Time in a bottle

City Public Safety Officer Al 'Skip' Fincham brought an interesting artifact into the newsroom recently. It was a beer bottle dating back to 1926 discovered in the rafters of the playhouse located on the grounds of the old Ranger estate, which is now being demol-

Skip was helping the firefighters' academy train a group of new recruits last week. Since the house was being demolished anyway, the smoke eaters were allowed to use the building for training purposes.

One group worked on ventilating roofs, and in the process found the beer bottle and a 1926 Detroit Free Press in the rafters. Speculation has it the workmen building the structure back in 1926 drank beer with lunch, read the paper, then stuck it into the rafters and roofed it over, sort of creating a little time capsule.

The bottle, and its label, are still in great shape. It's for a product I've never heard of — Kling's Prost, A Beer for Guest and Host.

Brewed and bottled in Detroit, it declared itself "Pure and without drugs or poison." There's also a spider inside, dead and entombed these many

I've heard the edition of the Free Press is pretty interesting too, although I haven't seen it. In the sports section they wrote that the Yankees were counting on Babe Ruth to lead them to another great year. Well, he did and he didn't. The Bambino hit 48 home runs but-the Bombers lost the World Series four games to three to the Cardinals. The Tigers came in sixth and the Indians claimed second place, if you can believe that

The following year, the Yanks won 110 games, lost 44 and Ruth hit 60 home runs. They defeated the Pirates four games to zip in the series, which may be why Yankees were considered to be the greatest team of all time.

Thanks and many tips of the hat to the public library's Blaine Morrow for help digging up these statistics.

That distinction won him a spot in Sports Illustrated's "Faces in the Crowd" honor section in their Nov. 4th issue.

He's also the only freshman named last year to the NCAA Division III All-Mideast soccer team.

For shame!

C'mon, let's lighten up out there in Norseman land. The word from NHS was that after the North-South football game, which North won 37-0, the school began receiving highly irate calls from parents complaining that North wasn't receiving proper coverage in the Grosse Pointe News.

Their proof? Two photos of South students on the front page. One showed a South player whose father initiated a lawsuit with the Wayne County Circuit Court over his son's player eligibility status.

It was a news story, sports fans, not a sports story. It's kind of difficult manufacturing a (Continued on Page 18A)

By Mike Andrzejczyk Is the Grosse Pointe Public

School System getting out of the real estate business?

It may well be, considering the board's decision Monday night to consider selling a parking lot it formerly leased to the Farms, but for which there has been no agreement since June 1982.

The parking lot adjacent to Messner Field which is now used by the Farms as a by-permit-only facility, holds 84 cars. The city normally sells permits for the lot mally sells permits for the lot, which cost $30 quarterly.

The property, which appears to be zoned for parking, has been assessed at $118,000, according to Superintendent John Whritner. It is of no educational value to the system, which could otherwise benefit from the sale, he added.

The lease ran out with the Farms in June 1982. Under the terms of the one-year agreed extension, the Farms received use of the lot from June 1981 to June 1982 for $1. The lease that expired in 1981 included clauses that the school system receive certain services from the

For its part, the city maintained and protected the lot, often used after business hours on the Hill by those using the adjacent play field.

When asked why it had taken three years for the system to decide what to do with the property, board President John Gandelot said the board was aware the lease was up, but there were other, higher priority matters that had to be dealt with.

Since the one-year extension was granted in 1981, the system has had three superintendents, one interim and one acting superintendent. There was also the school-closing and recall issues as well as reorganization of administrators after retirements at the end of the 1983-84 school year.

members speculated.

Whritner told the board Monday night he wanted to bring up the matter "to plant a seed of an idea" on what to do with the lot. He added he will recommend in December that the board sell the property.

The move should not reflect poorly on the Farms, board members

"The relationship has been excellent over the years between the school system and the city . . ." board Vice President Vincent Lo-Cicero said. "Now that the lease has expired, I don't see any use for the property. It seems to me the property should be sold by putting it up for the highest bidder.

Farms officials say they may be interested in the property if the price is right. The school system owns a number of properties not directly related to education. Besides the superintendent's home on Grosse Pointe Boulevard, the school system also owns Elworthy Field and a parking lot adjacent to Maire Elementary School in the Village which it currently leases to the City, officials said. There may be another use for the Farms property besides as a parking lot, however.

At the direction of Gandelot, the administration will look into the possibility of adding the lot to the adjacent playfield should they decide not to sell it. The extra space may help accommodate a freshman soccer program at the high schools, which the board decided Monday night to make part of its 1986-87 budget year process. Grosse Pointe Soccer Association registrar Diane Karabetsos presented petitions she said were signed by several hundred people asking the board of consider starting a freshman soccer team at the high schools.

There are leagues in which the freshman high school could play and there are enough players to fill the roster of the team, Karabetsos

"When the final cuts are made after Labor Day, the soccer association scrambles to put together a team for these boys," Karabetsos said. "We feel the boys are the losers. We feel they should be playing for their schools and building their confidence."

Athletic directors at both high schools have said they approve of a freshman soccer program, Karabetsos said.

Being considered as part of new year's budget isn't assurance the program will come, however. Any number of items have failed to make the cut between the initial requests by departments and final approval of the budget in June 1986.

War Memorial out of bidding for liquor license

By Nancy Parmenter

Count the War Memorial down but not out as far as a liquor license is concerned. The board has yet to examine its options, but "we're going to do something," Director Mark Weber said.

Unable to put together a package deal for the entire assets of the Bronze Door, the War Memorial lost out to a newly formed corporation, Standby No. 5. The company submitted a bid of $320,000, but upped the ante to $375,000 in bidding at federal bankruptcy court Nov. 8.

George Peck, a partner at Marco Eagan Kennedy Timmis, who is listed as Standby's incorporator, said he is not yet at liberty to disclose the corporate backers or their plans. The only timetable he is working with is the closing date, he said. That is set for 120 days from the date of the hearing.

Three bids for the bulk assets of the Bronze Door were submitted. John Rickel, attorney for the War Memorial, said the center had "had some conversation" with one of the bidders regarding the possibility of buying a liquor license if he won the bid. He was unsuccessful, however.

Bronze Door attorney Arthur Miller said "spirited bidding" went on for an hour and a half Friday afternoon. Standby No. 5 ended by increasing its original bid by $55,000, beating the bulk "upset" or threshold price of $350,000. Only bulk bids were entertained, Miller said.

Philip Shefferly, representing a Grosse Pointe investor, agreed that the bidding was active. "We stayed in 'til the last round," he said. "It was purely a question of dollars and cents. It didn't seem economical at that point. We were surprised the bidding went that

The War Memorial is consoling itself with the thought that it "acted reasonably" in its pursuit of a liquor license. Weber repeated Monday the center's assertion that the apparent financial involvement by Marco or a member of his law firm "changes the situation."

Peck, without stating une-quivocally that no one in the firm has a financial interest, said that the firm is acting on behalf of a committee of residents opposed to a liquor license at the War Memorial. He said that Marco had gone on record to that effect as long ago as March 25, in a letter to the editor of the Grosse Pointe News.

The War Memorial is consoling itself the with thought that "acted reasonablly" in its pursuit of a liquor license.

Standby No. 5 had already made a $10,000 down payment at the time of the original bid. That amount must now be increased to $150,000, Miller said.

The original bid was contingent upon the granting of a liquor license allowing Sunday sales and was to be closed within 10 days of the license transfer approval. The current bid, however, is not contingent upon any approval either by the state Liquor Control Commission or the city of Grosse Pointe Farms, Miller said. Closing is to take place regardless of the status of the liquor license.

Prost asks for recount of last week's Park election.

Grosse Pointe Park Councilman John Prost requested a recount of last week's mayoral election in which he lost his bid for mayor to incumbent Palmer Heenan by 42 votes. The request was submitted to City Clerk Nunzio Ortisi Tuesday afternoon.

Prost's campaign manager, Lucy Smith, said the decision to ask for a recount was based on possible tampering with a voting machine in Precinct 1 and the fact that two of the three people who counted absentee ballots were inexperienced.

The tampering charge was raised when a voter reported that the plastic template covering the candidates' names had been lifted and Prost's name appeared with council candidates instead of mayoral candidates. The irregularity was reported at 10 a.m. and the machine was sealed until it was corrected.

The lawyer retained by Prost's campaign, John Urso, submitted a check for $80 along with the petition, to cover the recount cost, which is $10 for each of seven precincts and the absentee ballots.

Schools plan phone survey

Lantern and you begin to look like this, it's only a matter of time before you end up by the curb waiting for the trash man.

Don't go out Tuesday or Wednesday night, Nov. 19 and 20. You could be one of the lucky 400 people, randomly selected from residents of the school district, to take part in the system's $5,000 survey of community attitudes.

Those contacted by telephone will spend 20 to 30 minutes telling volunteers what they think about 55 different school-related topics, including a grading of schools and questions about specific issues, Superintendent John Whritner told the board Monday night.

The survey was designed by Bill Banach, an employee of the Macomb Intermediate School District, who designed a similar survey for the ISD which was conducted during the summer. The survey's blending of Gallup polling techniques and other market research makes its finding accurate when applied to demographic groups, according to Whritner.

The survey will help the system forward its stated goals for the year, Whritner told the board. It can be used as part of the background for the system's five-year facility plan, which will determine what the system is to look like in

The results of the survey should be available to the administration and general public by mid-December, Whritner said.

Appalachia through the eyes of children

By Nancy Parmenter

It was more or less happenstance that brought Wendy Ewald to a remote corner of Appalachia. What she found there led her to a photographic project that has turned into her third book - now making wavelets across the country. Deep in the mountains, 150 miles mining regions in Britain and on the Continent. Ewald's ideas have been discussed in "Psychology To-day" and on National Public from Lexington, lie the tiny communities surrounding Campbells Branch and Cowan and Kingdom Come creeks. The people who live there share a unique blend of their own history and traditions and the aspirations of all Americans.

'Portraits and Dreams' is a documentary of rural life produced by the participants. Ewald, who had taught photography to children on Canadian Indian reservations during college summers, armed local elementary school children with Polaroids and film and set them to recording their daily lives. The results have not only been published, but have also been compiled into traveling exhibits by the Smithsonian and a European institution hoping to show it in coal-and a roof bolter . . . He stopped because that lung of his collapsed because of coal dust. It got in his lungs and hardened just like a rock. It looked right white-looking in his lungs . . . I'd say it would be all right working in the coal mines, if you liked it, but if you didn't it would be hard on you. They say that's the darkest dark you've ever seen down there.

Ewald decided to document the area through its children's eyes and words because her own camera "seemed to get in the way." She had noticed photographs prominently displayed in the rural homes, "photographs telling the stories of the families who live there, binding the generations and preserving the past." She decided to make her own offering and teach their children to take pictures.

The local principal jumped at the offer. Facilities were primitive, but teacher and students met the challenge. Ewald describes conditions in the preface to "Portraits and Dreams:

"At Cowan all that was available was the boiler room. The furnace was fired by coal and when it kicked on, I had to yell to be heard over the roar. We ran hoses along the floor from the water tanks to mix chemicals and wash negatives, but sometimes they broke and the coal dust and water mixed together to leave a layer of gray sludge on the floor. We put our four new enlargers . . . in the janitor's closet. Half of the students could print in the closet while the other half developed negatives in changing bags in the boiler room."

The project progressed into Instamatic cameras when it began to be funded through the Kentucky Arts Council. Ewald spent four years in the schools teaching photography and says "the kids always wanted to work." They also wanted to talk, and essays distilled from their conversations are interspersed with their pictures.

"I favor my dad, but I act just like myself," Robert Dean Smith told her. "My dad's a short skinny fellow, all the time joking around, but when you make him mad, he usually uses a shot gun

Wendy Ewald grew up in Grosse Pointe Farms and was educated at independent schools here and in Massachusetts. She graduated from Antioch College, but along the way taught at Indian reservations in Canada, studied photography at MIT, a spent a year and a half in London, where she — as an aside — established a photography gallery.

Fresh out of college, she headed for Kentucky, via San Francisco. Still living in Kentucky, she is a member of Appalshop, an artists' colony and multi-media center using film, touring theater, recordings, photography and books to promote understanding of the regional culture.

Three years ago, Ewald went to Colombia on a Fulbright grant to make comparisons between mountain village life there and here. The comparison turned out to be "a ludicrous idea," since the similarities were few, but the experience led to learning to speak a Spanish patois dating from the time of the Conquistadors and to the writing of another book, which she has nearly finished.

One of the similarities she found and it is one that is strongly at odds with the mainstream of American culture — is the prevalence of death themes: 'Self-portrait with the picture of my biggest brother, Everett, who killed him-

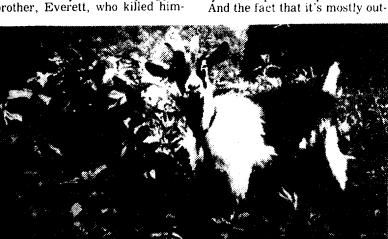

Some of the essays reflect ageold themes. Darlene Watts expressed her misgivings about love and marriage:

'When you're in love you do funny things like lay your books in the refrigerator . . . I know one thing, when you get married, you can't lay your books in the refrigerator any more because your husband would get mad. He usually acts like he's the boss, and I don't like anyone to boss me around all the time."

And of course, environmental concerns:

"(T))hey're tearing the mountains up with bulldozers

. They're destroying them. They've killed almost everything that's up there. I'd like to plant trees and set animals out because soon there won't be anything to look at. It'll just be a plain old place."

Park contest a squeaker

By Pat Paholsky

It was, without a doubt, the hottest political race in the Pointes and when it was over, the two Park mayoral candidates almost finished in a dead heat. Incumbent Palmer Heenan narrowly edged back into office with a 42-vote margin out of some 3,900 votes that were cast.

He received 1,949 votes and challenger John Prost, a councilman and mayor pro tem, racked up 1,907 votes. Prost was a winner at the polls by 70 votes, but he lost in the absentee balloting that gave Heenan a 112-vote margin.

Heenan attributed the high number of voters — 43 percent — to the high level of interest in the issues, public safety in particular. "I think the people were aware of public safety and wanted to take a position," he said. "Issues get people out, not personalities.

"I'm delighted that the voters responded so well that voted absentee," he added.

Prost said voters turned out in large numbers because of the "tremendous amount of activity by the candidates. There was a lot of door-to-door campaigning and we had four brand-new people working very hard as well as the incumbents.

Prost, who did not jeopardize his seat on the council to challenge the mayor, has two more years to serve before his term expires.

The top vote-getter in the council race was incumbent Mark Valente III, who garnered 1,942 votes. He begins his second four-year term and attributes his success to his campaign workers, who numbered more than 100.

"We worked so hard," he said. "and we ran a positive campaign. Winning the first time was nice, but getting re-elected is special."

Challenger James Robson Jr. was a close second with 1,932 votes. It's the first time he's been elected to public office.

I think I got broad-based support from every neighborhood and that's a credit to the citizens of Grosse Pointe Park. They responded to my message and I'm very grateful for that

No one was more upset than the students and faculty of North High School last spring when vandals cut down a number of valuable trees on school property as a mindless prank. To that end, members of all four classes, the choir, the student association and the Keep Michigan Beautiful organization raised funds to replace the trees this fall. Present at the planting this week were; from left, Tom Gauerke, athletic director; Mark Moore, junior class president; Robin Wheatley, sophomore class president; Holly Smith, choir representative: and Robert B. Healy, of Keep Michigan Beautiful. At the rear are Chuck Loeher, senior class president; and Doug Tobbe, freshman class president.

"I'm very happy I was re-elected," he said, "but I'm disappointed that only 11.75 percent of the registered voters in the Woods went to the polls. I'm happy for those that did vote because they got what they wanted, but the others were content to let others choose for them.

"I'd like to see more participation in the elections and I just wish more had come out to vote. I learned the hard way in 1983 that two or three votes can make a big difference.

Wilson lost his bid for re-election to a second term on the council two years ago to his friend Ted Bidigare by three votes. Wilson said he was eager to begin work on the council and to address what he feels are the biggest problems facing the city — traffic flow, parking, liability insurance and future tussles with the Wayne County Road

Next in votes was Jean Rice, who ran for her second four-year term. A resident of the Woods for 23 years, she received 1,333 votes.

Thomas Fahrner, a 22-year resident of the Woods, won his third four-year term as a councilman. A member of the Woods block grant commission, he tallied 1,130 votes.

Crowley tops field in Farms election

By Nancy Parmenter

Making it right

Monday evening's Farms council meeting saw one new face at the council table John Crowley was relishing his new role.

"I'm looking forward to sitting on this side of the table," the 26-year old neshman councilman said. Crowley has attended every council meeting in the last two years, sitting in the audience and observing the action.

He swept the election Nov. 5, garnering more votes than any other candidate "I'm flattered, he said that night as he waited. watching the results come in. His big victory has been attributed to shoe leather." Crowley walked the Farms, house to house, to introduce himself to the voters

No contest in City: has lowest turnout

The city of Grosse Pointe experienced one of its lowest voter turnouts last week when the mayor and three councilmen, all incumbents, ran for re-election with no opposition.

Less than 6 percent of the city's 4,432 voters, or 253 people, cast ballots. Lorenzo D. Browning, who has been mayor for about three years and a councilman for 12 years, will serve another two-year term as mayor. Councilman James P. Curran, William N. Montgomery and Robert L. Nugent will begin fouryear terms. Curran has served four years, Montgomery six years, and Nugent has been on the council about 14 years.

The election cost the city about $3,500, City Manager Thomas Kressbach said.

A patdown search of the driver revealed the gun hidden in the back of his waistband, according to the report. It was loaded, with one bullet in the chamber and eight more in the magazine clip. On the floor of the van were a four inch hunting knife and a two-inch stiletto. The identification numbers on

Husband-and-wife research gathers statistical data on why doctors lose licenses using case studies to determine the feasibility and advisability of

By Nancy Parmenter

Less than one percent of all doctors ever lose their license to practice. Some would argue that the number should be higher. A pair of Woods researchers turned the question around and wondered why almost 400 doctors in three states have taken risks and jeopardized their careers to the extent of license revocation during the last six years.

Husband-and-wife team Dr. Norma Josef and Dr. John Kinkel have spent the last three-and-a-half years gathering statistical data on the question. She is a psychiatrist and professor at Wayne State University; he is a sociologist teaching at the University of Michigan-Flint.

The first part of the research now completed - was Kinkel's project, according to Josef. "He and a research assistant did most of the statistical analysis," she said. "We shared the data collection."

Spare weekends and afternoons, odd days off, found the pair - and often their two children, as well - sifting through dusty archives in Columbus or Lansing or Madison, Wis., or making personal contacts with medical board officials in the three capitals.

"There was a lot of information and we had to sift it for relevancy," Josef explained. "It was all public documents - we weren't going into any secret stuff. The state boards had the information, but most of it wasn't organized.'

The information also varied from one state to the next, Josef said. Where one state might provide details and background information, another might list only the most sketchy information. Licensing requirements likewise vary among the states, as do the laws for license revocation.

The idea for the research came when Josef considered several cases of debarred doctors and began to wonder how many of these people there are walking around." Doctors may reapply for a license one year after revocation, but the process often takes an addieducated general practitioners.

The study showed that the average age of the offenders was 57, compared to 45 for the control group. More than 95 percent of the offenders were men, although men make up only 86.2 percent of the control group.

tional year or two, Josef said. Kinkel and Josef wondered if rehabilitation would be desirable and, if so, how to identify the good rehabilitation risks, and what the elements of a rehabilitation program should be.

"I have the feeling that there are doctors worth rehabilitating," Josef said, "but I'm not certain yet how to tell who they are. Our first step was to find out the extent of the problem. The next step is to develop a psychological profile of the errant physician.

That's the part Josef is looking forward to. Kinkel, the sociologist, reveled in the statistical first step, she said, but for Josef, "the interesting part is to come. The psychiatric part is more my line of Already, the statistics have revealed some surprises. Using a randomly selected control group, the couple studied cases of 371 "errant" doctors in three midwestern states since 1978. Initial results indicate that the doctors who have lost their licenses are dispropor"I wasn't too surprised at that finding," Josef said. "Across the board, women are less represented in the criminal area.

Even more out of balance was the medical specialty of the offenders: although fewer than onefifth (16.9 percent) of the control group were in general practice, almost half (47.9) percent of the offenders were general practitioners. Osteopaths also offend out of proportion, with 20 percent of the offenders, but only 11.5 percent of the controls.

Graduates of American medical schools formed 82.2 percent of the offenders and 76.1 percent of the controls. Low-income doctors accounted for more than half (53.4 percent) of the offenders and only 32.9 percent of the control group.

Now that the numbers are in, Josef and Kinkel plan to supplement them with statistics from at least two more midwestern states.

"The Midwest is probably typical — if anything is," Josef said. Next, they hope to put their find-practice medicine again. Doctors invest many years and financial resources in learning medicine and are generally not prepared to earn a living any other way.

They've spent most of their life training to be a doctor," she said. Those who develop a pattern of incompetence shouldn't be rehabilitated, but an occasional misjudgment is part of life. I was gratified to learn that only .5 percent actually lose their licenses — so the public can maintain its confidence in 99.5 percent.

Incumbents lead the way

A disappointing prelude

Incumbency proved to be the strongest factor in the Grosse Pointe elections last week with only one incumbent losing his office among the 16 candidates seeking re-election in municipal balloting in the City, the Farms, the Woods and the

That was not unexpected, of course. In the Pointes, incumbents usually serve as long as they wish unless they get involved in a major controversy, get spots on their records with votes or actions that upset their constituents or face foes who convince the voters it is time for a

It turned out that the only incumbent who felt the sting of the "time for a change" argument was John Sabol, who lost when William Wilson, a former councilman, led the ticket in the Woods. Jean Rice and Thomas Fahrner were re-elected to the council and Mayor George Freeman was returned without opposition.

One of the election surprises was the victory of John M. Crowley, youngest of the candidates at 25, who led the ticket for the Farms council and thus will fill the post left by the retirement of Nancy Waugaman. The three council incumbents - Joseph Fromm, Gail Kaess and Bruce Rockwell — were re-elected, with Rockwell getting the two-year term because he had the smallest vote among the four winners. Peter O'Rourke won the hotly contested municipal judge race over Anthony Penta.

As expected, the biggest turnout and the closest race were reported in the Park where Mayor Palmer Heenan topped challenger John Prost, an incumbent council member, by a margin of only 42 votes. Two incumbent council members, Mark Valente III and Carroll Evola, were re-elected along with newcomer James Robson Jr. who ran second to Valente in the balloting and will succeed the retiring Patricia Forster. Municipal Judge Beverly C. Grobbel was re-elected without opposition.

In a late development that could affect the mayoralty race in the Park, Prost announced that he is seeking a recount. His campaign manager said the request is based on two factors: reported tampering with one voting machine and the possibility of human error in the absentee ballot count which put Heenan ahead.

With no opposition, the City had the quietest election in the Pointes. Mayor Lorenzo D. Browning was returned to office along with three council incumbents, James P. Curran, William N. Montgomery and Robert L. Nugent.

As expected, the Park turned out the biggest total vote and the best percentage of its registered voters of the four Pointe municipalities. With 3,907 votes cast out of a registration of 9,100, the Park attracted 43 percent of those eligible to vote. The turnout was attributed to the high interest in the contests for mayor and coun-

At the other end of the spectrum, again as expected, was the City with only 5.7 percent or 253 people voting to endorse the unopposed slate of city officers.

In the Farms, 2,368 or 29 percent of the 8,000 registered cast their ballots, while in the Woods only 1,741, or just under 12 percent of the 14,806 registered, went to the polls.

Overall, there was nothing extraordinary in the balloting in the four Pointes with incumbency once again proving to be a candidate's best recommendation and the vote totals reflecting the differences among the four communities in the contests and issues.

Yet we should not overlook the fact that there will be one new face on the council in the Woods, the Farms and the Park, although Wilson, in the Woods, is returning to the post he lost by a narrow margin two years earlier. Robson in the Park and Crowley in the Farms are newcomers to city politics who should bring new perspectives to their posts and provide a leavening influence on the council veterans in both cities.

Normally, a low turnout in any contested election is deplored. But sometimes satisfaction with the quality of service being provided and confidence in all of the candidates seeking election offer better explanations for the lack of voters than any suggestion of apathy on the part of the constituency. Perhaps that is what occurred in Tuesday's light voting in the Farms and the intensely competitive. I feel we (BCBSM) have a chance against the competition; however, the unfair regulation against us is another issue. We must be permitted to sell health care coverage in all forms, combinations and varieties that customers want and other carrier can furnish.

We now compete with more than 300 sellers of health insurance in Michigan, among which include the largest carriers in the world. The competition will still exist if we were allowed to become a nonprofit mutual, but at least it would be fair competition.

Thank you for the opportunity to be heard.

Mayor's past clarified

To the Editor:

Prior to the recent Grosse Pointe Park elections, residents of the Park received a campaign flyer from Mr. John Prost with an insert of an article that was written in one of the Detroit newspapers. In the article it stated that Mayor Heenan was affiliated with a right wing organization over 20 years ago.

Two years and three weeks to this date I sat in Mayor Heenan's living room and offered my support in his compaign for mayor because of his stand on keeping Grosse Pointe schools open. I explained to Mayor Heenan that there was a rumor about his affiliation with a right wing organization.

Mayor Heenan assured me that he was never a card-carrying member, but did support that organization's efforts at that time on one issue that he felt was impor-tant. I asked Mayor Heenan to explain what could be that important to support such a group Mayor Heenan said "that organization was the only group, at that time, lobbying against our government's financial backing of Fidel Castro because they believed Fidel Castro would turn Čuba into a Communist country.

Mr. Heenan became Mayor later became a Repuneenan an blican delegate who witnessed Mayor Heenan's appointment over a prominent black attorney by the 13th District Republican Party, which consists of a majority of black delegates, to the honored post of presidential elector.

Nicaragua:

Kathleen Sengstock of Grosse Pointe Woods earned a bachelor of arts degree from Wayne State University in May 1985. She graduated with highest honors with a dual major in psychology and peace and conflict studies, and minors in political science and German. She is currently at Columbia University in New York where she plans to earn the degree of Master of Internation al Affairs.

She wrote the following paper, Life, Politics and People in Revolutionary Nicaragua: Impressions of an American College Student.' after spending five weeks this summer in Nicaragua.

The Grosse Pointe News will publish it in a series as space permits. This is the first of three arti-

I have just returned from a fiveweek adventure of life in revolutionary Nicaragua with the Nuevo Instituto de CentroAmerica from June 8 through July 14. I went down considering myself a moderate with respect to the American political spectrum, but determined to keep an open mind and to listen to the views of the Nicaraguan people. I have returned with a markedly different perspective of Nicaragua than that which is most commonly portrayed by the administration of President Ronald Reagan and, quite often, in the Ameri-

The school of the Nuevo Instituto de CentroAmerica -- the "NICA school" -- hosts groups of Americans for four to five weeks each in the Nicaraguan village of Esteli. They normally host seven or eight sessions per year. During the trip, we each lived with a poor family in Esteli, took Spanish language classes each morning, and did volunteer work two afternoons each week. I worked at an agricultural cooperative within walking distance of Esteli, where I pulled weeds in a bean field along with the peasants of the cooperative officials and representatives of various grass-roots organizations on such current topics as the history of the Sandinista movement, land reform, health, labor unions, the economy, the literacy campaign, liberation theology, and the role of women in Nicaragua today. We were also able to tour the hospital of Esteli, the prison camp outside of the city, and Nicaragua's only state-owned eigar factory. On one weekend we traveled up into the mountains of the north where contra activity has been heavy and visited three of the "asentamientos" where refugee families from the war zones have been relocated. On another weekend we traveled to Managua, the capital, where we attended a discussion by a reporter from La Prensa. Nicaragua's conservative opposition paper; by the former presidential candidate of the opposition Liberal Independent student's impressions Party; and with a foreign service officer at the U.S. embassy.

During my session, there were 36 students at the school from a wide variety of backgrounds. The group included several college students from diverse educational fields, a number of school teachers, a Catholic nun, a woman studying to become a Protestant minister, a physics professor, a senior citizen, an ROTC student, and two American journalists. The majority of the participants were political activists. Thirty-four of the 36 participants were U.S. citizens. The other two were both being funded to do development work in Nicaragua by the government of Canada, which has maintained excellent relations with the Sandinistas despite hostility from their allies in Washington. One of the two was a Canadian development analyst; the other was, interestingly, a Dutch veterinarian. They attended the NICA school to improve their Spanish an to have a general orientation to Nicaraguan society before they began their volunteer work.

The Nicaraguan "Revolution": The vast majority of Nicaraguans strongly support what they would call the "revolutionary process." To the people of Nicaragua, the "revolution" has meant an opportunity to learn to read and write, send their children to school, receive free medical care after years of being unable to afford any medical care at all, a higher standard of living in general, and, most importantly, freedom from the brutal dictatorship of Anastasio

This is not to say that the people of Nicaragua do not criticize specific government policies and actions and complain about their own reallife situations. In fact, it is this very freedom to make their concerns and their needs known and to be-

Nicaragua: A student's impressions

(Continued from Page 6A) come directly involved in governmental decision-making through grass-roots activity that dis-tinguishes life in Nicaragua today from life before the revolution. When a foreigner asks a poor Nicaraguan what he thinks of the revolution, he will discover that the average Nicaraguan takes great pride in the revolution and may even boast at length about all that it has done for him and his neighbors. However, the same average Nicaraguan, when asked by a Sandinista official what he thinks of the revolution, may tartly respond that the water stopped running in his neighborhood for several days last month and that he expects the revolution to provide him with an adequate supply of water!
Evidence of Free Expression:

Nicaragua has a variety of "popular organizations," such as neighborhood groups and unions, all of which enthusiastically support the revolution. However, the organizations and their members do not he-sitate to voice their own opinions and argue with government officials. I went to a meeting of ANDEN, the teacher's union, after which I followed all the teachers to the local office of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry where they intended to protest the short supply of products for teachers. They argued with the officials for one-and-a-half hours.

I also attended a city-wide meeting of the "Sandinista Defense Committee," which seemed to re-semble an "officials-meet-the-people" session. It began with a rousing speech on resisting U.S. imperialism and aggression (in the form of the contras) and ended with a series of cheers for "Free Nicaragua," fol-lowed by the hymn of the FSLN

(Sandinista Front of Natonal Liberation). In between, various individuals from the crowd of about 200 stood up and complained to the officials. (My Spanish was not good enough to have understood exactly why they were complaining.) One elderly man griped for 20 minutes straight, arousing several rounds of applause from the general audience. When he was dissatisfied with the officials' response to his harangue, he said, "Good Night," took his cane, and hobbled militantly out of the meeting hall! The entire evening, which lasted about three hours, seemed to resemble a crowd of citizens at a local political assembly lobbying to their congressmen. It certainly did not resemble what President Reagan considers a "totalitarian, communist dictatorship."

I must admit I'm a little puzzled by all the hoopla surrounding the royal visit of England's Prince Charles and Princess Diana. But everytime I ask, who cares, I get the answer, almost everybody.

The prince and princess will not announce a new treaty between the United States and the United Kingdom whereby the British will stop impressing American seamen. That was settled in the War of 1812. (That's impress as in press into service, not "Wow, look at those chic uniforms!")

It is highly unlikely that the prince will announce Britain's plan to reassert control over the rebellious colonies. It is even more unlikely that the couple will talk to the press, answering any of those burning questions about their personal life, such as, does Diana get along with the queen?

Charles and Di will travel around to a variety of public places and public events, and smile, and look properly royal, and reveal nothing more significant than what outfit the princess has chosen for the occasion.

Then, why did thousands of good, independent, patriotic Americans line the street of Washington, D.C., to watch the Prince of Wales and his consort go to church last Sun-

The answer is, people everywhere are fascinated by royalty. Our founding fathers made it very clear that the United States would not have a royal class. Our highest official is addressed as Mr. President, not Your Highness, not Your Grace, not even Sir. But the conscious decision that the leaders of this country would be one with the common people did not remove the longing people seem to feel to be led by people from a higher caste.

The European royalty of ages past ruled by divine right. That is, God created these people and set upon them the special skills necessary to rule justly and for the common good. If they failed in this mon good. If they failed in this mandate, it was the human component of their makeup at fault. It is comforting to believe that an omniscient, just and compassionate God guides the hand of the government. Such a scheme minimizes the possibility that our rulers are guided by greed, lust for power, ego or incompetence.

Democracy is a much riskier principle. The concept that power flows from the people to the government is fraught with pitfalls. The people can be duped. They can put their trust in leaders

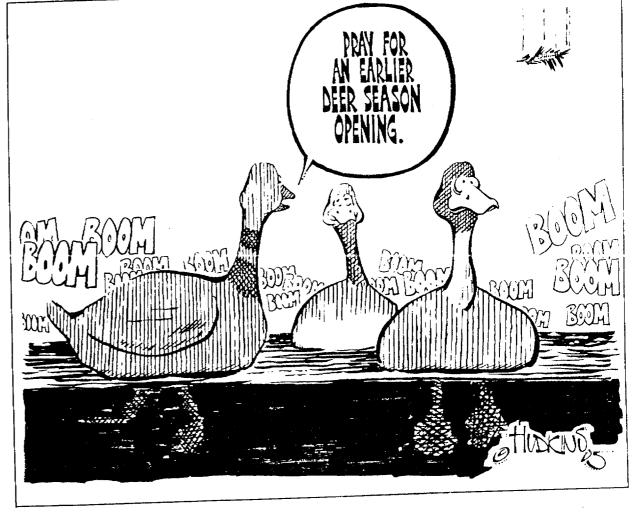

Clown Corps

The Grosse Pointe Clown Corps will hold a new member registration at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 26, at the Woods municipal building, 20025 Mack Plaza.

The corps has a number of events planned for the coming months, including participation in a bake sale Nov. 30, marching in the Windsor, Ontario Christmas parade Dec. 7, and the corps' 10th annual Old Country Bake Sale scheduled for Dec. 14

The corps is celebrating its 10th anniversary this year and is looking for alumni to attend an open house planned for the coming year.

Visiting royalty who will betray their trust and use the power of government for their personal advantage. Even the best-intentioned elected official may lack the competence to fulfill his mandate. On an emotional level, it is much easier and much safer to leave the task of selecting leaders up to God.

So we look across the Atlantic and long for royalty. In this day narchy has practically dropped from use as a form of government, we still look at the descendants of the kings and queens and dukes and believe that on some level, they have been touched by a greater power.

In the absence of legitimate royalty in this country, we have created our own pseudo-royalty. The continuing interest in such personages as Jacqueline Onassis, Gloria Vanderbilt and countless movie stars reflects our desire to see these people as something fundamentally different from our-selves. I'm not speaking of our interest in the accomplishments of these people — rather the burning, almost guilty, desire to know every detail of their personal lives.

We have created an entire industry based on satisfying the public's desire to know inconsequential details about the lives of celebrities. The tabloid press panders to this curiosity. And if the details seem too mundane, if they seem to prove the simple humanity of these peo-ple, rather than their existence outside the rules of society — siutably lurid details will be fabricated to suffice.

In recent years, some celebrities have rebelled against this exploitation of their lives. Carol Burnett successfully sued the National Enquirer and others have followed her lead. Some of the consumers of this literary pollution react with dismay. They resent the celebrities' desire for privacy, arguing that life in a fishbowl is the price of fame.

Is it? Are Charles and Diana any more valuable as human beings than you or I? Do they owe us the intimate details of their married life? I doubt it.

Imagine for a moment that Charles and Diana live next door to you - not in Buckingham Palace, but in whatever dwelling is situated next to your house. The couple next door would be a former military man and his wife, a former nursery school teacher. They have two nice-looking, wellbehaved sons whose grandmother wears funny hats and cuts ribbons on bridges and highways and such. Dad does some of that too.

Who are Charles and Di? Just a polite, attractive and vaguely boring married couple. They would never park their cars to block the sidewalk and would certainly rake their leaves before they blew into your yard. Nice people — but material for the tabloids? Yawn.

First-graders settle into learning routine

By Nancy Parmenter

A RECORD FOR A REC

Seven weeks is a long time in the career of a first-grader. Children who were timid about the new disciplines and routines when school started are old pros now, relaxed, laid-back, and understanding of the daily procedures.

A second visit to Pandora Buterakos' first grade classroom at Richard School reveals how far the 22 students have come since the beginning of September. Science projects dot the room. Lima bean plants on a windowsill struggle to ward the light. A newt sprawls beneath tiny "trees" in his terrarium, part of an ongoing series on personal pets. Children vie to tell about other pet visitors: the kitty who is a mammal; the snake, a reptile. There is a surprising number of snakes.

They are used to hearing directions now. They chime in as Buterakos instructs them, chorusing the rules and the answers. They jump ahead, getting out their books before she tells them to.

At least four things are going on at once. Some of the students are working on reading assignment tests. Reading records are kept all the way through elementary school, to keep track of each student's strengths and weaknesses.

Arithmetic is advancing. Thursday's exercise was in subtraction.

The readers have learned to read silently. The beginning of the reading group time is spent in silent reading, to become conversant enough with the material to read with expression.

The first story is about a girl who has lost her two front teeth and is afraid people will laugh when they see her school picture. Everyone participated in a discussion about sensitivity and friendship. And teeth.

"I think she looks cute," said

"I didn't have my teeth either," said Amy. Several people add details about losing their teeth. One girl tells about the notes she writes to the tooth fairy; a boy announces that his grandmother is a dentist.

Reading started seven weeks ago with a rebus reader combining pictures and words. By now, most of the pictures are gone and reading concepts are sophisticated: hard and soft 'c' are under study.

Meanwhile the other students are poring over their worksheets. Some are trying to match pictures of rhyming words. They are happy to explain the process.

"Is this a toad or a frog?"
Gregory asks, trying to match the unnameable amphibian with a seal, a cat or a dog. Buterakos waits patiently while he puzzles it out. Suddenly a pleased smile spreads over his face and he runs back to his seat to color the creature green.

The next reading group gathers around the table. The kids engage in an earnest discussion of plot and theme in a tale of a tiger whose friends try to talk him out of flying to the moon in a homemade rocket.

They note the "nervousness" and "sadness" of the friends as they consider the tiger's folly - and they discover the humor and irony in the friend's failure to understand the rocket is a fake. They talk enthusiastically, volunteering their impressions. Casey's verve leads him to stand up and lean over the table. Nobody is nervous about this assignment, even though it contains hard sentences like "Sam is going to race in the park." They sail through with no mistakes.

One of Buterakos' goals at the beginning of school was to make the children comfortable with their new surroundings. "I don't want to panic them," she said then, pointing out that nervous children have more difficulty learning.

After seven weeks, it appears that the children are comfortable in their surroundings.

Tracy Riddell shares her pet newt, Isaac "Fig" Newton, with her fellow first-graders at Richard. The children take turns bringing in snakes and hamsters, as well as the more mundane cats and dogs.

Creative, innovative, talented

The Chefs of Grosse Pointe

By Pat Paholsky

The idea for this feature came after a spirited — and sometimes heated — discussion with friends who live west of Woodward. There are very few decent restaurants on the east side, they said. The majority of the really good restaurants are in their part of town, they claimed, where the intense competition keeps everyone alert.

Besides, they said, young and affluent west-siders eat out more than the conservative east-siders, particularly Grosse Pointers, who go to their club for a night

Well, my husband and I eat out often and hardly ever west of Woodward, only because he works on that side of town and doesn't enjoy traveling the same roads he's been traveling for 19 years. But we do travel all over the east side and Canada. And we have found some great - not merely good restaurants and we wait, more often than not, for a table because of the crowds.

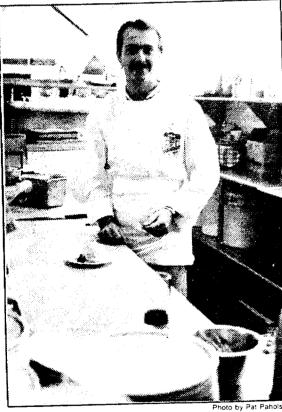

According to the Michigan Restaurant Association, people eat out an average of 3.7 times a week and the sales tax alone for the industry last year was nearly $162 million. That's big business.

There are many things that make a restaurant good — its management, ambience, service, the attitude of the staff. But at the core of the operation is the chef, the raison d'etre of a restaurant. The chef is the heart and soul of the business and everything else either complements or detracts from his work.

The word "his" is correct, since there are more male than female chefs. The reason according to those who were interviewed, is that it's an extremely physically demanding job, lifting heavy pots of soup, doing ice carvings. Jeff Gabriel, one of those interviewed, said he knows some good female chefs, "but they are strong women, and that's why they've survived." More and more women, however, are getting into the business, he added. What I've attempted to do with this feature is to show that if even a small enclave like Grosse Pointe has top chefs, the east side is far from a malnourished wasteland populated only by the ubiquitous fast food chains. This is only a representative sampling and it is not intended to exclude the area's other fine chefs who have a devoted following. So, if you have a favorite chef, write and tell us what's so good about him or her and we'll reprint your thoughts along with a picture of the deserving and, we hope, happy cooker. The only requirement is that he or she works here in Grosse Pointe.

Jeff Gabriel

Jeff Gabriel

He's only 33, but Jeff Gariel of the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club is becoming a luminary in the world of culinary arts.

At the 16th International Culinary Olympics last year, Gabriel won two gold medals - one with distinction, the highest designation. Only one other American won a gold in 1984 and Gabriel is one of the youngest to be so honored. The other winner was master chef Milos Cihelka of the Golden Mushroom in Southfield under whom Gabriel once

The Olympics is held every four years in Frankfurt, Germany, and chefs from throughout the country are preparing to try throughout the country are preparing to try out for the 1988 U.S. team. Regional and national tryouts will be held at Cobo Hall in February and April next year and Gabriel is getting ready to dazzle the judges. He feels he might have a slight edge of making the team, since he was on the last one.

His prize-winning entry in the cold food category consisted of three platters, one of hors d'oeuvres, one of seafood and the piece d'resistance, a wild game platter. For that, he prepared a pheasant pate, stuffed partridge breast with a pastiche mousse, smoked pheasant breast, smoked pheasant livers and corned pheasant hearts. The judges were impressed.

One of Gabriel's goal is to become a master chef, a title he says is currently held by only 24 people in the country. Job experience, education and certification at several levels are necessary before a candidate can take the 10-day exam.

"There's a lot of studying and they cover a broad area, including international cooking, classical, nutritional, dietary, kitchen management and bar management," he

The exam is held in Hyde Park, N.Y., and Gabriel said it's also a costly venture, about $2,000, but he figures he'll go for it.

Gabriel began his career when he was 15. "I started out as a dishwasher and I really admired the guy I worked for," he said. "He was a chef-owner and then I cooked in the Navy and when I got out, I went to the Culinary Institute of America in New York."

His first job back in Detroit was at the Detroit Athletic Club where he was garde mangier, a cold food specialist. He worked there for 4½ years, and five years ago, accepted a job as executive chef at the yacht

At the club, Gabriel plans 10 to 12 different specialties every day.

"The secret to being a good chef is to appeal to the whole market," he said. "It's nice to have some interesting gourmet specialty, but it's also nice to please the guy who wants a steak."

Gabriel is looking forward to a new kitchen at the yacht club, one that has been planned for three years. It will be twice as large and it will be updated and modern, he

He doesn't fit the stereotype of a nastytempered, barrel-shaped terror with a tall white hat - he jokes easily with his staff and he's physically trim and fit.

'I work out every day and eat the right food," he said. "I have to because it's really a stressful position, being a chef. There was a time when I was overweight and it really slowed me down.' Gabriel said he works 10 to 12 hours, six days a week, during the busy season. But the lifestyle suits him. "I wouldn't be doing anything else," he said.

His advice to aspiring chefs? "You don't have to get a good culinary education. You should work for a good chef in a good house and forget about the money. That comes later. You have to be dedicated and be willing to sacrifice a lot of spare time to learn. When I was in my early 20s, I was always staying late to watch the chef doing ice carvings. I wasn't getting paid and back in our bake shop, I tried to invent new desserts until three in the morning. I did that for a long time and it all pays off.

"The more you put in, the more you get out," he said.

Bill Wolf

Bill Wolf

Bill Wolf is on the quiet side, somewhat bashful — and talented. The 30-year-old head chef at Sparky Herbert's has won several gold medals and best piece of show awards in cooking competitions over the past couple of years.

He comes from Philadelphia where he served an apprenticeship for three years. He then moved to the Detroit area where he worked at the Golden Mushroom under master chef Milos Cihelka for 51/2 years.

He got into the business by way of a parttime job on weekends washing pots and pans. That's when he became interested in working with food, he said.

If his background seems to mirror that of Jeff Gabriel's, there's more. Wolf, too, is working to be selected as a member of the American Culinary Olympics team. Gabriel says he will be a tough competitor.

"I enjoy the actual effort of cooking every day," Wolf said, adding that he begins planning the next day's menu the night before.

"In the morning I go straight in the walkin box and start pulling things out."
That's the most interesting part, he said, going into the walk-in and coming up with a "good tasting, eye-appealing dish. It's a very satisfying feeling."

He plans 12 to 14 different entrees every day to go along with the regular items. The regular menu is changed four times a year.

"We work with the seasons and only buy fresh ingredients," he said.

He orders by phone once a week from suppliers all over — California, Chicago, Florida, even New Zealand.

Of his staff of 10 cooks, he says, "I have got a bunch of very talented guys interested in becoming a part of the business. I don't hire anyone unless they're dedicated." It also helps if they are tolerant — the kitchen is small, crowded and hot.

Even though he works 10 to 12 hours a day, Wolf says he has to exercise and force himself not to eat in between meals to keep from gaining weight. "It's hard sometimes," he admits.

People who eat out are eating lighter these days, Wolf said. "We gear our menu toward that. People are more concerned about their health. We don't embellish our food with rich sauces or milk products. "You shouldn't walk out of a restaurant and feel stuffed," he added. Another change in eating habits that he's noticed is that people are looking for "more arousing food, more interesting."

The best way to break into the business, he says, is to work with a good chef. "This is a very stressful job. That's what the restaurant business is about."

Robert Goodfriend

Robert Goodfriend

In order to be a chef, you have to be crazy, says Robert Goodfriend of the Cafe le Chat.

"It's a crazy business, but it all boils down to one word and that's freedom," he said. "I do what I want."

The words spill out of his mouth rapidly and his whole body becomes animated when he talks. His openness is disarming.

"I'm a little kid a heart and I like the customer to play. Food should be a fun pro-

Although he's only 27, he's accumulated a list of varied experiences that have led him to his vocation. When he was growing up, he says he always had a chemistry set in the basement where he was constantly experimenting. He entered the University of Michigan to study biochemistry, but left and went to Spain where he lived for two years.

Goodfriend, who had been a strict vegetarian since he was 13, said, "I was walking down a beach in Italy just south of Pisa when I smelled something incredible and I followed it.'

A group of peasant women had stuffed chickens with fresh thyme and were roasting them over an open fire. That was the end of his life as a vegetarian. 'I bought one and ate the whole thing," he

After returning to the United States, Good-friend went into the business of smoking chickens over applewood and selling them to people like Yvonne Gill. That led him to a job with City Delights in downtown Detroit which in turn led to the position of second chef at the Restaurant Duglass.

He and friends started a carry-out business, Chefs de Cuisine, in Bloomfield Hills, which is still operating. Goodfriend has since sold out his share to his partners. "The concept is definitely catching," he said. He was working at LaMarmite and the Bricktown Bar and Grille were he said he had "just finished writing menus and hiring staff when somebody torched the building."

The Cafe le Chat, which has been open only for lunch up to now, just received its longawaited liquor license and will begin serving dinner in December. In the meantime, Good-friend does not have an abbreviated day.

"We do a lot of catering," he said, adding that he is preparing food at different places until 11 p.m. or midnight.

He's back on the job the next morning, deciding on a menu at about 10:45 a.m., and at 11 a.m. the kitchen is ready. Every day, 70 percent of the menu changes, he said. He orders from Eastern Market and suppliers in San Francisco, New York and sometimes

He gets his positive reinforcement from checking out the dirty dishes coming back to the kitchen. It there's no food left on the plates, he's satisfied.

He's proud that he comes from a family of cooks. His sister, Joannie Goodfriend, teaches cooking and he said she is a "fabulous chef who makes the finest chocolate truffles in town. My parents are fantastic cooks." And when they get together, they each pick a dish to make.

Goodfriend, who is slim, said he tastes everything, but rarely eats a whole meal. While his goal is to own a restaurant someday, his interests are eclectic — passive solar architecture, art, science, reading and especially his pet parrot.

Andrew Johnson

Andrew Johnson

At 24, Andrew Johnson of the Park Place Cafe, says he has a lot to learn but his back ground says he's in a hurry.

He became interested in cooking during his freshman year of high school and after graduation, enrolled in the culinary arts program at Macomb Community College. He was then accepted at the Culinary Institute of America in New York where he studied and completed the course.

Since then he's worked at the London Chop House and Restaurant Duglass, where he served an externship. The Park Place, which recently changed hands, is undergoing some changes.

"We just started a Sunday brunch," he said, "and I'm working on rewriting a menu." He said he hopes to make his own pasta in the future.

Patrons are ordering mostly chicken and fish, he said, and staying away from red meat. Salads are also high on the list.

"I worked in a nursing home for two years while I was in school and I'm very familiar with calorie counts," he said, 'so if people come in with special requests, we'll try to accommodate them."

Johnson's own preferences include any kind of pasta dish and Chicago-style pizza. One of the requirements to be a chef, he says, is "to be crazy enough. It's a high stress level. You have to like working with your hands and you have to like dealing with people. There's no such thing as weekends or holidays.'

He said he gets ideas for new dishes from other restaurants — "but no one ever does it that way, they do it their own way?'— and from 'just coordinating tastes. You sit down and start putting them together what kind of flavors go good with beef base, with chicken base. You can read some recipes and find out what you can change as you go.'

Johnson describes his style as frenzied. "I'm hyper, running around all the day." His dream is not to open a restaurant someday, but he would like to start a gourmet resale shop, which he said is popular in New York.

Johnson, who comes from a family of five, said his mother is a good cook, who allowed him to get in the way "to help" when he was younger.

Publishing boom means more books for kids

By Mike Andrzejczyk

With all the things kids can spend time doing — from interfacing with their Apple PCs to watching MTV

their Apple PCs to watching MTV

they're still sitting down to read their favorite books.

At least they are in Grosse
Pointe, according to Blaine Morrow, the library's chief of children's services.

Writers of children's books know their market is expanding rapidly and have started to turn out books on all sorts of subject, including those that until recently may have been too controversial.

ideas, Morrow says.

A children's book is successful

Writers of children's books are dealing with sensitive themes like drug abuse and alcoholism, family or sexual abuse, war and others. Choosing books for the children's section at the central library isn't a matter of ignoring certain topics,

"There aren't any subjects you want to stay away from, just ones you want to look at closely," Morrow says. "There isn't a book on the shelves here that I haven't read from cover to cover. If I don't think it's appropriate, it doesn't go there. I don't think that's censorship." As part of the Wayne-Oakland

Library Federation, the Central, Woods and Park branches each re-

In fiction books, it's the quality of the writing and the story that makes the book, Morrow says. Children don't like being preached at or talked down to in books. Often, sensitive issues like substance or sexual abuse are more easily discussed in fictional settings, he adds.

Kids also find it easier sometimes to cope with problems when they see characters facing the same situation in books.

Bibliotherapy isn't a new idea, Morrow says. The children's libraries have bibliographies available in a variety of subject areas. The books' titles and authors are followed by synopses of plots and

The publishing boom has its up and down side, Morrow says.

It takes less time for a book to be produced, but it goes out of printing faster, Morrow says. The quality of good, however, he adds.

Children's librarians do more than just put books on shelves. Parents come into children's sections, looking for advice on what kind of book to buy for this or that age child or if there is a book on a certain topic appropriate for a certain age child, Morrow says.

While there's a boom in publishing and writing of children's books, Morrow says he doesn't plan to join the ranks of authors.

"It takes a certain knack to write children's books," he says. "I write about books... but I don't think you'il ever see a book with my name on it on these shelves. Morrow reviews children's books for a national teachers publication. Besides books and reference materials, the central library and its branches also have story hours: three preschool and one school-age at the central branch, and two preschool and one school-age at each of the branches. Changes are coming in the spring, Morrow says. The library will look at bringing more pre-school children into the libraries, with the hopes of getting them interested in reading at an early age.

There are traditionally two groups that are very strong users of the library; the very young and older people." Morrow says, adding that bringing preschool children and toddlers to the library for their first experience is important. That first step into getting children hooked on books should be a positive experience, making them interested in reading at an early age.

Getting kids hooked on books seems to work. The library's reading club program continues to be successful, Morrow says. Kids last summer read an average of eight books each, with some going so far

There will be other authors visiting the libraries in the coming year, along with other changes. Morrow says. By mid-December, the library hopes to have Apple PCs available for public use.

Rare book auction

More than 100 items of interest to the collectors of books, manuscripts and grahics have been assembled for the 7th Annual Rare Book Auction Thursday evening, Nov. 21, at the main library, 5201 Woodward.

The auction is sponsored by the Friends of the Detroit Public Library. Proceeds will benefit the newly reopened Rare Book Room.

Auction tickets are free and may be obtained by calling the office at 833-4048. A ticket provides admission to the champagne preview at 6:30 p.m. and to the auction at 7:30 p.m. Ticket-holders will also receive a copy of the auction catalog.
On the day of the auction, all materials will be on public display between 9:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. in the Friends Auditorium at the Main Library.

To be auctioned are two typed manuscripts with corrections by author William X. Kienzle and a set of uncorrected galley proofs of three soon-to-be published novels by Dutch Elmore with an auto-graph signed letter laid in. Cartoonist Draper Hill of the Detroit News has contributed two original brush and ink cartoons

For information, call the Friends at 833-4048.

Book sale

The Third Annual Historic Indian Village Book Sale, sponsored by the Indian Village Archives, will be Saturday, Nov. 16 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Iroquois Avenue Christ lutheran Church, 2411 Iroquois, at the corner of Vernor.

Indian Village is a residential neighborhood of fine homes dating from 1895 to about 1930 on Detroit's near east side. The Village has been officially recognized as a national, state and city historic site.
The books, which have been donated by Indian Village residents and friends of the Archives, include a desirable selection of hard bound and paperbacks ranging from non-fiction to cook books, children's works, novels, biographies along with a few rare and unusual books.

Proceeds from the Book Sale are used for the Indian Village Archives' programs. Donation of books is welcome. Those wishing to do so should contact Ginni Cos-grove, 499-3466. Donations are taxdeductible.

They love a parade

Thanksgiving is almost here and that means the annual Christmas Parade in the Village can't be far behind. As in years past, the parade is scheduled for the day after Thanksgiving, kicking off the yuletide season. This year the parade will leave South High School at 10:30 a.m. and proceed down Kercheval towards the Village on Friday, Nov. 29. The parade is sponsored annually by the Grosse Pointe Village Association. Representing the association in the photo are; from left, Bob Jose of Grosse Pointe Auto, Susan Dennis of Susan Charles Pottery, Martha Keane, Mary Colombo, Santa's helper, Kelly Aitken, who will be riding in this year's parade, Santa himself and Liz Finken, of Sparky Herbert's.

District SAT scores are good despite drop from last year

Grosse Pointe's Class of 1985 scored an average composite mark of 1000 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the second highest score in the last 14 years, according to one of two reports distributed to school board members by the system's Office of Research and Develop-

The 397 seniors who took the SAT, considered the more difficult of two commonly used college entrance examinations, scored 474 points on the verbal and 526 points on the mathematics portion of the exam last year. Fifty-one percent of the graduating seniors took the

The 1985 SAT score was 11 points lower than the year before, according to one report, when 56 percent of the graduating class that year scored 473 on the verbal and 538 on the mathematics portion of the examination.

Analysis of the trends in test scores and a summary of performance by school and sex were covered in the two reports, prepared by Roger McCaig, director of the Office of Research and Development.

Performance on the SAT has shown an increase locally since 1982. Scores on the math portion have fluctuated randomly over the past three years; the verbal scores have increased steadily.

The performance in 1982 ended a seven-year trough in scores, according to one report. The trough corresponds roughly to a period of relaxed standards. The improvements in 1982 reflect increased emphasis on academic performance and vocabulary, McCaig said.

The 1982 seniors who started the trend were seventh-graders in 1977, the first year of an upswing in local achievement test scores in elementary and middle schools, according to one report. Before that, the seven-year valley of poor performance was broken only in 1978.

The pattern of high and low scores is consistent with district achievement scores, where scores in the elementary and middle schools improved consistently from 1977 to 1981. Seniors who turned out to be the first high scorers in 1982 were seventh graders in 1977.

SAT scores have been more stable than national scores, according to one report. The decline in local scores was far less severe than those nationally, the report

Scores at the two high schools differ significantly, according to one report. While 41 percent of North's 1985 graduating class took the exam and scored an average 457 on the verbal and 531 on the math, 60 percent of South's graduating class that year scored an average 480 on the verbal and 524 on the math. While one school does not consistently score better than the other on the SAT, a greater percentage of South students take the exam than North students. In 1975, 64 percent of North's graduating class took the SAT, compared to 59 percent of South's students, the only time in the last 14 years more of North's graduating class turned up for the exam than South's, according to the report.

For 1985, 60 percent of South's graduating class took the exam, compared to 41 percent of North's graduating seniors.

The difference in the portion of the graduating class taking the exam may reflect differences in college preparedness counseling at the schools, McCaig said.

More females than males have taken the SAT at South since 1972. Over those years, 2,467 females have taken the exam, compared to 2,251 males. Performance on the test varies, with males consistently outscoring females on the math portion of the exam at South.

At North, more males than females have taken the SAT since 1972, with 1,945 males taking the exam over the years, compared to 1,835 females. The pattern of better performance by males on the math portion of the exam holds at North, according to the report.

In general, more students attain scores above 600 on the math test than on the verbal portion, according to the report. The ratio varies between 2 to 1 and 3 to 1, with the same pattern occurring on the national level. A greater percentage of South students achieve 600 scores than North students.

Differences in performance between the schools remains a topic for continuing study, McCaig said. One report also details the district's performance on the ACT college entrance exam, but dif-ferences in reporting by the administering agency makes its application to the performance of graduating seniors more difficult, McCaig said. A Clean Chimney Is a Safe Chimney!

Starring in Pointe Players' production of "Good News" are, from left, Heidi Bowerman, portraying Patricia Bingham, Greg Roach as Tom Marlow and Kymberli Finger as Connie Lane. Showtimes are 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14, and 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, at the Performing Arts Center. Tickets are $3.50.

Pointe Players will present 'Good News'

Grosse Pointe South's Pointe Players will present the musical, "Good News", tonight through Saturday, Nov. 14 through 17. Showtimes are 7:30 p.m. Thursday and 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Performances are at the Performing Arts Center at North High School.

The college campus musical was first produced in the 1920s and has been revived many times and was made into a movie in the 1950s which starred June Allyson and Peter Lawford. It contains many songs, including The Varsity Drag, The Best Things In Life Are Free and Lucky In Love.

The story revolves around the homecoming football game at Tait University and Tom Marlow, the college football hero. Marlow is played by Greg Roach. After flunking astronomy, Marlow's in danger of not being able to play in the big game. If he wins the game, he has promised to marry his girlfriend, Patricia Bingham, played by Heidi Bowerman. But Marlow is really in love with his astronomy tutor, Connie Lane, played by Kymberli Finger.

Also chronicled are the adventures of Marlow's roommate, Bobby, played by David Bryant, who's trying to escape man-chasing Babe, played by Christine Esckilsen, and her jealous and dangerous ex-boyfriend Beef, played by Jeff Douglas.

Tickets are $3.50 at the door.

A picture-perfect puzzle of the Pointes

By Tom Greenwood If you ask Peg Gibson and Joe Polimeni, they'll tell you they've done some of their best work while on a bicycle built for two.

That was their transportation when they were gathering photos for their joint venture, a jigsaw puzzle of the Pointes. "Grosse Pointe is the kind of community you can walk through night or day and not worry about crime," said Polimeni, news picture bureau manager for United Press International. "We walked literally miles and miles taking photos for this and another project. Finally, Peggy suggested using her bike and we covered a lot more ground."

"Actually, the puzzle is an off-shoot of our mail venture," said Gibson, who is employed by the Economic Club of Detroit. "We're going to be marketing a 1987 calendar called 'A Year in the Life of Grosse Pointe.' We've taken about 4,200 photos since November of last year and I chose 50 or so that make up the puzzle. Joe likes people pictures and I like things that represent Grosse Pointe. I think we've achieved a nice blend.'

The 110-piece and very colorful puzzle represents all of the Grosse

Included in the montage are shots of the annual fireworks against a coal black sky, sailboards against a looming ore carrier, a snow-covered Garfield sporting a knit cap and scarf and Pointers at play.

"The kiddie shots are the best," Polimeni said. "We caught everyone as candidly as we could. I must admit I had the cops called on me once, and a principal came out and asked what I was up to. He called UPI to see if I was really who I said I was. I thought that was great. It shows the concern people in our community have for others.

morning or as the sun was going down — just when the light was at its best."

Gibson and Polimeni are still hard at work on their calendar. "The upcoming Thanksgiving day

⊖SAWPUZZLE of the POINTES

Once people saw Gibson and Polimeni at work, they usually attracted a small crowd. Often residents would have suggestions on what to shoot next, Polimeni said. Included in the puzzle is an aerial shot of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford

House just as the sun comes up.
"I have a friend who's a helicopter pilot and we worked out a trade," Polimeni said. "I covered the Pointes in a chopper at least five times. Always early in the parade will just finish a year of work," Gibson said. "The calendar will be rather unique because it won't consist of just a cover and 12 photos inside. The inside will have at least 150 photos in a montage effect. Enough to be interesting, but not so many that it's overly busy.

The cost of the puzzle is $12 and it's available at Jacobson's main store, the Village Book Store, Two's Company, the League Shop and Detroit Paint and Color.

Financial aid explored

The rising cost of a college education continues to be a concern to parents of high school students and to the students themselves. In order that those involved may receive practical information regarding sources and procedures for obtaining financial aid, the counseling department of Grosse Pointe North High School has scheduled, for Tuesday, Feb. 19, an evening program at which questions may be posed and answered.

The featured speaker will be

The Grosse Pointe South Mothers Club will meet Monday, Dec. 2, at 12:45 p.m. in the school's Cleminson Hall. The group will continue its discussions of college preparedness, with counselor Terry Lloyd talking about college testing, what colleges look for in students, grades, test scores, extracur-ricular activities and personal recommendations.

This meeting is the latest of the activities related to college preparedness. The Mothers Club in November heard Peggy Maycock and Elaine Yates discuss "Carver Decision Making — The Role of Parents." Also related to the series was College Night '85 held last night at North High School.

Other meetings in the college preparedness series include Dec. 19, when South alumni will return to the school to talk about their college experiences with students. Also, the Mothers Club will meet Monday, Jan. 6, at 12:45 p.m. in Cleminson hall to hear Stephanie Kost and "The Mechanics of the College Interview.

Trombly sets artists day

A group of local artists have volunteered their time to share art with children at Trombly Elementary School Friday, Nov. 15, to stimulate interest and awareness of the creative process.
Children will be invited by classroom to observe the artists during demonstrations and see samples of their work.

In attendance will be Sharon Koppy from the Quilter's Patch, quilting; Margaret Leidel, basket weaving; Ruth Songer, tin punching; Elena Ackerman, water-colors; Jerry Lemenu; WDIV courtroom artist, charcoal portraits; Jon Austin, carved birds and decoys; Gerry Lutz, tole painting; Pat Jones, needle weaving; Rene Diot from the Center for Creative Studies, pottery and ceramics; and the demonstration of Hmung stitchery, a traditional cutwork embroidery, by local Laotian women.

The artists will be set up in the gymnasium. Parents and interested residents are also invited to attend between 9 a.m. and noon. Certain items will be for sale.

Story Lady makes magic at Trombly

It's not unusual to hear stories told in elementary schools. It is unusual to hear them told with changing voice and facial expressions for each character and to see a story weaved with voice and hand

Students from Trombly and Detroit's Guyton elementary schools got such a chance when Jackie Torrence, the Story Lady, visited Trombly last month.

Torrence's appearance Oct. 11, part of the whirlwind tour to promote the Oct. 26 television program, "The Teller and The Tale" on which she appeared, was arranged by parents at the school.
"She's one of the kind of people that others want to touch," said Gail Gunn, Torrence's tour companion. "When people see rock stars, they want to reach out and grab a piece of them. But when people see Jackie, they just want to reach out and touch her.

It was Torrence who did the reaching out that day, at least verbally, holding the undivided attention of the children, teachers, parents and others who had come

As the plot thickened in her first story, the nervous fidgeting among the audience ebbed. As she reached the climax of her second, all the children were swept up in the story, "The Ghost with the Golden

In the hall afterward, she chatted with some of the children, telling them about books they might enjoy reading and listened to them tell about other stories they had heard and read. An impromptu autograph session started, but the children were quickly shooed back to class. She even reassured one little girl that there was no such thing as a ghost with a golden arm.

Torrence has been telling stories since 1972 while working as a reference librarian in North Carolina. She was the official storyteller at the library until 1976. The next year, she was invited to perform at the national convention of the National Association for the Preservation and Perpetuation of Storytelling, and since then has traveled through 42 states, Canada and Mexico telling her stories.

Among her vast repertoire (she once told stories for three hours a day for a month without repeating herself) are "Jack" tales — Appalachian folk tales with their origin in old English folk tales - Uncle Remus stories and ghost stories. Torrence had a list of television appearance besides Oct. 26's show. Film clips of her work have been shown on Good Morning, America, The Today Show and Charles Kuralt's Sunday Morning News.

"The pipe tobacco side of my life used to make me miserable. One pipe tobacco would bite. Another was too smelly. Or too sweet. Or tasteless. Then I found Haymarket blend. It's got everything. Satisfying flavor. It's bite-free, pipeful after pipeful. With an aroma so nice, my family actually likes me to smoke! Even after three years, I'm not tired of it. Now, the pipe tobacco side of my life is one of my happiest.

Conference teaches teachers about shuttle

By Mike Andrzejczyk

Nancy Swartz of Lincoln Road may not have been chosen to be the Teacher in Space, riding on an upcoming space shuttle mission. But she and other teachers from seven states did get to watch a shuttle launch, compliments of the National Aeronautics and Space Administra-

Swartz, a Detroit Chapter One preschool teacher at Keith Elementary-Middle school, was among the 1,100 teachers who applied to be the first teacher in space. Of those, 10 were chosen to enroll in the training program, with a final selection of a first team and alternate made later.

Some of those applicants who didn't make the final cut were invited to attend a three-day teacher's education conference during the last week of October to get more information about the shuttle and space programs and to witness a launch.

The education conference included a briefing and tour of Kennedy Space Center, a discussion of the Teacher in Space project, and a variety of special programs, including one about Halley's Comet, the solar system and the plans for an orbiting space station.

Other workshops gave teachers details on how they and their classes could plot the course of Halley's Comet or follow the orbital progress of the space shuttle using materials available through NASA, Swartz said.

The conference was to give those who applied and had a continuing interest in the space program an opportunity to learn more about it and pass that information on to others in the community, she add-

Swartz said she will make herself available to elementary schools and student groups, like the Cub Scouts. Write her, care of Keith Elementary Middle School, 10800 East Canfield, Detroit, 48214.

One of the reasons she applied for the Teacher in Space program, which she called a chance of a life-time, was because she would be able to communicate her experiences with any age group.

"I'm a preschool teacher, and if I can break my language down to small enough pieces to communicate with preschoolers, I can talk to any group," Swartz said. Most of the teachers attending the conference were about the same age. Swartz said. "We have grown up with the space program and have seen it from the start," she added.

While they were about the same age, teachers at the conference represented all subjects, not just science and math, Swartz said. There were grade school teachers and art teachers as well as junior and high school teachers who ap-

It only supports the contention of one former astronaut, now speaking on behalf of NASA, that all subjects are relevant in space, from home economics to nuclear physics, Swartz said.

Teachers at the conference had a chance to meet the person chosen to represent their profession in space as well as watch the latest shuttle lift-off. Watching the shuttle fire itself into space is a very emotional experience, she added

When the engines fire, the shuttle is lost for a moment in a cloud of steam from the evaporating water used as a coolant, Swartz said. "When you do catch sight of it, it looks like it's rising slowly, but then you hear three sonic booms so you know it's not going slow," she added. "It's almost like slow motion, the way the booster rockets float away.

"It's a very emotional thing, to watch the shuttle lift off. Some of the people there were crying as it launched," Swartz said. "I was just snapping pictures. Some of them will probably be out of focus, but I kept taking pictures until I couldn't see it anymore.'

AN ORDINANCE TO AMEND SECTION 1400 OF ORDINANCE NO. 192, COMMONLY KNOWN AS THE ZONING ORDINANCE.

THE CITY OF GROSSE POINTE FARMS ORDAINS:

Park firefighters protect garage

Section 1. The Zoning Ordinance, Ordinance No. 192, enacted November 18, 1963, is hereby amended by revising Section 1400 to read in its entirety as follows:

SEC. 1400. USE, HEIGHT AND AREA EXCEPTIONS:

The regulations in this Ordinance shall be subject to the following interpretation and exceptions:

1. Essential Services

Essential services authorized and regulated by law and other ordinances of the City of Grosse Pointe Farms shall be exempted from application of 2. Voting Place

The provisions of this Ordinance shall not be so construed as to interfere with the temporary use of any property as a voting place in connection with a municipal or other public election. 3. Height Limit

The height limitations of this Ordinance shall not apply to chimneys, provided the chimney is not more than five (5) feet above the highest point of the roof. 4. Projections into Yards

The following projections into required open spaces are permitted: sills, cornices, eaves, gutters, chimneys, or pilasters projecting not more than eighteen (18) inches into any required open space. Outside stairways, basement entrances, fire escapes, bay windows, balconies, unenclosed porches and other projections shall be considered as part of the principal or acceptable or accep cessory building and shall conform to the open space requirements, subject to the following exceptions:

(a) an unenclosed and uncovered porch or paved terrace may project into a front yard for a distance not exceeding ten (10) feet, but this shall in no instance be interpreted to include or permit fixed canopies, or any porch or terrace enclosed with walls, glass, screen or other material,

(b) terraces, patios and other uncovered and unenclosed projections may project into a rear or side yard so long as such structure is flush with the ground level, but this should in no instance be interpreted to include or permit decks or other elevated projections.

5. Drives and Walks

Paved drives placed in required open spaces for the purpose of providing access to principal buildings or accessory structures are permitted; provided however, that any paved drive located in the front yard for any residential lot shall not exceed thirty feet in width (30%) or thirty percent (30%) in coverage of the required front yard, whichever is lesser. Walks or other pavements are permitted in required yards for the purpose of providing access to rear yards or accessory structures if such pavement is not higher than nine (9) inches above the grade on which it is placed.

Section 2. In all other respects, Ordinance No. 192, as previously amended, should remain in full force and effect

Section 3. This Ordinance should take effect 20 days after its enactment, or upon publication, whichever is later.

Art teacher takes sabbatical

By Mike Andrzejczyk

North High School art teacher John Wargelin will take a semester sabbatical to study the uses of computers in graphic arts and develop a program for a computer-aided design course at the high school next year.

The sabbatical, approved Monday night by the Board of Education, will give Wargelin the second semester off this school year to take classes in computers at either Wayne State University or the Center for Creative Study. He will write a course guide of computer application in art that will be piloted in next year's commercial design class at North. A separate course in computer art may be offered in 1987-88.

Although he has some knowledge of computers, Wagelin says he doesn't want to put together a class for only computer specialsts or mathematics experts. "I want to write a computer art course for students who ... want to use the computer as another tool," he

The semester sabbatical should give him enough time to prepare the course guide, Wargelin says. Other courses have been written in other districts and, after the coursework is behind him, he'll be able to visit those districts and see the classes before he puts together a program for Grosse Pointe.

He's excited with the opportunity the school system has given him to learn about computer-aided design, Wargelin says. It's an opportunity both he and the school will benefit from.

While there may be enough time to write a course guide, there are some conflicts coming up for Wargelin. His university classes are scheduled to begin before his sabbatical officially starts. Also, to have a pilot program for the coming school year, he will have to submit an equipment request by the end of January so the school system can work it into the coming year's budget.

The system is interested in getting into computer-aided graphic arts work, Wargelin says. His original request for a sabbatical contained other options with the computer arts class, but he says he was asked to concentrate on getting the information for the compu-

Wargelin has been with the school system since 1960. The Birmingham resident spent eight years at Parcells Middle School and 17 at North. His specialties include crafts, commercial design and sculpture. He has been art department chairperson for a number of years as well as the art instructor on the humanities team.

Crafts include stained glass and jewelry work, Wargelin says. He has been a professional stained glass artisan for the past 18 years and has handled commissions throughout the state. He also holds a master's degree in industrial design, which will also be useful in his work on the design program.

Computer fluency is just the latest in a series of things Wargelin says he has had to learn in order to keep up. "Ninety percent of what I teach now I never had in college. I think it's important to stay cur-

He says he found himself faced with a choice. He could spend the last few years he has until retirement without learning anything more than the basics about computers, or he could take the classes, pick the brains of anyone who has ever prepared or taught a computer art course, and turn around and write a better one for the school system.

There are various applications in graphic and pure art for computers, Wargelin says. The equipment can be used to form multipli-cations and enhancements of forms, distort patterns, or be used to aid painting and even do calligraphy, he adds.

In the office of the art department at the high school, Wargelin has examples of computer art from magazines, as well as information he will incorporate into his work. "I don't know how some of these things are done yet, but I want to learn," he adds.

The high school has computer equipment available, and one part of his work will be finding out how applicable that hardware will be to computer art, Wargelin says. One of the reasons he decided to take some courses at the Center for the Creative Studies, which he calls one of Detroit's best kept secrets, was because the equipment used in those classes would be more sophisticated and give him broader understanding of the field.

The school system will pilot some aspects of the course guide in 1986-87 and look to develop a full program in the following year, once any of the bugs found are worked out, Wargelin says.

Computer art is really something new," he adds. "What better thing can I learn right now?"

Thanksgiving Parade needs sponsors

Thanksgiving Michigan's Parade is asking local businesses to "Show Your Stripes" by sponsoring antique papier mache character heads for the traditional event.

Besides the obvious tax advantage, business sponsors are offered a listing in a full page Detroit News thank you ad, a listing in parade publications, souvenirs of the parade, grandstand seating for two and a space marching in the parade wearing their sponsored papier mache head.

Four levels of sponsorship make up the Small Business Drive program ranging from $500 to $2,000 hat are governed by the size of the valuable handcrafted heads.

Further information on small business "Show Your Stripes" program is available by calling Doug Knopper, of the parade offices 963-

Miss Grosse Pointe

Maria Thomas of the Woods won the 1985 Miss Grosse Pointe Scholarship pageant recently. The 17-year-old North honors student topped a field of nine contestants and received more than $1,500 in prizes and scholarship funds. Runners-up are Mary Lukowski, fourth; Cyndi Davilla, third; Kelley Glancey, second; and Cindy Dundon, first. Thomas also won the Miss Congeniality award and the talent award for her piano performance. Her next step is to compete for the title of Miss Michigan in June 1986. Applications for next year's pageant can be obtained by calling Darlene Doetsch at 882-5250.

The other photo showed South seniors losing a tug of war to the North students. South was a part of the day's activities, so why shouldn't it be shown? At least they had the "good grace" to lose the contest, didn't they, all you irate callers?

The sports section was devoted mainly to North, about their victory and chances in the playoffs. As the winners, that was only right.

There's a lot more coverage of them this week after their lastminute victory over Murray-Wright High School Saturday in the first round of the playoffs.

It's funny, but all the calls came from parents, not from the kids. The students are showing a lot more class than the adults. How nice.

While we're at it, top marks to the Murray-Wright football team for showing such grace after their heartbreaking loss. There were no cheap shots on either side, although the game was rough and tough out there in the mud and rain.

More top marks for the Murray-Wright Pilots' marching band which put on a high-steping, razzle-dazzle half-time show that had the crowd dancing in the stands.

Too bad both sides couldn't have won.

ULS open house

University Liggett School will host an open house Sunday, Nov. 17, 2 to 4 p.m.

Both campuses will be open to the public. The main campus (Pre-Kindergarten, Lower and Upper schools) is located at 1045 Cook Road, and the Middle School site is about two miles away at 850 Briarcliff Road, Grosse Pointe Woods. Students; faculty and parents will be on hand at both locations to give tours, answer questions and demonstrate typical school-day activities.

Local architects, designs honored PARKCREST DARTY STORE

At the Michigan Society of Architects 70th Annual Convention in Flint recently, several local residents and their firms were among those honored for good design in architecture

Schervish, Vogel, Merz, P.C. received a total of three honor awards. One was for Chene Park, an urban park that is the site of a summer arts and music festival. The park sits at the edge of the Detroit River in an aging industrial area.

The firm also won an Image award for combining art and architecture into a fast food outlet, the Burger King in the Renaissance Center. The restaurant features a 120-foot long Spirit of Detroit mural

In addition, the Rivertown Carriage House Project was also an award winner. The buildings include the firm's office and a restaurant and is made up of two horse and carriage houses that survived the large 1885 homes they once served.

Care was taken in the design approach to preserve the character and charm of the structures and to highlight the original buildings as much as possible. To avoid additions, the architects found additional space by excavating and underpinning the rubble footings to create a new lower level.

The firm's Charles Merz is a resident of Grosse Pointe Park.

The firm of another resident, Gino Rossetti of Rossetti Asso-ciates, was honored for a glass and granite building in Dallas. The triangular site had been rejected by other developers who believed that height, set-back and on-site parking requirements made an office building there economically unfeasible.

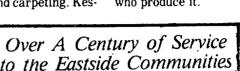

The Grosse Pointe Shores Municipal Building won an award for its renovator, Robert Wakely Jr.. AIA, of Farmington Hills. Using details and proportions from the Albert Kahn-designed building, 6,000 feet were added to its north side. Since the building had gone through at least six non-professional interior and exterior alterations, little historic detail remained, so Wakely stripped it down to its wood frame and masonry exterior walls and reconstructed it.

A special award was created for William Kessler and Associates for their design of a dog house, which resulted in a temperature and weather-resistant mobile house constructed of a 30-inch diameter spun air duct that features a free access opening and carpeting. Kessler is a Park resident. Ninety entries were judged this year and who produce it.

Milo Thompson, AIA, of Frederick Bentz/Milo Thompson/Robert Rietown, Inc., of Minneapolis, chaired the jury. The Michigan Society of Architects is a component of the American Institute of Architects. The honor awards program at the chapter. state and national level is sponsored by the architectural community to promote good design and to recognize those

Old Fashioned Celebration

Sigma Gamma benefit supports the Detroit Institute for Children

By Elsa Frohman

The Christmas season will begin the weekend of Nov. 22-24 on the Hill this year. Santa Claus will be on hand to meet with children, Mayor James Dingeman will light the Farms' official Christmas tree and old fashioned horse-drawn carriages will take shoppers from one end of the district to the other.

It's all part of the Old Fashioned Celebration put on by the Sigma Gamma Association for the Detroit Institute for Children. In its second year, the celebration represents an important cooperation be-

The Detroit Institute for Children and the Sigma Gamma Association have been directly connected from the very beginning.

"Sigma Gamma is not a sorority," said Betsy Dance, president of the board of trustees of DIC, an honorary chairman of the Old Fashioned Celebration and a longtime Sigma Gamma member. She explained that the Greek name was chosen by the six Grosse Pointe girls who founded the association in 1904 because they liked the

'A Greek name sounded like fun," Dance said. However, the organization that resulted was far from frivolous. Beginning as a group of young women gathering for friendship, it soon grew into a significant service organization.

The group founded the Detroit Orthopedic Clinic in 1920, then the Sigma Gamma Hospital School in Mt. Clemens in 1925. The hospital school was a long-term in-patient facility, primarily for polio victims. For more than 30 years, Sigma Gamma supported the clinic and school. The group held fundraisers and members volunteered giving patient care at the school.

In 1957, the school was closed because the treatments for polio had progressed to where long-term inpatient care was no longer necessary. Sigma Gamma then concentrated its attention on the orthopedic clinic in Detroit.

In 1979, the name was changed to the Detroit Institute for Children to reflect the wider scope of services offered. Today, DIC is a Torchdrive agency, receiving funds from the United Foundation, as well as the Sigma Gamma Association.

"Our philosophy is to take care of the whole child," Dance said. "We don't just concentrate on the handicap, but look at the good things as are children with cerebral palsy, a condition affecting motor function. Cerebral palsy is not a disease, but rather a condition, usually resulting from oxygen starvation to the brain in early development.

DIC provides physical therapy, custom fitting for mobility devices and prosthesises, medical referrals and counseling for all children, regardless of ability to pay. The institute's medical staff serves on a volunteer basis. Physicians from Children's Hospital of Michigan donate their time to perform exami-nations and give referrals. All surgery recommended at the institute is performed at Children's Hospi-

Currently, DIC is staffed by an administrator, an assistant administrator, a medical director and a professional staff of doctors, physical therapists, occupational thera-pists, speech therapists, psychologists and social workers.

Approximately 2,500 children are treated annually at DIC, however, there is currently a waiting list of patients who need the institutes

"We have a waiting list for the first time," Dance said. "And this disturbs us. We know that early intervention gives us a better prognosis for these children. We need more staff and more doctors, and more support and more social workers.

The children who come to DIC have disabilities that range from mild to severe. Some need little more than physical therapy to improve their motor control. Others need help learning to sit up, stand or even communicate.

'It's wonderful what happens to these kids when they get the ability to communicate," Dance said. Children at the institute are taught to operate computer voice synthesizers, or a variety of other devices to improve communication skills.

"The thrust is to help them live as normally as possible," Dance

GP Symphony Christmas Concert preceded by champagne brunch yuletide extravaganza

Determined to make the Christmas concert and brunch the season's most spectacular event, the Grosse Pointe Symphony Women's Association is planning its annual yuletide extravaganza on Sunday, Dec. 1, at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. The social hour begins at noon with a cash bar, and a champagne brunch will be served at 1 p.m. The concert follows at 3

Heading the 65-member Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra is music director and conductor, Felix Resnick. The music scheduled for this year's festive concert includes works by Verdi, Mozart, Tchaikowsky, Bizet, Anderson, Humperdinck, and Berlin. The program concludes with the traditional Christmas Carol Sing-Along.

Patron ticket holders at $50 per person and benefactor ticket holders at $75 per person will have their very own preview party with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, Nov. 22, at the Lakeshore Road home of Dr. and Mrs. Choon Soo Rim. The preview party is free to patron and benefactor ticket holders.

Advance reservations are requested by Monday, Nov. 18. Checks should be made payable to the Grosse Pointe Symphony Women's Association and sent to Mrs. Mary Evelyn Self, 1067 Berkshire Rd., Grosse Pointe, Mich. 48230. Reservations will be confirmed at

Additional information may be obtained by contacting the general chairman at 886-5160 or the reservations chairman at 822-8667. General admission to the yuletide event is $25 for adults and $10 for children under 12 years of age.

General chairman of the affair is Jeanette A. Szulec. President of the Grosse Pointe Symphony Women's Association is Mrs. Bogdan Baynert. Committees also include Mrs. George Coticchio, Gertrude Draves, Mrs. Raymond

Many members of the Grosse Pointe Symphony Women's Association are working to plan the upcoming champagne brunch. Clockwise, from the lower left corner, they are Mrs. George Coticchio, arrangements; Mrs. Douglas Robinson, decorations; Gertrude Draves, assisting with invitations; Mrs. Walter Levick, assisting with decorations; Mrs. Henry Simons, assisting with arrangements; Mrs. John Young Jr., committee member; Jeannette Szulec; Mrs. Bogdan Baynert; Mrs. Anthony Rutkowski, invitations; and Mary Evelyn Self.

Sardines: A little fish that's a nutritional giant

Sardine is a collective name for a variety of tiny soft-boned fish, believed to be named for the island of Sardinia in the Mediterranean. It is an exceptional protein food (3 oz. contains 300 mgs).

Whole sardines are an excellent source of the bone building minerals, calcium and phospherous, and also provide potassium, magnesium, iron, zinc and iodine. They contain all the B vitamins except thiamine and contain high levels of B-12. Sardines are one of the good sources of vitamin D, the nutrient essential to the utilization of cal-

The following is a selection of recipes featuring sardines, from low-cholesterol, budget-wise kitchens of Thrya Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt

Sardine Pizza

- 2 cans sardines
- 4 wholewheat buns 1 cup tomato sauce
- 1/2 tsp. oregano
- 1/4 tsp. garlic powder

Combine tomato sauce, garlic powder and oregano and blend. Spoon sauce over sardines and sprinkle onions, olives and green pepper over tomato sauce. Top with cheese.

Bake in preheated 400 degree oven 10 to 12 minutes, until bread is toasted and cheese is melted. Serves four.

Variables prohibit exact calorie count. Cholesterol low.

Sardines and Rice. Scalloped

- 1/4 cup rice
- 1 Tblsp. margarine 11/2 cups strained tomato juice 1 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 2 cans sardines (31/2 ounces ea.)
- in tomato sauce 1 tsp. flour
- 1/4 tsp. paprika
 1/3 cup fine bread crumbs
 Cook the rice until tender.

- Remove bones and mash sardines.

Make a tomato sauce, using tomato juice, margarine, flour, salt, pepper, and paprika. In a greased or sprayed baking dish, place alternate layers of rice, sardines, and tomato sauce until all are used. Cover with bread crumbs and bake at 500 degrees for about 12 minutes. Serves six.

Talking turkey — don't let leftovers go to waste

Traditionally, the holiday season is the time when families and friends come together for large, home-cooked feasts. It is also the time when doctors see a jump in illness due to improperly prepared

Feeding a large group calls for special measures. Phil Kirkwood, deputy chief of the Division of Environmental Health for the Michigan Department of Health and Jon Gould, owner of the Pointe East Restaurant in Jackson and chairman of the Michigan Restaurant Association suggest following the same guidelines as Michigan restaurants follow:

• Defrost your turkey in the refrigerator. This calls for some torethought as large birds may take a few days to completely thaw.

• Use a meat thermometer when cooking turkey. Insert the thermometer into the center of the bird and cook the turkey to at least 165 degrees Fahrenheit.

• Wrap leftovers and store in the refrigerator or freezer. Don't leave turkey, dressing or gravy at room temperature for more than two

• Re-heat leftovers to 165 degrees. Simply warming food can release bacteria instead of destroying it.

Gould adds one more suggestion to this list. He recommends cooking dressing outside the turkey. He reasons that the thermometer in the turkey may register 165 degrees Fahrenheit while the dressing inside is still not fully cooked.

Failing to bring the food up to 165 degree allows bacteria, including staph toxins, strep and salmonella infectious organisms to remain and grow on food. "This does not mean that everyone eating warmed-up leftover turkey will pick up an infection," added Gould, "but it certainly increases the chances.

Gould and the Michigan Restaurant Association offer food service sanitation courses run in conjunction with the Michigan Department of Public Health. Although only Wayne County requires each restaurant to have a course graduate on premise, over 10,000 managers and employees of restaurants across the state have taken the course on a voluntary

Christ Church presents 1985-86 concert series

Continuing an 11-year tradition of musical life in Grosse Pointe and the metropolitan area, Christ Church's 1985-86 concerts will include works by Britten, Haydn, Faure and Gilbert and Sullivan. A recital with guest William deTurk, carillonist, and choral evensong opened the series, which also this year will include a "Festival of Lessons and Carols" and a Yale Glee Club visit. Frederic DeHaven, organist and choirmaster at Christ Church, originated this series and directs these events. Vocal and dramatic talents such as Roma Riddell, Beverly Rinaldi, Rosamarie Russell and John Paul White have participated as well as instrumentalists from the Detroit Symphony and University of Michigan Orchestras and Michigan Opera Theater.

Michigan Opera Theater.

Major works have included "The Play of Daniel," a 13th century manuscript, as well as Bach's "G Minor Mass," "St. John's Passion," "St. Mathew's Passion" and Cantatas 148, 140, 78, etc. Requiems of Verdi, Brahms and Mozart have been heard as well as

U.S. Savings Bonds. Paying Better Than Ever.

Back in 1872, San Francisco's first cable cars were called "Hallidie's folly." Today, they're America's only mobile historic monument. Some things never change.

But one great American tradition has changed—U.S. Savings Bonds. Now Savings Bonds pay higher variable interest rates like money market accounts. That's the kind of change anyone can appreciate.

Just hold Savings Bonds for five years and you get the new variable interest rates. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. That means you can earn a lot more, but never less than $7^{1}.5^{0}$.

You can purchase Bonds at almost any financial institution. Or easier yet, through the Payrol! Savings Plan where you work. Buy Savings Bonds. Like the cable car, they're another part of our proud heritage. For the current interest rate and more infortion, call toll-free LS: SAVINGS BONDS Paying Better Than Ever

A new tradition is born at Detroit's holiday gala Festival of Trees

Thanksgiving week marks the debut of an exciting new holiday tradition for Detroit — the Festival of Trees, a benefit for Children's Hospital of Michigan. From Nov. 26 through Dec. 1, the Riverview Ballroom at Cobo Hall will be transformed into a spectacular holiday fantasyland. Attractions include more than 100 professionally decorated holiday trees and wreaths, a gingerbread village, a model train display, a historical doll display, Santa Claus and continuous entertainment.

Detroiters recall with fond memories the Ford Rotunda Christmas displays. Millions of visitors enjoyed the decorated 37-foot Christmas tree and other displays offered there.

The Festival of Trees will recapture the spirit of the Rotunda's holiday event, and will support a worthwhile cause. It is intended to augment Detroit's other holiday traditions - the Detroit Aglow ceremony, the Thanksgiving Day Parade and carolling at Hart Plaza. Organizers hope to raise $300,000 from the event for Children's Hos-

"The Festival of Trees represents the true meaning of Christmas — sharing," said Kathy Neumann, general chairman for the event. "It is both our gift to metropolitan Detroit and the city's gift to children. We hope that the Festival of Trees will become an annual event and an integral part of the city's holiday season."

The 100 festival trees, donated by Frank's Nursery & Crafts, have been sponsored by area businesses or individuals for donations of $300

The trees will be decorated by area designers who have donated their creative talents to trimming a tree according to selected themes.
Their creations are eligible for seven Festival Design Awards to be announced at the gala Preview Party on Nov. 26.

In addition, the decorated trees will be sold at the Preview party along with 12 gifts from an auction

Proceeds from the Festival of Trees will establish the Evergreen Endowment Fund to support research into the causes and cures of childhood diseases and other specific hospital programs.

Children's Hospital of Michigan was founded in 1886. Children's Free Hospital, as it was known then, consisted of one small ward housed in Harper Hospital of Detroit. Approximately 40 years later, Children's Free Hospital merged with Michigan Hospital School of Farmington and was re-

The official Festival of Trees ornament commemorates the debut of this Detroit tradition. All proceeds from the five-day holiday fantasyland held at Cobo Hall will benefit Children's Hospital of Michigan. The $6 ornament can be purchased at Festival of Trees, Nov. 27 through Dec. 1. named Children's Hospital of Mi-

Since that time, Children's Hospital has grown into one of the busiest pediatric hospitals in the United States, with an international reputation for medical excellence. Highly-skilled specialists in more than 50 areas provide total health care for children from birth to early adulthood.

In addition, Children's Hospital is affiliated with the Wayne State University School of Medicine and serves as its primary pediatric teaching facility.

Children's Hospital of Michigan is a voluntary, non-profit, 290-bed hospital. It is a subsidiary of the Detroit Medical Center, the academic health center of Wayne State University. It is privately funded and serves patients from all income levels.

According to Paul Broughton, president of Children's Hospital, the Festival of Trees is a particularly appropriate project for the

"The holiday season has special meaning to children," Broughton said. "Also, the Festival of Trees combines the beauty of the season with the spirit of caring for others that makes it such a wonderful time of year.'

Thirty-six garden clubs throughout metropolitan Detroit have created nearly 60 holiday wreaths that will be displayed and sold at the Festival of Trees.

A special aisle of wreaths will greet visitors as they enter the Festival of Trees fantasyland. Area garden clubs designed and donated the wreaths to support this fundraising efforts.

"The wreaths serve as a symbol to welcome the holiday season and the Festival of Trees to Detroit, said Neumann, chairperson of the wreaths committee. "We are delighted by the support we've received from area garden clubs Their efforts will be enjoyed by all who attend the festival.

Twenty-four area chefs will build the sweetest place in the world — Gingerbread Village, one of several special attractions at the Festival of Trees. Their individual entries will comprise the First Annual Gingerbread House Competi-

"Chefs frequently enter culinary competitions, but the Festival of Trees gives us a unique opportunity to pool efforts for a worthwhile cause," said Jeffrey Gabriel, executive chef for the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and coordinator for the event.

Participants have designed a village of edible buildings made of such ingredients as chocolate, marzipan, royal icing, sugar and nougat. Ray Hollingsworth, chef of Fairfields in Sterling Heights, and Gabriel will add the finishing touches, including streets, sidewalks, curbs, streetlights and other village items.

"It will take about 300 pounds of powdered sugar — that doesn't include pastry — to fill in the village around the other chefs' entries," said Gabriel. "We're making the village as detailed as possible. It's really going to be a miniature really going to be a miniature world of its own.'

Certified Master Pastry Chef Leon Korstjens of Saint John's Hospital in Detroit and Certified Master Pastry Chef Joseph Decker of the Golden Mushroom in Southfield will serve as judges for the event.

Local businesses and individuals participating in the festival include: the chefs of Sparky Herbert's Restaurant, building a school house and family home for the Gingerbread Village; the Grosse Pointe Shores Garden Club, the Grosse Pointe Park the Grosse Pointe Farm and Garden Club, the Trowel and Error Garden Club, the Garden Club of Michigan, the Village Garden Club, the Junior League Gardeners, all contributing wreaths; Georgia Edwards, Botanical Interiors, Inc.; George and Pat Hawkins, Design Detroit Interior; Lynn Harrison McCandless, Design East; Cheryl Waldeck, Design Interiors; Nancy Cawley, Persnickety Pedlar; Joanne Berg, Something Special; Lynn Elvidge, A.J. Assumption Cultural Center Christmas Fantasy planned

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas at the Assumption Cultural Center "Christmas Fantasy" opens its eighth and brightest season ever Nov. 22, 23 and 24.

Shoppers can choose among unique handcrafted holiday arrangements, ornaments and gifts for Christmas-giving. This year's bazaar will offer a "Nostalgia Nook." as well as the popular 'Country Store,' with charming decorative items, candies and gingerbread boys for kids of all ages.

Santa Claus has promised to arrive Saturday morning for the "Breakfast with Santa" from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. A pancake breakfast will be served, and youngsters can visit with Santa and receive a Christmas balloon. Tickets are $2 for children 12 and under, $3 for adults, and can be purchased in advance at the center or at the door Saturday morning.

Two raffles are offered this year, each for $1 per ticket. An elegant pair of cultured pearl and diamond earrings valued at $800 will go to one lucky winner, and a second raffle will include a basket of cheer and a colorful handmade afghan.

Chicken and rice pilaf, Greek salads, cheese and spinach pies, hot dogs, and a special addition this year - stuffed grape leaves - will be served at the food booth. Group reservations can be made by calling the center office.

The "Christmas Fantasy" bazaar hours are Friday, Nov. 22, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday, Nov. 23, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, Nov. 24, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Free and ample parking. Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

Just the other day, I found myself defending the language I use in my role as a sports "wordsmith." "I'll bet it isn't easy stringing all those sportsy adjectives together, is it," a co-worker teased. "Is that what they teach you in 'Famous Sportswriter's School?"

I shot back something like, "no, it's an inherited trait." The entire exchange was all tongue-in-cheek (a physical anomaly shared by many sports columnists) but it got me to thinking about the way we sporty types speak and write.

Take sports broadcasters. Don't get me wrong; I'm the first one to say "Sportscasters? I love 'em." It's just that sometimes they talk funny, know what I mean?

For example, I was watching a college football game on TV a few weeks back and listened as the play-by-play man made like he was announcing a pro game. (There is a difference; most college game announcers wear at least a gallon less hair spray and are usually easier to listen to than the guys doing the pro games).

Anyway, the guy couldn't bring himself to describe a player as plain, old "freshman Billy Jim Backwash." Noooo. He had to call him "untested freshman Billy Jim Backwash." I think sometimes these guys get paid by the word.

Unfortunately, one of those words is "hapless." As in "hapless Missouri," "the hapless Red Wings" or the "hopelessly hapless Cleveland Indians."

What is "hap" anyway? To me, it sounds like it would be a great name for the football trainer in one of those "win one for the Gipper" movies of the 1940s starting Ronald Reagan or Van Johnson. I can hear Reagan now: "Hey, Hap, where's my helmet? Coach says I got to quit making tackles without it on."

And if the Detroit Lions are referred to as "hapless," does that mean that the Chicago Bears are "hap?" And if so, why doesn't anybody ever say so?

Just exactly when did the Red Wings lose their hap? Who's helping them find it? Where does one look for hap, anyway? Maybe "Hap" has it. And if that wily, old trainer is keeping it in a dangerous place, would one's quest for the elusive hap be termed "haphazard?"

Then there's the overzealous use of

Now, I'm just as willing as the next person to spice up a story or a column with well-placed adjectives here and there. But sometimes, it seems like the TV guys and yes, even some newspaper types, get a little carried away.

If TV is such a powerful visual medium, (notice how I resisted the temptation to call it a "big" visual medium) why do we always have sportscasters telling us about how a team is "remarkable, talented and amazing." Can't we figure it out for ourselves without these guys beating us over the head with their adjectives?

And how come they don't use them when they're describing a team or an athlete that isn't so amazing? Just once, I'd like to hear some talking hair-do tell us we were about to watch a game between the "remarkable and talented and amazing 9-1 Los Angeles Rams" and the "poor, unfortunate, mediocre 5-5 Detroit Lions." Just once.

But that would be letting the team, or in certain cases, the athlete, speak for itself or him/herself. And sometimes that doesn't cut it either

Left to their own devices, a great many of today's athletes couldn't spit out a grammatically-perfect sentence if their lives depended on it

A week or so ago, for example, I watched as a member of the University of Iowa football team tried to describe his feelings over his team's, last-second, 12-10 win over the University of Michigan. It was almost painful, watching and listening to the sweat-drenched (how's that for an adjective?) player search for words to "limit or qualify a noun or other subjective," as Webster's would say.

"It's great. Really. We really, really played well. We really deserved this one, you know? We really showed that we are really No. 1, you know?"

Uh-huh.

I guess that not everybody is able to express themselves like one North High athlete. In the closing moments of North's 39-0 league championship victory over rival Clintondale a few week back, I happened to be close enough to the football player on the sideline to hear him express his thoughts on the biggest game in North's history.

"This is the greatest moment in my life," he shouted. That was it, plain and simple, straightforward and to the point. It was probably the single greatest use of words I've ever heard by an athlete, bar-none.

And I ought to know. After all, words am my business.

North's Como: not just a passing fancy

'My line did a great job all day long ... all year long ...

ng . . . — North quarterback Craig Como By Peggy O'Connor

The situation looked hopeless, even to some of North High's most ardent supporters. Detroit Murray-Wright had an 11-point lead with less than five minutes left in last Saturday's pre-regional playoff game in the rain and mud at North High. And the Norsemen had a problem sustaining offensive drives all afternoon against a blitzing Pilot's defense.

Then senior quarterback Craig Como stepped up to the line of scrimmage, fired a 36-yard pass to a receiver who hadn't caught one all season and North had a first down at Murray-Wright's 15. On the next play, he found Steve Pochmara in the right corner of the end zone for a touchdown.

After North forced a bad punt, Como tossed a second down and 19 pass to Jon Palazzo, who made a great catch at the 1. On the next play, Como sneaked into the end zone for the the winning touchdown with 33 seconds left.

It was a performance typical of those displayed by the poised senior quarterback all season. Typical, too, was his response after the game when it was suggested that he was responsible for the most exciting finish of the high school season.

"What can I say, we came back," Como said with a grin. "We were down, but somehow, we just had a feeling we could do it."

"My line did a great job all day long . . . all year long," he added.

There's no doubt that Como is surrounded by a talented cast of receivers, backs and linemen, just as there's no denying that Como is a major reason for North's success this season. He's North's leading scorer with 69 total points on six touchdowns, three field goals (in three trys) and 24 of 29 extra points.

Como, is of course, a "triple threat" for North: he plays quarterback, punts (a 35.4 yard average) and is the regular kicker. "He doesn't really do much else for us," jokes North coach Frank Sumbera. "No, really, he's a great kid. He has the poise and character to play his position, he's well-liked and respected by his teammates.

"He's also got the tools. When you do it and your teammates see you are capable week in and out, if they can, they'll block that extra bit for you. That's what Craig inspires," Sumbera added.

Como has tied or broken several North offensive records this season, including that for single season passing yardage. He is 63-for-139 (45 percent) and a total of 1,399 yards this year. Como holds the school record for most completions (63) is nearing the pass attempt record and holds the career and season touchdown pass record (15). He also rushed for 127 yards and six touchdowns in 52 carries in an offense which doesn't employ the option play a great deal.

Sumbera says he thinks that Como gained valuable experience at the junior varsity level. He took Como from the freshman team and had him start at quarterback for two seasons on the JV squad. "He got a lot of experience and that has a lot to do with his poise," Sumbera says.

An example of what that poise can mean to a team was Saturday's last-second victory. Como and the rest of the squad weren't as sharp as they could have been in the first half, but the senior hung in there, stayed calm and directed the Norsemen's comeback.

"It also helps to have a receiving corps that is as good as ours," Sumbera said. "That pass that Altobelli caught (for a first down at the Murray-Wright 15) was the biggest pass this year. And Palazzo, he's a heck of a target for Como: 6-2, 170 pounds . . . and he can block."

It all came together under Como's direction last Saturday and the Norsemen are hoping for a repeat performance this weekend against Redford Catholic Central.

"The kids have gone a long way," Sumbera adds. "It's been a great year for us and for the community."

And for Craig Como.

Quarterback Craig Como with teammate Paul Aitobelli.

A pair of North High graduates made significant contributions in helping the Kalamazoo College women's soccer team to a 9-4-1 record in its recently completed inaugural fall season. Sophomore Marlene Preisz played center halfback for the Hornets, scoring three goals and six assists. Stephanie Smith, (above) a freshman sweeper, started in five of the last six games, four of which were shutouts. Kalamazoo outscored its oppopents 48-22 this season. Preisz, a matnematics major, and Smith, who majors in Spanish and computer science, were coached at North High by Guido Regelbrugge.

Albion College junior Suzanne Carty, of Grosse Pointe, scored the lone goal in the Britons' 3-1 loss to Calvin College in the MIAA field hockey playoffs last week. Carty is a University Liggett School alumna.

The Woods' Sartor, a North High grad-uate, is described in the OU yearbook as an excellent shooter and defensive player who is fundamentally sound ... an excellent athlete ... who will see time at big forward and may be the biggest contributor among the freshmen. She earned MVP honors in the Bi-County League last year, leading North to a 17-4 record while averaging 13.5 points and 11.5 rebounds. She was team captain and named All-Area, All-Metro, All Suburban and honorable mention All-State as a senior; All-League as a junior.

All Pointes drops opener

The All Pointes Swim Club was narrowly defeated, 284-263, in its first dual meet of the 1985-86 season, by a tough Southfield Swim Club on Oct. 23. Many fine performances were recorded by the swimmers, with several of the relays posting near state qualifying times. In the 10 and under mixed 200 freestyle relay, the team of Paul Reaser, David Reinke, Marsha Zeller and Kim Higel came in with a time of 2:14.48. Higel followed this effort shortly after with her 36:12 in the 50 yard butterfly. In the fourth event, the 14 and under 200 free relay, the team of Mike Buc-

BRUINS-MAJOR MAGICS Mike Collins earned a shutout in the Magics' 4-0 win over the Bruins. Scoring for the Magics were Matt Elich, and Donny Tocco, with assists from Kevin Baskel, David Collins and Chuck Schervish. Nick Miotke and Phil Descamps played well for the Bruins, as did Greg Ryan. Danny Magdowski and Jonathan Solaka were outstanding on defense for the Magics.

BENSON'S-OILERS

Leo Salvaggio's third period goal lifted Benson's Canadiens to a 2-1 win over a tough Oilers team. Kevin Leach's first-ever goal gave Benson's the early lead, but Joey Berger tied it up on his breakaway goal. Oilers' goalie Bobby Rahaim stopped several hard shots by Benson's A-liners, led by Jeff Huebner and Kenny McIntyre. Oilers' B-liners Billy Crandall, Sebastian Yofre and Timmy Kimmel played

BENSON'S-FLYERS

Kevin O'Malley and Salvaggio had a goal and an assist to lead Benson's Canadiens to a 4-1 win over the Flyers. Benson's A-liners Huebner, Georgie Massu and Peter Anthony Brown played tight de-fense against the high-scoring Flyers. Flyers' goalie Joey Lucido turned away several good scoring chances and B-liners Tommy Waldron, Peter Birgbauer and Brian Holliday played well.

TALONS-SEALS

The Talons shut out the Seals, 4-0, behind the offense of the line of M.J. Morris, Brad Klein and David Gracey which accounted for three goals. Blair Ridder and John McNaughton played well on defense. C-liners Anne Morris, Mary Meade, Brian Law and Abby Fox played tough, but ran into excellent goaltending from Paul Meglar. FLYERS-CHIEFS

The Flyers beat the Chiefs, 7-4, to raise their season mark to 5-2. The Chiefs took an early lead on goals by Terry Brennan on a breakaway and by Alex Bieri, from Chris Coates. Midway through the second period, Omar Sawaf picked up a hat trick to put the Flyers ahead, 3-2. Two of the goals were on breakaways; Tim Miller and Joey Lucido assisted on the other.

Early in the third period, Miller picked up three goals for the hat trick. Sawaf drew an assist on one goal. Gordie Todd and Terry Brennan scored for the Chiefs to keep them in the game, but Miller's third goal and a goal by Peter Birgbauer iced the victory of the Flyers. Mark Campbell had a good game in goal for the Flyers; Mike Weyhing, Pat Kerwin and Ranie Sawaf also played well.

Jack McSorley and Zack Van Auken score the other goals, from Gabe Benvenuto, Dan Grundman and Jason Erbecker.

Greg Semack was a standout in goal for the Raiders; he got help from defensive standouts Peter Cueter and Jeff Giacobbe.

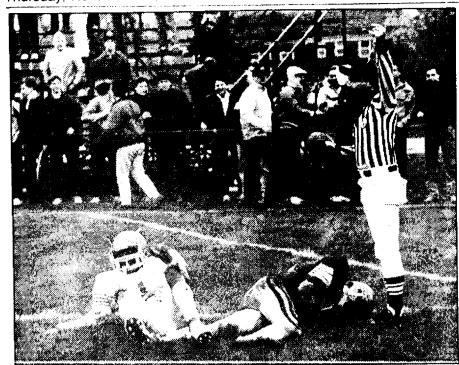

ULMS JV soccer goes 5-1-3 this season

The ULMS JV soccer team compiled a season record of 5-1-3. A strong offensive line, backed by a versatile midfield led by Most Improved Player John Morreale, gave the team control of the center of the field. Consistent defense, spearheaded by fullbacks Josh Nesi and James Kim and anchored by goalie Duncan McMillan, foiled the opposition. Brian Disser was

Norsemen come back for last second playoff victory, 19-18

By Mark Moore North High

North High defeated Detroit Murray-Wright 19-18, last Satur-day, in the first round of the Class A state playoffs. It was the first victory ever for a Grosse Pointe football team in the present-day state playoff system.

Safety Ken Straske intercepted a pass from Murray-Wright quarterback Joel Blankenship early in the game and on the first play from scrimmage, quarterback Craig Como tossed a pass to Steve Pochmara for a 33-yard touch-down. The point after was good and North led, 7-0.

With 1:20 to play in the first half, Chester Jackson scored on a third down, 48-yard draw play for Murray-Wright and after a twopoint play failed, the score stood at Pochmara fumbled on the ensuing kickoff and the Pilots' Pat Eubanks returned the ball 25 yards for a touchdown. The two-point play was missed again, leaving the score 12-7 at halftime.

After a scoreless third quarter and one-half of the fourth period, Murray-Wright's Blankenship hit Johnei Bladwin for a 94-yard touchdown pass with 6:16 left in the game. After the failed extra-point, Murray-Wright took what looked like an insurmountable 18-7 lead.

But the Norseman defense stopped Murray-Wright on four downs and North took over on its own 37. On fourth down and 10, Como hit Paul Altobelli with a 28-yard pass for a key first down. Then on the next play, Como found Pochmara in the end zone for a 16-yard touchdown pass. North missed the twopoint conversion and the score stood at 18-13.

With 1:52 left in the game, the Norsemen blocked a Murray-Wright punt, giving the offense exwright punt, giving the offense ex-cellent field position at Murray-Wright's 35. After a 10-yard holding penalty, Como hit Palazzo for a 20-yard gain and a first down. Full-back Dave Kopitzke ran for 10 yards and another first down to the Statistically, Como was 9-for-28 (32 percent) for 185 yards and two touchdowns. Murray-Wright's Blankenship threw for 138 yards.

North had 77 yards on the ground, including 54 yards in 10 carries by Kopitzke. North had 12 first downs compared to Murray-

Jon Palazzo had four catches for 62 yards and one touchdown. Pochmara had four receptions for 95 yards and a touchdown and Altobelli caught his first of the year, a 28-yard pass. "It was the most important catch of the season," Sumbera said.

On defense, Greg Guest had 15 tackles, tops on the season, and also had one interception. He had four behind-the-line tackles and one deflection, and Rob Brumer with 7. Mark Demanigold had a first quarter interception.

"It was a great game and the kids really grouped together near the end. Murray-Wright was a tough team and they played like they had scouted us all year. I was very pleased with the front four (Dave Queller, Brumer, Rocky Villani and Jim Claphan) allowing no first downs in the second half. It was a great day for Grosse Pointe North," Sumbera said.

North will advance to the regional finals against Redford Catholic Central at 1:30 p.m. this Saturday, Nov. 16, at Lincoln Park Memorial Field.

"We're down to the ugly eight and definitely have our hands full," Sumbera said.

'Remo Williams': He sets things right

By Marian Trainor

Television borrowed from the motion picture industry. Now the movies are picking up some techniques of television.

Soap operas leave the audience ready for more much as the old serials back when movies were our only entertainment. We have stations that feature full-length films and cable movie channels

Observing what draws audiences to television presentation, the film industry has picked up a few pointers.

In such films as "Invasion U.S.A.," "Commando," and "Remo Williams," we see the mayhem so prevalent on television presented on a larger and more frequent scale. Sound tracks are louder, the photography more brilliant and the storyline fragmented to the point where one movie seems like a collection of highlights with no boring passages in between.

This devotion to keeping the audience on the edge of its seat may not be an exercise in intellectual stimulation, but it is entertaining. Moreover the heroes of these films have intrinsic appeal. They are endowed with brute strength. They survive unbelievable feats of daring and all in a good cause. And they are real people, not the Superman type that needs a magic cape to perform. They are the real thing, giving the audience the feeling that no matter what happens, there will be a Rambo or Remo to set things right.

The tone of Remo is set in the first minutes of the film. When we first see him, he is a cop in a scout car, munching on a hamburger and trying to ignore his police radio.

He spots two thugs attacking a man. He goes to the rescue only to be set upon by all three. Beaten and bruised but victorious, he stumbles back to the car. While placing a call, the car is rammed by a forklift truck and our hero ends up on the bottom. Goodbye, cop? Yes and no. He is rescued by divers and when next we see him, he has been made over into Remo Williams (Fred Ward) and drafted into a secret organization to correct evils in high places.

The organization is so secret it consists of only two, a grandfather-type computer expert, Mac-Cleary (J.A. Preston), and Harold Smith (Wilford Brimley). Added is Remo, a reluctant recruit.

The mission they have in mind is dangerous. Remo looks fit and capable, but his mentors think he could use some improvement.

To prepare him for all confrontations where the mind and body will have super-human demands placed upon it, they put him in the hands of Chiun (Joel Grey) a Korean sinanju master, who is quick enough to dodge bullets, strong enough to paralyze a body with the touch of a finger and light enough to walk on water.

He is not impressed with Remo. "He is slow, dumpy and moves like a baboon in heat," he comments, and then adds, "However, there is a feeble glint of promise in his Chiun is a hard taskmaster. What he puts Remo through is unbelievable, including a workout on the Wonder Wheel at Coney Island. It all comes in handy when Remo has to dodge three goons set on erasing him from the landscape while he is climbing around the Statue of Liberty.

While he is not ready (Chiun figures it would take about 15 years to put him in shape), expediency demands that Remo be sent out on his mission.

He is to destroy a powerful and corrupt weapons' manufacturer, George Grove (Charles Cioffi) and do it in such a way that it can never be traced back as a government

He is aided in the beginning by Wilford Brimley, the boss of the operation and the one who arranged to have Remo made a part of the

While the exploits of Remo are high-powered and suspenseful, the real lure of the film is Joel Grey's performance as Chiun. He never wavers in his deadpan demands of Remo, no matter how outrageous they are. His off-hand dismissal of Remo's protests are masterly. He gets off some wonderful humor. In his demonstrations of body movements, he is fluid and graceful. He is a unique character, who in his wisdom reminds the viewer of E.T. He is the added ingredient that puts "Remo Williams" a cut above other films of the same category.

Cabaret pops

William E. Lane, virtuoso trombonist of the Detroit Concert Band, will play Gardell Simons' "Atlantic Zephyrs" during the band's third Cabaret Pops Concert Wednesday, Nov. 20, at 8 p.m. at the Detroit Light Guard Armory, 4400 E. Eight Mile Road, between Mound and Ryan roads. Tickets are $10, $12 and $14 and can be ordered by phone. Call 886-0394.

deer accidents occur-red in Michigan last fall, resulting in five deaths, 1,299 injuries "The 1940's Radio Hour," a slice of pure nostalgia, opens tomorrow. Nov. 15, at the Attic Theatre. Third at West Grand Boulevard, and runs through Dec. 31 with a special performance and party on New Year's tural Resources offi-

The show recreates a live radio to be alert and on the broadcast on Dec. 21, 1932 with look-out for deer on the stock characters — the tough old stage door man, the fluster ducer, the young and hopeful entertainers. It's filled with Hit Parade favorites and even commercials from the era.

The cast includes Neal Bearman. Miche Braden, Keith Austin Brown, Thomas Cooch, Roy K. Kennison, Herbert Ferrer, James Lawson, Sheri Nichols, Ted Pethick, Aden Russell, Judy Seplowin, Craig Shepherd, Augustus Williamson and band members Thomas H. "Dr. Beans" Bowles, Shoo-Bee-Doo/Reginald Fields, Joseph Francis and Christopher Collins.

Director is Daniel Yurgaitis and the music is under the direction of Julie Kutosh.

Regular performances will be Thursday and Fridays at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 5:30 and 9 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 and 6:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the box office and all Ticket World outlets. They may be reserved by phone with Visa or Mastercard by calling 875-8284 or 423-6666.

There will be two interpreted performances for the deaf and hearing impaired on Dec. 15 at 2:30 p.m. and Dec. 21 at 5:30 p.m.

The Attic Theatre is a non-profit organization whose productions are made possible with the support of the National Endowment for the Arts, the Michigan Council for the Arts, the Arts Foundation for Michigan, and the Detroit Council of the Arts, as well as corporate and individual donors.

Vienna Choir Boys to perform 2 concerts

The Vienna Choir Boys, whose singing marks a musical tradition that dips back nearly five centuries into European history, will appear in two concerts at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts, Wednesday, Nov. 20, and Thurs-day, Nov. 21, both at 8 p.m. Tickets at $14 for adults and $12 for students and senior citizens may be obtained at the Center's box office or reserved on credit card by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The Center is located on the Center Campus of Macomb Com- music.

munity College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

Generations of the Vienna Choir Boys have existed ever since the group was founded in the late 1400s by Emperor Maximilian I to fulfill his wish to have choristers in the Austrian Imperial Chapel.

Each season brings on a new choir of 24 boys carrying on the rich tradition. They present a program of costumed operattas, sacred songs and secular folk

Edwardian evening planned

The seventh annual Edwardian Evening, sponsored by the First Unitarian-Universalist Church in its parish house which is listed on both the National and Michigan Registers of Historic Places, will be held Saturday, Dec. 14.

For $40, guests will be greeted and announced by a butler, have their wraps taken by a maid and be invited to partake of sherry and canapes at 6 p.m. Promptly at 6:30 p.m. a seven-course meal will begin. The menu consists of consomme Celestine (garnished with crepe strips and parsley); paupiettes of sole Rachel (stuffed with truffles, coated with shrimp sauce and diced truffle); Canton sorbet, melding the flavors of ginger, lemon and orange; roast beef, Yorkshire pudding, squash with chestnut puree, duchess potatoes. brussels sprouts; salade endive; plum puddings (served flambe); and, as a savory, trois fromage and pomme de terre au caviar (sampling of three cheeses and a tiny potato garnished with sour cream and caviar). Appropriate wines will accompany the fish course and the entree.

At 8 p.m. a program will follow that will be patterned on the variety show presented in British music halls of the past. Entertainers will include Rich and Maureen Del-Grosso performing British music and song of the past and Christmas selections, an appearance of the exotic "Little Egypt" (dancer Catalina Hall), soprano Priscilla Carey Tucker, the Michigan Flute Choir, and at least one other act. When the entertainment is over, guests will adjourn to the dining room which will be set for coffee, tea and a dessert buffet

Guests are encouraged to wear Victorian or Edwardian costumes but evening wear or cocktail attire are appropriate as well.

Program and dessert only tickets are $12. For information, call 833-9107. The church is at 4605 Cass Ave. at Forest in the south end of the Cultural Center.

(in-'teg-rət- \overline{e}) n. rigid adherence to a code of behavior, honesty.

Integrity is critical to a newspaper. It begins with ethical news gathering and reporting and extends to the advertising sales department as well. Advertisers must believe in the integrity of circulation information—the basis for intelligent advertising buying decisions.

That's why we subject our circulation records to independent verification by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. ABC is the oldest—and largest—not-for-profit circulation auditing organization in the world. Nearly 5,000 advertisers, advertising agencies and publishers have joined together to make ABC the standard for circulation integrity.

Before you buy any advertising, ask to see a copy of the latest ABC Audit Report. We'll be pleased to show you ours.

IAGUAR

From a heritage of coachbuilders to kings and the sporting aristocracy of Europe comes the most exclusive Jaguar sedan you can own.

The Vanden Plas is a limited edition of the Jaguar Series III sedan. It shares the Series III's superb racebred double overhead cam six, its athletic handling equipment, its uncanny smoothness and silence in motion, inside, however, the Vanden Plas is unique even among Jaguars. It cossets you with soft leather. exotic burled walnut panels and individually contoured seats front and rear
