Alan to the rescue

Heroes come in all sizes, and therein lies my tale. Bob and Ann Lech, of Balfour Road, moor their 27-foot sailboat at the Bayview Yacht Club.

Bob figured they could squeeze one more day of sailing in before the season ended, so he and son Peter, 7, invited family friend Chris Behler and his son, Alan, also 7, along for the final voyage.

Afterward, Bob and Chris tied up the boat and began working below decks while Peter and Alan played on the dock. The boys secured a bucket and began dipping for minnows.

One scoopful proved too heavy for Peter and he tumbled into the water. Twenty feet away and below deck, the fathers heard nothing. Dressed in tennis shoes, blue jeans and a sweatshirt, Peter became waterlogged and foundered around, unable to pull himself from the chilly water.

Without panicking, Alan grabbed his frightened buddy, pulled him to a piling and hauled him from the drink. Not an easy job when your friend weighs about 50 pounds soaking wet and you're 44 pounds dry.

The first Bob and Chris knew about the accident was when they spied Peter wet and shivering on the dock, being comforted by his rescuer.

"The boys thought their fathers would be angry at them because they were fooling around when Peter fell in," said Ann Lech. "Peter was sure of it because he lost his tennis shoes in the lake. It was such a close thing. We could have lost him. Who cares about shoes at a time like that?"

Peter said he was really scared because his clothes were heavy and he couldn't get out. He's convinced he would have drowned if it hadn't been for Alan.

Bob and Ann said Peter made sure there was a "God bless" for Alan in his prayers that night.

Finally, thanks, and a tip of the hat to Park police Sgt. Randy Cain for turning us on to this story.

Tug of words

Overheard from some North students commenting on the tug-of-war between North and South during half time at last Saturday's showdown.

"Looks like we got all the heavies on our side."

"Yeah, looks like we got all the uglies too."

"Ugly and heavy" North won in a walk.

Gold and gorgeous

I try not to push my opinions on others in this column, but this time I just can't resist.

My nomination for the prettiest pile of leaves in Grosse Pointe is the thick golden carpet adorning a house on Hall Road, just where it intersects with Radnor Circle.

Buttery yellow, it looks like it's about six inches deep and it's all I can do to keep from leaving my car and rolling in it every time I pass by.

What really gets me is that even with all those leaves in the yard, there's still a ton more on the maples fronting the house.

What a perfect spot for a family portrait.

All tricks-no treat

Apparently it just isn't enough to dress up as witches, cowboys and monsters on Halloween anymore. At least that's the opinion of some members of the Woods police department after pulling over a car loaded with Ninjas and Rambos on Halloween night.

An alert citizen on Brys Drive spotted a youngster armed with what appeared to be a sword and

Grid case heads for high court

By Peggy O'Connor

Duff Berschback thought his South High football team's game with North High last Saturday was tough. Compared to the court battle being waged by his father, the running back's clash with North's defense was a piece of cake.

Donald Berschback, a local attorney, filed suit in Wayne County Circuit Court on Sept. 6, challenging the validity of the Michigan High School Athletic Association's (MHSAA) transfer eligibility rule. Donald Jr. (Duff) attended De La Salle High School for two years, transferring to South High this fall. The Berschbacks were already Grosse Pointe residents.

Duff applied to play varsity football and trained with the Blue Devils all summer. But the MHSAA's transfer eligibility rule states that a student who transfers from one high school to another without leaving his previous school service area is ineligible to participate in athletic contests for one full semester. There are 13 exceptions to the rule, none of which covered Berschback's situation, so the junior was not permitted to start the season.

According to MHSAA legal counsel Edmund Sikorski, if the school involved in the transfer thinks there is a reason why a waiver should be granted, the case may be brought before MHSAA's executive committee. That didn't happen in this case.

Although Berschback agreed that the published exceptions did not include Duff's situation, he reasoned that since his son had transferred for a non-athletic reason, (one purpose of the transfer eligibility rule is to curb high school athletic recruiting) he should be allowed to play football. Circuit Court Judge Maureen Riley refused to issue a temporary injunction barring the MHSAA from applying the rule to Berschback.

The case went to the Michigan Court of Appeals on Sept. 13 and on Sept. 27, the appellate court issued the temporary injunction against the MHSAA and the Grosse Pointe Board of Education. Duff Berschback played in South's Sept. 28 game and in the five remaining contests.

According to attorney Sikorski, the MHSAA filed an emergency application with the Michigan Supreme Court requesting that it take immediate jurisdiction of the case. The Grosse Pointe school board in its meeting Monday night directed school board attorney Doug West to prepare a positive response to the MHSAA's request to ask the Supreme Court to take the case. The deadline for filing the response is Nov. 12.

In the initial hearing, the board made it clear that it was not taking a position on the matter. "The Grosse Pointe schools are in no way involved in developing or implementing the transfer rules. The MHSAA develops the rule and member schools must adopt the rules if they want to participate in the association," West said. "It's the only game in town."

The parties involved in the Berschback case appear to have the same goal: a clear legal interpretation of the transfer eligibility rule.

"We're after a definitive legal statement, a unified, cohesive statement of the principles of law regarding amateur athletes in this state," Sikorski said.

"My original purpose in instituting the suit was to not have my son denied the opportunity to play football. Okay, so the appellate court gave him that opportunity. But I have wrestled with this thing for so long, I can't say 'the heck with

Pointes hit with high insurance rates

By Nancy Parmenter

It's a problem for the Silverdome, the People Mover, riding stables, swimming pools, local charities' haunted Halloween houses, bars, doctors and you.

Skyrocketing liability insurance rates are hitting you in the wallet every time you buy a drink or take a physical or see a football game, because the business in question has to cover its costs.

Liability insurance is pinching the five Pointe governments and the school district. All have received big rate hikes this year, often for decreased coverage, and the Farms is sweating it out now, with bids due this month.

"We're on a white-river raft trip, but we can never be sure if we're in the boat or in the water," said Farms Controller Carrol Lock.

Lock sees the liability situation as a reflection of society, which he describes as non-responsible. "If anything happens to me, it's quite clear it can't be my fault," he said in illustration. "All you have to do is figure out whose fault it is. Nobody's responsible for himself — the public is always supposed to provide."

The Farms has already had part of its umbrella coverage cancelled and its deductible increased — twice — during the year. Lock said it is likely that the city won't have any umbrella in the next policy.

Asked if that meant that the city would be self-insured, Lock emphatically disagreed. "No — when you are self-insured, you're not spreading the risk. We're not self-insured — we don't have any insurance. Let's not use nifty-pammy words to make it sound better. And we don't drop insurance — insurance drops us. We don't have any choice."

Self-insuring is risky. It's a decision the Woods has so far avoided, even though its insurance package increased almost 350 percent, from $95,000 to $327,000.

"The problem with self-insurance is if you can't get an excess liability policy," said Woods Administrator-Clerk Chester Petersen. "You can insure yourself for a million, but you could easily have a case worth more than that."

If losses were to exceed revenues, a city would probably have to issue emergency bonds, Petersen said. "I haven't made the decision in my own mind if it's worth the risk. On the other hand, you can be insurance-poor, too."

No one in the Pointe cities would say their municipality is "insurance-poor," but at the same time that companies are getting out of the liability business or leaving Michigan because of its reputation for high jury awards, governments are having to protect themselves more thoroughly. The Woods has just beefed up its marina insurance, following this year's electrocution death in St. Clair Shores.

Some governments are getting rid of services that appear to offer too many liability possibilities. At the height of this summer's swimming season, the Farms decided on an overnight removal of its three-meter diving board on the advice of its insurer. The City took its board down several years ago in anticipation of possible problems. And "you'll notice nobody has teeter-totters any more," said City Treasurer Dennis Foran.

That former bastion of teeter-totters, the school system, still has swings and slides, but both are monitored by a liability inspector, as are the system's sidewalks, according to Christian Fenton, director of business affairs.

The liability inspector is an outside consultant provided by the liability insurer, Fenton said. The consultant checks both the schools' physical environment and the policies and procedures — for example, the dispensing of chemicals in the school laboratories or of medicine in the school dispensary.

The liability inspection was made three weeks ago, Fenton said. The report will be presented to the schools in December, although if there had been a flagrant violation, it would have been mentioned verbally right away.

The schools, as is the case with the five Pointe governments, are fortunate in having had few accidents and lawsuits. That has kept the rates from going even higher.

The schools were paying $90,000 a year for the last three years, Fenton said. The new rate is $280,000 a year. "We knew it would happen, so we budgeted for it," Fenton said. "We adjusted as we went along." He said that although the amount is high, he does not foresee the schools' asking for a millage increase just on the strength of the liability insurance jump.

The rate is higher, but the coverage is less. The deductible is higher, for example, and asbestos is no longer covered at all. That is standard for school policies, Fenton said, even though most American schools have some asbestos in them somewhere.

As the liability market dries up, city officials spend more and more of their time just shopping for insurance. The Woods buys 22 separate policies with several different companies at a total cost of 10 percent of the city's budget, Petersen said.

"That's equal to 1.5 mill of taxes," he said. "Fortunately, we had sufficient budget surplus from last year to cover it." If costs keep escalating, they are likely to bite into the Woods' capital improvement programs, Petersen said.

The Woods and most cities lobby the legislature through the efforts of the Michigan Municipal League. The legislature is the last hope for liability relief in the view of many city officials.

"Otherwise, I don't see any reductions in the next two or three years," Petersen said, "and we'll never see the prices we've seen in the past."

The Municipal League offers pool insurance coverage and is one of the possibilities being considered in the Farms, where the problem is seen as being "almost to the crisis stage," according to City Manager Andrew Bremer.

"We find that the major problems are things like slips and falls on sidewalks," Bremer said. "Things like that are too expensive

Grosse Pointe South not only lost the battle Saturday afternoon, but the war as well. That's the annual football battle with North High School and the half-time tug of war between the schools' seniors. Straining mightily in the forefront of South were seniors Bill Tecos and Jeff Webb, but to no avail. The war was over in about 10 seconds. The Blue Devil varsity football team didn't fare much better, losing 39-0 to the Norsemen who sport a perfect 9-0 record. There's always next year, all you Blue Devil supporters.

Board considers AIDS policy

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The Grosse Pointe Public School System will begin work in the next couple of months to develop a policy on how to deal with those infected with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, or AIDS.

Superintendent John Whritner said the district is beginning to look at the various sources of information on the disease and should start formulating a policy over the next couple of months.

Whritner first broached the subject at the October Board of Education meeting at North High School. At that time, he said the district was watching the progress of the Wayne Intermediate School District, which was forming a task force to discuss the problems of the disease for school districts.

The task force, headed by the intermediate school district's director of special education, will develop criteria from which local districts can formulate their own policies, according to a spokesman for the ISD.

The task force will schedule its first of two meetings for Thursday or Friday, Nov. 14 or 15, after the state board of education has held its committee of the whole meeting to consider the recommendations of state Superintendent Phillip Runkel to adopt the federal Centers for Disease Control guidelines for handling students with AIDS, the spokesman said.

At its first meeting, the task force will review the state and federal guidelines and consider other sources of information. The second meeting, to be held before the end of the month, will be to formulate the criteria to aid local districts in developing their own policies.

Each of the county's 34 school districts have been asked to participate in the task force and 18 will have representatives there. All superintendents expressed interest in the outcome of the task force, according to the intermediate school district.

The state board of education's consideration of adopting federal guidelines for handling students with AIDS is only an interim move, according to Ned Hubbell, acting assistant superintendent of public affairs. The state administration will be asked to appoint a reference group to look at some of the implications of the disease, such as how to deal with staff members who contract the illness, Hubbell said.

The guidelines to be considered by the state board in November deal only with students, he added.

The state department of education has no reported case of school-age children with AIDS attending school, Hubbell said. Only one preschool child is reported to have the illness, and that child is in Detroit, he added.

The interim guidelines being considered will help stave off any chaos should the state board be faced with such a problem, Hubbell said. Further recommendation and guidelines are expected to be presented to the state board in January, he added.

A spokesman for the Centers for Disease Control said there are 14,393 reported cases of AIDS so far in the United States, with more than 7,400 known deaths from the disease. Only 204 of reported AIDS sufferers are children under 12, and 125 of those reported to have suffered from the disease are now dead.

Guidelines developed by the centers say that only those students infected with AIDS who "lack control of their bodily secretions, or who display behavior such as biting, vomiting, etc. . . shall not be permitted to attend classes or participate in school activities with other students."

The virus believed to cause the disease has been found in body fluids. None of the reported sufferers of AIDS contracted the disease through casual contact, according to the CDC spokesman.

While the infected average student may attend classes, careful consideration must be given to what diseases that child may come in contact with during a school day. Because the AIDS sufferer has a debilitated immune system, he or she is less able to fight off infections, such as a common cold, the spokesman said.

The National Education Association has also issued guidelines that it recommends for adoption by its affiliates to be used in school districts, colleges and universities. The guidelines include when students or school employees should be required to be tested for the disease, providing education to students with AIDS, and making available information about the condition of an AIDS-infected student or school employee.

Residents head electronic funds transfer system

The Michigan Automated Clearing House Association, whose membership is comprised of financial institutions based in the state, was headed this past year by George Strachan Sr., vice president and comptroller, Standard Federal Bank, and Alastair Carlyle, executive vice president, Manufacturers Bank of Detroit. Both men are Grosse Pointe residents.

The association is part of a national electronic payment system developed as an alternative to using paper checks. More than 800 million entries are processed annually for applications such as payroll, bill payments, corporate trade payments, Social Security deposits and any other transaction that formerly required a check.

Both Strachan and Carlyle have been active in the association since its inception in 1974 as members of the board of directors and the executive committee.

Stroud received the William Allen White Award for editorial excellence five times and the Overseas Press Club of America Citation in 1974 for reporting excellence in a series on Latin America. A finalist in the 1982 Pulitzer Prize competition, in 1984 he received a Distinguished Service Award from the Michigan Women's Commission for his "keen analysis of the problems and inequities facing women in the various facets of their daily lives."

Senior center keeps busy at Ferry School

By Mike Andrzejczyk

On this Friday at Ferry Elementary School, while safety patrollers take their lunch-hour posts along the corners and other students enjoy some time on the playground equipment, another group of people sit down to a roast chicken lunch and await the day's announcements.

Food and Friendship, which serves hot lunches to those aged 60 and over from the Pointes, Harper Woods, St. Clair Shores and north-east Detroit, is only one of a variety of programs for older residents housed at Ferry and just one of the activities that takes place in the senior activity center at the school.

When the center is open, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., those who come can take part in sewing programs or cards and bingo, hear speakers talking about subjects of interest to older persons, see movies or take part in thrice-weekly exercise classes.

The center has a monthly calendar available for those interested in taking part in programs, according to site director Donna Nelms.

"The food is just an incentive to bring people in," she said. "The people are really what makes this place. We'd like people in the community to know about it."

Residents interested in taking part in activities at the center should call 882-5699 weekdays. Nelms said. People can call just for the calendar or they can register two weeks ahead of time for programs at the center.

The activities center is funded through the Detroit Board of Health and is affiliated with Services for Older Citizens.

SOC was formed seven years ago in the basement of the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church but soon outgrew its facilities. In September 1984, the agency centralized its services at Ferry, signing a five-year lease to rent the five-room suite at the school for $300 a month.

Other programs housed in Ferry are Meals on Wheels, Minor Home Repair and the Senior Information and Referral Center.

Volunteers are an important part of the program. They help staff the center, answer the phones and literally help pay the rent. Half of SOC's monthly rent bill can be paid through "in-kind" volunteer work for the school system. At Friday's lunch, one of the announcements included the need for a volunteer to help a Ferry teacher with computer instruction.

The activity center tries to get involved in other things as well, Nelms said. People from the center have helped a variety of community functions, including the anniversary celebration of Grosse Pointe Woods.

One ongoing activity this year at the center is the refurbishing of old toys to be donated to a children's center to brighten Christmas for the children, Nelms said. The toys have been pulled from attics and garages and are getting cleaned, a new coat of paint and other minor adjustments.

Besides the toys being donated, many people have brought in furniture to help turn one of the rooms into a lounge, Nelms said. There is also a billiard table available, she added.

The school system has also put in time and equipment at the center, including the addition of the warming tables for the food programs. Companies, like Michigan Bell, have also become involved, Nelms said.

Nelms, who has been site director at the center for six months, said she enjoys her work at the center. "I find it very enjoyable; the different people, the love that goes on here and the camaraderie, with everyone pulling together."

For more information about the activity center, call 882-5699. For more information about programs and services available through SOC, call 884-2790.

Liz Cohen, on stage, leads some older residents through an exercise class, a thrice-weekly activities at Ferry School.

Child safety program set by K.E.N.N.Y.

The Grosse Pointe chapter of K.E.N.N.Y. — Kids Everywhere Now Need You — will host a kidnap prevention program for the community on Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 11 and 12, at St. Paul Evangelical Church, 375 Lothrop Road.

The Monday program from 7 to 8 p.m. is a preview session for parents and concerns safety precautions and child safety tips for parents. No reservations are necessary.

The Tuesday program is scheduled from 6 to 7 p.m. and consists of a children's slide training program titled "Safety With Strangers." It will be presented to children in grades K-3 and 4-6 with a limit of 24 children per group. Reservations for the program can be made through Sue Kramer at 882-9726.

Speaker at the Nov. 11 meeting will be Marie Edenstrom, founder of K.E.N.N.Y. and mother of 14-year-old abduction/murder victim Kenny Myers, in whose memory the non-profit public awareness organization was founded in May 1985.

Together with Edenstrom, members of K.E.N.N.Y. have been working to educate the general public in the prevention of molestation of children. They are also working with the Adam Walsh Resource Center by bringing the "Safety with Strangers" program into schools.

Local member of K.E.N.N.Y. include Marlene Hudson, Lisa Steiner, Renee Schulte, Ann Willett, Pat Bissig, Mary Ellen Kelly, Susie Rhode, Kathy Champion and Vicky Finnerty.

K.E.N.N.Y.'s safety awareness program has been endorsed and recommended by the Farms, Shores and Woods police departments. Officers from those departments coordinating efforts with the group are Donald Dewey of the Farms; Archie Greive of the Shores; and John Albrecht of the Woods.

Firearms and jewelry were reported stolen from a Buckingham Road home sometime on Halloween, Oct. 31, according to Park police.

The break-in was reported at 6:43 p.m. but occurred sometime during that day, police said. The thief or thieves broke the glass from the rear door window to gain entry to the home.

Taken was one handgun, unknown type, and possibly a shotgun, as well as jewelry, police said. A portable television set was found near the rear door.

TV taken from Harvard Road home during Nov. 2 robbery

A Harvard Road home was reported broken into Saturday night, Nov. 2, according to Park police.

The thief or thieves entered the home by removing an air conditioner from the window in the sun room and took a 19-inch color television set, police said. Left behind was a video cassette recorder and cable television converter. It appears the thief first tried to enter the home by breaking out a section of glass in the door to the home, police said.

For the record

Jean Rice

In last week's story on the candidates in the Woods running for council seats, we inadvertently left out Jean Rice's photo. She was the first Woods' candidate to be interviewed and the first one in with a photo. We goofed. Here is her photo, with our sincere apologies.

In last week's article titled "Parochial school students lose in special ed rulings," it was incorrectly implied that only one-third of the 142 students eligible have enrolled. Sixty-five students, or 46 percent, have elected to take part in the program.

A story on Page 1C of the Oct. 31 Grosse Pointe News should have noted that South was the unbeaten team which lost to unbeaten rival North, 36-21, in the annual clash in 1973.

In last week's Pointer of Interest article, the name of the otolaryngologist was misspelled. It should have been Walter Belenky.

U.S. economy at crossroads, Fed governor says

The rate of inflation has been lowered and there are more jobs, but the economic expansion has not gotten firmly on track yet. That was the message last week given to a group at the War Memorial by Dr. Martha Seger, a member of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

The economy is at a crossroads, she said, and some of the "fester- ing problems that must be addressed soon to avoid serious economic damage are the massive federal budget deficits, the over- valued dollar, unsustainable trade deficits and the threat of devastat- ing protectionism.

"I see encouraging signs of progress in dealing with these prob- lems, and thus I'm basically opti- mistic about our nation's economic prospects," she said. "If we and our trading partners can find the political fortitude to follow through on the initiatives recently taken, then we can look forward to a sustained period of solid economic progress."

Seger, a Michigan native, was re- cently confirmed by the U.S. Senate to serve a 14-year term on the governing board of the Federal Reserve System. As a member of the board, she is directly involved in formulating and executing American monetary policy.

The board is also responsible for formulating U.S. policy regarding the international financial system, supervising the 12 regional Federal Reserve banks and their branches, supervising and regulating all bank holding companies, im- plementing banking laws and regu- lations and consumer credit laws.

There's more stability in the housing market, she said, due to regulatory reform and financial in- novations that "have alleviated the on-again, off-again, flow of home mortgage credit that had been so much a part of recessions in the past."

The technological revolution has been a boon to the manufacturing industry as well as to retailers and other service industries.

"In manufacturing, production and inventories can now be man- aged more efficiently through the use of new information tech- nologies," she said, "... and there has been a realization that moder- nization is necessary to compete with foreign producers."

Retailers and others can keep books more efficiently, control inventories and process information faster, she said. The investment in new technologies will result in more productivity, she added.

The cost of labor has risen moderately and first year union settlements in major collective bargaining agreements this year have been averaging below 3 per- cent, a significant drop from the 10 percent average for contracts sign- ed in 1981, she said.

On the downside, personal sav- ings are at a low level and con- sumer debt is high. Seger said the farming industry will remain de- pressed. Some 340,000 people who worked in factories manufacturing steel, textiles and machinery are out of jobs since December, she said.

Seger told the audience that she is encouraged that the Congress is looking at cutting spending rather than increasing taxes in the federal budget.

About 125 people attended the lecture, presented by the Council of Sponsors. M. Jane Kay, vice president of administration at Detroit Edison, chaired the program.

Martha Seger, left, Federal Reserve Board governor, and Farms resident M. Jane Kay got together before Dr. Seger's talk at the War Memorial last week. The lecture, presented by the Council of Sponsors, was chaired by Kay.

once an author submits his or her ideas to the publisher. At 9:30 a.m., Noble will visit Richard School, and from there, Kerby School at 10:30. Her final visit will be at Mason School at 1:30 p.m.

At 4 p.m., she will be the guest of the Central Library, where she will give a brief presentation and au- tograph books. The Grosse Pointe Book Village will serve as retailer for her books, and a representative of the Book Village will be at the library at 4 p.m. to sell books for autographing.

Park has quiet Devil's Night

It was a very quiet Devil's Night this year in the Park, according to Fire Chief Phillip Costa. His department was called to put out two leaf fires and aided Detroit firefighters at one garage fire possibly set by vandals.

The leaf fires were reported at 12:12 and 12:14 a.m. Oct. 31. The garage fire was reported on Alter Road. That fire was believed to have started on the roof of the cinderblock structure behind the burned-out house, reports said. The Park firefighters were relieved by Detroit firefighters.

Filling Lucas' big shoes

With County Executive William Lucas widely expected to run for the Republican nomination for governor next year, a list of potential candidates to succeed him in the county's best-paid job already is lining up on the political stage.

Among the first is Livonia Mayor Edward McNamara, who lost to Lucas in 1982 and who recently sponsored a $200-a-plate breakfast which was widely regarded as his first step in raising funds for a campaign for county executive. McNamara himself billed it as "a mayor's fundraiser" but since he doesn't have an election this year, the breakfast is seen as his beginning effort to raise a war chest for the county campaign.

McNamara is only one of many dipping their toes into the political waters of the county executive's office. Sheriff Robert Ficano and Wayne County Commission Chairman John Hertel of Harper Woods also are seeking support, although both insist it is too early to be putting much time into the campaign for county executive. Others on a list compiled by the Detroit Free Press were Sumpter Township Treasurer Thomas Gondek, Frank Wilkerson of Detroit, assistant county executive, and County Commissioner Edward Plawecki Jr. of Dearborn Heights.

Hertel, whose district includes the Grosse Pointes, told the Free Press essentially what he had told the Grosse Pointe News earlier when asked about his aspirations for higher office:

"I believe if I were to get openly involved in a race for another office, it would interfere with my effectiveness here, particularly with the county budget and reform of the drainage board. I think the public is tired of people who use one office as only a stepping stone for the next office."

Hertel has supported Lucas on a number of issues but their differences seem to have multiplied since the county executive switched to the Republican Party and made known his intention to run for governor on the GOP ticket next year. Hertel is regarded as the most experienced politician among those mentioned for county executive to date, but it is not certain he would be willing to risk giving up his powerful new position as county board chairman to seek the executive's position next year.

If Lucas does announce early in 1986 that he is running for governor of the GOP ticket, he obviously will start a spirited contest to pick his successor. Regardless of what happens to Lucas in his state race, he will leave a pair of big shoes to fill on the county level. For despite the efforts to denigrate him and his accomplishments since he switched parties the county executive has set Wayne County on a course that is leading to increased efficiency and better service in Wayne County government.

Abolish a political relic

The recent controversy over what were termed excessive charges made by Wayne County Drain Commissioner Charles N. Youngblood's department for cleaning drainage ditches has revived talk of abolishing the county office and merging it with the public works department.

It will be recalled that during the drafting of the county charter, several proposals were made for abolishing the county drain commissioner's department, but the charter commission, bowing to political pressure, finally agreed to continue the office without change.

But County Executive William Lucas has made no secret of his dissatisfaction with the county drain commissioner's office and recently has recommended that it be abolished. The issue could be put on the county ballot for the 1988 election, assuming the Board of County Commissioners goes along with the proposal. That is not certain because the board has its own reform plans.

From the discussion reported in the daily papers, we conclude that the major opposition to the proposal to abolish the office comes from old-line Democratic politicians who contend that in Democratic Wayne County it makes no sense to put an end to an office held by a Democrat. That may be an understandable argument, but it surely adds nothing to the efficiency of county government which has been undergoing a number of reforms since the charter was adopted.

The Wayne County Road Commission, another powerful agency that was able to use its political power to protect itself from reform during the drafting of the charter, recently has been abolished as a separate agency and brought under the control of the county executive. That provides ample precedent for doing the same thing to the county drain commissioner's office.

In simpler times, it may have made some sense to have an elected drain commissioner. Today it doesn't in an essentially urban area. The office ought to be abolished and merged into the public works department. Coordination of the project activities of the departments of public works and drain commissioner, as well as those of the road commission, already is authorized under the charter.

The county board, by appointing the members of the board of drain commissioners, feels that it is now controlling the abuses of the old system run by the drain commissioner. So the dispute between the county executive and the county commission seems to be boiling down to a matter of who should get credit for reforming the drain department. It seems to us that there is credit enough to go around, but that in the interests of good government the department ought to be abolished. In the modern day and age, it is an anachronism for a predominantly urban county to be electing a drain commissioner on a county-wide basis.

A major reason for abolishing the drain commission is to centralize county authority in one office so that voters can hold one person responsible for what happens in county government. Commendable progress already has been made under the charter to achieve that goal and abolition of the county drain commissioner's department would be another step in that direction. The office is another political relic that the county can no longer afford to retain.

A witch hunt at Oakland U.

Even though Halloween is over, a witch hunt has been started at Oakland University by Accuracy in Academia, a national group that urges students to monitor their college professors for evidence of liberal bias. A history professor at Oakland now has been accused by Accuracy in Academia of presenting a distorted view of what is happening in Nicaragua.

Accuracy in Academia was organized last fall by Reed Irvine, chairman of Accuracy in Media, which monitors what he calls the liberal bias of the news media. Thus the two organizations appear to have the same goal: to oppose what they regard as liberal points of view, whether found in the media or in the classroom. Both organizations support conservative viewpoints which they apparently regard as the norm from which some of the news media and some college professors are straying.

What does this kind of intrusion by outsiders mean for classroom teaching?

It is obviously antagonistic to academic freedom. The moment that outside interests try to censor or veto what is going on in the classroom, academic freedom is imperiled. It is not that all professors are above criticism. Obviously they are not. And most universities have clearly outlined procedures through which students, if they cannot resolve their problems with an individual instructor, can appeal and be heard, either by an ombudsman or some other university official. But that is not what Accuracy in Academia has in mind. It wants to substitute its bias for the free inquiry that occurs in the classroom.

In a 1967 Supreme Court decision, Justice William Brennan wrote the opinion that banned a legal requirement that employees of state universities certify in writing that they were not Communists. Here is what he said in part:

"Our nation is deeply committed to safeguarding academic freedom, which is of transcendent value to all of us and not merely to the teachers concerned. That freedom is therefore a special concern of the First Amendment, which does not tolerate laws that cast a pall of orthodoxy over the classroom."

That view prevails even when the pall of orthodoxy is cast by an outside group such as Accuracy in Academia. It is good to know that at Oakland University the administration, students and faculty have rallied to their professor's defense. Oakland's provost said the university is "fully open to free inquiry and exchange of ideas," adding that it accepts "a responsibility to preserve that atmosphere and we deplore and will oppose any attempts to change it."

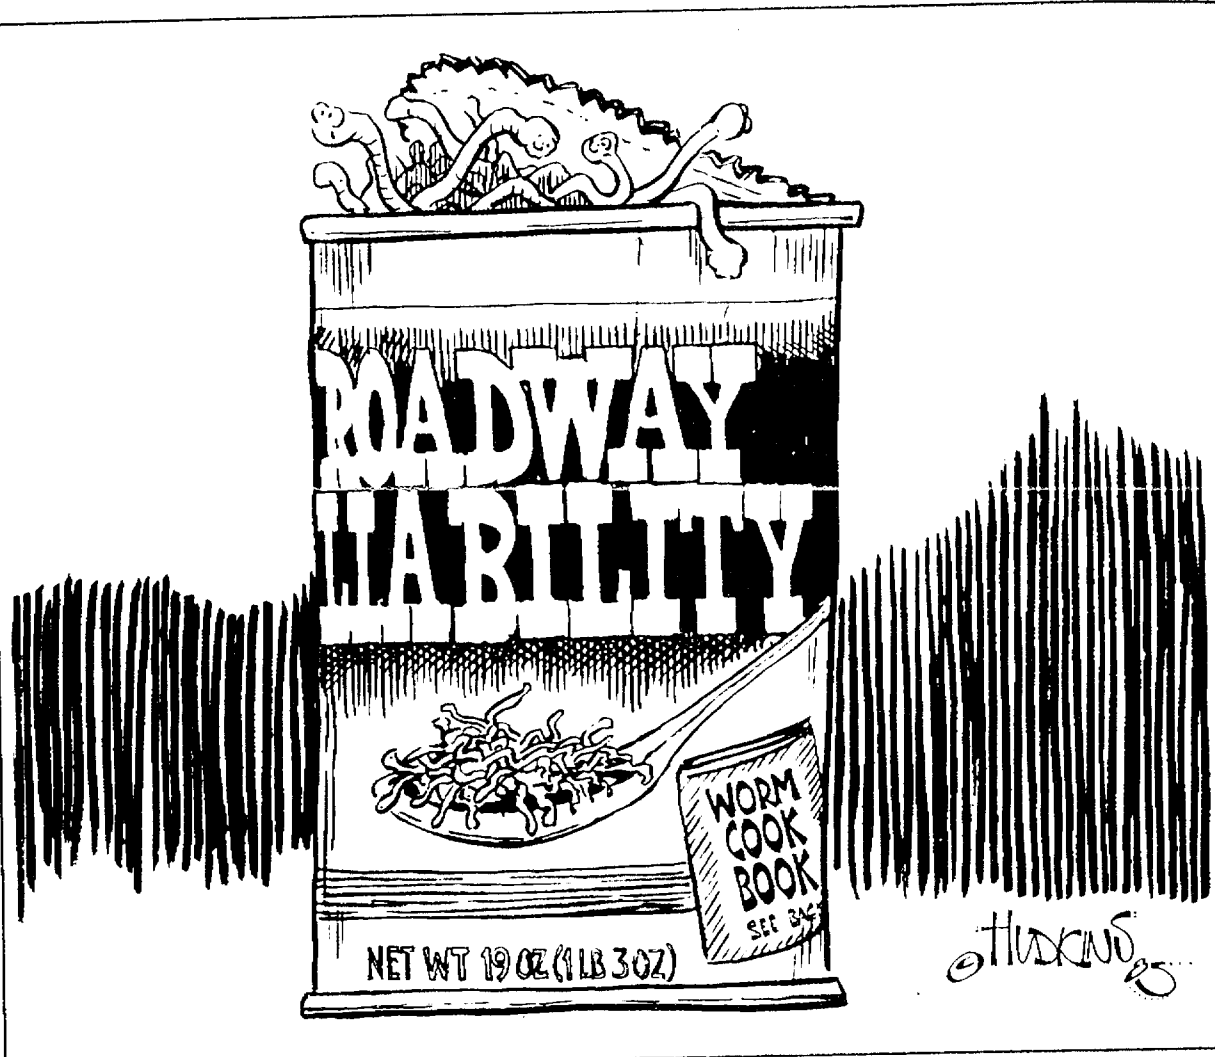

Well said.

Young artists' work reveals future

To the Editor:

It is indeed heartening to see a venerable local institution such as the Grosse Pointe News support our local young artists.

We can point with pride and gratitude to the efforts of our local school system to imbue our children not only with an appreciation of art, but with the ability to express themselves through art. These schools produce many talented youngsters who represent our fair cities in art shows across the country.

We here at the Osler house (joined, I'm sure, by the residents of the Plankers, Palombo and Brown homes) were delighted to see our own Kathy Osler in your full-page (15-A) display of local winners of the Kodak/Scholastic Photography awards.

It is through the handiwork of these young people that we observe our society's future — a bright future — and through their camera lenses that we glimpse the hopes born of youth's full fruition. Looking at these photographs, one can only be proud of the community that has produced these artists.

As John Ruskin made so poignantly clear in his "Stones of Venice," art can only be viewed as a component of the community from which it springs. Thus, in giving a bit of exposure to the works of these young artists, you revealed to Grosse Pointe an integral part of our local society's very fiber.

Were I allowed to nitpick, I would point out one small error. The collage by Kathy Osler, "Night Life," appeared in your paper upside-down. Please — we don't do that in the Pointe.

End of era is new beginning

To the Editor:

Your Oct. 24 picture page, "The Last Days," by Elizabeth Carpenter, truly marks the end of the palatial mansion era in the Pointe.

I for one, am glad. For all the beauty and great expense represented by homes such as the Dodge/Ranger estate, their demise opens great expanses to new homes, new families and new blood.

Grosse Pointe has changed a lot in the last 20 years. As the image of lakefront grandeur fades, we can learn to accept and nourish our diversity, while maintaining our high standards.

Correction

To the Editor:

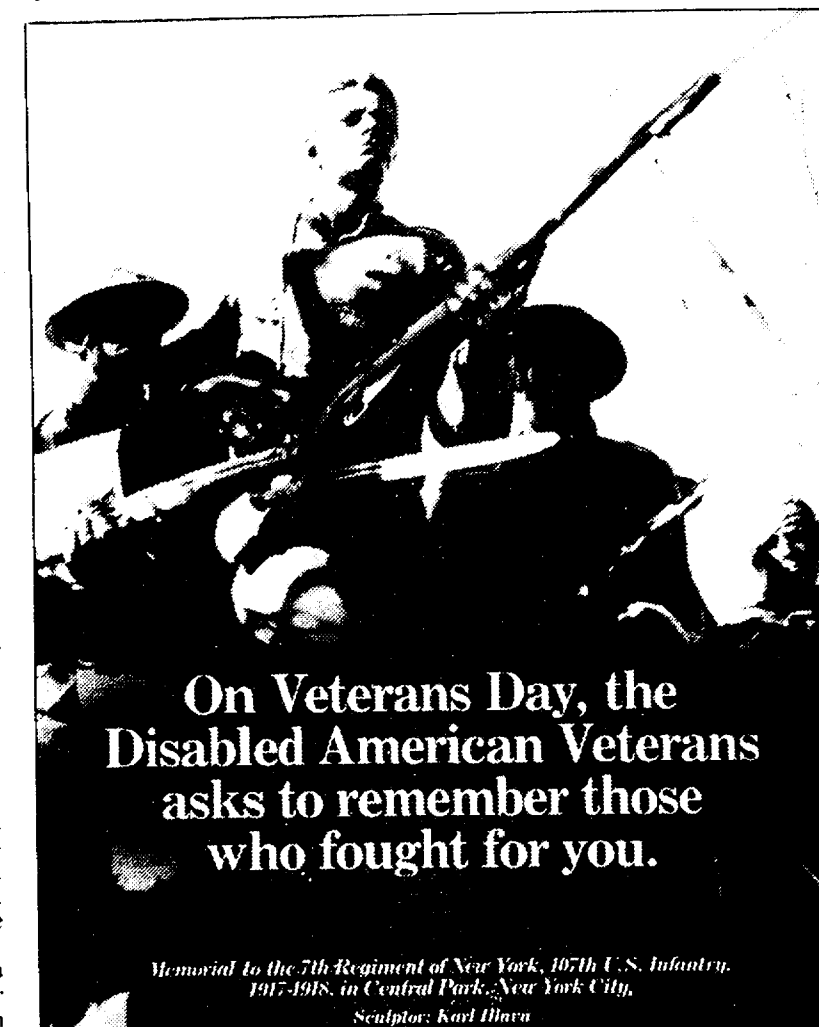

I have checked my Xeroxed copy of the Letter to the Editor you published today. According to my copy, you have inadvertently made two errors. The first, in paragraph one, should read "reward students who take advanced classes" (not "advantage classes"). The second, in paragraph five, should read "reduce the need for classes and staff" (not "classes and staff").

I raise the issue only because, as an English teacher, I am held to higher standards. The appearance of the word "stuff" is particularly touchy because I warn students to avoid slangy or vague terms unless they have a specific reason for using them.

I do not send this as a letter to be printed, but, in the interests of fair play, I do ask you to print a correction of your errors.

While I have your attention, I would like to thank you for printing my letters and the letters written by students. Some of the student letters were written as an assignment, but this is one assignment most students do take seriously. They feel proud when they see themselves in print.

Report on 1986 defense budget

By Dennis M. Hertel
U.S. Representative

Sometime in the near future, the U.S. House of Representatives will again take up consideration of the 1986 defense budget. Although the House originally passed the defense budget this summer, the proposal still awaits final approval of the compromise version produced by the House-Senate Conference Committee. While the Senate has already approved the modified version, the House has been busy with other pressing legislation.

In spite of the fact that the compromise version appropriates $10 billion more than members of the House originally intended, the bill still manages to incorporate several of the defense contract reform amendments that originated in the House version. Granted that efforts were made in the conference committee to weaken many of the amendments aimed at addressing the problems of $630 toilet seats, $650 ashtrays and similar spending atrocities, the fact remains that many of the contracting reforms did survive the conference committee process.

In its current version, the fiscal year 1986 defense budget still directs the secretary of defense to develop plans for buying more of our major weapons systems competitively and from more than one source. Competition should bring down the cost of such systems and free us from the cost overruns that a single source contract so often produces.

The conference version of the Defense Budget accepts much of the House language relative to criminal penalties for disallowed or fraudulent costs passed on by contractors. Although the compromise version reduces the potential first-time penalties from the House $10,000 minimum fine, the penalties for successive violations have been increased to triple the disallowed costs. Under the compromise bill, corporations who knowingly bill the government for illegal costs could be fined $1 million instead of the $500,000 fine originally imposed by the House. The language providing prison terms for fraud remains unchanged.

The House reform amendment aimed at ending the "revolving door" for defense department employees who move on to lucrative positions with the very defense firms they supervised now bars any defense official who discusses future employment with a contractor from future negotiations with that firm. It also provides that violators be prohibited from working for the firms involved for a period of 10 years. Presidential appointees who are primary negotiators on any contract are prohibited from working for the contractor for two years. These individuals are subject to a penalty of up to $5,000 and one year in prison for knowingly violating this provision.

As chairman of the House Democratic Task Force on Waste, Abuse and Fraud in the Department of Defense, I am pleased that many of the reforms which we introduced on the House floor have survived the legislative process. For too long, we have watched billions of our tax dollars wasted while we try to build up our national defense system. The reform amendments that remain are not nearly enough to eliminate the problem, but they are a good beginning. I know that my task force, together with many members of both the House and Senate, are committed to a continuation of the reform process and will continue to work for additional reforms of the procurement system throughout the remainder of the 99th Congress.

Offer drivers' training during school year

To the Editor:

I am writing concerning the drivers' education program in Grosse Pointe.

There are drivers' education classes offered in the summer by the Grosse Pointe School System at no cost. This is a wonderful opportunity to those whose fifteenth birthdays fall on the dates before the first class. For some of us whose birthdays are later in the year, we have to wait until the following summer to take the class. Our other choice is to take a class from a private driving school and pay a lot of money.

Why not have drivers' training offered as an elective during the school year like it once was? This program could be tied in with an auto maintenance and care class.

There will be festive, low-calorie alternatives and recipes will be available. The fee is $3 and preregistration is required. Call 245-1241.

I say

It was one of these sweet ironies of life. I had to miss my journalism class the night the topic focused on freebies and junkets. I missed the class because I was going on a junket.

I grabbed my textbook to read on the plane and the title, "Groping for Ethics in Journalism," stood out as brassy as you please. I was thinking that I could have wrapped it in brown paper or better yet, wrapped myself in brown paper. You can tell that along with my luggage, I was carrying a healthy dose of guilt. I don't know why because while it qualified as a junket in the strictest sense — we flew out of Selfridge in a military plane — we were responsible for our food and lodging and other expenses.

Would I do it again? You betcha. It was a once-in-a-lifetime experience. Our group — about 40 — toured NORAD, the nerve center in Colorado Springs that tracks everything that's airborne in the world. Deep in the bowels of the Cheyenne Mountain, near Pike's Peak, are the eyes that watch the skies of the North American continent. These eyes, in the form of computers, receive information from radar, satellites and other surveillance systems around the world. It's the largest and most complex control network in the free world.

During one of our many briefings, an officer lightened the heavy, statistic-filled lecture by telling us how it's possible to track

Santa ever since Rudolph became the leader of the pack. His nose, it seems, is a source of heat, and radar is heat-sensitive. Or something. If I could understand all of this stuff, I would be a nuclear physicist in a minute.

Anyway this city carved in the mountain is the most incredible thing I've seen. About 1,700 people, including U.S. and Canadian military personnel and civilians, enter the tunnel every day and travel one-third of a mile in before coming upon the first blast door. You wouldn't want to be in this door's way when it's opening or closing — it weighs 25 tons. Fifty feet away, there's a second blast door. In the event of an attack, these doors would seal the complex from the outside world. There's enough food and supplies for about 1,000 people for 30 days.

By Pat

There are 15 steel buildings and 11 of them are three stories high. They all sit on rows of steel springs that act as shock absorbers. Each spring weighs about 1,000 pounds, and our guide told us, with a twinkle in her eye, that that's where the name of Colorado Springs came from.

There was a feeling of déjà vu when we entered the control room where all the information is received and disseminated. That's because filmmakers have copied the set of their movies with control rooms. We weren't allowed to go into the control room, but we could view the scene from a glassed-in room overlooking it. There are a number of technicians watching their screens and when they are on duty, they don't leave for anything. Even their meals are brought to them. An officer told us some 500 potentially hostile airborne objects had to be identified last year.

The thing that made me feel better about the whole setup is that there isn't any such thing as a button — the one button that'll set off a nuclear war. I worry a lot about accidents. The procedure that would initiate an attack involved a number of high-level people, each of whom would have to agree, we were told. I want to believe that.

The next day, we toured the Air Force Academy. That was impressive — 18,000 acres on a mesa against the foothills of the Rockies. Deer freely roam the grounds since the academy is a game refuge. We saw a half-dozen bounding across the road as we were driving up. The academy, which is a tremendous tourist attraction drawing about one million people a year, is a no-expense-spared facility. Three pools, a football stadium and an indoor football field, numerous tennis courts, a golf course, you name it. One of the extracurricular activities offered is the ancient sport of falconry. About one dozen cadets participate in that, I learned.

It was in July of 1906, before William Jennings Bryan amassed a personal fortune of more than $1 million, that he enunciated the widely repeated contention: "No man can earn $1 million honestly."

The eyes of the continent

The chapel, which at the time received a lot of criticism for its architecture, was breathtaking. And 4,000 cadets marching in formation to lunch was another sight. They do that every day and from the time they march into the dining room and out takes less than 30 minutes. They don't fool around. We learned that the freshmen have to chew each bite so many times and they must lay their fork down in between bites. Otherwise they wouldn't eat, our guide told us.

It was some trip. The first night our dinner was hosted by a four-star general. I didn't realize how rare they are — there are only 11 of them around today.

The group I was with consisted mainly of businessmen and educators. There were two publishers and me, so the newspaper business was in the minority, and I was part of another minority group — women. There were four of us and about three dozen men.

The purpose of the tour was clear — the military has a mission and they want to promote it. I have reservations about building more and newer weapons. An escalating arsenal on either side frightens me and it seems at some point, we have to stop and take stock of the consequences. I was glad, however, to have the opportunity to tour NORAD. It has heightened my awareness, as I'm sure it has for everyone in the group, of our defense system.

Skiers help by donating used equipment

By Tom Greenwood
With winter on its way, Dick Matzka finds himself heavily into two subjects: ski equipment and tax deductions.

Matzka, owner of Metro Ski & Sports, Inc., on Mack Avenue, is the Grosse Pointe co-ordinator for the Subaru Deduct-A-Ski program benefitting charitable organizations nationwide, while allowing consumers to turn in their used ski clothing and equipment for tax deductions.

"When winter rolls around, a lot of people look at their equipment and decide to buy new merchandise," Matzka said. "Then they wonder what they're going to do with the old stuff. We take it here and give them an IRS-approved tax deduction for their property. The old equipment is then turned over to the Deduct-A-Ski program for distribution to various organizations. We get a lot of equipment in here the last week of November."

Metro accepts the clothing and ski equipment from September through November only. Dealers are usually too busy during December to accept the equipment otherwise.

Beneficiaries of the equipment include Special Olympics, Boys and Girls Clubs of America, National Handicapped Sports and Recreation Association, and Ski for Light.

In its three-year history, Subaru Deduct-A-Ski has collected more than 60,000 units of ski merchandise valued at more than $2 million. Average collections for the three-month collection period in 1984 was $2,000. Metro Ski & Sport collected $38,000 in equipment, placing it among the most successful businesses in the state.

"People in Grosse Pointe seem to be very charity-oriented," Matzka said. "The idea is to help as many individuals as we can and also give out the deductions, although I don't think that's why a lot of our customers donate their equipment. They just seem to like to help."

"We get people coming here from Port Huron, where I live, and from West Bloomfield, but most of the donations come from here on the east side."

"I even had one person bring in some old, old equipment," he said. "The boots were kept on by straps and the skis were made of wood. That's just too old to be used by others, but we still accept those types of goods. It doesn't have to be downhill equipment either. We also take cross country equipment as well."

This isn't the first time Metro has been involved in charity work. In 1984, the store bought up all the sailboards used in the summer Olympics and donated them to various charities for auction.

"We've always been involved in charities," Matzka said. "We just believe in trying to pay back to our customers and our community."

Once the ski equipment is accepted, Matzka and his crew inspect it, clean it up, and ship it in crates to Reno, Nev., the main collection center for Subaru-Deduct-A-Ski.

"In Reno, it's checked again, repaired and readied for distribution to the various charities," Matzka said. "Unfortunately, I've never been on hand when the equipment is given out. It's just too big an organization for that kind of personal satisfaction."

To date, Matzka estimates the store has collected $11,000 in ski equipment. They're hoping for a large rush at the end of November to break last year's mark of $38,000.

Detroit Artists Market schedules preview party Nov. 14

The Detroit Artists Market will hold its second annual Holiday Preview Party on Thursday, Nov. 14, from 5:30 to 8 p.m. at its Harmonie Park location at 1452 Randolph in Detroit. Proceeds from the ticket sales for the party and 30 percent of the proceeds from the exhibit sales will make up the 1986 scholarship fund for local art students.

Each year the Market hosts a Holiday Show of Crafts that are especially created for gift-giving by Michigan artists. Included will be handcrafted ceramics, glass, jewelry, basketry, clothing and furnishings.

This year the Holiday Show, which is open to the public, will run from Saturday, Nov. 16, through Saturday, Jan. 4. Those who attend the preview party will have the first opportunity to view and select from this collection of handcrafted pieces. Tickets are $25 per person and will include hors d'oeuvres and an open bar.

Through the scholarship fund, the Detroit Artists Market each year awards grants, on a rotating basis, to several promising artists from three local institutions. They are the Cranbrook Academy of Art, the Center for Creative Studies and Wayne State University. In 1985, scholarships were given to students at Wayne State in sculpture, Ruth Lampkin; in drawing, Ann Hegarty; in ceramics, John Murphy; and in painting, Cynthia Singelyn. Also, a grant was made, again this year, to the Pewabic Pottery for the Detroit Public High School Saturday Ceramics Program.

This year's party is co-chaired by Henrietta Fridholm and Jim Bridenstine. Reservation information may be obtained by calling the Market at 962-0337. Reservations are limited.

Dental students seek patients

The University of Detroit Dental School needs patients so that graduating dental students can prepare for and take licensing exams, according to Dr. Joseph Gian-santi, Dental School clinical director. A free screening will take place Saturday, Nov. 9. To apply, call 446-1834. A nominal fee will be charged for any fillings that are needed.

Woods commission gives certificate to local church

Grosse Pointe Woods Historical Commission Chairman Suzanne Dempsey Kent presented Christ the King Lutheran Church with a certificate of recognition at the church's 45th anniversary banquet Sunday, Oct. 20, at the Harper Woods Community Center.

The church, now at Mack and Lochmoor, had its inception in 1940 when the English District of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod established a new preaching station on Mack and Lancaster. On Jan. 27, 1941, the congregation was organized under the name of Calvary Lutheran Church. Kent's father, Fred Dempsey, was among the 10 charter voting members at that time.

When property for the present church building was purchased in 1947, the name was changed to Christ the King. Pastor Joseph P. Fabry has served the approximately 650-member congregation since 1972.

Military museum receives grant

Michigan's Own, a military and space museum now in rented space in Frankenmuth, has received a state grant of $225,000 to help build a monument to the 1,450,000 Michigan men and women who served in the military and on the frontiers of space.

Rented facilities no longer can accommodate the more than 300 exhibits owned by the museum, and more are accumulating weekly.

The museum focuses on personal effects of those it memorializes — uniforms, photos, citations, letters, medals, histories, models and related artifacts.

The new structure will include an auditorium-theatre for showing audio-visual programs relating to museum exhibits from the nation's five foreign wars: Spanish-American, World Wars I and II, the Korean and Vietnam conflicts.

The timetable for the project calls for completion of a fundraising drive in 1986, construction in fall and winter of 1986-87 and the official opening in April 1987.

The basic structure, including site, equipment, furnishings, parking and landscaping, is estimated to cost $725,000. To accommodate the long-term needs for exhibit space and storage, the museum board hopes to raise an additional $190,000.

A list of memorial gifts is available on request for donors who wish to designate their gift for this purpose. Inquiries about the project, contributions and the memorial gifts list should be addressed to Michigan's Own, 245 S. Main, Frankenmuth, Mich. 48734.

Learn yoga

Relieve tension and stress through yoga at the War Memorial on Wednesdays, Nov. 13 through Jan. 15. The class will be taught by golden Lotus instructor Betty Locke from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The cost for eight sessions is $30.

Participants will learn that yoga postures will help to revitalize and refresh the body and mind, as well as develop flexibility and energy. Students should bring an exercise mat to the classes.

For additional information, call 881-7511, Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Four authors to speak at dinner

A Book and Author Dinner will be held Monday, Nov. 18, at the War Memorial. This is the first time the biannual event will be held in the evening.

Tiger announcer Ernie Harwell, one of the four authors, will call the plays of his book, "Tuned to Baseball," which covers his experiences of nearly four decades as a baseball broadcaster. Humorous interviews and broadcast bloopers are included, as well as memories and observations of players, umpires and owners.

British author Pat Booth will discuss her steamy new novel, "Palm Beach," about a woman born on the wrong side of the tracks who claws her way up the Palm Beach social ladder. Booth dedicated her book to her controversial friend, Roxanne Pulitzer.

Wendy Ewald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Ewald of the Pointe, will present a unique look at life in the coal-mining communities in southeastern Kentucky in the book, "Portraits and Dreams." A former elementary school teacher there, Ewald has compiled photographs and stories by Appalachian school children. The insight of the children, their fantasies, their homes and their land show an honest portrayal of what life is like in the remote hollows of that region.

Former Secret Service agent Dennis McCarthy will give an insider's view in "Protecting the President." He will share behind-the-scenes anecdotes about presidents and their protectors. As the agent who wrestled John Hinckley to the ground on the day President Ronald Reagan was shot, McCarthy's book describes the constant threat of danger, the rigorous training, the stress and the boredom of a job where split-second reactions means the difference of life or death.

Moderator for the event will be WRJ Radio Executive Producer Hal Youngblood.

A cash bar will be available beginning at 6 p.m., with a 7 p.m. dinner of salad, London broil, potato, vegetable and dessert. The program will begin at 8 p.m. The authors' books will be on sale after the program, with time allotted for autographs.

Tickets for the complete evening, which includes dinner, program and parking, are $16.50 per person and should be purchased at least three days in advance. Tickets for the program only are $6.50. Reserve in person or by mail. Send checks, payable to Grosse Pointe War Memorial Association, to 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with payment. Call 881-7511 for additional information.

The event is organized by the Council of Sponsors. Aphie Roumell and Mary Turner are chairpersons.

New art class offered

A new art class, "Explorations in Drawing," will begin Monday, Nov. 11, from 7 to 9 p.m., at the War Memorial. The instruction, designed for students at all levels of development, will include shading, line, proportion and composition.

The instructor, Carolyn Swift Armitage, is on the teaching staff at the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit, and holds a master's degree from Indiana University.

Register at the War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Request a supplies list at the time of registration.

Coping with pain

A program that delves into the neuropsychology of pain will be presented at Saratoga Community Hospital, 15000 Gratiot, Thursday, Nov. 14, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Pat Brown, MA in rehabilitation counseling, will discuss experimental treatments, acupuncture and a new injection method that directs nerve pathways to the brain.

There is a $3 fee and preregistration is required. Call 245-1421 for information.

Popcorn sale

Thousands of Scouts in the tri-county area will be knocking on doors selling popcorn from Nov. 7 to Nov. 25.

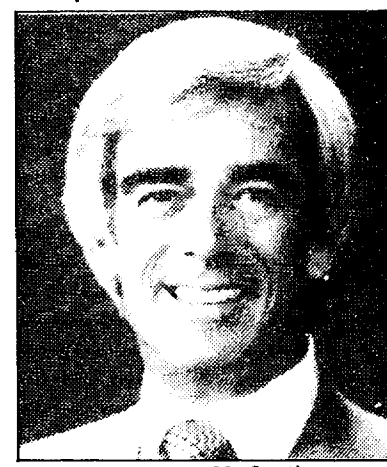

The Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, Varsity Scouts and Explorers will be seeking community support through the popcorn sale to help raise funds for a variety of scouting activities — from the purchase of new equipment to sending Scouts to camp.

Lottery jackpots won't trickle down to local districts

State lottery officials were smiling last week with the announcement that sales increased 51 percent in fiscal 1985 over the year before.

That translated into $47 million more for the state's education fund for the fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30.

While officials in 70 percent of the state's school districts can smile about that increase in the state school aid fund, those districts considered out-of-formula, like Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods, will see none of the lottery benefits.

In fiscal 1984, the lottery contribution to the state school aid fund totaled $370 million, or about 18 percent of the total, according to state education department officials. The school aid fund is used to pay in-formula districts and virtually none of the school aid fund goes to out-of-formula districts.

The lottery contribution to the state aid fund in fiscal 1985 total $417 million.

Intervention is SAC² topic

The last talk in the SAC² fall series is "Intervention: A Loving Solution," ways the family and concerned others can approach and motivate the substance abuser into accepting treatment. Speaker is Renee Genger, M.S.W., A.C.S., a therapist and intervention specialist at Henry Ford Hospital/Maple Grove.

Originally scheduled for the War Memorial, the program has been moved to Fellowship Hall at Memorial Church, next door to the War Memorial in order to accommodate the large group that has been attending the series. It is scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m.

Construction

Work is progressing on the new Grosse Pointe News building, located across the street from the current offices. The windows have been put in and the brickwork is next. The building is expected to be ready for occupancy in February.

Young Viewpointes is back

It's been two years, but Young Viewpointes — Grosse Pointe Cable's television newsmagazine written by and starring young people — is back on the air.

Not just the faces have changed since the first show, which last aired in August 1983. The number of kids appearing on camera has increased from seven to 12, introduced by two high-school-age hosts, according to co-producer Richard Carter.

Instead of each person having one specific area of coverage, as on the first show, each of the dozen kids in the reporting pool will be able to cover any kind of story they'd like — within limits, of course, according to Carter.

All of the young newscasters attend school in Grosse Pointe or Harper Woods. Hosts of the show are Allison Jones from North High School and Paul Gryzenia, a student at South. Also appearing will be Tiffany Hart, Melissa Van Hoek, Kristi Damitico, Matt Hart, Corry Gazepis, Tamiko Brooks, Julie Cavataio, Tru Love, Michelle Lindsey and Cheryl Gilin. The show is produced by Kathy Brennan and Carter, with production handled by Peter Koenig and assistants Maureen Galeota and Mark White.

This is the first on-camera experience for the newscasters, who will have a one- to two-minute segment each show, Carter says. They will be free to choose what story they would like to cover and will have to develop it themselves, he added.

The first show faded away after nearly a year on the air, mostly because it was getting difficult for the kids to come up with stories weekly that related only to their single area, Carter says. It limited the creativity of the newscasters and eventually made the weekly productions a job.

The second version seems to have learned from the mistakes in its first incarnation. After each Friday afternoon taping, the staff gets together to plan out next week's work.

The show was one of the most popular the company ever aired on local access, Carter says. He's still hearing from schools' music, speech or performing arts departments to find out if there are still openings for students.

Young Viewpointes is on Channel 11 Monday through Friday at 3:30 p.m. and Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 7:30.

Sample college at Mercy

High school students will be able to study the cardiovascular system and closely examine an actual human heart in one of the sample college classes at Mercy College of Detroit's "College for a Day" program on Friday, Nov. 15.

Students will be able to experience a taste of college life by attending actual classes taught by Mercy's faculty designed to introduce students to areas they may be considering.

Special sessions will focus on financing a college education, succeeding in college and career planning. Campus tours will also be available.

"College for a Day" will begin at 9 a.m. with registration in the Mercy College Conference Center. Sessions will begin at 9:30 a.m. and continue until 2:30 p.m. with a break at noon for lunch. Admission to the program is free for high school students and their parents; a buffet lunch and sundae bar will be available at $3.50 per person.

Mercy College of Detroit is located at 8200 W. Outer Drive at the Southfield Freeway, just south of Seven Mile Road, in Detroit.

For reservations and additional information, call the Admissions Office at 592-6030.

Holiday workshops

The War Memorial will offer the following holiday workshops in November:

- Learn to dress a Thanksgiving turkey in an edible pastry vest and bow tie. Instructor Candy Hartson says that one needn't be a gourmet cook to join this workshop on Tuesday, Nov. 12, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Cost is $5 per person. Needed supplies include one package of pie crust stick mix, waxed paper, rolling pin, one egg white, pastry brush, knife and scissors.

- Make a "Traditional Father Christmas" with miniature expert Terry Henson on Tuesdays, Nov. 12 and 19, from 7 to 9 p.m. The doll is made from an exclusive Terry Henson, hand-sculpted doll kit, which will cost $30 for students enrolled in the class. The kit will include everything needed to make the Victorian Father Christmas, complete with long robe, a large pack on his back and a crook in his hand. Students should also bring needle, thread, scissors, Quick or Sobo glue and, if possible, a glue gun for white glue. Fee for the class is $15.

- On display in the War Memorial showcase are samples from Pat Bentley's "Eighteenth-Century Wreath" workshop, scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 20, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Use grape vine or dried greens, fruit, baby's breath and ribbon, to construct a standard Williamsburg wreath. The workshop fee is $10, plus approximately $15 for materials. Students should bring a sack lunch to class.

- Libby Van de Putte will instruct a "Smocked Snowflake" workshop on Saturday, Nov. 23, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Students will be taught basic smocking stitches plus a whipped spider web stitch to create an unusual Christmas tree ornament. The registration fee is $10. Students will purchase a complete materials kit for $5, but should bring scissors and a sack lunch to class.

For additional information, call 881-7511.

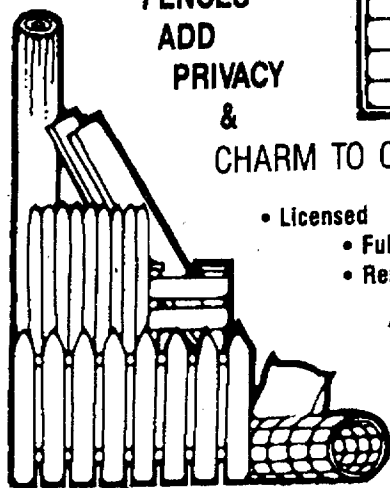

Topic is glaucoma

"Glaucoma: Its Treatment and Management" will be discussed Wednesday, Nov. 13, at Ferry School, 748 Roslyn. Dr. Gerald Mullan, an ophthalmologist, will address the Food and Friendship seniors program at noon. The public is invited.

Topics to be covered will include open and angle closure glaucoma, laser treatment and medication management. Free glaucoma testing for seniors will be given following the lecture.

Confessions of a pipe smoker, or: Why I switched to "Haymarket" Blend

"The pipe tobacco side of my life used to make me miserable. One pipe tobacco would bite. Another was too smelly. Or too sweet. Or tasteless. Then I found Haymarket blend. It's got everything. Satisfying flavor. It's bite-free, pipeful after pipeful. With an aroma so nice, my family actually likes me to smoke! Even after three years. I'm not tired of it. Now, the pipe tobacco side of my life is one of my happiest."

Essay winners tell how to resist drug pressure

One student from each grade at Parcels Middle School was named the winner in a recent essay contest that involved the entire school. The winners are Maura Winkworth, 6th grade, daughter of Susan and Paul Winkworth; Corry Gazepis, 7th grade, daughter of Virginia and George Gazepis, and Stacy Williams, 8th grade, daughter of Jackie and Thomas Williams.

The contest was a total school effort involving the Parcels staff, the PTO, the Parcels Parent Substance Abuse Community Committee and the students with support from their parents.

The panel that studied the essays which had been coded and were without names were William Cristofferson, Parcels principal; George Pamerleau, PTO father vice president; Sally Giacobbe, Parcels SAC chairperson; and Mary Beth Devlin, student council treasurer.

Each winner received $25. Students who received an honorable mention were: 6th grade, Rachel Duditch, Sandra Dipasquale, Lisa Lillich, Lisa Wyrock and Tino Licari; 7th grade, Benjamin Temkow, Jennifer Connell and Taffany Ladendorf; 8th grade, Tammy Robbins, Terry Stocki and Anne Koenig.

Following are the winning entries:

By Maura Winkworth

Many people say that the best way to say "no" to drugs is by associating with good people and avoiding companions who could get you into trouble. Drugs, though, can affect anyone's life, no matter whether they're good or bad, because people think drugs can help them to solve their problems. Drugs will only be another, bigger problem.

I have asthma, and when I have been hospitalized, I have had to take a lot of medication, and that is most uncomfortable. I feel light-headed and sleepy, and I experience lots of shakiness. I can feel my heart racing, and it seems as if I have no control over my body. If that is how it feels to be either addicted to or withdrawing from drugs, I would never take them.

It would be better to live my life seeing the world the way God intended me to perceive it, not in the un-natural way a drug-dependent person perceives it.

If I have a problem, I talk to my parents or friends about it. Drugs only mask the problem. Communication solves it.

Being on drugs is a robot-like existence, for I would not control my mind and body; the drugs would.

This is how I remember to say "no" to drugs.

By Stacy Williams

One of the first words one says as a child is "no," yet for millions of teenagers a year, it becomes one of the most difficult words to say. The difficulty of saying "no" to drugs is threefold.

First, teenagers are under severe peer pressure. It is important to them to be one of the so-called "in" crowd. If the crowd teases and pressures them to try drugs, they do so at times to become one of the group.

Furthermore, some teenagers are lonely and insecure. They fall under the false impression that drugs will make them feel better about themselves. They don't look beyond the moment to see that the loneliness and insecurities are not erased with drugs, but merely covered-up for the moment.

Finally, one takes drugs merely to experiment. The teenager has heard so much about drugs and their effects, that he just wants to experience for himself if what he's heard is true. These are all common reasons for teenagers taking drugs.

It's important to understand why someone does something before he can be counseled as to why he should not emulate a certain behavior. Peer pressure is a very real phenomenon in society, but a person can also use it to his advantage. He must decide that if some of his peers are using drugs, that it's not the crowd he wants to be part of. The loneliness and insecurities that plague some teenagers can be turned around. Getting involved in sports and other hobbies are great ways to nurture hidden talents and meet new people. Experimenting with the unknown can always backfire. One can become physically and emotionally dependent on some drugs after only one use. The dangers to one's health, family life, school work and future depend on relearning that one word he learned as a toddler — "no!"

By Corry Gazepis

Nowadays, young people are being introduced to cigarettes, alcohol and other drugs at an increasingly early age. A most difficult problem for them is how to say "no" to drugs. It's not easy to walk away from someone you are fond of when they approach you with drugs.

I would have to weigh the consequences carefully to determine if I should take a chance with drugs or lose the friendship that has been developing over the years.

Thankfully, I am well-educated on this subject, and have seen numerous movies showing many of the outcomes of drug abusers. To me, there wouldn't be a choice to make. I would definitely decline the offer, and then perhaps try my best to help convince my friends of the terrible mistake they'd be making in their lives.

I would never abandon their friendship because of an unfortunate error in judgment on their part. I would be a supportive friend and hope that they could change their minds about using drugs. I know that I have high values and expectations for my life, and I would never stoop to contaminate my body by smoking, drinking or by using drugs.

It takes a strong-willed person to come to a decision of that sort. For the student who isn't strong enough to say "no," I would tell them to talk to their parents, a counselor, teacher, or a close friend who could advise them.

Hopefully, your decision will be a positive one.

Vietnam vet plans Veterans Day program at ULS

Bobby Muller, national president of the Vietnam Veterans of America, will focus on "Putting the Veteran Back Into Veterans' Day" Monday, Nov. 11, at University Liggett School.

The vets will tell of real experiences relating to their involvement during and after the war through informal discussion groups, audio-visual presentations and speeches throughout the day and also in a special evening session.

Muller, a Marine Corps officer and platoon leader in Vietnam, was wounded while leading troops in an assault and came home permanently paralyzed from the chest down. After a year in a Veteran Administration hospital, he graduated from Hofstra Law School and became legislative director of the Eastern Chapter of the Paralyzed Veterans of America. He founded the Vietnam Veterans of America (VVA) in 1978.

Mike Sand, University Liggett School physical plant director and Vietnam veteran, has organized the day's events.

"A lot of young people have a distorted view, a 'Rambo' view of Vietnam, Vietnam vets and war in general," Sand said. "A lot of adults have forgotten that Veterans' Day is not just another holiday when the banks close and the mail slows down. We hope to remind adults and educate students that Veterans' Day has a special meaning which may have a profound effect on future generations serving their country and much more."

An audio-visual presentation, "We are all Vietnam Veterans," will be held at 8:25 a.m. Throughout the day members of the VVA will be meeting with students and other interested parties for informal discussion groups.

In the evening at 7, there will be a second showing of "We are all Vietnam Veterans," followed by an address by Bobby Muller. Steve Champlin, co-author of "Vietnam: History of Neglect" and aide to U.S. Congressman David Bonior, along with VVA national board members Randy Wright, a Birmingham attorney, and Jack Devine, administrative assistant to Lieutenant Governor Martha Griffiths, will be on hand with other veterans to discuss issues and answer questions.

All events are open to the public and will be held in the Upper School Auditorium and Commons at 1045 Cook Road, Grosse Pointe Woods. For more information, call 884-4444.

Business women's group to meet Nov. 14

The Belle-Biscayne Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association (ABWA) will meet at Meadowbrook Hall, Thursday, Nov. 14.

The tour will begin at 7 p.m., dinner at 8 p.m. Bus service at 6 p.m. is available for those who want it. For information, call Kathie Ollis, at 779-8866 or 689-4159.

ABWA, founded in 1949, is a national organization with a membership exceeding 110,000 women who are employed at all aspects and on all levels of business throughout the United States and Puerto Rico.

Women who are employed are eligible for membership. For further information, call Kay Wyszynski at 468-1488 or 293-3759.

So long ago it was that nobody knows when it first became traditional for ships to pass on the right.

Resident reports suspected scam

The Farms police report an attempted pigeon drop on Oct. 30. A woman in her 30s, heavy set, with long blonde hair, approached a Farms resident at Kerby and Mack, saying that she had found a small, black leather pouch filled with money. She asked for the resident's advice about it.

The resident became suspicious, according to police reports, and suggested that the woman report the find to the police. The woman reportedly acted nervous and left.

The suspect matches the description of a suspect involved in a car theft in the Pointes the previous day. Farms police notified local banks of the possible scam.

Berthe Huwiler

Berthe Huwiler was matter-of-fact about her personal view of life. "Old people nowadays feel sorry for themselves. I don't. If I can do something for someone, I will do it," she said, in a 1982 interview with the Grosse Pointe News.

A petite woman sporting a beret and a charming French accent, Mrs. Huwiler was a well-known personality in Grosse Pointe, often seen walking on The Hill, or down to the Village to shop for her less ambulatory Mapleton Road neighbors.

"She walked to the Village every day, and that's a least two miles," said her grandson, Greg Geisler. "She was always shopping for someone, cashing their checks because they couldn't make it to the bank. She walked everywhere. It kept her young and healthy."

A private nurse from Switzerland who immigrated to the United States when she was 22, Mrs. Huwiler became a very proud citizen in 1950. For the past 50 years, she collected money from her neighbors when any of her Mapleton Road neighbors died. Then she'd walk to a local flower shop to buy flowers to send to the funeral.

Last week, neighbors on Mapleton took up a collection for Mrs. Huwiler after she died Tuesday, Oct. 29, at Cottage Hospital.

She was 93. Services for Mrs. Huwiler were held Friday, Nov. 1, at the Verheyden Funeral Home.

She is survived by a daughter, Lily J. Geisler; a son, John S.; five grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

Interment was at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Harry W. Frost

A memorial service for Mr. Frost, 89, formerly of the Pointe lately of Fresno, Calif., will be held at 10 a.m. Monday, Nov. 18, at the Barbour Chapel of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

He died Oct. 10 in Fresno.

Mr. Frost was president and owner of the Frost Railway Supply company. He was a member of the Country Club of Detroit; University club; and the Princeton Club. He also served with the United States Marine Corps during World War II.

Mr. Frost is survived by his wife, Helen; two daughters, Frances Ermoian and Helen Powell; and four grandchildren.

Interment will be in the columbarium.

Hazel Kulych Burns

Services for Miss Burns, 85, of the Woods, were held Thursday, Oct. 31, at the Southfield Funeral Home.

She died Oct. 28 at the Georgian-Bloomfield Hills Nursing Home.

Special service planned by U of D for Veterans Day

The University of Detroit, in conjunction with veterans groups and the local POW/MIA committee, will sponsor a special liturgical service at 7 p.m. Veterans Day, Monday 11, in SS. Peter and Paul Church in downtown Detroit.

U of D's decision to hold the service was sparked by the friendship of a U of D staffer and an alumnus active in university athletics whose son's plane was shot down over North Vietnam in October 1965.

Like others close to one of the 75 Michigan men in prison camps or unaccounted for, Arthur Massucci of Royal Oak, class of 1931, has felt the stress of the 20 years in which he has lived without word of his son, Martin. Massucci shared some of his anguish with a family friend, Mary Ann Dingeman, of U of D's University Relations staff.

Dingeman, touched by the story, took it to the Campus Ministry Office where she proposed "we do something" for families and friends of these men and that it be on Veterans Day. The Rev. Frank Cody, campus chaplain, assigned intern Tim Breen to design a special liturgical service with the theme of reconciliation and healing. The U of D ROTC unit, under the direction of Major Robert Arsenault, will act as ushers and present the colors.

Light refreshments will be served after the service in the Law School atrium adjacent to the church. SS. Peter and Paul is located at 629 E. Jefferson.

For further information, contact Tim Breen at 927-1560.

The presentation was made recently during the ASWA's annual Student Activities Dinner at Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

Grid case heads for high court...

"I think the actions of the MHSAA are so arbitrary. This rule is applied in a self-serving manner. I think that in order to be consistent, the transfer rule has to fall."

The MHSAA has had several

PSO James DeDeppo stopped the car near Vernier and Mack and ordered its occupants, two 18-year-olds and three 15-year-olds, out of the vehicle when it looked like they were trying to hide something.

The "something" proved to be a 25-inch samurai sword stashed under the back seat. There's a lot more to follow so try and keep up with this arsenal.

The driver was adorned in an all black ninja outfit and had a four-inch butterfly knife strapped to his leg.

A second teen was dressed in a black karate suit and was armed with a black throwing star and a pair of climbing claws.

A third boy was wearing an infantryman's camouflage suit and strapped to his left arm was a black carrying pouch with three six-inch steel throwing darts.

Another passenger, dressed as a Ninja, 'fessed' up to owning the samurai sword while the fifth mercenary proved free of weapons.

At the station, police searched the car and found an 18-inch machete under the front seat. Also under the seat was a small black sickle with a seven-inch steel blade and one black throwing star.

A silver throwing star was found in the glove box and one pair of climbing claws was found in a pillow case used as a trick or treat bag.

That's right — the kids had been out trick or treating. The car was full of candy. The driver and passengers, all residents of Detroit, said they were just out for a ride.

The juveniles were released to their parents, to be contacted by the detective bureau at a later date. The adults were fingerprinted and released on their own recognizance.

challenges to the transfer eligibility rule in recent months, but none to the extent of the Berschback case. The rule has been in place since 1981, when the MHSAA was asked by member schools to clarify the eligibility picture by instituting a rule.

"Now when there are questions or challenges regarding the rule, we take the heat," Sikorski said.

"There have been 26 litigations regarding eligibility rules since 1980. Most of the trial courts will look at the established cases, but no appellate decision has been rendered before. We (the MHSAA) are forced to go to federal jurisdiction to get the law interpreted," he added.

If the Supreme Court doesn't agree to hear the case, Sikorski said the MHSAA will be forced to again proceed through normal channels — on a case by case basis — in future situations. One such situation is on the horizon for the Grosse Pointe schools involving a recently transferred student who wants to play hockey this semester.

"We hope they take it. If they don't, the whole thing will continue to be a mishmash of confusion," Sikorski said.

A decision on whether the case will be heard is expected within three weeks at the earliest.

Duff Berschback finished the football season on Nov. 2. His father said that Duff had not escaped the effects of the law suit. But he pointed out that the process also had its advantages.

"One reason I took the suit was that Duff read the rule and the exceptions and figured out that if he had done something like take a pop at the De La Salle principal or finish his sophomore year with poor grades, he could transfer to South High because of disciplinary or academic reasons and play right away. He said to me, 'Because I'm a good guy, I can't just transfer and play football,'" Berschback said.

"The simple fact of the matter is that Duff just wanted to attend his hometown public high school. He's a junior and only has two years left to play football. It's amazing that the MHSAA wanted to take away 50 percent of his opportunity to play varsity football. He loves to play, he eats it up," he added.

Berschback admitted that his background as an attorney played a big role in the decision to proceed with the lawsuit and prepare a response for the Supreme Court.

"What really grates me is that of the 24-some lawsuits, 19 of them have been brought by children of attorneys or their associates. Who's going to spend $3,000 or $4,000 in legal fees so their kid can play football?"

"So they've got you. I think the MHSAA has the obligation to see this rule applied appropriately. Or write a clearer rule."

High insurance rates...

Bremer said he fears bids as high as $200,000 for the coming year. (The Farms currently pays about $75,000 for 10 separate policies, according to Lock.) "This is the year that scares us," Bremer said.

The Park just renewed its policy last month. "The bad news was that our previous agent couldn't negotiate a deal," said Clerk Controller Nunzio Ortisi. Park officials made it into the Municipal League's pool coverage. Even so, the cost doubled, from $40,000 to $87,000.

The pool coverage isn't as extensive as the old policy. The previous $4 million umbrella coverage has dropped to $1 million. "Most cities are probably getting less now," Ortisi said. "It's a bad market and we're having to compromise. We have to stay in business no matter what."

The Park is too small to even consider self-insurance, Ortisi said. The idea wouldn't be feasible without including all of the Pointes.

The Shores, which conducts an early budget process, knew in January that increases were on the way. "We got busy and took bids," said Village Manager Michael Kenyon. A scramble on the part of their longtime insurance agent found coverage for the village at $69,950, an increase of about $10,000 over the previous policy.

"It was a nip-and-tuck thing, but we escaped for this year," Kenyon said. He said the village recognizes that rates are likely to continue climbing. "We need help from Lansing."

Rates in the City, which just renewed Oct. 1, nearly doubled, from $57,000 to $111,000, according to Treasurer Dennis Foran. "We couldn't get quotes from insurance companies," Foran said. The City is participating in the Municipal League pool. Pool rates are increasing, too. "Since the Park went with the pool in August, rates have gone up 25 percent," he said.

As further proof of increases, Foran offered the fact that the City's old $10 million umbrella cost $11,000, while the new $1 million umbrella costs $25,000. He said the City expects to have to raise taxes 45 cents per $1,000 valuation next year to cover insurance increases.

Cities are "watching everything (they) do" to protect themselves, Foran said, while they also watch Lansing for assistance. Many of the officials complained that the legislature has combined cities, bars, doctors, and schools for consideration together. They say the issues are different.

"Bartenders and doctors can move," said the Farms' Carol Lock. "We're geographically here. We have not control over snow, but we have to ensure that no accidents will happen when snow falls. We can't decide that the public has had all the snow it can handle, so there won't be any more storms this year."

Blood supplies down; AIDS scare blamed

By Nancy Parmenter

Monday is a slow morning, but there were a few people at the Red Cross blood center donating blood. Bigger crowds later in the week balance out the donations — with any luck, meeting the 900-1,000 pint daily average the center needs to supply southeastern Michigan.

The Red Cross isn't getting as much blood as it needs every day any more. For the last six months, at least, donors have been staying away for fear of AIDS.

"We need 325 units of O-positive every day," said Noreen Petersen, assistant director of public affairs for the agency. She stopped in front of a sparsely stocked freezer. "We're low on O all the time any more — it seems to be chronic."

Other types aren't suffering shortages, Petersen said. Because O is the universal donor, there is a greater need for it. Rarer types are needed less often. Almost 40 percent of the population has type O-positive blood; at the other end of the scale, only .7 percent have type AB-negative, according to Red Cross statistics.

But the O-positive is "typically down by 200 units," delaying elective surgery and occasionally scaring Petersen and health care officials. "We were very worried a couple of weeks ago," Petersen said.

The only ray of encouragement in this gloomy picture is that the public is quick to respond when emergencies do arise. "If we had some sort of disaster, some mass emergency, I know people would be down here, ready to donate,"

Petersen said.

But the everyday need remains, in spite of the fact that health care procedures over the last several years have been improved to recycle the patients' blood and reduce the need for bank blood.

Petersen says the Red Cross is taking heroic measures to ensure that the blood supply is safe. It has always used sterile, disposable needles that are thrown away after one use. The association that the public has made between needles and AIDS applies only to needles which are used repeatedly without being sterilized. There have not been any cases of post-transfusion AIDS in Michigan, Petersen said.

For two years, the Red Cross has used its health history form to try to weed out potential AIDS carriers — as well as people with other infectious diseases like hepatitis and malaria. The primary AIDS question lists night sweats, fever, weight loss, swollen lymph glands, discolored areas of skin or mouth, and persistent cough or diarrhea. A form also asks potential donors to refrain from giving blood if they are males with multiple male sex partners, abusers of intravenous drugs or if they are hemophiliacs.

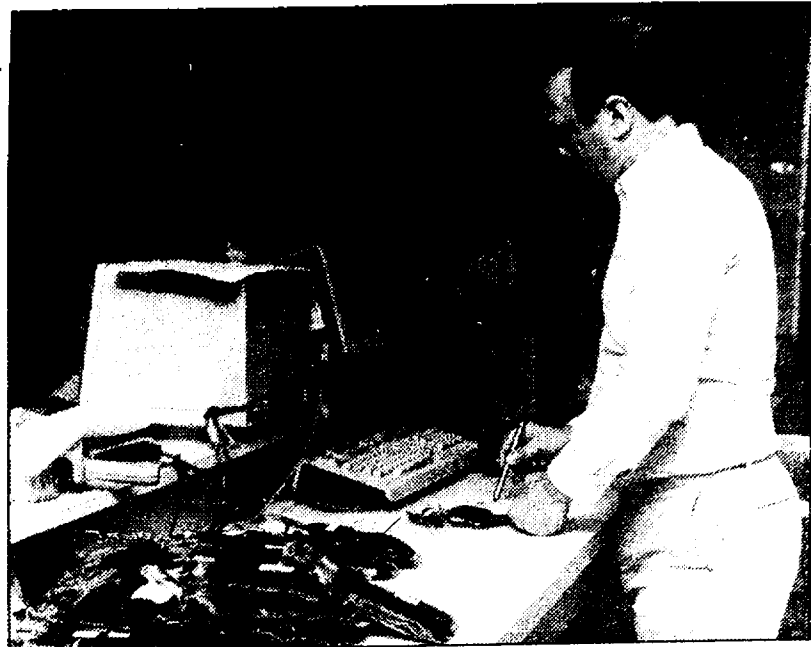

Every donation of blood is tested for the presence of human T-lymphotropic virus type III antibody — the clue to having been exposed to AIDS. Every blood donation is also tested for syphilis and hepatitis. The AIDS antibody screening test was instituted in April, within two weeks of being licensed by the Food and Drug Administration. The test is 99 percent effective.

Camille Desmet, section chief of the enzyme-linked immuno-assay laboratory, said that in spite of the hysteria among some health care workers about AIDS exposure, her lab staff is actually more concerned about exposure to hepatitis.

A sign on the door advises the use of protective clothing, but lab workers appear to wear less than operating room personnel — and certainly less than workers exposed to radioactivity. Some wore paper disposable lab coats and all wore gloves when handling the specimens.

"The gloves are the biggie," Desmet said. "They protect you if you have minute cuts on your hands."

She said some workers grumbled about AIDS when their lab rotation came up, but no one has quit or gotten sick. "It comes with the job. My only option is to be as careful as I can be," she said. "There are no known cases (of AIDS among Michigan health care workers), but let's not try to be number one." Studies have shown that the incident of hepatitis is lower among lab workers than other health care

Bill Kuzenko of Grosse Pointe, Red Cross product manager, fills in for striking personnel in order processing. Thirty-two workers in five departments represented by the Teamsters went on strike at midnight Nov. 1. Supervisors are filling in for striking workers on a rotating basis. Red Cross officials said the strike would not affect blood deliveries.

Assistant education coordinator Jan Soave removes red blood cells from refrigerated storage in preparation for shipment.

'Oldest Living Graduate' is Fine Arts next offering at The Players Nov. 15-16

The Fine Arts Society of Detroit will start its 80th theater season with the last of a three-play Texas

Trilogy: "The Oldest Living Graduate," a 1970s two-act comic-drama by Preston Jones.

The play is produced by William and Dorothy Ludwig and directed by Kenneth W. Kurtz. The cast includes Phillip A. Gillis and Colonel J.C. Kinkaid, Martha Ann Kurtz, Steve Shrader, Don Kumn, Ed Hoot, Bob Davis, George Spelvin, Mildred Avedisian and Susan Cavalli.

Foreign travel available for kids

By Elsa Frohman

Last year, Chris Kaiser took her daughter, Mary Beth, 11, to a presentation for Children's International Summer Villages — just to see what it was about. A year later, Mary Beth has spent a month in Costa Rica, and her mother is vice president for Village Delegations for the Detroit chapter of the organization.

"We went to Dedication Day at Marygrove College," Chris said. "They had native costumes and it was a fascinating idea to have that experience with children from other parts of the world."

After the Kaisers made application to send Mary Beth to the village in Costa Rica, there was a selection process. Only four children, two boys and two girls, can go. The children travel with an adult leader.

"The children fill out an extensive application form," Chris said. "They have to answer a lot of 'what would you do if' questions. They want to select the children who will get the most out of the experience."

The program starts with 11-year-olds because they seem to be just about the right age, Chris said.

"They are old enough to go away and to absorb the experience, but they are not struggling with their adolescent problems yet."

At the camp, the activities are designed to help the children get to know one another, across national boundaries.

"There was no common language," Chris said. "They had to figure out how to communicate. Several of the delegations could not speak any language other than their own. The children adopted words from each other's languages and used hand signals. They made friends."

Chris says Mary Beth profited from the experience.

"She had a very good experience," she said. "She sees people differently now. She sees products and notices where they are from."

Mary Beth Kaiser, 11, a student at Brownell Middle School, spent a month in Costa Rica last summer at the Children's International Summer Village. She is wearing a Japanese costume to symbolize the international theme of the program.

She is much more independent. She has traveled 4,000 miles without her parents and she feels she can go shopping alone now."

The Greater Detroit chapter of CISV is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year.

"I wanted to get involved," Chris said. While she is part of the process of recruiting children and their parents for the program, she doesn't get to travel.

"I get to drive the kids to the airport," she said.

The Greater Detroit chapter has several distinctions. The group will be the host of a village in 1986. This chapter is the first to invite a delegation from the Soviet Union.

For the older children, beginning at age 13, the group has a different program. The 13-year-olds travel in delegations of 10 and stay with a family in a foreign country. In the second year, when they are 14, they travel with the children of the family they stayed with.

At age 16, children can become junior counselors. Eighteen and 19-year-olds attend seminars that are political and economic exchanges.

Chris is looking for children and their parents in this area who would like to participate in the program. Mary Beth is a student at Brownell Junior High School. In coming weeks, she will be speaking to her younger sister's classmates at Richard Elementary School. In addition, there will be a meeting for parents at Salem Memorial Lutheran Church, 21230 Moross, on

Parkinson Foundation plans Ravel Festival benefit concert

By Elsa Frohman

On Nov. 17, at 3:30 p.m., at Orchestra Hall, the Lyric Chamber Ensemble, headed by Fedora Horowitz, will present a Ravel Festival, featuring the works of Maurice Ravel, the benefit for the Michigan Parkinson Foundation. The concert is a joint project of the Lyric Chamber Ensemble and the foundation.

MPF provides programs for victims of Parkinson's and their families. The group operates patient support groups, open forums on the disease, a referral service and several physician workshops each year. The concert is one of two fundraisers the group holds each year.

Grosse Pointe Raymond Bauer is the president of the MPF.

"As a neurologist, I've always been interested in Parkinson's," Bauer said. Bauer has been involved in clinical research on the disease and its treatment. "We've helped a lot of people at Harper Hospital," he said.

Parkinson's is a slow, progressive neurological disorder affecting specific areas of the brain, causing tremors, slowness of movement, weakness and muscle rigidity. These factors can cause changes in appearance, as well as difficulty with posture, walking, balance, speech and eating. Signs and symptoms, as well as their severity, vary from individual to individual, as does the rate of progression.

The cause is unknown. Although some medications are helpful, there is currently no cure. There are between 25,000 and 35,000 Parkinsonians in Michigan alone, according to Bauer.

MPF was founded in 1983 to alleviate some of the distress of the disease to the victims and their families.

MPF provides patient support through 18 affiliated support groups throughout the state, including several in this area.

Tickets for the benefit range in price from $100 for box seating four, to $20 for loge seats, to $17.50 for choice main floor seats, $10 for main floor seats in the rear of the auditorium, and $2.50 for balcony seats.

"This is a unique opportunity for high school and college students to get to see Orchestra Hall," Bauer said, pointing out the inexpensive balcony seats.

The concert was arranged through the friendship of Horowitz for the foundation. The Lyric Chamber Ensemble is a highly respected chamber music group. The ensemble gives performances at several locations, including St. Paul's Catholic Church in Grosse Pointe Farms. MPF has strong support in the Grosse Pointes. The foundation board of directors includes Thomas Cracchiolo, chairman; Bauer, president; and the following members, all of Grosse Pointe: John A. Boil, Teresa A. Brooks, Rodney B. Burton, Christopher J. Dembek, Marjorie M. Jouppe and Herbert O. Steiger. The concert committee includes Grosse Pointers Dale Austin, Maralyn Domzalski, Jacquie Dubay, Marce Haney, Jan Hermes, Arvid Jouppe and Rose Regner.

Soybeans can form basis for meatless meals

The soybean is a truly remarkable vegetable with numberless uses to man. A native of China, this bushy plant has been cultivated since before the era of recorded history. There are countless varieties. In the Orient the soybean is second only to rice in importance of food.

Soybeans are rich in protein. Studies show that soybeans and their products (bean curd and Tofu) lower cholesterol. All soybean products contain protease inhibitors that curb the activity of cancer-causing agents in the stomach. Vegetarians use soybeans in a wide variety of recipes and prize it for its many uses and its high nutritional content.

The following is a selection of recipes featuring soybeans from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budget-wise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

U.S. Savings Bonds. Paying Better Than Ever.

Back in 1872, San Francisco's first cable cars were called "Hallidie's folly." Today, they're America's only mobile historic monument.

Some things never change.

But one great American tradition has changed—U.S. Savings Bonds. Now Savings Bonds pay higher variable interest rates like money market accounts. That's the kind of change anyone can appreciate.

Just hold Savings Bonds for five years and you get the new variable interest rates. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. That means you can earn a lot more, but never less than 7 1/2%.

You can purchase Bonds at almost any financial institution. Or easier yet, through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

Buy Savings Bonds. Like the cable car, they're another part of our proud heritage.

For the current interest rate and more information, call toll-free U.S. SAVINGS BONDS 1-800-US-Bonds. Paying Better Than Ever

George Roumell: Defending the law

By Elsa Frohman

"Society should demand higher standards of everybody," according to George Roumell, the new president of the Michigan Bar Association. He sees the legal profession, and the court system, as society's mechanism for promoting accountability and encouraging higher standards in all professions.

Roumell is fond of quoting Aristotle to define the function of the court system.

"Justice is the bond between men and women and the state," Roumell said. "Justice is the determination of what is just. It is the principle of order in society. Lawyers are ministers of justice. We are the peacemakers of society."

Roumell, who has practiced law since 1954, and is a founding partner in Riley & Roumell, specializes in labor law and arbitration. A long-time Grosse Pointer, he is best known as the attorney for the

In the wake of ballooning liability insurance rates, the state legislature is currently debating measures to: place a cap on awards; limit contingency fees to lawyers (the lawyer accepts the case for a percentage, usually 33 percent, of the award, rather than for a flat fee); to establish a panel to certify the validity of a claim before it goes to trial; and to institute qualifications for expert witnesses in such trials.

Roumell opposes all four measures.

"This (the personal injury suit) is society's method of acquiring accountability," he said. "There are methods of weeding out frivolous law suits. Juries are not opening up the pocketbook. I talked to a judge recently who said he had had five malpractice cases in the past year. Four came back with no cause for action. In one, there was a $60,000 verdict. You don't read about the large number of cases with no cause for action. There has to be another professional who will say they (the defendant) didn't follow the standards of practice for their profession."

Roumell emphasizes that the problem extends far beyond the medical profession.

"It applies to lawyers, accountants and architects. They all face malpractice suits. It's one of the adjustments society can make through the courts. A great deal of the cases end up as no cause for action and the prevailing party can ask for costs and court fees."

Roumell opposes caps on awards on the grounds that some cases warrant higher awards.

"What if through someone's negligence, your child is reduced to a vegetable. That child may have a 60-year life expectancy. If I was a parent, and I suddenly had to look forward to a lifetime of caring for this child, I would expect some compensation."

He defends contingency fees as making legal representation more accessible to those who might otherwise not be able to afford to pay.

Pointer of Interest

Detroit Board of Education.

Since taking office as head of the Michigan Bar in September, Roumell has been traveling throughout the state, meeting with local Bar Associations.

"I've been talking to my fellow lawyers about our mutual problems in the law," Roumell said.

Speaking for the Michigan Bar, Roumell has been a strong voice against the proposed state legislative measures to limit awards and make other changes in the procedures for personal injury lawsuits.

George Roumell dictates a brief. He specializes in labor law and arbitration in his private practice, Riley & Roumell.

"A lawyer can spend an awful lot of time on a case, for which he is not paid. The cost of a lawsuit can be very expensive. A lawyer may spend 500 or 1,000 hours on a case and not receive one penny. Contingent fees are a method of making the courts accessible. It is fair to the client and fair to the public."

Roumell opposes the qualification of expert witnesses because the system might be unfair to the plaintiff.

"I don't want the defendant to be able to tell who the expert witness can be," Roumell said. "That's letting the fox into the chicken coop."

Roumell said that an expert witness who has been selected to give a particular and biased point of view is easily identified in the courtroom.

"Those type of experts are easily broken down," he said. "One has to be skilled in presenting the facts and let the jury decide. The jury system is a good system. I would trust six jurors. People who criticize should look at the alternative system where people disappear and newspapers can't publish and labor unions can't do what they do."

He opposes a panel of physicians to screen malpractice cases because he doubts that physicians could give impartial judgments on members of their own profession.

Roumell's answer to the current liability insurance crisis is to look at the insurance system rather than the legal system.

"I would ask the insurance companies what their practices are," he said. "I would ask why insurance premiums have to dramatically increase when in the last 10 years, the industry has made in excess of $70 billion."

Roumell acknowledges that the legal profession has been suffering from an image problem in recent years.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

Who could ask for anything more?

Somebody up there (in Lansing, I mean) likes me. North High makes the state high school football playoffs for the first time in its history and do I have to travel to some God-forsaken, pit-filled mudhole of a football field in northern southeastern Michigan to cover it? Nope. North plays Detroit Murray-hyphen-Wright at 1:30 p.m. Nov. 9 AT HOME.

... From the department of incidental typos: Readers who are a darn sight sharper-eyed than I caught the error in my North-South game preview story of Oct. 31. It was North which finished the 1973 season unbeaten by trouncing South, 36-21.

... North, by the way, now leads the North-South football series, 9-8. And the Norsemen also own the biggest victory margin in the series' history after last weekend's 37-0 win.

... South's Steve Kinsley wasn't playing like his team was being shut out. Kinsley made some great defensive plays in the rain and mud on Saturday, including one play early in the game when he bulldozed North quarterback Craig Como on a second down and 7 play.

... Love those South High fans. Game time is 1 p.m. and the Devil supporters stroll in around 1:30. Apparently, it's a breach of etiquette not to be fashionably late for high school football games in Grosse Pointe.

... Figure this one out: All season long, I had no problem getting into such "foreign" football fields as Roseville and Clintondale. Showed my press pass at the South gate last Saturday and ran straight into a graduate of the Sgt. Schultz School of Gatekeepers who didn't seem too thrilled about letting me in on just my press pass.

Guess I needed to bring my passport.

... While all the attention has been focused on North's push for the playoffs and on the fortunes of the Norsemen's injured running back Mike Miller, quarterback Como has gone quietly about the business of being a top prep passer. He set a North single-season record of 1,106 yards passing by throwing for 292 yards — in the rain and the wind — last Saturday.

... Yes, South fans, there were a couple of questionable calls by the referees.

... All I kept thinking was that if it was going to rain, it should have poured. Standing out there in that mist, I kept looking back to see who was spitting at me.

... And the guy on South's side who nearly got me with the roll of toilet paper had better work on his arm curls and strengthen up that wrist action this winter. Nearly doesn't count in sportswriter target shooting.

... The meeting of the bands — North and South — was its usual success. Got to hand it to those kids who spend so much time drilling and practicing that they make it look easy out there in the mud.

... I did wonder about one thing, though: which band was it that started playing "Taps" when North went out in front, 30-0?

... Second best show of the day: The "human alphabet" routine performed by North's ersatz cheerleaders, the guys who made such a splash in their first big performance at the Clintondale game.

... Wonder what they have planned for Murray-Wright?

... One hears such great things standing on the sidelines at a high school football game. Like when North was poised on the South 1 yard line ready to bump the score to 36-0. The fans on the Norsemen side started yelling for North to let defensive tackle "Brave" Dave Queller (6-3, 230) run with the ball, ala the Chicago Bears' tackle/running back William "Refrigerator" Perry.

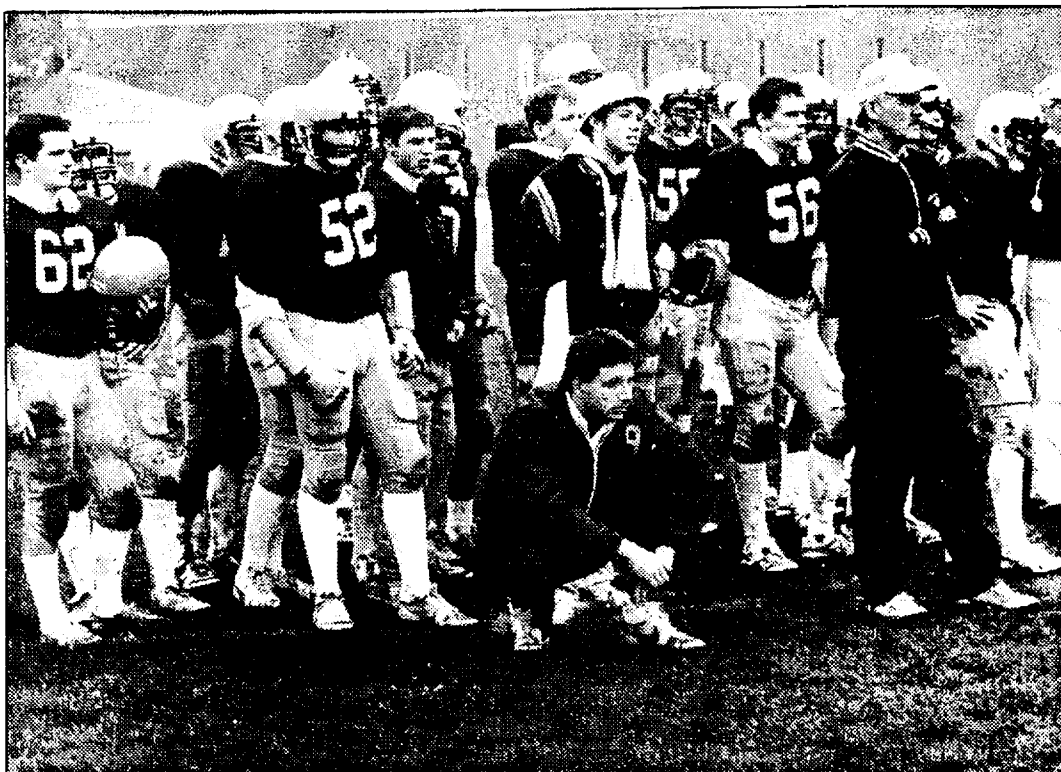

Hmmm. "Refrigerator" Queller. I like it.

... Class Act of the Day award goes to South High. The Devils hung in there, didn't respond to the loss with cheap shots and kept trying to play their game. And when the game was over, the public address announcer wished the Norsemen luck in their playoff venture.

... Best chant of the day was for the benefit of the guy who wasn't there to hear it. Seems Detroit Free Press/Metro Macomb East reporter Terry Foster made a little bet prior to the prep season: something about letting the players on North or South give him a haircut if they went unbeaten and got into the playoffs.

Foster was on assignment elsewhere when the Norsemen — with coach Frank Sumnera on their shoulders — began their "Terry, Terry, Terry" chant last Saturday.

Shear lunacy, making a bet like that. Terry. But cheer up. I hear Dick the Bruiser haircuts are in these days.

Perfect: Norsemen go 9-0, head for playoffs

By Mark Moore
North High

For the first time in 12 years, North High's varsity football team completed regular season play undefeated by trouncing crosstown rival South, 37-0. Statistically, the victory was the biggest win in the 17-year series and serves as a big moral boost for the Norsemen, who face Detroit Murray-Wright's Pilots at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 9 at North.

The Norsemen opened the scoring early in the second quarter against South, marching 58 yards in five plays ending with a 47-yard pass from Craig Como to Steve Pochmara. The extra point was good and with a 7-0 lead, North moved the ball 67 yards in four plays, ending the first half with a 41-yard field goal by Como.

In the third quarter, North defense stopped South in four downs and the Norsemen took over on their own 44. On the first play, tailback Bill Smith ran 66 yards for a touchdown. Later, halfback Casey Quick intercepted a pass and ran it back 34 yards, setting up a 12-yard touchdown pass from Como to Pochmara. North led, 23-0, after a failed extra point try.

Early in the fourth quarter, Como hit Jon Palazzo in the end zone with a 39-yard pass, ending a six-play, 66-yard drive. Como's kick was good and North led, 30-0. Brad Keats recovered a fumble on the next kickoff, sparking a 65-yard march in three plays, ending in a 1-yard dash by Como for the score.

Statistically, North rushed for 171 yards, including Smith's 108 yards in 10 carries. Como was 12-for-15 for 292 yards in the air, a new school record for one-game passing. Palazzo tied a North record with his six receptions for 161 yards and one touchdown. Pochmara had two catches for 59 yards, both touchdowns.

On defense, North allowed just 18 yards rushing, 55 yards in the air and only three South first downs. Greg Guest led the defense with eight tackles, including three behind the line. Rob Brumer, Matt Mourad and Dave Justice each had four tackles. Quick played an outstanding game, knocking down three passes and coming up with a key interception.

"I'm really proud of the kids being 9-0," said coach Frank Sumnera. "The defense has done a great job allowing only 441 yards all year. We're peaking at the right time... they were not to be denied on Saturday against South."

Cagers split

The varsity basketball team split its games last week, beating Lake Shore, 50-25, before dropping a hard-fought battle in overtime to Clintondale, 44-40.

Against Lake Shore, the girls played excellent pressure defense. Every girl scored, but junior Leslie Talos scored 20 points, had 14 rebounds and 6 steals. Sophomore Robin Wheatley followed with 7 rebounds.

Against Clintondale, the girls played well on defense against a taller Dragon team. "I couldn't have been any prouder of the girls. I appreciate their effort and respect them for their commitment and hustle," said coach Gary Bennett.

Wheatley led North with 13 points, followed by Virginia Sanders and Barbie Loeher with 7 each.

North is 8-7 overall and 5-3 in the Bi-County. The girls travel to Lakeview at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 12.

The JV beat Lake Shore, 31-25, building a 19-7 first half lead and cruising to the win. Angela Domienik had 7 points, Jenny Czerniakowski and Nicole Didur had 5 each.

The girls beat Clintondale, 55-19, riding a 29-4 half time lead to their eighth straight league game without a loss. Leading scorers were Julie Cook with 16 points and Amy Brennan and Domienik with 8 each.

The 10-5 North JV plays at Lakeview at 6 p.m. Nov. 12.

North's freshman team upped its record to 14-2, beating Fraser, 47-8, and topping Center Line, 34-22.

The win over Fraser broke the frosh record for least points allowed and most victories in a season (13). Heather Mergos led the way with 13 points, 11 rebounds, 4 assists and 5 steals. Laura Bova had 8 points and 7 rebounds, Kerri Peters had 6 points and 6 rebounds, and Kris Saliva added 5 points and 6 rebounds.

Against Center Line, Mergos led with 13 point and 19 rebounds. Kari Andrew and Lucy Barry came off the bench and had great games: Andrews had 7 and Barry added 4 points and 6 rebounds.

The frosh play South at 4 p.m. Nov. 12.

I'm really proud of the kids being 9-0...
— North Coach Frank Sumnera

Cross country team finishes a best-ever third in the state finals

By Jennifer McSorley
South High

The girls' cross country team is third in the state! South finished with 189 points, in third place behind state champ Sterling Heights Stevenson with 127, and Ann Arbor Pioneer, with 154, in the Class A championships last Saturday.

"It was a thrilling finish to a spectacular season by our team," said coach Steve Zaranek. "We ran the finest race in the history of our cross country program. The key to this race was that our star seven girls ran not as individuals, but as a team."

Nancy Solterisch placed first for South, third overall, in 18:58. Ellen Mayer was South's second runner, finishing 20th out of the 190-runner field in 19:46. Micha Song followed in 39th (20:07); Toni Tedesco was 50th, Wendy Berger was 77th, Kelly Riehl was 82nd and Megan Smucker was 110th.

South's 189 points was the best the school has done. "I'm proud of Nancy because she did the best she's ever done and because she works so hard — she deserves to do well. I'm happy we did well, but kind of sad because it was my last race," said Riehl, a senior.

Also last week were the Eastern Michigan League championships and the 9th and 10th grade Blue and Gold Invitational.

Even without their top five runners competing, South won the EML on Oct. 29. All of the girls running varsity finished within the top 10, earning All-League honors. Riehl was race champion (20:32), Berger was third, (21:05), followed by Toby Ott in fourth, Smucker in fifth and Rebecca Wasinger, seventh. The girls totaled 20 points, beating second place Anchor Bay, which had 24.

Alexandra Anglewitz was JV winner (21:33). Raquel Chapin, Michelle Brasseur, Sue Sparling, Elizabeth Lazarowitz and Reba Uthappa followed to take the top six places. Also finishing in the top 10 were Lisa Lambert (eighth), Stephanie Morreale (ninth) and Jenny Kerwin (10th).

At the 9th and 10th grade Blue and Gold Invitational for non-state competitors, Chapin led South to third place. "It was a nice way to end the season," Chapin said. "Knowing it was the last meet and having my teammates remind me during the race really put pressure on me and helped me to hit my goals." Wasinger and Jenny McSorley also finished in the top seven.

At Awards Night Nov. 6, 19 of the 27 girls earned their varsity letters.

"This was one of the very best teams I've ever coached in terms of the dedication, support and effort the girls gave to their team," said Zaranek.

Boys finish year

The boys' cross country team finished second in the EML championship, trailing Mount Clemens by 13 points, and participated in the Blue and Gold Invitational.

Finishing first for South in the EML's was Kevin English, third overall with 16:50. Kyle Anderson followed in 10th place, Matt Winquist in 12th. Close behind were John Saad, Lew Echlin, Jeff Pfendtner and Craig Bagno.

English placed 77th in the boys' state cross country meet, in 17:22. "I was very happy with my results, but I wish my team could have qualified," English said.

Coach Thomas Wise called English's race "wonderful, especially considering the problems that English has had with his leg, putting a limit on his ability to train for the meet."

South's JV squad has a one-two-three-four finish in the EML's, as Phil Orten, Dave Nicholson, Dave Sultzman and Tony Murdock crossed the finish line. Mount Clemens finished fifth, but Chris Sherwood followed to give South a score of 16, which won the meet.

In the Blue and Gold Invitational Echlin led South, finishing seventh overall (18:28). He beat the record of the best 3.1 mile course on a certified course for freshman by a few seconds.

Coach Wise said he was pleased with South's performance this year and looks forward to another successful season in 1986.

The boys were rated third during most of the season and were happy with the second place they had achieved in the post-season meets.

Gridders end season

By Stephen Ebner
South High

A wet and lifeless Confederate flag told the story last Saturday, as North defeated rival South, 37-0.

The Blue Devil defense kept the Norsemen scoreless until a tipped pass in the second quarter was caught for a touchdown. With three seconds left in the half, North kicked a field goal, to lead 10-0. Early in the third quarter, North crossed the goal line again, on a breakaway run from mid-field. The Norsemen continued their success into the fourth quarter with two touchdowns. "They are a big and strong team," said coach Russ Hepner, "and they executed on offense."

One positive aspect in the game for South was its kicking. Despite the cold and rainy weather, South booted punts of 48, 56 and 36 for an average of 47 yards.

Saturday's loss put South's record at 5-4. "It was a fun football team to coach," Hepner commented. "They are a great bunch of guys."

"The defense was outstanding all year," offensive tackle Jamie Barlow added.

The JV team beat North, 18-12, for their second win of the season. South quarterback Bryan Jones was busy, throwing for three touchdowns. Catching scoring passes of 45 and 55 yards was Ted Mills. "The offensive line was excellent," coach Lewandowski said.

Late in the game, John Binder intercepted a North pass and with seconds left, Jones found Rick Lickford for a 45-yard, game-winning TD pass.

"We had a lack of mental preparation," Lewandowski said of the season. "We couldn't carry over from the practice field to the playing field. Overall, the season was productive in establishing identities and these guys will really add to the varsity team."

The South freshman team beat rival North High, 28-7, Oct. 30, making it a true "Devils' Night."

North had jumped out to an early lead with a 75-yard touchdown pass on the third play of the game. The Devils came back and took a 22-7 lead at halftime. "We controlled the ball," said coach Dan Griesbaum. "And we had a lot of good, sustained drives."

The brilliant running of fullback Steve Rice continued; he rushed for 126 yards in 23 carries and scored three touchdowns. Rob Crane joined the action with 54 yards in nine carries, including a two-point conversion. Mike Ferro added a touchdown.

The frosh finished with a 5-3-1 mark. "The last two games we really came together," Griesbaum said. "It was a very successful season, despite the record."

Swimmers at 7-1

South's girls' swim team raised its record to 7-1 by defeating Warren Woods Tower, 138-20, Oct. 31.

South dominated the meet, taking firsts in all 11 events. Individual winners were Nancy Vettorello in the 50 and 100 free; Karen Rent-schler in the backstroke; GERALYN Bocci in the 200 and 500 free; Alison Rowley in the 200 medley; Christie Weinberg in the 100 butterfly; Allison Crissman, diving; and Patti Molloy in the 100 breast. Molloy's win qualified her for the states; she's the sixth from South to qualify.

"The girls are swimming faster and the last couple of meets. We are hopeful this will continue," said coach Tim Kennary. "We're looking at Huron as a warm-up for the North-South meet."

Cager update

The girls' varsity basketball team split its games last week, beating Port Huron, 52-39, and losing to Mount Clemens, 58-40.

Heidi Albrecht set a school record with 26 points against Port Huron. Lynn Vismara had 10 points and Carmina Amezcua had 9 rebounds.

Albrecht had 12 points in the loss to Mount Clemens. "I didn't even know about the school scoring record and I didn't know I had 26 points, but I'm happy," Albrecht said.

The JV won both of its games, topping Port Huron, 36-19, and beating Mount Clemens, 48-35. Stephanie Dinka, Roseann MacConnachie and Megan Keller had 8 points each against Port Huron. Keller also had 11 rebounds.

Keller led South against Mount Clemens with 14 points and Dinka and Patty Pentecost had 11 points each.

South's JV is 12-3 overall, 3-1 in the EML.

South's frosh beat Anchor Bay, 45-37, but saw their eight-game winning streak snapped by East Detroit, 54-35, later in the week.

Heather Adragna led South against Anchor Bay with 12 points. Maya Davis, Lorrie Geist, Sara Heck and Megan Nelson had 6 points each. Against East Detroit, Leigh Leonard had 10 points, Heck had 13 rebounds and Davis grabbed 11 rebounds. (By Jennifer McSorley)

Pictured above is the 1985 South High girls' cross country team which just completed its best season ever. The girls placed third in the state, won their seventh straight EML title, completed their second straight unbeaten season and captured four major invitational first place titles.

Walk champs

Grosse Pointe North High's track provided the setting for this year's 5K Race Walk Championship and the only factor other than the weather was how the competition would deal with ace walker Gary Morgan.

A quick first lap by Morgan split the field. Morgan then pushed to increase his lead, crossing the first mile in 7:08. This effort allowed him a 42-second lead over master's walker Max Green of Taylor and University of Detroit Junior Dan O'Brien of Port Huron. The remainder of the large field spread itself out.

Morgan continued to press the pace, crossing the second mile in 7:14. The only concern in the eyes of the competition was who would finish second. Morgan, 25, of Clarkston, finished in 22:31. Green finished second, well behind Morgan, in 24:34 and O'Brien, third in 25:38.

Veteran walker and Master's National Champion this year, Leon Jasnowski, 41, of Utica, placed fourth in 25:41. Pointer Greg Near was fifth in 26:55, with eastside walking teacher Frank Soby sixth in 27:16.

Jennifer Green, an 18-year-old student at the University of Michigan, walked away from her competition, winning the women's division (30:05). Green's last mile was done in 9:10, allowing her to place well ahead of master's walker Louise Goodman of Northville. Goodman finished in 33:48 and Susan Lolli of Detroit finished third in 34:02.

In the companion 2K novice race, Jerry Wolf was the first walker in at 13:07, with Vivian Burrows of Kalamazoo second in 14:53.

Over 30 walkers competed in this year's event.

The Total Runner Shop on Mack Avenue and Harper Sport on Harper provided a number of raffle prizes for this event; refreshment and race assistance were provided by the Assumption Cultural Center.

They did it again

GLYC ends fall season

The final race of the 1985 Great Lakes Yacht Club Fall Series was held Oct. 27 under sunny skies and 6-12 knot winds. Following are the final results of the Fall Series (best four of five races):

PHRF A: Sure, D. Naples; Rage, R. Lakits; Natural High, M. Hall.

PHRF B: Plexus, J. Higgins; Top Gallant, Salden/Paschke; More Trauma, M. Goran.

PHRF C: Tangent, Ingersoll; Blue Image, Darnell; Magic, Podgorski.

PHRF D: Harlequin, Duker;

Tunas end league year

Our Lady Star of the Sea High School's girls' varsity basketball team completed its league season last week, finishing with a 5-5 record. The girls will begin playoff action Nov. 14.

Star began the week of Oct. 28 with a 46-39 loss to St. Clement. Marissa Bautista had 11 points and Kelly Kiefer, 10, to lead the Tunas.

Shenanigans, D. Connolly; Lorax, Deeds.

The Championship Series Overall Winners (combination of overall Fall Series and the double-counter H. Boston Memorial Race) were: Tangent, Ingersoll; Plexus, Higgins; and Epic, Adams.

The GLYC is planning a Long Distance Double Handed Race for the spring of 1986. Interested sailors should write to the Great Lakes Yacht Club Race Committee, 23900 Jefferson, St. Clair Shores, 48080, to be placed on the mailing list.

The girls closed the league schedule with a 41-40 win over St. Anne. Tracy Walker, Kristi Widgren and Beth Allor each had 10 points as Star finished in fourth place in the Catholic League's A-East section.

Kiefer and Allor have been named to the All-League team for their performance this year, according to coach Kathy Merony.

Pair of 'old salts' earns Boat of the Year honors

By Peggy O'Connor

One boat is sailed by a just-for-the-fun-of-it group of sailors whose average age is 50; the other, by a sharp crew of familiar faces on the national sailing circuits. What they have in common is that each has been named 1985 Boat of the Year in its class by the Offshore Racing Club of Detroit.

George and John Uznis, owners of IOR (International Offshore Rule) Boat of the Year "Nitissima," and William McGraw, who skippers PRF (Performance Handicap Rule) Boat of the Year "Irish Mist II," picked up their Charles W. Stodgel Boat of the Year trophies at the ORCD awards dinner at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club last Friday night.

Boat of the Year honorees are chosen from the top three overall finishers in each class through a comparison of their corrected times throughout the year. To qualify, boats must meet all requirements for class season championship, place in the top three in their class, and sail four of six major races during the season, including the Bayview Port Huron to Mackinac event.

For the Uznis brothers, the 1985 Boat of the Year award marks the fourth time they've been honored as skippers of season's top IOR vessel. But their victories with their first boat, Hot Flash, in 1976, 1977 and 1978, haven't detracted from their feelings about this year's prize.

"It feels good. It was a very long season with a lot of different conditions . . . and it's just nice to be here," said George Uznis.

The brothers bought the Frers 50, built for an Italian buyer at Green Marine in Leamington, England, last February and completed a fine first year with Nitissima, sailing out of Bayview. They won eight of the 14 ORCD qualifying races and finished second overall in the Mackinac.

"Sailing on Lake St. Clair, you are generally faced with all the conditions a sailor can be faced with. But the roughest race of the year was the Mackinac. It was a real test for both the boat and the crew," Uznis said.

A test Nitissima passed with flying colors. And she still isn't finished, according to her skipper, who is completing his 17th year on the sailing circuit, nine of them as a boat owner.

RIGHT NOW, Nitissima is enroute south after winning the Manhasset Bay four-race series off Long Island last month. The 100-foot event featured some of the country's top IOR racers and is seen as a preparatory race for February's SORC (Southern Offshore Racing Club) race which begins in St. Petersburg, Fla., and ends in Nassau, the Bahama Islands.

"When you talk about a boat of the year, you're talking about one boat and a crew of 15 being recognized from among 250 boats and 2,000 crew," said ORCD commodore and 1984 Boat of the Year skipper John Stevens. "It's a distinction well-merited."

"We were consistent, that certainly helped," Uznis explained. "And I've got a fine crew . . . the finest in the area. They are people who 'play the game' — take racing seriously. People like Stu Argo, who sailed in the Canada's Cup, as did Mike Thompson. Some darn good guys," he added.

Nitissima's other crew members are Wally Cross, Guy Wadsworth, Eric Hollerback, Nigel Ingram, George McCroskey, Gerry Clixby, John Upton, Russ Nutter, Gary Snider and Spike Neesley.

If the IOR Boat of the Year crew was comprised of "darn good guys," then the top PRF craft of 1985 must have been sailed by a crew of "good old boys." At least that's how Bill McGraw, skipper of the Islander 41 Irish Mist II, feels about them.

"The whole story of this championship is that the average age of our crew was over 50," McGraw said. "We're the kind of guys who love to sail . . . and the kind who get together every Saturday during the winter for lunch."

"Sure, I'm happy about the championship. It only took 28 years."

Irish Mist II was built in 1968 and purchased by McGraw in 1977 — which is about when most of his current crew signed on. It's that kind of stability the Grosse Pointe resident credits as the basis for this year's success.

"Six of the nine crew (which includes Bill Burt, Joe Carollo, Jack Fleck, Tom Casson, Bob and Bill McGraw, John Rettenbach, Jim Scannell and Jim Weiss) have been with us for nine years. We've stayed together so long that things just get done automatically out there on the boat," McGraw said.

Irish Mist II's 1985 Mackinac victory was the highlight of the season . . . until the boat of the year honors. "Our success was due to the fact that no one got seasick," the veteran sailor said with a laugh.

Having fun is the name of the game for McGraw, a two-time Mackinac champion. "There are people who spend a lot of money on racing and if that's what they like, fine. Certainly, our aim is to have fun, but we do campaign every race."

This year, McGraw's sailing season of fun, with a little campaigning and some cruising the lake with his family was capped perfectly with boat of the year honors.

"It just proves that if you live long enough and stay with it, something good might happen," he said, chuckling.

Nitissima

Runners-up are honored

Nitissima and Irish Mist II weren't the only boats picking up honors at last Friday night's ORCD dinner at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. Runner-up boats in IOR and PRF classes were also recognized.

Behind 1985 IOR Boat of the Year Nitissima was first runner-up Lunatic, a Frers 46 owned by Richard Grow; second runner-up Sprint, a Joubert Nivel 40 owned by John Stevens; third runner-up Stars and Stripes, a Nelson 41 skippered by Bill Martin; and fourth runner-up Fujimo, a Frers 50 owned by Jerome Schostak.

Runners-up in the PRF Boat of the Year competition, won by Irish Mist, are Rampage, a Catalina 38 owned by Sullivan/Replogle; East-erly, a Chance 30 skippered by Herbert Mainwaring; Natalie J, a CC 35 owned by P. O'Neil; Sure, a J 36 owned by D. Naples; and Mystique, a Pearson 30 skippered by D. Schappe.

ULS gridders finish with a victory

By Oscar Alcantara
ULS

After going a week and a half without a game, the University Liggett School football team took an impressive 39-8 victory over the 6-1 Clarenceville Trojans on Wednesday, Oct. 31, in the final game of the year.

The Knights started poorly and were forced to punt on the first offensive sequence. The snap on this punt flew over kicker John Birgbauer's head giving Clarenceville possession on the 3-yard line. The Trojans scored easily, and held on to this lead throughout the first quarter.

The Knights' potent offense, which has gained an average of 270 yards per game, came alive in the second quarter. After Clarenceville was forced to punt from its 40, freshman Dike Ajiri rushed 49 yards on a quick pitch to score ULS's first touchdown. On the following kickoff, the Trojans' return man fumbled the ball, setting up the Knights' second scoring drive. The rest of the scoring for the half came from a 29-yard field goal by senior John Birgbauer, and a spectacular 45-yard pass from Bill Listman to tight end Ed Brady.

Clarenceville's offense fared well in the second half, gaining 143 yards, but failed to score against the Knight's stingy defense. ULS, by contrast, scored early in the fourth quarter, again with a Listman-Brady completion. After the Knight's secondary defense gained its only interception of the night, the final score came on a quick pitch to Ajiri for 28 yards. Other standouts were fullback Oscar Alcantara, who rushed for 124 yards and a touchdown, and linebacker Marty Tibbitts, who made 13 ULS tackles.

The Knights finished the 1985 season with a 3-3-1 record.

Hockey team 11-1-1

The University Liggett varsity field hockey team ended its season with a record of 11-1-1. The final games were decisive victories over Dearborn (3-0) and Maumee Valley Country Day in Toledo, Ohio (3-0).

MOT's 'Martha' delivers audience a good-natured good time

By Elsa Frohman
My first exposure to opera came at an early age when I saw a Bugs Bunny cartoon lampooning Wagner's "Ring of the Niebelung." Elmer Fudd wore a horned helmet and sang "Kill the wabbit," to the tune of "The Ride of the Valkyries," while Bugs Bunny played Brunhilde. The cartoon is a classic, and very funny, but like many of the children who saw it, I formed an impression of opera as an art form where over-weight tenors and sopranos stagger around the stage bellowing as they take 30 minutes or more to die.

I was in high school when a date took me to a touring Metropolitan Opera production of "Carmen," and I found out that opera can be tuneful, spectacular, and above all, entertaining.

The gap between the Michigan Opera Theatre's production of "Martha," and the popular conception of opera as heavy, downbeat and stultifying, is so great that many have been tempted to call "Martha" something other than opera. It has been labeled a musical, a romance and a comedy. It is all of that, but it is also a genuine, authentic opera.

The MOT production, which continues through this weekend at the Fisher Theatre, is a delight to the eye and ear. The plot is hardly worth recounting. It is the inconsequential story of the bored Lady Harriet, who takes her maid, Nancy, and her boring admirer, Sir Tristram, out on an adventure where they masquerade as peasants. Under the assumed name, Martha, Lady Harriet and Nancy are hired as servants by two farmers, Lionel and Plunkett. Of course, Lionel is, unbeknownst to anyone but Queen Victoria, the heir to the exiled Earl of Derby, unjustly banished from the court. To make a long story short, Martha and Lionel and Nancy and Plunkett fall in love. At first there is no hope because of the disparity in the lovers' stations, however, love triumphs and Lionel is restored to his rightful title as Earl.

But never mind the cotton candy plot. You don't go to the opera to see great plots. You go to the opera for spectacle and music. "Martha" delivers.

The show is full of tunes you can hum as you leave the theater. The music is lively, light and spiced with toe-tapping dance rhythms. The performances are delightfully tongue in cheek. It's easy to see that the cast is having as good a time as the audience.

The strongest performances were turned in by Alice Baker, as the maid, Nancy; and Kristian Johannsson, as Lionel, Paul Geiger, as Plunkett, was the perfect country bumpkin with just the right touch of machismo. Michael van Engen, as Sir Tristram, the biggest bore in England, was a memorable buffoon, despite a sore throat on opening night.

No account of "Martha" would be complete without some mention of the eight royal hunting beagles, Blue, Christine, Honey, Joe, Lucy, Morgan, Sam and Sparky. They amounted to a clever promotion for the show, garnering more media attention in the days before the show opened than any of the two-legged stars. The eight dogs and their handler were on stage for something less than 30 seconds, but managed to steal the scene as eight tails wagged enthusiastically. You might think of the dogs as the "seventh inning stretch," designed to wake up the audience and bring their attention back to the show.

They were hardly necessary in such a lively production.

"Martha" was written by Friedrich von Flotow, with a Libretto by W. Friedrich Riese. This production used a fresh, vital new translation into English by George and Phyllis Mead.

The show was first performed by Vienna in 1847. It was a popular staple for many opera companies until World War II when it fell from favor as being too naive.

The MOT's production has its tongue planted firmly in its cheek. The show is presented strictly for fun and the audience opening night was carried along for a delightful romp in an England that never was.

Sharon Christman, in the title role of "Martha" and Kristian Johannsson, as her lover, Lionel, sing a duet in the Michigan Opera Theatre's production of "Martha." The show continues through this weekend at the Fisher Theater. For tickets, call the MOT at 874-SING.

Local children's choruses to perform in U of M concert

George Crumb will return to his alma mater, the University of Michigan, to attend rehearsals and a performance of two of his works.

"Songs, Drones and Refrains of Death" and "Star-Child: A Parable for Soprano, Antiphonal Children's Voices and Large Orchestra" will be performed Tuesday, Nov. 12 at 8 p.m. in Hill Auditorium by the University Philharmonia and the Contemporary Directions Ensemble, Carl St. Clair, director. The children's choruses from Christ Church in Grosse Pointe, D. Frederick De Haven, conducting, will be featured.

At Michigan, Crumb studied with Ross Lee Finney and earned his doctor of musical arts degree in 1960. Now teaching at the University of Pennsylvania, Crumb has received numerous prestigious honors and awards, including the Pulitzer Prize, a grant from the Koussevitzky Foundation, the Guggenheim and the International Rostropovich Composers Award.

"Songs, Drones and Refrains of Death" is a musical setting of four poems by the Spanish poet Federico Garcia Lorca. It has been called "music which... perfectly complements the poet's words... an enormously powerful composition of striking beauty." Stephen Morscheck, a graduate student in voice from Lombard, Ill., will sing the baritone solo.

"Star-Child," described as a sort of requiem mass without the religion, is rarely heard because of its vast scope. The work requires large forces to perform it, including two children's choruses, four conductors, a separate orchestra in addition to the dominant ensemble and a handbell choir.

On Monday, Nov. 11, from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. in the Recital Hall at the School of Music, Crumb will meet the public.

Both the Nov. 11 session and the Nov. 12 concert are free.

18 Italian words you can't say without your hands.

Most people think that every word spoken in Italian must be accompanied with expressive hand gestures. Not true. There are some Italian words, like Fiat, you can say without your hands. However, words like "Bella" and "Mama Mia" and all things relating to "Pasta" absolutely must be spoken (as well as eaten) with the hands. OK? Hands ready, here's Italian lesson #1 at Pastissima.

Fresh Pasta
Available in egg, spinach, or whole wheat noodles, cut to order.

Tagliarini-a very thin noodle, magnificent with cream sauces.

Fettuccine-flat, wide noodle invented by a man named Alfredo.

Lasagne-real wide flat noodles, used to make, what else, lasagne.

Sauces
Prepared fresh daily.

Quattro Formaggi-means four cheeses, sharpness of Gorgonzola, blended with three milder cheeses, attractive with spinach noodles.

Alfredo-same man who invented fettuccine is responsible for this classic white sauce. Rich combination of butter, parmesan, heavy cream with hint of freshly grated nutmeg.

Marinara-squid, shrimp, clams, scallops in a tomato sauce.

Cured Meats
Genoa Salame-cured pork, great for submarines or other cruise ships.

Prosciutto-air-cured Italian ham, accompanies figs, melons, other fruit well.

Cheeses
Braided Scamorze-smoked semi-soft cheese.

Torta-basil layered white cheese.

Caprini-small, soft white cheese.

Reggiano Parmesan-mild, hard cheese you grate for salads and pastas.

Topo Gigio-Italian mouse cheese, good for watching Ed Sullivan reruns.

End of lesson. Now come in and pick up your homework.

A strange world in 'After Hours'

By Marian Trainor
It begins so innocently. A word processor operator, Paul Hackett (Griffin Dunne), is sitting in a coffee shop rereading his favorite book, "Tropic of Cancer." He catches the eye of Marcy (Rosanne Arquette), an attractive blonde who is sitting across from him. They exchange comments about the book and before she leaves, she gives him her phone number. Later that night, alone and lonely in his apartment, he calls her. She invites him to her Soho loft and his nocturnal misadventures begin.

On the way there he loses his last $20 out of the window of the speeding cab. Arriving at his destination he is met, not by Marcy but by her roommate, a sultry sculptress whom he later finds has a fondness for leather and chains.

Eventually Marcy returns. They go to her room where she recites the sad story of her life with her former husband who was somewhat weird.

Marcy is not your run-of-the-mill well-adjusted girl. She is something of a neurotic who uses drugs for mysterious burns. While she is out of the room, Paul picks up a book that has vivid and explicit pictures of burn victims in it. Turned off by the entire set-up, he leaves.

With 97 cents in his pocket, he makes his way to the railroad station in the pouring rain just in time to catch the last train, only to find that the fare has gone up to $1.50.

Frustrated he wanders into an after-hours bar where the bartender offers to loan him train fare if he will go to his apartment and get a key for the cash register. Paul goes, but while he is there, he is confronted by a gang of angry tenants who think he is the burglar who has been ripping them off.

But now the audience is ready for anything and it happens.

In an attempt to elude them, Paul encounters a whole menagerie of characters; a love-lorn waitress, (Terry Garr), caught in the time wrap of the '60s who keeps a ring of rat traps around her bed; a blonde ice cream vendor who wants to play nurse (Catherine O'Hara); a timid bearded fellow (Robert Plunkett) who picks up Paul for his first homosexual adventure.

Some of the places where he seeks refuge are pretty spaced out too, such as a crowded noisy bar where everyone must have a mohawk to enter. Those without one are seized and brought up to code in a barber chair kept there for that purpose.

At the end of his rope and crying, "I just want to go home," he stumbles into the Club Berline where he meets a lonely sculptress. He puts his last quarter in the juke box before sitting down with her and out comes the velvet voice of Peggy Lee intoning her most poignant song, "Is that all there is?"

All of the characters Paul encounters turn out to be related in odd ways. They are a community. They belong. Paul, representative of the normal life, is on the outside. What happens to him is a way of telling him, "Keep out, Square."

As Paul, Griffin Dunne turns in an outstanding performance of a character out of control in a strange environment. He is both funny and touching and he is supported in his efforts by an outstanding cast.

The script, written by 26-year-old Joseph Minion, is a first effort but it shows a real talent for the nuances of speech. Each of his characters rings true. Director Martin Scorsese again proves his talents as he did in "Raging Bull" and "The King of Comedy."

On his way back to the bar, he sees two heavyweights (Cheech and Chong) carrying a sculpture out of Marcy's loft. He rescues it, carries it up flights of stairs and finds Marcy dead.

He makes a swift departure only to become involved in more disastrous incidents, including murder and pursuit by a band of vigi-

If there is a moral to this story, it is this: If you are alone in a room in New York and you don't know the city, stay there.

On another level, the comedy could be taken as an allegory of an individual's struggle to escape chaos into a world of sanity and security.

To Live And Die In L.A. would be better off dead

By Mike Andrzejczyk

If you like your movies artsy, violent, visually haunting but with characters that have been cut from cardboard and pasted up on the screen, then you'll like "To Live And Die In L.A."

The basic story line is time worn. Old cop and young cop are partners. Old cop, a couple of days away from retirement, gets himself killed and young cop, dragging along younger cop, goes after the bad guys to make them pay.

Instead of New York City beat cops, Los Angeles street cops, state or FBI agents, this time the cops involved happen to be Secret Service agents. The cliches are just the same, though.

The film opens with a little mood setting. Young cop and old cop are part of the entourage protecting the president on an appearance in L.A. Young cop spots a waiter, and as young cops always do, smells a rat and heads to investigate.

He finds that the waiter has become a dynamite-wrapped Arab terrorist. While young cop keeps the unwrapped terrorist talking, old cop scales the wall to get behind the terrorist and pulls him off the roof, sending him plummeting toward the ground, a fall broken by the explosion of the dynamite. Old cop makes the scene complete by saying he's too old for that kind of work.

After that mood-setter, the movie slides into a few scenes to develop the relationship between old cop and young cop. They are, to be kind, artfully interesting. At their worst, they are the scenes you'd expect to see out of any television cop show.

On to the next cliché. Old cop, with three days left until retirement, decides to make the most of them so he can get the big crook counterfeiter before he retires. Suffice to say that, three shotgun blasts later, the big crook counterfeiter has gotten the old cop and has earned the undying enmity of young cop.

Young cop ends up with younger partner who he doesn't want to work with and who, oddly enough, believes in the mission of young cop. Even when young cop tells his partner that his plan to get the front money to help them bag the big crook counterfeiter involves robbing someone, younger cop tells young cop about how his grandfather was a cop, his father was a cop and he couldn't do it. Three guesses as to whether or not younger cop goes along.

There are good moments in the movie. It is, if nothing else, a hauntingly artsy movie. From its opening orange sunrise, the movie makes Los Angeles an important part of the movie, if not the only character in it that shows some life. "To Live And Die" takes viewers from the freeways, warehouse districts, topless bars and downtown "scrappers of the city."

The only other character that shows even the same hint of complexity as the city is the villain. The big crook counterfeiter is really a seriously unbalanced criminal artist, burning the things he creates. He has style, although bad taste in his choice of companions.

The trouble is, you have to really work to catch the counterfeiter's complexities. You have to watch his face when he burns his paintings, when he works on producing the plates to print money or when he brings along special friends for his woman companion.

And if that crook looks familiar, it's because you may remember him as biker-demon, Raven, in "Streets of Fire." He's a little sicker and a lot more complex in this movie.

In the end, "To Live And Die In L.A." is a sadly inadequate movie. Its action, when there, can be frenetic. The movie has probably the best chase scene yet filmed. But because of the sadly plodding progress of the plot, that chase feels like the movie's climax, even though there's still 40 minutes of movie still to come. Some less patient viewers were walking out when the plot hit one of its deeper pits.

This isn't a film you should take your first date to see. There are five relatively grisly gunshot deaths, a score of nude scenes or situations that can politely be termed "adult" and language that would make a longshoreman blush.

So, if you like seeing L.A., go see this movie. If not, don't bother.

Harvest dinner at Trinity Episcopal planned by Detroit Historical Society

The public is invited to join Detroit Historical Society members and friends for a harvest dinner Thursday, Nov. 14, at Trinity Episcopal church. It is one of the dinners in the society's Pubs, Clubs and Private Dining Series.

Built by Detroit News founder James E. Scripps to "stimulate, if possible, in church architecture a return to the older and more truly artistic forms," Trinity Church is Gothic in style. It has many features borrowed from 14th century countryside churches in southern England; notable are the exterior gargoyles which serve as downspouts. The building is constructed entirely of stone with only a small amount of wood. The stout of heart will be invited to climb the bell tower.

Guests will be asked to leave their cars at the Detroit Historical museum and board the Historymobile for the ride over to the church. Following a social hour, a harvest-type dinner, prepared by members of the congregation, will be served. The evening ends with a tour of the interior of the church which boasts an oak barrel vault with rich tracery of the chancel resembling the ceiling of the Chapter House of Canterbury Cathedral. The Historymobile will leave the museum parking lot at 6:30 p.m. and should return by 10 p.m.

Advance reservations are required and may be made by mailing a check to the Detroit Historical Society, 5401 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. 48202. Member tickets are $35 per person and $40 for non-members.

The program is one of the dinners presented in the Pubs, Clubs and Private Dining series presented to acquaint members and friends with Metropolitan Detroit landmarks normally not open for private visits. Non-members are encouraged to participate and learn about the Detroit Historical Society and its activities in a congenial and entertaining atmosphere.

For more information, call 879-7934 during office hours Monday through Friday.

India film captures people, culture

"Irresistible India," a look at an exotic country from its famed Taj Mahal to its towering Himalayas, will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14, at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts.

The film and narration, presented by Commander Karl Stein, is part of the Center's popular Travel Series, coordinated by lecturer and TV personality Dennis Glen Cooper and sponsored this season by the Automobile Club of Michigan.

Stein, known for the credibility of his travelogues, sought to capture what he calls "the excitement of India, teeming with life." In addition to their focus on the area's scenic wonders and geographic landmarks, his cameras pay special attention to the nation's people, their homes, schools and culture and how they work and play.

A world explorer and sailing enthusiast who served as navigator on the winning boat in two of Michigan's Mackinac races, Stein has lectured for many years throughout the United States and Canada. He has presented his travelogues before such prestigious audiences as the National Geographic Society in Washington, D.C.

After graduating from Brown University with a collection of intercollegiate wrestling medals in addition to his degree, he became the only American member of the British expedition that spent five months exploring the jungles of the Mosquitia Coast in Honduras. He later joined the Snyder Mountain Expedition that surveyed uncharted areas of Canada along the Yukon border.

During World War II, Stein spent four years at sea on various combat vessels. They included the troop transport Wakefield that was sunk by the enemy. He was executive officer of the destroyer escort Mosley, which was awarded a unit citation for its anti-submarine activities in the Mediterranean.

Tickets for all Travel Series presentations at the Center are $4 for adults and $3 for students and senior citizens. They may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The Center is located on the Center Campus on Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

'Royal Family' at Hilberry

George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber's "The Royal Family" opens at the Hilberry Theatre Nov. 21, following previews Nov. 15 and 16. The production continues through Jan. 31, in repertory with "Step, Look and Listen," "The Taming of the Shrew" and later, "Equus."

"The Royal Family" is a story of the strength and unity of an ordinary family caught in the extraordinary lifestyle of the theatre.

The three generations of actors include a budding actress who marries a stockbroker to the amazement of her family. Her mother Julie (a thinly disguised Ethel Barrymore) must decide between the nerve-wracking business of the theatre and a millionaire husband. Julie's brother Tony (undoubtedly John Barrymore) is a theatre actor who has made the transition to screen, but only pops up when escaping from his latest flame or contract. Fanny is the matriarch who made the family name synonymous with quality actors. She keeps her brood from becoming carried away with their status and keeps her family close with her strength and wisdom.

"The Royal Family" cast includes Cheryl Williams (Fanny), Tom Whalen (Tony), Lynne Kadish (Julie) and Melanie Metcalf (Gwen) in major roles. It is directed by Robert Emmett McGill, with scenery designed by John Wade, costumes by Valerie Dawn Moore and lighting by Mark Highland.

Tickets and information are available at the University Theatre box office, Cass and Hancock, phone, 577-2972. Tickets are also available from any metro AAA office or J.C. Penney store.

WSU band, director honored

Wayne State University's symphonic band and its director, Professor Harold H. Arnoldi, have added two more accolades to an impressive list. Of more than 400 audition tapes submitted nationwide, the WSU symphonic band is one of four university bands chosen to participate in the biennial Music Educators National Conference in April 1986 in Anaheim, Calif.

And Arnoldi was selected by "The School Musician," an international publication for music directors and teachers, as one of 10 leaders in music education to be honored for "outstanding contributions" and "lasting influence" on music education in the United States and Canada.

Arnoldi, who lives in Harper Woods, joined WSU in 1967 while serving full-time as Cass Technical High School's head of music and director of bands. In June 1969 he was appointed to WSU's faculty.

Under his leadership, WSU bands have premiered eight major works. In June 1982 the WSU band conducted a concert tour in the People's Republic of China, one of the first from an American university to do so.

REPORT TO ADVERTISERS:

Dis·ci·pline

(dis-ə-plən) n. system of rules governing conduct.

Discipline—in gathering news and reporting the facts—is the rule in our newsroom. It's also the rule in our sales efforts—our advertising rates are based upon accurate circulation information. The rules of conduct are laid down by a self-governing body and recognized throughout the industry.

We're proud that our newspaper measures up to the standards of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, a not-for-profit organization whose nearly 5,000 members represent all areas of the advertising and publishing industries in the United States and Canada.

At regular intervals, ABC makes an independent audit of our circulation activities—then issues reports on our progress. Facts, without opinion, in an easy-to-read format.

Before you buy any advertising, ask to see a copy of the latest ABC Audit Report. We'll be pleased to show you ours.
