viewing of the award-winning film "Salt — The Essence of Life," a guided tour through the 50-foot wide, mile-long rooms of salt aboard a motorized transport, and lunch at Giovanni's. Casual, warm attire is recommended since the mine temperature is a consistent 58 degrees.

An evening trip to Greenfield Village Friday, Oct. 25, will feature Robert Sherman's mystery comedy play "Spooks," preceded by cocktails and dinner in the museum's American Cafe. The bus will leave at 6 p.m. and return at 11:30 p.m. This trip, especially designed to get everyone in the Halloween spirit, costs $33 per person.

A trip to historic Hathaway House in Blissfield, and the Hidden Lake Gardens nestled in the Irish Hills will depart at 10 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 10, and return at 7 p.m. The $25 per person cost includes lunch at the Hathaway House, built in 1851, time to explore the numerous Main Street shops, and a guided tour of Hidden Lake Gardens which should be ablaze in autumn colors by that time.

On Wednesday, Nov. 20, historical purists will savor the efforts of the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth when they partake in a nine-course, authentically prepared Thanksgiving dinner. Day-trippers won't go away hungry, to be sure, nor will they go away without a new appreciation for the holiday. A color film about the Pilgrims and a tour of the Plymouth Historical Museum is part of this $35 per person "Mayflower Pilgrimage." The bus will leave at 3 p.m. and return at 9:30 p.m.

On Wednesday, Dec. 4, the Grand Theatre of London, Ontario will present "Barnum," the Tony award-winning Broadway musical. Travelers will begin their day with a backstage tour of the Grand Theatre followed by lunch at Sorrenti's. Then, during the matinee performance, they will be dazzled and dazzled by the color, music and dance celebrating P.T. Barnum's rise to circus immortality. This $45 per person day trip will leave at 8 a.m. and return at 7 p.m.

Last is the "Christmas Candlelight Tour of Marshall," Sunday, Dec. 8, from 2:30 to 11:30 p.m. Guests will dine in the Inner Circle Room at Schuler's restaurant followed by a punch and cookie re-

Author seeks data on haunted houses

The publisher of a book on haunted houses is seeking communications from people who live in, or who are aware of, such places.

The book, "The Ghostly Register," will be published next year by Contemporary Books. The author is Arthur Myers, who has written two other books on the psychic, for Simon & Schuster and for Random House.

Myers would like to hear from people who know of, or live in, places that seem haunted. He would also like to know about stores, churches, theaters, boats or any other haunted places.

Among things to include are ways that the ghosts make themselves known; the people involved; the history of the place; any studies that have been made of the haunting; how the ghosts were gotten rid of, if they were; a description of the place.

Preferably, names will be used, but they will be withheld if the people involved wish. Exact addresses will not be revealed, only the town or city.

Myers may be sent information at 315 Boston Post Road, Weston, Mass., 02193. He may be reached by phone at 617-894-6293.

Health education

The Friends of Bon Secours will sponsor a Town Hall for Health community education program on CPR at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 4, in Bon Secours Hospital's Science Hall, Grosse Pointe.

CPR, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, is an emergency treatment for victims of heart attack, shock, drowning, or suffocation. An emergency treatment maneuver for choking victims will also be taught by Bon Secours Hospital's health care professionals.

Admission is free, but a reservation ticket is required. For free tickets or more information, call Glory Little at 823-0008. Class space is limited.

CPR recertification will also be available on this date between 7:30 and 8:30 p.m. Recertification takes about 15 minutes and no tickets or reservations are necessary. If CPR certification has not been renewed within a 12-month period, it will be necessary to take the entire course again.

Bon Secours Hospital is located at 468 Cadieux Road at Jefferson in Grosse Pointe.

M-Star's here

There's something new to watch during the day on Grosse Pointe Cable channel 19, the local education access channel.

M-Star, which offers educational programming for students in kindergarten through high school, is up and running, cable company officials say. The state-financed broadcasting will run weekdays from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

College Cable fans will have to watch channel 21, cable company general manager Michael DuFour said. College Cable will share that channel with the Pro-Am Sports System.

College Cable is a 24-hour service which repeats 12-hour blocks of programming, DuFour said. The first run will be from 4 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the repeats will be preempted when PASS comes on the air about 7 p.m.

While the signal will be coming through loud and clear when school starts next week, public school administration officials say they aren't sure how to work the programming, produced by the Chicago-based Cable Education Network, into the curriculum. The school system retains its one-year recordability rights and hopes that planning sessions later this school year will help give direction on how to work the segments into classroom instruction.

Regular programming produced by the public and non-public schools will begin being shown at 6 p.m. on channel 19.

North chemistry teacher is Project SERAPHIM Fellow

Imagine a world where computers could be found in every chemistry classroom. Humming inside their disk drives would be the best, most up-to-date software available. The teachers would, of course, drain every drop of educational value out of all that technology, simply because they're been so well-trained in computer usage.

The result would be chemistry classes that reached more people and produced the best chemistry students ever.

Sound like a dream? For some people in the Chemistry Department at Eastern Michigan University, it is. But it's a dream that's gaining a strong foothold on reality, thanks to Project SERAPHIM.

SERAPHIM, funded by the National Science Foundation (NSF), promotes the use of computers in teaching chemistry, especially at the high school level. The idea was born three years ago by Dr. John Moore, EMU chemistry professor and director of the project, and his wife, Betty, who serves as project manager.

John was editing the computer series column in the "Journal of Chemistry Education" at that time, something he still does. The journal's worldwide readership put him in touch with chemistry teachers across the globe. It occurred to the Moores that many teachers have no way of knowing about — or purchasing — the latest software for teaching chemistry. So in January 1982, they wrote a proposal to the NSF requesting funds to allow EMU to serve as a clearinghouse for software and information. The $160,000 grant came through, and Project SERAPHIM was in business.

Since 1982, the clearinghouse has distributed over 12,000 computer disks and 10,000 information packets to chemistry teachers all over the world. The project has distribution centers in France, Canada, Kenya, West Germany, Yugoslavia and Italy, not to mention the United States.

That clearinghouse is the foundation for what is now a three-pronged approach to promoting the use of computers in the chemistry classroom. A three-year grant for $600,000, the project's third and largest grant, enabled SERAPHIM to introduce two new aspects into its program last year.

The first is a training system that brings high school teachers from across the U.S. to EMU, teaches them how to lead workshops on computer usage and sends them back to their respective parts of the country to spread the word.

The second new component has professors, teachers and programmers creating new, innovative programs. That's why nine Project SERAPHIM Fellows from as close as Grosse Pointe and as far away as California are on campus this summer. And it's this newest area — research and development — that excites Moore the most.

"We're trying to develop things that people haven't thought about before," said Moore, a 46-year-old with dark hair, beard and glasses. "The other programs were almost like flash cards. The computer had you choose between a right and a wrong answer. We're looking into something different from the older kinds of computer-assisted instruction or drill-practice."

One example Moore cited is called "instrument simulation." Such a program makes the computer behave exactly like a scientific instrument, allowing students to learn how the machine operates before getting their hands on the real thing.

This would be advantageous Moore said, because instruments don't always work, there aren't enough of them to go around and they're expensive to buy and operate.

"One example at EMU is the HPLC, which probably starts at around $20,000," Moore explained. "It's used for chemical analysis. It's a bunch of different parts and it would take you all day to figure out how to use it. And if you don't know what you're doing you can screw it up and somebody will have to fix it. The idea behind instrument simulation is to let the student try it on the computer first and learn, 'okay, you're supposed to turn this knob first, and so on.'"

But can it be even close to the real thing?

"Right now it's very realistic in terms of the output it produces," he said of the program, being developed by a SERAPHIM Fellow from Washington just down the hall from his office. "But it's not as realistic as far as the knobs actually being visible on the screen in the right places. But he is working on that. The computer will actually become the instrument."

SERAPHIM Fellow Bob Rittenhouse, a 35-year-old physical chemist at Walla Walla College, is getting closer to achieving that. After 2½ weeks, he finished the "computation kernel" — all the number-crunching, design trees and general logic of the program that allows the computer to take in data and produce outcomes extremely close to that of the actual instrument.

Now, he's into the "graphic/user interface" portion, the part that determines what the user sees on the screen and how he or she works with it.

Rittenhouse explained that a "mouse" will be used to operate the program. The flashing cursor that appears on the video screen can be controlled by sliding the mouse across a flat, simulated screen lying on the desk next to the terminal.

While watching a computerized image of the instrument on the video screen, the student will move the cursor to different parts of the instrument and, by hitting a button on the mouse, activate knobs and buttons visible on the screen.

"The idea is to make the program behave exactly like the real instrument," Rittenhouse said. "The mouse has a very intuitive feel. It kind of feels like you're doing the real thing as opposed to punching keys on a keyboard."

Rittenhouse figures he has 3½ weeks of work left before he has a "complete, functional program." Until then, he'll be putting in what he calls "a good eight hours" each day, which means at least eight, probably more.

"It's hard time quitting when you get involved in something," he said. "That's the problem with programming. You almost have it. Four hours later, you still almost have it."

Rittenhouse's program is one of many special projects in progress at EMU this summer. William Coleman, chair of the chemistry department at Wellesley College in Massachusetts, is working on three programs, including one that takes a new approach to teaching students about atomic spectra and structure.

"The traditional method is to show them a theoretical model and then make observations," said Coleman, who is working with two student assistants. "This program will allow students to make observations, then organize those observations into categories and finally, use the patterns to come up with a model. We're trying to avoid letting the computer become another workbook. We're taking advantage of the computer."

Eventually, he explained, the program will present a model on the screen that looks like most models found in textbooks. The difference will be how the student arrived at that model.

Developing innovative programs like this one and distributing them worldwide has obvious benefits. But these efforts won't mean much unless the teachers who get the programs know what to do with them. That's why SERAPHIM used some of that 1984 grant money to establish its workshop leader training program.

"Last summer we brought 18 people here to train for workshops," said Betty Moore as she and her husband sat in a large office about ten strides down the hallway from the clearinghouse room. "Those are the first 18 dots you see on the map out in the hall."

That map, an enlarged outline of the United States, is now speckled with 35 dots, each one representing a trained workshop leader who is giving computer workshops to other teachers in his or her surrounding area. The dots are scattered, as if at random, from coast to coast, and you can find at least one in 25 different states.

Those 35 leaders gave roughly 30 workshops last academic year, John said. He estimates that as many as 800, or even close to 1,000 high school chemistry teachers attended. Since there are about 20,000 high school chemistry teachers in the country, it's conceivable that the workshops have reached 5 percent.

Those workshop leaders will continue to give seminars, as will each new batch of trainees. In addition, the Moores have plans for an advanced workshop for those who have taken the first one.

Patricia Barker, a chemistry and earth science teacher at Minisink High School in New York, is at EMU this summer developing the package for that workshop. She's also converting an Apple interfacing program to Commodore and judging SERAPHIM's national computer program contest. She has Commodore, Apple and IBM computers in her labs at Minisink, and she has seen the impact computers can have in the classroom.

"It's a whole new ballgame," she said. "You can simulate things in the classroom you could never do before. It makes my job more challenging."

"What's really encouraging," she added, "is the number of kids with computers at home. I get lab reports on disk — the kids have written them up at home. And when they work at home, they're even more willing to come in (to class) and work."

Not all schools are as fortunate as Minisink. As the Moores pointed out, even schools that can afford computers often don't have enough money for software. It's a problem John and Betty saw a lot of during SERAPHIM's early stages, the time when schools were eager to buy computers but didn't always know what to do with them. Bake sales and other fund-raising efforts just weren't enough.

"One school wrote and asked if we had any 'used software,' we could send them," Betty said. "We found some to send them (free of charge). We figured that if they needed it that badly..."

"Five dollars (what SERAPHIM charges for each disk) is not more than the price of material, postage and handling," John said. "We're sending them out at cost. But these people didn't even have that much. So we sent them some."

Such benevolence is common at SERAPHIM, which was jokingly named after a type of angel. A friend of the Moores who came up with the name didn't expect the Moores to take it seriously. But they liked it, and it stuck.

The letters in SERAPHIM stand for Systems Engineering Respecting Acquisition and Propagation of Heuristic Instructional Materials, but John isn't sure if his friend came up with the acronym first or the words to go with it. In any event, the Moores like the title.

'Chorus Line' auditions

Grosse Pointe Theatre, one of Michigan's premiere community theaters and Midwestern winner of the quadrennial national one-act festival, will hold open auditions for "A Chorus Line," the longest-running musical in the history of Broadway.

Held at the theater's rehearsal studio at 315 Fisher, the auditions will begin Friday, Sept. 6, from 7 to 11 p.m. and continue Saturday, Sept. 7, from 1 to 5 p.m. "A Chorus Line" will open the theater's season Nov. 6-10 and 12-16.

Grosse Pointe Theatre will be one of the first nationally to present this story of aspiring "gypsies" (chorus dancers) telling a director who they are and how they feel about dancing. Choreographers Marcy Kazmirowski and Don Ross have devised intricate and original numbers, while relying heavily on the forcefulness of the original choreography.

For more information regarding the auditions, call Barbara Bentley, director, 882-9879.

Peace Corps — hard work . . .

chigoe egg sacs and clean them out." (Webster's tells us that chigoes are the same as chiggers.)

The health education project that Duffy took part in under the joint auspices of the Peace Corps and the Zairian Rural Development Center was aimed at teaching villagers the basic facts of cleanliness as disease prevention.

"Like the importance of washing your hands," Duffy said. "But they don't have running water, and when your water source is so far away, you just don't wash."

One of her biggest accomplishments was the construction of a capped spring, Duffy said. A source of clean water was found and boxed in and covered over to protect it. Installing a pipe made it possible for the villagers to fill their jugs without dipping them in the water.

"There was a nearby village that was pretty dynamic," she said. "They came to ask for help with their water source after they saw ours. I think it will be a catalyst. They were so appreciative of anything I did. I was real happy — it's the goal of the Peace Corps to have yourself become obsolete."

For the first year she was in the village, Duffy taught volunteer health workers to work in dispensaries in their own villages, diagnosing and treating diseases such as malaria and hookworm. The program was under way when she arrived, but unfortunately, the volunteers, mostly young men with a little education, knew the monetary value of additional training and headed straight for a better job in the cities as soon as the class was over.

"It was set up to fail," Duffy said. "Most of the villages nominated 18- or 19-year-old men — exactly the people who want to migrate to cities." Duffy designed a new program using more settled, middle-aged adults with a stake in their home villages. They happened to be largely illiterate, so she taught the course in Swahili.

Four African languages are spoken in Zaire, Duffy said. In many cases, a traveler need only walk from one village to the next to find a different language. The Peace Corps holds a three-month total-immersion language training camp at a former Belgian boys' private school. For the first half, the students learn conversational French, which is widely spoken. In the second half, they learn one African language.

"We spend eight hours a day between the language classes and the technical training (for the Peace Corps specialty)," Duffy said. The language class consisted of four students, who stayed most of the day, and a teacher, who changed every hour. Conversation revolved around such topics as diseases, crops and food.

The former Belgian school is not the only formerly Belgian aspect of Zaire. President Joseph Mobutu instituted a comprehensive Zairization plan outlawing things European, Duffy said.

"It's against the law for men to wear ties," she said, "and it's against the law for Zairian women to wear pants. And no Christian names are allowed. So you see a lot of 'Ex-Antoinettes' and 'Ex-Patricias.' They do it on maps, too. They just put 'Ex' in front of the old name. Oui!" in a burst of accidental French.

Women wear a "panga," four yards of cloth wrapped tightly from waist to ankle. Single girls wear one, married women wrap thickly in two, to show off their exalted state.

Women marry by the age of 15 ("if you're 20 and still not married, you're over the hill") and have one baby after another until they die. "The goal is to have 10 or 12 children," Duffy said, "but the infant mortality rate is about 50 percent. I haven't seen a study on it, but that's what you hear, and by looking around, it looks pretty accurate."

Zairian women are neat and conscious of their appearance, according to Duffy. They like to wear jewelry, usually thin metal or plastic beads, or ivory "if they're rich enough." Many women crop their hair so short it looks shaved, but others grow it longer and "tress" it in myriad tiny braids.

Duffy said she wore skirts and dresses in Zaire. Before Peace Corps volunteers left this country, they were advised to dress according to the culture of the area. But she said she rarely wore Zairian clothes "because it's impossible to ride a bike in them." She kept one pair of pants for use on a motorcycle, but when she wore them, people often asked if she was a man. Small children would run out to the road and call out the Swahili word for "priest" when she drove by.

In the custom of the country, Duffy and her fellow Peace Corps volunteers hired a man to cook and clean house and a young boy to haul water. She said many people hire teenagers to help with chores. Cooking and cleaning her house, a modern one with a tin roof, a cement floor and glass windows, was worth about $10 a month "and lots of gifts."

The staple food there is beans. "Beans, rice, and sweet potatoes and about 12 kinds of bananas," Duffy said. The standard method of cooking is boiling, but frying is favored when families have enough money to buy palm oil, which is produced in the northern part of the country and is expensive.

The village, located near the Rwandan border in a valley ringed with volcanic mountains, is a fertile area of Zaire. Such a desirable area is overpopulated, so that most families farm only about one hectare (about two-and-a-half acres), although in theory four hectares are needed to support a family of four.

The tiny plots are often located five or six kilometers from home and are hand-cultivated with hoes fashioned from sticks and metal disks. "Some of the farmers came from a town 60 kilometers away," Duffy said. "They would hitch a ride on a truck and stay for the whole planting season."

Hunger stalked even the fertile region. For two years, rainfall had been below normal. The undeveloped systems of Zaire do not allow for storage of crops. In October 1984, Duffy said, the situation grew grave and the central government sent in beans.

"You saw wrinkled babies, bloated bellies everywhere," Duffy said. "You'd walk down the street and every second house was having a funeral." But the situation had not reached Ethiopian proportions.

Taken as a whole, Duffy said it was a positive experience. "I wouldn't go twice — once is enough, but yes, if I had it to do again, I would."

Farms creates committee . . .

residential area with narrow streets. The five communities are now built nearly to saturation and the typical family owns more cars than it did 10 years ago.

"What you've got here is a city that was not designed to carry Detroit traffic," said consultant Bowman, "but like it or not, that's what you have." According to Bowman's study, some of the traffic on McKinley, McMillan and Fisher is generated by non-residents taking a shortcut to Canyon and the expressway.

But he proposed no easy solution. "Solutions like a drastic one-way road system will probably hurt more," he said. "You'll inconvenience yourselves."

The traffic report, prompted originally by complaints from residents of the three busy streets, was intended to accomplish two things: provide a statistical base and identify problem areas. As a result of the study, Bowman provided three alternative solutions.

"I tried for practical, long-term solutions, not quick Band-Aids," he said.

Alternative one is to make Fisher a two-way street, banning parking altogether. A practical difficulty with this solution is that it would require agreement from the City. A political difficulty is that it is nearly unanimously opposed by Fisher residents, who spoke up clearly at the meeting. Their consensus was that making Fisher two-way would increase both the volume and the speed of traffic and leave them with nowhere to park. However, Bowman himself said he does not favor this alternative.

Alternative two is to close the median crossovers on Mack at McKinley, Moran and Manor. This is the favored alternative of both Bowman and the residents. The goal of the proposal is to make travel from Mack onto those streets so inconvenient that traffic will take other routes.

A practical difficulty again is that the proposal requires the cooperation of another body, in this case, the Wayne County Road Commission. Several residents urged trying out the plan by blocking the median crossovers with sawhorses to see if the diversion is effective. Complete implementation of the proposal would involve filling in the crossovers with dirt, grass and curbs.

Councilwoman Nancy Waugaman asked Bowman to elaborate on where the traffic would go if the crossovers were blocked. "It isn't all foreign traffic," she said. "We're generating some of our own traffic problems."

Bowman admitted that the proposal would only divert traffic to another street. "It requires people to go farther for a turnaround," he explained. "We want to make it less convenient for outsiders to use the city streets. We hope it will make people say, 'oh, cripes, I'll just do down Mack and cut through another Pointe.' You can change their route, but you can't change where they want to go."

The consensus of the meeting was that the newly appointed traffic committee is likely to concentrate on the crossover closings as the best solution.

Bowman's third alternative is to designate McKinley as a one-way southbound street. He said that Fisher creates an unbalanced traffic pattern because it is one-way without a pair. Making McKinley one-way would require banning parking on one or both sides, Bowman said. Residents also opposed this plan on the grounds that it would encourage higher speeds and create a parking problem.

Excessive speed became a hotly debated side issue at the meeting. Residents were unanimous in feeling that traffic on their streets travels far in excess of the posted limits. Several asked for increased enforcement.

Chief Ferber told the audience that he does not have enough personnel for additional enforcement. In any case, he said, studies have shown that speed is not really a problem.

"I'd like to call your attention to this report," Ferber said. "There is no indication of excessive speed. These readings were taken in an unmarked car by civilian employees of the engineering firm. Every study has shown that the traffic problems center on Kerby, Moross and Lakeshore."

The study recorded speeds at mid-block and calculated the speed at which 85 percent of the traffic was traveling. It found that on McKinley, Fisher, McMillan and Moran traveled consistently at five miles over the posted limit of 25 mph. On Kerby and Moross, traffic tended to drive 10 miles above the limit.

No timetable was established for the work of the traffic committee. Fromm promised that the committee would meet as soon as possible. Residents interested in taking part in the committee's work may contact City Clerk Richard Solak.

Well, tomorrow is the opening ceremonies for the annual Hamtramck Festival and opening ceremonies will see Ronald Kowalski, president of the Kowalski Sausage Co., and Hamtramck mayor Robert Kozaren, cleave through a 300-foot-long kielbasa to officially kick off the festival.

The sausage, weighing in at 300 pounds, is expected to replace a Guinness Book of World Records sausage featured last year at Chicopee, Mass. that weighed in at 240 pounds and 27 feet in length.

After the kielbasa has served its unique purpose, it will be donated to the festival so that visitors wishing a taste of a world record can buy it with a choice of condiments. This sixth annual festival will run four days over the Labor Day weekend and city police expect 600,000 persons to attend.

One hundred booths offering every type of food, drink and services imaginable will line both sides of Joseph Campau for over one half a mile. There's free admission and free parking.

So what are you waiting for? Shine your shoes and polka on over.

sand dollars or more from IRAs.

The amount of money invested in private pensions has increased dramatically. This growth has been encouraged by the government. Pension contributions by companies are tax-deductible. Investment profits of pension plans are tax deferred. The government has also established standards for pension plans and insured them against losses.

But in spite of all the incentives for Americans to provide for their own future, it's going to be a hard-sell to convince those who have lived with Social Security for 50 years.

For most Americans it is the foundation on which they build their future as a retiree. There will be those with other sources of income who will be able to erect an elaborate and luxurious structure of life on that foundation. But there will also be those who will be happy with the modest shelter that Social Security provides.

From all concerned — Happy 50th birthday to Social Security.

Magazine seeks nominations

A local magazine is seeking information about current or native Grosse Pointers for inclusion in a special issue, to be published in 1986, dedicated to outstanding Grosse Pointers.

"Heritage: A Journal of Grosse Pointe Life" is a bi-monthly magazine published for and about Grosse Pointers. Five issues of the magazine have been distributed since last December. A publication schedule for 1986 indicates that the "Outstanding Grosse Pointers" theme issue will appear in early fall of next year.

Editors of the magazine are currently compiling lists of famous Pointers and unsung heroes for inclusion in the special issue. Criteria for inclusion on the prestigious list require that the individual be a native Grosse Pointer or a current resident; that the person has made a significant contribution to his or her career field; or that he or she has made a significant contribution to society through philanthropy.

Nominations will be accepted through Nov. 15, 1985. Nominations should include the nominee's full name, career field, and a description of the person's contributions to their career field specifically or to society generally.

Persons who submit nominations should include their own name and telephone number so that information may be verified and expanded. Nominations should be submitted to: "Heritage: A Journal of Grosse Pointe Life," 20010 Nine Mile Road, St. Clair Shores, Mich. 48080.

Raspa's book evokes texture of Italy past

By Elsa Frohman

Picture stables in a tiny Italian village nestled between the brightly colored peaks of the Dolomite Alps. Listen to the wind whistling between tiny, unheated houses. Look up at the mountain peaks changing color as the sun travels across the sky. Join the villagers as they gather in the stables — the warmest place in town — for court- ing, spinning, gossiping and telling stories.

"It's the kind of place where you can imagine fairy tales happen- ing," said Richard Raspa, an associate professor of Communica- tions in the College of Lifelong Learning at Wayne State Universi- ty. Raspa, a resident of Grosse Pointe Woods, has co-authored a book of Italian folktales, as told by a woman who emigrated from Italy before World War II. In coopera- tion with Elizabeth Mathias, a pro- fessor at St. John's University in New York, Raspa has attempted not only to preserve these tradi- tional stories, but to put them in perspective within the culture that generated them.

"Italian Folktales in America — the Verbal Art of an Immigrant Woman," is based on the expe- riences and reminiscences of Clementina Todesco, who lived in Detroit in the 1940s. Clementina's daughter wrote down her mother's stories and experiences and do- nated them to Wayne State Universi- ty archives before the family moved on to Arizona.

The stories were in the university archives for several decades before Raspa found them and decided to base his research on them. Wayne has the largest col- lection of urban folklore in the United States.

When Raspa became a Fulbright Scholar to Italy, he traveled to Clementina's home village of Faller to find the setting that pro- duced her stories.

"Ethnographic research is a de- scription of a culture to reveal the underlying premises that manifest themselves in daily activities," Raspa explained. "It's about dis- tinguishing twitches from winks from parodies of winks."

Raspa used his fluent Italian to talk with the villagers and record the history and physical presence of the village. At first, the villagers were reluctant to speak with him, but after a while they opened up and shared their experiences and folktales with him. His task was to compare the stories as they are being told today in Faller with the versions that Clementina told after she came to the United States.

"There were changes and transi- tions as she moved from the village to New York and from New York to Detroit and Detroit to Arizona," Raspa said.

But Raspa's book is not a dry dis- section of the stories — separating the culture from fancy and leaving the narrative to bleed away into academic rhetoric. The book at- tempts to bring the tales back to vivid life.

"It's an attempt to evoke the pre- sence and thickness of the culture to an audience that has never been there," Raspa said. "The person reading should have a feeling of being there in that place and time."

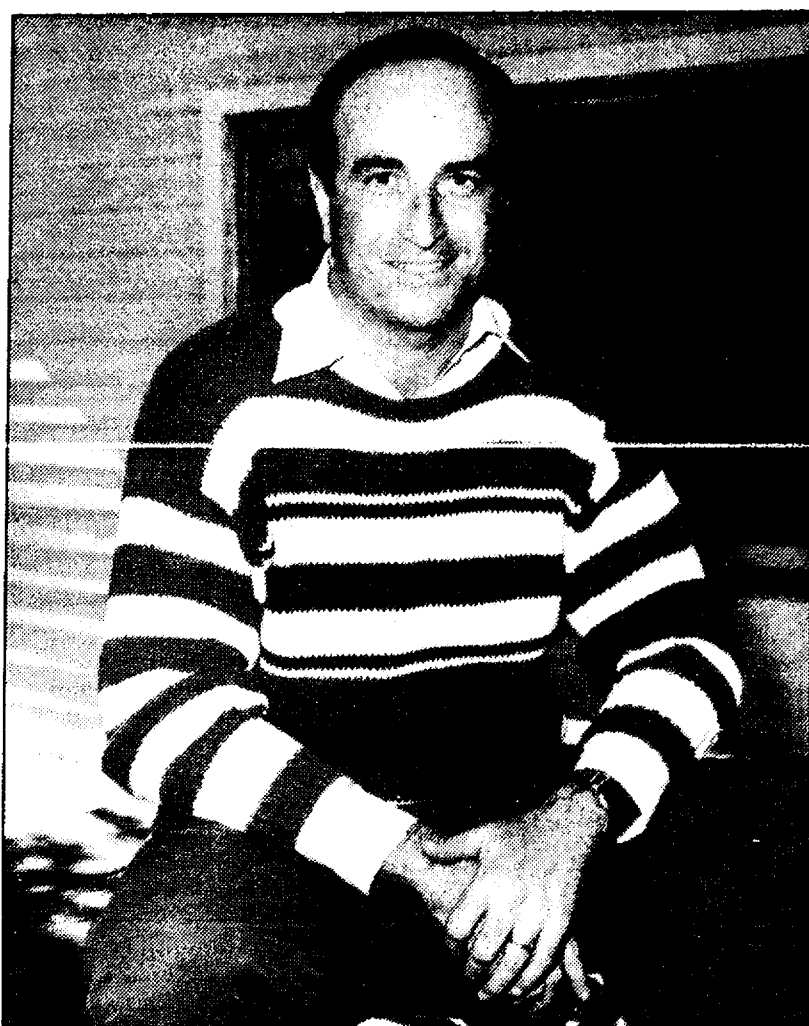

Raspa has found his source material fascinating. Clementina's stories told of more than magic and imagination. She told about a life- style and culture that died after World War II. When her daughter donated the transcripts of Clemen- tina's oral history, she didn't realize their value or power.

"She didn't see them as valua- ble," Raspa said. "It was just something they did in an Alpine village. She was embarrassed by the context of the stables. But this woman was such an extraordinary storyteller. She had such a talent to sustain a narrative line. Some of her descriptions of battles in World War I were as powerful as Hem- ingsway."

The book is presented in the im- age of fiction, Raspa said.

"But it's not fiction," he ex- plained. "Fiction begins in the writer's imagination. Ethnography begins in the real world. It recreates a culture for the reader."

Raspa tells of a moving expe- rience that he had while collecting stories and history in Faller. He had asked an old woman to tell him an old story. She agreed, but told him he must come to the stables with her because she had to feed the animals.

Richard Raspa has turned an ethnological study into a fascinating collection of folktales — retold with the immediacy of being among the villagers who originally spun the tales.

"Her granddaughter came in crying with a toothache," Raspa said. "The woman held the child in her arms and continued with the story. As she went on, the animals started to sing for their supper. The child forgot her toothache and became completely entranced by the story. The woman was in the story as well. She was in that creative domain where all there is is the experience of the story."

Raspa explained that the stories were the primary form of enter- tainment for the villagers before World War II. However, when in- door heat and television came to the village in later years, the stories began to fade and the village culture began to blend with the rest of Italy.

"But what a power they must have had when they were told," Raspa said.

A favorite tale that seems to be a part of almost every culture is Cinderella. Clementina's tales also include a version of that popular story.

Raspa attributes the universality of Cinderella to the fact that until the 20th century, women often died young in childbirth — leaving their husbands to remarry and bring a stepmother into the household.

"It was a hard life and children could attribute their misery to the stepmother. There was also the perception that if the stepmother had children of her own, she would treat them better."

Raspa pointed out that Clemen- tina herself was raised by a stepmother.

Raspa said his book should ap-

Woods Presbyterian pastor resigns post

At a meeting of the congregation on Sunday, Aug. 25, the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church, 19950 Mack Avenue, ac- cepted the resignation of its senior pastor, Dr. Robert C. Linthicum, so that he might accept the position of Associate Director of Urban Ministry for World Vision Interna- tional. World Vision, a Christian in- ternational relief and development organization, is based in Los Angeles.

Linthicum will provide the tech- nical leadership for the emerging urban ministries of World Vision in Kenya, Columbia, India, the Mid- dle East, Brazil, the Philippines, Taiwan and Thailand. His primary responsibility will be to assist Pro- testant, Catholic and Evangelical churches and parachurch organi- zations in major cities of the Third World to create mission coalitions. These ecumenical coalitions will cooperatively address the economic, social and spiritual problems of the poorest of the poor in those cities. Besides on-site or- ganizing and negotiating, Dr. Lin- thicum will be leading workshops, training events and retreats for pastors and Christian lay leaders in the major cities of the Third World.

World Vision International is an ecumenical relief and development organization which carries on 2,910 ministries in more than 80 coun- tries throughout the world. More than 372,000 orphans are under World Vision's care. The address- ing of the problems of the very poor in the major cities of the Third World is a new priority for World Vision, and Linthicum will be responsible for giving direction to that effort.

Linthicum has been the senior pastor of the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church for the past 10 years. During his pastorate, the church developed one of the largest and most successful adult educa- tion programs in the Detroit Presbytery. Two of its adult educa- tion curricula have been published and are now in use in over 800 churches in the United States and Canada. The annual income of the church has more than doubled under Dr. Linthicum's leadership, and its mission giving is six times larger than it was in 1978. While in the 10 years previous to his pastorate, the Woods church had experienced considerable mem- bership decline, the church's mem- bership has stabilized in the past eight years. The Woods church is known particularly for its strong mission outreach as a congrega- tion; it now carries on 12 commu- nity ministries, including seven in the city of Detroit.

During his years at the Woods church, Dr. Linthicum has played a strong role as a community leader. He helped to form Seniors Onward for Change (SOC — now Services for Older Citizens) in 1978, a self-help organization for senior citizens, and he brought the Food and Friendship luncheon program for seniors to the Grosse Pointes in 1976. He led a detailed community analysis in 1977-1978 that was the first public study to accurately predict the significant growth in Grosse Pointe's senior citizen population and the economic and social implications of that growth.

He was instrumental in the de- velopment of People In Faith United (PIFU), a coalition of 13 Grosse Pointe and Detroit churches and social service agencies

AAUW to hold duplicate kickoffs for season

The American Association of University Women — Grosse Pointe, number one branch in Michigan for membership growth, is planning a double kickoff of the new season, to be held on Thursday, Sept. 19, at 9:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., in Grosse Pointe Memorial Church Fellowship Hall.

The duplicate meetings, to be conducted by President Peggy Ptasznik, will look back to the recent past with a resume, done in Readers Theatre format, of highlights from the association's national convention held this summer in Columbus, Ohio, and which several local members attended. In the preview department, General Program Vice President Eloise Spencer will summarize the speakers she has lined up for events in the coming months.

Eleanor Waters, director of the Continuum Center at Oakland University, will be the keynote speaker at the AAUW's pre-retirement planning conference, "Shifting Gears — Consider Your Options Early," to be held on Saturday, Oct. 26, also at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. Open to the public, with advance reservations, the conference will include workshops on financial planning, personal and lifestyle plans, career and volunteer options.

Speakers scheduled for other 1985-86 AAUW occasions include Joe H. Stroud, editor and senior vice president of the Detroit Free Press; Eric Linder, University Liggett teaching staff; Beth Konrad, vice president of community development at Channel 56; Hope Palmer, of the Detroit Institute of Arts Education department and an art history instructor at Wayne University; M. Jane Kay, Detroit Edison vice president and member of the Governor's Commission on Pay Equity.

Several of these future guests will discuss facets of the AAUW's current national issue, Women's Work/Women's Worth, whether paid work, work in the home or volunteer work.

Study group and committee displays at the kickoff meetings will also dramatize the scope of the local organization's interests and activities.

There will be a progress report on AAUW — GP's 23rd Annual Used Book Sale, to be held Oct. 8-13

The 1985-86 officers of the Grosse Pointe branch of the American Association of University Women are planning the double kickoff of the organization's new season, Thursday, Sept. 19, at 9:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., in Grosse Pointe Memorial Church Fellowship Hall. Seated from the left, Peggy Ptasznik, president; Ann Nicholson, president-elect; Aralynn Vinande, vice-president, program development. Standing are: Jean Obenauer, corresponding secretary; Anita Unger, treasurer; Francesco Catalfo-Truba, membership vice-president; Eloise Spencer, vice-president, general program. Not photographed was recording secretary Julie Demchak. Phone 881-9585 or 885-8247 for information about AAUW — GP membership, open to any woman holding a baccalaureate or higher degree.

The cut-off date for making donations to the sale (make drop-offs at the convention book barrels or call 882-7788, 824-0307 or 882-0424 if you have super sized loads to give) is Monday, Sept. 16.

"We look forward to a busy and productive year," Ptasznik said. "We hope many prospective, new and veteran members will join us for the Sept. 19 kickoff."

Membership is open to women with baccalaureate or higher degrees; phone 881-9585 or 885-8247 for further information.

Woods Presbyterian

Continued from page 1 which minister with the poor in Detroit's east-side inner city. He was a founder and three-year board member of the PIFU Housing Corporation, a $4 million housing and community development project on Detroit's east side.

In 1983-84, he helped organize MARA — the Mack Avenue

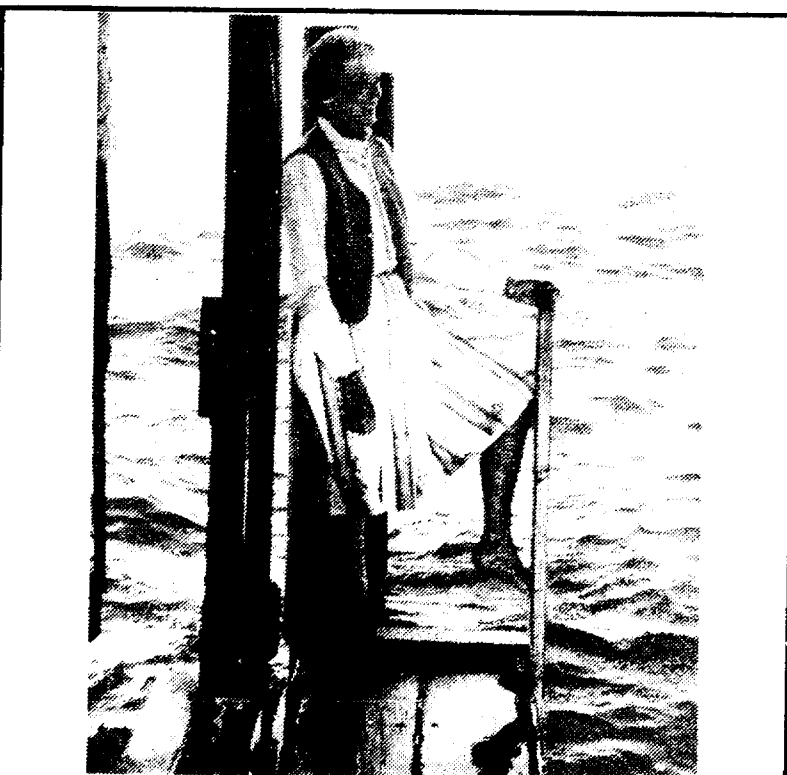

Renaissance Alliance, a subsidiary of the Grosse Pointe Business Association, which is seeking to redevelop the Detroit side of the Mack Avenue business strip.

Linthicum's last day at the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church will be on "World Communion Sunday," Oct. 6, when he will preach at the 11 a.m. service on the theme, "Before You Into Galilee."

Raspa's book . . .

Continued from page 1 peal to more than an academic audience. He believes it will be an enjoyable reading experience for anyone interested in the history of immigration to the United States, and for people with children who are interested in the art of storytelling. "Italian Folktales in America — the Verbal Art of an Immigrant Woman" will be available through the Wayne State University Press beginning Sept. 15. It will also be available at the Book Village in Grosse Pointe.

Feminist to speak at Methodist Church

Rosemary Ruether, noted feminist theologian, will be guest speaker at Central United Methodist Church in downtown Detroit, Sunday, Sept. 8, at 11 a.m. She will speak on "The Gospel and Women's Rights."

Ruether, who teaches applied theology at Garrett-Evangelical Seminary in Evanston, Ill., is a passionate and articulate spokesperson for human liberation, especially as it applies to sexism, racism, anti-semitism, and colonialism. She was one of the signers of the October 1984, New York Times full-page ad proclaiming diversity among Catholics on the issue of choice.

The topic of sexism, which will be the focus of concern at Central on Sept. 8, is one of a series of social concerns being highlighted on several Super Sundays.

Central UMC is located at 23 E. Adams on Woodward at Grand Circus Park. For more information, call 965-5422.

Charles Greenwell: A life in music

By Elsa Frohman

From singing opera, to acting in musical comedies, to playing the oboe and piano, to conducting, to announcing on a classical radio station, Charles Greenwell has been involved in nearly every aspect of making music.

Now the Grosse Pointe Woods resident has been named music director of WQRS-FM radio, musical director of the Plymouth Community Orchestra and associate conductor of the Lake St. Clair Orchestra.

"It's going to be a busy year," Greenwell said.

Greenwell comes from a musical family. His parents were opera singers. From the very beginning his education and orientation were towards a career in music.

His education was to lead to a career as an orchestral conductor. He has degrees from Michigan State University and the Royal College of Music in London. But opportunities in broadcasting presented themselves early in his career. While he was still a student at MSU, he participated in a radio panel on drivers' education. The strictly amateur radio appearance led to an invitation to try out for the campus radio station and Greenwell spent the rest of his college career at MSU working as a student disc jockey.

After college, Greenwell went to New York to try his luck as a professional performer. He worked as a singer and an actor in musical comedies.

Pointer of Interest

"In 1975, I was tired of New York City," Greenwell said. "I decided to quit and get back into broadcasting full-time."

In 1977 he came back to Michigan. In 1978 he began announcing broadcasts for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. He has been a fixture in Detroit classical broadcasting ever since.

This year presents several major challenges for Greenwell, with his involvement with two community orchestras and his new responsibilities for choosing most of the music to be played on WQRS. He emphasized that the changes he will institute in the station's musical programming will be minimal. However, before the disc jockeys chose most of their own records. Now, all the music for the station will be chosen centrally.

Greenwell explained that the job of the conductor of a community orchestra varies a great deal from the task of conducting an orchestra like the DSO. Community orchestras are made up of musicians of vastly varied backgrounds and levels of musical expertise.

"There are members of the DSO playing in community orchestras," Greenwell said. "But there are also high school students and everything in between."

Though members of community orchestras are usually paid for their performances, the job is strictly part-time and the groups must draw on the talents of the people in the community.

"The Plymouth Orchestra draws musicians from Ann Arbor," Greenwell said. "The Lake Orchestra draws more people from the Detroit area."

Greenwell said working with the Plymouth group will be a new experience. "They're an unknown quantity to me," he said. However, he has worked before with the Lake St. Clair Orchestra — formerly known as the St. Clair Shores Orchestra. Greenwell provided the narration for the group's 1984 performance of "Swan Lake."

Since 1984, the Lake Orchestra has been presenting a major ballet performance annually. For "Swan Lake," Cynthia Harvey and Ross Stretton — two internationally acclaimed dancers — appeared in the principal roles. This year, Evelyn Cisneros danced the lead part in "Sleeping Beauty." She will return next spring to perform in "Coppelia."

Greenwell has been pleased with the orchestra and dancing performances in the first two years.

"I've seen supposedly first rate companies that made more mistakes," he said.

Greenwell is looking forward to conducting the orchestra for Coppelia.

"It's a happy, sprightly piece," he said. "It should be a real treat for ballet fans."

Greenwell will conduct a Christmas Pops concert this December and two concerts in the spring with the Lake Orchestra. He is currently working on choosing the selections for those programs.

"The December concert will be traditional Christmas music," he said. "The February concert will be a cabaret concert. In March the program has yet to be decided. The group will finish out the season with the ballet in May."

In choosing music for community orchestras, Greenwell looks for pieces that can be enjoyed by the largest number of people.

"You don't want to alienate the listener," he said. "You don't do as much experimental music. Twentieth century music presents technical difficulties. It is hard for a community orchestra to deal with."

Community orchestras are closer to their audiences, Greenwell said. "They are there because they love music and want to share it," he said. "The audience can identify with the orchestra. There is more sense of community. It is more like family."

As conductor, Greenwell's job is to draw the orchestra together.

"With an orchestra you have 60 or 70 different ideas of tempo and speed. You have to have one person at the helm. They have to play together. In a large ensemble, you can't hear all the other players. The conductor benignly imposes his view on the orchestra."

Conducting a community orchestra is different from conducting a professional orchestra in that the musicians are not as highly skilled. "You spend less time on interpretation and far more on the basics. If I'm doing it well, I get across some of the interpretive elements as we work on the technical elements," he said.

For his own pleasure, Greenwell's musical selections are eclectic.

"I like late 19th century music like Brahms," he said. "But I like virtually every period except modern. I have no use for atonal music."

However, Greenwell hasn't turned his back entirely on the 20th century. He said he also enjoys Big Band music and film themes.

"The most memorable music written recently has been for film," he said.

For special flavor later, can produce now

Canning conjures up images of the farm wife, slaving over a hot stove, to put up copious volumes of food for the family's winter meals. But preserving doesn't have to be a huge, laborious job. Small quantities of special condiments and preserves can be produced by the modern cook — with very little perspiration.

The following is a selection of pickles, preserves, jams and jellies from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budget-wise kitchen of Thyra Grey Howard of Helena De-Weitt Roth.

Delicious Pickled Peppers

1 quart chopped cabbage
1 onion, chopped
2 Tblsp. salt
3-1/3 tsp. mustard seed
3-1/3 Tblsp. celery seed, crushed
1-1/2 cups sugar
11 cups vinegar
6 very large green peppers
6 very large red peppers
1/2 cup grated horseradish
1 stick cinnamon

Combine cabbage, onion, one tablespoon salt, two tablespoons mustard seed, two tablespoons celery seed, 1/2 cup sugar and three cups of vinegar and let stand 12 to 24 hours.

Soak peppers in brine one cup salt to one gallon water for 24 hours. Rinse peppers in fresh water twice, cut a circle off the top of each pepper and scoop out seeds and midribs. Then soak in cold water for two hours.

Combine remaining mustard seed, celery seed, sugar and vinegar, add horseradish and cinnamon, heat to boiling and cool.

Drain peppers, carefully stuff with cabbage mixture solidly, replace pepper caps and fasten with toothpicks. Pack in sterilized wide mouth quart jars and fill with cold vinegar mixture. Permit to cure for at least two months before cutting into slices to serve.

Dilled Green Beans

Select the straightest beans possible, as it makes them much easier to pack in the jars.

3 pounds fresh green beans

6 cloves garlic, peeled and halved for at least two months before cutting into slices to serve.

Pickled Okra

As a garnish with meats and poultry these pickled okra are most tasty.

2 pounds young okra pods

1 tsp. dill seed

1/2 tsp. alum

1 clove garlic, peeled, cut in fourths

1 small pod hot red pepper

Wash okra, leaving only a small piece of stem. Pack five pint jars.

Add remaining ingredients in the amount as above. Place jars in large pot and heat water to boiling.

Make syrup of:

3 cups white vinegar

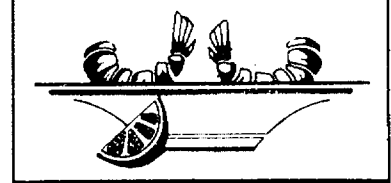

1 cup water

3 tsp. salt

Bring vinegar, water and salt to a boil; pour hot syrup over okra. Be sure each jar is filled with vinegar syrup. Seal. Makes 5 pints.

Calories about 66 per pint. Cholesterol 0.

Elegant Eating

3 tps. mustard seeds
1-1/2 tsp. peppercorns
12 large sprigs fresh dill
Or 3 tsp. dill seed
3 cups cider vinegar
3 cups water
1/4 cup pickling salt

Wash and sterilize six pint jars and lids. Snap ends off beans, cut in 4-1/2-inch lengths, and pack vertically in jars, filling centers with odd lengths. Add two halves of garlic, 1/2 teaspoon mustard seeds, 1/4 teaspoon peppercorns and two sprigs of fresh dill (or 1/2 teaspoon dill seeds) to each jar. Heat vinegar, water and salt until boiling hot, then pour in jars, filling to 1/4-inch of the top. Wipe rims and seal. Process in hot water bath for five minutes. Tighten seals, if necessary, cool, check seals, label and store in cool, dark, dry place four to six weeks before serving. Makes six pints.

Calories about 10 per 1/4 cup. Cholesterol 0.

Peach Jam

5 cups sliced peaches (about 2 1/2 pounds)
1/4 cup sugar
1 Tblsp. lemon juice
1 env. unflavored gelatin
1 cup cold water

In a medium sauce pan, combine peaches, sugar and lemon juice. Heat five minutes, crushing peaches slightly. Bring to a boil; boil rapidly, stirring constantly, one minute.

In a small bowl, sprinkle unflavored gelatin over water; let stand one minute. Add to peach mixture and heat, stirring until gelatin is dissolved; about three minutes.

Let jam stand five minutes, skimming off foam with a spoon. Ladle into jars. Cover and cool slightly before refrigerating. Makes three cups.

Calories about 10 per tablespoon. Cholesterol 0.

Blueberry Jam

1 cups ripe but firm blueberries
1/4 cup sugar
1 Tblsp. grated orange peel
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 cup orange juice

In a medium saucepan, combine blueberries, sugar, and orange peel. Heat five minutes, crushing berries slightly. Bring to a boil; boil rapidly, stirring constantly, one minute.

In a small bowl sprinkle gelatin over orange juice. Let stand one minute. Add to blueberry mixture and heat, stirring until gelatin is dissolved completely, about three minutes.

Let jam stand three minutes, skimming off foam with a spoon. Ladle into jars. Cover and cool slightly before refrigerating. Makes about four cups.

Calories about 10 per tablespoon. Cholesterol 0.

Strawberry Jam

1 cups sliced strawberries (about 2 pints)
1/4 cup sugar
2 Tblsp. lemon juice
1 env. unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup cold water

In a medium saucepan, combine strawberries, sugar and lemon juice. Heat five minutes, crushing berries slightly. Bring to a boil; boil rapidly, stirring constantly, three minutes.

In a small bowl, sprinkle gelatin over cold water. Let stand one minute. Add to strawberry mixture and heat, stirring until gelatin is dissolved, about three minutes. Let jam stand five minutes, skimming off foam with a spoon. Ladle into jars. Cover and cool slightly before refrigerating. Makes about two cups.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

What'd I miss?

Okay, so I'll admit it. For once, I really don't know what's going on in the wonderful world of sports. When I left for a fun-filled, four-week vacation back in mid-July, major league baseball players were all hot and bothered over what they felt they had coming to them, the Tigers were 10½ games behind the Blue Jays, the Park and the Woods-Shores Babe Ruth teams were heavily into regional competition, it was summertime and the living was easy.

All of a sudden it's the week before Labor Day and I'm wandering around doing my impersonation of Rip Van Winkle. What I need to know is, what'd I miss?

Is it true that baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth brought a hasty end to the brief baseball strike (I've had indigestion that lasted longer than that strike) because the American news media was sick and tired of having to look up the spelling of Ueberroth's name?

Who are all those guys running around with shoulder pads and helmets on . . . and isn't it tough to get around on a fastball wearing stuff like that?

How much of the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association's season have I missed? I mean, it's already Aug. 29, shouldn't they be in the summer playoffs or something?

Who won the Farms Fishing Rodeo? I'm really sorry I missed that one. It isn't every day you see someone stay on the back of a bucking largemouth bass for the two-minute limit. I hope somebody took pictures.

I missed the Snipe Championships, too?

How determined is North football coach Frank Sumner this football season? Has anybody noticed steam coming from his ears at the mention of still ANOTHER Class B school in his Bi-County League? I mean, are the Norsemen ever going to get a break, football-playoff-wise?

But Sumner had to be smiling at the signing of former North hurler John Hackett to a contract with the St. Louis Cardinals. That makes five from the 1980 squad — Hackett, John Clem, Bill Babcock, Tom Shook and Bob Brown — to sign pro contracts and that has to make their old coach happy.

Especially when he sees a whole new crop of former Norsemen, namely Dan Kopitzke, Mark Bilkovic and Dave Waldeck, making their mark in post-prep baseball, like they did in helping Utica TSI win the National Amateur baseball Federation Senior World Series.

Is it true that Cincinnati's Pete Rose threatened to slide head-first into each and every one of the other 649 major league baseball players if they didn't end the strike already and let him break Ty Cobb's hitting record, for Pete's sake?

One thing I didn't mind missing was the roughest Mackinac Race in history. A stubborn ankle injury kept me out of the Lake Huron tempest. Is this kid's timing perfect or what?

And I'm not sorry I wasn't around to watch the state champion Babe Ruth All-Stars from Grosse Pointe Park lose a sixth-inning, 17-8 lead in what looked like the title game of the regionals, then drop from contention altogether in a (ouch) no-hitter in the deciding game. Bet there was lots of moaning and groaning around here for that one.

Speaking of moaning and groaning, there is also no truth to the rumor that I finally came back from vacation because people got sick and tired of looking up the spelling of interim sports editor Mike Andrzejczyk's name before they could mail him the naughty letters they usually reserve for the regular sports editor.

Seriously, Mike did a fantastic job while I was gone and in fact was beginning to make sounds like he was getting to really love being sports editor. (Hmmm. Wonder what Mike's been putting in his coffee?)

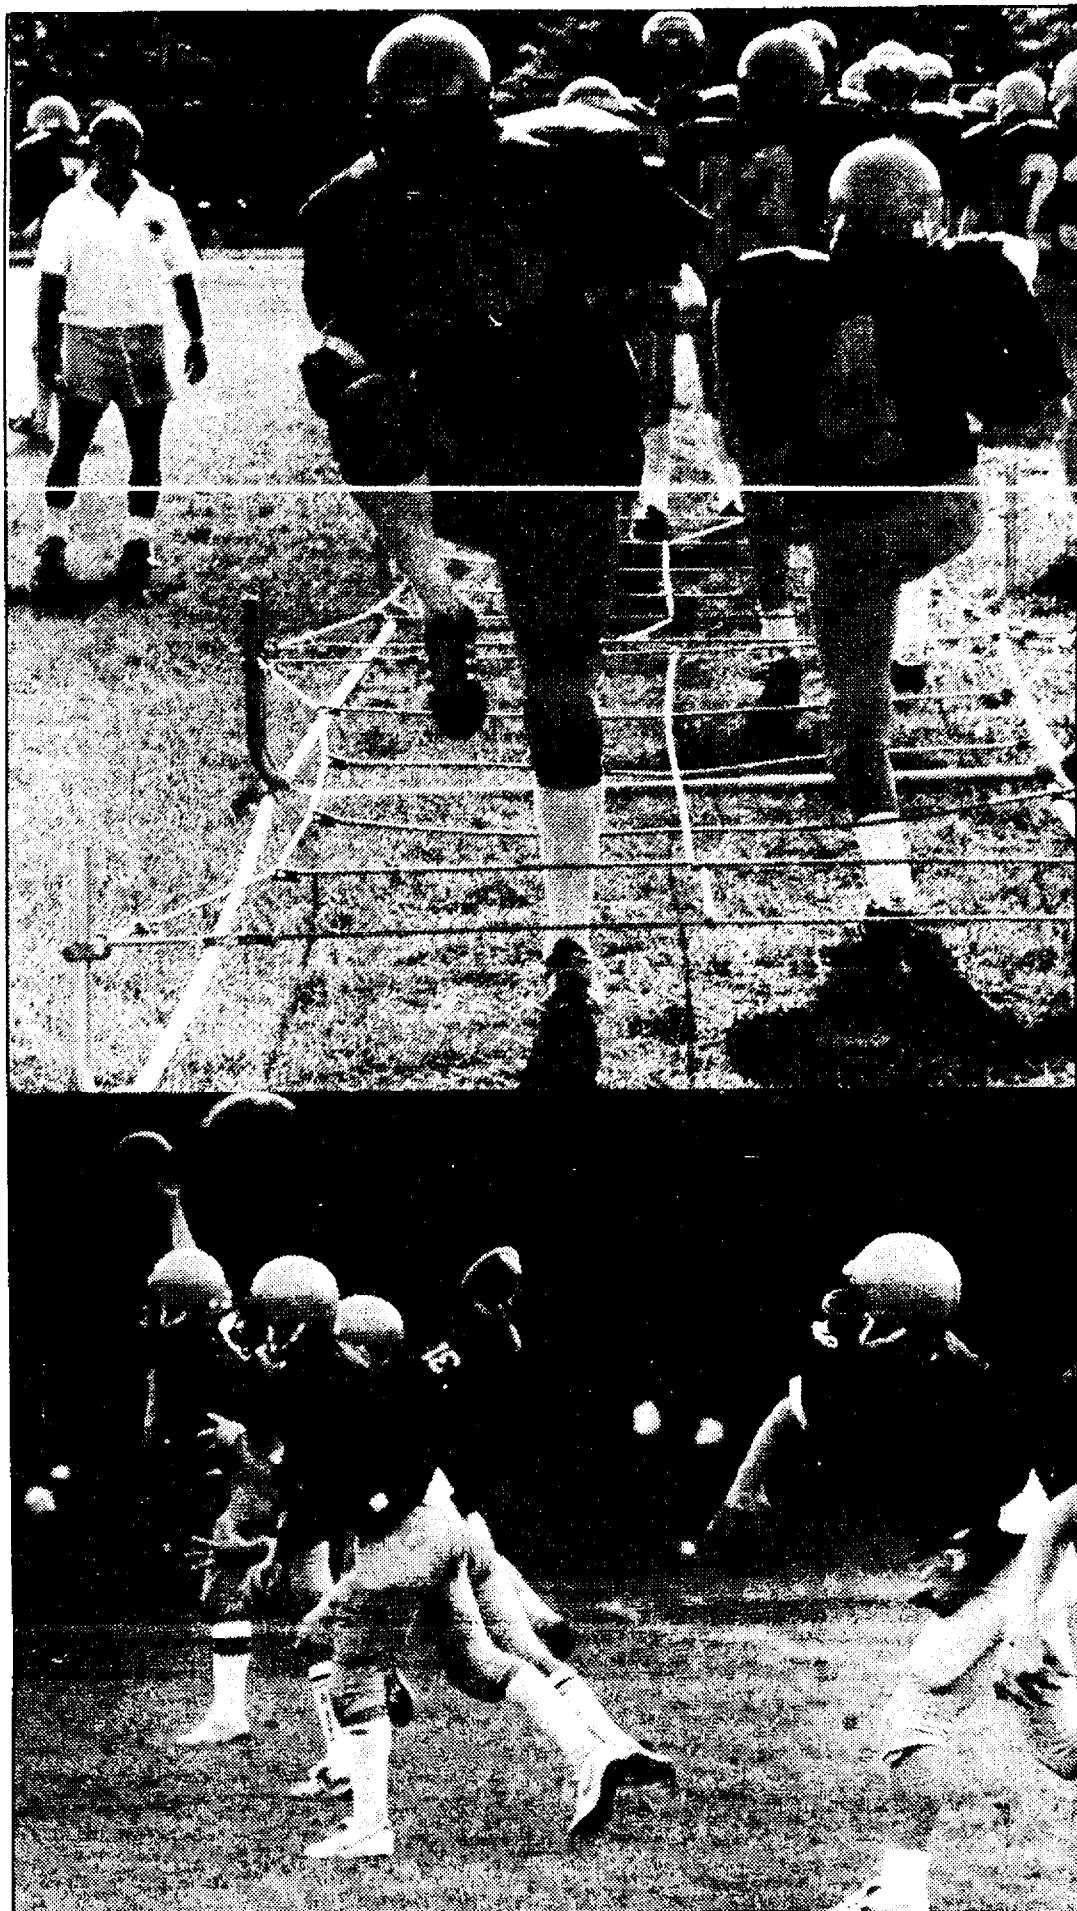

Hey, when is somebody going to challenge the Grosse Pointe News to a volleyball game or three? Modest as I am and as unusual as it is for me to chronicle my own athletic accomplishments in this space, I will say that I attained a certain amount of respect as a top-notch volleyball player during my recent hiatus. (And yes, my opponents were fully sighted, more than 3½ feet tall and came with all their limbs intact, thank you.)

They changed the name of this sports section while I was gone. How do you like it? The Third Section. (Personally, I'm just glad that this section of the paper isn't the eighth section, know what I mean?)

Speaking of changes, there haven't been any where submitting information to the sports pages is concerned. Now that I have taken a giant leap from mid-July to the opening of school, can fall sports be far behind? And can complaints about missing coverage be far behind that?

Nope. But to make sure that we don't miss out on anything else, remember to submit schedules, summaries, details on upcoming events and any news in general on your favorite fall sport or athlete to me, at 882-0294 or by stopping by to see me from 9 to 5 daily.

McMahon on U.S. team making China tour

The Tennis Association of the People's Republic of China has invited a U.S. national tennis team to tour China in September. Scheduled for Sept. 8 to 20, the trip will consist of three exhibitions against the Chinese National Olympic Team in Beijing, Nanjing and Shanghai.

Among the team members is Megan McMahon from Grosse Pointe, who attended South High School and is currently a senior at Yale University. The No. 1-ranked player at Yale, McMahon was undefeated in Ivy League competition this past season and had a 14-1 record overall. She has won the Most Valuable Player award at Yale two years consecutively.

A National Honor Student before entering Yale, Megan has had to juggle a tough academic curriculum with her tennis. "But I have to do it," she says jokingly, "or else my little brother will start beating me!" She means 10-year-old Colin, who is making his mark in regional 12-and-under competition.

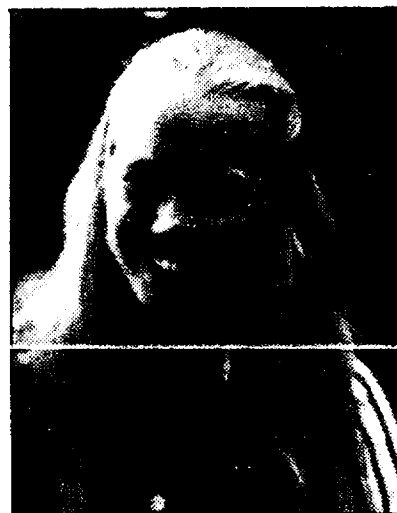

This is the first time that an amateur tennis team from the U.S. has been invited to China. Further, it marks renewed sports cultural ties between the two countries since the 1983 defection of Hu Na, China's number one-ranked female tennis player.

The U.S. team, composed of scholar-athletes from universities across the nation, was selected by the International Sports Exchange, the New York-based organizers of the event, in conjunction with the United States Tennis Association. The trip is sponsored by Pan American World Airways, American Express, Nike, Inc. and Prince Manufacturing.

"It's not easy putting this kind of event together," said ISE chairman Doug Sacks, "but the reward is the continued international development of tennis, and for that, it's always worth it."

Prior to leaving for Beijing, the U.S. Team will be guests at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships in Flushing Meadows, New York. William Talbert, tournament director and former Wimbledon champion, said "I'm in full support of this great trip. I'm delighted our young players will have an opportunity to experience a different culture and meet their tennis peers. While I hope the competition is close, of course I hope we win!"

Selected to coach the team was Mike Best, a well-known instructor who has coached many nationally ranked junior players from the

Megan McMahon

U.S. and Canada and recently coached at Yale University. Said Best, "We have some of the best collegiate players in the nation on this team. I expect we will be very competitive."

Players on the women's team include: Leigh Anne Eldredge, Altadena, Calif. (Stanford University); Elizabeth Evans, Los Angeles, Calif. (Harvard University); McMahon; Julie Ann Park, Park Forest, Ill. (Dartmouth College); Emily Schuette, Houston, Texas (Princeton University); and Sue Taylor, Gladwyne, Pa. (Duke University).

Male players invited include: Neal Cavallon, St. Simon's Island, Ga. (Yale University); Louis Crosier, Kittery Point, Maine (Dartmouth College); David Livingston, Albuquerque, N.M. (UCLA); Matthew Porteus, Palo Alto, Calif. (Harvard University); Eric Rosenfeld, Philadelphia, Pa. (Stanford University); and John Simon, Chestnut, Mass. (Harvard University).

GPSC starts fall swimming season

The Grosse Pointe Swim Club will begin its fall season of age-group competitive swimming the week of Sept. 16. Registration for new and old swimmers will be on Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 9 and 10, at Grosse Pointe North at 7 p.m.

Parents of swimmers must attend one of these registration sessions. New swimmers should be prepared for a brief try-out in the pool. No locker room facilities will be available during registration, however.

Woods resident Nicole Abood attended a student athletic training workshop July 29 to Aug. 1 at Grand Valley State College. The workshop was designed to teach subjects such as taping and care of ankle, knee and upper extremity injuries to high school and junior high school student athletes. Doug Woods, head trainer at Grand Valley, conducted the clinic.

Grand Valley State head football coach Tom Beck welcomed 108 candidates to open drills for the 1985 season. Among them was Tony Petz from South High School, at wide receiver. Last year's Grand Valley squad failed to win a game.

Three local players competed in the Ann Arbor Open tennis tournament last week. Sean Byrne of the Park was the 12-and-under title winner in the regional tournament, beating Imran Mazhar of Canton, Jonathon Meixner of Ann Arbor and top seed Brad Emmons of Ohio. Matt Bentley made the quarterfinals of his flight, beating William Burke 6-4, 6-0, before losing to Anders Anderson 6-0, 6-1. Tom Sullivan lost the first round of his flight to the eventual runner-up of the tournament.

Tom Wilson, Jr. of the Shores, recently won the Golf Association of Michigan's 17th Junior Championship by shooting a 75 and 74 for a tournament total 149 at Verona Hills. Wilson bested 90 of the state's top junior golfers. Tom, captain of North's golf team in his senior year and the number one golfer at the school for the past four years, will attend the University of Michigan this fall where he will play golf for the Wolverines. Earlier this summer, Tom qualified for the United States Golf Association Juniors, held this year in Buffalo, N.Y. Tom was 23rd low qualifier for match play out of 160 participants nationwide.

One of the largest football squads in Hope College history hit the field Monday. Fifty-two of the 111 players who reported to camp are freshmen, including Terrence Ayrault, of the Park. The 18-year-old, 6-foot-1, 190-pound South graduate, coached by Russ Hepner, is listed as a quarterback and safety. The Dutchmen, undefeated last year, play four of their first five games on the road and have their home opener Sept. 21 with Carthage College.

Club sets Hike for Hearts

It's Hike for Hearts time again and this year the Ticker Club's popular fundraiser is set for Belle Isle on Saturday, Sept. 21, at 10 a.m. Participants are asked to collect pledges and bike, hike, jog or run the three loop, 20 kilometer (12 miles) course to benefit the Children's Hospital of Michigan.

Check-in and late registration begins at 10 a.m. at the Casino. In case of rain, all hikers will receive credit for the complete 20 kilometers. Free refreshments will be available and prizes will be awarded to the five hikers collecting the most donations.

First prize is a videotape recorder; second prize, a 10-speed bike; third prize, a $100 gift certificate from Oakridge Markets; fourth prize, a cordless telephone; and fifth prize, a "blaster box" radio. To qualify for prizes, pledges must be collected and mailed by Oct. 29 to Ticker Club Inc., 3702 Sandburg Drive, Troy, MI, 48063.

Participants can obtain registration forms and sponsor forms by contacting Bonnie Moulik at 689-7735. Hikers registering before Sept. 15 qualify for a chance to win a stereo radio with headphones. All hikers will receive a Ticker Club mug.

The Ticker Club is a non-profit organization formed to support the cardiology services of Children's Hospital of Michigan. The Hike for Hearts began in 1983 as an effort to raise monies to bring computer assisted postoperative support to the intensive care unit at Children's.

Set physical fitness goals

The Bon Secours Hospital Health and Fitness Center in St. Clair Shores is offering the first in a series of free seminars by the members of the Center's professional staff on Thursday, Sept. 12, from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

"Setting Fitness Goals and Attaining Them," a plan for self-motivation to achieve physical fitness and nutrition goals by Tom Hein-richs, M.S., registered dietician, is the first topic.

The seminars will be held in the Bon Secours Hospital Health and Fitness Center classroom, 22300 Bon Brae, west of Jefferson between 10 and 11 Mile Roads. Space is limited; call 779-7040 between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. weekdays, and 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Saturdays to reserve a seat. Ample lighted parking is available.

Get elk hunt applications

Only a short time remains for Michigan residents, 14 years or older, to apply for an elk hunt license by the Sept. 1 deadline, says the Department of Natural Resources. This year, 120 licenses will be issued for the Dec. 10 to 15 elk hunt season, as approved by the State Natural Resources Commission.

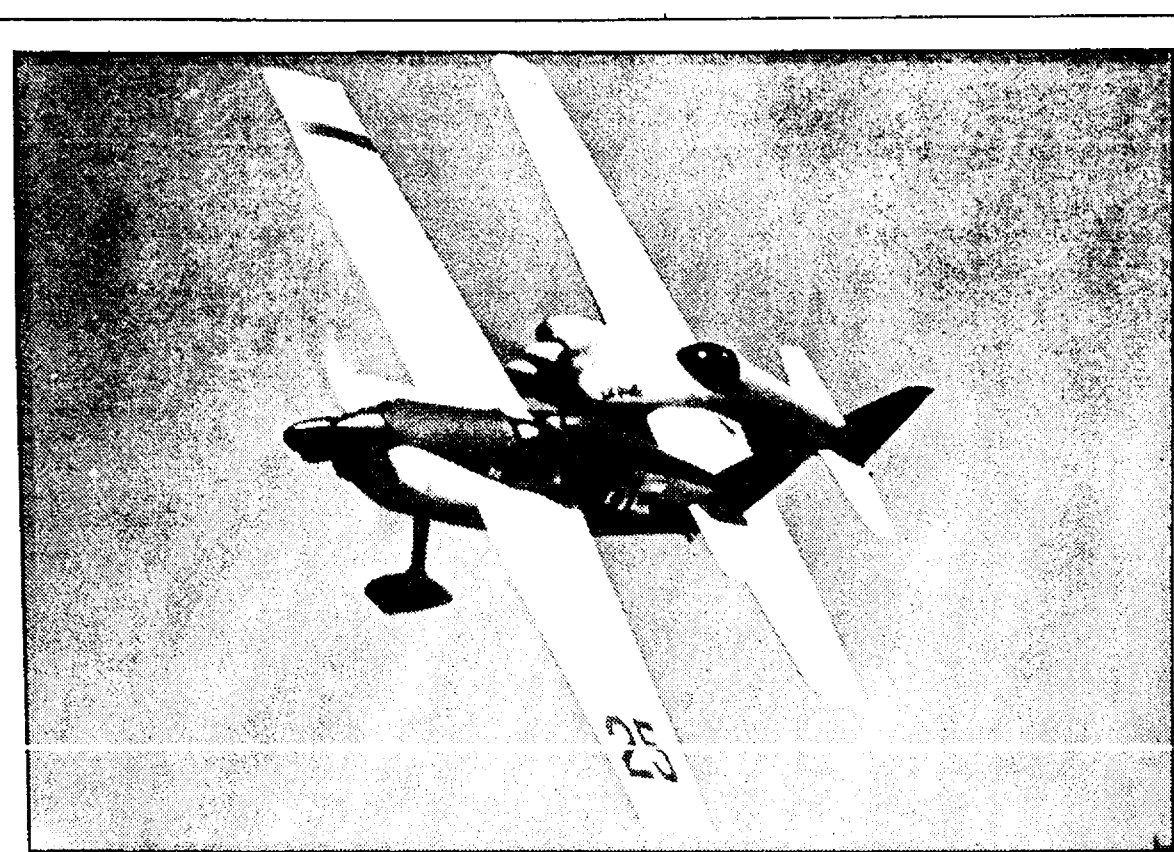

The application fee for the elk license is $4; application forms may be obtained from licensed dealers, at all DNR regional, district and some field offices, and at the department's information services center in Lansing. Last season's elk hunters are not eligible for elk licenses in 1985.

A lottery drawing will be conducted to determine the 120 successful applicants. Only those successful applications will be notified by Nov. 1. These applicants will be required to pay $100 for the license within two weeks of notification.

Thirty hunter's choice licenses will be available for taking either a bull, cow or calf elk, the remaining 90 licenses will allow the taking of antlerless elk only. A special drawing of all 120 qualified licenses for the 30 hunter's choice licenses will be held on Dec. 9 at a mandatory half-day training session in Atlanta (Montmorency County) conducted by DNR Wildlife Division personnel.

The elk hunt site will cover a 300-square mile area where the elk herd is causing the most agricultural and forest damage. This area lies within the counties of Montmorency, Otsego, Cheboygan, and Presque Isle. DNR wildlife biologists estimate Michigan's elk population at 1,100.

Air racers return to metro area

U.S. Air Racing Association competitors returned to Detroit for the first time in 30 years Aug. 10 and 11 for the Detroit Willow Run Air Show. They competed for $15,000 in the Budweiser Championship Air Races that are part of the show, sponsored by Wayne County. A portion of ticket sales benefits Children's Hospital of Michigan.

Wear protective goggles on the racquetball court

As competitive sports become increasingly popular, related eye injuries are on the ramp, particularly in racquet sports.

The National Society to Prevent Blindness, NSPB, warns that players of all ages face the risk of losing more than just the game — if they don't wear proper eye protection.

According to the society, an epidemic exists of eye injuries from racquet sports. Recent studies have shown that injuries are increasing in direct proportion to the growing popularity of games such as racquetball, paddleball, volleyball and tennis.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that 4,400 eye injuries from racquet sports were seen in hospital emergency rooms in 1983 (latest figures available). This estimate excludes victims seen in medical clinics and physicians' offices.

"The tragedy of this is that 90 percent of these injuries could be prevented if players would give their eyes a sporting chance by wearing protective eyewear — something which has been neglected by many professional athletes," said Edward H. Hall, manager of NSPB's Eye Safety & Corporate Health programs. "Many players do not wear protective eyewear; others mistakenly believe that their own streetwear glasses protect them."

Mr. Hall explained that players have failed to recognize the real eye injury potential they face.

But the society stresses that the danger is real, and injuries are just as common among veteran players as among beginners. Medical authorities report that racquet and squash balls fit neatly into the bony orbit of the human skull surrounding each eye, which accounts for the increasing number of eye injuries among players of all ages. A racquet or squash ball traveling often at speeds in excess of 90 miles an hour severely injures the eye upon impact. Racquets also inflict eye injuries.

The National Society to Prevent Blindness has led the crusade to combat racquet sports eye injuries. Several other organizations have also taken strong stands on this issue.

The board of directors of the U.S. Squash Racquets Association in 1983 overwhelmingly voted to require eye protection in national championship tournaments. This was the first national racquet sports eye protectors were issued by the American Society for Testing Materials in April, 1983.

Among the other organizations that recommend or require protective eyewear are the National Collegiate Athletic Association, National Intercollegiate Squash Racquets Association and the American Amateur Racquetball Association.

Shannon is golf champ

Marcie Shannon, a new member of Gowanie Golf Club this year, won the 54-hole medal play with a 260 — 88, 85 and 87 — making her the 1985 Woman's champion. Shooting rounds of 85, 93 and 96 for a 274 was Carol Gneiser, who finished second.

Marge McEntee won the first flight, shooting a 98, 99 and 99 for a 54-hole total 295. Finishing one stroke back was Bette Wilds with a total of 296.

Second flight winner was Marietta Samaras, who scored a 104, 101 and 94 for a 299 total. Five strokes back was Mary Soulliere, who was second flight winner last year.

Jeanne Zink won first place in the third flight for the second consecutive year with a 322 total. Flo Simpson came in second with a 325 total.

Fourth flight winner was Lynn Christel, shooting 117, 112 and 122 for her 351 tournament total. Tied for second at 352 were Sherry Curtis — 115, 115 and 122 — and Judy Rsenthal, with rounds of 115, 126 and 111.

Mary Soulliere had net low score at 202 and Marietta Samaras has second low net with 209. Shirlee Kretschmar was cited for the lowest number of putts at 89. Fifty-eight players completed the tournament, an event chaired by Dittie Smith and Mary Jane Meier.

tion. Recently the American Medical Association also endorsed ASTM's racquet sports eye protection standards, and many eye doctors now encourage their patients to wear proper eye protection.

NSPB hopes that the wearing of proper protective eyewear will become a habit among all players.

For advice on the types of protective eyewear that should be worn, write for a free copy of "What's Your Game?" to: National Society to Prevent Blindness, 79 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed, business-sized envelope with your request.

The National Society to Prevent Blindness, founded in 1908, is the oldest voluntary health agency nationally engaged in preventing blindness through a comprehensive program of community services, public and professional education and research.

'Return Of The Living Dead' is return of the schlock

By Chris Dellas

"Brains!", is the zombie war cry in the latest offering from the crew of Return Of The Living Dead.

You see, eating the brains of live humans kills the zombies' intense pain of being dead. Or something like that.

Actually, the plot is not one of the more vital ingredients in a schlock film like "Return" and it doesn't take a lot of brains to figure that out.

What it does take to enjoy a film of this nature, and thus get your money's worth, is: 1.) an open mind, 2.) a strong stomach, 3.) a willingness to accept the film at face value, and 3.) a rainy day with nothing better to do.

"The Return Of The Living Dead" is a film by a guy named Dan O'Bannon (I never heard of him either), which is meant to spoof the films of cult figure and zombie film director extraordinaire George Romero. His classics like "Night Of The Living Dead" and "Dawn Of The Dead" still command respectable crowds at last night showings.

"Return" has been in the can for some time and its distributor, Orion Pictures, decided to release it now amidst all the publicity that George Romero's newest film "Day Of The Dead" (which is to open September 30) is receiving.

Orion wisely figured that moviegoers would mistakenly believe that "Return Of The Living Dead" is the third of Romero's zombie trilogy.

Instead, "Return" is merely an adequate spoof of Romero's films that is clever at times but doesn't possess either the originality or the budget of the films it attempts to parody.

The first of Romero's films, "The Night Of The Living Dead" was extremely low budget, but the second, "Dawn" was more expensive to make and the third is reportedly a big-budget Hollywood project, which goes to show that cult status can read marketability with today's young movie-going crowd.

"Return" begins in an embalming parlor where a veteran mortician is training a teenager on the finer points of the business of the Dead.

The old pro lets the kid in on the big secret of the place if he promises not to tell; that the chemical that caused the cadavers to become animated in a prior corporate mishap (a reference to the Romero film) is now being stored at the very mortuary where they are now working.

Why the chemical is being kept so close to dead bodies, (oh yeah, there's a cemetery across the street, too) is anyone's guess. Again, it's not a good idea to question a film of this caliber, just kind of go with the flow.

Naturally, all the dead bodies in the surrounding area come back to life (or "become animated," as the characters explain) and proceed to make lunch out of the morticians and a group of punk rockers who have been having a soiree in the graveyard.

Is the movie as funny as it might sound? At times yes but at times no. There are clever moments. Like the time the zombies devour two paramedics sent to the scene, then one of them gets on the ambulance walkie-talkie and says, "Send more paramedics," with a hungry gleam in his eye. The scene also gets repeated with police officers as fodder for the zombies.

Unfortunately, the humor does not sustain itself and the continuity of the film falters.

And don't expect any Oscar-winning performances, either. The most recognizable actor in the film is Clu Gulager, who returns from the "Whatever Happened To..." file to play the owner of the company who is responsible for the chemical.

"Return" is being heavily advertised on MTV as a Rock and Roll film of sorts with an impressive soundtrack by such underground bands (you can read the term both figuratively and literally) as 45 Grave, The Cramps, and T.S.O.L. Unfortunately, the clever soundtrack is not utilized well (as in "American Werewolf in London") and thus loses any of its possible effectiveness.

The bottom line of "Return Of The Living Dead" has a few laughs, is short on the real blood-curdling scares, and loses most of its steam towards the end. As in most films, the director probably went over budget, but unlike most Hollywood films, his producers probably refused to increase the

Choir rehearsals

A choir program for all ages will begin soon at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 375 Chalfonte under the direction of Susan Kvale.

New members from the community are welcome. Rehearsals begin for girls in grades seven to 12 at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 10. Rehearsals for the junior choir, grades one through six are at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 10. Senior choir for adults will hold auditions at 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 12. The Cherub Choir for those aged 3 to 5, will be held Sunday, Sept. 15 at 9:20 a.m.

For more information, call 881-6670.

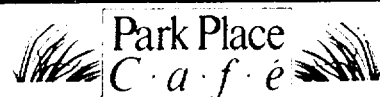

Lecture-adventurer Franklyn K. Carney will open the Travel Series segment of the 1985-86 entertainment season of the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts Thursday, Sept. 12, at 8 p.m. The subject of his film and narration is "The GREAT Great Lakes" which shows the role this area has played in the history and well-being of North America. Tickets are $4 for adults and $3 for students and seniors and may be obtained by calling 286-2222. The center is located at Garfield and Hall Roads in Clinton Township.

cash flow and left it up to him to finish the project on his own.

Either check out "Return Of The Living Dead" at matinee prices if you have a hunger for some hungry zombies or wait until Sept. 30 for George Romero's "Day Of The Dead" if you are a fan of the genre.

Vanden Plas

From a heritage of coachbuilders to kings and the sporting aristocracy of Europe comes the most exclusive Jaguar sedan you can own.

The Vanden Plas is a limited edition of the Jaguar Series III sedan. It shares the Series III's superb racebred double overhead cam six, its athletic handling equipment, its uncanny smoothness and silence in motion. Inside, however, the Vanden Plas is unique even among Jaguars. It cossets you with soft leather, exotic burled walnut panels and individually contoured seats front and rear.
