Melanie and the Wolf

Grosse Pointe can boast of two distinguished movie stars in Julie Harris and Edward Herrmann, and another one of our own may be a star in the making.

Melanie Manos, daughter of Mara and the late Charley, can currently be seen on the silver screen in "Teen Wolf," starring the very popular Michael J. Fox.

According to her mother, Melanie plays a girl named Gina and can be seen "here and there" in the movie, sitting in the bleachers, attending dances and so on. She has a small speaking part and told her family that unfortunately, her best parts in the movie were left on the floor of the cutting room.

The Manos family, along with a group of friends, caught the flick at the Woods Theater and said they spent most of the evening howling and yelling "There she is!" Somewhat sheepishly, Mrs. Manos admitted she's only seen "Teen Wolf" once, but intends to return very soon.

Melanie, 21, is currently in her second year at UCLA, studying theater and working in two more films.

"Charley was kind of concerned when he found out Melanie would be in something called 'Teen Wolf,'" Mrs. Manos said, with a laugh. "He thought it might somehow be kind of schlocky. He was relieved when she explained it was with Michael Fox. He'd really flip if he knew the name of her second movie. It's called 'The Creep,' and it's science fiction. Something like a Spielberg film. That's all I know, but you can bet I'll go see it."

So will we, Mrs. Manos.

According to Melanie's sister Melinda, who'll soon be traveling to LA for a visit, Melanie will be appearing in a third movie called "Pretty in Pink." Melinda, who has an interest in politics, is considering giving the movies a try as well. It sort of runs in the family. Older brother John is a Hollywood stunt driver, so keep an eye out for his credit line in the future.

See you at the movies.

Jobs well done

The Grosse Pointe Woods Council did a good thing and honored two of its heroic citizens recently.

On Sept. 16, the council passed two resolutions for devotion above and beyond the call of duty. The first went to Woods Director of Public Safety Jack Patterson for his actions in subduing a gun-toting teenager who invaded the offices of a Mack Avenue dentist last February.

In case you don't recall it, the youngster wanted his braces taken off. When the dentist refused because no parents were present, the kid whipped out a loaded .45 and persuaded the good doctor to honor his request.

Patterson and a number of other officers responded and the director grabbed the assailant's gun hand and held on while he was subdued. Two shots were fired during the event, and luckily no one was injured.

The Woods expressed its appreciation to Patterson for "his outstanding performance of duty." Jack Patterson is a very modest man and you'd never hear about this resolution from him, so we thought we'd tell you instead.

The other resolution went to Mark Rieth, who was working as a lifeguard at the Woods pool on July 2 when he pulled an unconscious child from the swimming pool and revived her on the spot with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Because of Mark's efforts, the child made a full recovery. Rieth was thanked for "his performance of duties and his outstanding lifesaving efforts."

Thanks from all of us, guys.

Schools to hire teacher, aides

By Nancy Parmenter

The Board of Education moved Monday night to reduce class sizes at the elementary school level by hiring one additional teacher, 4.5 classroom aides, and a study hall supervisor, at a total cost of $65,000.

Charges last week that some of the classes at the high schools are also overcrowded were not addressed at the meeting. Superintendent John Whritner told the board in a memo that secondary numbers "have been adjusted or are still in the process. I am not hearing great cries of pain."

The hiring was aimed at alleviating the crowding in 19 elementary classes throughout the district. Some of the schools were able to shift population between classes to solve the problem.

Whritner conceded that hiring aides to assist teachers is not the same as actually hiring additional teachers and splitting the classes. He said, however, that the aides are the best solution with budgetary constraints in mind.

"In developing recommended solutions, we have tried to keep cost in mind," he wrote to the board. "An aide for the balance of 1985-86 will cost approximately $6,000; a teacher $30,000+."

This year's increased enrollment came as a surprise to school administrators, who had projected 180 fewer students. Last year, in expectation of a drop in enrollment, the board made staff cuts. Earlier this year, it was forced to reverse itself and hire three new teachers, the last of whom is expected to be in place next week.

Monday's hiring covers only four schools. The board unanimously agreed to provide half an aide to the kindergarten class at Defer and 1.5 aides to kindergarten at Monteth. At Poupard, there will be one aid for first grade and one additional teacher for fourth grade.

Poupard is one of two sites offering federally funded reading and math classes for high-need students under Chapter 1. One of the requirements of Chapter 1 is that class sizes not exceed class sizes elsewhere in the district.

"They want to make sure the schools don't use the extra teacher (provided under Chapter 1) to reduce class sizes," explained Poupard Principal James Cooper. Poupard already has one teacher and one aide specifically assigned to Chapter 1 and funded entirely by the federal government.

In addition, Trombly School will receive 1.5 aides spread between fourth and fifth grades, although Whritner's memo indicated that the hiring of a teacher and splitting the classes could be justified.

The additional staff will cost approximately $65,000, Whritner said. Of that, $25,000 is budgeted, leaving the school system to find an extra $40,000 not now in the budget.

Maximum class sizes in the district have been creeping down over the years. Board Treasurer Dorothy Kennel said, "When I taught kindergarten, they had to have 29 in a room before they would open it up, so we're making progress."

Doris Cook, president of the Grosse Pointe Education Association, told the board she has some reservations about hiring aides instead of teachers at Trombly.

"Civics and general math are particularly overloaded by main-

Farms couple recalls terror in Mexico

By Tom Greenwood

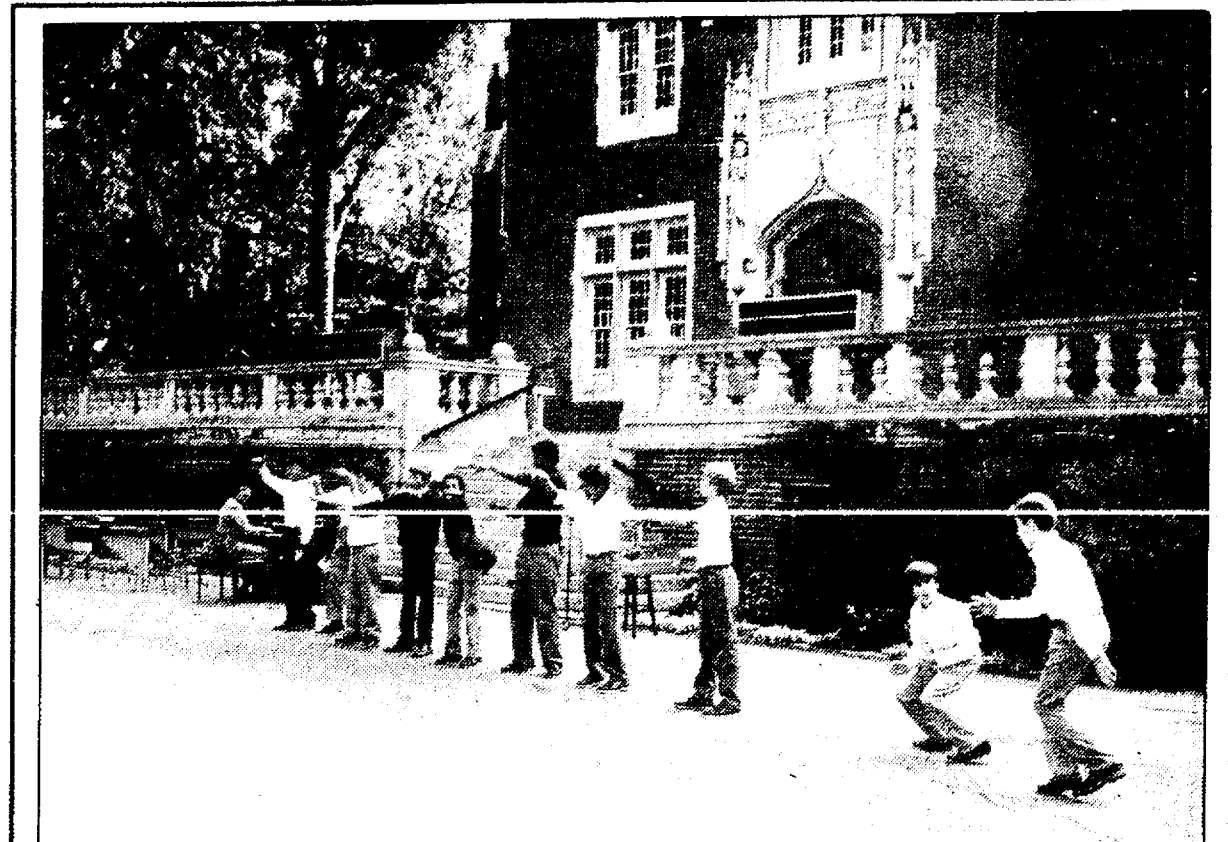

One of the newspapers George and Rita Brady brought back from Mexico City said it all: "Oh, Dios!" screamed the black, four-inch headline. It sat atop a photo of a collapsed building that covered half the front page.

It was supposed to be a business/vacation trip for the Bradys, residents of the Farms, who left for Mexico City via Dallas on Friday the 13th.

"My husband works for a firm that supplies automotive carpeting to the Ford Motor Company," Brady said. "We were down there with a number of other suppliers. Thank God, none of us was hurt in the quakes, but it was absolutely terrifying."

After visiting family members in Dallas, they left for Mexico City on Sept. 16, and stayed at the Maria Isabelle Sheraton, near the American Embassy. They were both in their room on the 15th floor when the quake struck.

"I was sort of dozing and George was getting dressed for his meeting," Brady said. "I felt dizzy and nauseated at the same time. Even though we had been in the country just a short while, I thought maybe it was the change of food and water. I climbed out of bed and was thrown to the floor. I said I was sick and my husband said he was too.

"Then we noticed that the building was swaying. After that the room began to shake and it got very, very violent. We bounced from one wall to the other. George threw me down between our bed and the walls and pulled the mattress over us. We literally bounced between the wall and the bed for the four to seven minutes the quake lasted. It seemed like four to seven hours. I really thought this was it. We were going to die."

A friend who was to meet the Bradys outside their building that morning said he saw the tower they were living in violently sway back and forth on a 12-foot arc.

In the hallways, people were screaming and the passageway and stairwell were filled with dust.

"At first we thought it was smoke, but it was from the destruction," Brady said. "The closer we got to the main floor, the more destruction there was. We had to pick our way around debris. There were people wandering around in their pajamas. I don't know why that building didn't collapse."

Once outside, they stared in disbelief at the destruction around them. They finally sat on a park bench on Reforma Boulevard for about an hour, watching as Mexico City's population gradually snapped out of its shock.

After a while, hotel personnel told them to return for food and their belongings. The Bradys returned to their room and prepared to move in with friends who lived in the city.

"There were cracks in the walls on the 15th floor," Brady said. "You could see daylight through them. I was terrified the whole time we were back up there. Believe it or not, after we cleared out, my husband went off to his meeting. That's the way things went. People just sort of got back to their lives. It was so strange."

Information on the magnitude of the quake was slow in coming. Some phone lines were knocked out, there was only one channel on television, and radio stations were out of commission.

"Some people had to call back to the U.S. to get more information," Brady said. "Of course everything was in Spanish, which made it difficult for us. We went to the American Embassy to get information and send messages out to our relatives. They wouldn't let us in. They kept the doors closed and locked. We had to talk to them through the fence, but they did take our number to call home to our kids."

"What really amazed us was that the newspapers were out on the street with extra editions in about four hours. They did an incredible job. The people of Mexico were wonderful. They were warm, generous and gracious. Everyone pitched in. We didn't see any signs of looting. Everyone, old people and youngsters included, dug through the rubble with shovels. Private cars and trucks painted red crosses on their sides and transported food, medicine and victims from the destruction."

The Bradys were at their friends' home the evening the second earthquake struck. "Talk about terror," Brady said. "I looked at the walls and they were shaking. The mirrors were swaying and the chandelier was dancing back and forth, nearly touching the ceiling. We stood beneath an archway. This one only lasted a couple of minutes. We didn't feel sick this time. I think it's because we weren't on the 15th floor this time."

The Bradys didn't notice much noise during the quakes, but could hear the building groan and glass break as the quake faded away.

"We drove around the city afterwards," Brady said. "Much of it was cordoned off because of collapsed buildings and gas leaks. You could smell gas everywhere. People keep propane tanks in their homes, and it kept exploding. There was no rhyme or reason to the destruction. Old buildings would stand and newer ones would fall."

"If two buildings were side by side, one would be untouched and the other wrecked. There was a large statue of an angel in the park across from our hotel. It fell during the 1957 quake," she continued. "It was left standing this time. Those poor people. It's a miracle more than 10,000 weren't killed. There's over 17 million persons in Mexico City, with more coming in every day. It's wall-to-wall humanity. I've never seen so many cars in my life. Traffic there is like rush hour on the Lodge here, only it's around-the-clock rush hour in Mexico City."

Board debates internship program for North, South high schools

By Nancy Parmenter

A recommendation by the school administration to take some pressure off the high school counseling department by hiring interns to perform some of the paperwork chores met with discussion and dissension at the Sept. 23 special board meeting. The proposal was ultimately approved, 6-1, Carol Marr dissenting.

The issue of increasing the guidance and counseling staff has been under consideration since July. In its original form, the proposal was to hire an administrative supervisor.

Monday's proposal attacked the problem from the other direction: putting some of the drudge work on the shoulders of an intern to free up the counselors for counseling.

"I'm not comfortable with the timing of this," Marr objected. "We need more background. . . . What is troublesome to me is that it has come about so quickly. It's not a budgeted item. We need a better handle on where we're going with it."

Superintendent John Whritner said that the two interns would be current teachers who are interested in administrative careers. They would act as interns at their present salaries and would be replaced by new teachers at a lower rate. Whritner estimated the cost of the program at $49,000, depending upon the qualifications of the replacement teachers.

Several board members agreed that the counselors are tied up with too much detail.

"Anybody who spends much time at the high schools notices two administrators handling discipline. They can get to spending all their time on it," said trustee Joan Hanpeter. "They have a responsibility to the personal development of young people. I have reservations when one person becomes the repository for all school problems — it needs a total staff involvement."

"This gives staff members an opportunity to try their wings," Hanpeter went on. "We always talk about promoting from within — this will give us the opportunity to observe staff members in an administrative role."

Hanpeter also agreed with Marr that there has been insufficient long-range planning. "We have been through a year of finger-in-the-dike," she said. But she said she supports the internship concept because counselors should not have to spend the major portion of their

City plans major fall tree-planting

By Tom Greenwood

Despite a jump in prices, the City will proceed with an aggressive fall tree planting program, the city council decided Monday night.

The council voted 5-0 to buy 85 trees from the Greater Detroit Landscaping company for $10,625, or $125 per tree. Councilman Arthur Fetter and Willie Montgomery were absent.

City Manager Thomas Kressbach explained that in the past two or three years, the trees had averaged anywhere from $103 to $110 in cost, but that prices in earlier bids this year had averaged $155 per tree.

"But by limiting the variety of the trees, we were able to trim the cost back to about $125 per tree," he said. "We are satisfied now with the variety we were able to receive for $125."

Kressbach also said the city was about $13,000 over its budget for tree removal for the current year, and that the extra cost would be absorbed by the city budget.

The trees to be purchased this year include Norway Crimson King and sugar maples, lindens, ash and locust, Kressbach said. The city had earlier included ornamental pears, two types of ash and lindens on its purchase list, but eliminated them when the cost went up.

The council was advised that the city lost 106 trees on city property over the past year. Dutch elm disease killed 105 and the city also lost one maple.

Kressbach said the city was also conducting its tree maintenance program to combat the spread of the disease through tree injections, constructive pruning and sectioning and the prompt removal of diseased trees.

During the past year, the city had sprayed 1,440 trees, injected 450, pruned 70, removed 106 trees and repaired four others. Kressbach said it was believed the high loss rate was the result of a warm early spring, which enabled the beetle to begin breeding earlier and infecting trees prior to the dormant spraying.

The new trees will be planted where trees were removed if it is suitable and interference would not result from overhead wires, street lights, drive approaches and other factors, Kressbach said.

The 1985 tree replanting program will be funded 25 percent by Community Development Block Grants. In 1984, the city planted 75 replacement trees.

Offices avoid smoking policy leave workers to work it out

By Nancy Parmenter

Non-smokers carry a lot more clout than they used to. Gone are the days when they had to prove medical problems in order to get a smoke-free zone to work in. The pendulum has swung so far that many smokers now feel discriminated against.

Michigan mandates non-smoking areas in restaurants, but has not addressed a policy in the workplace. Individual offices are left to fight it out among themselves.

An informal survey of local offices shows that people are by and large managing the decision without open warfare. None of the offices have formal policies, but rely on courtesy, persuasion, and occasionally, an employee vote.

The question of a formal policy has never come up at Colonial Federal. The bank's Tom Bush said there are 17 office employees, six of whom smoke.

"Our smokers are pretty conscientious," he said. "They head for the kitchen to smoke."

Not smoking at their desks is "good business discretion," Bush said. Of course, many of the bank's customers smoke, "but we're here to serve them — we hand them an ashtray."

"Our smokers are pretty conscientious. They head for the kitchen to smoke."

— Tom Bush
Colonial Federal

At St. John Hospital, employees in the various departments settle the issue by a majority vote — if it becomes an issue at all. In some departments, "the people who smoke, smoke; the people who don't smoke, don't," according to one employee.

Patient accounting, which employs about 50 people in two shifts, voted not to allow smoking at their desks. There is a non-smoking section in the employee cafeteria. The public relations office is peopled by non-smokers, but just by happenstance.

"I see the smoking population dropping," said PR representative Dorothy Colombo. "It's too annoying to the non-smokers."

The Grosse Pointe News employs about seven smokers out of 19 office employees. As a matter of evolution, one of the offices has only non-smokers, the others have all the smokers. No formal smoking policy has ever been discussed, although in the past, desktop smoke filters have been purchased for unhappy non-smokers.

According to The Tobacco Observer, an industry publication, corporations across the country are relying upon individual courtesy to solve the differences between smokers and non-smokers. A survey of 445 of the nation's largest and fastest-growing companies, conducted by a California think tank and funded by the Tobacco Institute, showed that one-third have some type of employee smoking policy. One-third of those are located in a state or locality that requires such a policy by law.

The study found that 87 percent of the companies do not assign employees to particular offices on the basis of smoking preference. Ninety-nine percent do not have policies against hiring smokers and most don't even ask if prospective employees smoke.

Smiliar feelings surfaced locally. Sandy Berardo, office manager at Jacobson's, expressed some surprise that some offices restrict smoking.

"There have never been any complaints here because there are no few smokers," she said. The office employs 20 people, but only three smoke.

In the city administrative offices of Grosse Pointe Woods, which employ 10 people, there is an unwritten policy of actively encouraging smokers to do it somewhere else.

"We try to discourage it at the desks and urge them to smoke on their coffee breaks," said City Administrator Chester Petersen.

Office Manager Nita Capitan of the 70-employee AAA office on Mack said the subject of a smoking policy has come up in the past and is bound to come up again.

AAA has designated separate areas for smokers and non-smokers in the cafeteria, but has no policy for the office area. Nearly half of the office employees smoke, a far higher percentage than the one-third usually quoted for the national adult population.

"It's a touchy subject," she said. "Unless the company tells him to put in a formal policy, our labor relations manager doesn't want to touch it. We try to work out individual situations and ask smokers to be courteous."

Air messages

It was an absolutely perfect day for a balloon launch. Just ask the hundreds of students at Richard Elementary School who took a brief break from their classes last week to send hundreds of brightly colored balloons soaring into the cloudless blue sky. Each balloon was equipped with the sender's name and address, so the kids can find just where their helium-filled flyers finally landed. Enjoying herself immensely at the event was two-year-old Rebecca Skinner, whose antics delighted her mother, Beatrice.

The Punch makes it perfect

By Tom Greenwood

It's another chapter in the life of the Punch, as the former Punch and Judy Theater is affectionately known.

The old theater, a Grosse Pointe landmark since the 1930s, was the location for a training video for the Chevrolet division of General Motors last week.

A large truck owned by the Troy-based Sandy Corp., parked before the theater and 15 crew members began carrying equipment into the now-vacant structure, which for years was known for its plush interior.

"Our company basically produces training and communication programs for Chevy dealers," said Len Walkowicz, executive producer of Chevrolet product training for the company. "This is not a commercial, and it won't be seen by the general public. It's about 20 minutes long when finished, and will be shown to Chevy dealers only."

"We're using the Punch for on-location product comparison between the Astro and Ford Aero Star mini-vans. One of our assistant directors was previously with the Classic Film Theater here in this theater. When he heard we were looking for someplace like this, he recommended it to us."

The theater's decor was perfect for the concept the film's producers had in mind: a take-off of the popular "At the Movies" program hosted by movie reviewers Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert.

"This theater is a natural because of its size, physical logistics, interiors and its current availability," Walkowicz said. "It also has a great balcony."

It's the balcony where most of the action takes place. The majority of the crew, including two actors, are jammed into the hallway at the top of the stairs.

A large section of railing has been removed, and the area is filled with lights, cameras, sound equipment, TV monitors and crew members. The plush red armchairs that fill the Punch's balcony are pushed or piled to one side. On the main floor, lights set up in the aisles are aimed at the screen and the decor on either side.

Sitting calmly in the midst of all the equipment are New York-based actors Dave Bailey and Don Billit. Bailey, sandy-haired and quick to smile, is recognizable from dozens of commercials. Billit, dark and handsome, works as an actor on a daytime soap. They talk quietly between themselves, rehearse their lines and smile easily into the cameras, completely self-assured before the lights.

Just like "At the Movies," they turn to the darkened screen of the Punch and Judy and simulate watching a movie.

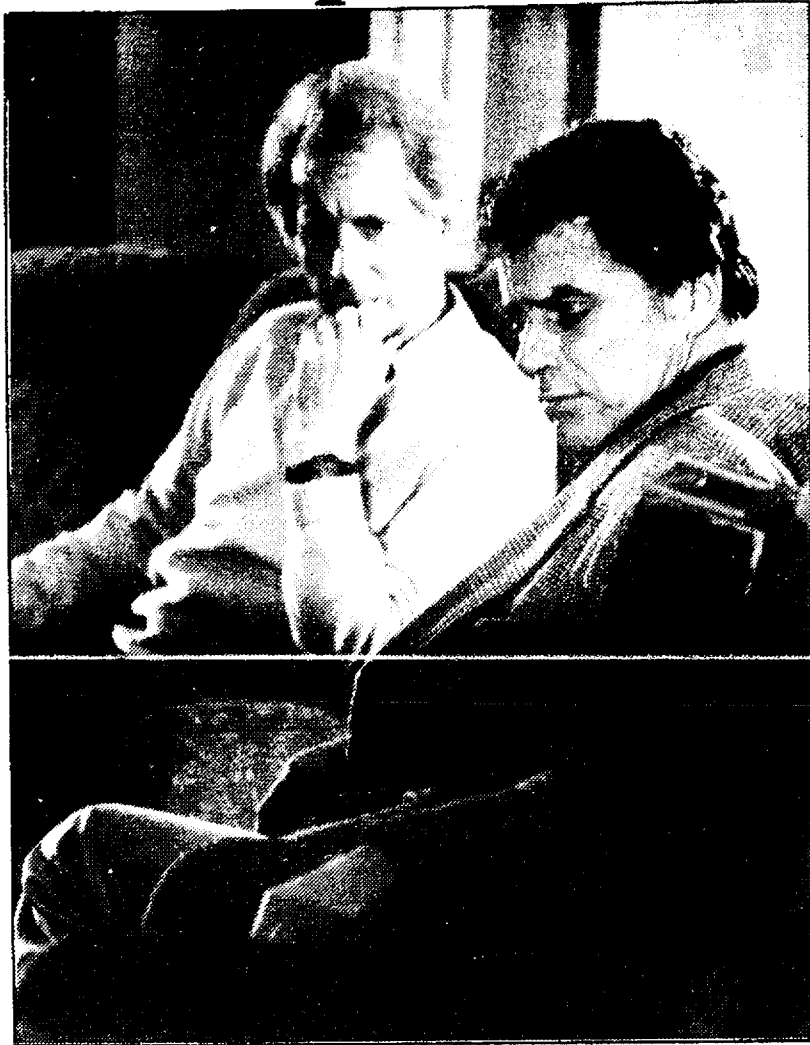

"They won't actually be seeing the comparison film," Walkowicz said. "We just raise the lower lights on the screen so they'll know the proper time to react and turn to the cameras."

"The actual training film the actors are supposed to be watching will be plugged in later through post-production magic. Actually, I think the two of them are working out well. This is the first time they've performed together. They auditioned for the job in New York and we brought them here. Detroit has a good reputation as a industrial film town, but we still occasionally bring in outside actors for the shoot."

During the actual filming, producer Frank Kratochvie and director John Wyland guide the crew and actors toward the finished product.

After two or three rehearsals, Wyland gives the okay for the real thing. Things proceed smoothly until he calls "cut" and explains the type of voice inflection he's looking for to the actors. Once again, things are rolling smoothly until one actor mispronounces a word, tries to correct it, curses and breaks the entire crew up.

"Things are going pretty well," Walkowicz said, standing off in a corner. "This shouldn't be any more than a one-day shoot. Everyone's working together as a team. There's a good atmosphere here today."

A 1982 injustice admitted

So far as we know, Rep. George Crockett is the first prominent state Democrat to admit publicly that "the Democratic Party did Grosse Pointe an injustice" when it split the community into the 13th and 14th congressional districts in the 1982 congressional reapportionment. It was, of course, a classic case of gerrymandering.

In his interview with Nancy Parmenter in the Sept. 19 issue of the Grosse Pointe News, Crockett said what many Grosse Pointers have been saying ever since adoption of the 1982 reapportionment plan that put Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe City into the 13th District and left the remaining Pointes — the Farms, the Shores and the Woods — in the 14th District.

To his credit, Crockett added another comment that might have come from a Grosse Pointe Republican: "All the Pointes identify more with the political philosophy and thinking of Macomb and Oakland counties than with Detroit. They should have been left there."

Well, what did happen back there in 1982? And why?

The state Legislature under the control of the Democratic Party enacted a reapportionment plan that was so favorable to the Democrats that the then-Republican governor, William Milliken, vetoed the bill. That action put the reapportionment problem into the hands of a three-member federal panel from the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. That panel of two Democratic members and one Republican judge adopted the state Democratic reapportionment plan with a few changes in the outlines of the 5th and 9th districts, and then ordered the revised plan into effect as "the most politically fair plan" before the court. That was the plan that split the Pointes.

Even before the court made its decision, the Concerned Republican Committee of the Pointes had filed objections to the plan on the grounds that the Pointes have substantial interest in common that justified keeping them all in one district: They share one school system, the Grosse Pointe War Memorial facilities and the Neighborhood Club; their police and fire departments are substantially integrated into one mutual support system and all work within one radio network; they share the same trash disposal system and efforts then were being made to integrate them into one district court. The committee added:

"They (the Pointes) also constitute one monolithic (albeit not very big) block of Republican voters — and therein lies the rub. What little effect the Grosse Pointes have had in the past the plaintiffs (the Democratic Party) would split in two and put half in the 13th and half in the 14th District, both of which are heavily Democratic."

In its decision, the court panel made no reference to the Supreme Court decision cited by the Concerned Republican Committee that offered the following guidelines: "The boundaries should be drawn with an eye to compactness, contiguousness and the preservation of natural, political and traditional boundaries, not racially balanced representation."

As the Grosse Pointe News pointed out at the time, the federal court panel refused to even entertain the GOP intervenors' point of view. The panel said that "intervenor who have submitted partial plans or who seek adjustment in individual districts within total plans cannot be seriously considered." Why not? Because "the ripple effect of such changes in individual district of proposed complete plans would require reassessment of the entire plan, a luxury in the expenditure of time already rejected as one the court can ill afford."

The court said devising a plan of its own was not feasible, and yet it did not adopt the Democratic plan in toto. It made certain adjustments in the boundaries of the 5th and 9th districts in line with the recommendations in a plan submitted by state Republicans. Thus the court seems to have been inconsistent in making some changes and at the same time rejecting other revisions proposed by intervenors representing just one district.

Well, we suppose the Grosse Pointes should be indebted to Rep. Crockett for his long-delayed admission of a Democratic injustice to Grosse Pointe. But there is little that Pointe residents can do about that 1982 injustice now except to remember the names of the Democrats who voted for the plan in the Legislature when they come before the voters in the 1986 election — and to keep an eye on the next reapportionment in the early 1990s.

The 1982 Democratic reapportionment plan passed by the Legislature and later adopted with little change by the federal court was, of course, a classic example of gerrymandering, which means "to divide into election districts . . . in an unnatural and unfair way with a view to giving a political party an unfair advantage over its opponent . . ."

A little learning . . .

It was Alexander Pope who wrote: "A little learning is a dangerous thing; drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring."

That point may help explain why it is that parents of children attending public school rate the schools significantly higher than do people without children in schools. Normally, parents have more than "a little learning" about the schools their children attend.

Pope's comment also may help explain why it is that both parents and the public at large rate the public schools in their own community significantly higher than they do the public schools of the nation as a whole.

The annual Gallup Poll of the public's attitudes toward the public schools, published in the September issue of the magazine Phi Delta Kappan, shows 71 percent of parents of children in public schools rate their local schools A or B, 43 percent of the public rate their local public schools A or B and only 27 percent of the public rate public schools of the nation as a whole as high as A or B. It is probably understandable, too, that 84 percent of parents of children performing at an above-average level rate their children's schools A or B, while 60 percent of parents of average or below-average students give such schools an A or B rating.

As for other issues, the poll found that a third of the respondents say teachers salaries are too low, six out of 10 favor merit pay for teachers, and almost 90 percent favor a basic competency test to measure teachers' general knowledge and ability to teach.

Almost half of the public also give teachers in local public schools high marks of A or B, but parents are more likely to award those grades than are respondents with no children in school.

It is not surprising, of course, that parents are shown to be such strong supporters of the local public schools. Because of their concern for and interest in the education of their own children, they tend to keep themselves well informed about school problems. But it is also encouraging that even those people with no children in the public schools give fairly good marks to the public schools in their own communities.

A well-qualified fact finder

The selection of Richard Strichartz as the fact finder to investigate any possible violations in the Wayne county contract bidding process and a possible conflict of interest in the office of the county executive ought to alleviate fears that the investigation is politically motivated. Such fears won't be set at rest, of course, until the investigation is completed and the board of county commissioners which authorized it has completed its actions on it. But the appointment is reassuring.

Strichartz brings a distinguished and respected record to his task. He was educated at Columbia, Oxford and Yale and has served in a variety of professional jobs in three states. Currently a law professor at Wayne State University, he was city controller under the late Mayor Jerome Cavanaugh and served as legislative counsel to a joint House-Senate committee that rewrote the state's health code. He does appear to be a well-qualified fact finder.

Equally important, he was the unanimous choice of the Wayne county commissioners for the job. Even the lone Republican on the county board, Mary Dumas, had good words to say about Strichartz' selection and so did independent observers of county government. His appointment also satisfies county board Chairman John Hertel who had pushed for an independent fact finder to "depoliticize" the investigation.

Hertel, whose district includes the Pointes, told the Grosse Pointe News that Strichartz was one of a number of excellent candidates considered for the job and appeared to have the best qualifications. Other board members at first had proposed either a "Watergate-type" public investigation by a board panel or appointment of a special prosecutor by the grand jury. But Hertel wisely opted for the fact finder as "the most rational and objective way to go."

The board chairman said he felt either of the other plans could have resulted in damage to county government and to the new charter under which the recent reforms and reorganization have been carried out. He insisted the fact finder will not engage in "a fishing and hunting expedition" as some observers had predicted but will report back in 90 days on what, if anything, he has found wrong.

Strichartz will have subpoena power, but Hertel expects him to show restraint and not use it unless it becomes necessary to obtain information. It was the granting of this power and the expansion of the investigation into contracts other than the one for renovation of the Old County Building in Detroit that led to fears the probe would become a political fishing expedition. But with the appointment of Strichartz and Hertel's renewed pledge to "depoliticize" the investigation, those fears are minimized even though they will not disappear unless and until Strichartz' report sets them at rest and the county board disposes of the case.

County Executive William Lucas has earned a fine reputation as a reformer of county government and he wisely says he has nothing to hide. We hope he hasn't, even though his approval of a contract for a $26 million renovation of the Old County Building by a private firm in which his aide, Dennis Nystrom, had an interest was at least politically unwise. Since the firm now has been dropped from the project, it is clear that neither Nystrom nor the firm involved is going to profit from it. But Lucas could be damaged by the investigation, even if cleared of wrongdoing.

It still looks as if Lucas has come under new scrutiny since he announced his switch from Democratic to Republican and indicated he's planning to seek the GOP nomination for governor. Those with suspicions that the current investigation is part of a Democratic effort to cut Lucas down to size will be satisfied with nothing less than a comprehensive report that sticks to facts and avoids politics. We hope that Strichartz can deliver on Hertel's promise to seek that goal.

Quality teaching or rhetoric?

To the Editor:

If a title should reflect content, I fail to recognize the sense of your Sept. 12 editorial "Good News About Teachers."

You begin by citing a shortage of teaching personnel requiring the hiring of foreign and "less than fully qualified new teachers." This is good news? Then after an acknowledgement of the "generation or more of neglect of the school teacher," you rejoice at the current average salary of American public school teachers — $23,546. While this figure may, as you point out, reflect a 7.3 percent increase over 1983-84, further analysis reveals that this $23,546 equals only $7,319 in purchasing power in 1967 dollars. (Today's Education, Sept. 1985, p. 73.) What is more, this "average" salary is being paid to veteran teachers: the "average" teacher in Michigan is 43 years old with 15 years of teaching. (The Detroit News, Sept. 12, 1985) Is that good news?

Today's Education provides further perspective by publishing a comparison between the estimated average starting salaries for teachers and for comparable professions. (Northwestern University's Endicott Report) Teaching, at $14,500, occupies the bottom rung of a pay ladder rising to $26,844 for engineering graduates. Thus, a teacher with 15 years experience may earn less than college graduates entering many other professions. As Today's Education observes, "Even the lowest salary cited — $19,344 for liberal arts graduates — surpasses the average for [beginning] teachers by 33 percent." Good news about teachers? I think not.

Nor can the call for various "merit pay" or teacher-testing programs be considered good news. You acknowledge that it is too soon to evaluate the Tennessee plan, but everything I have read about it and Florida's Master-Teaching program indicates serious flaws, inadequate planning and staffing, and declining teacher morale. In Florida, new positions are being established to implement the program, non-teaching positions assuredly, increasing bureaucracy, requiring expenditure of more money for testing instruments and evaluators, especially since the administrative non-teachers — even the least experienced — earn higher salaries than mere teachers. Further expense for dubious, unproven results does not equal good news to me.

Good news about teachers? No. Instead, your editorial presents selective statistics and wishful thinking about currently touted panaceas. I do agree with one sentence, though: "... schools must pay for quality teaching if that is what they want." My concern is whether "they" want the reality of quality or only the rhetoric, reality or conveniently manipulated statistics resulting in "good" news or "bad" news, whichever way the wind happens to be blowing.

Suzanne Boivin
English Teacher,
Grosse Pointe South High

Editor's Note: We appreciate the writer's concern about the points made in the editorial but feel she has been somewhat guilty of the same fault of selective quotation that she finds in the editorial. The editorial cited, for example, the report that "in each of the last two years the average pay (of teachers) has risen more than 7 percent, or more than twice the rate of inflation" and it also expressed the opinion that "teachers finally are beginning to catch up in their annual pay."

Make sure it's right

To the Editor:

I am writing to you regarding your article, "More schools to close," published in your Sept. 5 issue. Considering all the facts showing increases in births, closing schools in the near future would be a mistake.

Enrollment records now show an increase of 166 more students than the schools were expecting for this year. Plus, what are the schools going to do with all the pre-schoolers? My block in particular has seven pre-schoolers and two kindergartners. We have not had that many children on this block since the late '60s.

At the onset of this controversy, the board was going to close four elementary schools and incorporate them into the middle schools, making them K through 8. A citizen study found that these students could not physically fit into the middle schools.

This controversial issue might be worth the school board's time to take a long, hard look at the demographic study done by Dr. Ziegler, a pediatrician at Bon Secours. He spoke of the increased birth rate in the Grosse Pointes.

I am glad that the board has established a plan to research the number of schools needed in the future. I would like them to be sure to make an accurate projection and make sure it is right for Grosse Pointe.

Factual not idealistic

To the Editor:

Regarding the letter in the Sept. 19 issue of the Grosse Pointe News under the heading, "Words worth remembering":

The words of General Dwight Eisenhower regarding man's dream of no more wars are excellent indeed, however, the good general left no clue as to when, if ever, a truly peaceful world will come about.

In the meantime some words that we had best remember, if we do not want our children to become slaves in a truly evil empire, are those spoken by Mikhail Gorbachev in a speech before the Central Committee of the Communist Party (reported in the July 1, 1985 bulletin of the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade), as follows: "I am an orthodox Marxist-Leninist."

Soviet military and economic strengths must be maintained at the highest level.

Continue the support of Cuba and Nicaragua and support other revolutions.

Divide and weaken the will of the United States authorities, and people, to resist communist aggression by promoting various peace movements."

The above words of Gorbachev are factual, not idealistic.

Congressional immunity protected McCarthy

To the Editor:
It was an amusing error that went undetected in a recent Mike Andrzejczyk story — something about the courses that “fishermen” entering high school would have to take. (Editors Note: The word should have been freshmen.) Too bad that the following quotation from a letter in the 9/12/85 issue wasn’t an error; it was hardly amusing. “... Joseph McCarthy was never proved wrong about any of his accusations, but the liberal media attacked him viciously.” A most incredible statement.

If someone had falsely accused that letter writer of having operated the gas chambers in Dachau, he would have had recourse to the American system of justice, that is, his day in court, and would probably have been indemnified because of slander. Senator McCarthy was very careful to accuse individuals only when he was protected by congressional immunity; off the Senate floor his accusations were likely to be very vague and general. On and on he went, preying on a hysteria he was helping to promote, stirring up fear and hatred with his insinuations and innuendos, questioning the “Americanism” of even Dwight Eisenhower and George Marshall.

Certainly it was the media, liberal if you must, that ended his scurrious career of character assassination. Our politicians, ever sensitive to political currents, remained expediently silent lest the McCarthy vituperation be directed at them. If one lacks moral courage, it is difficult to criticize one who drapes his shoulders with the Stars and Stripes. It was perhaps television’s greatest moment when the senator’s politically inspired, self-serving witch-hunt was exposed to the American public, when “Tail-gunner Joe’s” pseudo-anti-communism was revealed for the hypocrisy that it was.

The letter writer claims that none of the senator’s accusations

War Memorial

To the Editor:
Congratulations on your excellent story about the Alger House (now known as the Grosse Pointe War Memorial) and its years of service to the Grosse Pointe communities.

Looking ahead, the management and directors of the War Memorial should consider the success of the past in serving the Grosse Pointes as a non-profit operation, not competing with taxpaying businesses.

The purpose of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial should be as it has been in the past — a service to all residents with concern for the reputation of the communities supporting it. Selling liquor, wine or were proved wrong. Were any of his accusations ever sustained in a court of law? Did any of those accused by McCarthy have his day in court which, the conservatives assure us, is part of the American tradition? In order to deal with the communist “threat,” do we have to assume guilt, a la the medieval Inquisition, until the accused proves his innocence? Are any American freedoms safe from the fanaticism of the self-appointed subversive hunters?

has a purpose

beer in a tax-free institution is not good public relations for the War Memorial nor the Grosse Pointes.

As a former contributor, I am disappointed and disillusioned at the effort expended to secure a state license to become a “dram shop” and above all to spend thousands of its contributors’ dollars to buy a license formerly held by an entrepreneur.

Let us continue to build our communities’ good image with good programs and not defeat that goal by selling liquor at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

I say

When I was a kid growing up in the ‘50s, I used to wish I had been part of the Roaring ‘20s. The flappers, the gangsters and the rum-runners all seemed so glamorous. And I would fantasize about being among that select colony of expatriate writers in Paris. When I was a kid, almost any other age had a lot more allure than the dull ‘50s.

Everything then was so prescribed. In fashion, something was either right or wrong — there was no gray area. Hemlines were one certain length and not a half-inch higher or a half-inch lower. White was never worn to a wedding unless you were the bride and funerals always called for black or a dark, somber color. Red at a funeral would have been scandalous. But then in my neighborhood, red was suspect anyway, particularly red shoes and red fingernails.

I made the quantum leap to red nails about three years ago, but I still have never owned a pair of red shoes. I have nothing against them and I think they look fine. And I know if I bought a pair, I would not be struck by lightning, but I’m not taking any chances, no siree.

Young women could do anything they wanted when they got out of high school. They could go on to college or get a nice job in an office. They could be teachers or nurses or secretaries, as long as they got married and began raising a family before they were 25.

In high schools, girls never, I mean never, called up a boy on the phone. Boys could do almost anything and adults would smile indulgently and say, “Boys will be boys.” But catch a girl doing the dirty boogie and her reputation was ruined, possibly forever.

Those were the days. Yet despite the rigid codes of behavior and dress, most of my peers seemed reasonably happy and adjusted. It was because we didn’t know any different. We accepted the standard for a way of life then. Those who didn’t — well, too bad.

If you accepted the code, which I did, fine. But I still wanted to be part of another era. Everything else seemed better than the somnambulant ‘50s. The defiant ‘60s were full of eruptions and it made the ‘50s seem to be more of a do-nothing decade than ever.

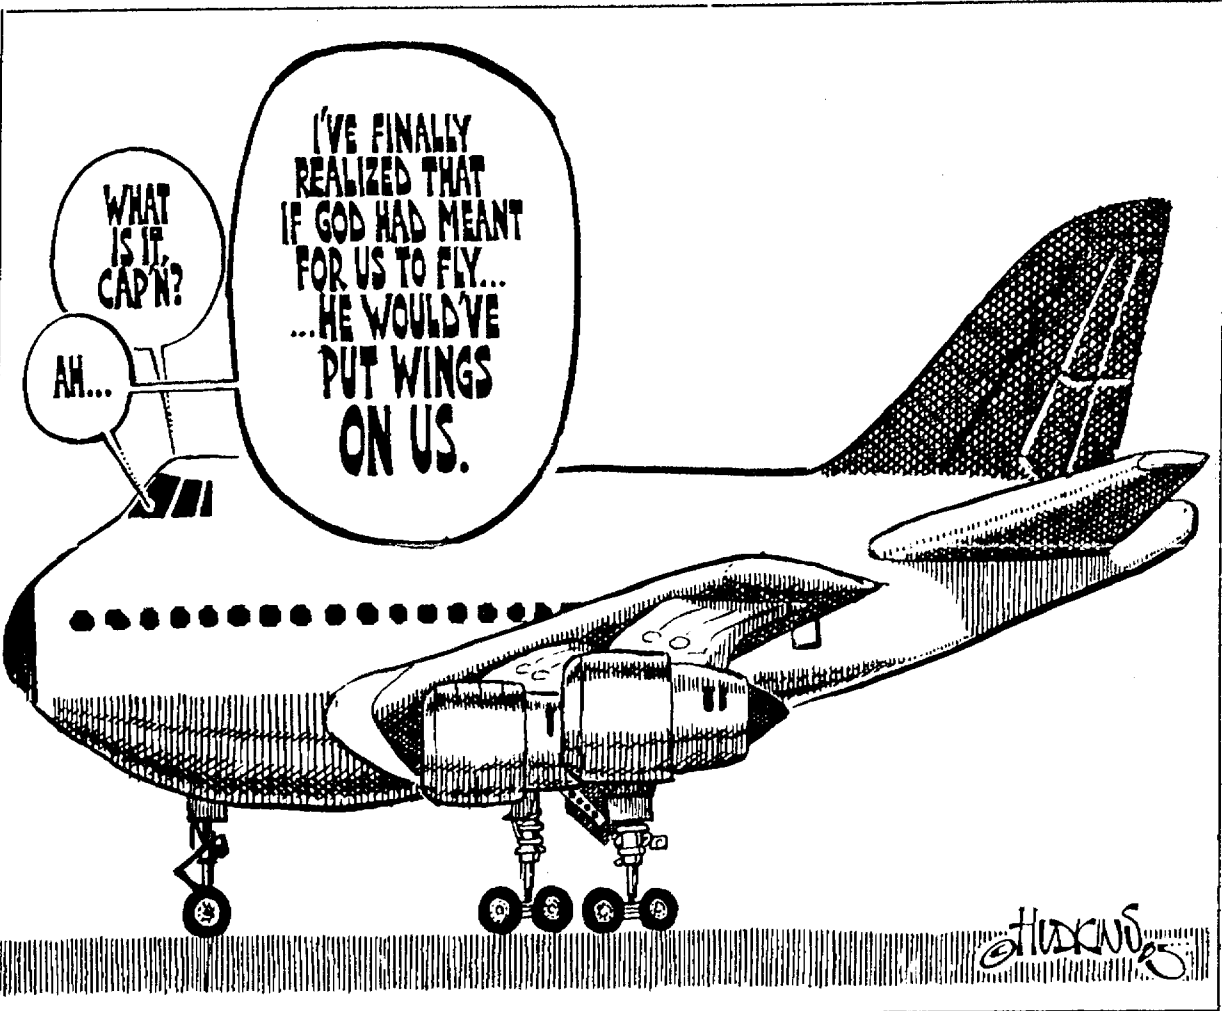

I got married and had a child before I was 25. I had two more and the years passed and then the strangest thing happened. There was a ‘50s revival.

I was horrified that that many years had passed, flattered that my era was being looked on as something to imitate, worried that interest in the decade would wane quickly before I had a chance to really wallow in reminiscences.

Well, as it turned out, the interest in the ‘50s is lasting longer than the original period. If it doesn’t cease soon, the ‘50s will become a classic. Oh, we are afloat with revivals, all right. The ‘60s and the ‘70s are also big, but it seems to me that interest in the ‘50s is more intense and long-lasting or is that just my selective perception at work?

And now that I look back, I think if I had to do it all over again, I wouldn’t change a thing. I like being a child of the ‘50s. And it wasn’t all that placid and uninspiring.

We were caught in the icy grip of the Cold War, a period that begat the arms build-up between the U.S.

Long live the 1980s

By Pat Paholsky

and U.S.S.R. My friends and I were convinced that, at any time, the bombs could start falling on us. There is concern today over the fear children have of a nuclear holocaust. My heart goes out to these kids. I know their fear.

Another fear we had was polio. There were long periods in the summer when we weren’t allowed to go swimming, because it was believed then that the virus was water-borne. To get polio meant possibly having to spend the rest of your life in an iron lung, paralyzed from the neck down. Yesterday it was polio. Today it’s AIDS. The fear is the same.

And how many of you remember the Big Four? The big Chrysler with four cops who cruised the streets looking for trouble. Civil rights was not in the vernacular then.

But it wasn’t all heavy. We had Doris Day. We had Pat Boone and his white shoes. I believe I spent one-fifth of my teen years polishing my white bucks and brushing the nap. Everytime I see my daughter polishing her white tennis shoes and washing the laces, I remember another time.

My generation witnessed the birth of rock ‘n’ roll, a revolutionary music form that was a) the work of the devil, b) a Communist plot, c) a passing fad. Well, the music is still around, constantly evolving, as it should since it was born in rebellion. Still raising the hackles of irate parents. So what’s new?

Now I know that living through a certain era is everything and it’s nothing. Everything that goes around, comes around. Long live the 1980s.

I like October, too

To the Editor:
I am writing to agree with Peggy O’Connor’s feature article in the Sept. 5 edition. My views on October are identical with Ms. O’Connor’s, except I enjoy holiday-filled months like December also.

December is a rush of last-minute Christmas shopping, decorating the house, cooking fancy things to eat. I look forward to this activity every year, whereas Ms. O’Connor could do without the bustle.

Other than that, I agree totally. I love October atmosphere, the fashions are nice, and, like Ms. O’Connor, I would rather get out and see the natural beauty of Michigan than watch fall-season sports.

More on school closings

To the Editor:
I am writing to you about your editorial, “More Schools to Close,” in the Sept. 5 issue of your paper. I am a sophomore at Grosse Pointe South High School, and I am very opposed to any more school closings. The kids would just be too crowded. For example, at Brownell, the lunchrooms would be packed full of people. We had trouble with lunchroom seating when I went there, now they have the sixth graders, too.

The people who are screaming for budget cutbacks are just going to hurt the schools. Grosse Pointers are fortunate to have people in the community who can afford to pay for schools. They shouldn’t mind paying a little bit for excellent schools.

Work dispute lands employee in hospital

A Detroit man, 20, was charged with assault and battery in a Sept. 11 dispute over work assignments at the Country Club of Detroit.

Witnesses and the complainant, a fellow employee of the club, say that the man hit the complainant, 32, in the eye, causing him to fall back against a handrail and stumble down one or two stairs to a landing, according to Farms police reports. He then hit him two or three more times in the head area. When the complainant got up, the man kicked him “karate-style” in the chest.

The victim was taken to St. John Hospital, where he is being treated for a fracture of the lower spine, the report stated.

Thank you

To the Editor:
On behalf of the Steering Committee for the 35th anniversary celebration of the city of Grosse Pointe Woods, I would like to publicly thank all those who contributed to the success of our special day: city and county employees, merchants, organizations and clubs, school groups, individual citizens.

A special thanks goes to Kevin Endres, a member of our Babe Ruth All Star team, for holding the flag during the Pledge of Allegiance.

Get your flu shots

Children go to the doctor for their "shots," but what about adults? Most don't think twice about being immunized but should according to Diane Culik, MD, of Saint John Hospital's Family Medical Center.

"Immunizations against infections aren't just for kids. Adults need to be immunized against certain diseases as well," says the doctor. "Influenza and pneumonia are the fourth leading cause of death in the elderly. Of all elderly patients who develop influenza, five percent will die and another 5 to 10 percent will have serious disabilities."

"If people would get vaccinated, 80 to 90 percent of their chances of serious complications from influenza would be eliminated," she continues.

"That's why, we at the Family Medical Center, are offering flu vaccines for $5 to our patients and members of the community on Wednesday, Oct. 2, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the center," announces Dr. Culik. "Appointments are preferred but not mandatory."

For the last two years, physicians at the Family Medical Center have sent letters to all their patients over age 65 advising them that they should have a flu shot. "We encourage preventative medicine and patient involvement in their own health care," Dr. Culik says. "The program has met with an overwhelming response. A large percentage of our patients were immunized against influenza and pneumonia."

According to Dr. Culik, the flu vaccination should be given every year to people over 65 and to persons of any age with chronic heart, lung, kidney or liver disease or with diabetes or cancer. The flu vaccine should not be given to patients allergic to eggs.

"The common pneumonia can be protected against with a one-time immunization. It is recommended for persons over age 50 or with any chronic disease," advises Dr. Culik.

For more information regarding vaccinations, call the Family Medical Center at 343-3040. The center is located in the St. Clair Professional Building adjacent to Saint John Hospital, 22151 Moross Road, Detroit, Suite 334.

Bon Secours joins two health care systems

Bon Secours Health System, Inc., Columbia, Maryland, has joined Consolidated Catholic Health Care and the American Healthcare System. Bon Secours Hospital, Grosse Pointe, is part of Bon Secours Health System, Inc.

"These alliances of Catholic and not-for-profit health care providers will combine our strengths and put Bon Secours Hospital in a better competitive position," said Christopher Carney, chief executive officer, Bon Secours Hospital, Grosse Pointe. The affiliations provide Bon Secours with networking and venturing advantages, as well as a pool of information and resources, he said.

The Chicago-based Consolidated Catholic Health Care is comprised of 19 Catholic hospital systems, which manage 301 healthcare facilities with 52,491 beds in 29 states. Recently formed in July 1985, the organization is the first cooperative effort among a large number of Catholic healthcare systems.

The new alliance plans to investigate national insurance products, joint purchasing, equipment sales, and shared services, such as marketing and advertising.

American Healthcare Systems is the largest not-for-profit multi-health network in the United States. AHS, with revenues more than $7 billion, was formed in August, 1984, when Associated Healthcare Systems merged with United Healthcare Systems. Its network of not-for-profit hospital systems serves 21 states and the District of Columbia. Another 650 hospitals participate in the AHS group purchasing program to buy hospital materials and equipment.

The two alliances will not own, operate or manage acute care facilities. The Bon Secours Health System, Inc. will continue to own and operate Bon Secours Hospital, Grosse Pointe, and its 13 other health care facilities in seven states.

And the Tigers won

... when 40 mentally handicapped teens and 10 adults attended the game last week, thanks to the Grosse Pointe Lodge of the Fraternal Order of Police 102. Through COP (Community Oriented Projects), the lodge and its civilian arm donated enough money to send the group to the game and provide transportation, food and good seats. Responsible for coordinating the treat are, from left, Sgt. Dispute flares, worker deported

An immigrant without papers was ordered deported when an alleged assault on the chef at Za-Paul's Restaurant Sept. 17 brought to light a previous criminal record. The incident occurred during a dispute over work assignments.

Karl Haynes, a Trinidadian kitchen employee at the restaurant, "became enraged and began throwing kitchen knives three inches long," Farms police reports stated. He then threw hot grease at the chef and all over the floor, walls and appliances in the kitchen. "According to reports," he then threatened the chef and left the restaurant on foot, vowing to return to carry out his threats. During the investigation, police notified Haynes' West Indian accent and called the Immigration and Naturalization Service's investigative office. A search of his record turned up two charges of burglary and a sentence of one to 15 years at Southern Michigan Prison at Jackson, the report stated. He served only 31 months before being paroled.

Haynes told police he emigrated from Trinidad in 1978, but had lost his green card. Although Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Charles Marr denied a warrant on the assault charge, calling it a case of self-defense between the two men in the kitchen, Haynes, as a convicted alien, was ordered deported, according to the report.

Oktoberfest is tradition at Trinity

A Detroit tradition continues this year at Historic Trinity Church, located at 1345 Gratiot in downtown Detroit. An Oktoberfest, a long-time Bavarian tradition, will be held in Trinity's community auditorium Friday, Oct. 4, at 7 p.m.

The unique black tie festival of authentic German cuisine, beer by the stein, wine, music, entertainment and dancing, promises to be an exciting event on the Detroit social scene.

The Rev. David Eberhard, pastor of Historic Trinity, and Roger Fridholm, president of Strohs, will once again participate in the "Blessing of the Hops." The cylinder of hops is on loan from Stroh Brewery Company. Joe Weaver, from WJBK-TV, will serve as master of ceremonies.

For more information, call Edith Miller at 567-3100.

Learn the law

The Michigan Trial Lawyers Association, through its Macomb County chapter, is offering a series of eight lectures by prominent area judges and lawyers on topics of interest to the general public.

Adults of any age may register. A fee of $1 per student will be charged for copying costs. The judges and lawyers speaking on the various topics will be donating their time and efforts to explore the myths and realities surrounding the law, the operation of the courts and the legal profession itself.

The topics to be covered are: A "Mock Trial," Wills and Estates, Cults and Deprogramming, Consumer Bankruptcy, Domestic Relations, Dram Shop, Products Liability, No-Fault Automobile Law and "Small Claims."

The lectures will be offered beginning Tuesday, Oct. 15, from 7 to 9 p.m., and will continue for eight consecutive weeks. Students will receive a course booklet with outlines covering each of the topics to be discussed and will receive a diploma upon completion of the series of lectures.

The course will be geared toward the lay person with question and answer periods following each lecture. Registration must be made in advance as attendance will be limited to the first 200 registrants.

All classes will be held at the Macomb County Community College, South Campus, 301 K Building, 14500 East Twelve Mile Road, Warren, Mich. All those interested should forward their name, address, telephone number and check for $1 to Peoples' Law School, 19900 East Ten Mile Road, St. Clair Shores, 48080.

Youth enrichment programs offered

Among the offerings of the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe public school system are a wide variety of classes and activities designated as the "Youth Enrichment Program."

These activities range from a six-session class, "Aggressive Study Skills for Middle School Students," to a Saturday "Art Workshop" for students in grades four and five, to a "Ballet" class for children in grades kindergarten through grade two.

Included this fall is a series of unique offerings co-sponsored with the Living Science Foundation, the Novi organization that has appeared in all the district's elementary schools in the winter and spring, as well as with a science adventure day camp offered in two sessions during July and August.

The first of these, "Endangered Species" has been designed for students in grades six through 12, to be held on Oct. 17. The second, "Crawl and Croak: Reptiles and Amphibians for the Young Learner," is for those from kindergarten through grade three, slated for Nov. 7, as is "Scaly Survivors: Reptiles," a presentation for students in grades kindergarten through eight.

"Those Amazing Spiders," a single-session presentation, co-sponsored with the Detroit Audubon Society, will be held Sept. 25.

Also included in the fall roster of Youth Enrichment activities are two Saturday programs: "Our World of Robotics" and "The Wonderful World of Chemistry" to be held Oct. 19.

Another Saturday offering is "Theater Workshop" for grades four through eight, to be held on Oct. 19, an effort to incorporate acting, music and dance for students in grades four through eight.

"Creative Dramatics," a 10-week offering for elementary students, has also been scheduled. Among the new-for-fall offerings is Tae Kwon Do, for those 8 years and older. Tae Kwon Do can be considered an art, a sport, a philosophy, and an effective system of self-defense.

Tennis will also be offered in the fall program. Among the new-for-fall offerings are a group designed to foster improved nutrition among middle school students. Co-sponsored with Pat Pompi's All Natural Cuisine, the topics to be offered to grades six through eight include "Tasty Alternatives to Junk-Food Snacks" on Oct. 2, "More Baked Goods with Whole Wheat Flour and Without Sugar" on Oct. 9, and "Pizza with Whole Wheat Flour" on Oct. 16.

Other offerings include an eight-week class in language for those in grades three through five. A Spanish class for elementary school students is also planned.

A 10-week introductory typing class, "Nimble Fingers Typing," is also being offered. Also offered for those aged 4 and 5 are "Pre-School Arts and Crafts" as well as a "Pre-School Story/Activity Hour," both repeats of popular classes offered last spring and summer.

"Introduction to Dance" for 4- and 5-year-olds has been scheduled.

For those interested in musical offerings, "Piano I" will be offered in 10-week classes for three age levels: 4 and 5, 6 and 7, and 8 and 9.

Among the co-sponsored activities are "Pottery for Children (and Parents)" which will be held at the Pewabic Pottery.

For space availability in Youth Enrichment classes, call 343-2178.

U.S., Canadian relations explored

Authors, scholars and broadcast personalities from the United States and Canada will gather for a symposium, "U.S. and Canadian Relations: The Politics of Culture and Trade," to be held Friday and Saturday, Sept. 27-28, at McGregor Conference Center on Wayne State University's main campus.

A "Dine With Diplomats" Dinner opens the symposium on Friday evening. His Excellency, Allen Gotlieb, Ambassador of Canada to the United States, will speak on "U.S. and Canadian Relations: Where Do We Stand."

On Saturday morning at 10 a.m. Mavor Moore, Canadian actor, actor and TV personality, and W.O. Mitchell, writer-in-residence at the University of Windsor, will discuss "The Politics of Culture." Martin Herman, assistant dean of Liberal Arts at WSU, will respond.

"Communicating Under the Shadow of an Elephant," the lunch-time topic, will be presented by Peter Gzowski, Canadian personality, broadcaster, author and host of CBC radio's "Morningside." The response will be by Victor Howard, director of the Center for Canadian Studies at Michigan State University.

In the concluding session William Merkin, U.S. deputy assistant trade representative, and Abraham Rotstein, professor of Political Economy at the University of Toronto and Canadian advocate for the national point of view, will speak on "The Politics of Trade." The respondent will be Shelly P. Battram, attorney.

Positive Parenting

The Trombly PTO invites parents from Trombly, Defer, Maire and Pierce schools to attend a series of four seminars on parenting skills. The seminars will be held in the Trombly School auditorium on four consecutive Tuesdays, beginning Tuesday, Oct. 8.

The price is $8 per family and covers the entire four sessions. Checks should be made payable by Oct. 1 to the Trombly PTO.

Four South seniors receive honors

Four Grosse Pointe South High School seniors have been awarded Certificates of Excellence for their performances at the National Career Development Conference held last spring in San Francisco.

Sue Rotta, general merchandising; Barb Youngs, credit and finance; Laura Barrette, general marketing; and Wendy MacAllister, restaurant management, were the South students who earned the Certificates of Excellence in the supervisory levels of their various employment categories.

Maynard Leigh, Distributive

Education Clubs of America advisor and coordinator of the Marketing and Distributive Education program at South, had a record number of five students who qualified for the nationals by placing in the top three of the state competition.

More than 5,000 students from all parts of the nation took part in the competition, which took place May 1-5, according to Leigh. A total of 32 Michigan DECA students received Certificates of Excellence representing 61 percent of the Michigan competitors.

Poets to visit South High

Three noted poets, including a Pulitzer Prize winner, will present special programs for students, staff and community during a Poets' Seminar at South High School Sept. 30 through Oct. 3.

Headlining the four-day seminar is Dr. W.D. Snodgrass, of the University of Delaware, who won the Pulitzer Prize in 1960 for "Heart's Needle," a collection of his poems.

Also being featured are Dr. Conrad Hilberry, of Kalamazoo College and son of a former president of Wayne State University, and Dr. Jack Driscoll, of the Interlochen Arts Academy.

All three will discuss their works and present readings of their poems on Tuesday, Oct. 1, at 7:30 p.m. in the South High auditorium. This part of the program is designed especially for members of the community. After the readings, the poets will meet with the public in Clemenston Hall. Refreshments will be served.

The poets will spend four days, Sept. 30-Oct. 3, meeting South English students in workshop seminars and small groups. The authors will have an opportunity to make suggestions to the budding youth writers as they review their works.

The Grosse Pointe South High School Mother's Club and the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Academic Enrichment are sponsoring this year's Poet's seminar as part of their enrichment programs.

Eva Koch, adviser of South's Authors/Artists Club and Imprints, South's literary magazine, is the driving force behind the seminar.

Koch, who is South's creative writing teacher, organized the seminar and secured the necessary funding.

NOTICE OF HEARING ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Zoning Board of Appeals will meet in City Hall at 90 Kerby Road, Grosse Pointe Farms on:

MONDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1985

to hear the following:

- The appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Brian Geraghty, owners of the premises located at 258 Moran, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for the addition of a family room to the rear of their existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that the residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the side yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.
- The appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Philip J. Meathe, owners of the premises located at 329 Grosse Pointe Boulevard, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for the conversion of and addition to their garage located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:
 - Article IV, Section 403 of the City's Zoning Ordinance requires each dwelling to have at least a one-car enclosed garage. As the garage is proposed to be converted to living space, a variance is required to the above provisions.
 - The residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the front & rear yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.
- The appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Thomas Mertz, owners of the premises located at Lot No. 5, Stephens Hills Subdivision, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for the construction of a residence located on the aforementioned property. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that the minimum lot width in an R-1-AA Residential District is 100 feet while the lot width of the aforementioned property is approximately 82 feet, thereby requiring a variance from Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance.

The Hearings will be public. Interested property owners or residents of the City are invited to attend.

Interior design classes offered

This fall the Department of Community Education will offer three opportunities for those who want to improve their knowledge of interior design. Two, four-week classes and one single-session class have been scheduled.

"Personal Interior Design: Part I" began Sept. 25. If you are interested in discovering your personal style and expanding it, this four-week class taught by Patricia Andrews can help you create a one-of-a-kind environment that you will enjoy and can build on for years to come. Fee is $14.

"Personal Interior Design: Part II" begins Oct. 23. This course deals with expanding color analysis, furniture and lighting. In addition, you will produce a complete personal decorating project. Confidence in your design decision-making is the goal of this four-week session also taught by Andrews. Fee is $14.

"Trends in Interior Design" will be held Oct. 24. Contemporary culture impacts interior design in many ways. Learn what they are in this new-for-fall single-session offering designed by Sylvia Gdowski to spot trends which you may wish to incorporate in your own decor. Fee is $4.50.

Call the Department of Community Education at 343-2178 for space availability.

Grosse Pointe Lawyers' Wives

... will begin the season's activities with a fall coffee for all members and prospective members Wednesday, Oct. 2, at 12:30 p.m. at the Washington Road home of Mrs. Steven Kinsley. Officers not pictured are Mrs. Richard Suhrheinrich, publicity; Barbara Brasseur, corresponding secretary; Mary Cohan, first year delegate; and Linda Casazza, second year delegate. War Memorial to erect tribute tree

A child lights a candle at a family dinner and a tradition is born. The Grosse Pointe War Memorial will embark on a new tradition with the introduction of a Tribute Tree to be displayed for the first time this Christmas season.

The Center will erect a giant evergreen in front of the Alger House and residents can buy a white light to shine on the tree in memory of a loved one or in tribute to a special person. The light will cost $5 per name.

"The Alger House was donated for the purpose of being a living memorial to honor war veterans," said Dr. Mark Weber, executive director. "In that vein, the Tribute Tree is an opportunity for an individual to recognize someone special while benefiting the War Memorial which in turn benefits the community through improved programming and services."

The War Memorial will retain a book of the names of the recipients and the donors as a permanent record.

A remembrance card will be issued to the person specified by the donor after the tree lighting ceremony, Dec. 5.

Harriet Lafer of the Farms has volunteered to coordinate the drive, which will begin at the open house Sunday, Sept. 22.

"This is a wonderful way to give a meaningful gift to someone and beautify the community as well," Lafer said. Besides memorials, she listed teachers, employees, relatives, clergy, beauty operators, or anyone to whom one would like to show special regard.

Donation forms and information may be obtained at the open house, in the upcoming calendar of events, or by mailing a request and donation to 32 Lakeshore Drive, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., 48236. Requests should contain the name of the honoree, the donor's name and address, and the name and address of the recipient of the gift card. Each request should be accompanied with a check for $5.

GP cable to hold student auditions

Red Mass is Oct. 1

Several hundred members of the judiciary and the bar, representing all religious faiths, will attend the University of Detroit's annual Red Mass, beginning at 12:15 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 1, in SS. Peter and Paul Church, 629 East Jefferson.

The Most Rev. Kenneth Untener, bishop of Saginaw, will deliver the homily and celebrate this year's Red Mass, a tradition of the legal profession dating back to 13th-century England.

The English legal year at that time was divided into four terms, the first called "Michaelmas", after the Feast of St. Michael, Sept. 29. On a date close to Michaelmas, as the courts, Parliament and the universities began the year's legal activities, the entire bench and bar would attend the Red Mass, named for the color of the vestments worn by the officiating clergy.

Chief Justice of the Michigan Supreme Court, G. Mennen Williams, will lead the Renewal of the Lawyer's Oath of Commitment. The chairman for the Mass is the Honorable Maureen P. Reilly, a 1958 graduate of the U of D School of Law. She is being assisted by Mary M. Barden, assistant dean of Alumni Relations and Placement, U of D School of Law, Honorable Roland L. Olzark, Michael A. Conway and Father Arthur E. Lovely, S.J., U of D Campus Ministry. Students from the law school are also assisting and will participate in the Red Mass as ushers and hosts.

Justice James L. Ryan of the Michigan Supreme Court will serve as honorary chairman for the Red Mass.

Students at Sacred Heart Academy enjoyed sports, despite their lady-like school uniforms. This photograph, taken sometime early in the century, records a basketball game in front of the Lakeshore building. An exclusive girls school, Sacred Heart Academy strove to educate the entire woman and to graduate young women with confidence and leadership qualities.

A century of tradition

Grosse Pointe Academy carries on Sacred Heart philosophy with an eye to the future

By Elsa Frohman

"We were kept very busy. The nuns had a way to bring out the best in you, never focusing on the trivial. We went to a school where we felt cared for and loved. This really was home."

— Toni Robinson,
1951 graduate

Sacred Heart Academy

"One advantage of this type of education was that the girls learned a certain leadership quality of confidence. We were training them to be leaders. The discipline that was imposed, in later years it was appreciated."

— Sr. Marguerite Seymour, former teacher,
Sacred Heart Academy

St. Madeline Sophie Barat, seen here in a carving in the side chapel of the Academy's main chapel, was the mother foundress of the Religious of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, the order which operated the school until 1969.

Sacred Heart Academy — Grosse Pointe Academy. One hundred years of education with an emphasis on personal development and Christian values. Once an exclusive convent school, today a co-educational private school from pre-school through the eighth-grade, Grosse Pointe Academy is at once different and the same as it was when it was called the Sacred Heart Convent of Grosse Pointe.

In 1985 the Religious of the Sacred Heart of Jesus opened its second school in the Detroit area on a pleasant tract of land on the shores of Lake St. Clair.

The order originated in France in the years after the French Revolution. St. Madeline Sophie Barat, mother foundress, set the tone for the order's schools throughout the world with instructions for four "works." The nuns were to establish academies for the daughters of the wealthy, to run free schools for the poor, to offer retreats, and to have necessary relations with the world.

The fourth work is unusual in that the Religious of the Sacred Heart were established as a cloistered order with the nuns seldom venturing out of the confines of their houses.

"They had to come to us," said Sister Mary C. Wheeler, former mistress of discipline at Sacred Heart Academy. Sister Wheeler was one of more than 30 former Sacred Heart Academy teachers who came back to celebrate the school's centennial last weekend. The academy is still affiliated with the order, though the school accepts Christian students of all denominations.

The cloistered life of the Religious of the Sacred Heart and the school changed in 1969 when Vatican II mandated that Apostolic orders, such as the Religious of the Sacred Heart, should no longer be cloistered. The order re-examined its mission and decided to close the school in Grosse Pointe.

Parents and alumni were distressed and immediately formed an organization to keep the school open.

"We were the first school to form a board of trustees and enter into a partnership with the Religious," said Toni Robinson, a former student of the school in its convent days, who served as president of the board of trustees for 13 years. Robinson gave up her position with the school when she moved to Florida several years ago. "Now schools all over the country are doing it."

The announcement that the school would close in 1969 came as a shock to the parents and alumnae.

"We all dropped everything and did nothing else for five months," Robinson said of the process of taking over the school. "It was important that the school not close. If we lost a year we would have lost everyone. We had people who felt strongly that the school was necessary."

The transition was accomplished with hard work and much cooperation on the part of the Religious of the Sacred Heart.

"Many people don't understand how much the nuns did for us," Robinson said. "They were very supportive." The grounds and buildings were transferred to the new board of trustees for the value of the land alone.

The relationship between the school and the order remains close even today. The Sacred Heart nuns contribute scholarships for the school annually out of their own salaries. The administrative assistant to the headmaster is currently Sister Marguerite Seymour, a member of the Religious of the Sacred Heart.

"If you visit any of the schools the Sacred Heart Religious still run, they aren't very different from Grosse Pointe Academy," Robinson said. "We took the core — a form of education that was very loving."

One change that was effected was to make the school co-educational and limit the grades to pre-school to eighth grade.

"The same Christian education would be beneficial for boys," Robinson said of the decision to admit males to the school.

Robinson and her classmate, Carole Peabody, currently on the board of trustees and alumni board of the school, have warm memories of their life at Sacred Heart.

"There were 16 of us in our class (of 1951) and we were all good friends," Peabody said.

Robinson was a boarding student during her high school years, after her parents moved from Grosse Pointe to Bloomfield Hills. She lived at the school, Monday through Friday, and went home on the weekends.

"We went to a school where we felt cared for and loved. This really was home," Robinson said. "The nuns became our good friends."

"We would come back (after graduation) and it would be like visiting a second mother," Peabody said.

"We weren't allowed to speak between classes," Robinson said. "We marched down the second row of tiles in the hall. We advanced on a clapper and stopped on a clapper."

But Robinson emphasizes that the regimentation was not arbitrary. "There was a reason for everything," she said. "It was a matter of logistics. It kept us in line."

Sister Wheeler told another tale of discipline — of a stricter kind. As mistress of discipline, she was in charge of meting out punishment for infractions of the rules.

A common punishment was washing windows in the classroom building.

"There were 24 little panes of glass, all separated by leading," Sister Wheeler said. "I set one girl to washing them and then came at the end of the time she was supposed to work. I told her that her time was up, but she looked up at me and said, 'I'm kind of interested in this. I think I'll finish.'"

Sister Wheeler is a cheerful little woman who hardly brings discipline to mind with her upbeat manner. Today, she is in the process of organizing the order's archives, in the United States and in Rome.

Robinson remembers that while life at the convent was well ordered, there were "characters"

The focal point of the Grosse Pointe Academy Lakeshore building is the chapel. Ground was broken for the chapel in 1899. It was designed by Harry J. Rill.

Photos by Elsa Frohman who had to rebel against authority. "There was one girl," Robinson said. "She would let the turtles out of the science lab. In the evening we would hear them coming down the hall all of the sudden — thump, thump, thump."

But the class cut-up turned out all right after all. "She became a nun," Robinson said.

Peabody remembers that the nuns seemed to be able to read minds. She tells of encouraging a classmate to sneak off campus with her for an ice cream sundae one afternoon.

"We thought there was no way anyone could find out. But the next morning, we were called to the principal's office. To this day we can't figure out how they knew."

Intertwining with, but separate from the lives of the students, were the lives of the cloistered nuns.

Sister Seymour grew up in Grosse Pointe and attended the school as a student, then returned as a teacher.

"It was different," she said. "But not because I was a teacher. It was different because I was a religious."

"It was a very busy, very happy life," Sister Wheeler said. "People have asked me how I could stand the life (of a cloistered nun). I've been in the order for 59 years. I was 18 when I came in and I've hardly had an unhappy day."

"Everything had a reason," Sister Seymour said. "If the reason is no longer there, we no longer do it."

According to the nuns, the life in the cloistered convent was structured, but peaceful. There was ample time for reading and reflection.

"Once we had a visitor from Africa," Sister Seymour said. "He sat right over there," she said, gesturing at the other end of the parlor. "He said that since he had been in the United States, the people who had known the most about world affairs were cloistered nuns. We had time for reading. We felt that in teaching, we owed it to the profession to be sharp and not narrow."

Sister Seymour told of how the nuns observed silence in the refectory during meals. However, one sister would read out loud during the meal.

"It was a liberal education," Sister Seymour said.

Sister Cathy Owens, another former teacher who returned for the centennial celebration, spoke of the spiritual feeling of living in the convent.

"You were very aware you were living a mystery," she said. "You were with others who were chosen."

Vatican II changed the way of life for the Religious of the Sacred Heart.

"It called for a different way of looking at the religious life," Sister Seymour said. "The big difference in the ministry now is that the work of prayer must flow to a wider field. The needs of the world are different. We must answer a call to a wider field. You have to make choices that are a little harder."

Sister Owens said the transition was not as difficult as it might have been because the sisters had known a change was coming for some time.

"We were prepared, but our constituency was astounded," she said.

Some 40 former teachers returned to the school to help celebrate the centennial.

"It's because they have a love for this place and their years here," Sister Seymour said.

Sister Wheeler said the school doesn't seem so different from the days when she taught there.

"The children are younger and there are boys," she said. "But those are externals. People dress differently. But these are little things. The important thing is that they have held onto the philosophy. It shows in the life of the school and the attitude of the teachers."

"The school doesn't fit into any little boxes," Robinson said. "It is Catholic in the best sense of the word. We stress skills and self-image and good early training with a firm Christian value orientation. This is really the school of the future."

When one automobile is struck by another, or when a vehicle rams a stationary object, thousands of pounds of force are exerted upon the neck and spine of the passengers. The head is thrust toward the impact. The muscles stretch and react with a violent spasm in the opposite direction. The unhappy and painful result is injury to the muscles, ligaments, nerves and sometimes broken bones. Automobile injuries, left untreated, can result in severe permanent injury.

Insurance scam is uncovered in Shores

By Nancy Parmenter

When an 82-year-old uninsured Detroit man lost control of his car and hit a fire hydrant Sept. 10, the village of Grosse Pointe Shores was left holding the bag. The bill is expected to come to $1,500, police said.

This is not the first time a similar problem has occurred, according to police. In one incident, the Shores' insurance company successfully sued the violator for $3,000. But this time, the driver is elderly, receives public assistance and food stamps, and has so little money that he turned his 1966 Chrysler over to the towing company rather than pay the impounding fee.

Furthermore, according to the police report, although the official charge is operating without insurance, the driver actually had showed police an insurance certificate from The Travelers insurance company. It was only when the department called a Travelers' office to make the claim, that the certificate was discovered to be a fraud.

No-fault insurance is a widespread scam in the metropolitan area, police believe. In this case, the man stated that he bought the certificate from a neighbor for $65, believing it to be a genuine policy. Shores police said they have not made a complaint to the state insurance commission in the expectation that the insurance company may do so. They said that the likelihood of the Detroit police pursuing the issue is small because the problem is so big.

Charles Johnson, director of investigations for the state insurance commission, concurred.

"Insurance scams are the last thing in the world most police departments want to look at — they have too much violent crime to want to bother with white collar crime," he said.

The commission operates a consumer fraud bureau which coordinates investigations with police departments. But the bureau is manned currently by only one person, owing to state budget cutbacks, Johnson said.

Johnson said the no-fault scam is widespread in the Detroit area and has been around as long as insurance has been required by the state.

"There's probably a handful of scams at any one time," he said. "There are usually three or four games going on."

The scam is easy to operate, according to Johnson and the police. Some operators print their own certificate according to the format of a genuine one. Some photocopy certificates, some steal them.

"All you have to do is grab a handful and start selling them on the corner and you've got yourself a game," Johnson said.

Shores police said that this is the first time this particular scam has surfaced there. But they said it is difficult to know how many times it may have occurred to private individuals involved in an accident with an uninsured person. Since their own insurance then pays off, many people are not likely to report such an incident to the police.

The youngest person known to have committed suicide was a little boy, 4 years 6 months old. He wanted to be in heaven with this grandmother. This tragedy turned up in a seven-year study of 505 child suicides.

Japanese mayor, council honored here

By Elsa Frohman

Takashi Nishiyama, mayor of the city of Toyota, Japan, is an avid Detroit Tiger fan. Though he speaks almost no English, he can say "Detroit Tigers, World Champions, yea!"

Nishiyama was in Grosse Pointe last Friday for a reception at the home of Michigan's Belgian consul, Elizabeth Stevens, and her husband, architect John Stevens. The reception was organized by the International Institute which arranged for several Japanese interpreters for the mayor and 19 members of his city council.

The Japanese were in Detroit to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the affiliation between Detroit and Toyota as sister cities.

"The Canada goose and the Siberian tiger are the mascots of Toyota," Nishiyama said through an interpreter. "We are rooting for the Tigers."

The Japanese mayor said the sister city affiliation has been profitable for both sides over the past 25 years.

"There have been exchange students and we have developed mutual understanding and friendship," he said. "Therefore, we have come because of the past 25 years of kindness on the part of the city of Detroit. We hope for prosperity and lasting friendship and hope that the people of Detroit know our intent."

Mashashi Toguchi, a member of the Toyota City Council, compared the Detroit metropolitan area to the city of Toyota.

"The city of Toyota proper is very small," Toguchi said through an interpreter. "It is only about one-tenth the size of Detroit. But the economic region called Nishiyama has one million population and is one of the largest in Japan."

Toguchi said he found many similarities between the sister cities.

The Japanese group's last visit to Detroit was about seven years ago. However, a group from the International Institute visited Toyota more recently.

Jerry Rosenberg, a physician who went on that trip, said that the Japanese showed them tremendous hospitality.

"The mayor took us to his home and cooked sukiyaki for us. He cooked it himself," Rosenberg said.

Kazumasa Honda, chief of the international section of the mayor of Toyota's administration, said he has made many trips to Detroit and has many old friends here. Honda is a specialist in American relations and speaks English fluently.

Honda said the highlight of this trip was a visit to the Detroit Historical Museum.

The itinerary for the Japanese group's two-day stay in Detroit included a school visit, a meeting with the Detroit City Council, a Tiger baseball game, the historical museum and the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn. The group left for Toronto Saturday morning.

The mayor and his council were outgoing and friendly during the reception at the Stevens' lakefront home — despite the language barriers.

When presented with a keychain depicting the Spirit of Detroit, Nishiyama crouched down to imitate the position of the statue to have his picture taken.

The mayor's aide, Honda, reflected on Nishiyama's good humor.

"Only here," he said. "He wouldn't do this in Japan."

Takashi Nishiyama, mayor of Detroit's sister city, Toyota, Japan, signs the guest book at a reception held in his honor by the International Institute. The event was held at the home of John Stevens, (behind the mayor) and his wife, Elizabeth, who is Michigan's Belgian consul.

Working women

From 1976 through 1984, the United States civilian labor force grew by 21 percent. Women contributed more than 62 percent of the total growth as their numbers rose from 37 million to 50 million, according to "Facts on U.S. Working Women," a fact sheet by the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Body Recall

An introduction to Body Recall, a national lifetime fitness program, will be presented Saturday, Oct. 12, at Madonna College in Livonia to promote health and well-being of older people. The program is part of a statewide initiative by the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging (OSA) and the Michigan Department of Public Health (MDPH).

Body Recall developer Dorothy Chrisman of Berea, Ky., and her travel team of older adults will conduct a physical fitness demonstration with audience participation at the Madonna Activity Center on the Livonia campus. This will be followed by a lecture presentation in which Chrisman will explain her method of easy exercise and how it works to assist adults in health-producing movement.

Registration cost for the one-day event is $10 which includes refreshments on arrival and lunch in the college's faculty alumni dining room. Persons interested in attending should call the Department of Gerontology at Madonna College at 591-5094.

"Marketing: An Introduction," sponsored by Joan Hall of The Kendall Company and the Department of Community Education to the Grosse Pointe Public School System, has been designed to aid owners of small and medium-sized businesses.

It will offer insight into various forces operating in the market place and will propose specific tools for maximizing market opportunities: product, promotion, distribution and pricing strategies. Work sheets for analyzing individual firms will be provided and discussed.

Fee for this three-week session, which begins Oct. 9, is $25. It will be held in room 203 of Barnes School, 20090 Morningside Drive, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Hawkwatchers hit the beach for fall migration

By Nancy Parmenter

One by one the sharp-shinned hawks flew by, ticking their way rhythmically across the sky toward the west. By the time we had been at Holiday Beach for four hours, official hawk counter Brian Eaton, a transplanted Englishman now living in Ontario, had toted up 500 "sharpie" fly-bys.

Flap, flap, glide. The birds look surprisingly like blue jays as they fly above in silhouette, but can be readily distinguished by their flight pattern. Flap, flap, glide. Blue jays just flap.

"There's another sharpie, Brian," pointed Dick Benoit, a Pierce science teacher and avid hawkwatcher. The comment punctuated his conversation about once a minute.

Benoit and Eaton are only two of the dozen people who have made it their business to spend much of their spare time counting hawks during the fall migration. Since many hawks are soarsers, they follow the wind and don't like to cross large bodies of water lest they be stranded. So they funnel through Holiday Beach, Ontario, on the northwestern end of Lake Erie, sometimes in their thousands.

The star of the show, the broad-winged hawk, failed to materialize that day. But such is life for bird-watchers, who are no strangers to disappointment.

Broad-wings are known to collect in huge numbers to swirl in up-

"The people out there just get tired of counting — they go home after they've counted a million or so."

drafts, called "kettles." They peak in the middle of September.

Last year, 110,221 broad-winged hawks migrated through Holiday Beach, literally half of them in less than half an hour. That was a day

Benoit still recalls with an edge of excitement.

"They were wall-to-wall — they covered the sky," he said. "We just stared — and then we shouted 'Count! Don't watch! Count!'"

They counted 54,000 hawks in 18 minutes.

There's a method for counting that many birds, Benoit said, and other counters always establish markers — two trees, for example — and spend some time counting and estimating how many birds in a flock fit in between the markers. That way they're ready when the really big kettle comes along.

The broad-wings migrate to Central and South America, following a variety of paths, depending on the wind. A northwest wind is likely to bring them by Holiday Beach, Benoit said.

"A good time to see them is when a front's moving through," he said. "Right now my main concern is with the weather — they're so weather-contingent." Benoit studies the weather at Point Barrow and has become proficient in predicting local weather about three days ahead.

"They have preferred times to go, but the weather affects the timing and the route," he explained. If the birds don't pass by Holiday Beach, they are probably at Chatham.

Hawk watching is a new avocation in the Midwest, Benoit said. It has moved here from the East, where hawkers are so enthusiastic, "you can't find a boulder to sit on."

Twelve years ago, in spite of all the birders in Michigan and Ontario, nobody realized the hawks migrated past Holiday Beach.

"They're probably streaming through the center of the continent, too, but there's nobody out there watching," he said.

But where they stream through the Texas panhandle, people notice. Hawkwatchers here have established a networking arrangement with birders in Brownsville, Texas. The birds flying past Holiday Beach today hit the panhandle in about a week, Benoit said.

"The skies are black with them. The people out there just get tired of counting — they go home after they've counted a million or so," he said.

Hawk-counting isn't just a way to fill empty days. The dozen members of the Michigan-Ontario hawk watch are establishing a data base for future hawk research.

They try to station someone at the park every day of the fall migration, to count the 17 species of raptors likely to be there.

In 1974, the first year of the count, they covered 27 days and counted about 48,000 birds. In 1984, they counted 141,636 birds in 92 days. Some of the counters put in as much as 100 hours of work during the migration season.

Some days, not much happens. "That's the beauty of it — you just let the birds come to you," Benoit said. "You get a core of people who show up over and over. We just sit and talk — and wait."

Benoit, who lives in the City, said he got started counting hawks because he wanted something useful to do that fit in with the strictures of work. He has become so involved that he is now the regional editor of the Hawk Migration Association's newsletter and frequent speaker to birding groups.

"We're trying to get more people interested in conservation," he said. "We're kind of the doers in the birding world. It's a sense of duty."

The peregrine falcon started off the current interest in hawks. Populous in the 1950s, the bird almost vanished owing to DDT-caused fragile eggshells.

With the banning of DDT, the peregrine is making a comeback, even in populated areas. Benoit said he spotted one in Windsor not long ago. The birds are cliff-dwellers and adapt readily to tall buildings.

The near-disaster with the peregrines made hawk enthusiasts realize the importance of keeping track of the birds, Benoit said. Right now, hawkers are watching the rough-legged hawk, which appears to be in a recent population decline.

"Bird populations go through 10-year cycles," Benoit explained. "The rough-legged is down this year, but it's too soon to tell if it's cyclical. But we'll watch again next year to see if it's a trend we should keep on top of."

Holiday Beach has become a local hawk hotspot for birders from all over Michigan and southern Ontario. "Numberwise, we match any place in the East, but we're not as picturesque as Hawk Mountain or Cape May," Benoit said.

Even casual birders can enjoy a visit to the provincial park — even when the big kettles don't form. On that morning two weeks ago, we saw a small kettle of about 25 broad-wings, an immature broad-wing perched in a tree, a bald eagle, an osprey, and a bit of serendipity in the form of a black-backed, three-toed woodpecker, a visitor from the Arctic.

Benoit thinks there's a lot more to birding than making lists. It's a sense of accomplishing something for the birds through research. That's how he came to spend his springs doing nesting studies of yellow warblers — but that's another story.

That most renowned of American millionaires, Hetty Green, read her daily newspaper carefully, then resold it.

Students should bring scissors and a sack lunch for this class which costs $10 plus $5 for materials. The class time is 9:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

Early American Stenciling has experienced a recent revival. No special talent is needed to master this craft, according to Kim Friend, who will teach the two-day workshop, to be held on Tuesdays, Oct. 22 and 29, from 7 to 9 p.m. Advanced registration is required. Cost is $14 plus a kit fee of $7.

Carol Czechowski, who is noted for her exhibits at the annual Holly Mart, will share her knowledge at the "Herb Wreath Workshop" Wednesday, Oct. 23, from 9:30 a.m. to noon. Herb tea will be served and Czechowski will lecture on the history and uses of herbs. Students will fashion a decorative wreath with materials purchased for $15. The class fee is $10 and students are requested to bring clippers to the workshop.

Samples of these crafts and others are on display in the showcase at the War Memorial. To register, send a check or money order to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236.

Harper has center for hearing-impaired

Harper Hospital's new Assistive Listening Device Center will open in mid-September to show hearing-impaired people devices to help them hear better.

Hearing aids amplify ordinary conversation, but function poorly in noisy and crowded areas. Harper's listening center will have technologically advanced devices that can assist the hearing-impaired when using the telephone, television, or in crowded rooms by making the desired sound louder than other sounds in that environment.

Demonstrations of signaling and alerting devices will show how hearing-impaired people can receive messages through lights and vibrations. These special devices allow hearing-impaired people to function safely and independently.

Participants at Harper's Assistive Listening Device Center will receive a hearing assessment and hands-on experience to determine which device can best serve their needs.

Sabina Schwan, clinic coordinator, in the department of audiology at Harper, said, "There is no other Assistive Listening Devices and Systems (ALDS) center in Michigan and only one other in the entire Midwest."

ALDS demonstrations will be available to all hearing aid candidates for a nominal fee. For more information, call 494-4651.

Hertel seeks academy applicants

Congressman Dennis Hertel (D-Harper Woods) is currently seeking applicants for possible appointments to one of the three United States military academies. The deadline for applications is Friday, Oct. 25.

Interested individuals must be United States citizens, between the ages of 17 and 22 years, and high school seniors or graduates.

"I will again be using the services of a special citizens committee to assist in reviewing all the applicants for the 14th District appointments to the various military academies," Hertel said. The committee is composed of nonpartisan representatives from the community.

Hertel urged that interested students send a letter to him at his Warren District office, 28221 Mound Road, Warren, MI 48092. He stressed that applicants must be residents of the 14th Congressional District and must indicate an academy preference at the time of application.

The congressman also advises interested applicants to simultaneously contact the academy of preference for a "pre-candidate questionnaire." The questionnaire must be obtained directly from the academies and is not available from Hertel's office. Interested individuals should contact the school of their choice:

U.S. Naval Academy, Candidate Guidance Office, Annapolis, MD. 21402

Headquarters U.S. Military Academy, Office of Director of Admissions, West Point, N.Y. 10996

U.S. Air Force Academy, Admissions Liaison, Colorado 80840

When letters of application are received, Hertel said applicants will be contacted directly regarding additional academic information and interview schedules. Under the process established by the academies, each congressman can make one appointment per year to each academy.

St. Ambrose Academy: changing to meet area's needs

By Pat Paholsky

Editor's note: In March we began a series on the schools of Grosse Pointe. Noted for its well-established public school system to a diverse group of non-public schools, the area offers a wide range of choices. When school closed for the summer, we, too, took a break. We are now resuming the series with, appropriately enough, a Detroit school whose roots are deep in Grosse Pointe. This is the 12th in the series.

In its more than 60-year existence, St. Ambrose school has undergone a metamorphosis. The building that housed the entire student body — grades 1 through 12 — is no more. The high school was closed in 1972 and the building was razed last year.

The student body, once predominantly white and Catholic, is now multi-ethnic and 85 percent non-Catholic.

Principal Judy McCusker, who came to the school in 1965 as a teacher, said all of the students then were members of St. Ambrose parish, with half of them from Detroit and the other half from Grosse Pointe. The school on Alter Road is in Detroit and the church is on Hampton in Grosse Pointe Park.

Now, she says, of 225 kids enrolled in kindergarten through eighth grade, three are from Grosse Pointe.

The name was officially changed last year to St. Ambrose Academy. "Because our curriculum is different from most Catholic schools, we decided to have our name reflect that — to show we are different, that our offerings are varied, our program is different," McCusker said.

It begins with a pre-school program for 4- and 5-year-olds that concentrates on music, art and drama. Emphasis is on socialization and the program is designed as a pre-kindergarten experience.

Kindergarten is normally offered as either a full- or half-day program. There isn't a full-day class this year, however, due to insufficient enrollment.

The language arts program, which includes reading, English and spelling, is personalized for all students. Computers are used in grammar, math and spelling drills. Students participate in various city-wide competitions involving spelling, writing, math, science and art.

All of the students, from the first-grade through the eighth, take part in the annual science fair, by creating a display, conducting and recording an experiment or demonstrating a scientific theory. The older students display their projects at the Detroit Science Fair.

Eight-graders produce a quarterly newspaper for the school. And beginning from grade 1, students learn the fundamentals of music. When they get to the 7th and 8th grade, they study art history and music history.

Everyone participates in religious services and all of the students attend religion class. The emphasis is on Christian doctrine and the classes are designed to teach Catholic beliefs with the tenets of other faiths incorporated in the program.

There are 25 learning disabled, emotionally impaired and educable mentally impaired students at St. Ambrose. They go to an alternative room for a special needs class, but spend the remainder of the day in classrooms with the other students. "Mainstreaming makes for a better self-image and is more positive," McCusker said.

The learning resource center, a Chapter 1 program funded by the federal government, has been temporarily closed due to a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision prohibiting such services being held on other than public school property.

While the Grosse Pointe school board has agreed to abide by the decision and provide transportation for parochial school children to these programs, McCusker said she will not allow her students to leave the grounds. She believes their safety would be jeopardized every time they left the school and she said the time spent in transit is wasted.

Some of the optional programs offered by the school include a computer class, tap, ballet and jazz dancing and an art program that teaches drawing, sculpting and painting.

Sports include football, basketball and track. The teams — junior and senior varsity football, boys and girls junior and senior varsity basketball and a co-ed track team — compete in the Catholic Youth Organization league.

"We are off to a great start this year," McCusker said. "Our junior varsity (football) is 2-0 and our senior varsity is 1-0."

The school day begins at 8:15 and runs until 2:40 except for Monday when the children leave at 1:30 p.m. Students bring a lunch.

Class sizes are small, averaging about 20, McCusker said, and the teachers are all accredited. "They teach in their area of expertise," she said. "They always have."

While the school has undergone a transformation, not everything has changed. McCusker, who is in her 21st year with the school, the last 15 as principal, said many of the teachers are long-timers with a dozen years or more service.

The kids still wear uniforms, and fundraising, a fact of life at most schools, is a fine art at St. Ambrose. The fundraisers — a flea market, four Las Vegas weekends, monthly pizza sales, candy sales, a Christmas show, a dance recital — bring in between $20,000 and $30,000 a year. It helps defray the $300,000 it costs to run the school.

Other money — $42,000 — comes from the archdiocese and the parish maintains the building and helps with the annual raffle. The families of the students are obliged to sell $75 worth of raffle tickets.

There is a small scholarship program, but other than that, everyone pays tuition, McCusker said. Costs vary depending on the program and how many children from each family attend.

Policy is determined by a school board of eight members elected from among parents. McCusker said there is no formal parent-teacher organization. A number of parents volunteer to work in the library, as classroom aides and in the office.

Most of the students who graduate from the eighth-grade go on to Catholic high school, McCusker said.

Principal Judy McCusker, in the school library, goes over some of the reading material available. The students are, from left, Armilia Davis, first-grade; Hilary Hairston, first-grade; Paul Montenyayor, third-grade; and Robert Riehlmeier, third-grade, whose grandmother lives in Grosse Pointe.

Prime Time for Senior Citizens

By Marian Trainor

Death is not a subject which most people care to talk about or even think about. Yet it is the inevitable price that must be paid for life. We find it difficult to face up to the fact that the time will come when our stay on this earth will come to an end.

We see this cycle of life and death played out in all living things around us. The seasons come and go, flowers bloom and fade, creatures are born and die. But we, as human beings often choose to close our eyes and refuse to accept the tenet that we too are programmed by nature to live out an ordained cycle.

Because we have been blessed with powers not given to other creatures of the earth, we like to think we are exempt from their fate. They die, we don't. We rationalize that because we have a brain that has made it possible to gain mastery over so many forces of nature, we will somehow also conquer life's final obstacle.

And to a certain extent we have. Science and medical technology have added years to our life span, but even most optimistic findings point out that the biological clock cannot be set beyond a certain time. Human beings like all of nature's creatures, despite their superior qualities, are mortal.

It is likely given one wish, that wish for many would be for immortality. We look back on our mistakes and wish for more time to correct them. We look into the future and think of all we might accomplish given more time. We lament the swift passage of time, the days, weeks, months and years that pass too swiftly and yearn to reign time in, to make it go slower instead of galloping to the finish line.

We ponder what we have done with the time already passed, not stopping to cherish and be thankful for the good times that have been ours but only wishing for more.

There are some who are willing to go to extreme means to gamble on a second time around in this hemisphere. They spend huge sums of money to be frozen and revived at a later date. There was even a plan devised by one group to send bodies into outer space until science had devised means to replace death-dealing cells with live ones.

Can you imagine coming back to the earth some years hence and adapting to what would be totally alien, confusing and frustrating?

That proposal, while it did offer a far-out option, met with some ridicule, such as watching the sky at night and trying to identify the body of a loved one floating among the stars.

However, that quest for extended life is only human. The unknown is always scary and certainly that journey beyond the perimeter of life is a mystery, less so for those who have been blessed with the faith that beyond human existence awaits a better life, free of travail and pain.

A few years back, there were several articles and books on patients who had been brought back to life by aggressive medical means. They described their brief journey into the beyond as traveling towards a mesmerizing light and experiencing a sense of wondrous peace and tranquility. Even so, they welcomed their reprieve.

What that experience did for them was to intensify their resolution to live a better, more meaningful life.

If we think about it, this is the one lesson that death has to teach.

Suppose we were guaranteed an indefinite extension of life, what would we do with that time? Without the incentive of a time limit, would we feel any need to achieve?

Leon Kass, a University of Chicago philosopher, biologist and medical doctor, ponders this question in an essay on "Mortality and Morality: The Virtues of Finitude" in a book "Toward a More Natural Science, Biology and Human Affairs."

He writes: "Mortality makes life matter. This is in part because finitude — the sense of not having world enough and time is a spur to achievement."

With endless time to spend, where would be the need to develop good character, to meet the challenges of transcending concern with mere survival and work to eradicate the plagues of disease, suffering and poverty?

Longevity is not the answer to happiness, according to Kass, but rather living well. A life without goals and aims is empty and cannot be cured by existing indefinitely.

Rather than wishing for a life that goes on forever, it would seem to be more profitable to wish that life's end could come without undue suffering and pain.

There is much to be accomplished in that area. With all the medical advances, there are those who cry for relief from pain by death.

Recently three mercy killings have come to public attention. Undoubtedly there are many more that are never uncovered but these three are indicative of the desperation that drives people to relieve a loved one's misery by the only way that seems possible.

Boswell Gilbert, 76, is in prison for fatally shooting his wife of 51 years. Emily Gilbert had Alzheimer's disease with its progressive brain damage and osteoporosis, a painful bone deterioration.

There were witnesses who testified at Gilbert's trial that his wife begged to die. Gilbert has appealed his conviction but if he loses, he must spend 25 years in jail. The governor refuses to grant him a pardon. The only way he can escape his sentence is to become ill enough to be hospitalized.

A physician in New York was so undone by the damage Alzheimer's disease had done to his friend that he killed him with injections of insulin. He faces murder charges despite the fact that his friend had begged to die.

A well-publicized case is one where author Betty Rollins ("I'll Cry Tomorrow") sat by while her mother took lethal drugs. Her mother wanted to die after enduring months of chemotherapy and pain. Although aiding a suicide is a felony under New York law, Betty Rollins has not been charged. She has written a book about her mother called "Last Wish." It is a current Book-of-the-month selection.

While we sympathize with those who must make a choice of whether to stand by and watch a loved one die a painful death, or help them die a peaceful death, there is no way taking the life of another can be condoned.

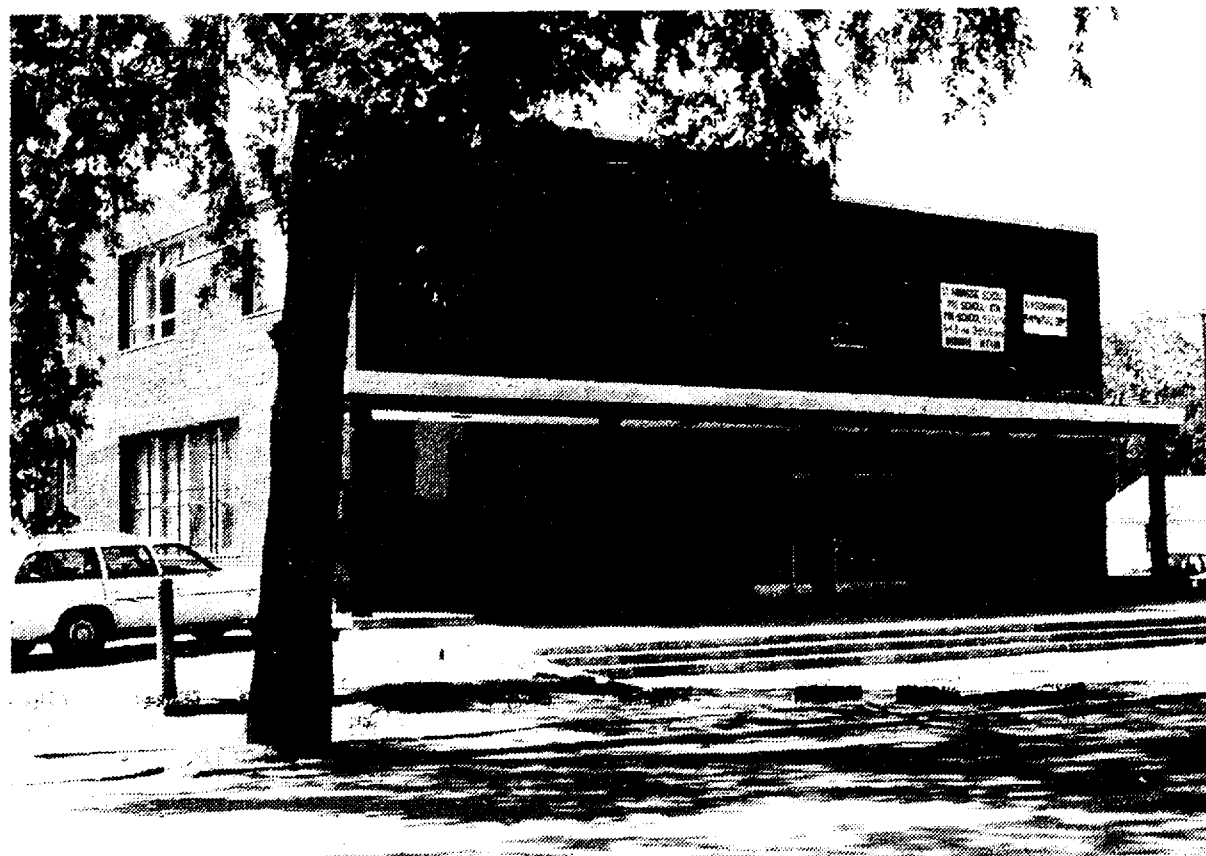

There is a danger that it could be an easy way out for relatives who feel overburdened by the care and expense involved in caring for a critically ill person. Unpleasant as it is to contemplate, a so-called mercy killing could become a means for impatient relatives to get their hands on an inheritance.

It is a weighty question that calls for the need of a hospital medical ethics committee to find answers for those who are terminally ill and want to be free of an agonizing process of dying. There have been steps taken in that direction. Doctors will ask relatives if they wish to have extraordinary steps taken to keep the terminally ill patient alive when death seems imminent. If the answer is no, it is respected.

It would seem also, that the patient, while still in possession of faculties and aware of prognosis, should have some input into that decision.

There have been stories told by those who have sat at the bedside of a terminally ill patient, sensing that the person themselves, wished to die. They seem to linger long enough to get past a holiday or to see a relative who had traveled a distance to be with them and then, satisfied, that their last wishes have been granted, quietly drift off.

Life is a mystery that we work to solve. Death too, has its mysteries that only faith can solve for some. For others it is a journey into the unknown.

One view from the Capitol Keeping options on governor's race

By William R. Bryant Jr.

The Republican conference on Mackinac Island last weekend saw three gubernatorial hopefuls trying to convince the party regulars of their potency as possible challengers to Gov. James Blanchard next year.

I did not attend the conference this year. They tend to suffer from a sameness every September of every odd-numbered year.

And I object to their being held at the great, but super-expensive, Grand Hotel. Many people simply cannot afford to attend.

Bill Lucas, Dan Murphy and Dick Chrysler are the three publicly seeking the Republican nomination for governor. Brooks Patterson claims to be sitting this one out. If he is it may not totally be a choice he was glad to make.

Patterson may well have concluded from polls that Blanchard is too strong, presently, to be beaten next year. I don't share the view. I think Blanchard can be beaten, but there are some who feel the Republicans better start looking at 1990 as the year to regain the governorship.

Patterson also may feel that questions about his role in the refusal to prosecute certain auto dealers for theft of natural gas by meter tampering may be too severe for a statewide race this time around.

And Brooks has continued to fail to catch on as other than a law-and-order candidate. And one-issue candidates don't often win a governor's race.

Dick Chrysler is an innovative businessman, owner of Cars and Concepts, political protégé of Richard Headlee and promoter of a part-time legislature petition drive. As you know if you have seen any of the TV ads for that petition drive, Dick lacks any apparent charisma or sense of humor on television.

Whether Dick Chrysler can groom himself, train himself to appear at ease, concerned and the sort of person many would like as their governor is anybody's guess. It seems unlikely. As he says, he is the only business person candidate, but Lee Iacocca he is not.

Dan Murphy has done a solid job as Oakland County executive and is personable in small groups or one on one. But, he, too, lacks, presently, an appealing personality in large groups or on television.

Oakland County party regulars and citizens like and respect Dan Murphy. His statewide appeal is still a major question.

Bill Lucas entered the Republican Party an instant star. But Democrats privately speak of problems Lucas might have in a statewide race. Even last February rumored problems in the political past of Lucas led me to caution Washington and Lansing officials.

Top Lucas staff person Dennis Nystrom was, and is, seen by me and many others as a major problem for Bill Lucas. Nystrom's ambition for himself and for Lucas is unlimited. Nystrom has an ego which makes it difficult or impossible to think he may be wrong. He has had a large hand in creating Lucas as a media all-star, but may be the downfall of Bill Lucas.

Further problems, beyond the highly questionable contract to renovate the Old County Building, may soon come to light.

At least one involves Nystrom. Little was said at the time Lucas used his officeholder expense fund to pay Nystrom legal fees the county refused to pay. Those fees, however, were incurred apparently while Lucas was sheriff. It may have been illegal, therefore, to pay them from the Lucas officeholder expense fund as county executive.

I like Bill Lucas, but at this time I am uncomfortable with some of his past actions and rumors as to other past actions and I am uncomfortable with his dependence on Dennis Nystrom.

I intend to keep my options open, and I hope someone comes along or one of the present contenders develops into someone whom I can support.

Oh, well, it is still early. Who knows what might develop.

"It has always been known that donating blood has nothing to do with AIDS. Giving blood is absolutely safe. There is no way that a donor can contract AIDS or any other disease by giving a pint of blood. Despite the known safety of donating blood, some people are afraid to give. In fact, blood donations are down from a year ago, and there is evidence that some previous donors are staying away from blood drives because they are afraid they may get AIDS.

"Their fear, I cannot stress too strongly, is unfounded. All blood collection agencies use a new needle for each donor. That needle is sterile, and it is thrown away after a single use. You cannot get AIDS from donating blood."

Stars come out at North planetarium

This fall Community Planetarium Director Tim Skonieczny will present four, single-session classes, a public star program, and a "Halley Hotline" for those with an interest in astronomy. Classes begin at 7 p.m. on Tuesdays in the planetarium of North High School, 707 Vernier Road. Fee is $4.50, payable in advance through the Department of Community Education of The Grosse Pointe Public School System.

"Introduction to Amateur Astronomy" will be held on Thursday, Oct. 10 because of a school conflict. This class starts with techniques for observing the night sky as well as teaching the basics of purchasing and using binoculars and telescopes. Suggestion for joining local astronomy clubs are included.

"The Solar System — Part I" on Oct. 15 is the first of a two-part series which examines recent discoveries of Viking and Voyager missions to the outer planets using slides and the planetarium's new laser disk system. Also included are techniques for observing the planets.

"The Solar System — Part II" on Oct. 22 examines "dirty snowballs and cosmic dust," the comets and their relation to meteors. Learn too, about the passage of Halley's Comet, as well as Edmond Halley's life and times.

"The Sun and Stellar Evolution" on Oct. 29 deals with the structure, life and death of the sun as compared to other stars in this class as well as a discussion of neutron stars, pulsars and black holes. Learn how nebulae in the Milky Way galaxy give clues to stellar evolution.

This fall's public star program "Strangers Around the Sun," will be repeated each Tuesday from Nov. 5 through Dec. 10. Public Star Programs begin at 7:30 p.m., promptly. Fee is $2.

The planetarium is located at North High School behind the Community Performing Arts Auditorium. Enter the north campus from Morningside Drive and park near the tennis courts. The entrance to the planetarium is to the left of the garage door to the scene shop. No one will be admitted to the planetarium after the program has begun.

The telephone number for Halley Hotline is 343-2289. Call from 3:30 p.m. to 7:30 a.m. Nov. 4 through Nov. 27 for up-to-date information on the visibility of Halley's Comet and planetarium activities related to the comet.

Call the Department of Community Education at 343-2178 for space availability in astronomy classes.

Three groups form oral history consortium

The dream of bringing the history of Grosse Pointe to life by means of tape-recorded memories of and about Grosse Pointers is now a reality.

The Grosse Pointe Oral History Consortium, a newly established collaborative effort of the Grosse Pointe Public Library, the Grosse Pointe Historical Society and the Grosse Pointe Woods Historical Commission, has begun to interview individuals in the community about the area's past — the daily life, business endeavors, cultural traditions and social activities of its citizens. This project is titled "History On Our Doorsteps."

"We felt it was vital to actively expand a lasting record of our heritage," said Helen Leonard, Outreach librarian. "Through the consortium, we have provided the means to gather and preserve information about the growth and development of our community."

The Grosse Pointe Oral History Consortium, which was created in the spring of 1985, has two major goals: to discover history's unknown details and to expand access to, as well as an appreciation of, these newly-uncovered facts. By collaborating, consortium members hope to encourage more individuals to share their remembrances, to minimize duplication of effort, to provide a trained volunteer corps of interviewers and to insure uniformity of taping methods. With the interviewee's approval, tapes made for one consortium member will be given to other members, thus expanding availability of the recorded information for educational use.

Recorded oral history acquired its first popularity in the 1940s at New York's Columbia University. Since then, it has been the source of works such as Merle Miller's biography, "Plain Speaking," and Studs Terkel's "Working." Thanks to individuals already interviewed, Grosse Pointers can know more about the Jefferson Avenue Inter-Urban and the early electric powered automobiles, about "ribbon farms" turned first into grand estates and then into comfortable suburbs.

If its goals are to be achieved, the Grosse Pointe Oral History Consortium needs the participation of Grosse Pointers. Anyone willing to discuss his/her memories or able to serve as an interviewer should call 343-2316 and ask for Helen Leonard.

John Hammel, a long-time volunteer in the recording of oral history, listens as Shirley Weiderhold remembers growing up in Grosse Pointe Woods.

streaming," she said. She said one general math class has 20 students, 16 of them with special needs and taught by a teacher with no special training.

"If it were (designated) a special ed class, she'd have an aide," Cook said.

According to schools Personnel Director Ronald Tonks, the additional teacher will probably be hired within two weeks. He said the process will be shortened because the district has just gone through the hiring process with the three new teachers and is likely to hire one of the people interviewed for those jobs.

"We receive 1,000 to 1,500 applications every year (for teaching positions)," Tonks said, "so we have plenty of resumes on hand." he did not establish a timetable for hiring the aides.

Administrators and staff expressed satisfaction at the hirings. "If there were enough room, one of my staff here would be doing cartwheels," Poupard's Cooper said.

Twenty four hours a day."

The Bradys left for the United States the day after the second quake. Needless to say they received quite a reception from their family and friends in Texas and Detroit.

"The plane was only half-full on the way to Dallas and Detroit," Brady said. "Anyone with any brains had probably left after the first jolt. It was pretty emotional when we finally got back."

Once home, the family made calls on behalf of other earthquake survivors who requested their help once back in the states. The calls included that of a Mexican woman whose husband was in Virginia, and for two priests who lived in Toronto.

"I don't know what's wrong with us," Brady said. "We were in Hawaii recently and they had the first hurricane they've experienced in 25 years. Then when we left a long dormant volcano exploded. Our friends call us the Disaster Twins. They want to know where we're going next so they can avoid it."

"And our kids get on us too," she said. "They've refused to let us go any further away than Toledo from now on."

time working with students who are disruptive. As things are now, "they don't get to see the students who are doing everything right," she said.

Trustee Carl Anderson asked the administration for a review and evaluation of the internship by July so the board would have a way to rate the effectiveness of the program.

Other board members also testified to the need for advance planning. "Perhaps we've learned a lesson," said Secretary Fred Adams. "Next time let's make sure Carol has all the information she needs."

"(It is) my philosophy that we ought not have surprises," agreed board President Jon Gandelot.

Education Association President Doris Cook urged the administration to provide greater continuity to programs.

"Our programs lack regularity," Cook said. "They just come along when there is too great a cutback at the administrative level. They're brought in to fill a gap."

Cook told the board that she supports the internship and recommended that it become a regular, ongoing program.

Arts Bazaar
League of Women Voters plans fundraiser

By Elsa Frohman

On Saturday, Oct. 5, the League of Women Voters of Grosse Pointe will hold its annual Arts Bazaar in the Crystal Ballroom and Alger House reception room at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. The event is the league's major fundraising activity of the year and will serve to support the group's many community services including voter information, public seminars and informative publications such as "Know Your Grosse Pointe."

Leila Lynch, president of the Grosse Pointe chapter, pointed out that this year marks the 65th anniversary of the national league and the 35th anniversary of Grosse Pointe's chapter.

"The league is an unusual organization," Lynch said. "Our dues go completely to the state and national organization to support their programs. Local league members must raise every penny we spend in the community. The people who gravitate to the league would rather be doing community service than raising money."

To support the league's local programs, the Arts Bazaar has been held every year for the past nine years. Exhibitors from throughout Michigan will offer a wide variety of arts such as: Marily Lyons' Chinese brushwork; Bill Whiting's mouthstick pen and ink drawings; Maria Agopian's lace boxes; and whimsical children's clothing by Jennifer Phillips.

A special feature at the bazaar will be the works of local artist Sister Kinue Matsuzaki. Born in Magasaki, Japan, Sister Matsuzaki is a member of the Religious of the Sacred Heart. Her delicate floral paintings are extremely popular in this area.

State and local candidates and elected officials will be on hand to meet and talk with their constituents at the bazaar. Rep. William Bryant will be among their number.

The league is particularly dedicated to encouraging voter registration. A voter registration table will be staffed by league members during the bazaar. The league hopes to register voters from all five Grosse Pointes during the event.

The League is an issue-oriented organization. While the group sponsors candidate forums and other voter information programs, specific candidates are never endorsed by the league.

The league does, however, support issues. Currently, the league supports voter registration reform, a statewide presidential primary, tax reform and responsible disposal of solid wastes.

The Grosse Pointe League was formed in 1950 after a group of civic-minded women responded to a request to investigate questionable practices by the city council of Grosse Pointe Park.

Today, the league publishes voters guides for elections and

Sportsmens Dinner to help conserve wetlands for ducks

By Elsa Frohman

Next Wednesday, sportsmen from around the area will gather under the "wing" of Ducks Unlimited for the annual Sportsmen's Dinner which raises funds for wetlands conservation in Canada, the United States and Mexico.

Ducks Unlimited is one of the largest conservation groups in the western hemisphere. It was founded in 1937 during the days of the "Dust Bowl," which affected Canada even more severely than the United States. The dry climatic conditions of those years decimated the breeding grounds of several species of waterfowl — alerting some commercial hunters to the possibility that some varieties of duck could disappear all together.

The hunters banded together to form Ducks Unlimited. The majority of the groups funds are used to create and protect wetlands in Canada, however, a portion of the funds are earmarked for use in the area where they are raised.

Kevin Rinke is chairman of the Grosse Pointe chapter of the organization. The local chapter is one of the most successful in Michigan.

"We raise more money per person than any other chapter in the state," Rinke said. "Last year, we raised $40,000 in our chapter alone."

The group's primary fundraiser is next week's Sportsmen's Dinner. In addition to ticket sales, the group raises money by auctioning off donated items at the dinner.

"We don't concentrate just on ducks," Rinke said. "Money going into waterfowl conservation benefits other forms of wildlife as well."

This year, the international organization hopes to raise $55 million for wetlands conservation.

About $2 million will come from Michigan. About $150,000 of the money will be used in Michigan with matching funds from the Department of Natural Resources.

However, though the majority of the money goes to Canada, the conservation efforts there benefit sportsmen throughout North America. The primary nesting grounds of several breeds of ducks important to duck hunters are in Canada. If the Canadian wetlands are not protected, duck populations elsewhere will be affected.

"This community is very active in supporting Ducks Unlimited," Rinke said. "We do not purchase anything (for the silent and live auctions at the dinner). All our items are donated. We rely on the generosity of the local businessmen. With the auction items, a donation of $100 goes directly to

The paintings of Sr. Kinue Matsuzaki, left, will be one of the highlights of the League of Women Voters Arts Bazaar planned for Oct. 5. League President Leila Lynch, center, has also announced that many public officials, such as Rep. William R. Bryant Jr., right, will also be on hand at the event.

Pro Musica Society of Detroit elects board

The Pro Musica Society of Detroit held its 58th annual meeting on Monday, Sept. 9, at the Edsel Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores. The main reason for this occasion is the society's annual election of one third of its board of 15 directors and its officers for the coming year.

Mrs. Zoltan J. Janosi of Grosse Pointe and Dr. Hershel Sandberg of Southfield were newly elected to the board, filling two vacancies. Grosse Pointers Elizabeth Soby, Mrs. Nicholas Kondak and Edward P. Frohlich were re-elected.

Officers chosen for the coming year are Alexander C. Suczek, president; Thomas V. LoCicero, first vice president; and James Diamond, treasurer, all of Grosse Pointe. Mrs. George Zeits of Dearborn is second vice president and Mrs. Berj H. Haidostian of Birmingham, secretary.

Artists for the society's three concerts this season were also announced. Opening the season on Friday, Oct. 25, will be pianist Leonard Pennario. Equally prominent in recital, chamber music and orchestral performances, Pennario is one of America's most eminent pianists.

For his Pro Musica recital Pennario has programmed music of Debussy, Schubert, Barber, Scriabin, Milhaud, Ravel and Chopin. Of these composers, Maurice Ravel and Darius Milhaud have performed at past Pro Musica concerts.

The second concert on Friday, Feb. 28, will bring the brilliant young violin prodigy Joshua Bell in his Detroit debut. A protege of Itzhak Perlman, Bell was welcomed to musical stardom last April when he made his Lincoln Center debut in New York. Audiences and musicians alike also praised his artistry highly this summer at the Marlboro Festival. His appearance in Detroit fulfills Pro Musica's aim to bring new artists as they achieve top status.

The society's season will close on Friday, April 18, with fulfillment of its other primary goal — to bring the world's greatest composers to play and speak at performances of their music. The composer is Ned Rorem, reputed to be the most widely performed living composer of vocal music in the world today. At this very special Pro Musica presentation, Rorem will discuss his composing and accompany lyric baritone William Parker in recital. Parker, the recipient of numerous grants and awards for performances of American music will perform songs by Rorem and selected French Art Songs which have a particular influence on Rorem's work.

Season subscriptions to the Pro Musica series are available to the general public and may be arranged by calling, on the east side, PM President Alex Suczek at 885-0793, on the north side, membership secretary Mrs. George Drake at 334-0724, and on the west side, second vice president Mrs. George Zeitz at 563-9452.

The subscription is $30 per person for the three concerts. Each is followed by a social hour with refreshments where the audience can meet and talk at leisure with the artists.

The concerts are held in the Recital Hall and social hours in the Romanesque Hall of the Detroit Institute of Arts where Pro Musica is sponsored by the Department of Performing Arts.

The annual meeting concluded with an interlude of Viennese songs performed by Alex and Maribel Suczek and a performance by pianist Mischa Kottler of the Variations on Liebeslied and Liebesfreud by Rachmaninoff. An ovation by the membership persuaded Kottler, a former board member, to perform the Waltz in C minor by Chopin as an encore. The meeting adjourned with a glow at 10:30 p.m.

Operation LINC

Gala opening

Ray Fleming of the Kidd Galleries explains the background of some of the artworks included in the week-long exhibition of the War Memorial to guests at the black-tie preview party held Sept. 20. The art exhibition has been arranged by the Council of Sponsors to give Grosse Pointers an opportunity to view and possibly purchase fine contemporary art. Co-chairmen of the Week of Art where Margo Kessler and Audrey Platt.

Services go on the block at Memorial

Would you enjoy a week-end at a Leland Cottage, or at Harbor Springs; have dinner-theatre tickets; see a U of M game in a choice location; enjoy having someone whip up hors d'oeuvres and dinner for you and seven guests; smile as someone polishes your brass or silver; have any one of five women volunteer to be your driver within a 50 mile radius? Would you feel it's simply an attractive come-on? Think again because this is an on-going project of the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church Women's Country Fair committee.

Pauline Lackey enjoyed working on a community auction so much that, in conversation with Martha Kiely, they determined this could serve as a project for the fair. In its early days, members provided services — helping by doing. Under the leadership of Pauline, later Jan Coulter and Jan Wright, the idea has expanded.

This year's "Bids and Prices Auction" committee has garnered many interesting and unusual items for the Nov. 9 auction board says Pauline Lackey, chairman of the committee. Dinner-Theatre tickets, hockey tickets, condos, cottages for ski-weekends, antiques, art objects, a log cabin dollhouse created by artisans in Grayling are only a few of the items available in November.

Anne Parcells and Barb Fordree, general chairwoman for the 1985 Country Fair, are enthusiastic in their praise of the Fair workers.

"When one thinks that all the proceeds from the Fair are sent out — totally used in charitable giving — it gives a special glow to be involved with women who give hours and hours of their time unselfishly," Parcells said.

Fordee listed a few of the organizations to be helped: Crossroads East, Presbyterian Village East, Foundation for Exceptional Children, and outside of the community — World Medical Relief and Buckhorn, a home for the emotionally disturbed in Kentucky.

"Not all of us can be active in the sense of the Peace Corps, but all of us working on the Fair do so because we can lend our time and talent knowing that we are reaching out to the greater community. In addition, it gives us an opportunity to become better acquainted with members of our own church," Fordee said.

Because many working women commented how difficult it was for them to participate in past fairs, Lackey noted the fair date is on a Saturday so that not only the working woman can attend, but the entire family can enjoy the day together.

"It will be important for people to block out the time, early, if they wish to participate in the Bids and Prices Auction as well as the entire fair on Saturday, Nov. 9," Lackey said.

Ducks Unlimited . . .

Ducks Unlimited."

Another feature of this year's dinner will be a film on a conservation project in Ontario, Canada.

Rinke pointed out that a seven-year drought in some parts of Canada has led to a sharp decrease in the breeding populations of some types of ducks. However, at the same time, the record high water-levels in Michigan have led to more wetlands here and an increase in some types of ducks.

"We're very fortunate here in Michigan," Rinke said. The area surrounding Lake St. Clair has one of the largest populations of canvas back ducks — a protected species.

This year's dinner is being planned ed by a new committee. In addition to Rinke, committee members are Dr. Donald Thill, Dr. William Opdyke and Dean Jabara.

Stop in and show your appreciation to our fine local establishments and become acquainted with one of the great musical assets in Grosse Pointe.

DON'T PAINT YOUR RADIATORS

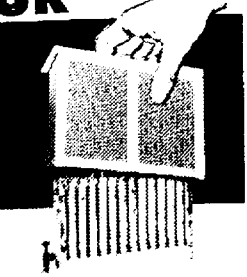

Steam and hot water systems with upright radiators have been proven to be the most efficient method of heating. But are ugly and old-fashioned. Paint or wood covers drastically reduce heating efficiency.

William Krag: Captain who sails on a sea of imagination

By Elsa Frohman
William Krag of Grosse Pointe Farms is captain of the steam tugboat Alaska Bay. But Alaska Bay is only a beginning — he is planning a fleet of four or five boats that will someday be the pride of the Great Lakes — and fit nicely into his family room.

The Alaska Bay is about three feet long. But never mind its size. Its lights light, its whistle blows, its propeller turns. In nearly every aspect except scale, Alaska Bay is as seaworthy a ship as has ever sailed the waters of Lake Huron.

Krag built the Alaska Bay practically from scratch. Beginning from a purchased hull, he cut individual boards from several different shades of mahogany veneer to cover the deck. He constructed the cabins to match old photographs of similar antique steam tugs. He then installed three separate electrical systems to work the lights and whistle, the motor, and the radio control system.

Finally, the captain was installed on the bridge and the captain's wife on the deck. The cabins were furnished with miniature furniture and rugs and the model ship was completed with its mascot — a model dog that bears a striking resemblance to Krag's own dog.

Pointer of Interest

Krag admits that the Alaska Bay is an elaborate toy.

"I can startle people at beach parties," he said. "Or use it to chase ducks." The Alaska Bay is also at home in friends' swimming pools, where it can push its barge — often loaded with drinks. The last function led Krag to name the barge "Barge."

Silly? A little bit — but the Alaska Bay also represents methodical research and painstaking attention to detail. Krag designed the boat to match drawings and photographs of boats he found at the Dossin Great Lakes Museum and the Great Lakes Historical Society Museum in Vermilion, Ohio. He also got assistance from marine artist Robert M. McGreevy who gave him a drawing of a boat similar to the Alaska Bay.

"I've heard that a real tug like the Alaska Bay is in a museum in Bath, Maine. Now we will have to make a trip there to see it," Krag said.

The Alaska Bay was officially launched this summer. The construction job took about a year. But Krag purchased the hull almost three years ago before he had time to start working on the boat.

"You never have time to work on a project like this," he said. "You have to make time." Krag said he would work on the boat in odd moments — putting on a coat of varnish before he went to work in the morning, then working on the boat again when he got home and the varnish was dry.

As a manufacturing engineering consultant for Giffels Company

William Krag's radio controlled model tugboat took more than a year of painstaking work to complete. It was carefully researched for authentic detail.

(the firm which built Cobo Hall). Krag spends a lot of his time traveling — which takes him away from his model-building hobby. However, his travels have led him to a few finds which advanced the Alaska Bay project.

Giffels works with the military, finding ways to reduce the cost of manufacturing weapons systems. On a business trip to Tooele Army Depot near Salt Lake City, Utah, Krag was given a miniature rubber tire on a keychain as a souvenir of the rubber shop where old tires are melted and recycled by the Army.

Krag said he had come back from the trip when a "bell rang" in his head while he was looking at the keychain. He checked the size of the tire and found it would be almost perfect for the bumper tires on his model tug. He called back to the Tooele Depot and they sent him enough tire keychains to furnish the Alaska Bay.

While Krag made many of the fittings and furnishings for the tugboat, including the doorknobs which are BBs, much of the miniature hardware came from the A.J. Fisher Company in Royal Oak, which specializes in miniatures.

Krag said he chose a tugboat for his first radio controlled project because it was slow moving and relatively safe.

"When you put this much work into something like this, you want to be pretty certain you can recover it when you sail it," he said.

He explained that while the radio controls are effective for a considerable distance, an airplane flying overhead can interfere and he can temporarily lose control of the boat. A fast-moving boat might be out of range before the interference died down.

Krag said he started building models when he was a boy, but only took the hobby up again about 10 years ago. His first project was a hermaphrodite brig — similar to the boat the settlers took to Hawaii to the Michener novel.

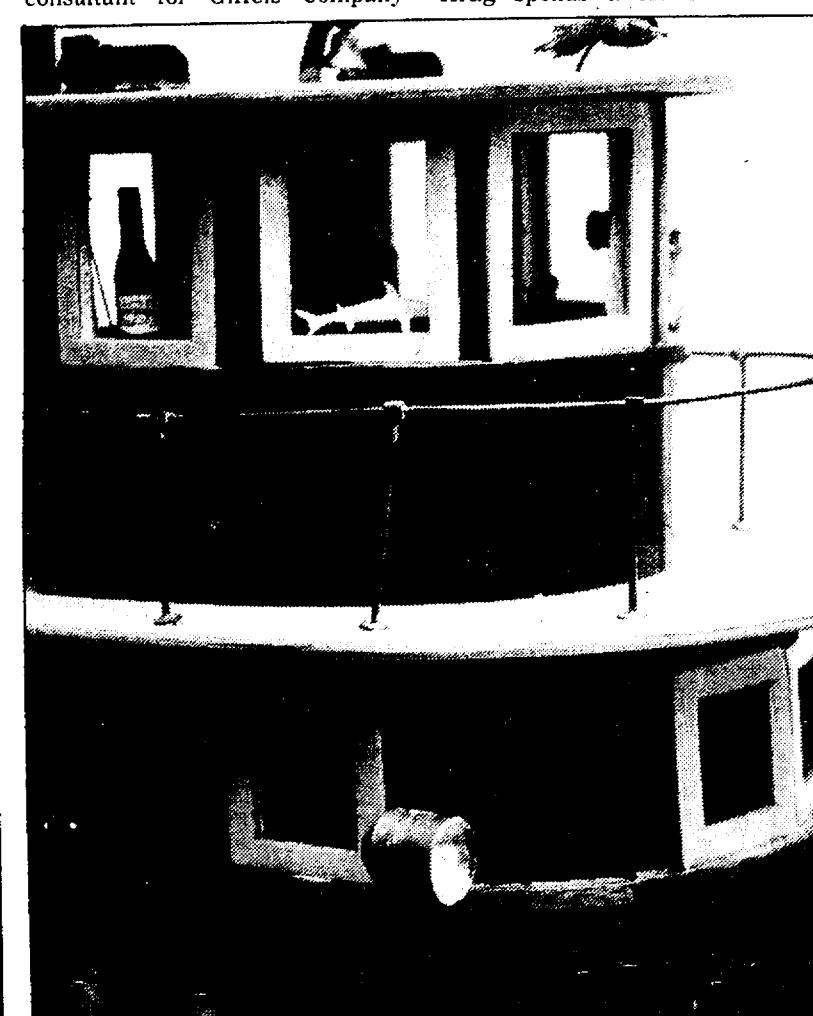

He plans several more radio controlled boats in the future. His next project will be a 1920s-vintage Richardson cruiser to duplicate one his father-in-law once owned.

"I've always loved the water," Krag said. "If you like ships and can't afford to own them full-sized, this is the way to bring them down to the level of affordability." Eventually, Krag intends to have a fleet of four or five model ships.

Krag doesn't spend all his spare time building and sailing his model ships. He is on the board of the Detroit Institute for Children — which he has helped obtain a computer system for a medical database and financial analysis. Krag has also designed a modular computer workstation that he is currently marketing through a custom furniture company.

Lubera on dean's list

Deborah Loraine Lubera, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Lubera of Grosse Pointe Shores has been placed on the Smith College dean's list and has been named a Smith College First Group Scholar for her academic excellence. She is also a member of the Gold Key Association, varsity lacrosse team and Athletic Association. She was a 1984 graduate of University Liggett School.

A tiny captain commands the bridge of the Alaska Bay. The search light, on the lower deck, sweeps back and forth and lights up. Each board of the deck was individually cut from mahogany veneer and laid down separately.

Look for good nutrition in the cabbage patch

There are 500 varieties of cabbage. Cultivated over 2,000 years, the cabbage figures in Greek mythology. The early colonists found it so adaptable to the soil that it rivaled the potato in popularity. Because it is nutritious, low caloric and not as perishable as many vegetables, this delicious vegetable is coveted the world over.

Cabbage is rich in potassium, vitamins A and C, calcium, magnesium, selenium, carbohydrate and protein. Excellent seasonings for cabbage are dill, oregano, saffron, celery seeds, fennel, garlic, onions and red peppers.

Cabbage is a coveted food of vegetarians and dieters because of its low caloric and high nutrient content. (1 cup raw — 17 calories, 1 cup cooked — 29 calories).

The following is a selection of recipes from cabbage from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budget-wise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Favorite Fried Cabbage

Henry Ford was extremely fond of fried cabbage. Mrs. Ford originally gave this recipe to her church group, who published a cookbook. We have served this dish many, many times and everyone loves it. 4 Tbsp. fat (butter or bacon) 8 cups shredded cabbage 1/2 cup catsup

In large skillet melt the butter and fry the cabbage 10 minutes, constantly keeping it covered. Stir often. Add catsup, heat thoroughly and serve. Makes six servings.

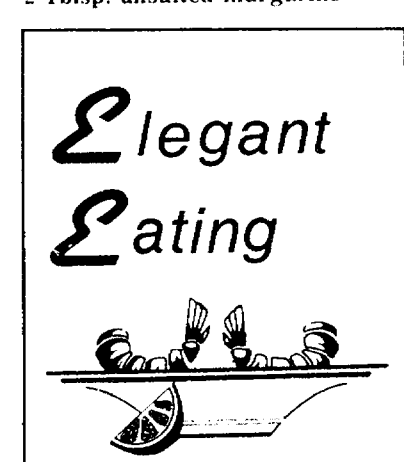

Calories about 104 per serving. Cholesterol about 23 mgs.

In Mrs. Ford's recipe, Elegant Eating suggests substituting 2 tablespoons of unsalted margarine for the butter or bacon fat. The calorie count will then be 71 per serving and the cholesterol 0.

Tangy Fruited Cabbage

A perfectly delicious dish when served with either meat or poultry... and decidedly easy on the family grocery budget. 2 Tbsp. lemon juice 3 apples, chopped 1 onion, chopped 2 Tbsp. unsalted margarine

1/2 medium cabbage, shredded (about 5 to 6 cups) 1/2 cup water 1/4 cup brown sugar, packed 1/3 cup tarragon wine vinegar 1/4 tsp. salt 1/8 tsp. white pepper Sprinkle with Hungarian sweet paprika

In teflon skillet saute apples and onion for 10 minutes. Add cabbage and water. Cover and steam 10 minutes. When tender, add brown sugar and vinegar. Just before serving, stir in salt and pepper. Taste for seasoning, you may wish to add a little more sugar or vinegar. Makes six servings.

Calories about 128 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

Country Style Cabbage

1 Tbsp. margarine 1 can (3 ounce) Broiled in Butter chopped mushrooms, undrained 4 cups finely shredded cabbage 2 Tbsp. lemon juice 3 ounce evaporated skimmed milk 1/8 tsp. crushed tarragon Dash salt and pepper

Melt margarine in a large skillet with tight fitting cover. Add mushrooms including broth from can. Mix well. Add cabbage, cover and cook five to six minutes, stirring occasionally.

Put lemon juice in bottom of measuring cup, stir in evaporated skimmed milk; let stand for a few minutes to thicken. Slowly stir into the cabbage mixture with the tarragon, salt and pepper. Heat over low heat until hot, but do not let boil. Makes five servings.

Calories about 37 per serving. Cholesterol — a trace.

Chutney-Chicken Cabbage Salad

1 large chicken breast, split, skinned and boned 2 Tbsp. soy sauce, divided 1 tsp. grated fresh ginger or 1/2 tsp. ground pepper 1 Tbsp. cooking oil 1/3 cup low-calorie mayonnaise 1/2 cup chutney, chopped 1/2 tsp. curry powder 2 cups shredded Chinese cabbage 2 cups torn fresh spinach 1 can (8 oz.) pineapple chunks drained 1/2 cup thinly sliced carrots 1/4 cup chopped peanuts Cut chicken into 1 1/2 x 1 1/2-inch pieces. In a small bowl combine chicken, the first tablespoon soy sauce, and the ginger, stirring to coat. Cover and marinate two hours in refrigerator. In a skillet or wok stir-fry in hot cooking oil three to four minutes or until done. Drain, cover, and chill. In a bowl stir together mayonnaise, chutney, the second tablespoon of soy sauce, and the curry powder. Toss with cabbage, spinach, drained pineapple, chicken, carrots and peanuts. Serve in cabbage lined bowl, if desired. Garnish with carrot curls. Makes six servings. Calories about 198 per serving. Cholesterol about 23 mgs.

Braised Red Cabbage

1-1/2 tsp. caraway seeds 2 Tbsp. margarine 1 medium-sized red cabbage 1/3 cup vinegar 1/2 cup low-sugar currant jelly 1/4 tsp. salt Dash of pepper Warm the caraway seeds in the margarine in a large skillet until they have softened somewhat, about five minutes.

Wash cabbage, quarter, core, and cut into slices 1/8 to 1/4-inch thick. Add cabbage to skillet and toss lightly with seeds; stir-fry until nicely glazed, about five minutes. Cover skillet and let cabbage braise for five minutes, or until crisp-tender. Cover, skillet, toss cabbage. Combine jelly and vinegar in a cup; pour into skillet with the pepper and a touch of salt. Toss cabbage again and braise five minutes more or until done as you like it. Makes six servings. Calories about 108 per serving. Cholesterol 0.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

There were a couple of big football games around here last weekend: South beat Roseville, 39-0, and North trounced Waterford Kettering, 48-20. My spies tell me I missed a pair of pretty good football games. That's okay. I was over at University Liggett School, where football is back after a one-year absence.

The last time I watched ULS play football is also the first time I saw Oscar Alcantara. He was a sophomore then, one of the few kids who came out for football at ULS in 1983. There really wasn't anything unusual about Oscar, except maybe his size. You don't see many 5-3 cornerbacks playing varsity football.

ULS was playing a team with the unlikely name of Carsonville-Port Sanilac that day. Early in the game, a Port Sanilac receiver caught a pass and had nothing but open air between him and the ULS goal line. Out of nowhere came Oscar Alcantara, who was about six inches shorter and 50 pounds lighter than the guy with the ball. Oscar put a hit on the Port Sanilac guy, then jumped up, pumped his fist, shook a finger in the face of the player who lay on the ground wondering how to get his eyes uncrossed and then dashed back to the huddle with a huge grin on his face.

ULS ended up losing by a lopsided score, but the game had been one of the most interesting I'd seen that fall. Little Oscar just kept hitting and grinning and pumping that fist. I had never seen anybody that much into a football game before.

I wrote about Oscar in that week's column, but then pretty much forgot about him. See, ULS dropped varsity football last season and there really wasn't any other opportunity for me to run into Oscar.

Until last week, ULS teacher, coach and publications expert Cathy Schmidt thought it might be nice if I got a chance to meet Oscar. He remembered the nice things I'd written about him and would like to meet me. Could I come for lunch, Schmidt wondered?

So we had lunch. And I finally got a chance to meet Oscar.

"I've always been small. Well, short, anyway. In the sixth grade, I was kind of heavy-set, too. I took a look around at the different sports. I wasn't too interested in soccer — built the way I was, there was no way I was going to run around all day. So, I chose football," Oscar said.

"It's the hitting I enjoy the most. I just love to hit," he told me. No kidding Oscar, I said. So what did he do last fall, when there was no football and consequently, no hitting?

"I took a job after school, in the extended day care program. Every day, I'd play with kids for two hours. It was great," he said, excusing himself from the table to go and get his lunch.

"You should have seen him. I'd look out my window and there was Oscar, walking along, playing his guitar, with all the little kids following him. I don't know who was enjoying it more, Oscar or the kids," said Cathy Schmidt.

"He's really a great kid. He's a musician, an excellent student and very involved in school activities," she added. And not a bad football player.

Oscar had on his dark blue, No. 42 football jersey at school that day. He also wore his ever-present grin as he walked around the cafeteria, talking to friends and trying to coax every teacher he saw into serving as a chaperone for a school dance.

"I plan to go to a small college and as far as sports go, maybe I'll get into intramurals. Or play basketball in one of those 6-foot and under leagues. There aren't a great deal of college sports opportunities for someone my size," Oscar said, between bites of lunch.

Not yet, anyway. But with Oscar, you never know.

He didn't just sit around moping last year when ULS dropped varsity football because of a lack of numbers. He played varsity basketball, just as he had in middle school and as a ULS freshman. He was no Patrick Ewing, but even at 5-4, Oscar wasn't out of place on the Knights' cage team, either.

But Oscar's real love is football and with ULS playing again, he's back at it. He doesn't even mind playing a JV schedule, which the Knights are doing this season in an effort to get the program back on steady ground.

"It feels good to be one of the bigger kids for a change," he laughed.

So I spent last Saturday afternoon at ULS watching the parents, teachers and students get into football again. Head coach Bob Newvine stresses an aggressive game and injects lots of excitement into the program. ULS fans were out in full force, with tailgate parties, banners, a pep band... the works.

On the field, ULS was trailing 28-7, a few minutes before halftime. No. 42 was limping as he walked back to the huddle. A few plays later, he joined his teammates as they walked off the field for halftime. Then he took his helmet off and smiled that Oscar Alcantara smile.

Yep. Football is back at ULS.

Girls' day out...

The occasion was the sixth annual North High Girls' Fall Sports Invitational, an all-girls event hosted by North and featuring 400 athletes from eight schools in Ann Arbor, Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills and Farmington. That's North leading the cross country pack up Vernier Hill at right and North vs. South in a basketball match-up at far right.

Rebels open hockey year

The name may have changed but the result — a winning hockey team — remains the same as the Grosse Pointe Squirt AA Rebels (formerly the Bandits) began play in the Fraser Early Bird Hockey Tournament with two victories.

The Rebels topped the Macomb Rocco Bulldogs, 3-1, and the Michigan Blades, 9-1. The tournament will continue this weekend with the Rebels playing St. Clair Shores and Port Huron.

In the Rebels' first game, the Bulldogs dominated the action early and took a 1-0 lead. But Stefan Teitge got the Rebels even and goals from Andrew VanDeweghe and Louis Tellerico put the game away. Assists went to VanDeweghe (two), Teitge and Scott Berger. The excellent goaltending of Jon Bell and Chris Eldridge thwarted several Bulldog scoring efforts.

Against the Michigan Blades, the Rebels took control early on both offense and defense. Goals were scored by VanDeweghe (three), Tim Peterson and Teitge (two each), Tellerico and Kyle Wachner. Corby Leith (three), Tim Peterson and Teitge (two each), Tellerico and Kyle Wachner. Corby Leith (three), Teitge and Tellerico (two each), Berger, Matt Vetrano, Peter Antonenko, Jeff Jensen, Mike Frank and John Maycock drew assists.

In addition to the Early Bird Tournament at Fraser, the Rebels are also entered into a tournament hosted by Woodhaven. The Rebels will play in the Little Caesar's Amateur Hockey League this season. They are coached by Joe Berger, John O'Connell and Toby Leith, with assistance from South High hockey players Bill Tecos and Andrew Roy.

Jeff Seibenick, third degree black belt, is currently offering classes in the four major systems of Okinawa karate, Goju Ryu, at the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo, on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 8:30 a.m. for grades 4 through adult.

Goju Ryu karate deals directly with the fighting techniques that would be encountered "on the street." The major emphasis is on self-defense practice. Session II classes will begin on Nov. 4. Registrations are being accepted currently at the Neighborhood Club.

Marathon deadline is tomorrow

The registration deadline for the Eighth Annual Detroit Free Press International Marathon is tomorrow, Friday, Sept. 27. Entries postmarked after that date will not be accepted.

Race producer Jim Dwight said this deadline must be adhered to by all competitors. "We have to be tough about this due to the sheer volume of entries we receive," he said. "The logistics for this event are very involved, so we need those registration forms by Sept. 27."

The 26-mile marathon will be held Sunday, Oct. 13 beginning at 7:34 a.m. (7:20 a.m. for the wheelchair division) at Jackson Park in Windsor, Ont. The finish line is on Belle Isle in Detroit.

The Detroit Free Press International Marathon, the ninth largest marathon and 57th largest race in the U.S., can be used to qualify for other marathons, including Boston. It attracts participants from Michigan, Ontario, Ohio, Indiana and 30 other states. The race is sponsored by the Free Press, AAA of Michigan, Crowley's, Little Caesars and NBD Banks and will benefit the Canadian and U.S. Multiple Sclerosis Societies. Computerized results are provided by the Burroughs Corporation.

Registration forms and entrants' packets are available from the Detroit Free Press. For further information, call (313) 222-6788.

Devils net first win

Boys unbeaten, too

South High's varsity football team ended a four-game losing skid reaching back to the eighth game of the 1984 season, by beating Roseville, 39-0, at Memorial Field last Friday night.

Senior quarterback Tim Overbey hit speedy tailback Chris Astfalk with a 34-yard touchdown pass to highlight South's scoring. Astfalk also scored on runs of 7 and 4 yards as South was able to get its offensive game in gear after being shut out against East Detroit one week earlier.

The Blue Devils are 1-2 (1-1 in the Eastern Michigan League) and will host Port Huron Northern at 1 p.m. this Saturday, Sept. 28 in another league contest.

Runners are top-ranked

The No. 5-ranked South High girls' varsity cross country team continued its winning ways last week, netting a first-ever perfect score in an invitational competition, remaining unbeaten in dual meets (7-0) and taking first place honors in the Girls' Sports Invitational at North High.

On Sept. 14, South registered a perfect score of 15 in the Macomb College Invitational. South took the top five places and seven of the top eight. Nancy Solterisch and Ellen Mayer left the large field of runners behind to finish one-two. They were followed by sophomores Micha Song and Wendy Berger and freshman Toni Tedesco. Toby Ott and Megan Smucker rounded out South's varsity seven, placing seventh and eighth overall.

South scored 50 points in finishing first in the girls' Sports Invitational last Saturday, two points ahead of runner-up Ann Arbor Huron. North High was third overall.

Solterisch was the top Blue Devil runner, placing third overall. Close behind were sophomores Mayer, Song and Berger. Tedesco was fifth, followed by Smucker and Ott.

South, North and Ann Arbor Huron are each ranked in the state's top 10.

South's JV runners also did well last week, placing first in the JV race at the North invitational by taking the top 12 spots in the 50-runner field. The top seven South JV runners included Kelly Riehl, Jenny McSorley, Raquel Chapin, Mary Beth Hicks, Reba Uthappa, Michelle Brasseur and Alexandra Anglewicz.

In the Macomb College Invitational, the JV took six of the top eight spots, including a one-two-three finish by Lindsey Haddad, Rebecca Wasinger and Hicks. Other fine performances came from Riehl, Uthappa, Elizabeth Lazarowitz, Stephanie Morreale, Lisa Lambert, Brasseur and Sue Sparling.

Three of Grosse Pointe's girls' varsity tennis teams were among the state's top 10 teams in the first Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association's rankings of the fall season. South High was ranked No. 1 overall and No. 1 in Class A; North was the No. 10 team in Class A. University Liggett School was No. 1 in Class C-D and No. 9 in the top 10 — all classes.

North High alumnus Marc Tirikian scored two goals in Kalamazoo College's 3-1 league victory over Albion on Sept. 18. The win improved the Hornets' record to 5-0; Kalamazoo is currently ranked fifth in the Great Lakes Region of NCAA Division III. Tirikian, a sophomore and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Tirikian, of the Farms, leads the team in goals with 11.

South High graduate Madeleine Willard is playing varsity tennis this fall for the University of Iowa women's tennis team. The Iowa freshman played No. 1 singles on the 1984 Class A state champion South High squad.

MEEA will hold fall conference

"Michigan Environments — Taking a Closer Look" will be the theme of the Michigan Environmental Education Association's annual conference October 18 to 20 at Blue Lakes Fine Arts Camp near Muskegon, Mich.

Noted futurist Harold Plummer will make an eye-opening presentation titled "The Beat of a Different Drummer" Saturday morning.

Environmental field trips will include the home of lumber baron David Hackley, wildlife preserve on the Muskegon River, a sand dune ecology tour and the innovative Muskegon Waste Water Treatment Plant.

Sessions will range from acid

Returning for her second season on the University of Detroit women's cross country team is senior Nancy Drolshagen, a graduate of Our Lady Star of the Sea High School. Drolshagen was a letterwinner in 1984, which was the first year UD fielded a women's intercollegiate cross country team.

Leading the way in Hope College's JV football team's 34-6 victory over Grand Rapids Junior College last week was South High alumnus Terry Ayrault. Ayrault, a freshman from the Park, threw two touchdown passes as the JV amassed 393 yards total offense.

Former South High cross country All-Star and track star Meg Moisen was a double winner in the summer's TAC Junior Olympics National championships at the University of Washington. Moisen, who now lives in Darien, Conn., and is a student at Villanova University, won the 1,500 in 4:35.59 and the 800 in 2:13.92.

rain technology and Indian life to Michigan forests and outdoors teaching techniques. These conferences will feature a large number of programs devoted to teaching pre-schoolers about the outdoors.

Also, a large group simulation will be held in which everyone will decide how to use "new found funds" for environmental projects.

There will be raffles, music, a sweat lodge, "Environmental Pursuits," a book display, square dancing, pioneer crafts and much more.

A star is born

University Liggett School junior is making her mark in women's field hockey

By Peggy O'Connor

Remember that name: Laura Khelokian.

While field hockey remains a relatively anonymous sport in these parts, Khelokian, a junior at University Liggett School and the midwest's budding field hockey star, is anything but anonymous. Just ask her coach.

Muriel Brock has coached many excellent field hockey players in her tenure at ULS, including those of Olympic-caliber. Not many approached the potential of her current star, Brock says.

"She is a natural athlete, but what impresses me more than her innate ability is her very calm, cool air on the field. You don't see her temperament rise and she's quite often in a situation where everybody else plays against goes after her because of her talent, her ability.

"That kind of reaction is very unusual for a person of her age."

Just as unusual as it was for Khelokian, 16, to be selected for the National Junior Olympics Tournament camps this past summer at the University of Iowa. Only the top amateur field hockey players were selected for the developmental camps, which usually precede selections to the national and Olympic teams. Teams from the north, south, east and west played each other in round-robin competition. For Khelokian, it was more of a learning experience than a portent of things to come.

"If the Olympics come, fine. Whatever happens, happens," she said. "I just thought the camps were a lot of fun and a good experience. It told me a lot about where I stand with players from the east. Hockey in the east is more intense than here in the midwest. But I kept up with them and it wasn't as hard as I'd thought it would be.

"It was nice to find that out."

It also gave college coaches from "back east" a chance to see what Khelokian can do. That's important, says her coach.

"We're anxious to expose Laura to as many different resources as possible. It's important for colleges to see her play and for Laura to see what other areas of the country offer in terms of competition," Brock says.

Khelokian admits that she definitely wants to play college hockey, but hasn't thought about where. And there have already been some interested colleges sniffing around, although college coaches cannot talk specifically about attending their school to a player who is not a high school senior.

The Olympics are down the road a piece, too.

"That's so far away. I'd like to go, but the average age of Olympic field hockey players is late 20s or early 30s. I'd like to go to the national sports festival, too," she says.

"Right now, though, I just go out and play."

Which is why it probably wouldn't be too unusual to see Khelokian in the sports festival or the Olympics before that "average age" comes about. Because she just goes out and plays her own game.

"You know what makes her different from the rest? She's willing to go the whole route. Sure, she has natural talent and poise, but she also has the motivation it takes to be a great hockey player. Already she plays so far superior to those her age," Muriel Brock says.

"And with all of that, she's the one who pulls our team together. The girls elected her captain because they respect what she has to say. You don't get that respect unless you are special and Laura is special. She's not an 'I' person at all... she's just a very nice young lady."

'Underdog' Norsemen top Kettering in Silverdome, 48-20

By Bill Hoover

North High

North's varsity football team extended its win streak to three games by crushing Waterford Kettering, 48-20, in the Pontiac Silverdome on Sept. 21.

The Norsemen, one-point underdogs, seemed ineffective as Kettering scored on an impressive opening drive.

Waterford appeared to have the upper hand until, as Coach Frank Sumner put it, "The kids rose to the challenge and played to the best of their ability." This was evident as the Norsemen scored four unanswered second-quarter touchdowns.

North's first points came on a one-yard plunge and point after by Craig Como, finishing a 55-yard, six-play drive. On the Norsemen's next possession, North marched 46 yards on seven plays and scored on a three-yard pass to Steve Pochmara from Como. The extra point was missed, and North led 13-7.

Dave Justice intercepted a Kettering pass on their first set of downs and returned it 26 yards, setting up Mike "The Kid" Miller's 10-yard touchdown run. The try for two points was successful as Rob Olds hauled in a Como pass for a 21-7 lead.

North closed the first half score at 28-7 when Como hit Jon Palazzo for a 36-yard touchdown pass. A 67-yard, nine-play drive which was capped by an 11-yard run by Miller was all the scoring in the third quarter.

North, which held a commanding 34-7 lead entering the final quarter, built on that lead after an interception and a 15-yard return by Ken Straske which started a 57-yard, seven-play drive ended by another Miller touchdown, this time for six yards out. The point after made the score 41-7.

Kettering scored and forced a punt on North's next possession, seemingly mounting a comeback. The punt was fumbled and recovered by Palazzo. North's second team offense, controlled by junior quarterback Jamie Wheatley, put together a solid 49-yard, seven-play drive, finished by a 33-yard touchdown pass from Wheatley to John Hielscher.

Kettering scored once more in the final minutes, but the comeback effort was too late. Miller led North's rushing with 186 yards and three touchdowns on 18 carries. Como completed 9 for 14 for 161 yards and two touchdowns.

Defensively, Rob Brumer had nine tackles, including three quarterback sacks. Dave Justice and Rocky Villani each had five tackles and one sack.

North's next game is at 1 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 28, at Roseville Brabec.

Cagers cruise

North's girls' varsity basketball team bounced back from a tough, 55-34 loss to Warren Woods Tower on Sept. 19 to defeat South High, 32-22 on Sept. 21.

North pressed the taller Tower team early and led 15-14, at one point, but couldn't keep up that pace. Barbie Loeher, who played well on defense, scored 12 points. Sophomore Sue Nichols scored 8 points and grabbed 5 rebounds in her first varsity start.

Against South, Leslie Talos had the hot hand, shooting 7-for-12 for 14 points and grabbing 10 rebounds, her high for this season. Loeher also played a fine game, scoring 8 points, collecting 4 rebounds and dishing off 5 assists, with 1 steal.

"It was a nice win for us. Defensively, they did everything exactly as I wanted and made the adjustments offensively..." said coach Gary Bennett.

North's next game is Thursday, Oct. 2, at 7:30 p.m. at Lake Shore.

The JV cagers got their first win on Sept. 19, beating Tower, 48-43. The Lady Norsemen fought back from a 12-8 deficit to take their first win of the year against two losses.

Nicole Didur led all scorers with 15 points, followed by Angela Domenik with 12 points. Janet Dunlop scored 7 and Kristen Eschenbach had 5.

The JV faces Lake Shore at 6 p.m. Oct. 3.

North's ninth grade squad ran its unbeaten mark to three with a 36-23 win over South before falling to East Detroit Oakwood, 32-23.

Against South, Kris Salive's 12 points led North. Heather Mergos had 9 points and Kelli Gianunzio, 7. Amy Grierson and Lucy Barry had 5 rebounds each.

In the Oakwood loss, North shot just 13 percent from the floor and came within five points near the end of the contest. Gianunzio led North with 6 points, Salive had 5 and Lora Bova and Barry had 4 each. Mergos played well, with 2 points, 10 rebounds and 9 steals.

Netters win

By Lynda Rayos

North High

The girls' varsity tennis team added two more wins to its record last week, beating Sterling Heights, 6-2, on Sept. 13 and topping Port Huron Northern, 12-4, on Sept. 19.

On Sept. 21, North hosted the Girls' Sports Invitational. The netters tied Mercy for third place out of eight teams.

North's No. 1 doubles team, Nicole Lehman and Beth Keys, made it to the finals before losing to South High in a tough, three-set match. No. 2 singles player Lisa Lucido, No. 3 singles Lynda Rayos, No. 4 singles Michelle Francis, No. 3 doubles Kristen Deisler and Sue Fry, and No. 4 doubles Jennifer Orr and Kathy Sanom, reached the semi-finals.

Andrea Thomas and Christine Barretta won their consolation match at No. 2 doubles.

"I thought the invitational was a tremendous success," said coach

Trisha Gaskins. "We were pleased to be part of the all-girl sports program."

Kickers win two

North's varsity soccer team traveled to South country last week, hoping to improve its record to 4-2. The Norsemen did just that on goals from Kevin Tisdale (two) and Louie Melhem. The game was the fourth shutout in six games for goalie Brian Grieve, who said, "The shutout would not have been possible without excellent help from Ralph Barbier, Tom Mediodia, Jeff Ward and Dave Colfer."

On Sept. 19, North crushed Mount Clemens, 7-1. Dan "Spyder" Spitz opened the scoring; he and John Andary had two goals each. John Dittrich, Chris Colfer and Dan Regelbrugge also scored. Back at home on Sept. 20, North battled Class B 10th-ranked ULS to a 0-0 tie.

The Norsemen travel to Roseville to play Brabec on Oct. 1 and will host South in a rematch on Oct. 3. Both games begin at 4 p.m.

Swimmers set goals

By Debbie Wright

North High

Clinching the Bi-County championship and beating rival South High are the girls' varsity swim team's main goals for the season, says coach Scott Teeters. "We have good swimmers returning and gained some good swimmers, which should help," Teeters adds.

Junior Sandy Smith has a good chance of earning state qualifying times in the 100 breast, as does freshman Kate Young (who holds three school records) in the 50 freestyle. Other state hopefuls are Anne Verona in the 100 butterfly; Kathy Kish, 500 freestyle; Laura Verona, 200 individual medley; Helen Mikelic, 100 freestyle; Nancy Woods, 100 breast; divers Ellen Nelson and Patti Roustemis.

Last week, for the first time in North's swimming history, the Lady Norsemen defeated Dearborn, 104-68, results which certainly contribute to coach Teeters' confidence in his squad.

On Sept. 14, North finished fourth out of 24 teams at the Battle Creek-Lakeview meet. Young set a new school record in the 200 free (2:01.8), with a time that was two seconds faster than the former record.

She set two more school records at Dearborn in the 500 free (25:08) and the 100 free (55:22). The medley relay team also set the first pool record for North (both boys and girls) with a finish of 1:55.94 by Anne Verona, Sandy Smith, Kate Young and Helen Mikelic.

By Josh Abbott

North High

The Norsemen's boys' cross country squad defeated league rival South Lake, but lost to a tough Ann Arbor Huron on Sept. 17. John Van Syckle finished second overall for North. The team faces Warren Woods Tower and Romeo this week.

North's JV football team scored on the first play from scrimmage and rolled to a 20-12 victory over Kettering. The team is 2-1.

Bruno Giglio completed a pass to Chuck Thomas who rambled 75 yards for a touchdown. Thomas also scored a second touchdown and Giglio chipped in with one himself. Frank Markey played an outstanding game at offensive guard.

The JV looks forward to its big game on Oct. 24 against a strong Clintondale team. North faces Brabec today, Sept. 26 at North.

North's ninth grade football team lost its third consecutive game Sept. 18 to Marysville, 27-7. Matt Brady scored the lone Norsemen touchdown on a 15-yard reception.

The Norsemen JV soccer team won a big game against arch-rival South, 1-0, as Brian Metry scored the only goal. The Norsemen rolled over Mount Clemens, 10-0, on Sept. 19. The JV is now 5-0 and has yet to permit the opposition to score in 300 minutes of play.

This week, North battles Rochester Adams and Chippewa Valley on the road.

ULS

The University Liggett School Knights varsity soccer team lengthened its unbeaten streak to six games last week, bringing its record to 6-1-1 while playing the toughest competition of the season so far.

ULS faced off against the No. 1-rated Class D school Inter-City Baptist at home on Sept. 17. Coach Dave Backhurst's squad quickly disposed of them, 3-1, in an excellent display of the Knights' power. Inter-City opened the scoring 21 minutes into the game on a fluke goal, but was quickly shut down by the ULS defense headed by senior Kirk Haggarty and juniors Blasko Ristic, Steve Schmidt and Bob Jewett. ULS came back with three unanswered goals from seniors John Birgbauer and Rob Healy and junior Bob Williams.

On Sept. 20, ULS squared off against Grosse Pointe North and battled the highly-ranked Norsemen to a 0-0 tie. Both teams came out strong, but equal match-ups at all areas of play prevented scoring despite a total of 24 shots on goal - 14 for ULS and 10 for the Norsemen. With less than three minutes to play in the game, North was awarded a penalty kick, but the shot sailed wide and the Knights' keeper Brian Curtiss had his second shutout of the season.

Along with Curtiss' strong play in net, Haggarty's at defense, and Birgbauer's at midfield, the entire ULS squad turned in excellent performances. Pleased with his team's play, despite the tie score, Backhurst noted, "It was another classic Grosse Pointe confrontation. I'm glad we gave them a heck of a battle, although I'd have preferred to win."

This Saturday, Sept. 28, the Knights host the ULS Invitational Soccer Tournament. At 9 a.m., ULS will play Lutheran North on the Cook Rd. field, while Oxford takes on Warren Fitzgerald at the North High field. The losers of each game play at 11:45 a.m. at ULS, followed by the championship game.

ULS

The ULS girls' varsity tennis team will be a tough team to beat this fall. On Sept. 16, ULS beat Monroe St. Mary, 8-0, then on Sept. 19, the Lady Knights conquered their biggest rival, Kingswood, 7-1. ULS lost to No. 2-ranked East Grand Rapids, 4-3, on Friday.

ULS placed third out of eight competitive tennis teams in the East Grand Rapids Tournament. Impressive showings were performed by Charu Nautiyal, No. 4 singles, and by Karen Rahm and Kathy Bianchi, No. 2 doubles. Nautiyal won all her matches in the tournament and remains undefeated. Rahm and Bianchi beat East Grand Rapids 6-2, 6-4, but lost in the finals to Birmingham Marian, 2-6, 6-4, 4-6.

The teams placed in the following order: East Grand Rapids, Birmingham Marian, University Liggett School, Portage Northern, Okemos, Forest Hills Central and Saginaw MacArthur (tied for sixth place), and Kingswood.

Coach Bob Hartwick's squad competes in the Kingswood Invitational this Saturday, Sept. 28, starting at 9 a.m.

Harriers split

ULS

The ULS cross country team has continued to impress opponents and even itself.

Last week was a particularly rewarding one. On Tuesday, the Harriers lost by a modest margin to cross country powerhouse, Southfield Christian (SCS) 234-34, at the SCS course. In that same meet, ULS handily beat Temple Christian, 26-38. The top time for ULS was sophomore Gordon Maitland's 18:32. Behind Maitland was senior captain Christopher McCabe (19:52).

On Saturday, Sept. 21, the team met 10 other schools at the Springfield Christian Academy's Eagle Cup Invitational. Led by frontrunner Maitland, who placed second overall (18:09), the ULS squad captured the third place trophy.

Coach Eric Linder's team hosts Temple Christian at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 26, and travels to L'Anse Creuse on Tuesday, Oct. 1.

Bryan Ferry's 'Boys and Girls' is hypnotic, passionate

By Chris Dellas

There can be complaints heard these days that most modern rock music is too blatant, that it has lost the subtle edge that separates the crude from the romantic.

For those yearning to find out what has happened to good old-fashioned romance in pop music, the answer is Bryan Ferry's new release, "Boys and Girls."

Ferry was once the slick crooner in the always style-conscious avant-garde rock band Roxy Music back in the 1970s. Roxy Music was a hybrid of flashy outfits, gorgeous women (both on the album covers and as back-up singers), and an ever-present "good-life" aesthetic, which English youth embraced with a passion. If you couldn't afford to live the "Good life," Roxy philosophized, you might as well dress the part. Something like clean living under difficult circumstances.

Eventually, Ferry and Roxy Music stripped away the extreme image-consciousness and sensationalism and became a premiere progressive rock act. Their influence on current bands cannot be over-emphasized. Current hit-makers like Duran Duran, ABC, and Spandau Ballet owe their sense of style and posturing to Roxy Music.

Today we find Bryan Ferry mellowed by a decade of near-misses, always remaining on the outer edge of widespread success in the American market. With the hypnotic and passionate "Boys And Girls" album, Americans should finally realize what Ferry's preoccupation with the power of romance is all about.

This is not an album of silly love songs. Ferry takes the whole business of amore very seriously. In the album's single, "Slave To Love," we find Ferry "tired and weary" with no escape from the bonds of true love. In the video for the song, which is currently receiving heavy rotation on MTV, we see Ferry dancing not only with elegant women but, at the end of the video, he is dancing with a young child, suggesting that the omnipresent power of love that he sings about extends beyond just man/woman relationships, possibly into the realm of love for one's own child.

In "Windswept" Ferry croons with enough finesse and savvy to make the coldest heart swoon, and the most analytical mind becomes obsessed with daydreams of lovers and seashores.

Ferry's music conjures images of the great romantic Hollywood films of the '30s and '40s. Visions of Bogart in a smoky cabaret. Gable sweeping Lombard off her feet. Ferry remains as the last of the restless playboys.

One writer reflects that 1985 finds Ferry, "alone at the end of the bar at closing time, clutching a smoldering cigarette and staring into a half-empty glass of Scotch as he reflects on the perils and rewards of the high life."

Indeed, "Boys And Girls" is a reflective, introspective musical work, but full of enough passion and honesty to keep it from being pretentious.

The album is filled with layered vocals and smoothing harmonies, subtle bass lines and shining saxophones. The mood is mid-tempo yet inviting, understated yet mesmerizing.

Those looking for head-banging rock will be disappointed, the album has a sound that remains to consistent that the songs seem to run together. That's intentional, though, considering it deals with one continuing theme.

The words of the song "Wasteland" sum up the whole mood:

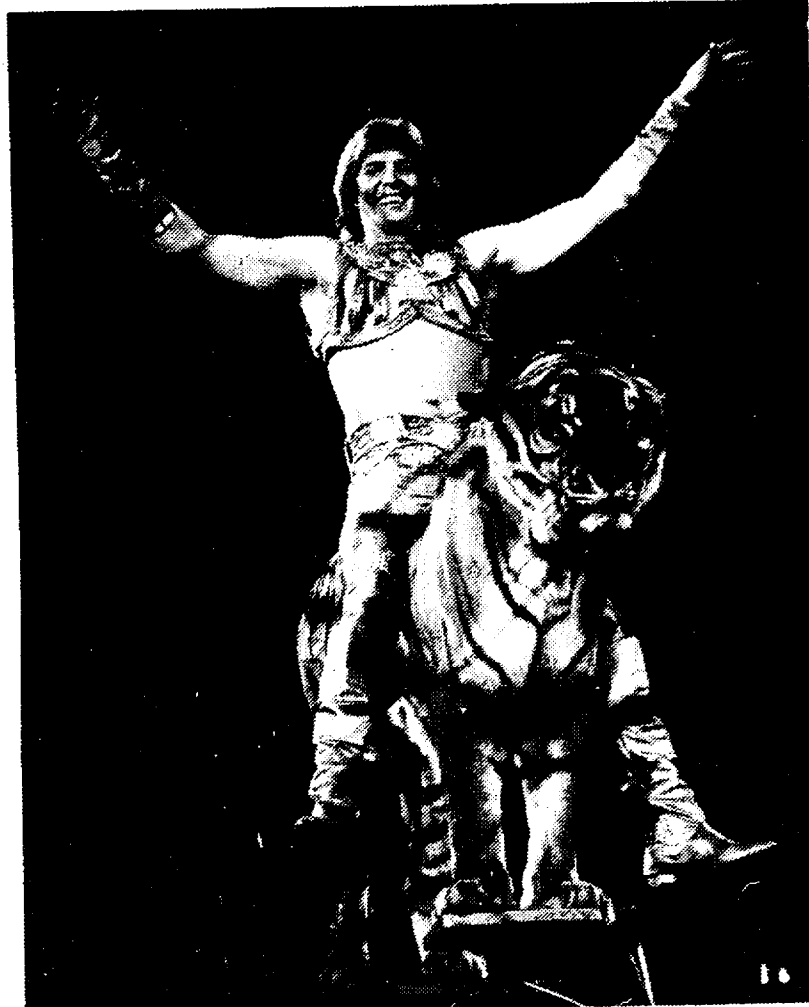

"When love's gone
There's no one
A wasteland
A ghetto
When love's gone
A tear on
A wasteland
Your pillow..."

Don't get the idea that you'll have to stock up on Kleenex to listen to this album. It is not intended to make you cry in your glass, but is instead at once a celebration and an attempt to understand the very powerful sting of love. And if you've ever been bitten, you'll know exactly what Ferry's singing about.

Available on Warner Bros. records and cassettes.

American tiger trainer to debut in circus Oct. 1

When the big cats — Royal Bengal, Siberian and rare white tigers from Burma — bound into the steel cage, a sudden sharp feeling of excitement will be experienced by every member of the audience at Joe Louis Arena when the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus appears Oct. 1-6 for 11 spine-tingling performances.

Featured in the all-new edition of The Greatest Show On Earth is American-born tiger trainer Wade Burck, who appears to feel no fear when facing the savage fury of the tigers.

"There's always fear from the threat of attack when a man enters the cage with 15 wild animals," Wade admits. "but I can never let on to the tigers or the audience that I am apprehensive, or I might not walk out of the cage. I have to play a game with the tigers, because to them, I am just another cat in the cage and I must always be the strongest, the most clever and the most daring."

An avid animal lover since childhood, Burck started as an apprentice and worked his way up through the ranks to trainer. He has a breeding program to produce more rare white tigers and hopes to soon present the first all-white tiger act in the world.

Tickets are now on sale at the Joe Louis Arena box office and all Ticket World outlets and by phone using Visa or Mastercard by calling 567-7500 after Sept. 20.

Tickets are priced at $6, $8 and $9 with a $1 discount for children 12 and under at many performances.

Oktoberfest

Notre Dame High School will hold its first Oktoberfest Friday through Sunday, Oct. 4-6, at the school, located at Kelly Road, south of 8 Mile behind Eastland Center.

There will be music and dancing. Bavarian foods and a biergarten. Donation is $2. There will also be a polka mass Saturday at 4:30 p.m.

For more information, call 371-8965.

'Creator' is a fine escape

By Marian Trainor

If you have an urge to escape from a well-ordered world where life goes on day after day without any outstanding happenings, if you want to believe in the power of enduring love and if you would like to live for a short time with a couple of free-spirited characters who believe in themselves and ignore the restrictions of what is expected, you'll have a merry time watching "Creator."

Don't go in with the attitude, "Hey, this is crazy. Who carries on like this?" Just accept Dr. Harry Wolper (Peter O'Toole) and Meli (Mariel Hemingway) as the basically lovable people they are.

Harry is a Nobel Laureate who hasn't let his exalted honor get in his way of acting outrageously. He is a genius but to put it mildly, an eccentric one.

By day he teaches and does research at the university where he is a constant source of worry to his colleagues because of his unorthodox performances. They would like to see him retire to the university center for advanced research which has no budget and is staffed with forcibly retired or transferred old professors.

One colleague in particular, Harry's academic rival, Dr. Sid Kublenbach, (David O. Spiers) is intent on Harry's removal, even going so far as to make daily forays in Harry's trash to find intimidating evidence involving Harry's secret project.

Harry's secret project is a somewhat ambitious one. With equipment he has borrowed (filched?) from the university, he is trying with the help of cells preserved in liquid nitrogen to recreate the wife he still loves 30 years after her death.

He enlists the help of Boris Lafkin (Vincent Spano), a graduate student who keeps a robot in his apartment. The robot is programmed to electrocute him if he doesn't get out of bed on time in the morning. To bad it wasn't programmed to do his laundry, because each morning Boris goes through an accumulated pile of clothes sniffing each piece until he finds one that smells fresh enough to wear.

With his own idiosyncrasies, Boris fits right in with Harry's non-conformist attitudes. At first he has misgivings, thinking he should have gone with Dr. Kublenbach who goes to great lengths to snare him, including mayhem.

However, Boris comes to admire Harry, even to the point of declaring he wants to be just like him, to watch Harry drolly replies, "I'm not sure the planet earth is ready for two of me."

He even acts as Harry's protector when he stirs up his academic world with such acts as operating on a monkey in the hospital ("He's one of God's creatures"), and posting notices for a donor of a human egg.

Harry's donor appears in the person of Meli (Hemingway), another free spirit like himself. She is 19 and a self-declared nymphomaniac. Harry is 50 but that doesn't keep her from setting her sights on him.

Harry will have none of it even though Meli tries to convince him that she is in love with him and wants to marry him.

Concurrent with this state of affairs is Boris' romantic attachment for a student, Barbara Spenser. He falls for her in the same way Harry fell for Lucy.

Woven into this accumulation of situations is Harry's repeated insistence of the importance of the big picture. What he means by that is not explained, but is made clear as Boris sits by his love who is near death and tries by the sheer force of his ardor to woo her back to life and Harry's realization that a lost love can only be replaced by letting it go and accepting the new.

One other loose end is Harry's victory over his spiteful colleague as he delivers a rousing summary of a brilliant research program which he wants to work on. He is rewarded with a grant and to the dismay of Kublenbach, he takes it with him to the center for retired professors.

O'Toole is outstanding in this role of an eccentric genius. He charms with a sly look a smile and wave of his cigar.

Hemingway is well cast as a bold, lusty individual with basically good values and a sensibility that can spot a phony a mile away. Her performance on the football field as she lines up in a faculty game against the scheming Kublenbach is a gem.

Together O'Toole and Hemingway make "Creator" an excellent "Let's get away from it all experience."

One patron exiting the theater remarked, "That was worth the money," which says a lot in these days of cable and video cassettes.

'Maxie': Like eating cotton candy

By Tom Greenwood

Making it big in the movies can be pretty tough. Especially for a fledgling actress who's been dead 60 years and decides to hit the comeback trail from heaven to Hollywood.

That's the premise of "Maxie," the story of unflappable flapper Maxie Malone, who died in a car crash in 1927 while on the way to her big screen test.

Convinced she still has what it takes, she materializes into the 1980s intent on regaining her lost stardom. If she has to inhabit someone else's body along the way, well, that's show biz.

Maxie's unwilling host is the straight, sweet and ever-so-predictable Jan Cheyney, private secretary to the bishop of San Francisco. Pulling double duty as Maxie/Jan is the aristocratic Glenn Close, of "Big Chill" fame, whose characters share only one thing in common — the same body.

Make that two things. They both love Nick Cheyney, Jan's unbelievable nice-guy husband and Maxie's sometime and very confused lover. Nick, a librarian specializing in rare books, is played by Broadway actor Mandy Patinkin.

Secure in a comfortably routine marriage, the Cheyneys are lovingly restoring an old Victorian home. Peeling wallpaper back layer by layer one night, they reach a bare wall with the message

Maxie Malone Lived Here
March 3, 1927

Read it and Weep!

The tale of the lipstick scrawled message is explained by upstairs neighbor Trudy Lavin, played by the late Ruth Gordon, in her usally dotty-but-with-a-heart-of-gold character.

As Maxie's old vaudeville partner, she explains that Maxie threw herself a big going-away party the night before her big chance, scrawled her message for posterity, then drove into a tree along the Pacific Coast Highway.

"She played one small part in a movie, D.W. Griffith saw it and offered her a screen test," sighs Mrs. Lavin. "She died before she ever got a chance to see herself in that one film."

Nick rents the film, screens it while Jan sleeps and receives a visit from Maxie, who in a throaty, whisky-edged voice admits that she was pretty good. Maxie more or less slips into bed before Nick does, and, well, things begin to happen — then, and for the rest of the movie. Maxie is a pleasant enough film.

but sometimes suffers from an acute case of the cutes and predictable characters.

Bishop Campbell, played by Bernard Hughes, is slightly whacky as a man of the cloth who drives golf balls out his office window, studies Polish because he's going on vacation in Rome and considers bringing in an exorcist from Beverly Hills. His young assistant, Father Jerome, is bewitched by the young women he sees jogging around the streets of San Francisco, and of course, don't forget Ruth Gordon's feisty old lady routine.

It would have been interesting to have Nick ask Maxie what heaven was really like, and how did it feel to die. But questions about what lies beyond never seem to enter anyone's mind.

All in all, viewing "Maxie" is like eating cotton candy.

It's sweet, sometimes sticky, but somehow not very filling.

Glenn Close as Maxie

Italian farce at Attic

The Attic Theatre, Third at West Grand Boulevard, opens its 10th anniversary season Friday, Sept. 27, with the hilarious farce by Dario Fo, "We Won't Pay! We Won't Pay!"

The show runs through Oct. 27. Performances are Thursdays and Fridays at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 5:30 and 9 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 and 6:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the box office, 875-8284, and at all Ticket World outlets.

The play addresses the universal complaint about the high cost of living and weaves a slapstick series of events that begins with a grocery store riot. The crazy antics that follow can best be compared to the broad humor of Lucille Ball, Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca. Underlying the buffoonery is the true frustration of the common man in dealing with the injustices and hypocrisies of society.

Dario Fo is one of Italy's most prolific and controversial contemporary playwrights. American theater-goers may recall that he was refused entrance to the United States for the 1983 off-Broadway production of his play, "Accidental Death of An Anarchist", which can be seen at The Theatre, University of Detroit.

Two performances will be interpreted in American Sign Language for the deaf and hearing-impaired. Signed performances will be Saturday, Sept. 28, at 5:30 p.m. and Sunday, Oct. 6, at 6:30 p.m. The TDD number for the deaf and hearing impaired is 875-6560.

Boots Randolph

... known for his "yakety sax" artistry, will appear along with his Nashville band at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts at 7 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 29. Tickets at $14 for adults and $12 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222 weekdays from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Stockton's Wing to appear at Mercy

Stockton's Wing is a phenomenon in Irish music — a group with firm footing in traditional music that has captured the pop audience as well — and they will capture the Detroit audience when they appear in concert Friday, Oct. 4, at 8 p.m. at McAuley Auditorium, Mercy College, Detroit. It is the first stop on their major city tour, which includes New York, Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee and San Francisco.

From the original trio of All-Ireland instrumentalists who formed the group in 1979, Stockton's Wing has grown to a seven-piece acoustic/electric band.

Tickets are $8.50 each and are available at Village Records &

Tapes in Grosse Pointe. For more information, call 537-3489. McAuley Auditorium is on the campus of Mercy College, located on the northwest corner of Outer Drive and the Southfield Expressway, between Six and Seven Mile roads.

What's the ideal age at which a man first should marry? When one Dr. Otto Weininger put that query to numerous husbands in Vienna, the majority said age 30. But that is not the age at which most Viennese men first marry. They go to the altar considerably earlier. It's their hindsight view of it.

Record apple harvest

A record one billion pounds of apples should be plucked off Michigan trees this year — up 30 percent over 1984 — and that will mean plenty of sweet cider to savor this fall, according to AAA Michigan.

A gallon of cider averages $2.37 per gallon, ranging from $1.50 to $3.50. A dozen doughnuts averages $2.29, 2 cents lower than last year. Costs vary from $1.30 to $3.10.

Although Michigan's apple production has increased and now represents 12 percent of the nation's total, the 8.1 billion pounds of apples to be harvested across America this year is 3 percent below last year, according to the Michigan Department of Agriculture.

Michigan is the leading producer of Jonathans and Northern Spys in the country and ranks third in the nation in overall production of apples.

Red Delicious is by far the most popular Michigan apple variety, but Jonathan, Ida Red, Golden Delicious, McIntosh, Rome and Northern Spy also contribute greatly to Michigan's bountiful apple harvest.

Many of the 100 mills listed on AAA Michigan's Cider Mill Guide offer such activities as hay wagon and train rides, doughnuts and other baked goods, puppet shows, petting zoos and candle dipping.

Most mills also allow visitors to view pressing operations and provide tours and demonstrations. Visitors should call ahead for pressing dates and times and schedules of other activities.
