

Champagne: What's hot and how to use it properly

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

A bottle of white, a bottle of red — how about a bottle of Dom Perignon instead?

Sound like a good idea? Well, if you can't afford the $80 or $120 for a bottle of Dom Perignon, there are plenty of alternatives for the serious bubbly enthusiast.

Bill Solomon, a partner in the Village Wine Shop in the Park, said he is selling a lot of Great Western champagne from New York state at $9 a bottle.

"Mumm's is a very good quality champagne," Solomon said, "right up there with the best of France."

The Mumm's start out at around $22 a bottle at Village Wine, and go up to about $32 for a vintage year. A vintage bottle will have a year on it, meaning that it was a special year. Wines not made in a vintage year carry no date on the bottle.

Brian Day, manager of Vintage Pointe in the City, said that choosing a champagne depends on taste and what one can afford.

"Two of our biggest movers are Len Ben and Freixenet, Spanish champagnes," Day said. "We are also selling a lot of a new Californian champagne called Michel Tribut. It is just delicious for the money." It rings in at $13.95 a bottle.

Sam Husaynue, owner of Marylard Beverage on the border of the Park in Detroit, said his biggest mover is the White Star Moet Chandon. He's been running a special on it at $16.95 a bottle, and he said it has been selling "fantastically."

"People are going bubbly this year," Husaynue said. "We are probably selling a lot more champagne this year than last."

Day offered several tips to the inexperienced champagne-sipper.

"Do you realize how many people lose an eye from a champagne cork in a year?" Day asked. "It's some terrible number like 300."

To properly open a bottle of champagne, he said, a person should hold the bottle at a 45-degree angle at all times during the procedure. After removing the neck wrapping and wire, firmly grasp the cork, pointing the bottle away from yourself and others. Instead of twisting the cork, slowly turn the bottle. As the cork loosens, the pressure inside the bottle will ease the cork from the bottle.

"By keeping the bottle at a 45-degree angle, the bubbles will roll up and then back down the bottle rather than escape out the top," he said. "When the cork finally frees itself, it should make only a silent pop or whoosh sound. A loud pop means the bottle has been opened improperly."

Day suggests that people who want to shake a bottle of champagne to have it foam should use an inexpensive brand, so as not to waste or ruin the good wine.

And it's easy to ruin a bottle of champagne by shaking it.

"If you shake up a bottle of champagne, it quickly loses its bubbles," Day said. "The bubbles should be an integral part of the wine. If you shake the bottle, you are really doing a disservice to the vintner's art."

To properly open a bottle of champagne, it should be held at a 45-degree angle. To properly serve champagne, it should be at about a 45-degree temperature. The 45-degree rule should then be easy to remember.

Champagne should be served in a tulip or fluted glass, according to Day who said that Hollywood movies have made the wide bowl glasses that people hold between their fingers famous, but that the champagne loses its bubble too quickly in that kind of glass.

"Never use a corkscrew on a champagne bottle," Day said. "You can seriously injure yourself or someone else. The kind of pressure inside of a champagne bottle is enormous. I dropped a bottle once, and the glass shot through the air and lodged itself through drywall and cardboard boxes."

No one said drinking champagne was a safe sport. Cheers.

New students coming from private schools

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Overall, the number of students in the Grosse Pointe public schools has stabilized over the last three years, but the number of students new to the district has been on the rise.

Director of Support Services David King gave a report on the district's demographics to the school board last month. The report shows that the number of students from private and parochial schools transferring to the district increased again this year as it has for the last three years, and that the number of students moving into the area from outside has declined.

"We always had a high number of students who came to the system from private and parochial schools at the ninth-grade level," King said. "What we are finding now is that we are getting students at the middle and elementary levels who were not coming to the ninth grade in years past."

King said he believes part of the reason is that the tuition costs at the private and parochial schools are going up, and that there is a perception within the community that the Grosse Pointe Public School System provides quality education.

King noted he can only guess the causes, but suggested the guesses could be fairly accurate.

He said that the decline in new students coming from outside the school district might be due to economics. Interest rates have gone up considerably in two years. This may have prevented younger families with children from moving into the area, because the housing is less affordable.

There is also a fairly constant level of students leaving the school district, King noted.

It may be due to companies transferring executives to other areas of the country, he said, or because people are leaving their jobs.

"These are our best guesses," he said. "We have no hard data to support this."

Over the last three years, the total number of students in the school system has somewhat stabilized. For years the trend had been downward. But since the 1985-86 school year, the number has remained about 7,350 to 7,400.

King said one of the most significant changes in the year's demographics was the increased number of students moving out of the area. The district lost some 200 students in the 1985-86 school year, and this year, lost 246 students.

This year the district continued to gain more students than it lost, however the percentage of gain is less than it was during the previous two years. The decrease is due primarily to the net loss of students moving into the area versus those moving out.

King noted that by the year 1995, Michigan will have about 24 percent fewer high school graduates as compared to 1980, while nationwide the trend will also be downward. Predictions are that by 1995 there will be 20 percent fewer high school graduates in this country. States such as Michigan, Illinois, Ohio and New York will have significant decreases in the number of students, while states such as Wyoming, Arizona and Florida will see an increase in its high school age populations.

"What this may mean is a significant labor shortage in the next 20, 25 or 30 years," King said. "It may also have an effect on early retirement. Companies may ask people to stay on longer, and there may be a tremendous impact on Social Security."

"These predictions are as accurate as far as predicting trends is concerned," King said. "We will be having less young people in Michigan and more young people in the warm belt states."

In the mood

And in the spirit of the season, we wish all of our readers a happy, healthy and prosperous new year. Eight-year-old Charles Thomas personifies the kind of joyful welcome to 1988 that will be given by some residents, while others opt for a quieter celebration. Charles, wearing his father's top hat and tails, is the son of Charles and Pam Thomas of Grosse Pointe Woods.

The product is intangible. Its purpose is to sell, persuade, move.

The tools of production are creative people. "Our inventory goes down to the ground floor in an elevator every night at 5 p.m.," said Roy Edmonds, senior vice president of Ross Roy Group Inc.

The Grosse Pointe Woods resident is executive producer, director of broadcast for the Bloomfield Hills advertising agency. He said his work is a 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week, vacation-time job. "The creative process can't be turned on and off. I look for ideas all the time."

Ross Roy did $500 million worth of advertising in 1987. According to Edmonds, the company, for the first time, will be the largest ad agency in Michigan this year. The firm does media buying, research, production and follow-up for TV and radio commercials, print ads in newspapers and magazines, and outdoor advertising. It competes with national agencies, he said, in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles and employs about 500 people in its Bloomfield Hills office.

Clients represent a wide variety of products and services: the giant Kmart Corporation ("our biggest commercial client," said Edmonds); Michigan Bell ("We're currently bidding some new commercials"); Detroit Edison (Edmonds negotiated the contract with Isiah Thomas, who turned out to be an extremely popular spokesman for the company); Ameritech Publishing's Pages Plus (it used to be called the Yellow Pages); Lazy Boy chairs (Edmonds negotiated the contract with celebrity Alex Karras); the Michigan Travel Bureau ("One of the fun things I do is work for the state of Michigan," he said); Blue Cross and

Pointes incinerator passes ash test

By Tim Tipton

DNR officials gave a clean bill of health for the Grosse Pointe-Clinton incinerator Dec. 22.

The absence of hazardous waste in ash from the facility alleviates major concerns about a possible 10-fold increase in the cost for disposing incinerator waste.

John Bohunsky, DNR regional supervisor of waste management said eight samples were taken from the Pointes-Clinton incinerator. Tests showed an absence of toxic chemicals or metals.

"We are quite pleased with the type of ash that is being disposed of from these facilities," Bohunsky said. "If one of the incinerators would have grossly exceeded the limits for hazardous chemicals or metals, it would have changed the type of landfill which could be used for ash disposal."

A landfill in Detroit will currently accept ash for $14 a yard, he said, and the cost drops to $3 to $5 a yard in the Flint area. Ash contaminated with hazardous waste, however, can only be disposed of at a special facility in Romulus, he said, and the cost is about $130 a yard.

Edwin Whedon, general manager of the Pointes-Clinton incinerator, said he was confident that his facility would be well within state specifications. He said that federal regulations prohibit incineration of toxic waste.

He added that he was concerned that the DNR did not contact him before taking the samples. "I first learned of the ash tests from the radio and then from later reports in the newspaper," he said.

Bohunsky said it was an oversight on the part of his department.

The DNR lab analyzed the ash samples for 11 hazardous and non-hazardous metals. Five metals were completely absent or had traces that are not measurable, including silver, arsenic, chromium, mercury and selenium. The metal cadmium was found to be present at levels that slightly exceeded the limit, but officials said they weren't concerned.

Foundation nears goal

The Grosse Pointe Park Foundation Board of Trustees recently accepted a $50,000 donation from Charles S. Tompkins and $11,500 from George Nicholson Jr. The money is earmarked for a community activity center at Windmill Pointe Park. Tompkins, left, a Park resident since 1942, has served as councilman and mayor pro tem and was instrumental in establishing the Park's annual Fourth of July parade. Nicholson, middle, is a trustee of the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation. Robert Hutton, right, president of the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation, accepts the checks against the backdrop of Windmill Pointe Park and the activity center.

To date, the foundation has raised $139,000 toward the $300,000 project. The center will be called the Charles S. Tompkins Community Center. If the Park can raise the remaining amount of money, construction will begin in 1988.

terchangeable body shells and the method of measuring auto dimensions that became an industry standard. Mr. Kaptur devised the interchangeable body shell concept after taking body drafts from the Fisher Body Division and looking at an overlay of three different cars. His suggestion for interchangeable body shells took on even more significance in 1937 when the corporation switched from wooden framing for composite bodies to all-steel construction.

USING YOUR OTHER SENSES
Monitoring everyday sounds in the home may present a problem to many hearing-impaired persons, but it is one that can be solved by the use of new alerting devices that give the user visual or vibratoc-tile signals.

A flashing light or vibrator may be used to signal common household sounds such as the doorbell, the telephone ringer, a baby or incapacitated adult calling, the alarm clock, and the smoke detector. Most of these systems are powered either by batteries or line current in the home. In addition, today there are both visual and vibratoc-tile receivers that hearing-impaired persons can wear on their wrists.

Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church: Upbeat, expanding

This is the seventh in an occasional series about Grosse Pointe churches.

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Dr. Robert Boley is senior pastor of the Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church, 211 Moross, Grosse Pointe Farms. He tried to capture the uniqueness of his church and congregation, struggling to put the ineffable quality into words. "After church services, at the coffee hour in the parlor, we're wall to wall people. We like that," he said.

"Every church has its own personality. This is the friendliest church I've ever been part of. People who greet you are really sincere. There's an upbeat togetherness. A sweetness, a vitality."

A newcomer doesn't have an opportunity to sneak into Sunday services or maintain his anonymity. He's certain to get caught in the warm embrace of the coffee hour — the friendliness of the outgoing people who gather in the church parlor afterward, Boley said.

He said church membership stands at 730 — up slightly from three or four years ago. "We're in a 37-year-old gothic building. We need more space. We use our building to the extreme." By midsummer, the board hopes to present the congregation with architectural drawings for a proposed expansion of the facilities. Boley said that tentative plans include a new 350-400 seat sanctuary and more education rooms.

Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church's beginnings go back to 1945, when the Methodist Union purchased a parcel of land on Moross Road and the bishop appointed a young man of 27, the Rev. Hugh White, as pastor of the unbuilt, unformed church.

According to a 1965 history of the church, the first service was held in old Kerby School on Sept. 9, 1945. An advertisement in the Grosse Pointe News put out the word: "First Service," it read. "Announcing the first services here by Methodists in the history of Grosse Pointe." Fifty-eight people attended that Sunday morning. Within a few months, the group had clarified its purpose with an organizational meeting and had formed committees, elected a board, purchased a parsonage, gathered a choir and a male quartette, formed a women's society, pieced together a wobbly financial foundation — and held its first potluck supper.

In 1949, they hired a contractor to construct the stone gothic structure, and by May 1950, the planning committee actually held one of its meetings in the unfinished building. According to the written history, "Members (sat) on the bare concrete steps of the balcony (and looked) out over the scaffolding which filled the sanctuary." The congregation used folding metal chairs for Sunday services until May 1955, when pews were installed.

Membership figures climbed steadily for more than a decade, reaching an all-time high in 1958, according to Boley. "The year 1958 was a high-water mark for all church and synagogues attendance in the nation," he said. Attendance has been leveling off for the last 30 years.

Today, he said, there is more creativity in the church than 30 years ago. Services use laymen more. "More input is expected from the laity today," Boley said. "The minister is more of an enabler than in the '50s. In the old days the minister made most of the decisions. Today we have a program council and an administrative board. The council is responsible for programs and serves as a think tank," he said.

One of Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church's unique programs, according to Associate Pastor Jack Mannschreck, is the Logos program. The three-hour

Wednesday evening meetings are for children in the first through eighth grades and endeavor to do a more complete job of Christian education.

"Kids really get involved. It's not a substitute for Sunday school," said Boley. The Logos program includes an athletic activity, Bible study, dinner and creative worship. "The dinner is with china and silverware," he said. "It's not a picnic-style dinner. Adults participate, too. The creative worship involves musical instruments or songs or some kind of music. Parents get involved in serving the meal and one of the great spin-offs of this program is that the parents get acquainted, too."

Another unique feature of the church is its effort to develop a Sunday school class for handicapped children and children with special needs. Mannschreck said the church has appealed to parents of special children, whatever their church affiliation, asking them to bring the youngsters to Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church. Special education teacher Marilyn Johnson has adapted a Sunday school curriculum to meet the special needs of individual children.

Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church has not neglected missions, according to both pastors. "The Methodist church is traditionally a missionary church," Boley said. "At Christmas time, for instance, we're sending $1,200 to Mozambique." The congregation supports the Eastside Ministry, a community center for adults in group homes; People In Faith United (PIFU); Cass Community United Methodist Church's program for feeding people in the Cass Corridor; the CROP walk; FLEC; and the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR).

Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church is the only Methodist church in the five Grosse Pointes. Yet — "This church is small enough and aggressive enough that nobody can be anonymous here," said Mannschreck.

"You can't sneak in for Sunday services and slide out," said Boley.

Mannschreck agreed. "We take attendance. We keep track. If three months go by, we send a letter."

Boley said, "This church has a heart as big as the world." He smiled. "No. I guess that's an exaggeration." He looked at his colleague. "They're all saints. But they're not canonized yet. If we lead them right, they'll all have hearts as big as the world."

Photos by Margie Reins Smith

Dr. Robert Boley, senior pastor at Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church for the last six years, said his church is a friendly family church that provides programs for people of all ages. Members are especially proud of the Logos program for children in grades one through eight. About 55 children attend the weekly Wednesday evening meetings.

Associate Pastor Jack Mannschreck said that Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church is small and aggressively friendly to newcomers. "Nobody can be anonymous here."

Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church was founded in 1945. The building was dedicated in 1950; more was added in 1957. The five acres of land now contains a sanctuary, classrooms, a parlor, choir rooms, a youth room and office facilities. The board and the congregation hope to expand the facilities further in the next few years by adding a new, larger sanctuary.

Six to retire from Park

Six Park firefighters, with 188 years combined experience, will retire at the end of 1987.

The retirements were planned with the merger of the departments which occurred last year. Currently the department has three people in the police academy and has hired one officer.

Retiring are Lt. William Hunt, 32 years of service; Lt. Lee Failieres, 29 years; Sgt. Anthony LaBonty, 29 years; John Streberger, 39 years; Paul Bazger, 32 years; and Edward Koerber, 27 years.

"We are sorry to see them go, but everybody has a time to go," said Phillip Costa, deputy director of public safety. "They are taking with them a lot of knowledge. We are losing some valuable people. They knew the ins and outs of firefighting, and have passed some of that along to our younger men."

Man arrested on roof

A 32-year-old Grosse Pointe Park man was arrested last week on the roof of Brook Bar on Charlevoix in the Park.

The man was spotted on the roof by a neighbor. Police cordoned off the area with scout cars, then called in the city's ladder truck. Officers climbed atop the roof and found the man hiding.

He was charged with attempted burglary.

New drug saves resident from serious heart damage

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

A 47-year-old Grosse Pointe resident will be spending the holidays at home following a massive heart attack earlier this month, thanks to a new drug that dissolves coronary blood clots.

The drug, Activase, which was approved for use by the federal government in early December, was used on a patient at Cottage Hospital in the Farms Dec. 9. It was administered by Dr. Vithal Kinhal.

Activase can be administered to a patient having a heart attack caused by a blood clot in the coronary artery or arteries. It is administered intravenously, and in a matter of minutes, the blood clot is dissolved and the immediate danger and damage to the heart is over.

Activase, also known as t-PA, is found in the body, but in very small quantities. The bioengineering firm, Genentech, Inc., found a way to synthetically produce t-PA and market it.

Kinhal said there is another drug that acts similarly in the body, called streptokinase. Activase has a couple of advantages over it in that it is more clot-specific. Streptokinase has the effect of working throughout the body, rather than just at the heart. Also Activase is cleared from the body faster than streptokinase.

"For Activase to be totally effective, it has to be administered as soon as possible during the infarction (heart attack)," Kinhal said. "By administering the drug as soon as it is determined that the person is having a heart attack, there is a better chance of opening up the artery. There is greater chance of minimizing the damage to the heart muscle and less of a chance of having the artery clogged again."

In fact, a study by the cardiology division of the University of Michigan Medical Center showed that the drug's success improves if the drug is administered at a community hospital emergency room rather than at a major medical center or university hospital. The drug is available at all hospitals, now that it has been approved for use by the federal government. The study, however, showed that it was administered 1.5 hours earlier at a community hospital than at the larger hospitals, Kinhal said, since they are less likely to have a busy emergency room as well as fewer patients to tend to.

"Time is the critical factor," said Kinhal, who is also on staff at Harper Hospital and an assistant professor at Wayne State University. "When this drug is used, the patient's heart function is well-preserved, and it spares the heart from damage."

Kinhal, a Grosse Pointe Shores resident, saw the patient at his office at Cottage Hospital.

He quickly admitted the patient to the emergency room. After a cardiogram and blood work were completed and it was positively determined the patient was having a heart attack, the drug was administered.

"This patient was having a massive heart attack we determined later," Kinhal said. "By giving this patient the drug when we did, we were able to prevent serious damage to the heart muscle."

It is an expensive medication, Kinhal pointed out. A 100-milligram dosage, the usual recommended, costs about $2,000.

"We want the public to be aware of this medication," Kinhal said. "The patient must get to the hospital as early as possible during the heart attack. So awareness of the signs of heart attack is critical. Also by going to a community hospital, which is usually closer, the patient can get the earliest possible treatment."

Because the immediate danger is over in most cases, once the drug is administered, the patient is better. Surgery or other invasive procedures such as catheterization, can be done 48 to 72 hours later rather than subjecting the patient to emergency surgery.

Vithal Kinhal, M.D.

"Most heart attacks occur after the patient has eaten," Kinhal said, adding that is can be dangerous to have surgery after eating.

As with almost any drug, there are side effects. Activase can cause internal bleeding and related problems, but Kinhal said these problems occur only in a small percentage of patients.

Kinhal did note that Activase is readily absorbed by the body. About 80 percent of it is cleared by the liver. This means that if a patient did need emergency surgery, it could be performed almost immediately. With any drug that prevents blood clotting, surgery is impossible until it is cleared from the body.

The drug cannot be used as preventive medicine. Activase dissolves blood clots. It does not remove cholesterol plaque build-up from arteries. High cholesterol levels or blockage of heart arteries due to plaque build-up must still be treated in conventional ways.

"Successful use of Activase does not mean the patient has been cured," Kinhal said. "The problem which caused the clot is still there. That must still be examined and treated."

Kinhal said the use of catheterization to look at the damage done to the heart by the attack will still be necessary; it just won't be necessary as soon as it would be without the drug.

Kinhal studied in India, and took his post-graduate training in New York. He came to Michigan in 1973, and moved to Grosse Pointe Shores in 1975. He is board-certified in both internal medicine and cardiology.

Man arrested on weapons charge

A 40-year-old Detroit man was charged with carrying a concealed weapon and drunk driving, after a Grosse Pointe Shores patrol unit spotted the car the man was driving strike the curb four times on Lakeshore early Monday, Dec. 21.

When the man was searched, officers found a .25 caliber seven-shot handgun in his coat pocket.

Shores police are requesting a warrant for the concealed weapons charge.

City police said the man approached her from behind as the woman was walking to her house from her car. The man pushed her, then grabbed her purse. She was reportedly uninjured.

Notice Of Hearing Zoning Board of Appeals

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT the Zoning Board of Appeals will meet in City Hall, 90 Kerby Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan on

at 7:30 p.m. to hear the following:

1. The appeal of Russell Homes, Inc., representing the homeowner at 48 Briarwood Place, from the provisions of the Zoning Ordinance requiring that paved drives placed in required front open space shall not exceed 30% in coverage of the required front yard. Construction of such a drive as shown on the submitted plans results in a front yard coverage of 45%, thereby requiring that a variance be granted from the provisions of Section 1400, Item 6 of the City's Zoning Ordinance.

2. The appeal of Mr. and Mrs. James Long, owner of the premises located at 20 Carmel Lane, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for a bay window addition to the front of their existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that the residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the front and side yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

3. The appeal of Mr. and Mrs. E. Kolemainen, owner of the premises located at 286 Merriweather, from the denial of the Bldg. Department to issue a Building Permit for the construction of an addition to the rear of his existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:

a. The residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the side yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

b. The proposed addition on the rear would further infringe upon the minimum side yard requirements of four feet, leaving a side yard of three feet thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance.

4. The appeal of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Cazzaza, owners of the premises located at 255 Moran, from the denial of the Building Department to issue a Building Permit for a two story addition to their existing dwelling located at the foregoing address. Such permit issuance was denied for reason that:

a. The residence located on the foregoing premises is non-conforming for reason that it is in violation of the side yard provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance, and in accordance with the provisions of Article XV, Section 1502, Item 4-A of the City's Zoning Ordinance, no such structure may be enlarged or structurally altered unless a variance is granted.

b. The proposed addition would further infringe upon the minimum side yard requirements of four feet, leaving a side yard of 3.7 feet, thereby requiring a variance from the provisions of Article XIII, Section 1300 of the City's Zoning Ordinance.

The Hearings will be public. Interested property owners or residents of the City are invited to attend.

In the Pointes 1987 was not a bad year

The end of the old year traditionally is a time for reflection about the past and speculation about the future. Unfortunately, our foresight seldom matches the accuracy of our 20-20 hindsight, whether we are reviewing our personal experiences, national politics, state government or our own communities in the Pointes.

Looking back, however, we can see some positive achievements in the Pointes in 1987. One surely was the start of the resurfacing of Lakeshore Drive in the Farms, with the installation of nine-inch curbs that should prevent more cars from flipping into the lake.

Another was the agreement by the Farms council to combine the police and fire departments into a single public safety agency. When the process is completed, all of the Pointes will be operating public safety departments which ought to curb crime through more patrolling of the streets, make more efficient use of manpower and increase cooperation among the police and firefighters in the Pointes.

In 1987, there was renewed concern in the Pointes about the quality of life. That covers such matters as maintaining excellence in the public schools; improving public services; providing better maintenance of public parks, and upgrading the appearance of storefronts and business buildings in the Village, on the Hill and on Jefferson and Mack avenues.

New business and office buildings were erected or converted from other structures on the Hill, in the Village and on Mack and Jefferson, and plans made for other developments in the Park and in the Woods that will protect both avenues from blight and improve the appearances of the entrances to the Pointes.

New residential developments added to the stock of good housing in the Pointes, but also resulted in the demolition of more old estates. That continuing trend led to new zoning requirements in the Farms and discussions of ways to preserve the truly historic homes still left in the Pointes.

There were setbacks, too, for Pointers in 1987. A major one was the defeat in the November election of a proposal to expand the three public libraries. Another was the inability of the Woods to agree on zoning amendments to authorize day care centers. And Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit indicated he still is seeking legalization of casino gambling in Detroit, a move we think would be a threat to the quality of life in the Pointes and in the suburbs generally.

In Lansing, the Legislature enacted a 65 mph speed limit on rural freeways, a move that is likely to increase highway deaths. Also under consideration are proposals to reduce the property tax and increase the sales tax to aid the public schools. But we fail to see any benefit to the Pointes from a proposal to put a cap on local spending for the public schools in order to help "equalize" public education on a statewide basis.

On a statewide basis, the Republicans made such a mess out of their presidential nominating process that it now appears likely the state will return to a presidential primary in 1992. The party split between the backers of Vice President George Bush and the forces supporting Pat Robertson and Rep. Jack Kemp has been even more unsettling for the GOP than the re-entry of Gary Hart into the presidential derby has been for the Democrats.

In viewing the future, we find our crystal ball is still cloudy. We are optimistic about the future quality of life in the Pointes and their reputation as excellent communities in which to live, work and go to school. Wayne County also looks as if it is about to emerge from its fiscal chaos as a result of the state legislation that apparently saved it from bankruptcy. Even the state, with its budget finally balanced, ended the year on an upbeat note which could continue if the old partisan controversies can be avoided in another election year.

But when it comes to the 1988 national election, it is difficult to predict which presidential hopefuls will emerge as the strongest challengers in Michigan or even as the two major party nominees next summer. Yet 1987 did provide a new test for the 1988 presidential nominees: How will they measure up against the tough but successful new "communicator" from the Soviet Union, Mikhail Gorbachev?

A musical Christmas week

Christmas is always a time for surprises, but at least one Grosse Pointe Farms family received a musical surprise for Christmas.

The day before Christmas, just after the mail had arrived, people in the home began hearing music. But they couldn't find the source of the tinny sounds which every 22 seconds delivered several bars from "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town" and "Jingle Bells."

The family members were baffled. They made sure their radios, TV sets and music boxes were turned off. They checked car radios and neighbors' homes. They even considered calling an electrician.

About this time one family member picked up the New Yorker magazine that had arrived in the morning mail and, leafing through the pages, discovered the source of the music. Implanted in an advertisement for a Swedish vodka, he found a paper strip bearing a couple of bars of music and attached to a tiny chip or battery.

Checking with several other subscribers to the New Yorker, the family found at least one other family enjoying the musical advertisement. But four days after their discovery, neither family had learned how to turn it off, short of destroying the ad or the magazine.

Another shooting spree

We have been unable to figure out the rationale of those who have been shooting out car windows in many suburban communities, including the Pointes, during the holiday period.

It is not the first time these incidents have occurred, but we hope we'll soon hear the last of this minor crime wave. Yet the number of incidents seems to be increasing with more than 150 car windows being shot out with air-propelled pellet guns or BB guns in Allen Park, Riverview, Southgate, Trenton and Lincoln Park on a recent weekend. Another rash of shooting was reported last weekend in some of the same and in other suburban areas.

In the Pointes, several persons attending a dinner party found their car windows had been shot out when they started to go home. On a cold winter night, driving without windows can be unpleasant. Even more unpleasant is the cost of replacing the windows which can run from $60 to $300 for a side window and from $125 to $400 for a windshield.

As we've said, we don't know what motivates those responsible for such an activity. It is, of course, malicious destruction of property and not just a holiday prank. Police take a serious view of such an activity and promise to deal appropriately with those responsible.

Where praise is also due

Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara no doubt deserves much of the credit for the approval of the county bailout package that was accepted in the waning hours of the 1987 legislative session. Yet other people also deserve kudos for enactment of the program that helped Wayne County avert bankruptcy.

We might start with Gov. James Blanchard himself. He violated his own campaign pledge against tax increases by endorsing in advance of legislative approval the four-cent boost in the cigarette tax.

If the governor deserves some credit, so does Sen. John Engler, the Republican Senate majority leader, who helped put together Senate approval of the package even though many Republicans still regard Wayne County as a financial sinkhole unworthy of state support.

The nine Republican House members who voted for the cigarette tax increase also deserve some of the credit for passage of the bailout package. Among them was Rep. William Bryant Jr. of Grosse Pointe who knew the seriousness of the Wayne County situation because of his service on the House Taxation Committee.

House Speaker Gary Owen also was credited by the media with having persuaded some of his Democratic colleagues from outside the Detroit metropolitan area to support the legislation. Even though Detroit and Wayne County always return a Democratic majority in all elections, out-state conservative Democrats have little more sympathy for the metropolitan area's problems than outstate Republicans do. So Owen's task was none too easy.

Businessmen and lobbyists who serve their own interests by keeping Wayne County solvent also helped in the final push for the bailout package, according to the Detroit media. But in the end most of the credit must go to those who cast their votes to pass the legislation.

The Detroit Free Press acclaimed the bailout package and gave McNamara the lion's share of the credit. Its editorial pointed out that McNamara's action in proposing a balanced budget that required deep cuts in needed services probably turned the tide in the county's favor. It warned legislators of what would happen if the bailout package failed. The threat worked and McNamara was able to cancel most of the spending cuts and layoffs.

Even the Detroit News, which seldom approves of revenue increases for any purpose, said: "If the reforms work, the extra revenue up front will have proved to be a good investment by the state's taxpayers." And then it added some good advice: "Voters will want to keep an eye on the county's performance, however."

McNamara told reporters the revenue increase involved in the bailout package "does not give us dollars to play with but dollars to go back in business." We hope the Wayne county commissioners were listening, both to McNamara and to the Detroit News warning, because in November they had approved $87,704 in new furniture for their offices in the newly renovated Wayne County Building even as the county's fiscal crisis was deepening.

Library

To the Editor:

I can't believe it! I read the recent headline story about the library and its decision regarding a move to Richard School and moving more furniture out of the library. Why are they considering moving Central Library across the street? As a South student I have been quietly watching all the things going on at the library, and I must say that I am disappointed that I won't see a better library soon.

I grew up with the library. My parents used to walk with me there, and ever since I can remember I have used the library. It never occurred to me that the library would ever be any place else than where it is right now on Kercheval. I also grew up hearing about how much this community values its kids and how valuable the library was for kids. It really surprised me when I heard from my parents, who voted for the library expansion, that the library was defeated.

Even since I can remember, I looked forward to going to South High School. And I knew that the library would be on my path home from school every day. Unfortunately, I am probably one of those silent minority who fail to speak up for what is worthwhile before someone takes it away. This happens in classes every day; it's the loud-mouth bully who gets heard. That's probably what happened to the library, too, especially when I heard words about the playing fields being taken away. I couldn't believe it when one of my teachers said he had voted against the library because of the fields.

How often are the fields used? Look at them now; they are just lying dormant! How often is the library used? Every day! I am sure that the athletes could use their physical strength to walk a few blocks, to Messmer Field for example, if the small portion of land were given for library use. On the other hand, you can't take a huge library building and its contents and move it across the street! The library will continue to provide for my needs and everyone else's needs long after the sports players have retired from sports and their jock straps are left to decay in some abandoned dresser drawer. It seems that a few loud voices, reflecting narrow-minded views and self-pride, robbed me and other kids of the chance to have a better public library.

This is not to say that I like South any less. In fact, my education and my teachers speak to me about the need for a democratic process and for the necessity of my role as a future leader. Unfortunately, because of my age, I was not given an opportunity to vote in the last election. I truly am the minority without a voice. Would I have been viewed as a crazy teenager if I spoke out for better library? And yet, in a few years, after the library has helped me prepare for college, I may want to return to live in Grosse Pointe. I would want it to be the place that had the best library in any community in the nation!

Come on, Grosse Pointers, you are always telling teenagers to grow up and become mature. Now it's time for you to grow up and vote for a library that will help prepare me for the future.

Please, don't move the library to Richard. Please, don't move more seating out of the library. The library is already overcrowded. Please, stop playing games with my opportunities for education and my future.

Woman's work is never done

A short story appeared in the November/December 1987 issue of Michigan Woman, written by Tess Hoffman, a freelancer from Grosse Ile. It's called "The Habitual Laundress." I read it. I laughed. I cried. I identified.

It's about a wife/mother who's conscientiously trying to do her job.

She just wants to get done. She becomes obsessed with actually finishing the family's laundry. Just once.

We wives/mothers know, of course, that this is a physically impossible task. You could rouse the whole family at 4 a.m., send them to the showers, strip the beds, snatch their towels away, and ask them to line up, nude, in front of the washer and dryer.

Ha. You'd still find socks under the beds, gym suits stuffed in the children's backpacks, dish towels in the sink.

The poor woman in the story went broke and berserk and was finally packed off to a rest home somewhere.

When my children were very young, I once confided to my friend Joyce — in a whisper — as we sat watching our kids at swim practice. "Don't tell anybody," I whispered, looking over my shoulder, "but I think I'm caught up. With everything."

She stared at me.

"My house is clean. The grocery shopping is done. The laundry is finished. So is the ironing and mending. The beds are made. The bathrooms are scrubbed. The garden has been weeded. The dog's shots are up to date. So are the kids'. The dishes are in the dishwasher."

I swept my hand toward the pool, where little swimmers were paddling diligent lengths. "The kids are clean. I called my mother-in-law. Paid my bills. Shaved my legs. I took the trash out an hour ago. Picked up the dry cleaning. Watered the plants. Caught up on my correspondence. Gave the outgrown clothes to Goodwill. Did 100 sit-ups. Returned my library books. I cleaned the toy box, the glove compartment, the junk drawer and my purse."

She looked at me with wonder. "If I die today," I said, "be sure my obituary reads 'she was caught up with her housework.'"

Joyce nodded, dumbstruck.

We sat, silently watching the children swim.

She finally leaned toward me. "Have you put the family photographs into an album?" Silence.

"How about the kids' games? Have you taped the broken corners of the lids to the Clue game and the Monopoly game?"

Joyce was on a roll. "Have you put your cancelled checks in chronological order? Alphabetized your paperback books? Cleaned under the rim of the toilet bowl?"

Her eyes were getting glassy. "Have you started a compost pile?"

"Halloween costumes! Are they done yet? Have you begun your Christmas shopping?"

"Fingernails!" She grabbed my hand. "Your polish is chipped."

I began to think. I hadn't read a single current best-seller. My driver's license needed to be renewed. I hadn't yet figured out what to do with the fluff cycle on my dryer. I needed to lose five pounds. I didn't yet own a little black dress, a fun fur, or even a serious fur. Nor had I balanced my checkbook.

That poolside incident took place 10 years ago. As the kids got older, I got further and further behind. I got a job. Friends said things would get worse. Things got worse. Two kids went off to college. Life's little litters should have been easier to keep up with.

But the mold still grows, unchecked, between the shower tiles. Dust continues to collect. Laundry, trash and bills still pile up at a constant rate. Green fuzzy things appear unexpectedly on the back shelves of my refrigerator. Sheets rip. Coffee spills. Appliances break. Insects multiply. Checks bounce. Clothes go out of fashion. Holidays loom. I still haven't figured out what the fluff cycle is for.

You're a flirt

Well, if you're not a flirt, you soon could be. The Grosse Pointe schools' Department of Community Education will, in March, offer a class on the subject.

The course, titled "Flirting," will begin March 14.

George Eddington, director of community education, said the class will be an interpersonal skills course taught by Paul Seaser. The course description sounds a bit less exciting than the snappy title.

"Flirting is a social skill in today's lifestyle. Understand how to open up avenues of communication between yourself and others, how to meet and relate to others in various social and business situations, how to attract people and charm them and, most importantly, how to hold their attention. The positive attention of flirting is fun."

Anchors away

Three men got the deep six last week when an alert Woods officer spotted a car driving down Mack with a huge white boat anchor in the trunk.

The officer asked the driver for his registration and license, but the man was unable to produce either.

The men, all in their late teens from St. Clair Shores, professed innocence to knowing where the anchor came from. The anchor, about 4 feet by 3 1/2 feet by 2 1/2 feet, was too large to fit in the trunk and was sticking out. The officer estimated the anchor weighed about 100 pounds.

Police later determined it had been taken from the front of a Vernier home that had a large nautical display. The anchor had apparently been decorated for Christmas.

The men were all brought in on charges of possession of stolen property. The anchor's owner did not press charges, since he got his property back. Parents were contacted, the youths released and the anchor returned.

Down the hatch

There was an unusual entry in a report for a drunk driving offense last week.

Seems a woman who had been arrested for drunk driving became combative with the officers and was somewhat hostile.

During the process of being booked, she was asked to remove her chain and locket from around her neck for safekeeping.

The woman refused. After the officers insisted, the woman ripped the chain from her neck, grabbed the locket, put it in her mouth and swallowed it.

The woman apparently suffered no ill effects, and after posting bond was released.

June 12, 1969 —

The New York Times reported that John L. Lewis, a giant of the American labor movement and for decades a top figure on the American scene, died at Doctors Hospital in Washington where he had been admitted earlier in the week, suffering from internal bleeding. He was 89.

President Nixon ordered the cancellation of the manned orbiting laboratory program — the military's most ambitious space project — over the objections of the Defense Department and the Air Force.

Communist China said that Soviet troops intruded into northwest Sinkiang, killing one herder and kidnapping another and concentrating troops and armored units on the border. According to Peking radio, the incident was "developing."

A Soviet reply contended that Soviet frontier guards had fired in self-defense after a Chinese herder had driven his sheep across the border and soldiers opened fire.

Seventy-one graduates of Harlem Preparatory School, who had been accepted into 37 universities and colleges, were told by black commencement speakers to shun campus politics and to concentrate on acquiring skills that could be of service to people of the slums. It was the second graduating class for the school.

Eighth- and ninth-graders in West Germany were scheduled to receive a sex information atlas, a book that described the techniques of sexual intercourse and provided information on contraception. The book, which made no moral judgment on premarital sex, was described by federal health ministry officials as one of the most comprehensive and advanced sex education programs for children anywhere. The book was prepared by the government.

The Students for a Democratic Society, turned down on more than 60 potential meeting places, announced it would hold its national convention in Chicago.

board officials who considered using it for a library. War Memorial officials also rejected the possibility of using the residence as an extension of its Lakeshore facility due to cost and distance.

Scheduled to graduate from Grosse Pointe South in the evening were 1,030 students, with commencement exercises to be held on the football field if the weather permitted. School authorities decided to keep the class intact — with the first class to graduate from North scheduled for the following year. About 625 students were expected to graduate from North.

A Lincoln Road resident discovered a family of opossums — mother and seven babies — living in his garage. The man managed to get them in a cage so that all of the neighborhood children could see them and then he planned to call one of the humane organizations.

The War Memorial's 20th anniversary annual Family Participation Campaign was deemed a success. Nearly $85,000 had come in from 5,137 donors.

The Park director of police safety's recommendation that limited parking on Mack from Grayton to Cadieux be made permanent was rejected by the council. A temporary restriction prohibiting on-street parking between 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. except Saturdays and Sundays was working well, the director said. However, store owners contended it hurt business.

Niki's owner Kefallinos finds business success tasty

By Tim Tipton
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods resident Dionysius "Dennis" Kefallinos thinks he has a grasp on the American dream and many people would agree. Kefallinos came to the United States from Greece in 1969 when he was 14, and since his arrival, has encountered business success to the tune of about $1.7 million in annual sales for his company this year.

Kefallinos is fast becoming Detroit's salad dressing tycoon as well as being owner of Niki's Pizzeria, Niki's Taverna, Niki's on the Boulevard and Chicken Express, all downtown restaurants. His business empire began in 1981 when he opened Niki's Greek Pizzeria in Greektown and he has been expanding his operations ever since.

Life on his family's olive farm in Zakynthos, a Greek island southeast of the mainland, didn't seem to have the glamour of a trek to the United States, so Kefallinos left home and worked for six years bussing and waiting tables in Detroit restaurants before going into business for himself.

"I've only had about four years of formal education, so it was quite natural for me to go to work in the restaurants," said Kefallinos, who became a U.S. citizen in 1975.

It took long and hard hours of work — sometimes 90 to 100 hours a week before Kefallinos had accumulated the $40,000 needed to open his first business — the Mediterranean Lounge in Warren. This is the location where Kefallinos first developed his special salad dressing that now graces supermarket shelves of stores from Canada to Florida as well as his own restaurants downtown. "When I first started, we used to fill up the bottles by hand down in the basement," he said.

By 1979 Kefallinos longed for the olive farm and sea air of home, so he sold his lounge and moved back to Greece. This was short-lived, however, because six months later he returned to Detroit to the city life and once again put his heart in the American way.

It was with the $30,000 from the sale of the lounge which Kefallinos used to open Niki's Pizzeria, a small restaurant on Beaubien Street at the edge of Greektown. He named the restaurant after his mother, who in the early years of the business could often be seen cooking and helping out. His product was unique in that his pizzas didn't use mozzarella cheese, but a combination of kasseri and brick cheese and a spicy Greek sausage instead of the traditional pepperoni.

Kefallinos jokes that he was in Greektown before it was fashionable. "I have great faith in downtown Detroit," said Kefallinos, who is married to Agatha, 23, and has a 15-month-old son, Nikolas. "Since our first restaurant in 1981 we have been beating the odds, and I know when future investments come along, I will always consider downtown."

It is easy to understand Kefallinos' pro-Detroit attitude since his sixth floor Beaubien Street offices overlook Trappers Alley, Greektown and the People Mover.

Currently, Kefallinos is adding 130 seats to the 410 in his Niki's Greek Pizzeria and Niki's Taverna by taking over the former Acropolis restaurant next door. This will bring his seating capacity to 540, making it one of the city's largest restaurants.

"Business success does not come easy," he said. "You can't be afraid to work — oftentimes I put in between 12 and 15 hours a day and even though I'm the boss, there is no reason to slow down. Making it is the satisfaction I get from my work."

Over the years Kefallinos has been locally marketing his salad dressing, which comes in original, feta or creamy garlic, in an effort to fill a void left in the marketplace. In 1984, he purchased an existing salad dressing plant in Troy, which could bottle 50 jars per minute, but after a year, moved his business to Detroit. Kefallinos cited the need to keep his businesses in close proximity as the reason for the move.

"Sure, it cost me money to make the move, but now I can keep track of all of my businesses and not worry about traveling time," he said.

His salad dressing business is flourishing, with distributors sending the product to Indiana and Florida. "I hope to concentrate on between 10 and 15 states for the next two years and who knows after that," said Kefallinos.

"We have begun Canadian distribution, which seems to be as strong as in the U.S., since we have shipped over 13,000 cases after the summer and they are continuing the order." He is shipping salad dressing to all four major grocery chains in the Detroit area and has recently been shipping to Loblaw's, a Canadian grocery chain of 800 stores.

Although Kefallinos does not envision national distribution of his salad dressings in the near future, his thoughts are on business growth. "In the next five years I would like to see a 40 percent increase even if we don't expand," he said. "Right now I would just like to make my company more solid and grow with the challenge."

In December Kefallinos opened Chicken Express on Michigan Avenue, a fast food restaurant offering barbecued and fried chicken. "This is our test store and we will be keeping a keen eye on the public's response," he said. "We feel the next 90 days will be a workable timeframe to track the store's success. If the public's response is considerable, who knows what the future will hold."

Chamber plans tax seminar

The seminar will be presented Thursday, Jan. 7, 1 to 3 p.m., at the Chamber of Commerce building, 27601 Jefferson, St. Clair Shores. There is no charge for chamber members, $10 for non-members.

The seminar is open to all businesses located in the service area of the Metro East Chamber of Commerce. Due to limited seating capacity, reservations are necessary, and may be made by calling the chamber office at 777-2741.

School considers variety of budget woes; to cut $500,000

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Board of Education has given authority to the school administration to cut the district's budget expenditures by some $500,000 for the 1988-89 school year to maintain a favorable fund equity.

According to Director of Business Affairs Christian Fenton, the district's fund equity, the amount left over at the end of the year after expenses have been paid, should be about $2 million.

Since the school board has voluntarily rolled back the millage rate every year for seven years, and costs have continued to rise, the district will tax at its maximum rate of 33 mills, but still be about $500,000 short in keeping the fund equity level at a minimally acceptable level of about $1.8 million.

Superintendent John Whritner said the principals of the schools have been asked to look at areas of their budgets where expenditures can be cut. He didn't feel that the full $500,000 could be found from those budget reductions.

"In a district where 80 percent of the overall budget is tied to staffing," Whritner said, "that is the only area where major cuts can be made."

Whritner said that perhaps 10 to 12 positions, likely at the high school level, would be eliminated for the 1988-89 school year.

The reason for the $500,000 shortfall hasn't been solely caused by the voluntary reduction of taxes. The state mandated Headlee rollback of millage rates and cost increases, especially large increases such as in Blue Cross and liability insurance, are to blame.

"We are not considering any increase in the authorized millage rate for the 1988-89 school year," Whritner said. "We have been given a three-year levy and we intend to live within our means."

The district is considering a millage rate increase during the 1989-90 school year to meet rising costs and a host of other expenditures.

Fenton said the district will also take a look at such self-supporting programs as the cafeteria and Latchkey.

"We want to make sure they really are self-supporting," Fenton said. "With the cafeteria, for instance, if we have to replace a stove or buy a truck, then the program really isn't all that self-supporting."

He said the district may look at moderate fee increases to offset such situations which would make the programs truly self-supporting.

Whritner noted that the district has increased the number of elementary positions this year. He said that reflects the increase in enrollment in the elementary schools. Cutting positions at the high school level will not be easy, but that with some consolidation of classes and a look at maximum class size, some 10 to 12 positions could be cut. He added that he realizes this will be unpopular within the community.

There are a number of other financial concerns that will face the district in the months ahead. The school board listened to a preliminary plan by an architect about renovation of the 389 St. Clair administration building, or possible new construction at Barnes Elementary School in the Woods.

The preliminary figures indicated that new construction at Barnes would cost about $2.3 million while renovation at the historic 389 St. Clair site would cost about $1.7 million.

That construction could be performed without benefit of a vote, if the school board agreed to borrow the money. The board could ask the voters to approve whatever plan it decided on.

For this and other special projects, the board has agreed to look at a December 1990 $5.5 million to $6.1 million bond issue. Again, the district could borrow this money with the state's approval or ask for voters to decide. This vote would likely come after any vote on the proposed library expansion project that might occur in 1989 or 1990.

Other expenditures facing the district in the next several years will be replacing the North High School pool at $500,000; masonry projects around the district, $800,000; roof repairs at various buildings, $1 million; and window replacement projects at Mason, Trombly, Richard and Parcels, $1 million.

The window projects are necessary to save energy costs, cut down on maintenance and improve aesthetics, Whritner said. The energy savings would allow for a 16- to 20-year payback for the district. Fenton pointed out that this would not include savings due to a decrease in maintenance costs.

Fenton said the district will borrow that money, likely next summer, for the window projects. The money will be borrowed with board approval only.

These expensive projects must be worked into the budget. The money would be found through a combined plan which includes hiking the millage levy, voter approval of allowing recapture of the Headlee rollback and a bond issue for special projects.

The district is also looking at major asbestos removal or encapsulating projects district-wide in the next few years. Director of Support Services David King estimated that were the district to go ahead with all of the asbestos removal projects it currently has, the cost would be about $4 million.

The projects, however, will be done over time. There is also the consideration that the class action lawsuit the district has entered will provide it with money to offset those costs. That lawsuit, however, is just getting underway, and there may not be any decision for years, with compensation not for years after that.

Officials said they are not proposing the district tackle the entire asbestos problem immediately, but there are certain problems within the school which must be addressed soon.

There have been continuing problems with pitting of the pool's metal liner, which has cost the district thousands of dollars since its construction in the late-1960s. Of course, there is no guarantee that the district will get any money as a result of the lawsuit.

The renovation of 389 St. Clair or a move of the administration offices to Barnes is necessary, according to Whritner. The current building is a historic site, but has water leakage problems in the basement where the district's computers are located, has window problems, an antiquated heating and air conditioning system and general inefficiency in allowing employees to move between departments.

Children's Home gets decorated trees, gifts

By Tim Tipton
Staff Writer

For the second consecutive year, the Children's Home of Detroit has received donations from a special Children's Tree project sponsored by the Kmart Corp. Shoppers can pick a child's name from the tree and either donate money or buy a present for the youngster.

The Children's Tree is an optional program run on a per-store basis, according to Leslie Kota, a company spokeswoman. "Last year, in our first year, we helped 361,000 children across the country to have a better Christmas."

The special Christmas tree is located near the front of each participating store filled with tags giving information about the children — first name, sex, age and clothing sizes when available. Shoppers do not have to buy the gift at the store, but they are asked to bring it back gift-wrapped.

The St. Clair Shores Kmart on Nine Mile Road has chosen the Children's Home and Project Headstart as recipients of the gifts for the past two years. Assistant Manager Paul Grey said shoppers helped more than 900 children last year and this year they are expecting to help nearly as many. "It is a fun project that many of our employees enjoy getting involved in," he said.

Debbie Liedel, an activities services supervisor at the Children's Home, said donations go far to help the many emotionally impaired and learning disabled troubled youth who are residents there. Liedel said currently 62 children live at the home and range in age from 6 to 18 years old and usually require a stay of 12 to 18 months.

The Children's Home held its annual Christmas banquet Dec. 18 and this year all of the children and staff were treated to a Christmas play titled "Mother Goose's Party." Some of the residents performed the production with help from 20-year-veteran Loretta Burton, a child care worker and drama club leader.

For the last three years, the Children's Home has also been involved in a special program for adolescent females. Liedel said the girls remain active and some of them work besides going to the local high school. Child care worker Tommie Jo Davis is a 19-year-veteran at the Children's Home who has an opportunity to work with the teenage girls on a daily basis. "Here at Parker Cottage we have eight girls ranging in age from 14 to 17 years old," she said. "Our girls are very busy. They raised money to buy a videocassette recorder and a microwave oven for their cottage by holding in-house raffles, a craft sale and car wash."

Ten-year employee Liedel said watching the Children's Home grow over the years has been especially rewarding as well as seeing the special commitment given every day by those on staff, some of whom have been there for 20 years. "I also get great pleasure out of hearing from the kids who have left, but come back or keep in touch in later years," Liedel said. "For some of these people, maybe they couldn't say thanks while they were here, so seeing or hearing from them gives you a wonderful feeling."

The girls in Parker Cottage at the Children's Home decorated their family room with plenty of Christmas spirit. Besides having a beautifully decorated tree, the group has their Christmas stockings hung by the fireplace in anticipation of the big day.

Park reports five break-ins

Five break-ins were reported in the Park in the week before Christmas, according to officials.

A leather coat was taken from a Somerset home around midnight on Dec. 19.

Police said the resident heard a noise in the living room and when she investigated, she surprised the burglar.

The man fled out the rear door. He was described as a black male in his 20s with short hair.

A VCR was taken from a Wayburn resident on Dec. 20. Entry was through an apparently unlocked front door. Residents heard a noise, and saw the suspect run out the front door. A short chase ensued, but ended when the man shouted that he would shoot his pursuer.

Register for kids' programs at library

Registration for spring children's programs at the Grosse Pointe public libraries will be held Saturday, Jan. 2. Due to the demand, register for one session of four weeks only.

Pre-school storytime for ages 3 to 5, one-half hour of stories, songs and fingerplays, will run Tuesdays at 1 p.m., from Feb. 2 through March 22, at the Woods branch. The Park's storytimes will be held Thursdays at 1 p.m. and 2 p.m. from Feb. 4 through March 24. Central Library will present storytimes at 10:45 a.m., 1 and 2 p.m. on Wednesdays, Feb. 3 through March 23.

The burglar was described as a black male, 20 to 30 years old, about 5 feet, 7 inches tall, about 200 pounds with a dark complexion.

A side door screen was kicked and the inner door was unlocked at a Buckingham residence Dec. 20. Police said a large purse was taken.

The Rustic Cabins Bar was broken into Dec. 23. Police said extensive damage was done to a rear door through which the thief likely crawled. Some $1,100 in coins was taken.

A 19-inch color television was taken from a Wayburn residence Dec. 24. Police said that the burglar kicked in a rear door. Also taken were a microwave oven, jewelry and 162,000 Italian lire.

Television stolen

A glass pane on the front door of a house on the 1300 block of Maryland in the Park was broken out, allowing thieves into the house.

A color television set was taken. Park police are investigating.

Resolution, what is it?

The new year. Bah Humbug! Another year down, another year older. Another gray hair, another opportunity to blow those resolutions right out of the water.

What is a New Year's resolution and why do we make them? I don't know many people who stick to them or carry them out for 365 days of the year. For those who do, you deserve a pat on the back. For those who don't, jump aboard and stand in line. I'm the number one culprit.

After downing glasses upon glasses of punch, egg nog, or whatever that stuff was Aunt Millie made, we all tend to believe we have got to lose that extra 10 pounds or begin jogging during the wee hours of the morning. Most people call that a "resolution." I call it idiotic.

For one thing, during the wee hours of the morning I am rolling over for the first time and while I succumbed to Aunt Millie's original creation, I thought about tossing my share in the plant in the corner of the room. I don't need to lose weight, so I won't make that my New Year's resolution. I do need to become better fit, so I'll try to drop the punch and start swimming or working out again.

I squeezed the majority of coaches in the area for their resolutions, and in turn they asked me mine, but I got off on some tangent to avoid the question. (It kind of reminded me of some people I try to interview). Anyway, I began to list my resolutions, but it was difficult to get my arm to work. I didn't know if it was because I think I'm just simply pleased, or if I am that mentally drained.

After careful consideration, I decided to put my resolutions on paper, but as usual I had to edit parts of them because some were definitely naughty, but the majority of them were nice.

So, on this day of bubbly, cheer and party favors, I bring to you my list of resolutions:

This year I will not watch Dick Clark's Rockin' New Year's Eve show. Every year I see that apple fall to the ground and I remember one time I watched from a hospital waiting room as a buddy of mine was dressed with 10 stitches in his forehead. He was pushed by a party crasher and bumped his head. It was not one of my favorite nights to celebrate, but when that apple did fall as I watched from the waiting room, I believe I scared the hell out of the lady in the corner when I shouted Happy New Year!

In 1988 sports will remain the second biggest part of my life. (See Sandy, I told you I would get your name in the paper again). Sports, sports and more sports. That's all I think about sometimes. I live, breathe and sleep for sports, but this year I will turn over that new leaf and promise to stop sleeping in my Indianapolis Colts pajamas and keep the baseball cap on the bed post. But most of all I have got to refrain from wearing those cleats — they always get stuck in the sheets.

My next resolution is a simple one. I have got to start wearing the proper attire to the proper school. You know, Grosse Pointe, the "fashion statement city." It was my first bitter taste of the North/South rivalry. I heard about the tremendous adversity between schools, but making a statement with my clothes was obviously not appropriate for one North fan. In my second trip to a gymnasium, I was asked why I wore blue pants and a gold tie to North's gymnasium. Isn't that ridiculous? Just because North's school colors are green and gold and South's are blue and gold, doesn't mean I have to arrange my wardrobe accordingly. However, I would like the girl to know that no longer will I wear blue and gold into a green and gold venue, nor will I wear green and gold into a blue and gold gym. The solution is simple: That girl will have to rearrange her closet, call me every day and clue me in on what I should wear — this way I can't blame my mother for the way I dress.

One more thought will be to stop listening to Beach Boys music in the dead of winter. The only Surfin' Safari I've ever been on is a 180 degree fall straight to my back while shoveling snow. You know what they say, "It's a jungle out there."

Last, but by no means least, I must create a new concoction for punch. Aunt Millie has got to realize that the plants in her house are not dropping to their death by natural causes. Hopefully that awful taste of punch will not erode my taste buds and the new formula will be ever so pleasant. Happy New Year!

Humor and honesty head the list

Pointe coaches look for resolution

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

It's the time of year to begin trimming the waistline and picking up the jump rope to make those New Year's resolutions part of a daily regimen.

As sports enthusiasts we should all know the meaning of wanting to make the "season" grow, but we also should recognize that wanting our resolutions to come true takes diligence and patience. It doesn't happen over night, but with the guidance of our courageous coaches in the Grosse Pointes, we will soon discover what their intentions are as well as our own.

For the coaches of North, South and University Liggett School, resolutions were stretched from fiction to non-fiction, but when their response was on the line, they came through with originality and honesty.

Maybe you thought you knew the coaches, but the following list may redirect your thoughts. And yes, they do have a sense of humor.

My New Year's resolution is...

Gary Bennett — North basketball: "Getting to the quarterfinals next year. It's going to be pretty difficult, but..." North was one win away from qualifying for the Class A girls' quarterfinal games.

Dan Griesbaum — South baseball: "Go back to Lansing in 1988 and come home from Michigan State with a different result." The Blue Devils advanced to the state finals last year, only to be defeated by Midland Dow, 9-3.

Tim Zimmerman — South hockey: "To be more patient with my hockey team. I think that says it all. Hopefully that resolution will come true."

Mike Maskill — North wrestling: "To have about 25 more wrestlers participating in the program to make it stronger."

Dick Didur — North golf: "I would like to try and hit the ball as well as the kids do."

George Petrouleas — South basketball: "I want to make sure, or maintain my composure when our basketball team is down by 30 points. And I don't want to smile too much if we're up by 30."

Cathy Schmidt — ULS track and field: "To help the track and field athletes become more confident and happier about themselves."

Chuck Wright — ULS basketball: "To keep my fanny on the bench the rest of the season." In case you don't know, high school basketball coaches are restricted to the bench during the game. What prompted Coach Wright's decision about his resolution was when he was assessed a technical foul for "cheering" in the first game of the year.

Steve Zaranek — South cross country: At first Steve commented that "it's hard to improve on perfection my boy." But, after careful thought, Steve reneged and stated, "To enjoy another year teaching and coaching the fantastic students at South."

Bob Wood — ULS athletic director and tennis coach: "To begin working on my dream to build an athletic fieldhouse at University Liggett School."

King for a day!

Bob Kaiser (middle) was recently honored by Wayne County Commissioner David P. Cavanagh (right) for his avid sportsmanship and keen civic interest for the benefit of charitable services and needy young children. Kaiser, a championship offshore powerboat racer who represents the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, the Lake St. Clair Offshore Racing Association and the state of Michigan as the 1987 U.S. National High Points Champion, donates his substantial prize earnings to Big Brothers and Special Olympics organizations.

Kaiser's father, Joseph P. Kaiser, was on hand to watch his son receive a Resolution that stated, "The Wayne County Commission salutes and commends Robert Kaiser for his great success and history of achievement, and applauds his exceptional generosity and inspiring contributions toward favorite worthy causes..."

Kaiser captured the world record average course speed of 108.043 m.p.h. during the season and drives the only boat in the nation with the US-1 designation attached to it. Kaiser is a resident of Grosse Pointe and is the executive vice-president of the Gallagher-Kaiser Corporation.

Jeanne Bocci sets American walking record

Jeanne Bocci, of the Park, set a new American record in the 100 kilometer Walking Championships (62.2 miles) in Houston on Dec. 20. Bocci finished fourth, with three male competitors ahead of her, in a time of 11:30:28. The old record was 12 hours, 4 minutes set back in 1984.

"My goal was to walk just under 12 hours so I am more than pleased to be 30 minutes faster than planned," said Bocci. "This is by far one of my toughest athletic accomplishments ever achieved."

A dreary day for running left Bocci with numerous choices to make, but changing her clothes seemed to hinder her time.

"During the last 25 miles it rained so hard I had to change my clothes five times, otherwise I would have been even 20 minutes faster," she said, "I became too chilled after the rain and needed dry shirts, shorts and shoes. Thanks to my family (who came along as my "pit" crew) for their help and support."

Bocci completed the 62-mile course in record time, but without proper preparation, she possibly would not have done as well.

"It was exciting to be able to finish this with such an excellent time," she said, "and I am amazed at how good my recovery time was after the event. Guess I did my homework with my training schedule."

Judy Richards — North volleyball: "To make the team reach its potential in time to beat South in the district finals." Think there's a rivalry there?

Don Zysk — South tennis: "I want to lose enough weight to feel good again on the tennis courts this spring."

Shelley Owens — ULS volleyball and basketball: "Work, work, and work some more. But smiling all the way of course." Of course, but all work and no play, well you know the rest.

Buffy Fowler — ULS girls' hockey coach: "I've never had a resolution before, but if I had to have one, it would have to be that I want to be more understanding to John and his hockey commitment."

John Fowler — ULS hockey and lacrosse: "To be a better husband." John and Buffy are newlyweds and marrying one another was definitely "ice"-ing on the cake.

Frank Sumner — North football: Frank also tried to get a job in as he said, "I'm going to stop being nice to the Grosse Pointe News sports editor." But, when threatened by the words "no coverage next season," he confessed that he'd like, "To try and spend a little more time with my family and not so much time watching film."

John Bruce — South softball: "My players know what my resolution should be, but there's no way I'm going to confess the number of pounds publicly."

Mary Dube — North gymnastics: "To give my plumber more golf lessons." Instead of giving her husband a plunger this year, Mary wrapped up some lovely thoughts of watching her husband tour the PGA.

Muriel Brock — ULS field hockey: "To continue to be involved in, and enjoy my coaching as much as I have in the past."

Peggy VanEckoute — South basketball: "I look for the end of the school year. My resolution is to make it through the school year."

Fred Michalik — South swimming: "To make sure all basketball players with big feet become swimmers, and that all swimmers with two left feet become basketball players." Could that be why some basketball players can't dance?

Jon Rice — South football: "Try to be as happy through this football season as I was last season." The Blue Devils played in two playoff games and finished with a 9-2 mark.

David Backhurst — ULS soccer: "To be able to replace the five girls we lost from last year's team, with five quality girls this year."

Josh Schmidt — ULS track and golf: "That no kids in the school become injured."

Tom Wise — South track: "That the students at Grosse Pointe South will attain the best health possible."

Mike Manzella — North hockey: "The perfect hat trick would be to be a better father, a better teacher and a better coach." Looks like he's got his work cut out for him.

There you have it folks. From your favorite coach to your favorite enemy, you know what the coaches are after in 1988.

Tonight the resolutions will ascend as the apple descends. Here's to hoping your New Year's resolutions are not caught underneath the apple. Cheers!

Happy, healthy holiday greetings

One of the exciting aspects of current health issues is that individuals can modify their health status and control major risks.

You can gain control of your health by taking responsibility for your health and controlling the risk factors. Take the opportunity to identify your personal health problems and risk factors and act on them accordingly.

Most of the research studies concerning risk factors for health problems have dealt with some aspect of cardiovascular disease. Risk factors are normally divided into two groups; primary and secondary.

Primary risk factors are those characteristics that are highly associated with particular health problems and independent of all other variables. Secondary risk factors, on the other hand, have a high relationship with the health problem only when other factors are present. For instance, if a person's parents died from heart disease at an early age (secondary risk factor), that person would not be at high risk if no other risk factors were present.

Here are some primary factors that cause a higher risk for cardiovascular heart disease even in the absence of other risk factors: Smoking, high fat diet, high levels of LDL in the cholesterol count, low levels of HDL in the cholesterol count and high blood pressure.

Here are some secondary characteristics and behaviors that cause an increased risk only when other risk factors are present. In addition to the factors that can't be altered (age, family history, gender, or race) other secondary risk factors exist. Included among the "other" secondary risk factors are physical inactivity, obesity, inability to cope with stress, coronary prone personality and high triglyceride levels.

It is obvious to note that these characteristics can be controlled by modifying life-styles.

If you don't know the breakdown in your cholesterol or triglyceride tests, ask your physician for specific information. It is your duty and right to know this information about yourself.

Physical fitness is a necessary ingredient of fitness, but fitness includes much more than just the physical aspects. Stress patterns that can be transmitted from parents to children are types of behaviors that can be corrected with proper attention throughout life; especially in early childhood.

It's time to think about your lifestyle and the type of programming you are giving to your children.

Make the present you give yourself this season one of ultimate benefit by evaluating your lifestyle and altering some of those risks.

MichCon, MUCC offer scholarships

Planning a career in fisheries and wildlife, environmental protection or natural resource management? If so, and you're a high school junior or senior, you could qualify for a scholarship of up to $1,000 from one of the state's largest utility companies and Michigan's largest conservation organization.

For the third consecutive year, the Michigan Consolidated Gas Company (MichCon) and the Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC) are co-sponsoring a unique college scholarship program for high school juniors and seniors pursuing careers in natural resource management.

Under the MichCon/MUCC Scholarship Competition, eligible high school students who want to compete for a scholarship grant of up to $1,000 must design a conservation related project and submit their project proposal to MichCon and MUCC for consideration. Examples of projects, which can be in any field involving natural resources, include a plant or wildlife program, a stream improvement or erosion control project, designing and conducting a fishing program, or research projects on acid rain, toxic and hazardous waste or land use planning designs.

Participating students should consider the practicality of the project, cost, time involved, and the impact the project will have on their local community.

Twelve finalists, chosen from all entries, will implement and manage their projects to completion and submit a detailed report to MichCon and MUCC before Sept. 30, 1988. The top five finalists will receive scholarships of $1,000. The remaining seven students will receive $350 scholarships.

Under the MichCon/MUCC Scholarship Competition:

- High school juniors and seniors interested in the competition must submit a written proposal for a conservation project along with a short essay on their career goals to MUCC by March 11, 1988.

- MUCC and MichCon will evaluate the project proposals and select 12 finalists on April 1, 1988.

On Jan. 4, 18 and Feb. 1, the Gorskis will hold instructional sessions from 7 to 9 p.m. The sessions will include proper dress, rules and regulations and desired equipment. There is no charge for the instructional sessions.

CHAMP presents aerobic program

Anyone active in aerobic dance and exercise programs should attend Safety in Aerobic Dance and Exercise, sponsored by the Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program (CHAMP).

This free community program will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 6 from 7 to 9 p.m. in the lower level boardrooms of the hospital.

The featured speaker at the program will be Valerie Pokorny-McHugh, a local exercise specialist. Pokorny-McHugh is a member of the American College of Sports Medicine and the Reebok Advisory Board. She also acts as the head judge in the Crystal Light Aerobics Competition.

The Jan. 6 program will focus on two viewpoints — that of the instructor and the participants. Exercise participants learn what to look for in a good class and instructor, how to select the appropriate level to begin, and particularly, how to avoid injury while exercising.

Instructors will learn about new developments in safe exercise programs, how to convey the injury prevention message to their students, and how exercises can be modified for low impact and other special needs.

If you exercise, you won't want to miss this presentation. Call 881-1800, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

'Weeds': An ambitious, intellectually troubling, feel-good film

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

A bold, ambitious film, "Weeds" marries the theater of the absurd with the American penal system. It draws from its existential footings to present the story of a man searching for freedom from body and soul. In the process, it becomes what is perhaps the most intellectually troubling feel-good movie of the year.

Though "Weeds" was inspired by Director John Hancock's experience with ex-prison convict Rick Cluchey and the San Quentin Drama Group, it is not a factual account of Cluchey's famous project.

"Weeds" is the story of fictional Lee Umstetter (Nick Nolte), a San Quentin prisoner serving a life sentence without chance of parole for robbery with aggravation. When we first meet Umstetter, he is despondent — trying various methods of suicide, looking for a way out of the bars that forced introspection have built up in his mind.

Film

When suicide doesn't work, he begins to read. He starts with "War and Peace" and moves on to the works of Nietzsche, Camus, Dostoevsky, Sartre and Beckett. And from this group he gleans not only a different way of looking at the world and his life, but also the key to maintaining his sanity.

Umstetter writes a play based on his experiences in prison. At first it is intended for presentation only to the San Quentin prisoners. But a very impressed local drama critic (Rita Taggart) campaigns to get Umstetter a gubernatorial pardon and parole.

Once out of prison, Umstetter gathers together all of the ex-convicts who worked with him on the play, and takes his show on the road — first to small colleges and playhouses across the country, then eventually to off-Broadway theaters in New York.

"Weeds" is the chronicle of the show and its progress. More importantly though, it's the chronicle of the growth of a group of human beings that society had written off as being beyond help. For every less-than-wholesome act the guys get involved in on the road — sleeping around, petty theft, drug abuse — there is the understanding that all of them are doing the best they can with what they have. They are trying to make a difference. And it's coming from the heart.

Especially Umstetter. On the road he faces many criminal temptations, including a chance to rob a liquor store in order to pay the bills. Not only does he meet the challenges he faces, he also manages to keep a group of ex-convicts in line and on the right track.

Late in the film, Umstetter and his company perform at a New York prison, where a riot breaks out because of the inflammatory nature of the dialogue. This sequence is as troubling for the film's viewers as it is for the fictional guards at the prison. With one broad stroke the story comes full circle. As far as Um-stetter and the group have come, they still have not broken free of the penal system. The passion and fire that emanates from their hearts is misunderstood by prison and civilian audiences alike.

In a final bit of existential irony, the show makes it to Broadway. But it's quite clear to viewers that the spirit of the piece has been lost in the shuffle. Physically, the men are free and the rewards of a material world are theirs. In matters of the soul, they are back where they always were.

Nolte gives the performance of his career in this film. As a hardened convict and a deeply thoughtful man, he touches all his bases. Every nook and every cranny of a solid characterization are filled in his reading of Um-stetter. Consequently, viewers find themselves rooting for Umstetter more than he is rooting for himself.

Despite the seemingly hopeless philosophical message the film delivers, there is a hint of joy just before the credits roll. Umstetter narrates over pictures of a long-abandoned prison, where weeds and flowers have begun to grow between all the cracks in the cement structure. Some day this vegetation will tear apart the walls of confinement, Umstetter says. "Because just like any flower, they had nectar to give too."

The parallel he's making is obvious. It's just sad that he won't be able to reap the benefits of his hard work because audiences who saw the play missed his point.

'Tango Argentino':

A different kind of flash dance

By Tim Tipton
Staff Writer

Romance and excitement are back at the Fisher Theatre with "Tango Argentino" which runs through Jan. 10.

With no speaking lines and a plotless configuration of tango dancers, creators Claudio Segovia and Hector Orezzioli achieve what they set out to do in celebrating the 100-year anniversary of the tango.

It is no wonder this all-Argentine cast of 15 dancers, three singers, and the 12-piece Sexteto Mayor tango orchestra provide for a fulfilling evening in the theater. The show has experienced wide acclaim from Japan to Canada, including a six-month run at the Mark Hellinger Theatre on Broadway in 1985 and a record-breaking sold-out one-week engagement at New York's City Center.

Foremost are the dancers, who convey the unique evolutionary styles of the tango from its slum-ridden roots to the more formalized styles which were later appreciated in European ballrooms and throughout the world. Their tango dances evoke a colorful display of emotions — love, fear, sexuality, repression, vitality, and even death.

The simplified set designs of Segovia and Orezzioli incorporate a contrast of black and white realities not unlike the flamboyant lives of 34-year dance partners Juan Carlos Coupes and Marla Nieves. Coupes, 54, and Nieves, 48, met in a social club when Coupes was an 18-year-old engineering student and he danced the tango with Nieves' older sister.

By 1952 the pair had teamed up and won an important tango competition at Luna Park in Buenos Aires. In 1955 they staged their own tango revue which made them national celebrities.

The couple then went on a tour of Latin America and to New York where they tangoed on the Ed Sullivan Show and at the Waldorf-Astoria. In 1964 they were married in Las Vegas, but by 1974 they were divorced, citing that although they were in love with each other, they couldn't live together.

Two years later Coupes married a non-dancer, Miriam Albuernez, with whom he has two children. However, Coupes has kept Nieves as his dance partner ever since.

Just as unique as the dance itself is the tango music, especially with the Bandoneon — an Argentine instrument similar to the accordion which can show off the voice of a cello and provide great accompaniment to the vi-lin. The show's orchestra featured four Bandoneon players in the front row of three levels of risers to furnish the audience with an interesting perspective of the instrument's wide range.

During one scene the orchestra plays under a star-filled night as a lone couple arrives on stage from different directions. The dancers move together and meet for a first embrace, but all is not passionate within the complex nature of the tango. Their poignant embrace is short-lived as their sleek bodies slide across the floor in the familiar slow, quick, slow step. Suddenly his feet kick furiously between her legs, and her threatening stiletto heels jab nervously past his torso. Throughout the dance the man dominates the woman, holding his body rigid as she revolves around him, sometimes encircling his body with her legs.

It seems as if the intricate moves of the dancers could never be duplicated, but throughout the performance their moves blend to provide for a unique understanding of this non-verbal communication.

The tango furnishes the spectator with a varied range of emotions that oftentimes defy description. Romantic yet dominant, elegant yet rowdy, and sensual yet restrained — all within the confines of a mysterious cultural statement of the tango.

'Overboard' showcases Goldie Hawn's zaniness

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Wrap any film around Goldie Hawn and it becomes a fun experience. Much of the enjoyment comes from her ability to project the impression of having such a good time playing her part that the viewer becomes part of the romp.

In "Overboard," she displays a remarkable gift for caricature also. As Joanna, a haughty, rich, spoiled wife of looney-tune Grant Stayton (Edward Herrmann), she is barely recognizable as the elfin, wide-eyed giddy blonde we are used to seeing.

dent, with special workshops planned for the studio professional. Day and evening classes are scheduled and will meet once or twice a week. Saturday classes for children will meet weekly. Class size is limited to assure both the quality of instruction and individual attention.

take-off on how obnoxious, bored and silly people can be.

She reigns supreme as the tyrant of a luxurious yacht which has broken down in the hinterlands of Elk Cove.

Fussing and fuming for some way to pass the time, she calls in the local carpenter, Dean Profit (Kurt Russell), to redo her closet to accommodate her extensive wardrobe.

Russell arrives looking like a character out of Dogpatch. With utter disdain, Hawn goes about telling him what she wants, injecting insults along with directions.

Russell needs the money. He is a widower with four boys to support, so he grits his teeth and bears it. He even refrains from going overboard (figuratively) when he overhears Hawn and her goofy husband conjecturing about whether or not he is toilet-trained.

Russell turns out a sophisticated piece of work, a revolving shoe rack. He is proud of his work and expects her to be pleased.

Instead she berates him because it is not made of cedar. She refuses to pay him.

That does it. He dresses her down to the delight of all the help on the yacht, particularly Andrew (Roddy McDowell), who also directs the picture.

Furious, she pushed Russell overboard. From there, the plot takes a number of incredible turns that showcase Hawn's zany talent.

Russell complements her performance (they are husband and wife off-screen).

"Overboard" sails along on a sea of far-fetched premises, but steers a nice, even course as a film that is essentially about a warm, loving family that only needs a captain at the rudder to steer it into a tranquil cove.

"Overboard" is not a top-grade film, but it is an entertaining one.

Blue Shield of Michigan ("Blue is Better" was an award-winning campaign with simple, child-like visuals, music and animation); and Stroh's (nonalcoholic products.)

Edmonds is responsible for all audio-visual communications for Ross Roy's clients — "every message we craft for public viewing. I'm in the business and technical end of the audio-visual communication process as well as the creative aspects. I deal with creative people — art directors, writers, directors," he said.

The producer's role is slightly different for each commercial. Basically, Edmonds said, the producer organizes the job. He works with all outside suppliers, the pools of freelance talent. He does the hiring and firing. The agency writes and does the storyboards. "(The producer's job) is not clearly defined. Everything crosses. It's a collaborative effort," he said.

Edmonds, 38, was born in Mount Clemens, the middle child in a family of 10. He lived in the Mount Clemens-Utica-Rochester area and attended parochial schools. He has been with Ross Roy since graduating from college.

"I dropped out of Michigan State University for a year between my sophomore and junior year," he said. "I went to Colorado for a year. I couldn't make up my mind what to do. I was interested in filmmaking. I went back to MSU for a bachelor's degree, then looked for a job with motion picture production companies, TV stations and ad agencies. I've been with Ross Roy 15 years in October.

"The fun of this job is dealing in the creative process. The job varies every day. No two days are alike." There's also a fair amount of travel, which he likes.

Edmonds said he likes the satisfaction he gets from producing something from nothing. "I start with a blank piece of paper and shepherd it through to completion within six to eight weeks. And my work is on public display. Everybody sees it — the mistakes and the good stuff too." He said he enjoys the excitement, the high profile, visible, creative work.

"In the ad business, expectations are always very high," he said. "We're always trying to maintain these. It's a stressful business. But the world is stressful. A kindergarten teacher tells me she works under stress, but all I see are 22 happy faces."

Edmonds is always looking for ideas, details, examples and information that he'll use someday when building a set, setting a scene, conveying a subtle character trait, a mood or a feeling. He keeps a pad of paper and a pencil beside his bed to jot down ideas.

"Creative ideas come to me just as I'm waking up or falling asleep," he said. "You can't turn on the creative process, then turn it off. I jog too. Often I consciously work on problems while I'm jogging."

"Even if I'm just going out to dinner — I notice things. I'm constantly aware of my surroundings. It's important in advertising. I'm always looking at light — taking note of what makes up a mood, a look."

He enjoys working with celebrities on commercials. "Alex Karras. When we went to film the Lazy Boy commercial with him, we were advised that he did not want to talk about his football career. That was part of his past. He didn't want that to be in the commercial either. We went to L.A. We were tiptoeing around the set — not mentioning his football ring — not mentioning the athletes he knew. We were all having lunch when Alex launched into some football stories and he didn't stop for the rest of the time. It broke the ice."

Jaclyn Smith worked in some of Kmart's fashion commercials. "Isiah Thomas took us by surprise. He was a sleeper. His popularity was known in Detroit, but it has grown over the years. He's not an actor, but he's wonderful. His relationship with his mother was well-known and I think people respond to his sincerity. He's charming."

In the mid-'70s, Edmonds worked on the Today Show in New York with Barbara Walters. Libby Glass was a client and a sponsor of the show.

Edmonds lives in Grosse Pointe Woods with his wife, Karen, and three children: Jeff, 11, Jennifer, 5, and Jon, 3 — "all start with J — so they can pass down monogrammed clothing." He's been a Grosse Pointer since 1974 and said he's been in a lot of communities and has traveled all over the United States. "Grosse Pointe is unique and wonderful."

Prime Time for Senior Citizens

Now is prime time for resolutions

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

As the old year fades into history and the new year begins a new chapter, we are reminded that every year is a new beginning — an opportunity to become better than we are.

It's a good time to shore up our lifestyles and to improve the structure of our lives.

Resolutions to get more rest, to exercise and to watch our diets are commendable.

Heads will be clearer on important issues if we plan to flesh out television snippets of news with solid newspaper reading, where the whole story is presented without undue editing. We can strengthen our minds by reading those good books we meant to read last year and by enrolling in adult education courses to broaden our perspective.

Most of us have friends whom we cherish but neglect to call or visit. Good friends should not be neglected, so we might include on our list the firm resolve to let them know we care about them and think about them by inviting them to our home — or, if they live a distance away, by writing them a newsy letter.

Add to the list: patience in trying circumstances; empathy and charity when dealing with difficult people; and the resolve to maintain a positive outlook. You'll then have what most aspire to, but often fail to achieve — a road map for 1988 that will result in a better, happier person.

As a reward for having such high aspirations, there should be tradeoffs, concessions and adjustments, grants and some remedying of situations that vexed and outraged us in 1987.

Now that the older population is growing so rapidly, the need to portray older citizens as they are — and not as mutations — is one that advertisers need to give more thought to. There have been some improvements, but more thought should be given to portraying older people as vital, forward-thinking individuals concerned about being attractive and useful members of society.

Another hoped-for happening: 1988 should be charted to eradicate poverty among the elderly. There are many who must choose between food and medicine because their Social Security allotment will not cover both. There are many for whom success has evaded their grasp. They are labeled as failures. But when an American citizen perishes from cold or hunger, the image of America as a country which cares for its people is tarnished.

It would be appropriate also if private research groups would spend research time on slowing the aging process and fighting specific diseases, instead of compiling statistics showing that because people are living longer, society will be unduly burdened with elderly people who will need expensive care. What we need are not questions about what to do with a swelling older population, but answers concerning how to add vigor and health to added years.

Moving away from what is present and urgent, we need to look to the future. The future, no matter how large or small our estate, is the most important bequest we leave.

Locally we are blessed with the finest fresh water system in the country. It is imperative that we see that this wealth of water is kept free of pollution. It is important also to see that it is not pipled out to states which have lured industry and people away from Michigan because of climate and job opportunities.

Our waterways are one of Michigan's selling points. The diversion of water would not only be an economic disaster — but our lakes, which at this point overflow, would recede and the fish would die.

While important, the preservation of our lakes is a local concern. There are others, both national and international that we would like to see remedied for future generations. Daily we read of terrorisms, skirmishes and takeovers. We are told that our country's part in these eruptions is that of maintaining a balance of power and keeping peace. Because of national security, we take these reports on faith and belief that those in charge know much that cannot be told and must follow through on the secret informations they possess.

What we do know is that modern technology has shrunk the world to the point that the world we once knew no longer exists and the one that we know now must survive on a different plan of strategies than those which once worked. We also know that our precarious future and those of our children exists at a political level. We hope that those who are in charge will look beyond ambition and realize that their people — even as we — want to live in peace and equanimity. They do not want to send their young people off to a no-win war or live in fear of annihilation. They have the same hopes and desires as we do.

And so, as the old year dies, may all your fears die with it and may the New Year's shining legacy of hope light the way to a bright and Happy New Year.

Overeaters Anonymous offers 'tools of recovery' to obsessive eaters

By Peggy O'Connor
Feature Editor

"Sharon" of Harper Woods has a memory of herself crouched in the corner of her kitchen eating jar after jar of peanut butter or spooning powdered sugar into her mouth.

As unpleasant as that recollection is, there are a lot of other things Sharon has no clear memory of. That's because Sharon is a recovering, cross-addicted, alcoholic/obsessive eater.

"I come from a middle class family where there isn't alcoholism. But I have been overweight since I was 4-years-old. I weighed 165 pounds at age 9 and spent my teen years losing and gaining back hundreds of pounds. As I got older, I got into drugs and alcohol... I was making minimum wage, but I was $1,000 in debt because of my drug habit.

"And the relationships I chose weren't the wisest, either. I knew I was hurting but I didn't know how to make the hurt stop except to drink or eat," Sharon said.

Sharon heard about Overeaters Anonymous from a friend. She attended a meeting because it was free and because she thought that it would be a new way to approach yet another diet. It wasn't.

"I expected it to be the same as the other weight loss programs I'd been in. I went into OA expecting them to give me answers. But it wasn't until I grasped the idea that the power to change was within me that I was finally able to make changes," Sharon said.

And those came slowly. Sharon realized that to stop overeating, she also had to stop her other addictive behaviors, including drinking and drugs. OA em-plays what it calls the "tools of recovery," or methods through which members work toward recovery. One of those tools is abstinence, which brings the symptom of compulsive overeating to an immediate halt.

As difficult as it was for Sharon, she had reached a point in her life where abstinence had become acceptable. "I knew that I couldn't get any lower than I was. I told myself that the pain from abstaining couldn't be any worse than the pain I'd been suffering for years," Sharon explained.

The pain was pretty bad those first five weeks of the OA program. Alcoholics who stop drinking have a physiological craving for refined sugar, which Sharon also had given up. But what she had gained by joining Overeaters Anonymous was a huge support group of people who shared her experiences with overeating and drinking and could help guide her through the tough times.

"Those first five weeks I was in withdrawal from alcohol and sugar. But when I was ready to come into the reality of dealing with the disease, that support was there. Those who aren't in the program can't understand how crazy the compulsion is to eat. And every one of the people in OA has picked me up at one time or another," Sharon admitted.

Some 13 months after she joined OA, Sharon had lost 110 pounds, stayed sober for more than one year, and stuck with her program of improving her financial and career status. One day earlier this month, she sat in a small room with several fellow OA members who told their stories and talked about the common bond which brought them there: Overeaters Anonymous.

Overeaters Anonymous is a fellowship of men and women who meet to share their experience and strength with one another in order that they may solve their common problem and help those who still suffer from compulsive overeating.

OA was founded in 1960 and adopted its program of recovery from that of Alcoholics Anonymous, using AA's 12 steps and 12 traditions and changing only the words "alcohol" and "alcoholic" to "food" and "compulsive overeater." OA members are helped to recognize that they have a threefold illness: physical, emotional and spiritual and that they must strive for recovery on all three levels.

OA's approach is that the principles within the 12 steps promote change and effect that spiritual, emotional and physical recovery. The 12 steps are:

- We admitted we were powerless over food — that our lives had become unmanageable.
- Came to believe that a power greater than ourselves could restore us to sanity.
- Made a decision to turn our will and our lives over to the care of God as we understood Him.
- Made a searching and fearless moral inventory of ourselves.

Churches

DeVries installed as pastor at First Christian Reformed Church

The Rev. William C. DeVries, pastor of First Christian Reformed Church of Detroit.

The Rev. William C. DeVries was installed as pastor of First Christian Reformed Church of Detroit on Sept. 20. Former pastor The Rev. William Moxey, and an InterVarsity pastor The Rev. John Natelborg, participated in the installation service. The church is located at 1444 Maryland at Goethe in Grosse Pointe Park.

Prior to his appointment to First Christian Reformed, The Rev. DeVries was pastor at Christ's Community Church, El Paso, Texas. He filled the vacancy at First Christian Reformed when The Rev. William Moxey entered the Harper-Grace chaplaincy program, then took a call to pastor a church in Inwood, Iowa.

DeVries graduated in 1964 from Chicago Christian High School, Oak Lawn, Ill., and Trinity Christian College in Illinois. He received a bachelor of arts degree in philosophy from Calvin College in Grand Rapids in 1969 and a master of divinity degree in 1973 from Calvin. He is currently enrolled in the University of Texas at El Paso's master's degree program in speech and communication.

DeVries began his career as a staff member for the Wayne State University InterVarsity Christian Fellowship from 1970-72, where he supervised and counseled students and faculty members in development of their Christian growth, evangelism and missions.

From 1973-76, he was pastor of Ann Arbor Christian Reformed Church, a 25-year-old urban church in a university setting. He then served as pastor of Cold Springs Christian Reformed Church, Syracuse, N.Y., from 1976-81.

In 1981, DeVries was named pastor at the El Paso church, which had been without a pastor for two years. His responsibilities at the church included preaching, teaching and leading Sunday Bible study, chairperson of council, worship liturgist, administrative head, counselor, outreach development and coordination, youth group leader, visiting the sick and needy.

There, DeVries helped develop the scope and level of lay involvement, reorganized Sunday School, nursery, fellowship and vacation Bible school activities, developed education and evangelism seminar series, and developed and implemented structure for planning sermons, hymns, special music, sacraments and lay readings in advance and in synchrony with the church year.

DeVries and his wife Marcia reside in Grosse Pointe. They are the parents of three daughters: Heather, a drama major at Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas; Cori Jo, a Grosse Pointe South High School sophomore; and Rachel, a seventh grader at Pierce Middle School.

Overeaters

Pointe. She is a new member of OA and admitted to being a little intimidated by the spiritual element of the program.

"I'm sort of the agnostic of the group. As far as a 'higher power' goes, I'm not sure that I'm ready to accept that. But in Alcoholics Anonymous' 'big book' there's a chapter which applies to agnostics and atheists, so I apply that to myself.

"The important thing for me — and for other people outside the group to realize — is that it is the people in OA who help you. They more than anything are what I rely on. My compulsion to eat is lifted somewhat but I'm still struggling. Every time I reach for something to eat or want to eat because I'm upset, I think of the people in the group and how I don't want to let them down," Meg said.

It is also important, Meg said, for people who need help to realize that OA is there and they need not feel guilty because they seek assistance from the group.

"It's a disease, just like diabetes is a disease. Overeating is incidious, it is deadly. So why should somebody who has it be afraid to seek help?"

OA members have varied backgrounds. Their common bond is their illness and the experiences they share with others. OA is not a program of promotion, where potential members are pulled in off the street and "saved." It is a program of attraction, where members are welcomed and allowed to find their own niche within the community.

"Betty" remembers learning early on in life not to talk about her problems, not to tell what went on in her own home. Sharing was not something which came easily.

"I was born into a dysfunctional family. My mother was an alcoholic and my dad was a screamer. I didn't start compulsive eating until I was about 12 years old. And I can remember going to the store and buying three items of refined sugar and eating them all before I got home," Betty recalled.

"Sugar was my pacifier. When I grew up and started my career, I can remember feeling the frustration when I knew how to solve the problems of the world, but that those characters out there were not cooperating. I'd be so stressed out at the end of the day, I'd get into my car, drive to the store on my way home and buy three — always three things of refined sugar — and eat them in the car. I'd pop that stuff into my mouth and just like an alcoholic or drug addict, I'd feel my whole body become calm.

"But there was so much guilt. I would hate myself for eating."

Betty joined Recovery, Inc., and later, when she married an alcoholic, was a member of Al-Anon. "I knew what the 12 steps had meant to my life, but it was not until I joined OA that I was able to 'let go and let God,' as we say," Betty said. "Now, I don't control anybody, just Betty. I work with a higher power I choose to call God. I sit back and watch people who are suffering and not feel guilty because I can't help them.

"I know what OA has done for Betty. I don't kick my dog in the tail anymore, for one thing," Betty said with a chuckle. Other people benefit because I don't get angry anymore. I'm happy with myself. Betty used to be a rotten SOB. Now I feel I can accept anything."

Joining OA is not a ticket to immediate success and freedom from compulsive overeating, said "Charlotte" of St. Clair Shores. "I know, I was ready to quit this week. I'd had a rough week and had slipped a couple of times. But after seeing everyone and talking things out, I know that this is where I belong. You meet people who give you such unconditional love and that is so important when you are going through this," she said.

Charlotte is one of the OA members who benefitted from OA's request that new members attend meetings at least six times before they make up their mind about whether to stay in the program.

"Mary" was another. She, too, came from a dysfunctional family. She was emotionally and sexually abused as a child, a situation which led to rape at age 10 by a family friend.

"My parents knew the man who did it, but they didn't take steps to keep him away because he was wealthy and they didn't want to lose his friendship. So I lost my trust in them, in people in general. I was on my first diet at age 11 and gradually, drinking and overeating became very much a part of my life," Mary explained.

Most of the time, she was able to stay in a middle ground, just drinking a little before dinner every day and not eating so much that she grew to be more than "chubby." But she drank and ate enough to be miserable with herself and the way her life was going.

"I hit rock bottom last March. I was sick and tired of alcohol. But I didn't have the courage to go to AA. I believe that my higher power said, 'Okay, I'll take her alcohol problem away because she's too stubborn to walk through the door into AA. But she's got to find those 12 steps and make them work for herself.' But after I quit drinking, I began to eat more because my body craved sugar. And I was eating to the point of becoming physically uncomfortable, and hiding food because I was ashamed of how much I was eating," Mary said.

In July, she attended an OA meeting with a friend because she knew that no other group would be able to help. "I was put off at first because they were holding hands and hugging. I'm not a demonstrative person. But I listened to the sharing, the warmth. And by the end of the first meeting, I knew I was home. I knew that for the first time in my life, I had a family."

"These people are like the best friends and parents I never had. I've been getting better ever since. I will have to go to OA for the rest of my life. And I want to go. It is my salvation," Mary said.

Each of the women who sat in a tiny, warm office and shared the most personal and painful aspects of their lives has found something in OA which they say will remain with them for the rest of their lives. Each says that they will have to work, to struggle each day, to keep those principles they learned from OA. And each says that anyone who really wants to can find the same thing at OA.

"Katie" from Grosse Pointe

Park found the one thing that was missing from her otherwise happy life: a spiritual component. "It gave me relief from binge eating. I've learned to rely on my spiritual base instead of on food. And I've learned to hug."

Sharon found those hugs, that warm hand to hold when she talked about her struggle to remain sober and abstain from binge eating. "God didn't do anything for me; maybe because I was looking for him in a motel room with a bottle of vodka and a box of Kentucky Fried Chicken.

"But I found what I needed in the group. They couldn't give it to me, the serenity and the willingness to look inside myself for change, but by trial and error and with their help, I found it," Sharon said. "And that's what OA is all about."

"Marlene" found a place where she could be accepted for herself, unconditionally, no questions asked. "I'm learning every day not to bury my true feelings under compulsive eating."

"Ruthie," an alcoholic/compulsive eater, realized what a compulsive, addictive person she'd been born and remained for most of her 64 years. "And I also learned that through OA, I could stop drinking and overeating and stop thinking about it. And how through the 12 steps I can give love and receive it. Most importantly, I found an identity."

Overeaters Anonymous is a non-profit organization which does not provide diets, food and weight lectures or weigh-ins. OA is self-supporting. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop eating compulsively and to accept the program one day at a time, one pound at a time.

For more information on OA, call the HOTLINE, 545-LIFE.

Pride of the Pointes

Cadet James W. Montgomery, son of James and Diane Montgomery of Grosse Pointe Woods, was recently selected as the best plebe (freshman) in the 1st Regiment of the U.S. Corps of Cadets at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. Montgomery, a Grosse Pointe North High School graduate, is also the freshman class committee representative for his company, F-1.

His selection was based upon his military appearance and his performance of duties and responsibilities assigned to plebes at West Point.

Among University of Michigan students elected for membership into Tau Beta Pi, the national engineering honor society, are senior Scott R. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Miller of Grosse Pointe, and junior Cindy Winiarski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Winiarski of Grosse Pointe Woods. Miller, a Grosse Pointe South High School graduate, expects to receive a degree in mechanical engineering in May, 1989. Winiarski, a graduate of Our Lady Star of the Sea High School, expects to receive a degree in computer engineering in May 1989.

Paul Grammatico, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Grammatico of Grosse Pointe Woods, has been awarded an Endowed Scholarship to Valparaiso University, where he is a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences and a member of the University Theatre.

Mark Walston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Walston of Grosse Pointe, served as stage manager for the Wagner College December production of the musical, "She Loves Me." Walston, a junior at the Staten Island College, is a speech and theater major. He graduated from Grosse Pointe South High School.

Grosse Pointe North High School graduate Kathleen Beal, daughter of Paul and Wendy Beal of Grosse Pointe Woods, has been accepted into the Albion College Liberal Arts Program in professional management. Beal is a freshman at Albion.

Shawn Whelan, son of Shirley Whelan of Grosse Pointe

Park, has been named to the 1988 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities." A 1984 Grosse Pointe South High School graduate, Whelan is a senior majoring in business administration at Mount Union College Alliance, Ohio.

Thomas Champion, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Champion II of Grosse Pointe, was named to the fall trimester honors list at Kents Hill School, Kents Hills, Me., where he is a senior.

Among students enrolled in the freshman class at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute is Lisa Ann Southwell of Grosse Pointe Shores. She plans to major in general studies or engineering.

Among those who have been selected as "Outstanding Young Men of America for 1987," are Vittorio Michelangelo Morreale of Grosse Pointe Woods and William Joseph Cosgrove Jr., of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Dr. John Novak of Grosse Pointe Farms, an assistant professor of biology at Eastern Michigan University, was among eight EMU faculty members recently awarded $1,200 grants from EMU's Faculty Center for Instructional Effectiveness for innovative teaching projects.

Novak has created materials and instructional kits designed to help beginning biology teachers teach basic laboratory skills to secondary school students.

Gilbert Berenguer, M.D., a second-year physician at Bon Secours Hospital, presented a poster that was chosen for display at the September regional meeting of the American College of Physicians-Michigan Chapter and the Michigan Society of Internal Medicine in Traverse City. The poster, titled "Breakthrough Bacteremia with E. Coli Subacute Bacterial Endocarditis," was created based on the treatment and analysis of one of Berenguer's patient cases at Bon Secours Hospital.

Pamela Kelly Durrschmidt of Grosse Pointe Park received a bachelor of science in nursing degree, summa cum laude, from Nazareth College at winter commencement ceremonies Dec. 18.

CPSC Cautions Snow Thrower Users

- Never put your hand in the discharge chute or near the auger/collector to remove snow, sticks or other debris. Blocked auger/collectors and impellers can "spring back" when cleared and may cause personal injury, even with the engine stopped. Always use an object such as a trowel or long stick to clear blockages.
- Never leave a running snow thrower unattended; shut down the motor if you must leave the machine for any time.
- Keep the area of operation clear of other people and pets. Do not aim the discharge at people, pets, automobiles, windows, etc.
- Fill the fuel tank of gasoline-powered machines with extreme care. Never fill the fuel tank indoors or add fuel to a running or hot engine.
- Be aware of the power cord on electrically-powered snow throwers at all times.
- Check the machine often if you are using the equipment sporadically over the winter season. Inspect for loose or missing safety guards... watch for loose nuts, bolts or fasteners.
- Refer to the owner's manual for specific instructions on the operation, care and maintenance of the snow thrower.

If you want to report a potential hazard with a snow thrower, call the CPSC Hotline on 800-638-CPSC. A teletypewriter for the hearing-impaired is 800-638-8270 (Maryland TTY calls: 800-492-8104).

101 PRAYERS

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, you who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen.

Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer three consecutive days without asking your wish, after third day you wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as you favor has been granted. Thank you for favors received. MAJ.

MOISTEN AND SEAL HERE

What is FOOD FOR THE POOR, INC?

FOOD FOR THE POOR, INC. is an interdenominational, non-profit charitable organization chartered in the state of Florida as a 501 (c) (3) corporation, for the purpose of improving the health, economic and social conditions of the poor throughout the Third World.

How did FOOD FOR THE POOR come about?

FOOD FOR THE POOR was founded by Mr. Ferdinand G. Mahfood as a result of a spiritual conversion he experienced several years ago. "Here I am, Lord," was Mr. Mahfood's response when he felt that God was calling him to adopt the indigent poor in the Third World countries of the Caribbean, primarily in Jamaica, and Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

Who benefits from the contributions?

Incoming funds and goods donated to FOOD FOR THE POOR benefit the poor directly. Even though FOOD FOR THE POOR has sent donations to the poor in South America and in Africa, the organization primarily concentrates its efforts on the needy in the Caribbean.

What channel of distribution does FOOD FOR THE POOR utilize?

The distribution channel is direct to the missionaries and priests who have the responsibility of seeing to the needs of the poor. FOOD FOR THE POOR does not operate through any foreign government. Since the distribution channel is direct, the normal problems in dealing with intermediaries are eliminated, and all of the donated goods are placed into the hands of the needy.

Ferdinand G. Mahfood is greeted by Pope John Paul II

What types of donations does FOOD FOR THE POOR accept? Are they tax deductible?

On behalf of the poor, the trust raises and distributes money, food, clothing, medical and school supplies, bibles and catechetical materials, sewing machines, musical instruments, baking equipment, agricultural and carpentry tools, and other necessary items. In this manner, the destitute poor experience (perhaps for the first time in their lives!) the caring hand of a loving God, and take a small step towards learning to help themselves — thus promoting social justice and peace.

All donations to FOOD FOR THE POOR, whether in cash or kind, are tax-deductible.

What has FOOD FOR THE POOR, accomplished since its inception?

Since February 1982, FOOD FOR THE POOR has been able to raise close to $2 million in cash from over 10,000 loyal contributors. In addition FOOD FOR THE POOR has obtained and shipped over $25 million (market value) worth of food and goods to the poor in the Caribbean, South America and Africa.
