Thanks, Bruce

Whew, wasn't that a party! I'm talking, of course, about the recent Bruce Springsteen concert out at the Silverdome. Before the concert began, while 70,000 fans were chanting in the aisles, Bruce presented the Gleaners Community Food Bank of Greater Detroit, the Capuchin Soup Kitchen, and the Oakland Food Bank with checks of $10,000 each.

Springsteen, who regularly challenges his audiences to become committed to bettering America, has made similar donations to local food banks and non-profit organizations throughout his U.S. tour.

Both Gene Gonya, executive director of the Gleaners, and Lewis Hickson, general manager of the Capuchin Soup Kitchen, were impressed with the donation and Springsteen himself.

"The checks were presented just prior to the show," Gonya said. "He spent about 15 minutes with us and seemed like just an average Joe. He's concerned about the big issues in this country. He's not at all self-absorbed like Prince or Madonna seem to be."

Gonya said he stayed for the entire rock concert, his first ever, and was amazed at Springsteen's performance.

"What energy!" said Gonya. "The man never stopped for four hours, with the exception of one 20-minute intermission. He makes aerobic instructors look like wimps!"

Both Gonya and Hickson hope the area's young people will accept Springsteen's challenge to become involved and will attend a "Springsteen Friends for the Hungry" meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 17, at the Capuchin Third Order Hall, 1740 Mount Elliott.

The meeting will concern itself with helping these organizations meet the needs of Detroit's hungry.

The Boss would approve.

One really to go

It wasn't your average police arrest. A Woods officer on stationary radar patrol on Sunningdale Road last week spotted a 1986 Oldsmobile convertible tooling down the street with five young males in it.

Two boys were from Grosse Pointe, two were from Harper Woods and the fifth was the large ceramic Big Boy from the Mack Avenue Elias Brothers restaurant.

He took up the entire back seat.

Naturally, the Woods biggest boy in blue stopped the car and ended up issuing a citation to the driver to driving with an obstructed view.

Oh yes, he also escorted them back to the restaurant where Big Boy was reinstalled at his place of honor.

I thought this sort of thing went on only when school got out for the summer.

Strike up the bands

If you've got a case of happy feet, then the New Center Park, Second Avenue at West Grand Boulevard, is the place for this afternoon and evening.

It'll be the season finale of "Dancin' in the Street," a free concert series presented by Stroh's and River Place. There'll be music, merriment and munchies available for all and music for every possible taste.

Alexander Zonjic, a contemporary jazz flutist, will perform from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.; Steve King and the Ditties, an oldies band that has opened for the likes of Ricky Nelson, Brian Wilson and Chubby Checker, will perform from 6:50 to 7:50 p.m.

Find parking, council tells Punch developers

By Nancy Parmenter

The developers of the Punch and Judy went to the Farms council with a proposal Monday and were told to try again. The council told developers Robert Edgar and Richard Crawford that they must make a greater effort to locate parking spaces.

"You're asking council to put blinders on and ignore the problem," said Farms Mayor James Dingeman of the parking. "It was a problem two years ago. The merchants were up in arms about parking. It's a wonder there wasn't blood on Kercheval."

The developers protested that there is little risk to the city if the parking turns out to be inadequate. "The landlord has the greatest interest of all in adequate parking," Edgar said, with Crawford adding that "the risk is ours."

Project architect Charles Merz, of Shervish, Vogel, Merz, told the council that its parking demands were too limiting to developers, many of whom lack the finances up front to provide prior parking in the quantity demanded by the city ordinance. "You'll have a hulk sitting there for a long time," he said.

Edgar said he would be willing to keep trying. "We'll do anything that makes economic sense," he said, "but there aren't many options."

Edgar and Crawford had asked the council for a 100 percent variance from the parking required by the ordinance. According to the square footage of the proposed Punch and Judy office and retail complex, there should be 76 parking spaces available. They have counted 152 spaces nearby in the library, school, and Richard lots and along the street.

However, the Richard lot is only available on a 14-year lease and the library has declared its parking off-limits except to library patrons. Edgar said he had talked to school officials, who are unwilling to consider additional parking on the high school property.

"They said they are willing to talk," he said, "but they told me not to expect any miracles." Edgar said he expects discussions to continue this week.

Various solutions to the problem have been considered and discarded, Crawford said. Purchasing residential property behind the Punch or razing the commercial building beside it are expensive options that would only provide a total of 48 spaces. Parking on the currently residential property would require rezoning by the city. Crawford said they had even entertained, then abandoned, the idea of providing parking on the ground level of the theater and putting the shops above.

Edgar said he doesn't see either school parking or razing of residential property as real possibilities. He told the council that he has circulated a petition favoring the variance and that, of 100 people asked to sign it, only one had declined. "I don't know how we're going to hang cars in the air," he said.

Councilwoman Nancy Waugaman, a member of the council committee working directly with Crawford and Edgar on the problem, said she believes that "everyone in this room" favors the project, but that it is the responsibility of the developer to provide parking.

"It's no less than we're asking of others," she said. "You have to come up with some parking or there isn't anything to talk about."

Resident Paul D'Angelo, speaking for the Moran-McMillan Steering Committee, a group concerned about neighborhood traffic congestion, asked the council not to "ignore the parking problem project by project," referring to the temporary variance recently granted to the Bologna-Standard Federal project (which will result in the construction of the complex prior to the construction of a companion parking structure) and the 100 percent permanent variance granted last winter to the Grosse Pointe News for a building now under construction on the Hill.

"We have to recognize that increased business on the Hill will create traffic in the neighborhoods," D'Angelo said.

Dingeman committed the city administration to continue participation in the search for a solution.

It was hot

... it was humid and it was fun. That's the consensus of the thousands of persons who attended the birthday bash Sunday to celebrate Grosse Pointe Woods' 35th anniversary as an incorporated city. The parade made its way from Mack and Vernier roads to the city hall, where the throngs kept cool with ice cream, soft drinks and the large shade trees the Woods is known for. The parade was made up of clowns, marching bands, antique cars and a detachment from the Detroit Police Department's Mounted Division. For more photos, turn to page 15A.

City public safety contract talks stalled

By Tom Greenwood

Contract talks between Grosse Pointe City and its public safety officers have been relegated to binding arbitration, 15 months after the current contract expired.

Bitterness and hard feelings may be a side effect of the stalled talks, according to a spokesman for the city's command officers.

"The contract expired on July 1, 1984," said Detective Sgt. John Drummond. "The contract for the patrol officers, that's everyone below the rank of sergeant, expired as well. The city has talked extensively with them, but not with the command officers. It's like their attitude is 'we'll deal with the patrolmen and break the back of the command officers.' Our position is that we'll wait until they talk with us, but we just won't have a contract until then."

According to Drummond, the supervisors are asking for four major contract demands — a seven percent across-the-board pay raise; full health benefits for retired public safety personnel; a 14-percent pay differential between ranks; and more representation of the city's pension board.

"We had one meeting with the city in May or June," Drummond said. "We didn't even want to talk economic issues. We just wanted to talk. Instead their man wrote $500 on a tiny scrap of paper and tossed it across the table at us. 'That's all you're going to get,' he said. I don't call that negotiating."

Drummond said the supervisor officers wanted fully paid hospitalization for retired personnel because their position was that the retired members "can't go out and find another job at their ages. And if they did, they sure wouldn't pay much."

Arbitration necessary

"The city is offering very limited benefits," he said. "They want co-pay, no prescriptions, no dental and no eyeglasses. As for pay differential between ranks, we're asking for a 14 percent difference. Right now it's seven percent. I think in the Woods it's over 20 percent."

Drummond said the public safety officers would like more representation on the pension board, an idea which he said "scared" the city.

"We have to admit that the present board has been doing a great job," said Drummond. "But what about five years or more down the road? Currently there are five members on the board: one person representing public safety; one from the DPW; two councilmen; and one citizen appointed by the mayor."

Thomas Kressbach, the city manager and Dennis Foran, the city treasurer, also sit as non-voting members of the board. They can't vote, but they can make suggestions. They're always going to see things from the city's point of view. Their investment choices so far have been good, but what about after some of our guys retire? If investments go sour and lose, at least we'd like more of a chance to have a say-so in those investments."

Drummond said that in the last contract public safety officers received a five percent pay raise for 1981; four percent in 1982 and six percent for 1983-84. The contract did not go into arbitration.

"We want to be fair," he said. "We're willing to negotiate. But $500 scribbled on a piece of paper isn't negotiating."

City Manager Thomas Kressbach declined to talk specifics of the city's counter-offers, but confirmed that the patrol supervisors' requests were essentially accurate.

"I believe they pretty much parallel what the patrol officers wanted as well," he said. "They filed for arbitration. These talks have gone on for a protracted period, but that's not too unusual in the Grosse Pointes."

"I believe the Woods just recently ratified their latest contract and many times another city will lay back and see how their neighbors did. Sort of see which way the wind is blowing."

Kressbach said he wasn't present when the "$500 offer scribbled on a piece of paper" was made, but conceded he had felt a little tension lately that was previously absent.

"In the past few weeks I'd walk through their department and there'd be jokes about the contract," Kressbach said. "Lately things have been a little more serious. No one wants to dredge up old history or create ill will. We're a small family, and families don't"

Board votes to cut December tax bills

By Mike Andrzejczyk

What will you do with the money, Grosse Pointe?

The Board of Education Monday night rolled back its tax levy 1 percent for this year, which will mean about a $2 savings for the average homeowner in the school district, whose home has a state equalized valuation of $50,000.

This is the second time in the past four years that the school board has rolled back taxes. In 1982-83, the board adopted a similar rollback, according to the administration.

Superintendent John Whritner presented two proposals to the board at the Monday meeting: the first for a 1.8 percent tax increase which was used in developing this school year's budget and the second for the rollback.

Originally, the board discussed having no tax increase this year, Whritner said. When the administration finished its calculations, however, it found it could offer the rollback this year, which the superintendent recommended for adoption.

The board acted on the motion for approval by Vice President Vincent LoCicero — seconded by trustee Carl Anderson — with little discussion.

"It's been discussed," quipped trustee Joan Hanpeter, referring to reports in the past couple of months that the board was contemplating holding the line on taxes this year.

LoCicero, who with board Secretary Fred Adams had pushed for no tax increase, was praised by board President Jon Gandelot for first raising the subject.

The new rate will be used on the December tax bills.

Eligibility requirements: Motivators or misguided?

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Should Grosse Pointe public school students have to maintain a minimum grade standard before they can participate in sports and other extracurricular activities?

That's the question asked recently by a school board trustee and one the Board of Education may have to answer in coming months.

It's a question already answered affirmatively by at least half the school districts in the state for their sports teams, according to the Michigan High School Athletic Association.

It's also a question that North and South High School athletic directors Tom Gauerke and Chuck Hollosy and North Principal John Kastran have the same answer for. They'll discuss it with the board if asked, but they don't think the higher standards are needed in Grosse Pointe, where parental pressure to achieve academically keeps kids working in the classroom, they say.

Doing the asking is trustee Carl Anderson, who, after reviewing MHSAA minimum academic eligibility standard information, says he thinks the system may be missing an opportunity to scholastically motivate its athletes and those who take part in after-school activities.

The MHSAA standard requires students to pass four classes a semester in order to be eligible for sports. Students also have to be enrolled full-time to play sports. That standard is in effect for all schools that join the association.

"I know we meet the minimum academic requirements of the association and go beyond that in some areas ... (but) I think the first mission of a school system is the education of its students," Anderson says. "If an academic requirement can be a motivational factor for some students, then I think we should pursue that."

He adds he plans to talk with other board members to see what they think about the idea.

The association's standard is meant to be a minimum for eligibility, according to MHSAA Director Verne North. The association's board recently increased the standard from passing three to passing four classes, defeating an attempt to establish a minimum grade point average, he adds.

"The primary reason for the change was the board's recognition of the need to maintain a minimum standard that reflected the enrollment patterns of the high school programs," North says.

When the three-class rule was in effect, most high school programs offered students four classes, North says. With more classes offered to students, the association hiked the standard to keep the minimum "a little more in the ballpark," he adds.

In 1983, the MHSAA surveyed member districts and found that 47 percent had standards for eligibility higher than those set by the association, North says. Another 27 percent said they were thinking about increasing their eligibility requirements while a similar number reported feeling some pressure to hike standards.

Even though the survey was conducted before the association increased its minimum standard, North says that probably half the systems in the state have eligibility standards higher than MHSAA's minimum. The push for academics has fueled that drive, he adds.

It was parental concern for good athletes with poor academic performance that led the Benton Harbor schools to adopt requirements tougher than the MHSAA, according to athletic coordinator Herb Quade.

Since the 1981-82 school year, a Benton Harbor student has to have a 2.0 overall grade point average to play sports, Quade says. Failure to maintain that average means a student is ineligible for the next semester and the student is enrolled in a tutorial program as well, he adds.

Athletes are also monitored periodically, with coaches handing out academic progress cards to players that must be returned the next day after being filled out by their teachers. The athletic office then publishes a list of students ineligible for the coming game, those who are just getting by and those who have met the standard, Quade says.

Although there is a problem with control at the middle school level, the system has worked out well for the district, Quade says. It also has put in an appeal policy to help some students who, for special reasons, may have missed the mark, he adds.

"We are more and more satisfied with the way things are going," Quade says. "We still think we have a couple loopholes, but we're working on them."

When the standard was originally developed, an overall grade point average was adopted because of the number of vocational education majors taking part in sports programs, Quade says. There are worries about grades in vocational classes carried over to offset low academic grades, but the system's looking at the problem, he adds.

Still, there are no "Mickey Mouse" courses allowed, he adds. The school system has a core curriculum that needs to be met for graduation.

"We're very happy with the program," Quade adds. "More and Circus clown to teach Pointe youngsters safety

"Safe Kids," a national program sponsored by Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus for the prevention of missing children, will come to Grosse Pointe next week.

St. Paul's Catholic School, 170 Grosse Pointe Blvd., will host the free program Thursday, Sept. 19, and Friday, Sept. 20, from 3 to 6:30 p.m. It includes a half-hour performance by a circus clown and will teach children preventive safety measures.

Following the skit, all children will be fingerprinted and given an information packet by the local Grosse Pointe police department.

There is no charge for the program and the public is invited.

Fifteen high school seniors named NMSC semifinalists

Fifteen students attending three local high schools were named semifinalists in the 1986 National Merit Scholarship Corporation's competition this week.

Grosse Pointe South students named are Elizabeth Meagher, Colleen Murphy and Kirk Sanders. North students making the semifinals are Bryant Kong and Keith Peltz.

University Liggett Upper School students named as semifinalists are Oscar Alcantara, John Birg-bauer, Brian David, Susan Gates, Lancelot Lie, Bridget McKeever, Thomas Redmond, Carolyn Seydel, Kai Soering and John Travis.

The 15 are among 15,000 high school seniors nationally who, as semifinalists, will have the chance to advance in the National Merit Scholarship competition seeking 5,800 scholarships worth more than $21 million, to be awarded next spring.

More than one million students from 19,000 secondary schools entered the competition last fall by taking the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT) as juniors. Those who qualified as semifinalists include the highest scorers in every state and represent the top 12 percent of this year's senior class.

To become one of approximately 13,500 finalists who will be considered for awards, semifinalists must document their academic performance throughout high school, receive the recommendation and endorsement of their prinicipal, confirm their earlier qualifying test scores on a second examination and provide information about their interests, accomplishments and goals.

Only about 40 percent of the finalists will be offered scholarships. Three different types of awards will be provided, of which at least 1,800 will be $2,000 scholarships that are allocated to winners on a state representational basis.

Every finalist will have a chance to win one of these one-time national awards, which are supported by business and industrial sponsors that also will finance more than 1,500 renewable merit scholarships.

Because corporate-sponsored four-year awards usually are specified for finalists who are children of company employees, residents of an area served by the sponsor, or students with particular career goals, not all finalists will compete for them. Winners of these awards will receive $500 to $4,000 for each undergraduate year of college.

The remaining 2,500 four-year merit scholarships to be offered next spring will be sponsored by some 200 colleges and universities that reserve the awards for finalists who will attend their universities. These stipends range from $250 to $2,000 for each undergraduate year of study at the sponsor college.

Between 1956 and 1984, more than 90,000 young Americans have received merit scholarships worth $265 million.

Woods computer first on-line

Cities join to share information

By Tom Greenwood

The use of national and statewide computer systems to fight crime isn't a new story, but the implementation of more personalized systems among neighboring cities may prove to be more popular and effective in the future.

That's the opinion of the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods, all members of St. Clair VI, a joint effort research project to computerize police and fire records on a local level.

The Woods got the ball rolling four years ago when it began invesvia the nationwide LEIN (Law Enforcement Information Network) machine.

"Information that is now in the LEIN comes directly to the state police from the individual cities in Michigan," he said. "That information has to be sought out by hand, taking men away from the streets. Now all that information, and more, can be called up and printed out by the computer almost instantly. It can then be sent on to the state police without a waste of man hours."

In addition to compiling reports on crime statistics for the state elderly or handicapped person lives at that address."

The Woods reportedly hopes to expand their computer program to include other services such as fire inspections, dog licenses, bicycle licenses, city accounting, taxes and utility billings.

"All the cities won't be using these other enhancements," said Rusert. "It all depends on their needs."

It's also believed the computer system will help prevent future crimes by projecting trends based on past records. "I can draw curves and make specific projections," Rusert said. "It's also efficient in compiling EMS records. It will help note special homes of invalids, the utilization of equipment and what a city needs to handle fires and emergencies in its community."

Other cities in St. Clair VI not yet on-line can use the Woods computer via telephone or through their own computers, once they come on-line, according to Rusert.

Rusert also does his best to allay fears of creeping Big Brotherism that citizens may fear.

"This is not a proprietary or snooping situation," he said. "This information is already known to the police. The difference is that the computer is much quicker and more efficient. It allows the information to be drawn up instantly. It's similar to using a pencil or a hand calculator to add up a huge row of figures. You can do it both ways, but one's quicker and more accurate."

While the computer system may sound complicated, the actual installation was simple. The computer, a Super Micro built by AT&T, was simply plugged in, with a printer installed along side. "There's one director of information at the Woods, plus probably two persons per shift who can operate the machine," Rusert said. "They have their own names and passwords to log into the system. Their job is to insert and retrieve information as need be. Their training takes about two weeks."

"The system can be just as detailed as the department wants. They're very thorough in the Woods," Rusert added. "They intend to cross-file their information. Current information is put in first, while past records may take two or three years to be put on discs."

Rusert, whose company must bid to supply the computer hardware to the other cities, said the goal of the program is to have all of the communities tied into the system within five years.

Hospital dedicates center

By Elsa Frohman

Saratoga Community Hospital dedicated a new two-story conference center Sunday to the memory of the late Karl E. Schmidt, a Grosse Pointer who was a member of the hospital board of trustees.

The Karl E. Schmidt Center consists of a multi-use conference room, a surgical waiting room and a private, surgical consultation room. The two-story addition to the hospital's main building represents Saratoga Community Hospital's first fundraising project. The center was built at a cost of approximately $135,000, which was raised from donations from the hospital's employees and private and public foundations.

The Karl E. Schmidt Center will accommodate the 650 people who attend community education classes each year; the 1,500 people who participate in Health-O-Rama and other free health screening programs each year; the 155 people who attend weekly or monthly health support groups and community meetings at the hospital; the 150 retirees, more than 50 students and the other employees who are recognized annually for special contributions to the hospital; the families of the 3,600 surgical patients who previously waited in the main lobby for news of their loved ones; and the members of the surgical patients' families when they need a private consultation with a doctor.

Schmidt was chosen as the symbol for the new addition because of his long service to the hospital. He became a part of the Saratoga board in 1970 and was the chairman of the Board of Trustees from 1977 to 1982. During the period when Schmidt was the chairman, the hospital started its first volunteer program, its first gift shop, its first community outreach programs, its first full-service radiology department and became the first hospital to process Blue Cross bills by computer tape, according to Saratoga Executive Director K. Rand Dykman.

"I think that this is Karl's kind of project," Dykman said during the dedication ceremonies on Sept. 8. "It is a facility devoted to serving people and education. In addition to being a very talented engineer, with all of the technical expertise and precision the profession requires, Karl was a very kind and warm-hearted man. Without a doubt, it is these qualities — his un-failing kindness and generosity of spirit that enabled us to be so successful in this, our first fundraising effort."

Until 1985, the largest fundraising drive ever conducted by the hospital raised $3,400, according to Dykman.

Maurice Day, a retired executive of American Natural Resources, Schmidt's employer, and a long-time friend, praised Schmidt's work as an engineer, as well as his many community service sidelines. Day said that Schmidt was instrumental in the development of underground storage of natural gas in Michigan. Michigan is now one of the major underground storage states in the United States.

"Karl had a wide range of interests, in addition to work and his professional life," Day said. "He was instrumental in developing a credit union for the Gas Company and served as director for many years."

Another of Schmidt's special projects was the Detroit Science Center.

"He was active in promoting the Science Center and worked on the building committee to raise funds to build the new structure," Day said. "He liked to bring science to the understanding level through exhibits and hands-on equipment."

Of particular benefit to the Grosse Pointes was Schmidt's involvement in St. Paul's Catholic Parish. When the church was damaged by fire in 1978, Schmidt was one of the primary activists in raising the money for repairs. He also acted as an engineering consultant for the heating system at the parish and for the grounds and buildings.

Of the $135,000 needed for the construction project, $87,831 came from the hospital employees.

An additional $23,800 was contributed by the Schmidt family. However, the funds for the center weren't the only benefit the hospital derived from the campaign. Day put the hospital in touch with another ANR executive and Grosse Pointer, Ralph McElvenny, who arranged for a $57,480 grant to the hospital which will be used for two transcutaneous monitors and a pulmonary function analyzer.

The rooms went into use even before the dedication. The surgical waiting room was opened as of Aug. 1.

tigating the use of computers to streamline statistics for more detailed crime studies. The other Pointes and Harper Woods followed. A study group from the six communities received a $20,000 grant from the Metropolitan Affairs Corporation (MAC), a private, non-profit research group, to study the project.

The first computer in the St. Clair VI group went on-line three months ago in the Woods. "They're also about to start in the Park, City and Harper Woods," said Mike Rusert, president of Logic Industries, Inc., the firm that researched the Woods' needs and supplied it with equipment and on-the-job training.

Rusert added that the Woods new computer would enhance the information now available to the police

Volunteers sought by FLEC

The Family Life Education Council (FLEC), for the tenth year, plans to sponsor its Alcohol Awareness Program for youth.

Marge Nixon, coordinator of volunteers for the Grosse Pointe Public Schools will be available to recruit interested 10th, 11th and 12th grade students at Grosse Pointe North during the week of Sept. 16 and Grosse Pointe South the week of Sept. 23. Interested students from other local high schools may pick up an application at the FLEC office, 158 Ridge Road, Grosse Pointe Farms.

FLEC is looking for responsible young adults who are willing to participate in the 24 hours of training as well as lead discussions with the fifth and sixth graders in local elementary schools. The program provides the facts on alcohol and its chemical abuse. The high school students benefit personally from the skill-building training and from the experiences of leading group discussions.

Alcohol continues to be a community problem. Young people pay a heavy mental, physical, emotional and social price for alcohol abuse. The results are often a breakdown in family relations, poor academic performance, loss of friends, unwanted pregnancies, drunk driving arrests, and in too many cases, injuries and premature death.

FLEC's "student-to-student" approach to inform people is one way of addressing the problem. Last year, 109 high school students participated in the training program, with approximately 55 continuing on to present information to 1,200 students in local public and parochial elementary schools.

Youth arrested in St. Clare break-in Charges are pending against a youth in connection with a break-in early Monday morning Sept. 2, at St. Clare of Montefalco School.

The building was entered through a side door, police said. The athletic office and gymnasium were entered and searched and some classrooms were also rifled.

Witnesses saw the youth enter the building and flagged down a passing Detroit police car, who detained the youth until Park police arrived.

Get in shape at War Memorial

Nine fitness classes that take into account everyone's special physical fitness needs will be offered at the War Memorial starting this month.

Couture Exercise, a total body workout for men and women includes two classes — one on Monday and Wednesdays from 9 to 10 a.m. for those over 40; and co-ed sessions on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 8 p.m. open to all ages. Alice Belfie's Dynamic Energie program focuses on adapting a routine to everyone's level, regardless of age, sex, or size. The cost is $20 for a card that is valid for any 24 sessions, a.m. and p.m., Sept. 9 through Dec. 10.

Jacki Sorensen's Aerobic Dancing, America's premier cardiovascular dance/exercise program, will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 8:45 to 9:45 a.m. beginning Sept. 10. The cost of this class, which has its members jumping, kicking, laughing and clapping to their favorite music, is $60 for 24 sessions.

One-hour sessions in "Classical Ballet" will be offered by the senior examiner for the Cecchetti Council of America, Mary Ellen Cooper, at 8:15 p.m. weeknights, excluding Friday. Registration for classes is by interview with the instructor on Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 9 and 10, 3:30 to 6:30 p.m., to enable her to place students according to ability.

Children five years of age and older, and teens, who will meet after school and on Saturdays, may register at this time, also. The cost is $40 for 11 one-hour sessions.

Ted and Lillian Forrest will return to brighten up peoples' social lives with their Monday evening course, "Social Dancing." Beginners will meet from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. to learn the fox trot, waltz, Latin dances, and the Forrests will include instruction of the current rock steps for fun. Continuing and advanced students will meet from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. and will fine-tune their previous dance experience. The cost is $18 for each six-week session.

"Yoga," with Golden Lotus instructor Betty Locke will meet from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays starting Sept. 18. The goal of the course is to revitalize internal organs, awaken and purify energy centers, develop stamina and flexibility.

"In this quieter state," Locke says, "students will find themselves accomplishing more, sleeping better and enjoying life." The cost is $30 for eight sessions.

For a healthy and sensible approach to exercise during pregnancy, physician-approved "Pre-Natal Exercise," presented by Super Shape, Inc., will be offered on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, from 6:30 to 7:15 p.m. beginning Sept. 23. Women who have not been exercising previously can start any time after their first trimester. Participants must have their doctor's written permission to participate. The cost is $54 for 18 sessions, or $20 for a card valid for any five sessions between Sept. 23 and Oct. 31.

"Post-Natal Exercise — For Baby Too!" will meet on Mondays and Thursdays from 1 to 1:45 p.m. beginning Sept. 23. The progressive 10-week workout is geared toward toning those areas of the body most affected by pregnancy. Babies, up to six months of age, are included by means of simple massage and stretching techniques. The cost for this course is $65 for 20 sessions.

"Walking For Fitness," an invigorating three-mile walk along scenic Lakeshore Drive, will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 9 to 10 a.m., starting Sept. 24. Special warm-up and cool-down techniques will be included, along with informational handouts. The cost is $35 for 14 sessions which will meet rain or shine, under the direction of Valerie Pokorny-McHugh, director of Super Shape, Inc.

"Tae Kwan Do Karate," taught by members of the Karate Club, will meet on Fridays, 7 to 9 p.m., beginning Sept. 27. Beginning and advanced students meet together in this $28, eight-week course.

To register for any of these fitness classes send full payment, and a note indicating the class desired, to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236. To avoid class cancellations, the center requests that students register in advance.

Park buys emergency call recorders

Both the Park fire and police departments will soon have equipment to record emergency calls. The purchase of $10,000 worth of Dictaphone Co. hardware was approved Aug. 26 by the city council.

The recorders will handle three lines into the fire department and the dispatcher's line in the police department, according to Fire Chief Phillip Costa. The fire department requires the extra recordings because emergency calls can be taken on any of three lines, he added. The police desk will have a single line recorded.

The recorders, used by other departments in the area, will record the time of an emergency call as well as the conversation allowing immediate recall in case information wasn't understood the first time, Costa said. Also, by programming the approximate time and date of the call into the machine, departments can search the tape and replay original calls.

Recorders may also help in prosecuting those calling in false alarms because they will provide voice prints that can be used for identification, he added.

The departments will be able to monitor response time with the equipment, Costa said. Recorders automatically tally time, while the city's radio system automatically marks the time a unit is dispatched.

Should a resident complain that police or fire units were slow in responding to an emergency, officials can compare the time of the call, time a unit was dispatched and when it reported being on the scene for the actual response time.

There have been two complaints by residents to the fire department in the past month of excessive response time, Costa said. One of those calls involved a person who dialed 911 instead of the Park's emergency numbers.

Although it's rare for residents to call Detroit's 911 emergency number, it does happen, Costa said. A 911 dispatcher will then have to find out what city the call came from and call that department. That takes time, he added.

Some residents have been brainwashed into using 911 instead of the city's emergency numbers — 822-7400 for police, 822-6400 for fire — by a variety of media meant to promote the 911 system, Costa said. "They forget to say to use the numbers in Detroit," he added.

One resident upbraided the council at the Aug. 26 meeting, complaining the emergency numbers were more difficult to remember than 911. The city should look into instituting a 911 system of its own, he added.

Other residents commended the chiefs for requesting the equipment, saying it will combat the "gossip, rumors and so forth" about poor or no response by police and fire units.

Police Chief Richard Caretti said that should the police and fire departments be consolidated into a single public safety department, the two recorders will still be needed to cover all the incoming lines.

Ears for the deaf

Saratoga Health Care Corporation will sponsor the monthly meeting of the Saratoga Hearing Impaired Support Group Monday, Sept. 16. The group will meet at Saratoga Community Hospital, 15000 Gratiot, from 1-3 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Michael Sapp, executive training director for "Ears for the Deaf," a program which trains dogs to become surrogate ears for the deaf.

Lawn job spree

The night of Aug. 25, an economy-minded vandal did nine lawn jobs at once, swerving across the sidewalk and heading straight down the front yards of Kenwood, in the Farms. Damage was minor, police records stated, except that the driver hit a six-inch driveway curb, ripping a piece of it out. Police speculate that damage may also have been inflicted on the undercarriage of the vandal's car.

SPINAL HEALTH

Chiropractic utilizes a structural approach to maintain a healthy body. The spine must maintain normal biomechanical movement to be healthy. Normal biomechanical movement entails unrestricted and painless motion in all directions of bending the neck, mid-back, and lower back. Abnormal motion leads to premature joint and disc degeneration of the spine. This also leads to symptoms such as: low back and leg pain, neck and arm pain, headaches, dizziness, etc. which surface due to the irritation of the nerves, muscles, and ligaments of the spine. Abnormal spinal movement is detected via a motion palpation examination which can easily detect spinal problems.

Another view of WCCC

The Grosse Pointe News is indebted to Barbara Gattorn, prominent Grosse Pointe civic worker and member of the Wayne County Civil Service Commission, for a more comprehensive view of Ronald Temple, the new president of Wayne County Community College, than the one expressed in a News editorial Aug. 22.

The editorial had taken issue with comments Temple made in an interview with the Detroit News in which he said he would seek approval of a new county-wide tax to ensure long-range stability for the college. The editorial had suggested he ought to make sure the college has cleared up its past mistakes before talking about expansion and additional funding.

As a member of the search committee that recommended Temple to the college board, Mrs. Gattorn came to have a high opinion of the new president. She pointed out he emerged as the best of the 60 candidates considered for the post and impressed both the search committee and the college board. She herself found him to be "a super candidate" and an "excellent choice."

The selection committee was made up of four members of the college board, four representatives of the combined faculty and staff, one student and one community representative, who was Mrs. Gattorn. The committee was chaired by Charles Stockwell, a college trustee from Westland.

As for Temple's interview with the Detroit News, the subject of the Grosse Pointe News editorial, Mrs. Gattorn said she felt his comments about raising taxes to support the college had been somewhat taken out of context. From her own conversation with Temple, she said she knew he was not talking about any tax hike in the immediate future and that his first goal is to improve the college's image through solid performance.

Mrs. Gattorn pointed out that the county tax of $1.02 per $1,000 of valuation to help support the college had been imposed by the Legislature and that it is low in comparison with taxes levied locally to support other community colleges. The editorial had said that Temple's quotes in the Detroit News indicated he did not know that any levy was being imposed currently. Mrs. Gattorn's impression is that Temple was talking about the possibility of an increased levy but only at some future time after the college had proved itself to the public.

The News has no quarrel with either Mrs. Gattorn or President Temple if that was the point he had intended to make. Our concern was that the new president had not given county residents any credit for the direct and substantial support they already are providing to the ailing college, and that he seemed to be looking for new worlds to conquer before cleaning up WCCC's poor record.

The News is happy to have the additional background from Mrs. Gattorn about the new WCCC president. It is true that he still faces problems because of the recent administrative and board turmoil. But it is also true that he ought to be given time to bring order out of the chaos on the WCCC campus before any final judgment is passed on his performance.

The Legislature has extended for another year the designation of the state superintendent of public instruction as a monitor of the college operations. With a new president and a newly reorganized board in place, WCCC now ought to be poised for a new and more constructive take-off. But talk about an increased tax levy on county taxpayers ought to be deferred until positive results can be seen from the changes made and need for additional funding can be substantiated.

Good news about teachers

Even though U.S. school teachers are starting to catch up in their pay, many school districts in this country were so short of personnel this fall that they recruited new teachers abroad and permitted the employment of less than fully qualified new teachers.

What seems to be happening is that the United States is beginning to pay the penalty for a generation or more of neglect of the school teacher, not only with respect to pay but also in terms of professional standing and community regard.

A recent report in the New York Times indicated that the average salary of the American public school teacher now is $23,546 and, what is more important, in each of the last two years the average pay has risen more than 7 percent, or more than twice the rate of inflation. Hence, it can be truly said that teachers finally are beginning to catch up in their annual pay.

Michigan, known as a high pay state in many fields, is second only to New York among the states in the continental United States with an annual salary of $28,401 in 1984-85. Pay in New York state averages $29,000 but that is exceeded by the Alaskan rate of $39,751.

Education officials contend that teaching will be able to retain and attract good teachers only when salaries are more nearly competitive with those in other fields. But some contend that even if starting salaries go up, districts will not be able to employ the quality of people they want unless they can find ways to pay their best teachers more than the average.

That brings up some system for rewarding good teachers, a hotly controversial issue in the profession itself. So far only one state, Tennessee, has put into effect a system that rewards teacher performance as well as longevity and postgraduate work, currently the major bases for differentiation among teachers. The Tennessee system has been in effect too brief a period to determine whether it is achieving its purpose, but there has been a growing national demand for testing of teachers, which is one controversial proposal for making a pay differentiation among teaching personnel.

Nor are teachers' salaries always determined by the market demand. A professor at Teachers College, New York, told the New York Times that sometimes teachers salaries "are much more related to the salaries of the school board members" than to the marketplace. That accounts for the difficulties of some small school districts which fail to attract teachers because of the low salaries paid to everyone in the community, teachers included.

In the nation as in Michigan and its local communities, schools must pay for quality teaching if that is what they want. And quality teaching is what most parents want for their children, even though some on occasion complain about their school taxes and the other costs of sending children to school. With the rise in annual pay over a period of time, there ought to be a corresponding rise in the quality of the nation's teachers, which would be good news for everybody concerned.

A 'depoliticized' investigation?

Now that the Wayne County Board of Commissioners has voted to appoint a fact finder to investigate a possible conflict of interest in the office of County Executive William Lucas, it is appropriate to suggest that the inquiry not be used as a political vendetta against Lucas.

It is true that as an all-but-announced candidate for the Republican nomination for governor next year, Lucas has to expect that his record will be reviewed with much more care and in much greater detail than if he were seeking re-election to his present office. But we have noticed a step-up in criticism of Lucas and of charges against him ever since he announced his switch from Democrat to Republican.

That perhaps is to be expected. A Wayne County resident seeking statewide election on the Republican ticket is highly unusual, unless he or she lives in a Republican enclave such as Grosse Pointe. But the vehemence with which charges of misconduct are now being leveled against Lucas because of reports that his top aide stood to gain financially from a contract to renovate the Old County Building in Detroit raises suspicions that the issue is being stirred up by Democrats or their colleagues who hope to damage Lucas' gubernatorial prospects.

We also noted that the special fact finder named by the county board will have power to subpoena witnesses and records in connection with all contracts approved by Lucas, not just the one for the Old County Building renovation. That looks as if the investigation could be a fishing expedition to try to find something that could damage Lucas' reputation as a reformer who has modernized Wayne County government and become a strong GOP possibility for governor.

That a fishing expedition is in prospect is supported by the fact that the private firm that had been approved for a $26 million renovation of the Old County Building has been dropped from the project. So even if Lucas did know that his aide, Dennis Nystrom, was part owner of Utley-James, Inc., the firm involved, when he signed the contract, neither Nystrom nor that company is not going to benefit from the project. No matter. The fact finder could look for other controversial contracts to publicize.

Board Chairman John Hertel, whose district includes the Pointes, has been quoted as saying that a fact finder would "depoliticize" the investigation into Lucas' granting of the contract to a private development group. Other board members contend that there is no way the investigation can be taken out of the political arena. The county board itself is strongly Democratic and several members, including Hertel himself, have political ambitions for higher office. So the prospects of "depoliticizing" the investigation do not appear to be bright.

Politicians, of course, are supposed to be cleaner than a hound's tooth. And while it is not necessarily true that any skulduggery was involved in Lucas' signing the contract that never was invoked, it still wasn't a very smart move politically. Politicians normally seek to avoid even the appearance of conflict. George Weeks, Detroit News political reporter, says Lucas "may be guilty of nothing more than insensitivity to perceptions," but adds that "such insensitivity has derailed many a bandwagon."

Hertel is chairman of the Special Committee on Government Integrity that not only recommended appointment of a fact finder but will select the fact finder, subject to full commission approval. The identity of that fact finder — whether he is a politician closely identified with the Democratic Party — and the specific instructions under which he will operate will offer the best clues as to whether the investigation of Lucas' office will be "depoliticized" or not.

Reflections on Old Kerby School

To the Editor:

As a former 35-year resident of the Farms and still a property owner, I ask that you indulge me a few reflections and thoughts concerning old Kerby school whose demise is currently under way.

I visit the Pointe quite regularly from my current residence which is in the Monroe County area, and having read of the planned demolition of Old Kerby, I decided to pay a last visit. My late father and other members of his family attended Kerby shortly after it was opened and I recall some of his stories, but of course I remember far more vividly my own six years at the "Great Old School." My visit then, was in hopes I could walk the halls and visit the rooms where I know I share so many good memories with many Pointers.

Ironically, when I visited the site some destruction had begun, and I met a man whose son is responsible for the demolition. This man, Paul Kerby, and I were long-time neighbors and the school was named after his family. Mr. Kerby stated he attended Kerby for three years and then went on to St. Paul school.

I noticed another gentleman walking about and inquired of his name. He told me his father also was a student at the old school and often spoke of it and since his Dad had just passed away, he decided to stop by. The man's father was Vernon Sylvester, retired Farms Police Lieutenant.

As I walked through the hallway and into the old classrooms I remembered many of the teachers — Mrs. McLoud, Mrs. Ekstrand, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Hamilton, and the only male teacher, Mr. Schaefer. The principal was Mrs. E. Tucker and like a lot of others I spent some time in her office getting a stern lecture.

Strangely, I could vividly flash back to Mrs. Kuhlman, our kindergarten teacher. I remember her as a very loving and caring lady. I slowly walked down the stairs to the room which served as our lunchroom and gym when the weather was inclement. The lunchroom was only allowed for those children who lived a distance from the school and were required to bring a lunch. All others had to go home to eat.

The gym was not much larger than an average family room and limited us to relay races or dodge ball. When weather permitted we would charge outside to play soccer, but always ended up in what we called "keep away" with the upper grade students stealing the ball. Prior to the bell signaling the end of recess, there would always be a good scrap or two — bloody noses and all. Win or lose we would be back as friends the next day, grudges or anger were forgotten for later times.

Prior to my departure, I related to how in our sixth year we were all looking forward to moving on to Grosse Pointe High (South). Due to overcrowding, some students had to go to Pierce Junior High. Many of us made it clear to our parents — it was the High School for us!

Momentous occasions for me at Kerby were: captain of the safety patrol, co-captain of the ball team, which incidentally used to knock the socks off Defer, Richard, Maso and St. Paul's. Most of the games Mr. Schaefer would travel with us and umpire. Some of the players were: Bob Roy, Charles Higdon, Dick Moore, Arnold Parsons, Jack Thomas, Tom Roberts, John Keir, George Hubbard, Tom Wittingham and Don Stahl. Other classmates of that period: Reno, Allor, Beer, Allard, Socia, Grylls, Vossler, Burn, Johnson, Peters, Dana, Fluitt, Mastrianni and Allie.

My last memories of the Grand Old Building was after a hitch in the Navy in WW II and several years later when I attained majority. I worked on the election board with many well known Pointers such as Snay, Hoch, Backman, O'Connor, Maxon, Moran and others. The old building was the voting precinct for many prominent Pointers.

I am certain it was a practical decision by the council to demolish the school, but I would hope they recognize a responsibility to place a marker or plaque of some nature to indicate the site and as a tribute to many of the early pioneer families who attended Kerby School.

Iacocca for me

To the Editor:

Regarding your editorial "Iacocca for President?" and your implied agreement with Mr. Cheyfitz that "I don't even know what he stands for," I say, "You gotta be kidding!"

I believe Iacocca stands for free enterprise and full employment, but most of all... fair trade. As he states, a level playing field so all players abide by the same rules and then let the best team win.

Good trade relations based on a firm national policy can only make for a good foreign policy in short order.

Iacocca not only has established his position on programs and issues, but given national exposure, he will sell them to the public and Congress as the correct course of action for this country. We have paid a steep price for inaction for too long.

Could he be my candidate?? ... you bet!

To the Editor:

How tragic it is that we Grosse Pointers must travel over such rough pavement on our two main roads, Lakeshore and Mack Avenue, when we are among the highest taxpayers anywhere. It is incredulous that hundreds of millions of dollars are being spent on the People Mover in downtown Detroit which will serve only a tiny percentage of our population. This money could best be used on roadway repairs not only in the Grosse Pointe area, but everywhere in the metropolitan area of Detroit. Everyone would then benefit instead of the very few who will use the People Mover.

If a poll were to be taken, the vast majority of citizens would vote against the People Mover in favor of better roads. Once again, the silent majority is left out.

Writer responds to letter

To the Editor:

Regarding the letter in the Aug. 22 issue of the Grosse Pointe News which carried the headline, "This is a wearisome nostrum."

The Soviets have been saying for 66 years that their goal is to dominate the world.

Only Communists and their sympathizers belittle patriotism and obviously do so in their desire to make it easier for the Soviets to add the United States to their long list of conquests.

As for agitation in South Africa, much has been published about Soviet-promoted agitation in Africa, including South Africa, for the Soviets have much to gain there and will leave no stone unturned until they have it under their thumb.

As for the New York Times and the State Department, the New York Times has long been considered as being one of the most liberal papers in the country and the State Department has been criticized for leftist tendencies for many years. Even President Roosevelt was quoted as saying in 1945 that "I know that we will defeat the Japanese, but I am not so sure that we will defeat our State Department." (Washington Inquirer, May 10, 1985).

Joseph McCarthy was never proved wrong about any of his accusations, but the liberal news media attacked him viciously.

There is no difficulty in determining what is happening in Nicaragua; the Soviets want that country and all of Central America. If they do not, why would they be pouring over five billion dollars a year into Cuba for that purpose?

I am a firm believer in America. I know that it has and will probably again make mistakes, but I know that millions of people want to come to live in America and few ever willingly leave our shores. Officers of mine told me in Germany in 1945 that people committed suicide rather than climb onto the truck for shipment to Russia.

Prime Time for senior citizens

By Marian Trainor

It's all over for another year. Those warm lazy days of summer when the livin' is easy and each day a delight have come to an end. Labor Day has come and gone and it is time now to give up the joys of summer and prepare for the tasks of winter. Children have returned to school, fathers to their work and mothers to the endless chores of housekeeping. It is a letdown that is only relieved by the anticipation of the golden days of autumn that gradually eases into the chilling winds and frosty dullness of winter.

One of the regrets, particularly for older people, that comes with the passing of summer is the loss of opportunity for physical exercise that summer provides.

They will miss walks in the sunshine, or the mellowness of twilight, the leisurely game of golf, swimming in waters warmed by the sun, a set of tennis in the coolness of early morning. They will miss the good feeling that comes from moving about in the outdoors. Bodies begin to feel a little heavier, a little lazier when they are confined by inclement weather.

While it is not the same (no indoor exercise can compare with that taken in the fresh air), it is possible to keep the body toned and fit until spring rolls around again.

Classes designed for all ages to promote and maintain fitness are available in local school's adult education classes, in various centers such as Assumption, the Neighborhood Club, the War Memorial and various churches and clubs throughout the area.

However, if you are without transportation or if you are self-conscious about exercising with a group, you might prefer working out with a VCR tape. They are much preferable to trying to follow a routine from a book where you have to stop to find your place or to turn a page.

Video tapes are enormously popular. They not only provide the opportunity for exercise at home at your own convenience, but it is fun and inspiring to watch the stars at work as they maintain their glamorous svelteness.

Take Debbie Reynolds for instance. She's no kid but she maintains the looks and vitality of a woman half her age, and she shares her exercise secrets on a tape, "Do it Debbie's way." It is designed for the older participant. Those who would give up in despair at trying to work out with Jane Fonda will find Debbie Reynolds' system on they can handle.

Before selecting an exercise tape, it is recommended that everyone over 40 have a medical stress test. It is difficult to develop a tape for different ages and different physical abilities. It is better to know one's limitations, because it is possible to injure one's back or to pull a muscle if too strenuous a routine is attempted.

By and large the effects of exercise tapes aren't much different from roadwork or skipping rope. The difference is the motivation. If you have invested in a tape, you'll use it, not to mention the incentive you get from watching Debbie Reynolds' teen-caliber body encased in a leotard.

Richard Simmons, who established an enormous following with television show also has a tape that is not too strenuous, "Everyday with Richard Simmons." However if you're really a Jane Fonda fan, she has one designed for those not ready for the more strenuous stuff. It is "Jane Fonda's Prime Time workout," a no-nonsense but easy exercise program for which Jane Fonda's "Coming of Age" book is a detailed companion volume.

For men in a state of low fitness, there's no better workout than "Sid Caesar's Shape Up." Sixty-two years old and a former alcoholic, exercise for him is a serious business. He gives some wonderful motivational spiels throughout the presentation including, "Youth is wasted on the young unless you're in shape."

For pure inspiration, "The Jack LaLanne Way" tape is the ultimate. That man is 70 years old and look what exercise has done for him!

If you're a person who just can't get into the exercise routine that is sweeping the country, there is still

I say

Mike

There are some things I can't take. One of them used to be when someone called into question my professional integrity. I still bristle, but I've learned.

You could call me a slob, an ignorant, ink-stained wretch without a whit of understanding for the subject I was writing about or even a functional illiterate. I let it roll off.

If you called me biased in my reporting, I'd be down your throat with both size 10½ corner-kickers in no time.

It got me every time. I'd go to a party and someone would tell me how reporters don't care about the facts and don't tell the truth in their stories anyway. I would usually recommend watching television news during their upcoming months in traction.

But I've learned. A big piece of my education came from the Journal of Communication and an article titled "Repairing the News: A Case Study of the News Paradigm." The rest of my rethinking came in the past couple of weeks.

"Repairing the News," in summary, said all reporters are biased because they have come to depend on official interpretation of the real world. What happens doesn't matter until someone who comes under the generally accepted definition of "official source" describes what happens.

I didn't believe it and fumed about for awhile until two weeks ago, when an irate parent called me, demanding I look into the removal of the high school diving coach. That coach was not rehired this year and was going to be replaced by someone with supposedly less experience. And, the parent fumed, it was all over politics.

Tell me about it, said I, lining up in my head the calls I would make.

The parent gave me the reasons for which the coach was not rehired. First, he didn't take part in school photographs, something he couldn't do because he worked at more than just the high school, the parent said. Also, the diving coach was to have refused to become an assistant to the head coach.

The diving coach also didn't attend enough staff meetings because he did have another job, the parent said. A couple of impolitic things the coach was to have done was to ask some untalented divers

Alcoholism discussed

Psychiatrist Dan Guyer, M.D., will examine the latest theories and evidence associated with the causes, effects and treatment of alcoholism in a special program at Cottage Hospital Thursday, Sept. 19. The program begins at 7 p.m. in the lower level boardrooms, 159 Kercheval Ave.

One common misconception is that alcoholics are generally found on skid row. The fact is that only 3 percent of today's alcoholics are derelicts. Most are found in middle class homes and executive offices, although the disease shows no affinity for any particular sex or socio-economic class.

"Alcohol Abuse — A Persistent Problem" is a discussion program which can benefit anyone and, in particular, those who have or are close to someone with a drinking problem.

For more information or reservations for this free program, call 884-8600, ext. 2390.

Biased reporting the topper was Robin Missant, a regular attendee of board meetings.

Missant wanted to know why board members didn't call those people who would come to the regular board meeting and complain about now having a chance to talk about tax rate what they truly were. Was it because the board was too polite?

Well, she said, now that she came forward, at least the Grosse Pointe News could write about the poor turnout.

I stopped cold. There was no action at the hearing, at least no official action and, in my mind, no news. My bias had settled so deep that I was ignoring a pitiful turnout for a tax hearing that people had been reading about for three weeks, not only in this paper, but in the Detroit Free Press' Metro Section.

If I were a normal everyday person, I would have called the turnout at the hearing a truly sorry show of interest by the close of 60,000 people who live in the school district. It would serve them right to see their school taxes take a 200 percent jump, with immediate execution for non-payment.

Because I'm a reporter, I'm not able to say that. I dutifully report the passage of the tax rate, the vote, the board comments and use a couple of paragraphs from the hearing and past conversations with board members.

Anyway, I'm learning my lesson. I know where my blind spot is at least. The tough part is working my way around it as often as I can.

Let's face it. The only unbiased reporter is a dead reporter. The only thing I try to do is hide my biases away so you don't see them.

When it comes to personalities, that's what people expect. But when it comes down to what's to be considered news and what's not, that bias becomes more unacceptable. It limits what you read, see and hear in the media.

The only thing to do is for more people to get out and see things for themselves, instead of depending on their daily, weekly or monthly newspaper, television or car radio, to tell them about the world. From my end, I have to open up my definition of what's news to get around the action/reaction bitch.

Like I said, I'm learning. That's what this is all about, right?

Board angry about costs of transportation

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Grosse Pointe public schools may find two recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings to be very expensive. And the school board isn't excited about picking up the costs.

The cases have forced state re-vamping of the regulations governing special education services delivered by public school systems to non-public religiously affiliated schools. The Supreme Court in July said public school teachers could not go to parochial schools to perform certain special education duties.

From that, State Superintendent of Instruction Phillip Runkel decided earlier this month that public school systems will have to pay transportation costs to bring non-public school students to public schools for special education services in speech services and work with teacher-consultants.

State and federal law says that students are to receive special education services from the public school district in which they attend school. Students needn't go to public school to receive service.

Transportation for the 126 parochial school students in the public school district that receive the services of the Grosse Pointe staff could run as high as $50,000, Superintendent John Whritner told the school board Thursday night, Aug. 29. About 15 percent of that cost will be reimbursed by the state.

The estimate is "a ballpark maximum," according to Whritner. The system isn't sure how many students will elect to participate, he added.

The district has met with parochial school principals and reviewed schedules and teaching assignments. In addition, the district has scheduled short individualized education planning committee meetings with the parents and students from the parochial schools, Whritner said.

The meetings will not be normal IEPs, but are meant for the public school staff to get to meet the parents of the parochial school child and to add the required transportation to the educational plan. Personnel Director Ronald Tonks told the board.

The required transportation for the students had trustee Carl Anderson incensed. He asked what the system could do to test "the edict from on high" and added he was "spoiling for a fight" to see if the school system could somehow avoid being hit with the added, unbudgeted cost.

Michigan is the only state that has interpreted the decisions to mean that public schools have to pay the transportation costs according to trustee Joan Hanpeter. The matter still faces the possibility of further legal action, board members added.

The board decided that instead of refusing to provide the transportation and force a confrontation with the state, it would seek an opinion from the Attorney General on the matter and ask the Michigan Association of School Boards what is being done to clarify the issue.

Barrow will speak

The School of Government will begin its 1985-86 season with a meeting of the new board and luncheon Wednesday, Sept. 25, at 10:30 a.m. at the Country Club of Detroit.

Guest speaker will be Detroit mayoral candidate Thomas Barrow, president and chairman of the board of Barrow, Aldridge & Co., which he founded in 1975.

Before that, he was senior auditor at Arthur Anderson Co. and is now chairman of the Michigan State Board of Accountants, which approves appointments of new certified public accountants.

In 1982, Barrow was selected by federal Judge Ray Reynolds Graves to serve as trustee on the Salem Mortgage bankruptcy case. He was also responsible for developing a free income tax program for low-income Detroit residents, which is now the largest such program in the nation.

The board meeting will begin at 10:30, followed by a social hour and luncheon at 12:30 p.m. New president is Mrs. Cassius McIntyre. For reservations, call 822-1474 or 399-1698.

Restorer discusses techniques, gives hints

By Nancy Parmenter

Put a wooden house on the shore of Lake St. Clair and the elements are bound to eat away at it. Paint peels and blisters, wood rots.

The Charles Tompkins house on Windmill Pointe Drive has been suffering from the vagaries of winter bluster and summer heat for 50 years. This summer, Tompkins, who bought the house in 1959 as an anniversary surprise for his wife, hired a professional exterior restorer and agreed to share the results with us.

"The first thing we did was turn a powerwasher on it," explained Jeff Pierick, the painting subcontractor for Independent Painters Group. The powerwasher aims a powerful blast of water at a pressure of 3,000 pounds per square inch and knocks off loose and peeling paint — and architectural detailing as well, if the operator isn't careful.

"You have to be careful not to cut the wood on these old window sills," Pierick said.

The powerwasher will probably get most of the paint off, but any areas remaining should be attacked with a torch to remove the alligator and checked paint. Amateur painters have been known to light the house on fire with the torch, but Pierick said careful control of the temperature will prevent that.

"And of course, we carry a fire extinguisher with us," he said. "In the right hands, a torch is better than a power stripper." The danger with the torch in the wrong hands is that a spark can smolder in some crack for days before finally igniting.

Different sides of the house weather differently. Exposure to the sun, rain and prevailing winds can wear the paint off faster. Trees shading the walls and roof hold dampness. Pierick pointed out that if tree limbs scrape on the roof, they can wear it out. Leaves filling the gutters so the water can't flow away can cause leaks.

The west side of the Tompkins house is heavily shaded. The resultant dampness had caused the paint to peel. Wood frames on the three garage doors had rotted in places. Pierick had a carpenter build new frames for two of the doors.

"You see the molding? You can't buy wood like that — he had to rout it," Pierick said.

The front of the house features a porte-cochere flanked by tall Corinthian columns. The leaf detailing eight or 10 years and it fits most people's budgets. Of course, if they want to spend the money, I can recommend a 25-year caulk."

A house should be repainted at the first sign of deterioration. Un-

Pierick decided to use a flat latex paint to avoid chalking.

"Generally speaking, oil-based paint is better on wood," explained Rick Gladstone, Independent Painters general contractor. "Lots of the capital had never been scraped; the powerwasher broke off thick chunks of acanthus-leaf-shaped paint chips.

Once the paint is removed — down to the bare wood is preferable — cracks must be caulked. Caulking must be applied along every door and window molding and around the top of the wall. The Tompkins house is ornamented at the top with a dentil crown, and Pierick said he had caulked around every single block of wood, for a total of 140 tubes.

"I like to use a good grade of rubber caulk," Pierick said. "It's dynamite material. It's good for fortunately, most paint doesn't last as long as the manufacturer claims it will, according to Pierick. He also says that old houses need to be painted more often.

"The powerwash is only the beginning," he said. "It tears things off you can't get with a scraper. But 80 percent of the work is the preparation."

Before you are ready to paint, make sure the wood is dry. Prime the bare spots and the new wood and shellac the knots on the new wood so they won't bleed through the paint later.

Because the Tompkins house is brick below and wood siding above, of companies are pushing acrylic latex, but oil is better." Not only oil, but glossy oil, according to both men.

Last week, Pierick's efforts were concentrated on the recessed entranceway and the pillars. He removed almost all of the old paint, repaired cracks, scraped out rot, and sanded, sanded, sanded.

"The entranceway is the most important point," he said. "I want to give it the glamor it deserves."

Gladstone, a former teacher, offered some tips on hiring a painter. Ask for local references. Make your expectations clear and don't assume anything. Get it in writing. On the other hand, don't be surprised — especially if your house is old — if the painter finds something additional after he starts work. "Something always comes up," Gladstone said.

Make sure you feel trust in your selection. "Materials aren't the big part of the cost — the labor is," he pointed out. "Don't be confused by the wide variations in bids. Go with the guy who makes sense and who you have confidence in."

Correction

In the Aug. 22 story on helping to prevent cancer through diet, "Chose more All-Bran, less Brie," Allison Boomer was incorrectly described as a health educator for the Michigan Cancer Foundation. Boomer's correct title is Allison L. Boomer, M.P.H., R.D., Health Educator, Cancer Information Service, Comprehensive Cancer Center of Metropolitan Detroit. The News regrets any inconvenience this error may have caused.

City man arrested

A City man, 63, was arrested and charged with indecent exposure after a brief chase by three police departments Aug. 25.

Farms and City police joined the chase when they heard over the Detroit police monitor that a Detroit motorcycle officer was chasing a green station wagon south on Canyon from Chandler Park, according to a Farms police report. The chase led down Mack through an alley and eventually the wrong way on Fisher, where the driver crashed into a wooden utility pole at Charlevoix.

The crash brought neighbors outside. They reported that the man was wearing women's clothing and that the accident stopped traffic at the intersection for about half an hour.

The suspect was apparently uninjured in the crash and was turned over to Detroit police for booking. Farms police chief Robert Ferber said the area has had several reports of indecent exposure by a man in a green station wagon.

"There's no way of knowing at this point whether it's the same one," he said. "I hope this will end it."

Newspapers: They're everybody's business

National Newspaper Week

September 15-21, 1985

By Nancy Parmenter

Next week is National Newspaper Week. So what?

So what if there were no metropolitan dailies? You could survive maybe without any more bad news about the People Mover. The politicians' shenanigans were wearing you out anyway.

But if there hadn't been any paper last week, you wouldn't have known where the best buys on back-to-school clothes were. You wouldn't have been able to plan your weekend activities.

If there were no Grosse Pointe News, you wouldn't know who got married, had a baby, or died. Local merchants would have no outlet for their ads and business would drop. You would have had to depend on word-of-mouth to find out when school opened.

Two weeks ago, by one of those quirks of coincidence, there were no obituaries in the Grosse Pointe News. That ought to be good news, since it means nobody died. But four people called up to complain. When you're used to finding your news in the newspaper, you miss it when it isn't there.

You depend on the Grosse Pointe News for information on community meetings. School sports. The level of Lake St. Clair. Those fantastic classified ads. And we've been cranking that information out for 45 years.

A lot of things have changed in that time. Our first issues cost three cents, $1.50 for the year. Things must have been up and down, because within six weeks, the price jumped to $2 and five cents for a single copy, an over-optimistic amount that dropped to $1 six months later.

The Grosse Pointe News was born to turbulence. It was threatened with a lawsuit before the first copy rolled off the press. Publisher Robert B. Edgar, with the best of intentions, baptized his infant paper "The Grosse Pointer," infringing on a title already sanctified to the Yacht Club newsletter.

"The offices of the Grosse Pointe News, a welter of hustle and bustle trying to get out its first issue yesterday afternoon, was thrown into a state resembling panic" when the Yacht Club's letter arrived, Edgar wrote.

But the real issue of the day was the national election, held two days before the Nov. 7, 1940, publication date. A bold 96-point headline (journalese for BIG) screamed across the entire top of the front page that more Pointers had voted than ever before. A huge photo caught Edsel Ford arriving early at the polls.

The News was fascinated with celebrities. "New Paper Makes Bow in Thick of Social Season," announced a headline on the top of page four, the society page. Here we learn that Mrs. Mead and Mrs. Bartemeier are visiting in Akron and Mrs. Templeton will entertain the music appreciation group.

A later issue focuses on a real celebrity: Elsa Maxwell, about to visit the Woods with her champagne-dispensing mechanical cow.

Even political events took on a social tinge. When Matilda Dodge Wilson was appointed lieutenant governor, a large headline gushed that the staff envied her silver fox furs, while in tiny print was stated the fact that Wilson was the first woman in Michigan history to hold a major office.

"The first woman to hold a major state office, Mrs. Wilson made a stunning appearance when she greeted the governor. . . . She was dressed in a black dress and feather-trimmed hat and wore two superb silver fox furs that were the envy of the governor's corps of secretaries and stenographers."

Wilson pronounced herself "extremely pleased" with the meeting and told her fellow officials, "I will not spend any more time in Lansing unless I am needed here." Proponents of a part-time legislature would be delighted with her attitude.

But let us not think that the Grosse Pointe News was frivolous. Early on, it started a crusade about traffic problems in the Pointes. Week after week, traffic accidents and deaths were front-page news. The paper attacked the licensing procedure, which allowed children of 14 to get a driver's license with less trouble than it took an adult to get a streetcar conductor's certificate.

The News even went out on a limb with a story charging that Grosse Pointe parents shielded their children from the police and were to blame in the spate of auto accidents. The Farms police chief is quoted as saying that "the base of the trouble lies with short-sighted parents who either are too lazy to take their boys and girls to task, or simply don't care where they go, how they drive, or what they do. Parents who pamper their children by allowing them to drive cars without a thorough understanding of the dangers thereof are criminally and morally slackers of the worst type." The article went on to say that Grosse Pointe had become too involved in cocktail parties to adhere to the tradition of family discussions.

Hot stuff for a community newspaper. But it never neglected the role it prides itself on today — that of community booster. Pages were devoted to high school sports and community events. Economic development, fire and police protection, and school news filled the pages, crowding even news of the war in Europe.

Today the Grosse Pointe News has seven writers. We cover the police and fire beats in all five Pointes twice a week and attend every municipal meeting, but the biggest part of our coverage is still the community. Detailing the efforts and successes of its individuals is the paper's way of taking an accurate community pulse. It's a record of the rhythms of life from birth to death.

POINTES BREAK BUILDING RECORD

Home Construction Here Shatters All Marks for Permits

Statistics Furnished by School District Survey Show Area is Growing at Rate of Better Than 2500 Annually

Residential home construction thus far in 1940 in Grosse Pointe has equaled 1939's twelve-month total — and in 1939 there were more new homes built than in the full six year period, 1930 through 1935.

Such was the startling figure given out at the Grosse Pointe Board of Education offices yesterday. The schools tabulate home and other building permits from each of the five municipalities each month.

More Than 700 Homes Through November 30, permits for 716 new homes had been issued in the Grosse Pointe school district compared to 718 in the full calendar year of 1939. The 1939 total was passed a few days later.

The permits total for 718 homes last year was slightly in excess of the total for the six-year period at the beginning of the decade. In 1932, 1933 and 1934, building fell off almost to nothing after the high rate in the 1920s. In 1936, there was a marked upturn to more than 500. 1938 saw 396 permits, a high figure but one which was nearly doubled in 1939.

The average Grosse Pointe family, according to the School Board's statistics, has three and eight-tenths members. On that basis, the school district's population is increasing well over 2500 persons per year. "Is it any wonder that even though practically every one of our school buildings has been built in the last fifteen years, we still have some crowded schools?" Charles A. Parcells, president of the School Board, said, when asked to comment on the figures. "Only two of our nine school buildings were built before 1925 and they are our two smallest schools — Vernier and Kerby."

Mr. Parcells said that the defeat at the last state election of the proposal to permit school bond issues to run 15 years, instead of five years as now, was especially unfortunate for rapidly growing communities like Grosse Pointe. The proposals carried in Grosse Pointe, except in Grosse Pointe Woods, in the state as a whole, however, it was defeated five to four. More than 2300 new homes have been built in the Grosse Pointe school district in the last four years.

Debuts To Brighten Gay Social Season

Heavy Calendar Gets Underway with Ann Barrett's Bow to Society at Tea on December 20

The Yuletide season will be considerably brightened by the debuts being made here in the Pointe.

The festivities will begin on December 20, when Ann Barrett will bow to society at the tea which her mother, Mrs. Wyman D. Barrett, will give in their home on Vendome road. That evening Peggy Farr will be honor guest at the dinner which Mr. and Mrs. John Owen, III, and Miss Mary Woodruff are giving for her in the Little club. The climax of the day will be the Christmas ball in the Country club, given for Amy Pittman by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin K. Hoover.

The twenty-first will find Pixie Hamilton making her initial bow at a tea given by her grandmother, Mrs. William P. Hamilton, in her home on Beverly road. That same evening, the coming-out party of Lettie Barbour will be held in the Country club, with Lettie's mother, Mrs. Willard Barbour, as hostess.

Both Ann Donald and Sally Chapin are making their debuts on the Thursday after Christmas. Ann will be presented at a tea by her mother, Mrs. Douglas Donald, in their home on St. Paul, and Sally will make her bow at a dinner in her home on Lakeshore.

Mrs. Leslie Weary is presenting her daughter, Leslie, at a luncheon in her home on Balfour on Friday, December 27, and the debut set will move on to another party given for Pixie Hamilton in the Little club that night.

The gayety will continue on through December 30, which is the date for Ann Brown's luncheon, given by Mrs. Alfred D. LaFerte, of Touraine road.

Woods to Be Hosts To Elsa Maxwell

Many Pointers Excited Over Scheduled Country Dance to Be Given in D.A.C.; British Air Commander Coming for Events

Miss Elsa Maxwell arrives in Detroit and Grosse Pointe this week to amuse (and thrill) the young marrieds and others. The young marrieds are mentioned especially, because Friday night, the D. A. C. is giving a first dinner dance for them.

Miss Maxwell and her mechanical cow, who revolts with champagne instead, will supervise the entertainment.

Room To Be Barn The whole dining room will be decorated as the inside of a farm chestra will play for the square dances. There's to be an amateur floor show.

Mr. and Mrs. Gar Wood have claimed the honor guest as theirs for the weekend. Val and Phil Wood have invited a large group to sit at their table with Miss Maxwell, at the party. The cocktail party which was scheduled to be held in their home on Grand Marais preceding the dinner, has been cancelled. Commander and Mrs. John Powle will not arrive until late, so the proposed cocktail party will merge into the dinner party.

Commands Air Force Commander Powle has been in Ottawa to supervise the purchase of war planes. He is the commander of the British Royal Air Force, from London, England. The other guests include Val's sister, Renee Renaud and her fiance, Dan McDuffee, of Toledo. Ginny Rabaut and Art Rhode, Mr. and Mrs. Glendon Roberts, G.A. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Keller, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Firstone of Cleveland.

Service Held In Theatre

St. James Lutherans Complete Plans for Worship

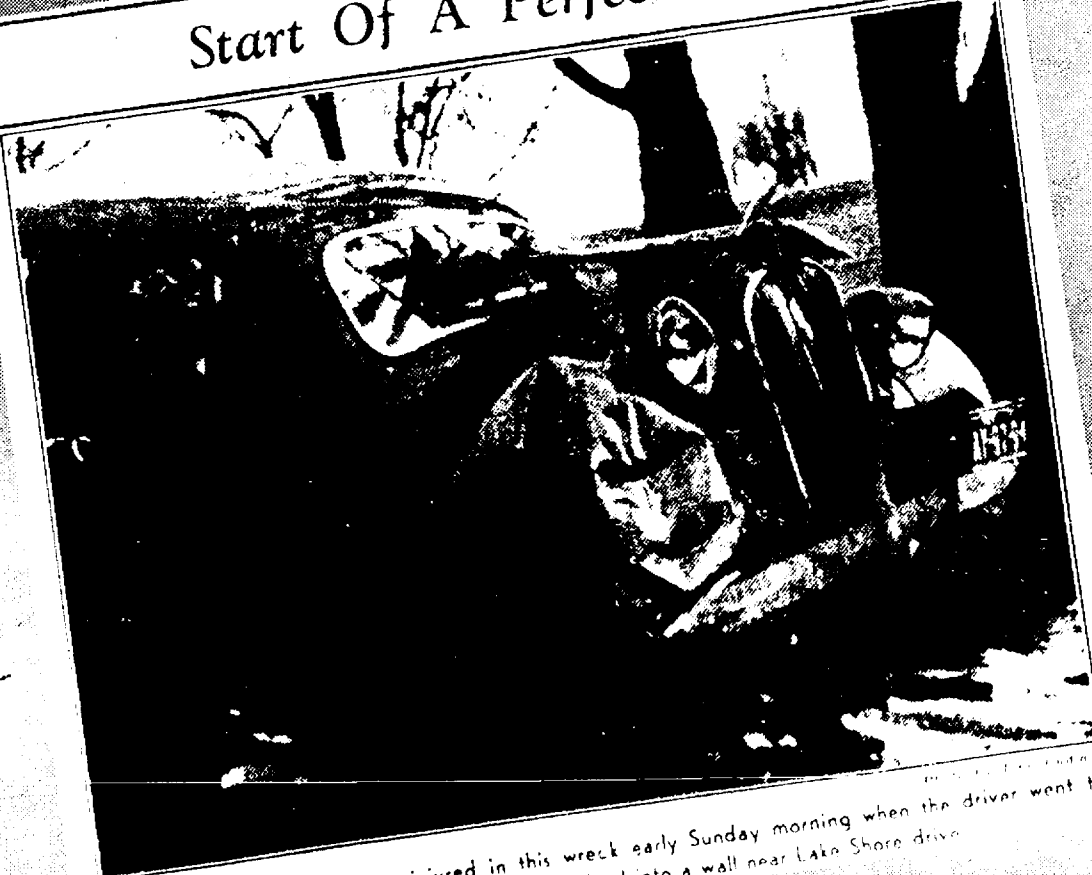

The special Thanksgiving Day Service of St. James Lutheran Church in Grosse Pointe, held at the Punch and Judy Theater, was received with such favorable response by the members, that a resolution was adopted to continue holding all the Sunday services at the Punch and Judy. In closing proper negotiations with the owners and manager of the theater, the congregation has received hearty co-operation and encouragement.

Since last February, the congregation has been holding its services in the Auditorium of Grosse Pointe High School. The move to the Punch and Judy is an important step forward for the local Lutherans. The theater supplies them with an organ, provides a comfortable and conducive place in which to worship, eliminating the coldness of a large school plant, and, most important to all, it brings the congregation much closer to its recently purchased property (McMillan Road, Gabriel Richard School), taking it into the very shadow of its church-site.

Sunday worship at the Punch and Judy, McKinley and Kercheval, began last Sunday, December 1, with close to a hundred attending. The attendance at the Thanksgiving service in the theater was one hundred and five. The offering of that service being $270. Services are at 11 a. m. Sunday school, also in the theater, is at 9.45 a. m. Visitors are welcome. Sermon subject next Sunday: "Prepare to Meet Him."

Pirates on Lake St. Clair?

Yep, and they belong to the Grosse Pointe Sail Club. It was the final contest of the season of the Tuesday night sundown races which meant it was also the annual dress-up night. And those sailors certainly expressed themselves. There were Coneheads ala "Saturday Night Live" and one man was attired in evening wear — from the waist up. He completed his ensemble with swimming trunks and docksiders.

Law, lawyers in documentary

The complex world of law and lawyers will be explored in the new documentary film, "No Law without Lawyers," to premiere on Channel 56 (WTVS), tonight, Sept. 12, at 8:30 p.m.

Produced by award-winning Detroit film-makers Sue Marx and Pam Conn, photographed and edited by award-winner Lawrence Marshall, the documentary features former Michigan Supreme Court Justice John Voelker. Under the pseudonym of Robert Traver, Voelker authored "Anatomy of a Murder," a best-selling novel on which the 1959 film, starring James Stewart and Lee Remick, is based.

The new documentary was commissioned and is being released for television by the State Bar of Michigan as part of its 50th anniversary celebration.

"No Law without Lawyers" takes its viewers on a journey through the complex world of law as seen through the eyes of lawyers at work. The film eavesdrops on actual conversations between attorneys and their clients and documents actual courtroom dramas.

Viewed close-up in the film are Michigan lawyers in differing environments and types of practice, from the small-town lawyer in general practice, to the big city lawyer in a highly computerized law firm, to practitioners working in legal-aid clinics.

The State Bar of Michigan is making the film available on loan and for sale to community groups, law firms and educational institutions. To obtain a copy of "No Law without Lawyers," contact Philip O. Spelman, Director of Communications, State Bar of Michigan, (517) 372-9030, or (313) 689-3762.

Music classes are offered

The War Memorial will offer several music classes this fall, four of which will be taught by Juilliard graduate Doris Pagel.

"Beginning Adult Voice," for students who want to learn proper breath control, presentation, projection, basic theory and sight reading, will meet on Mondays, from 7 to 9 p.m., starting Sept. 9. Cost is $65 for 10 weeks.

An "Opera Workshop," with emphasis on the study and performance of grand opera, will meet on Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p.m. starting Sept. 11. Cost is $65 for 10 sessions, one-half hour per week.

"Special Voice," with emphasis on concert repertoire, will meet on five Thursday evenings, and "Concert Voice" will meet on five Saturday afternoons. Both of these five-week courses cost $55 each and include one-half hour of instruction per week.

"Opera Workshop," "Special Voice," and "Concert Voice," registration is by interview with instructor Pagel. To arrange an interview, call the War Memorial at 881-7511.

Pagel also teaches voice to children on Saturday mornings, and to teens on Monday afternoons after school. Each 10-week course costs $65.

"Fun Guitar," under the direction of Colleen Lough, will be taught to people of all ages and skill levels from Tuesday, Sept. 24, through Oct. 29, 7 to 8 p.m. Students must have their own guitars, whether they be classical, folk or electric. Cost is $20 for six weeks, plus $2 for music.

For additional information on any of these music classes, call 881-7511.

School's open

Grosse Pointe public schools opened their doors last week to 7,352 kids, 14 more than last September, according to a census by the school administration. Saying hello to these kids heading up the steps of Trombly Elementary School are teacher Dorothy Goodfellow, left, and Principal Sheila Joyce, right. While board members praised the ease with which the school year began, the administration is meeting today to look for ways to relieve pressure on some elementary and secondary school teachers who find themselves with larger than normal class sizes.

Fine art exhibit

Local artist Joann Stringari will open her one-week show at Jacobson's Grosse Pointe Store for the Home Friday, Sept. 13, from 7 to 9 p.m.

A native of Chicago, she began her training at the American Academy of Arts in Chicago and continued her studies at the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit. Stringari has studios in Grosse Pointe and Florida.

MACLD to meet Sept. 17

The Grosse Pointe Chapter of the Michigan Association of Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities (MACLD) will hold its first meeting of the year Tuesday, Sept. 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the Grosse Pointe Central Library.

Small business conference planned

The White House Conference on Small Business will hold an open forum in Dearborn, Friday, Sept. 20, at the Hyatt Regency.

The purpose of the conference is to increase public awareness of the contributions of small business and to identify its problems, to examine the status of women and minorities as small business owners, to assist small business in its role as the nation's major job creator, to develop recommendations for government action and to review the status of the recommendations adopted at the 1980 conference.

Registration will begin Thursday, Sept. 19, from 5 to 9 p.m. and will continue Friday, Sept. 20, at 7 a.m. The one-day conference program begins at 8:30 a.m.

Dr. Linda Clinard will speak about "Parents, Teachers and Children: Interpreting Reading Strengths and Weaknesses Together." Clinard is author of "The Reading Triangle: Parents Can Help Children Succeed in Reading." She is also an instructor at Michigan State University.

MACLD is a support and advocacy group for parents of learning-disabled children. They meet on the third Tuesday of each month for informational programs. Members and non-members are welcome at all meetings. For more information, call Jamie Wolff at 343-9168.

Foreign Exchange Club will meet

The Foreign Exchange Club at South High School will hold an information meeting Wednesday, Sept. 18, at 7:30 p.m. in Cleminson Hall to explain summer and fall year high school exchange programs.

Representatives from American Field Service and Rotary International will outline their programs and applications will be available.

Students from all Grosse Pointe area high schools who are interested in a January or September 1986 year program or a 1986 summer program should plan to attend. Parents are also invited.

More information can be obtained from AFS Representative Ann Nicholson, 884-4637.

Parent-child time at YMCA

The YMCA's Indian Program is a parent-child activity that provides a framework for a parent to devote a modest amount of time to his or her child doing things, such as tribal meetings, crafts, games, Indian Lore, campouts, horseback riding, parades, skating parties and more.

Learn about the program at South High School Monday, Sept. 16, or Tuesday, Sept. 17, at 7:30 p.m. A drawing will be held for a Cabbage Patch doll and a fishing rod and reel. Those who can't attend can call the Lakeshore Family YMCA, 23401 E. Jefferson in St. Clair Shores, 778-5811.

Art teacher in exhibit

Robert Rathbun, head of the Art Department at South High, had two of his works accepted for display at the 1985 Michigan State Fair Fine Arts Exhibit.

An oil painting, "Fascinating Rhythm," and a drawing, "Absorbing Life," were exhibited from Aug. 23 to Sept. 2.

There's one one real fjord on the Atlantic Coast of the United States — Somes Sound. It splits Mount Desert Island for six miles in Maine's Acadia National Park.

Cinema League

The Grosse Pointe Cinema League will open its fall season with "Let's Cruise Around South America!", an 8mm movie by Pierre and Elfrida Palmertier, two of its founders and past presidents, when it meets in the War Memorial Fries Auditorium Monday, Sept. 16, at 8 p.m.

This is the first film showing of a three-month cruise made last year, completely around South America, from Port Everglades, Fla. and return.

There are views of historic San Juan, Puerto Rico; Willemstad, Curacao; and Cartagena, Colombia. Of special interest are the Cuna Indians on the San Blas Islands, and an eight-hour transit through the Panama Canal. Magnificent buildings and local entertainment are shown in Lima, Peru, and in Chile there are views of the snowcapped Andes and the superb Emerald Lakes at Puerto Montt.

At the bottom tip of South America, a dramatic two-day transit is made through the Straits of Magellan, from ocean to ocean, which took Ferdinand Magellan 38 days to accomplish.

Beautiful Buenos Aires with its many lovely parks, and a launch trip in Argentina on the Parana River are photographed, and wonderful beaches in Montevideo, Uruguay are shown. Rio de Janeiro at Carnival Time and other Brazilian cities of special interest are filmed. In French Guiana, the seldom-visited, infamous penal colony of Devils Island provides unusual scenes. The movie ends with St. Vincent in the Windward Islands.

The program is open to the public, with a $1 fee for non-members of the Cinema League.

Camera club

The Grosse Pointe Camera Club will meet Tuesday, Sept. 17, at 7:45 p.m. at Brownell Middle School, 260 Chalfonte, in the Farms.

Along with the color print and nature slide competition, a mini-program by Lee Maschmeyer on "Slide Binding" will be featured. Visitors are welcome. Call 822-1948 for more information.

GP Breathers Club

For the patient with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, the simple act of breathing can easily become a laborious chore. Find out how breathing can be made easier by attending Breathers Club, sponsored by the American Lung Association of Southeastern Michigan at 2:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 16, at the Bon Secours Calvary Senior Center, 4950 Gateshead, Detroit.

George Holtzman, RRT, will present the topic "Techniques for Controlling Shortness of Breath."

Breathers Club meets the third Monday of each month and is a free community service of the Lung Association in cooperation with Bon Secours Hospital. Family members and friends are encouraged to attend. For more information, call 961-1697.

GP Singles

Grosse Pointe Singles will resume their regular 1985-1986 fall-winter schedule of meetings on the first, second, third and fifth Friday of each month when the group convenes Friday, Sept. 13, at 7 p.m. in the Library Room of the War Memorial.

The featured speaker will be Gene Kleeman, Chrysler Corporation training instructor for small auto repairs. The topic will be, "Let's Learn How to Diagnose and Repair Troublesome Automobiles."

An Afterglow dance, immediately following the meeting, will be held at the Jefferson Yacht Club, 24505 E. Jefferson, St. Clair Shores, 9:30 p.m. featuring the music of Doug Di Maria.

The membership will be given information about the black tie formal dance to be held later in September, featuring floor show entertainment by the original cast of "Mame" from the Grosse Pointe Theatre Group, under the direction of "Auntie Mame," Lois Bender.

Any single person living in the area is invited to attend both the meeting and the dance. For information, call 882-0316 or 445-1286.

Rummage sale

The Hope Circle of the First English Evangelical Lutheran Church will hold its annual rummage sale and Christmas boutique, along with lunch and refreshments, today, Sept. 12, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The sale will be held at the church, 800 Vernier Road, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Respect

Do you find it hard to gain the respect of others? Does your authority over your children diminish as they get older? Does your boss demand respect that you feel he or she has not earned?

Learn why respect is getting a bad rap these days when Sherwin Wine presents "Respect: Getting It and Giving It," a lecture series at the War Memorial.

The three lectures, sponsored by the War Memorial's Council of Sponsors, will begin with a discussion about respect and how it relates to parents, teachers and children, Wednesday, Sept. 18, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. The cost is $16 for the series, or $6.50 per lecture.

Wine contends that "an egalitarian age has undermined the automatic deference of the past. Parent, teachers and bosses," he says, "are often annoyed by the fact that their subordinates talk to them as equals, challenge their demands, and refuse to obey. Children, students and employees are equally annoyed by the fact that authorities often want respect without earning it and without returning it."

Succeeding lectures will deal with spouses and lovers on Oct. 2, and friends and strangers on Oct. 9.

For additional information on any of these lectures, call the War Memorial at 881-7511.

Craft classes

Stained glass craftswoman Susan Imhoff will present an orientation lecture on the craft Wednesday, Sept. 25, from 9:30 to 11 a.m. at the War Memorial.

This $5 per person lecture, which will include the history of stained glass and its uses today, is a prelude to a full seven-week, hands-on, course to begin Oct. 2.

In the full course students will create a glass panel of their choice working in the copper foil technique. The panel, approximately one square foot in size, will include 235 pieces.

All basic techniques will be taught as well as a demonstration of lead assembly and repairs. No glass experience or art talent is required, although those who wish, may bring their own pattern ideas to the first class.

The cost is $30 plus $45 to $55 for supplies.

An all-day workshop, "Smocked Christmas Egg," for beginners, will be offered by Libby Van de Putte Saturday, Sept. 14, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Students will make a charming geometric ornament that is fun, quick and provides an easy way to learn the basic smocking stitches. Students should bring a scissors and sack lunch. The cost is $10 plus $5 for materials.

To register for either of these craft classes, send full payment to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Drive, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236. To avoid class cancellations, the Center requests students register in advance.

Lansing bus trip

The Council of Catholic Women, Archdiocese of Detroit, is sponsoring a bus trip to Lansing, Thursday, Sept. 26, to attend sessions in the House and Senate, take a tour of the Capitol and meet with various legislators for lunch.

The bus leaves St. Matthew Church parking lot located at Harper and Whittier in Detroit, one block off I-94, at 9 a.m. to return at 6 p.m.

The cost including bus fare and luncheon is $15. Make check payable to CCW/AD and mail to 305 Michigan Avenue, Detroit, Mich. 48226.

For further information, call 237-5896. Deadline for reservations is Sept. 19.

House tours

The International Institute's annual house tour will be held on Sunday, Sept. 22. Tickets are $6 and include admission to five selected houses, each representing an ethnic theme.

Other stops on the tour will carry Greek, Russian and Polish themes.

Tickets for the tour can be purchased at Bed Bath and Linen, 16906 Kercheval in Grosse Pointe; at Carl Stern Menswear, 80 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms; or by contacting the International Institute at 871-8600.

GPW Seniors

The Grosse Pointe Woods Seniors have planned a luncheon and card party for Friday, Sept. 27, at noon at the Hunt Club.

The public is welcome. The $10 donation includes food and table and door prizes. For tickets and information, call Grace Jordan at 882-9123.

Hong Kong film

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Adventure Series will feature Fran Reidelburger's film, "Hong Kong and Macao," Monday, Sept. 23, at 8 p.m. The cost is $4.15.

Armchair travelers will view one of the world's most famous tourist spots and compare modern Hong Kong with its teeming back streets. In Macao, they will see a slice of Portugal with an Oriental flavor.

For those who would like a taste of Hong Kong, an optional regional dinner will precede the film at 6:30 p.m. The menu will include egg roll with plum sauce, almond chicken with Oriental vegetables, jade fried rice, and vanilla ice cream with Lychee ginger sauce. The cost for the complete evening, which includes dinner, gratuity, film and free parking is $16.75.

To reserve space, send a check to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, along with a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and mail it to 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236. Dinner reservations must be made at least three days in advance of the film date.

Financial planning

Johnny and Sally have just entered kindergarten, but they will have the opportunity to attend the college of their choice?

Parents who are concerned may attend the War Memorial's finance class, "Planning For Your Child's Education," on Thursday, Sept. 19, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Cost is $5 per person.

Instructor Sandra G. Yelensky, a certified financial planner, says, "It seems too far off to worry about, but now is the time to plan for the constantly sky-rocketing tuition costs that may reduce your child's choices for a college education."

She projects that the current in-state university cost for room, board and tuition at $7,900 annually, will increase to $11,400 by 1995, taking into account a 5 percent annual inflation rate.

She will discuss trusts, gifts, investments and other strategies geared toward financial planning.

To reserve space, mail $5 to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., 48236.

Armchair research

The Detroit Society for Genealogical Research will hold its first meeting of the season in the Explorers Room of the Detroit Public Library, 5201 Woodward Avenue, Saturday, Sept. 14, at 2 p.m.

"Arm Chair Research," or how to do genealogical research without leaving home, will be presented by Barbara Madison, past president of the Michigan Genealogical Council and former director 1979-1984 of the Federation of Genealogical Societies.

Genealogical supplies and publications will be for sale after the meeting. The public is invited to attend.

PWP meeting

The Grosse Pointe Chapter of Parents Without Partners will meet Friday, Sept. 13, at the K of C Hall, 25303 Little Mack at 10 Mile, St. Clair Shores.

There is an afterglow at 9:30 p.m. The cost is $3.50 for the meeting and afterglow and $5 for the afterglow only.

For more information, call the hotline at 881-0510 or 775-3273.

London trip info offered

A free, no-obligation information night about the War Memorial's London Sojourn Nov. 9-16, will be held at the Center tonight, Sept. 12, at 7:30 p.m.

The trip is custom-designed for those who want to enjoy the theater, museums, Christmas shopping or browsing at a leisurely pace.

During a morning familiarization tour of the city, travelers will see Trafalgar Square, Big Ben, the Houses of Parliament, Whitehall, Scotland Yard, Admiralty Arch, and Buckingham Palace. A stop will also be made at Westminster Abbey for a tour which includes the tombs of many monarchs.

Other mornings will include trips to Piccadilly Circus, Regent Street, Saville Row, the famous Burlington Arcade, Fortnum & Masons, Simpson's, Portobello Road and Harrod's.

Optional tours may be arranged to the Crown Jewels, Windsor, Hampton Court, Canterbury or the Old Vic. Antique enthusiasts may enjoy day trip to Brighton.

A list of the many restaurants and museums will be provided, along with "Town and Country" magazine's suggestions for "Your Own Royal Shopping Spree."

This fully escorted tour includes centrally located first-class hotel, round-trip air fare on British Airways non-stop from Detroit, continental breakfast daily, farewell dinner, portage of one bag per person, and evening theater tickets to two performances.

The cost per person, subject to air fare fluctuations, and based on double occupancy, is $899. An additional $85 is required for single supplement.

Prime Time

another way you can keep your body toned and one that you can relate to more than workouts that make you feel inept and a little silly. After all you haven't had to follow a routine of exercise since you took gym in high school and you probably hated it then.

But there is an exercise which is fun and one you have enjoyed through the years. It is dancing.

As one enthusiast put it: "The exercise is tremendous. I used to do sit-ups at home. That was work. This is fun. Dancing is a great stress remover."

Dancing authority John Lucchese says, "Dancing is a form of active exercise, it involves a social man-woman relationship and is performed in an atmosphere of happiness, music and laughter."

Judy Schwartz, who at 68 is an associate professor of education at New York University, strongly advocates creative dancing for older people.

"The older you get, the less you do," she says and then quotes research that shows that physical, medical and emotional plagues associated with aging are aggravated by inactivity. She believes that all older people can benefit from dance, whether they are healthy or suffering from arthritis, depression or other afflictions.

In her workshop she strives to give participants what she calls "a creative, social and body experience." She encourages them to think, imagine and remember and interact as they build strength, coordination and flexibility.

For instance in a senior center, she may organize traditional square dances or circle dances. She also works in nursing homes where participants are sometimes not lucid. "You can get them to be lucid about the time and people they're remembering," she claims. If someone in the circle is stretching toward the center of the circle, she may ask what they'd like to push away into the circle; loneliness, sickness, pain. Then she may ask what they'd like to pull out of the circle: good health, close friends, pleasant memories. "It gives them a chance to express themselves and to be listened to by the groups," she explains.

Judy Schwartz' concept of creative dance is both a combination of physical and mental therapy. However there are classes in studios and adult education where creative dancing is taught for the joy and exercise it affords.

Most people, when they think of dancing, whether it be for pleasure or exercise or both, think of ballroom dancing. For a long time, older dancers have been disenfranchised when it comes to social dancing. It takes a brave person indeed to get up on the floor and cavort to the disco beat.

But their times have rolled around again. The big bands and those familiar tunes of the '40s are coming back. Dancers, old and young, are swinging to Benny Goodman music and loving it.

The music of swing and sway was revived in 1978 by a former Artie Shaw bassist, Al Ham, on his radio program "The Music of Your Life." It was an enormous success and soon after other stations were featuring the music of the '40s and '50s. It was enjoyed by listeners of all ages.

Older people welcome the return of swing. The music they knew and danced to is back, which means that there is no longer any excuse for not enjoying one of the easiest and most enjoyable forms of exercise. Exercise classes and video tapes are all right but they won't give you the same lift as "In the Mood," Chattanooga Choo Choo, "String of Pearls" or "American Patriot."

CITY OF Grosse Pointe Park MICHIGAN ORDINANCE NO. 115

AN ORDINANCE TO AMEND CHAPTER 2, SECTIONS 2-247, 2-248 AND 2-252, OF THE CODE OF GROSSE POINTE PARK TO INCREASE TO FIVE THOUSAND ($5,000) DOLLARS THE CEILING ABOVE WHICH PURCHASES AND SALES OF CITY PROPERTY MUST BE COMPETITIVELY BID.

THE CITY OF GROSSE POINTE PARK ORDAINS:

1. That Section 2-247 of the Grosse Pointe Park City Code, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 2-247. Purchases or contracts of five thousand dollars or less.

"Purchases of supplies, materials or equipment, the cost of which is five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) or less, may be made in the open market but such purchases shall, where practicable, be based on at least three (3) competitive bids and shall be awarded to the lowest competent bidder. The purchasing agent may solicit bids verbally or by telephone, or may contact prospective bidders by written communication. Where bids are solicited by written communication, a request for such bids shall also be posted in City Hall. A record shall be kept for six (6) months of all open market orders and the bids submitted thereon, which records shall be available for public inspection. Any or all bids may be rejected."

2. That the first paragraph of section 2-248 of the Grosse Pointe Park City Code, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 2-248. Purchases or contracts over five thousand dollars.

"Any expenditure for supplies, materials, equipment, construction project or contract obligating the city, where the amount of the city's obligation is in excess of five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) shall be governed by the following provisions:"

3. That section 2-252 of the Grosse Pointe Park City Code, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 2-252. Sale of property.

"Whenever any city property, real or personal, is no longer needed for corporate or public purposes, the same may be offered for sale. Personal property not exceeding five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) in value, may be sold for cash by the purchasing agent upon approval of the city manager after receiving quotations or competitive bids therefore for the best price obtainable. Property with a value in excess of five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) may be sold after advertising and receiving competitive bids, as provided in section 2-248 and after approval of the sale has been given by the council."

4. This ordinance shall take effect on: September 25, 1985.

Orchestra auditions continue

Young musicians aspiring to professional careers can audition for the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra, a pre-professional training orchestra for music students.

Auditions continue through Sept. 21 at Ford Auditorium before a panel of the music director and certain members of the Detroit Symphony. Students accepted will participate in a nine-month, four-concert season, with weekly Saturday afternoon rehearsals.

Operating under the auspices of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the Civic Orchestra is led by Music Director Michael Krajewski. Successful members will receive tuition-free orchestral training through concerts and weekly rehearsals, sectional coaching sessions with Detroit Symphony musicians and rehearsals with noted conductors such as Detroit Symphony Music Director Gunther Herbig.

In addition, certain eligible Civic Orchestra members receive private lessons from Detroit Symphony musicians, assistance in obtaining instruments to play, and scholarships to summer music camp. Again this season, the Civic Orchestra will spend a weekend at Interlochen. At the invitation of Bruce Galbraith, director of the Interlochen Arts Academy, Civic members will spend Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 11 and 12, at the Academy, participating in master classes and attending a performance by students there.

The orchestra will also give a Saturday evening concert, led by Krajewski. In addition, the orchestra will perform Thursday, Jan. 16, at the 41st Annual Midwestern Conference on School Vocal and Instrumental Music in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Founded in 1983, the Civic Orchestra's aim is to provide advanced musical training for career-oriented musicians. Special emphasis is placed on discovering and developing the talents of minority musicians. Membership in the Civic Orchestra is open to any musician currently participating in a Michigan high school or college orchestra who is seriously interested in receiving professional career training.

Field day fun!

The event was the 44th Annual Police and Fireman's Field Day held recently at Brownell Middle School. The weather was perfect, as the hundreds of children and parents who attended can attest. There was free cotton candy, hot dogs, pop and ice cream, and Grosse Pointe's finest provided 10 boys' and 10 girls' bicycles, along with Big Wheels and other prizes. In charge of the drawing was retired City Fire Chief Tom Trombley, (with microphone), assisted by firefighter Ed Berend.

CITY OF Grosse Pointe Park MICHIGAN
ORDINANCE NO. 114

AN ORDINANCE TO AMEND CHAPTER 24 OF THE CODE OF GROSSE POINTE PARK TO PROHIBIT THE SALE, STORAGE, OR DELIVERY OF DISEASED ELM WOOD.

THE CITY OF GROSSE POINTE PARK ORDAINS:

1. That the Grosse Pointe Park City Code, is hereby amended by adding a section, to be numbered 24-30, which section reads as follows:

"Section 24-30. Storage, Sale or Delivery of Diseased Wood.

"No person shall store, sell, deliver or bring into the City wood from any elm tree to be used as firewood or for any other purpose, unless the bark has been completely removed from the wood.

2. This ordinance shall take effect on September 25, 1985.

N.J. ORTISI

always agree. But we do try to prevent hard feelings.

"But progress is being made at the contract table and we're hopeful that both sides will reach a settlement quickly," Kressbach said. "That's one of the reasons I'm declining a chance to be more specific."

The base salary of a sergeant in the city currently is $29,820. For lieutenants, the base is $31,770. Both additionally receive a guaranteed cost-of-living allowance of $1,000.

Punch . . .

He declined to put a definite time limit on the negotiations, but said he was hopeful that they could be completed in a matter of weeks.

"It's up to you people now," he told Crawford and Edgar. "It's an imaginative plan, but you and your group haven't put your full imaginations to work on the parking problem. I think it can be done."

The developers say they are faced with time constraints because of the deteriorating condition of the building, which has boiler and roof problems. "We'll give it our best shot," Edgar told the council, "but we're running out of time."

and the Sun Messengers will offer big band jazz sounds with complex Afro-Caribbean rhythms from 8:10 to 9:10 p.m.

Free parking for the evening is available behind the Normandie Building.

Be there or be square.

Collectibles

If your basement is anything like mine, then you probably have no less than 12,000 soft drink cans stored between the furnace and the laundry room.

If you too are awash in a sea of aluminum, then help is only a phone call away, according to Michael Marontate, Shores resident and chief barker of the Variety Club of Detroit.

Cans for Kids, a fundraising project of the club, has expanded its collection period through September. Michigan beverage consumers (that sounds so much nicer than beer guzzlers) are being asked to donate their empty 10-cent deposit returnable cans to the project. Church, youth, business and civic organizations are especially encouraged to collect cans for the campaign.

Proceeds will benefit the Variety Club Electronic Limb Research Center at the Detroit Institute for Children. It's one of the few in the nation providing lifelike myoelectric prosthesis hands and arms to those needing them.

For more information, contact Pat Morgan at 259-7400. She'll make arrangements for pick up.

Let's get off our collective cans and help the kids.

Woods celebrates 35

Members of the Detroit Police Department's Mounted Division were, as usual, great favorites of the crowd. Among the dignitaries at the festivities were Wayne County Executive William Lucas and his wife Evelyn, who spent a few minutes speaking with Woods resident Jerry Swan. Speaking briefly to the crowd, Lucas promised he'd return to celebrate the Woods' 70th anniversary if he was asked.

Park residents invited

Park residents are invited to hear how the plans are progressing on the new Windmill Pointe Park Activity Center Tuesday, Sept. 17.

Charles S. Tompkins Sr., president of the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation, which initiated the project, will outline the plans at an informal wine and cheese party at the old bath house at the southwest corner of Windmill Pointe Park beginning at 8 p.m.

"This will be a good time for Park residents to meet the officers and trustees of the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation," said Tompkins, "as well as to tell us what other projects they would like to see get under way to improve the Park.

Since the foundation was established last year, $25,000 has been raised toward the goal of $250,000 to complete the new activity center, which will include a game room, audio-visual room, a kitchen and snack area. Renovation also includes expansion of the maintenance area. The year-round center will be available for any Park group wishing to reserve it.

There is no charge for the wine and cheese party, but space is limited. Call Shirley Kennedy for reservations, at 823-0392 or 884-5700.

Two arrested in break-in

Two people were arrested by Park police last week in connection with a break-in early Sunday morning, Sept. 1, in the 1300 block of Kensington.

Another resident on the street called police at about 12:06 that morning to report the break-in occurring at a nearby home. Police searched the area and called Detroit police to request a tracking dog.

Officers found a car they believe was being used by the thief occupied by a young woman, who was then arrested for possession of stolen property and subsequently released pending further investigation.

The next day, a 21-year-old Detroit man was arrested at the Park police station after reportedly turning himself in and confessing to the crime, police said. He was being held in Wayne County Jail pending examination in Municipal Court Tuesday.

Born Center expands service

In the fall of 1982, Born Center opened its doors to a select group of handicapped adults in Macomb County with a full day treatment facility in St. Clair Shores. Sponsored by St. Clair Shores Adult Education and Community Mental Health, the facility has served almost 400 clients to date.

Beginning in September 1985, the special needs program at Born Center will become available to all interested and eligible handicapped adults in the Wayne, Oakland, and Macomb area.

With so many disabled people sitting at home, this is a program for shaping behaviors and social, academic and vocational skills.

Sept. 16 begins the fall session. The program is a non-profit venture and is offered at no cost to clients and even includes a free hot lunch.

For any further information, call Born Center at 293-7310.

Cancer screening

During September, the Michigan Cancer Foundation will hold two screenings for cancer at the East Regional Service Center in Warren.

A pap test will be held Monday, Sept. 16 and a breast exam is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 30. Conducted by specially-trained nurses, the pap test costs $8 and the breast exams are $15.

Located at 15111 Thirteen Mile at Hayes Road, in Warren, the East Regional Service Center serves cancer patients, their families and members of the communities of eastern Wayne and Macomb counties.

For more information or to make an appointment, call the center at 294-4430, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. MCF is a torch drive agency.

Society to host walking tour

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society will host a walking tour of some of the area's historic sites Sunday, Sept. 22, from 2:30 to 5 p.m.

Guided by Barbara Emmons and Lucy Hamilton, society members and friends will leave St. Paul's Church parking lot at 2:30 p.m. and will be taken by bus from there to each of the points of interest. The women will present an overview of French historic sites, and stops will include St. Paul's Church, the Nuns Walk, Grosse Pointe Academy, Wardwell House, Cadieux House, the Oxford Gatehouse, St. Paul's Cemetery and Provencal House.

It is particularly fitting that the historical society's opening tour of 1985 should include the Grosse Pointe Academy, since 1985 marks the centennial of the Academy's buildings and grounds. The Academy property was originally settled by the French who established long narrow "ribbon farms" which stretched from the lake shore inland.

In the late 1800s, Grosse Pointe became the summer home for many Detroit families who subdivided the ribbon farms. The Grosse Pointe Academy property is one of the last remaining lake-shore sections of its size, and the buildings and grounds are in the process of being nominated for registration in the National Register of Historic Places and the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Fee for the tour is $2 for Grosse Pointe Historical Society members; $4 for non-members. Checks should be made payable to the Grosse Pointe Historical Society and mailed to the Society's office, Room 105, 1275 Cook Road, Grosse Pointe, Mich. 48236. Advance registration is required.

For information, call 884-7010.

First English plans rally

This Sunday, Sept. 15, is Sunday School Rally Day at First English Lutheran Church located at Vernier and Morningside in the Woods. It is a day to give thanks for the opportunity to learn and the freedom to express our faith.

The celebration will begin at 9:10 a.m. with family worship followed by a Sunday School open house with punch and cookies in the Fellowship Hall at 10 a.m. This will afford an opportunity to meet the teachers and Parish Education Committee and learn about the school year activities. There will also be a puppet play for children.

At 10:40 a.m. everyone will be invited outside for a balloon lift-off. The church bells will ring as the balloons are let loose.

At the 11 a.m. worship hour, there will be a special service of installation for Sunday School teachers and staff. Following worship there will be a family cookout. Everyone is invited to come and eat hot dogs and play group games. There will also be a horse or two from the Hunt Club for the children to ride.

9th grade parents to meet at North

All parents of freshmen students at North are invited to attend Ninth Grade Parents' Night, Wednesday, Sept. 18, at 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria.

Speakers on freshmen activities, policies and procedures will begin the evening to be followed by an opportunity for parents to meet with their freshman's counselor in small groups. Parents are encouraged to attend as new items specifically relating to freshmen will be discussed.

Eligibility requirements: Motivators or misguided zeal?

more of our kids are getting a chance to go to college."

In Jackson, Mich., athletic teams first came under more stringent academic standards, with the requirements extended to all extracurricular activities a semester later, according to Athletic Director Dennis Kiley. Students have to maintain a 2.0 overall grade point average or they become ineligible for the next grading period, he adds.

Kiley says he put together the standard for the athletic teams, "because I got tired of being accused of using kids for athletics." Parents complained their kids couldn't handle the academic load of college and decided it was the fault of the athletic department, he adds.

The rules apply to students in special education programs and there have been no problems there, Kiley says. A core curriculum has been established by the school system as well, eliminating a number of easy electives.

For a while, Kiley says he tried to offer a tutorial program for athletes declared ineligible but didn't get enough students to take part in the program to make it work.

The requirements have worked though, Kiley says. "Initially, you lose a few kids. With the demands of today's society, these kids have to be able to do more than read and write. When he or she goes out into the world and gets a job, there are going to be certain demands placed on that person. If you can't meet them, your boss isn't going to keep you around."

"I think we're getting kids ready for the real world by demanding that they keep themselves in line," he adds. "Basically, the kids know what they need to do academically and they go out and do it."

Last week marked the beginning of the second full school year that South Lake Public Schools in St. Clair Shores has had eligibility requirements for students who want to take part in extracurricular activities, according to South Lake High School Principal Constance Matthai. The school system started the program during its second marking period of the 1983-84 school year, she adds.

To participate in activities that require more than three hours a week, a South Lake high school student has to have passed all classes during the previous marking period or become ineligible, Matthai says.

Grading periods are 10 weeks long, she adds.

The district hasn't noticed any increased drop-outs or students' choice of easier classes, Matthai says. A review committee has been established to look over the workings of the program.

Although it takes more administrative time to work under the new policy, there have been pay-offs. "We have seen an increase in the concern for academics, in certain cases by team members and coaches looking out for students," Matthai says. The number of students ruled ineligible dropped last year from the year before, she adds.

"We are concerned with student education and learning here," Matthai says. "We are all aware of the potential athlete for whom participation in sports would be beneficial and who could be discouraged in that involvement by the policy. Their purpose is to get an education... and that concern outweighs the discouragement."

There have been complaints from the coaching staff that the school's teams are less competitive in league play because of the tougher standards, Matthai adds. But those same coaches are the ones that might have students show up at their classwork or help them find a tutor to help them with the classwork. "Most students fail classes because they don't do the work," she says.

Since the policy was enacted, a good support system was evolved to help students with academic problems, Matthai says.

There aren't many Grosse Pointe athletes who are doing poorly academically, according to South's Hollosy. The average athlete probably carries a grade point average of between 2.5 and 3.0, a C- to B, he adds.

Hollosy says he can only remember two or three cases of a student being ruled ineligible for sports because of bad grades in his tenure at the school. Athletic teams don't normally get students who carry very low grade point averages, he adds.

He concedes that there are students who fall at both ends of the grading scale, but those who are doing poorly are pointed out to coaches, who try to work out a personal approach to get the student back on track in the classroom, Hollosy says.

Kids who take part in athletics at South realize that college sports are for a select few and the chances of getting a sports scholarship are not good, Hollosy says. Good grades are the students' way into college and most know it, he adds.

"Home is the major pressure point," Hollosy says. "It's really the parents who control whether an athlete plays or not."

Parents have been known to pull kids from teams because of poor academic performance, he adds.

Academic eligibility has been a topic of discussion for a couple years for the North Athletic Advisory Committee, according to Athletic Director Gauerke. That committee, made up of students, parents and coaches, has decided that, while academic standards should remain high, it is up to parents to make sure their kids keep their grades up, not the athletic department.

"Generally, the feeling (of the committee) was that we should have high standards," Gauerke says. "Individual standards should be set by the family, not by the school system. To make a blanket policy for all students is a problem."

"Very, very few athletes have performed at an academic level so low that they have become ineligible," he adds.

The Bi-County League, in which North plays, has an All-Academic Team status awarded to students who maintain a 3.0 grade point average or better, Gauerke said. Eighteen of 20 swimmers on last year's girls' swim team made that squad, he adds.

"Improving a student's self-concept and self-image is important," Gauerke says. "If a kid doesn't do well in the classroom and we take away his chance to perform athletically, what does that do for his self-image?"

How the standard is introduced is important, according to North Principal Kastran. In his former school district, students were required to keep a 2.0 average in each of their classes to be eligible for sports and students quickly found out how to get around it.

Six sections of physics at the high school level dropped to two after the standard was set, and similar drops were recorded across the board in all academic areas. The first year of the standards saw a sharp decline in upper-level academic courses, a trend that continued until he left the district to become North's principal, Kastran adds.

The reason his former district instituted the tougher academic standards was because of accusations that the system was using students for athletics and not worrying about academic performance, he adds.

The "dumb jock" image of an athlete is a misnomer, Kastran says. Studies show that athletes are often better students than those who don't become involved in school activities. Also to be considered is the "late bloomer" phenomenon, where a student won't hit academic stride until after high school, he adds.

While an education is an important goal of a high school, some surveys show that as many as 80 percent of high school students attend classes for the social opportunities available, Kastran says. A high school has to do things to keep students in the classroom and interested so they get that education.

"I don't think it would (work) in this community," Hollosy says of eligibility standards. "We just don't have that many kids in that category."

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Colonial Federal Savings and Loan Association of Grosse Pointe Woods has received approval for Merger Conversion with Central State Savings Bank and form the resulting institution of Colonial Central Savings Bank, FSB from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington.

Robert E. Powers, President of Colonial, said information and proxy materials were mailed to the association's customers this past week.

Under the plan of Merger Conversion, final approval by a majority of voting members is expected at a special meeting on September 26, 1985. If the plan is approved, members will not be required to purchase stock, but will have the first option to do so.

"The savers, borrowers, employees, officers and directors of Colonial Federal will be given the opportunity to purchase the first shares of stock in Colonial," Powers pointed out. He said all the remaining stock following this subscription offering would be made available to the general public through a community offering. The price per share of all Central Holding Co. stock to all purchasers in both the subscription offering and the community offering will be the same.

"The additional equity capital received from the stock sale will support the merged association's future growth, increase our ability to provide mortgage loans and expand our services to the community we serve," he said.

Powers noted the "savings account holders will continue to hold accounts in the resulting Savings Bank identical as to dollar amount, rate of return and general terms as presently held.

"Savings account will continue to be insured to $100,00 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, an agency of the United States government.

Following the Merger Conversion, Powers said Colonial Central Savings Bank will operate as a federally-chartered stock association and will maintain its membership in the Federal Home Loan Bank System.

Normal business of the Association in accepting savings and making loans will continue without interruption in its 7 existing offices. Borrowers' loans will be unaffected by the conversion.

Powers said details of the offering and resulting Savings Bank's operations are described in an offering prospectus that will be available from the Association or completion of the following request form. Interested purchasers of stock may obtain the prospectus by completing the following request form or calling Colonial at 886-1080.

Council of Sponsors plans Week of Art

By Elsa Frohman

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Council of Sponsors will treat the community to a "Week of Art," Sept. 20-26. Throughout the week, an exhibit of first class contemporary art will be open in the War Memorial art studio. The exhibition is being provided by Robert L. Kidd Associates/Galleries of Birmingham.

However, the exhibit isn't the only thing the council has in store for the gala week. On Friday, Sept. 20, the Alger House will be the setting for an elegant, black tie preview party.

On Saturday, Sept. 21, there will be a wine and cheese reception from 3 to 7 p.m. Ray Fleming, director of the Kidd Galleries and frequently an art instructor in the Pointes, will be on hand to answer questions about the art.

On Tuesday, Sept. 24, Fleming will give a lecture explaining the appreciation of abstract and contemporary art.

The art exhibit will be open to the public from 1 to 4 p.m., Sept. 23-26. Purchases may be made and a portion of the proceeds from all sales will go to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association.

The Council of Sponsors is a group of Grosse Pointers interested in bringing alternative programming to the community. The council was founded in 1979 as a volunteer unit of the War Memorial. The stated goal of the organization is to supplement the War Memorial's programming with enrichment seminars, lectures and courses which meet the educational, cultural and civic needs of the community.

Some past programs have included "The Collectors," with Andrew Camden, W. Hawkins Ferry and Ann Spivak sharing their collections of modern art; a series of lectures on the history of furniture; the annual Book and Author Luncheon; and a series on Oriental religions.

Margot Kessler, co-chairman of the Week of Art with Audrey Platt, said she wanted to put on the event because she believes there is an interest in the community in contemporary art.

"Last spring we had a gallery tour in Birmingham," Kessler said. "We got a very nice response, even though it was on a Sunday. We thought it would be nice if a gallery came here instead this year."

The Council of Sponsors consists of 11 members who each suggest, then take responsibility for presenting a program. Platt and Kessler have planned all aspects of the upcoming week.

After conceiving of the event, Kessler contacted Fleming at the Kidd Galleries and got an immediate positive response.

"Ray has many friends here," Kessler said. "He has been a teacher at the War Memorial."

Fleming is an artist in his own right and has taught painting in the community.

Musical chairs

Endow a musician in the GP Symphony

By Elsa Frohman

The game of musical chairs will get a new twist this year as the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra establishes its Inner Circle of Musical Chairs. Through this new program, Friends of the Grosse Pointe Symphony can endow a chair in the orchestra — for as little as $150. Those who participate in the program will be guests of the symphony at a gala party at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club on Oct. 4.

George Vincent, chairman of the symphony board, said he thought of the concept of the Inner Circle as an idea that would raise money for the symphony and be fun for the participants at the same time.

"I was trying to come up with a word, phrase or slogan to identify a group of dedicated people who support the symphony," Vincent said.

Vincent hopes that sponsors can be found for 70 chairs in the orchestra. The actual membership of the symphony varies from concert to concert, but an average of about 65 musicians play in each concert. The majority of the musicians come from the eastside and the Grosse Pointes.

"The musicians are paid," Vincent said. "It's very low, but they are paid."

The members of the symphony are amateur musicians who play like professionals, Vincent said. Most have full-time jobs in other fields and play in the orchestra out of their love for music.

"We have people from all types of professions," Vincent said. "We have lawyers, teachers, salesmen, bankers, students and even housewives."

The Grosse Pointe Symphony usually gives four concerts a year at the Parcels Middle School Auditorium. However, this year there will be a fifth concert in April at the Grosse Pointe Performing Arts Center at Grosse Pointe North High School.

The fifth concert will be special, as it is an outgrowth of the orchestra's scholarship fund. Called the Nestor Fund, the scholarship is given to a music student at one of the Grosse Pointe high schools each year. The award is given out through a try-out process.

George Vincent has devoted a great deal of his energy since retirement to the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra. He is the president of the Grosse Pointe Symphony Society.

Each year, the winner of the scholarship plays with the orchestra during one of the regularly scheduled concerts. However, this year, the group found three students deserving the scholarship. Rather than have the three play during regular concerts, a special concert has been scheduled to highlight their special talents.

Vincent said he would like to see more people turn out for the Grosse Pointe Symphony Concerts. In its 33rd year, the symphony represents the special musical heritage of the community.

Vincent pointed out that the group still has one charter member who has played with the symphony throughout its history. Violinist Bernard Whitely has earned himself a special place in the symphony with his long-standing contributions.

This year's regular concerts will be given on Sunday afternoons at 3:30 p.m. The season opener will be on Oct. 27. The theme will be "Americana." Included will be works by Barber, Gershwin, Kay and Gould.

On Jan. 26, 1986, the program will be "Music and the Spirit." Haydn's St. Theresa Mass will be featured, with the cooperation of the Christ Church Men's and Boys' Choir.

On March 9, 1986, the symphony will treat the community to a program that ranges from "Classic to Contemporary." Works of Mendelssohn, Mozart, Rossini and Copland will be featured.

The season closer will be on May 4, 1986, featuring "International Masterpieces." Works by Kabalevsky, Rachmaninoff, Ippolitov-Ivanov, and Kodaly will be on the (Continued on Page 4B)

Scholarship benefit to feature Judelaire's chorus

The 1985 John Lake Scholarship benefit will feature the Judelaire's chorus in a cabaret version of their musical entertainment, "Moods, Rhythm and Blues," in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Crystal Ballroom, on Friday, Sept. 27, at 8 p.m.

"We tried the cabaret format for our fundraiser last fall and it was so well received we decided to have another cabaret," says Mrs. Perry L. TeWalt, chairman of the scholarship planning committee. "There'll be the same cozy atmosphere, complimentary refreshments, and lots of well-remembered standards, like 'Varsity Drag,' 'The Birth of the Blues,' 'Satin Doll' and Hoagy Carmichael songs. It should be a fun evening — and for such a good cause."

The scholarship fund was established a few years ago as an ongoing tribute to the late John Lake, executive director of Grosse Pointe War Memorial from 1952 to his 1982 retirement. Friends and members of several groups and clubs, who wanted to honor Lake for his outstanding contributions to the community, settled on a scholarship as a most appropriate memorial to a man who first came to Grosse Pointe as a high school history teacher.

So far three $1,000 college tuition awards have been given, alternately to graduates of North and South High Schools, with the hope that the fund, through events such as the cabaret, will be built up to the point where two scholarships can be given annually.

The Judelaire's, founded in 1954, a lively show chorus of men and women, have performed widely at benefits, churches, malls, clubs, and in their own annual musical production. Harvey Kahl directs the group and the accompanist is Harold Fortuin. Jim Jeffery is Judelaire's president.

The Judelaire's chorus will sing a program of "Moods, Rhythm and Blues" at the John Lake Scholarship benefit cabaret, Friday evening, Sept. 27, at 8 p.m., in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Crystal Ballroom. Germaine Strobel (seated left) and Jan Michael (center), of the Judelaire's, discuss some of the selections with honorary chairman Mrs. Alger Sheldon (seated right) and committee members William D. Dahling (standing left) and Gerald L. Stotzter (right). General admission is $10, including complimentary refreshments. Advance reservations necessary by Sept. 21; phone 881-9566 for information.

The scholarship planning committee includes, in addition to TeWalt, Fred Adams, Mrs. Bruce K. Bockstanz, Mr. and Mrs.

Cass DAR promotes Constitution Week

The Elizabeth Cass Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, is joining the National Society DAR in sponsoring the week of Sept. 17 to 23 as Constitution Week, and inviting each American to think about the vital force of the Constitution in our lives today.

In just two years America will celebrate the Bi-Centennial of the Constitution, yet its provisions are as fundamental today as when they were first written to establish the form and manner of government of a new nation composed of 13 separate and very different states.

The constitution's endurance derives from its built-in flexibility, permitting change and modernization and its unyielding resolution of purpose. It has been amended many times as attitudes demanded, and will be amended again and again in the future as the American people think necessary. But its guarantee of individual rights and freedom will never change.

The Elizabeth Cass DAR chapter will begin its 1985-1986 season next month on Monday, Oct. 7, at the McKinley Road home of Mrs. Howard Reed.

Dinner-dance is planned for francophiles

On Saturday, Sept. 21, the French Institute of Detroit and the Consul General of France in Detroit, are planning, for all francophiles, a superb dinner dance to be held at the magnificent mansion on the lake, 1100 Lakeshore Road, Grosse Pointe Shores, from 6:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. The cost of this benefit super is $37.50 per person and is all-inclusive. It is tax deductible within the provisions of the law. Evening dress is optional. Reservations must be submitted to Sept. 15. Call 644-4110 for information.

The French Institute of Detroit offers instruction in French, using modern methods developed by the Alliance Francaise for its worldwide network of schools for adults. It is Michigan's only school approved by the Alliance Francaise or Paris. It is a cultural, non-political, non-profit, tax-exempt organization.

This fund-raising soiree, to further the institute's educational endeavors, promises to be an evening full of enchanting delights. Music for dancing and listening will be provided by an excellent rhythmic, versatile, and cosmopolitan orchestra. The supper, preceded by a cocktail hour, will be worthy of the most discriminating palate: vichyssoise, stuffed clam shells, canard a l'orange with wild rice, grilled tomatoes and french wax beans, bibb salad vinaigrette, strawberries Grand-Marnier, and wines — a white Chateau Reynon, a red Domaine de la Chapelle, champagne.

Party-In-The-Park

Grosse Pointer Sue Vittoe, right, and her daughters, Laura and Stephanie, enjoy some musical entertainment during the preview party for the Detroit Artists Market's Party-In-The-Park. The Sept. 13 event will kick off the 1985-86 season for the Detroit Artists Market. The event will carry a superstition and occult theme and will feature a preview of the Detroit Artists' Market exhibition. For tickets, call 962-0337. The party will be held at Harmonie Park one block southwest of Madison on Grand River.

St. Joan launches three-year program for spiritual renewal

St. Joan of Arc Church, St. Clair Shores, will launch a massive, three-year spiritual renewal program called Renew for all interested persons in the area beginning with a sign-up campaign on Sept. 21 and 22, immediately following all masses. A further kick-off will take place Sunday, Sept. 29, with a tree planting at approximately 2:15 p.m., after the 1 p.m. mass.

Renew is different from other programs in that it is a challenge to foster new spiritual growth not just for the 3,500 families at St. Joan, but the entire area — including people outside the parish and those who don't attend church regularly.

The first six-week session of Renew, which starts Oct. 13, is designed to get people together in small groups to pray, reflect and discuss personal renewal.

The Rev. Charles Morris, associate pastor at St. Joan, describes the program as "a faith community coming alive."

Renew originated in Newark, N.J. as a diocesan program involving most of the parishes in the diocese. The program in Newark was extremely successful, involving close to 40,000 people, mostly in small group discussions.

The Renew program is free and will focus on five renewal themes. The first two concentrate on personal renewal — a sort of Catholic self-help program — and the last three turn outward to the needs of the world.

Interested persons may sign up for Renew after the 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. masses on Saturday, Sept. 21, or after the 7 a.m., 9 a.m., 11 a.m. or 1 p.m. masses on Sunday, Sept. 22, at 21620 Mack Ave.

Women's Connection is club for networking and fellowship

The Women's Connection of Grosse Pointe will start off its new year of monthly dinner programs with Dr. Raquel Scheier on Thursday, Sept. 26, at a local private club.

The evening is open to the public at a charge of $13 to members and $15 for non-members. The charge is $4 for the program only.

The deadline for reservations is Sunday, Sept. 22. Socializing and dinner will be from 6 to 8 p.m. with the program following.

Scheier's topic will be "Stumbling Blocks on the Road to Success." Scheier is a psychologist and is director of Women's Programs at Woodside Hospital. The lecture will cover women's dependency on men, drugs, children and parents.

Subsequent speakers will include Dr. Pamela Collier; Barbara Starbridge of Change, Inc.; Betty McKee, Hudson's Fashion Consultant; Selma Fisher, Enrolled Agent, dealing with the IRS; M. Jane Kay, Detroit Edison vice president; Barbara Kroft, psychic; Gerry Ellen Cunningham, holistic health and healing.

The Women's Connection of Grosse Pointe is an organization that welcomes women of all ages, educational backgrounds, work and professional experience. It is committed to supporting and promoting the personal and professional growth of women by offering encouragement, networking, intellectual stimulation and socializing.

Come share the gifts and talents, concerns and frustrations, enthusiasm and dedication of other women.

For further information regarding membership, and the location of the Sept. 26 meeting, contact Bonnie Randolph Gibson at 881-0610.

Wayne Men's Glee Club to sing victory song

The Wayne State University Men's Glee Club, fresh from their triumph at the International Music Festival (Eisteddfod) this summer in Llangollen, North Wales, will perform a victory concert, under the direction of Dr. Harry M. Langford, at 8:15 p.m. Friday, Sept. 13, in Orchestra Hall.

This will be the final concert for the 42-man group which toured Europe, since seniors have already graduated. The Glee Club also sang a brief concert and the National Anthem prior to the Detroit Tiger-Seattle Mariner night baseball game at Tiger Stadium Saturday, Sept. 7.

State Senator Jackie Vaughn III will present a resolution of recognition from the Michigan Legislature in ceremonies during the Orchestra Hall concert. Resolutions honoring the Glee Club will also be presented from Gov. James Blanchard, Wayne County and the City of Detroit.

Money for the European tour by the WSU singers was raised by the Glee Club through concerts performed in the metropolitan area.

Concert tickets at $5 and $3 for students and senior citizens may be purchased at the Orchestra Hall box office and through the WSU Music Department. For ticket information call 577-1795.

Dr. Harry M. Langford of Southfield, director of the Wayne State University Men's Glee Club; Peter Schoenbach of Detroit, chairman of the WSU music department; and Peter Haddad of Grosse Pointe, president of the Glee Club (left to right), display the plaque the Glee Club won at the International Music Festival in North Wales this summer. The group will present a victory concert in Orchestra Hall Friday, Sept. 13.

Engaged

Judith M. Brownell
Brownell-Smith

Dr. and Mrs. Paul C. Brownell of Grosse Pointe Park announce the engagement of their daughter, Judith, to Victor R. Smith, son of Mrs. Angelita Gibson and the late William Thomas Smith of Kettering, Ohio.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Michigan State University with a bachelor or arts degree in Marketing.

The bridegroom-elect is a graduate of the University of Michigan with a bachelor of arts degree in Economics and Finance.

A May 1986 wedding is planned.

Kirlin-Brownell

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Kirlin of Grosse Pointe announce the engagement of their daughter, Jana Armstrong, to Stephen Cummings Brownell, son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Brownell of Raleigh, N.C.

The bride-elect is a graduate of University-Liggett School, Mount Holyoke College and Harvard Business School with an MBA. She is the product manager with Hyland Therapeutics Division of Baxter Travenol Laboratories in Glendale, Calif.

The bridegroom-elect is a graduate of Trinity Preparatory School of Florida, the University of Florida and Harvard Business School with an MBA. He is an associate with Banker Trust Company of Los Angeles.

The couple will marry on Sept. 28, 1985.

The special scholarship concert on April 11, 1986 will feature Stephen King on the trombone, Richard Lupescu on the marimba and Claudia Valsi on the harp.

Vincent and his committee have planned a special evening on Oct. 4 for those who endow a chair. The evening will begin at 6:30 p.m. with cocktails and saxophone entertainment by Mel Stander. Dinner will follow at 7:30 p.m. The highlight of the evening will be a Broadway Revue by the Michigan Opera Theatre. The event will then continue with dancing music by the David Jennings Quartet.

The honorary chairman of the gala are Dr. and Mrs. David Chiera. Honored guests will be Maestro and Mrs. Felix Resnick. Resnick is the symphony's musical director.

Vincent said he got involved in the symphony board after he retired as a tool and die manufacturer.

"It's a lifelong love of good music," Vincent said. "I go to all types of symphonic concerts. I have liked music all my life. I agreed to go on the board when I retired. I've been getting involved in all types of voluntary work. It's something else to keep me busy."

So far, the Inner Circle program has been a great success, Vincent said. People were sending in their endowment checks even before the invitations were mailed out.

The symphony has several other programs for donors. A regular subscription to the concert season is $25.

For the Inner Circle, endowments may be made in the donor's name, in the name of a favored institution, or as a memorial. There are also special categories for the Conductor's Chair, $500; and the Concertmaster's Chair, $300.

The committee for the Inner Circle of Musical Chairs includes Vincent, Mrs. John E. Young, Jr., Mrs. Bogdan Baynert, Mrs. Joseph J. Marshall, Mrs. George C. Vincent, Roy Scharfenberg, Mrs. John J. Nolan, Jr., Mrs. Anthony Vermeulen, Mrs. Michel A. Skaff, Mrs. Robert O. Reisig and Mrs. Joseph N. Jennings.

For more information on the Inner Circle, call 886-6970 or 886-9102.

Week of Art

Fleming said he plans to bring as varied a selection as possible for the exhibit. Some featured artists will be Marvin Liposky, who works in glass; sculptor Harry Bertoia; pianist Phillip Azziz; and many other well-known and emerging artists.

The works on display will be for sale and visitors might consider purchasing something special to benefit the War Memorial. Fleming urges visitors not to be intimidated by the myth that art must be unreasonably expensive.

"Cost is not an issue," he said. "There is quite a bit of contemporary art by emerging artists that is reasonable. Some paintings go for as little as $1,500."

Some people are afraid to purchase art through a gallery because they don't think they know enough about the subject to make a good buy.

"If we only sold to people who are knowledgeable, there wouldn't been that much art sold," Fleming said. "Most people are looking for a piece of beautiful art to go in their living room. The main thing is to buy what you like."

Artists come to the attention of galleries by several methods, Fleming explained. Some submit samples of their art and hope a gallery will take an interest. Others are "discovered" by a gallery.

Among those artists featured at the War Memorial will be Valentina Dubasky, a Kidd Galleries discovery.

"We found her in New York seven years ago," Fleming said. "Now she is gaining a reputation all over the country."

The Week of Art Gallery Gala on Sept. 20 will open the week-long event in elegant style. The invitation-only party will feature a tent at the front entrance of the Alger House with hors d'oeuvres and drinks, then a tour of the exhibit. The evening will continue with dancing to the music of the Phil Gram Combo. Samuel Sachs, the new director of the Detroit Institute of Arts will be an honored guest.

The wine and cheese reception on Saturday, Sept. 21, will be open to the public at a cost of $10 per person.

Fleming's lecture on Sept. 24 will be open to the public at a cost of $6 per person. Fleming promises that anyone who attends the lecture will come away with an understanding of contemporary and abstract art.

The gallery display will be offered free to the public.

All ticket sales will directly benefit War Memorial programs. For more information and reservations for the wine and cheese reception or Fleming's lecture, contact the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Other Council of Sponsors programs planned for this fall include: a lecture by Dr. Martha Seger, a member of the governing board of the Federal Reserve, on the effect of the Fed on personal finances; a series of lectures by Sherwin T. Wine, director of the Center for New Thinking, on "Respect, Getting It and Giving It;" and a lecture titled "De-Industrialization and Re-Industrialization: Which Way for America?" given by John A. Fillion, UAW special council.

Cartoonist to speak at Woman's Club

Members of the Grosse Pointe Woman's Club and their guests will open the Club's season next Wednesday, Sept. 18, with a tea and program starting at 12:30 p.m. in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's Crystal Ball Room where, following a social hour, Mrs. Raymond Duffy, first vice-president and program chairman, will introduce guest speaker Draper Hill, since 1976 editorial cartoonist of the Detroit News.

Hill is a former president of the Association of American Editorial cartoonists. He has been a reporter, author, instructor, and many of his reviews have appeared in the New York Times. He is currently working on a biography of the cartoonist, Thomas Nast. He has had many one man shows with a show scheduled in December at the Art Gallery of Windsor.

Mrs. Ernest Chielens and Mrs. Erwin Stoetzer, Woman's Club social chairmen and their hostesses, Mrs. Wayne Anderson and Mrs. A. J. Van Tiem have planned the tea.

Assisting on the committee are Mrs. Harold Bates, Mrs. Lloyd Beemer, Mrs. Harold B. Lee, Mrs. Herbert, D. Ralph, Tea pourers are Mrs. Milan J. Alexander, Mrs. Philip Skillman, Mrs. Robert Trinklein and Mrs. Anthony Webb.

Members planning to invite guests are requested to make reservations by contacting the hospitality chairman, Mrs. Herbert Taube 884-2516 by Sept. 16.

St. Clair DAR to meet in Troy

Mrs. George T. Edson, regent of Louisa St. Clair Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will conduct the Sept. 19 meeting at 10:30 a.m. at the Troy Historical Village in Troy. The program will feature a tour of the Troy country village of the early 1800s which includes a log cabin with its garden of flowers, herbs and vegetables of that era, a clapboard Colonial house, a one-room schoolhouse, complete print shop, blacksmith shop and carriage display in a former barn and a fine museum. All buildings were moved to this site from their original locations in Troy.

Luncheon at Casa Lupito will follow the meeting and tour. Reservations are being taken by Mrs. Charles E. Marshessault and Mrs. Albert H. Bell, III.

Pettipointe Questers meet

The Pettipointe Chapter of Questers met on Thursday, Sept. 5, at the Colonial Road home of Mrs. Hein Rusen. All members present brought a favorite hors d'oeuvre, and dessert was provided by the hostess. After the business meeting, Mrs. Rusen gave a mini paper on Corrado Parducci, a Detroit area architectural sculptor, who designed and built Mrs. Rusen's home. The members were then treated to a tour of the home.

Chapter officers for the 1985-1986 year are: president, Mrs. Ralph Bleich; first vice president, Mrs. Robert le Fevre; second vice president, Mrs. Hein Rusen; recording secretary, Dr. Anne-Marie Laird; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Everett Scranton; treasurer, Mrs. William Nagel.

Committee Chairpersons include: Mrs. Gordon Sorenson, parliamentarian; Mrs. Robert Lewis, hospitality; Mrs. Michael Counen, publicity; and Mrs. Henry Cornillie, historian.

Fall bonsai workshop set

The Grosse Pointe Bonsai Association will hold its fall workshop on Thursday, Sept. 26, from 9 a.m. to noon, in the Veterans' Room of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lake Shore Road.

There will be a demonstration of bonsai styling as well as individual instruction on growing techniques.

Workshops are free to members of the Grosse Pointe Garden Center; dues are $5, and non-members may join on the day of the meeting. There is a nominal charge for plant material, bonsai pots, and supplies.

For further information, please call the Garden Center at 885-3300.

Speaker to address stress at Memorial

Learn "How to Handle Stress — God's Way!" will be the topic of a free seminar by Eleanor Page, a woman who has traveled all over the world sharing what God's love has meant to her.

Uniquely qualified to reach people who are leaders, Page has taught Bible studies at the White House during the Nixon, Ford and Reagan administrations. The Washington demand for her time has led her into studies with Congressional wives, members of the State Department, staff at the Pentagon, and the departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Interior, Health, Education and Welfare.

Page will speak Friday, Sept. 20, at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church Fellowship Hall from 10 a.m. until noon. Everyone is welcome to attend. The seminar is sponsored by Creative Living Bible Study.

Alliance Francaise to hold reception

The Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe is about to begin its season of social and cultural activities. A festive reception for its members will be held on Wednesday evening, September 18, at the house of Dr. and Mrs. Kim K. Lie.

The Alliance Francaise, whose main purpose is to promote and expand the study and understanding of the culture and language of France, devotes a great deal of its attention, as well as funds, to the high school pupils who study French. In order to encourage their efforts, the alliance holds an annual competition where their proficiency in the French language is tested in written and oral form.

Three prizes are awarded: The first place is a trip to Paris, to study for a month; the second and third prizes are, respectively, a week stay in Quebec City and a weekend in Montreal. This year, the first prize was awarded to Joseph Jurewicz, while Nadia Selim won second place and the third prize winner was Marie Ali.

Furthermore, each year the Alliance Francaise distributes awards and books to all students who have been selected by their teachers for their excellence in French class, in this area.

Recently elected officers of the Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe are: Mrs. Kim K. Lie, president; Mrs. Farris S. Sire, vice president; Dr. John R. F. Ingall, treasurer; Mrs. John L. Drummy, secretary; and Mrs. Russell H. Axson, Mrs. Robert J. de Pauw, Richard McMullan, Dr. Antoine Nahoum, Mrs. Michel Skaff, Mrs. Perry L. Tewart, David Thoms, directors.

The Alliance Francaise de Grosse Pointe welcomes new members. If your French is fluent, sketchy or minimal, you can join the organization, as long as you have an interest in France and its culture. For more information, you can call membership chairman Jean Van Bever at 881-7985.

Ribbon Farms Questers met

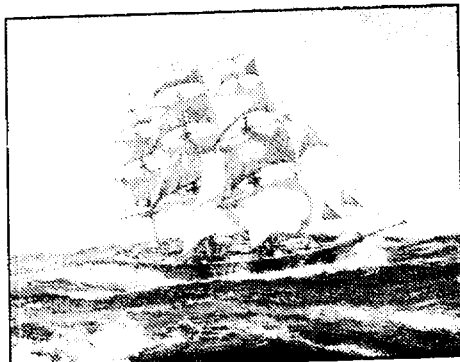

The Ribbon Farms Chapter of the Questers will meet at the Lakeland home of Mrs. Harold Lee on Monday, Sept. 16 at noon. Mrs. Edward Gruca will speak on a variety of antiques; edible, decorative and wearable.

White earns medal

Army Col. Thomas E. White has been decorated with the second award of the Legion of Merit at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. The Legion of Merit, the nation's fifth highest medal, is awarded for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service to the United States. White, a deputy director, received a master's degree in 1974 from the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, Calif. His wife, Susan, is the daughter of Dr. Charles W. Adams of Grosse Pointe.

Correction:

In the Aug. 29 Pride of the Pointes column, Tina M. Maraccio was incorrectly listed as entering Central Michigan University this fall. Maraccio is now a freshman at the University of Michigan.

The News regrets any inconvenience that may have resulted from this error.

Spivak graduates

Jeffrey G. Spivak, son of the Hon. and Mrs. Peter Spivak of Grosse Pointe, received a bachelor of science degree from Northwestern University in June. Spivak majored in Journalism in the Medill School of Journalism. He served as news editor of the Daily Northwestern, and worked as a prep correspondent for the Chicago Sun-Times. He has placed on the dean's list.

"I swore I'd never send my mother to a nursing home..."

...but the situation was getting worse. Mom was 81 and an invalid. Taking care of her daily needs had put so much stress on my marriage that I had to seek counseling to save my sanity. Then I found out about PMS."

PMS, or Professional Medical Services, is an "in home" nursing service for families who find themselves in situations like this. PMS provides experienced professionals who specialize in administering medication and treatment, meal preparation, light house-keeping chores and help with shopping and errands. PMS also provides for a 24-hour, 7-day a week live-in situation.

The next time you are uncertain about how to care for a family member who needs special attention, give us a call.

U.S. Savings Bonds. Paying Better Than Ever.

Back in 1872, San Francisco's first cable cars were called "Hallidie's folly." Today, they're America's only mobile historic monument.

Some things never change.

But one great American tradition has changed—U.S. Savings Bonds. Now Savings Bonds pay higher variable interest rates like money market accounts. That's the kind of change anyone can appreciate.

Just hold Savings Bonds for five years and you get the new variable interest rates. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. That means you can earn a lot more, but never less than 7½%.

You can purchase Bonds at almost any financial institution. Or easier yet, through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

Buy Savings Bonds. Like the cable car, they're another part of our proud heritage.

For the current interest rate and more information, call toll-free 1-800-US Bonds. U.S. SAVINGS BONDS Paying Better Than Ever

NEW ON THE MARKET

Built by Micou in 1947 for the late Robert H. Tannahill, this outstanding house once contained one of the world's greatest art collections. Constructed with durability, security and beauty in mind, the roof is slate and the floors are solid concrete covered with parquet throughout nearly every room. Imported antique mantels grace the fireplace and elegant French doors let in the breeze from the lake. It has five bedrooms and four and one half baths and is situated at the end of a very secluded cul de sac near the lake. A once in a lifetime opportunity. You should see it now!

The exciting curb appeal of this well designed Tudor extends to the interior as well. The beautiful leaded glass windows have new aluminum storms and screens and the kitchen has been updated. It has four spacious bedrooms a living room with a fireplace and a den. Be sure to see it this Sunday at 1324 Bishop.

You still have plenty of time to enjoy the 32'x16' pool with cabana hidden in the back yard of this attractive four bedroom Colonial. Hardwood floors, natural woodwork and a newer kitchen and furnace make this a very attractive buy.

This English Tudor style condominium is located one block from the Village. Four bedrooms two and one half baths and a library all done in a charming traditional decor. Leave lawn care and snow shoveling behind and still have loads of space. Priced at $134,900. See it at 592 Cadieux on Sunday.

You get a Guardian Home Warranty with this spacious five bedroom, three bath Tudor. Well maintained, it has extra insulation in attic floor and walls. Another extra is the two room apartment.

Edna Bakewicz: On a continuing journey in search of artistic excellence

By Elsa Frohman

When Edna Bakewicz went down to Wayne State University to sign up for a single painting class, she had no idea that she would be going to school full-time to earn a bachelor of fine arts.

But just two weeks after she signed up for that single class, the university called her and offered her a four-year merit scholarship. That was in 1982, and today, Edna is on the verge of completing her bachelor's degree and going on for a master's degree. She has been accepted into the master's program and some of the courses she is currently taking will be counted toward that goal.

Edna's own work has been a fairly hot seller over the years — even though she makes no attempt to market her paintings.

"I don't paint as much as I would like to," she said. "But I've sold about three-quarters of all the paintings I've ever done. I've given some away too. I don't have many of the older ones. It's entirely word of mouth. I don't take the time to produce paintings just to sell. I paint because I like to paint."

Edna's primary medium is watercolor, though she also works in oils. Most of works she will display at the War Memorial this weekend are all watercolors.

"This is an experimental time for me in oils," she said. "I don't feel I want to show anything I've been doing."

Membership in the Grosse Pointe Artists Association is juried. Potential members submit examples of their work and they are judged for membership. However, the organization isn't restricted to perfect artists. The group is rather looking for artists who have a quality of originality.

"It's for people who want to grow as artists," Edna said. "We hold workshops and seminars. Five times a year, the Grosse Pointe Artists Association has somebody come and give a demonstration or critique."

Edna said he believes the programs have had a profound effect on her work.

"Five years ago I had reached a dead end with my watercolors," she said. "But I went to a demonstration once and came home and started painting. She said such exciting things. It opened up my imagination."

Edna has been searching for excellence for a long time. Her first art training was in commercial art at Cass Tech High School. When she graduated, she got a job as a commercial artist but kept working on her own in the more creative pursuits.

"The yearning for fine art has always been there," she said. "The basics are the same (in commercial arts) as in fine arts. I've raised a family, but I've always known that other track was there."

After working for a while after high school, Edna gave it up for almost 30 years to raise her family. However, in recent years she started giving art lessons in her

"I just get excited about art," she said. "It's (teaching) something very natural for me. I never shut up. Teaching keeps you constantly on your toes. You get a rapport with the students. Every teacher learns a lot from students. It's stimulating."

Edna's teaching technique is to develop the creativity of her students.

"I don't hold their hand and tell them to put some of that color right there," she said.

Edna encourages aspiring artists to join artists' groups.

"When you work by yourself, you don't know where you're at," she said. "You don't want to parrot somebody else's style."

A new field that has opened up for Edna since she went back to school has been printmaking. She has experimented with silk screens and serigraphs.

"It's a field I think has not been explored. I approach it from the perspective of a painter. This last semester, my professor kept three of my prints for the Wayne State collection."

Edna's plans for the future include more of the same. She will be continuing her studies at Wayne, but she will also continue honing her artistic skills on her own.

"I just want to become a better artist," she said. "A lot of times I'll think I'm satisfied, but then I'll think I could do it better."

Cabbage family may help prevent cancer

Dr. Saxon Graham, cancer researcher at State University of New York at Buffalo, says that his studies have shown that colon cancers are rare in people who eat turnips, cabbage, brussels sprouts, broccoli and cauliflower.

These vegetables are rich in vitamins A, C, and B complex, potassium, calcium, iron, protein, zinc, magnesium, selenium and trace nutrients.

According to botanists, turnips are part of the brassica family (crucifer-cabbage family) as are kale and collards. Although the turnip tuberous root, as well as its leaves are used by epicureans, the nutritional value of the tops or head of all the crucifer family foods are exceptional and similar. Researchers emphatically recommend increased usage of these foods in our daily diet.

The following is a selection of recipes for vegetables in the crucifer family from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Brussel Sprouts and Carrots

2 pints brussel sprouts
1/2 stalk celery, finely diced
3 Tblsp. margarine
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
2 Tblsp. minced parsley
2 pounds carrots

Boil sprouts with celery in water to cover until fork-tender, about 20 minutes, then drain. Put margarine in saucepan, add sprouts, seasonings and 1/2 of the parsley. Cut carrots into thin strips, put in vegetable steamer and cook only until crisp tender, about 15 minutes. Place brussel sprouts in serving dish, surround with carrot sticks which have been sprinkled with remainder of minced parsley. Serves six.

Calories per serving about 72. Cholesterol 0.

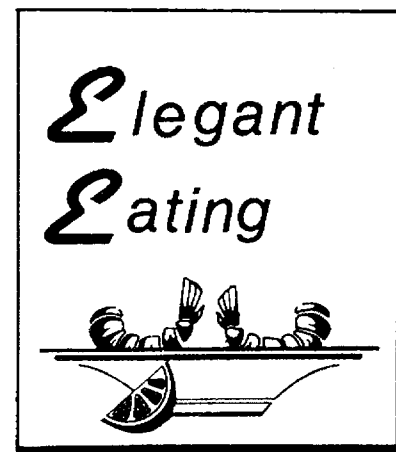

Hungarian Brussel Sprouts

1-1/2 pounds brussel sprouts or 2 pkg. frozen, cooked
1 cup stewed tomatoes
1 medium green pepper, chopped
1 bay leaf
1 Tblsp. caraway seeds

1/2 tsp. paprika
Slice sprouts in half lengthwise. Heat tomatoes in a saucepan; add all other remaining ingredients except sprouts. Simmer for five minutes.

Calories about 54 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

Stir-Fried Cauliflower

2-1/2 Tblsp. vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, mashed
1 slice ginger (size of quarter)
1 head cauliflower, washed and broken into flowerets
1 yellow squash, cut into 1/2 inch-slices
1 red pepper, seeded, cut into 1/4-inch strips
3 tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and cut into strips
1/2 cup chicken broth or bouillon
1/2 cup dried oregano
1/2 tsp. dried basil
1/2 cups peas, fresh or frozen

In a large skillet heat oil. When hot, saute garlic and ginger for one minute. Add cauliflower and stir-fry for two minutes. Add squash and pepper and stir-fry for two more minutes. Add tomatoes, chicken stock, oregano and basil. Cover and steam for five minutes.

Remove cover, add peas and cook three or four more minutes or until vegetables are crisp and tender. Makes eight servings.

Calories about 99 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

Parsley Cauliflower

1 small head cauliflower (1-3/4 lb.) trimmed and cut in florets
4 cups water
1/4 cup milk
Salt to taste
3 Tblsp. margarine, divided
1/4 cup Egg Beaters, hard cooked, grated

Fresh ground pepper to taste
2 Tblsp. finely chopped parsley
In large saucepan bring to boil cauliflower, water, milk and salt. Simmer 10 minutes or until tender (do not overcook). If desired, at this point vegetable may be set aside and final preparation done later.

In skillet heat one tablespoon margarine. Add cauliflower and toss until florets start to take on color. Transfer to serving dish; keep warm. Heat remaining two tablespoons margarine, add grated eggbeaters, salt and pepper. Pour over cauliflower; sprinkle with parsley. Serve immediately. Makes four servings.

Calories per serving about 118. Cholesterol trace.

Cauliflower Supreme

This is a wonderful do-ahead salad that will bring any hostess raves and raves and all kinds of compliments.

1/4 cup salad oil
2 Tblsp. white wine vinegar
1 Tblsp. minced parsley
1 Tblsp. minced pimento
1 green onion, minced
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. dry mustard
Dash cayenne pepper
Tomato wedges
Cucumber, unpeeled, thinly sliced
Romaine leaves

Select a beautiful white cauliflower; trim it well, then put into steamer over boiling water; turn down heat so water just simmers; cook cauliflower until just tender. (Be sure not to overcook, or it will become soggy, break apart, or become mushy.) Carefully remove to large pottery bowl that will just hold cauliflower nicely.

In small bowl, thoroughly combine all the remaining ingredients except tomatoes and cucumbers. Pour dressing over cauliflower and let marinate at least 24 hours. Occasionally, spoon some of the marinade over the cauliflower. Just before serving time, drain cauliflower, set on a beautiful serving plate on a bed of romaine leaves, then surround with wedges of tomatoes, interspersed with thin slices of unpeeled cucumbers. Serves six.

Calories per serving about 95. Cholesterol 0.

Potato and Turnip Puree

2 pounds potatoes, peeled
2 pounds white or yellow turnips
5 Tblsp. unsalted margarine
1/4 cup hot skimmed milk
1/4 tsp. white pepper
Salt to taste

Cut potatoes and turnips into uniform pieces so that they will cook evenly. Place in large Dutch oven or large saucepan, cover with water to which one teaspoon of salt has been added. Bring to a boil over high heat; then reduce heat to moderate, cover and simmer 25 to 35 minutes, until vegetables are very tender when pierced with a fork. Drain thoroughly. Mash with potato masher. Mix in four tablespoons of unsalted margarine, the hot milk, 1/4 teaspoon salt and the pepper. Cover puree and refrigerate until needed. About 30 minutes before serving time, place in top of double boiler over boiling water; cover and heat, stirring occasionally, until heated through. Spoon into serving bowl and top with remaining tablespoon of margarine. Makes six cups.

Calories about 116 per 1/2 cup serving. Cholesterol 0.

Flemish Red Cabbage

3 Tblsp. margarine
3 Tblsp. chopped onion
8 cups shredded red cabbage (about 1 medium head)
2 cups coarsely grated apple
1 tsp. salt
1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/2 cup red wine vinegar
Dash of pepper

Melt margarine in large skillet. Add onion and saute until tender. Add cabbage, tossing to coat evenly with melted margarine. Cover and cook over low heat for five minutes. Mix in apple and salt. Cover; cook additional 10 to 15 minutes, or until cabbage is tender. Mix in brown sugar, vinegar and pepper. Heat thoroughly. Makes 12 servings.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

Just this once, why not a battle to the death?

Try not to get too excited and don't everybody applaud at once, but Hollywood has done it again. Just when you thought that those "Battle of the Athletically-Inept Stars and Starlets Dressed as Skimpily as Possible, Spewing Forth Some of the Most Inane Sports Cliches Imaginable and Playing at Competitive Sports in the Worst Possible Fashion" programs weren't going to be around anymore, Hollywood has gone and come up with something it calls "Star Games."

We didn't ask for it and Lord knows we don't need it, but "Star Games" is going to be a syndicated weekly series this fall. Yippee. I don't know about you, but the thought of having the opportunity to put up with . . . er . . . enjoy an obviously high class program like this one promises to be more than I can handle. How do I know before seeing the show? Simple. I have access to the pre-show publicity supplied to me via press release from the brains behind "Star Games," Viacom Enterprises.

Viacom's press release starts out like this: "The city of Santa Barbara has long enjoyed a quiet, low-key reputation, offering Angelinos, as well as President Reagan, a welcome respite from life in the fastest of lanes. With the descent of nine star-studded celebrity teams gathered for the first weekend of competition in . . . Star Games . . . this picturesque, yet isolated community was jolted into remembering that Hollywood, the president's old haunt, was — in fact — only 90 minutes away.

Huh?

Wait, it gets better.

"General Hospital heartthrob Steve Bond was keenly aware of the 'adrenaline factor,' the extra push provided when a team collectively gets genuinely excited at the prospect of a victory within their grasp," continues the Viacom release.

Oh, yeah? I get the idea that Star Games viewers will probably be keenly aware of the regurgitation factor, the extra "push" on the contents of one's stomach when one becomes genuinely nauseated at the prospect of having a show like this on within the confines of his living room.

To keep things interesting (ah, those foresighted producers), Star Games will feature regular hosts Bruce Jenner and Pamela Sue Martin. Former Chicago Bears All-Pro linebacker Dick Butkus will serve as "Official Commissioner" for Star Games. Viacom assures us that Butkus has all the "right qualifications" for the job, lest the celebrities get upset over a broken fingernail and its effect on a hotly contested tug-of-war and feel the need for the services of the "official commissioner." (What? Did Butkus go to Famous Official Commissioners' School?).

"A legend in his own right, former football pro football superstar Dick Butkus tackles Star Games with the same brawn and agility that established him as one of the greatest linebackers in NFL history," the Viacom release says. And what does the "greatest linebacker in NFL history" say?

"Star Games has offered me the unique opportunity to bridge my long-running love of sports with my acting career," Butkus says, presumably with a straight face. Viewers of Star Games will get a chance to watch the All-Pro as he "gives tips to the star-studded team players" and officially commissions or whatever it is official commissioners do. (If I were the folks who award the Emmys, I would not start engraving Butkus' name just yet.)

You can't have star games without stars, can you now? Among the stars competing on Star Games are such well-known giants of the silver screen as the aforementioned Steve Bond, as well as "Sherilyn Wolter and Jackie Zeman, Leslie Esterbrook, Brant Von Hoffman and Billy Hufsey" and the ever-popular "Carlo Imperato." Hey, you can't get any bigger than that. We're talking major Hollywood stars here.

And of course, big stars like these will be competing for the sheer joy of athletic achievement, for the spirit of competition. Uh-huh. There's also the little matter of what the Viacom press release calls a "considerable cash bonus" and a new Pontiac Sunbird, as well. And we all know that you can't drive a Sunbird very far along the Santa Monica freeway on just a tankful of the spirit of competition.

You probably get the idea that I am not too enamored with the show of the Star Games genre. That's probably because my gag reflex is so strong, particularly when I subject myself to "athletic events" like Star Games promises to be. And Star Games promises to be about as athletic as your Aunt Gertrude.

What I'd like to see is a show that pits ordinary, non-athletic "stars" against real, live professional athletes in a real sports setting. No more no-name TV stars doing their counterparts in dunk tanks or competing in phony-looking tugs-of-war. No way. Give us Tom Selleck vs. Ivan Lendl at center court, Wimbledon. Or Robert DeNiro stepping into the batter's box against New York Mets

Netters gear up for championship repeats

By Peggy O'Connor
Grosse Pointe South
Coach: Stephanie Prychitko
1984 marks: League, district, and regional champions; ninth consecutive state championship

"I like to take one game at a time..."
—Stephanie Prychitko

Care to make it 10?
South's girls' varsity tennis team has a chance to do just that — win its 10th straight Class A girls' state tennis championship. But if the girls are looking ahead as far as the state tournament in October, it isn't with the blessing of veteran coach Stephanie Prychitko.

"I like to take one game at a time. I don't put pressure on the girls by setting goals and saying we'd like to win the state championship. Like in the states last year, I wasn't even there. They did their jobs and won the title. And that's the way it has to be — it has to come from them," Prychitko says.

That's the kind of approach "Miss P" has employed to great success at South, in particular for the last nine straight years. Success like last year, when South was ranked No. 2 in the state but wound up winning the title by the largest point margin in five previous seasons.

Six of the top seeds return from the 1984 squad, and despite the loss of Madeleine Willard, Stephanie Schulte, Laura Gushee and Lil Petersen, South appears to again be one of the strongest teams in the area.

Courtenay Kotas will assume Willard's spot at No. 1 singles, followed by Cathy Wachter at No. 2 singles, Mary Wachter at No. 3 singles and Katy Turner in the No. 4 spot. Noel Berry and Sarah Mayer will team up at No. 1 doubles, with Anne Nicholson and Susie Ingrao — the only doubles team in Class A to go undefeated all of last season — at No. 2 and Kathy Rajt and Meg Peterson at No. 3 doubles.

To no one's surprise, both South and North are picked as among the area's top boys' soccer teams this fall. They'll face off — just as they did last year (above) when only two points separated league champ North and the Blue Devils — for the first time in 1985 on Sept. 17 at South.

North chases 6th straight title

"Now we have much more balanced scoring . . . we have to . . ."

—Guido Regelbrugge

They'll miss the likes of All-State Chris Nearhood and defensive star Neal Gross, but the North High varsity soccer team which was 12-4-3 last season is essentially the same team in 1985. Which is good news for North soccer fans who are hoping to see the Norsemen win their sixth consecutive divisional championship.

"We're still young, as we were last season. I think we will be very similar to what we were last year . . . except we will probably play better soccer," says North coach Guido Regelbrugge.

What Regelbrugge means is that North is still without a pure goal-scorer in the mold of Marc Tirikian. And, while that means that North's ability to "finish" the plays around the net is still a question mark, the lack of a "superstar" goal-scorer isn't all bad, according to Regelbrugge.

"Now we have much more balanced scoring — we have to because we don't have that game-breaker. What we have now is more depth than in years past. We really have no superstars, but in every position, I have two or three

Devils eager for crown

By Peggy O'Connor

South has been picked by opposing coaches as one of the area's strongest teams this season . . . but you wouldn't know it by talking to varsity head coach John Case.

See, there's a lot of pressure in this "top teams" business and Case likes to steer clear of that sort of thing, thank you very much.

"Well, I hope we can live up to those sort of expectations," Case says with a smile. "No, I don't let it put pressure on us. We just play our game."

If the Blue Devils play the game the way they did last season, it will do a lot to help the 1985 edition of South varsity soccer live up to almost anyone's expectations. South finished second in the Macomb Area Soccer League, recording its best record in five varsity seasons: 10-4-2 for 22 points, just two points behind league champ North High.

Five players return from that 1984 squad, including Pat Imsch, who earned All-Division, Second Team honors last season.

In goal for South this season are Eric Restum and John Rowady.

Will someone please send these 'angels' to Las Vegas?

All Angyal's Angels had to do to win the USTA/Volvo women's tennis midwest sectional title was come from behind on the last day of play, win at least four out of five matches and take the championship away from a very confident opponent. That part was easy.

The hard part is going to be getting 13 tennis players to Las Vegas next weekend for the USTA/Volvo national championships on the $800-worth of travel expenses "awarded" to the midwest champions, Angyal's Angels.

"There's no way that 13 women can go to Las Vegas for three days on $800," said team captain Jennifer Holmes, of the Woods. "That's a stipend of $61.54 per person, which is barely lunch money for three days in Las Vegas." (Or as one Angel's boyfriend put it, "That won't even cover slot machine expenses.")

So the Angels need a sponsor willing to lend the financial assistance the champions need to continue their assault on the national USTA/Volvo title. Those interested in helping sponsor Angyal's Angels should contact Holmes at 882-0143.

The Angels, named for their coach, Ken Angyal, of the Park, won the right to compete in the midwest championship by taking the state title in their division in August by winning 13 of 15 matches against Kalamazoo, Harbor Springs and Midland. In the midwest finals, they competed in round-robin format against four other women's 3.5 teams from Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Wisconsin.

At the midwest finals, a lucky break helped the Angels clinch the title on the last day of play, Sept. 1. Michigan (the Angels) and Wisconsin were the only two teams with a shot at the title; Ohio, Indiana and Illinois had already been eliminated. Michigan had already played Wisconsin and lost, giving Wisconsin the notion that it would walk away with the midwest crown.

But while Wisconsin's matches were over, Michigan still had one left to play: against Ohio. The Angels needed to beat Ohio, four matches to one, in order to best Wisconsin's tournament record. It might have been a difficult task, had Ohio not been out of contention. The Ohio coach decided to play all of his loyal bench-sitters, the third-string players who had not had a chance to play all weekend while the title was still up for grabs.

Michigan wound up sweeping Ohio, 5-0, and winning the 13 out of 20 matches, two more than Wisconsin. Wisconsin wound up being furious with Ohio.

"I felt loyalty to my alternates, not to the Wisconsin team," the Ohio coach told Michigan team members.

"This is like a dream," said Susan Lubzik, when the matches were over and the Angels seemed bound for Las Vegas. She was in tears and so were several other Angels. "This is the first thing I've ever done on my own, without my husband or somebody else making it happen for me," said Lubzik's doubles partner, Nancy Kujawski.

The Wisconsin team, which had come in second last year and was determined to win a spot in the 16-team national championships and face teams from Hawaii to Puerto Rico, finished second to the upstarts from the Pointe area, a team which was formed just last spring by Holmes.

She started Angyal's Angels (who range in age from 28 to 39) with seven fellow members of the Wimbledon Racquet Club in St. Clair Shores: Annie Villaruel, of Detroit, Agnes Villaruel, of Windsor, Vida Keyes, of the Woods, Nancy Kujawski, of the Park, Cindy Wheeler, of the Shores, Susan Lubzik, of St. Clair Shores, and Teri Spytman, of Farmington Hills.

To form the doubles teams, Holmes added Jane Porath, of Sterling Heights and Jan Rudzinski. Porath plays out of Eastpointe Racquet Club and the Peachtree Racquet Club in Clinton Township. Rudzinski played for the USTA/Volvo team in Las Vegas before moving back to her native Michigan.

For singles strength, Holmes recruited four players from the Franklin Racquet Club in Southfield: Michele Mandell, of Southfield, Shirley Moulton, of Grosse Pointe, Linda Okun, of Southfield, and Alice Williams, of Birmingham.

Each USTA/Volvo team playing a team match uses eight women — three courts of doubles and two courts of singles. Of the five individual matches, a team must win at least three in order to score a win. The Angels' top doubles team was Lubzik and Kujawski. Second court doubles was played by Keyes and Rudzinski and third court by Porath and either Wheeler or Spytman. Agnes and Annie Villaruel also played second court doubles, although Annie Villaruel's superior singles talent meant the team had to be broken up occasionally to allow her to play singles.

Mandell and Annie Villaruel had a lock on the Court 1 singles; Holmes played Court 2 singles most of the season, with Moulton, Okun and Williams sharing Court 2 singles.

Although the doubles teams are ranked in order of strength — and must be according to United States Tennis Association rules — what has made the Angels a so-far unbeatable combination is the fact that the teams are virtually interchangeable. Courts 1, 2 and 3 doubles are even in strength, with one duo frequently beating another in practice.

The singles line-up is just as strong. Mandell, going into the midwest championships, had not lost a single match in two years. And seasoned tournament player Annie Villaruel also carried the day in several regular season matches.

The very "hot" Angels now have the midwest championship trophies, $800 and the invitation to play for the national championship Sept. 20 through 22 in Las Vegas. (All season, the Volvo tennis team had been under the impression that USTA/Volvo would pay all expenses to the finals for the teams which had made it, according to Holmes.)

Norsemen beat heat, Ramblers in 1985 football opener

By Bill Hoover
North High

North High's varsity football team opened its 1985 season at home last Saturday with a 16-6 victory over the Fraser Ramblers on what was the hottest opening day in memory.

The 90-degree day started slowly for the Norsemen. The sweltering

North fans were quieted early as they watched the Ramblers force and capitalize on a North fumble for a quick six points.

North started its comeback in the second quarter behind an impressive 80-yard, four-play drive which included a 49-yard pass to Steve Pochmara and a 22-yard touchdown pass to junior tightend Rob

Olds.

Fraser's drive near the end of the first half was snuffed out by Brian Francis, who intercepted a Rambler pass on the 22-yard line and the teams were deadlocked 6-6 at the half.

The second half, which was to be dominated by North, began with a 58-yard drive capped by Craig

Como's 31-yard field goal.

The next two Fraser drives were stopped by a fumble caused by Greg Guest and recovered by Craig Engel and an interception by Ken Straske. Straske's 27-yard run back after the interception started North's 62-yard, 16-play drive which ended with a six-yard quarterback keeper and extra point by Como to finish out the scoring. A strong defensive stand by the Norsemen stopped Fraser in four downs, giving North the ball and a 16-6 victory.

In addition to Como's fine performance, junior running back Mike "The Kid" Miller made two key first downs on touchdown drives.

Rushing leaders for North were Miller, with 65 yards in 17 carries; Como, 45 yards in seven carries; and Bill Smith, 40 yards in seven carries. Como, who also was 5-of-11 on pass attempts for 118 yards, hit Olds three times for 58 yards and a touchdown.

Defensively Guest made 11 tackles.

time state Class C-D champ University Liggett School on the schedule.

"Then we've got the North tournament, the Kingswood tournament and the Eastern Michigan League tournament. Playing in those tournaments helps us prepare for the kind of competition and schedule we face in the state tournament. It also gives us a chance to know who's around and get a look at what they can do," Prychitko says.

"We've got a good enthusiastic group of girls again this year. We had the challenge last week for seeds and it was very competitive. We'll see what happens as the season goes along... I just hope they don't peak too early."

How about mid-October... just in time to make it No. 10?

Grosse Pointe North
Coach: Trisha Gaskins
1984 marks: League Championship, second place in regionals
The comparisons between North and South and their athletic abilities are inevitable — but when it gets down to making comparisons between the girls' varsity tennis teams at the two schools, the people doing the talking always seem to forget one thing: consistency.

North has been every bit as consistent as South in recent years, remaining undefeated in the Bi-County, winning the league championship regularly and earning a spot in the state tournament the last two years. First-year coach Trisha Gaskins is predicting more of the same this year.

"I think we'll have a super team. We feel we will win the league and we certainly hope to do well in the states," says Gaskins, who takes over the coaching reins this season after assisting former coach Beth Manojlovich last year.

Thirty girls tried out for the squad this season and Gaskins says the competition for top seeds has been fierce. North has added a JV tennis team this year, which means no girls will be cut.

Vying for the top singles spots are Lynda Rayos, Andrea Thomas, Mary Garcia and Lisa Lucido. Picking the doubles teams hasn't been any easier for Gaskins — six teams are competing for four spots. They include Nicole Lehmann and Beth Keys, Michelle Francis and Christine Barretta (an impressive pair of freshmen), Kristin Deister and Heather Mac Donald, Susan Fry and Katherine Sanom, Lisa Joh and Nancy Giftos, and Liz Schervish and Jennifer Orr.

"We ought to come through with flying colors in our league. And in the region, we should be right up there with South," Gaskins says. "Our goals are to win the league again, place as many girls as possible on the All-Bi-County team and be represented in the state tournament."

North placed every varsity member on either the 1984 All-League and or Honorable Mention All-League teams. And with the level of inter-team competition — North's trend toward consistency looks like it's a permanent one. That bodes well for the future of tennis at North High.

"I hope so. We only have two seniors and a very, very talented junior varsity team, so yes, things do look quite well, both for this year and next," Gaskins adds.

"And what makes it nice is that I don't think I could have a nicer group of girls if I had hand-picked them myself."

University Liggett School
Coach: Bob Hartwick
1984 marks: Regional champions, Class C-D state champ
There are always better situations for a first-year coach to face... but not many better than the one Bob Hartwick will confront as University of Liggett School's girls' varsity tennis coach this season.

ULS has won the Class C-D state title for five straight years and after losing just one player to graduation, No. 6 looms large on the horizon.

"I've got a very good team here. My singles players are comparable to any singles players in the state. They could beat any other singles players on a given day. These girls are Class A caliber... and I see a lot of potential in them in terms of the matches they will play against Class A teams this year," Hartwick says.

In other words, ULS is well aware that after beating the odds and winning the title last season, they are very much the favorites this year with a nearly intact line-up.

Pam Ali returns to her state champ No. 1 singles spot. Freshman Elena Hunt moves into the No. 2 singles spot with Amina Ali and Charu Nautiyal in the No. 3 and 4 positions. The doubles teams are Marie Ali and Shefali Sharma at No. 1, Karen Rahm and Kathy Bianchi at No. 2 and Wendy Willett and Jennifer Barnhardt at No. 3 doubles.

Hartwick is cautious, though, admitting that even though ULS is picked by the experts to win the state title again, the actual process of retaining the state championship will be a difficult one.

"The girls are going to have to be aggressive. Last year, they won when they weren't expected to. Naturally, they might tend to think that this year, winning the title will be easy. But it's still going to have to take a lot of hard work. I will admit, though, they're going to be tough to stop."

Hartwick adds that he expects ULS to have another good season, but that he hasn't set any specific goals for the returning champs.

"I have my expectations and I try to fulfill them myself. For instance, if I think we can beat Grosse Pointe South, then we try to fulfill that expectation. Deep down, I think the girls would like to win all their matches."

players who can do the job.

"If somebody gets hurt or somebody is having a bad day, I don't have to hesitate. I can pull the starter and put in somebody who might be able to do the job," Regelbrugge adds.

The only problem with that kind of depth is that it isn't always conducive to a close-knit team. After all, it's kind of tough to get close to a teammate who is gunning for your job. But if the 1985 Regelbrugge team is like his previous five teams at North, that hurdle will be an easy one to jump.

"So far, the kids have been real great, it's been a real homogenous team. And I can't deny I like the possibilities that having such great depth gives to me as a coach," Regelbrugge says.

Goalender Brian Grieve returns to the nets this season; he had eight shutouts in 1984. Juniors Ralph Barbier and Jeff Ward and seniors Tom Mediodia and Dave Colfer make up the North backfield. At midfield are juniors Chris Colfer, Dan Regelbrugge and Mike Farrelly. Regelbrugge says he'll use John Dietrich, Dan Spitz and Louie Melham up front. He'll also count on support from senior Kevin Tisdale, returners Eric Hess, Jeff Lewis, Jeff Ward and Steve Francis, and JV standouts Rob Kholer, John Secco and John Andary.

"We beat Dearborn, 2-0, last week and while we looked good on defense, we struggled a bit on offense. We'll try to combat that this year. We'll be in every game, but whether we consistently get the goals we need to beat the better teams... that's the question mark," Regelbrugge says.

The veteran coach feels that the league race may well end up a two-team struggle: between his squad and crosstown rival South High. But he hastens to add that it won't be a cake walk for either team, since even the league's weaker teams have improved this year.

North has won a divisional championship in each year of its existence at the varsity level and that league title remains one of Regelbrugge's goals this season. He says North would also like to win the unofficial "championship of Grosse Pointe" by beating both South and ULS. But, just as every year, Regelbrugge is predicting that it won't be easy for the Norsemen to achieve those goals.

"It's going to be tough because the teams we play are going to be tough. But that's the way we like to play."

As much as South has been picked to be among the league's leaders, crosstown rival North is classed among the league's elite by area coaches... and that goes for South's Case, too.

"North will certainly be a very good team and after that, I'm not sure about the other teams," he says.

Case does admit that he has an enthusiastic group of soccer players on his hands this year — proof of that was a spirited practice session last week on the soggy grounds of Elworthy Field in 85 degree heat.

"It's a good group, for sure. I think we'll have a strong, balanced team," Case says.

Grosse Pointe Hockey Association presents HOCKEY FUN FOR KIDS

Join us this fall and winter for the most comprehensive hockey program available. An excellent coaching staff supports the children in all phases of skating and team play. Last year nearly 400 boys and girls had fun with us.

WHO CAN PLAY?

Any youngster 5 or older. Teams will be available for children in the following age brackets:
MITE 5 - 9 years old BANTAM 14 - 15 years old
SQUIRT 10 - 11 years old MIDGET 16 - 17 years old
PEE WEE 12 - 14 years old JUNIORS 18 - 20 years old

WHAT IF MY CHILD HAS NEVER SKATED BEFORE?

The vast majority of new registrants every year have never skated before. The emphasis of the program is on teaching skating. By season's end, you will marvel at the improvement in your youngsters skating skills.

HOW MUCH DOES IT COST?

The annual registration fee is $50 for the first player in the family and $30 for each additional child. Additional charges for ice time are divided equally among all team members.

WHAT ABOUT SUPERVISION, COACHING AND SAFETY?

All on-ice activities are supervised. All coaches are selected and approved and reviewed by a coaches review board. Safety is of utmost importance. This year is expected to be the seventh consecutive year in the association without a serious injury.

WHEN AND WHERE DO I REGISTER?

Former players in the association will be contacted by mail and can re-register by return mail. All newcomers should come to the Grosse Pointe Community Rink on Canyon between Warren and Mack.

Rock's 30-year history will be chronicled in tour

By Chris Dellas

Move over, Boat Show. Step aside, all you auto shows, camper shows and home shows. With the generating power of the Baby Boom generation firmly established, we now have the Rock Show.

Walk Thru Rock, sponsored by Pepsi Cola, is a multi-media exhibit that uses films, videos, music displays and memorabilia to capture and present the 30-year evolution of rock 'n' roll.

The exhibit begins this week in Kansas City and will arrive at Cobo Hall Sept. 18 for a stay through the 23rd. The show is scheduled to tour 24 cities this year and at least as many dates are in the works for 1986.

Phil Lobel, vice president of marketing for Walk Thru Entertainment, described the exhibit as a combination of 18 video theaters, an extensive collection of rock memorabilia ("From the original Fillmore East sign and The Who's drum kit from Woodstock to Pat Boone lamps and Elvis bubblegum cards"), and consumer product displays by both national and local companies.

The video theaters, which should prove to be the main attraction of the exhibit, are each 36 feet x 42 feet and 12 feet high and are capable of holding a standing crowd of 175 people.

The theaters will use laser disc stereo/video technology to chronicle highlights in rock history. Each theater will be devoted to a different genre of rock.

For example, there are; Motown and Soul, Elvis and Rockabilly, Surfing Music, The Girl Groups, The Beatles, The British Invasion, Psychedelia, etc., along with six theaters devoted to current rock acts.

The theaters devoted to current artists is where the real interest has been stirred within the music industry. Several record labels will show off their hottest acts in 12- to 15-minute video programs. Such record giants as CBS, WEA, RCA, Arista, A & M, Capitol/EMI, PolyGram, MCA, Motown, Island and Chrysalis will take advantage of Walk Thru Rock to showcase their latest offerings.

Lobel has also worked out promotional ties with a single radio station in each of the 24 cities. In Detroit, WRIF will sponsor the tour.

Hallways throughout the exhibit will be devoted to photos and graphic displays depicting various periods in rock history plus magazine and album art.

Merchandising booths will be located throughout the exhibition with past and current products available for sale to the Walk Thru Rock visitor, including posters, T-shirts, souvenirs, record albums and other novelty merchandise.

Lobel admitted that Walk Thru Rock was attractive to Pepsi because of their desire to capture the 18-39 age group.

Pepsi currently uses pop stars such as Michael Jackson and Lionel Richie to promote their soft drinks.

"We went to Pepsi exactly one year ago with nothing more than a concept," said Lobel. "Pepsi had a vision that this would be something that America would fall in love with."

Chances are, Pepsi's vision may turn out to be an accurate prophecy. Walk Thru Entertainment, based in Denver, went public with a stock offering in May. Although the company has no operating history, no products, a 15-person staff and no performance to date, the stock has climbed from its $1 a share offering price to $2.50 a share last month.

Ken Wolf, the company's chief executive officer, attributed the sustained interest in the stock to Wall Street's anticipation of Walk Thru's premier performance.

For Lobel, Walk Thru's success is a make-or-buy deal. He left a job at a Denver-based promotions company to take the reins of Walk Thru Rock.

"I told Donald Yakush (Walk Thru's president) that this was a promoter's dream," said Lobel. "I said, 'When you get closer to getting this funded, call me and I'll drop whatever I'm doing.'"

And Lobel has been working on it full time ever since.

For more information on Walk Thru Rock, call the box office at Cobo Hall at 224-1010. Tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for children under 12 and senior citizens.

Detroit Film Society's 12th season opens

The Detroit Film Society begins its 12th season with two piquant comedies on Sept. 13 and 14, and a tribute to James Cagney by film critic Richard Schickel on Oct. 11.

"Ruggles of Red Gap" gave Charles Laughton his first American comic role as a butler exiled from upper-class England to the wild West, while "Pat and Mike" casts Katharine Hepburn as a woman jock and Spencer Tracy as her manager.

During his visit to the Detroit Film Society, Schickel will discuss his book, "James Cagney, That Yankee Doodle Dandy," and introduce Cagney's film, "Strawberry Blonde," which will be shown after Schickel's presentation.

The double features that complete the Film Society's 1985-86 series of monthly films are:

- "Bad Day at Black Rock" and "Mister Roberts," two critically acclaimed films dating from the mid-fifties (Nov. 8 and 9).

- "Trouble in Paradise" and "Easy Living," two screwball comedies of the 1930s (Dec. 13 and 14).

- "Golden Boy" and "Gentlemen Jim," boxing classics, with Bill Holden and Errol Flynn as the fighters (Jan. 10 and 11).

- "Murder, My Sweet" and "The Big Heat," tough guy movies, with Dick Powell in the adaptation of the Raymond Chandler novel, and Glenn Ford in the adaptation of William McGivern's book (Feb. 14 and 15).

- Fred Astaire with Ginger Rogers in "Top Hat," and with Judy Garland in "Easter Parade," two toe-tapping Irving Berlin musicals (March 14 and 15).

- John Ford's "The Informer" and Alfred Hitchcock's "Saboteur," suspense thrillers (April 11 and 12).

- "I Married a Witch" and "My Favorite Wife," sparkling comedies about marriage, with Veronica Lake and Fredric March as witch and spouse, and Irene Dunne as an explorer who is returning to husband Cary Grant after seven years on a desert island with Randolph Scott (May 9 and 10).

- "A Member of the Wedding" and "Life with Father," two successful Broadway plays that were made into equally successful Hollywood movies (June 13 and 14).

The Detroit Film Society is a non-profit educational affiliate of the Friends of the Detroit Public Library. Its purpose is to screen American films and to study them both as an art form and an entertainment medium.

Membership privileges include a quarterly newsletter filled with information: the season's schedule, facts and trivia about American film, and news about important international films and filmmakers. All members receive program notes on the movies to be screened and enjoy free intermission refreshments.

Screenings are held in the air-conditioned Friends Auditorium in the Main Library, usually on the second Friday and Saturday evening of each month. Membership in the society is $23, with a $3 reduction for members of the Friends of the Detroit Public Library, retirees, and students over 12 with identification.

Free brochures with information and membership applications are available by calling 833-4048, or a check made out to the Friends of the Detroit Public Library may be mailed to the Detroit Film Society c/o the Friends of the Detroit Public Library, 5201 Woodward, Detroit, Mich., 48202.

Memberships in the film society are also being sold at the door on Sept. 13 and 14 and are available after those dates by calling 833-4048. Guest passes for individual showings are available at the door on a space available basis at a cost of $4 for the evening.

'Dr. Ruth' comes to Macomb

Dr. Ruth Westheimer, known by millions as "Dr. Ruth, the sex therapist of the airwaves," will appear at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts, Monday, Nov. 18, at 8 p.m.

Dr. Ruth has her own call-in advice radio program called "Sexually Speaking," originating in New York and broadcast locally on WNIC. Her new book, "Dr. Ruth's Guide to Good Sex," is expected out in April.

Dr. Westheimer's television program, "Good Sex with Dr. Ruth Westheimer," airs on the Lifetime Cable Network. She has made several guest appearances on national talk shows such as "The Tonight Show," Merv Griffin and David Letterman. Her unique German accent has been imitated on "Saturday Night Live."

Tickets at $10 for adults and $8 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The Macomb Center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield Roads in Clinton Township.

"Gypsy," the song and dancy odyssey of Gypsy Rose Lee, will be performed twice, Sept. 25 and 26, at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts. The production will feature a professional company of 38 New York singers, dancers and musicians and technicians.

'Gypsy' opens season at Macomb Center

Two fully staged performances of the touring Broadway musical "Gypsy" followed by a Ray Charles doubleheader and topped off by Boots Randolph and his "yakety sax" will highlight the first big weekend of the new professional entertainment season at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts. "Gypsy," the vibrant song and dance odyssey of Gypsy Rose Lee, the "first lady of burlesque," will be presented at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 25, and again at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 26, by a professional company of New York singers, dancers, musicians and technicians. Tickets are $12 for adults and $10 for students and senior citizens.

Charles, the "man and his soul," will appear with his Raelettes singers and his orchestra twice on Friday, Sept. 27 — at 7 p.m. and at 9:30 p.m. Tickets are $16 for adults and $14 for students and senior citizens.

Randolph, who last year kicked off the Macomb Center's most successful season ever, returns to another early spot in the current lineup, a single performance at 7 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 29. Tickets are $14 for adults and $12 for students and senior citizens.

Tickets may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield Roads in Clinton Township.

Auditions

Admissions interviews for the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus Clown College and auditions for female dancers will be held Thursday, Oct. 3, at noon at Joe Louis Arena.

'Volunteers': Outstanding comedy

By Marion Trainor

Summer and comedy film releases go together. This year the season has seen a goodly number: "Back to the Future," "Summer Rental," "Pee Wee's Big Adventure," "National Lampoon's European Vacation," "Weird Science," "Real Genius," "Cocoon," "My Science Project," and the recently released "Volunteers."

From these, two stand out — "Back to the Future" and "Cocoon." Add to the list "Volunteers."

It is perfectly cast. Tom Hanks, with his quicksilver charm is tops as the Yale graduate, Lawrence Bourne II. He has the unfazeable aplomb that only generations of inherited wealth and social impeccable breeding can bring. He is a combination Bill Murray and Cary Grant.

When we meet him, Bourne, white dinner jacket and all, is escaping from a duo of mean-spirited gamblers who are threatening to skin him alive unless he pays up a debt.

When his father refuses to come through with money to ward off the knife-wielding thugs, Bourne is left with but one option; to trade his nubile girlfriend for a place on a plane headed for Thailand and Peace Corps duty.

On entering the cabin, he is faced with the sight of an enthusiastic group singing "Michael Row the Boat Ashore" and "Puff the Magic Dragon." "So this is hell," he mutters.

His seatmate is Tom Tuttle from Tacoma (John Candy) who reads books about maximizing his capital and recites his knowledge in an endless recitation of maxims.

Moving on to better things, Bourne finds a seat next to idealist Beth Wexler (Rita Wilson), a young lady who is dedicated to "doing good for others."

He spends the rest of the trip charming her but when he makes his pitch, she turns him down — emphatically. Bourne is puzzled. "I do think I put in the hours, don't you?" he asks.

When the three arrive in Thailand, they are advised of their mission; to build a bridge over the river whether the villagers want it or not.

Tom Tuttle from Tacoma takes charge and immediately gets off to a bad start when he suggests cutting down the sacred teakwood trees. He is rescued from the disaster by Al Toon (Gedde Watanbee) who speaks English and is the voice of the village. Al Toon is another perfectly cast character. He plays his role with wit and a sort of tolerance for the ignorance that some do-good Americans have of foreign values.

With the ground rules established, the fun and action heats up. Tuttle wanders into a forest and encounters a unfriendly tiger. Using his book-learned powers of persuasion, he tries to persuade the cat that he is not cat's evening meal. "Nice kitty," he intones, "You are a big kitty." No luck.

Trying to escape he falls into a trap meant for the tiger and is taken prison by the local guerrillas and brainwashed. When next we see him, he is reciting Mao's aphorisms with the same zeal that he once declared his love for America. He leads his tormentors into battle singing the Washington State fight song which sounds martial to his new-found allies.

In the meantime, Wexler is abducted by a mad CIA operator as harem material for the local warlord and opium smuggler.

In an unexpected turn of events, Bourne demonstrates Yankee initiative to rescue her and to restore Tuttle's sanity.

No synopsis can do justice to the mad situations and wild maneuvers in this uproariously funny movie. It is a series of unbelievable riotous happenings presided over by the suave wit and ingenious maneuvers of Bourne.

From the time he jumps on the plane until he takes over the island and the natives with his disdain for formalities, jokes pile upon jokes.

He accomplishes with less-than-orthodox methods what formal organizations and insistence on regulations fail to do.

He wins over the natives by teaching them to play New England baseball (It's straight poker but deuces are wild for white men).

Bourne was not a willing Peace Corps worker. "It's not that I can't help these people," he announces haughtily on his arrival. "I don't want to."

Before we leave him, he displays wit and gumption to prevent the bridge from being taken by converging armies.

He even decides to work out his Peace Corps commitment. And why not? By some devious means he has managed to dress up his tattered hut like a scene out of Casablanca, complete with a well-stocked bar. Besides he has plans to open a nightclub and turn the island into a mecca for tourists.

"Volunteers" is a comedy straight out of the '60s. To establish the time and place, the directors deftly set the opening credits against an amusing array of still photographs spelling out a complicated joke about the era, which is 1962; one more added touch to establish "Volunteers" as an outstanding comedy.

Stevens' films at DFT

"George Stevens: A Filmmaker's Journey," the 1985 study by George Stevens Jr. of the work of his father, will be shown by Detroit Film Theatre on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 13 and 14. Showings will be at 7 and 9:30 p.m., in the Detroit Institute of Arts auditorium.

Tickets at $2.50, and DFT's $17.50 discount coupon books, good for 16 admissions over one year from date of purchase, are available in advance through the Art Institute ticket office, and at the door. For information and a detailed DFT weekend movie guide through December, call 832-2730, during regular business hours.

On Sunday, Sept. 15, at 7 p.m. only, DFT's Sunday series, "The Films Of George Stevens" will open with his 1935 "Alice Adams," Katharine Hepburn stars with Fred MacMurray, Hattie McDaniel, and gossip columnist Hedda Hopper in this adaptation of Booth Tarkington's novel about slice-of-life Americana. The series will continue each Sunday into November, offering Stevens' 1936 "Swing Time" (Sept. 22) with Fred Astaire singing Jerome Kern's Oscar-winning "The Way You Look Tonight" to Ginger Rogers; the 1939 "Gunga Din" (Sept. 29) starring Cary Grant, Sam Jaffe, Douglas Fairbanks and Victor McLaglin in Rudyard Kipling's 19th-century India; Cary Grant, Ronald Coleman and Jean Arthur in the 1942 "The Talk Of The Town" (Oct. 6); Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn on the screen together for the first time in 1942's "Woman Of The Year" (Oct. 13); the 1951 pairing of Montgomery Clift with Elizabeth Taylor in "A Place In The Sun" (Oct. 20); Alan Ladd and Jack Palance in the 1953 Western classic, "Shane" (Oct. 27); and "Giant" (Nov. 3) starring James Dean in his final performance, and Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson, and Carroll Baker.

Advance reservations are required and may be made as early as a month before a concert, and as late as the Friday afternoon before a concert. For program information, a detailed schedule and reservations, call the Art Institute ticket office — 832-2730 — during regular business hours.

September's artists include the works of Barber and Schuman by Ross Harbaugh and Bernice Mrozinski Sept. 15; Baroque music of Vivaldi and Loeillet performed on original instruments by Thomas Cirrin and Daniel Jencka, Sept. 22; and sonatas by Beethoven and Faure by Richard Luby and Phyllis Rapoport Sept. 29.

September Song to celebrate music

"September Song," a new event celebrating music, is scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 18, from 5:30 until 9 p.m. in Detroit's University Cultural Center, two miles north of downtown on Woodward Avenue at Kirby Street.

Music — opera, chamber, jazz, gospel and more — will be featured along with innovative music related workshops such as "The History of Jazz" by Harold McKinney at the Detroit Historical Museum.

Between musical interludes, stroll through the University Cultural Center for a "Taste of Midtown" at sidewalk cafes featuring specialty foods by Alexander's, Altier's, The Gnome, Mr. Mike's, Snicker's, Traffic Jam & Snug and Union Street. Also visit Domino's Pizza, Hardee's and Z's Place located on Woodward Avenue in the University Cultural Center, plus the Melting Pot Cafe at the International Institute and Mark of Excellence at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

University Cultural Center Association member institutions include: Children's Museum/Detroit Public Schools, CCS/College of Art and Design, CCS/Detroit Community Music School, Detroit Institute of Arts, Detroit Historical Museum, Detroit Public Schools, Detroit Science Center, Engineering Society of Detroit, International Institute, Museum of African American History, Orchestra Hall, Scarab Club, University of Michigan-Dearborn/Rackham Building, Wayne State University and Your Heritage House.

Auditions

Auditions for "Guys and Dolls" and "The Mikado" to be presented by Dennis Wickline Productions, Inc. at the Golden Lion Restaurant, will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings, Sept. 23 and 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the lower level of the restaurant, 22380 Moross.

"Guys and Dolls" will run Friday and Saturday evenings from Nov. 1 through Dec. 28 as well as New Year's Eve. Five men and five women will be cast.

"The Mikado" will run Friday and Saturday evenings from April 11 through May 24. Four men and four women will be cast.

Payment upon casting in either production is $17.50 per performance. For further information, call 773-5914 between 7 and 8 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

'French Cancan'

Available for the first time in its uncut Technicolor version, Jean Renoir's 1955 "French Cancan" (English sub-titles) will be shown by Detroit Film Theatre Friday, Sept. 20. Showings will be at 7 and 9:30 p.m., in the Detroit Institute of Arts auditorium.

With a special cameo appearance by the celebrated cabaret star Edith Piaf, "French Cancan" is director Renoir's romantic vision of the famous Montmartre section of Paris during the creation of the Moulin Rouge. Called by critic Andrew Sarris "the most joyous hymn to the glory of art in the history of the cinema," the film stars Jean Gabin and Maria Felix.

Alcohol blamed

Alcohol-related accidents were responsible for the majority of the Labor Day holiday weekend fatalities, Col. Gerald L. Hough, Michigan State Police director, reported.

Fifteen people lost their lives in 13 fatal accidents on Michigan highways, including one pedestrian and two motorcycleists. Drinking was involved in 10 of the accidents, Hough said.

Although the number of fatalities was down from last year's holiday total of 19 fatalities, delayed deaths may drive the toll higher. Hough stressed that the use of seat belts could have reduced the number of deaths. In nine of the fatalities, seat belts were available, but six victims were not wearing them.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen.

Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. D.T.M., M.L.M.

JAGUAR FALVEY JAGUAR

THE BEST JAGUAR EVER BUILT:
Breeding tells. While trends in automotive design come and go, the 1985 Jaguar XJ6 remains defiantly true to its heritage: lithe, graceful and utterly distinctive.

It is the nature of automotive styling to be transient. And it is the nature of Jaguar to create cars of classic grace: cars whose beauty endures long after the fads are forgotten. Such a car is the Series III. Combining beauty of form with quick response and notable luxury, the XJ6 rewards its driver in many ways. Come in and experience the pleasures that have been bred into the best Jaguar ever built.
