Tobacco it ain't

Uh, oh, look what we found! Or, more accurately, what Grosse Pointe News reporter Nancy Parmenter found while visiting the Farms police station.

There, on the bottom step leading to the cop shop, was a small plastic baggie with a green material in it looking something like oregano.

"Scoop" Parmenter (as we like to call her) brought it in and made a formal presentation of the latin lettuce to the desk clerk. As the cops gathered round to inspect the grass, the lines began to fly.

"That's where it went!"

'There must have been a hole in my pocket," and pockets were pulled out for examination.

"Uh, that' s mine. I use it in my secret spaghetti sauce."

"And I use it in brownies."

Anyhow, the coppers snapped up the evidence (if that's what it was) and properly disposed of it.

Perhaps it was merely an early Christmas gift from some wandering Rastafarian?

Name claim to fame

If you're a student and if you've ever wanted to name a work of art, now's your chance. The Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library will host a reception on Sunday, Dec. 15, at noon to introduce a new work of art commemorated to the years of service to the library by William T. Peters.

The piece, called an assemblage by its creator, Glen Michaels, is untitled. Local students are encouraged to enter a competition to name the artwork.

The piece is based on the idea of communication and will be placed on view in the Central Library.

So take a peek, put on your thinking caps and come up with a name, already.

Proud papas

It's time to pop a few buttons on behalf of members of the community, and I'm happy to lend a hand.

Steven Vitale, son of Shores Director of Public Safety Joseph Vitale, was recently selected to the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association's second team as an offensive guard and tackle.

Steven, who was voted most valuable offensive lineman for Lakeview High School, where he captained the team, is a sophomore at Kalamazoo College majoring in business administration.

Over in the Farms Leon Sehoyan, owner of Leon's and scuba diver extraordinaire, is pretty proud of son David, who was one of only 30 business students from across the country who earned a scholarship to the Community tries to cope with teen deaths

By Nancy Parmenter

Teen suicide is frighteningly inexplicable. Its specter haunts parents, schools, friends. Professionals try to account for it and to find ways to prevent it.

Grosse Pointe is afraid. Afraid to talk about it and afraid not to talk about it. In the wake of several suicides or accidental deaths and suicide attempts by local teenagers within the last month, wild rumors have sprung up.

Suicides are admittedly difficult to quantify. Many hospitals list suicides and attempts under other categories — victim of a gunshot wound or a drug overdose, for example. It is said that as many as 100 people attempt suicide for every one who is successful.

However, it is certain that the rumor that 11 Grosse Pointe students have taken their lives this year is just a rumor. Piecing together information from police and school records, this fall there have been two deaths — of a high school student and a college student — and two attempts. The victim of one attempt remains in critical condition.

But four rather than 11 is small consolation. "There's certainly panic out there," said school Superintendent John Whritner. "We're very concerned."

People have every reason to be concerned, according to Mary Leonhardi of Suicide Prevention Center. Suicide can be psychologically "contagious."

"When kids are already depressed and a suicide occurs, there's always a lot of guilt," Leonhardi said. "Some kids are already focusing on the negative. People who are depressed and suicidal take on other people's problems as their own. In many instances, there is a fantasy about what the death will accomplish."

Suicide Prevention Center and the schools are working hard to bring a sense of reality to bear on the problem. Leonhardi completed a several day session at Pierce Middle School before Thanksgiving. North High School and a variety of parents' and community groups are bringing two suicide experts to Grosse Pointe tonight (Dec. 12). Whritner has established a special committee to deal with suicide as it affects the student population.

Some of this activity is in response to the current climate of concern in the community. But some of the programs were planned as long as a year ago, simply to address suicide as a national issue. Most of the sources agreed that suicide rates have increased over the last 30 years — some experts even call the increase "an epidemic" — but there is no epidemic in Grosse Pointe.

"We need more dialogue between parents and children," said Edward Deeb of the Shores, chairman of the group sponsoring the North High public forum. "This has been planned for a long time, but it just turns out that we need it now."

In fact, the students did not respond as much as expected to the special counseling arranged after the accidental death of a South High classmate, according to Russell P. Luttinen, assistant principal for student services.

"We discovered from the faculty that the students didn't want to talk about it very much," Luttinen said. "They may have talked it out among themselves." The school had arranged counseling sessions for any student who wanted one, as well as encouraging students to engage in a general discussion during class time.

There is a certain danger in over-reacting to the situation, Luttinen said.

"(Our consulting)) psychiatrist warned against glorifying or glamorizing the event," he said. "There is a danger of contagion. Some kids have trouble keeping things in perspective. They could see it as an opportunity to get attention they are not now getting."

Dr. Alton Kirk, a clinical psychologist who does suicide counseling at Michigan State University, makes it a practice to meet with all interested MSU students following a suicide. In November, there were two suicides during the same weekend; Kirk found that many students wanted to talk.

"I met with about 100 people from the dormitory and then 60 or 70 fraternity brothers — practically the whole group," Kirk said. He said those closest to the suicide are most affected.

"I do a 'psychological autopsy' to reconstruct the final few days," he said. "It helps the friends to work through their feelings. We also do 'team-building' in case any of them have suicidal feelings."

Michigan State has an on-going suicide prevention program to train residence personnel in detection. Although the rate among students of college age has not risen, according to Kirk, many students arrive on campus with "residual, unresolved" feelings, making them candidates for suicide.

There is a lot of speculation about "pressure" in today's society and whether it is a contributing factor in teen suicide. Luttinen said that students are under pressure to achieve.

"They are highly programmed,"

Carols and caring

It was a perfect night to kick off the War Memorial's first Tribute Tree last week. It wasn't too cold, snow was gently falling and hot cocoa was available to the dozens of carollers who journeyed to the Center to sing along with Santa and Christmas Carol. The Tribute Tree lighting ceremony was preceded by a musical selection by William DeTurk on the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church carillon. White lights on the tree will shine in honor of friends, family and members of the community. Those who would like to place a light on the tree may do so with a $5 donation for each name. Specify in whose name the light should be donated as well as the name and address of the recipient of the gift card. Names will be accepted until Christmas.

Woods youth officer dead at 42

By Tom Greenwood

When some of his fellow officers learned the end was near for Pat Fagan, they drove to his home, bundled him up warmly and took him for a long drive.

"There was a vanload of them," said Woods Public Safety Director Jack Patterson. "Lord, they drove him everywhere. Uptown, downtown and they took him to lunch. Guess where he wanted to go? McDonald's! Pat always had a good appetite."

Public Safety Officer Patrick M. Fagan died early Tuesday morning, Dec. 3, after battling cancer for a year. He was 42. Friends, admirers and fellow officers joined Tuesday evening at the Harper Woods Community Center to remember.

"This was originally supposed to have been a retirement party for Pat," said Park Sgt. Randall Cain, a longtime friend. "Instead it's turned into an old fashioned Irish wake. I can't say enough about Pat. He was a great friend, the kind of guy who was always there when you needed him."

They also remember Pat Fagan at Mason Elementary School, where the former youth program supervisor, traffic safety officer and crossing guard would don a costume and join "his" kids in their annual Halloween parade around the school.

"He was always doing things like that," Patterson said. "He was a great public relations man for the department. He was Irish and could really gab and tell a story. I guess that comes with the territory. He even went to magic school to learn tricks and sleight of hand to keep the kids interested when he gave safety lectures.

"They loved it and he did too. He loved learning magic. He was always attentive to his duties, even when things got bad for him. He always wanted to help. When he was in the hospital for the last time, he asked us to bring him paper work case loads to work on. He was always busy.

"His hospital room looked like a hobby shop," Patterson said. "He was always making something. When anyone would visit they'd walk away with a present he'd made. Especially the little kids."

While Pat Fagan was respected by his fellow officers, he was also known for his sense of humor.

"He wasn't a saint," said Cain, with a smile. "He loved funny stories and practical jokes. Privately his friends will tell you what he's pulled, but they can't be repeated in the paper."

Friends do recall when Fagan visited another policeman in the hospital. The man was recovering from a kidney infection. Fagan told so many jokes, the patient was both laughing and crying in pain. When Fagan later entered the hospital for appendicitis, his victim returned with a number of friends. They jumped up and down on Fagan's bed in retaliation.

"Pat impressed us with his optimism and determination in fighting back," Patterson said. "Most people, when they hear that diagnosis, just sit back and quit. But not Pat. Everytime I saw him, he'd tell me his latest treatment was going to deal a knockout blow to the disease. He simply never quit believing. He taught us a lot about living."

Flags flew at half staff in the Woods upon news of Fagan's death, and dozens of officers from the Pointes, Harper Woods, Taylor, Detroit, Hamtramck and Wyandotte joined friends and family members at the A.H. Peters Funeral Home Dec. 6 to pay their last respects.

A bagpiper played a farewell and he was borne past fellow police officers who offered a final salute.

Patrick Fagan joined the Woods Public Safety Department in 1969 and specialized in youth programs and traffic safety.

During his 16 years on the force, he won a department letter and departmental commendation. In 1981, he was the first recipient of the "Crime Prevention Practitioner" of the year from the Crime Prevention Association of Michigan. He was also past president of the Fraternal Order of Police for the Grosse Pointes.

Officer Fagan is survived by his wife, Karen; a daughter, Christine; his mother, Kathryn Fagan; one brother; and one sister.

1986 school millage campaign organizes

By Mike Andrzejczyk

There's a phrase one hears more often around the school system lately, "if the millage passes."

Quips have been flying about at board meetings, with people volunteering to work for the millage, the president of the teacher's union pointing out that the state's salaries for teachers have barely kept ahead of inflation, and even trustees questioning what's going on.

The organizing began last week, with the appointment of Peter and Patricia Gast, of the Woods, and Russell and Jane Nutter, from the Park, as co-chairs for the central committee for this school year's campaign.

The board is expected to decide in January the size and length of the millage request, Mrs. Nutter said. Up to now, all discussion has been about a renewal, not an increase, she added.

Between now and January, the Gasts and Nutters will meet with school officials, file the necessary campaign papers, put together a 10- to 15-member central committee, study past millage campaigns and put together the nuts and bolts of this year's organization, Mrs. Nutter said.

"We realize we have got to identify our yes voters," she said. "We're going to really work in that direction."

While it identifies "yes" voters, the committee is also going to have to get to traditional "no" voters and show them that schools aren't just for children, Mrs. Nutter said. Services provided by and through the school system help all segments of the community, she added.

The central committee will represent all elements of the community, Mrs. Nutter said. While the traditional committee is about 11 members, that structure may be altered this year to make sure all segments of the community are represented.

The committee will be looking for people with experience in millage campaigns, Mrs. Nutter said. The Gasts chaired the Mason Elementary School committee in 1980 and the Nutters have been active as block workers, passing out literature in past elections.

In past campaigns, each school appoints a chairperson to aid in organizing the building, according to Deputy Superintendent Joseph Spagnoli, who is liaison between the school system and the millage campaign. While the school system cannot officially advocate support of the millage, it can provide the committees with information they request, he added.

It's hoped the structure of the campaign will be in place by the middle of the month, so it will be ready to gear up once the board decides the amount and duration of the millage request.

As it now stands, elementary school committees will be asked to help in passing out pro-millage literature, while the middle school committees will take care of telephone solicitations aimed at turning out "yes" voters. Mrs. Nutter said. High school committee members will most likely be asked to be volunteer poll watchers and to work on turning out the vote, she added.

People interested in working on the millage may call 885-3293 to volunteer or check with their schools, which will have the names of building committee chairmen, Mrs. Nutter said.

Anything but jazz, says centenarian

Saturday, Dec. 8, was a special day for Florence Kaufmann. One hundred years earlier she was born on a farm in North Dakota. She met her husband and moved to Michigan when he came to work for the Chrysler Corporation. A resident of Grosse Pointe for 30 years, Mrs. Kaufmann currently resides at the Georgian East Nursing Home where she was recently joined by her three children and more than a few of her 40 grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She received dozens of birthday cards, along with official congratulations from President Ronald Reagan. Mrs. Kaufmann attributes her long life to "believing in the Bible." She loves music better than anything, with the exception of jazz. "Lots of happy sounds," she said during her photo session. "But you can keep that jazz."

North High to present all-choir Christmas concert

A concert, "Spirit of Christmas," will be presented by Grosse Pointe North High Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 18 and 19, at 8 p.m. For the first time, the concert will be held at the First Lutheran Church, 800 Vernier Road, across from the high school, to allow the use of the church's pipe organ.

More than 175 voices from all of the choirs at North will perform a variety of Christmas songs. A special vignette, "A Victorian Christmas," will also be presented. And in keeping with tradition, the choirs will conclude the concert with the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah," accompanied by full orchestra and organ.

The choirs are under the direction of Benjamin Walker, accompanied by Robert Foster. Nathan Judson will conduct the orchestra.

Tickets are $2 and may be obtained in advance through Dec. 16 at All Pointes Bookshop, 20531 Mack, across from Parcells. Seating is limited and tickets will be sold at the door, based on availability. Senior citizens with gold cards may pick up tickets in advance at the high school Tuesday, Dec. 17, between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. in front of the main office.

Grosse Pointe Cable TV will show a telecast of the concert on Dec. 23 and 26 at 7:30 p.m.

The laser: A 'word salad' that is changing surgery

By Nancy Parmenter

The pulsating spinal column fills the television screen. Magnified 300 times, hairlike sutures anchoring the sides of the incision loom like carpet thread.

A look over neurosurgeon James Ausman's shoulder reveals an inch-long incision in the patient's back. It is about to grow longer.

A tiny red-glowing dot indicates the location of the carbon dioxide laser beam. Ausman positions it carefully between two throbbing blood vessels. A click as he triggers the laser switch — and the flesh opens, slightly singed on the edges of the wound.

"That's the beauty of it — it not only cuts precisely, but it cauterizes the wound as well," explained Dr. Paul A. Kvale, director of Henry Ford Hospital's laser center. The laser beam effectively controls bleeding in the same moment that it cuts through tissue.

Ausman continues lengthening the incision to expose the entire tumor. A wisp of vapor rises as cells literally go up in smoke. When the cancer is completely visible, he turns to an ultrasonic instrument to "disrupt" the tumor so he can suction it out.

Surgery like this wasn't even possible before the development of these advanced technology instruments. "All we could have done was take a biopsy and close the patient up again," Ausman said.

The risks of such surgery are also enormous. The patient, whose lung cancer had metastasized, or traveled, to his spine, could have been permanently paralyzed by the operation.

"The surgery is not curative," Kvale said. "The purpose is to preserve the function of the nervous system and to improve his quality of life."

There are not many alternatives. "It gives him extra time to live in a reasonable way," Ausman said. "His choice was to become paralyzed and die."

In the short time medical scientists have been using lasers, they have already harnessed them for many uses. Lasers are used to zap tumors and to "weld" tissue together. They can vaporize warts and relieve eye pressure in glaucoma patients. They can be snaked into hard-to-reach locations, reaching all the way into the duodenum or the bile duct through an endoscope inserted into the mouth. Flexible quartz fiberoptics allows the laser beam to be transmitted around curves.

"Laser" is an acronym for "light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation." The machines are in routine use for certain procedures at Ford, with new types and uses under constant experimentation. Some potential uses have still to be discovered. A project stemming from "Star Wars" defense research is expected to reveal new laser applications for the health field.

For all its Star Wars and Buck Rogers connotations, the laser is actually not a new idea. It was first conceptualized in the 1700s, Kvale said, possibly as a spin-off of the idea of focusing sunlight through a magnifying glass to ignite straw or paper.

But there's a big difference between ordinary light and laser light. Natural light is made up of varying wave lengths, including those in colors discernible to the human eye, as well as the ultraviolet and infrared lengths. Laser light from any one machine is all the same.

"They are all exactly the same frequency, traveling through space in a harmonious fashion," Kvale said. "They are like lemmings to the sea in cadence — they're all alike and they all arrive together."

Four types of laser are in use currently at Henry Ford: Yag, carbon dioxide, krypton and argon. Conditions as varied as bleeding ulcers, keloids, cancer of the lungs or bladder, portwine stains and precancerous conditions of the cervix are responding better to lasers than to traditional methods.

Lasers have the ability to make a clean cut, to stop bleeding almost as it starts and to slice precisely through delicate structures without injury to adjacent tissue. Some procedures — like the delicate spinal surgery — couldn't be done at all without a laser.

The laser isn't the answer to everything, however. Some procedures are still too complex. No one has yet figured out how to zap gallstones, although stones in the common bile duct have been destroyed by laser.

And some procedures just don't need the fancy equipment. "They're better done by traditional methods," Kvale said. "Scissors, sutures and a knife still work."

Kvale, a lung specialist who lives in the Park, has been using a different laser, the Yag (yttrium, aluminum and garnet), to treat lung cancer and vaporize tumors. The laser beam is transmitted through a flexible quartz fiberoptic tube.

"You can literally blow things away with it," he said. "The tissue just vanishes. It has to be used carefully and precisely."

The argon laser is most used. It was first used in ophthalmology and is commonly applied to "weld" tissue back in place to treat some retinal detachments and to attack the abnormal growth of blood vessels in diabetic retinopathy, Kvale said.

Ophthalmologists are also using the pulsed laser, which builds up energy and expels it suddenly with an internal switching mechanism. "(The switch) just opens for picoseconds," Kvale said. "The bundled-up energy instantly pops out of the machine."

The pulsed laser is used against an opacified posterior capsule of the lens, a condition that sometimes occurs following cataract surgery. The shock wave hits the capsule and shakes it up, causing the "curtain" to be dissipated so the patient can again see through it.

The Yag has been used to vaporize tumors in narrow passageways like the airway, esophagus and colon. It is also useful for controlling bleeding ulcers. "It works 75 percent of the time in properly selected patients," Kvale said.

The Food and Drug Administration recently approved a new attachment for the Yag. The synthetic sapphire tip will further improve precision. Some of its applications are still experimental and are performed under strict reporting requirements, according to Kvale.

"I can see the day when a breast could be removed better with a Yag laser — but that day isn't here yet," he said.

It is the Yag that has been used experimentally to destroy stones in the common bile duct, and it was used once — by Kvale — to destroy a stony concretion in the bronchial tube.

The hospital is now starting a "look-ahead" program of treating cancer with a laser plus radiation instead of radiation alone. The procedure has been tried on about 30 patients so far, and the preliminary results indicate that "it may be worth it," Kvale said.

"It'll be five years before I can look back and see if it's better or just the same," Kvale said. "I feel sure it won't be worse. But it's premature to draw conclusions before the study."

Lasers may have applications scientists are only now beginning to dream of. Phototherapy is already used to detect tiny cancers too small to find by ordinary means. A chemical photosensitizing agent spreads throughout the body, lingering in the fast-growing tissue of cancerous tumors. When exposed to light, it glows.

Its potential applications are "more theoretical than real" at this point, Kvale says, but work is now being done on a new generation of photosensitive chemical that will produce its own light and kill the cancer from within.

And five to 10 years from now, we could see the new exemer laser — the most precise — used as a "roto-rooter" to remove plaque from blood vessels in an alternative to balloon angioplasty.

"We don't have flexible-enough instruments now to do it without horrendous complications like perforating the blood vessels," said Kvale. "It's just experimental. It's too early to say if it will be better or just more expensive."

Potential health applications are even coming out of the federal Strategic Defense Initiative — "Star Wars." The Defense Department is committed to building up to five gigantic free-electron lasers at a cost of about $10 million, Kvale said.

The machine will shoot a beam of electrons through a magnetic field to produce any wave length of the entire spectrum. Different wave lengths may have new applications that can then be produced by less expensive machines yet to be developed. There's no end to the possibilities, Kvale says.

"There are applications we don't even know of yet. We can only guess at them now."

Dr. Paul Kvale, head of Henry Ford Hospital's Division of Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine, positions the guide light for the Yag laser, which is often used with a fiber-optic bronchoscope tube to remove cancerous tumors from the lungs.

Two-year battle saves Woods $60,000

By Tom Greenwood

A two-year struggle by Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods with the Milk River Inter-County Drainage Board over the proposed construction of a $60,000 satellite office building came to a conclusion recently, with the two cities declaring victory.

The end came when the board voted 2-1 to abandon the project, which would have been located in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The three-member board, consisting of State Secretary of Agriculture Paul E. Kindinger, Macomb County Public Works Commissioner Thomas Welsh and Wayne County Drain Commissioner Charles Youngblood, oversees operation of the station, which handles overflow sewage and storm water from the Woods, Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores.

The problem began in 1983 when Youngblood proposed building the office to house additional personnel and records. Because it was located in their district, the cities of Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods were responsible for the majority of the cost of construction, with the Woods picking up 60 percent and Harper Woods 38 percent. The remaining two percent would be paid by St. Clair Shores and the state.

"We felt they didn't need it," said Woods City Administrator Chester Petersen. "There already was adequate office space on the site, which is located on Parkway Drive in the Woods." The Woods also said the station had operated for 28 years without the additional space and didn't need it now.

The Woods really protested when an earlier design of the building was pegged at $120,000. The building was later scaled down to a 600-square-foot structure for $60,000.

Both cities fought the project from the start and were successful in obtaining a temporary injunction against construction, but lost ground when the court ruled the site was not an improvement but rather a maintenance measure. Under that classification, the drain authority did not need the cities' permission to build.

When the Woods still protested, the drainage board tabled any action on the plan this past September. Not satisfied with that, the Woods notified John C. Hertel, chairman of the Board of the Wayne County Commissioners, who, through contact with Gov. James Blanchard and Commissioner Welsh, issued the opinion that unless the Woods and Harper Woods petitioned for the building they could see no reason to construct it.

On Nov. 5 the board voted 2-1 to cancel the project. Mayor George S. Freeman and the Woods City Council expressed their gratitude to the governor, Hertel and Welsh in a formal resolution on Nov. 18.

In the resolution, the city officials credit them for saving the taxpayers of the Woods and Harper Woods $60,000 for a building they didn't want.

GP schools behind in cable

By Mike Andrzejczyk

There's something missing on Grosse Pointe Cable these days.

When you look over the list of programs on the system's education Channel 19, you find listings for "Harper Woods Highlights," produced by the Harper Woods Public School System, "Steady Gains" from Bishop Gallagher High School and "Something Original" from the Association of Non-Public Education Community.

What you won't find is a program produced or prepared by the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

Gone are last year's offerings; "Education in Our Town," monthly board meetings and tapings of special events in schools. That's mostly because the two people who handled all of the cable responsibilities for the system no longer have that duty.

Assistant to Superintendent Bruce Kefgen hosted "Education in Our Town" and helped with technical details for other shows. After being removed from the assistant's position this summer, Kefgen was reassigned to the classroom. He is now a high school teacher, commuting between the two buildings.

Handling the camera work and editing was Kimberly Kirkpatrick, technical director for the Performing Arts Center. With the help of student volunteers and the Instructional Material Center, Kirkpatrick taped board meetings and special school events for broadcast. She is no longer with the school system.

As the public school system's program has collapsed, the non-public schools brought their cable club program to fruition, producing "Something Original," a student-run newsmagazine highlighting the non-public school system.

The AN-PEC commitment meant hiring a consultant to help coordinate activities of its various clubs. It took close to a year to get the activities in place and meant the pooling of resources from among the various private and parochial schools.

While one of the Grosse Pointe Board of Education's goals for the coming school year has been telling its story to the community, the administration hasn't had the time to begin putting its cable tv program in place, according to Superintendent John Whritner.

Noting that cable television is a potentially powerful way to tell its story, Whritner adds the system would like to try to get the high schools involved in some kind of club activity related to cable television. The clubs would be training programs for students to use to begin producing public school programming.

At the same time, the school system is working on ways to incorporate the M-Star programming into classroom instruction, Whritner says.

M-Star is educational programming provided by Chicago's Central Education Network through the intermediate school district's use of state education grants. The programming runs from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Channel 19. The cable company began providing the signal at the end of this summer.

Schools have a one-year recordability right on programs provided on M-Star, which provides a guide to upcoming shows, materials to be used in class and teacher aids for its K-12 educational programming.

For the record

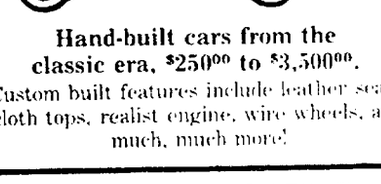

In last week's issue in an article titled "Social Security by phone," the phone number to make an appointment to file an application for retirement, survivors or disability benefits or Supplemental Security Income should have been 885-4262.

A costly record for Detroit

Few people would dispute a modest pay raise for Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit if it merely recognized the recent increase in the cost of living. But to propose that he be awarded the highest pay for any mayor in the United States is ridiculous considering the city's financial difficulties. Yet it appears that the tracks are greased for acceptance of the proposed 44 percent pay hike to $115,000 a year.

It no doubt will be said by supporters of the mayor that it is inappropriate for anyone in the suburbs to criticize the proposed increase recommended by the Elected Officials Compensation Commission. But many people in the suburbs are concerned about what happens in Detroit. Many of them own property there. Many others work in Detroit and pay Detroit city income taxes. Still others operate businesses in Detroit and want to see it grow and prosper. And every taxpayer in the suburbs also contributes to the state's contributions to the city of Detroit budget. So while many suburban residents are taxpayers without representation in Detroit, they do have the right to make judgments about what the city is doing with their money.

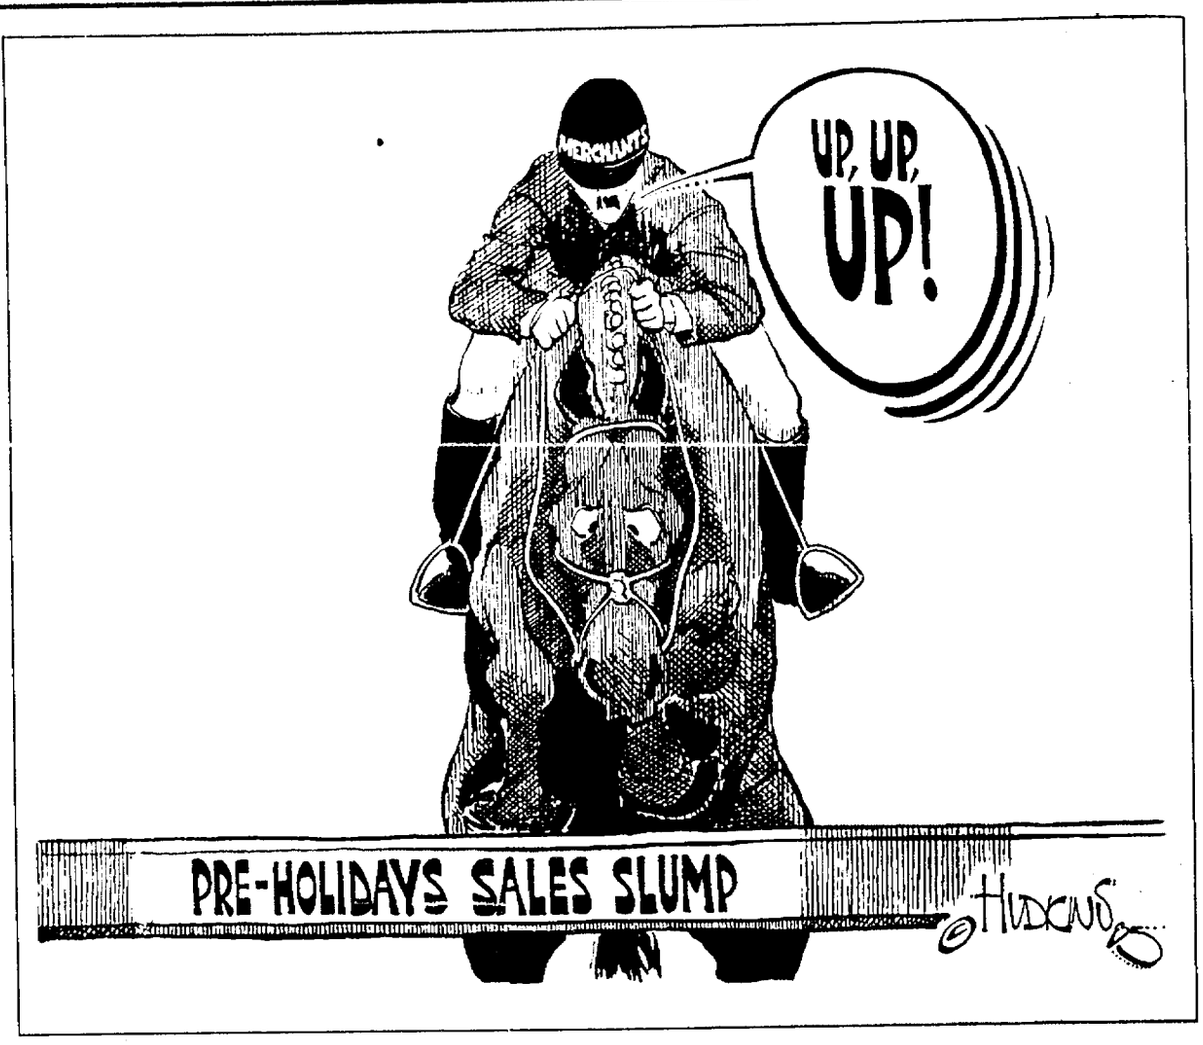

But the big boost for the mayor — and the smaller increases recommended for other elected officials by the Elected Officials Compensation Commission — is being noted elsewhere, too. In Lansing, which provides direct state aid to Detroit, there was criticism from both Republicans and Democrats. Senate Minority Leader Arthur Miller, Warren Democrat, was quoted as saying that the mayor deserved a pay raise but that he "liked to see Detroit and Michigan be leaders across the nation in technology and industry and not necessarily in governmental pay increases."

It is true, of course, that elected officials in Lansing and Washington have adopted procedures similar to those in Detroit to avoid having to recommend increases for their own jobs. The results in both Lansing and Washington have been similar to the result in Detroit. The recommended raises usually are accepted without a vote of the legislative body involved and so the happy recipients cannot even be held personally responsible for any increases that become effective. In Detroit, the city council has the authority to veto the recommendation but a majority of the members said the pay raises were justified.

Councilman Jack Kelley, however, raised another point that is important to anyone concerned about the cost of government. "How can you give the mayor and council 40 or 22 percent when we've given so little to our policemen, firemen and other city employees?" Whether or not we agree that Detroit pays too little for such services, the fact remains that the huge increases for the mayor and council will spur bigger pay demands by the city's unionized employees. Several union leaders already have acknowledged they will use that tactic when contract negotiations are renewed.

We have not read any comments by businessmen concerned about the recommended pay increases, but we suspect they will factor that information into decisions they make in the future about locating or expanding in Detroit. Any moves that tend to increase costs of government are weighed carefully by investors before they put their money into new or expanded ventures in Detroit or anywhere else.

All in all, the huge increase for the mayor and lesser pay hikes for the other elected officials in Detroit tend to offset other efforts being made to spur Detroit's economy and increase investments in business and industry in the central city. Making Mayor Young the highest paid mayor in the United States gives Detroit a distinction it cannot afford.

Budgets go conservative

In Wayne County, Lansing and Washington, politically divided governments are having budget trouble. In general, the causes are the same. Efforts to hold the line on government spending are running into trouble because of the need for governmental services and the lack of sufficient revenues to finance them. But budgets at all three levels are going conservative.

In Wayne County, the new feud between County Executive William Lucas and the board of county commissioners — and especially Chairman John Hertel — continues to be played out in the headlines. The latest development is the commission's override of the executive's veto of three items in the commission budget. While Lucas' own budget proposals appeared to be out of balance, the board's continued insistence on determining the details of the funding for specific departments get close in interfering in the administrative matters supposedly left in the county executive's hands by the charter.

In Lansing, the budget problem is one that both Wayne County and the federal government wish they had to face. The Blanchard administration predicts that when the final settlement is made, the state will have an $80.6 million surplus for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, but the Senate Fiscal Agency, the forecasting arm for the Republican-controlled Senate, disputes that figure. It contends that the surplus should be put at $163.1 million.

But this dispute then leads into the controversy over the date for the next cut in state income taxes. The Democratic state administration contends the state cannot afford to cut back to a 4.6 percent rate until next May 15 while the Republicans argue the rate should revert to 4.6 percent as of last Nov. 11. So the level of spending and the concern for financing services enter into this budget problem as well.

In Washington, the hassles over the growing budget deficits in the federal government are still continuing with the politically divided Congress unable to achieve agreement on ways to reduce red ink in the future. President Reagan, despite his support for a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, has not yet submitted a balanced budget in his five years in the White House.

In all three instances, the budget problems are closely related to political party controversies. In Wayne County, the county executive, a former Democrat now starting a campaign for governor as a Republican, is political anathema to the county commission, made up of 14 Democrats and a single Republican. That division obviously contributes to the disputes between the executive and the commission.

But similar divisions plague Lansing and Washington. Both the state Senate and the U.S. Senate are dominated by Republicans, while both the state House and the U.S. House are in the hands of the Democrats. The chief executive in Washington is, of course, a Republican, and the chief executive in Lansing is a Democrat. Yet in neither Lansing nor Washington do we hear much demand for any new public programs or even for any great increase in spending. Instead, the emphasis by both parties on limiting government and curtailing spending, the differences in the end being largely over ways to achieve agreed-upon goals.

In fact, at all three levels of government, the Democrats have become almost as cautious as the Republicans about public spending with the result that some programs are being reduced not only for lack of revenue but also for lack of support. It appears that the 1986 issues are likely to be based on which party can offer the most conservative proposals for funding government services. That would be a far cry from the days when the cynics said the purpose of government was to tax, tax, tax and spend, spend, spend.

But what has happened to the feeling expressed by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr. that "Taxes are what we pay for civilized society?"

George Mason's memorial

It was almost 200 years ago — on Dec. 15, 1791, in fact — that the Bill of Rights was added to the Constitution in order to limit the powers of government and guarantee the individual rights of the people.

Most of us are aware that the First Amendment guarantees freedom of religion, speech and press and the right of the people to assemble and petition their government for a redress of their grievances. But few of us are knowledgable about the other freedoms that are guaranteed in the first 10 amendments that constitute the Bill of Rights.

Yet they include protections as important as those guaranteeing freedom from unreasonable searches and seizures, protection against double jeopardy, freedom from being compelled to testify against ourselves, the right to be given a fair and speedy trial, and protection against excessive bail, excessive fines and cruel and unusual treatment.

These and the other rights were first enumerated by George Mason, a wealthy Virginia planter, in his colony's own Bill of Rights adopted on June 12, 1776, five years earlier than the adoption of the first 10 amendments to the U.S. Constitution. He also helped write the U.S. Constitution but refused to sign it, because in his opinion, it failed to meet the rights and needs of individual citizens. But his own draft of the revisions he sought later served as the basis for the Bill of Rights which became the first 10 amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

It is true that Mason's name today is hardly a household word although his home at Gunston Hall, Va., is still maintained as a national treasure and the Daughters of the American Revolution each year mark his role in the drafting and adoption of the Bill of Rights. It would be appropriate for all of us to join in that observance and thus pay tribute not only to the document but to the man who, more than any other one individual, was responsible for the declaration of the rights that are so important to so many citizens today. Indeed, the Bill of Rights still stands as a permanent memorial to this early American patriot.

Progress report on The Pfutz

To the Editor:

It is almost a year since we lost Emu. His death came on Dec. 16 of last year. A few days later I wrote a short summary of his life, which you published.

Emu has become more widely known via this essay than he ever was in life. We, too, have tended to bask in his posthumous notoriety.

If you recall this piece, you may also note that The Pfutz succeeded to the post of Head Cat. She was an unlikely choice and had a tough spot to fill. The enclosed item tells of her efforts — and lack thereof — in this direction.

Robert F. Agne
Grosse Pointe

It is now almost a year since Emu died — almost a year since Taffie (or as I call her, the Pfutz) has had the title of Head Cat. There may be those who are curious as to how The Pfutz has fared in this new position. Such curiosity is well-founded.

In my time, I have been served by many Head Cats even though only recently has the title gone with the duty. These Head Cats of the past have had a few things in common. They have been large, sleek and well-mannered. They have had loud, authoritative purrs. They have been endowed with long tails and could contort them beautifully. They have uttered their meows with a sense of purpose. They have taken their relaxation and dining with deliberate seriousness. They could strike a dignified pose any time anywhere. In short they lived their position to the hilt. And they were all males.

The Pfutz has had none of this going for her. Gender has been the first strike against her. She became the first female Head Cat — appointed or unappointed — and she does not bulk large. To put it bluntly, she is a runt. Only her long hair — some ancestor must have been an Angora — tends to accent her size. It also gives her a shaggy appearance far from the sleekness of her predecessors. Her tail is bushy and tends to drag when she walks. Her meow is sharp and a little whiney. When she purrs you have to listen hard to see if anything is going on. In short, she is a most unlikely candidate for the post she holds. It is easy to see why there might be curiosity as to how she has been faring.

The office of Head Cat calls for more than aptitude. It calls for another cat to lord it over. When Emu died, The Pfutz was our one and only. The title passed by right of succession. But it was hollow indeed. To give it meaning, a second cat was needed in the household. The Pfutz heard us talking about this, gave us a withering look and sauntered out of the room.

Selecting a new junior cat requires care. We thought briefly about getting a kitten — very briefly. The Pfutz is known for her erratic and feisty ways: we feared a kitten might be eaten alive. So we kept an eye out for a cat that could hold his (or her) own in a pitched battle. We watched the cats-for-free ads in the papers and kept an ear to the ground. We checked several candidates and auditioned one or two. At last in early spring, we invited in a large white cat on approval.

We have had cats on approval before. Fluffernutter, who trained Emu, came to us that way as a kitten. A few hours with us and he was in. We were prepared for the same again with the white candidate. No way! We should have known we were in for trouble when we couldn't find a name for him. Cats can usually name themselves. But the white guy was nondescript. He was also muscle-bound. Then we found out he was over-zealous. A day passed and he took over my chair — with or without me. When I was in it, he flopped over me like a rug. He was working too fast too soon. Then he took to claw sharpening on the nearest object available. One of these objects turned out to be The Pfutz. She yelped, flew out of the room, and went into hiding, leaving little heaps of tan and white fur in her wake. The white cat came back to my chair for further coddling. I threw him in the basement and shut the door. Meanwhile The Pfutz chose life in the backyard and eating on the back porch.

We agreed to try remedial measures. We had the white cat's front claws removed. This stopped him from mauling The Pfutz. So he bit her instead. At about the same time, he decided to forego the cat box. That did it. The approval period ended — negatively — and The Pfutz agreed to spend time in the house again. Slowly she calmed down and began to acknowledge that we were there. But she was again Head Cat without a subject.

This ended when the decision was taken out of our hands. Our younger daughter had a cat in Kalamazoo. We had put out feelers about her cat — a jet black female named Penney — just in case. At first she declined our offer to take in Penney, but a shift in apartments and rules changed her mind for her. So Penney came to live with The Pfutz and us.

We told The Pfutz that there were no approvals this time. But as usual, The Pfutz didn't listen. She greeted Penney with spitting, low growls and a high speed chase. Penney is fleet of foot and didn't care. Penney had been a guest in our house before and was quite at home in our daughter's room. There, on the second floor she set up shop as our upstairs cat. The Pfutz continued to operate as our downstairs cat — and of course outside.

All this took place several months ago. Gradually The Pfutz has grown to accept Penney within spitting range without an outburst. And Penney has been seen edging up to The Pfutz in her sleep. But for the most part they live together in an armed truce. Penney (who does not go outside) comes downstairs to eat and find a warm place to nap. The Pfutz stays downstairs — except at night when she has sleeping rights on our bed. They eat in shifts. They avoid confrontation. Who knows? One day The Pfutz may even be able to start the training program expected of a Head Cat.

But what, one may ask, is all this progress? It depends on where you look and how you count. Emu has been dead nearly a year and we still miss him. The Pfutz is clearly a cat to be reckoned with. If she is to remain in charge it will certainly be on her terms. But through it all she has mellowed — ever so slightly. Within the last few weeks she has come to my chair, pattycaked on it — without front claws she can't scratch — climbed up and sat down beside me. It hasn't lasted long, but she has made a first move. It may be that she is trying to tell us something: that the shakedown period is over and she is now ready to take charge. It sounds reasonable. It takes many a new administration at least a year to come to grips with reality.

No need to change 35-year practice

To the Editor:

The letter to you of the board of the War Memorial regarding its resolve to put the service of alcohol at the Memorial on a professionally controlled legal basis has been called to my attention.

There are very strong convictions among many persons in the City of Grosse Pointe Farms on this matter which convictions can be summarized briefly:

1. There has been no demonstrated need to change the practices which have been followed by the board for the past 35 years.

2. The service of alcohol on the premises of the Memorial is not necessary for it to serve the purposes for which the War Memorial was created and exists.

3. Alcohol service on premises frequented by and utilized for the benefit of minors is not desirable and should be very limited. Two hundred and thirty-five alcohol events are already far too many.

4. The sale of alcoholic beverages by a public tax-exempt institution unfairly encroaches upon licensed taxpayers in Grosse Pointe Farms which sell liquor and pay local property and other taxes.

5. The proposed sale of alcoholic beverages at retail by the War Memorial should be profitable at market rates. When contributors see the large profits which would be realized by such activities, some may reducc or eliminate their financial support of the Memorial. As a result, the Memorial then becomes partially dependent upon the sale of alcoholic beverages which is not a desirable situation.

Finally, we are all aware of the need for and the escalating cost of liability insurance relating to the sale of alcoholic beverages. In referring to an annual cost of $10,000 for 230 prescheduled activities, some readers would like to know:

1. What is the dollar volume of sales of alcoholic beverage at this cost?

2. What calendar or fiscal year does the $10,000 cost refer to?

3. What amount of liability is insured?

Thanks again

To the Editor:

Recently I wrote a letter to the Grosse Pointe News thanking the Grosse Pointe Police Department for helping me Oct. 23, 1985.

Inadvertently, I did overlook the fact that it was also the Grosse Pointe Park Fire Department that took my husband to the Bon Secours Hospital.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank them also for their extreme kindness. Being from out of town I was unaware of the difference between Grosse Pointe and Grosse Pointe Park departments.

Consider author's purpose

To the Editor:

Regarding the articles titled, "Nicaragua: A student's impressions," the second of which appeared in the Dec. 5 edition of the Grosse Pointe News.

The first two articles were well written and were interesting and it is reasonable to believe that the final one will be in a like vein.

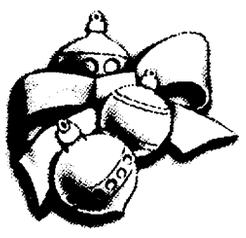

Readers of these articles should consider the author's purpose in going openly to Nicaragua and asking for information, for it is highly unlikely to think that she was naive enough to think that she would learn anything unfavorable about communism and about the Soviets. Certainly they did not tell her, for instance, that Nicaragua is their latest step in the Americas in conquering the United States and the United States is their last major obstacle in taking over the world.

The Nicaraguan government has been carefully tutored and is well prepared to brainwash any and all visitors who enter their lair; the apparently unplanned casual interviews that visitors may have are painstakingly planned for and no one who talks to such a visitor dares to say anything against their situation for it is unhealthful to do so as none have been vaccinated for beatings and "lead poisoning."

Lenin said that "Liberty is precious, so precious that it must be reserved for the few elite masters of the world of slaves."

Each reader should be guided accordingly.

I say

Me and John Wayne

By Tom Greenwood

Did I ever mention that John Wayne is a fraud? Let me amend that. One of the rock 'em, sock 'em legends he fostered is fraudulent.

Specifically, the myth spawned by the barroom brawls the Duke enjoyed in each cop, cowboy or war movie he starred in. The scene where everyone trades roundhouse rights, bottles bust over heads, eyes cross and no matter what the damage, everyone bellies up for shots of redeye and male bonding.

I caught Big Jake in a movie brawl the other night, and folks, it ain't necessarily so. If I had a nickel for every barroom brawl I've been in, I'd have a nickle.

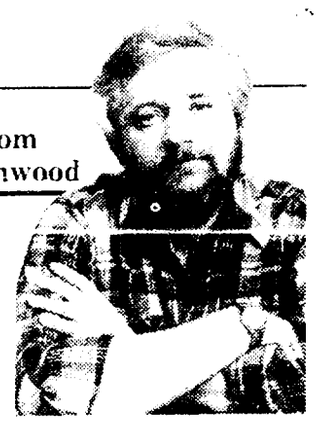

It happened one New Year's Eve in a country far, far away. I was corporal of the guard, caught some liberty and decided to celebrate. All by my lonesome, I strolled into the enlisted men's club and managed to secure a corner table.

Looking back now, I can see I was a damned fool to have gone there in the first place. The club, meant to hold 200, was crammed with about 400 homesick Marines awash in the I-wish-I-was-anywhere-but-here blues. Beer was half-a-buck, mixed drinks a dollar and bottles of champagne were $2.50.

A band in the corner produced a mutated form of rock 'n' roll and an occasional Christmas carol. It was something out of a Fellini movie.

Tucked into the corner, I watched the brawl begin. One group midway in the room sprayed their buddies across the table with champagne. They also hit a table of strangers and the war was on.

Tables, bottles and bodies flew through the air. I saw one guy get hit over the head with a bottle that burst from the impact. He didn't cross his eyes, plaster a silly grin on his face and reel around the room. The dude went face down and didn't even twitch. It wasn't anything like the movies.

I saw this was no place for Tom and jumped behind the bar. A few minutes later, a platoon of MPs roared into the club to break up the fight. Big mistake. They were beaten with their own night-sticks. One fired his .45 into the ceiling and suddenly there were about 200 of them, hitting anything that moved. I stayed behind the bar.

After the room cleared out, I decided to leave. On the way out I saw the oddest things. Shoes, shirts and belts were everywhere. Shirts and shoes were torn off, the belts removed because they made good weapons when wrapped around fists. There was also an arsenal of knives, bayonets, nightsticks and brass knuckles. Blood was everywhere, even on the ceiling.

Glass crunched underfoot as I stepped through pink, frothy pools of beer, champagne and blood.

It was chaos outside. Dozens of men lay face down on the lawn, hands cuffed behind them. Others were taken away in ambulances for stitches at sick bay.

MPs were everywhere, and my, were they angry! In civilian clothes, MPs act just like anyone else. But once they put that red armband on, they seem to change. They get mean. They get meaner when someone hits them back.

I tiptoed through a gauntlet of about 40 MPs, all hard eyes and heaving chests. You think a church mouse is quiet and meek? You should have seen me.

Hands in the air, I walked slowly and in a low, calm voice explaining my position behind the bar. Once beyond their perimeter, I hightailed it as if the hounds of hell, wearing red armbands, were on my tail.

And John Wayne was nowhere in sight.

Stronger sanctions needed against bad doctors

By State Senator John F. Kelly
1st District

One of the most important things the Senate has done to deal with the current crisis in the availability and affordability of medical malpractice insurance has been to adopt Senate Bill 475, which I introduced. This bill is designed to help eliminate instances of malpractice by strengthening the sanctions that can be imposed against bad doctors by state licensing boards.

Research has shown that the number one cause for medical malpractice awards is physician negligence. It has also revealed that a few bad doctors are responsible for a disproportionate share of the malpractice that leads to lawsuits and large jury awards, which subsequently make malpractice liability insurance both more difficult and more expensive for all physicians to obtain.

So far, efforts to eliminate these bad doctors from the profession by utilizing the existing powers of the state boards that license them have proved to be generally ineffective and inadequate. Last year, only 1,381 of the nation's 430,000 doctors were disciplined. In 1983, there were only 1,154 doctors who had their licenses suspended or revoked or who were subject to other major disciplinary actions. This amounts to disciplinary action being taken against only one out of every 252 doctors involved in malpractice settlements.

Michigan's track record is not any better than the nationl statistics. In 1984, Michigan took disciplinary action at the rate of only 1.8 per 1,000 doctors. This ranks 38th in the nation. Furthermore, in 1983-84 only 18 MDs and six DOs lost their licenses in Michigan.

Also compounding the problem, according to the American Medical Association, are an estimated 10,000 alcoholic doctors in the country and an estimated 4,000 who are drug addicts. This means that 5 to 15 percent of the nation's doctors are incompetent or impaired and should not be treating patients. In spite of this impressive but frightening evidence, however, very few doctors are actually disciplined.

Senate Bill 475 will amend the state's Public Health Code to make it much easier for state licensing boards to crack down on bad doctors. It will require that a doctor's license to practice medicine and his/her license to dispense controlled substances (drugs) be renewed concurrently and for the same number of years. In addition, the bill will require that a doctor's license to dispense controlled substances be automatically revoked or suspended upon notice that the individual's license to practice medicine had been revoked or suspended. This will assure that a doctor whose license has been revoked or suspended does not go on writing prescriptions to dispense drugs.

The proposed legislation pro-

Electric heat tapes pose fire hazard

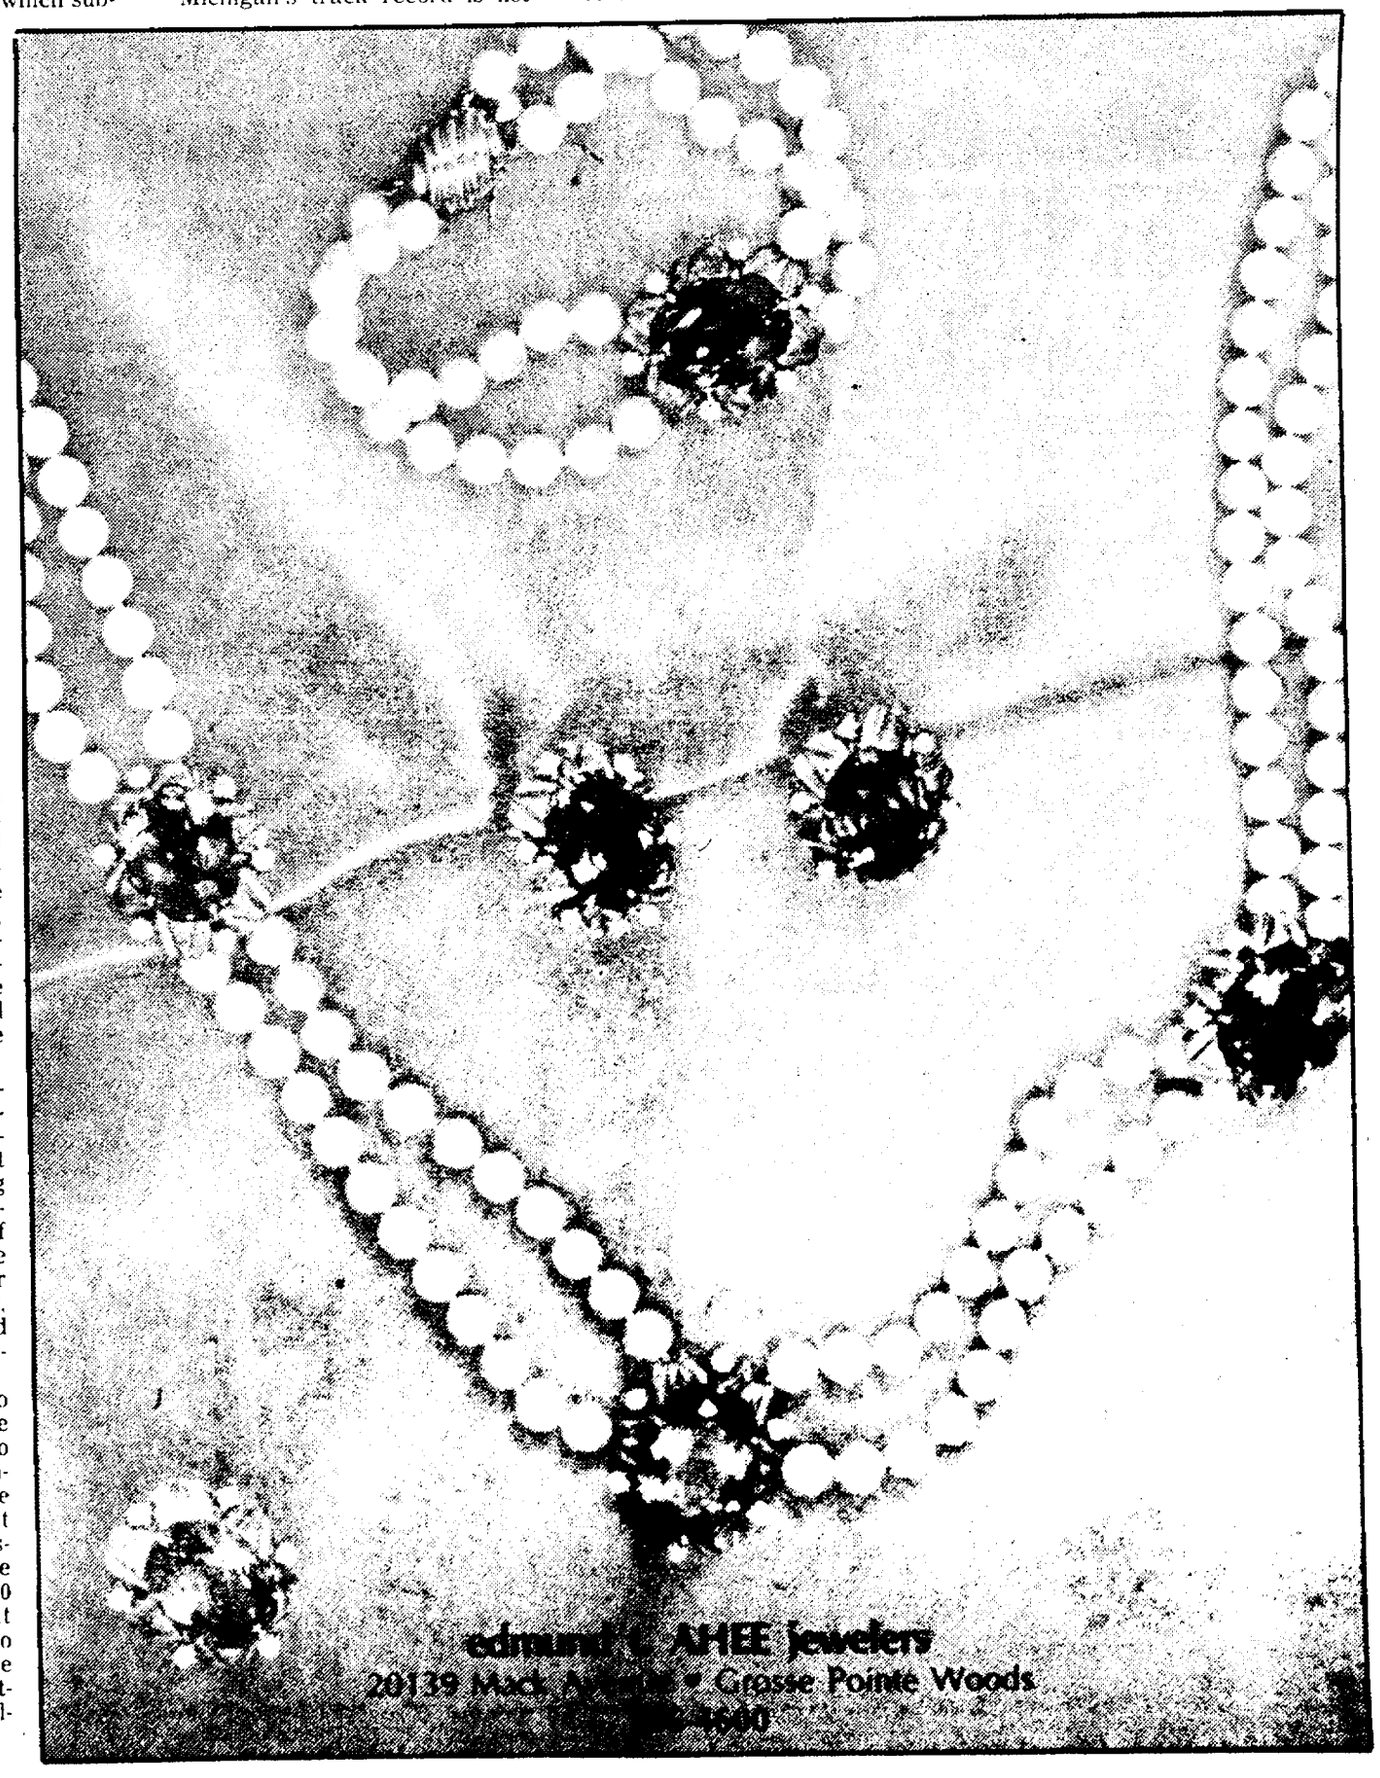

Homeowners and mobile home residents who rely on electric heat tapes or pipe heating cables to protect exposed water and drain pipe from freezing are being urged by government safety experts to inspect the tapes or cables now for possible fire hazards.

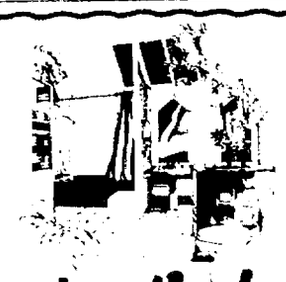

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, over 500 reported home fires are believed to have been caused by heat tapes or pipe heating cables over the last seven years. In many cases, improperly installed tapes and cables triggered the fires.

CPSC said heat tapes and cables are commonly used in crawl spaces and in the substructure of mobile homes, beach houses, mountain cabins, cottages and other part-time dwellings where exposed pipes could freeze during the winter.

CPSC said homeowners or licensed electricians should make annual inspections of heat tapes or pipe heating cables to detect any latent fire hazards. If cracks are found in the plastic insulation or bare wires are exposed, the tape or cable should be replaced immediately.

Inspect tapes to make sure they were installed according to the manufacturer's instructions. Of 35 home fires involving heat tapes which were investigated by CPSC, the agency learned that 40 percent of the heat tapes were believed to be "overwrapped;" the tape was lapped over itself when it was installed around the pipe.

Board puts lots in Farms, City up for sale

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The Board of Education Monday night decided to put school-system owned parking lots in the Farms and City up for sale.

The board concurred with Superintendent John Whritner's recommendation that the property be advertised for sale. All proposals will be brought before trustees for their consideration and final action.

Board Vice President Vincent LoCicero made the motion, supported by trustee Carl Anderson that the school system advertise the City lot behind Kroger's for sale at the same time. That lot has been appraised at $111,000, Whritner told the board.

Both motions passed unanimously.

LoCicero also asked the administration to put the sale question on the February board agenda for more discussion.

The .62-acre Farms parking lot, adjacent to Messner Field and behind the municipally owned Kercheval lot, was leased from the school system by the Farms. The lease expired in 1982.

The Farms uses the 84-car lot as a permit only parking area. The city regularly fills the lot to capacity, grossing more than $10,000 annually from the sale of permits.

At the Dec. 2 meeting, Whritner told the board the district should know by January if it will get a good price for the property, which is zoned for parking. Should the district decide not to sell, it should renegotiate a lease with the Farms or do something else with the lot, he added.

The district had the property appraised in April at $118,000.

Board President Jon Gandelot suggested last month the administration consider attaching the lot to Messner field. The suggestion was made after a presentation by the Grosse Pointe Soccer Association asking the board to establish a freshman soccer team at both high schools.

School officials said the cost of removing the paving, regrading and seeding the lot to add it to the playfield would be costly.

Developments planned for the upper Hill make that property more attractive to potential buyers. Cottage Hospital plans a parking deck for the area and developer Peter Bologna envisions a multi-million dollar building across the street from the hospital.

Parking is expected to remain at a premium for the Hill, even with completion of the parking deck.

One Hill developer, however, said the school's lot is too far away to benefit his partnership's plans. Realtor Robert G. Edgar, who, with Richard Crawford, plans to renovate the Punch and Judy Theater at Kercheval and McKinley, said he was interested in the lot earlier this year as part of a three-way arrangement to gain some leased parking spaces in the municipal lot behind Richard Place, across McKinley from the theater. When the board, in executive session, balked at his proposal, the idea was dropped, Edgar said.

Punch developers are no longer interested in the lot because it is too far from the theater to practically provide the parking for the renovated theater, he added.

The district had good luck in choosing this time to sell, Whritner said. Originally, the system hoped to get the sale of the Farms lot out of the way before it took up the City lot behind Kroger's in the Village. Some parties have already expressed interest in the City lot, school officials said.

The parking lot owned by the district in the City is similar to the one in the Farms. It is .57 acres and accommodates 80 cars. The lease expired in 1981.

It is unclear what the school system received in return for the use of the lot, since the original lease agreement contains no dollar amounts, school officials said.

Community tries to cope . . .

he said. "Their time is highly structured, both in and out of school. It doesn't allow for much free time."

Luttinen acknowledged that some parents feel that filling their children's time keeps them out of trouble. He said, however, that parents who can afford it tend to enroll their children in too many leisure classes.

"There's a tendency in affluent communities to over-program the kids," he said. "They need alternatives."

Leonhardi agrees that today's students field a lot of pressure, but with a difference. "I'm not sure (the pressure) is different from in the past. What may be different is how we deal with it. We may be less feeling-oriented. We concentrate on success — there's no room for indecision or failure."

Parents should not be blamed or blame themselves for the suicide of their child, Leonhardi said, but they should recognize that some of their behaviors contribute to it. Parents protect their children from life's blows with the result that the children fail to learn coping skills.

"Parents have to let their kids learn to deal with reality," she said. "They're too protective."

Sissela Bok, in her book, "Lying" calls these protective measures "paternalistic" lies. They are designed to protect the child, to soften the hard edges of reality, to put off confrontation with a parental failing, a "skeleton in the closet," or a "fact of life." They contribute to a climate of mistrust, Bok says, and we should ask ourselves how we would feel if such a lie were told to us. If our pet dies, let us mourn it properly, rather than replacing it with an identical one to "assuage" the grief.

Affluent parents may also tend to blame their comfortable financial situation for in some way causing problems in their adolescent children. The statistics do not bear this out, according to University Liggett Upper School Head Stephen Clem.

"They may feel it, but studies do not bear out any connection between affluence and suicide," Clem said. In fact, studies done at Harvard show an inverse relationship between the level of education of the father and the incidence of teen suicide. The more education a father has, the less likely his children are to commit suicide.

On the other hand, families who concentrate on professional careers instead of emotional needs could have problems. "Some professionals are unable to pick up on emotional needs because they relate more to performance," said Dr. Alfred Topico of the Psychiatric Center of Michigan in New Baltimore.

Although there is a negative correlation between educational level of the father and suicidal tendencies of the offspring, Topico said the mother's education correlates positively. "This is probably because she is usually away from home, concentrating on her career instead of the children," he said.

Female adolescents are more likely statistically to attempt suicide, but males are more likely to succeed, Topico said. This is because boys are more likely to select violent and sudden means like guns or hanging, while girls tend to choose means with options for reversal, like drug overdoses.

During the last 30 years, adolescent suicides have increased threefold, Topico said. In the 1950s, the suicides per 1,000 population were 2.2. This number has increased to 7.5 suicides per 1,000 population. Suicide is now the third cause of death in adolescents, ranking after accidents and cancer.

Ballooning the problems is the fact that the attempts outnumber the deaths. "There is usually more going on in the way of self-destructive behavior than reaches the statistics," Topico said.

Some hospitals keep no suicide statistics. Bon Secours, for example, lists attempts according to means used (gunshot, drugs, drowning, etc.). St. John Hospital recorded 77 attempted suicides admitted between July 1984 and July 1985. That number does not count people who came into the emergency room and were transferred to another hospital, nor does it include victims who were dead on arrival, a hospital representative said.

Topico does psychiatric consulting for all of the Grosse Pointe area hospitals, as well as hospitals along the lake as far as the St. Clair River District. He said he has seen 30 to 50 suicide cases this year among all of the hospitals. The psychiatric center in New Baltimore admits about 250 new patients a year, with approximately 40 of them displaying suicidal tendencies, he said.

People wanting to learn more about suicide may attend tonight's free public forum at 8 p.m. at North High School. Expert psychiatrists Dr. Emanuel Tanay and Dr. Beth Ann Brooks will speak.

Next week: What the schools are doing about suicide.

Accepting awards for their outstanding leadership, talent and interest in furthering the arts in the Detroit area are, from left, Joseph L. Hudson, Jr. and Gilbert Hudson. The awards were made at the annual Center for Creative Studies-College of Art and Design Studio Club Awards Luncheon. The club is for donors of $1,000 or more.

Foundation gives grants to FLEC, Children's Home

The Family Life Education Council (FLEC) and Children's Home of Detroit were among the 59 organizations that received grants from the Skillman Foundation Nov. 13 at the biannual trustees meeting.

FLEC was awarded $63,000 for its Youth Assistance Program and the Children's Home will receive $16,000 to replace fire alarms and for the 1986 summer camp program.

The grants, totaling nearly $2.5 million, were awarded to local social service, educational and cultural organizations to help prevent juvenile delinquency, hunger, domestic violence, child sexual abuse and to strenghten the arts. The awards bring total grants given in 1985 to $6 million.

Two new trustees were elected at the meeting, bringing the number to seven. They are Dr. Jane Thomas of the Park and Dr. Bernardine Denning of Detroit. Thomas is a member of the faculty of Wayne State University's School of Medicine.

Other members of the board are Leonard W. Smith, Samuel C. Kovan, Mandell L. Berman, William M. Brodhead and William E. Hoglund.

The Skillman Foundation was founded in 1960 by the late Rose Skillman. It is the largest private foundation in Detroit with assets of $185,000,000.

1986-87 programs of study okayed by board of education

By Mike Andrzejczyk

The Board of Education Monday night approved a program of studies for next year for the high and middle schools. Classes will be added to high- and low-ability students at the high schools and the middle school program will remain essentially the same as this year's.

Among the additions to the high schools program are Advanced Computer Programming-AP to help students with the new advanced placement college credit examination in Pascal language; inclusion in the honors program of Introduction to High School English, Civics and Advanced Foreign Languages.

Also added will be a semester or year course titled Exploring World Civilizations, which is meant to meet the needs of students who aren't strong enough in reading and writing to handle a year-long course now offered by the system.

The changes are in part a response to increase graduation requirements put in place a couple of years ago, according to Secondary Curriculum Director Robert Welch. The additions also reflect a change in philosophy for the system.

The school system has long operated under the premise that most of its students will go on to college, which is true, Welsh said. For those who don't, however, there needs to be a program of studies that will educate the student but not necessarily prepare him or her for college, he added.

The system has been working to put in classes for students not intending to go on to college. New graduation requirements demand completion of two years of math, for instance. The school system offers "college-bound" algebra and calculus as wel as practical math classes, Welch said.

The course outline, provided with the program of studies, shows the class taking students from the cradles of civilization in Greece, Rome, Asia and South America through the emergence of Third World nations and a look into the global future.

While the course is expected to cover most of recorded history, instructors will "post-hole" to illustrate central points of civilizations, Welch said. Since 1986-87 is the first year the class will be offered, teachers' experience in it may mean making some changes.

Also being added in 1986-87 is a restructured premedical and nursing training program. The semester course will be offered during the summer on a tuition basis, with space available for 14 students.

Cottage Hospital has proposed restructuring the program, once year-long. The demand for hospital aides has decreased, while the need for aides in extended care facilities has been on the rise, according to the school administration.

Since the class will have students working in the facilities as part of the program and receiving instruction and materials form two hospital-hired instructors, the system decided to offer a semesters credit for the summer program and charge participating students tuition.

The hospital has agreed to pay $2,500 to cover part of the cost of two instructors, students supplies and physical examinations for participating students. The school system will use the tuition to cover the rest of the program's cost, expected to be about $2,500.

Other program changes for 1986-87 include name changes for the typing courses in the business education department, dropping three courses because of insufficient enrollment, changing computer programming courses in the math department to reflect difficulty of the courses, changing home economics to life management and transferring health to that department, and modifying the skills program at both high schools.

The three-year program of studies for middle school students will remain unchanged for 1986-87, Welch said. It is a strong program to being with, with offers progressive freedom for students to choose electives. Some refinements may be proposed for the 1987-88 school year, he added.

Federal law permits each American Indian tribe to sacrifice one golden eagle a year in religious ritual only.

Adults and children over five years of age who are accompanied by an adult may participate in the workshop. The Selinsky-Green Log House Museum is located behind the St. Clair Shores Public Library at Eleven Mile Road and Jefferson Avenue. There is no admission charge.

For hours or more information or to book group tours, call museum Curator LuAnne Kozma at 771-9020.

Purse snatched

An unidentified assailant grabbed a Detroit woman's purse as she got into a car in the parking lot behind the Seven Mile-Mack shopping center Dec. 6. The woman and two friends had completed their shopping at 8:45 p.m. and were preparing to drive away when the man ran up, seized the purse of the front-seat passenger and slammed the car door on her leg. He then fled with others in a dark-colored car.

One of the witnesses said she thought she might have frightened the man away when she shouted to the passenger in the back seat to get her gun, Farms police reports stated.

The man did not speak or threaten to use a weapon.

The purse contained a Hudson's gift certificate, about $10 in cash, and credit cards, according to the report.

Ewald Foundation seeks applicants for scholarships

The H.T. Ewald Foundation is now accepting applications for scholarship grants for the 1986 college year from high school seniors, according to Ted Ewald, foundation president.

Scholarship grants are based on three criteria: financial need, as demonstrated by a completed application and a personal interview; scholarship record, as evidenced by school grades and ACT/SAT test scores, as well as extracurricular activities; and character of the applicant testified to by letters of recommendation, outside activities, jobs. Applicants must reside in metropolitan Detroit.

Applications may be obtained by writing or calling the Ewald Foundation, 15175 E. Jefferson Ave., Grosse Pointe Park, Mich. 48230, 821-2000.

Interviews will be scheduled upon receipt of a completed application package some time between November and May 1. Winners will be announced in early July. The grants range between $500 and $2,500, based on need, and are for a maximum of four years.

Everyone loves

. . . a gingerbread house, it seems, and plenty of people want to learn how to make one. Due to the demand, the War Memorial scheduled a second workshop for Saturday, Dec. 14, and Saturday, Dec. 21, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Participants in the last workshop included 6-year-old Laura Chapin, at the right, with her father Boyd. The Chapins live in the Park. Below, 5-year-old Nicole Jackson hangs on to her aunt, Janis Jenks of the Farms.

Hospital installs satellite dish

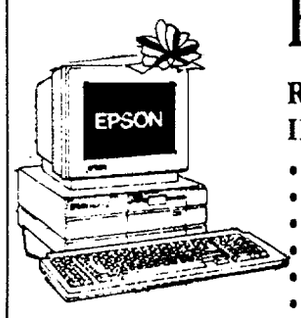

Bon Secours Hospital recently installed a satellite dish to receive transmissions of educational programs for the hospital's physicians, nurses, administrators and other health care professionals.

As a member of the Michigan Hospital Association Communication System, the hospital will receive about 30 hours of MHA programs each month. Satellite transmission of these programs will allow the hospital's staff to keep up-to-date in their professional fields, without leaving the hospital.

The satellite dish will also enable staff members to participate during live tele-conferences. Viewers at the hospital can call their questions to conference speakers, and the questions will be answered during the program.

MSU homecoming queen Angela LoVasco of the Woods is shown with John DiBiaggio, the school's new president.

North High School graduate is MSU homecoming queen

By Kelli LaVelle

During her years at Grosse Pointe North High School, Angela LoVasco's twin sister, Mary, was selected for homecoming court every year.

But this year it was her turn when she was crowned homecoming queen 1985 of Michigan State University.

"I always hated popularity contests," she said. "But here, I was challenged through the interviews. Now, I feel good about it."

LoVasco, 21, Grosse Pointe Woods, is a senior in the James Madison College at MSU. She is majoring in urban studies with cognates in both French and Spanish.

Although she is active in many areas, her primary interest is her job as resident assistant in the dormitories. She is an RA for Four North Case Hall, the group that sponsored her nomination for homecoming court.

Once a person is nominated, she must go through a series of interviews with seven judges. The judges were administrators, faculty, local politicians, an ex-president of MSU and two student leaders.

Approximately 100 nominees were interviewed. Judging was based on the candidate's academics, involvement, leadership, achievement, diversity and poise.

After the preliminary interviews, about two-thirds of the candidates were eliminated. The remaining candidates were interviewed again, and five court members were selected. The process of homecoming king was the same. The winners were announced at a pep rally the night before the homecoming game.

In addition to being an RA for three years, a member of the Senior Class Council, and a Mortar Board member, LoVasco has been on the dean's list for six terms and received the Michigan Competitive Scholarship.

LoVasco is also active at St. John's Student Parish in Lansing, where she has taught Sunday School, led retreats and helped organize RENEW, a type of Bible study meeting for small groups of Catholics.

Additionally, she has been involved in both the Lansing and Detroit area communities, working as a tutor for bilingual education, a United Way volunteer, the Council Against Domestic Assault and a soup kitchen volunteer.

LoVasco also spent a summer in New York working on the Statue of Liberty/Ellis Island Voluntary Service project where she was responsible for 40 international students as well as a budget and food for the group. She also worked in the Habitat for Humanity project which helps renovate abandoned homes to provide shelter for the homeless.

She is the daughter of John and Catherine LoVasco and has four brothers and five sisters, including a twin. She plans to spend the summer after graduation at an international workcamp in Spain.

Insurance rates too high; Farms joins MML pool

By Nancy Parmenter

The Farms city council bowed to the inevitable Dec. 2 and moved city insurance coverage to the Michigan Municipal League pool, over the strenuous objections of the city's insurance agent. The agent had come in with a bid of $251,783 — three times as high as last year's premium and with drastically reduced coverage — compared to the pool cost of $125,620.

"There are no other options available — other than going bare," said Farms Comptroller Carrol Lock.

The bids exceeded even the wildest fears of the Farms administration. A month ago, City Manager Andrew Bremer warned that the insurance companies' bids could be as high as $200,000.

The old insurance policy, which cost approximately $75,000, included $15 million in umbrella liability. Both the pool and the insurance company bids limit umbrella coverage to $1 million this year, with the company refusing to include police and errors and omissions.

"We discussed pool coverage last year and had serious reservations about it. What, besides the astounding difference in cost, makes us consider it now?" Councilman Bruce Rockwell asked Lock.

"What's the use of an umbrella that doesn't cover police?" Lock responded.

The Municipal League pool covers approximately 300 Michigan cities and villages with populations of less than 50,000. It was formed in 1982 in response to enabling legislation passed earlier that year. Other pools exist for specialized purposes, such as hospitals, according to Lock.

City insurance agent Howard Camden begged the council not to consider the pool. "A pool is a mutual-aid pact," he said. "It isn't insurance."

Camden said pools are mistakenly believed to be identical to insurance and that most members fail to realize that they could be subject to unlimited assessments to pay the unfunded losses of other members. Pools rarely establish reserves at the level required by law of insurance companies, he said.

"Insurance is a more conservative approach, because it is regulated," Camden told the council. "A key point is that there is no regulation of pools. This thing is gonna blow."

Camden recommended that the council purchase the insurance policy without the umbrella, but admitted that the council faces a "catch-22" in today's insurance "drought." "What is available is exorbitant," he said. "I'm embarrassed to be here as an insurance agent. The business is in a state of total disarray."

Lock told the council that the three-member insurance committee had reviewed the alternatives and agreed unanimously that "this is not happiness time, but this is the best of bad alternatives."

"We believe we picked (a pool) that is responsibly run," he said later. "It's not a blind shot."

The Park and the City are already members of the same insurance pool. The Woods has so far managed to buy a policy, but the cost for this year is $327,000, up nearly 350 percent, according to City Administrator Chester Petersen.

The council voted 5-1 to participate in the pool, with Councilwoman Mary Anne Ghesquiere opposed. She raised concerns about the individual liability of council members as well as the city's liability, especially in the absence of a full errors and omissions policy.

Council members are not individually liable unless it can be shown that they acted with malice or negligence, Lock said. He conceded, however, that cities seem more and more to be found liable for things that are beyond their control.

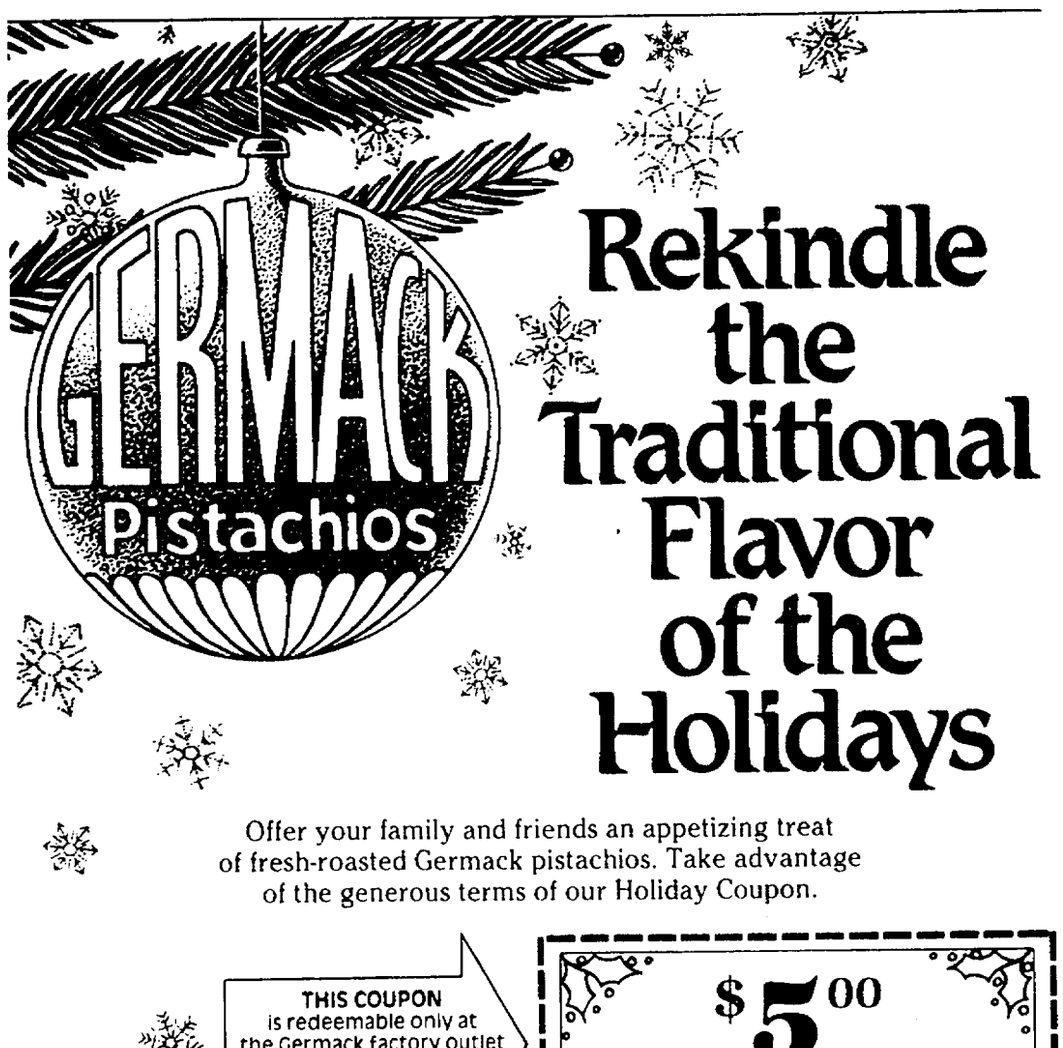

"I can foresee a time when more and more cities get hauled in on things they didn't do, like clearing away snow," he said. "Cities no longer have immunity. The courts have corroded that to the point where it doesn't exist."

The pool agreement became effective Dec. 7.

Gentlemen, take a bow.

The winner is...

While we're speaking of awards, let's not forget George Hawkins, of Design Detroit Interiors, in the City, who won the Spirit of Christmas Award at the recently held Festival of Trees.

The festival was a fundraising event for Children's Hospital. More than 100 designers were invited to decorate artificial trees which were then auctioned off. The event, held in Cobo Hall late last month, raised more than $100,000 for the hospital's Evergreen Fund.

Hawkins' tree alone was auctioned off for $1,000. His tree, with a Williamsburg Christmas theme, was decorated in a day, but Hawkins had been working on the design since last summer.

All the time and materials were donated free, so the money raised represented a 100 percent profit for the hospital. Incidentally, Hawkins was one of only nine designers winning an award.

Sanctions against . . .

vides that doctors who are convicted of criminal sexual conduct or those who violate the good oral character standard could be subject to board-imposed sanctions, including probation, limitation, denial, suspension or revocation. Too often, doctors who have been guilty of these violations have suffered few professional sanctions.

Senate Bill 475 also stipulates that the state's medical licensing boards have the authority to impose fines and order restitution as part of their disciplinary actions. And, very importantly, the bill makes it clear that sanction determinations are the responsibility of the licensing boards. If a court finds a sanction imposed by a board to be illegal, then it must state the reason on the record and return the case to the board for further action. If a court currently nullifies a board action, the doctor usually gets off scot-free.

Board members will also have more protection in carrying out their duties if this bill becomes law because it provides them with civil immunity, except for gross negligence or willful and wanton misconduct.

In addition, board will have to investigate complaints on a priority basis.

The majority of the doctors who practice medicine in Michigan are fine, responsible physicians. They should find it easier and less expensive to obtain medical malpractice insurance if the minority of bad doctors responsible for most of the malpractice claims and judgments are put out of business by the tough provisions contained in SB 475.

North American Indians traditionally nursed their boy babies longer and more carefully than their girl babies in the belief that the males at birth were weaker than the females.

Turkey — just like mom used to make?

By Tom Greenwood

Forget Julia Child. Throw out that dog-eared copy of "The Joy of Cooking." Everything you could possibly ever want to know about preparing a turkey for dinner is in this story.

It comes with the compliments of the culinary kids in the second grade class of Richard School's Irene Lowther, who gave her students a simple essay assignment: How to cook a turkey.

The spellings may be a little strange, but the instructions are simplicity itself.

Mark Zeller: "First you go to the groshare store and by one. Then you take it home and take the hart out. And the rest of the in sides. Then you chop off the gizerd and the head and then you pluk it's fithers. Then you get a pan. And then you set a tempacher and throw it in!"

Jenny Failla: "This is how to cook a turkey. It is esy. First the turkey is pluked. The it's lugged by truk to market. Then you buy it. You leave it in the freezer untel you cook it on Thagiving. You could put it in a the mikerwave if you have one. I put it in the stove and put some stuff on it."

Tim Reynolds: "When you cook a turkey. It's a littil hard. You can buy it two ways. Alive or allready cleaned out and killed. You can put stofing in the cleaned body. If it has a thing, when it gose up then it's dun."

Meghan Buckler: "Hi. My name is Meghan. I will show you how to cook a turkey. Ok take a turkey. Ok pluck the turkey and put it in the oven to cook and when you take it out you have a turkey. The end."

Kasiani Pozios: "First you get the turkey. Then you take off the fethers and take out all the inside. Then you make the stafing. Then you put the stafing in the turkey. And then you put it in the oven and cook it and evry once and awhill you scwhert a little lemen on the turkey."

Jessica Hunter: "First you wash it. Then you take out the heart and stuff then you wash it once more. Then you cook it and you have a nicely cooked turkey yum yum."

Erin Coyle: "You get a turkey maybe at a store. When you get it you cut off the head. And then you cut the wings. And then you cut the legs."

Christy Schumacher: "Wene you cook a turkey. It takes about three howers once it is in the ovin. But you have to get it ready first. You should have a timer sow it duss not get to cooked. I like turkeys alot."

Christy Schumacher: "First you get a turkey then you get all the sick stuf out. Then you put it inside the oven. And then turn it on. Then you take it out and set up the table and call avry bodey up stairs. And give a pice of turkey thay ate some and thay like it."

Amy Birch: "First you have to do this. Get a turkey and pluk it and than cook it for one hour or two hour's and then cut it and let it cool for one hour and then eat it. And if you have any left over's share it with you'r nabers."

Jeremy Burkett: "First by a turkey at the store. Take the gunk out. Then stuff it with dressing. Then cook it and then you cut it. There is white turkey and brown turkey."

Laurie Henderson: "First you must wash it and then you must get the guts out and then you put the stofeing. And then you put it in the ovin . . . and then you check it. Then you put some gravey on it. And than you have a nice turkey diner!"

Ben Ambrosino: "First you got to the groshree store and biye the turkey. Then you take the turkey and you cleen it and you cut up a bunch of vegdolubuls and you stuf them in to the turkey. Then you put it in the oven and cook it for a long time and then you eat it."

Christopher Tiede: "First you pluck it and put it in the oven. Wen a minit is up take it out and there you have it. The end."

It was especially important to include Christopher's recipe. His grandfather is Bob Charlton, a CKLW radio personality who read the recipes over the air on Thanksgiving day.

Seconds, anyone?

Grandparents go to school

The Greens of Christmas

The Christ Church Greens of Christmas sale was a rousing success last weekend. Pre-orders had exceeded last year's total by 300 percent before the sale even opened last Thursday night. Offering one of the largest selections of live green decorating items in the area, the sale supports the Episcopal Churchwomen's programs throughout the year.

GP Academy announces scholarship honoring Lee Robinson's service

At a dinner on Nov. 21, given at the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House to honor major donors to the Second Century Fund Campaign, the board of trustees of the Grosse Pointe Academy announced the establishment of the Lee D. Robinson Endowed Scholarship for metropolitan Detroit students. The endowed fund is intended to provide an opportunity for inner city children to benefit from the unique educational experience offered at the academy.

The scholarship is a tribute to the ideals and leadership that Robinson has displayed in her commitment to the community. Robinson, a founding trustee of the academy, has been instrumental over the past 16 years in shaping the philosophy and educational goals of the institution.

"The academy's philosophy is to maintain a representation of students of all religious, cultural, social, and economic backgrounds from the metropolitan Detroit area," explained academy trustee Carole Peabody. "Toward this end, the Lee D. Robinson Endowed Scholarship has been established to honor an individual who believes that children must be prepared in a strong moral, academic surrounding to face the world of tomorrow."

The celebration at the Ford House was held to recognize major donors, members of the steering committee, and board members for their assistance and participation in bringing the Second Century Fund close to the Phase I objective of $2 million by Dec. 31. To date more than $1.5 million has been raised, with a number of commitments expected to be fulfilled by the end of the year.

The Second Century effort has been headed by George Haggarty, who also serves as president of the school's board of trustees. Steering committee members include Barrett O. Brink, Mrs. Craig H. Curtiss, Dr. Sidney L. DuPont, Mrs. Edward S. Evans III, Mrs. Hans Gehrke, Jr., Wayne C. Inman, John P. Jagger, Mrs. Joel P. Kerr, William H. Leith, Mrs. F. Dennis McCarthy, James T. McMillan II, Mrs. Peter E. O'Rourke, Catherine F. Owens, R.S.C.J., William C. Rands III, Mrs. Walter B. Robinson, Mrs. John S. Schneider, S. Gary Spicer, Mrs. Edward J. Stroble, Jr., Michael T. Timmis, Mrs. Emmet E. Tracy, Peter Van Osdol and Dominic Varisco.

The Grosse Pointe Academy is an independent, coeducational day school educating children ages 2½ years through grade eight. The distinctive quality of the education offered at the academy is the emphasis on the value of a single child and his or her personal growth.

Fashion show benefits Children's Hospital

Eddie Denha in cooperation with Contempo Media Productions, Inc. has organized an evening of music, illusions and fashions to benefit Children's Hospital of Michigan. The Southfield Manor is the setting for this charitable event to be held on Monday, Dec. 16 at 7:30 p.m.

Menswear will be provided by Kosin's Clothes and the ladies fashions by Janine's Boutique. Many Detroit area celebrities including Doris Biscoe, Rich Fisher, Nancy McCauley, Jay Berry and Sylvia Glover will be donating their time and talents as models.

Franz Harary & Co. will entertain with an array of illusions. Originally from Ann Arbor, Franz now lives in Hollywood and is the person responsible for the illusions in Michael Jackson's Victory Tour, and the Night Ranger and Barry Manilow tours. He also performed close-up magic at the Presidential Inaugural Ball. Franz is coming home to show his support for Children's Hospital of Michigan.

Separate Checks is probably the hottest jazz-fusion band to come out of Detroit in quite some time. One of their recordings is at the top of the request list on Alan Almond's "Pillow Talk." Separate Checks will provide captivating music throughout the evening.

As you can see, every element of this night is quite strong in itself. Put them all together and you have "The Magic of Giving," a fine way to help fund the special programs and equipment needed to offer the finest pediatric care that's available.

Tickets for the event are $30 and are open to the public. They can be purchased by calling 356-1880.

With the support of caring people, "The Magic of Giving" will be a huge success.

Newcomers mark holiday

The Grosse Pointe Newcomers Club will be celebrating the holiday season with "Candlelight and Candy Canes," the theme of its annual Christmas dinner-dance to be held at the War Memorial on Saturday, Dec. 14. The festive evening will begin with champagne and hors d'oeuvres at members' homes, then on to dining, dancing and the arrival of Santa at the Alger House.

Mike and Eileen Shapiro, committee chairpersons, along with Bill and Sandy Schauman, Gregg and Marcia Bruce, Bill and Marilyn Wayland, Bill and Kim Hubbard, Jim and Daria Cooper, Eric and Alice Ernst, Mike and Pat Micallef and Dale and Julie Gallimore have all been working to make the evening a success.

Couples who are new to the Grosse Pointes within the past two years and would like more information about joining the Grosse Pointe Newcomers Club may call Jim and Lori Everett at 882-4114 or Craig and Margit Jackson at 884-2032.

Fontbonnefair called a success by auxiliary

The Fontbonne Auxiliary of St. John Hospital hosted its second annual Fontbonnefair Tuesday, Oct. 29, at the St. Clair Shores Recreation Center. The event invited the community to shop or just browse through the fantastic displays of arts and crafts, Christmas decor, homemade treats and elegant white elephant items.

"This year's Fontbonnefair was a tremendous success," says Patricia Ostosh of St. Clair Shores, president of the Fontbonne Auxiliary. "People were coming in the entire day."

The displays at the Fontbonnefair gave the community good reason to attend. The pantry corner and candy table offered homemade goodies to visitors and the 22 arts and crafts tables, the elegant white elephant array and a display from the hospital's gift shop offered guests a vast selection of unique items and gift ideas. Additional features included: the Renaissance Cuisine Cookbook, hand-crafted Christmas wreaths, a raffle, refreshments and a celebrity auction.

Guests had a chance to bid on items from Mort Crim, J.P. McCarthy, Dr. Sonya Friedman, Aaron Krickstein and the Detroit Tigers to name a few.

Some 100 women donated their time to make this event possible. This year's general chairperson was Joan Gehrke of Grosse Pointe Farms.

"The success of this year's Fontbonnefair can be measured by all the wonderful people who participated as well as by the donations," Gehrke said.

Chairpersons of this year's Fontbonnefair included: Caroline Bommarito of East Detroit; Jane Buhl of Grosse Pointe; Marie DeLuca of Grosse Pointe Farms; Virginia Douglas of St. Clair Shores; Rita Haller of Grosse Pointe Woods; Betty Ireland of Grosse Pointe Park; Victoria Keys of Grosse Pointe Woods; Pattie Klimchuk of St. Clair Shores; Judy Lundell of Grosse Pointe Farms; Joanne Marcil of Grosse Pointe Woods; Rose Regner of Grosse Pointe Park; Betsy Schooff of Grosse Pointe Shores; Pamela Stanton of Grosse Pointe; Mary Elizabeth Tulloch of Grosse Pointe; and Patricia Young of Grosse Pointe.

Also of vital importance to the event was the auxiliary office staff. Members include: Sr. Sylvia Dimeck of Grosse Pointe Woods; Anne Marie Gregorich of Detroit; Clarice Lewis of Warren and Virginia Whalen of Harper Woods.

Plans for the third annual Fontbonnefair are now underway and reservations have been made at the St. Clair Shores Recreation Center.

Ham and turkey will be good meat buys through December

Consumers will have a meat lovers dilemma in December. Both turkey and ham will be selling at bargain basement prices.

November turkey prices were very attractive, thanks in part to the largest turkey supplies in four years and to retailers selling the birds as loss leaders.

But turkey supplies will begin to overwhelm demand after Thanksgiving. With stockpiles already running 14 percent ahead of last year, turkey production in the fourth quarter is slated to increase an additional 10 percent over year-earlier levels. Consumers will pay less for turkey through much of 1986 — as little as 60 cents per pound during the first quarter.

Ham supplies, also at record-high levels, will likely depress the prices of all pork products. Ham prices are expected to remain depressed through the holiday season and to drop even more after Christmas.

There will be plenty of Michigan apples for holiday eating and gift packs. Farm markets producing their own apples may be your best source.

The citrus outlook remains good as of this date. The 1985-86 orange forecast by the U.S. Department of Agriculture is for a total crop 16 percent above last year's. Orange juice concentrate prices have fallen for the second time in about three months, and there may be further drops.

Now, the outlook for key holiday baking ingredients. Egg prices are up and will continue to climb for the next two months. Look for lots of specials on raisins as the 1985 crop is second only to last year's whopper.

Peanuts and peanut butter should remain at current prices; the 1985 crop is just 4 percent under last year's record-breaker. Pecans are in short supply and prices are high; the carryover is small and the size of the new crop is questionable. Almond factors remain withdrawn from the market in order to assess the supply situation. Look for higher almond prices when trading resumes. Overall walnut production, on the other hand, is forecast at record-large levels.

Ward off leftover blues with new recipes

Are you haunted by the ghost of Thanksgiving past? Was your November turkey enough to carry you to Christmas? Will your Christmas turkey last you until the snow melts in the spring? Does the holiday season make you wonder if you have the courage to look another meal of turkey in the eye?

If your freezer still has some packages of turkey in it from last year — take heart. A new approach to turkey leftovers can banish the post-holiday boredom of endless turkey sandwiches and croquettes.

The following is a selection of recipes featuring turkey, from the low-calorie, low-cholesterol, budgetwise kitchens of Thyra Grey Howard and Helena DeWitt Roth.

Turkey Scallopini Marsala

1 pound thinly sliced turkey breast
1/4 cup seasoned bread stuffing, rolled into very fine crumbs
4 Tblsp. margarine, divided
1/8 cup Egg Beaters, well beaten
1 Tblsp. skim milk
1 pound fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced
1/2 cup marsala or dry sherry wine

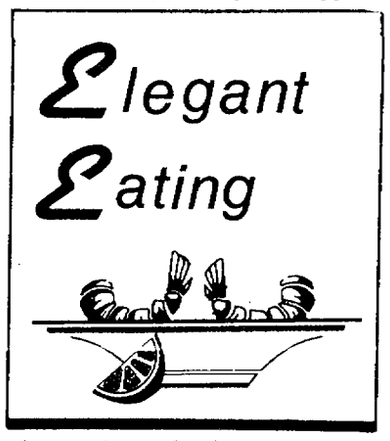

Mix well beaten egg substitute with skim milk. Dip turkey slice into mixture and coat both sides with stuffing crumbs.

Using two tablespoons of the margarine, saute turkey slices until well browned on each side (try to avoid getting them too brown). While turkey is browning, melt remaining margarine in another skillet and saute the mushrooms until they just start to lose their juices. Stir wine into mushrooms. Pour mushrooms over turkey slices and simmer three to five minutes or until turkey is tender. Makes four servings.

Calories about 325 per serving. Cholesterol about 59 mgs.

Turkey Curry with Raisin Rice

1-1/2 cups chopped unpeeled apples

2/3 cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 Tblsp. margarine
2 Tblsp. flour
1 tsp. curry powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1 Tblsp. fresh ginger, minced or 1/4 tsp. ground ginger
1-1/2 cups turkey or chicken broth
2-1/2 cups cooked turkey, cut up
1/3 cup slivered almonds
2 Tblsp. margarine
3/4 cup light raisins
3 cups cooked rice

Saute apples, onion and garlic in margarine until crisp-tender. Stir in flour, seasonings and turkey broth. Cook over medium heat until thickened. Add turkey and heat thoroughly. Keep warm.

In a saucepan saute almonds in margarine until golden brown. Stir in raisins and cooked rice, tossing lightly to combine. Heat thoroughly. Serve with turkey. Makes six servings.

About 395 calories including rice per serving. Cholesterol about 30 mgs.

Quick and Easy Tetrazzini

3 cups water
1 envelope onion-mushroom soup mix
1-1/3 cups uncooked spaghetti broken (about 4 ounces)
2 cups cut-up cooked turkey
1/2 cup cooked peas
1/4 cup chopped pimiento
1 cup milk
1/4 cup flour
1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese

In large saucepan, bring water and soup mix to a boil; add spaghetti and cook eight minutes or until tender. Add turkey, peas, pimiento and milk blended with flour. Simmer five minutes or until lightly thickened; stir in cheese. Serves four.

Calories per serving about 350. Cholesterol about 57 mgs.

Turkey Hash

3 cups diced cooked turkey
4 Tblsp. unsalted margarine
2 Tblsp. flour
1/2 cup evaporated skimmed milk
1/2 cup soft bread crumbs
1/2 cup minced green pepper
1/2 cup finely diced onion
2 Tblsp. minced parsley
1/2 tsp. poultry seasoning
1/4 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
Paprika

Melt two tablespoons of margarine in saucepan, blend in flour and evaporated skimmed milk and stir until thick. Add remaining ingredients except the remaining two tablespoons of margarine. Melt the margarine in large skillet and add turkey mixture. Saute for about 25 minutes stirring frequently. If a brown crust is desired, place under the broiler for a few minutes. Sprinkle with paprika and garnish with parsley sprigs. Makes six servings.

Calories about 238 per serving. Cholesterol about 78 mgs.

Turkey Chili

1/2 cup onion, chopped
1/2 cup celery, chopped
2 cups shredded cooked turkey
1 can (16 ounces) stewed tomatoes
2 Tblsp. oil (vegetable)
1 can (16 ounces) kidney beans, drained
2 tsp. chili powder
1/2 tsp. salt
Pepper to taste

In large skillet saute onion and celery in hot oil until tender. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer 10 minutes. Delicious served over hot rice. Makes four servings.

Calories per serving about 329. Cholesterol about 62 mgs.

Yale Glee Club to sing at Christ Church

The beautiful nave of Christ Church Grosse Pointe will be the site of a concert by the world-famous Yale Glee Club on Monday, Jan. 6 at 8 p.m.

The church's recently renovated acoustics should provide a perfect setting for the glee club's choral offerings, which include 16th century motets and madrigals, folk songs, and contemporary works by its renowned director, Fenno Heath.

An additional feature of the concert will be an appearance by Something Extra, an all-girl singing group from the Yale campus. Of course, the evening will be also sprinkled with traditional songs of Yale for the "Old Blues" to enjoy.

Four Grosse Pointers have key responsibilities in the presentation. Bill Gard, Sandy McMillan and Charlie Parcells are concert co-chairmen, and Howie Tischler is president of the Yale Alumni Association of Michigan, sponsors of the event.

Ticket information may be obtained by calling 758-7550 during the day, or 881-0925 evenings, or by writing Martha Corbin, 1035 Cadieux, Grosse Pointe 48230.

PMS, or Professional Medical Services, is an "in-home" nursing service for families who find themselves in situations like this. PMS provides experienced professionals who specialize in administering medication and treatment, meal preparation, light housekeeping chores and help with shopping and errands. Twenty-nine ways to make the holiday brighter for people less fortunate

By Elsa Frohman

Christmas is a time of giving. We drive ourselves crazy in a frenzy of shopping, wrapping, baking and decorating.

It is also a time when we stop and give thought to how fortunate we are to be surrounded by friends and family, to have all the food we need, a warm and pleasant home, and enough surplus to shower our children, relatives and friends with gifts.

We also tend to think of others less fortunate at this time of year. A dollar goes into Santa's kettle at the shopping mall and a check goes off to Christmas Seals.

However, there are still people in need this Christmas. There are agencies beyond number which provide food to the hungry and shelter to the homeless, but in many instances they are taxed beyond their capacity and there is nothing left over for Christmas gifts.

The following is a list of 29 agencies in the Detroit area which subsist, at least partially, on contributions. They range from hospitals to emergency shelters for battered women. Each has submitted a "Wish List" for Christmas giving.

The needs are as different as the agencies. A few have asked for cash donations only, because merchandise often misses the particular needs of their clients — making a well-meant donation more of a burden than a help.

Other agencies would appreciate almost anything that was offered.

"I guess I need just about anything," said Charleszetta (Mother) Waddles.

Some of the wishes were small enough for almost anyone to provide, such as a Christmas party for about a dozen deaf children from over seas who can't go home to their families for the holidays.

Other wishes will be a little more difficult to fill, such as the need for a van for transportation at a home for emotionally disturbed adolescents.

The list is far from complete. A gift to any will help someone less fortunate enjoy the holidays.

Boys Republic — A residential treatment center for socially maladjusted and emotionally disturbed youth, serving boys ages 12-17.

"Some of our youngsters are pretty needy," said Executive Director Frank Harris Jr. "They could use clothing or any Christmas item. Cash is good. It gives us the latitude to shop for the individual child."

There are 65 boys at Boys Republic, coming from the Detroit area and some from the rest of the state.

Anyone who would like to help out the boys there should contact Harris for specific needs, at 476-9550. The address is Boys Republic, 28000 W. Nine Mile Rd., Farmington Hills, Mich., 48024.

Capuchin Community Center-Jefferson House — The Capuchin Community Center provides a variety of services to the poor and disadvantaged. Jefferson House is a therapeutic community for men in transition, including recovering alcoholics, drug abusers and ex-offenders.

"We need men's warm clothing," said Sue Lane, a worker at the house. That includes coats, gloves, sweaters and hats. The residents would also appreciate small personal gifts such as toiletries, after shave and bill folds.

To make a donation, contact Lane at 331-8900. The address is Jefferson House, 8311 E. Jefferson, Detroit, Mich. 48214.

Children's Center of Wayne County — Provides day, residential and outpatient health treatment services to children and their families.

Osei Akoto, director of the office of resources and development for the center, explained that the agency could use many things.

"We need sets of baby clothes, infant and toddler's toys, coloring books, crayons, blocks," he said. "Also, Cabbage Patch dolls and Barbie dolls, educational games, Transformers, fuzzy toys, Playdough. Also sweatshirts for young boys, age 6-13."

On a slightly larger scale, the center needs a couple of black and white televisions, as well as bicycles and sports equipment.

To make a contribution, contact Akoto at 831-5535. The address is Children's Center of Wayne County, 101 E. Alexandrine, Detroit, Mich., 48201.

Children's Home of Detroit — Provides residential treatment services for emotionally disturbed children.

"We're all set for gifts (for the children)," said Executive Director H.E. Tammelaid. "But for our cottages, we could use two television sets. You know how important that is to the boys."

Tammelaid said the recently defunct sets were 19-inch color televisions. He also said the girls' cottages could use record players.

To make a donation, contact Tammelaid at 886-0800. The address is Children's Home of Detroit, 900 Cook Rd., Grosse Pointe Woods, Mich., 48236.

Children's Hospital of Michigan — Provides testing, evaluation and program development for children suspected of having developmental disabilities, as well as a full range of pediatric care.

Paul Attar, executive director of development, asks contributors not to send toys. While the hospital is appreciative of contributions, the flood of toys that tends to come in around Christmas can tend to be a problem.

"We don't have any place to store them," Attar said. "We don't need gifts, we need money to buy gifts." He explained that the staff can match the gift to the child. Furthermore, the hospital wants to be able to give the children gifts throughout the year.

Cash contributions to the Toy Fund are appreciated, Attar said.

To make a contribution, send a check to the Children's Hospital of Michigan Toy Fund, 3901 Beaubien, Detroit, Mich., 48201.

Christ Child Society — Provides assistance to needy, neglected and abused children. Christ Child House is a residential treatment program for 16 beds and four emergency beds for abused or neglected children who have been removed from their homes.

"We have a million needs," said Frances Geiger, director of Christ Child House. "We have 20 kids, aged 6-10. I guess what they need most is winter boots."

The group also needs warm clothing for the children, including hats and mittens, leggings and snow pants. Other needs include pajamas, sweaters and blue jeans.

"We have to look at the practical aspects," Geiger said.

The children in Christ Child House are placed there temporarily, so the group has a constant need for new articles of clothing.

"What they need most is parents who will care for them," Geiger said. "But we can only substitute some TLC."

To make a contribution, contact Geiger at 584-6077. The address is Christ Child Society, 15751 Joy Rd., Detroit, Mich., 48228.

Christian Guidance Center — A residential program designed to re-integrate individuals with substance abuse problems into the community. Program is aimed at ex-offenders, but not limited to this group. The center also operates a summer camp for inner-city children at Howell, Mich.

Steve Stump, director of the center, said the group needs maintenance tools for its buildings.

"We could use almost everything in the way of maintenance tools," he said. "Shovels, brooms, power tools. We also need dinnerware, drapes and shades for the windows.

Other appreciated items include bed linens, personal items and paint for the walls.

The center's Wildwood Ranch and Farm would like help building a fireplace in the chapel and a copying machine is needed.

To make a contribution, contact Stump at 832-1470. The address is Christian Guidance Center, 3664 Trumbull, Detroit, Mich., 48208.

Clinton Valley Center — Provides adult inpatient psychiatric services including psychiatric evaluation and treatment.

Frank Formenti of Mt. Clemens coordinates donations to the Clinton Valley Center. Formenti is a volunteer who devotes most of his time to making life easier and better for the patients at the hospital.

Formenti said that one of the most needed items is twin, fitted bedsheets. But personal Christmas presents, nightgowns and pajamas are appreciated.

"We can also use sweaters and winter things," Formenti said. He includes stocking caps, gloves and sweaters.

"A lot of these people are forgotten," Formenti said. "We could also use money. If everyone who reads your article gave $1, what a wonderful Christmas it could be."

To make a contribution, contact Formenti at 286-0684. The address of the hospital is Clinton Valley Center, 140 Elizabeth Lake Rd., Pontiac, Mich., 48053.

Detroit Rescue Mission — Offers a wide range of services to transient men.

"We have a never-ending need for men's underwear and t-shirts," said David L. Sherrard, director. He emphasized that small and medium sizes were needed most often, though large are appreciated as well.

Toiletries are needed because all the mission's clients are provided with soap and toiletries during their stay. The mission's clients are temporary residents.

To make a contribution, contact Sherrard at 832-1333. The address is Detroit Rescue Mission, 3535 Third St., Detroit, Mich., 48201.

Federation of Girls' Homes — Operates three residential programs which provide emergency or longer-term group care for troubled adolescent girls.

Forty-eight girls are currently in homes operated by the group.

"We need gowns and robes, sweaters and raingear," said David Ruetenik, director. He said the jeans are also appreciated.

The girls are age 12-17.

To make a contribution, contact Ruetenik at 571-4707. The address is Federation of Girls' Homes, 548 E. Grand Blvd., Detroit, Mich., 48207.

Foundation for Exceptional Children — Prepares mentally or physically handicapped children to enter special education programs in public schools.

"What we need is cash," said Dorothy Martens, director. The contributions would be used to purchase craft supplies and special equipment for handicapped children.

To make a contribution, contact Martens at 885-8660. The address is 16 Lakeshore Rd., Grosse Pointe, Mich., 48236.

Goodwill Industries of Greater Detroit — Provides training and assistance to physically, mentally and socially disabled people.

Goodwill is hoping for contributions to its Sustaining Member Campaign. A $25 or more contribution will help remodel the Goodwill buildings. Particularly, the group hopes to build a better foyer on its building, so the handicapped clients don't have to outside in cold weather to enter the building.

"We want to bring them in where it's warm," said W.D. Wisecarver, president. The group is also planning a facility for training the clients to work in fast-food restaurants.

Goodwill also operates a large donated goods program for its resale shop.

To make a contribution, send a check to Goodwill Industries, 3132 Trumbull, Detroit, Mich., 48216.

Heartline — A short-term residential program for women with emotional and/or behavioral problems.

Loretta Deponio, administrator of the program, said that personal gifts are most needed.

"We need bedroom slippers, scarfs, rainhats, clutch purses, cologne, hand lotion, hand mirrors and umbrellas," she said.

The 1986 CROP Walk of Hunger will be held on April 13 in the Grosse Pointes. The Rev. Robert Boley, president of the Grosse Pointe-Harper Woods Ministerial Association and pastor of the Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church, announced that the first organized meeting for the walk will be held on Jan. 7, 1986, at the First English Lutheran Church in Grosse Pointe Woods. All churches and organizations are asked to send two representatives to the meeting.

More than $6,000 was given to the Calvary Senior Center, the People in Faith United Soup Kitchen and CrossRoads East. In addition, $2,066 from the previous year's walk, which had come in late, was given to the PIFU Kitchen, CrossRoads East, the Southeastern Food Coalition and the Detroit Anti-Hunger & Youth Advocacy Program.

Margaret Gillis: cooking up a storm

By Elsa Frohman

Publishing a cookbook can be mean eating and a lot of spinach salad, or so Margaret Gillis found out while serving as co-chairman of the Detroit Institute of Arts "Visual Feast" cookbook.

Gillis, a Grosse Pointe Farms resident, worked with co-chairman Jan Solomon of Huntington Woods, and vice chairman Joy Emery of Grosse Pointe to compile and publish a cookbook of recipes submitted by members of the DIA Founders Society, museum staff and friends. The job took three years, a lot of testing and a lot of tasting.

"I had thought for a long time that a cookbook would be a good idea," Gillis said. "And so did Jane Solomon. Cookbooks are good money makers and it's a good project for volunteers and staff to work together on."

Pointer of Interest

The book was released in August, but it got a boost recently with a press luncheon at the London Chop House.

One hundred and nine people are represented in the recipes in "A Visual Feast."

"Many, many more people were involved," Gillis said. "They sent recipes and we couldn't use them all."

Gillis and Solomon set out to publish a book of unusual recipes.

"We hoped for a lot of ethnic recipes and we did get quite a few. We were looking for something unusual — not a lot of things starting with a can of mushroom soup," Gillis said.

Letters were sent out to all members of the DIA Founders Society and other friends of the museum. Before long, the recipes started to pour in.

But the group wasn't satisfied to include any recipe on the word of its submittor that it was good. Every recipe in the book was thoroughly tested — some several times.

"When we sent out the letter, we were specific about what we wanted," Gillis said. "We asked them to print or type the recipes and be careful about measurements — no pinch of this or that. But we didn't get that. People tend to keep their recipes in very strange ways."

The recipes were divided by catetories and a committee of women took them home to standardize them and test them. Each recipe was evaluated.

"When the remarks came back, they were from awful to good. Some would say it took too long, or the instructions were not specific," Gillis said.

For the next step, all the recipes to be considered for the book were retested. Gillis met with her committee for lunch almost every week and they ate whatever they were testing.

"A lot of them were tested three times," Gillis said.

Part of the problem was to decide which of several similar recipes would be included.

"We got about 10 spinach salads," Gillis said. "We tested them together and ate all of them. We picked out the one that was most unusual."

Testing some of the recipes was a problem because they called for unusual ingredients. For example, the Game Pate on page 15 calls for 12 ounces of game, such as woodcock, pheasant, partridge, quail or wild duck.

"I never seem to have a surplus of pheasant in my freezer," Gillis said, humorously. "But there are people who hunt who do." The cookbook committee sought out people who had unusual ingredients to test the recipes.

"We went out and tapped all kinds of sources for testing," Gillis said. "There was a marvelous duck salad that called for wild duck. I tested it with domestic duck and it was terrific. I know it would be good with wild duck."

Other unusual ingredients asked for in the testing process included Canada goose and muskrat. A Canada goose was located.

"We never did find any muskrat, so we left out the recipe for muskrat stew," Gillis said.

However, far from being a hunter's cookbook, the "Visual Feast" book includes dishes to suit almost any occasion.

"We have party dishes and family dishes, though I've never made that distinction," Gillis said.

Gillis has been a member of the Founders Society since 1935. She is on the board of trustees of the DIA.

"I've always done it and I like it," she said.

She also enjoys cooking.

"I've said that if I'm going to have to cook, I might as well enjoy it," Gillis said. "So I do."

Years ago, she took cooking lessons with Dione Lucas in New York.

"She was around before any of those boys like James Beard," Gillis said. "You could tell her what you wanted to cook and she would tell you how. She came here several times and gave lectures."

Margaret Gillis and her Yorkshire terrier, Bridget.

Gillis has several recipes in "A Visual Feast." Her favorite is Waterzooi Soup, a Belgian dish.

"I clipped it out of a magazine, years ago. But I changed it and made it my own," Gillis said.

The recipe originated with the Belgian chefs sent to the New York World's Fair in 1939. It is a stew of chicken with leeks, carrots and celery.

"Back then, people used to stew all the vegetables," Gillis said. "Now we make them much fresher and crisper."

Waterzooi Soup

1 onion
4 large leeks (white portion only)
3 large carrots
3 tablespoons butter
8 cups chicken stock
Bouquet Garni (or parsley, thyme and bayleaf tied together)
4 pounds meaty chicken pieces
Juice of ½ lemon
¾ cup heavy cream
1 large stalk celery
3 egg yolks, beaten
Wondra flour (optional)
Salt and pepper to taste
6 small potatoes, boiled and peeled
Parsley, chopped

Coarsely chop one onion, one leek and one carrot. Place the vegetables in a large kettle with the butter, cover, and saute for five minutes. Add the chicken stock and the Bouquet Garni, cover and simmer for 30 minutes. Add the chicken pieces and simmer for one hour more. Remove the chicken and let cool. Strain the stock into another pot and boil until it is reduced by one-third.

Add the lemon juice to the cream and let sit until room temperature. Cut the remaining leeks, carrots, and celery into julienne strips, cook in boiling water until barely tender, and drain. Remove the cooked chicken form the bones, discard the skin and bones, and cut the meat into bite-sized pieces.

Add the beaten egg yolks and the cream mixture to the soup and whisk until the soup has thickened; add salt and pepper to taste. Add the chicken and vegetables to the soup and heat through. Serve in large, deep bowls with a boiled potato in each and garnished with a generous topping of chopped parsley.

For a thicker soup, shake Wondra Flour over the top and whisk until well blended.

Serves six.

Many Grosse Pointers are represented with recipes in the book. Among them are Henry Ford II, Ann Spivak, Jean Hudson, Nicole Stroh, Andy and Gayle Camden, Marguerite Stroh and Virginia McMillan.

"A Visual Feast" is available through the DIA gift shop and through local book stores and department stores.

School of Government plans musical holiday luncheon

The School of Government invites members, guests, and friends to join in a holiday event, featuring two outstanding artists from Grosse Pointe. Johanna Gilbert, contralto, and Carol Kavan, pianist, will perform at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club on Wednesday, Dec. 18. A social hour at noon will be followed by a luncheon served at 12:30 p.m. The musical program will follow the meal.

Gilbert has performed as soloist for the Grosse Pointe Symphony, and the Grosse Ile Musicale several times. She has performed at South Macomb County Community College under the auspices of the Michigan Council for the Arts. She was also the soloist for the John Lake Scholarship Benefit at the War Memorial and has performed for the Detroit Review Club, the Colony Club, the Grosse Pointe Business Women's Club and was soloist for many years at the Sixth Church of Christ Scientist.

Kavan is a graduate of Oberlin Conservatory of Music and has performed in the Karamu Theatre, Cain Park and the Cleveland Playhouse. She has also been involved with and has participated in theater, ballet, voice and other programs with the Detroit Board of Education and Wayne State University.

Mrs. Cassius McIntyre, president of the School of Government, will introduce Linda Zimmerman, program director, who is chairman of the day.

Reservations for the party may be made by calling 399-1698, 822-1474, 822-6238, 824-8806, or 824-7467, by Saturday, Dec. 14.

Exchange Club focuses on 'One Nation Under God'

The significance of the sanctity of the words "One Nation Under God" will be celebrated throughout the holiday season by the Exchange Club of Grosse Pointe-St. Clair Shores.

Club President Kevin Granger said his members have planned a series of events to coincide with the observance of "One Nation Under God" throughout this holiday season. The observance is the focal point of a national program launched by the Exchange Clubs of America to raise public awareness of the significance and spiritual importance of the inclusion of the words, "One Nation Under God," in the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag by an act of Congress in 1954.

The Exchange Club urges individuals to attend church his holiday season as a reminder of the God who we serve individually and as a nation.

Michigan Chiropractic Council has gathering

Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Lupo once again hosted the Michigan Chiropractic Council, District #1's annual Christmas party on Dec. 5 at the Edsel and Eleanor Ford House.

Music was performed by "The Connection," playing songs for the 40s, 50s, 60s and current popular tunes. The Gourmet House provided hot and cold hors d'oeuvres and a buffet followed by dessert and after dinner cordials.

Sports Week

By Peggy O'Connor

You know it's winter sports season . . .

. . . when people walk around telling you about the great "hoop" they saw last night. That's "hoop" as in "The Pistons aren't playing great hoop lately." Or "They're really into hoop over at South High."

(Winter, for some strange reason, makes people talk funny.)

. . . when the annual souvenir hockey programs hit the stands at South and North high schools. I've already got my South program and it's a nice one, as usual. Great team photos, a slick format and best of all, that neat personals section in the back of the book. I get a lot of these souvenir programs in the mail and let me tell you, South's ranks up there with the best of them and I think it's because of those personals.

Tell me where else you could find such touching team tributes as "Bowl-cut Bourke and Slick Bill, if they don't score, who will? J.C." Not to mention the messages sent to South's "Poopsie, Riz, Guru, Ev-Dog, Bubba, Legacy, Smiley, Flounder, Rambo, Butterhead and Gerbil." I love it.

. . . when the hockey dads get themselves wound up into full gear. Sometimes they can go a bit far, like the dad who shouted derisively at an opposing team's goaltender when that goalie allowed an easy goal in one recent game. But for the most part, when they remember that these kids are, after all, only 16 and 17 years old, hockey dads are nice folks to be around.

. . . when there's something going on every night of the week, practically. Hockey on Wednesdays and Saturdays, basketball and volleyball on Tuesdays and Fridays.

What I want to know is, what's wrong with Thursdays?

. . . when high school girls start playing what most of us wait until summer for — volleyball — and playing it for keeps. This area had four pretty good spiker squads last season, in the teams from North, South, Star of the Sea and Bishop Gallagher, and it looks like a repeat this year.

. . .when I answer "I turned the silly thing off after the Lions fumbled on their own 2" to people who ask me if I saw the most recent Detroit Lions' game on television.

. . . when I put on six layers of clothing to go INSIDE to cover a game.

. . .when it takes me four hours every night to get my teeth to stop chattering because the six layers weren't enough.

. . .when I get the urge to start publishing a running total of the column inches this paper devotes each week to the athletic endeavors of North, South, Star of the Sea and ULS. Just to satisfy the natives, who for some odd reason, get a little restless this time of year.

. . . when wrestlers (for my money among the hardest-working high school athletes) swing into action. Few people realize that wrestlers compete in approximately 50 meets per season, spend countless hours improving their strength and flexibility . . . and don't get a heck of a lot of recognition for it.

. . . when 30 of my friends and relatives ask me if I'd like a subscription to Sports Illustrated for Christmas.

. . . when I start thinking about looking for more imaginative friends and relatives.

. . . when I also start thinking about how little recognition the assistant coaches for the various high school teams get. Folks like Thatcher Storm, Tony Gallaher, Bruce Bentley, Lyle Heavner, Pete Costello, Dave Seagram, Bill Fleming and Tony Niarhos, to name a few.

. . . when it's South High goaltender Bill Tecos' turn to shine.

. . . when the Lakeshore Soccer Dome (where familiar faces like John Case, Claire Busse and Kim Wood can be seen practicing or playing their favorite sport) gets really busy.

. . . when folks who like to see me get ticked off tell me they didn't submit youth hockey results to the paper because their team is doing so poorly. It's not whether you win or lose, remember folks?

. . . when News' photographer Tom "Evel Knievel's got nothin' on me" Greenwood puts his life, reputation and pride on the line shooting winter sports for me. Two years ago, Greenwood got hit by a hockey puck. Last year he nearly got mauled by a flying basketball player. This year, only two weeks into the season, he got whacked by a well-aimed soccer ball while covering indoor soccer.

All I can say is that it's a good thing that they don't complete in the biathlon at North and South. The picture of Greenwood clicking away in the midst of all that skiing and shooting is almost too frightening for words.

World 12-meter championship

Park man sets sail for down under

'One of my dreams is to be involved in a 12-meter campaign.'

By Peggy O'Connor

Mark Szymanski has gone a long way since he began sailing the waters around Grosse Pointe at age 13. Halfway around the world, to be exact.

That's where the 26-year-old Park resident will be sometime this month when he travels to Perth, Australia, to begin practice for the 12-meter World Cup sailing championships in February as a crewmember aboard the yacht Courageous IV.

The muscular Szymanski was chosen last month for one of the "strength" positions on Courageous, which is owned and campaigned by Leonard Greene, and sailed out of the prestigious Yale Corinthian Yacht Club in New York. He will join his friend and fellow sailor, Larry Klein, 33, of St. Clair Shores, on the crew.

"I'm very honored to be chosen for the crew," Szymanski said. "One of my dreams is to be involved in a 12-meter campaign."

Twelve-meter boats differ from IOR (International Offshore Racing) and PHRF (Performance Rated Handicap) boats in that they sail under simpler rules, are much longer and heavier (around 60,000 pounds) and stand up straighter to heavier air than IOR or PHRF boats. One major difference is that they are built for racing — more like shells than yachts — not for distance sailing.

Szymanski, a bilingual aide in the Chippewa School system, and Klein, a sailmaker, have sailed together several times, most recently in the MORC international and J-24 championships this summer. Neither has sailed on a 12-meter craft.

"Larry was really the one most instrumental in getting me a spot on Courageous. He recommended me to the racing syndicate and got me in. I've got him to thank," Szymanski said.

Klein, through Courageous IV's skipper Peter Isler, was asked to compile a list of sailors who might be suited for the crew spots on the boat in its first step toward a challenge of the America's Cup in 1987 — the February world championships.

"I recommended Mark because is a good sailor and a really strong guy. He is tailor-made for a strength position," said Klein, himself a sturdy 6-5, 200 pounds. At that time, Greene's syndicate was sailing two boats, Courageous IV and Defender, with an eye toward the America's Cup challenge. There were plenty of sailors to fill positions on both boats, including two ex-pro football players at Szymanski's winch-grinder spot.

"But they decided not to commit themselves and Mark is a first-teamer now," Klein said.

The upcoming world championships are the crew's short term goal. Most of the above decks "talent," like Szymanski and Klein, is new to the boat. Isler will be assisted by Olympic gold medalist Jonathan McKee as tactician and syndicate vice-chairman Dave Vietor as navigator.

"Sure, we're all relatively new," Szymanski said. "But once we get down there and get the boat put together and a month of practice in, we should be okay. Good sailors can work together well with limited practice."

Right now, Szymanski is looking at a 14-month commitment, up to and including the America's Cup. There will certainly be changes to the crew and to the boat itself, but if Szymanski sticks with Courageous through the 1987 America's Cup challenge, he will be making several trips back and forth from Grosse Pointe to Australia.

Courageous is the only United States entry in the expected 14-boat fleet for the world cup championship. The seven-nation field is expected to offer the finest competition available before the America's Cup trials in October. And the heavy air, often around 20 knots, will be good practice for those trials.

"I think we have just as good a chance as anybody," Szymanski said. "We are dedicated and, I think, intelligent sailors who will work well together."

Both Szymanski and Klein admitted they are impressed by the challenge being mounted by the Green syndicate. "It's a well-designed boat and it seems that they (the syndicate) are making every effort to do well in the world championships," Szymanski said.

The Columbus-born Klein has traveled extensively and said he was a bit "blase" about the upcoming trip to Australia. That's not so for Szymanski, the Austin Prep graduate who got into his favorite sport only 13 years ago by sailing with a friend from the Grosse Pointe Sail Club.

"My parents and the rest of the family are genuinely enthusiastic about what I'm doing. And I'm pretty happy about the whole thing myself," he said. "I love sailing . . . I think it's a great sport and I'm really interested in promoting it in this area.

"And . . . I can't think of a better way to do it than this."

North basketball squad drops close one, 55-52, to open year

By Bill Hoover
North High

North High's varsity basketball team opened the season last week with a 55-52 loss to Sterling Heights in a hard-fought, fast-paced contest at home.

The biggest crowd in recent memory watched as Sterling Heights took an early lead and was up 12-6 at the 2:26 mark of the first period. With 1:25 to go, Dave "Little World" Justice closed the gap to two points but after one quarter, Sterling Heights led, 15-10.

Dave Bryer hit two straight and Bill Miller added a bucket to pull North to within one, 19-18, in the second quarter, but Sterling Heights ended up taking a 25-22 lead at halftime.

Rob Olds dropped two straight baskets — both with assists by Justice — to put North into an early third quarter lead, 28-27. North led, 37-35 going into the final quarter.

Sterling Heights went on a scoring spree in the fourth; leading 42-37 with less than five minutes to go. Miller's layup put North again within three, but that was as close as the Norsemen could get.

Miller led the squad in scoring with 15 points. Bryer had 13 and Olds, 10. Jon Palazzo had 10 rebounds to top North in that category, followed by Olds with 9 and Bryer with 8.

"The team played well and with good intensity, but failed to shoot well outside," said coach George Olman. North was hurt by the loss of senior Rob Skuras and Eric Walters, both on the injured reserve list.

The Norsemen's next game is at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 13, at Dearborn.

Tough start for wrestlers

North's young, predominantly-sophomore varsity wrestling team lost 51-19 to L'Anse Creuse North and 38-21 to Romeo in a dual meet Tuesday, Dec. 3.

Norsemen winners against L'Anse Creuse North were Phil Shefferly, Bill Lewis, Chris Hayes and "Mean" Dean Demetropoulos. Kevin Mack, Dave Van Dale, Shefferly and Lewis were victorious against Romeo and Shefferly and Lewis were double-dual meet champs in their weight classes.

Shefferly pinned Tom Passalacaqua of the Lancers in 3:00 and Mack pinned Rich Rifield of Romeo in 3:06.

North's JV squad also suffered a double defeat in the dual meet, losing to LCN, 8-0, and to Romeo, 24-12. (By Jamie Wheatley)

North icers stay unbeaten

North High's awesome scoring punch was evident last week, as the varsity hockey team added two lopsided victories to its record to improve to 4-0 this season. North blanked Southfield, 8-0, early in the week and closed out the action on Saturday night with an 11-3 shellacking of St. Clair Shores Lakeview.

Against Southfield, goalie Matt Dennis registered his first shutout of the year. Senior winger Kevin Tisdale led the North scoring attack with two goals and two assists. Tisdale scored 15 seconds into the game and again less than one minute later to get the rout started. Adding single goals were John Russell, Rob Marshall, Link Bessert, Peter Guzzardo, Bob Poulos and freshman sensation Doug Olds.

The Norsemen hosted Lakeview on Dec. 7, but the visitors weren't too pleased with the reception as North won its second Metro League game, 11-3. North was in command all the way, scoring three times in the first period, five times in the second and three more in the final period.

Centers Marshall and Russell paced the offense with five goals; Marshall had a hat trick and Russell, two goals and two assists. Defensive leader Dave Johnston had an excellent game, leading the blue line crew and figuring in the scoring with a goal and two assists. Single goals came from Tom Ugval, Tisdale, junior Dan Spitz, sophomore Bessert and Olds. Defensive standouts Bob Alcott and John Henchel did not play because of injuries.

North's impressive start includes a 45-8 goal edge in four games. But the heart of the tough Michigan Metro League schedule is still in front of the Norsemen, including two difficult contests this week against Gabriel Richard (after press time) and at Ann Arbor Huron on Dec. 14.

"We haven't been pressed yet," said North coach Mike Manzella. "So it's hard to say what this team can do when the heat is on. As long as we continue our intensive play and aggressive skating, I think we'll be all right."

By Jennifer McSorley
South High

South High's varsity hockey team is 2-1 in the Michigan Metro Hockey League (2-2 overall) after losing to Catholic Central and beating Gabriel Richard last week.

In the Dec. 4 game against Redford Catholic Central, the Devils led for half the game before CC turned on the offense and won the game, 6-2. Senior winger Rob Wood scored both South goals, one unassisted and one assisted by junior Andrew Roy.

One of CC's six goals came on a penalty shot against senior goaltender Bill Tecos.

The Blue Devils bounced back on Dec. 7, edging the Gabriel Richard Pioneers, 4-3. Roy opened the scoring when he converted a Rob Wood pass. After Richard tied the game at 1-1, Mike Kramer and Wood added second period goals. John Nicholson and Rodney Goin added the assists.

Sophomore Tim Jerome closed out the South scoring in the third period, assisted by junior Jeff Lefebvre. Tecos held the Pioneers to two goals, and then shut the door on the Ann Arbor squad to give the Devils the victory.

Juniors top seniors

South's juniors beat the seniors, 14-7, on a muddy field Nov. 16 in the annual Powderpuff Football Classic.

The seniors, plagued by low turnout for the game, scored when a Kellie Egan pass went to Heidi Albrecht, who ran it back for a touchdown.

Jenny Smith led the junior scoring, catching touchdown passes from Mary Wachter and Amy Hawkins. On defense, Anne Nicholson intercepted a key senior pass.

Getting their kicks

Unbeaten under-19 team draws college notice

By Peggy O'Connor

Deepak Shivraman knows soccer talent when he sees it. And he hates to see it wasted.

That's why the Bombay, India-native and longtime area soccer coach decided to do something about it. So he went out, recruited all the soccer talent he could find and started his own girls' 19 and under soccer team.

"I literally went out and stole the best players from all over the metropolitan area. It started when I got very angry watching these very highly-skilled players playing on mediocre teams. Here they were, possessed of excellent talent and not getting the recognition they deserved. I wanted to do something about that."

One team he watched, from Windsor, Ont., had several such athletes. Shivraman was impressed by the girls and by their coach, Les Krautner. He got together with Krautner and a team was born.

Originally, the squad was formed to compete in a tournament in Kansas City, Mo., the first week in November. They swept that tournament and Krautner and Shivraman decided to keep the girls together to play the winter indoor schedule. So far, that looks like a wise decision, since the girls won their first six contests, outscoring opponents, 63-4.

"The girls play well together as a team. And better yet, they get along with each other and that's important," Krautner said.

"What makes this team unique is it's make-up -- we've got four girls from Windsor, four from Sterling Heights and three from Grosse Pointe. They are literally the best their area has to offer," Shivraman added. "I could probably find better players, but I also wanted to find girls who would complement each other."

The girls practice at the Lakeshore Soccer Dome and compete against high school teams from Birmingham and Troy. Krautner has also scheduled tournament games in Buffalo Jan. 27 and in Welland, Ont., for later this winter.

The Grosse Pointers on the team are South High's Claire Busse and Kim Wood and Alexa Parmentier, of North High, (all All-State soccer players). Busse and Wood say they know just why their winter indoor team has been a success.

"We've got some really good talent put together on this team," Busse said. "And we love to play," Wood added.

Assembling an All-Star soccer team wasn't the only reason Shivraman and Krautner have devoted so much time and expense (they and the team members split the costs) to this under-19 squad.

"The whole intent and purpose was to get these girls playing with other players who are at their level. And once we did that, to showcase them in the hopes of getting them college scholarships. That's really our aim," Shivraman said.

So far, it's worked. Shivraman said he's heard from a few colleges regarding his players, including Kalamazoo, Villanova and the University of North Carolina. "These girls are so underestimated as far as college scholarships go. We're inviting a lot of college people to come watch us play. I would hope to use this as a link from the girls to the colleges," he added.

And what's Shivraman's reward, besides making sure that good soccer talent isn't wasted?

"The return is that if we get even one college scholarship out of this, we are successful. That would be great for the girls and great for us," Shivraman said.

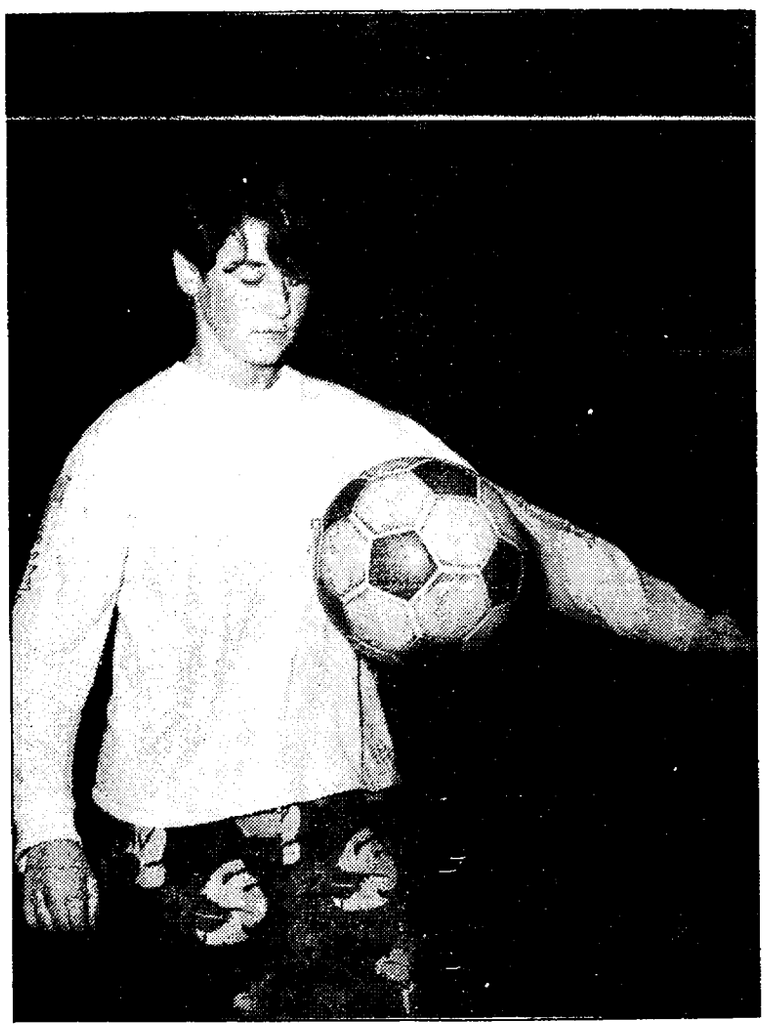

His squad is halfway through its 12-game schedule and is still considering team names. "We've narrowed it down to the 'Stickers' or 'Toxic Reflex,' Shivraman said with a laugh.

They might just consider calling themselves "Successful."

And you thought they were young last year

By Peggy O'Connor

As competitive as they are with each other, North and South find themselves in pretty much the same position this wrestling season: young and inexperienced. South has the edge in sheer numbers, but beyond that, the Norsemen and Blue Devil matmen will each find it tough going this season.

AT SOUTH, second year coach Larry Carr lost four four-year starters to graduation. For 1985-86, he's got two wrestlers with two years experience, seven with one year under their belts and the rest are new to the sport.

"It's an excellent group. We have more numbers and more of the kids who are sticking with it, despite the difficult sport. They are very willing, but you can't expect too much from first-year wrestlers," Carr said.

He points to Mount Clemens and East Detroit as South's main Eastern Michigan league competition, with Warren Lincoln looming large on the non-league horizon. "But they all look tough," Carr said with a laugh.

At 98 pounds, Carr has varsity wrestlers Gordon Muir, Jeff Adik and Tom Caulfield joining Matt Snyder. One of that group will move up to the 105-pound class when necessary, Carr said.

Dave Morenelli is the varsity starter at 112 pounds, joined by Josh Flowers, Phil Orton and Derek Farr. Tony Smihal is the varsity wrestler at 119 pounds; Paul Andrepont, Noel Christ and Matt Dillenbeck also wrestle at that weight. At 126 pounds are Mike Shrake, Bill Kalmar and Clint Snider, with varsity matman Andy Vyletel, Pete Zinn and Chris Dillenback at 132 pounds.

Peter Hart and Erik Farr check in at 138-pound class, with Tait Erickson returning to the varsity at the 145-pound class. Semo Post and Taras Gracey also wrestle at 145 pounds.

Jeff Johnston will man the 155-pound position, with Andy Kozak and Jamie Pangborn at 167 pounds, Barry Brookes at 185, Ty Sfat at 198 and Mark Thomas and Peter Sfat in the heavyweight division.

"I'd like for us to improve every time we wrestle and to give it our all. And, although I don't expect to win the league, I'd like us to finish two notches higher than we did last year," Carr said. South was sixth in the eight-team EML in 1984-85.

NORTH'S Larry Aceto isn't kidding when he said his wrestling team is young. He has no seniors, one junior in his second year of wrestling and the balance of the squad, untried underclassmen.

To make matters worse, Brian Reid, capable of top wrestling for the Norsemen, is out for the year with a broken arm.

The numbers are down for North wrestling this year, but Aceto looks at the bright side. "Our kids get a lot of opportunity to wrestle. And they're good kids. I think any kid who can stick it (training for wrestling) out is a great kid," Aceto said.

Aceto, like his South High counterpart, feels that most of the Norsemen's opposition this season will be tough. North doesn't have the depth to achieve great success as a dual meet squad, but the effort in both dual meet and tournament competition will be there, Aceto added.

Already, North has had some success in tournament action, with four wrestlers finishing in the medals in the recent Lutheran East event.

One of those, Kevin Mack, was fourth in the 112-pound division. He was a freshman letterwinner last season and this year, one of the leaders at that weight. Second-year matman Bill Lewis was also fourth at Lutheran East; he wrestles in the 132-138-pound class.

At 126 pounds is junior Phil Shefferly, another fourth place finisher at Lutheran East. Dave Van Dale will wrestle at the 167-185-pound level with freshman letterwinner Dave Glancy competing at 138 pounds when he returns from an injury after Christmas vacation.

Other bright spots for North, Aceto hopes, will be sophomore Chris Hayes (138), also recuperating from injury; second-year wrestler Dean Demetropoulos (155); Andy Meing, a second-year man (119); and another second-year grappler, Dan Korzeniewski (155-167), who won the JV championship at the recent Utica Ford tournament.

New to the squad are John Shefferly (112-119), a freshman who beat three opponents enroute to a JV title at Utica Ford; and freshman Chuck Shultz, who won a similar title at the 145-pound class.

Aceto said he thinks Clintondale could be the Bi-County League champion and rule in the Macomb area. He said he looks for Centerline, Mount Clemens and Lutheran East to be tough, as well.

Bill Fleming is assisting Aceto this season.

Despite the less-than-rosy outlook, Aceto said he is looking forward to this season because of the attitude on the team.

"They are the greatest kids. I love and respect kids who will go out for wrestling and stick to it no matter how rough it gets. We'll pay our dues, but the kids will see the success that comes from their work.

"More importantly, they'll know what it's like to rely on one's self . . .," Aceto said. "And if you draw a correlation from the sport to everyday life, you see how precious that experience is."

Holiday skating

The St. Clair Shores Civic Arena, 20000 Stephens, will offer public skating Dec. 21 through Jan. 5 (with the exception of Dec. 24, 25, 31 and Jan. 1 when the arena is closed) from 2 to 3:45 p.m. each day.

Admission to each session is $2. Further information may be obtained by calling the Civic Arena at 779-4300.

Extremely cold golf balls play like little round rocks, according to the pro golfers. Leather grips on clubs get hard, too, in freezing weather. So serious golfers never leave their golf bags out in the car trunks overnight.

Consistent offense deserts 0-2 basketball squad

By John Travis
ULS

The University Liggett varsity basketball team lost its first two games, falling behind early in each and being unable to complete stirring comebacks in the second half.

On Friday, Dec. 6, before a large home crowd, ULS played Harper Woods in each team's opening game. While playing excellent defense, the Knights' offense sputtered against Harper Woods' zone. The low half-time score (Harper Woods led 19-10) was a result of an inability to get the ball inside.

ULS fought back early in the second half with a strong press. In two minutes, the Knights had drawn to within two. ULS couldn't tie it up, and the momentum faded with the third quarter score, 32-24.

Foul trouble then took its toll, as forwards Keith Calcagno, John Travis and Ian Jones all fouled out. Harper Woods expanded its lead to 15 to finish with a 57-41 victory.

On Saturday, Dec. 7, ULS faced league opponent Bethesda. The Knights jumped out to a seven-point lead, but collapsed as Bethesda rallied to a 68-62 victory. ULS made up an 18-point deficit in the third and fourth quarter, most without starting point guard Marc Hunt who had fouled out. Excellent rebounding and defense keyed the spurt as well as the inside play of Calcagno, who finished with 20 points. Darby added 21.

'Spies like us' — good, but not great

By Tom Greenwood

"Saturday Night Live" at its best it's not, but "Spies Like Us" tries mightily in reuniting Chevy Chase and Dan Aykroyd in this hit-and-miss comedy about Dropping The Big One.

In this Warner Bros. release, Chevy plays Emmet Fitz-Hume, a third-generation diplomat possessing a lecherous, yet likeable, smarmy charm. As a lower-level bureaucrat stuck aimlessly in the State Department, he's capable of anything to advance his career. Anything but honest work, that is.

His future partner in crime is Austin Millbarge, played by Aykroyd, an electronics genius who dabbles in languages while toiling away in the bowels of some nameless building, unhappily embellishing the career of his jealous boss who steals all the credit.

The two meet at an examination, both intent on advancing their careers, Millbarge through his genius, Fitz-Hume by means of some outrageous, hilarious cheating. This is Chase at his smirky best.

Inexplicably, the two are handpicked for espionage work and are shipped off to spy camp, where the government does its best to eliminate them. Since the Lord takes care of drunks and fools, the pair graduate and are sent off on a dubious mission as decoys to distract the Russians from a genuine spy team intent on inspecting a Soviet missile.

The boys parachute into Pakistan in a crate marked Ace Tomato Co., where they're promptly captured by Afghan freedom fighters.

Up to this point, the movie is successful, but falls apart with the cameo appearance of Bob Hope, who's searching for a lost golf ball. The sight of Hope, looking like the Ancient Mariner in golfing togs, is bewildering and depressing.

The movie wanders even more than Chase and Aykroyd, who finally blunder their way into Russia, where they meet up with the real spy team.

The tempo accelerates again as Chase and Aykroyd get off some very funny comments on nuclear explosions and the sight of Russian soldiers dancing in the snow, gathered around a ghetto blaster blaring "Soulfinger" by the Bar-Kays.

A nice supporting role is provided by Steve Forrest as General Sline, a humorless, relentless advocate of the Star Wars defense, intent on saving the American way of life, even if he has to destroy the world to do it.

There are certain questions to ask about movies like "Spies Like Us."

Is it believable? No way.

Is it funny? For the most part.

Are Chase and Aykroyd another Laurel and Hardy? No, but they aren't Burke and Hare either.

Is this flick worth the $4 admission? Yeah, sure.

'Santa Claus: The Movie' is a magical fairy tale

By Marian Trainor

In "Santa Claus: The Movie," producers Alexander and Ilya Salkind combine fact and fancy in a dazzling display of cinematic effects. It is not an empty display of color and lights designed to captivate viewers with a montage of brilliance but rather a tasteful background for the story of how Santa Claus came to be.

It is set in a wonderland of toys and Christmas-card scenery. Except for the magic which is part of the Santa Claus legend, every effort was made to retain a classical fairy-tale aura. Like "The Nutcracker Suite" it is a world of dreams. There is no electricity in the movie — only candlelight and no metal, only wood, in the toy factory.

It is a very expensive production at $50 million, but then, Santa is worth it. This jolly fellow has been the soul of generosity forever. He deserves the best.

The entire story features Santa as Santa. Absent is the portrayal of a real person such as was seen in "A Miracle on 34th Street," who really is not viewed as Santa but rather as the spirit of Christmas.

This Santa was invented by David Newman, the author. He researched the legends of Santa and found that most of them were religious. Anxious to have Santa Claus belong to everyone, he turned to the poem "The Night Before Christmas" for the spirit of the story. However it fretted him that so little was known about how Santa came to be.

To fill in the gap, Newman went back in time to the Middle Ages when a kindly, childless couple brought gifts to their nieces and nephews on Christmas Eve.

On one particular night, there is a raging blizzard. As the couple make their way to deliver the presents, they become lost and supposedly they and their reindeer freeze to death.

Out of the darkness, there rises in the sky a blinding light. Marching toward them come an army of elves, led by Patch (Dudley Moore) to rescue them and transport them to the North Pole. There, they are taken on a tour of toyland that outdoes even the fondest dreams of childhood. They are offered immortality if they stay and promise to be Santa Claus to the whole world every Christmas Eve.

Santa (David Huddleson) and Mrs. Claus (Judy Cornwell) are delighted. Playing a prominent role in the film are eight reindeer. Each has a personality all its own and each relates to Santa and Patch on an almost human basis. Giving the reindeer an identity adds to the charm of the film. This is enhanced as they fly through the sky leaving a trial of stardust behind them.

Once the Santa Claus beginnings have been established, the story flies through the centuries to the present time when Santa is confronted with modern day commercialism. He also becomes involved with two orphans — one a rich little girl Cornelia (Carrie Kel Helm) and the other a poor street urchin, Towser (Jeffrey Kramer).

We first meet Towser as he huddles in the cold looking in the window of Cornelia's mansion. She spots him and puts out a plate of food for him. They become friends.

Santa also sees Towser and stops his reindeer to talk to him. He invites the boy to go on his Christmas rounds with him. The scenes that follow are ones that every child would like to experience — flying through the air with Santa.

Back in toyland all is not well. Patch in an effort to impress Santa has set up an assembly toy manufacturing apparatus. Unlike Santa's carefully made products, they break easily.

Patch, thinking he has let Santa down, leaves the North Pole and takes up with a ruthless toy manufacturer B.Z. (John Lithgow) hoping to create a toy that will win back Santa's favor.

Lithgow's performance as a manufacturer who puts profits before children's safety is outstanding. He hams it up with his outrageous gestures and bombastic speeches. He's even funny when he is mean. Segments showing the extreme advertising gimmicks he sponsors are ridiculous but humorous.

The director said, "We tried to create a delicate balance between pathos, humor and visual imagery in a way that would enhance its magic."

He has succeeded.

North, South groups tie in Battle of the Bands

By Chris Dellas

It was billed as the largest and loudest musical ever in Grosse Pointe.

It followed an 11-year tradition of sell-out crowds comprised of a thousand screaming teenage music fans.

It had been known to be, in the words of Steve Allen, the start of something big.

It was of course, the 12th annual Grosse Pointe Battle of the Bands at the War Memorial, Nov. 30.

Twelve young bands auditioned for this year's Battle throughout October. The dozen aspiring groups were trimmed to six competitors by a panel of high school students.

Of the six, only one band was supposed to earn the coveted first prize by winning over the support of the captive audience.

This year though, history was made when first prize had to be split in half and shared by two bands.

A tie, you say? Yes, for the first year ever two bands were admired by the audience so equally that the evening's vote count came out exactly the same.

The two bands, "Places to be . . ." and "Shylook II," both received 173 votes, enough to make a tie official and to make it necessary to divvy up the spoils.

Usually, the winning band gets 40 percent of the ticket sales after the War Memorial's expenses and the second place band receives 21 percent.

To solve the tie dilemma, the War Memorial's student activities director, Jack Dotson, decided the only fair thing to do was to add the first and second place monies and divide the total in half, each winning band getting 31 percent of the door.

"Places to be . . ." members include J.T. Harding, kneeling, Steve Mellos and Mike Caradonna. Missing from the photo is Dave Frassrand.

"We were real surprised by the tie," said Shylook II's drummer Jeff Buhl. "But the concert itself was a lot of fun and a good experience."

"We were better than them," added bassist Brian Rentchler in a gesture of humility.

Shylook II is a band of North students who play a popular collection of commercial New Music covers. Their set consists of songs by mostly British bands like U2, Simple Minds and Modern English.

The band consists of Buhl on drums, Rentschler on bass, Carl Fernstrum on keyboards, Jim Mongomery on vocals, and Bill Smith on guitar.

The enthusiastic troupe, which had the girls in the audience doing Beatle screams, has been together for only a few months and now, with the Battle trophy in their pockets, has a North dance gig and possibly some studio recording in the works.

The other band which wowed the audience enough to receive an equal number of votes was "Places to be . . .", a rival New Music band from South High.

"Places" is a four-piece band made up of Mike Caradonna on guitar and synthesizers, Steve Mellos on drums, Dave Frassiand on bass and vocals, and the outgoing J.T. Harding on lead vocals.

The band has been together since March and has in their repertoire songs by such Top-40 New Music acts as ABC, Ah-Ha, U2 and Simple Minds.

"Places" has to their credit a successful gig at a Jacobson's fashion show and their future holds school dances and, hopefully some studio recording.

Asked how they arrived upon their interesting name, J.T. said, "I was driving through Tennessee in the summer and I saw a billboard that said something like 'The place to be is . . .' and I thought it might be an original name for a group.

"Anyway it caught my attention, so I thought it would catch other people's also."

The winning vote count of 173 doesn't seem enough to decide a victor among 1,000 voting kids, even when doubled.

That's because this year another tradition was broken and, for the first time, the Battle of the Bands didn't sell out.

This year's crowd came close, though, with 800 paying music fans attending.

"It's unfortunate that the Battle didn't sell out," said Dotson. "Research after the fact showed that not a whole lot of publicity got out at South.

"The bands are responsible for their own promotion. From what we understand the only promotion at South was an article in the Tower (South's school paper)."

Dotson acknowledges that getting a school to promote a rock concert is not always the easiest thing in the world to do.

Another reason Dotson believes the concert didn't sell out is that five of the six bands were made up of mostly North members and only one band from South.

The Battle has usually been dominated by South students in the past because of the proximity between the school and the War Memorial. Also, South has more extracurricular affiliations with the War Memorial, such as its ski club.

Dotson was glad to add that this year's crowd was one of the most well behaved, albeit enthusiastic, audiences ever. The crowd this year was a little older than recent years because middle school students were not encouraged to attend.

The practice of high school students buying advance tickets to the Battle and then selling them to middle school students was discouraged this year as well.

"In past years we've had high school students scalp tickets for as much as ten bucks apiece," said Dotson.

The other four bands that helped rock the house were:

"Closure," a rock band which played in Fries Ballroom, with Scott Jogwick (vocals, guitar), Rick MacDonald (bass), Mike Hinz (drums), Steve Denz (guitars, vocals), and Paul Kalil (keyboards); "Alter Ego," with Dan Brier, Matt Cooke, Jack Brahms, Kurt Kumiaco, and Bob Welson; "American Jam," with Adam, Steve and Ted Jankowski and Matt Calcatera, and "Focus," with Tony Lentine (bass), Dom Maceri (lead guitar), Mitch Nies (rhythm guitar), Eric Kropf (keyboards), Greg Preston (lead vocals), and Steve Foulkrod (drums).

Organists to present 'Bach to Bach'

As a final celebration of the Johann Sebastian Bach Tricentennial and in conjunction with its own 75th anniversary, the Detroit Chapter of the American Guild of Organists will sponsor the program, "Bach to Bach," at 8 p.m., Monday, Dec. 16, in the sanctuary of St. Timothy United Methodist Church, Detroit.

The program, open to the public, features the Detroit area performing artists, Roger and Caroline Jamison, who portray Johann Sebastian Bach and his wife, Anna Magdalena. Staged as a time capsule in the life of Bach, circa 1745, the program takes place in Leipzig just after Johann returns from Potsdam where he received recognition from Frederick the Great. A feature of the evening will be the audience participation in the learning of one of Bach's familiar chorales, "Wachet Auf."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Jamison currently teach piano in the metropolitan area. He came to Detroit teach at the Detroit Conservatory of Music, has performed with the Kenneth Jewell Chorale and the International Symphonies. Mrs. Jamison is a student of Barbara Windham.

Admission to the program is $5. St. Timothy United Methodist Church is located at 15888 Archdale at the corner of Puritan, one block east of Southfield between Five and Six Mile roads.

Band auditions

The voluntary American Concert Band is holding mid-season auditions. Saturday morning rehearsals and Sunday afternoon concerts take place at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts, on the center campus of Macomb Community College, located at Hall Road and Garfield in Clinton Township.

Christmas concert at Holy Redeemer

Led by Dr. Sergio Pezzetti, the Bel Canto Choir and Chamber Orchestra invites metro Detroiters to the Christmas concert at 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 22, at Holy Redeemer, a Catholic Church and school at the corner of Junction and West Vernor that ministers to Hispanics and 39 other nationalities.

Eighteen soloists and 12 instrumentalists, who have appeared on television at home and abroad, will help put shopping-weary Detroiters in the holiday spirit with a medley of Christmas carols and Bach's "Magnificat" during a 90-minute performance.

Tickets may be purchased at the doors of the acoustically-pleasing church for $3. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

Holy Redeemer, a 105-year-old parish in the shadow of the Ambassador Bridge, ministers to 1,500 families, more than one-third of whom subsist below the poverty level.

1C. PRAYERS

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in perpetual glory. Amen.
Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. M.A.T.

THANK you St. Jude, infant of Praque, Holy Spirit for favors received. Heavenly father, in the name of Jesus, I thank you for the power of the Holy Spirit. God the father, God the son, God the Holy Spirit who makes me see everything and shows me the way to reach my ideal . . . you who gives me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. (Pray this prayer three (3) consecutive days without asking your wish. After the third day, your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your blessing is received.) S.C.

FREE — Small dogs, all ages. Due to my illness, cannot keep. 821-1631.

GROSSE Pointe Animal Clinic has lost and abandoned animals for adoption. This week we have four wonderful dogs. A spectacular, 6 mo. old, female, yellow-lab. Also, two adorable, lovable, "shaggy-mixes." One 9 mo. old, 30 lb. female with blond hair and a pink nose. The other, a 1-yr. old, 30 lb. male with jet black hair and big floppy ears. We are also looking for one exceptional family to adopt a tiny black, 1-yr. old, poodle-mix with very special needs. She was hit by a car, thrown in a garbage dumpster, and has injuries as a result. OILERS-SEALS

The Oilers and the Seals skated to a 1-1 tie, highlighted by the outstanding goaltending of the Oilers' Bobby Rahaim and the Seals' Paul Meglar. The Oilers took an early lead on Geoff Kimmel's first period goal, but Debski tied it up for the Seals. Kevin Kasiborski had a strong game for the Oilers, as did David Gakstatter; the Ricci brothers played well for the Seals.

MAJOR MAGICS-CANADIENS

Outstanding work by goalies Chuckie Schervish and Kenny McIntyre highlighted this 2-2 tie between the Magics and Benson's Canadiens. The Canadiens took a two-goal lead on scores by Kevin O'Malley (assisted by Jeff Huebner and Peter Anthony Brown) and Browe Merriweather (assisted by Dave Presnell). The Magics came back with two third period goals by A-liners Billy Faber (assisted by Donny Tocco) and Tocco (from Magdowski and David Collins). Kevin Collins, Jonathan Bayko and Brian Everham played well for the Magics; as did the Canadiens' R.J. Wolney, Brian Brown and Mark Aronson.

CANADIENS-FLYERS

Merriweather's two goals provided the victory margin as Benson's Canadiens defeated the Flyers, 3-1. The Flyers' Mark Campbell scored his unassisted goal in the second period. O'Malley provided the insurance goal early in the final stanza. Leo Salvaggio was near-perfect in goal for the Canadiens and Joey Lucido played solidly in the net for the Flyers. Mike Weyhing, Peter Birgbauer and Drew Norton were outstanding for the Flyers; as were the Canadiens' Kevin Leach, Presnell and Brent Kuhar.

BRUINS-CANADIENS

Phil Descamps' two goals and the outstanding goaltending of Jason Santo (his first shutout) highlighted the Bruins' 2-0 victory over Benson's Canadiens. Todd Dunlap, Chris Gibson and Greg Ryan earned assists on Descamps' goals. Brown played a great game in goal for the Canadiens. Edith Berube, Matt Lariscy and Tim Brady played well for the Bruins; Wolney, Presnell and Leach were outstanding for the Canadiens.

SEALS-BRUINS

The Seals came away with their first win of the year, a 3-1 victory over the Bruins on Dec. 8. Doug Semack got the scoring started for the Seals, from Casey Crain. Descamps scored on an assist from Dunlap to tie the game and that's the way it stayed until Semack scored his second goal of the game in the second period. Andrew Ricci drew the assist. Both goaltenders played well in the third period, but Meglar put the game away with his goal on a pass from Matt Debski. Colin Darke, Robbie King and Jay Ricci played well; as did the Seals' Behi Rabbani.

TALONS-FLYERS

The Proform Talons squeaked by the Flyers, 2-1, in a close game at McCann Arena. Omar Sawaf opened the scoring for the Flyers; Tim Miller assisted. John Graffius scored both Talons goals on breakaways. Booth Platt and John McNaughton played strong defense for the Talons' A-line. Birgbauer had several shots on goal for the Flyers. Goalies Ev Meade and Mark Campbell were strong in the nets.

OILERS-TALONS

The Talons topped the Oilers 6-3. The Oilers' A-line of Kimmel, Peter Blake and J. Berger had several scoring chances thwarted by Talons' goalie James Custer. Brad Klein and David Gracey played well on defense for the Talons. C-liners Nick Allen and Pete Knudsen stopped several dangerous rushes by the Oilers' Chris Amsden.

FLYERS-SEALS

The Flyers beat the Seals, 3-1, to improve their record to 7-4. Sawaf scored on a breakaway in the second period and Birgbauer made it 2-0 later in the period from Lucido and William Conway. Tim Miller picked up the Flyers' third goal in the final period; Campbell drew an assist. Meglar scored for the Seals from Gakstatter and Jay Ricci. Goalies Rabbani (Seals) and Weston Norton (Flyers) had good games, as did Mike Weyhing, Tom Waldron, J.C. Tibbits and Patrick Kerwin.

Pee Wee Division

RAIDERS-SPARTANS

The league-leading Grosse Pointe Raiders and the St. Clair Shores Spartans clashed last week, with the Raiders taking a 3-1 victory. Dan Grundman opened the scoring for the Raiders late in the first period on an unassisted goal. Roraff scored from Parr to get the Spartans on the board, but Mike Kisskalt got the Raiders back on top in the third period, Derek Smith assisting. With 21 seconds left on the clock, Dino Ricci added an insurance goal into an empty net.

South cagers lose opener

By Stephen Ebner
South High

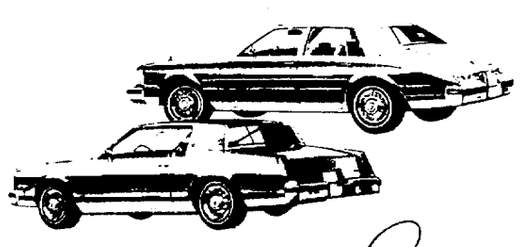

The boys' varsity basketball team opened its season with a 55-45 loss to Highland Park.

South jumped out to an early five-point lead, but fell behind in the second quarter and trailed by two points at halftime. Highland Park exploded in the third quarter, outscoring visiting South by six points.

The real showdown was in the fourth quarter, when the Blue Devils tied the game with just a few minutes to go. But Highland Park rebounded for 10 points and the victory. "They played hard, but made some key mistakes and Highland Park capitalized on every one," said coach George Petrouleas.

South forward Tim Hudson led the Devils with 14 points. Guards Sean Bruce and Ed Gramling added 11 and 10 points, respectively. Under the basket, center Gordie Langs reached for 8 rebounds, while Hudson had 5. Bruce also chipped in with 4 assists.

Fine, imported chocolates make a fine Christmas gift

A GIFT of fine quality imported chocolates will help make holiday festivities special.

What other gift suits almost everyone's taste, always fits, and says you've given the best in quality? CHOCOLATE.

Not just any chocolate will do, but a gift of fine, imported chocolate will delight your kith and kin.

Why imported? A well-earned reputation for quality ingredients and studied techniques precedes the European chocolate heritage. For example, the famous Swiss chocolatiers Lindt and Sprungli have been perfecting the chocolate making art, since they created the world's first chocolate bar in 1845.

If you would like to know the marks of fine chocolate, please enjoy this guide provided by the Lindt Chocolatiers.

A CONNOISSEUR'S GUIDE TO FINE CHOCOLATE

Appearance	— Note the unblemished, silky sheen.
Texture	— Break off a piece of Lindt chocolate. It should break firmly and crisply; the edges are clean and the surfaces do not crumble away.
Aroma	— Smell a full-bodied chocolate bouquet. It is never obtrusively sweet.
Mouth Feel	— Put the chocolate in your mouth. It neither clings stickily to the palate nor feels gritty on the tongue. Quality chocolate melts like butter.
Taste	— Indescribable!

Sparkling wines for entertaining elegantly during the holiday season

When entertaining this holiday season, add an extra touch of festive elegance. Without sacrificing your budget, pop the cork in style with an affordable imported sparkling wine.

Perfect for every spontaneous party or perfectly planned gathering, sparkling wine is the ideal complement to formal and informal menus. You can serve it with inexpensive hors d'oeuvre and entrees, or turn your holiday celebration into a dazzling dinner party accompanied only by sparkling wine.

If you're planning a holiday celebration with family and friends, the experts at Viceroy Imports suggest the following tips to turn your party into a truly "bubbling" affair:

Shop wisely — The chance of finding a sparkling wine that suits your particular taste at an affordable price has never been better.

• And remember, sparkling wine is ready for consumption upon purchase; it does not improve with age.

• Many imported sparkling wines are composed of both red and white grapes. However, only those made from a blend of white grapes can place "Blanc de Blancs" on their label. An imported French Blanc de Blanc such as Champs D'ore is lighter and more delicate than wines composed of white and red grapes, and retails for approximately $3.99.

• The wine's degree of sweetness can be determined by reading the label. A dry sparkling wine which has little or no sugar is called a "Brut." Rising up the scale of sweetness, the label will cite the wine as extra dry, sec, demi-sec or doux, which is the sweetest.

Cuvee Speciale on the label means the wine has been blended according to strict specifications. Champs D'ore Cuvee Speciale has been specially blended for an extra dry taste, a clean finish, a fruity nose and a natural effervescence.

Proper Chilling — With proper chilling, the sparkling wine's effervescence will be retained and make opening the bottle easier.

• Before serving, chill to 45° by placing the bottle into an ice bucket for ½ hour or in the refrigerator for two hours.

• Sparkling wine is a living product and should be treated with care; never freeze or "shock" the wine. This will destroy its composition and "close up" the bubbles.

Pop the cork — Sparkling wine should be opened to the sound of a soft pop by easing the cork out very gently.

• Remove the gold foil and wire muzzle. Hold the cork firmly with one hand, tilting the bottle at a 45° angle.

• Hold the cork between your thumb and forefinger, and twist the bottle to allow the pressure to ease out the cork.

Bubbles up — Once your bottle of sparkling wine has been opened you can preserve the bubbles to maximize your drinking pleasure.

• Sparkling wine should be served in fluted or tulip-shaped glasses to minimize contact with air. Air is the worst enemy of a sparkling wine's bubbles; the narrower the glass opening, the longer the bubbles will last.

• Don't pour more sparkling wine than you'll drink in 10 minutes, the average length of time the bubbles should last.

• Hold the glass by the stem; body heat from your hands on the glass will warm the wine and dissipate the bubbles faster. Don't shake the glass or swirl the wine as this will also dissipate the bubbles.

• And, don't forget to take time to appreciate the bouquet of the wine through the bubbles. They release a fragrant aroma or "nose" that should be savored.

Since Christmastime is the season for togetherness and sharing, nothing could reinforce those feelings better than a family decision to add a pet to the household.

In the busy weeks before the holidays, it's easy for individual family members to get caught up with outside activities. But setting aside one hour each evening to decide on and plan for a new pet could be a wonderful way to spend time together and capture the spirit of Christmas.

According to the Pet Information Bureau, more than 60 percent of American households currently own pets. Companion animals fill a variety of needs for love and companionship, because they're non-judgmental, affectionate and good listeners.

Teaches responsibility

Adding a pet to the family can help teach children about responsibility and caring for others. And pets are often the source of endless laughter and fun, because of the crazy antics that make up each animal's unique personality.

Choosing a pet should be a family project in which each person makes suggestions and offers an opinion. Important decisions that need to be ironed out in advance include whether or not the family has time for and interest in owning a pet, what type of animal is desired, and who will be responsible for grooming, feeding and other chores.

Children and baby animals

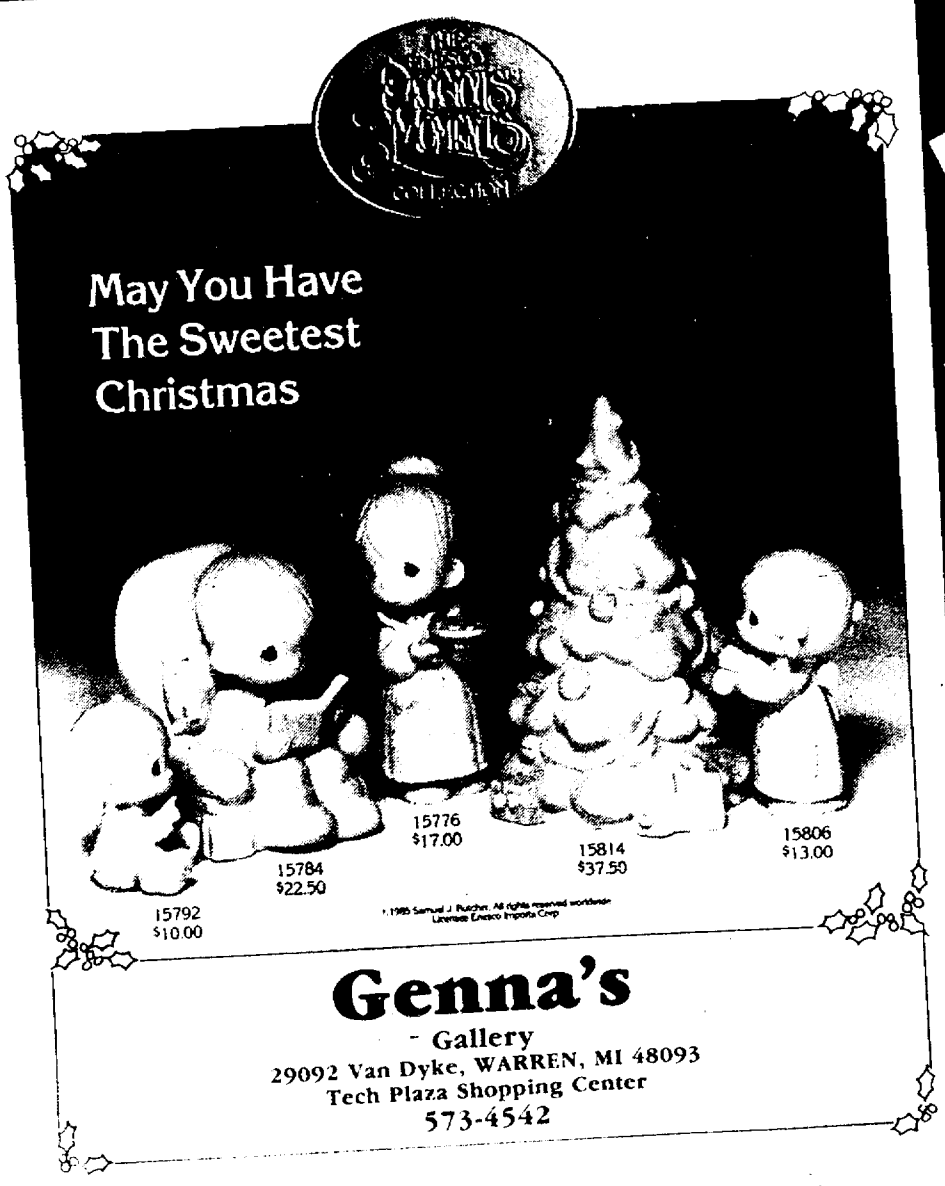

Kittens and puppies are terrific with young children, because they sense the need to be gentle, cuddly and affectionate with their new little friends.

While dogs are certainly everyone's favorite pet, they do require extra attention, space and care. Cats, on the other hand, are content to stay indoors, and training them to use the litter box is a rather simple, painless procedure.

If space is a big restriction when deciding on a pet, perhaps a bird would be a good choice. Because they live comfortably in a small, enclosed area, they're great for apartments or small homes. Birds are colorful and cheerful, and some varieties can even be trained to talk.

Birds too require careful attention, especially with regard to food and living quarters, but they're friendly animals that will make a pleasant addition to any family.

Sharing and giving are important qualities that families try to observe all year long. Preparing for a new pet during the Christmas season is an excellent way for families to work together and create a special feeling that's sure to last long after the holidays have been forgotten.

Hot soup refuels athletes

Physical fitness has become an integral part of the '80s lifestyle. In American Food Preferences, a study by Campbell Soup Company, nearly 70 percent of the 5,000 families surveyed indicate that they do some form of exercise.

For physical fitness buffs such as those identified in the study, the search is already on for good tasting, nutritious foods that can be quickly and conveniently prepared.

After all, whether you work out on exercise equipment in the gym or out-of-doors on the ski slopes, you don't want to waste time in the kitchen.

Most athletes, male and female, agree that exercise tends to curb appetites. Less is more and a bowl of hot soup is a terrific meal maker. With some imaginative additions — herbs or spices — Campbell's Condensed Soup is the athlete's answer for quick refueling.

This Olé Bean Soup is fast to fix when a hot and hearty soup fills the bill.

OLÉ BEAN SOUP

1 can (11½ ounces) Campbell's Condensed Bean with Bacon Soup
1 teaspoon chili powder
½ soup can water
1 can (6 ounces) "V-8" Vegetable Juice
½ cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese

1. In 1½-quart saucepan over medium heat, combine soup and chili powder. Heat, stirring constantly until hot, about 2 minutes.

2. Gradually stir in water and V-8. Reduce heat; simmer 5 minutes or until hot. Garnish with cheese. Makes 2½ cups or 2 servings.

Calories Per Serving: 290.

An impressive holiday buffet with all the fixings will not only impress your guests, but will leave you with the time and energy to enjoy the food, company, and spirit of the holidays. Included in the Holiday Buffet menu, which serves 4-6 people, are low calorie substitutes which will not alter the taste, just the calories, for the calorie counters. Dessert can be made the day before and hors d'oeuvres hours ahead, ready to pop into the oven before guests arrive. Happy Holidays and Bon Appetit.

Hors d'oeuvres:
Three Cheese-Vegetable Quiche

1 lb. mushrooms
1/2 head cauliflower - frozen may be used
1 bunch broccoli - frozen may be used

8-10 eggs
1/4 cup light cream
pinch of nutmeg

Chop mushrooms and sautee in 2 tablespoons of butter. Add wine and let simmer 15 minutes.

Steam cauliflower and broccoli until tender - drain well.

In a 9x13 pan layer vegetables in order: mushrooms, cauliflower and broccoli. Layer cheese in order: colby, swiss and parmesean. This may be prepared hours ahead and refrigerated. Whisk eggs with cream, add nutmeg, pour over vegetables.

Holiday Buffet

White Sauce

4 tbs. butter
4 tbs. flour
2 cups milk
1/2 cup chicken stock or canned chicken broth
salt and pepper

Melt butter in saucepan over medium heat, gradually blend in flour, whisk until smooth, add milk and stock, spices. Increase heat and continue to whisk until sauce thickens about 5 minutes.

This dish is beautifully complimented by buttered egg noodles or Uncle Ben's Wild Rice Mix. Serve with crusty warm French bread and a chilled light white wine.

Sesame Green Beans

1 lb. green beans
2 tablespoons butter or Butter Buds
2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds
salt and pepper

Cut beans french-cut style. Steam until tender. Drain. Melt 1 tablespoon butter in pan, add beans, sprinkle sesame seeds and toss. Add spices, sautee for 3-5 minutes. Dot with butter and serve.

Honey-Glazed Carrots

1 lb. carrots
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoon honey
1 tablespoon butter or Butter Buds
3/4 cup orange juice
2 tablespoon orange peel

Wash and scrub carrots. Cut into julienne slices. Combine rest of ingredients in saucepan, add carrots. Cover, bring to boil, simmer for 15-20 minutes until carrots are tender. Sprinkle orange peel and serve.

Scrumptious Almond Cheese Cake

Crust:
1½ Cup crushed graham crackers
3 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
1/4 cup melted butter or Butter Buds

Grease springform pan with butter. Place pan in center of 12" aluminum foil and press foil up sides of pan. Combine all ingredients together and blend well. Press graham mixture on bottom and up sides of pan. Refrigerate.

Filling:
2-8 oz. pkgs. of cream chesse (room temperature)
1-1/4 cup sugar
6 eggs separated
1 pint sour cream or plain yogurt
1/3 cup flour
2 teaspoons vanilla
Juice of 1/2 lemon
Grated peel of 1 lemon
1 pint whipping cream or Cool Whip
1/4 cup ground almonds

Beat cream cheese on low speed until smooth. Add sugar, beat until light and fluffy.

Add egg yolks, one at a time until well blended. Gradually add sour cream or yogurt, flour, vanilla and lemon rind, juice and ground almonds.

Beat egg whites until they hold stiff peaks. Fold into cheese mixture souffle fashion until well blended.

Beat whipping cream until thick. Add one-half of whipping cream or Cool-Whip to mixture. Fold in completely. Pour into prepared pan.

Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 1 hour 15 minutes or until top is golden.

Turn off oven and allow cake to cool in oven for 1 hour. Remove cake from oven and cool on rack. Chill overnight.

Before serving, pipe remaining whipping cream around cake and decorate with fresh fruit. Kiwi fruit, manderine oranges make a festive presentation.

Imaginative toys provide year-round entertainment

Nothing frustrates parents more than purchasing toys at Christmas and finding them left unnoticed weeks later. Toys that promote active child involvement and creative input are the best bargain because they have lasting value.

Toys with themes that let youngsters invent their own variations prove most popular throughout the year. Some of Schaper's newest vehicles encourage kids to role-play exciting situations for hours of imaginative fun and adventure.

Daring young underwater explorers will love conquering the high seas with the new Stomper Monster Water Demon (SRV). This super huge amphibious transporter moves easily over rough terrain and through the water.

Special features

Monster Water Demon's sea research facilities include detachable research submarine, working crane, super wide tires for flotation and a water jet for extra steerability and power in the water.

Its fully articulated figure moves easily from the vehicle to the sub's controls to conduct a myriad of underwater experiments. Monster Water Demon is a great holiday value at under $25.

Schaper's new Future Force vehicles let youngsters play out the ultimate battle between good and evil in the uncharted areas of outer space. The Guardians protect their planet with Guardram and Mobile Outpost vehicles, while the Destroyers plot their attacks with the Crusher and Launcher.

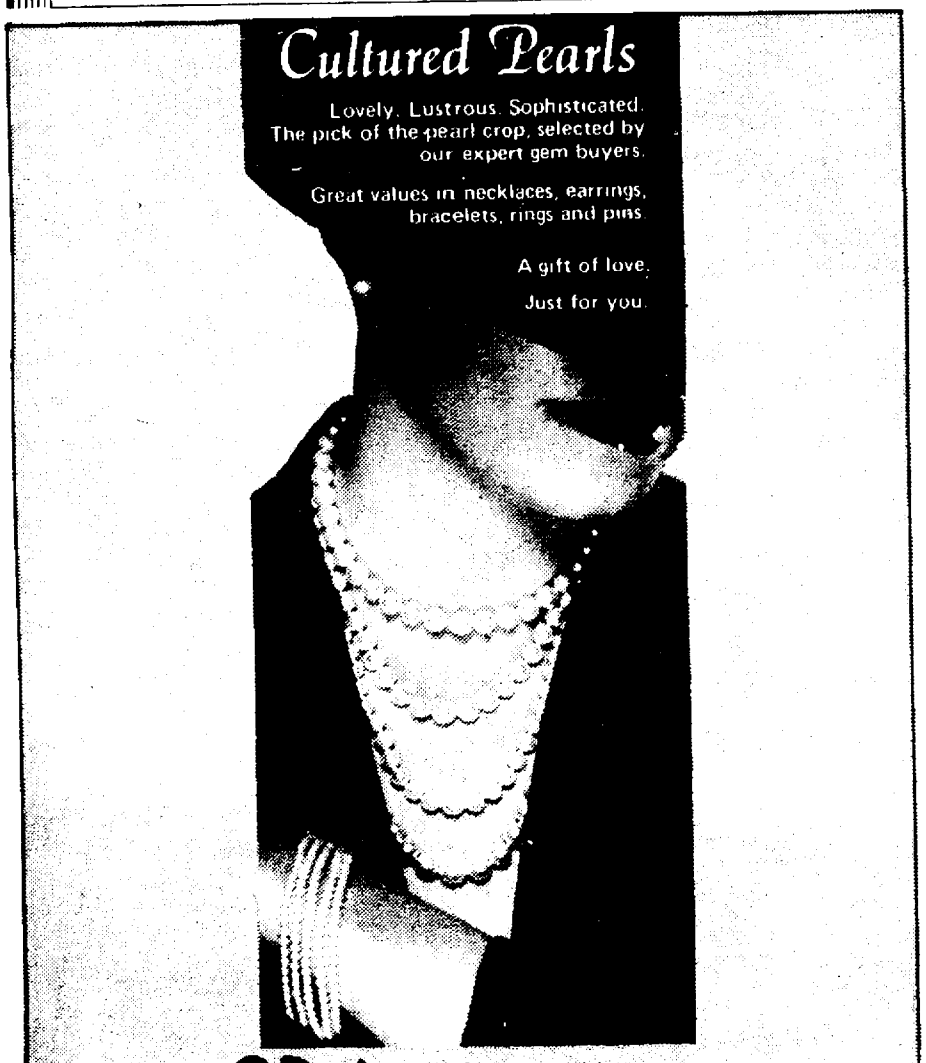

Moveable parts

Future force vehicles have moveable defense and attack systems, working headlights, three speeds and a free battery. And, at under $10, they won't strain holiday budgets.

Auto fans will love tinkering with new Stomper Zanees, crazy looking vehicles that need lots of fine tuning from their young owners.

Zanees feature bold, wild graphics, oversized engines that pop up through the hoods, and adjustable speed and engine noise levels. Stomper Zanees are also reasonably priced at approximately $9.

Finding toys that challenge a child's imagination will be easier this year than ever before. Schaper's vehicles are specially designed to get youngsters involved for hours of play.
