Drink up!

Well, Grosse Pointe has another winner. Well, if not in Grosse Pointe, pretty close to us.

Louise Cebalt, a bartender at Farina's Grainery, was a fifth place winner in AAA's Great Pretenders non-alcoholic holiday drink contest.

Her creation, the Merry Mousse, calls for 3/4 cup of vanilla ice cream, 1 ounce warm hot fudge, 1 teaspoon peanut butter and 1 ounce cold black coffee. Blend it all for a minute, pour into a coffee mug and top with whipped cream and chocolate sprinkles.

For her efforts, Cebalt won a tote bag from AAA. First prize, a $1,000 trip for two to Florida, was won by Steve Pogodzinski, of the Amway Grand Plaza, Grand Rapids, for his Roman Holiday drink.

What, you might ask, is in said drink? It calls for ice cream, cappuccino, honey, caramel syrup, non-sweetened cocoa, half and half and chocolate shavings on top.

These drinks may not have alcohol in them, but they can still cause hangovers. Drink enough of them and it'll all hang over your belt.

Comedy is not pretty

Instead of calling it "Some Semblance of Sanity," perhaps it should have been renamed "Gary and the Gross-Outs."

What I'm referring to is a recently yanked episode of local comic Gary Thison's Grosse Pointe Cable Program in which the featured performer, comic-magician "The Amazing Johnathan," swallowed five razor blades and a 12-inch piece of string.

After allowing blood to dribble down his chin, and making "disgusting guttural noises," he removed the thread from his mouth — with five razor blades strung on it.

While the act, based on an old Houdini trick, was truly amazing, it was also judged as being too disgusting for most viewers and was pulled from the company's regular programming.

"Houdini didn't use blood in the original act," said Thison. "Johnathan decided to add the blood (actually blood capsules) and call it 'Punk Magic.' We were just looking for laughs. We certainly didn't mean to offend anyone."

When Thison called Johnathan in San Francisco and informed him of the situation, the "amazing one" said he should have stuck to his original act for Gary's show — decapitating a live goat.

He also said he later performed the same stunt on the syndicated television program "Comedy Tonight."

Agency crippled by state funding cutoff

By Mike Andrzejczyk

A local intervention agency is considering a trip to Lansing to protest the state Department of Social Services' cut-off of its funding which has left the program crippled.

Communication Around Sexual Issues is a four-year-old non-sectarian program administered through Catholic Social Services of Wayne County. The loss of $47,000 in state funds means the agency can't pay its peer counselors, secretarial staff or cover certain traveling expenses of workers.

About 2,000 people have taken part in the CASI six-week program and one-night discussions in the past four years, according to Kathy Walsh, an adult counselor with the program. CASI holds its meetings in community centers or churches throughout the tri-country area.

The program brings parents and their teenage children together one night a week for six weeks to learn ways of communicating to solve problems before they become crises, Walsh says. The program is designed to get the people before problems occur that require the aid of other social services agencies, she added.

Peer counselors, aged 16 to 18, meet with teens to discuss self-esteem, peer pressure and anatomy, according to Jackie Smith, a South High School senior and peer counselor. Peer counselors are more able to get through to teens than adult counselors, she added.

Walsh agreed. "We know how the program worked for two years before we had the teen counselors and we know well it works now and the difference they've made."

To become a counselor, Smith underwent three months of extensive training beginning in July. "Now I won't get to use it," she said. "I learned so much from the program and I can help people."

The six male and 10 female counselors have all volunteered to continue with the program. Smith says she doesn't know how long she'll be able to stay in the program without some kind of compensation.

"I work after school as a waitress, and to get one night off every week for six weeks is hard. The travel costs helped a lot. I had to drive out to Romeo for a program. That's a long drive and gas is expensive," she said.

Peer counselors help model communication with adults as well as being able to talk about their own development of self-esteem or solutions they have found for a variety of common situations, Smith said.

At a recent local one-day program, Smith was involved in teaching pre-teens about self-esteem and peer pressure.

"When we got there, they didn't know what self-esteem was, or what peer pressure meant, even though they'd felt it," she said. "They just got started talking about it and when time came for us to leave, nobody wanted us to go."

CASI had started talking with some local churches to see if they were interested in hosting a six-week or one night program, Walsh said. Although CASI can go on without peer counselors, the quality of its presentation and its results will suffer, she added.

Lack of communication on a variety of topics, including sex, drug use and other problems like grades and dating is a big problem in Grosse Pointe, Smith said. More communication between parents and their children could keep a lot of problems from occurring, she said.

Some of the people she's talked to don't know what they want in relationships, don't know how to foster self-esteem or have other problems, Smith said.

"But you can't come out and tell them what to do or what's wrong," she said. "But when you get them together in a group, they see what's going on and it's easier for them to learn."

CASI is sending letters to Lansing to protest the cuts, Walsh said. The agency is also applying for other grants and looking for other sources of funding to undo some of the damage done by the state cut-off.

The agency would like to meet with Gov. James Blanchard or DSS director Agnes Mansour to try to persuade them to continue the funding, Smith said. If she gets a chance to meet the governor, "I'd tell him all the good the program's done, how much I have gotten out of it and all the people we've helped," Smith said.

CASI gives families the tools they need to deal with problems and ways to communicate to discover solutions, Walsh said. It's the ounce of prevention that comes before the pound-of-cure programs for teen pregnancies and others.

"What parents and their children remember and apply in their everyday lives is what's important about this program," she added.

Farms to establish traffic bureau, hire 2

By Nancy Parmenter

A two-person traffic bureau will start monitoring driving speeds in the Farms by the beginning of the 1986 school year. The Farms city council authorized the hiring of two officers and the purchase of two cars at its Oct. 21 meeting.

The move came as a response to the initial recommendation of the 14-member traffic study committee appointed last month. The group will continue meeting in the hope of finding additional remedies to the traffic congestion and excessive speed on residential streets. It has also recommended changing the traffic signal at Mack and Moran to the flashing mode.

The cost of the bureau is expected to be $61,000 per position per year. Salary and benefits will amount to $45,000, the vehicle will cost approximately $13,500, while $2,500 has been allocated to gasoline and repairs. The cars will be replaced on a two-year cycle.

The cost of one position is equal to approximately two percent of the city property tax, according to Councilman Joseph Fromm. "But, conservatively, half of the money would be recovered through fines," Fromm said. The city has estimated that increased revenues through tickets would amount to $30,500.

Police Chief Robert Ferber told the council that more than half of the drivers caught in the enforcement net would be Farms residents. Based on figures in the Woods, when the traffic bureau started operations there, 60 percent of the ticketed drivers were residents, a number that dropped to 47 percent once residents were more aware of the enforcement efforts.

"We're really looking at ourselves," Fromm said.

The decision to start the program was made now so that the city could include the two additional cars in its police car bids, which will be let within a month. The officers will not actually be recruited until May and will not start work until July, when the next fiscal year's budget takes effect, according to City Manager Andrew Bremer.

"Right now, I'm sitting here scratching my head, wondering where we'll find $26,000 in this year's budget," Bremer said. He said he expected to have figures by the end of the week to help him in analyzing the problem.

The authorization of the traffic bureau includes a commitment to fund two officers for two years. At that time, the program will be reassessed.

The two officers will have only traffic enforcement duties and will not be counted toward minimum shift strength in the police department, according to the plan. They will deal with moving violations, speed enforcement, traffic control and accident investigation and will only be taken from those duties for felonies in progress.

The council also authorized Chief Ferber to negotiate with the city of Detroit and Wayne County to place the traffic signal at Mack and Moran on the flashing mode for a trial period of 90 days. If arrangements can be made, the light will flash yellow for Mack drivers and red for Moran, making turning on to Moran from Mack in congested traffic more lengthy — with the goal of discouraging drivers from using Moran as a through street.

"The feasibility of the flashing light won't be measured by formal data," Ferber said. "If there's no right-angle, head-on collision, we'll ask (that it be permanent)."

Ferber said he is hopeful that the county and Detroit will agree to the plan. The light was originally placed there in 1963 before there was a light at Warren, to ease traffic to and from Austin High School. The school is now closed.

Success dogs architect of doghouse

By Tom Greenwood

Forget about building a better mousetrap. Build a better doghouse and the world will beat a path to your door. Even if you build it with tongue firmly in cheek.

That's what Park resident William Kessler recently discovered when his architectural firm won a special award from the Michigan Society of Architects for a 9 foot square dog house he constructed for Circe, the Kessler's golden Labrador.

"We'll, the competition sponsored by the society asked for entries other than just buildings, so I figured 'why not?'" said Kessler, in a phone interview.

"The house is made out of a spun air duct that's oh, about 30 inches around and 51 inches high. It was a sample that was just sitting around our offices for about two years. I hate to waste anything, so I figured it would make a good doghouse if I turned it on its side and made some modifications."

Kessler said it took most of the winter to modify the duct in his basement, and then he could barely get it out of the house.

"Circe really loves it, but we only let her utilize it during the summer," Kessler said. "She goes in to cool off when it's hot."

In his entry letter to the competition, Kessler described the doghouse as a "private dwelling whose user is a single, middle-aged female whose basic needs were programmed at a living space of nine square feet. No cooking and/or eating areas were required and sanitary facilities were to be found in the immediate environment."

Kessler insulated the duct and equipped it with carpeting, an entry platform and a window of insulated glass.

Circe, in her award-winning home, surveys her domain.

"Actually, the list of things you could do with a doghouse of this type is almost endless," said Kessler, with a laugh. Options include: stainless steel ductwork; electric radiant heat with thermostat; interior/exterior lighting; colors of any choice; sound system for sleep or wake-up; wheels; dweller's name; rear louver door for hot climates; special attached water dish; one can of insect repellent; and a built-in compartment for a stainless steel pooper scooper.

"I sort of half-way seriously thought of producing a doghouse like that to see if Neiman Marcus in Texas would be interested," Kessler said. "People are crazy about animals and I know there are people out there who would buy one. I figured the total cost would be about $1,800. I have two daughters who are interior and graphic designers. They started looking at ways to market it. Research showed the most expensive doghouse available now running at about $90.

"But the idea just sort of fell by the wayside," Kessler continued. "Everyone was really excited there for a while. To tell the truth, I just don't have the time right now. Maybe in the next few years."

Kessler recently traveled to Flint to pick up his special award. He also created an award for Circe — a silver dog bone with a ribbon attached. She ignores it.

"I took a few slides of the doghouse and now include it in our slide presentations," Kessler said. "I usually save it for last. It comes on after we've shown the clients all the regular buildings we've designed."

"I tell them we still design houses, even if we do have a few dogs for clients. They love it."

Farms adopts ordinance to control open house parties

By Nancy Parmenter

The Farms city council Oct. 21 unanimously adopted an ordinance regulating the use of alcohol and drugs at open house parties. The ordinance is intended to place the responsibility for out-of-control teen parties on parents or other adults in charge. It will take effect Nov. 20.

The ordinance, which was originally proposed by Farms Prosecutor Peter O'Rourke, almost ran aground on a wording revision by the city attorney. A phrase requiring "reasonable knowledge" by an adult that alcohol or drugs were on the premises was added to the ordinance proposal (which itself was identical to one adopted in Farmington Hills in May).

"In my opinion, the language added . . . neutered the proposed ordinance," O'Rourke wrote to the council. "The added language would virtually require the prosecutor to establish that the adult in control of the residence was present at the time of the possession or consumption. It does not cover the case where the adult has gone out for an evening, left town for a night, a weekend or longer and, in effect, provides the forum for the open house party."

At O'Rourke's request, an "and" was changed to an "or", thereby strengthening the ordinance. City attorney Kathleen Lewis also inserted a severability clause, stipulating that if any section or clause is later found to be unconstitutional, it can be severed from the ordinance without impairing the effectiveness of the remaining portions.

The paragraph in question now reads that no adult shall allow a party combining liquor, drugs and minors "(a) where the adult failed to take reasonable steps to prevent the possession or consumption of the alcoholic beverage or drug at said residence or (b) where the adult knew or reasonably should have known that the alcoholic beverage or drug was in the possession of or being consumed by a minor at said residence."

Several residents spoke in favor of the proposal. Resident Sandy Gillespie told the council that even though she is "directly affected" by reason of having an adolescent child, she "thinks it's great."

"But if you adopt it, please make sure it's enforced," Gillespie said. "Kids think laws don't apply to them."

Several council members raised concerns about enforceability and constitutionality. Councilwoman Nancy Waugaman pointed out that party situations sometimes are beyond the control of the child who has been left alone.

O'Rourke said that the goal of the ordinance is to ensure that the people left in charge are able to maintain control. "If they place someone younger in charge, then there's a question of whether they use good judgment . . . Parents have to recognize their responsibilities. They can't just say, 'have your party — just don't tell us what happened.'"

Police Chief Robert Ferber said he feels the ordinance will be a valuable tool against out-of-control parties. But he cautioned the council against adopting it with the idea that its enforcement depends solely on the tact, restraint and good judgment of the police, prosecutor and judge.

"You can talk about discretion at every step, but you have to assume it will be enforced as written," he said. "You are fooling yourselves otherwise."

Ferber said the police break up parties nearly every week, sometimes at the request of out-of-town parents who have called home to check up and heard a party in the background. "It happens all the time," he said.

Workshop for the blind is first in area

By Pat Paholsky

Blindness is considered to be one of the worst possible things that could happen to a person. To never see again, to be trapped in a world of darkness is so overwhelming to many people who lose their sight that they become reclusive. As their sight fails, so does their will to survive.

It's sad to see a capable, productive person who has a talent to share give up. It's sad to see that person become a burden to loved ones and to society.

Yet if a person were to lose his sight, Michigan is the place to be. It's one of only nine states that has state-supported facilities for the visually impaired. A person can go to the Michigan Rehabilitation Center for the Blind in Kalamazoo, and in about six to eight weeks learn how to become independent. The service is open to anyone who is visually impaired and it's all free — meals, training, low-vision aids.

And if a person who lives in Michigan were to lose his sight, the Grosse Pointe area is the place to be. The Friends of Vision, a support group for the visually impaired, is one of the first such groups in the country. It offers comfort and hope to its members, and more importantly, practical advice in dealing with everyday life.

The Friends meet twice a month at the Neighborhood Club and membership is open to everyone. Besides the Pointes, members come from Detroit, Birmingham, St. Clair Shores, Warren, Sterling Heights and East Detroit.

Some of the services the group offers includes the talking newspaper — the Grosse Pointe News on tape — trips to Masonic Temple, Meadowbrook and other places, craft workshops, and plenty of information on what's available for the visually impaired and how to get it.

The group sponsored an event at the War Memorial in May called "A Clear View." It was for members and the general public and it was a first attempt to give sighted people a better understanding of the unsighted. More than 250 people attended and supporters were ecstatic.

A few weeks ago, the Friends again tried the untried and were successful. They asked the Michigan Rehabilitation Center in Kalamazoo to come to Grosse Pointe to put on an orientation and mobility

Mary Kearns of Detroit, who has some vision left, was blindfolded during an exercise at a workshop for the blind held recently at Christ Church. About three dozen visually impaired persons participated in the three-day workshop sponsored by the Friends of Vision, the Michigan Rehabilitation Center for the Blind and the state Commission for the Blind.

workshop for members. The center, which is an arm of the state Commission for the Blind, agreed. And out they came. The rehab center brought its 30-foot mobile unit, and staff members along with instructors from the Commission for the Blind spent three days at Christ Church exposing some three dozen visually impaired persons to a world of independence and dignity.

They learned how to fold their money a certain way to keep track of the denomination, how to use a white cane and how a dog is used, how to navigate stairs and curves, how to mark bottles of medication, how to write a check and how to go shopping. It wasn't possible to do more than skim the surface of what a person can do, according to Robert Hall, mobile unit coordinator. The purpose of the workshop, he said, is to let them know what is possible.

"We familiarize people with all the things we do and we try to get them excited," he said. "We find about 50 percent of all the people we reach end up in the program at Kalamazoo."

The mobile unit, a gift from a benefactor, travels throughout the state every year. It's in its fourth year and this was the first time it came to Grosse Pointe. It's also the first time the rehab center responded to a request by a private group. Hall said he is going to recommend that the agency returns next year to put on a regular one-week program.

"We have probably the very best system in the U.S.," he added. "Everything we do is totally free. Our main focus is to move people back in employment and take them off assistance."

The federal government pays for 80 percent of the services, Hall said, with the state paying the remaining 20 percent. An average of 35 to 40 beds are used regularly at the 50-bed facility in Kalamazoo and Hall said the reason it's not at full capacity is many people don't know about it.

"But the biggest reason is it's frightening for people who have just lost their vision to leave their home for an extended period of time," he said. "They just can't handle that."

The Friends of Vision knows how frightening it is to lose one's sight. That's why they banded together years ago under the aegis of the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology. For more information about the group, call Judy Dara at 824-4710.

Competition intense in Park political contest

By Pat Paholsky
Park voters will go the polls Nov. 5 to elect a mayor and three council members.

There are two candidates for the mayoral position, the incumbent and a councilman. In the council race, four challengers and two incumbents will vie for three seats. All of the candidates were interviewed by a reporter and the editorial writer at the Grosse Pointe News office. Following are the responses of the candidates in alphabetical order. Endorsements are on Page 6A.

For mayor

Palmer Heenan
Palmer Heenan, 63 is seeking a second two-year term as mayor. Some of the things that have been accomplished during his term that he is proud of include helping to make the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation a viable organization. "We have 500 donors and a vitality and spirit of community," he said. Of some 300 foundations in the country, Michigan has 40, he said. He also points out that there have been no tax increases during his term and there is, in fact, a surplus.

Heenan is a strong supporter of consolidating the police and fire departments in a public safety unit. There should be a 25 percent increase in efficiency, he said, if the program is implemented properly. He believes the program will be jeopardized if he is not re-elected. He lists public safety as the number one concern of Park residents.

On his position on street closings, he said, "We left that in the very competent hands of the Planning Commission and I will be satisfied with that. I'm not going to get locked in for or against. There are reasons to keep an open mind."

Heenan said the Park Foundation's goal to develop an activities center at the bathhouse will benefit both the youngsters and older citizens of the community. "They have no place to meet at the present time," he said, adding that this would give them a meeting spot.

He is also proud of negotiating the purchase of the property on Jefferson across the street from the future Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology building. Plans are to redevelop that block into professional buildings, he said.

Heenan said he has always responded to people who have asked him for help and for that reason, he is confident he will be re-elected. Some of the feedback he has received in his campaigning is concern for personal safety and taxes. "There's generally no hue and cry over what we're doing," he said.

John Prost
John Prost, 48, was first elected to the council in 1979. He was elected mayor pro tem by members of the council in 1981 and 1983.

He is pleased with the work that has been done on Kercheval Avenue and the plans to revitalize Mack Avenue. The commercial area on Kercheval was deteriorating and Prost said the council took steps to reverse the blight.

He lists the tree replacement program as an accomplishment and says that much of the credit for positive action belongs to the various commissions, such as beautification, recreation, street improvement and communications commissions.

Prost believes the new police chief will have a positive impact on crime because of his past experience. He lists the crime prevention program that is being developed and the motor scooter patrol as positive steps.

While the city offers programs for its youngsters, such as swimming lessons and the fishing rodeo, Prost said more could be done. If the Park Foundation is able to raise enough money to convert the bathhouse into a recreation center, he said, "One of the first things would be to establish some money for programs there."

The city does not do enough for its older citizens, however, and Prost said more could be done to support already established programs, such as the senior center and home repair program.

Property values is the chief concern of residents, Prost said. "An important issue is how the city addresses the fact that many houses on the west end have owners who don't live there," he said.

He believes he should be elected mayor because of his commitment to the Park. "I've served six years under three mayors and I've been involved for years in civic organizations. I feel very strongly that someone has to take a positive approach," he said.

For council

Lee Carrick
Lee Carrick, 41, is seeking a term on the council because he wants to preserve the residential character of the community and continue to provide good services. He feels he can bring a different perspective to the council because he is an educator.

Public safety is the main concern of the community, he said, and it should be implemented immediately. "Uniformed officers on the street is the best deterrent to crime," he said.

He views street closings as an unfortunate solution to problems in the Park and says it puts a burden on the other streets.

As a child growing up in the Park, Carrick said there were always planned activities and he feels there are more available today. He says, however, that youngsters who are in trouble should not have to go to Detroit courts, and that the matter should be handled locally.

The city does not have to concern itself with caring for older citizens, Carrick said, because the majority are affluent and able to care for themselves. There should be more leisure activities available, however, he said. He added that he does not favor senior citizen housing or retirement buildings.

Urban blight and an increase in the number of burglaries is the main concern in the community, Carrick says, and it should be addressed by implementing public safety.

He says he could be elected because he can offer a different perspective than the other candidates. He cites his educational background and his experience as a researcher. "Research is essentially solving problems and as a researcher, I'm constantly implementing this thought process and I think the same thing applies to city council,"

Lynn Crissman
Lynn Crissman, 43, said she should be elected to the council because "I believe I can facilitate progress in the Park on some of our more difficult issues." Her legal training helps her to understand the city code and would be useful in mediation and arbitration.

To combat crime, she said, "I would urge a rapid implementation of public safety. It will be the single most effective way to alleviate fear and create a greater perception of safety."

Crissman is opposed to street closings.

Recreational activities for children are very good, she said, however the equipment should be monitored to identify faulty or outmoded equipment. She feels there could be more activities offered in the winter.

Older citizens are vulnerable to muggings and Crissman says more police officers would alleviate their fear. She feels there could be more services for senior citizens, such as elm tree injections, a rebate program and transportation.

Crime is the top issue, Crissman says, and it must be addressed now. The statistics are conflicting and there is too much fear, she said.

Crissman said she is well qualified to serve on the council. "I'm not tired of the issues in the Park. I'm not tired about elm trees and I would try to do something about Mack Avenue. I will not be influenced by special interest groups," she added.

Carroll Evola, 46, is seeking a second four-year term on the council because she wants to continue the reforestation of the Park and improve the streets. Communication between the city and residents has increased, she said, with the Park Communicator going out three times a year instead of once a year.

One of the council's accomplishments she takes pride in is the establishment of the Beautification Commission. "They did a tremendous job," she said, adding that as a result, the 1400 blocks of the city have been replanted as well as parts of the 1300 blocks. "Ten years

from now, it won't have to be done."

Crime is uppermost on the minds of the citizenry, Evola says. The formation of Neighborhood Watches is a positive step toward combatting crime, she said, as well as the scooter patrol.

She is opposed to street closings because she says it creates more problems than solving them.

Even though there are a number of activities for children, Evola says more could be offered. "Sometimes as parents we forget we had big fields to play in."

When it comes to older citizens, however, Evola said, "As somebody who works with the elderly, I can say nobody ever does enough for them." She said home security was one area in which older people could be helped.

Top priority for the council is to always give the best services for the tax money, Evola said. The public safety issue will be the number one issue when the council receives a report from the administration, she said.

Arthur Getz
Arthur Getz, 67, hopes to be elected because he has been a Park resident for more than 30 years and has always been involved in the community. Most of his time was spent with Little League. Getz has served on the Recreation Commission and has worked with four mayors. "I don't think there is a candidate as knowledgeable as I am," he said.

Getz said the hiring of Richard Caretti as police chief was one of the more positive things that occurred. In favor of combining the police and fire departments, Getz said it will mean more police protection at no extra cost. Public safety is the main issue in the Park, he said.

He is not in favor of closing any streets.

As chairman of the Recreation Commission, Getz said the group is always looking for more activities for children. The non-motorized launch pad at the park and a playground are two accomplishments of the commission, he said, adding that the next goal is a beach at Patterson Park.

More can be done for the city's older citizens, he feels. The activities center planned for the old bathhouse would benefit youngsters and senior citizens, he said. Dial-a-Ride is another service Getz favors.

From campaigning, Getz said he has learned that many residents resent absent landlords and are concerned about blight. On the positive side, residents enjoy the parks, he said.

James Robson Jr.
James Robson Jr., 37, is seeking a seat on the council because of his concern for the city. "We moved here 10 years ago because of good city services, good schools and I've grown to value our community very much."

He says his background of leadership and experience in negotiations qualify him to serve.

He supports the public safety concept. "The best feature is we have the ability to double our patrol and instead of three cars, we can have six." He added that a comprehensive crime program should be adopted and a police reserve unit created to patrol Mack Avenue.

Regarding street closings, Robson said he is in favor of an objective review of the matter. "I think the city could hire a firm with experts in street planning. Perhaps it should only be tried on a temporary basis for six to eight months."

More can be done for youngsters, Robson said. The Park has many excellent facilities that are empty in the evenings.

As far as older citizens, Robson said many are afraid to leave their homes because of muggings. In his campaigning, he said he found many lonely senior citizens and he suggested that some of the empty city hall rooms be used as meeting rooms.

Crime is the main concern, Robson said, and while it is not over whelming yet, he said now is the time to address the problem. "There's talk about the image problem and I'm suggesting that if you take care of the crime problem, image will take care of itself," he said.

Issues he is concerned with are the condition of roads, blight, homes that are burned out and trees. Robson said he sides with the Beautification Commission regarding the tree program.

Mark Valente III
Mark Valente III, 29, is seeking re-election to a second four-year term on the council. Some of the goals he set the first time have been accomplished such as turning a deficit into a surplus with no tax increases. The city is now living within its means and Valente credits the administration with good management.

Street improvements, the Park Foundation and providing quality services at the same or lower cost are other areas of which he is proud, he said, as well as the tree program.

Janet Newberg, president of the Woods Senior Commission, is shown accepting a plaque for the city from Gov. James Blanchard.

Woods honored for project

Grosse Pointe Woods received recognition for its project to disseminate information of interest and value to senior citizens at a recent convention of the Michigan Municipal League in Flint.

Cities throughout the state submitted descriptions and examples of projects that they developed for their citizens. Cities were divided according to population with two awards — first place and honorable mention — given in each group. The Woods information project received an honorable mention award as a model for cities the size of the Woods.

The Senior Citizen Information office of Services for Older Citizens, Inc. (SOC) developed and coordinated the project under a contract with the Woods. This included preparing and overseeing the delivery of 3,000 packets of information detailing services for persons 60 years of age and older residing in Grosse Pointe Woods and writing and supervising the distribution of two newsletters with information for older adults.

The personally addressed packets were delivered door to door through the efforts of senior citizens who contacted other seniors in their neighborhood; interested residents and Boy Scouts working on an Eagle project. Senior residents also volunteered to prepare the newsletter for mailing. Jean Rice was the council member working with the project.

The SOC Senior Citizen Information office with the Woods Senior Commission and Councilwoman Jean Rice are now preparing a fall newsletter with current information for older adults which will be mailed out the middle of November to all known senior residents of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Help for adult children of alcoholics

Adult children of alcoholics is the topic of the third program in SAC's fall series. The program, to be held at the War Memorial on Wednesday, Oct. 30, at 7:30 p.m., is free of charge and open to the public.

Presenting the program will be Jeanne DeRoche, M.A., who has been involved in substance abuse work for 14 years. She developed the family program for Maple Grove and the intensive outpatient program at Fairlane.

In December 1984, she formed her own company, The Knopf Company, where she is involved in consulting with health care systems and designing programs for the chemically dependent and their families. In the schools, she provides parent/teacher training and organizes student assistance programs. She recently received a grant for working with chemically dependent children.

DeRoche will explain how adults who were raised in a chemically dependent home need to complete some of the developmental tasks of growing up. She will discuss characteristics these adult children have in common and how they can begin the recovery process.

Other topics in the series will deal with adolescents in turmoil and the intervention process.

Nutrition for seniors

Senior citizens can improve their health through diet. A seminar, "Be Well: Nutrition in the Later Years," will be presented Wednesday, Nov. 6, from 2-4 p.m. Held at Saratoga Community Hospital, 15000 Gratiot, the class will be taught by registered dietitians.

Pre-registration is required and there is a $3 fee. Call the hospital at 245-1241 for more information or registration.

Family sleeps through robbery

Woods police say a home in the 1500 block of Blairmoor was burglarized sometime early Thursday morning, Oct. 17, while the family slept upstairs.

According to reports, the homeowner came downstairs at about 6:30 a.m. and found that the home had been ransacked. He told police he and his family had retired for the evening at midnight and heard nothing.

Police found pry marks on the front door of the home where one of two locks had been forced. The victim told police he had secured both locks the night before.

Taken in the robbery was a 23-inch Zenith television valued at $400, an RCA VCR valued at $325 and about $140 in cash, along with checks and credit cards.

For mayor in the Park

Once more Grosse Pointe Park appears to be providing most of the excitement in the campaigns for the municipal elections to be held Nov. 5 in the Park, City, Farms and Woods.

In the contest for mayor, incumbent Palmer Heenan will be facing John Prost who is in the middle of his second term as a member of the council. So, in effect, it will be a contest between two well experienced and highly qualified candidates.

If any one issue has emerged to dominate the campaign, it appears to be the proposal, strongly backed by Mayor Heenan, for the consolidation of the fire and police departments into a single public safety department.

Heenan believes his candidacy has become a referendum on the public safety department, although he would prefer that his campaign be seen as transcending any single issue. He insists that adoption of the plan would increase the Park's efficiency in combatting crime and protecting people and property by putting as many as 10 to 13 more patrolmen on the streets. And he feels that the consolidation proposal could be put on the back burner if he loses his re-election bid.

With respect to the consolidation, Prost supported the council when it directed the city administration to prepare an operational plan for the consolidation and then report back with an estimate of costs and other factors. But he does not see the consolidation as the only route to combatting crime. He feels the new police chief, Richard Caretti, has made a positive impact by making residents more aware of what they must do to protect themselves and by introducing motor scooter patrols to keep the police in closer contact with the people.

Park firemen, while not involving themselves directly with the campaign, have made no secret of their opposition to the consolidation proposal. At a council meeting last week, they reported the results of a public opinion poll that showed 78 percent of some 500 Park residents expressing a preference for keeping separate police and fire departments. Mayor Heenan took strong exception to the poll and said, among other things, several people had told him it was structured in such a way that respondents "could not express themselves in favor of public safety."

On other municipal issues, there seems to be more agreement between the mayor and his challenger. The mayor insists he has fulfilled his campaign pledges by providing a more responsive leadership on the council and in the mayor's office; more effective crime prevention in the Park and excellence in police and fire protection; a strong zoning ordinance to maintain the character of the residential community, and the proper maintenance of the roads. These are in addition to his pledge to work for a consolidated public safety department.

Challenger Prost says he has been pleased with the progress in the Park since he has been on the council. He cites such things as the improvements on Kercheval Avenue that have reversed the deterioration of the commercial area that had also threatened residential neighborhoods, the improvements on Mack Avenue which also have reversed the trend toward blight, the involvement by the council in the tree program and, in general, the actions that helped maintain property values in the Park.

In personality, Heenan is more combative and Prost more conciliatory. But both have been responsible for gains in the Park in recent years. Both feel the Park is an excellent place in which to live and both believe the city government has been a positive force in making it that way. Both see the need for the city to do more for its senior citizens and its young people.

Both men told the News they are running independently and are not part of any slates. Yet both endorsed council candidates. Heenan endorsed the four challengers because, he says, he wants more "independent judgment" on the council. He feels Prost as well as the two incumbent council members running for re-election have not supported him on such matters as the public safety department and maintaining taxes at current levels. Prost, on the other hand, says he is backing Mark Valente and Carroll Evola for re-election because of their contributions to the council. He also says that as mayor he feels he could work more cooperatively with the other council members and be less combative than Heenan has been.

The Park obviously has two experienced and competent candidates whose campaigns may differ somewhat in style and tone, but whose aims are similar in that they seek to improve public services without increasing costs to the public. Either man would do a good job in the mayor's office, but the Grosse Pointe News endorses Heenan on the grounds he is an incumbent with a first-rate record and deserves another term to carry out his plans for the Park.

For council in the Park

In several respects, the campaign for the three seats on the Grosse Pointe city council serves as a mirror image of the race for mayor.

For one thing, the proposed consolidation of the fire and police departments into a single public safety department is a major issue in the council race as it is in the mayoral contest. And for another, two of the incumbent council members are supporting their council colleague, John Prost, for mayor while the four challengers are backing Mayor Palmer Heenan for re-election. All six say, however, they are running as independents and not as part of any slate.

All six contenders for the three council posts endorse the public service proposal with varying degrees of intensity, but there are distinct differences between the approaches of the incumbents and the four new nominees.

The incumbents, Carroll Evola and Mark Valente, supported the council vote to direct the city administration to "proceed in preparation of an operational plan" for the consolidation of the fire and police departments, and report back to the council after the election with an estimate of costs and other factors. Mrs. Evola made her position clear with her prepared statement:

"I am not opposed to public safety. I am opposed to the 'damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead' approach being voiced by some of the current candidates. There are many different types of public service and it would be a disservice to the community to proceed without a plan. A decision of this magnitude commits the energies and finances of the city on a long-term basis. Full factual consideration is a mandate, not a luxury."

Valente, who made the council motion directing the preparation of an operational plan for the consolidation, contends that the city doesn't really know the cost and needs more information before going ahead. He says providing municipal services at the lowest possible cost is the key to everything in city government.

Councilman Prost, now running for mayor, takes much the same position on the consolidation issue as the two council incumbents seeking election.

The four challengers, on the other hand, strongly support the adoption of the proposal for a public service department and go along with Mayor Heenan's contention that the plan would increase the Park's efficiency in combatting crime by putting as many as 10 to 13 more patrolmen on the streets without a comparable increase in costs. They seem to agree that the plan already has been studied sufficiently and now ought to be implemented.

They do express some differences, however. Arthur H. Getz, for example, feels that nobody should lose his job through the consolidation and cross training should not be forced on any current firemen or policemen. Lee Carrick supports the goal of a public safety department and believes the city ought to set priorities with respect to the consolidation and then reach agreement on how and when to reach them. James E. Robson supports the consolidation because it would bring about more street patrols and serve as a crime deterrent but he also wants more neighborhood watches, more help for senior citizens and a police reserve plan to improve law enforcement. Lynn Crissman urges rapid implementation of the public safety proposal in order to increase the number of patrolmen in both the neighborhoods and the commercial areas.

With respect to the other questions put to the candidates by the Grosse Pointe News, there were no sharp disagreements although there were differences in emphasis. On street closings, for example, nobody favors action to close a large number of additional streets but some oppose any further closings, some want to await the planning commission's study of the problem and at least one candidate would prefer an objective review by some other agency than the planning commission.

Overall, the candidates tend to think Grosse Pointe Park provides many recreational activities for its young people, but several suggested use of schools for evening programs and one candidate felt the need for more programs to aid young people with drug and other problems.

The candidates felt that the Park also might do more for its senior citizens. Getz, for example, pointed out that the new activities center being planned with Park Foundation funds would provide a good meeting place for senior citizens. But Carrick, while favoring more organized recreational programs, objected to any proposals for retirement type housing programs to be sponsored by the city itself.

Overall, it is clear that all of the candidates are concerned citizens who want to improve life and services in the Park without increasing taxes and other costs to the residents. All regard the Park as an excellent place in which to live and work and want to make a contribution to the community through public service. Their differences are over the ways to combat such problems as crime and the consolidation of the fire and police departments.

The candidates do have a wide range of background and experience. Carroll Evola is a marketing representative for the Michigan Baptist Homes at the Whittier retirement home. Lynn Crissman is an attorney with expertise in labor negotiations. Arthur H. Getz is a retired businessman who has served as chairman of the Park Recreation Commission and in other civic capacities. Lee Carrick is a Wayne State University researcher and assistant professor in the medical school who has become interested in civic issues through his lifelong residency in the Pointes. James E. Robson is a Wayne County deputy sheriff with experience as a labor union president. And Mark Valente is active in the family clothing business.

Under the circumstances, the Grosse Pointe News believes all six candidates are well qualified. The News, however, does endorse the two incumbents, Carroll Evola and Mark Valente, because of their past services to the Park and their pledges to continue to seek improvement in city government. As for the third position on the council, the News believes the four new candidates are well qualified but on the basis of their experience and interest in city government and services would give a slight preference to Arthur H. Getz or Lee Carrick.

Go for the grade point average

To the Editor:

Amen, David Loffredo! His letter Oct. 10 requesting a change in the grade point system expressed my sentiments very accurately.

It was discouraging for me to be told by admissions officers that the grade point average is the only criteria applied in initially weeding out possible candidates for admission to the more prestigious colleges. No consideration is given to high school attended, courses chosen, AP classes taken. ("We don't have to, so many want to get in here.")

A 4.0 received from normal courses at Any High is better than 3.5 with Advancement Placement courses, from Grosse Pointe. A Grosse Pointe student is actually penalized for taking the more educational and more difficult courses! And, the parent who has "bought" the Grosse Pointe public education package, thinking it was the key to the future, is disappointed at not having provided what was promised.

As a parent, I have learned my lesson: Go for the grade point average! Select courses that will enhance the student's GPA to give him a better chance for college admission.

It is too bad that we have a school system that extolls its virtues but by its grading system does not allow its students to be "marketable" to similarly excellent colleges and universities.

As David Loffredo waited to speak until he had left the system, I choose to remain anonymous to avoid embarrassment to my children still enrolled.

A Parent

Let's love our neighbor

To the Editor:

When I became associated with the Grosse Pointe real estate firm, I assumed that the area in which I would be selling homes was in Grosse Pointe. I dearly love the Pointe, having resided here for over 20 years.

Much to my surprise my first clients asked for homes bordering the Pointe on the east side — our neighbors.

In finding these homes I was delighted in what I saw. Some nice areas filled with many well-built, inexpensive homes, tree-lined streets and most of all two races living side by side in harmony.

I heard stories of blight, and throngs fleeing Detroit in fear of crime. I'm not saying that crime doesn't exist — it does even in our Grosse Pointe. However, strong block clubs have evolved and neighborhoods are pulling together to protect their homes.

What I have learned from this is that we can't turn our backs on our neighbors — we can't let Detroit go down the tube. For our sakes, as well as for theirs, it behooves us to "Love Our Neighbor," to appreciate it, to encourage those who want to move into it to do so and we will be blessed as well.

Adopt public safety in Park

To the Editor:

It has come to my attention that public safety, although "endorsed" by the Grosse Pointe Park City Council earlier this year, is in danger of not being implemented.

As the most effective and efficient means of providing police and fire services, public safety (fully consolidated) must be at the top of the Park council priority list. If it is not implemented, the Park residents will either pay for extra personnel or risk increased losses to property and harm to persons, without good reason.

If the Park is intent on further reducing crime (or its perception) while holding the line on fire risks, it will adopt, implement and be a leading municipality in the public safety effort.

Improve North's cafeteria

To the Editor:

I feel that the cafeteria at Grosse Pointe North High School should be improved. The staff is good and the service is good but several things should be changed.

The portions of food are very small and I think that they should be increased. Hamburgers, french fries, onion rings and pizza are very greasy. The lettuce is wilted, stale and very dry. Once in a while the milk is spoiled. It takes too long to get your lunch and by the time you get it, most of the lunch time is over.

Hopefully, this letter will help to improve cafeteria food and service at Grosse Pointe North. The students deserve to have better meals.

Pointes should be one district

To the Editor:

This letter to you concerns the article, "A 1982 Injustice Admitted" published Sept. 26. I am in agreement that Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe City should not have been re-apportioned into the 13th Congressional District, while the Shores, Farms and Woods were left in the 14th District. Even though Grosse Pointe is an island totally surrounded by Democratic waters, I think the Pointes belong together in a unified 14th Congressional District. There is a difference in the political ideas and beliefs between these two districts even though they are both Democratic. Grosse Pointe relates more to the suburbs than to the urban area of Detroit.

Furthermore, the concerns and problems of residents in the Pointes are considerably different than those of Detroit constituents.

Therefore, if all of Grosse Pointe was to be placed into the 14th District, our community would have greater opportunities to influence our congressional representative on issues.

I firmly believe there is a greater commonality between the constituents of all Grosse Pointe and the residents of the 14th District than the voters in the 13th District. In 1990, Grosse Pointe should be unified into the 14th Congressional District so that the citizens of this community will be more fairly and effectively represented.

Reiterates opposition

To the Editor:

According to a recent article in the Free Press, the War Memorial Association has submitted an offer to purchase a Commercial Class C Liquor License from the bankrupt Bronze Door restaurant for $70,000 cash and has delivered a certified $8,000 deposit check with the offer. We understand no other offer for the liquor license has been received. Michigan National Bank, a secured creditor, has filed objections to the War Memorial offer claiming the price is inadequate.

The Bankruptcy Court has set Oct. 25 as the date to consider the offer and the bank's objections. The bank alleges in its objections that the Offeror (War Memorial Association) is not dealing in good faith for the stated reason that the bank is informed and has reason to believe that the Association previously submitted an offer to purchase the liquor license at a price of $80,000, which was accepted by the Debtor subject to confirmation of sale by the Court, and that the Association thereafter advised Debtor's counsel it would not complete the purchase pursuant to said offer.

The offer recognizes that the transfer of the liquor license to the Association must be approved by the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council and the State Liquor Control Commission, and expressly agrees that if such approvals are not obtained, there is not to be any refund to the War Memorial Association of the deposit or the purchase price paid to the Bronze Door, Inc.

Over many months during which the Association has carried on its public campaign to obtain a commercial Class C public liquor license, the undersigned committee acting on behalf of several hundred concerned long-time Farms residents has consistently opposed the Association in its efforts to obtain a commercial liquor license in the sincere belief that a commercial liquor license at the Memorial Center in a residential neighborhood would not be in the best interest of the Farms community.

In view of the Association's current offer now being made to purchase the Bronze Door's liquor license, the undersigned committee desires to inform the War Memorial Association, and its officers and directors, in advance of the expenditure of War Memorial funds for such purpose, that it intends to continue to oppose such efforts of the Association and will question

I say

Okay, I admit it. I read our letters to the editor. And sometimes they burn me worse than 100-grit toilet paper.

Two recent writers complained how Grosse Pointe high school students sacrifice their grade point averages to get an education. The students took advanced placement courses and got lower grades than they would have if they had taken easier courses.

They felt betrayed by the system, which they decided has some serious flaws and didn't build self-esteem.

What's implied in this set my hands shaking. First, schools should reward students who take tough classes. Good students deserve a different, easier grading system because they take tough classes.

Also implicit is that high schools only prepare kids for college, which only prepares kids for careers, which only prepare kids for being rich.

Tough graders in AP classes damage student esteem and handicap those students' ability to get into the "best" colleges, go the letters' common refrain. The problem is those seriously flawed administrators for devising the grading system.

The letters' cant has a familiar — if hollow — ring. In April, the school system did a study that showed local students with 3.0 grade point averages scored as high on SATs as kids in other districts with higher GPAs.

The reasons for the study were probably the same ones aired in the letters. Recommendations included a simple one — telling teachers essentially to lay off to no one's benefit — and one a bit more complex: educate college entrance people that Grosse Pointe students do exemplary work and to use GPAs as an entrance requirement is ridiculous and discriminatory.

What do AP students deserve? The same thing every other high school student deserves. They deserve:

- Small class sizes, with no more than 20 kids to a room.
- Highly educated, highly motivated teachers who have the time to spend to get students into a subject, correct homework and prepare lessons that require critical thought by their charges.

- A guidance staff that lets students know the school expects them to get out and get the best education they can while in the building.

- An administration that cuts no deals with kids, forcing them to take classes that challenge and educate them in ways they need to live: critical thinking, clear writing and reading with understanding.

That doesn't go for just the two high schools in Grosse Pointe, but high schools throughout the country. It's time to make some fundamental changes in structure to provide those things.

The Education Triangle

Those things — teachers with the ability and time to teach, a school dedicated to learning and students told they have to learn to get out of high school — are some of the recommendations made in a recently published book titled "The Shopping Mall High School. Winners and Losers in the Educational Marketplace."

Mike Andrzejczyk

Written by Arthur Powell, Eleanor Farrar and David Cohen, the book — published by Houghton Mifflin Company — is the second of three books presenting findings from A Study of High Schools, a five-year study commissioned by the National Association of Secondary School Principals and the Commission on Education Issues of the National Association of Independent Schools.

The authors say high schools are like shopping malls, offering everything for everybody to draw the most number of kids into the building. Gifted programs, vocational education, social services and extracurricular activities all have a common denominator: enticing kids to go to school.

But, because they are everything to everybody, high schools must be neutral when it comes to asking students to be serious about learning, the authors say. With a wide variety of choices, kids can get the education they want, but if they don't want, they don't get.

Now, it makes sense, but, like our letter writers, it puts the burden on only one of the three sides of the education triangle. The reason some kids need to be enticed into school is because they don't want to learn, don't see a future in higher education or don't feel comfortable with academic programs.

The shopping mall high school has to offer them something or run the risk of putting hoodlums on the streets full time three years earlier than usual.

Education is not only the responsibility of the shopping mall high school, which may have abrogated its responsibilities to learning. It's up to parents and students as well to go to that shopping mall and come back with the best education program available.

Shopping Mall High School is an interesting book, especially in its chapters about how schools abrogate their education responsibilities and how "treaties" undermine teaching and learning. There's also a piece on the history of the secondary school system and the plight of the average, "unspecial" student.

The book makes some valid points. Secondary schools need to press students to get out and aggressively pursue learning and work to make sure teachers have the time, training and tools they need to do the best job they can.

After reading this one, I'm keeping my eyes out for the third of the series, Robert Hampel's essays on the history of high schools since 1940 due out in spring, 1986 I may go back and wade through the first book, Thomas Sizer's "Horace's Compromise."

The ornament on the bow of a gondola is especially made to weigh as much as the gondolier in the stern as a counterbalance.

Mexican exchange student helped by radio ham

By Tom Greenwood

Jorge Medina is from Aguascalientes, Mexico. Robert Shipton is from Grosse Pointe Farms. It took an earthquake to bring them together.

Shipton, a ham radio operator, was instrumental in helping Medina establish that his family in Aguascalientes and Mexico City were safe after the capital was nearly leveled by two major earthquakes last month.

Medina, 18, is a Rotary exchange student spending his senior year at South High School. He had just returned from playing golf with the South golf team when his host parents, Richard and Phyllis Rabbideau, asked him if he had seen the news on TV yet.

"I just couldn't believe it," Medina said. "I tried calling my parents that night, but couldn't get through. It took a week. When I finally reached them, the first thing they said was 'why didn't I call earlier.'"

"They have a foreign exchange student with them from New York," Medina said. "They tried calling her parents but couldn't get through either. Lines were down everywhere. No one was hurt but my father said the house rumbled during the first quake, even though it was 200 miles away. He was shaving and said he suddenly felt dizzy and sick. Then he heard the doors slamming throughout the house. He got my family out into the street."

Of major concern to the student and his family was the condition of three uncles living in Mexico City. There was no way to reach them.

Then Richard Rabbideau remembered a ham radio operator from a businessman's prayer group he had attended in downtown Detroit. Through that operator they were able to locate Shipton, who lives a few blocks from the Rabbideaus.

"What's even more interesting is that I know Bob's wife from our membership in the American Association of University Women," Mrs. Rabbideau said.

It's not exactly like Shipton was sitting around twiddling his thumbs when Medina called. Self-employed in environmental testing, Shipton had been handling dozens of radio calls for exchange students, newspapers, CBS news, WJR radio and hospitals concerned with conditions in Mexico City.

"I was grinding out messages daily," Shipton said. "The lines were down and no one could get word in or out. I'm still handling calls weeks after the catastrophe, though its lightened up considerably."

Shipton said it was very difficult reaching Mexico City since hundreds of U.S. hams would be networked to one operator in Mexico City.

"The poor guy I worked with was going crazy fielding messages," Shipton said. "He was on the radio and his wife was on the phone. There are only 1,820 ham operators in Mexico, and there are 435,000 in the U.S. So you can see what the odds are."

Shipton was never able to reach Medina's uncles directly, but was still able to relieve the student's fears. "I was able to patch a call through to the uncle's homes and could hear the phones ringing," Shipton said. "I told Jorge that was a good sign. Then I discovered two of his uncles were doctors and at that time all doctors were on call in Mexico City, so they were probably out working."

Later, Medina's family in Aguascalientes was able to confirm Shipton's theory.

For the Grosse Pointe radio operator, the experience of helping others was one he'll never forget.

"It was unbelievable," he said. "I helped newspapers in Arizona and CBS in New York. I read a blood analysis from a doctor in Mexico City to a doctor in Pittsburgh. I didn't know what it meant, but I relayed it percentage by percentage. The doctor in Pennsylvania ordered the patient in Mexico City flown to the U.S."

"I was also able to track down a U.S. baseball player named Ike Blessed, who's now a coach in Mexican baseball. He was supposed to be in Mexico City, but couldn't be found. We located him in a town 300 miles away. All in all, I've been pretty lucky. Of all the hundreds of messages and calls I made, the worst news I had to pass on was that one person's walls had cracked during the quake. Not everyone was that fortunate."

According to Shipton, the bulk of the work was done by Mexican ham operators working 'round the clock to aid their stricken countrymen. "It's nice to know we helped," he said. "I understand in Mexico they said masses for the hams that aided Mexico City. It shows you how fragile our environment is when something nature in a couple of minutes completely undoes man's work. If it hadn't been for the hams, perhaps no information would have gotten out."

and the hiring of the police chief.
The best way to fight crime, Valente feels, is for neighbors to be aware of each other and what is going on in the area. With a police response time of 25 seconds to 1½ minutes, he said, people help each other by keeping an eye on things.
He said he would not be in favor of any more street closings, even though he voted to close three last year.
The Park has much to offer its children, he said, with swimming programs and baseball fields. A busy kid doesn't get in trouble, he added.

Senior citizens are another story, he said. "I don't think we ever do enough for our seniors." He pointed to the senior program in the Woods, the Neighborhood Club and the War Memorial as outlets, and added, "We should be able to do more."
Some of the issues he is hearing about from campaigning are public safety, crime and property values.

Ordinance...

Violations of the ordinance are subject to a fine of up to $500 and/or 90 days in jail.
The ordinance was originally written for immediate adoption. However, at the meeting, Councilman Harry Echlin produced a newspaper article about a recent appellate court decision that seemed to indicate that parents do not have a duty to regulate drinking by their children. At the request of city attorney Lewis, the effective date of the ordinance was delayed 30 days so she could research the question.

A hearty party at St. John's

Children in the pediatrics department of St. John Hospital had a scary good time last week, thanks to the efforts of employees of AAA Grosse Pointe office. The workers trekked on over in costume to cheer up the ill or disabled youngsters in their wards. The party was part of the "Light Up a Life" Halloween safety campaign being sponsored statewide by AAA. Safety tips include: wearing highly visible face makeup rather than masks; wearing short costumes to prevent tripping; crossing streets at corners only; trick-or-treating only on well lit streets; having adults check treats before eating; wearing costumes of bright colors and applying luminescent paint or tape; and carrying flashlights to light children's way and make kids visible to the motorists. Sharing the fun at St. John were, from the left, Chris Ciacchella, Kiana Durham, 4, Becky Perkins, 8, Sue Conner, Janice Tavalieri, Mary McCray, 6, Jeremy Lee, 4 and Cheryl Jasman.

Math, science teachers to meet

The Metropolitan Detroit Science Teachers Association and the Detroit Area Council of Teachers of Mathematics will present their 45th Annual Science and Mathematics Fall Conference Saturday, Nov. 2, at Lakeview High School, 2100 East Eleven Mile, St. Clair Shores, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The purpose of the conference is to give all Detroit area science and mathematics teachers an opportunity to meet with their colleagues and observe new or different ideas, approaches and materials for their respective fields and grade levels.

The program will include 58 sessions, exhibits, luncheon for pre-registered, and keynote speakers. Dr. William Cole of Michigan State University, the math keynote speaker, will present "Estimation: The Fifth Basic Skill." The science keynote address, "It's The Little Things In Life That Make Kids Wonder," will be presented by Dr. Michael Leyden of Eastern Illinois University.

In addition Leyden will present a special session for pre-registered science teachers on Friday, Nov. 1, at University Liggett School, from 7 to 9 p.m. For information on either event, call John Smitka at 884-0358.

Local traps yield few moths

The state Agriculture Department found good news and bad news in this year's gypsy moth trapping results for the area.

The good news is that any problem with the pests locally is probably years away.

The bad news is moths continue to show up in local traps in a random pattern, leaving workers a little confused about where they are coming from.

State workers found 40 moths scattered across 28 traps set in Harper Woods, Grosse Pointe Woods, Shores and parts of the Farms. Last year, eight traps yielded 17 moths.

Because there is no discernable pattern to the catches, there will be no search of the area for a possible infestation, according to Carl Dollhopf, regional supervisor of the plant industry division of the state department.

Any problem with the moths, whose larvae have defoliated millions of acres along the Eastern Seaboard, New York and Michigan, is still "quite a few years away" in Grosse Pointe, Dollhopf added.

The continued appearance of moths in the area could be the remnants of a past problem that inexplicably cleared up, he added.

There isn't much good news in other areas of the state in this, the first year the department has trapped the entire state in order to track to spread of the insect.

Oakland and northern Macomb counties have shown dramatic increases in moth population over last year, Dollhopf said. Bloomfield Hills appears to be the center of a tremendous infestation, while some areas of St. Clair County appear to harbor large numbers of moths.

Although the Macomb and Oakland county moth populations have increased, they haven't reached the point of causing damage to trees through defoliation. There are places in outstate Michigan, such as near Midland, west of Saginaw, that defoliation has occurred.

Ford-Cottage merger in effect

By Nancy Parmenter

Two years of discussions have finally led to a plan of merger between Cottage and Henry Ford hospitals. The merger, tentatively announced in July, will take place Jan. 1, 1986.

The hospitals have announced that the merger will not affect patient services or staffing. Cottage, its nursing centers and its medical services corporation (which markets medical equipment and home health care services) will become subsidiaries of Henry Ford Health Care Corporation. Staffing levels will remain basically unchanged.

"That's what we're telling our employees," said Cottage Director of Public Relations Kathleen Maslanka. Although the merger plan also touts the benefits of expansion, reorganization and consolidation, it does not at this time mean staff reductions.

"At this point, nothing is final at all," Maslanka said of the corporation's long-term plans. But, she said, "I don't see (staff cuts) happening at all."

The two hospitals already operate a joint venture in sports medicine. Starting in July, when the merger became imminent, Ford began to provide emergency services at Cottage through a service contract with a company specializing in staffing emergency rooms.

As an example of how the merger will affect employees, Maslanka noted that Cottage's laundry service was consolidated with Henry Ford's last week. The laundry is now shipped out and Cottage laundry employees were reassigned to the housekeeping staff.

"Because it will be 'business as usual' at both hospitals," staff will not be significantly changed, according to the hospitals' press information. "Key management staff of each hospital will continue with current responsibilities. . . . Studying opportunities for expansion or integration of function could alter certain individual responsibilities."

Personnel policies, procedures, wage levels and pension policies will continue to be handled separately by the two institutions, according to the release.

Cottage continues with its plans for growth. The parking deck/office structure on the corner of Muir and Kercheval will be completed within five years, according to an agreement among the hospital, the city of Grosse Pointe Farms and the property developer.

Health programs, lectures, classes and services such as blood pressure clinics will continue to be offered through Cottage. Cottage is already one of 10 member hospitals on Preferred Health Plan, a health maintenance organization created as a Ford subsidiary.

At the same time, the merger will offer greater opportunities to Cottage to participate in the improved delivery of outpatient care and the financing of health care, according to hospital officials.

A view of the back of the house

It was vacant for years and time took its toll on the property known as the Dodge/Ranger estate that adjoined Rose Terrace. Memories of another time are evident, however, in these photographs taken recently. The property has been sold and 18 houses will be built on the 7.63 acres. The main house, built before World War I by Charles M. Swift, is scheduled for demolition along with the carriage house, pool house and boat house.

Consultants make teaching a team effort

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The lot of an elementary school science consultant is not an easy one.

The job calls for being in a different school each day of the week, developing flexible lesson plans, transporting some equipment from school to school, being able to work with both students and teachers, setting up and cleaning up experiments, keeping organized and being willing to change horses in mid-stream.

This is the first year the school system has had two science consultants on staff. Last year, Trombly had one while other elementary school found parents who volunteered to help with coordination of science material.

Because this is the first year of the expanded program, there's still room to experiment with different methods of delivering science instruction.

More science instruction is the reason for the program. A science consultant has the time to set up, explain and clean up after experiments, time a regular classroom teacher doesn't have.

While an evaluation procedure has yet to be developed to see how well the program works, the consultants are already working on lists of common equipment that each building should have, according to elementary curriculum director Alfreda Frost.

Requests for equipment by building principals can be incorporated into next year's budget, she added.

Jan Morrison took time out from mixing chemicals in Defer's science room Monday afternoon to talk about her second year as a science consultant.

"My main goal is for somehow, at the end of the year, that teachers and students come out with a really good taste for science," Morrison says. To do that, she's using the same procedure she used as Trombly's science consultant last year.

Morrison tries to meet with all the teachers in the building to schedule experiments or observations to correspond with the classwork. She also posts a sign-up sheet that teachers can use to set up to meet and talk about problems or questions they may have.

For the first four weeks of the school year, Morrison spent a full week in each of her schools to set up science rooms and make initial contacts with teachers. With that done, she's begun the traveling schedule, a different elementary school each day, with Friday set for a return trip to Monteith, one of the largest elementary schools.

In the science rooms in each of her four buildings, she sets up the experiments or observations. Some may take only a couple of minutes to set-up and tear-down; others can take as much as 20 minutes.

That's what she offers, Morrison says. While a regular classroom teacher can't lose that 40 minutes of set-up and clean-up during a regular class day, he or she can take a class into another room where the experiments are ready to go, team-teach with the science consultant and take the children out at the end, leaving the clean-up to someone else.

"My main job is to get some hands on time for the students and work with the teachers in what they want," Morrison says. "It's going to take time. This is a different kind of thing for many of the kids."

The idea of a science consultant has received a generally favorable response from the staff, but there are a few teachers who just aren't sure what her duties are and how she can help them with science, Morrison says. That, too, will take some time to correct.

But she's optimistic.

Trombly's staff has worked into the program easier this year because she spent a half-day there five days a week last year, Morrison says. Many of the things she sees in her three other buildings are things she saw last year at Trombly.

"I'm glad I did work at Trombly last year... because I know this is going to work out," she says, adding that extra year has "helped me get organized."

It's going to take time for things to work out, though, Morrison says. For many of the children, experiences in observations and experiments is something new. It takes time to teach observation skills and the scientific method of experimentation.

The feedback she's gotten so far from students has been good, though, Morrison says.

"I know they like what we're doing because they talk to me about it afterward," She says. "I see a lot

Fall leaf collection under way in City

The city of Grosse Pointe's special fall leaf pick-up program is now in operation. City residents may rake their leaves into windrow piles between the curb and sidewalk where they will be picked up with a vacuum truck.

Residents are asked not to rake leaves into the street where they cause traffic hazards and clog catchbasins. Also brush and similar debris should not be intermixed with the leaves as it clogs the vacuum collection equipment. Residents are also reminded that the burning of leaves is not permitted.

Public Works Superintendent Douglas Collinson reports that the leaf collection program is operated on a continuous cycle throughout the city. Crews and equipment operate on an overtime basis when leaves are falling at their heaviest rate to keep the collection cycle as short as possible.

Also, to keep the vacuum suction equipment in actual collection operation as much as possible, the collected leaves are temporarily held at the city park. From that point they are subsequently hauled to the Grosse Pointe-Clinton waste reduction plant for disposal or to mulching sites.

The special leaf pick-up program ends the first week in December after which leaves should be placed in containers for pick-up on regular refuse collection days. If residents desire, they may place leaves in plastic bags at curbside for pick-up on regular rubbish collection days during the vacuum period.

Committee reiterates opposition...

the propriety of the proposed expenditure of War Memorial funds for the following reasons:

1. A commercial liquor license is not authorized under applicable zoning.

The War Memorial Center is situated within 500 feet of the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church and is located in a highly restricted area zoned for residences only. The Center operates under the zoning classification of a Community Service District and the applicable zoning regulations governing the War Memorial Association do not authorize the operation of a commercial liquor license in a Community Service District.

Article VII of the zoning ordinance reads in part:

"The CS Community Service Districts as herein established are intended to provide suitable locations for desirable and necessary public activities which serve the residents of the city and to limit the location, size and character of such uses so that the activity which they generate does not become a nuisance and will not overburden facilities of the city.

The principal permitted uses under the ordinance include schools, churches, community and cultural centers, municipal buildings, hospitals and accessory buildings.

A Commercial and Cultural Center is defined under Section 201-12 of Article II of the zoning ordinance as follows:

"Community and Cultural Centers: Is a use conducted by a non profit organization which serve educational, cultural and recreational needs of the residents of the community."

In our opinion, the operation of a commercial liquor license is obviously not contemplated or intended in a cultural center by the above quoted language of the Community Service District ordinance.

2. A commercial liquor license would result in further commercialization.

A commercial public liquor license would inevitably result in further commercialization of the Center's activities, which is neither necessary to the Center financially nor desirable from the standpoint of the Farms' residents. On July 31, 1985, according to its audited financial statements, the Association had a net worth in excess of $5,000,000, including listed securities with a market value of more than $4,000,000; and according to the Center's 1984 Annual Report the Association accommodated 4,075 functions (of which 96 were community functions) attended by over 195,000 people and served over 83,000 meals. Therefore, further commercialization at the Center is neither necessary to the Center financially nor desirable for the best interest of the community.

3. No real need is shown for commercial liquor license.

There has been no convincing showing by the Association of a real need for a commercial liquor license at the War Memorial Center. The Center has been successfully operated for over 30 years without a commercial liquor license and it should be possible for the Association's management to effectively control the use of alcohol on its premises on the present basis of using special 24-hour liquor permits rather than operating a commercial liquor license.

4. The expenditure of War Memorial funds is not prudent investment.

The Association's offer expressly agrees that if the necessary approvals by the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council and the Liquor Control Commission are not obtained, no part of the purchase price will be refunded. Therefore, by proceeding with the purchase of a commercial liquor license under these conditions the officers and directors of the Association would be risking a substantial loss of War Memorial funds. If the Association is unable to operate the commercial liquor license at the Center, for whatever reason, there is no assurance the Association would be able to locate a purchaser for the resale of the license at a satisfactory price. Such a highly speculative investment of War Memorial funds, in our opinion, would not be consistent with nor reflect prudent business judgment on the part of the officers and directors of the War Memorial Association.

5. The expenditure assumes approval by Farms council.

The proposed expenditure to purchase the Bronze Door license is apparently based upon the assumption that the Grosse Pointe Farms Council will approve the acquisition of the commercial liquor license by the Association without regard for the rights of the many long-time residents of the community who are opposed to a commercial liquor license at the Center in a residential neighborhood and who have signed petitions expressing their views against such a license and even though the Council has denied such approval on two prior occasions.

6. Dram shop insurance expense would be substantial.

The ownership and operation of a commercial liquor license by the War Memorial would result in substantial additional operational expense, including the cost of insurance protection under the so-called "Dram Shop Act." We have been informed that the cost of insurance protection under the Dram Shop Act at the Country Club of Detroit amounts to approximately $100,000 per year.

The members of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club have just received a notice dated Oct. 17 advising of a dues increase stating in part:

"The principal reason for this (dues) increase is an unprecedented rise of $100,000 in the annual renewal premiums for all forms of insurance coverage which the Club must carry. A major part of this increase is attributable to the cost of liability coverage associated with bar service under Michigan's Dram Shop Act."

7. Dram Shop Act litigation could involve city.

In this connection the October issue of "Risk Management," a publication by the Michigan Municipal League, contains the following precautionary advice with respect to the potential legal exposure of municipalities to claims arising under the Dram Shop Act:

"... Municipal officials must be aware of this potential source of large loss and take steps to avoid it. Any connection with the sale of alcohol exposes the municipality to a potential law suit."

8. Offer to purchase liquor license should be withdrawn.

For the foregoing reasons, among others, the undersigned urge the officers and directors of the War Memorial Association to seriously reconsider and withdraw its offer to purchase the Bronze Door commercial Class C liquor license. This would be in the best interests of the residents of the community and the War Memorial Association.

The officers and directors should refrain from investing War Memorial funds in such a highly speculative investment in an attempt to obtain a commercial liquor license, which, if successful, would lead to further commercialization of the Center.

Furthermore, in any event, under the circumstances, such an investment would not, in the opinion of the undersigned, qualify as a proper investment under the prudent man rule which is generally applied by the courts of officers and directors of public corporations.

Car stolen on test drive

A Farms man had a surprise Oct. 17 when a prospective customer for his brother's car made off with the vehicle.

Under pretext of listening to the engine of the '79 Cadillac Fleetwood, the customer sat in the driver's seat, then sprayed something the Farms man believed to be Mace and drove away, according to Farms police reports.

The customer had been dropped off at the seller's home by a person in an orange Gremlin. The seller did not see the Gremlin's license plate.

Leukemia group begins toy drive

The Annual Toy Drive is now underway at Children's Leukemia Foundation with new toys being collected for distribution at local hospitals and treatment centers for children with leukemia and other serious blood disorders.

The tests undergone by the youngsters are administered to monitor their disease course and determine appropriate medications. Although necessary, these tests are painful. Often, the only way to replace those tears with smiles is through the gift of a toy.

For over three decades, the foundation has been sending toys to hospitals throughout the state.

For sanitary reasons, only new toys can be accepted. Toys are needed in all price ranges, for all ages of children. Toys should not be gift wrapped.

Donations may be sent to the Children's Leukemia Foundation office at 19022 West 10 Mile Road, between Southfield and Evergreen roads. Drop-offs may be made between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

For more information, call 353-8222.

CRISSMAN FOR COUNCIL

Grosse Pointe Park

As a councilwoman, I will independently evaluate issues and vote in accordance with the needs of our community.

1. Public Safety — I am in favor of Public Safety, as it is responsive to the needs of citizens and merchants for an enhanced police presence. Increased services will be provided in a cost effective way: (1) rapid and efficient management of fire calls; (2) increased personnel for EMS; (3) additional patrol cars for residential areas, of particular importance at night; (4) foot and/or scooter patrol for protection of commercial areas; (5) radar enforcement and increased traffic patrol to correct traffic abuses. Residents should not be bullied out of better services for their tax dollars by select special interest groups.

2. Protection of Natural Resources — A well integrated elm management program is essential to preserve the character of the Park and our property values. Such a program must include: (1) prophylactic treatment for healthy trees, including insecticide spraying to combat the elm bark beetle; (2) strict sanitation measures for severely diseased trees, including prompt girdling and removal, as well as judicious use of cactodylic acid; and (3) a therapeutic program to save minimally diseased trees, including twice yearly inspections of both public and private trees, trimming, and fungicide injection.

Park to regulate alarm systems

By Pat Paholsky

The number of false burglar alarms prompted the Park council to adopt an ordinance regulating alarm systems connected to the police or fire departments. The ordinance, to take effect Dec. 1, will require owners of such systems to obtain a license from the police department.

The ordinance review committee will submit a recommendation regarding license fees at the next meeting, Oct. 28. The ordinance will apply to existing and new systems.

Police Chief Richard Caretti said more than 500 false alarms have been recorded for this year. "That's a lot of man hours involved in responding to these false alarms," he said.

The ordinance will provide that an owner be notified after three false alarms in one calendar year. After four false alarms, the owner will be required to have the system inspected by a licensed alarm system contractor and to submit a written report to the police chief. The report must specify the probable cause of the false alarms and the steps taken to correct the situation. If the owner does not submit a report, the license may be revoked.

The ordinance was one of seven adopted at the Oct. 14 meeting. The others will make it a misdemeanor to:

1. Possess, sell or use fireworks;
2. Urinate in public;
3. Write a check without sufficient funds;
4. Drive or ride in the front seat of a motor vehicle without being secured by a seat belt;
5. Transport a child under 1 year old in a motor vehicle who is not secured in a child restraint system; and
6. Permit an automatic alarm system to light up or sound continuously for more than 30 minutes.

The ordinances mirror state law and Councilman Mark Valente, who serves on the ordinance review committee, said the purpose of adopting them on the local level enables the city to try such cases in its municipal court rather than going to Detroit.

City attorney Herold McC. Deason said the passage of the ordinances will "free up a considerable amount of man hours with our detective department and it eases the burden of the police as well as the prosecuting office."

Store robbed

The Sears store at Seven Mile and Mack was broken into twice in four days last week. Both times a thief headed for the stock room and took items off the shelves. It is not clear at this time whether the breakings and enterings were related.

During the night of Oct. 13, someone pried open the west doors, entered the store and took three pieces of electronic equipment from the stockroom. According to the Farms police report, the value of the items was approximately $230.

Later in the week, during the night of Oct. 17, another attempt was made to force the west doors. This time, entry was made through the loading dock doors at the rear of the building, according to the report. The thief took seven videocassette recorders, worth about $2,000, a pearl necklace, 15 jewelry boxes and a television set.

The police were able to lift several latent fingerprints from the scene.

Too gross for Grosse Pointe?

A Halloween treat

If you'd like a real visual treat, stroll by the terrific Halloween display on the windows of the Book Village in the Village.

Painted by Grosse Pointe Theater member Kathy Gray-bruck, her depiction of a witch against a full moon, Jack o'Lantern and cornstalks is a real show-stopper.

The Book Village's Gwen Samuels reports that hundreds of people have stopped by, or come into the store to admire the art work.

Take a look and judge for yourself.

Beauty from above

Well, I know one item this columnist is adding to his Christmas list. A copy of Dale Fisher's "Detroit" would certainly be welcome under my Christmas tree.

Hard cover and 178 pages long, it's filled with the most beautiful aerial photographs of downtown and metropolitan Detroit I've ever seen.

Fisher covers it all, from ore carriers smashing through the ice on the Detroit River to a packed U of M stadium to mansions dotting the shoreline of Grosse Pointe.

Ann Arbor-born Fisher, who learned his craft as an aerial photographer with the Navy, has succeeded in capturing a view of Detroit seldom seen before.

Detroit has been around since 1701, but I doubt it's ever looked as stunning as it does in Dale Fisher's "Detroit."

To the rescue

At least one Woods public safety officer had his hands full last week. PSO Phil Hamel made an emergency run to a local supermarket to help a distraught and embarrassed mother extricate her child from a gum machine.

Seems the little eager beaver put a quarter into the machine and then stuck his hand up inside to help the prize come out a bit quicker. The problem was his hand wouldn't come out either.

Hamel was able to pull the locking mechanism from the machine with a slam hammer and brought the crisis to an end. No serious injuries were reported, just some minor bruising and swelling.

Way to go, Phil!

With the autumn leaves come the holiday marts that lead the way to Christmas. Organizers of the Bon Secours Christmas Mart, from the left, Anne Lemhagen, chairman of the gift shop; Karen Mourad, co-chairman of the Christmas Mart; Mary Jo DuMouchelle, co-chairman of the gift shop; and Donna Ryan, co-chairman of the Christmas Mart; met recently at Lemhagen's home to discuss plans for the event planned for Nov. 3 and 4.

Above is the Boutique Group of the Cottage Hospital Auxiliary's Gift Shop Guild. This special group of ladies has worked all year long to create one-of-a-kind boutique items for their annual Holiday Mart to be held Saturday, Nov. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Center.

Hospital holiday marts offer special shopping opportunity

Bon Secours Christmas Mart

You arrive and hand your keys to the valet parking attendant. Inside you sample wine and cheese in a fantasy-land atmosphere.

Is this an exclusive cocktail party? No, you have just arrived at the Bon Secours Christmas Mart, where customers are treated as honored guests.

An annual tradition, the Christmas Mart is an extension of the hospital gift shop. But Karen Mourad and Donna Ryan, the co-chairmen for the event, emphasize the merchandise is not what you would expect to find in a hospital gift shop.

"It's not a hospital gift shop, but a gift shop in a hospital. We are going to have something for everybody," Mourad said.

If valet parking and refreshments (coffee and cookies before 4 p.m. and wine and cheese after) are not enough to distinguish this shopping event, consider the opportunity to pay with Visa and Mastercard or the package pickup service.

As you shop your way through the mart, your purchases will be collected for you near the door — freeing your hands to examine more purchases.

The Bon Secours Christmas Mart will feature 11 booths, each decorated like a giant Christmas package. Preparations are already underway for the Nov. 3 and 4 event in the hospital Science Hall.

"The magic has begun," said Anne Lemhagen, chairman of the Bon Secours Gift Shop.

Shoppers will be offered a mixture of handmade items produced by Bon Secours Assistance League members and special purchases. The gift shop staff handles the merchandise purchasing.

"We go out of our way to find items that we didn't have last year," Lemhagen said.

One feature among many at the fair will be the children's booth, where handknit and crocheted articles of clothing will be offered. There will also be hand-smocked dresses. A special item, only available during the Christmas shopping season, is the pajamas with toys. These unusual nightclothes have a toy packaged with them to match the picture emblazoned on the front of the shirt.

"It's a grandmother trap," Lemhagen said.

Other highlights include a lingerie booth — where the wares will be modeled by members of the Assistance League. The merchandise will range from glamorous to flannel.

The toy booth will offer educational and "plain fun" toys. Lemhagen pointed out that the toys had been selected either to entertain a hospitalized child, or to delight any child under the Christmas tree on the morning of Dec. 25.

The brass booth will offer unique and intriguing items from candlesticks to a brass porpoise sculpture. Items in glass will range from crystal to a glass tea pot from the Museum of Modern Art.

If French bread baskets and turkey platters are your preference, the pottery booth will satisfy your itch.

"I think we have the largest selection of Christmas ornaments available anywhere," Mourad

Cottage Hospital Holiday Mart

The Cottage Hospital Gift Shop Guild Holiday Mart is the shopping experience too big to be held at the hospital on Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms. Therefore, it will be held on Saturday, Nov. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Crystal Ballroom at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Dr.

The first Cottage Hospital Holiday Mart was held nearly 30 years ago to showcase the hospital gift shop merchandise. It has grown over the years to include specialty boutiques and many unusual handcrafted items. Joyce Rock and Margaret Layson are co-chairmen for this year's fair.

"About 30 percent of the things available this year were made by our members," Rock said.

Profits from the mart benefit specific areas of the hospital. This year, the Gift Shop Guild hopes to purchase two or three Holter heart monitors.

Holter heart monitors are small, portable recording devices worn by the patient for 24 hours to monitor possible irregularities in the heartbeat. Each monitor costs about $2,500 and the guild hopes to purchase two or three from the Holiday Mart proceeds.

"Last year, we made almost $8,000," Rock said. "We have had very good support from the merchants who donate raffle prizes and our members."

A raffle for many beautiful gifts donated by local merchants will be held at 3 p.m., just before the mart closes. Raffle tickets are on sale now at the Cottage Hospital Gift Shop, and will also be available at the mart. You need not be present to win.

Among the items featured in this year's Holiday Mart are toys, small gifts, attractive lingerie, Christmas decorations, stylish jewelry, cards and stationery, books, unpredictable attic treasures, and tempting baked goods.

A special group of women has worked all year long to create one-of-a-kind boutique items.

"They work every Monday, year around making afghans, angels and other Christmas items," Rock said. "Cottage Cuisine," the hospital auxiliary cookbook, will also be available at the mart. The cost for this favorite recipe collection is $7, and is tax deductible.

The mart includes many items now featured in the Cottage Hospital Gift Shop. The gift shop, located in the main corridor of the hospital, has recently been enlarged and redecorated. Several new lines of merchandise and a refrigerator of fresh flowers are among the additions to the shop.

The Gift Shop Guild has 120 members. Committee heads for the Holiday Mart are Inez Mullaney and Shirley Lewis, raffle tickets; Margaret Layson, raffle prizes; Liz Groehn, small gifts and gift shop chairman; Charlotte Moreland, boutique; Gladys Gies, jewelry; Betty Theuerkorn and Adele Theuerkorn, toys; Maryon Sibilsky, lingerie; Peg Noble and Mil Marshall, attic treasures; Margaret Layson, stationery; Dorothy Newhouse and B.R. Maile, baked goods; Irene Smith, books; and Evelyn Skinner, treasurer.

LCW sponsoring Interlochen benefit concert

The League of Catholic Women of Detroit will present the Interlochen Arts Academy Orchestra in a benefit concert Thursday, Nov. 21, at 8 p.m. at Detroit's Orchestra Hall. Proceeds from his "Helping Hands-Helping Children" benefit will help support Casa Maria and Peter Claver Community Centers and other league programs for disadvantaged youth and families.

Tickets are available at the league, Orchestra Hall and all Ticket World outlets. Benefactor tickets are $125 for two and Patron tickets are $80 for two. Other prices are $15 and $10 each. Students may purchase $10 tickets for $5. Special prices for groups of 20 or more are available by calling the league at (313) 831-1000.

The musical benefit was announced by its chairman, Maria Valente, at a kick-off party hosted by Mr. and Mrs. William Markley of Bloomfield Hills. "This year's concert promises to surpass the success of last year's," Valente told the nearly 200 guests and league members at the party.

The program will present melodic works by Dvorak and Ravel and will feature talented Interlochen students in solo performances, one of which will be Vinicio Meza who will perform "Concertina for Clarinet and Orchestra" composed by Carl Maria von Weber.

"How appropriate," said President Marilyn Lundy, "that the talents of gifted young people who have had the opportunity for personal development can be used to generate funds to assist the development of youth who may have similar talents, but otherwise no opportunity for development."

The prestigious Interlochen Arts Academy draws talented young musicians from all across the United States and from many foreign countries. The academy offers intensive fine arts study and an excellent academic program, in addition to its National Music Camp. The 100 young musicians who comprise the Academy's orchestra annually travel throughout Michigan.

The conductor for their Detroit appearance will be Uri Mayer who is in his fourth season as music director and principal conductor with the Edmunton Symphony Orchestra. Mayer received the Best Orchestral Recording award for his recording of "Orchestral Suites of the British Isles."

The League of Catholic Women of Detroit is a non-profit organization which provides a variety of services for disadvantaged youth, families and senior citizens. In addition to Casa Maria and Peter Claver Community Centers, the league operates other agencies and programs, including Barst Human Services, Project Transition and Vistas Nuevas Head Start. Established in 1906, the league has over 11,000 members in the Detroit metropolitan area.

League members are looking for area families to host the Interlochen students. If you would like to participate, call Maria Valente at 882-3696.

Barbara Porbe: Grosse Pointe's best kept musical secret comes forth

The name, Porbe, is familiar to musical connoisseurs in the Detroit area. Philip Probe is a well-known violinist with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. But how many people know that Porbe's wife, Barbara, is a virtuoso musician in her own right? Originally from California, Barbara has played with several professional orchestras, including the National Orchestra in Washington, D.C., and the Cincinnati Orchestra, where she was first violin.

The Porbes make their home with their four children in Grosse Pointe Park. On Nov. 3, Barbara will appear with Grosse Pointe Virginia Shover, and guest artist Michael Stockdale in the opening concert of the 11th season of Music for a While at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford house on Lakeshore. Shover will play piano and Stockdale will play guitar. The trio will perform works by Bach, Bartok, Ponce, Debussy and Veracini.

"The Debussy is a great challenge," Barbara said. "It will be the first time I have performed it." She names Brahms as her favorite composer, but has found a special challenge in the Debussy because it is so different from the music she plays most often.

"It is so opposite from Brahms," she said. "It is lighter and there are such quick changes of mood. There is so much lightness about it, it is very listenable."

Barbara took up the violin when she was 9 years old, only to have her musical development interrupted by an accident about a year later.

"I fell and fractured my skull,"

Pointer of Interest

she said. "That took away a whole year. They made me stay in bed. It was like starting over."

But when she started again at the age of 11, she had the good fortune to come under the tutelage of Vera Barstow, one of the better known violin teachers of her period.

Barstow took students of all ages, from nine to 10-year-olds, to adults.

"I can remember seeing one gentleman who was 65," Barbara said. "He had a Stradivarius."

Today, Barstow's students play with nearly every major orchestra in the United States, Barbara said.

The regime was a stern one for a young teenager. Barbara practiced two hours each day. She attended two lessons each week and had rehearsals with the training orchestra she belonged to twice a week. If that wasn't enough, she spent all day every Sunday playing chamber music. However, her determined studies led to her gaining the prestigious Coleman Chamber Music Award in 1950.

"My mother pushed me," Porbe said. "But I don't regret it. I spent summers living at my teacher's house."

After high school, Barbara received a full scholarship to the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music. However, she never graduated. After just two years of study, she won a chair in a professional orchestra and left school.

She married Philip during his senior year at the University of Southern California. The two then went together to play with the Cincinnati Orchestra, he in the viola section, she in the violins.

The Porbes played together in Cincinnati for four years before they came to Detroit when Philip joined the DSO. Unfortunately, there wasn't a position open in the violin section, so Barbara temporarily gave up professional music.

However, over the years, she didn't let her skills slip. In 1981-82 she acted as a permanent substitute, playing with the DSO for a full year. With the exception of about five years, she has continuously taken private students and has played for local concerts through her church, Grosse Pointe Memorial, and other organizations.

"I could never quit practicing," she said. "It's too much like breathing for me. I practice for the sheer joy of it."

Actually, she believes that she has practiced more since she left the symphony-system, then when she was in it. She has more time now.

"It's hard to come home (from a symphony rehearsal) and have to get dinner over with and get the babies in bed and still have to practice."

Barbara's transition from music student to professional symphony musician was deceptively easy when viewed in the context of today's stiff competition for symphony seats.

"The audition process has changed," she said. "In those days, the conductor ran everything. I went to New York and auditioned for Howard Mitchell (then conductor and musical director of the National Symphony) in his hotel. I played for about 45 minutes. Now days, there are so many people you have to go through. First there is the orchestra committee, made up of the first chair players."

Barbara pointed out that a musician auditioning for the DSO today must pass the preliminary and semi-final auditions before he or she even sees the conductor. Then, in the final round, the conductor sits in and listens. "His vote is the deciding one," she said.

The effect is a system that demands a higher level of competition among the aspirants. For one thing, there are a lot more musicians trying out today than there were when Barbara passed her first audition.

"There may be 45 people auditioning for one chair now," she said. "When I auditioned for the National Symphony, there were no more than 10. There may be some luck to it. It may depend on how you feel that day, or maybe someone else is having a good day."

This past summer, Barbara had the honor of playing at the Carmel Bach Festival in California. It was a special thrill to go back to her home state and play in one of the top Bach festivals in the nation, she said.

In teaching her private students, Porbe remembers how hard it was for her to give up so much of her social time to practice and playing when she was young. She demands a certain amount of dedication from her students, but doesn't demand the same level of sacrifice that she gave as a child.

"I won't take a student unless they promise to practice for at least a half hour a day. The ones who are really interested will do more on their own. But if they won't practice at least a half hour, it doesn't do any good."

One student, taught by both the Porbes, has just graduated from a prestigious music school and will soon begin playing with the Phoenix Symphony Orchestra.

Mickey Kemp was an ideal student, Barbara said. "She worked very hard."

Barbara quotes her husband on the amount of talent needed to become a musician.

"He always says it takes 90 percent determination and 10 percent talent," Barbara said. "There are kids who learn so well, who don't have much natural ability. The violin is very demanding of coordination. But many students achieve surprisingly high levels. It depends on the personality and how much they can discipline themselves."

To hear Barbara play at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House on Nov. 3, at 3 p.m., you must make advance reservations by calling 884-7815, or 885-8110. Tickets may be ordered by sending a check and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Music for a While, 481 Hidden Lane, Grosse Pointe Woods, Mich. 48236.

Nutritious fish are the 'catch of the day'

Fast growing in popularity, because of its adaptability to many cooking techniques, fish can be delicious and satisfying to appetite and taste. Fish products are highly nutritious and are excellent means of obtaining dietary essentials, like a high percentage of protein in an easily digestible form. What a blessing fish is to those who like to eat well, but must watch their calories and cholesterol.

White-fleshed fish such as flounder, sole and ocean perch, are often classified as "lean." Fish with colored flesh, such as salmon, bluefish and red snapper are known as the "fat" fishes. But the fat in all instances is highly unsaturated. Studies have provided that eating fish can have excellent results in helping reduce the amount of triglycerides and saturated fats included in the diet.

With the endless variety of fresh and frozen fish now available in supermarkets, many marvelous fish entrees can be prepared in minimal time and served without bankrupting the food budget.

The following is a selection of recipes for fish from the low cholesterol, low-calorie, budget-wise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Broiled Haddock with Garlic Sauce

For a wonderful dinner serve Belgian French Fries, steamed green beans and spinach — tomato salad with this wonderful fish for a really delightful dinner.

1 Pkg. (1 pound) frozen haddock fillets, partially thawed
1 Tbsp. flour
2 Tbsp. vegetable oil
1 tsp. minced fresh garlic
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 cup Egg Beaters, well beaten
1 Tbsp. fresh lemon juice

Preheat broiler. Line broiler pan with foil. Dry block of fish with paper towels. Spread flour evenly over fish with fingers. Place fish on prepared broiler pan and brush with one tablespoon of oil.

Broil five inches from heat for 15 minutes. Meanwhile mash garlic and salt to a paste and add with the remaining ingredients to an electric blender: cover and blend at medium speed 10 seconds, until smooth. Pour half of the garlic sauce over fish and broil 2-1/2 minutes. Pour remaining sauce over fish, baste with pan drippings and broil two minutes longer, until light golden crust forms. Serves four.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

Sure, I said over the telephone to Detroit Boat Club rowing coach Chuck Kreger, I'd be glad to come out and watch his junior squad practice. It sounded like a great story, these rowers out of South High school who have more than held their own against older, more experienced competition this season.

The only thing was, Kreger explained, he and his team practice out on Belle Isle . . . at 6:30 in the morning.

No problem, I said. And I kept repeating that to myself as I drove around Belle Isle in the dark one recent Saturday morning, looking for the Detroit Boat Club. When I finally found Kreger and his crew, they weren't out on the water as I'd hoped. Instead, they sat around the DBC locker room, "grounded" by high winds and too-choppy Detroit River waters.

No problem, Kreger told his crew. They could work out on the rowing machine, and after some good-natured grumbling, they did, while I watched and talked to their coach.

Kreger, a former Wayne State University rower, took over the junior team coaching reins this spring, at the request of DBC senior coach, Dr. Rick Bell. "They're a good group of kids," he said. "Although it took a while to get used to them."

The junior squad is composed of South High 10th and 11th graders. Earlier this spring, the Junior 4 of Paul Gryzenia, Jeff Barry, Andy Kosak, Don DelPlace and coxswain Mickey DelPlace, finished third in the 2000 meters in the Toledo International Regatta. It was an upset victory over veteran teams with rowers in their 30s. The Novice 8, which included Kosak, Barry, Scott Adragna, Bill Gryzenia, Jeff LeFebvre, Bob Brisley and coxswain Steve Strup, also placed third at Toledo.

"We usually finish second," Kreger said of his squad, which by fall, also included John Skupien, John Dwaihy, Paul Williams, Todd Hawthorn, Jeff Douglas, Rich Devine, Ted Prayan, Mike Irvine and Kurt Phillips. They haven't competed as often as one might think, but there was a reason, Kreger said.

"I didn't want to take them out until I felt they were ready. Their times have improved; they're about 17:30 for 3 1/2 miles and that's pretty good for their age," he explained.

Pretty good?

They finished second to University of Michigan rowers in Mount Clemens earlier this month and against some of the east's finest prep scullers last week in Boston, managed a 24th out of 48 boats. "It was our biggest meet, so I feel pretty good about the finish," Kreger said.

But WHY are they so good?, I wondered.

"Superior coaching," Kreger said with a laugh. "No, really when you get a group of young kids, they are eager to learn and easy to teach. They come in with good attitudes."

And they go out with medals, like coxswain Mickey DelPlace. Mickey was drafted into his position — which calls for him to steer the boat, help keep balance and call stroke counts — when some experienced DBC boats needed a coxswain. "It was great, I just got thrown in and learned about rowing," Mickey said.

It also helps that Mickey and the rest of Kreger's crew have just happened to learn rowing in what amounts to the mecca of rowing in the midwest: the Detroit Boat Club. It's the oldest continuous boat club in the U.S. and the venerable old place just reeks with rowing history, from the trophy room upstairs to the miniature rowing hall of fame which leads the way to the boat storage room and the locker rooms downstairs.

"The Club has some great programs. They sponsor these teams and they make sure the kids get the proper training. And you couldn't find a place with more rowing history," Kreger said.

That all plays a part in setting up a successful rowing team, but it helps to have some natural athletes. And that's exactly what Kreger found at South. There's even a future Olympic rowing possibility on his squad — complete with the size and natural ability one needs to making in world-class rowing — although Kreger wouldn't say who it was.

"These kids are all athletically able. I've got some kids who run track and that's good for cardiovascular conditioning which is important to a rower."

The season is over for Kreger's junior rowers. They'll have to keep in shape and be ready for spring training which begins in March. Other than seeing his rowers report in excellent condition and prepared for another successful season, Kreger said he wouldn't mind just one more thing.

"I'd like to see South High sponsor a rowing team. I think it would generate a lot more interest than just a notice put on the bulletin board asking South kids to come out to the DBC. It's great to race under the boat club colors, but it would be nice to see rowing as a varsity sport."

Especially if it could be as successful as the varsity level as it has been at the club level. Even if they do practice at the highly uncivilized and un-varsity-like hour of 6 a.m.

They've done it again . . .

. . . those phenomenal girls' varsity tennis teams from South High and University Liggett School. They battled last weekend's rain, winds and site changes to continue their state championship streaks. South won its 10th consecutive Class A title, sharing the crown with Ann Arbor Huron; ULS took its sixth straight Class C-D championship.

That's No. 1 singles champ Dawn Martin from ULS (top right). At right, one of the day's competitors looks in on the play at ULS before the rains came and not all the action was on the courts, as these two tennis fans could confirm (if they ever figured out the seeds, that is). South's Class A champs (top left) include left to right, (top row) coach Stephanie Prychitko, sophomore Meg Petersen, junior Anne Nicholson, junior Mary Wachter, senior Noel Berry, senior Susy Ingrao; (front) junior Sarah Mayer, senior Courtenay Kotas, freshman Kathy Rajt, junior Katy Turner and freshman Cathy Wachter.

Blue Devil netters come from behind to win 10th championship

It may not have been as pretty as some of the last nine Class A state championships, but last weekend's tie for the title at Midland may well go down as one of the most thrilling in South High's history. Just ask the lady who's been there for all of them.

"It was probably the most exciting one, I'll say that," chuckled Stephanie Prychitko, after her girls had won their 10th straight state championship by tying Ann Arbor Huron with 24 points. "It was the first year we weren't ahead in the finals since we started the streak. We had to come from behind to win but I'm happy about that."

South was down, 22-24, going into the last match of the tournament. No. 3 doubles. And the No. 3 doubles team of Meg Petersen and Kathy Rajt were tied with their Ann Arbor Pioneer (fifth place finishers) opponents, 3-3, but trailed 3-5 and was down, 15-40, in the tiebreaker.

"Pioneer had a chance to win that third flight and give Huron the championship. I asked Meg if she knew what the score was ... she didn't. They just went out there like they could win it no matter what and they did," Prychitko said.

Petersen and Rajt won the tiebreaker, 7-6, and took the final set, 6-2, to give South the tie with Ann Arbor Huron in the overall match.

The state finals went much as Prychitko had expected, except that South was not seeded in the No. 1 and 2 singles spots and Ann Arbor Huron did better than expected in doubles competition. It was also a match which saw South players extend personal streaks. Noel Berry collected 19 of a possible 20 points in her four years worth of state finals, winning at No. 2 doubles this year for the third time; she also won at No. 4 singles. And the No. 2 doubles duo of Susy Ingrao and Anne Nicholson extended its two-year unbeaten string.

At No. 1 singles, Plymouth Salem's Wendy Gilles defeated Candy Kopetzki, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2. Niki Rival topped Michelle Hurrelbrink of Huron, 7-6, 3-6, 6-2. Huron's Kelly Robinson defeated South's Mary Wachter, 6-0, 6-3, at No. 3 singles, and at No. 4 singles, South's Katy Turner lost to Huron's Kristy Miner, 6-1, 3-6, 6-4.

Berry and Sarah Mayer defeated Jennifer and Tracy Cronin from Birmingham Lahser, 6-0, 6-1, at No. 1 doubles. Ingrao and Nicholson topped Huron's Janet Payne and Amy Sheldeon, 6-2, 6-3; and Petersen and Rajt beat the No. 1 seeds from Pioneer, Karen Irwin and Piper Copeland, 4-6, 7-6, 6-2.

"It was a funny kind of tournament. Because of the weather, the matches started outside and then moved inside and we had to play at different sites all over the Midland area," Prychitko said. "I'm just happy about the way it all turned out."

Amen.

Kickers end great year

South High's varsity soccer team fell to Utica Ford, 2-1, in the third round of the state playoffs last week, ending the squad's finest season in memory.

"This has been the best year since I've been here," said coach John Case. "I was skeptical at the beginning of the year because we had so many new players, including three sophomore starters. But we did much more than I expected ... I'm quite pleased."

The Blue Devils won the Macomb Area Soccer League championship for the first time, ending crosstown rival North High's five-year hold on the title. South finished with an 8-1-1 mark in the league; the Devils were 10-2-2 overall.

Jeff LeFebvre had South's only goal against Utica Ford; Mark Kaczmar drew the lone assist.

Earlier in the week, South defeated Chippewa Valley, 3-2, in playoff action. Kaczmar had two goals and Rudy Cruz, one. Senior captain P.J. Imesch had two assists and LeFebvre, one. On Oct. 16, South topped Mount Clemens, 2-1, on goals from Kaczmar and LeFebvre. Kaczmar and Cruz drew assists.

"I never predict what we'll do in a season because I never know what the other teams are going to have," Case said. "One year can make a terrific difference in talent in this age group. But we did very well and with such a young team, I think we look pretty good for next year."

Homecoming victory

By Jennifer McSorley
South High

The Devils did everything they were supposed to do at last Saturday's Homecoming game. South beat Mount Clemens, 7-6, when junior Don Berschback scored a touchdown in overtime after regulation play ended in a scoreless tie.

It was tough going for South's offense, due to the muddy field. Coach Russ Hepner noted that senior Tim Overby played a good game. Junior Dave Fennon was valuable as the day's long punter; sophomore Mike Paull also made seven or eight punts. Sophomore Doug Lucas kicked the game-winning extra point.

Seniors Jeff Van Tassel, Jeremy Wise and Steve Kinsley led the defense; senior middle linebacker Andy Bedsworth played well. Hepner added. Seniors Bob Holder, Tait Erickson, Jim Reynolds and Jason Colegrove also contributed to the victory.

The win gave South a 4-3 record, 4-2 in the Eastern Michigan League. Should the Devils beat Anchor Bay on Oct. 25, they'll reach their goal of second place; a 5-2 record would place them in second.

The JV fell to Mount Clemens, 27-6, Oct. 16. South had its problems with the Bathers, but did generate some excitement in the first half when sophomore Bryan Jones threw a 57-yard touchdown pass to sophomore Ted Mills.

The JV faces Anchor Bay at home today, Oct. 24, at 4 p.m.

It was not a happy sight last Wednesday as South's freshman football team took its third loss in seven games, 26-0, at Oakwood. Oakwood jumped out to a 16-point lead in the first quarter and South could not recover. The Devils held Oakwood to 10 points in the remaining action. A bright spot was the ball carrying of Steve Rice, who rushed for 72 yards.

Prior to that loss, South beat Anchor Bay, 20-6, on scoring runs of 3, 17 and 37 yards from Rice, Rob Crane and Brad Van Tiem. On defense, Dale Wilson had 8 tackles, Tom Smith added 6 and Lance Harding, 5.

The frosh will travel to North High on Oct. 30. (By Steve Ebner).

CC victories

South's cross country teams traveled to Metropolitan Beach Oct. 15 to face Anchor Bay. It was a muddy course filled with wet ditches, but the South teams survived ... and won. The boys ran well, scoring a 27-35 victory as Matt Winkquist performed well. The girls also took a 22-37 victory. (By Jennifer McSorley).

Cagers cruise

It was a two-win week for all three divisions of girls' basketball at South High last week.

On Oct. 15, the varsity defeated Port Huron Northern, 38-21. Heidi Albrecht led scorers with 11 points and 7 rebounds. Lynn Vismara had 8 points and 7 rebounds and Kelly Buchanan had 10 rebounds.

Albrecht led again on Oct. 17, with 19 points, 5 assists and 6 steals in South's 62-25 win over Roseville. Patty Hess scored 16 points and had 8 rebounds and Vismara had 10 points and 6 steals.

The JV squad topped Port Huron Northern, 27-19. Megan Keller had 7 points and 8 rebounds, Patty Pentecost had 6 points and Chris Schulte had 6.

The girls beat Roseville, 41-21, on Oct. 17. Schulte led with 13 points and 13 rebounds. Stephanie Dinka scored 8 points and had 3 assists; Keller added 11 rebounds. (By Jennifer McSorley).

South's nine graders won their fifth straight game last week, running their record to 7-3.

The Devils beat Fraser, 45-19, as Heather Adragna scored 9 points and added 8 steals. Sarah Verlinde scored 7; Leigh Leonard and Marlinda Wilcher each had 6. Sarah Heck and Kathy McGrath played well.

South's fifth straight win came at the expense of Warren Lincoln, 44-13. South led 25-5 at the half and never looked back. Adragna had 14 points, Maya Davis scored 6 and had 5 rebounds, Lorrie Geist grabbed 7 rebounds. Laura DeMercurio, Megan Nelson and Amy Steben played sound defense.

"Each girl has played almost every quarter of each game and it is beginning to show ... they're really improving," commented coach Al Devine.

Swimmers win again

South's girls' swim team extended its victory count to four, defeating East Detroit last week. The girls are now 4-1. "The team is the best we've had in a long time," said Margaret Eckel. "Right now, our goal is to beat North and top last year's accomplishments in the states."

Prior to the East Detroit victory, South beat Mount Clemens, 120-36. Nancy Vettorello and Karen Rentschler were winners against Mount Clemens. Allison Crissman took the diving, scoring 122 points more than the second place finisher.

The girls swim Warren Woods Tower on Oct. 31 and will be at home against top-rated Ann Arbor Huron on Nov. 7. (By Steve Ebner).

Full of spirit

Following a spirited Homecoming week at South, awards were made at the game on Saturday. The sophomores took the coveted Spirit Jug and also were named "Best Dressed." The seniors were awarded "Best Banner" and "Most Original," and the freshmen took the "Best Float" honors.

They went down fighting, but last week's 2-1 loss to Utica Ford spelled the end to South's soccer season. The competition (above) was fierce as the teams battled it out in the rain last Friday in the regionals.

ULS sports

Host ULS wins 6th straight title

The weather didn't cooperate but everything else went University Liggett School's way last weekend as the host Lady Knights won their sixth consecutive Class C-D state tennis title. ULS had 28 points, followed by runner-up Detroit Country Day School with 16 and North Muskegon with 10.

ULS swept all seven flights in the two-day tournament. Torrential rains forced tournament officials to move the matches indoors to the Eastpointe Racquet Club. But even the change in sites didn't deter from ULS's assault on the state title.

No. 1 singles star Dawn Martin won her flight; she was an early-season transfer and one of the most widely-watched players of the tournament. Other winners were Pam Ali, at No. 2 singles; Elena Hunt, at No. 3 singles; and Amina Ali, at No. 4 singles. Marie Ali and Shefali Sharma were victorious at No. 1 doubles; Charu Nautiyal and Paula Rodriguez won at No. 2 doubles and Kathy Bianchi and Karen Rahm were state champions at No. 3 doubles.

In earlier action, ULS played an exciting match against rival South High. ULS's Pam Ali won her No. 2 singles match to tie South and her sister Amina fought against muscle cramps and went to several tie-breakers in her No. 4 singles match before finally falling.

On Oct. 8, ULS defeated Grand Blanc, 7-0, thanks to the win at No. 1 doubles by Shefali Sharma and Marie Ali. Coach Bob Hartwick's team faced Class A Ann Arbor Huron, losing 4-3, on Oct. 3. Freshman sensation Dawn Martin won at No. 1 singles; Rodriguez and Nautiyal won at No. 2 doubles, as did the aggressive doubles duo of Bianchi and Rahm.

A one goal loss

By David Schwab
ULS

The ULS varsity soccer team played just one game last week, but it was a tough one. It was the second round of the state tournament and once again, pitted ULS against Cranbrook — a rematch of last year's game which lasted 110 minutes and ended in a shoot-out loss.

The Knights came out strong, but after a scoreless 16 minutes, Cranbrook scored on a corner kick. Junior goalkeeper Brian Curtis kept Cranbrook off the board and ULS trained 1-0 at the half.

With the strong wind at their backs in the second half, ULS came out shooting and pressing the attack. Seventeen minutes later, senior halfback John Birgbauer knotted the score on a penalty kick. Three minutes later, however, the Knights slipped the winning goal into the net. ULS ended up outshooting Cranbrook, 15-13.

"We have nothing to be ashamed of. We played well," Birgbauer said. And coach Backhurst noted, "I have mixed feelings. To be eliminated from the tournament for the second straight year — by one goal again — hurts. However, Cranbrook is a very fine team, the best we've seen in two years."

In previous action, ULS fought Royal Oak Shrine in the first round of the state tournament, winning 2-1, in overtime. Rob Healy had ULS's goal in regulation and sophomore Frank Karabetsos connected on a Birgbauer corner kick to send ULS on to the quarterfinals.

On Oct. 10, the Knights topped MIAC league rival Southfield Christian, 3-2. Junior forward Rob Williams opened the scoring five minutes into the game when he converted a Tony Malcoun cross. Southfield Christian tied it up, but Healy scored from Chip Davis to make it 2-1. After the Eagles tied it again with 17 minutes to play, Healy scored from Kirk Haggarty to give ULS the win. Goalkeeper Mike Agave came up with two great saves in the last minutes.

ULS finished with a 13-3-2 record.

Field hockey title

ULS's girls' varsity field hockey team won a Michigan Secondary Field Hockey League title, earning a 6-0-1 record with three games remaining.

On Oct. 8, the Lady Knights beat Ann Arbor Huron, 3-0. Senior Becky Ingall and junior Susan Judge played well.

Against the Academy of the Sacred Heart on Oct. 10, coach Muriel Brock's team played its most competitive game of the year, winning, 2-0. Sophomore Kathy Petzold and junior Cindy Paul played their best games of the season. Senior Kara Van Dellen and junior captain Laurie Khelokian scored the goals. (By Laura Khelokian).

DCDS downs ULS

On a rainy Oct. 10, the ULS football team reinitiated the traditional ULS/Detroit Country Day School rivalry after last year's fallow season. The well-established DCDS squad, however, proved to be too strong for the rebuilding Knights, 26-0.

The Yellowjackets scored on their first offensive play with a halfback option for 64 yards. Working against this quick deficit, the Knights' offense rolled to the 14 yard line on five plays, but failed to penetrate the endzone. In the second quarter, DCDS opened up its passing game, taking advantage of ULS's young secondary. After a 16-yard touchdown pass and a two-point conversion, the score at half-time was 14-0.

ULS, plagued by injury, was unable to score. The Knights' offense was able to gain significant yardage as freshman Dike Ajiri, who earned a full starting position when junior Mike Isip was injured against Cranbrook, gained an average of close to five yards per carry. Fullback Oscar Alcantara carried the ball 14 times for 27 yards.

The Knights, now 1-3-1 will host Harper Woods on Thursday, Oct. 24, at 4:15 p.m. (By Oscar Alcantara).

Harriers at 9-5

The ULS cross country team went to L'Anse Creuse to a dual meet with their hosts and South Lake, losing to L'Anse Creuse, 18-43, but beating South Lake, 21-35. Seven ULS runners achieved record times for the season, one of whom was front runner Gordie Maitland (18:04).

A week later, the Knights defeated Bethesda 24-31, scoring as well over Oakland Christian, 25-30, but falling to Plymouth Christian in a close 26-29 finish.

The ULS squad ran its last home meet of the season, romping over South Lake 12-26, in spite of rain, mud and cold on Oct. 10. Preparing for the regionals are the top seven runners Gordie Maitland, captain Chris McCabe, Kevin Darby, John Bellamy, Dale Werkema, Joe Jurawicz and Mike Baks. ULS is 9-5 overall.

Golf summary

The ULS varsity golf team dropped two matches, 169-175 to North, on Sept. 24, and 179-180 to Detroit Country Day School on Sept. 26. Sophomore Gordie Stewart shot a 42 against North High. The one stroke loss to DCDS was encouraging as DCDS is currently ranked No. 2 in Class C.

Coach George Montle's team also lost to Cranbrook, 171-186, on Oct. 1. David D'Alessandro shot a strong 41 against Bishop Gallagher on Oct. 2.

The low score for the year was a 35 recorded by Gordie Stewart against Oakland Christian on Sept. 20.

ULS's girls' basketball team traveled to Bethesda, Oct. 10, falling to the undefeated Bethesda team, 38-19.

Star cagers still hoping

The varsity basketball team from Our Lady Star of the Sea has four games left this season and a playoff spot is still a possibility. There's only one catch: the Tunas have to win all four games.

"It's tough, but there's always hope," chuckled coach Kathy Merony.

Star faces East Catholic (after press time) and Pontiac Catholic (Oct. 24) on the road this week before playing St. Clement and St. Anne in two home contests next week.

Last week, the Tunas lost to St. Florian, 44-39. Star's inability to make its free throws while St. Florian hit five of eight in the fourth quarter contributed to the Tunas' downfall.

Beth Allor scored 20 points. Freshman Kristi Widgren, filling in for a starter, played "outstanding" defense, according to Merony.

Star is 3-3 in the Catholic League's A-East Division.

The water's just fine for top-ranked swim teams

By Peggy O'Connor

It's right there in black and white: North High is No. 7 and South High is No. 9 in the latest state girls' swimming rankings. Not that the coaches of the respective squads, Scott Teeters and Tim Kennary, wouldn't believe it if it wasn't in black and white. It's just that while both of them know the talent they've got this season, they are both very much aware that their teams have yet to be really tested.

For North, that means facing Ann Arbor Huron (after press time Oct. 22) and rival South. And making it through the states in good shape.

"If we finish in the top eight, I'll be happy," Teeters said one recent Friday as he watched his charges in practice. "I don't think we're good enough yet to be state champions or even in that category. I don't think anyone could beat Ann Arbor Pioneer this season, anyway. But they'll graduate some swimmers next year and if everything goes right, I think we could challenge."

No. 7 North is a small team — only 19 of 40 swimmers who came out remained in the program — and a very young team with no seniors. Teeters claims he doesn't have the depth he'd like and the strength he wants in the sprint events. "If you have a good sprint team, you have the advantage in the states. We've got some work to do . . ."

But North looks strong in many areas . . . especially those in which Katie Young swims. Young is just a freshman, but she's already qualified for the states in the 50 free, 200 and 100 free and the 100 fly. She swam in the summer nationals and Teeters calls her a "big addition" to his North squad.

Leading the way for North this year in the 200 free is Helen Mikelic, a former All Pointes club swimmer who recorded a lifetime best 2:04 on Oct. 10. Camey Mader and co-captain Kathy Kish are at 2:09 in that event, and Ann Verona also adds depth in the 200.

Already qualified for the 200 individual medley in the states are Sandy Smith and Laura Verona, also with lifetime bests, according to Teeters.

Other top Lady Norsemen include sophomore Nancy Woods in the breaststroke and the 200 IM; Brigid Brooks in the 200 IM; and Nora Brooks, a freshman who's just off the qualifying times in the 50 freestyle with her 26:08. North is also strong in the breaststroke events. Smith is an All-American in that event and just five-tenths off the Olympic trial time . . . with two years left at North to achieve that mark.

"She's the fastest breast-stroker in Michigan. But she knows she's got tough competition ahead," Teeters said.

Diver Ellen Nelson has scored well this year, despite the disadvantage of competing in the shadow of one of the state's best divers, South's Allison Crissman. "She's sharp and she trains all year. It has really helped make her the diver she is," Teeters added.

The fierce competitive spirit that exists between North and South may have even helped Nelson, as it has other members of the North swim squad.

"It's an intense rivalry, that's for sure. We beat them in the fall invitational, but that didn't give us an indication of what each team could do," Teeters said. "South has a lot of talent; we're finally getting our share over here on this side of town. The girls on both teams know each other from summer competition and they also know what each team is doing during the season. It's quite a competition."

THAT'S EXACTLY what South coach Tim Kennary hopes next month's North-South swim meet will be: a real competition. He chuckled at the mention of the rivalry and agreed with Teeters' assessment that his South team is long on sprinters.

"We're very strong in our relays, too. We can pick up lots of points in our 200 medley relay and 400 freestyle events. Individually, we've got Nancy Vetterello qualifying for the state's in the 50 and 100 free and Kelly Bartsch in the 500 free. And by mid-November, we should have a couple more," Kennary said.

South finished 10th in the state last season and with all but one swimmer back and the highly regarded Crissman picking up a ton of points in diving competition, should be right up there again, Kennary added.

Karen Rentschler is just a few tenths away from qualifying in the backstroke; she's also on the medley relay team going to the states. Kennary said he thinks Erin Kroll should qualify in the 100 breast, as should Vetterello in the butterfly, and Bartsch in the free. Bartsch placed in the 50 free in last season's state finals.

Kennary also points to the strength of his 400 freestyle team of Vetterello, Rentschler, Bartsch and Patti Molloy. Molloy will also try to qualify in the 50 and 100 freestyle.

He also looks to the North-South meet as one in which he hopes to qualify more swimmers for the state finals. "It's going to be tough, that's one thing I know. We've got 18 freshmen and a team of 38 and not everybody has gotten a chance to practice like they should. But we're looking forward to North."

Kennary added that South's goal is to do as well as possible in the states, and to win the Brighton Invitational set for November.

"Basically, I'd just like to see us keep going like we are, keep the girls healthy . . . and keep swimming as well as we can," Kennary said.

Neither team feels the pressure of its lofty, top-10 position.

"They like being ranked," Teeters said of North. "As a team, they feel they have no limits and I think they're right. We'll see how much character they have against Huron, Pioneer and South. Those are all teams that finished in the top 20 in 1984 and they'll all be tough."

"South has the advantage with its sprinters and its two seniors. The difference between a 15-year-old and a 17-year-old is a lot. Those seniors lead by example; they know when to shut up and when to pour it on. We don't have that luxury this year."

But North, like South, has a team full of top swimmers. Neither Teeters or Kennary ignore that "top-10" business, but both realize that it comes down to one thing: post-season performance.

"You've got to get as many ir the states as possible. You can never tell what's going to happen at the states and that has a lot to do with your rankings," Teeters said.

"I'll boil down to what we do against the top teams and in the states," he added. "But my team's not afraid of that. They'd rather have it that way. And I think South feels the same."

Unbeaten North faces 7-0 Clintondale in year's biggest test

By Bill Hoover
North High

Grosse Pointe North's varsity football team, which is undefeated this season and must remain so to enter the state playoffs, suffered a loss in the 33-0 victory over South Lake on Oct. 19 that could be as detrimental to the team as a defeat.

Junior running back Mike Miller, who is averaging 7 yards per carry and is the team's leading rusher, broke his collarbone early in the third quarter and reportedly will miss the remainder of the season.

"Michael means a lot to us; he's an outstanding young man and a great leader," said coach Frank Sumner. "All his teammates have a lot of respect for him and there's no doubt we'll miss him."

At this moment junior Dave Kopitzke is penciled in as Miller's replacement; but Sumner feels that it will be the team, not the individuals, that will win the games. Sumner emphasizes, "There are 52 players on the team and they'll just have to play harder. Injuries are a part of football and we will just have to play over it."

The South Lake game, despite Miller's loss, was a fine performance. North opened the scoring in the second quarter on a 31-yard pass from Craig Como to Steve Pochmara.

Casey Quick's interception, the first of four by North, set up North's next touchdown, which was a 1-yard run by Mike "The Kid" Miller. The point after was again good, and the Norsemen took a 14-0 lead into the locker room at the half.

North's defense and special teams shone in the second half as they accounted for all of North's touchdowns. The first score of the half came on a blocked punt by Dave Kopitzke that was recovered by Dave Justice in the end zone. Como's point after was good, and the Norsemen led 21-0. Minutes later Joe Craparotta picked off a South Lake pass and dashed 25 yards for another North TD. The extra point failed due to a mis-handled snap, and North led 27-0.

The final score of the game came on a 52-yard punt return by Steve Pochmara.

Offensively, Miller rushed for 69 yards and one touchdown and Craig Como completed five passes for 96 yards and one touchdown. North's defense, which held South Lake to 57 yards passing and 5 yards rushing, was led by Justice, who recorded 10 tackles. Rob Brumer recorded a quarterback sack and two behind-the-line tackles while Rob Rochon and Ken Straske each intercepted a pass.

North's next game, which Coach Sumner calls "the biggest game in North's history," will be Friday, Oct. 25, at Clintondale at 7:30 p.m.

JV gridders win; frosh fall

North's JV football team beat South Lake, 13-0. Scoring for the Norsemen was freshman fullback Chuck Schultz, on a 6-yard run, and replacement quarterback Chuck Thomas, on a 25-yard run. The defensive line did an outstanding job to secure the shutout.

North is 5-2 and will play South High at 4 p.m. Oct. 31.

The frosh lost to Clarkston Sashabaw, 12-0, last week. Kevin McCarron played very well, rushing for more than 100 yards. North's freshman are 1-6 on the year and will next play South at 3:30 p.m. Oct. 30.

CC keeps it up

After a tough loss to South High, North's girls' cross country squad bounced back to finish third out of 12 teams in the Oxford Invitational last week. North has five runners in the top 25; Sandy Smith finished in 10th place.

On Oct. 15, North defeated L'Anse Creuse 20-42, placing runners in eight of the top 10. Christy Drummy and Smith finished first and second, respectively.

The girls ended regular season competition on Oct. 17 by beating Clintondale and Regina by 35 points. North swept the top 10 spots; Drummy finished first. The girls' regular season record was 9-2.

The boys' team won a pair of races last week. The Norsemen topped Clintondale on Oct. 15, by eight points. John Van Syckle and Adrian Weyhing, North's stalwarts all season, led the victory. Against Clintondale, Van Syckle and Weyhing tied for first as North took eight of the top nine spots and won, 17-45. (By Josh Abbott).

Cagers split

North High

North's varsity basketball team routed Bi-county opponent Lakeview last week, but dropped a game to Clarkston.

The Lady Norsemen faced Clarkston on the road and were defeated, 57-39. North "had trouble scoring against the taller Clarkston team," commented Coach Gary Bennett. Sophomore Robin Wheatley and junior Barbie Loeher each had 10 points. Loeher had seven steals.

North destroyed the Lakeview Huskies on Oct. 17, 50-27. Bennett said the girls played "outstanding full-court pressure defense. Junior Leslie Talos led North with 14 points. Sue Nichols has 12 rebounds and Loeher had 6 assists.

The cagers' record now stands at 5-6 and 2-2 in Bi-county. They play at home against South Lake on Oct. 24.

The Lady Norsemen JV basketball team split its two games last week, but a win over Bi-county rival Lakeview helped raise its league record to 4-0 (6-5 overall).

The JV traveled to Clarkston on Oct. 15. The girls fell behind 21-19 at halftime and could never manage to overtake a tough Clarkston team. The 45-37 loss dropped North's overall record to 5-5. Nicole Didur led the Lady Norsemen with 9 points.

North's ninth grade basketball team took a 24-10 lead at the half. They cruised through the second half and beat the Huskies, 47-20. Didur had 10 points and Kristen Eschenbach and Julie Cook had 9 and 8 points, respectively.

The JV hosts South Lake on Oct. 24.

North's nine grade basketball team continued its outstanding play with a pair of victories last week, improving its record to 10-2.

On Oct. 15, the freshmen beat East Detroit Kelly 40-21. Mary Spiewak sank six of seven shots and led the Lady Norsemen with 12 points. Heather Mergos scored 10 points and Kris Salive had 6. Kari Anrewes grabbed 5 rebounds and Spiewak pulled down 4. North's lamey. The senior halfback has rushed 75 times for 635 yards and 12 touchdowns, and by press time, had amassed 1,125 total yards on offense. The Norsemen will rest much of their hopes on quarterback Craig Como and junior tailback Bill Smith.

This game was to have been the chance to see two great backs compete against each other: Bellamy and North's ground-gainer, Mike Miller. But Miller is out for the season with a broken collarbone he received during North's 33-0 victory over South Lake last Saturday. Until his injury, Miller had rushed for 927 yards on 135 carries, averaging 6.9 yards per carry and scoring 9 touchdowns.

Smith has rushed for 348 yards on 50 carries for North this season, averaging 7.0 yards per carry and scoring three touchdowns. Senior quarterback Como is 35 for 79, with 7 touchdowns and 693 yards passing. He also has rushed 32 times for 11 yards and 3 touchdowns.

Even without the Bellamy-Miller showcase, this match-up promises to be one of North's biggest games in its history. And the Norsemen wouldn't mind seeing a large turnout of friendly faces in the crowd tomorrow night as they play for a league title and a playoff spot.

North High graduate Dave Waldeck captured the University of Michigan All-Campus Table Tennis championship recently, beating three challengers without losing a game. Waldeck is a sophomore in the U-M College of Engineering. As a Norseman, he performed for the varsity baseball and soccer teams, in addition to helping the North Table Tennis team finish third in state competition in 1984.

A trio of North soccer products has helped lead Kalamazoo College's men's soccer team to a No. 15 ranking in NCAA Division III. Sophomore Marc Tirikian is the squad's scoring leader with 30 goals in 13 games; he also has eight assists. Tirikian broke the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association single-season scoring record by scoring his 16th goal in a league game recently. Co-captains Mirko Mikelic and Paul Regelbrugge are also responsible for the Hornets' success this season. Mikelic, a junior sweeper, had one goal and two assists and junior midfielder Regelbrugge had two goals and five assists in 11 games.

Another Pointe soccer alumnus, University Liggett School graduate Harold Colby, is a member of the 1985 Albion Briton men's varsity soccer team. Colby is a freshman. Last season, the Britons had a 11-4-2 record overall, good for a third place finish in the MIAA.

Participating in the ITCA regional tennis championships this past week was Madeleine Willard, of Grosse Pointe. Prior to that, Willard and her No. 3 doubles partner Robin Gerstein finished in third place in the Cornhusker Invitational in Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 12 and 13. Willard is a 1985 graduate of South High.

Leading the Central Michigan University football team in scoring this season is South High alumnus John DeBoer. DeBoer had 18 points after scoring a touchdown in CMU's 24-17 victory over Western Michigan Oct. 12. DeBoer caught three passes for 90 yards. As of the Western game, the senior split end had caught 18 passes for 325 yards and three touchdowns and was averaging 18.1 yards per catch.

The Last Chance old timers, Grosse Pointe's over 30 soccer league comprised of coaches and alumni from North, South and ULS, won its league last weekend, beating Macomb, 6-0, and finishing the season undefeated.

ULS Knights are on a roll

The University Liggett Middle School varsity soccer team ran its season record to 5-1-1 with victories over Jefferson Junior High.

In the Jefferson match, Anthony Abiragi starred for the Knights with two assists and a goal. The other tallies were by Jason Shannon and Jonathan David. Midfielder Chris Paul and sweeper John Gordon enjoyed exceptional games of defense.

In the St. Paul's contest, the Knights found themselves behind at the half, 1-0, but steady goal-keeping by Ross Kogel and Paul Fozo's strong midfield play helped dominate the center of the field. Abiragi opened the scoring after a clever pass from Davis — his first of two assists. Shannon scored to give Coach Josh Schmidt's team the lead. Bill Wundram crossed to Matt Hoonhout who headed in the third tally. Fullback Max McDuffee carried the ball almost the entire length of the field and completed a perfect pass to Shannon, who obliged with his second goal of the afternoon and sixth of the season.

Coach Schmidt praised his team. "These boys play together beautifully. Our patience on offense, subtle short-passing game and determination on defense give us good balance and the ability to dominate. In seven games we've given up a total of seven goals and scored 25. That's a clear measure of this team's talent."

Great starts

The University Liggett Middle School field hockey teams are off to a great start. The varsity team is undefeated and the JV has two victories.

The season opened with a victory over Academy of the Sacred Heart, 7-0. Left wing Sarah Stackpoole's speed and center-forward Paige Pelok's aggression paid off as they scored four and three goals, respectively.

The JV beat Sacred Heart and Kingswood Cranbrook.

Halloween costume ideas

Take one pair of long johns . . .

By Nancy Parmenter
The best Halloween fun I ever had wasn't as a kid at all. It was a few years ago that my sister and I got the idea to dress up to hand out the candy. You know the eerie, featureless look of a face under a writes. "Inexpensive hats, props and accessory items are often sold at novelty and costume shops." Not to mention thrift shops and grandma's attic. We've got a 1940s fedora worthy of Humphrey Bogart on the top shelf of the hall closet — handy for the many times we are bound to need it.

Okay, we're not even going to bother with the regular stuff like dressing up as rag dolls, pirates or tropical natives. We'll go straight for the great:

The Mummy

You need long johns, glue and a sheet torn into strips about 2 1/2 inches wide. Fasten the strips together with white glue or pins. Have someone wrap the strips around you (after you have your long johns on), tacking them with glue. Walker assures you of authenticity if you tint the strips with a brown fabric dye.

The Shower

In my long years of observing Halloween folkways, I have never seen anyone dressed as a shower. Wear this and you will be assured that no one at the party will duplicate your costume.

You need a hula hoop, a shower curtain, a shower cap, plus whatever you fancy wearing when you get out of the shower. Rig up a harness using dowel rods and rope to support the hula hoop over your shoulders, hang the curtain from the hoop and you're all set.

stocking mask — well, we each got into one leg of a pair of pantyhose and squeezed ourselves into one man's jacket to become a two-headed monster. It amazed the kids and tickled us so much that we laughed ourselves dry. It made the trick-or-treat ritual memorable.

Halloween costumes, so much fun and so taxing on the creativity! Moms whose kids won't settle for K mart plastic are tearing their hair about now. (Actually, it was always dad who brought out the theatrical makeup and false hair at our house.)

A couple of books by a magician/illusionist/ghost effects expert (when he isn't busy being a young executive on the move) can save the day with a slew of wacky homemade costumes. Sure, you can always put a sheet over the kid and call him a ghost, but why not be a mummy or a bunch of grapes?

Mark Walker's ideas are intended to be implemented with ordinary clothing, pins and glue. The basic ingredient seems to be a pair of long johns.

And don't throw away your old hats. "A hat will convey the entire premise of the costume," Walker

Half-Man, Half-Woman

This one requires two complete wardrobes that you're willing to cut in half. On one side, wear half of a man's jacket and pants and a man's shoe. Sew to these (this one also takes a little work) a half dress or skirt and blouse. Wear a woman's shoe on that side. Complete the effect with makeup divided half-and-half.

Bunch of Grapes

Dye your long johns purple. Attach purple balloons with string to safety pins you have scattered tastefully all over the long johns. If you really want to get authentic, wind vines around your legs and arms. This part isn't necessary, though. The important things is to get the balloons bunched together.

The grape idea seems to have real possibilities as a bubble dancer costume. Just replace the long johns with a bathing suit and make the balloons whatever color you like.

Walker can make just about anything out of a box. Television set, dice, robot. Academic or choir robes are good for witches, absent-minded professors, wizards, sheiks, even the Statue of Liberty. Attach shoes to your knees and go out as a short person.

Of course, if you have the time, theatrical makeup can be used to great effect. Test a little on your skin to check for allergy before you smear it all over. Use brand-name makeup from a costume store. Don't try to substitute with things like shoe polish. I know a guy who had to shampoo his hair 13 times to get rid of the Vaseline he slathered in it to turn himself into a greaser. (Actually, 13 times didn't do the trick, either. He just got tired of washing his hair.) And be careful with makeup around the eyes and mouth.

Also, "if you are serious about applying character makeup in a professional manner rather than in an amateurish way, . . . practice several times before Halloween night," Walker recommends. "This will cut the application time in half and you will arrive at the party on time instead of a day late."

Walker's books, "The Great Halloween Book" and "Creative Costumes for any Occasion" are probably available wherever paperbacks are sold. If not, consider my desk your reading room and feel free to browse. And don't let my stocking mask frighten you.

'Music Man' comes to Macomb

"Five" performances of "The Music Man," the nostalgic Broadway musical about fast-talking Professor Harold Hill taking slow-moving River City by storm while forming a boys' band, will be presented over two November weekends at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

To the tune of "Seventy-Six Trombones" and with nationally known singer-actor Chuck Mitchell in the starring role of the glib professor, the production is a joint effort of the Macomb Community College Music Department and the Macomb Center.

Performances are set for Friday, Nov. 8, and Saturday, Nov. 9 — both at 8 p.m. — and for Friday, Nov. 15, at 8 p.m., followed by two shows on Saturday, Nov. 16 — a 2 p.m. matinee and at 8 p.m.

"The Music Man," which opened in New York in 1957, was Meredith Willson's first Broadway show, although he had been an important figure in other branches of the entertainment world. The show ran for 173 weeks and 1,376 performances. In the process, it won five Tony awards, including best musical.

Two plays on Studio Theatre bill

"In My Father's House," an evening of two one-act plays, will open at the Studio Theatre in Wayne State University's General Lecture Hall, Warren at Third, on Thursday, Nov. 7. The plays run through Nov. 17. Performances are Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 7 p.m.

"The first play, 'I Solemnly Swear,' a drama by Wayne State University's Von H. Washington, probes relationships in the family of a black army officer. A crisis oc-cal, and was cited by the Drama Critics Circle as the top musical of the season.

Willson wrote "The Music Man" using memories of his boyhood in his home town of Mason City, Iowa, when he was considered a child prodigy playing with the adults in the Mason City Brass Band at the age of 13.

His words and music capture the small-town innocence of the Iowa community in the early 20th century as con-man Harold Hill, traveling salesman from Gary, Ind., bursts upon the scene, alerts frozen-faced parents to such corrupters of their youth as pool halls and dime novels, proceeds to charm them into buying uniforms for a boys' marching band and winds up being a mildly reformed womanizer who is snared by the pretty librarian, Marian.

Tickets for all performances are $7 for adults and $5 for students and senior citizens. They may be obtained at the box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

curs when they discover that the daughter has participated in a social protest on the base.

The second play, "Herbert III," by playwright Ted Shine, is a comedy highlighting the concerns of a worried mother whose only child is late returning home. Underlying the comic reactions are the subtle yet evident effects of racism.

Pro-tec-tion

(prə'tek-shən) n. the shielding from injury.

Protection is provided by the known, the named and the proven. Knowledge is your protective shield; the assurance that you receive full circulation value for your advertising expenditures.

That's why we submit our records to independent verification by the Audit Bureau of Circulations, the world's oldest—and largest—not-for-profit circulation auditing organization.

At regular intervals, ABC sends a specially-trained auditor to our offices to inspect our records. Following this visit, ABC issues an Audit Report—their information, not ours—showing how much circulation we have, where and how copies were sold and delivered, as well as a wealth of other facts about our circulation.

Before you buy any advertising, ask to see a copy of the latest ABC Audit Report. We'll be pleased to show you ours.

THE BEST JAGUAR EVER BUILT:

Breeding tells. While trends in automotive design come and go, the 1985 Jaguar XJ6 remains defiantly true to its heritage: lithe, graceful and utterly distinctive.

It is the nature of automotive styling to be transient. And it is the nature of Jaguar to create cars of classic grace: cars whose beauty endures long after the fads are forgotten. Such a car is the Series III. Combining beauty of form with quick response and notable luxury, the XJ6 rewards its driver in many ways. Come in and experience the pleasures that have been bred into the best Jaguar ever built.
