

Ethical investing: Profits with a social conscience

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Investing to make an ethical point is so new that not even many places that make ethics their business know about the possibilities. Among those who do know, there is not complete agreement that ethical choices are the best business choices.

William Carey, an Illinois stockbroker and former evangelical lay minister, believes investments can reflect social values and still make money. He and his associate, Douglas Smith, likewise a broker and minister, but in the Episcopal church, will speak on the subject to an audience of church people tonight in Southfield.

Carey isn't surprised that many churches haven't heard of the concept.

"All we're doing is taking the idea and polishing it for a particular audience," he said. "We tell them that they need to invest their money according to their faith."

Carey and Smith have developed lists of investments according to various ethical criteria so that a socially conscious organization can shape its portfolio to reflect its specific values. The two are prepared to advise investors with views on apartheid, nuclear power, alcohol, tobacco, gambling, women's rights, abortion, genetic engineering, birth control, pornography, racial equality, war, armaments and the environment.

But they don't tell investors what to think.

The first step requires the church or other institution to fill out a form describing its values. It's often a long, soul-searching process.

Probably the single most significant issue today is divestment in companies doing business in South Africa, according to Gerald LeVan, vice president of EF Hutton in Birmingham, who describes himself as one of the few local brokers prepared to advise on ethical investing, and under whose aegis Carey and Smith are in Michigan.

"We're not preaching ethical values," LeVan said. "We're not imposing our views on anyone. We're just helping people who have already determined their views."

But most companies have both positive and negative activities, as is illustrated by the South Africa issue. Carey and Smith won't say whether they think development is a good idea.

They have a list of companies that don't do any business in South Africa. They have another list of companies that do business there but are signatories of the Sullivan human rights and equal employment principles. And they have a list of companies that do extracurricular good in South Africa, like endow schools or clinics.

After that, it's up to the investor.

Churches have considered the problem to a greater extent at the national level than the local level, Carey said. Depending upon the organizational structure of each church body, their decision may filter down informally to the local congregation, or they may appear at the local level as a directive.

The congregation at St. Michael Episcopal Church in Grosse Pointe has discussed the idea

During the school week, most Grosse Pointe kids are pretty serious and studious, said Sidney DuPont, headmaster of Grosse Pointe Academy. "But during summer vacation and weekends, it's party, party, party. And there's not five or six kids at a party — it's hundreds of people."

"The War Memorial can't get a liquor license," he said, "but for five nights in a row during the recent school vacation, kids were charging $3 a head for admission to a kegger — and an additional $3 to get into the keg room. Police — or somebody — should crack down on this."

DuPont's comments drew applause from an estimated 250 parents — a full auditorium — at Grosse Pointe South High School last Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Only a few seats remained empty at the evening community forum, "Positive Partnerships: Families and Schools Working Together," co-sponsored by the Substance Abuse Community Council (SAC<sup>2</sup>) and the Grosse Pointe PTO Council.

Four head administrators from Grosse Pointe's public, private and parochial schools were represented on the panel: Msgr. Francis X. Canfield from St. Paul School; Sidney DuPont, headmaster of Grosse Pointe Academy; Ted Whatley, headmaster of University Liggett School; and John Whritner, superintendent of the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

The panel touched upon a variety of social issues that concern

Grosse Pointe's teenagers — alcohol, drugs, pressure to excel, smoking, suicide and appropriate social activities. Most of the discussion, however, zeroed in on teenage alcohol use.

All four educators and the panel moderator, Gail Erickson, coordinator of Assistance Programs for the Grosse Pointe public schools, expressed surprise and delight at the large crowd that turned out for the evening. "The turnout was heartening," Whatley said. "There was a significant cross-section of the community and representatives from lots of schools."

"It was valuable for our community to see all these heads of educational institutions together in a public place," said Ruth Zinn, publications chairman for SAC<sup>2</sup>. "Their presence showed a unity of purpose behind the kinds of things SAC<sup>2</sup> and the PTO Council are trying to do about the use of alcohol and drugs. Also about the tougher stand that parents should take against these things. It's the first time educators have said this publicly."

The purpose of the forum, Erickson said, was to "explore information in the book, 'As Parents We Will . . .'" and the brochure, "Safe Homes." Both publications were sent from SAC<sup>2</sup> to every family that has a child in a Grosse Pointe school. The book is designed as a handbook for parents. It contains facts about alcohol and other drugs, suggests guidelines for setting limits for children, and offers resources for families experiencing problems with teenagers. The "Safe Homes" brochure outlines a program for parents to publicly pledge not to permit unchaperoned parties or the use of alcohol and illegal drugs in their homes. A tear-off pledge may be returned to SAC<sup>2</sup>.

The two publications were also designed as catalysts for future parent peer groups to discuss teenage issues.

The panel agreed parents should take tougher stands against unacceptable behavior and activities of their children and that parents should receive support for their actions from

Grant Brown

By Elsa Frohman
Features Editor

A sumptuous meal cooked by Grant Brown, executive chef of the London Chop House, won't necessarily leave an extra pound on your hips to remember it by. However, if a thick, rich sauce is your idea of culinary heaven, Brown can accommodate you just as easily.

"You shouldn't have to ingest a lot of sugar, cream and butter to enjoy a meal," Brown said. "Dining doesn't always have to do that. We have a wide enough range (on the Chop House menu) that if you want an incredibly rich and decadent meal, or a light meal, we can accommodate you without having to make a special order."

Brown took over as executive chef at the Chop House in early December. A native Grosse Pointe, he has returned to the area from outside of Washington, D.C. where he was executive chef and general manager of the Leathercoat Restaurant.

At 30, Brown is unusually young to have the responsibility of executive chef at one of southeastern Michigan's most prestigious restaurants.

"I am quite young," Brown said. "But it's happening more and more, especially here in the United States. There are a lot of bright young chefs coming along, and there isn't the same kind of pecking order here that there is in France." As executive chef, Brown has complete responsibility for all the kitchen and menu operations of the Chop House. He controls costs, manages the kitchen staff and designs the menu. It is as much a management position as a cooking position, though Brown does do a great deal of the actual cooking. He has several sous chefs, French for second chef, working under him.

Brown is even more unusual because he doesn't have a formal culinary education. His college degree is in urban planning.

"I'm pretty much self-taught," he said.

Brown has been a frequent

Our new look — what it means to you

By Edmund C. Arnold
Design Consultant

When you get to the end of this sentence, please pause.

You have just completed one of the most intricate tasks that a human being can perform: You read words.

Few people realize what an accomplishment this is. The eye must look at a character little bigger than a pin head, recognize it as a letter of the alphabet, give it a sound, combine the sound into words and phrases and sentences . . . and then comprehend what it all means.

All this is done in a matter of a split second. The interaction of the eye and several separate areas of the brain is little short of a miracle.

And today the staff of the Grosse Pointe News introduces a "new" newspaper, designed to make the job of reading easier, more pleasurable and more rewarding. You saw some of the changes the moment your eyes landed on this page. That's the nameplate or flag at the top of the page. The letters themselves are familiar; they've been used since the World War II years. The picture of the building is new — just as our building is. Just as 96 Kercheval is a community landmark, so the Grosse Pointe News is an integral part of community life. You may remember that a picture of our old building with its famous elm in the entryway was part of our old nameplate, before we moved into our new home. We've kept the original logo, which is part of our history, on the masthead on the editorial page, 6A.)

A major factor in the new look of the paper are the headlines. The new typeface is Palatino, one of the most handsome in use today. Technically it's a Roman face. There are thick and thin strokes and curves are modulated. Look at an O: at the top of the bowl, the stroke is thin, as it comes around the circle it gets wider at what would be 3 and 9 o'clock on a clock dial, then it slims down again. And at the end of every stroke are tiny finishing strikes called serifs.

Our new headletter is an Old Style Roman. Contrast a line of it:

Look us over

with our former headline type, called Century:

Look us over

You'll see that our new face has a certain elegance and yet is as comfortable as a pair of well-worn bedroom slippers.

Our accent face is called Mistral, it's a script that is flavorful and popular for top-flight publications:

People

As you go through the paper, you'll see new stylistic touches: column headings, page logos that identify special sections and pages of the paper and a brand-new design for the editorial page.

The staff hopes that after you have looked at these new features, you won't see them again. For typographers — people who work with type — prefer their achievements to be invisible. They don't want you to "see" individual letters; they want you to recognize whole words and phrases in that split-second glance. The less you are aware of the actual letters that create words, the more gray cells in your brain are available to comprehend the information those words carry. And that is the primary function of the Grosse Pointe News, to convey information.

Some background

Ed Arnold, who traveled here from Richmond, Va. to work with the staff of the Grosse Pointe News on the redesign of the paper. He is a newspaper designer who has led workshops and seminars in every state and Canadian province and in Central and South American countries. He has designed more than 1,000 newspapers, including the Boston Globe, National Observer, Today, Toronto Star and Kansas City Star.

He's also been an editor, publisher, combat correspondent and professor. He writes a weekly column for Publisher's Auxiliary, a trade journal.

Arnold has been called the father of modern newspaper design, and besides thousands of articles, he has written 25 books. He has received scores of honors, including two honorary doctorates.

The staff has been working diligently on the redesign of the paper since July. I was invited to join them in setting up the new format. I am a newspaper designer and I work with publishers throughout this continent and a couple others besides. I am also a native Michigander (I worked on papers in Saginaw and Lansing and had my own weekly in Frankenmuth.) So it was a real pleasure to be associated with this activity.

It was all the more pleasurable because of the dedication of the publisher, editor and staff. Every decision that was made was on the basis of creating a better newspaper for you, the reader. (There are changes in the content, too, made for the same reason.) Every aspect of the physical package — choice of type, style of setting it, use of photographs and hand art, placement of captions, innumerable details — was decided on after meticulous examination of all the options. The result has been a good blend of typographical artistry that goes back to 1450 A.D. and the invention of moveable type with the most modern of electronic technology. The Grosse Pointe News is printed at one of the best and most modern typographic plants in the state.

professional cooking since he was a teenager in Grosse Pointe. He ran his own catering business from his parents' home, cooking for parties throughout the Pointes. He attended South High in his freshman year, but attended an eastern boarding school for the remaining three years of his secondary education.

After high school, he attended Clark University in Boston for his bachelor's degree.

"I decided to follow in my family's footsteps and study urban planning," Brown said. His father is retired as director of community service for the United Auto Workers' Union, and his mother works at Wayne State University in early childhood development. Both have backgrounds in urban planning.

But the kitchen was calling to Brown even as he was studying at Clark. During his college years, he worked at several New York City restaurants to earn extra money.

After college, Brown decided to put aside any other ambitions to go into cooking as a profession. He went to work for the Sheraton Commander Hotel in Cambridge, Mass., for four years, before moving on to the top position at the newly opened Leathercoat Restaurant near Washington.

Over those years, Brown was developing his own cooking style.

"I eat out a lot," he said. "I went to Europe. My style is pretty much my own. I pick up all these things and synthesize them into my own format."

At the Leathercoat, the hallmark of Brown's kitchen style was the use of the finest possible raw materials.

"We used a lot of local ingredients," he said. "Though we did fly some of them in from Europe. I like to work with the local people. There, we had a person who made our goat cheese and a farm where we got our vegetables. I'd like to get that going here. It helps the community and gets you the very best produce."

Coming to the Chop House has meant some changes in Brown's style — but not in his demands for the very best ingredients.

"The Chop House is different," he said. "It's a high-production situation. It's a lot of fun to work here. And there is the great tradition of Poncho and Jimmy Schmidt (two of Brown's predecessors) here. We use the highest quality ingredients, too. We fly a lot of our produce and seafood in from the east and west coasts."

Brown's ambition is not to transform the Chop House into his style of restaurant, but to continue its established tradition.

"I'd like to build on that tradition," he said. "I'd like to take it a few steps further and make my mark here in Detroit."

Brown's personal taste in food tends toward simplicity.

"I like to grill," he said. "I like things simply cooked. Often, when I come home, at 1 or 2 a.m., I'll light up the grill and cook some chicken or fish."

But even more than that, Brown likes to have someone else do the cooking.

"I like to dine out," he said. "It's nice to have somebody else wait on you."

Great cooking is a combination of art and science, Brown says.

"I like to say it is temporal art," he said. "When you set the plate down in front of someone, it isn't going to stay long, but when you present it, it should be like a work of art — well constructed."

That construction should be not only of visual elements, but of flavors as well, he explained.

"There is so much nouvelle cuisine around where it is too much how it is designed and not enough flavor," he said. "When I say rosemary sauce, you're going to taste rosemary, not just a hint."

In addition to the artistic elements, however, Brown said the science of cooking is important too.

"Cooking is chemistry," he said. "Baking, even more so."

As more and more chefs turn toward lighter, healthier fare, Brown sees the key to success as designing meals that can stand on their own — that are not simply the old standards with the calories subtracted.

"The health trend is affecting chefs, but it isn't an adverse thing," he said. "To have the most success, however, you have to incorporate the total concept — not just leave something out. I might serve a grilled fish with a sweet red pepper relish. The components have to come together."

Brown enjoys oil painting, horseback riding and keeping a well-stocked wine cellar in his free time. He and his wife, Robin, are expecting their first child this summer. They live in Grosse Pointe Park.

U.S. agency seeks unsafe ext. cords

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission is looking for consumers who have had problems with electrical extension cords in recent years, and who would be willing to exchange the malfunctioning cord for a nominal cash payment.

Of specific interest are extension cords that have smoked, overheated, been involved in a fire, shocked someone, or where the plug has been too hot to touch when the cord was being used. If you have such a cord, the safety commission wants it so that engineers can determine what caused the malfunction.

James J. Testaseca, an investigator for the commission's Detroit office, said the agency is trying to find reasons for minor accidents involving extension cords.

Consumers having malfunctioning extension cords should call 226-4040 for details.

Brownell teacher tests hi-tech laser discs for classroom use

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

Bill Leleszi first got excited about laser discs a couple of years ago when he previewed some video discs of the Apollo moon landing.

"I was overwhelmed by their clarity," he said. "I saw them as an ideal adjunct to the planetarium."

Healy named director

Police chiefs and officers from the five Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores attended the Jan. 27 ceremony honoring the promotion of Dan Healy of the Grosse Pointe Shores Department of Public Safety to director. Healy will replace Joseph Vitale who will officially retire after 32 years of service Feb. 1.

The Shores village council voted unanimously in favor of the recommendation from the public safety committee to promote Healy from sergeant to director. Sergeant is the highest level under the director in the village.

Village President Gerald C. Schroeder said that while the promotion was a time of sadness due to the retirement of Vitale, it was also a time of happiness because of Healy's promotion.

Representatives of the police and fire departments applauded both Vitale and Healy for their years of service to law enforcement and public safety.

"All the rhetoric in the world could not say how I feel right now," said the emotion-laden Healy. "I will just continue on to meet the challenges of my duties and strive to perform my job to the best of my ability."

Schroeder praised Vitale for his years of meritorious service, but said he would save the official speeches for Vitale's Tuesday, Feb. 24, retirement party, scheduled at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

Attempted robbery

A breaking and entering and attempted larceny of a snowblower was reported Jan. 19 in the Farms.

According to Farms police, the would-be thief broke into a garage on Fisher Road sometime between 12:30 and 7:30 a.m. The door was forced open, but the snowblower apparently would not fit through it.

Nothing else appeared to be missing.

The planetarium plan had to go by the board, but that experience got the Brownell science teacher thinking. An avowed science nut, who applied for the teacher in space program and would do it again in a minute, Leleszi thought he could see ways to use the discs in the classroom — and maybe in math as well as science.

Right now, Leleszi, the chairman of the math and science department at Brownell, is the only teacher in the Grosse Pointe system using the discs. He is conducting a pilot study to determine how well they can be adapted to classroom use and to suggest ways to use them as teaching tools. With any luck, he will be ready to report to the school board before the beginning of the next school year.

He likes what he has learned so far.

"They never wear out!" he says.

The discs, which resemble mirrored records, with grooves so tiny as to be nearly invisible, can be played thousands of times a year for several centuries before they wear out, according to the extravagant claims made for them. The International Planetarium Society says the discs will stay clear and sharp even on the thousandth play.

The discs last better than tape and store more information than slides. They use photography for a more realistic look than computer graphics. They are durable enough to be handled by hundreds of students, as Leleszi demonstrated by bashing the disc against the lab counter.

They aren't perfect, of course. Until recently, the equipment has been expensive and there has not been a wide variety of discs available for classroom use. And, according to "Classroom Computer Learning," the quality of the educational experience depends a lot on the teacher. Getting a lesson organized requires a lot of time and expertise that not all teachers have. But Leleszi loves it.

"I see the program incorporated throughout the middle schools," he said. "It allows the teacher to walk through the class and monitor the kids' work. With the old technology, you couldn't be in two places at once. We're talking about individualized instruction — but with the whole class. It's most unique."

The project takes a lot of effort on Leleszi's part. He has to preview each disc and write a report on its quality and possible uses. But he says he likes figuring out new ways to use the equipment.

Besides being able to read an entire encyclopedia on one disc, Leleszi's sixth-graders have participated in some active projects spun off from disc-viewing. In a project that linked the discs and a computer, they studied rockets and programmed their own rocket launch. After learning about the space program's soft re-entry, the kids made their own re-entry vehicles and dropped them from the second floor. The test of success was the survival of the passenger — a raw egg.

Leleszi says the students relate well to the video because they are already television-oriented. "The kids take TV for granted," he said. "The disc is an adjunct, a tool, not to be used every day." But when he does use it, it's with enthusiasm on both sides.

"We've got a lot of good stuff here."

Trombly to celebrate 60 years in February

1987 marks the 60th anniversary for Trombly Elementary School. Plans are afoot to celebrate it Sunday, Feb. 8 in style, with speeches, proclamations, refreshments and a time capsule.

Longtime Trombly teachers Lillian Kachadourian and Eleanor Pawluk have taken charge of the time capsule, which will be filled with classroom computer printouts and news accounts for the day.

An open house will run from 2 to 4 p.m., featuring a tour of the classrooms, historical slides and a talk by Grosse Pointe Historical Society President Lisa Gandelot, scrapbooks and old photographs, and background music by pianist Jim Capaldi. Past principals Frank C. Welcenbach, who served at Trombly for 23 years; Eric Folo; and Robert Shover, currently principal at Defer, will be on hand for the festivities.

The school is named for Robert Trombly, a youthful landscape gardener who planted many of the trees on Jefferson Avenue and grew up to become a lawyer and president of the village of Grosse Pointe Park. Trombly served 30 years on the school board before the five districts consolidated in 1922. It was Trombly who made the trips to Ypsilanti to select teachers and pick up books and supplies.

The original Robert Trombly School was built in 1903 at the corner of Jefferson and Beaconsfield, where a Sunoco gas station now stands. In 1925, the school board bought the current 5.24 acre site for $180,806.17. The building, considered an architectural masterpiece, was built in two phases and completed in 1930 at a cost of $423,301.16.

But the business of educating Grosse Pointe Park children didn't wait for the building to be finished. The first PTA meeting was held in 1927, when high school student musicians entertained the crowd. In those days, there were five teachers and a principal.

Trombly School now has a full-time staff of 12 classroom teachers — plus principal Sheila Joyce and special-subject teachers in physical education, art, music, instrumental music, science, library and high ability, resource people in speech, social work, reading, bilingual language and a psychologist. Current enrollment is 250.

The school also has the only auditorium of the Grosse Pointe elementary schools. It is often used for assemblies, concerts and fine arts performances. Trombly's upstairs playroom became the current library in 1967 and was named in honor of the school's second principal, Frank C. Welcenbach.

Trombly was the first elementary school in the district to have a permanent science consultant. Through hands-on experiments and direct observation, students learn the principles of science. The school's computer program is largely the result of parental support and initiative. Trombly also has a PTO-sponsored fine arts program, which has hosted the Michigan Opera Theatre, the Habinger Dance Company and artists-in-residence day.

Lecture series on raising parents

"How to Raise Parents . . . in These Troubled Times," is a two-part film presentation featuring Clayton Barbeau, author, lecturer and family therapist. The series of film and discussion will be on Thursdays, Feb. 5 and 12, 7:30-9:30 p.m. in the St. Paul School cafeteria.

Barbeau is the father of eight children, four of whom he reared as a single parent, following the death of his wife. From San Francisco, he is an author and family therapist. The two-part film series features Barbeau as he lectures before a live audience. Each of the two segments is one hour in length.

In part one, Barbeau presents some do's and don'ts of interpersonal communication, and he compares the trials of adolescence with the tensions of middle-school. Using the results of an extensive research report, he shows that teenagers and their parents share many values in common. He concludes this first hour with a straight-forward discussion of premature sex and its troublesome effects.

In part two, Barbeau bases his presentation on questions submitted to him earlier by both parents and teens. Insight, compassion and humor mark his practical responses to these queries. They touch on such topics as parental authority and the maturing teen, active listening and honest response, the right to privacy, and the freedom to make and admit to mistakes.

other parents. In short — parents need to unite.

"Many adolescents have demanded — and received — freedoms they are unable to handle," said Erickson. "The parent-child relationship is not an equal one. We should remember this. Like the children's campaign, 'Say No to Drugs,' we, as parents, should say no to our children — with the help of other parents giving that same message."

DuPont pointed out that 25 years ago, entire communities provided the back-up parents needed to enforce rules set down for their children. "The school crossing guard knew me since I was in kindergarten," he said. "So did the postman and the lady at the candy store — who also happened to be the piano teacher. They all knew who I was. They knew my dad. They all took part in raising the youth of my community," he said. "Today we live in a transient world. But kids still need to know there's a large population out there with expectations and limits."

In a later interview, Whatley added, "Parents took a beating in the '60s. They lost confidence. They went from an authoritarian mode to a 'winip' mode. It's clear we're finally moving away from that. Parents should work together to develop their own positive peer influence."

Msgr. Canfield, in a later interview, also echoed the panel's feelings. "It's important for parents to gather. Parents should work with other parents and teens. As a community, we're concerned about our kids. They're our treasurer. Individual families can't stand up against this. Parents must work together."

Whitner cited the recent decisions banning smoking on public school grounds and beefing up attendance policies. "I've seen these new policies accepted in a positive way by students," he said. "I'm surprised, frankly. The policies are working better than expected."

Whitner expressed dismay at the excesses he sees as built-in traditions in the Grosse Pointe teenage community — elaborate prom celebrations with limousines and hotel parties, for instance.

Zinn said that the next step is the formation of parent discussion groups at individual schools, using "As Parents We Will" and the "Safe Homes" brochure as a basis for discussion.

So far, 175 "Safe Homes" pledges have been signed and returned, according to Lucy Smith, SAC<sup>2</sup> board member.

Host an exchange student

The Grosse Pointe Chapter of AFS International/Intercultural Programs is offering local families an opportunity to demonstrate their belief that our youth holds the greatest promise for peace, by hosting a foreign high school exchange student.

"AFS brings together a student from a different culture and a Grosse Pointe family who, through living together, learn from one another and grow together, thus contributing — in a small but significant way — to the development of peace globally," said Ann Nicholson, chapter president.

The year program begins in July or August and enables the host family to enjoy the cycle of a full year with a student. The summer program lasts from five to eight weeks.

Host families are not asked to make special expenditures for their AFS student, but they do pay food costs and incidental expenses as they would for their own child. Most families may take a monthly tax deduction of $50; AFS extends medical coverage to its students and issues a monthly allowance.

Families can contact her at 884-4637 for information.

AFS is a non-profit, non-governmental organization, and one of three programs approved by the Grosse Pointe schools. Each year, more than 3,000 students participate from 70 countries in industrial and developing regions of the world.

AFS host families vary widely in age, size, income level and occupation. They include two parents with children, single-parent families, young parents, single people and older couples.

A new 'dress' for the News

Today the Grosse Pointe News appears for the first time in its new design, a new dress that we think is especially appropriate for a newspaper that less than a year ago moved into its new building.

The purpose of the redesign? It is to better serve the reader. The new format makes the News easier to read and, in the words of the internationally known newspaper design consultant Edmund C. Arnold, "more pleasurable and more rewarding" for the reader.

In its new dress, the News offers a new body type, new and different headline typefaces, a new design for this Opinion Page and for the Op-Ed Page, special logos to identify special sections and pages, new layouts and new makeup and other stylistic touches.

But there is more to a newspaper than its appearance, as every reader knows. The content still is all-important. So as part of the paper's new look, the staff is offering a series of new features to supplement the solid reporting of general news, sports, organizational activities, business and other news developments as well as the editorials, letters, personal columns and the other coverage of the Grosse Pointe community that readers find in their paper every week.

The new features include a Student Spotlight highlighting each week the accomplishments of a particular student in the Pointe public or private schools; a new Business Page, plus a listing of Business Notes explaining what is happening in the business community, and a new column, "Yesterday's Headlines," recalling newsworthy happenings in the Pointes and the world in the past.

The News is proud to have had Ed Arnold as its consultant in the paper's redesign. Often called the father of modern newspaper design, Arnold has written thousands of articles and more than 25 books on the subject. More to the point for the reader, he has designed more than 1,000 newspapers, ranging from the Boston Globe and the Kansas City Star to dailies and weeklies in Michigan.

Arnold is himself a native Michigander who owned his own weekly at Frankenmuth and worked on papers in Saginaw and Lansing. He later joined the faculty of the School of Journalism at Syracuse University where he became chairman of the graphic arts department. Later he was an award-winning professor at Virginia Commonwealth University. He also served as editor of the Linotype News, the only publication devoted to newspaper design. In recent years he has conducted more than 200 seminars for the American Press Institute and led workshops and seminars in every state and Canadian province.

But the task of redesigning the Grosse Pointe News was more than an Ed Arnold production. All the staff took part, along with the publisher, Robert G. Edgar, and other members of the family of Robert B. Edgar who founded the News in 1940 and served as its editor and publisher until his death in 1979. The task really was a team effort.

Newspapers, of course, are commercial enterprises, but our "customers" really are our readers. Unless they read the paper and find the news, sports, entertainment and other features they seek, the newspaper has failed its readers. It also has failed its advertisers who rely not only on their advertising presentations but the content of the news pages to attract readers who will become their customer.

So, as Ed Arnold emphasizes, the new format and new features are intended not just to make the News a better-dressed paper, but to please and satisfy its readers. We hope you like it.

The costs of justice

Grosse Pointe Farms is discovering that in law enforcement as in other matters, it isn't just the original cost; it's also the upkeep.

That comment refers to what has happened in the Farms since it established a new traffic bureau Aug. 1 with two new police officers in two new patrol cars cracking down on speeders and other traffic violators.

The campaign has resulted in doubling of the number of tickets issued to motorists each month, according to Municipal Judge Peter O'Rourke. That increased volume has, in turn, prompted city officials to hire a year-around clerk and move the court to a larger office in the Farms City Hall to help handle its additional load.

It also meant that the backlog for hearings on civil cases and misdemeanor offenses now extends well into 1987. The court simply has not been able to handle in timely fashion the increased volume of tickets now averaging about 300 more a month than before the establishment of the traffic bureau.

But two other developments now are seen as possible. One is the possible expansion of court facilities in the present city hall. The other is the possibility that a District Court be established in the Pointes.

It was Herb Levitt, regional administrator for the state court system, who raised the possibility of the district court. He claimed the problem at the Farms wouldn't be solved "until there is either a new home for the court or a district court for all of the Pointes."

A proposal by some Grosse Pointe officials a few years ago led to an introduction of a bill in the Legislature to establish a district court in the Pointes, but the plan failed to get enough support for passage, chiefly because of the additional cost and a fear of loss of local control.

Now in the Farms at least there is new concern that the recent investment in a traffic bureau is also raising the costs of the municipal court. There is also legitimate concern over the delays in handling cases, which recalls the judicial comment that justice delayed is justice denied.

Perhaps it is time for the Pointes once again to reconsider the district court plan and to make a new study as to just what the costs would be compared with the expense of maintaining municipal courts in each of the Pointes.

Establishment of a district court similar to those that serve most other communities in the state might well prompt the speedier delivery of justice in the Pointes.

State of the county: A mess

Backed by a tough report from his financial review committee, the new Wayne County executive, Edward McNamara, has called for cutting millions of dollars in nonessential county spending, especially in the sheriff's department. The proposed reductions are drastic but obviously required.

It remains to be seen whether McNamara will be able to impose all of his proposals on county officials and agencies, but the report of his financial review committee makes it clear that drastic action is called for to move the county toward a balanced budget and reduce its long-range debt now estimated at $292.5 million.

The picture apparently is much worse than indicated by earlier reports from the retiring county executive, William Lucas. However, the review committee did give Lucas credit for "some cost-cutting measures," such as closing General Hospital, and for "orchestrating events" that led to an agreement with the state that cut $45 million from the county debt for health care for indigents.

Yet the committee charged that "the fundamental problem of expenses exceeding revenues on an annual basis was never seriously addressed." It said that in each of the last four years expenditures had exceeded revenues by amounts ranging from $16 million to $33 million. The budget was declared technically in balance in fiscal years 1984 and 1985 but that result had been achieved by one-time accounting transactions and not by a real reduction in expenses, the committee reported.

So where does that leave the state of the county? In a mess, McNamara says.

So he proposes a freeze on county hiring, an end to Sheriff Department patrols of the county's secondary roads and a study of a proposal to save money by "privatizing" some duties at the county jail. As might be expected, Sheriff Robert Ficano promptly objected and so did labor union leaders.

But McNamara also proposed reductions in his own executive staff, which makes his plans more credible to the public. He would chop his security staff from six to three deputies and reduce his public relations staff from eight to two. He would also end all funds for out-of-state travel and conventions (the sheriff happened to be in Washington attending a sheriff's seminar when the proposals were issued).

While these and other cuts no doubt would reduce county services, the current deficit and the long-range debt are of such size as to require the drastic actions proposed. Some proposals by the review committee merely call for improved administration, such as the recommendation for timely collection of funds including the almost $5 million owed to the county by municipalities for housing of local violators in the county jail.

So far McNamara has talked tough. Now let's see whether he can act tough, too.

Letters

Deeply touched

To the Editor:

I was deeply touched by the very thoughtful letter from Sylvia Murphy's mother, children, sisters and brother. Although I never met Sylvia, I'm certain that there are many, like myself, who will remember her as a fine person and only wish that we could have helped.

I have mice

To the Editor:

Could it be that we are experiencing an invasion of mice in our area? Never have we had one in our house until this year's cold weather began, and now we cannot get rid of them.

This isn't something you like to admit, but I feel I was not alone when I overheard two ladies talking about the mice in their houses while dining in one of our most fashionable restaurants. On trips to the Village for traps and poison, I have found their supplies depleted. I'm coming out of the closet admitting, "I have mice." Am I alone?

Name withheld by request
Police care

To the Editor:

Our police departments of the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods not only protect our children on their way to and from school, in the neighborhood and at home, but they are also concerned with their success in the classroom.

The Fraternal Order of Police, Grosse Pointe Lodge #102, has made a generous donation to the Grosse Pointe Chapter of the Michigan Association for Children and Adults With Learning Disabilities. Their support will ensure that information on how our organization can help parents and students cope with learning differences is available in Grosse Pointe.

Through education and communication between parents, schools and the community, children whose lives might otherwise be a series of failures can become productive citizens. We are deeply thankful to our police who care so much for our children.

Let us keep cool heads

To the Editor:

I have read with interest, and some puzzlement, the letters of Mr. D'Angelo and Mr. Skomski.

Winston Churchill said he did not become prime minister to preside over the dissolution of the British Empire. In similar fashion, we must assume that Mayor Fromm and Chief Ferber are good and decent people who do not want the devaluation of Grosse Pointe Farms property values and destruction of our way of life.

Common sense analysis is always preferable to the ad hominem approach.

Throughout history in all times and in all places, merchants have always viewed increased traffic patterns as a positive good. Currently, the Mount Clemens merchants are attempting to change upper Gratiot Avenue traffic patterns to increase, not decrease, traffic through Mount Clemens. We must, however, recognize that increased traffic through Grosse Pointe Farms does not represent people rushing to shop at Kercheval on the Hill, but rather people taking zig-zag short cuts through the Farms to destinations outside the Farms.

I do not live on a designated main street, but rather a secondary street, now being heavily used as a short cut to avoid the congestion of Moran and other main streets.

Moran is a de facto extension of I-94. It would indeed be shocking if the state highway department were to erect signs, similar to those on I-96, saying (in effect) "Local Traffic take Canyon-Moran-McMillan bypass to lower St.

First impressions

It may or may not be coincidental that the debut of the Grosse Pointe News' "new look" just happens to be the same week I've chosen to write about first impressions for my turn in this space.

I got to thinking about first impressions and how they are often the most lasting after a recent incident at home. My brother ran into an old friend of his from high school and in the course of their conversation discovered that the friend was married to the daughter of our next-door neighbors. (He isn't their favorite son-in-law, which is why we'd never seen him before, I guess.)

First let me explain that we don't exactly live in Mr. Rogers' neighborhood. It's a nice, quiet little block in Harper Woods, just past Vernier Road. The neighborhood is a nice mixture of retired folks, working parents with children and single people. Most of us just keep to ourselves, really. There aren't any block parties, or Neighborhood Watch programs. In fact, most of us know one another only well enough to exchange nods and smiles on snowy mornings.

So it amazed us to discover — through the old high school buddy — that his in-laws, our neighbors, don't like us. It isn't because we have one noisy party per year. Nor is it because we sometimes let two or three weeks pass between lawn-mowing jobs.

No, according to their son-in-law, our neighbors don't like us because they think we're drug dealers. They think this because we don't have the traditional "young couple" or "mom, dad, kid and dog" household and because we have a rather odd assortment of people who operate on different schedules living in our house.

It's a reasonable assumption, I guess. Not many suburban homes have a 17-year-old girl, a 29-year-old professional woman and a 26-year-old writer/store clerk

I Say

living in them. And when those residents are visited by the teenager's friends, the 29-year-old's fiance and the 26-year-old's girlfriend, not to mention aunts and uncles, married brothers and sisters and their children and assorted friends... well, it's easy to see how our neighbors could mistake our humble little ranch home for a dope house. Just look at the proof in our driveway: a rusting AMC with no muffler is every crack dealer's choice of wheels, I'm sure.

So I got a little angry. (If you can call striding through the house yelling about how insensitive, suspicious, rude and ridiculous our neighbors were, a little angry). Then the 17-year-old pointed out the many times we ourselves had made nasty little comments about the neighbors. Like the time we called them "hillbillies" because they let their pit bull run wild. Or the time we yelled when the kids waited until their parents went up north to stage a three-day toga party. And the time we questioned their parentage when they dry-tested their boat motor at 6 a.m. on Sunday.

After I cooled down, I realized that the whole thing comes down to the fact that neither household has even given the other a chance. We aren't drug dealers any more than our neighbors are any of the dozens of things we've called them. We've relied on first impressions and never really cared to look beyond that point.

As I mentioned, it seems pure chance that the new-look News debuts this week. I remember when the paper changes you see on this page and throughout the paper were merely in the talking stage. Somebody asked me — as senior member of the editorial staff — how I thought News readers would react to sweeping changes.

It's kind of hard to say. I remember when the paper made similar changes five or six years back. The newsroom got calls every day for several weeks after the face-lift, many from longtime readers who pulled no punches in letting us know that they didn't like what they saw.

Gradually, the mini-furor died down, probably when people saw that the paper still covered what people wanted to read in their hometown publication: news about them and their community. Once they looked past that first impression, they realized that there really wasn't anything to get too excited about. The weddings and obituaries and Little League summaries and classified ads were still there. All was right with the world.

Now that we've changed our look again, I'm sure we'll get phone calls and letters and comments about all the things we've done. Some people will like the changes and some won't. Heck, I work here and I don't even like everything we've done (I think the little drawing of me at the left is a bit too reminiscent of Raymond Burr to suit my taste).

But hey, remember that first impressions aren't always the best ones to go by. And, to paraphrase that great fictional philanthropist Willy Wonka (whom my neighbors would probably think was an ax murderer)... a little change now and then is relished by the wisest men.

Yesterday's Headlines

Feb. 7, 1963 —

The New York Times reported that Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, showing a remarkable series of intelligence photographs to support his statement, assured Americans that "beyond any reasonable doubt," all Soviet offensive weapons had been removed from Cuba last fall.

Chancellor Adenauer pledged his government to intimate cooperation with the United States. He said that West Germans could not survive without American support.

In news from Saigon, a Communist guerilla battalion trapped a government force in a thick mangrove forest in the Camou peninsula and nearly wiped out a company of regular troops. It was one of the worst ambushes in the last year. Government sources put the losses at 34 dead, 27 wounded and seven missing.

Former Cuban prisoners released by the regime last December for a ransom of about $62 million in medicine will soon begin training with the U.S. armed forces, according to a civilian chief of the former invasion brigade. The Cubans were captured by Premier Fidel Castro's forces in the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in April 1961.

At the movies, "Lonely are the Brave" was playing with Kirk Douglas, Gena Rowlands and Walter Matthau. Gregory Peck was starring in "To Kill a Mockingbird." On Broadway, Zero Mostel was playing in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." Sid Caesar was in "Little Me" and Anthony Newley was starring in "Stop the World — I Want to Get Off."

Under the headline, "Negro nominated to be postmaster in Los Angeles," Leslie N. Shaw, a 40-year-old savings and loan executive, was nominated to become the first black postmaster in that city. He was the unanimous choice of the California Democratic delegation to Congress on the second ballot.

Sargent Shriver Jr., the president's brother-in-law, is keeping warm the speculation that he will be the next Kennedy relative to run for public office. Shriver, who was president of the Chicago Board of Education before he became Peace Corps director, has entertained an ambition to run for the governor of Illinois for some years.

In Grosse Pointe, John Chandler Jr., headmaster of the Grosse Pointe University School since 1949, resigned to become president of the National Association of Independent Schools, with headquarters in Boston.

The cities of Grosse Pointe spent a total of $26,279 for labor and materials to clear streets from Dec. 6, the date of the winter's first snowfall, through Jan. 31.

The Hon. George Romney, governor of Michigan, delivered the concluding lecture in the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Inaugural Series. Romney, speaking from the stage of the new William Hayes Fries auditorium, was scheduled to speak on "Michigan and the American Revolution — A commentary on previous talks in this series."

Brownell School's Parent-Teachers Association numbers 1,140 active members, making it the third largest in the state and second largest in the metropolitan Detroit area.

In the business community, Jacobson's was advertising men's all-weather coats with zip-in pile liners for $19.88. Vic Tanny Gym and Health Club opened on Mack near Vernier. And at Cunningham's on Kercheval, corner of Notre Dame, full-size electric blankets were selling for $13.88 and Ban deodorant for 57 cents.

A motorist who ran into the rear end of a car owned by a Park detective was traced to his home by a water trail left by the broken radiator of his car. He was arrested for hit-and-run.

Austin Prep overpowered Salesian 82-37 in the last game before two tough end-of-the-season battles with Catholic Central and Notre Dame that was to decide the league championship.

At the Detroit Boat Club, preparations were being made to usher in the Ladies Birthday Bridge Luncheon as the beginning of their part in the club's 125th anniversary year. The club was founded in 1839.

The Fine Arts Society will present "Anatasia" at the Players Playhouse. It was the second production of the year. The play was to be produced by Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. McDonald and directed by Erwin H. Foersterling.

The Pointer of Interest was Marc Lonesk, Grosse Pointe High School star of the gridiron, basketball court and baseball diamond. The 17-year-old had a B-average and was planning to attend the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

In the Who, Where and What-not column, written by Whoozit, it was revealed that the latest rage among the junior high set, at Pierce, was gum wrapper chains. The trick is to braid the wrappers in Indian fashion to form a chain as long as the current boyfriend's height. "Rather a chore if the beau is of basketball player's height," Whoozit noted.

Typewriters stolen

About $250 worth of office equipment was stolen from the Village Printers shop on Mack Avenue Jan. 22, according to Park police.

The burglar apparently broke upon a window to gain entry into the shop.

Two type-writers and a small amount of cash were taken. About $200 in damage was done to the window.

An eternal optimist

We received a letter the other day from a former Grosse Pointe candidate, thanking us for our endorsement and support in his campaign for a seat on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

It was a pleasant letter that indicated the 1986 campaign gave him the opportunity to meet many interesting people, to discuss important issues, to create the awareness that there are qualified, responsible candidates willing to take a leadership role toward building a prosperous and healthy community.

He thanked our paper for its support and wished us a happy new year.

The letter wasn't all that unusual or exciting, except for the first line, which we'll let you enjoy in its entirety.

"Except for the fact that my opponent's total vote count exceeded that of my own, my campaign for Wayne County commissioner was a complete success."

Now, there's an optimistic man.

Sad Saturday

It is a sad story with an unhappy ending.

Seems Arthur Wormet, a Provenal Road resident, spotted a fox Saturday morning on the porch of a neighbor's house in the Windemere subdivision.

Calls to Farms police and later to Park veterinarian Lawrence Herzog were made, and the half-starved animal was later attended to.

Herzog said the animal appeared to be a blue fox, which is a domestic species.

"They are raised for their fur," Herzog said. "It could have been a pet and either got loose or was let go."

The female weighed only eight pounds; a normal fox weighs about 16 to 18 pounds.

"We had to tranquilize it to get near it," the saddened doctor said. "I am not sure if the tranquilizer killed it or if it died of exposure. We would have probably had to put it to sleep anyway."

"It was very sad. It was probably one of the saddest things I've had to do as a veterinarian."

Simon says

A former Grosse Pointe News ad rep now has Andy Warhol for her boss.

Warhol, the well-known artist, is the publisher of "Interview," a New York-based magazine. Jane Simon became production director of the Magazine last October.

"I lived at the Berlin Wall at Alter and Jefferson," said Simon, who says she had three times as much room and one-quarter of the rent to pay at the Windmill Pointe Manor apartments as she has now in her New York apartment.

Simon, 28, oversees all facets of the nationally distributed magazine.

"I have to deal with any problems that come up, plan the magazine, plan the cover and handle the billing and the freelance people," she said.

An artist, Simon has a bachelor of fine arts degree from the University of Michigan, and was a lithographer and painter for a time.

"I am still a painter," she said. She started working for the Grosse Pointe News as temporary replacement, but the job turned into a full-time position. She was with the paper from 1981 to 1984.

She said her favorite clients were Jim Causley Pontiac (they took out a full page ad a week) and Yorkshire Market, where she dealt with Ron Vitale, the market's owner.

The January issue of Interview featured a cover story interview with Diane Keaton, along with interviews of David Brenner, Valerie Bertinelli, Martin Scorsese, Keith Hernandez and Duran Duran.

"Just make sure and tell everyone I miss them, and I think about them. I'll get a letter off."

Simon is the daughter of John and Ruth Simon of East Detroit.

B & E fails

A Buckingham residence in the Park was the site of an attempted breaking and entering Jan. 16 while the residents were home.

According to Park police, someone tried to enter the house by prying open the screen door. When that effort failed the perpetrator attempted to kick the doors open, but the attempt was in vain.

Police were called to the scene but the individual had fled.

Preparing for the race

That's Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm, left, shaking hands with unannounced 1988 Republican presidential candidate, Donald H. Rumsfeld. The former secretary of defense told an audience at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church that there is no doubt he would be running for the 1988 Republican nomination, but that it was still unofficial. The talk, sponsored through the War Memorial, centered on foreign policy. Rumsfeld told the group that President Reagan was doing a good job, but that he didn't agree with the Iran arms sales and the funneling of funds to the contra fighters in Nicaragua. Rumsfeld was the chief of staff in the Gerald Ford administration, and is currently the chairman of the G.D. Searle Pharmaceutical Co.

Clair Shores and other destinations."

Let us, for the moment, hypothesize that outside interests could, through the agency of straw-men, purchase mansions on the Lakeshore for a shopping mall to service the proposed condominium development in the lower St. Clair Shores. The zig-zag cut through patterns, up and down the secondary streets, would be intolerable. Outside developers would not particularly care if Grosse Pointe Farms became a high-profit, high-crime, shopping slum like Southfield. We do not expect that to happen. Neither did the St. Clair Shores waterfront property owners expect a condominium development. All traffic studies must factor in any possible future major changes, particularly because Moran is a de facto extension of I-94, just as all major north and south streets in Southfield, Oak Park and lower Royal Oak became de facto extensions of I-75 and the Lodge, causing the deterioration of the area.

Library offers children's classes

The Grosse Pointe Public Library Children's Programs at Central Library and branches are ready to start the next session.

The pre-school story times, stories, songs and games for 3- to 5-year-olds run 30 minutes each and require pre-registration. Central library preschool story times run from Feb. 3 through March 25 and meet on Tuesdays at 1 and 2 p.m. as well as Wednesdays at 10:45 a.m. Woods Branch will hold its story times on Tuesdays at 1 and 2 p.m. from Feb. 3 through March 24, and Park Branch sessions will be Thursdays at 1 and 2 p.m. Feb. 5 through March 26.

Toddler Time is a 20-minute program of picture books, songs and fingerplays for 2-year-olds. Each tot must be accompanied by an adult and pre-registration is required. Due to demand for this program, registration is limited to one four-week session per season.

February and March sessions have been filled through waiting lists, and April as well as May sessions have been added to the program. The groups meet at 10:10 a.m. Wednesday mornings. April's session runs from April 1 through April 22, and May's runs from April 29 through May 20.

Grade school story times, held after school at 4 p.m. on Tuesdays at Park, Wednesdays at Woods and Thursdays at Central, run from Feb. 3 through March 26, last approximately a half-hour and need no registration.

The junior high improvisational acting group meeting at Central Library Wednesdays at 4 p.m. is primarily a workshop but performs on occasion for story times, scout troops and service groups.

Call Helen Gregory for details, 343-2082.

Last week during a 15-minute period, I counted 13 vehicles whizzing down my formerly quiet little secondary street: five passenger cars and eight small trucks and vans. Grosse Pointe Farms merchants making service calls and deliveries? I doubt that. But the volume and distribution is representative. The vans and trucks obviously were taking a short cut. The cars also, in my opinion.

We need at this time a major scientific traffic study, not a call to the voting booths, as Mr. Skomski has suggested, nor a discussion of our appointed city officials.

Let us above all keep cool heads.

Student Spotlight

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a project for woodworking, a book review.

Following is an essay on world hunger written by 12-year-old Matt Stentz, a sixth-grader at St. Paul School. He is the son of Keith and Joyce Stentz of Grosse Pointe Farms.

World hunger has a big impact on the way we live. This impact is much more than simply the shock we experience when we see photographs in our newspapers and magazines of starving children throughout the world.

The most obvious impact is on those who are hungry. Forty thousand people die each day of starvation and malnutrition. Starvation is defined as dying from lack of food, malnutrition is faulty or inadequate diet. But these definitions do not convey the painful deaths, the sadness, misery, personal loss and suffering of the poor and hungry of the world. Nor does the cold statistic of 40,000 deaths each day convey to us the enormous scope of world hunger.

For example, the population of Grosse Pointe Farms is 10,551 people. Imagine four times the population of our city dying each day of starvation and you have a better picture of the size of the problem.

World hunger is often a result of poverty, and people who are poor tend to stay poor. This is because they must spend most or all of their time looking for their next meal. They must beg, look through garbage and do whatever it takes just to stay alive. This robs them of the energy and the time to work at a job and to develop.

In addition, poor people often cannot get a good education because the area in which they live may not be able to afford good schools. This in turn helps to keep them and their children poor and hungry.

Hunger and lack of proper diet also affect people at birth. Sadly, many of the poor children of the world will not live beyond three years of age.

Hunger can also cause wars or conflicts between peoples and nations. This is because poor and hungry people are often easy victims for stronger groups and countries. This pattern of the strong attacking the weak has been seen throughout history.

Finally, hunger has an impact on those of us who have enough to eat. As Christians, we cannot look at a picture of a starving human being and not put ourselves in that person's place. The photographs alone move us with feelings of sorrow and a need to help, and if we saw starvation face to face those feelings would be even stronger.

World hunger reminds us that we are all one people and one world under the kingdom of God. We should way to help the poor and hungry and give them food, money and God's blessing. God told us that whatever we do for His people we do unto Him. To the extent that this happens, then world hunger could have a positive effect on us by making us more aware of our Christian responsibilities. The recent Live Aid concerts that gathered donations for the starving people of Africa are examples of this coming together of Christians.

But, as I have said, the greatest impacts of hunger are not good ones. We are poorer for each of the people who die from world hunger. For example, of the 40,000 people who will die tomorrow, who knows whether one of them might have been a great scientist, world leader, freedom fighter or even the next pope had he or she lived?

The world can never be truly happy or at peace as long as there are hungry people anywhere among us. We must find a way to feed the world, for all of our sakes, before it is too late.

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public and private school system from grades 1 through 12. Send your entry along with a picture to Student Spotlight, Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms 48236. If you would like everything returned, enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Priest-alumnus new principal

The Marist Fathers of Boston have appointed the Rev. Leon Olszamowski, S.M., Ph.D., a Notre Dame alumnus of the class of 1965, to become principal of Harper Woods Notre Dame High School. His term begins with the end of the 1986-87 academic year.

Olszamowski, a former St. Clair Shores resident and member of St. Joan of Arc parish, joined the Marist Fathers after his high school graduation. He received his undergraduate degree in English from Boston College.

After two years of high school teaching in Syracuse, N.Y., he began studies for the priesthood at Weston School of Theology and received his master of divinity degree in 1975. In the same year, he received a master of arts in education from the University of Notre Dame, Indiana.

Upon receiving an academic scholarship from the Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C., he entered a dual degree program, graduating with a master of arts in education administration in 1980 and a doctor of philosophy in religion and religious education in 1984.

Since his return to the Detroit area, Olszamowski has served as an administrator at Notre Dame High School and as an adjunct professor in the Religious Studies department at Madonna College. Olszamowski, a bi-ritual priest, splits his weekend ministry serving either St. Martin de Porres Parish in Warren or one of the Byzantine Catholic Churches of the Ruthenian Detroit deanery.

MICRO FURNACE: A FURNACE YOU CAN HOLD IN YOUR HAND

A furnace you can hold in the palm of your hand. It's a bit hard to believe — but it's true! It's called the Micro Furnace.

Three partners of a company called Michigan Micro Products Inc. have gained exclusive rights to sell the Micro Furnace throughout the State of Michigan. Developers of the Micro Furnace project over $200 million in U.S. sales in the coming year.

The Micro Furnace is the invention of a University of Toronto professor. A 6-inch cube weighing only 5 pounds, it has the capacity to deliver up to 5,200 BTU the instant you plug it in.

The Micro Furnace is Underwriters Laboratories approved, and its solid state heating elements have an unlimited life expectancy. The fan life is estimated to be 100,000 hours or 20 years of heating.

The Micro Furnace is totally fire safe. To demonstrate this, a match or a piece of paper can be left in the grill and never ignite. Furthermore, the unit is designed to run 24 hours a day and constantly remain cool to the touch.

What is even more amazing is the cost efficiency of this device. The Micro Furnace costs $8 to $10 a month when operated 8 to 10 hours a day. The variation depends on insulation factors and local electrical rates.

The Micro Furnace takes air from a room, filters it through a special micro semicon ductor disc, heats it to a maximum 380 degrees, and then blows the heated air out into the room. A filter catches dust from this air, purifying it while heating it. An internal thermostat maintains the desired room temperature as the heating discs adjust constantly to conserve electricity.

First introduced in Canada, the unit is now available for the first time in the U.S. Canadian suppliers have been unable to keep up with the demand.

The Michigan based company makes the Micro Furnace available through a network of direct sale dealers. The device retails for $169 with a five-year warranty.

For more information about the MICRO FURNACE call (313) 777-8386. Jim Gilster, authorized dealer. Will be demonstrated in St. Clair Shores at Colonial Antiques, 25701 Jefferson at Statler (4 blocks N. of 10 Mi.), 5-6 weekdays.

Investing

several times over the years, but it is a relatively young church and does not have holdings in stocks, according to its rector, the Rev. Robert Neily.

"It isn't something we've had to wrestle with, because there isn't much to manage," Neily said. "We had to have a capital improvement fund drive a few years ago because there were no funds set aside. We aren't living hand to mouth, but our endowment is in the bank."

A decision to invest church money ethically has been made at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, but the basic step of reviewing the portfolio has not yet been taken, said the Rev. James Carroll. He said the review is too big a project for the local congregation. "We would need the benefit of counsel from the denomination," he said. "With a large portfolio, it's almost impossible to be sure you've accomplished what you intend."

Because companies don't always like to divulge all the facts and because so many of them are conglomerates with subsidiaries performing some unrelated activity, it is hard to know what you're buying. Morton, for example, makes salt and rockets.

Or, "You wouldn't think government bonds would have a negative ethical impact," LeVan said, "but the money goes into the general fund, which pays for food stamps and housing, but also for defense and aid to the contras."

The Rev. Jack Mannschreck, of Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church, says the national body governs to a great extent what the local congregation does. The United Methodists have put together lists of social principles that are updated every four years.

"The list changes with the times," Mannschreck said. "It translates into both stock purchases and consumer boycotts."

Mannschreck said his church owns stock and tries to be conscious of what it buys, but is also conscious of the difficulty of knowing. "We have lots of money invested in banks," he said, "but where do they make their loans?"

The church has a specific stance on gambling, the rights of the aging and of religious minorities, alcohol and drugs, and abortion. "It would not be ethical to invest or buy a product from a company (that operates in opposition to those rights)," Mannschreck said. "But nothing's a pure issue any more. It's a matter of individual interpretation for each church."

"It's a continual battle. If everything were right out in the open from the beginning, a lot of investments wouldn't be made — that's how some churches end up with egg on their faces."

Donald Lindow Jr. is the incoming chairman of the endowment committee at Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church. He is faced with the question at church and at work, where he is in charge of institutional tax-free investing for the National Bank of Detroit.

"I worked with the University of Michigan on its South Africa-free investing," he said. "I have lived through this."

Lindow said Woods Presbyterian has never discussed ethical investing, but he has never brought up the question, and that he would not take it upon himself as the church investment adviser to start investing on a new principle.

"It's like opening a Pandora's Box," he said. "There are so many things to be socially conscious about. Where do you draw the line?"

"I'm handling other people money. People expect the church to be fiscally responsible. I don't want to limit the possibilities."

Lindow is particularly opposed to divestment in South Africa. "I believe that the companies that are signatories to the Sullivan Principles are doing good," he said. "If you remove those people, there's nobody left to champion those things. There are other companies licking their chops to get in (if we leave) — they don't care about human rights."

The real way to affect the direction of a company is to boycott its products, in Lindow's opinion. "Not buying the stocks is a meaningless gesture," he said. "If you really want to do something, don't buy the product. When it hits them on the sales side, management will start rethinking their policies."

The Presbyterian church on the national level has recently taken a stand against companies that manufacture military paraphernalia, the Washington Post reported in December. A ban would affect more than $2 billion held by the church and pension funds nationally, according to the paper, but does not constitute a binding order to local congregations.

Divesting of stocks held by pension funds can be sticky, said the Rev. Philip Wahl, pastor of St. Paul Lutheran Church. The American Lutheran Synod has spent the last eight to 10 years slowly divesting stocks in companies doing business in South Africa, Wahl said, but is running afoul of the "prudent-man rule" in the pension funds. "Prudent man" is a requirement to invest where the pension fund can realize the greatest return.

There are several ways economic pressure can be used to create positive social change, according to LeVan.

Institutions can simply avoid an objectionable company, a way of saying "not with my money, you don't," he said.

Institutions can use the positive approach, buying only stock in companies with approved activities, like providing housing or medical supplies or making loans to the underprivileged.

Institutions can use the activist approach. "This is based on the theory that the stockholders are the owners of the company," LeVan said. "Shareholders can present resolutions and act as what is disrespectfully called 'gadflies.' They can buy the stock, then work for change."

Carey and Smith, both EF Hutton brokers, are currently in "active dialogue" with the national groups of the Episcopal church, the Disciples of Christ, the Catholic church and one of the Lutheran synods.

Missing snowblower recovered

A snowblower from a Pemberton Road residence was reported missing Saturday, Jan. 17, but Park police had already found the machine.

According to police, officers located the snowblower, which was valued at $400, brought it to headquarters and had it tagged. When the theft was reported, the snowblower was returned to the grateful resident.

Apparently the patrol car had frightened off the would-be thief who abandoned the snowblower, police theorized.

Student is victim twice

A Grosse Pointe North shutterbug was the victim of two thefts that left him shuddering-mad.

The student reported that his camera and lenses valued at $450 were taken from his locker on Jan. 16. He reported the larceny to school officials who notified Woods police.

The next day, the student again reported that his locker had been burglarized. This time the thief took his camera flash attachment.

Though the locker was locked, an apparent defect allowed entry without the combination.

The value of the flash was $70. Police are investigating.

New house is first one built in 44 years

Woods builder takes a chance and wins — in Park

By Nancy Parmenter
Staff Writer

When John Pierce built a duplex on Maryland last summer, people scoffed. But when 26 people showed up to rent the units the first morning they were available, the scoffing stopped.

"Nobody wonders any more why I did it," said Pierce, a Grosse Pointe Woods builder.

The reason for building a house where no one had built anything since the beginning of World War II was simple: It looked like a good business proposition. Pierce says he isn't an urban pioneer or a do-gooder trying to save a decaying neighborhood.

"(Grosse Pointe Park City Manager John) Crawford showed me what the city was doing in that area," Pierce said. "He knows he can't let those two streets go. I expected something to be forthcoming, but there were no promises."

The city had already started trying to upgrade the area through improved street and sidewalk lighting and increased crime prevention. The tax increment finance district, which will "capture" taxes to be used for local improvements, was then still unplanned. But it turned out to be the icing on the cake of an already good business deal to Pierce.

Between the good response to the first duplex and the creation of the TIFA, things look so good that Pierce plans to start building a second duplex across the street as soon as the weather breaks.

"I think that area is very hot," he said.

So hot that he rents the two units at $100 to $125 more than typical rent on the street. And he's been offered more.

The two 1,100-square foot units rent for $475 apiece, but one renter gets a little deducted for shoveling the snow. Each unit has a wood deck at the entrance. Cabinet work throughout is of wood, and the kitchen has built-in dishwashers. The plain exterior is vinyl-clad aluminum, in keeping with the wood siding of the neighboring houses. The 30-foot lot has no room for a driveway, but there is rear parking for four cars off the paved alley.

Pierce built the duplex at a cost of $90,600, about $15,000 more than it would have cost to build up-and-down flats. But he says renters feel more at home in the side-by-side units with an upstairs.

The units are designed so that stairs and utility rooms divide the living areas and keep down noise. It's just one of the little extra touches Pierce threw in.

"We built in about $5,000 extra in ambience because it's Grosse Pointe," he said.

Pierce said he knew when he looked at the area that the project made sense. He is licensed in building, real estate and insurance and his company, John Pierce Associates, builds residential and business projects for investors in Grosse Pointe and throughout the state.

"I had the feeling for it, but you can't go to the bank with feelings," Pierce said. "The computer gave a sophisticated backup."

As it happened, banks didn't care about the computer backup any more than they did about feelings. Pierce was turned down. But he was confident about the project and went ahead — with several investors.

"Everybody has a way to determine whether a project is a good one," he said. "My formula is 100 times earnings. The rent times 100 is $94,000. It only cost $91,000 so it's already a positive cash flow."

Pierce's feelings were borne out by prospective renters, who swarmed in to look at the units when they opened in September. Many of them were from the neighborhood already, just looking for a bigger place.

"That area, if I'm reading it right, is almost our yuppie area," he said. "It's more cosmopolitan than the rest of Grosse Pointe. My tenants are successful fellows who wanted to live close to downtown."

Pierce said he discussed the project at length with Park officials before a shovel was ever stuck in the earth. "Not everybody does that, but it's typical for me to talk about it first," he said. "These building guys know the business, and that's what a builder wants. They have ideas that are good because they know their town.

"I go in to see them before I even order drawings or sign papers. Discussion makes a better project."

Woods builder John Pierce watches as project investor Dr. Robert Shopbach updates the office computer program. "Bob believed in this when the banks didn't," Pierce says. Pierce wrote the original program that projects five years ahead to assist in investment decisions. Shopbach comes into the office in his spare time and fine-tunes the program just for fun.

The two-unit duplex with decks front and back is the first new dwelling built on Maryland in four decades.

Mike Morecki, assistant director of Patient and Community Education, instructs and counsels Edmond Ahee of Grosse Pointe Shores about diabetes in a program tailored to his specific needs at St. John Hospital.

St. John educates diabetics in new outpatient program

More than 100 patients have received individualized outpatient diabetes education in the first year of a program at the Patient and Community Education Center of St. John Hospital.

"It is one of only a few programs in Michigan which has met the criteria necessary to have its services covered by Medicare, Medicaid, Crippled Children and General Assistance," said Camille Klimecki, coordinator of diabetes education and director of the Patient and Community Education Center.

An instructor-counselor works with each patient and family members to first find out how much he or she knows about diabetes and tailor an education program to meet his or her needs. Many take the education program after having been frustrated by classroom situations where people with varying knowledge have been brought together.

The program is designed to teach each patient and family member what they need to know to cope with diabetes, to comply with prescribed treatments, to counsel and offer emotional support and to make them aware of other sources of help.

Specifically, the program teaches patients and family members about how to cope with diabetes, types of therapy available, proper injection techniques, nutritional instruction, blood sugar monitoring and urine testing, low/high blood sugar emergencies, types of complicating illnesses, prevention of infections, skin and foot care, need for exercise and how to travel with diabetes.

The program is evaluated yearly by the Michigan Department of Health and ensure it meets 14 standards, which provide strict guidelines for counseling and instruction, assessing and documenting patients' needs with pre and post-testing, making sure patients have reached certain levels of competency in the general effects of diabetes, use of medication, diet, exercise, injection techniques, home glucose monitoring and understanding and management of the disease's complications.

For more information about the program, call the Patient and Community Education Center at 343-3870 Mondays through Fridays between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. St. John Hospital is located at 22101 Moross, west of Mack Avenue, one mile east of I-94.

Office/retail building sold

Extensive interior renovation is scheduled within the next three months at the office and retail shop complex located at McMillan and Kercheval on the Hill, said new owner Don Dodge, president of Dodge Investment Company.

Dodge Investment recently completed the purchase of the 24,000-square-foot facility from Colonial Central Savings of Mount Clemens. "We have an extensive interior renovation plan which will start in about 90 days," Dodge said. "All the suites and hallways will receive renovation work, and the grand entranceway will be getting special attention."

Dodge said that a local florist will set up a satellite shop in the entranceway.

"There is a current hold on rents," Dodge said about the tenants' leases. The lessees include Standard Federal Savings, Offerman and Company, a jewelry store, two women's clothing stores, a hair salon, a restaurant, and several professional offices. Dodge Investment has located a satellite office at the facility.

Dodge Investment is a 21-year-old Taylor-based real estate and investment firm. It has properties in six states including Michigan.

"We have no other properties in the Grosse Pointes, but we do have property in about six other Michigan communities," Dodge said. "What makes us different than most real estate investment firms is that we also do our own management."

Dodge said that there were no plans for major exterior renovation, but there are landscaping and outdoor beautification projects scheduled to begin this spring at the site.

Renovation will take about six months, Dodge said. He added that there will likely be some rent increases after.

"I don't think anyone believes we would continue to hold the line on rents, but any increases will be reasonable," Dodge said.

"We do plan to hold a reception, inviting local officials, the newspapers and business people in the area to see the renovations and meet us when the work is done," Dodge said.

Hospice: New definition of hope for terminally ill

The hospice movement substitutes comfort for cure

Carolyn Fitzpatrick, a resident of the Park, travels nationally to help local organizations set up hospice programs. She is the immediate past chairman of the National Hospice Organization. There are two hospice programs available in the Pointes, one through Cottage Hospital and one through Bon Secours.

By Elsa Frohman
 Feature Writer

The patients are almost never cured. The treatment ends when the patient dies. Most traditional medical programs would consider that to be the definition of failure.

But in the hospice movement the emphasis is not on a cure. The patients who enter this program have accepted death as inevitable. They measure their success in the quality of the remaining life — not the length.

"We try to make their last months what ever they want them to be," said Carolyn Fitzpatrick, a member of the executive board of the National Hospice Organization. A resident of Grosse Pointe Park, Fitzpatrick travels nationally to assist local organizations in starting hospice programs.

Hospice is not for everyone. It is not for anyone who still hopes for a cure and a return to health.

"It is for patients with progressive terminal illnesses," Fitzpatrick said. "For people with six months or less remaining, who are in the final stages of their illness."

Most hospice patients are victims of cancer and Alzheimer's disease. However, the hospice movement is also providing care for many AIDS patients.

"AIDS is one of the biggest areas for the growth of hospice care," Fitzpatrick said. "It is very helpful. They need exactly the skills we have developed."

A patient becomes a candidate for hospice care when he decides there is no more point to curative treatments, Fitzpatrick said.

"Once you've decided you've had enough, then the focus can be on the time you have left," Fitzpatrick said.

Most hospice programs focus on home care, Fitzpatrick said. In England, where the hospice movement began, hospices tend to be places. Here, the program provides a group of approaches, rather than an inpatient setting.

The hospice experience begins with counseling by a trained team of workers.

"We talk about goals," Fitzpatrick said.

The hospice medical team then goes to work on making the patient comfortable.

"Dying is painful, many times," Fitzpatrick said. "We specialize in aggressive pain control."

But the pain control is put into the hands of the patient. There are no more injections and no more intravenous tubes.

"We put the patient in control," Fitzpatrick said. "He can take as much as necessary."

Some might fear suicide if a terminal patient is given unlimited access to pain killers. But Fitzpatrick said that suicide is seldom a problem.

"Hospice is a very hopeful thing," she said. "You'd be surprised as how exhilarated people become when they are free of pain. They want to get their affairs in order, get their wills done, give things away while they can still enjoy it. They establish and re-establish relationships. Wonderful things happen in hospice care."

The goal of the hospice organization is to make it possible for the patient to live out his remaining life in any manner he wants. That might mean a trip to Florida while the patient is still able to get around, or it might mean providing support to the family so the patient can simply stay home.

"The family is overwhelmed," Fitzpatrick said. "We sit down and talk to them to find out where they need help. Some people don't even know. A skilled worker knows what to look for. They can pick up the fear and the depression."

Depression is normal, Fitzpatrick said. "If nobody was depressed, then we would start to worry. We think of ourselves as crisis managers. We come into people's lives at a very important time. We provide physicians, home health aides, nurses and homemakers."

The care plan might include a housekeeper to come in once a week to give the family some relief from the practical concerns of life.

"The psycho-social team comes in and asks, what's going on with this family?" Fitzpatrick said. "Are there children who need to be involved? Are there spiritual, financial or practical needs?"

The question is, what would enhance these people's lives? "Some people just want to be left alone," she said.

Paying for hospice care is seldom a problem, Fitzpatrick said.

"Almost all insurance plans have a hospice benefit," she said, "except for Blue Cross-Blue Shield (which is running a limited pilot project on hospice care). Private insurers are racing to add hospice benefits. They are thrilled to have hospice care."

Michigan has a mandate law, encouraging all private insurers to provide a hospice benefit. For those with no health insurance, Medicaid pays for approved hospice care.

"Hospice care is growing by leaps and bounds in most places," Fitzpatrick said. "Changes in the health care system make it more attractive. The terminally ill are the most expensive patients. We think the fact that our program is cost effective is a nice by-product."

Exchange Club donates $2,000 to urban studies

The Exchange Club of Grosse Pointe/St. Clair Shores recently donated $2,000 to the Center for Urban Studies through the Northeast Guidance Center. The facility provides counseling services to the Jefferson/Chalmers Neighborhood Family Resource Center under a program entitled "Nurturing Infants and Families Together." The program is administered by the Council on Early Childhood, Center for Urban Studies, at Wayne State University.

Accepting the check from club President Wayne Defour, was Charlene Firestone, executive director of the center and Marilyn Moss, co-director.

The unique program consists of parenting classes, parent/child creative activities, counseling, children's developmental programs, home visits, and indirect services. This year's contribution will also be used for field trips, various supplies, and food for the children.

The endorsement of the Exchange Club fits perfectly into the Neighborhood Family Resource Center's goals of providing a locally-based, cost and energy efficient program which strengthens families, with special concern for the prevention of child abuse and neglect," said Firestone. Defour said, "We are very pleased that we can be of help in the area of child abuse prevention by contributing to this program."

The Exchange Club of Grosse Pointe/St. Clair Shores meets every Thursday, at 7:30 a.m., at Gilbert's restaurant in St. Clair Shores. For more information regarding membership contact Mike Reynolds at 343-0176.

"Preludes East" committee women lend an appreciative ear to Detroit Symphony principal flutist Ervin Monroe, who will be featured, with pianist Fontaine Laing, at the opening concert-luncheon of the series, on Friday, Feb. 13, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. This is an annual project of the Women's Association for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. Photographed, left to right, Mahie Skaff, chairman, Mildred Murray, Monroe, Lenore Marshall and Marjorie Jewell. For information and reservations telephone 886-9102.

Preludes East:

Flutist to entertain at luncheon for Women's Association of symphony

Ervin Monroe, Detroit Symphony principal flutist, will be the featured artist at the first of a series of three "Preludes East" concert-luncheons, sponsored by the Women's Association for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, to be held on Friday, Feb. 13, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The formula for the occasion calls for a mini-concert at 11 a.m., immediately followed by luncheon at 12:15 p.m. Monroe, who will build his program around the theme, "The Flute Through the Ages," will be accompanied by pianist Fontaine Laing.

The second in the series, which brings the talents of Detroit Symphony Orchestra players to the Grosse Pointe community, will present the Ventura String Quartet on March 20. The members of the group are Marguerite Deslippe-Andrews, violin; Stacey Woolley, violin; Vincent Lioni, viola; Mario DiFiore, cello. Harpists Elyse Ilku and Jane Rosenon will be featured on Friday, April 10.

Detroit Symphony patrons are familiar with the artistry of Monroe, who came to the orchestra in 1968, at 25 years of age, as principal flutist. A native of Louisiana, he grew up in Florida and earned two degrees in flute performance — a bachelor's from Oberlin Conservatory of Music and a master's from Manhattan School of Music.

Despite the demands of his DSO schedule, he finds time to teach on the music performance faculties of Wayne and Oakland Universities and has also taught summers at the University of Michigan. A former conductor of both the Oakland Youth Symphony and the Southfield Symphony Orchestra, Monroe is also past president of the National Flute Association, at whose 15th convention he will perform this summer in St. Louis. He is a columnist for the Flutist Quarterly and his articles have been widely printed abroad.

Mahie Skaff heads up the "Preludes East" committee, assisted by Dorothea Vermeulen, Marjorie Jewell, Mary Nolan, Lenore Marshall and Elly Bundesen. The advisors are Marianne Endicott, Johanna Gilbert and Jean Carmen and promotion is being handled by Ann Bielawski, Audrey France, Charlotte Benjamin, Mildred Murray and Katherine Wasserfallen. Alice Haidostian is the current president of the Women's Association for the Detroit Symphony.

Series of three concert-luncheons, $32; series of three concerts only, $15; individual concert-luncheon, $12.50. For reservations and information please telephone 886-9102.

Project Hope to hold fashion show

The Pastor's Corner

A Lack of Roses

By the Rev. Don Lichtenfelt
Redeemer United Methodist Church

Some years ago Vonda and I were watching the television series "The Trapped Housewife." The lead actress portrayed a housewife who felt trapped and depersonalized by her role in life. The pressures, the loneliness and emptiness of her life became too much. She attempted suicide.

As she lay dying, the words of a poem floated through her mind:

*"I hear them whisper,
as her family mourns,
That she bore the bite of a thousand thorns.
I think she did not die of thorns,
As everyone supposes,
But simply from A LACK OF ROSES."*

Love and appreciation, and all the other roses we can give one another, work miracles. They brighten dark corners. They make dull jobs exciting. They make life worth living even in drab conditions. People may do things well out of a sense of duty, but they do things beautifully out of a sense of love.

My first bishop, F. Gerald Ensley, out in North Iowa, used to tell of the old farmer who gazed tenderly at his wife as they sat in the living room one evening. "Martha," he said, "sometimes I love you so much, it's all I can do to keep from telling you so."

How many times have you and I had feelings like that -- and squelched them? But, as Sister Corita says, "The love in your heart wasn't put there to stay. Love isn't love 'till you give it away."

It would take so little effort for you and me to "make someone's day" today. Let's take a moment to write a note of appreciation to someone who deserves it. (Notes like that can be, and are, read again and again -- then saved.) A token gift with a thoughtful note ... an unexpected phone call to someone who's alone and hurting ... all these are roses, the kind someone near you may be dying for lack of.

Another way of saying it is: "Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God, and he who loves is born of God and knows God." (1-John 3:7) And "The great acts of love are done by those who are habitually performing small acts of kindness."

This column is written on a rotating basis by members of the Grosse Pointe Ministerial Association.

Hospice

But there are still many places that don't have hospice programs and that is what Fitzpatrick and the National Hospice Organization are working to eradicate.

"There are 80 hospice programs in Michigan," Fitzpatrick said. "That's quite a few. But they vary a great deal. It is still in the developmental stage. Some programs are very small." Eighteen of the 80 programs in Michigan are Medicare certified.

Fitzpatrick was president of the National Hospice Organization for two years, then chairman for two years, after the group reorganized. Now, she is immediate past chairman.

One of the major problems facing hospices is finding the right workers and training them to deal with the terminally ill.

"The first question I ask someone is why do you want to do this?" Fitzpatrick said. "It is important to select people who don't have to get anything, who want to give. You can't expect to get something back. They have to be really compelled."

It is also important to give the workers the opportunity to grieve for the patients who die.

"They do get depressed," Fitzpatrick said. "We don't want anyone who doesn't care enough to be saddened by the loss of a life. We have to make sure they have a chance to get over each case. It's a lot of loss."

"But we look at it differently," she said. "We redefine the word hope. We ask, what can we do to make the last months meaningful and comfortable? If we made it better, we feel good. That's not so depressing."

There are two hospice programs available to Grosse Pointers. Cottage Hospital has one program, and Bon Secours operates a satellite program of the Hospice of South-eastern Michigan, headquartered on the westside.

Tennis & Crumpets raises $98,000 for Children's

Members of Tennis & Crumpets, Inc. recently presented Children's Hospital of Michigan with a check for $98,000 representing the group's 1986 fundraising efforts through tennis parties and tournaments.

The contribution will be used for electrophysiological equipment. The purchase of a radiotelemetry telefactor system and the Compact 4 Nicolet system will provide Children's Hospital neurologists with tools to perform detailed, noninvasive analyses of brain, spinal cord and nerve functions.

With the radiotelemetry telefactor, physicians can have a continual analysis of the child's brain wave function while a television monitor simultaneously records the child's activities. This gives a comprehensive understanding of sleep disorders, epilepsy, near-miss sudden infant death syndrome and the numerous disorders that mimic seizures.

The Compact 4 Nicolet System will provide a means of performing non-invasive analysis of spinal cord function and provide information that could prevent complications during certain surgical procedures. This system is also very helpful in recognizing hearing and visual impairment and allows for the early diagnosis and institution of therapy.

With a better understanding of the function of the spinal cord and nerves, physicians are able to avoid more serious invasive procedures that could be uncomfortable and of some risk to the child. The information gained from this will hopefully provide a means of early identification of problems while they are easier to treat and before long-term serious complications of auditory, visual,

Tennis & Crumpets, Inc. was founded as a nonprofit corporation in 1967 by a small group of Grosse Pointe women interested in child philanthropy. Today its membership numbers over 2,000 and extends from Grosse Pointe to Western Wayne County and from Dearborn to Oakland County.

To date, Tennis & Crumpets, Inc. has donated $1,260,658 to Children's Hospital of Michigan.

Health workshop for seniors planned at Cottage

"HealthyLife for Seniors," a workshop at Cottage Hospital, proves that growing old doesn't have to mean growing ill. The workshop is designed for older adults, marking the way to a more vigorous life and overall well-being.

The program consists of two three-hour sessions, Wednesday, Feb. 4 and 11, 9 a.m. to noon, in Boardroom A, on the lower level of the hospital. The hospital is located at 159 Kercheval Avenue, between Moross and Cadieux roads.

"HealthyLife for Seniors" was designed by the American Institute for Preventive Medicine. Its goal is to enable seniors and retirees to alter good health practices while building upon the good health behaviors that already exist. There is a $10 fee for the program, which includes the workbook. Reservations are required and may be made by calling 881-1800 Monday through Friday, between 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

In the workshop, participants explore health topics that are of particular concern to older adults and retirees. Discussions involve common medical problems, medications, health insurance, dental care and home safety. The negative effects of stress and the benefits of physical fitness, good nutrition and weight control also are covered.

For more information, call 881-1800.

O'Connor

Friday night at the basketball game . . .

It's too cold to stay outside tonight. What better place to spend a January evening than in a warm, cozy gym, watching University Liggett School go after its ninth consecutive victory?

The guy at the door is nicer than 99 percent of the ticket-takers I deal with: he glances at my press pass, smiles and waves me in.

Liggett's JV has a nine-point lead with less than four minutes to go against Huron Valley Lutheran's JV. No problem.

Huron Valley Lutheran is known as HVL. Sounds like a flu strain. Or a speaker system.

Very funny. While I'm chuckling to myself, HVL has tied things up.

The crowd is pretty big and noisy, not bad for the JV game and ULS's tiny gym is filling up even more for the main event.

Uh-oh. HVL is up 44-43.

It's okay, though. The Knights ice it with a lay-up with one second to go.

I always like that little ripple of excitement in the gym when the varsity team takes the floor. Tonight, ULS's big guys come out to the "Eye of the Tiger" theme song.

Only they don't look so big. I don't know what I was expecting of them. I guess I figured that with a 9-0 record, they'd have the Twin Towers or something.

I don't know. ULS kind of reminds me of my old high school, Detroit Servite. Servite had a motto back in the early 1970s: A small school doing big things. That's kind of what ULS is doing this year, I guess. And hey, Servite of the 1970s wasn't too shabby when it came to prep basketball. The Panthers were runners-up in Class C in 1974.

ULS can't buy a bucket. The Knights are a little off in the shooting department.

I just figured out what I like about John Yancey. He doesn't need to look where he's passing. He senses where his teammates are and gets the ball to them. You can't teach that, you have to be born with it.

That's better, ULS leads 15-6 after one quarter.

Pretty sloppy basketball on both sides, though. Lots of fouls and some turnovers.

Hey, everybody talks about Yancey, but Kevin Crociata isn't a bad little shooter.

33-20 at the half. The HVL JV is out of the locker room and sitting in the top row of the bleachers behind me. "I sure hope that No. 34 is a senior," one of them says, referring to ULS's big rebounding senior William Middlebrooks. "I don't want to play him next year."

The crowd is pretty quiet. I'm a little disappointed. I thought that the fans would stomp it up a little more for an undefeated team. Maybe they don't know what to do.

I clap and I can't help it. Yancey's gliding lay-ups are things of beauty. They get the crowd going, too.

It's 58-35 after three quarters and Coach Chuck Wright is substituting freely.

Somehow, I don't think that this is Liggett's best game of the year. I sure hope they play better against Plymouth Christian on Feb. 20. I've got a hunch they will.

The HVL fans keep screaming about ULS being in the key for three seconds. Sorry, guys. Liggett's just so good, they make it seem like they're standing under the basket for an hour.

Now I know why I don't sit in the front row of the bleachers at all the basketball games. The cheerleaders get a little too loud down there.

At this point, HVL's cheerleaders are beginning to get on my nerves and I'm kind of glad ULS doesn't have cheerleaders. "Hoo, sa, sa, sa" times 12 would be a little much.

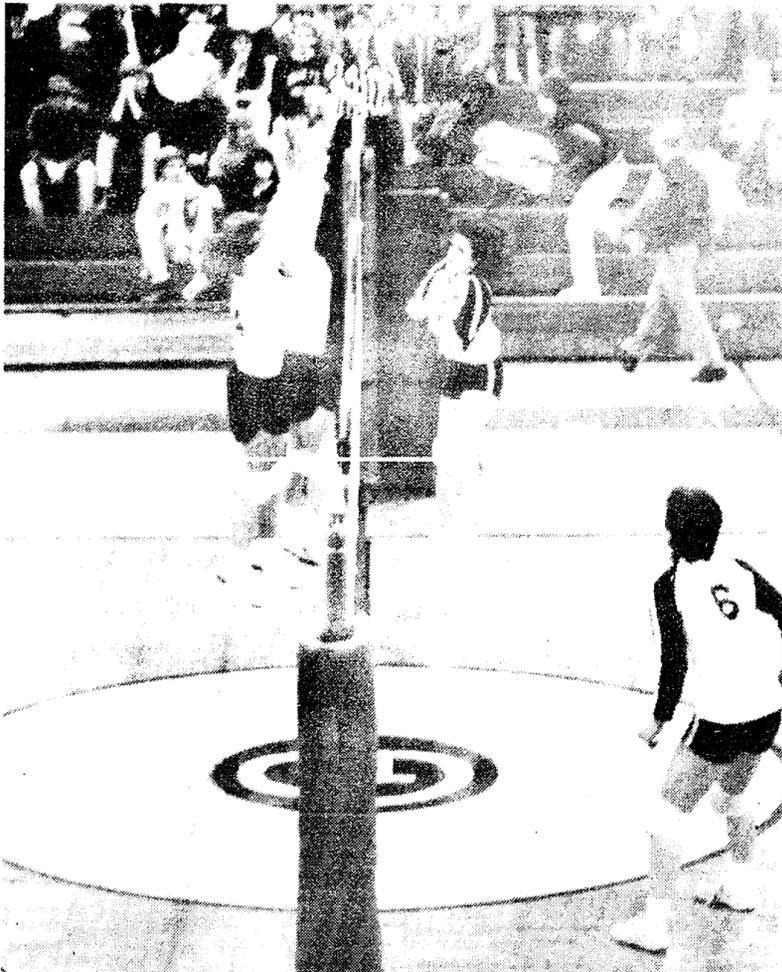

Now I'll get a bunch of nasty letters from cheerleaders.

It's late in the fourth quarter and Wright takes Yancey out of the game. Not a bad night for the junior: 23 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists.

The biggest thrill left for HVL at this point is whether their forward will make a foul shot and cut the lead to 38 points.

He doesn't. ULS wins it, 78-39.

Now I know what all the fuss is about. Bring on the districts.

Local coaches' response lukewarm

By Peggy O'Connor

Paul Diegel's aim is to give kids in Grosse Pointe, Mount Clemens, St. Clair Shores, Warren and Troy a better shot at college athletic scholarships. Diegel, a former coach, physical education teacher and high school and college baseball player, is district manager of Scouting Report, an outfit which bills itself as the nation's largest high school athlete scouting service.

For a fee, Scouting Report will provide continuous information about an athlete to colleges at all levels (NCAA Division I, II, III, NAIA, etc.). The service includes a personal interview, a personal profile, monthly off-season reports, individual game reports, a post-season summary, a game video, a personal game video for the athlete and other assistance.

The profile includes the athlete's picture and details academic, athletic and physical attributes plus Scouting Report's evaluation of the athlete's character, attitude and potential. It is distributed to 650 colleges in America.

The basic price for the service is $350; $550 for the program including the video.

Is it worth it?

"I certainly think so," Diegel said. "We're targeting the good athlete and good student/athlete who might not get the exposure he or she deserves. Say the athlete played on a losing team, or for a very small school or in a sport considered a 'minor sport' like field hockey or lacrosse. That's the athlete we want to help."

The colleges have been especially responsive to Scouting Report's service, he added. "Many times in a college situation, there is a one-man recruiting department. A small college in Kansas isn't going to recruit much in Michigan. But if we can send them information on a talented Michigan athlete, then the school and the athlete benefit," Diegel explained.

He cautioned that Scouting Report will consider an athlete's grades before it will contract with the student to perform the service. "We won't sign an athlete who is not a legitimate prospect. If the student's grades aren't up there or if we are sure we won't be able to get some kind of aid, we won't sign him."

Scouting Report claims that 85 percent of the student/athletes who subscribe to the service get some type of aid; that figure jumps to 95 percent if the program commences before the athlete is a high school senior. "It's See SCOUTING, Back Page

Two-time Olympic diving medalist battles illness, age and keeps smiling

By George E. Van
 Special Writer

Life can't lick you if you refuse to be licked.

And Betty Pinkston Campbell, a two-time U.S. Olympic gold medalist in diving, is proof of that. "Four different times the doctor told us, 'I'm sorry, your mother is dying. We have done all we can do,'" said Mrs. Campbell's daughter Betty Colton, of Grosse Pointe Farms.

But the competition — hanging on to life, not diving — had to go on for Betty Campbell. Now a feisty 83, she has battled cancer, a stroke, deafness and blindness and managed to stay ahead. Remarkably, she can always come up with a laugh that lifted the spirits of all.

The former diving queen lived in Palm Beach, Fla., until recently when Mrs. Colton and her twin brother Clarence (Buster) Pinkston, of New York, brought her north. Today, Betty Pinkston Campbell is walking down the hall of St. Anne Nursing Center on Detroit's east side, using a walker and joking with those around her. And she says she's sure the walker will soon be discarded.

What's happening is truly a miracle, say the St. Anne staff. It's really just another success in the life of this gutsy woman.

The meeting of Betty Becker of Philadelphia and Clarence "Pinkie" Pinkston, a Stanford University graduate engineer, was a shipboard romance that continued while the pair competed in the Olympic games in Paris. It was a sweet excitement beyond fiction. In 1920, Pinkie Pinkston had won the gold in three-meter springboard diving and in Paris in 1924, took second in the event.

Betty Becker, meanwhile, captured her first Olympic gold — in the three-meter springboard — and won the hand of Pinkston as well. They married when they returned home and in 1926 Betty Pinkston gave birth to the twins.

That same year, Mr. Pinkston was hired by the Detroit Athletic Club as coach and athletic director. And Betty Pinkston went back into training with Pinkie as her coach.

They went to the 1928 Olympics in Amsterdam, where Betty took the 10-meter platform diving gold medal. She told friends, "Imagine a mother of twins, flinging herself off a three-story building, doing fancy somersaults!"

Betty Colton recalls her mother's tales of what life was like for the few female Olympians in the 1920s. "She loved it all because she was treated like a combination of a princess and a Playboy Bunny . . . and going into the 1928 games must have been a relief for her, getting away from us twins," Mrs. Colton said with a laugh.

Pinkie Pinkston became one of the most respected swimming and diving coaches in the country, counseling such greats as backstroker Adolph Keifer, distance men Ralph Flanagan and Buster Crabbe and divers Dutch Smith, Pete des Jardins, Mickey Reilly and Georgia Coleman.

IN 1936, he was named coach of the U.S. women's Olympic diving team for the Berlin games. The Pinkstons traveled to Germany by boat in the company of Eleanor Holm, a great beauty and the world's best female backstroker at the time. But when Avery Brundage, U.S. Olympic chief, spotted Holm sipping champagne at dinner with the Pinkstons, he kicked her off the Olympic squad.

Holm's dismissal from the team was a story that went around the world. The Pinkstons said — and the sports world agreed — that Holm had been given a bum rap.

The Pinkstons were never away from swimming. They helped found the Michigan Interclub Swimming Association made up of top area clubs which fostered Parcells School boasted both a championship and a comeback in girls' basketball this season. The eighth grade (above) finished its season in a tie for the title with a 9-2 record. High scorers were Lori Haskell and Stephanie Hitch with 75 points. Amy Austin averaged eight rebounds per game. The team included, from left to right, (front) Gail Marlow, Karen Bova, Hitch, Beth Weber,

Kim Senter; (back) coach Jackie Sage-Phillips, Haskell, Patti Fasse, Austin, Amy Higgins, Erica Mumma and Danielle Fields. Parcells' seventh graders bounced back from an 0-4 mark to finish at 5-5. ## Knights icers take eighth straight; cagers win ninth

After defeating Birmingham Andover, 5-2, Jan. 22, the Knights traveled to Ann Arbor on Saturday to play Metro rival Ann Arbor Huron. In picking up their eighth win in a row, the ULS icers completely dominated, outshooting Ann Arbor, 48-25, and outscoring them 4-2. ULS, at 10-4-1, is now ranked No. 9 in Class B-C-D in the state.

Against Andover, Jeremy Belenky's play in goal was solid as he stopped numerous scoring chances. Doug Wood, Brandon Pelok and Charlie Roby scored for ULS. Pahl Zinn, Mike Coello, Jonathon Davis, Chip Davis and Bob Jewett assisted on the Knights' goals.

Against Huron, eight ULS players tallied. The game was deadlocked at 1-1 in the first on a beautiful tip-in by Pelok. At the 11:08 mark of the second, ULS scored to put the Knights ahead. The third period was filled with excellent play on both sides until the persistent Knights opened it up with a two-goal blast late in the third.

Coach John Fowler's team plays host to University School of Milwaukee this Saturday, Jan. 31, at 11 a.m., and plays Detroit Country Day School the following Saturday, Feb. 7, at 6 p.m. Both games are at McCann Rink.

Previously, ULS used the strong goaltending of Belenky and the goal scoring of the "red" line to take a convincing 6-1 win over South Lyon on Jan. 17.

The Knights opened the scoring with a two-goal outburst halfway through the first period on tallies by Andrew Galsterer and Doug Wood. Galsterer's goal came on a rebound off a Bob Jewett shot, senior blueliner Blasko Ristic picked up the other assist. Wood, the high scoring rookie forward, notched his first of two goals of the night when he converted a Jewett pass with 10 seconds left in the opening period.

The second and third periods saw the action pick up as the Knights passed and skated well. "The forechecking was furious," said assistant coach Joe Hubbuck, "and the backchecking was very strong."

"Jeremy Belenky was solid between the pipes," said goalie coach John Murphy.

Co-captain Bob Jewett scored at the 6:07 mark of the second period, with center Wood collecting the lone assist on the goal. "Bob Jewett played one of his best games of the year tonight," Coach Fowler said after the game. "His goal and two assists were the result of hard, determined work. As a matter of fact, the entire team is working extremely hard. Our team has many goals and everybody works to achieve every one."

The third period scoring barrage began with an unassisted goal by Wood. Fierce ULS forechecking forced South Lyon to turn the puck over time after time in its own zone. Freshman defensive standout Mike Coello fired home a low drive from the point at the 7:21 mark, with an assist coming from his blueline partner, Ted Evans. Charlie Roby finished the scoring when he punched in a Bill Jewett rebound. Pelok assisted on the play.

Cagers roll on

The ULS varsity basketball team remained on top of the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference standings with a 78-39 thrashing of Huron Valley Lutheran on Jan. 23. The victory lifted ULS to a 9-0 overall record. The team's 7-0 league mark gives it a slim, one-game lead over Plymouth Christian.

The game was settled in the first quarter. The Knights held Huron Valley to six points, all foul shots, while scoring 15. Senior David Chilingirian got the Knights on track, scoring nine first quarter points. Early foul trouble hurt the ULS attack, however. Kandia Milton and William Middlebrooks had two fouls each before four minutes had elapsed.

"Our effort was good, but we are still a bit slow beating people to spots," said coach Chuck Wright. "We often get into early foul trouble because we come out slow afoot. Overall, though, our team defense is getting better all the time."

John Yancey led four players into double figures, scoring 23. He also had 11 rebounds and 10 assists. Milton added 16 points; Chilingirian and Middlebrooks chipped in with 10 each. Kevin Crociata and Bill Lucken hit for nine and eight points, respectively.

ULS hosts Lutheran Northwest on Friday night, Jan. 30 at 7:30 p.m.

The JV team extended its winning streak to six and its overall record to 7-2.

On Jan. 23, the Knights defeated Huron Valley Lutheran (HVL) 47-45 in the final two seconds when forward Anthony Abiragi drove the baseline and put the ball through the hoop. HVL quickly called a timeout and put up a desperation shot, but to avail.

Coach John Wienshienk had called time out with 18 seconds left to play, when the score was tied 45-45. He told his players to get the ball to Abiragi, who was the best foul shooter on the team. Instead of getting fouled, Abiragi made the layup for the win.

High scorers on the team were Mike Niccolini with 15 points, and Ti Juan Kidd with 10.

The ULS swim team hosted its first home meet at Parcells Middle School pool on Jan. 16. Visiting Cranbrook defeated ULS, 65-17. Even though the score was not in ULS's favor, Kelly FitzSimons, Varick Foster, Victoria Martin, Tip Quilter, Steve Sanchez, Erika Teitge, Neil Weyhing, Bruce Wilkinson and Elizabeth Wisgerhof all swam their best times this season.

ULS traveled to Dundee High School on Jan. 13. Quilter took first place in the 200 IM and second in the 500 Free. Dan Shanle was touched out of first place by 1/100 of a second in the breaststroke and Jesse Bowman debuted as a backstroker.

Cagers roll over feisty Lakeview, 61-45

By Josh Abbott
Special Writer

After a low start, the North High varsity basketball team blew by a scrappy Lakeview squad to capture its sixth win in nine games, 61-45.

The Huskies led 14-9 at the end of the first quarter, but North outscored them 11-0 in the next four minutes to take the lead for good. Junior center Marc Demanigold, with five points, and junior forward Russell Rice keyed the outburst with tough rebounding at both ends. North went on top by seven at halftime and streaked to the win.

The Norsemen showed a balanced attack. Junior center Karl Schultz led the team in scoring for the fourth straight game with 13 points. Senior guard Dave Justice added 11 points, senior forward Scott Reiter had 10 points and junior Kirk Lowry chipped in with eight. Nine players scored for North.

The win gave the Norsemen a 2-1 mark in the Bi-County. The boys played Utica Ford (after press time) Tuesday and travel to L'Anse Creuse on Feb. 3.

Sophomore center Matt Brady scored 24 points to lead North's JV to an 87-48 blowout win over Lakeview. The Norsemen's full-court press broke open a close game midway through the first quarter. Trailing 8-7, North rolled off 13 straight points to take the lead. The Huskies rallied to cut that lead to 32-26 at halftime and got to within five early in the second half before Brady and North went on a 14-2 run to seal the victory.

Scott Schorer had 17 points, freshman Charlie Stumb added nine points and Kevin McCarron and Scott Clein added eight each as 10 players got in on the scoring. The JV is 6-3 overall, 3-0 in the league.

Icers hot

Hot after stunning No. 2-ranked Ann Arbor Pioneer, North's varsity hockey team gave the Knights a 3-2 victory. The goals were assisted by John Maycock (both), Colin FitzSimons and Billy Robb.

On Jan. 14 at Cranbrook John Morreale scored with two minutes left, assisted by Matt Moroun and Gary Corona for another 3-2 victory. Nick Giorgio, assisted by Chad Yates, also scored.

Gymnasts fall

South's varsity gymnastics team suffered two losses in its first two meets of the season. The first was to Royal Oak Dendero 117.55-94.35 and the second to Edsel Ford 115.40-100.55.

Despite the losses, South had

On Tuesday, Jan. 20, goalie Tom Best earned his first shutout of the season in a 2-0 victory over Royal Oak First of America. Goals were scored by Corona and Morreale, assisted by John Combs, Brian Blatt and Matt Moroun.

Then on Jan. 23, coach Ted Dickson's Knights conquered a tough Royal Oak B.&J. team, 4-

2. Corona had three goals and an assist for his first career hat trick. Vince Van Bael scored the other goal, and Peter Megler, Colin FitzSimons and Jamie Goodyear registered the other assists.

some outstanding performances by key members of the team. In the Dondero meet, sophomore Karen Trefzer took third place on vault and sophomore Monica McDermott also took a third on the balance beam.

In the Edsel Ford meet, Trefzer took second place on vault and freshman Mary Nairn took an impressive second place on beam in her first competition.

South has been in the rebuilding stage for over three years. Coach Jan Mason hopes for the best in her last year at South.

Frosh win

South's freshman volleyball team trounced Powell 15-0, 15-7, on Wednesday, Jan. 21.

Top scorer for the Devils was Ellen McGahey with 12 points.

Gymnastics

If there's a sport that not many people are aware of at North, it's gymnastics. Led by first-year coach Mary Dube (and assistant Linda Dixon) the Lady Norsemen are 3-2 and ranked No. 9 in the state.

To qualify for the regionals, a team must attain 115 points and North has either come close to or has achieved that total in every meet.

How important is experience in the sport of gymnastics? "It is very, very important," Dube says. One of North's disadvantages this year is that many of the members of the 19-girl team don't have the number of years of experience it takes to be a top gymnast. Dube commented that the team has performed well despite this, and despite an injury to team leader senior Jill Broadman.

One of North's brightest stars is freshman Jennifer Dube. She has been involved in competitive gymnastics for many years. Dube considers her to be outstanding

Feeling Fit

By Deanna Hawthorne

Cooling down

A "cool-down" after your aerobic workout helps your muscles to relax. It's a time that allows your circulatory system to slow down gradually. A proper cool-down will help minimize soreness and stiffness and will help you wind down after your routine, leaving you feeling relaxed and pleasantly loose.

Ease out of the activity slowly. Slow your pace if you are walking or running. Swing your arms less vigorously. If you're cycling or swimming, pedal or stroke slowly for a minute or two before you stretch.

Use these cool-down stretches to fine-tune your muscles. When a muscle works, it contracts; its fibers shorten and bulk up. Stretches counteract the effects of stress on muscles by helping them and the connective tissue to relax and strengthen. If the body's connective tissues aren't stretched frequently, they can become tight and limit range of movement.

Do the stretches SLOWLY. No bouncing. Don't stretch further than is comfortable. Eventually you will loosen up and become more flexible and will be able to stretch farther.

To stretch the muscles of the lower leg and the Achilles' tendon: Stand upright approximately three feet from a wall or post. Keeping the feet flat on the floor, extend the arms forward, touching the wall and slowly allow the body to lean forward. Hold the stretched position for 20 seconds.

To stretch the hamstrings and lower back muscles: Assume a sitting position with the legs extended forward and pressed flat on the floor. Grasp behind the knees and slowly pull the trunk down toward the knees, holding the stretched position for 20 seconds.

To stretch the muscles in the lower back and buttocks: Lie on the back with legs extended forward. Bring the right knee up and into the chest, pulling the knees with the hands and arms as far forward as possible. Hold in the fully stretched position for 20 seconds, then repeat with the opposite leg.

To stretch the muscles of the neck and upper back and to promote abdominal strength: Lie on the back with the knees bent and the hand behind the head or neck. Slowly curl the head and shoulders forward to approximately a 45 degree position. Hold for five seconds.

Diet, exercise programs become healthy habit for Farms woman

By Peggy O'Connor
Sports Editor

Chris Clay is pretty pleased with herself these days. She's got a right to be, after a change in eating and exercise habits resulted in a dramatic weight loss of 47 pounds in a little over three months.

Then ... Clay says she really wasn't aware of her weight gain.

"I'm really happy. And the exciting part is that I changed my way of eating in the process so that this time, I think I'll be able to keep it off," Clay says.

Clay wasn't grossly overweight; just enough to be uncomfortable. She'd gone through a weight loss program and managed to lose but gained the weight right back. Then last July, after several weeks of traveling and dining in restaurants followed by several more weeks of hosting (and feeding) houseguests, Clay decided that she'd better do something.

"I have this friend, Betsy Creedon, who had lost a great deal of weight a few years ago. I tucked that in the back of my mind and said that if I ever wanted to lose weight, I'd go where she went," Clay says.

She went to Diet Center in Grosse Pointe, where she was put on a four-phase program, which included conditioning, reducing, stabilizing and maintenance phases. Currently, she is on the maintenance phase and weighs in three mornings per week.

"That's basically for support. I feel better right now if I go on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. I'll probably cut that down to two, then one," Clay explains.

What Clay liked best about her weight loss program was that it taught her to make food choices — not force herself to eat certain things — and how to live a normal life with those choices.

"The first day I was on the program I had to take my mother-in-law to the hospital for tests. Here I was, in the waiting room at Bon Secours, reading this little sheet of paper which told me what I should eat and drink at 10 o'clock and 2 o'clock and so on. So I just sat there and pulled out my chicken breast and ate it and reached into my little bag of vegetables and ate them. You know what? Nobody cares when you do things like that.

"I guess what was most important to me about the program was the problem-solving that went along with the diet. I lead a busy, active life. And I did not give up one thing to go on this diet. I go out to dinner and I travel and I go to parties. I just changed the way I ate, not my lifestyle.

"There's no use in being thin if you are going to have to live in a closet," Clay says.

She has learned to keep cooked chicken breasts, cut-up vegetables and fresh fruit handy to make fixing quick lunches and dinners easier and to eliminate snacking on cookies or candy. And when Chris and her husband Henry Clay dine out — as they often do — she has found that most restaurants are quite willing to accommodate dieters.

"When we go out for breakfast after church on Sundays, I'll order a two-egg omelet and request that it's cooked without butter or fat. Then I'll order one-half of a melon and boy, that really fills me up," Clay says.

In addition to her dieting, Clay has stepped up the exercise program she began at Grosse Pointe's Vital Options three years ago. "It seemed that back then, the more I exercised, the more I ate. That was because I thought that exercising alone would take off or firm up the fat somehow. But when I started reducing, I went from three times weekly to five times. I still try to go five, I always make three and usually its four times per week," she says.

The beauty of her program, Clay says, is that she's up at 6 a.m., down to exercise class (which combines aerobics and floor routines) from 6:30 to 7:30 a.m. then over to the Diet Center to weigh in. She's finished with the entire routine and ready to begin her regular schedule by 8 a.m.

"I love it. I feel better and I didn't get all flabby with the great loss of weight."

Clay says she'll continue her eating and exercise habits for the rest of her life. The potential to backslide is always there, she warns. "Like last weekend, when I decided to eat everything in sight. I don't know why, but the urge was there. When I went to the Diet Center by Monday, I'd gained four pounds. They said 'hey, you had a bad weekend.' I went back to my reducing foods and by Wednesday it was off," Clay says.

Clay credits a supportive husband and her daughter for helping her through the tough moments on the diet. Youngest son Andy Clay, a Marine, was home for the holidays and when he saw his "new look" mom for the first time he exclaimed "Mom, where have you gone?"

Clay's oldest son Steve still hasn't seen his slimmed down mother. And that's another incentive for Clay to remain on the program she says.

"I'll see him in May when he graduates ... no way am I going to jeopardize it and gain anything before then. He doesn't even know I've been dieting. Boy, I can hardly wait to see the look on his face."

Sugar substitutes

Sweetness has long been a taste which has ingratiated itself to man's tastebuds. Even early man determined a food's safety based on its taste: sweet signified good; bitter meant bad. The assumption that sweet is synonymous with good has continued to hold true. Man's infatuation with sweetness, coupled with the demands of a weight- and health-conscious society, has led to a search for the perfect sugar substitute.

Sugar substitutes can be broken down into two basic categories: nutritive and non-nutritive. Nutritive sweeteners are referred to as such because they contribute calories to the diet.

Aspartame: Aspartame is probably the best known sweetener on the market today. It appears under the trade name NutraSweet and can be found in a wide range of products. "Equal" is not NutraSweet; it contains a combination of NutraSweet and corn syrup. Aspartame is made from two amino acids and is therefore metabolized the same as protein. Aspartame received the Food and Drug Administration's stamp of approval in 1981. Though its safety has been challenged several times, aspartame has been ruled safe, most recently by the U.S. Supreme Court. The major problem with aspartame is that it cannot be heated for long periods at high temperatures without losing sweetness.

Sugar Alcohols: Better known as xylitol, sorbitol and mannitol, they occur naturally in fruits or are synthetically manufactured. They are considered to be carbohydrate sweeteners. Unlike table sugars, they do not rapidly raise the blood sugar concentration in the body, and are often good choices for diabetics. Yet if consumed in large quantities, the sugar alcohols can cause gastrointestinal distress, (e.g. diarrhea, gas, bloating, cramps, etc.)

Fructose: Often referred to as fruit sugar, they can be taken from fruits or synthetically manufactured in the lab.

Maltodextrin: This sweetener is similar to corn syrup, but appears in a powdered form and absorbed more slowly than corn syrup.

Saccharin: This is a non-nutritive sweetener because it is not metabolized by the body and provides no calories. Saccharin is derived from a petroleum base and tends to leave a bitter after-taste. It has two advantages over aspartame — it can be used effectively in cooking, and it is very inexpensive. The combination of saccharin and aspartame is commonly used in the soft-drink industry. In 1977, the F.D.A. announced its intention to ban the use of saccharin, but the public expressed its disapproval, resulting in a "stay of execution."

Cyclamates: Another sweetener synthetically manufactured in the lab, cyclamates were banned by the F.D.A. in 1970. In 1985, testing results suggested that cyclamate, when combined with certain other ingredients, could serve as a "promoter or cocarcinogen."

It is interesting to note that even with the soaring usage of sugar substitutes, Americans are heavier now than any other time in history. It has been shown that while many people replace their regular soda with diet soda, they continue to consume the same amount of sugar in their diets. That operates along the idea that you can "have your diet soda and eat cake too."

Another theory operates on the idea that while sugar substitutes have fewer calories, they still taste sweet. When you eat these sweetened foods, the receptors in your tongue send signals that the body should prepare to handle sugar. The brain orders the pancreas to release a small amount of insulin into the bloodstream, but the sugar never shows up. Consequently, the excess insulin creates a slight drop in your blood sugar level, which may leave you hungry and craving sweets. Constant tapping of the sweet taste buds can create a cycle where you continually need more and more sweets to satisfy your "sweet tooth."

By making a concerted effort to cut down on consumption of high amounts of both white sugars and sugar substitutes, we can once again retrain our bodies to delight in the wonderful tastes that natural, wholesome and nutritionally-sound foods bring to our palates.

Ski for health

The last two races of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan's eighth annual cross country "Ski for Health" circuit are Feb. 1 at the Billy Rogell Golf Course in Detroit and Feb. 14 at Independence Oaks County Park in Clarkston.

"Cross country skiing is an ideal way to stay in shape during winter because it's an exercise that's inexpensive, available to young and old, and as close as the local park or golf course," said Prince Holliday, BCBSM vice president of community affairs. The "Ski for Health" races have a $5 entry fee per circuit. Proceeds benefit the recreation programs in the host communities. Races will be held in two heats, one each for novice and experienced skiers. Awards will be given at each race to the top three finishers in both heats for each of eight age categories. Everyone completing the race will receive a participant's award.

Race distances are 7-to-15 kilometers for those 15 years and older, and 4-to-12 kilometers for novices. For those skiers 14 years of age and under, distances are 1.6-to-3.2 kilometers.

Participants may register at the race site up to one hour before the heat begins. Race time is 10 a.m. for experienced skiers, 1 p.m. for novices.

Interested skiers may call the following numbers for more information about the races: 224-1180 or 935-5331 on race day (Detroit), and 858-4944 or 625-0877 on race day (Oakland County).

Vital Options

Deanna Hawthorne and Joan Thornton, owners of Vital Options Exercise, have passed the International Dance-Exercise Association (IDEA) Foundation's written examination for aerobic instructors and have received national certification.

The exam, which covers subject areas such as anatomy, kinesiology, health screening, nutrition and weight control, is administered by the Educational Testing Service, the same group that developed the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT). Approximately 65 percent pass this exam. 1986 was the first year that an exam of this type has been offered.

"We are pleased to be among the first to meet the industry's standards as knowledgeable aerobics instructors," say Hawthorne and Thornton. "We look forward to maintaining our certification with continuing education in the field of fitness and exercise as we have for the past 10 years."

Extended

Due to the number of sold-out performances and a warm critical reception, "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom" at the Attic Theatre will be extended one week until Feb. 15. The six additional shows are scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 12, and Friday, Feb. 13 at 8 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 14 at 5:30 and 9 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 15 at 2:30 and 6:30 p.m.

The award-winning play by August Wilson is based on a 1927 recording session with Ma Rainey, the renowned blues singer. The Attic Theatre's production is unique in that it features professional musicians, rather than actors playing musicians, as the chief characters. For Detroiters Thomas Bowles (reeds), trumpeter Rayse Biggs, pianist Earl Van Dyke and bassist Donald Mayberry, this play represents a professional venture in acting with which they had little familiarity two months ago.

Tickets are available at the Attic Theatre Box Office and Ticket-World outlets. For reservations, call 875-8284.

'Critical Condition' aptly describes Pryor's career

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

Question: Why does the title "Critical Condition" have such significance for Richard Pryor right now?

Answer: Because in addition to being the name of his latest film, it is also an accurate appraisal of the state of his career. Simply put, Pryor has not made a quality appearance on the screen since his accident. And because of this, it's his fans who have been getting burned.

In "Condition," Pryor plays an innocent man who will be sent to prison unless he can prove his insanity. During his stay at a New York hospital, a hurricane knocks out the power and creates turmoil. Before he knows it, Pryor is in charge of the hospital, masquerading as a visiting emergency room doctor.

Pryor the actor has been in similar situations before. Most of his roles put him in the position of the guy who gets in a situation beyond his control and must rely on his quick lip and cockiness to get him through.

But that is precisely why "Condition" is nothing special. The star has so much prior experience that he need not concern himself with creating a new character or even expanding an old one. Instead, he delivers his lines with the certainty of someone with nothing to lose.

In an examination room with a scantily clad young woman, he quivers and mutters to himself about how lucky he is to be able to listen to her heartbeat.

In the tense moment in which the hospital personnel almost discover his true identity — which would mean certain imprisonment for him — he veers off into a manic speech about their duties as medical professionals. Telling them to "remember what Hippocrates would say," he walks away quickly, letting them figure out for themselves what he means.

make points about inept bureaucracy and its effects on the medical profession, and about the quandary doctors find themselves in because so many people are trying malpractice suits on for size. The points are rather dull, however, and are not well taken.

What Pryor needs to do now is a stand-up comedy film. Such pictures were his road to success in cinema; hopefully they can also be a path for finding his way back to the funnybones of his fans. If Pryor doesn't make such a move soon — if he continues to make "safe" films like "Condition" — he can put an "I" between his initials.

Because that's what will be left of his career.

Film

The situations are all the same. Only the setting and the specific dialogue have been changed to protect the innocent.

All of this would be acceptable, of course, if the film was funny. But there is nary a laugh to be had in the entire 90 minutes of its running time. One is almost apt to feel sorry for the star, rather than laugh at his hijinks. The script is lifeless, containing enough worthless material to fill the city dump.

L.A. is bounty hunter's turf in 'Wanted'

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

It appears that old heroes never die. So it should come as no surprise to see a progeny of the legendary Steve McQueen appear as a bounty hunter in "Wanted Dead or Alive" searching down wanted criminals in the Los Angeles area.

By coincidence or plan, the film has the same title of McQueen's 1958 television series in which he was a bounty hunter tracking down outlaws in the Old West.

It was exciting stuff but nothing compared to what his great

Hauer is Dutch-born, but as Randall he draws in a perfect California accent, "I don't like cops and they don't like me."

For all his size and brawn, Randall doesn't go into danger poorly equipped. The loft where he lives is an arsenal of firearms of every description.

While he is used to matching wits and exchanging gunfire and other deadly methods of assault with the most dangerous and elusive criminals, even he has some apprehension about going after Malak Ali Rahim (Gene Simmons) the leader of a group of maniacal Arab terrorists planning to destroy Los Angeles by releasing poisonous gas into the atmosphere.

Philmore Walker (Robert Guillaume) persuades Randall to help find the leader before disaster strikes. The bounty is high and even higher if Randall brings him in alive.

This macho adventure film owes much of its credibility to Hauer. Built like a pro wrestler, he looks and acts tough. He has a mean, steady gaze and moves like a leopard stalking his prey. "Wanted Dead or Alive" is not an outstanding film, but it is entertaining.

It's good to know that with Stallone, and now Hauer, we have nothing to fear.

Film

great grandson, Colin Randall (Rutger Hauer), has to deal with in the wilds of Los Angeles. McQueen's victims bit the dust. Hauer's prey die in a pool of their own blood.

An ex-CIA agent, Hauer has hauled in enough wanted criminals to embarrass and antagonize both the local police and the government men.

Photography exhibit

The ULS Gallery is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and is located at 1045 Cook Road, Grosse Pointe Woods.

FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT PLASTIC SURGERY.

FACT 1: FREE CONSULTATION WITH A SURGEON IS IMPORTANT.
When it comes to cosmetic surgery, we operate a little differently at Cottage Hospital. For example, our physicians offer a free consultation. A time to discuss your private questions in a private setting. Call 881-1800 for details.

FACT 2: EXPERIENCE AND TRAINING MAKE A DIFFERENCE.
In Michigan, any licensed physician can put "cosmetic surgeon" on a business card. But at Cottage Hospital, your doctor has completed extensive postgraduate training, including a residency in plastic surgery or otolaryngology (ENT). All cosmetic surgeons don't meet these strict standards.

FACT 3: COSMETIC SURGERY HAS MANY FACES.
That's why besides face lifts (rhinectomy), we perform breast contouring, liposuction (removing fatty deposits) and more. Often without an overnight hospital stay.

FACT 4: A HOSPITAL ENVIRONMENT IS REASSURING.
Whether or not your surgery requires a hospital stay, it's important to know that you have the care of Cottage's expert staff, including highly trained nurses. If you do need an overnight stay, at Cottage you'll enjoy all the services you expect from a quality hospital...and more.

FACT 5: THE LUXURY OF A HOTEL IS YOURS.
At Cottage, you'll stay in a hospital that's actually hospitable. Our optional "Five Pointe Service" includes a special suite for cosmetic surgery patients and a VIP menu. You can even invite a guest for dinner.

Cosmetic surgery at Cottage Hospital. At a cost that compares favorably with other programs. Call us at 881-1800.

a total exposure program for the athlete... but we don't guarantee a scholarship. The success rate means that some type of aid is offered," Diegel said.

South High athletic administrator Charles Hollosy said that his office would be happy to cooperate with a scouting service like Scouting Report. "If they come to us and need information, statistics, etc., we'd accommodate them. It's my personal opinion that if the kids and their parents want to deal with a service like that, fine. Very frankly, though, I think that the real super good kids are discovered in the collegiate network."

South basketball coach George Petrouleas once worked at the collegiate level and recalled using a similar service. "I'm not knocking it. If there was some kid that we weren't aware of and a service like that presented his name to us, we would go out and take a look at him. And it's becoming a very, very competitive business, college athletics. There are a lot of student athletes out there."

Basically, though, colleges rely on personal contact with the athlete and his or her coach for their information.

North High athletic director Tom Gauerke said that his office does not deal with scouting groups which charge for their services. "We do the same thing as we do in academics. When there is a group which charges kids for their service, we ignore them. We won't give them information. We've been pretty consistent in our philosophy... anytime someone stands to make a profit on kids, we stay away."

University Liggett School boys' athletic director Bob Wood has similar misgivings about scouting services... but for a different reason.

"We feel that the ULS athletic department does an excellent job of contacting college coaches based on an honest estimate of a boy's or girl's ability. If we feel we have a kid who can play a sport at the college level, the athletic department will sit down with the kid and his parent and counsel them. We personally will make the college contacts for them."

"The difficult part is making a fair assessment of the child's athletic talent. If we feel that the talent — and grades — justify a scholarship we will take a very active role in obtaining that scholarship. We have in the past and will continue to do so," Wood said.

He did say a scouting service could be valuable for kids who don't have the benefit of a conscientious athletic department. "But remember, regardless of the scouting service and the assistant, the percentage of kids who get full or even partial scholarships is very small."

Those are the kids Scouting Report wants to help too, Diegel emphasized.

"It is so competitive out there... we want to help the kids who might otherwise fall through the cracks," he said.

CHIEFS-ARROWS

Goalie Gordie Todd was outstanding in the Sequoia Chiefs' 3-0 shutout over the Arrows. Popham, Berger and Coates scored. Ben Debski and Bill Faber played well for the Arrows, as did the Chiefs' Oren, Meldrum and K.C. Anderson.

CHIEFS-TALONS

The Chiefs made it three in a row with a 4-1 win over the Arrows. Popham scored twice and Berger and Coates added a goal apiece. Matt Lariscy, Kevin Kasiborski, Zayat and Chris Smith played well. Ford and Todd had their hands full with the Talons' Law and Graffius. Prues, Brown and Abby Fox played well for the Talons.

LEAFS-COUGARS

The Century 21-East Maple Leafs skated to a 3-1 victory on Jan. 17 over the hard-charging Crain's Cougars. The Cougars looked impressive on all three lines in the first period, shutting out the Leafs until Tony Barrata scored from Ryan Allard. The Cougars tied it on Behi Rabbani's goal, but the Leafs went ahead again on Allard's second. Peter Knudson, Ryan McCain and George Massu held the Cougars to 13 shots on goal. Paul Huebner was effective in goal for the Cougars, turning away 20 Leaf shots. Matt Moroun and Ian McMillan also played very well.

ARROWS-COUGARS

The Arrows topped the Cougars, 5-2. Rocky Bryant opened the scoring for the Arrows, with his first goal of the year. Chris Mitchell converted a Mike Getz pass to make it 2-0, but the Cougars tied it with goals by Mike Weyhing and Rabbani. Faber scored the tie-breaker in the third period, then Billy Crandall iced the game with a pair of goals from Faber and Debski. Ryan Robson, Tom Stroble and R.J. Wolney skated well for the Cougars; goalies Nicholas Miotke and Huebner played well.

MAJOR MAGICS-HAWKS

Ricky Carlson scored his first career goal and Matt Elich stick-handled his way through a crowd for a goal as the Magics beat the Hawks, 2-0. Brent Kuhar, Jon Bayko, Danny Magdowski and Nate Bayko drew assists. Mike Paul earned the shutout in goal. The Hawks' Chris Gibson, Robbie King, Leo Salvaggio, Chris Amsden, Byron Brewer, Doug Semack, Frank Orlando and Jon Solaka played well, as did the Magics' Sebastian Yofre, Jake Linder, Colin Darke and Danny Baskel.

MAJOR MAGICS-BRUINS

The Magics edged the Bruins, 4-3, in what spectators called the most exciting game of the season. The Magics opened up the game with a goal by Elich, from Frank Zimmer and N. Bayko. The Bruins' Tim Miller tied it up 20 seconds later, from Kerwin and John McNaughton. In the second period, Brian Everham scored from Baskel and Ronnie Sawaf to make it 2-1, but Miller tied it again for the Bruins, Mike Lahey assisting. Kevin Baskel gave the Magics a 3-2 lead; Elich and Zimmer drew assists. Joey Lucido tied the game at 3-3, from Miller and McNaughton and with 50 seconds to go, Elich popped one past Bruin goalie Sarke Solomon for the Magics' victory. Magdowski earned the assist. Defensemen Tim Brady, Stephen Owens, Wil Conway and Matt Descamps held the Bruins with seconds left and a one man advantage. Ricky Carlson played well in goal for the Magics; Bayko, Linder, Kuhar and Yofre also played well.

MAJOR MAGICS-TALONS

The Magics topped the Talons, 5-1. Sawaf opened the scoring when he tucked one behind goalie Andy Ricci. The Talons tied it on Annie Morris' goal from Anthony Tocco and Nate Ascensio. But the Magics put it away with goals from Everham (two), K. Baskel and Zimmer. Everham, Sawaf, Baskel, M. Elich, Nickel, Bayko and Magdowski drew assists. D. Baskel earned playmaker honors. Playing well for their teams were Darke, Andrew Warner, Bayko, Kevin Collins, Peter-Anthony Brown and Brian Brown.

Squirt Division

RED WINGS-BLADES

The Red Wings and Michigan Blades started a three-game series to determine the Grosse Pointe representative in the district playoffs. Jeff Adams scored from Chris Crain to give the Wings a 1-0 win. Kenny McIntyre (Wings) and Chuckie Schervish (Blades) were outstanding in goal. Jay Ricci, Amy Kendall, Kip Gotfredson and John Wise played well for the Wings, as did the Blades' Paul Megler, Omar Sawaf, Mark Waterman and Mark Campbell.

WINGS-BLADES

The Wings' 2-1 victory over the Blades earned them a spot in the playoffs. Both teams played a strong game. The Blades' Matt Spicer converted a Campbell pass to open the scoring, but Adams tied it up in the second period, Crain assisting. Ricci scored the winner on passes from Adams and Jordan Jones. McIntyre and Schervish again were outstanding in goal. Nate Cook, Ev Meade, Mike Collins, Sawaf, Andy Lee, David Collins, Jon-Paul Sweda and Peter-Anthony Brown played heads-up hockey.

Pee Wee Division

WHALERS-HAWKS

The Grosse Pointe Pee Wee Whalers staged their first comeback of the year, only to fall 5-3 to the St. Clair Shores Blackhawks. After trailing 3-0, Jeff Giacobbe scored from Dale Ihrie and Dino Ricci added a pair of goals to make it 3-3. Kevin McCracken and Ihrie assisted of Ricci's goals. With the score tied, Whaler defenseman Brian Michalak stickhandled the length of the ice, but shot over the top of the net. The Whalers pressed with the efforts of Beau Dossin, Brad Kimmel and Giacobbe, but couldn't score. Brian Dennis and Gregg Semack were in goal for the Whalers.

Bantam Division

CHIEFS-FLAMES

The Chiefs gave their fans something to cheer about as they skated and worked their way to a 6-0 win over their rivals, the Flames. Goalie Jeff Blum and the hardworking defense helped lead the way to the win and consequently, a 1-2 edge in the challenge for the district playoffs. The 11-0-2 (league) Chiefs got goals from Kevin Nugent, Brad Russell, Mike Kisskalt, Jim Alderton, John McGlone and Ed Barbieri; Russell (two), Kisskalt, Nugent, McGlone and Brad Hea earned assists.

CHIEFS-ULS

The Chiefs improved their overall mark to 18-6-2 with a convincing 8-2 win over the Liggett Knights. The Chief outshot ULS, 30-13, as the defense forced the Knights into taking low-percentage shots from well outside. Barbieri and Scott Soule (two each), McSorley, Mike Watkins, Russell and Brendan Rohan scored for the Chiefs. John Olmsted (four), Russell (three), McSorley (two), Watkins (two), Barbieri, Hea and Alderton assisted. Russ Kogel scored twice for ULS. Samudrala and Scoville assisting.

dual meets and culminated in a championship each summer. The association still flourishes today.

Betty Pinkston coached each summer and husband Pinkie was always there to assist. Her teams at the Detroit Golf Club, Detroit Boat Club and the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club won the Interclub team title regularly. Both Pinkstons were early inductees into the Swimming Hall of Fame in Fort Lauderdale. Their many photographs and other memorabilia are there in what is known as the "Dupont Pinkston Auditorium." It was donated to the Hall of Fame by DAC members.

Pinkie Pinkston died of a brain tumor in the 1950s. Betty remarried, then lost second husband Harvey Campbell, a man of great humor who was known as "Mr. Detroit" in the years he headed the Chamber of Commerce in that city.

"The 'champ' could use some cheering now," said daughter Betty Colton.

Our lands in McConnellsville, in the heart of New York State, are blessed with forests where oak and wild cherry trees flourish. These are the woods beloved by collectors of fine furniture for their beautiful grain and natural affinity to the furniture craftsman's art. An outstanding collection of brass and glass dining and occasional tables, designed by Harden and fabricated by European craftsmen from the finest brass available. Only solid brass is used throughout. Stretcher joints are hand brazed to assure a smooth appearance and lasting stability. A tarnish-resistant clear lacquer protects the carefully hand-buffed finish of each piece. The solid, tempered glass tops are of optical clarity and the edges are specially finished to resist chipping and breaking. These exclusive Harden designs provide an eclectic alternative to conventional furnishings when used as accent pieces in even the most traditional rooms.

What distinguishes Harden from most furniture is the extraordinary amount of hand work that goes into each piece. Granted, modern manufacturing techniques are used in some operations, but only when they result in a product that is superior to, or has the same substance and quality found in totally hand-made custom furniture. Harden's philosophy since 1865 has been "to make each piece of furniture the best way we know how." In adhering to this belief, Harden has found that it still takes the hands of the skilled craftsman to produce furniture that will truly be handed down from generation to generation.
