

2 die while shoveling snow following last week's storm

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Two Pointe men died while shoveling snow following last week's winter storm.

The deaths were among several other weather-related ambulance runs in the Pointes. The non-fatal runs were responding to complaints of difficulty in breathing after shoveling snow or merely being outdoors in the severe cold.

A 69-year-old Shores man was found lying in snow in his back yard on Hawthorne at 8:42 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 14, the morning of the storm. He had no vital signs when emergency medical technicians arrived and was pronounced dead at St. John Hospital. Police believe the man was shoveling snow or preparing to do so when he collapsed.

City police responded to a call at 8:08 a.m. Jan. 15 of a man down in the 600 block of Neff. Police found a 70-year-old man lying on his porch. He was still clutching a broom he had been using to sweep snow. He had apparently collapsed sometime during the night or early that morning. He was dead when police arrived.

Shores EMTs also handled a run for the Woods Jan. 14 at 11:54 a.m. where a 70-year-old man was shoveling snow at his home in the 700 block of Hampton. He became weak and short of breath. He was given oxygen and taken to Cottage Hospital.

The Woods paramedics responded to at least two other runs that may have been weather related, according to public safety records. Neither resulted in a death.

The Farms and Park reported no ambulance runs that may have been related to the weather.

Dr. Anthony Southall, head of the emergency room at St. John Hospital, said his department has treated several heart attack victims because of the cold weather and snow. He said he has also seen many fingertips lost due to people trying to unplug snowblowers.

Cold temperatures and the exertion of shoveling heavy, wet snow adversely affects those who are prone to heart problems and asthma, Southall said.

"Anybody who has heart problems or any adult who is not in physically good condition is at risk," he said. "So you're better off paying the kid down the block to shovel the snow for you."

He said common sense should be your guide. If you lead a sedentary lifestyle, then

Park has first street homicide in its history

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

It was the first street homicide in the history of Grosse Pointe Park, and police vow to catch the two men who shot and killed a 32-year-old resident during a purse snatching.

Park and Detroit 5th Precinct police received several calls that a woman had been attacked and injured at a bus stop near Wayburn on Jefferson at the Detroit/Park border at 7:55 a.m. on Thursday, Jan. 16.

Park police and emergency medical technicians were on the scene — a block from the police station — almost instantly, said Public Safety Director Richard Caretti.

Officers found Phyllis Ann Lenart, 32, a Beaconsfield resident, lying on the sidewalk inside the bus stop. She had no vital signs, and the EMTs were unable to revive her with an automatic defibrillator unit.

She was taken to Bon Secours Hospital where she was pronounced dead at 9:12 a.m.

According to witnesses and police, Lenart walked to the bus stop, where two men were already waiting. When she got there, the men apparently tried to grab her purse.

A witness who was walking toward the bus stop said it appeared as if a struggle was in progress. The witness saw one of the assailants strike the woman several times in the head. She fell to the ground, and the robbers fled on foot with the purse.

Caretti said the purse probably contained no more than a few dollars.

The assailants are described as black males in their 20s. One was 5 feet 4, about 165 pounds, dark complexioned and had a crewcut. He wore a red knit cap, a dark jacket with fleece lining and black pants.

Above are computer drawings of the suspects in the slaying of a Park woman at a bus stop at Wayburn and Jefferson at 7:55 a.m. on Thursday, Jan. 16. They were produced by the Grosse Pointe Woods police department and are based on witnesses' descriptions. Those knowing anything about the slaying or the suspects are asked to call the Park police at 822-7400 or the anonymous witness hotline at 965-6168.

The other suspect was 5 feet 10 and of medium build. He wore a tan jacket and black pants.

Caretti said Lenart probably died instantly when the bullet collapsed a lung and apparently entered her heart.

Park and Detroit police immediately searched the area with tracking dogs, but the trail was lost on Ashland between Jefferson and Kercheval in Detroit.

Caretti said several witnesses will be able to identify the assailants when they are caught.

"I say 'when' because we will catch them," he said. "You can make book on that."

Park detectives worked throughout the weekend putting clues together and following leads, Caretti said.

"It's a matter of traditional police work," he said, "beating the bushes and talking to witnesses."

Lenart was on her way to work at NBD Bank's downtown office when she was attacked. Usually she caught the bus at Beaconsfield and Jefferson, nearer to her home, but apparently she decided to walk to the bus stop at the Detroit border, possibly thinking it would be easier to catch a bus there because of the winter storm.

Just before she had arrived at the bus stop, six others were waiting for a bus along with the assailants. The six got on the bus, but not the two suspects. That is when Lenart came along.

"That's what they were looking for," Caretti said, "a lone target."

NBD has offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the suspects involved in the slaying. Also, SMART bus drivers, led by the driver of the bus on the Jefferson route, have offered a $1,000 reward.

Those with any information on the slaying can call the Park police department anytime at 822-7400. Tipsters can also call the anonymous witness hotline at 965-6168.

Caretti said Detroit police have been outstanding in their cooperation in the investigation. He said they have offered resources and records to assist the Park detectives.

The murder came at a time when the Park's crime rate has been declining every year for almost a decade. In 1990, the Park had the lowest total-crime rate of all the Pointes. It also had the third-lowest major-crime rate in the Pointes in 1990 and a lower rate than any Macomb County community.

The last homicide in the Park was in May 1990 when a 52-year-old woman was shot in the chest in her Trombley apartment by a 33-year-old Allen Park man who was reportedly her boyfriend. He was later found guilty of manslaughter.

City officials and residents were shaken by the incident.

"It can happen anywhere," said City Manager Dale Krajniak. "You have to be cautious and safety conscious at all times."

North senior wins top state honor

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods' Dennis and Gail Babel always thought their daughter Kelly was special and last Saturday they got proof.

Judges at the Michigan pageant of the America's Young Woman of the Year program chose Kelly, a senior at Grosse Pointe North High School, to be the best out of 20 contestants. She will represent Michigan at the national contest in Mobile, Ala., in June.

She's the first Grosse Pointe girl to win the title.

"I'm very excited and I'm also very nervous," Babel, who's 17, said.

The 35-year-old pageant, originally called America's Junior Miss, awards some $4.5 million in scholarships and other awards to participants at local, state and national finals each year. There is no entry fee.

Babel says the pageant is not a beauty contest. The young women are judged on how they present themselves during a panel evaluation, scholastic achievement, fitness, creative and performing arts skill and poise.

"North has a scholarship book and I looked in it and sent away for information," Babel said. "They sent me back a big packet that asked me about everything I do, my grade point average, and questions like, 'What are the biggest problems facing teens today?'"

Because Grosse Pointe does not have a local pageant, Babel participated in a state-wide competition for girls whose hometowns don't participate in the program. She was one of three chosen from that pageant to go to the state finals.

She spent last week in Marshall preparing for the pageant, in which 19 other girls vied for the title. Those girls were chosen from the 540 girls who participated in local pageants last year.

At the personal interview, she told the judges what she does to fill her time. She's president of the senior class, participates in the school's theater program, is a high school FOCUS (Fellowship of Christians in Universities and Schools) leader, lettered in varsity track and is a member of the National Honor Society.

She is the vice president of the choir in which she sings alto and is a member of the Chorale, a select singing group. She belongs to the French Club, volunteers with the Safe Rides program, the North School Improvement Team and is one of two North representatives who are asked periodically for input on school board decisions.

She also told them she is a member of the J. Board at Jacobson's and is a hostess at Da Edoardo's restaurant.

Babel, who is the only daughter and youngest child of Dennis and Gail Babel, told judges she hopes to study medicine at Johns Hopkins Univer-

Joseph Tolari retired last month.

He began his career in 1949 with then-National Bank of Detroit as a teller in the Warren-Alter office. He retired as first vice president and director of NBD's Grosse Pointe Regional Banking Center.

During that span, Tolari saw a lot of changes in the banking business and in the community. He likens it to seeing them grow from infancy to adulthood.

Although automation changed the face of banking dramatically, Tolari said, "It's still a people business. Good banks are basically all the same — the difference is the people."

He's proud of a letter a customer sent to the president of the bank describing Tolari as "not only a people's person, he is a banker's banker."

Interviews to begin in Woods for clerk/ administrator

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council will begin interviewing candidates for the city administrator-clerk position on Jan. 27.

The job became open Dec. 31 when Chester E. Petersen retired after 30 years in that position. He has agreed to stay on as interim city administrator-clerk until a replacement can be found.

As of Jan. 13, the city had received resumes from nine people who are interested in the position, according to Councilman Ted Bidigare, chair of the search committee.

That night, the council, sitting as the committee-of-the-whole, decided to interview five of the applicants.

The candidates are: Phillip Belcher, current assistant city administrator; Peter Thomas, Woods deputy director of public safety; Jeff Mueller, assistant to the city manager in Grosse Pointe Park; Donald Crawford of Grosse Pointe Park; and Gerald Felix, city administrator in Greenville.

Belcher, 40, a resident of Roseville, has been with the Woods (population 17,715) for two years. Previously, he had been city manager of Auburn (which had a population of about 2,000 then) for three years; city clerk and assessor of Clare (population 3,300) for three years; and a St. Clair Shores employee for 11 years, working in the departments of public works, recreation, accounting and assessing.

He holds a bachelor's degree in community development with an emphasis in public administration from Central Michigan University (CMU) and is working on a master's degree in human resources at CMU.

Thomas, 52, a 22-year resident of Grosse Pointe Woods, has been with the city's public safety department for 28 years, the last five as deputy director. He holds a master's degree in public administration from Central Michigan University.

Crawford, 48, of Grosse Pointe Park, has been providing consulting services to cities and counties since 1979. For example, he has helped cities develop position classifications and pay scales and management studies.

Before coming to the Detroit area in 1979, Crawford was city manager of Boca Raton, Fla. from 1975 to 1978. During that time, the population jumped from 35,000 to 50,000.

Before joining Boca Raton, he worked for DeKalb, Ill. (population then about 33,000). He started there as a student intern and left as administrative assistant to the city manager.

He earned his undergraduate degree from Nebraska Wesleyan College and received his master's degree in political science and his certificate of advanced study in public administration from Northern Illinois University.

Mueller, 33, has been with the Park (population 12,857) for 10 years, the last seven as assistant to the city manager. Before that, he worked in Detroit's planning department for a year. He holds a bachelor of science degree with an emphasis in urban planning from Western Michigan University.

He recently moved to St. Clair Shores from the Woods, where he had lived since 1969, but he said he would gladly move back should he get the job. The Woods requires its city administrator-clerk to live within the city limits.

Felix, 39, of Greenville, has been managing that city since 1987. He said it has a population of about 8,100 people, but that there are about 70,000 people in the market area it serves. Greenville is about 35 minutes northeast of Grand Rapids.

Before moving to Greenville, Felix was city manager of Harbor Springs for almost five years and an administrative assistant in the city of Wyoming for about five years. He earned his undergraduate degree from Grand Valley State College and his master's of public administration degree from Western Michigan University.

Bidigare said the Woods has not advertised for applicants; rather, it has asked people in city government if they know of anyone who might be interested in the position, and then approached the people who had been recommended.

"Depending on how the council feels after the interviews, we may advertise (the job opening)," he said.

"What does the position pay? That has not been determined yet," Bidigare said. "We know what the current salaries are of the city administrators in the surrounding communities. That will be taken into account, as will what the candidates are making now."

The job applicants will be interviewed by the council over two days. Some of the candidates will be interviewed starting at 7 p.m. Jan. 27, and others will be interviewed starting at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 28, in the council chambers.

The interviews are open to the public. The times may be changed so call city hall at 343-2440 before going.

City buys the house next door

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe City council purchased the house next door Monday and hopes to convert it into more office space.

The property, which abuts the city hall property, has a 3,560-square-foot duplex sitting on a 19,725 square foot parcel of land. The City paid $260,000.

Officials at city hall have been looking for extra office space to help contain the overflow from the city's bulging offices. It is the first time in years the land next door to city hall has been on the market and the City felt it should take advantage of the opportunity.

In addition, the parcel will not have to be rezoned, because it is already designated R-2 which allows for city offices.

A recent study by Robert C. Wakely Jr. found the City needs an additional 3,353 square feet of office space, including public-hearing facilities, general and police offices, municipal court space, and more room for the finance and building departments and records storage.

The City is not sure exactly how the land will be used. The exterior of the house may be left as is and the interior converted to offices. If that is too expensive, the City may level the house and construct a new building.

The house is occupied by two tenants who can continue their lease until the City decides what to do.

City residents will have a chance to vote on whether the City should use the land to expand its offices. If they say no, the City can sell the land, probably at a profit.

"It's a win-win proposition," said councilmember Lisa Bradley.

Hospital, city EMS providers look to paramedics

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Following the Farms' shift to paramedics, other Pointe governments are looking to see how they can offer advanced life support.

The Farms city council approved a contract Jan. 13 with Ruehle's/St. Joseph's Ambulance Co. to provide the city with an advanced life support rig, paramedics and emergency medical technicians.

Advanced life support is the highest level of emergency response. Only those trained and certified in advanced life support can be called paramedics.

On Jan. 15, EMS representatives from the Pointes and Harper Woods and emergency room directors from Bon Secours, Cottage and St. John hospitals met at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club to discuss what the Farms' shift to a private ambulance service means to the other communities, including what can be done to provide advanced life support to the rest of the Pointes and Harper Woods.

Before the Farms went to a private ambulance provider, the Pointes and Harper Woods were united under a mutual-aid agreement through which the cities provided backup for each other for police, fire and emergency medical services.

Because private ambulance services are not specifically included in the mutual aid agreement, there was some concern among public safety officials outside the Farms whether the agreement could still be honored.

The Park has agreed to provide backup for Ruehle's in the Farms.

Farms EMS director Dr. Michael McMillin, head of the Cottage Hospital emergency department and a member of the Detroit-East Medical Authority which governs paramedic services, believes there has to be a willingness among all the Pointes to work together so all can benefit from advanced life support.

"If we could cooperate," he said, "we could provide advanced life support at very reasonable costs."

The Park has two basic life support ambulances and provides EMS for the City. The Shores has its own basic rig, and Harper Woods has two rigs. The Shores and Park also have automatic defibrillator units for treating cardiac arrest victims. Basic life support is the lowest level of EMS and its practitioners are called emergency medical technicians, or EMTs.

The Woods has had paramedics for a decade. Its residents pay an additional millage to support the advanced system. The other Pointes have balked at the cost of providing the top level of EMS, especially considering the few number of priority I and II runs in which a paramedic's skills are needed.

Priority I calls involve life-threatening situations, such as cardiac arrest or possibly a stroke. Priority II calls include shortness of breath, asthma attacks, seizures, allergic reactions and drug overdoses, which also may be classified Priority I, depending on the drug and circumstances.

McMillin and his counterpart at Bon Secours, Dr. Ronald Laskowski, the Park's medical director, have each proposed a plan for providing paramedics to the Park/City, Shores and

Harper Woods for the least cost. McMillin has proposed that perhaps Ruehle's in the Farms could provide paramedics to the Park and City on priority I and

II runs only. The Park's two basic units would continue to respond to all medical emergencies.

The Park and City had 507 ambulance runs last year, of which 238 were Priority I or II. The Farms had 421 total runs. If Ruehle's also made the high priority runs to the Park and City, then it would make about 659 runs, based on last year's numbers.

The Farms' cost for Ruehle's is about $108,000. If that number is pro rated by the 659 runs, then the Park and City could contract Ruehle's from the Farms at a cost of $39,000 — providing the private ambulance company goes along with the plan.

Distance would not be a problem, McMillin said. The farthest point in the Park from Cottage Hospital, where Ruehle's rig is based, is Windmill Pointe Park, a driving distance of 3.9 miles. At an average speed of 35 m.p.h., it would take Ruehle's 6.7 minutes to respond.

Of course, the Park's basic emergency medical technicians would be there almost immediately.

Optimally in cardiac arrest cases, CPR is initiated within four minutes and advanced life support within eight minutes, which would save 30 percent to 40 percent of heart attack victims. Both time limits would be met even at the farthest distance involved, McMillin said.

Likewise, the Shores could contract with the Farms and Ruehle's for paramedic service when required and keep its basic ambulance, but McMillin fears that the distance from Cottage to the farthest point in the Shores (the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House) would be too great — 4.9 miles driving distance.

It would take more than eight minutes for a paramedic rig to get to the Ford estate, based on the 35 m.p.h. average speed.

McMillin proposes that the Shores contract with Grosse Pointe Woods for paramedic service when required. Out of 122 runs last year in the Shores, only 22 were priority I or II, he said.

Harper Woods had 922 runs last year, which would justify a paramedic rig of its own, McMillin said.

He emphasized that as an emergency medical professional, he is providing a proposal for discussion on how all the Pointes and Harper Woods could benefit from advanced life support. It is not his intention to tell other communities what to do, nor does his plan take into account the political practicalities involved.

Laskowski at Bon Secours has proposed an "echo" plan where the Shores, Park/City and Harper Woods keep their basic rigs and strategically station two or three paramedics to respond to high-priority runs.

The paramedics would drive to the scene in echo units, or non-ambulance, non-transporting vehicles, such as Ford Rangers or GMC Jimmies.

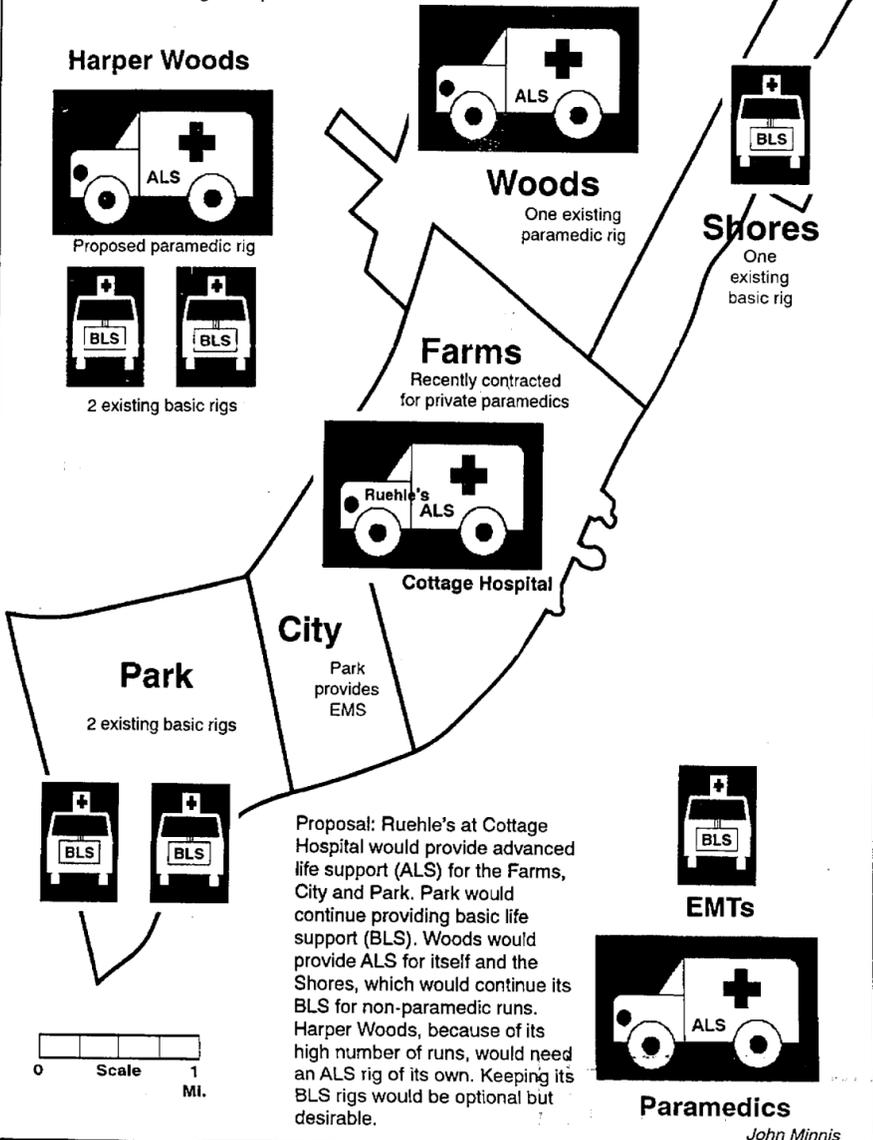

The benefit of Laskowski's plan is that only the paramedics would be hired and they would serve more than one community. There would not be the additional expense of providing more ambulances. The paramedics would be picked and trained locally, though probably contracted through a private ambulance company.

Cost figures for the echo plan have not yet been worked out.

Municipal, hospital and EMS officials are expected to meet again Feb. 12 to discuss the costs and problems of the proposed plans.

3 ALS rig system for Grosse Pointes

Proposed by Dr. McMillin,
Emergency room director,
Cottage Hospital

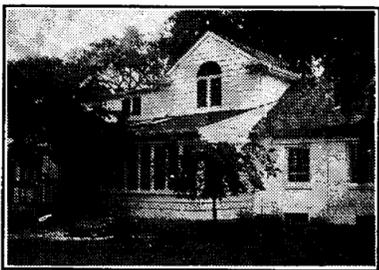

Proposal: Ruehle's at Cottage Hospital would provide advanced life support (ALS) for the Farms, City and Park. Park would continue providing basic life support (BLS). Woods would provide ALS for itself and the Shores, which would continue its BLS for non-paramedic runs. Harper Woods, because of its high number of runs, would need an ALS rig of its own. Keeping its BLS rigs would be optional but desirable.

Americans with disabilities to get federal help next week

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

One small step for the able-bodied can be a giant obstacle for the physically challenged. Next week, federal regulations go into effect to put the disabled on a more even footing with the rest of the population.

The regulations are part of the Americans With Disabilities Act.

Signed into law by President George Bush on July 26, 1990, the act prohibits discrimination against the disabled in employment, public services, public accommodations (including restaurants, hotels, grocery stores) and public transportation (even privately owned public transportation, such as private bus and van companies).

Parts of the law went into effect in August 1990, and other parts will not be in force until after July. However, the bulk of the rules go into effect Sunday, 18 months after the act was adopted.

As of Jan. 26, public accommodations must do the following:

- Provide goods and services in an integrated setting, unless separate or different measures are necessary to ensure equal opportunity.

- Eliminate unnecessary eligibility standards or rules that deny individuals with disabilities an equal opportunity to enjoy the goods and services of a place of public accommodation.

(For example, individuals with cerebral palsy cannot be excluded from a movie theater based on their disability, according to a U.S. Department of Justice booklet.)

- Make reasonable modifications in policies, practices and procedures that deny equal access to individuals with disabilities, unless a fundamental alteration would result in the nature of the goods and services provided.

(For example, a department store may need to modify its policy of only permitting one person at a time in a dressing room to accommodate a disabled person who needs help dressing.)

- Furnish auxiliary aids when necessary to ensure effective communications, unless an undue burden or fundamental alteration would result.

(Auxiliary aids include qualified interpreters, assistive listening headsets, television captioning and decoders, telecommunications devices (TDD's) for deaf people, video-text displays, readers, taped texts, and brailled and large print materials. If a restaurant cannot afford brailled menus, it can comply with the law by instructing its waitstaff to read the menu to blind customers.)

- Remove architectural and structural communication barriers in existing facilities where readily achievable.

(Barrier removal measures include installing ramps; making curb cuts at sidewalks and entrances; rearranging tables, chairs, vending machines and other furniture; widening doorways; installing grab bars in toilet stalls; and adding raised or brailled letters and numbers to elevator control buttons.)

- Provide readily achievable alternative measures when removal of barriers is not readily achievable.

(Alternative measures may include providing goods and services at the door, sidewalk or curb; offering home delivery; retrieving merchandise from inaccessible shelves or racks; and relocating activities to accessible locations. Disabled individuals may not be charged extra to cover the cost of barrier-removal alternatives. For example, a restaurant may not charge a wheelchair user extra for home delivery when it is provided as the alternative to barrier removal.)

- Provide equivalent transportation services and purchase accessible vehicles in certain circumstances.

- Maintain accessible features of facilities and equipment.

When constructing new facilities or remodeling old ones, make sure they are built in accordance with the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines issued by the federal Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board.

Sometimes, the federal and state guidelines conflict. In such cases, the federal guidelines take precedence, said Patrick Mullen, barrier-free plan reviewer for the Michigan Department of Labor, Bureau of Construction Codes, Barrier Free Division.

"It is my understanding that the federal guidelines aren't meant to diminish the state codes," Mullen said. "Rather, they're meant to augment them."

Also under the act, public accommodations cannot discriminate against someone because of the known disability of a person with whom the individual is known to associate.

For example, they cannot discriminate against a person whose spouse has AIDS.

People who have HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, are considered disabled under the Americans With Disabilities Act, whether or not they show symptoms of the virus.

In general, the act defines a disabled person as someone who has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more "major life activities," such as caring for oneself, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning and working. People who feel they have been or are about to be discriminated against in violation of the act can petition for a court order to stop further discrimination. Successful plaintiffs will not receive money for damages, but they may be reimbursed for "reasonable" attorney fees.

People may also file complaints with the attorney general's office in cases of "general public importance," or where "a pattern or practice of discrimination is alleged," according to the U.S. Department of Justice.

Park couple has high hopes for disability act

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Like many business leaders, Bob Byrne of Grosse Pointe Park was opposed to the Americans with Disabilities Act.

However, he suffered a change of heart in May 1990, when a stroke paralyzed the left side of his body.

Before the stroke, Byrne was executive senior vice president of I.S.S. Inc., a janitorial and mechanical service company based in New York City, and had close to 2,500 people working under him, he said.

"I always thought as a businessman that there was a need for some kind of civil rights bill for the disabled, but I thought Congress was going too far, trying to make small businesses do things they could not afford to do," he said.

Byrne, 58, now works out of his home, by phone, as a business consultant. With the help of physical and occupational therapists at Cottage Hospital and his wife, Linda, he learned how to walk with a cane and a leg brace, and how to climb stairs with the aid of another person. Usually when he goes out, he takes his wheelchair.

He's still sympathetic to small businesses, but being in a wheelchair several hours a day has given him a new perspective, he said.

He notices things now that he never did before, such as curb cuts that are far away from on-street handicapped parking spaces in front of stores, which make it difficult for a disabled person to get to the sidewalk and into the shops.

"I was greatly surprised when I had this stroke, because I never paid attention to those things before," he said. "Now that I do, I understand the ADA supporter Bob Byrne gets a hug from his wife, Linda, need for the act."

His wife said that whenever they go somewhere new, it's an adventure, because even though she calls first to find out, she is never sure if the place they are going to is accessible to the handicapped.

The Byrnes travel frequently to watch their children play in tennis tournaments. They've found that the concept of a handicapped room varies greatly from hotel to hotel.

"One hotel put bars around the toilet and next to the bathtub and called it a handicapped room, but that's all it did," she said.

Upon leaving, she gave the establishment a list of changes that could be made to better accommodate disabled guests. Her suggestions included a higher-than-normal toilet seat; props to keep swiftly closing doors open long enough for the handicapped person to get through; and placing all of the handicapped rooms on the first floor so that disabled guests can get out of the building quickly during a fire or other emergency.

As for places around here, Linda Byrne said she knows better than her husband which stores he can and cannot go inside.

"I always did the shopping, so he doesn't realize he can't go inside certain stores, because he never went in them before," she said.

For example, she said she has noticed that he couldn't shop at Kroger in the Village, because the aisles are not wide enough for his wheelchair.

George Sassin, manager of the store, agreed that the aisles are narrow.

"We have motorized shopping carts at our newer stores, but we couldn't get them in here because the aisles are too narrow," he said. "But if we had our expansion program (which involved the purchase of Maire school property) everything would be bigger."

However, there are ways to work around narrow aisles, Sassin said.

"We definitely will accommodate anyone," he said. "If customers have a problem, all they have to do is let us know and we'll work it out. We have several blind ladies who shop here and our clerks go around with them and get the items they want."

That's what the act is about, according to the U.S. Department of Justice: Making sure that disabled consumers can enjoy the goods and services of a place of public accommodation, one way or another.

When a business owner complained that it was going to cost him $15,000 to lower his drinking fountains in order to make them accessible to wheelchair users, Pat Wright, executive director of the Disability Rights Education and Defense Fund told him, according to the 1990 Congressional Quarterly Almanac:

"You know, you could just go down to Safeway and buy a $1.98 Dixie cup dispenser and that would bring you in compliance, too."

"I think it's a great act. It's more flexible than the earlier bills," Byrne said.

His wife said, "I have hopes it will raise more awareness. I feel fortunate that he had his stroke now rather than 10 years ago, because people now are more aware of the challenges that handicapped people face."

If Democrats find a winner, will it be???

With Michigan's presidential primary less than two months away, Democrats are hoping for the emergence of a clear Democratic front-runner who can win not only in this state on March 17 but go on to capture the presidential nomination.

In the GOP contest, President Bush is expected to easily repulse a challenge by Patrick J. Buchanan, the conservative columnist and former aide to Presidents Nixon and Reagan, and David Duke, the former Ku Klux Klansman, whose entry into the Michigan race has now been officially certified.

With Michigan choosing 131 Democratic national convention delegates and Illinois 164 on the same day this year, the Democratic front-runner might well be on the road to the nomination after March 17. Yet nearly half of the 2,143 delegates needed to win nomination at the party's national convention will be chosen after the Michigan primary.

The five major Democratic candidates entered in Michigan are Edmund G. Brown Jr., former California governor; Bill Clinton, Arkansas governor; Tom Harkin, U.S. senator from Iowa; Bob Kerrey, U.S. senator from Nebraska, and Paul Tsongas, former U.S. senator from Massachusetts.

On the GOP side, Bush is not yet home free either in Michigan or other state primaries but columnist Buchanan could pose more of a threat in this state than Duke does, especially if he runs as well as some experts think he will in the New Hampshire primary on Feb. 18.

Among the reasons advanced for Buchanan's high expectations are New Hampshire's economic distress, the president's delay in attacking the recession, and Buchanan's aggressive campaign on domestic issues that has won some standing in public opinion polls in that state.

It is true, of course, that the president has just begun his own personal campaign in New Hampshire and may yet win the same kind of victory that he achieved four years ago when his New Hampshire success launched him on his winning drive for the presidency.

Yet Buchanan and, to a lesser degree, Duke, are raising some populist and nationalist issues that have some popular appeal these days. Both have been stressing actions to put America first and backing programs designed to attack the recession.

In New Hampshire, Bush and Buchanan will vie with 24 other Republicans for the state's GOP support. The 24 are all unknowns, except for Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, the former Minnesota governor who has become a perennial but unsuccessful challenger.

The same five major Democratic candidates who are running in Michigan have filed in New Hampshire. Thirty Democratic nonentities also are running, although one, Eugene McCarthy, the former U.S. senator from Minnesota, was the giant-killer whose big Democratic vote in the 1968 New Hampshire primary caused President Lyndon Johnson to renounce his re-election ambitions.

In New Hampshire this time, however, political observers are likely to keep their eyes chiefly on Buchanan's race against Bush in the GOP primary with the performance of the five major Democratic candidates apparently getting second billing.

Buchanan's vote may indicate the extent of conservative unhappiness with Bush while Democrats may — or may not — produce New Hampshire backing for Clinton who has been "anointed" by the national news media as the current Democratic favorite.

Whatever happens in New Hampshire and the subsequent primaries in the South prior to March 17, Michigan Democrats are hoping that their primary vote will make a national impact either by helping determine a front-runner or by solidifying a favorite's chances for the nomination.

While most Republicans in Michigan are counting on an easy Bush victory, some are uneasy about the populist and nationalist challenges from the far right that might slow the president's re-election drive.

But who knows how many Michiganders will vote March 17? That could be a major question, too.

Violence even in the Pointes

Violent crime is always shocking, especially when it involves friends and other people who live in the Grosse Pointe community.

The murder of a Grosse Pointe Park resident, Phyllis Ann Lenart, at a bus stop on Jefferson Avenue last week was an especially shocking act of violence because it occurred on a busy street while she was doing what so many Pointers are doing this time of the year: waiting for a bus.

Even though the Pointes are neighbors of Detroit, which long has had a high homicide rate, violent crime does not occur here very often. In fact, Miss Lenart's slaying was the first in two years in the Park and apparently the Park's first ever street murder.

Yet despite excellent police protection in the Pointes, this community has been victimized by some other violent crimes in recent years.

In mid-November, an Indian Village woman was robbed at gunpoint and kidnapped from a Mack-Moross area store. In 1990, a Grosse Pointe businessman was shot and killed in Detroit while returning to his home from a nearby club. Each week this newspaper carries Pointe police blotter items about robberies and attacks, some even on the streets, and burglaries of homes and businesses.

A high unemployment rate and other deteriorating economic conditions, especially in Detroit, are often blamed for an increase in the incidence of crime. So is the breakdown in family life that often leaves teenagers without proper parental supervision at home.

But all of us can help police our community. That means that Pointers can help protect their neighborhoods by keeping an eye on absent friends' property and informing the police of any suspicious actions they notice.

It does not mean that Pointers become vigilantes. But it does mean that all of us should look out for each other and be more careful ourselves while entering or leaving parking lots, while driving the freeways, while visiting strange neighborhoods or even while waiting for the bus.

In these times, there no doubt will be other occasional acts of violence in the Pointes but our excellent police departments do a fine job of protecting us most of the time. That record is one reason we're all so shocked at what happened to Miss Lenart.

Don't complain

To the Editor:
Support your local merchant today, or don't complain tomorrow, when he's gone.

In September I was in Schettler's Drug Store as I listened to a man complain bitterly to the pharmacist for selling out. The man complained about the type of person Schettler's was negotiating to sell to. When the druggist asked the man if he had met the potential buyer, he said he hadn't, "but I know his type." I was proud of the druggist who was able to keep his cool.

This man probably shopped Schettler's every Sunday to purchase a newspaper, while during the week his wife stood in long lines at the discount stores several miles away holding her basket full of drug and sundry items to save a few dollars.

We all love to save money and it's our right to shop wherever we please; however, we sometimes lose sight of what a true bargain is. Our local merchants are true bargains — we can pick up the phone and call our local drug store, grocery, meat market, etc. and have our items home delivered, we can charge our purchase, we get personal service and we can get intelligent answers to our questions from people who care — that's a bargain.

We all have the right to shop where we please, and I thank God for that right.

If you choose not to support your local merchant today, don't complain when he's not there tomorrow.

Good fellows

To the Editor:

I am a senior woman who was driving home alone on Mack Avenue Jan. 18 following a dinner meeting with a friend. The time was around 8:30 p.m. and it was bitter cold.

Suddenly, as I was about two miles from home, the engine on my car died out and the car came to a stop. Needless to say, I was very nervous because I didn't know what to do.

Traffic was very heavy. I got out of my car to explain to the people in the car in back of me what had happened. There were young fellows in back who were on their way to a high school dance.

One of the fellows got in my car and he got it to start. He said they would follow me to make sure it would keep running. However, it stopped again after a few blocks. At that point, the fellow got in my car and drove me home with the others following.

It stopped again on the way but he got it started and it faded out one more time just as he drove into the garage. At least I was home and so thankful. I wanted to pay the fellows for their time and effort but they wouldn't take it. One of them said, "Just glad we could help out."

We didn't exchange names but the fellow who drove my car mentioned that he lived on Washington Road.

Those fellows will never really know how much I appreciated what they did for me. I said a little prayer when my car stopped as I was so frightened and they were the answer.

In this day and age when many young people get into trouble, I just wanted people to know there are still many wonderful ones around.

The arts still live in Michigan

Despite the gloomy outlook for the Detroit Institute of Arts and the city's other cultural institutions, support for the arts still lives in the state Capitol and Detroit's City Hall.

Exhibit A: The Detroit News Lansing Bureau reported that the state Legislature is spending nearly $1 million to buy antiques and handcrafted furniture to outfit the renovated state Capitol building.

The expenditures included $2,500 each for 20 custom-made chairs, presumably for legislators, plus a $5,660 TV and wardrobe cabinet, a $3,500 bookcase, a $2,000 credenza and a $1,500 chair, all for the governor's renovated office.

Exhibit B: A story by Vivan S. Toy, a Detroit News reporter, told how the Detroit City Council had approved a $290,000 design study for building a new and expanded Museum of African-American History in Detroit.

Both projects would be acceptable in more normal times, although we would question buying antiques to furnish even the renovated Capitol. But both are questionable when public funds are lacking to care for the needy and maintain daily operations at Detroit's cultural institutions.

Asked why the African-American museum should expand at a time when budget cuts have closed half the galleries at the DIA and the Science Center, Councilman Nicholas Hood was quoted as saying:

"African-American culture is not a priority" at the DIA and Detroit Historical Museum, adding "Most of their exhibits have no relevance to the city's population now."

In both Lansing and Detroit, public financing for the arts and cultural needs apparently depends more on who is requesting the funds than the purpose to be served.

A changing of the news guard

Among the many important changes being made in the world these days was one that just occurred in New York City.

What happened was that Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, chairman and chief executive officer of The New York Times Company and for 29 years publisher of The New York Times, stepped down as publisher and was succeeded by his son, Arthur Ochs Sulzberger Jr.

The younger Sulzberger represents the fourth generation of his family to head this nation's premier quality newspaper since the family acquired it 96 years ago.

In assuming his new post, young Sulzberger repeated on the Times editorial page the pledge made by Adolph S. Ochs, who acquired the paper, and reiterated by the family's publishers since: "to give the news impartially, without fear or favor, regardless of any party, sect or interest involved."

The New York Times still is the nation's No. 1 newspaper and surely much of the credit for its high quality must be given to the newspaper's publishers and staff members and their strict adherence to that pledge.

Reduce costs: Privatize

Eliminate costly government and services — privatize.

Grosse Pointe Farms' recent decision to get out of the public ambulance business points up the immense savings that can be accrued by privatization.

The Farms was able to sell its ambulance, discontinue the costly medical training of its firefighters and police officers and provide the highest level of emergency medical service possible for no more than it formerly cost to run its own basic ambulance. In fact, hiring Ruehle's/St. Joseph's Ambulance Co. at $108,000 may even save the Farms money.

The Farms got a heck of a deal.

The Woods got a similar bargain when it sold its garbage trucks and hired Efficient Sanitation to pick up the trash. The Woods experienced big savings and got recycling too.

Years ago, the Park also privatized its trash collection and saved taxpayers' money.

Clearly, there's something to privatization — that is, turning over traditional government services over to the competitive free market system through the bid process. If private enterprise can provide cheaper and better garbage and ambulance services, why not go for it?

Based on the Farms' results, all the Pointe and Harper Woods ambulance services should be farmed out to Ruehle's or some other private ambulance service that offers the lowest bid. Not to do so, it seems, would be fiscally irresponsible to taxpayers.

Likewise, the Woods and Park have shown conclusively that private garbage haulers can do the job far more efficiently than can public workers. It appears there is no reason for the City, Farms and Shores to continue providing costly refuse pickup.

For years, there has been

I Say

talk about turning fire departments and correctional facilities over to private firms. The Pointes have five fire departments but an overall population of less than 50,000. If private firefighters can't replace their public counterparts, perhaps a consolidation of the Pointe departments is in order.

With all the security firms out there, surely some very competitive bids could be obtained to take over the role of the police departments. If the private police provider were allowed to keep some of the proceeds from tickets, it may be possible to get police protection at very little or no cost.

The administration of the courts could be taken over by law firms, but that's not necessary in the Pointes. Our courts already generate handsome profits.

The department of public works could easily be abolished. Private construction companies can fill the potholes, and independent landscape/snow removal companies can keep the grounds pristine and the streets and sidewalks cleared.

Even elections can be managed by private companies. If auditing firms are good enough for the Emmies and Grammys, certainly they can conduct honest elections.

Indeed, when one considers the possibilities of privatization, it appears that just about every government service can be provided by the private sector. Building inspectors, assessors, tax collectors, accountants, bookkeepers, secretaries, city managers — all can be filled by professionals outside of government. And if they can do the jobs cheaper, then it would only be fiscally prudent to let them do so.

In fact, the Pointes could set the standard in privatization and reducing government. The Farms, Woods and Park councils and administration have shown the way with their unshakable faith in free enterprise.

Perhaps Gov. John Engler will take notice of the Pointes' results and privatize state government. Our state parks and natural resources, for example, can be turned over to private competition.

Perhaps the state's current budget problems can be solved by the self-correcting mechanism of free enterprise. If Engler is successful, then maybe the federal government would follow suit. Social Security, national parks, the IRS, HUD and federal prisons come to mind as areas that can be privatized.

To some, the panacea to overgrown, expensive government at all levels may be privatization — the reliance on Adam Smith's invisible hand of competition, the constant struggle among self-interests, laissez faire. But one wonders why government got into providing all these services in the first place.

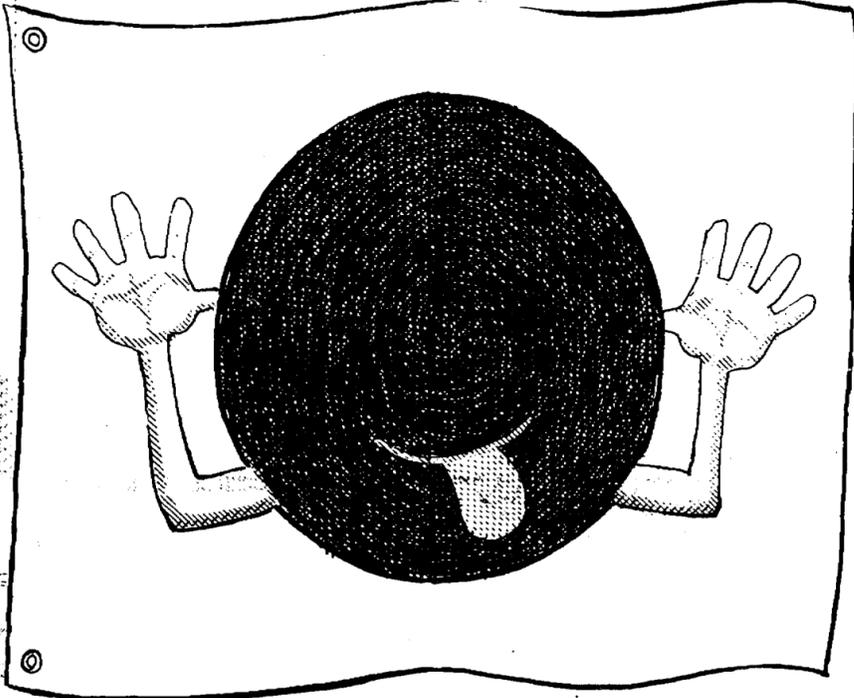

Obviously, it is simplistic to think that privatization can in itself eliminate overgrown government. And there are some areas, especially police protection, that are too important to entrust to private firms that are not immediately responsible to the public or its elected and appointed representatives.

However, when tremendous savings can be incurred through privatization of some services, as the Farms has shown with EMS and the Park and Woods have done with refuse pickup, then such an approach deserves at least an open hearing.

The status quo isn't good enough

Is anybody else getting sick of hearing about how bad off New Hampshire is? Granite Staters are crying about an unemployment rate that Michigan would be happy to have. The problem is that the East has had it so good for so long, whereas we've had time to adjust to malaise as a permanent condition.

"Environmentalists are all talk and no action," he says. "When it gets to the point of making those phone calls or knocking on doors, they're off walking in the woods or canoeing or looking at birds."

Mike should know, because he's one of the ones who does the work. And looks at birds.

He isn't the only worker, but environmentalists have a few things to learn, not only about working, but about working together.

There are two lawsuits piggy-backing on the DNR suit filed by the state's Democratic leadership (the one that challenges the governor's executive orders revamping the DNR). The reason there are two, instead of one joint suit, is that communications misfired.

The MUCC suit filed earlier this month was joined by a less-publicized one by members of the Michigan Environmental Council.

Karen Kendrick-Hands of the Park and Marcia McBrien of the Shores are two of the attorneys for the MEC filing. Kendrick-Hands said there are five plaintiff organizations and seven individuals, former members of dismantled commissions and other activists for the state's environment.

"These are the sort of people who are really going to be harmed," she said. "They're the people who used the old procedures who now can't access government as openly."

Under the old system, with 19 state environmental commissions, the state had free access to commissioners' professional expertise, for the price of some reimbursed meals and travel. That expertise, for reasons of fiscal constraints, is often lacking on the DNR staff, according to Kendrick-Hands.

"I can't tell you how often I would be testifying (at past commission hearings) and the DNR staff would ask me for more information and if I could update them on something," she said.

She predicts that free access and expertise won't be the only losses. If the governor is allowed to go ahead with his plans to abolish the commissions and reorganize the DNR, citizens will be faced with the expense of a lawsuit every time they want to challenge a decision.

We'll find out what the judge thinks on Feb. 1.

Former Grosse Pointer Joe Bartell is another environmental activist spending his free time working for legislative protections. He's currently pushing a bill to ban the importation of exotic birds — and I found him listed in the sea of people who worked on the brand-new Atlas of Breeding Birds of Michigan (MSU Press). He did field work for the massive project, and Bob Healy (of the Farms) provided fundraising expertise.

It's a fascinating chock-full-of-facts book to browse. Observers in the Pointes could doubtless fill in some inevitable gaps here.

She said she still gets the Pheasants are listed as "probable" or "possible" breeders in Grosse Pointe — and it's my guess that 100 of you could pick up the phone and testify to seeing broods of little ones parading after their parents every spring.

On the other hand, crows are listed as "confirmed" breeders. That was a tougher call, because these often raucous birds become quite secretive when nesting.

Watching crow behavior offers a terrific human pastime. Those of you lucky enough to have these interesting birds nearby may already know that crows are cooperative.

They roost, feed, and even nest cooperatively, with as many as seven helpers to feed the young. They have lookouts to watch for predators.

They also appear to play, often picking up sticks and tossing them or leaping into the air. If a hawk or vulture is nearby (which it may be, even in Grosse Pointe), crows may pick up items that look like food and bury them to fool the competitor.

Young crows have a lot of creative energy that needs to be channeled. One account tells of two young crows that waited every day in the yard for the author to come outside, when they would ride on his shoulders and bring him twigs. But when he got busy on a writing project and left them to their own devices, they soon started vandalizing the neighborhood, stealing bright objects and pulling flowers out of gardens. Sounds a lot like kids.

An old-fashioned Michigan winter — finally

If you happen to live anywhere in lower Michigan, you know that we haven't had a real winter here in years. Some people say it is the greenhouse effect, while others say the jet stream has swung north, leaving us with the same weather that Kentucky used to have.

The wimpy winters in recent years are mere shadows of what they used to be. For those of us who believe in the greenhouse effect, they are subtle messages from Mother Earth telling us she has had enough. Enough oil fires, enough burning rainforests, enough coal-fired electricity plants, enough gas-guzzling automobiles, enough incinerated trash. Yet, going beyond these apocalyptic signals, going beyond the psychological effects of brownish-grey gloom and doom, the winters we know now deprive us of a fundamental need. Something so sacred, so cherished. Something so simple, and so basic, yet, in recent years, virtually nonexistent. It grieves my heart to say this, but I haven't had a snow day in eight years... until last week.

Having heard reports of a winter storm warning, I set my alarm for 4:50 a.m., 15 minutes early, to account for any bad road conditions. They say 2 to 4 inches of snow by morning. Yeah... right. I'll believe it when I see it.

In the morning, I look out my window and am mildly surprised to find that I cannot see through the ice on it. "Yep, we're going to have some kind of fun driving to work today."

I try to shower as quickly as possible. The sooner I am on the road, the better. On my way downstairs to the kitchen, I look out the front window to see how bad it really is. To my wonder, to my absolute delight, I see no less than 8 inches of fresh snow covering everything, with more blowing wildly out of the sky.

My wonder turns to a nauseated feeling when I realize that I probably will not make it to work until at least 9 a.m., and with the blowing snow I will not be getting home until about 7 p.m., only to get up and do the same thing the next morning.

Despite my disdain for my job, I have not missed a day of work since I started almost three years ago. The sense of responsibility instilled in me by my parents has served me well in the past, and will continue to do so in the future, but

Echlin leaves Farms council

Harry T. Echlin, a member of the Grosse Pointe Farms council since 1979 and mayor pro tem from 1986 to 1991, has resigned, citing business reasons.

Echlin's resignation, effective Dec. 31, 1991, was given to Farms City Manager Rich Soklak. It was dated Dec. 19. Echlin is regional director of state governmental relations in Michigan for the Ford Motor Co. and was re-elected to another term in November 1991.

The council has 60 days from the effective date of resignation to appoint someone to fill the seat.

—Ronald J. Bernas

sometimes it really makes me angry.

Here it is, the first real storm in years. By the time I get home from work the streets will all be plowed and the mailman's footprints will have defiled the virgin blanket of snow on the front lawn. Worse yet, the kids in the neighborhood, who surely will not be in school, will have trampled even the mailman's footprints, not even leaving a square yard of fresh snow for me to make an angel.

By the time I get home, I will be too tired to go sledding. By then, the snow may even start melting. That's not all bad though, because tomorrow it will be great for snowball fights and snowmen — but... wait! I'm going to miss that, too, because I have to go to work! I hate this! It's not fair! Something inside of me snapped.

My parents also taught me not to lie. I really try not to be part of the 91 percent of Americans who regularly lie. I have told some half-truths in my day, but I realized a long time ago that it really is better to tell the truth... most of the time.

There is that rare occasion, however, when circumstances deem it necessary to bear false witness. When I find myself in this situation, two quotes from Mark Twain immediately come to mind: "A good lie has lots of details..." and, "Never let the truth get in the way of a good story." When I do lie, I do it up big.

Blood drive

The American Red Cross will hold a blood drive on Friday, Jan. 31, at Parcels Middle School at Mack and Vernier.

The drive is being organized by eighth grade students. Hours are 2 to 8 p.m. Babysitting, will be available.

Donors may walk in or call Parcels at 343-2104 for an appointment.

I pick up the phone and dial the answering machine on my supervisor's desk. I call early because it's a lot easier to lie to an answering machine than to your boss. I proceed to spin a fabulous yarn about multiple traffic accidents in my neighborhood, including one blocking the only exit off my dead-end street.

I tell of a bold land survey I did on foot into the teeth of a howling blizzard, desperately searching for any possible way out of the neighborhood so that I could fulfill my burning desire to get to work that morning. But, alas, my valiant crusade was fruitless and I regret to inform you, my beloved supervisor, that I will not be able to come to work today.

As I pull off my dress pants and shirt and don my sweat-shirt and jeans, it dawns on me that there was no way my boss will believe the message I just left... there is too much detail. But I don't really care, because today was a snow day.

I put on my winter coat (which I haven't touched yet this year) and tromp out the front door. I push my way down the street through a 30-knot north wind. The blowing snow stings my face and makes my eyes water. As I revel in the 9 inches of fresh snow, one of my neighbors fiahtails past me in his old Ford on his way to work. The poor sod, he must not realize it is a snow day.

The walk lasts only a half-hour. The years of wimpy winters have made a wimp out of me. I will wait until the wind dies down somewhat to go out again. I come inside and decide it would be fun to see what it's like to do some writing before dawn (it's only 6:15 a.m.).

So here I am. Now if you will excuse me, I have to call up my friends to see if they want to go out and play.

Snow: Friend or foe?

Did you see your glass as half-full or half-empty last Tuesday? Was that white stuff a cruel joke or a welcome reprieve from obligation? We all have varying reactions to surprises and I'm told that our reactions tell us a great deal about ourselves.

For instance, when we awakened on Tuesday did we feel smothered by an enormous white blanket as we gasped for air? Or did we feel like a fine white ermine had been wrapped around us shielding us from the elements?

Did we feel trapped in our homes or cars while winds howled and snarled at us, biting us with bitter fury? Or did we feel cozy under a huge white downy comforter? And did we snuggle inside and let Mother Nature have her way with us?

Did you feel imprisoned by icy streets and dangerously slippery sidewalks and driveways? Did you risk life and limb by venturing out to shovel or keep appointments? Or did you say the heck with it and tunnel under the covers retreating and allowing yourself the luxury of a vacation day?

Did you stay close to the phone, contact business associates, worry about everything from the homeless, to stray animals, accident victims and other matters totally out of your control? Or did you turn up the music, pick up that book you've wanted to read, bake some cookies, watch something mindless on television, read a magazine, make a snowman, light a fire, have a cup of hot chocolate and take your first nap in years?

No matter how we reacted as individuals last week, we also acted as teams to help each other in countless ways. And wasn't it beautiful? A fine photo opportunity if nothing else! And only 60 some odd days 'til spring!

Woods changes pension rules to keep experienced workers

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods employees who worked past the age of 60 were penalized until the Woods council amended the city's pension ordinance last week to remedy the inequity.

Clifford J. Maison, city comptroller-treasurer, explained the problem with the old ordinance. He used the hypothetical example of an employee who had worked for the city for 30 years and who made $50,000 a year. The employee had three retirement options, Maison said.

Under the first option, if the employee were single, or did not want his spouse to receive his pension when he died, the worker could have retired at age 60 and received a pension of $27,500 a year. The pension would have remained the same if the worker postponed retirement until later, for example, at age 65 or 70, Maison said.

Under Option II, the employee's wife would have received his full pension after his death. A worker who retired when he was 60 and his wife was 58 would have received a pension of $22,000 a year.

Neighbor bars handicapped child

A wheelchair-bound child was trapped in the street Jan. 15 when a neighbor refused to allow him to use her driveway apron.

The child's mother called Woods police at 3:38 p.m. when the neighbor backed her car to the end of her driveway and refused to move it. Responding police found the boy in his wheelchair in the street near his home in the 1800 block of Brys near the Mack alley.

There was a lot of snow piled in the street and the nearby alley and it was very cold, police said.

The neighbor told police that she did not want the handicapped child using her driveway. She said she was inconvenienced during the time it took the wheelchair-bound child to get off the bus. In fact, she said she didn't want the child or his family on her property, police reported.

When police explained to the woman that the sidewalk and driveway approach were city property and that she had no right to block them, she still refused to move her car. She suggested that the officer carry the child to his house.

The officers threatened to ticket the woman and have her car towed away. She then moved the car. The officer then wheeled the child up the driveway ramp and to his home.

However, that amount decreased the later he chose to retire. If he retired when he was 65 and his wife was 63, he would have received $20,625 a year. If he waited until he was 70 and his wife was 68 before retiring, he would have received $19,250 a year.

Under Option III, the worker's spouse would have received half of his pension after his death. An employee who retired when he was 60 and his wife was 58 would have received $24,475 a year. If he did not retire until he was 65 and his wife was 63, his pension would have dropped to $23,650 a year. If he waited to retire until he was 70 and his wife was 68, he would have received $22,825 a year, Maison said.

The method of calculating those figures is "actuarially sound," Maison said.

The older the employee is when he retires, the higher the premiums the city has to pay to provide the employee with health care and life insurance, he said. Also, if the employee's wife is younger than he is, there is a better chance that she will outlive her husband, Maison said. The longer the spouse lives beyond the employee's death, the more payments will be made from the city's pension fund.

That's why under options II and III, the amount of the employee's pension check decreased when he retired at 60 or over, Maison said.

However, Maison said it did not seem fair to penalize an employee who wants to stay with the city.

"We're losing our most experienced employees because of the disparity (in pensions)," he said.

He and the city's pension board studied the problem for nine months and came up with a plan to lessen the incentive to retire early. It was officially adopted as an amendment to the city's pension ordinance by the city council following the committee-of-the-whole meeting Jan. 6.

Under the amendment, employees over the age of 60 will be treated as if they are 60 when it comes to the two spousal-benefit pension plans.

So under Option II, a 65-year-old employee with a 63-year-old wife will receive a $22,000-a-year pension, rather than $20,625 a year. Under Option III, he will receive a $24,475-a-year pension, rather than $23,650 a year.

"The employee has to be at least 61 to benefit from this," Maison said.

Also, the employee has to have the required number of service years to retire.

The amendment was made retroactive to Nov. 4, 1986, following the recommendation of a law firm that specializes in pension law, Maison said.

"That date was chosen because it was the last time we had a major change in our pension system," Maison said.

In 1986, the Woods changed its pension rules from charter to ordinance provisions. When the rules were part of the city charter, even the slightest alteration in the system had to be voted on by residents in a general or special election. With the rules in ordinance form, the city council can amend them.

The change in 1986 was prompted by a legal case in another city, said Councilman Ted Bidigare. The police officers' union in that city wanted to negotiate pension benefits during contract talks. The city said it couldn't do so, because its pension laws were part of the city charter and could not be changed without a vote of the people.

The union said that was an unfair labor practice, and took the matter to the Michigan Supreme Court, which sided with the union.

Since 1986, four Woods employees have retired who are eligible for increases in their pension checks under the new amendment, Maison said. There is one other person who may retire in "the foreseeable future," he said, who may qualify for the improved benefits.

To cover the increased benefits paid to retirees, the city will have to contribute approximately $4,500 more to its pension fund each year, Maison said.

In addition to paying an added $4,500 in 1992, the city will also have to make a one-time payment of $2,600 this year to cover employees retroactive to Nov. 4, 1986, Maison said.

Currently, an employee may retire when he is 50 if he has 25 years' seniority; when he is 55 and has 20 years' seniority; or when he is 60 and has 10 years' seniority, Maison said.

The average age of public safety employees in the Woods is 40 and their average length of service is 15.5 years, Maison said. Other employees in the city have an average age of 39.1 years and their average length of service is 8.5 years, he said.

Based on past experience, he said only one or two of the city's 84 employees will stay with the city long enough to benefit from the new amendment.

City's Tujaka named Officer of the Year

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Grosse Pointe City public safety officer Edward Tujaka has been named Officer of the Year by the Fraternal Order of Police, Grosse Pointe Lodge No. 102.

Tujaka, a 15-year police veteran and a City officer for five years, received the recognition at the FOP's annual dinner dance Jan. 17 at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

Tujaka said he felt very humbled by the honor and that there were other officers more deserving.

At 32, Tujaka has no children of his own, but he has raised a niece and nephew. The many outside activities that earned Tujaka the award have to do almost exclusively with children.

"I love kids," Tujaka said, adding that raising children is a very important task that requires a lot of time and dedication. He hopes that giving children positive experiences, especially with law enforcement and other authority figures, will help prevent children from going bad.

"Too many have the wrong assumptions about police officers," he said. "Many think they're robots, but they're not. They're people like anyone else."

He said he hopes to instill traditional values in children and to get back to the days when the local police officer was known and trusted by the community.

"We're very proud of officer Tujaka," said his police chief, Bruce Kennedy. "He's representative of the majority of officers in our department. All our officers are dedicated to serving the public."

Park Lt. David Hiller, immediate past president of the Grosse Pointe FOP and current state president, said that many times Officers of the Year are chosen because of some heroic act, but many things a police officer does are over and above regular duty.

"(Community involvement) is a very, very important aspect of the job," Hiller said. "You leave a lasting impression."

Tujaka's track record — as provided by his immediate supervisor, Lt. Al Fincham, who nominated him — offers plenty of evidence the public safety officer has made and is still making an impression in the Pointes.

Tujaka is the department's traffic accident investigator and is a certified evidence technician, scuba diver and firefighter II. He is also a provisional fire instructor and the department's school safety officer.

He was on the founding committee for the Safety Town project at Barnes School, which is designed to teach children pedestrian and bicycle safety and how to be safe in the larger world outside their homes and with other people.

He spent nearly 300 hours, much of which on his own time, getting the Safety Town project off the ground. He is one of the primary instructors at Safety Town and is affectionately known by the children as "Officer Eddie."

He also worked closely with Richard Russell Jr. of Russell Homes in the building of the Smoke House, a small bungalow-on-wheels used to teach children fire safety. He also trained firefighters from the other Pointes and Harper Woods in the use of the house.

In 1990, Tujaka voluntarily helped in starting a Law Enforcement/Firefighter Explorer Post.

He has been involved in the March of Dimes' Jail and Bail program, donating many of his days off work to participate. Each year he also sells Goodfellows newspapers and is involved in the Meals on Wheels program, delivering prepared meals to invalids on Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Most importantly, he plays a terrific Santa Claus every year to local Cub Scouts and at the FOP's children's annual Christmas party.

There are more early retirees in Michigan than in other areas

In the current economic slow-down, much is being written about the loss of executive jobs, as though it were a phenomenon peculiar to these times. However, looking back, we find that the loss of middle-management positions began in the '80s and only now when cut-backs in the higher echelons have accelerated, has it gained momentum, a fact that doesn't lessen the impact of being out of work on those who have spent their entire careers with a company, confident that they would be there until retirement.

Southeast Michigan has more early retirees than any other area of the country. After World War II, engineering and business school graduates flocked to this area because it was where the action was. At that time, southeast Michigan was the industrial center of the world, creating more than 20 percent of the jobs in the United States.

In the 1970s, government regulation, recession and foreign competition altered that picture and in the late 1970s hit it hard. General Motors and Ford lost billions. Chrysler almost went out of business and American Motors faded away. Radical surgery was performed to heal corporate ills. Thousands of middle management employees lost their jobs, a scenario similar to the one that prevails today.

Yet out of the ashes of the dead decade of the '70s rose the prosperity of the '80s when the Big Three — Ford, General Motors and Chrysler — flourished and along with their revival came a resurgence of economic good times in southeast Michigan.

But what about the army of engineers, designers and plant managers who lost out in the '70s? One lifeline was the International Executive Service Corps, a non-profit organization that placed some 12,000 idle executives in programs in 90 countries, a service that benefited everyone — the host nations, the United States and the executives, whose knowledge and experience were employed in challenging and worthwhile endeavors.

Locally, we have Overseas Advisory Associates Inc., made up of retired executives and headed by Walker Lee Cisler, retired board chairman of the Detroit Edison Co., undisputed leader of the energy industry and adviser to national and state leaders.

The not-for-profit company provides energy consulting services to countries overseas.

Another opportunity for retired executives to continue working, but not for money, is the Detroit Executive Service Corps (DESC). Its executive director is Edward Kastner, who spent 26 years with Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

The idea of using retired executives and professionals in volunteer work was developed after World War II to help European nations rebuild their business structures. The first U.S. Executive Service Corps was founded in New York City; the Detroit group started in 1982.

Executives may work on strategic planning, business organization and development, financial controls and fundraising. At present, there are 125 retired executives and professionals on staff, both men and women. The average age is 67, but some are 75 plus.

Backgrounds of these volunteers run the gamut — banking, retailing, health care, utilities, automotive, newspapers, manufacturing and education.

There is no doubt that such volunteer work is rewarding, but still, it doesn't take the place of a paying job. Perhaps there would be more jobs if more companies followed the example of one firm that is offering employees a $1,000 bonus if they buy or lease an American automobile in 1992.

Woman falls prey to pigeon drop

Another woman has fallen victim to the age-old pigeon-drop scam, which cost her $2,000.

The victim, a 71-year-old Detroit woman, was walking to her car in the Mack-Moross parking lot in the Farms about 1 p.m. on Jan. 17 when she was approached by another woman, who was in her late 20s.

The second woman said she found a wallet and showed it to the older woman. It contained what looked like $100,000 in $10,000 bills. The stack of money was wrapped in clear plastic inside a greenish canvas wallet.

A man then approached the two women and joined in the conversation. He suggested they take the money to a bank at Warren and Mack to check to see if the bills were real. The two strangers then got into the older woman's car, and the three of them went to the bank.

The younger woman said she had a friend who worked at the bank. She went inside and returned a short time later, saying that the money was real and that her friend would set up a bank account for the three of them so that they could deposit their shares in such a way that they would not have to pay income taxes on the money.

She said they would all have to donate some of their own money so that the serial numbers would be different than those of the found money and thereby confuse the IRS. The man produced $5,000. Police did not know if the younger woman chipped in any funds.

The elderly victim said she had $2,000 in the bank at Warren and Outer Drive. So the three went to the older woman's home, got her bank book and went to her bank branch, where the victim withdrew $2,000.

The three then returned to the bank at Warren and Mack. Once there, the older woman gave the other woman the $2,000. The younger woman and her male accomplice then went into the bank to set up the account. They returned after a short while and told the woman it was her turn to go in and answer some questions. They told her to wait by the orange chairs.

The older woman went into the bank while the two others waited in her car. The woman waited for five minutes, but when she did not get waited on, she returned to her car to find the two con artists gone.

She then called police. The scam follows several incidents at the Mack-Moross parking lot in the Farms since November. Police believe they are linked to a gang of con artists and thieves living in Detroit. The gang moves from city to city, state to state and its members have extensive criminal histories.

Police have charged three individuals so far in the incidents, and a warrant has been issued for the arrest of a fourth individual who was involved in the Nov. 16 armed robbery and abduction of an Indian Village woman. The woman involved in the armed robbery/kidnaping has also been charged.

The other arrests involve a failed pigeon drop attempt and another armed robbery at the same location.

BirthCare™ at Bon Secours.

It's a child's game, but it's also good advice.

Bon Secours was the first hospital in the Detroit area to offer single-room maternity care. This alternative to traditional childbirth allows the mother-to-be to stay in the same warm, comfortable room throughout her delivery. We call it BirthCare, and when we first introduced it, other hospitals were still wheeling their laboring mothers from one room to another.

We thought it was a good idea to design a delivery around the mother, not a delivery around the hospital. That's why BirthCare has become so popular. And that's why a lot of women have chosen Bon Secours as their hospital. Maybe you should, too.

For more information about BirthCare, a tour of the unit, or referrals to qualified obstetricians who can answer questions about your pregnancy, call 779-7911.

Rev. Finster's folk art to be exhibited at Ford House

An exhibit of 35 works of art by the noted American folk artist, the Rev. Howard Finster, will open to the public at Edsel & Eleanor Ford House on Wednesday, Jan. 22, and run through Sunday, March 1. Exhibition tours, lectures, an evening of American folk music and Valentine Tea and Tour will be featured during the event.

"The Road to Heaven Is Paved by Good Works: The Art of Rev. Howard Finster" includes paintings, sculpture, cut-outs and excerpts from Finster's archival records. A Baptist minister and latecomer to the art world, Finster draws upon his religious beliefs and vivid imagination to create whimsical, fantastic and unconventional art in various mediums.

He attributes the inspiration for most of his unusual art to visions from God. Finster, now 75, entered the art world at the young age of 60. The exhibition is traveling nationally under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES).

"This display of American folk art by the Rev. Finster has been exhibited at the 1984 Venice Biennale, the White House, and in many renowned galleries," said Paul Alandt, Ford House president. "It's a truly unique addition to the schedule of exhibits we offer throughout the year."

"We also created an exciting schedule of events to complement the exhibit, including an opportunity to meet Rev. Finster and to hear America's national treasure of folk music, Howard Armstrong (Louie Bluié)."

The exhibit will be open during the regular house tour hours, which are Wednesday through Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is $2 per person for the exhibit only, or Japanese — or American-made? Name is no clue

I was driving a Mitsubishi 3000GT Twin Turbo, a magnificent clone of the Dodge Stealth sports car, albeit somewhat more expensive, when I heard parts of Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca's speech to the Economic Club of Detroit after the ill-starred trip to Japan with President Bush.

Dodge Stealth: A fine sports car, a fine old American name, made in Japan.

Much of what Iacocca said made a lot of sense to a lot of people, including me, but I would have preferred a dispassionate, less Japan-bashing tone. If the Japanese are engaging in unfair practices, it seems that the government should be able to deal with it, just as it has often done with unfair practices by American companies.

But the idea that real Americans should buy American cars, which underlies much of what American industrial and political leaders have been saying lately, is puzzling.

"Did you know that the Dodge Colt is made in Japan?" asked a genuinely surprised colleague at Wayne State University recently.

"Yes," I said, "it always has been."

"I took it to a mechanic to get something fixed and he said he would have to order a part because this was a Japanese car. I thought Dodges were American cars!"

I felt a bit guilty liking the Mitsubishi as much as I did in the current atmosphere, because I am distressed by the decline in the American auto industry and I have always been an ardent fan of Detroit iron. But while the Mitsubishi 3000GT was made in Japan, so is the Dodge Stealth. What could be a more Detroit nameplate than "Dodge" and Stealth is certainly a name associated with the United States.

My daughter is looking for a bumper sticker for her Mazda MX-6 that says "Made in Flat Rock," because it was and she doesn't want people to think she is unpatriotic. Japanese or American? Mazda is a Japanese name, but the car was made by American workers in a suburb of Detroit.

Honda built more cars in the United States in December than Chrysler Corp. did. It builds more cars now in the United States that it does in Japan and it exports U.S.-built cars to Japan. Japanese or American?

Last year, Japanese makers assembled 1,286,022 cars and trucks in the United States and another 361,119 in Canada, providing thousands of jobs for Americans and Canadians. If you don't buy a Chevrolet, you may be causing the layoff of an American, but if you don't buy a Honda you could be doing the same thing.

Now it is true that the actual content of Japanese cars built in America is still more Japanese than American, since many of the components such as engine and transmission are shipped in from Japan and components tend to be more labor-intensive than final assembly. But that can be dealt with by the government. What should our attitudes as car buyers be?

Autos

By Richard Wright

I don't really care where the profits go, I am much more concerned about jobs. Japanese can and do invest in General Motors, or Ford Motor Co. or Chrysler Corp., just like you or I. But cars built in Flat Rock mean jobs for Americans, whether the car is a Mazda or a Ford.

The Japanese help finance our national debt. Their cars pushed our reluctant industry into striving for higher quality. And Mitsubishi is making world-class sports cars to please Americans instead of Zeros to sink our battleships. So I think we are all better off. Bashing is uncalled for.

The Mitsubishi 3000GT Twin Turbo and the Dodge Stealth R/T Turbo are powered by a 300-HP 3.0-liter dual-overhead-cam 24-valve twin intercooled turbo V-6 with five-speed manual overdrive transaxle, all-wheel drive, four-wheel hydraulic-assist steering at speeds of over 30 mph and four-wheel anti-lock brakes. All of this makes the 3000GT and Dodge Stealth R/T Turbo very hard to beat at any price. And for $30,855 (for the Dodge) or $32,800 (for the Mitsubishi), it is a bargain.

There are cheaper models. The base Dodge Stealth starts at $17,155 and the lowest-priced Mitsubishi 3000, not as base as the base Stealth, at $20,049. Chrysler Corp. says the Stealth/3000GT was planned and designed by Chrysler Corp. and engineered by Mitsubishi and it is truly a fine automobile. What you pay for is what you get, of course, and if you want a world-class sports car, you must go to the top of the line.

The Mitsubishi 3000GT Twin Turbo/Dodge Stealth R/T Turbo is an incredible car, precise, powerful, a delight to drive and, unlike most big-time, high-powered sports cars, good in the snow.

Of course, if you want to buy American, you must go to a Chevrolet Corvette. But you might like the Mitsubishi better. Ask Mr. Iacocca about that.

Rickenbacker built autos in Detroit

During the Roaring Twenties, World War I flying ace Eddie Rickenbacker pursued his dream of building quality automobiles in Detroit. The January/February 1992 issue of Michigan History Magazine features the story of Rickenbacker's dedication to constructing a "car worthy of its name."

"In 1922, Eddie Rickenbacker's car had many advanced features we now take for granted," said Secretary of State Richard H. Austin, Michigan's official historian. "Heated interiors, improved vibration-free engines, locking steering wheels and four-wheel brakes were virtually unheard of before the Rickenbacker car. His cars were not only more comfortable but also safer."

Rickenbacker logged over 80,000 miles test-driving factory prototypes of his vehicles, according to the article by Michigan Historical Museum exhibits specialist Steve Osterlander.

The Rickenbacker Motor Co. (RMC) car designs were sold to the German manufacturer Audi in 1927 after RMC went out of business. Audi incorporated many of Rickenbacker's innovations into several models of its own line. Full-color photographs highlight the article, which is the cover story of the current Michigan History Magazine.

Other feature articles visit Benton Harbor's "Bungtown Canal," and travel to Civil War battlefields with the First Michigan Engineers, who built railroads and bridges to aid the Union cause. The current issue also examines Wayne County's long and fascinating history; and profiles Cora M. Brown, Michigan's first African-American woman elected a state senator.

Michigan History Magazine is available by single issue ($2.95) at many bookstores across the state, and by annual subscription ($9.95). The magazine, which chronicles all facets of Michigan's past and reviews contemporary historical events and publications, is published six times a year by the Michigan Department of State's Bureau of History.

THE BIG COVER-UP

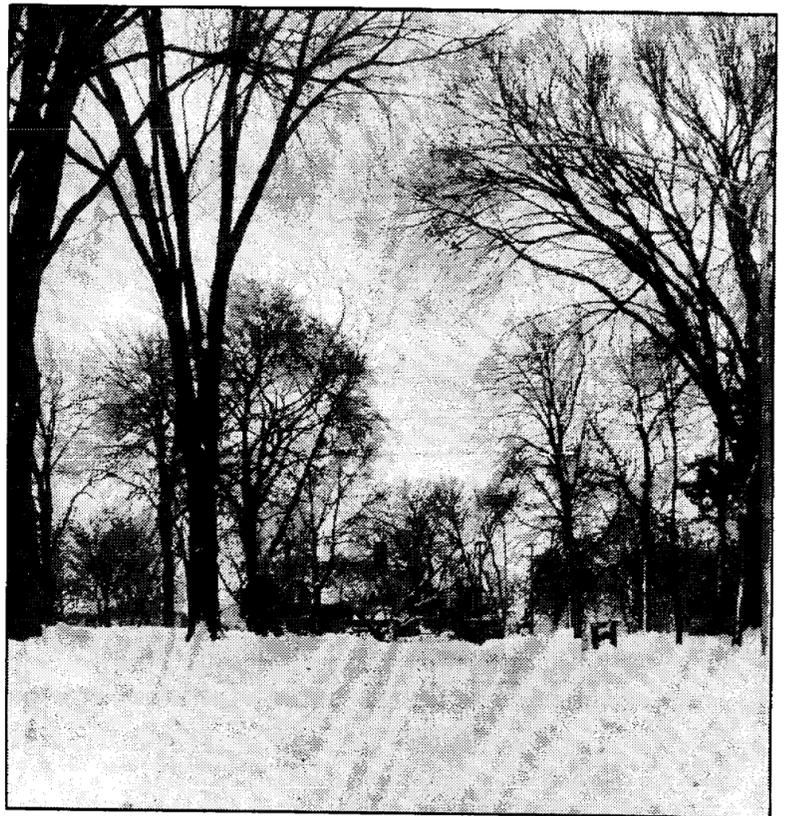

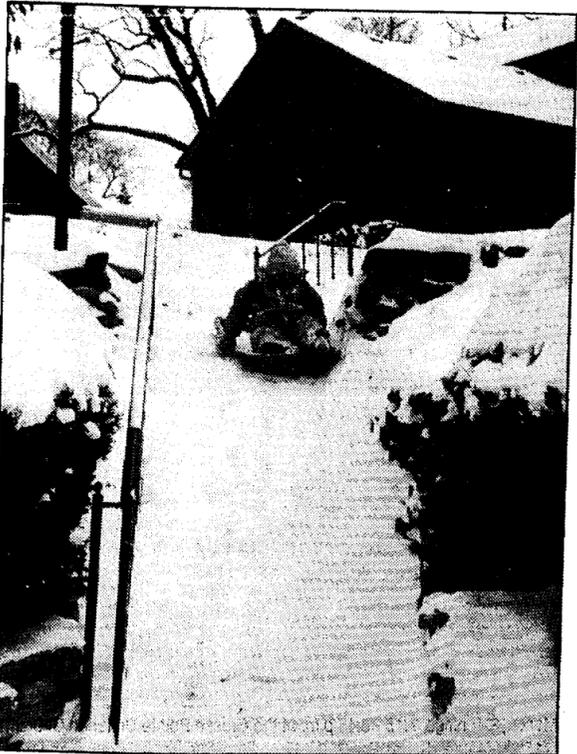

It would have been nice to stay at home, huddled over a steaming cup of hot coffee, but some people had to make their appointed rounds last week and braved the cold. Those who did saw one of nature's finer winter displays.

North, South students aid homeless

Grosse Pointe North and South high school students raised $1,800 for the American Red Cross and World Medical Relief's "Blanket Days for the Homeless."

As a result, they were able to buy 450 blankets to be used in shelters for the homeless, teenage runaways and victims of domestic violence.

The program's first distribution of 3,000 blankets to 53 shelters took place in December. Plans are to distribute 3,000 more blankets in January.

Kalogerakos is semifinalist

Robert Hatch Kalogerakos of Grosse Pointe South was among 300 U.S. high school science students who were named as semifinalists in the 51st annual Westinghouse Science Talent Search.

The students are competing for 40 awards worth a total of $205,000 in the oldest nationwide high school science scholarship competition.

The 300 semifinalists were selected as the most talented students from among the 1,705 entries submitted this year. Entries came from students in 761 schools representing all 50 states and the District of Columbia. Of the semifinalists, 206 were male and 94 female.

The total of 1,705 entries was an increase of 132 from the 50th Science Talent Search in 1991.

The search is sponsored by Westinghouse Electric Corporation and conducted by Science Service, a nonprofit Washington organization dedicated to increasing science and mathematics literacy among the young and minorities and to advancing the public understanding of science in general.

In addition to awards they may win, all 300 semifinalists will receive special honors certificates, and their names will be provided to colleges and universities throughout the nation. Admissions officers have long regarded this list as a valuable tool for selecting highly promising students and awarding financial aid.

From the 300 semifinalists, 40 finalists will be selected. They will travel to Washington in March to compete for the first-prize scholarship of $40,000, one $30,000 scholarship, three $15,000 scholarships and four $10,000 scholarships. Each of the remaining 30 finalists will receive $1,000 scholarships.

The 40 finalists will be announced Jan. 29.

Historical homes sought

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society is seeking nominations for its historical marker program. Anyone in the community may nominate a site for consideration.

To nominate a site, call the society headquarters anytime at 884-7010 and ask for a nomination form. Callers should leave name and full address and will receive a simple form to complete. Nominations should be sent to Grosse Pointe Historical Society, Ferry School, 748 Roslyn, Grosse Pointe Woods, Mich. 48236.

Marylyn Ross, chairman of the plaque committee, said, "We are looking for a variety of historic sites to consider; public buildings, farmhouses, gates and other sites will be considered."

All nominations must be received by Feb. 20. The winners of the 1992 plaques will be chosen March 1. Plaques will be presented at the society's annual meeting in April.

The bronze plaques, designed to be mounted in a visible location, feature an interpretation of the society's logo, the windmill, which gave its name to Windmill Pointe. The windmill was erected sometime before 1750 at the foot of Lakepointe in what is now Grosse Pointe Park. Both the French and Indians took their grain to the mill to be ground until about 1800.

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society was founded in 1945, reorganized in 1979 and has more than 500 members. The society's goal is to preserve Grosse Pointe's rich heritage by increasing awareness of the area's history and educating its residents through lectures, workshops and field trips.

Park residents to pay a curbside recycling fee

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park residents will see an extra charge on their water bills soon.

To pay for the Park's recycling program, the city council recently decided to charge households $30 a year. The council had considered creating a special millage to raise the revenue, but chose instead to tack the fee onto residents' water bills.

Will residents be expected to pay the fee in one lump sum, or in installments? The council left that decision up to the city administration.

City Comptroller Peter M. Dobrzeniecki said that the city will probably try a two-payment-a-year system first. He said that residents who receive their water bill in February will probably see a $15 recycling charge on it, and another $15 fee in April. Those who receive their water bill in March will probably see a $15 charge on it that month and in May.

Park residents receive their water bills bi-monthly. Half of the city's residents receive their water bills in even months and the other half receive theirs in odd months.

Last February, the council established the curbside recycling program, which went into effect in July. The city hired Efficient Sanitation Inc. (ESI) to pick up the recyclables and take them to recycling centers.

The three-year contract with ESI is costing the city $425,159, broken down as follows: $28,717 for 4,700 recycling bins; $125,722 (or $10,746 a month) for the first year; $131,976 for the second year; and $138,744 for the third year.

So far, the city has been paying ESI out of its general fund.

The city needs to charge residents to recoup that money, Dobrzeniecki said.

By charging the city's approximately 4,700 households $30 a year, the city will raise $423,000 over three years to pay ESI, he said.

If more residents complied with the recycling program, it would be cheaper for the city to operate and the new fee could be eliminated, Dobrzeniecki said.

The majority of residents still throw their newspapers in the trash, rather than in their recycling bins, he said. The trash is then burned at the Grosse Pointes-Clinton Refuse Disposal Authority incinerator in Clinton Township. The authority charges the park $52.75 a ton to burn and bury trash, Dobrzeniecki said.

Newspapers, especially wet newspapers, account for a great deal of the tonnage that goes to the incinerator, he said. So, if more residents put their newspapers in their recycling bins, the tonnage that the Park sends to the incinerator would be decreased, and the city would save money, Dobrzeniecki said.

Currently, ESI is picking up about 80 tons of recyclables in the Park a month, which amounts to a monthly saving of $4,200 by the Park in payments to the incinerator authority.

If Park residents collectively put 300 tons of recyclables in their bins a month, the city would save enough at the incinerator to pay for the recycling program, and would not have to charge residents, Dobrzeniecki said.

However, he said it's possible that the incinerator authority would raise its per ton fee if the Park drastically reduces the amount of trash it sends there, in order to cover the incinerator's fixed costs.

"Currently, the (incinerator's) rates are down, and we're hoping that they're not going to go up," he said.

Every year, professional magician Tom Plunkard of Warren entertains the children at the Barnard Center, a Grosse Pointe public schools special education program on the campus of the Children's Home of Detroit.

Like magic, smiles appear

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

Tom Plunkard is spreading magic — literally and figuratively — at the Barnard Center on the campus of the Children's Home of Detroit.

Plunkard, who lives in Warren, is a professional magician, but his most rewarding performances are those he does gratis for Barnard Center, a special education program of the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

About four years ago, Patty Kelly, first assistant at the Barnard Center, asked Plunkard to do a public service performance for her special children — about 30 in all in grades 1-8. He agreed and has been coming back every year since.

"He's done so much for us," she said. "He's such a non-assuming man. The children really love him."

"I appreciate his efforts. He's actually spreading magic around Barnard Center."

Plunkard, now 31, has been performing magic since he was 8. He has been a full-time professional magician for eight years and has a weakness for kids. It also helps that he's a self-professed family man and would rather entertain children than do stunts in nightclubs, though he does do that, too.

"As an entertainer," he said, "I'm asked to do a lot of free functions. But you can't do them all, and you have to decide which ones. Kids in this situation need it the most."

His most recent trip to Barnard Center was last week. During that performance, he had the children squealing with delight as he pulled doves out of handkerchiefs and coins out of young ears and turned the doves into a rabbit, albeit a big bunny.

But when pressed by the children about how the doves disappeared, he refused to reveal his secret. He did assure the kids, though, that his three doves — named Hamburger, Hot Dog and French Fries — were safe and unharmed.

As the children filed out, they each gave the bunny a pat on the head and Plunkard a pat on the back.

Cottage breaks ground on expansion

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Cottage Hospital broke ground Jan. 8 on a huge renovation and development project, the hospital's first remodeling since 1970 when it added a wing on Muir Road.

This renovation project has been several years in the making and includes an improved emergency department, new lobby and entrances and a pedestrian over Muir Road connecting the parking deck to the hospital.

The $6.5 million expansion includes construction and renovation, equipment, furnishings and landscaping. To date, the hospital has received $2.5 million in donations for the renovation.

When the first phase of the construction is completed — the target is January 1993 — the hospital will have moved the emergency room to the opposite end of the building, created a special triage area for quicker assessment of patient needs and increased the number of treatment rooms from eight to 13.

New specialty treatment rooms and private consultation areas will provide more privacy for patients and families.

Cosmetic improvements will include a covered canopy for drive-up access to the emergency department and a more attractive waiting area.

A new lobby and improved entrances are also included in the expansion, with an admitting area for both inpatients and outpatients, a new surgical waiting lounge, chapel and a larger gift shop. The expansion includes an area for community health screenings and exhibits.

New entrances will be built at the building's midpoint on Muir Road and landscaping will be done around the entire facility.

The second phase of construction is expected to be complete in July 1993.

The design is by Albert Kahn Associates Inc. and the construction will be handled by Freeman-Darling.

Several trees, including the huge pine tree at the corner of Kercheval and Muir — which has been lighted during the holidays for the past few years in honor of former Cottage Hospital boardmember Elise Morley Fink — will be removed during the renovation. At least five will be relocated. The pine tree will be replaced.

Fink was a Cottage Hospital trustee for more than 50 years and was an honorary board member when she died in October at the age of 85.

A new tree will be planted in honor of Fink, said John Danaher, vice president for development.

New wheels for Woods

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Woods public safety department will get three new squad cars this summer. Purchase of the vehicles was approved earlier this month by the city council.

Public Safety Director Jack Patterson told the council that he really wanted four cars, but had been asked by the city administrator if his department could get by with fewer, because of the tough economic times and the city's desire to keep the 1992-93 budget at this year's level.

Patterson said the department needed at least three new cars to replace worn two- and three-year-old vehicles.

He said that if the three older cars are sold soon, the city will be able to get about $3,500 for each vehicle.

"If we don't turn them in now (this year)," Patterson said, "they won't be worth anything to us."

The council authorized the city to purchase three 1992 Chevrolet Caprice sedans at about $14,000 each from Macomb County.

Each year, Macomb and Oakland counties ask for bids for various types of vehicles from car dealers in southeastern Michigan. The two counties compile a list of the top bidders for each vehicle and then send the list to cities in other counties, such as Grosse Pointe Woods, Patterson said.

The larger the county's purchase order, the less each vehicle will cost. That's why the counties ask other cities if they want to combine purchase orders, Patterson said.

Grosse Pointe Woods' squad cars will come from Mike Savoie Chevrolet in Troy, as did the three police cars that the city purchased from Macomb last year, Patterson said.

Each of the 1992 cars will run about $700 less than those purchased by the city last year, he said.

The cars will not be ordered until after July 1 and will be delivered this summer. The money for the cars will be taken out of the city's 1992-93 budget, Patterson said.

Sometime after July, he said, he will ask the council for a new car for the city's meter enforcement officers.

sity when she graduates. The contestants were taught a physical fitness routine which they had to do for the judges.

"It was part aerobics — but we had to do push-ups — and part dancing, and ended up in a big kickline," she said. "I'm kind of uncoordinated, though, so it took me a while to get it."

For the performing arts portion — which was limited to 90 seconds — she did a monologue from the play "Bus Stop." She played the lead in Grosse Pointe North's production of the play last year.

She answered the question — "What would you change about your school if you became principal and why?" by saying she would institute a merit system to reward the teachers who work and not simply those with seniority.

She walked down the stage in a full-length gown and did a couple of turns to show off her poise and in the end was named the state's top young woman.

For her efforts, Babel has a choice of a full ride scholarship to the University of Alabama for $3,000 towards an education at the school of her choice.

The national contest means 10 days of tours and practicing in Mobile — where she'll check out the University of Alabama and maybe change her mind about where she'll study pre-med — and a chance at a $30,000 scholarship which is presented to the national winner.

"I don't know why I got involved in the first place," she said. "But it's nice and it's exciting."

the sudden exertion of shoveling snow could be dangerous — if not fatal.

Before beginning any exercise program, people who are out of shape should go into it gradually — after seeing their doctor first. Shoveling snow is like starting an extremely vigorous exercise program without any conditioning.

Those who smoke have no business shoveling snow because they have difficulty in breathing and are prone to heart disease, Southall said.

One winter misconception, he said, is that alcohol helps keep you warm. Actually, alcohol causes a warming sensation at the surface of the skin, which causes the body to release heat faster. The rapid heat loss leads more quickly to hypothermia.

The best advice: Take it easy outdoors unless you're in good shape, wear layers of clothing and because half of your body heat is lost from your head and neck, wear a hat and scarf.

Attempted purse snatching reported

A 66-year-old Farms woman was walking on Roland from Mack to Chalfonte at 5:35 p.m. on Jan. 13 when a man and woman attempted to steal her purse.

She told police that while she was walking, an older car pulled up the curb on Roland and parked. A man and woman then got out of the car, and as the Farms woman got near, the woman yelled to the man, "Grab it!"

The Farms woman pulled her purse away from the man's reach and began yelling, telling them to get away from her. The couple then got back into the car and drove off.

Police ran a check of the car's license plate number, as provided by the Farms woman, and found the vehicle had been reported stolen in Detroit.

involved in over the years, including the Elworthy Field lot and Safety Town, a project of the Grosse Pointe schools. He was also involved in the formation of the St. John Bon Secours Continuing Care Center on Warren.

It's rewarding, he says, to have seen fledgling companies grow into giants. A small candy company began life with a loan of a couple thousand dollars. Today it can ask for — and receive — a loan of $7 million, Tolari said.

There are numerous commercial buildings throughout the community in which he has been involved. "You thrive and enjoy the success of others," he said.

He is proud that he has been a community banker for 32 years. "It's rare today for one person to stay in one place for that length of time," Tolari said. "I did it as a matter of choice. I was part of the community."

He was born in Detroit to Ada and Louis Tolari. He attended Southeastern High School and upon graduation in 1944, he was drafted. He served with the 11th Airborne in the Pacific theater for two years. Tolari was involved in three campaigns and he earned three Bronze Stars. He attained the rank of sergeant before his discharge.

The times were unsettling. "We were in high school when war broke out and all the plans we had were sidetracked," he said. "The thing to do was to join the service. We didn't get a chance to focus on a career until the war was over."

It was a frightening experience, he said. "You grew up in a hurry. Visualize getting your high school diploma, going for basic training for 15 weeks and then within the next 13 days being in a foreign country. It was a very unreal situation."

He went to work for Chrysler Corp. after his discharge. But, Tolari said, "I wanted to get into the world of finance."

He attended Wayne State University and completed graduate and post-graduate studies at the School of Banking at the University of Wisconsin.

He and Laura Conti were married in 1954. They have a son, Jeffrey, who is a lawyer in Farmington Hills.

At National Bank, Tolari worked his way through the ranks and in 1960, he was named manager of the Grosse Pointe office. The office was moved from Jefferson and Rivard to Kercheval and St. Clair.

In 1971, the branch became the Grosse Pointe Regional Banking Center for 13 offices in Grosse Pointe, Harper Woods and Detroit. Tolari was named head of the banking center, and in 1986 he was named first vice president.

He has made many friends over the years. "I won't miss the pressure, but I'll miss the association," he said. "I value the customers' confidence and I cherish their friendship."

Now it's time to sit back and reflect, Tolari said, and catch up on odds and ends. He and his wife will enjoy a short vacation in Florida and Arizona, but they'll remain in Grosse Pointe Farms, where they built their house in 1989.

"My wife designed and subcontracted it," he said. "She was there every day from 7 in the morning until the tradesmen left at night."

Tolari said the contractors had the utmost respect for his wife "because she knew what she was doing." It took two years to plan the house and six months to build.

"We didn't have any heartaches and we made very few changes," Tolari said. The workmen referred to his wife as the lady contractor, he said. She came from a contracting family and had worked as an interior decorator before they were married.

Tolari, who said he's an average golfer, also enjoys reading and coin collecting. He served nine years as treasurer, director and chairman of the finance committee of Bon Secours Hospital and he'll remain on the board of the Bon Secours Hospital Foundation.

He plans to spend time volunteering for charitable organizations, including the March of Dimes and a program for the homeless that is in the planning stage now. "The community's been real good to me," he said, "and I have to give something back."

Tolari has had a good start. At his retirement party last month at the Gourmet House, his wife arranged for the completion of a fund he began as a member of the Grosse Pointe Rotary. He was honored with the Paul Harris Fellow Award, an honor given to those who donate $1,000. The money helps the Rotary with its local, national and international projects.

"Rather than getting a set of golf clubs or things of a material nature, I can remember the people by this," he said.

Tolari is past president of the Lochmoor Club and a member of the Grosse Pointe Businessmen's Association. He and his wife are members of St. Paul Church.

Winter's dangers to health

This article, written by Dr. Anthony Southall, director of the Emergency Center at St. John Hospital, was originally printed in the Grosse Pointe News on Feb. 16, 1989.

Winter-time is once again upon us, and with it comes medical problems and injuries inherent to our climate and outdoor physical activity.

One condition which we commonly see in emergency departments this time of year is frostbite. In order to prevent and manage this problem, it is first of all necessary to understand some of its basic medical causes.

Frostbite is the direct result of severe cold's action on exposed skin. What actually happens is that the cold causes the blood vessels in the skin to narrow down or constrict. The blood in the narrowed vessels then clots and the blood supply to the skin, which is supplied by these blood vessels, is cut off. As a result of this loss of the blood supply, the skin dies and we call this frostbite.

Most of the cases involve fingers, toes, nose and ears. The symptoms are coldness of the skin, tingling and numbness. The skin becomes red, as the condition becomes more advanced, becomes pale and white or waxy-looking.

In early frostbite or frost-nip, simple contact rewarming such as putting your hand over an affected ear is usually sufficient.

For established frostbite, where the skin is pale and waxy looking, it is important to remember that rewarming should be done only once, and if you're in a situation where there is any chance of the skin refreezing after you have warmed it, then it is better to wait until you have medical help before the part is thawed out. This is because tissue that refreezes once it has been thawed out will almost certainly die off and amputation of fingers and toes will then become a necessity.

The best cure for frostbite is prevention. People should remember to wear adequate, dry clothing and mittens, keep their feet and socks dry, avoid unnecessary exposure and don't smoke; smoking also causes the blood vessels to narrow and this makes things even worse.

One thing people tend to underestimate is the effect of the wind-chill factor. By this, we mean that if the air is moving with the wind, the actual temperature of this moving air on the exposed skin is much lower than if the air is still. The wind-chill factor is very important in deciding if freezing of exposed flesh will occur.

At a temperature of 10 degrees Fahrenheit, you only need a wind of 20 mph to get a wind-chill factor of 24 degrees below zero.

At zero degrees, with a 40 mph wind you get a wind-chill factor of 55 degrees below. This has not been uncommon in our area in winter and at this temperature you have a very definite danger of exposed fingers freezing within a minute or so.

Some cases of frostbite are associated with hypothermia, or low body temperature. Many such instances are the result of accidental prolonged exposure outside and could be prevented with forethought and common sense. It is important to dress correctly if one is spending any significant amount of time outdoors.

For all-weather purposes, clothing should be worn in closely-fitting layers with outer garments that shed wind and water, wool garments that retain their insulation when wet, and inner garments that keep warm air close to the body.

Nothing goes better with the excitement of the SUPERBOWL than super food.

G.P. Symphony to accompany medley of local talent

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

How often do arts organizations and charitable groups launch new fundraising concepts?

The predictable round of fashion shows, silent and live auctions, house and garden tours, dinner dances and luncheons occasionally inspire... uh... weariness.

The Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra Society has a new idea. They've called it a Fun Fundraiser. What it is... is a high class talent show.

"It will be a showcase for local musicians," said Johanna Gilbert, president of the symphony society. "For some performers, it will be their first chance to perform with the orchestra."

The Fun Fundraiser will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 2, in the Crystal Ballroom of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. It will feature several dozen local musicians (some are members of the orchestra, some aren't) and more than a dozen musical selections, from Beethoven to Brubeck, from "Begin the Beguine" to "Bugler's Holiday."

The talent will be top notch, but the styles will range from Wiffenpoof-style songs, to jazz, to selections from popular Broadway musicals, to a string quartet and a two-piano concerto.

The purpose of the performance is twofold, Gilbert said.

"We're looking for a way to broaden our audience base," she said. "We want to reach people who haven't been to our concerts before."

"The symphony has a dedicated corps of followers," said Anne Roberts, one of the directors of the symphony society. "But there are others out there who just haven't gotten around to attending a performance."

And — like all arts organizations today, the Grosse Pointe Symphony is looking for additional funds.

"Many community orchestras are floundering," Gilbert said. "Not the Grosse Pointe Symphony. Because of the Women's Association, we are financially stable. But like most arts organizations, we are experiencing crises in funding, and we need help. We also want to show support for our musicians. They make great sacrifices of time and travel in order to perform," she said.

... and here's some of the talent

The Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra will present a program on Sunday, Feb. 2, showcasing some talented local musicians.

Last spring, Gilbert said the group was searching for a fundraising gimmick. They brainstormed. They discussed auctioning chances for local musicians to perform with the orchestra, but they added a new twist. Potential performers would be required to get sponsors to donate money in their support.

To be eligible, performers must get pledges of at least $500, which boils down to selling 20 or more tickets.

Nearly 800 letters were mailed to prospective supporters.

"It takes a lot of nerve and courage to ask a performer to find sponsors," Gilbert said. "Larry LaGore, a local piano teacher and performer, sent at least 70 letters and others sent 40 or 50 letters each to friends and family and co-workers."

The Grosse Pointe Symphony was created in 1954. The first concert, which was a sellout, included 59 musicians (12 teachers, 18 students, five housewives, one banker, one lawyer and 13 other people in various types of businesses and industry).

The orchestra's debut on March 7 at Parcels Junior High School was under the direction of Wayne Dunlap.

Eleventh grade girls from Grosse Pointe High School handed out programs and members of the Grosse Pointe Woman's Club acted as hostesses.

Felix Resnick has served as conductor of the orchestra since 1959.

The Women's Association was formed in 1965. The group supports the symphony by planning fundraisers and special events.

The orchestra presents four concerts each season, usually in October, February, March and May. The next concert will be on Sunday, March 22, at Grosse Pointe North High School's Center for the Performing Arts.

The Fun Fundraiser will not be an ordinary symphony concert, Gilbert said, although the orchestra will play several selections.

It will be an eclectic musical event, with classical, popular, rag, jazz and Broadway musical selections — vocal and instrumental performers — all mixed together.

"It's an idea whose time has come," she said. "We hope to do this again. Next year, I think people will be lining up to perform — and lining up to attend."

"The Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra is a lovely little local treasure," Roberts said.

Performers on the program for the Fun Fundraiser include Bob Plociniak, baritone; Margaret Ahee, soprano; Mary Alice Plummer, soprano; Helen Wu, pianist; Paul, Don and Ralph Miller, trumpeters; Larry LaGore, pianist; Alice Ellison, pianist; Laurie Strachan and Nancy Sutton, flutists; The Grunyons, a men's singing group; Anne Roberts, pianist; Martha Lucander, oboe; Robert and Barbara Hawksley, pianists; the Bob Barnard Trio (piano, marimba and bass); and, of course, the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra itself.

Tickets are $25. Call the War Memorial at 881-7511 for more information or to order tickets. If any tickets are left, Gilbert said they'll be available at the door on the day of the performance.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD

Many years ago I was present when the legendary Oswald Jacoby was commending the lovely Sally Johnson who had just won three hundred and the tribute that goes with it. His words were simple, but extremely sincere. "Success at the bridge table to most is measured by how well you bid and play the game. Not so, deportment is more important and Sally, you set a handsome standard."

To wear with integrity the mantle of a life masters rank requires performance commensurate with the status of that achievement and a tender touch at the table for others. A grace I must admit that we all falter at on occasion. Becoming one has many supplemental rewards. No longer are you solely motivated to conquer a number. The door to the world of an expert is open and now beckons you if you want to become one. The opportunity is fascinating and most enterprising. You will appreciate more readily than ever before that most of the gifts of a novice's play have past. Competition is more severe and there are only two ways to score better. By invoking your own industry and by the less often found folly of others.

In the past few months, a number of Grosse Pointers have reached the life master plateau. Nancy De Weese, Lois Green, Barbara Jur, Carol Neef, Mary Lou Keating, Greg Platt and Elmer Winkelman. We of the wonderful world of bridge salute you. Wear your award with dignity and continue to play the game with enthusiasm and credibility.

Today's hand presents a vexed question. When should one overbid? The standard answer is you shouldn't, but if you do you'd better play the twenty-six cards in your arsenal a trick better than the rest. Most of the experts and many of the life master have that craft, but be careful; ego can give you a zero.

Today's hand is a difficult challenge that Carol Neef overcame as she carefully reasoned with the possible position of the opponents high out cards.

Some will wonder why North, after first passing, didn't make the limit bid of two no trump, but his series of bids including a reverse is style and told Carol he had just less than an opening bid. Four hearts is ticklish with two possible diamonds, a spade and a trump loser. Three no trump had its problems too and some were going down, but declarer decided her side couldn't afford the risk of making a twenty-four or five point no trump contract and bid on to ten tricks and what turned out to be a top.

Tricks 1-3 declarer won the ace, king and ruffed a club high. She knew it would be the best technique to eliminate clubs so the opponents would have to break a new suit. 4; A low trump to dummy's nine and the last club ruffed. 6; A trump which West's ace won and the defense was at their crossroad. West reasoned declarer had the spade king, which, if the suit were led, would allow a diamond discard so she played a low diamond. This gave our new life master a horrible guess which she suspicioned correctly and played the king. It also uncovered new evidence that Carol put to work immediately. West had shown up with both red aces and the queen, jack, ten of clubs. She couldn't have the spade king or she would have passed an opening bid. The spade finesse wouldn't work so declarer realized the diamond position was critical. At trick 8, the diamond ten which East's queen won and the end play was on. East's thirteenth club gave Carol a bluff/ruff and the spade play gave declarer the much needed winning finesse. East overtaking the diamond queen was fruitless as declarer would then have lost only a trump, a diamond and the spade finesse. You say lucky, you're right, but luck plays favorites and Carol's technique for ten tricks was to be applauded.

The Gem is the latest jewel in Detroit's theater crown

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

"This day and age we're living in gives cause for apprehension, with speed and new inventions and things like third dimension... So we must get back to Earth at times, relax, relieve the tension. No matter what the progress, or what may yet be proved, the simple facts of life are such they cannot be removed."

That seldom-heard introduction to "As Time Goes By" is particularly apt when discussing both the newly renovated it opened as an auditorium for the Twentieth Century Club in 1927, it's been known as the Little Theatre, the Rivoli, Drury Lane, the Europa, Cinema and the Vanguard Playhouse before becoming the Gem in 1967.

Restorers had to remove red and black spray paint from tile and walls — remnants, probably, of its days as a pornographic movie house in the '70s — to reveal frescoes and details that the decades had slowly chipped away.

The carpet pattern was recreated from a piece of the original that was found in the basement. The seats and lighting fixtures were taken from the Ambassador Theatre in St. Louis, another 1920s theater.

What helps make the theater unique is the seating. The main floor seats 200 in cabaret style, complete with waiters and high-priced drinks. The mezzanine — which is only 25 feet from the stage — seats 250 in comfortably spaced seats. There isn't a bad seat in the house.

And the show developer Charles A. Forbes and the American Variety Arts Foundation chose to open the theater with is also a real gem.

"The All Night Strut!" is billed as a classy, sassy musical celebration of the 1930s and '40s. It's a compilation of the music that made Americans sing and dance during the Depression and World War II.

It's the kind of music young people hear and say, "I wish I lived back then" and older people say, "Remember this song, honey?" It's the kind of music that, despite time going by, still brings tears and inspiration.

Four extremely talented performers take you to "Tuxedo Junction" on the "Chattanooga Choo Choo" to help you get "In the Mood" to tap your toes to "Fascinating Rhythm" or dab your eyes at "I'll Be Seeing You." And that's just a sampling of the 29 beautifully arranged songs in the two-hour show.

The best thing about the show is that it moves easily, with no narrative from "Gimme a Pigfoot and a Bottle of Beer" to "A Nightingale Sang in Berkeley Square."

It's simply music. Great music.

The four performers — Jerry Christakos, Lori Flynn, Lance

Roberts and Sharon Young — sing, dance and scat through the songs without a false note, a mis-step or a drop of sweat. And that's quite a feat because they're on stage just about every minute.

They form a perfect ensemble, no one standing out from the others until it's his or her turn, giving and taking well from each other. And what's more, the performers seem to be having as much fun as the audience.

In addition to the four lead performers, there is a band of three musicians who work perfectly together. Don't rush out of the theater; they put on a short epilogue that shouldn't be missed.

"The All Night Strut!" is playing at least to the end of February, but its run is open-ended. When American Variety Arts opened in other cities, the response was so great it ran for years.

Tickets are $19.50 for week-day shows, matinees and Sunday performances. Friday and Saturday performances are $24.50. Curtain is 7:30 p.m., Saturday matinee is 3 p.m. and Sunday shows are at 2 and 6 p.m. Call 567-6000 for more information. Tickets can also be charged by phone at 645-6666.

Upon the theater's opening in 1927, a member of the Twentieth Century Club said that "it is a fine thing to put into the heart of the city an institution which will offer a broadening, refining and uplifting influence on the community. We need forces which are dedicated to spiritual values instead of just to the material progress of the city."

The sentiments are echoed here. Everyone connected with the Gem and "The All Night Strut!" should be proud of the polished jewel they have given Detroit. Now it's up to us to keep it going.

Gem Theater and the wonderful revue it chose as its opening show.

The fundamental things apply at the 450-seat Gem, located across Woodward from the Fox. (You've probably parked next to it for years but never noticed it.) Don't be turned off by the exterior — which will be renovated as soon as the weather breaks — the interior is restored gloriously to its beginnings.

It took the new owners as long to renovate the intimate theater as it did to renovate the Fox, which is more than 10 times its size.

You may not remember it as the Gem, though, because since

DSO report:

Boisvert's playing was worth braving the cold

By Alex Sucek
Special Writer

Those who braved the cold last Thursday to attend the Detroit Symphony Orchestra concert were generously warmed by a highly romantic program featuring two very talented ladies. One was the DSO's concertmistress, Emmanuelle Boisvert as violin soloist. The second was guest conductor Catherine Comet.

Music

A native of Paris, Comet came to Detroit by way of the Juilliard School and the Grand Rapids Symphony where she is now music director. She also has an impressive record of awards won and conducting dates with other prestigious orchestras.

Her vigorous and precise conducting style was immediately evident in the opening "Carnival Overture" by Dvorak. While the ultra fast tempo at the start tended to obscure some detail, it gave this familiar work a new vitality and fresh appeal, which was retained in the more conventional pace of the main portion of the work.

With the "Romance for Violin," also by Dvorak, she very effectively led the orchestra in a well-controlled and highly supportive accompaniment to the soloist. Boisvert's exquisitely rich tone and elegant style were eminently suited to the soulful and tender work.

The real fireworks came with Boisvert's performance of the "Carmen Fantasy" by Sarasate. As much violin virtuoso as composer, Sarasate employed just about every technique possible on the violin to embellish the main themes from Bizet's opera in this virtuoso show-piece.

Boisvert played them with amazing virtuosity, sweetness and accuracy for a highly enjoyable sampling, and reminder, of the taunting gypsy heroine. The earthiness of Carmen was missing, however, leaving the listener yearning to hear a harsh sound to relieve the gentility of the playing and express some of the grimness of the story that inspired those fiery tunes.

Even so, Boisvert's rendering of the fiendishly difficult passages of such embellishments as double stops, harmonics and the throaty Habanera set in canon with the orchestra were a tour de force.

The program's grand finale after intermission was the monumentally romantic Symphony in D minor by Cesar Franck. Alternating between mystery, foreboding and exultation, its organlike orchestration calls for sweeping style and grand passion. Comet often approached those goals in the performance which had its grand moments, and she delivered a rendition that facilitated recognition and appreciation of the exceptional quality of Franck's outstanding musical craftsmanship. Yet the overwhelming power of this work to become an all-consuming emotional experience was not fully realized. The thoughtful treatment and careful control exhibited by this conductor could not unleash the full passion of this music.

For this week's group of four concerts, the DSO offers a Pops program divided between orchestral treats and a great pop vocalist. For the first half, associate conductor Leslie B. Dunner will present Rossini's "Overture to The Barber of Seville," Rimsky-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnol," Borodin's "Polovtsian Dances" (famous for their use as the main theme of the Broadway Musical "Kismet") and selections from "Phantom of the Opera." The second half will feature Diannah Caroll who will announce her songs from the stage as she performs. For tickets to the three evening and one Sunday afternoon performances, call the box office at 833-3700.

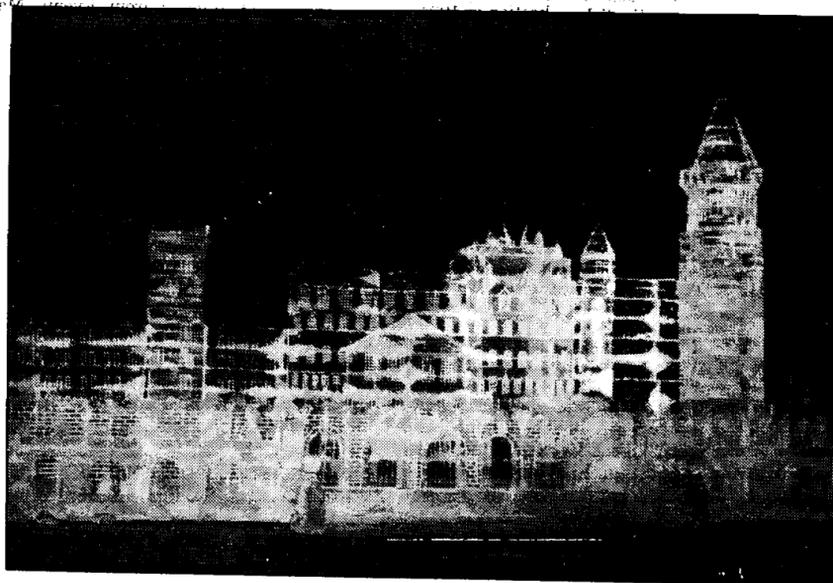

Winterfest '92 starts Friday

Canada has the Carnaval de Quebec, Minnesota has the St. Paul Winter Carnival and Japan has the Sapporo Snow Festival. Now, Detroit joins the international ranks when WinterFest '92 comes to the Michigan State Fairgrounds Jan. 24-Feb. 2.

WinterFest '92 is a 10-day festival celebrating winter activities and featuring the largest indoor ice and snow sculpture exhibition in the United States. Some 50,000 persons attended WinterFest '91 in its inaugural year at the fairgrounds. Planners anticipate that the festival will grow to rival other famous city-wide events, drawing huge crowds from around the state.

At WinterFest '92, champion ice-carving chefs from the United States, Canada and Japan will expertly transform more than 1 million pounds of ice into over 100 exquisite designs. Both professional and student ice-carving competitions will be held, with more than $30,000 to be awarded in cash, prizes, and scholarships. The designs created by the cold-weather artists will include an intricate 30-foot ice palace. These crystalline creations will be illuminated by a state-of-the-art lighting spectacular that will transform the State Fair Coliseum into a breathtaking beautiful winter wonderland.

WinterFest '92 will also present a snow sculpting exhibition. Snow sculpting makes its Olympic debut at the 1992

Winter Games in France. Snow sculptors shape 8 foot blocks of snow using shovels, ice-picks and the artist's imagination to create dramatic frozen sculptures. Preparation for the snow sculptures will begin just before the opening of the festival.

Unlike many outdoor festivals, the WinterFest ice carvings and snow sculptures will not be subject to adverse weather conditions, because the majority of the displays will be housed in the protected confines of the huge Coliseum and the Michigan Malls of the fairgrounds.

Surrounding the WinterFest display will be a wealth of wintery activities including MSDRA sanctioned snowmobile drag racing, a celebrity dog-sled race and complimentary horse-drawn carriage rides. The State Fairgrounds Dairy Barn will be home to KidsFest — a children's fun center featuring a mini-carnival, cartoon characters, clowns, puppet shows, magic shows, balloons and games and other "hands-on" entertainment.

The WinterFest Food Court will offer traditional winter fare including chili, soups, hot and cold sandwiches, pizza and a wide selection of beverages from hot chocolate to beer.

The WinterFest Trade Court offers one-stop shopping for the winter recreation enthusiast, including the latest in winter sports merchandise, a travel and recreation center, the Handcrafters arts and crafts display and much more. Members of the Detroit Red Wings will make a special appearance at the WinterFest Trade Court for an autograph session.

Tickets are $6 for adults and $3 for children (ages 6-12) and are available at the Joe Louis and Cobo Arena box offices, the Fox Theatre box office and all Ticketmaster outlets, including Hudson's and Harmony House. To charge by phone, call 645-6666. Adult tickets can be purchased in advance for $4 by writing to: WinterFest '92, c/o Fox Theatre, 2211 Woodward Ave., Detroit, MI 48201. Groups of 20 or more may purchase tickets for $3 per person by calling 567-7474. For more information, call 596-3287.

Piano festival highlights music of Spain

The Lyric Chamber Ensemble presents its fourth annual Piano Festival — "Spanish Rhapsody" on Sunday, Feb. 2, at 3:30 p.m. at Orchestra Hall,

Music

3711 Woodward Ave., Detroit. Now an established tradition for the LCE, the 1992 Piano Festival honors the unique flair of Spanish composers as well as French, South American and American composers who were inspired by the rhythms and melodies of Spain.

Underwritten by the Detroit Free Press, the concert is part of a full season devoted to Hispanic composers in honor of the 500th anniversary of the discovery of America.

LCE Piano Festival regulars Flavio Varani, Louis Nagel, Joseph Gurt and Fedora Horowitz will return to the Orchestra Hall stage for this concert, and will be joined by guest artists Michael Gurt and Andrew Cooperstock.

Known for its unique programming, the festival gives Detroit audiences the opportunity to see and hear four Steinway grand pianos at one time on the Orchestra Hall stage. The program will feature music for solo and duo piano as well as music for four pianos/eight hands. Selections include "Iberia" by Albeniz, "Soiree en Grenade" by Debussy, "Alborada del grazioso" by Ravel, "Espana" by Chabrier, "Brazilian Cycle" by Villa-Lobos, "Danzas Argentinas" by Ginastera, "Danzas Andaluzas" for duo piano by Infante, and Gershwin's "Cuban Overture" for two pianos.

The Alpena News' recent front page article about Patricia O'Toole, Rogers City's favorite daughter, inspired me to read her book, "The Five of Hearts." This biographical study was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize after it appeared last year, and this is why O'Toole came to her old hometown to be duly honored by her friends and teachers. Now a resident of Connecticut, she confessed that the first item that she carried when she left Rogers City was a love of books and libraries. She recalled that when she visited the library for the first time, she was dumbfounded to learn she did not have to buy the books, but could borrow them. "The idea was so amazing that I still remember my library card number: 1221. That card was my passport to the universe," she said. O'Toole said she read "constantly and indiscriminately" — everything from Dr. Seuss to Nancy Drew to the authors in her English literature class. And now O'Toole's books are among those on the library shelves.

How can one resist a writer like that? I didn't. Her fascinating portrayal of Henry Adams, the author of "The Education of Henry Adams," "Mont-Saint Michel and Chartres," and other historical works, and his exclusive circle of intimates are painted with great understanding and sympathy. The various personages involved are his unstable wife, the talented photographer, Clover Hooper; John Hay, a noted statesman and biographer of Abraham Lincoln, and Hay's wife, Clara; and, finally, Clarence King, the peripatetic scientist and entrepreneur. They eventually formed the habit of meeting regularly in the Adams' study at five o'clock for tea which often stretched into dinner and late into the night. "Delighted with their delight in each other, the friends sealed their bond with a name: 'The Five of Hearts,'" O'Toole writes.

Though the book is full of historical events that took place in the United States during the period 1880-1915, Adams, Hay, King and their wives remain prominently in focus. O'Toole skillfully presents her main characters against the backdrop of national and foreign affairs, and we are shown the important role the group played in the unrolling drama of history. She is a historian with a true grasp on historical sources, but yet she possesses a novelist's flair for exposing character, all of which leads the reader to a proper perspective of the era as well as an appreciation of the people involved.

Another Michigan author deserving of good notice is Kathleen Stocking. Her beautifully written collection of pieces, "Letters from the Leelanau," first came out a couple of years ago, and I look forward to seeing more of her work in the future. She writes poetically of the Leelanau Peninsula, a slender jut of land near Traverse City, where she spent her growing-up years amid the undulating sand of the Sleeping Bear Dunes. She imaginatively claims that "the Leelanau Peninsula has often been compared to the mythical Isle of Avalon, that place off the coast of England where fairies live, summer is eternal, and King Arthur still holds court in Camelot. The kind of place where you could pull the sword Excaliber from the stone."

Stocking admires the independence of the inhabitants of this rugged, largely untamed land: "They are doing less with less. They are learning to be self-sufficient. In a benign way, they are doing what some urban folks are trying to do with the caches of guns and food: preparing to survive on their own." These people are also battling the federal government's underhanded attempts to seize their property in order to create a national park. Stocking applauds the courage of the residents and their stubborn tenacity in hanging on to their land against the persistent encroachment of both government agents and tourists who swarm in heavier numbers each year.

Among all her entrancing chapters, there is one that particularly grabs my attention, Rimwalking, which tells of authors, past and present, who have discovered the Leelanau Country, and have written about it in stories, poems, and plays. Of special interest to me was the mention of Elizabeth Howard Mizner, a writer of historical romances for teen-age girls, because I once knew her when she lived in Detroit with her father, mother, and brother. She was a gentle spinster whose kind eyes twinkled behind spectacles while I, a tongue-tied youngster, too abashed to say much, admired her from a respectful distance. Jim Harrison, Larry Woiwode, and many others, too, felt the magic spell of the Leelanau.

In an amusing paragraph that pretty well describes my own predicament at times, Stocking declares that "ostensibly I am a writer and I work at home, but since I do work at home, other things weave into this. While I am trying to think of how to begin something, I empty the ashes in the wood stove and fold laundry. If I still can't think of anything, I go for a walk. Usually finding distractions is not a problem, because when you work at home people drop by all the time on the assumption that writing isn't really work, and since you're writing, you aren't busy doing anything else. I think this is about right."

Both O'Toole and Stocking, as Michiganders, have done us proud. The one, a historian, and the other, an essayist, have crafted two world-class books worthy of inclusion in any library. Although I discovered them a bit late, it is never too late to enjoy books of enduring value.

'Cradle' is a somber thriller of revenge

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world" is a saying that has cheered the hearts of mothers during the down days of teething, colic and late-night feedings.

However, the hand that rocks the cradle in the film of the same name has another, more personal goal. She wants to destroy a secure and happy household.

Clare Bartel (Annabella Sciorra), her husband Michael (Matt McCoy) and their 5-year-old daughter, Emma (Medeline Zima), are a happy, close-knit Seattle family whose storybook homelife is about to be torn apart.

Clare is expecting a baby. Their days begin with Mike singing as he shaves, while Emma gazes adoringly at him before they are called to breakfast by Clare. Then he's off to the laboratory. Clare puts Emma on the school bus and her day at home begins.

After Clare delivers a healthy baby boy, it is decided that a nanny be hired to help out while she works on a long-nurtured dream. She wants to build a greenhouse. An ad is placed in a local newspaper. The candidate who appears at her door is Peyton (Rebecca De Mornay).

She appears to be a perfect choice. She is young and pleasant, and her declaration that she loves babies rings true. Clare is enchanted by her and considers herself lucky to have her.

What she doesn't know is that Peyton has another motive for seeking the job. Because of a supposed wrong Clare did her, Peyton single-mindedly sets out to destroy the happy family — one member at a time.

The odd note in this dour thriller is Peyton who, for all her malevolent intentions, is a sympathetic character. The fact that she, through no fault of her own, was deprived of motherhood which she so earnestly desired helps us to understand how she was driven over the edge and succumbed to a psychotic urge to seek revenge against the woman she blamed for her loss.

"The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" trades on a current and sensitive subject that concerns mothers who bring in an outsider to care for their children. Because of that, it is likely to attract women audiences.

Yet it is threaded with enough surprises and is so downright scary that it should be appeal to a general audience.

Donna Williams and Dan Welcher appear in Alice Childress' comedic-drama, "Trouble in Mind," at the Bonstelle Theatre Jan. 24 - Feb. 2. Performances are Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 2 p.m. For tickets and information, call 577-2960.

Visit Meadow Brook Hall

For the ultimate mini-trip, luxuriate overnight in auto baron opulence at Meadow Brook Hall March 10-11. Experience the gracious lifestyle that was part of manor home living in the 1920s.

Completed in 1929 at a cost of $54 million, the craftsmanship, household appointments and art treasures in the Hall are now priceless and irreplaceable.

Planned activities include a guided tour of the home, a book lecture, walking lecture on the "Care and Identification of Antiques," description of the Wilson Dodge china, glass and linens on display. There is also a tour of the grounds, barns, greenhouse and Knole Cottage as well as a movie about Meadow Brook Hall. This beautiful mansion embodies the riches and history of an age that is gone forever.

The trip is $190 a person double occupancy; $180 single occupancy. (Rooms for singles have wash basin in the room and share a bath in the hall.) The package price includes motorcoach, one night accommodation, all meals and special lectures. Reservation deadline is Feb. 1. Call the Grosse Pointe War Memorial at 881-7511 for more information.

To Russia, with love

Let the War Memorial be your cultural connection to St. Petersburg (formerly Leningrad) Russia and Helsinki, Finland, this April 24 to May 1. Ask questions and find out the details of this trip on Jan. 29, at 6:30 p.m. at the War Memorial.

Visit the recently renamed St. Petersburg, the cultural center for music, art, theater, ballet, literary salons and the glittery court life of Imperial Russia.

This city was the hub of the lavish, reckless social milieu immortalized by Pushkin, Dostoyevsky, Tolstoy and Turgenyev. Almost inevitably, it was also the Cradle of the Revolution. St. Petersburg is relatively young for a European city of such rich cultural and political heritage but what happened here has changed the course of world history.

Visit Helsinki on the second leg of the journey. This city is surrounded by water on three sides, its gleaming white buildings have earned it the additional title, "White City of the North." The skyline is accented by the imposing dome of the Lutheran cathedral and the onion domes of the Russian Orthodox church. Helsinki is a place to see modern architecture at its best; the Finnish nation is world renowned for its achievements in modern design.

Trip highlights in St. Petersburg include: four nights in the most famous hotel in town, Hotel Astoria, a theater performance, city tour, and out-of-city tour to visit Pushkin Village, tour of the great masterpieces of the famed Hermitage Museum and a farewell gala dinner at a typical Russian restaurant.

The Helsinki trip highlights include two nights at the deluxe Strand Inter-Continental, city tour and a card for unlimited city transportation and museum admissions. Optional excursions are available.

The trip also includes round trip air from Detroit, six breakfasts, three lunches, two dinners plus St. Petersburg farewell dinner. The cost is $1,799 a person double occupancy; $350 single supplement. Deposit is $500. Price is based on an estimated Detroit/New York airfare and is subject to change. Payment in full is due Feb. 14. Call the Grosse Pointe War Memorial at 881-7511 for a travel flier.

'Private Lives' trip scheduled

Enjoy lunch at the beautiful English Tudor mansion of Meadow Brook Hall prior to the 2 p.m. performance of Noel Coward's "Private Lives" on Wednesday, April 8. The Grosse Pointe War Memorial sponsored day trip departs at 10:45 a.m. and returns to the War Memorial at 6 p.m.

"Private Lives," his most popular play, is a story of two people, once married to each other, who are now re-married.

By chance they meet again during their new honeymoons. The fire of their love is rekindled and what happens next is Coward at his very best. This class act satire is a sophisticated comedy with plenty of glitz.

Reservations should be made by March 2. A fee of $43 a person includes motorcoach, lunch and theater ticket. Call the Grosse Pointe War Memorial at 881-7511 for more information.

Get that screenplay finished

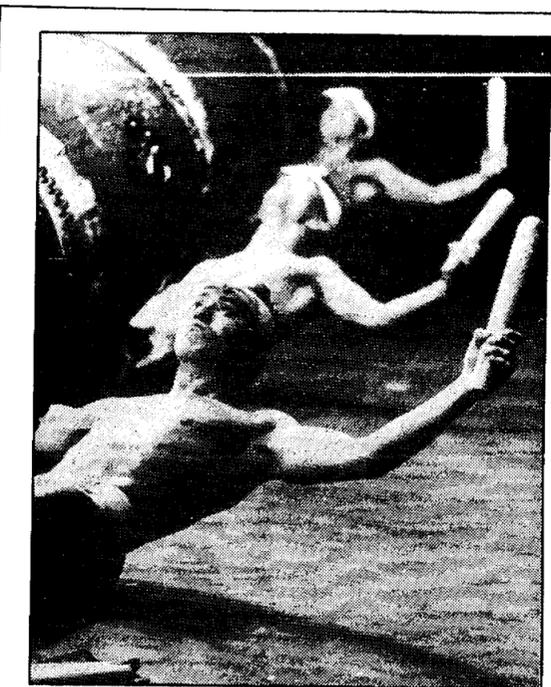

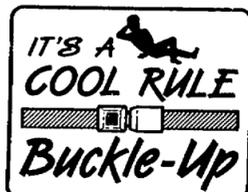

Cranbrook P.M., a program of continuing education and outreach, presents the winter/spring session of Emmy award-winning producer and writer Harvey Ovshinsky's screenwriters' workshop.

The group will gather at Thornlea House, the former estate of Henry Booth, beginning Thursday, Jan. 30, at 7 p.m. for meetings once a month for four months and twice during May and June.

Called "How to Complete Your Script in Six Months," the course is designed for aspiring screenwriters who have not completed a script and feel the need for more direction and motivation. It also affords the opportunity to learn from a support network. Former students have given this workshop high praise.

Fee for the course is $300 for the six-month session with $100 non-refundable deposit which will ensure registration. Enrollment is limited and early inquiry is suggested. Call Cranbrook P.M. at 645-3635.

A different drum

Kodo, the Japanese percussion company whose performances have electrified audiences on five continents, performs on drums including the traditional Japanese drum "taiko" and the 900-pound carved "o-daiko" at Macomb Center for the Performing Arts at 7 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 2. Tickets are $20 for adults and $18 for students and senior citizens and may be obtained at the center's box office or charged to Visa/MasterCard by calling 286-2222, Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Macomb center is located on the center campus of Macomb Community College at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

The tender coming-of-age comedy is set after the turn of the century. Nine men and six women of all ages, including one child are needed. For more information, or to obtain a script before auditions, call Mary Stutt at 885-1356.

BEFORE-YOU-GO-PLANNING

Advice given by Aesop in a fable 25 centuries ago makes real sense for the traveler headed for Europe this season.

"It is thrifty to prepare today for the wants of tomorrow." Veteran travelers feel the same way. They have learned from experience that before-you-go-planning on the basics can mean savings in time, money and general wear-and-tear on the nervous system.

If you are a do-it-yourself traveler, it's a good idea to have confirmed hotel reservations, at least for the first city on your itinerary. That will get you off on an upbeat note. It's best, however, to let a professional travel agent arrange the details of your trip. This can save you time and even money.

Valuable lesson's in the cards

I've always subscribed to the theory that a person should never do today what he can put off until tomorrow.

Who knows, tomorrow may never come. Once I put off doing a story for the Red Wings' program and the player I was supposed to do the feature on was traded. I saved myself a day's work that time.

I don't usually rake the leaves until they're all off the tree. Maybe if I wait there will be a windy day, they'll all blow off the lawn and the folks down the street can rake them.

I've been burned a few times, too. Last week was one of those occasions.

I was wandering through a baseball card show, trying to forget about the foot of snow and near-zero temperatures outside. If the 1992 baseball cards are out, spring can't be far behind, right?

While I was deciding which of the new sets I should try to complete first, I noticed a box of the Topps Archives cards. In case you're having as much trouble as I am keeping up with all the card sets on the market these days, that's a reprint of the 1953 Topps set.

I asked the dealer how much he was selling the box for and I couldn't believe his reply. One hundred ten dollars!

Before Christmas I went to a similar show and the Archives cards were going for $50 a box. But with the holidays coming up I decided to wait before buying them. It might have been difficult to explain to my wife that part of her Christmas was the pleasure of watching me open a couple boxes of '53 reprint cards.

So I put off buying the cards. I thought I might even get a better deal after the holidays.

Was I wrong!

Now it's going to be even tougher to explain where $200 went. It reminds me of another experience I had collecting cards.

About 20 years ago I saw an advertisement in a magazine for a mint set of 1952 Topps cards for $150 dollars.

That would have eaten up a pretty good chunk of my paycheck at the time, so I decided to wait. I could always pick up the set a few years later when things weren't as tight.

Anybody who knows anything about baseball cards can figure out the rest.

That same set of 1952 cards costs at least $40,000 today. My only chance of getting one is to win the lottery.

Maybe one of these days I'll learn my lesson. But don't count on it.

South improves in easy win

By Chuck Klönke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's basketball team didn't allow itself to fall into a trap against a struggling Fraser squad.

"We felt that we had to improve in a number of areas, because we had a couple games around Christmas in which we didn't execute well," said coach George Petrouleas after the Blue Devils beat Fraser 66-42 in a Macomb Area Conference White Division game.

"We felt our execution improved against Fraser," Petrouleas continued. "We took a step forward and it's easy to take a step backward in a game like that."

South had little trouble against the Ramblers, who have won only once this season.

The Blue Devils scored the last 10 points of the first quarter to open a 16-4 lead. Fraser came back with a six-point run at the start of the second period, but the Ramblers never threatened again.

South led 27-13 at halftime and the Blue Devils outscored Fraser 15-0 at the beginning of the second half to open a 42-13 advantage. Mike McLaughlin, who led South with 19 points, hit six straight free throws in the second-half spurt.

"We've been emphasizing defense because of the carryover it has on offense," Petrouleas said. "You can get some easy baskets on the transition and when you're playing tough defense, it forces the other team into mistakes."

That was the case against Fraser as the Ramblers made nine turnovers in the first quarter and had several more during South's early spurt in the second half.

Aaron Letscher and Matt Recht each scored nine points for the Blue Devils, as all but one player broke into the scoring column. Jason Donkin topped Fraser with 17 points.

Blair Hess pulled down six rebounds and David Ptasznik and Scott Lupo each grabbed five for South, which improved to 5-2.

Petrouleas said he was pleased with his team's assist total.

"We had nine players with at least one assist," he observed. "That means we were moving the ball around and doing what we wanted to do on offense."

The Blue Devils' game at Anchor Bay, which was postponed by the snowstorm, will be made up on Feb. 4.

Deep bench creates a pleasant dilemma

Grosse Pointe North's George Olman has a problem a lot of high school basketball coaches would love to have.

"We have a deep bench this year and it's hard to get all the kids as much playing time as I'd like," said Olman, whose Norsemen beat Romeo 51-46 in their only Macomb Area Conference White Division action last week.

"It's a nice problem, but it's a problem just the same. Matt Peters has played real well, but I haven't been able to work him into the games as much as I'd like."

The Norsemen got a solid contribution off the bench from several players against Romeo, including Kurt Rheume, Dan Devlin, Mike Haskell and Matt Westbrook.

Rheume scored seven points, including a pair of three-point goals, and Devlin and Haskell each connected on his only three-point attempt. Westbrook pulled down six rebounds.

"Those kids aren't starting, but they keep working hard in practice," Olman said.

North, which held a 26-21 halftime lead, fell behind 37-36 after three quarters. The game stayed tight through the first five minutes of the fourth quarter before the Norsemen pulled away. North, which hit nine of 15 free throws in the game, made four of five down the stretch.

Adam Lowry led North with 20 points, including 12 in the first half, and he collected 13 rebounds. Adam Korzeniewski had six points and seven rebounds.

Olman praised the defensive effort turned in by Brian Van Tiem, who guarded Romeo's Jason Boron most of the game and helped hold him to nine points.

"Brian has been playing great defense," Olman said. "He doesn't have to score as long as he holds down the other team's top scorer."

North's game with Sterling Heights Ford, which was postponed last Tuesday, has been rescheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 25.

South skaters notch two victories

By John Miskelly
Special Writer

There was a little bit of everything for spectators attending the Grosse Pointe North-Grosse Pointe South hockey game last week.

There was a pep band, courtesy of North. An octopus, which failed to make it on the ice surface, appeared. There were numerous bouncing balls, following the first North goal, and one mini-skirmish.

That's the nature of the North-South rivalry.

When it was over, the Blue Devils emerged with a 5-3 victory.

"It took us a while to start playing the system we work on in practice," said South coach

John LaLonde. "I thought North played well, but we could put more people on the ice than they could. At the end of the game we told our kids to lean on them and make them work a little harder because they had the short bench."

North scored twice late in the first period to lead 2-1. South's Brian Crane opened the scoring with a goal from defenseman David Tucker at the four-minute mark, but the Norsemen's Bill Bufalino tied the score with 1:42 remaining and Brian Quinn put North in the lead 32 seconds later.

Crane scored his second goal on a power play early in the second period to knot the score at 2-2.

"When we get penalties it hurts drastically," said North coach Dan Abraham.

The Blue Devils went ahead to stay two minutes later when Kevin Brennan took an excellent head-man pass from Marcel Chagnon and blistered a shot past North goalie Chuck Schervish. South netminder Jason Hall also drew an assist on the goal.

South scored its third goal of the period when junior forward Paul Haddad took a centering pass from Todd Frederickson and put the puck in the net with a North player draped over him.

Each team scored in a penalty-filled third period. North's Quinn notched his second of the game with 49 seconds left on assists by Joey Sucher and Gary Corona.

Later, South improved its record to 9-3 with a 7-5 victory over Ann Arbor Huron.

"We played pretty good offense, but not much defense,"

Country Day surge spoils Knights' hopes

It took a strong closing spurt by defending state Class B champion Detroit Country Day to overcome a fine effort by the University Liggett School basketball team.

The Yellowjackets outscored the Knights 20-5 in the last six minutes and handed ULS a 58-41 defeat.

The Knights trailed 38-34 after three quarters and cut the lead to two points before Country Day put on its winning surge.

"We simply forgot our game plan and lost our heads," said ULS coach Chuck Wright. "We stopped being a team."

Country Day held a 22-17 halftime lead.

Senior Jason Drock led ULS with eight points, all of them in the third quarter. Junior David Martin and senior Ken Hubbard each scored seven points for the Knights, who fell to 3-4 with the defeat.

Being well-read is worth a goal to Knights' coach

By Chuck Klönke
Sports Editor

Reading the Grosse Pointe News was worth a goal to University Liggett School hockey coach John Fowler.

"I was reading the article on (Grosse Pointe) South's game with (Riverview) Gabriel Richard and noticed that South scored two shorthanded goals against them," Fowler explained. "I thought that we might be able to do something against their power play, too, so we put in a play and it worked just like we drew it on the board."

The Knights' Andy VanDeweghe scored the first of his two goals while killing a penalty, but it wasn't enough to save ULS from dropping a 5-4 decision to the Pioneers.

"We didn't capitalize on our chances in the last two periods like we did in the first," Fowler said.

ULS led 4-2 after one period, and had 16 shots in the second and third periods but couldn't score.

"You only have x-number of chances in a game and you can't let them slip away," Fowler said. "In the first period we cashed in on our four or five excellent opportunities."

Co-captain Bill Robb, playing his first game in more than a month after recovering from mononucleosis, opened the scoring for the Knights at 2:22 of the first period when Van-

Deweghe and Eric Kisskalt set him up for a slap shot from the high slot area.

VanDeweghe scored his shorthanded goal at 3:04 and notched his 12th goal of the season on a power play at 5:21. Gabriel Richard scored twice within 40 seconds, but ULS defenseman Nick Giorgio scored his first goal of the season late in the period on assists from Kisskalt and Alex Crenshaw.

The Pioneers scored with 14 seconds remaining in the second period to cut the Knights' lead to 4-3.

"That goal was the result of an error on our part," Fowler said. "We didn't dump the puck down the ice like we should have."

Richard tied the score at 6:19 of the third period and scored the winner on a power play after Matt Spicer was sent off for tripping on a questionable call with about two minutes remaining.

"It was a good game, just like the first one when we won 5-3," Fowler said. "Richard, Cranbrook and ourselves should battle it out in the regional."

Fowler praised several of his players.

"Tom Best had a great game in goal and our sophomore defense pair of Spicer and Jay Ricci had a strong game. It was good to get Robb back, too," Fowler said.

The Knights visit Flint Powers for a 6 p.m. game on Saturday, Jan. 25.

Two firsts help North

Keith Giannico had to share some of the spotlight with his Grosse Pointe North wrestling teammate Dan Skuce at last weekend's Norsemen Classic.

Giannico picked up his 100th high school victory in the championship match at 130 pounds and was named the Outstanding Wrestler of the tournament, but most weeks Skuce's performance would have been the one that coaches and competitors were talking about.

The Norsemen's 135-pounder won the championship with a pin at 4:27 against a Madison wrestler that had pinned him a week ago in the Troy Invitational.

"You won't find a more exciting match than the one Dan had," said North coach Art Roberts. "He wasn't going to let himself get caught in the headlock like he did last week."

Skuce was trailing 7-5 when he got a reversal and went right after the pin. Skuce's pin helped the Norsemen win a tight battle for second place in the 11-team meet.

Skuce, a senior, improved his record to 17-4 with his three pins in the tournament.

Giannico pinned his first two opponents, then posted a 12-1 victory over a Highland Park wrestler in the championship match at 130.

"The Highland Park kid came into the match 17-0," Roberts noted. "Keith just handled him from the start. It was 7-0 before he knew what happened."

Giannico's victory improved his record to 20-0 this season.

"It's nice to go into meets knowing that you don't have to worry about at least two of the weight classes," Roberts said.

North got a second-place finish from Tony Romolino at 145 pounds. Romolino pinned his first two opponents.

Dave Sandercott took third at 103 pounds and Brian Kerber finished third at 125. Both pinned their opponents in the consolation final.

"Brian wrestled real well," Roberts said. "He didn't make many mistakes."

Dave Zoltowski (112) and Dave Pierno (189) helped North to its runner-up trophy with fourth-place efforts.

Madison won the meet with 145 1/2 points. North had 114 and Oak Park was third with 110 points.

Earlier, North won a pair of dual meets, beating Cousino 39-30 and downing L'Anse Creuse 44-23.

Sandercott, Zoltowski, Giannico, Skuce and Mike Gagala each won two matches. North freshman Charlie Vasapolli posted his first varsity win at 112 pounds.

Lady Devils make comeback

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

There's a good news-bad news scenario with Grosse Pointe South's volleyball team.

"The good news is we're winning, but the bad news is we're not doing it in the correct fashion," said Lady Devils coach Cindy Sharpe, whose team improved to 13-1 overall and 3-0 in the Macomb Area Conference White Division last week with a 14-16, 15-9, 15-6 victory over Grosse Pointe North.

"Just because teams aren't ranked we have trouble getting up for them," Sharpe said. "And there are some good teams in the league that can beat us if we're not ready for them. Hopefully, we'll turn it around and start winning convincingly again."

South trailed 6-2 and 9-5 in the second game against North before settling down and taking the victory.

"We missed eight serves in the first game and only two in each of the last two games," Sharpe noted.

Another factor in the Lady Devils' improvement in the last two games was the play of Stephanie Coddens and Ashley Moran. Each of them had 10 kills and Moran played one of her best games of the season.

"Ashley did an excellent job of passing and picking up North's tips," Sharpe said. "She reads the hitters well and always is in the right spot."

Moran had 11 digs of North's tips.

Coddens served 14 points, Angela Drake had five kills and 11 blocks and Sue Faremouth collected 28 assists.

North coach Leslie Harwood was pleased with her team's performance against South.

"I thought we played real well against them," Harwood said. "They're ranked eighth in the state and we beat them in one game and had a 9-5 lead in the second."

North's Stephanie Gore had 33 hits, six kills and six blocks, four of them for points or sideouts. Missy Bania had 12 hits and two kills and Jenny Shapiro had 11 hits and two kills.

Tricia Campau had 32 sets, six assists and was 12 for 13 serving with two aces and eight points. Amy Sacka had 31 sets, four assists and was five for five serving. Melissa Drouillard was nine for 10 serving with six points.

"We have to bang the ball harder," Harwood said. "We have a lot of hits, but not enough kills."

Close miss for ULS swimmers

A fraction of a second was all that stood between University Liggett School's swimming team and its fourth straight victory.

The Knights dropped a 95-73 decision to Detroit Country Day and the difference was a pair of narrow victories in two relays by the Yellowjackets, who brought a 40-member team to swim against the 11-member ULS squad.

The ULS team of Jon Sieber, Beth Weyhing, Sean Gardella and Betsy Belenky was second in the 200-yard medley relay in 1:56.95. Country Day's winning time was 1:56.73.

It was the same story in the 200 freestyle relay, where the Knights' team of Sieber, Weyhing, Anita Warner and Belenky was clocked in 1:45.51 to Country Day's winning effort of 1:45.37.

Both performances were season's bests by the ULS relay teams, but they were outscored 10-4 in each event by the Yellowjackets.

Sieber won the 200 freestyle in 2:09.53 and set a ULS pool record with a winning time of 5:14.2 in the 500 freestyle.

Weyhing set a pool record with a 1:03.68 to win the 100 butterfly and Belenky, a freshman, set a girls varsity record in winning the 200 individual medley in 2:24.

Freshman Anne Petz was second in the 100 backstroke in 1:09.36, Gardella was runner-up in the 100 breaststroke with a season-best 1:15.29 and Belenky took second in the 100 butterfly in 1:05.

Earlier, the Knights had 11 first places in a 103-66 victory over South Lake and swept the three relays in a 97-73 triumph over Marine City.

Sieber won the 500 and 200 freestyle events against South Lake in 5:45.32 and 2:02.69, while Warner was runner-up in each of the events, posting times of 5:54.61 and 2:11.58.

Gardella won the 100 breaststroke in 1:18.11 and took the 100 freestyle in 1:03.57.

Weyhing led a 1-2 finish with Belenky in the 100 butterfly with a winning time of 1:04.02. Belenky was second in 1:04.07. Weyhing won the 50 freestyle in 26.45 and Belenky was first in the 200 individual medley, with a winning margin of more than 10 seconds.

Senior Katie Tompkins won the 100 backstroke in 1:12.44 and was second in the 100 freestyle.

Petz and Andrew Dempz were key members of the three winning relay teams in the South Lake meet.

Against Marine City, Belenky, Petz, Warner, Gardella, Sieber, Weyhing and Tompkins were members of the winning relay teams.

Sieber and Warner finished 1-2 in both the 500 and 200 freestyle events.

Belenky won the 200 individual medley in 2:25.10 and Petz was third in 2:38.96.

Weyhing and Belenky finished 1-2 in the 100 butterfly and Weyhing was first and Dempz third in the 50 freestyle.

Gardella won the 100 freestyle in 1:02.08 and was second in the 100 breaststroke. Zhenyu Zhu was fourth in the breaststroke.

Tompkins took a second in the backstroke.

South matmen divide two league matches

Grosse Pointe South's wrestling team divided a pair of Macomb Area Conference White Division matches last week.

The Blue Devils beat Warren Woods-Tower 39-33, then dropped a 37-29 decision to Romeo.

South had some impressive performances in the Romeo meet. Sophomore Scott Olzmann, a first-year wrestler, posted a 5-4 victory at 103 pounds.

"He's been doing well for us," said coach Larry Carr.

Other victories for the Blue Devils came from Paul Kelley, a 10-6 decision at 119 pounds; Mark Francese, a 36-second pin at 125; Scott Cairo, a 17-2 decision at 145; Rich Reynolds, a fall in 49 seconds at 189; and a pin in 1:03 by heavyweight Don Leal.

Len Cugliari took a 6-4 decision at 130 pounds and Jesse Culver had a 50-second pin at 171 for South's victories against Woods-Tower in a match that had several voids.

South also had a fourth-place finish from Kelley in the West Bloomfield Invitational last weekend.

"We didn't wrestle badly, but the results just weren't there," Carr said.

Foreign foe ousts North

It took a team from another country to knock Grosse Pointe North's volleyball team out of the Wayne State University Invitational last weekend.

The Lady Norsemen reached the semifinal round before bowing to Windsor Brennan by scores of 15-5 and 15-6.

"The scores really don't tell how well we played," said North coach Leslie Harwood. "We let them get the jump on us and had trouble coming back."

North lost twice to West

Bloomfield, the fourth-ranked Class A team in the state in pool play, but beat Detroit Western, Dearborn Heights Annapolis and Hamtramck Immaculate Conception two games apiece to finish second in the pool.

The Lady Norsemen then overpowered Redford in two straight games in the quarterfinals.

"Our serving was good all day," Harwood said. "We missed only 17 serves."

Harwood had praise for several of her players.

"Our starters all played well, but so did two of our role players," the coach said. "Buffy Miriani specializes in back row play and we'd bring her in whenever someone was struggling. She did a wonderful job of playing her role totally. Felicia Paluzzi came in when one of the starters got hurt and did a good job of passing, setting and playing in the front row."

North improved to 11-4 in match play with the tournament performance.

South victory features sprint duel

Grosse Pointe South coach Fred Michalik knew how to get Tim Jogan and Andy Walter some good competition. He had them swim against each other in the 50-yard freestyle.

"They don't like to get beat by each other, so I knew they'd both swim well," Michalik explained after the Blue Devils' 116-64 victory over Fraser in a Macomb Area Conference American Division meet. "They both just missed the state cut."

The Jogan-Walter duel was the highlight event of the meet as Jogan nipped his teammate by five-hundredths of a second. Jogan was clocked in 22.78 and Walter in 22.83.

Jogan made his state qualifying time in the 100 freestyle with a winning time of 49.13. He also swam on two winning relays.

Although South posted its second straight conference victory, Michalik still had some concerns.

"Patrick Ollison might have a rotator cuff problem and Peter Mertz is out with a bad knee," Michalik said. "We don't have a real big team so it hurts whenever you lose somebody like that."

Ollison won the 200 freestyle in 1:57.52 and he and Matt Milliken finished 1-2 in the 500 freestyle. Ollison's winning time was 5:18.39 and Milliken's runner-up effort of 5:19.96 was his best of the season.

Rob Bacon won the 200 individual medley in 2:21.24 and took first in the 100 breaststroke in 1:08.61. Teammate Chris Jeffries gave South a 1-2 finish in the breaststroke with his 1:09.83 clocking.

Chad Hepner continued his superb work in diving with a score of 235.05 points.

Brenn Schoenherr, Jeffries, Walter and Jogan won the 200 medley relay in 1:45.52 and Jogan, Norman Rice, Walter and Tim Harmount took first in the 200 freestyle relay with a 1:34.86.

Michalik also praised the performance of freshman Kyle Zeller, who was second in the 100 butterfly in 1:09.08.

LaLonde said. "We can't afford to play like that against the Trentons or Livonia Stevensons."

South came out of the first period tied 2-2 on the first of Crane's three goals and the first of two by Tom Rajt.

Brennan scored the only goal of the second period to give the Blue Devils a 3-2 lead and South broke the game open in the final period on Rajt's second goal, two by Crane and one by Chagnon.

"We played excellent defense in the second period, but then there wasn't much offense," LaLonde said. "The third period was just the opposite of the second. It was a difficult game because there were so many penalties. It was hard to get into the flow of the game."

Rajt and Kevin Watt each had two assists, while Dave Auld, Ted Hanawalt, Chagnon, Crane, Brennan and Jim Andary each had one.

The two victories last week boosted South into fourth place in the state Class A coaches' poll.

"It's nice to get the recognition, but it doesn't mean anything else," LaLonde said. "We still have to keep working hard to keep improving."

Home innovations make the difference for handicapped living

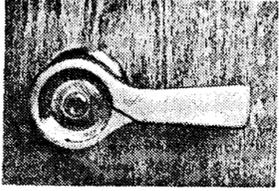

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

For many people approaching old age, the little things make life difficult.

Aging bones and muscles make climbing stairs a chore. Arthritis means turning a door-knob is hard. And taking a bath is more work than pleasure.

But as America's population grows older, manufacturers and builders are finding innovative ways that make staying at home an option over a nursing home.

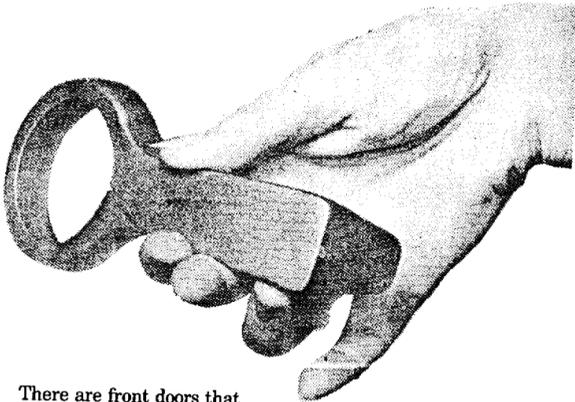

"More and more people want to stay in their homes, and they have a lot of options now," said Greg Plouff, president of Albert D. Thomas Inc., a Grosse Pointe Farms construction company that recently added a division to its corporation to serve the needs of the aging and physically handicapped.

"There are a lot of new innovations and a lot of people who are not in a wheelchair, but who still may need help and aren't aware of what's out there," he added.

For instance: A product called Handi Lever can be installed around each doorknob in a house, creating a lever that can be easily pulled to open or close a door.

"A lot of people will know that they can install a ramp to get someone to the front door," Plouff said. "But what happens when you get them to the top of the steps?"

There are front doors that operate like a garage door opener, allowing easy access to the house.

New building codes are also making houses more accessible, Plouff said. They require things like wider doorways and halls.

"Probably the hardest room in the house for handicapped people is the bathroom," said Joseph Acey, vice president of Albert D. Thomas Inc. He's also in charge of the new handicap division. It's an area in which many interesting innovations are taking place.

There are faucets that can be installed that don't need to be turned on. They are pre-set to a certain temperature and the water flows when motion is detected beneath it. Other faucet types incorporate levers and bars to make washing hands and faces easier.

A countertop with an indentation will allow people to wheel their chairs closer to the sink.

But then there's bathing. A new product called BathEase makes it easy for people to get in and out of the bathtub and shower. A door is installed in the side of the tub allowing a person to walk into the tub/shower area. The door closes and a lever locks the patented no-leak door into place. It comes with optional hand rails and even a whirlpool.

Showers which can hold a wheelchair, showers with seats or hand-held showers all can be installed to make using a bathroom easier.

Toilets can be adapted with special seats that make it easier for those confined to a wheelchair to slide onto them.

In the bedroom, shelves in a closet can be adjusted to make them more accessible and shoe racks can be installed off the floor so too much bending is eliminated.

Stairs are a particular problem, but can be handled in several ways from a $3,000 to $4,000 chair lift to a $20,000 elevator. The company has even adapted a chair lift so someone was able to use the family pool.

Kitchen renovations may include lower countertops, a refrigerator with a freezer on the bottom, and ovens or stoves with knobs down front.

There are kitchen cabinets that work like elevators — if you can't reach the top shelf, bring the top shelf down to you with the push of a button.

Medicare may pay for some renovations for people who get a prescription from their doctor. The government offers grants for businesses.

"The need is there in the community," Acey said. "We want to serve our community and we're learning about new products every day. We work with the people to fit their needs and their budget."

For information on barrier-free living, call Albert D. Thomas Inc. at 882-0628.

WASHINGTON

Special features abound

Visitors to the Washington 3 may feel they are arriving at an Elizabethan inn.

The angle enclosed by the two wings of the building and its three-car garage forms a large courtyard. Stone facing, half timbered walls, and an overhanging second story provide a rustic Tudor look to this luxurious home.

From the inner foyer, the view is open back to the two-story windows of the vaulted pentagonal living room. Left, a hall leads to the large family room, utility room and the smaller of two downstairs baths. To the right is the formal dining room and the kitchen. The kitchen is practically a suite in itself, with breakfast nook, walk-in pantry, central vegetable sink and attached exterior deck.

Upstairs, the wing next to the garage has a large master suite that includes its own sitting room above the kitchen skylight, "his" and "hers" walk-in closets, and a bath with oversize tub. The opposite wing holds three bedrooms and a bath. Between the two wings is a unique space: a library on a balcony overlooking the vaulted living room. Structural beams support twelve-foot shelves and movable ladders.

Another special area of the Washington 3 is the downstairs den next to the garage. With its own entrance and proximity to the kitchen, garage, and larger downstairs bath, it provides a sanctuary for work or study removed from the bustle of the rest of the house.

For a study kit of the Washington 3 (228-03), send $7.50 to Today's Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, OR 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Architect gets Olympic hopefuls into warm water

By Amy Gray Light
AIA News Service

Canoe-racing enthusiasts John Anderson, AIA, and Scott Wilkinson long had eyed a 60-foot-wide, U-shaped concrete sluiceway that poured water from the Dickerson Power Plant back into the Potomac River in Montgomery, Md., a suburb of Washington, D.C. Anderson, an architect from northern Virginia, and Wilkinson, a freelance writer and musician from Ellicott City, Md., often paddled their canoes near the sluiceway because the water flowing back into the river had been warmed from the plant, where it was used to cool the turbines of the Potomac Electric Power Co.'s (Peppo) turbines.

Because of the canoeists' imagination and tenacity, the sluiceway was transformed, in just 90 days, into the first artificial white-water training course in the United States. Designed for U.S. Olympic team aspirants preparing for this year's games in Barcelona, the race course, which opened in November, already is being touted by athletes all over the world as possibly the best man-made course in existence.

Europe has had artificial courses since 1972, but (despite the fact that the U.S. team won in 1972) no manmade practice course had been built in this country. And because natural rivers are dissimilar to artificial courses that slosh around and are "bodily," practicing on rivers did not give American athletes the edge needed to compete in Olympic races held on artificial waters.

In late 1990, Anderson and Wilkinson brought this argument to Peppo, with the idea of creating a white-water training site out of the sluiceway. Peppo was intrigued by the concept, and eventually approved the canoeists' feasibility study. In August 1991, architect Anderson began working out technical problems and drafting the working drawings in his spare time. A former member of the U.S. white-water team until 1989, when he quit to pursue his architectural practice, Anderson was familiar with many of the artificial courses.

With input from an engineer friend and the U.S. team, Anderson designed a model that closely resembles the Barcelona course. The 70-foot-long plywood model, complete with running water and various obstacles, was constructed at the Navy's ship model basin nearby. After reviewing the model, Peppo approved the final project, and "we were off and running," says Anderson. "Because the water ordinarily isn't turned off at the plant, we were under strict time constraints to build the course in late October while the plant cut the water flow for scheduled maintenance."

Hoisted by a nine-ton crane donated by Williams Industries, 72 concrete mounds weighing from two to 20 tons each were placed in the water channel. Miller and Long Construction Co. built and placed the free-standing, hand-formed obstacles, and Genstar provided the concrete. The waterway was built up to drop 18 feet to the river and is precisely controlled, pumping 300,000 gallons of water a minute through the 900-foot-long course. The water remains close to 70 degrees, which will allow the athletes to practice without discomfort all winter.

For liability reasons, only Olympic trainees are allowed to use the facility. The nonprofit Bethesda Center for Excellence is responsible for maintaining and supervising the course and for raising funds to repay the construction costs.

Anderson hopes to see races on the course eventually and says the center will continue to expand its uses. With typical architectural foresight, he suggests that similar existing waterways in other urban areas could support recreational boaters and inner-tubers and at the same time bolster urban renewal projects.

Building a strong foundation

By Amy Light
AIA News Service

Public awareness in the past few years has focused on the importance of protecting our natural environment — trees, plants and animals and clean air and water. While this concern is laudable and necessary, it tends to neglect a crucial aspect of the environmental puzzle, namely the "built environment."

The built environment — our architecture and its indoor spaces — is where we spend 90 percent of our time, so much time that we tend to take buildings for granted. To help people appreciate the importance of architecture, in terms of preserving our rich heritage and promoting environmental health and well-being, the American Architectural Foundation (AAF) serves as a link between the public and the architectural profession. Founded in 1957, the AAF is headquartered in the historic Octagon House in the nation's capital.

At the local level, there are some 50 architectural foundations across the country committed to educating the public about the built environment, and to bringing this awareness to the forefront through a variety of seminars, films, lectures, books, and exhibitions. One of the largest and most traditional of these is the Foundation for Architecture in Philadelphia. John Higgins, executive director of the organization, counts among its more successful programs: walking tours throughout the city, led by trained volunteers; a public lecture series focusing on Philadelphia's designed environment; and a curriculum-based educational program for first-grade through high school students. Implemented in 50 schools a year, the program reaches an estimated 3,000 students and has a long waiting list of schools and architects interested in taking part.

Advocacy programs sponsored by the foundation include a city-funded design competition for new food vending carts on Philadelphia streets; awards for designs of affordable housing; and forums on subjects of public interest, such as low-cost housing. One of the most exciting ways the Philadelphia Foundation raises much of its operating funds is by holding an annual beaux-arts ball. These elegant black-tie and costume events, some of the largest of their kind in the United States, take place in unfinished buildings, which offer the 100,000 square feet necessary to throw a party of that size.

If the Philadelphia Foundation is typical of architectural foundations, the Boston Foundation for Architecture, created in 1984, is an anomaly. Executive Director Richard Fitzgerald explains: "We looked at other models, and because Boston already had several worthwhile, non-profit community groups related to the built environment and architecture, we thought it would be more appropriate to strengthen these existing programs than to develop a competing one. We're a conduit, raising money in the architectural community and passing it through to other non-profit groups dedicated to public awareness of the built environment."

The Boston foundation shares the belief that the primary audience for environmental education should be children, and offers grants to local schools. It also brings the public in contact with the architectural profession by funding community-level projects that include lecture series, public television programs and film projects. "We try to help people understand and believe what architects believe in, which is that the way we design our living environment is important and has profound effects on our lives," says Fitzgerald. "Good design is not a luxury, but a necessity."

If you would like to learn more about the "other" environment, contact the American Architectural Foundation or your local chapter of the American Institute of Architects for information about the architectural foundation and the program nearest you.

LOVABLE dogs and cats need good homes. For adoption information call: Northern Suburbs Animal Welfare League Volunteer. 754-8741, 464-4984

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY OR NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

WE WILL BE HAPPY TO PROVIDE ADVICE as well as a LIST OF ECONOMIC SERVICE SOURCES

Preparing for the Big Sale

Selling your home takes much more effort than just putting a "For Sale" sign in the yard. It takes planning, a little hard work and perhaps a little luck. A good rule of thumb is to follow the Four Cs: Common Sense, Clutter, Cleanliness and Color. Here are some guidelines to help you put the Four Cs to work for you:

Common Sense is very important when selling your home. People can't picture your house as their home if your personal belongings are too predominant. Put away all personal art, photographs or objects which may distract the buyer.

Repair all damaged or worn-out items, such as broken doorbells, leaky faucets, squeaky door hinges and burnt-out light bulbs.

Hang clean towels in bathrooms and put out a fresh bar of soap before showing the house.

Clutter is something that gives potential buyers a bad impression of your house. If you can't avoid clutter, they may feel the house is too small for them to live uncluttered, too. Check out these ideas:

- Remove dead and overgrown shrubs, trees and potted plants.
- Clear the yard by putting away gardening equipment such as hoses and rakes, bicycles, toys and sports equipment.
- Set aside all unnecessary knick-knacks, books and personal items which serve no design purpose for the room.
- Don't leave any newspapers or magazines sitting out.

- Put all countertop appliances out of view.
- Never leave dirty dishes in the sink, on the countertop or in other living areas.
- Remember, people will be looking in the closets, so keep them uncluttered, too.
- Consider storing unnecessary items in rental storage to make your house seem more spacious and uncluttered.

Cleanliness is an important factor that gives prospects an idea of how you have maintained your home. Here are some tips:

- Sweep and pressure-clean driveways, walkways, rooftops and stucco walls. Think about resealing the driveway.
- Clean or perhaps paint the exterior or siding, gutters, trim, stucco and mailbox.

- Repair wooden or wrought-iron railings.
- Clean, repair or replace windows, screens, doormats and exterior lights.
- Dust off plants, baseboards, ceiling fans and ceiling corners.
- Check for cobwebs in the entry foyer and on chandelier.
- Clean drapes, carpets, wallpaper and walls.
- Straighten up kitchen cabinets, medicine cabinets, closets and storage areas (and don't forget the garage).
- Remove all odors caused by pets, mildew and heavy perfumes. Prospects should only smell a clean, fresh house.

Color is an important selling feature both inside the house and outside. Consider these ideas:

- Throw a few colorful pillows on a drab sofa.
- Plant colorful flowers and plants at the front entry.
- Dye old, faded curtains with a new color.
- Add shutters and awnings to spruce up windows.
- Brighten the interior and give the illusion of more space by painting your walls and ceilings a light color.
- Put a fresh coat of paint on the exterior siding, trim or stucco.

Following the Four Cs can be the key to selling your house. Take some time to plan what needs to be done and then put your plan in action—you'll be seeing a "Sold" sign in no time!
