Rollerbladers: All suited up and nowhere to skate

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Strap on a pair of in-line skates, commonly known as rollerblades, and you have a difficult decision to make: where to skate.

Skate on the street, where the pavement is smooth, and you're breaking the law.

Skate on the sidewalk, where it's legal, and you could trip and fall, due to cracks in the cement.

Some people think that's an ethical dilemma rollerbladers shouldn't have to confront.

"I think the law should be changed so that rollerbladers can ride in the street," said Nancy Abdulrauf, a resident of Grosse Pointe City who was shopping on Kercheval in the Village. "Well, maybe not all streets. I mean, on Kercheval and Mack it would be absurd, but as long as they stay by the curb and obey traffic signs, it would be all right."

The Grosse Pointe News conducted a random poll of people in the Village last Thursday, and of the 10 Grosse Pointers who agreed to stop and talk, all of them either shared Abdulrauf's sentiment, or said they have had no problems with rollerbladers.

"I think it depends on the area," said Pat Raveschot of Grosse Pointe Farms. "I know a lot of them ride in the parking lot at Windmill Pointe Park, and I think that's all right. And as long as they do what bikers do when they ride, I think rollerbladers should be allowed to ride in the street."

She said she is a member of the Easy Riders Bike Club, whose members ride together on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Sundays. Club members obey all traffic signs and signals, and they warn pedestrians by shouting that a bicycle is approaching on his or her right or left, she said.

"A lot of bicyclists and rollerbladers don't warn people that they're coming when they're on the sidewalk, and people can get hurt that way," she said. "But as long as they're courteous to drivers, I think they should be allowed on the street."

However, other people tell stories about how they "came this close to hitting a rollerblader" who was either "riding in the middle of the road" or who "came out of nowhere."

One man said he hates driving behind rollerbladers because the swaying motion they make with their legs is "hypnotic."

Grosse Pointe City, Farms, Park, Shores and Woods have all adopted, by local ordinance, a state law that prohibits pedestrians from walking, jogging, running and otherwise traveling in the street if a sidewalk is available.

Rollerbladers are considered pedestrians under that law, but bicyclists are not, according to police in the Grosse Pointes.

On streets where there is no sidewalk, rollerbladers may ride on the left side of the roadway, facing traffic, police said.

"That's just the opposite of bicyclists, who are supposed to ride on the right side of the road, with the flow of traffic," said Grosse Pointe Shores public safety chief Daniel Healy.

Other than sidewalks, there are no public places in the Grosse Pointes that have been designated for rollerblade use.

How strictly is the "no rollerblading in the street" law enforced?

"It's enforced fairly well, because we don't want people riding in the street; it's too dangerous," said Grosse Pointe Woods public safety director Jack Patterson.

However, another Jack Patterson, who is a lieutenant in Grosse Pointe Farms, said, "we usually just give people a warning, but if we see the same people all the time, then we issue them a violation."

Public safety officers in the other Grosse Pointes echoed his statement, but Healy added, "Rollerblading isn't much of a problem in Grosse Pointe Shores, because it's flat here. It's not hilly like it is in Grosse Pointe Farms. And because it's not a problem, we only pull people over when they're creating a nuisance, or impeding the flow of traffic."

The idea behind the "no rollerblading in the street" law is to protect rollerbladers from being hit by cars, and to prevent them from interfering with traffic, police said.

However, rollerblading on the sidewalk, where it is legal, can also be dangerous, said Dr. Michael McMillan, director of emergency medical services at Cottage Hospital in Grosse

Woods acts to bar dumping of refrigerants

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

The price of owning a refrigerator, freezer, air conditioner, water cooler, or anything else that uses "ozone depleting compounds" has gone up.

Or, more specifically, the cost of getting rid of these appliances once they are no longer useful has gone up, due to Section 608 of the federal Clean Air Act, which went into effect July 1.

The act prohibits refrigerant gases from being released into the atmosphere during the maintenance, servicing and disposal of refrigeration and air conditioning equipment.

Rather, the gases must be reclaimed and recycled; something the average homeowner can't do on his own because special equipment is needed to draw out and store the refrigerant without releasing it into the atmosphere.

Anyone convicted of releasing refrigerants into the atmosphere may be fined $25,000 by the Environmental Protection Agency, "and that's for a first offense; the fine is higher for subsequent offenses," said Philip Belcher, Grosse Pointe Woods acting city administrator.

To protect the city from liability under the act, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council on Monday adopted an emergency ordinance prohibiting the city's waste hauler (Efficient Sanitation Inc.) from picking up appliances that use refrigerant gases, unless the appliances have been tagged by an individual or organization approved by the EPA, certifying that the gases have been removed.

However, George Catlin, the Woods city attorney, said that to his knowledge, the EPA is still in the process of formulating a program to certify refrigeration specialists in the removal of refrigerants.

Until such a program is in place, the Woods will accept certificates from individuals or companies licensed by Michigan to perform refrigeration work, attesting that the refrigerants have been removed from an appliance.

The ordinance was put into effect immediately "for the preservation of the public health," the council said.

Now, when a resident wants to dispose of an air conditioner or refrigerator, he must call a state-licensed refrigeration specialist to remove the ozone-depleting gases from the system.

Once the gases have been removed, the resident can call the city's department of public works and request that the appliance be picked up for disposal. Such a request must be made at least 48 hours before the resident's regularly scheduled pickup, according to the new ordinance.

And, as always, the doors on

Ringling with Joy

Grosse Pointe Farms officially dedicated Joy Bells Park last Friday. On the corner of Grosse Pointe Boulevard and Moross, the park features the Joy Bells, a remnant from the Joy estate which stood on the corner of Kerby and Grosse Pointe Boulevard from 1929 until they were moved last year to the park. Grosse Pointe Memorial Church musical director William De Turk reconditioned the bells which will ring on the hour and Farms public safety officer Jack Fischer renovated the clock. More than 100 people showed up to watch former Mayor Joe Fromm and his wife Beverly cut the ribbon. The park is dedicated to Fromm who served on the Farms council for 18 years. The $57,000 cost, which included moving and renovating the clock and bells and landscaping, was paid for by the Farms council, the Farms Foundation and citizen contributions.

George R. Mikhail, a top surgeon in his field, is ageless.

At 77, he is still performing a highly specialized form of microscopic surgery and training other doctors in the technique.

He recently completed a 432-page book, "Mohs Micrographic Surgery," which is illustrated with 1,100 photos he took in a process called photomicrography.

And in March, he was presented a distinguished achievement award in Arizona by the American College of Mohs Micrographic Surgery and Cutaneous Oncology — the first time the award was given.

The Farms resident could slow down and take an extended cruise with his wife, Elizabeth, which he says he would like to do, but in the next breath, he says he wants to write another book.

In fact, he has learned to operate a home computer to make the process easier — and less expensive. He wrote his last book entirely in longhand, rising at 3 in the morning and writing until 6 or 7 when he left for the hospital.

He would bring the pages he had written on a legal pad to a secretary he hired who would type them at home in the evenings. In the morning she

Three-year-old Brooke Rigot of Farmington Hills strikes a spontaneous, natural pose for Nagler's camera. Getting low and using a telephoto lens to "fill the frame," gives impact to the portrait.

More on photographing children

Earlier, I've written about the ways of photographing children, possibly the most photographed of all subjects.

Today, I'll give you some more tips on how to capture those precious times of childhood on film.

Children are made for candid, so let's begin there. The unplanned and unexpected provide the opportunity for that exceptional photograph of your child. Candid allow your child to be spontaneous and do his or her own thing, resulting in positions and facial expressions that are a reflection of their own personalities.

The shot of 3-year-old Brooke Rigot does just that. It goes beyond a mere likeness of her. It brings out her vibrant personality. I used a 135mm telephoto lens to keep my distance yet still fill the frame. My shutter speed was fast enough to stop any sudden motion and the aperture was large enough to blur what could have been a distracting background.

I let Brooke do her own thing by peering through the rails on her deck. Her attention span with me was short so within seconds, she wasn't aware that I was there and a natural expression resulted.

Notice how I positioned myself on her level for a more pleasing perspective. Too often, people shoot down on kids resulting in unflattering angles. By getting low, you'll greatly improve your pictures.

Try predetermining exposure and even prefocusing so that you won't be fussing with the camera controls when that magic expression crosses your child's face.

What's the best lighting? Overcast skies as shown here.

Stereo gone

Someone broke into a car that was parked on the upper deck of the parking structure at Bon Secours Hospital on the night of June 28 and removed the vehicle's AM-FM stereo and cassette player, hospital security told Grosse Pointe City police.

5th tile in series features Mason School

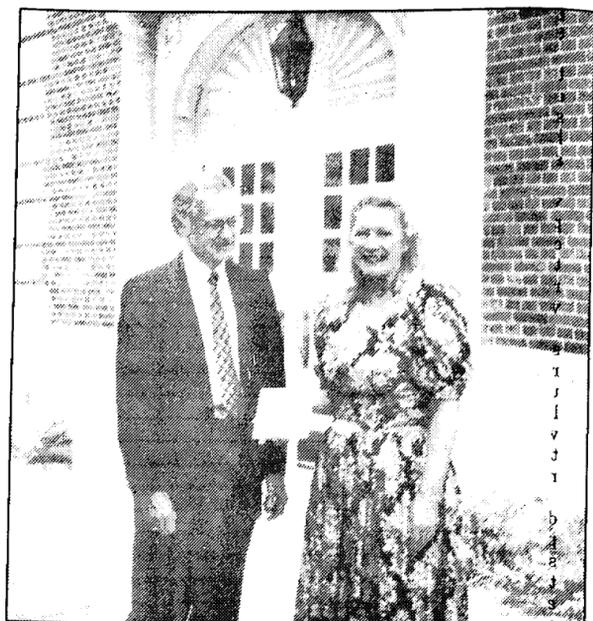

The fifth annual Grosse Pointe Woods commemorative ceramic tile has been introduced by the Grosse Pointe Woods Beautification Commission.

The first 1992 tile from the kiln, featuring the facade of the 63-year-old Mason School, was presented to Joan Mason, principal, by commission member Allen Dickinson during a graduation ceremony for fifth graders.

As in previous years, the sketch is the work of Grosse Pointe artist Wilma Urban.

For the first time, a limited number of earlier tiles of the Ghesquiere Park gazebo, the old Cook School, the Veterans Memorial Parkway and the Grosse Pointe Woods Municipal Building have also been reproduced to coincide with the introduction of the new tile.

The 6-inch tiles, which have become popular gift items, sell for $6 and are available at the counter of the Woods municipal building.

Allen Dickinson presents the first 1992 tile to Joan Mason, principal of Mason School.

Houses robbed

Three houses were robbed in Grosse Pointe Park recently.

In the first incident, someone entered an apartment in the 800 block of Beaconsfield through a front window, and left through the front door, carrying the victim's television and VCR, police said.

The second robbery occurred at a home in the 1300 block of Berkshire, sometime between 11 p.m. Wednesday, July 1 and 4:55 a.m. Thursday, July 2. The thief entered the home through a window after removing a screen, and stole the homeowner's purse.

A similar robbery occurred in the 1300 block of Balfour, between 1 a.m. and 5:45 a.m. Thursday, July 2.

Someone entered the home through a kitchen window that had been forced open, and took the homeowner's purse.

Park police have arrested a suspect who may be involved in the latter two cases.

The light is soft and natural on Brooke's face with no harsh shadows and squinty eyes. If it should be sunny, position yourself so that the child's back is to the sun and use fill flash to brighten the face.

If indoors, try natural light from a window. You may need a faster film but window light is beautiful and you'll capture a special mood in your shot.

By photographing children properly, you'll be able to record the spirit of youth that your family and friends will enjoy for a lifetime.

Students left holding the bag instead of a degree

By Maureen McNulty
Staff Writer

Regina Lindsey used to think that, despite tough financial circumstances, hard work and study would eventually enable her to accomplish her dream: attending law school.

But recently the D'Etre University student was told that perhaps only 15 of the 151 credit hours she earned from the now-defunct school will be recognized at an accredited university.

D'Etre University, a trade school specializing in business-related courses for low-income urban students, shut its doors last month on students who were in the midst of finishing their term and preparing for final exams.

David Friedrichs, the president of D'Etre University, apparently sold portions of the school's articles of incorporation to Walsh College in Troy, a respected business college, for about $100,000, according to a Walsh official.

D'Etre had been accused by the state of collecting state tuition grants, the school's main source of income, for non-existent students. Friedrichs announced the closing of the school before the state-appointed committee started its investigation.

The state Department of Education said that it did make a review of D'Etre's finances and it did not owe the state any money.

But the closing also comes just before an investigation by a special state committee into the quality of the institution.

"Several months ago, the Department of Education formed a state board of scholars to investigate and evaluate the quality of D'Etre," said Ron Root, director of higher education and management service for the state Department of Education.

That left Lindsey and about 80 other students and teachers in a state of chaos, wondering where to go from here. They were not even sure they would be permitted to finish classes they started last March and take their finals, which are scheduled to end this Saturday, or whether their coursework will count for anything, since the school ceased to exist before classes ended.

"We're afraid to leave the classrooms," said Lindsey, noting that since the charter was sold, classrooms were officially given up June 30. She said students have been sitting-in at the school 24-hours-a-day to prevent its computers from being taken while they were still needed to finish final projects and exams.

"We heard from the building's management people that everything is supposed to be out of here by July 1," said Lindsey. "But we need the computers to do our homework and we're staying here until we finish our finals or until we get some response from the Department of Education."

D'Etre, whose central business office is located at 377 Fisher Road in Grosse Pointe City, held its main courses at the Center for Professional Development (CPD) campus in the former S.S. Kresge headquarters on Second Avenue in downtown Detroit. D'Etre awarded bachelor's and master's degrees in areas such as business administration, computer science and automated office management.

The last time students and staff at the CPD campus saw Friedrichs was May 19, when he walked into classrooms and announced that there would be an "interruption of classes" but that the school was not closing, according to Akram Yunas, executive director of the CPD campus.

"I've attempted to get the administration to come to the campus and answer questions and offer counseling on evaluations and graduation," said Yunas. "But nothing's been done. The students and my office have tried to get in touch with anyone in Grosse Pointe, but their answering service is taking messages and their fax machine has been turned off. Everywhere else I've tried, all I get are answering machines. I've even been to the Grosse Pointe office myself and it's all

Repeated calls made to Friedrichs' Grosse Pointe office were fielded by an answering service. No calls were returned.

Yunas said he and the students have been receiving all of their information via mail, including finding out that the school was officially closing in June, over a month later than students at another one of D'Etre's campuses, in Southfield, were informed.

"The campus is functioning, yet we're not sure if the university still exists or if these grades mean anything," said Yunas, declaring that he was keeping the CPD campus open until final exams ended, as scheduled, on July 11.

"This is my campus and I'm keeping the doors open."

Yunas said teachers, most of whom have full-time jobs elsewhere, have been showing up to conduct classes, but they have been kept in the dark as much as anyone.

"I have also not been privy to any information or had a single meeting regarding the entire situation," said Yunas, who said he's not even sure who to send the students' final grades to or who records them.

"In the past, we sent them to the Grosse Pointe office. Now we don't know.

"My primary concern is that there is total chaos across the campus. The students were going through mid-terms when they found out about the 'interruption' and then had to go through finals through all of this. We're all very confused and need to know exactly what is going on. There's so much chaos that the students, especially freshmen, dropped out of classes like flies."

Yunas said the students at D'Etre come from non-traditional, academically disadvantaged backgrounds.

"It's not like there are parents coming with their children to look over the university first," he said.

Yunas said neither Friedrichs nor the executive vice president and provost, Wiley Pickett, have made any attempt to explain to the students what's been going on and whether or not their credits from this semester will be valid.

"No counseling, assistance or direction was ever offered to the students by any of the administration," said Yunas.

A major concern of the students is that they have not been able to get any of their records or transcripts from past semesters.

"No one has attempted to help me help them get their transcripts," said Yunas. "All of the school's records were kept at the Grosse Pointe office, so my hands are tied."

"The students can't get their transcripts because final grades haven't been recorded because classes are still going on," said an official with the state Department of Education.

"They're wrong," said Yunas. "The students want their transcripts up until this semester so they can start giving them to other schools so they can get in. Our students are not stupid. They're not asking for their transcripts from this semester."

D'Etre has the legal authority to operate as an institution of higher learning, offering programs which lead to degrees, but it is not an accredited school.

According to D'Etre's literature, it has several campuses throughout the metropolitan area, including Grosse Pointe South High School where "classes were begun ... in the spring of 1984" and the Grosse Pointe War Memorial where "management classes can also be conducted by D'Etre."

But according to South's principal John Artis, at least in the last three years he's been at the school, D'Etre hasn't held any courses there. And a programming assistant at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial said she could only recall one course being held at the War Memorial by D'Etre about two years ago.

In the summer and fall of 1990, its literature says, classes were first offered at the 110-acre campus in Southfield, the former Duns Scotus College. The focal point of the campus, it said, was a 40,000-volume library.

But the only problem, said Yunas, is that, like many of D'Etre's claims, it's only half-true.

"If you look at D'Etre's catalogue, it claims to have this large, computerized library in Southfield. But D'Etre was only leasing that space from the friars at the former Duns Scotus College and they lost that lease during the 1990-91 school year," said Yunas.

Yunas added that the only

Two students, protesting D'Etre University's closing, are among the many who say they can't get their past transcripts or records from the school's locked central office on Fisher Road in Grosse Pointe. An answering service has been fielding calls for D'Etre president Dr. David Friedrichs, who has only communicated with students and staff via mail since May.

library students had any access to was an insignificant facility in the CPD building, also the site of the Metropolitan Center for High Technology. The librarian there was laid-off last April.

Friedrichs, who was executive vice president of Shaw College in Detroit, which declared bankruptcy in 1984, opened D'Etre in 1980 after buying portions of the articles of incorporation from Duns Scotus College, which closed in 1979.

Although there are no ties between Duns Scotus College and D'Etre, D'Etre's literature claims that the "venerable institution was established in 1933 under the name and management of the Duns Scotus College."

Yunas said the entire ordeal could have been avoided if Friedrichs or someone in the administration had bothered to speak to any of the students in person.

"It comes down to this," said Yunas. "They should set up a crisis management center; they should make counseling available; they should get students their records and transcripts; and they should make catalogues available from other universities."

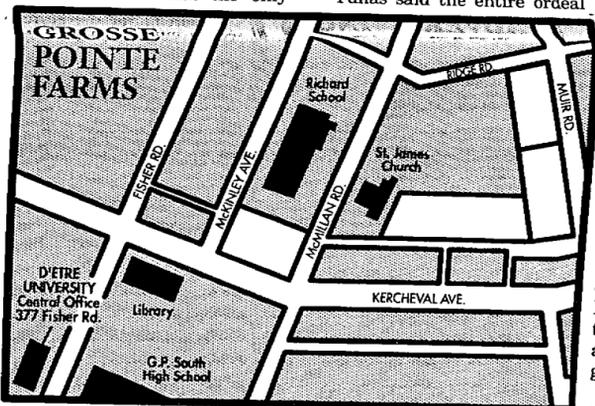

But no agency can force D'Etre to provide those things.

"There's nothing in the law that requires them to do that," said Root, "but it would be helpful if they extended the right hand of fellowship on that."

Personal contact might have eliminated what has turned into a career crisis for Lindsey, who is one of the few D'Etre students who has worked for her tuition, serving as an assistant to Yunas.

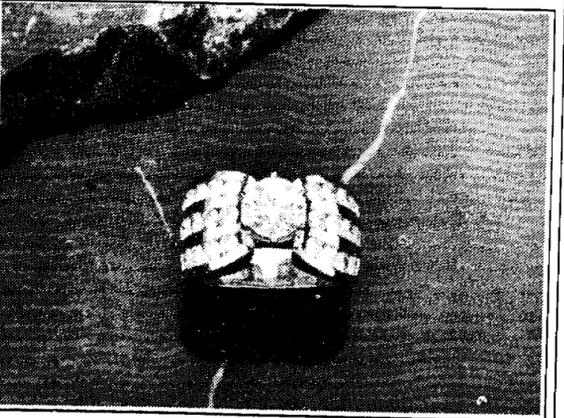

"I've received four evaluations (which list class standing and credits earned) in the last month and all of them have been different," said Lindsey. "On April 30, I received a letter from the president congratulating me for having enough credits to graduate. Since then I've received other evaluations that say I only have 115 credits and need two more classes to graduate."

"I have no idea what's going to happen."

would exchange the typewritten copy for more pages. It took him one year to finish the book.

Now the director of the Mohs micrographic surgery section, Department of Dermatology, at Henry Ford Hospital, Mikhail has spent his life studying and learning, teaching and training, writing and speaking. Besides his book, he has published 70 articles, written chapters in nine books and presented 67 papers at scientific meetings.

From the time he was a youngster growing up in Egypt, Mikhail wanted to be a doctor.

But it wasn't a matter of deciding on a career and then preparing for it. The government in Egypt ran the hospitals and, at the time, permitted only 100 students a year to enter pre-med studies.

The top-scoring 50 in each year's crop were directed to medicine, the next 25 studied dentistry and the remaining 25 went into pharmacology.

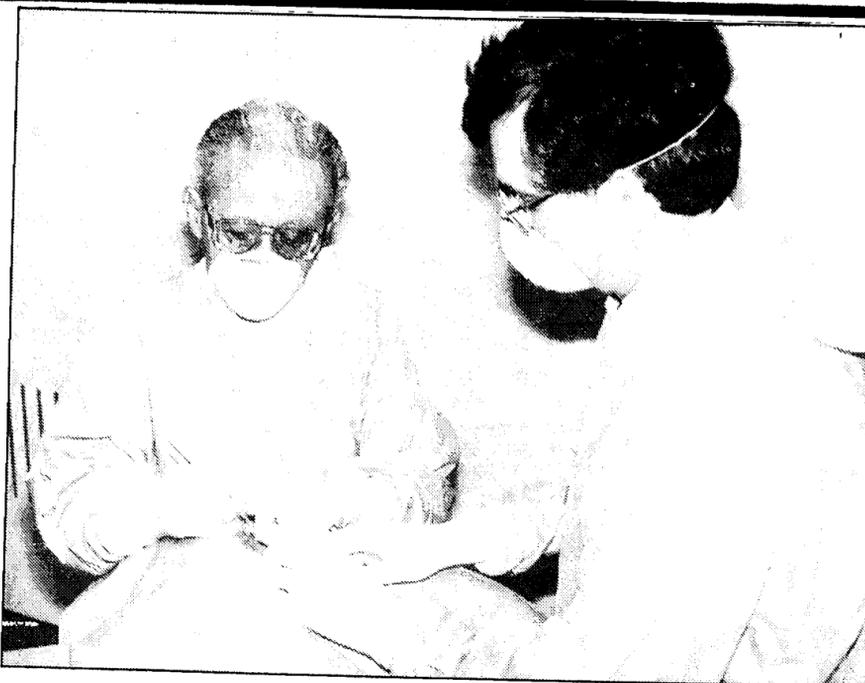

Mikhail earned a medical degree at Cairo University in 1938. He chose dermatology at the urging of a professor and because it offered a combination of medicine and surgery.

"I liked surgery from the beginning," Mikhail said.

He practiced in Egypt until 1950 when he received a fellowship to study in the United States from the World Health Organization. He interned at the University of Pennsylvania, Graduate School of Medicine, for a year. Before he left Egypt, he signed an agreement that he would return and work for the government for seven years.

He returned, staying 10 years and, during that time, got married and had two children, Michael and Marianne.

He applied for and received a fellowship to study with noted dermatopathologist Hermann

Dr. George Mikhail, left, performs Mohs surgery with Dr. Robert Norum assisting.

Pinkus at Wayne State University in 1962. He and his family moved to Grosse Pointe where they have lived since.

The following year he went to Henry Ford Hospital, where he worked on a program sponsored by the U.S. Army.

Mikhail, who remained at Henry Ford Hospital, practiced general surgery until 1967.

"Then I wanted to do Mohs surgery," he said, which is a microscopically controlled excision of skin cancer.

Originated by Dr. Frederic Mohs in the late 1930s, the technique is now recognized as a standard surgical procedure. Mikhail and Mohs, who is 82 and living in Wisconsin, are close friends.

Mohs surgery entails cutting the tumor out, which, like tentacles, spreads in unpredictable directions. The tumor, or neoplasm, and the position in which it is removed are carefully marked. The neoplasm is solidified and microscopically sliced into pieces thousandths of an inch. Each piece is examined under a microscope.

What emerges is a diagram of what parts of the tumor have been removed and what parts are still jutting out. The Mohs surgeon then begins a second operation on the patient, following the diagram, and more slides are made and examined. The procedure is repeated until no more cancerous tissue shows up under the microscope.

As an example, Mikhail had three patients scheduled for surgery the previous day. One took one hour, the other two hours and the third person was in the operating room from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mikhail operated on the patient six times.

Prospective Mohs surgeons go through an intensive two-year, one-on-one training program, Mikhail said. The candidate must not only have a good knowledge of anatomy, pathology and general surgery, he or she must be dedicated. The time in training could be spent earning money as a general surgeon, Mikhail said.

There are three Mohs surgeons at Henry Ford, which is one of some 25 training centers in the country. There are only about 300 Mohs surgeons in the United States, Mikhail said, and very few in other countries — two in Australia, two in England, one or two in Italy and one in Munich.

Mikhail has been honored for his work by his peers more than a half-dozen times. He has served on task forces and committees and is a member of 11 professional societies. He has also held office in various professional organizations.

Mikhail became interested in photomicrography, which is taking photos through a micro-

Ducklings in peril; saved by officer

A mother duck and her five ducklings were waddling across the 100 block of Cloverly in Grosse Pointe Farms about 11 a.m. Sunday, July 5, when the ducklings fell through a sewer grate.

The mother duck began quacking up a storm, and a nearby resident, who didn't know about the ducklings, called the Farms public safety department, thinking that the duck was injured.

Officer John F. Kennedy responded to the scene, and he and the resident tried to pick up the duck, but "she attacked us with an aerial assault," Kennedy said.

After a few minutes, the duck backed off, and Kennedy decided to lift the sewer grate, because the duck had been very protective of it.

He looked down the manhole and saw five ducklings floating in the water about six to eight feet below road level.

Kennedy taped a colandar to a long stick (both items were provided by the homeowner) and used the makeshift tool to scoop up the baby ducks, one at a time.

The uninjured ducklings were returned to their mother, Kennedy said, and they all waddled off together.

a refrigerator or freezer must be removed before the appliance is placed near the curb for disposal.

If residents need help finding a licensed contractor to remove refrigerators, they may call city hall. Belcher said he is in the process of compiling a list of qualified contractors, and that the companies charge about $40 per appliance, although the price varies with the amount of refrigerant in the appliance.

Councilman James Alogdelis asked what would happen if a resident said that his refrigerator is so old, that all of the refrigerant has leaked out of it. Would the city's waste hauler pick up the refrigerator?

Catlin said the resident would still have to obtain a certificate from a refrigeration specialist.

"I can see a lot of people putting ads in the paper for used refrigerators they're selling quite cheaply," councilman Ted Bidigare said.

Belcher said the Woods administration first learned about the federal law when it got a letter from the EPA on Wednesday, July 1.

"I can understand why the law was enacted," he said. "When you dispose of a refrigerator in a landfill, it gets compressed, which breaks the refrigeration lines and sends these ozone-depleting gases into the air. But it does create a problem for people."

Mayor Robert E. Novitke said, "This is going to be a major problem. Not just for us, but for the whole country."

Rulings reveal new divisions on high court

Reaction to recent controversial decisions by the Supreme Court on abortion and other issues shows that the opinions have had at least two important effects.

One is to emphasize that even the conservative majority on the court now is rent by substantial differences. The other is that its recent decisions have put the court squarely into the 1992 political campaign.

In Michigan, there already is new tough talk by both sides on the abortion issue that indicate it will be a major issue in legislative as well as congressional contests.

Michigan pro-life advocates have begun demanding that the Legislature impose new restrictions that they believe will be permitted under the court's ruling in the Pennsylvania case. Pro-choice advocates are pinning their hopes on the November election of more pro-choice legislators.

In Washington, House and Senate Democrats prepared almost identical Freedom of Choice bills to protect a woman's right to terminate a pregnancy and preserve Roe vs. Wade against state limitations the Supreme Court ruled the states can impose.

In addition, President Bush reiterated his pro-life position and called on the court to reverse Roe vs. Wade. Democratic candidate Bill Clinton assured pro-choice backers that as president he would appoint only pro-choice supporters to the high court. And Ross Perot indicated general support for the pro-choice view.

One of the surprising results of the abortion ruling was that three justices appointed by Presidents Ronald Reagan and George Bush wrote the opinion that by a 5 to 4 margin preserved the constitutional right to abortion but at the same time permitted some new state restrictions on it.

The opinion, presented jointly by Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, Anthony M. Kennedy and David H. Souter — but principally written by Souter — said that to overrule "under fire," a decision that had not been shown to be wrong would be "a surrender to political pressure."

While neither pro-life nor pro-choice backers were satisfied, the court's centralist position did seem to reflect the American public's view: support for the right to abortion but limitation on its use.

The court approved four limitations in the Pennsylvania case that it said did not impose an "undue burden" but that means the next round of court cases no doubt will involve further interpretation of that broad phrase.

Several other decisions in the concluding session of the current term provided further evidence of new divisions among the conservative members.

For example, several court observers said the decision in the school prayer case written by Justice Kennedy could make it more difficult for the Bush administration to win court approval for its new GI bill for students.

Under this proposal, the administration would award $1,000 scholarships to top students around the country with the students and parents having the choice of spending the funds with public, private or even parochial schools.

Because the school-prayer decision was seen to increase rather than lower the barriers to state-church relationships, it seemed to raise a new question about the constitutionality of the Bush administration's schools-of-choice plan.

Even before the historic ruling on abortion, Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times had contended that "effective control of the court" had passed to the trio of O'Connor, Souter and Kennedy.

Greenhouse wrote that the group's hallmarks "appear to be a generally cautious approach to deciding cases, a hesitancy to overturn precedents and a distaste for aggressive arguments, whether those presented to the court or those made by the justices themselves in written opinions."

So while it still is a conservative court, it is a cautious court with many shadings of opinion which which may not always satisfy a president under increasing pressure to demonstrate his allegiance to his party's militant right wing.

Whatever the future holds, one court tradition has already been reaffirmed: It is impossible to predict how any justice will vote on specific issues once he or she has taken a seat on the country's highest bench.

Pointe schools take new hit

Grosse Pointe schools apparently took a new hit in the closing days of the state Legislature from the state's newly enacted $2.9 billion school aid bill.

That estimate is based on "skeletal in-

End the JOA?

One Grosse Pointe subscriber to the two Detroit newspapers offers them a practical suggestion about a way to reduce their reported losses under their joint operating agreement (JOA).

It is for the papers to cease delivering two copies of the holiday joint edition to single subscribers. They have learned to deliver only one copy of the joint weekend papers to our informant's home but both deliver the joint edition when published on holidays.

On Friday, July 3, for example, our informant got one paper at the back door where he usually finds a morning Free Press and another at the front door where he usually sees his evening copy of the News. On other holidays, he says he often gets no joint edition.

If the two big chains that are joined in the JOA can't figure out a solution, perhaps they should resume putting out two papers on holidays — and on weekends, too — and give up on their JOA nonsense.

No freeze on municipal taxes

Many Grosse Pointe homeowners are finding some increase in their recently issued municipal property tax statements despite last year's state freeze in property assessments.

What happened in four of the Pointes is that the city councils had to raise their tax rates to offset losses in revenue or cover increased expenses that in the past often had been met by tax increases resulting from higher assessed values.

Thus the Farms raised its rate from 10.35 mills to 10.71 mills, still well below the maximum of 14.788 mills permitted under the Headlee Amendment. A vote of formation" that appears to show the district has lost an additional $500,000 or more from the FICA funds that it formerly recaptured from the state.

The loss of those Social Security reimbursements apparently will rise from the present $1.8 million a year to about $2.4 million or $2.5 million, according to the school's community relations coordinator, Kathy Roberts.

However, and this is the "good news" out of the Legislature, the impact on the Pointes' schools is not as bad as the "worst case scenario" drafted during the recent school budgeting sessions. That scenario would have cost the Pointes another $1.5 million in state funds.

The Legislature, however, left hanging in the air the method of financing the reimbursements that the state is promising local districts if the voters in November approve Gov. John Engler's "cap and cut" limitations on school property taxes.

One source of the replacement revenue, according to Alan Short, director of government affairs for the Michigan Education Association, could be an increase in either the income tax or the sales tax to replace loss of property tax revenues.

Passage of either proposal could improve the revenue outlook in the Pointes and other schools but would require a terrific sales effort in view of the current public opposition to tax hikes, even for the public schools.

the people would be required to boost tax rates beyond that figure.

However, the Farms increase in municipal taxes since 1981 is only 33.5 percent as contrasted with a 46.2 percent rise in inflation and a 73.5 percent rise in assessments since that same date.

Similar tax rate increases were voted by the City, Woods and Park but the Shores managed to make a further cut in its tax rate despite the assessment freeze.

The municipal tax rise surprised many taxpayers because they confused assessments with taxes, forgetting that the tax rate applied to the assessment is equally important in figuring any tax bill.

tee, would have avoided the subject of unemployment because he himself played an important role in increasing it.

How?
His committee has been held directly responsible for the lack of supervision and control that helped cause the S&L industry's collapse that in turn led to heavy unemployment, substantial financial losses and increased burdens on the American taxpayer.

In view of his own record, it is the height of hypocrisy for him to mount his soapbox to complain about the administration's handling of the economy or anything else.

Letters

Rules vs. rights

To the Editor:

As a handicapped resident of the Woods, I was shocked and dismayed to find myself in the situation of being denied access to the Lakefront Park pool recently. Upon attempting to enter the water (wearing a Water Walker flotation belt and clean aquasocks) a lifeguard acted under "rules" in ordering me out. I pointed out the necessity of the special gear, but only an adamant complaint at the office seconded by an offended witness opened an opportunity.

Though official reasons were stated (children wear aquasocks through the park and track grass/dirt into the pool; certain kinds of flotation devices were deemed dangerous for children), I can't help but wonder how many other people dealing with MS, arthritis, rheumatism and injuries are scared away from the benefits of water exercise out of fear of pool rules designed for the young/able-bodied. Where specific regulations would suffice, there are instead generic rules that strangle the pool's range of community possibilities.

I would never have suspected this battle to be waged in benevolent, conscientious and graying Grosse Pointe! And after finding Adaptive Water Exercise classes only through another community's program and obtaining the flotation belts and traction of aquasocks that help make it all possible, my family and I were shocked to find difficulty in transferring these methods to the Grosse Pointe pool system.

Though across the country the Americans with Disabilities Act is now in place, it looks as if a law is not enough to alter public rules and attitudes. Even in Grosse Pointe, does it still take the disabled themselves to fight for every privilege others take for granted?

Though it was assured I'd not have this problem again as I'd be personally recognized, what then happens to residents who haven't yet had access to the adaptive swim classes of other neighborhoods, and then have the fortitude to

"duke it out" at the Woods pool?

Thank you

To the Editor:

To all of my friends, old and new, and to all the people I have had the pleasure of doing business with, I give you my personal thanks for the last eight years that I have been at Scanlan's Florist.

To those of you who aren't aware, I have decided to pursue my career further in moving to Washington, D.C., and with much excitement and anticipation continue in my professional growth.

I would like also to say that the tradition that one has become familiar with at Scanlan's will continue as Bill will carry it on, and he will keep the family atmosphere that many of you have come to know.

I will miss so many of you here in the Pointes, but I will never forget the support you so willingly gave to us when we first opened the shop. My heartfelt thanks to each and everyone of you.

When work gets under your skin

You know, when you have an x-acto knife, and you put it blade-side up in your pocket, and then you forget about it, and then you thrust your hand in your pocket and you make an x-acto gash across your arm about yea-deep and an inch or so long?

Don't you just hate it when that happens?

Well, it happened to me.

I guess this is as good a time as any to notify everyone who might someday see my right arm that the scar, which is in close proximity to my wrist, is NOT what you might think.

Holy cow! No hari-kari went on here. It was, honestly, an on-the-job accident stemming from a faulty memory and inexperience using knives at work.

I mean, we in editorial hardly use knives, aside from claiming free movie passes.

I guess this is also as good a time as any to say some "thank-yous."

First, I'd like to thank the emergency room doctor who treated me for not "papoosing" me.

(Apologies to Dave Barry, but I AM NOT MAKING THIS UP!) The doctor told me that he and the nurses were actually considering "papoosing" me, which means, basically, strapping my arms down to the bed boards so I wouldn't thrash

I Say

about as he stiched my arm.

Geez! I wasn't that bad. I mean, sure, I was whimpering more than your average Joe, but I did have to wait THREE hours in the emergency room before I was even seen, with the last vision in my head being a clear view of my shoe ... through the gaping hole in my arm. (OK, that's a slight exaggeration.)

Even you, doctor, would have to admit that I was an A-1 patient once you started stitching. Your nurse even gave me a "Super Patient" sticker to wear home.

Thank you, also, for not openly rolling your eyes when I told you I needed more anesthesia than the average person because of an uncommonly low pain threshold.

And, finally, thank you for not stitching my sister's mouth shut as she yapped on about the various medical ailments she, myself, and entire generations of our family have suffered. That was nice.

Her heart is definitely in the right place, though, even if she did kind of defeat the purpose of trying to ease my fears by telling me to look only at her face instead of the hideous incision on my arm, and then proceeded to have a gape-mouthed look of horror when the doctor unbandaged the wound.

And some might have thought my sister insensitive when, moments after arriving at the hospital, she cheerily informed me that she saw no blood on my clothes.

So I had that going for me. But I understood. Seconds after realizing that the wound, while appalling, was not mortal, I quickly checked my white shorts. They were, after all, half linen and there's just no removing blood stains from that!

I also want to thank my colleagues who stopped by the emergency room and attempted to pep me up. Especially those of you who, since the incident, have reached deep into your fuzzy little hearts and, in acts of deepest compassion, now refer to me as "Frank" (short for Frankenstein) and "Slash." I only hope I can do the same for you someday.

Peaceful woods belie a seething world

Here in the northern woods, quiet pervades. It's hard to imagine, let alone believe, that somewhere else in the world, someone is looting or shooting or starving.

Nancy Parmenter

Here, the stream babbles. Somewhere nearby, men are playing horseshoes. Cheers, groans, the clang of shoes against the pin, echo in the woods. Someone revs up a chainsaw. In the distance, thunder rumbles, but the storm passes us by.

Other thunder, the far-off whump! of artillery shells at Camp Grayling, is the only reminder of the outside world. But even that is a game, not really believed in by the rest of us.

If you are good at vacations, time is measured only by the sun. You drink endless cups of coffee on the screened porch, read novels, wade in the creek, identify wildflowers if you feel scholarly. Cut some brush, follow the path along the bank to the neighbors' for a short chat, drive to town for a gallon of milk.

If you are bad at vacations, you have brought your fax. You talked business all the way up on your car phone. Your laptop is kept turned on all day. You drive to town for the New York Times and watch the financial report on TV.

Our TV only has one channel. We're good at vacations. The crew digging a trench for underground phone lines along our road is ready to break for conversation. "Bet you'll be glad to get off that four-party line," the crew chief suggests as an opening gambit.

We don't have a phone.

The crew chief has only once gone near Detroit. Tecumseh, in fact, where he was assigned to a phone project. Tecumseh was nice, but he doesn't want to get any closer to Detroit.

Yet Detroit has just been featured on television as home to glamorous auto and boat racing. And it wasn't Detroit in a shambles after the basketball championships, it was Chicago.

From here, Detroit is only a dream — or a nightmare, depending on how well you know it.

It is a measure of our world-view that stress, tension, competition and rivalry, greed, power struggles, machinations and mistrust are always characterized as "real." Let life administer a few lumps, and people will say, "welcome to the real world."

The "real" world is sadly full of violence.

Read the news from Ireland or Yugoslavia or Mozambique. Read it now or read a generations-old newspaper; the story will be the same.

Sorry, I can understand resistance, but the macho bloodshed is beyond my comprehension. One set of great-grandparents on my father's side was born and raised in the seesaw province of Alsace. With two governments fighting over them, Alsations were suspicious, unfriendly, distrustful of officialdom. They had to be.

Grandmother used to tell of keeping two flags. Every time an army marched by in conquest, they'd run the politically expedient flag up the pole out front. It was her joke, her way of jabbing the megalomania that kept her family and neighbors permanently off balance.

But they didn't shoot anyone. The Alsations may have been rebelling in their own quietly stubborn way. Maybe they felt like many modern-day Americans: personally powerless and convinced that it made no difference to their individual lives which government was in power. As peasants, distrustful of any central government, they no doubt viewed France and Germany as equal evils.

But what accounts for the psychological seething of Basques or Kurds or Croats and Serbs? On the individual level, surely they are all devastated, but an inner something drives them to keep getting even. The hate is ancient, bred in the bone.

My high school had a Croatian teacher for third-year Latin. He spoke nine languages — including Latin, which he tried to use in the classroom. To his dismay, of course, we couldn't get past "alia jacta est" or "omnia Gallia est divisa in partes tres." Classical Latin. We certainly couldn't open the window or sharpen a pencil or go to the bathroom in Latin.

Mr. Prcela was a disappointed man. American students were not then or now at the educational level of their European counterparts. Nor could we see past our provincial noses.

So he told us about Croatia. Mr. Prcela was a Croatian nationalist at a time when that was a very unhealthy thing to be. For his safety, in fact, he had been spirited out of Croatia in a coffin. Although he could not return to his homeland, he was active in the Croatian community in Cleveland and an unceasing advocate for independence.

He had seen things we could never understand. Mistrust, fear, hate, historic blood-feuds. Every single act a political one.

"I saw you at the hockey game with a blonde," one of the boys teased him one day. Mr. Prcela gave one of those eloquent European shrugs. "She is a Communist," he said.

In those days, Yugoslavia under Tito was an economic miracle, touted in the western world for its independence from Moscow. The eventual breakup

Oysters Bush?

What kind of munchies do you prepare for the president of the United States when he's in town? Stopping at the nearest Seven-Eleven to pick up a Slurpee and a bag of chips is not cool.

Grosse Pointer Kari Peters, executive chef at the Westin Hotel, got the assignment when George Bush was in Detroit for a day recently.

With an hour's notice — and secret service agents in tow — Peters created a hearty nutritious snack that drew raves from Bush and his entourage, according to PR folks for the Westin.

Here it is:

Presidential Oysters

12 pc. shucked oysters, on the shell

16 oz. fresh spinach, cut in julienne

1 T. fresh chopped garlic

12 pc. chopped garlic blossoms

1 T. olive oil

1 T. Pernod
2 oz. shaved parmesan cheese

salt and pepper to taste

Clean and shuck oysters. Saute garlic in olive oil. Add spinach and Pernod and cook until spinach is wilted, but still green. Remove from pan and chill. Add garlic blossoms to cold mixture and adjust seasoning.

Cover oysters with spinach mixture. Cover oyster/spinach mixture with shaved parmesan cheese. Broil for 5-7 minutes until cheese is golden brown. Serve immediately.

Go blue

Due to public outcry, Grosse Pointe Cable WILL offer the blue channel during the summer Olympic Games after all.

Gary Mizga, regional director of Comcast Cablevision, said they haven't decided which channel they'll bump yet.

Margie Reins Smith

They're still looking at ratings. For more information, call 822-9200.

Swearing is encouraged

Gloria Konster and Frank Sladen, newly re-elected members of the Grosse Pointe school board, were officially sworn in at the last board meeting.

A judge was present to officiate and a Bible was produced for the new trustees to swear on.

Not like what happened about 15 years ago, when nobody remembered to invite a judge and nobody brought a Bible.

Ever creative, the esteemed group pressed an administrator into service to do the formal deed. (His or her name has been forgotten.)

And a science book was substituted for the Bible.

Chief petty officers organize

An International Chief Petty Officers' Association has been organized.

Chiefs — male or female, regular and reserve, past or present, of any nation or national naval sea service — are eligible to join. No distinction of grades of chiefs is made.

The ICPOA non-profit organization was formed to promote the general image of chief petty officers, for camaraderie, annual reunions, conventions, to encourage current and future sailors to study and seek advancement in the Naval services and to help better communications between the world's sea services.

High naval officers and military publications have voiced their admiration for this long overdue naval organization. Strong and very ambitious plans have been made for an International Headquarters which will house permanent offices, meeting areas and a museum.

Tentative membership goal now is 35,000. The first 1,000 will be charter members. Membership cost is negligible. Sixty-eight nations have been invited to participate.

More information and applications are available from: Chief Mort Franklin, ISC, 4228 Staghorn Circle North, Ft. Worth, Texas 76137.

A century of garments donated to state museums

By all accounts former Grosse Pointe resident Fayette Crowley Thurber loved clothes. And she wanted everyone else to enjoy them, too. So before she died in 1987, she told her son, Grosse Pointe City's Donald M.D. Thurber, to donate the favorites she had saved — several hundred items — to a museum.

The clothes — which were stored in trunks, some for nearly 100 years — will be part of the permanent collections of the Detroit Historical Department and the State Historical Museum.

"We're delighted to have them," said Maud Lyon, director of the Detroit Historical Department. "We always like any donations, but a collection is much more important than individual pieces because we can get a picture of what a certain type of person would have worn. Mr. Thurber has extensively catalogued the collection, which is a great help."

The historical department will keep the clothes in its new climate-controlled storage area and will use them for research and future exhibitions.

The Detroit Historical Department, which runs the Detroit Historical Museum, the Dossin Great Lakes Museum and Historic Fort Wayne, has one of the largest costume collections in the Midwest.

Fayette Crowley was born in 1891, daughter of LaFayette Crowley, a principal with the Detroit Stove Co., which was, at the turn of the century, one of Detroit's largest businesses.

"She came from a time when there were strict rules regarding what to wear and when to wear it," Donald Thurber said. "The rules weren't written, but you couldn't violate them. And she was a woman very much at home in the thought patterns of her era."

The clothes reflect that thought pattern. There is a theater coat with a design by Picasso, trousseau dresses, hats (in their original boxes), shoes, evening gowns, babies' gowns, dancing gowns and nightgowns.

Mrs. Thurber saved anything of special interest to her, including the dress she wore at the rehearsal dinner before her wedding in 1910; clothes worn by her two children — Donald and Catherine, better known as Kitty — including a baseball uniform from 1925; and a boy's suit from 1922 which still has a handkerchief in the pocket.

Many of the items are Detroit-made, coming from designers and area landmarks such as J. Hoch, Irving's and Jacques Fath for Joseph Halpert at J.L. Hudson's. Other items come from farther away and include designs by Blanche Lebouvier of Paris and Grand Maison DeBlanc of New York.

"They were just stored in trunks with tissue paper," Donald Thurber said. "Nothing special was done. The museum will take care of them properly."

Recently her four grandchildren and one great-grandchild had a chance to look at the clothes before they were sent to the museums. Tom Gage, Claudia Snyder, Alice Schultes, Baba Jewett and her daughter Wendy, were amazed not only at the scope of the collection but by its pristine condition.

They were amazed, too, at the size of Fayette Crowley's waistline, which they figured would give Scarlett O'Hara a run for her money.

They remembered seeing their grandmother — and their mother, because Kitty's clothes are also part of the donation — wear some of the clothes. Indeed, Donald Thurber remembers specific occasions when certain outfits were worn.

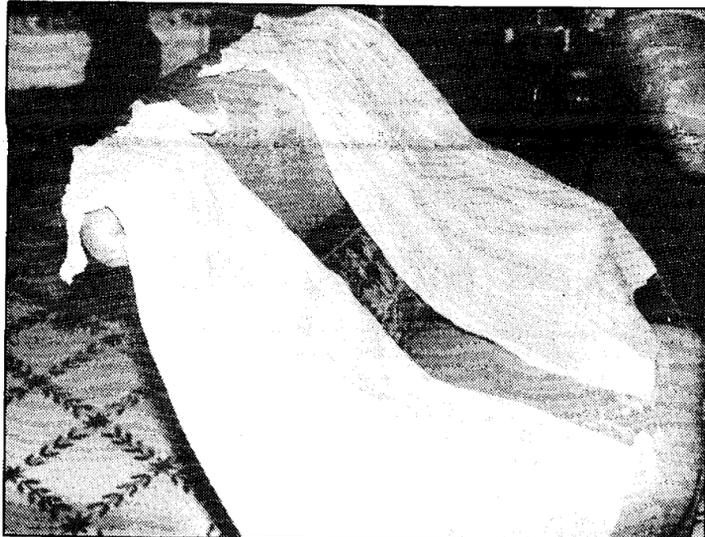

Despite his fondness for the clothes and the memories they evoke, Thurber says the donation is the right thing to do.

"She told me she wanted this done, and now I'm doing it," he said. "I know they will be taken care of properly. Sharing these is the right thing to do."

Happy birthday, America!

The following was written by Cristian-Mugur Argesanu, a journalist from Romania who was featured in a story printed in the Grosse Pointe News a few weeks ago. He and his wife are living with the Moebus family in Grosse Pointe.

It's night and I am walking. I see, as in a Turkish bazaar, a lot of blankets on the ground. It's early evening and nobody is there, so it seems to be a picturesque Oriental exhibition.

Now, little by little, the place begins to fill up. People are arriving. Each family has a blanket and food, juices, popcorn. Everybody is happy and says "hello" to friends.

Children have fluorescent collars made up of rainbow colors and light flowers.

It grows darker. The atmosphere is electrified. Words, words, words; communication and feverishness; colors and life; blankets and cars; green grass and birds; songs, impatience, joy; hand-shaking and blue serene sky; words, words, words.

This night is about a symbol, a love story and a commitment. The symbol is a celebration of America's Independence Day. A very simple love story. Americans love America.

They celebrate with traditional fireworks which stop our breathing many times. The fireworks please our minds and souls. For a few minutes we are in a fairy world. The sky seems to be opened in order to celebrate America's anniversary. The delicate ephemeral mixture of colors, together with the strong, rhythmic detonations give a new and exciting feeling. Imagine a symphony by Beethoven in which musical arabesques describe the beauty of life and refer to the cruelty and force of destiny.

Our human life is like the stardust we can see above — marvelous, shiny, different, but short-lived. We survive by the power of hope, daring and the love for our beloved. We feel all these, looking up in the sky. Fireworks consist of thousands and thousands of little light-stars. Together they create incredible effects.

Everyone's heart is full of emotion. It's one of the rare moments when we forget about daily problems and realize how strong we are.

Gradually, we recover from dreaming. Everybody enjoys the show and speaks the same language: "Ooooh! Ahhh!" Between the gates of heaven, the American flag appears. Let's clap, guys, this is really great. A final boom and everything is OK.

I remember Scheherazade's story. America is a Scheherazade which, by its inventiveness, patience and faith survives through tough times. America has its own fascinating story which will never finish. Each of us, hearing this story, fall in love with it and want to commit ourselves for its best. All we have to do is believe in our dreams, because America will always live by love and dreams.

Happy birthday, America!

To All Potential Van Buyers:

I just purchased a brand new Mark III Conversion Van from Al Long Ford. After looking at all the conversion vans I could find this one is positively the BEST on the market. As an owner of a 1990 Ford also, the improvements in the van are wonderful. This IS the van of the future. The only thing better than my new van was the service I received from Al Long. Not only will I never buy another type van but I will never buy from anywhere else. Thank you Al Long Ford!!!

Vintage cars remind us of Detroit's glory years

Fourth of July parades including old cars seem to be as American as apple pie. Communities throughout the nation enjoy them, including Grosse Pointe Park. There is something very American about viewing these cars, perhaps it recalls what many of us perceive as "the good old days," when the automobile was as American as the Statue of Liberty.

Through much of the lives of adults, Detroit was the world leader in automobiles and we thought of them as very American. In fact, the first automobile was operated in France by Nicolas Cugnot, who fitted a wagon with a steam engine in 1769. The internal combustion engine was invented in France in 1860 by Etienne Lenoir and the modern four-cycle engine was developed by Nikolaus Otto in 1876 in Germany.

Commercial automobile production was started in Germany in 1886, first by Karl Benz, then by Gottlieb Daimler, each working independently, unaware of what the other was doing or of what a number of American inventors were doing. (The firms founded by Benz and Daimler would merge in 1926 to build the Mercedes-Benz line of cars.)

But Americans like Henry Ford, Ransom Olds, David Buick, the Duryea brothers, the Studebaker brothers, Henry and Wilbur Leland, Roy Chapin, Charles Nash and Walter P. Chrysler would make the automobile American.

And on the Fourth of July, it is fun to see these reminders of Detroit's glory years, to admire the craft and even artistry that went into many of them, to marvel at the smooth sounds of engines built before most of those along the parade route were born. Old cars are fun.

1992 Ford Escort LX-E four-door sedan is powered by a 127-horsepower 16-valve 1.8-liter four.

"My dad had a car like that when I was a kid," said one graying, bearded observer as a '54 Chevrolet Bel Air, owned by fellow Grosse Pointe News auto writer Jenny King, moved quietly by. Others waved and shouted "nice car!"

It is not a classic or a particularly valuable car. Like the other cars in the parade, it is just an old car, lovingly preserved, to be driven, viewed, talked about and enjoyed.

There were no Duesenbergs or Bugattis in the parade. But the Model A Fords, DeSotos, Packards, stepdown Hudsons, bathtub Nashes and '54 Chevys were cars of the people, cars we can relate to, cars many of us can remember.

It is a joyful activity, one fitting for the Fourth of July.

Escort a nice small car

It has long been conventional wisdom that American companies build nice big cars, but are not very good at making small cars. Not so. A recent J.D. Power customer satisfaction survey showed the Saturn in the No. 3 spot, the only American car in the top five and the only small car. The rest were expensive luxury cars like Lexus, Infiniti, Acura and Mercedes-Benz.

And if you are looking for an up-to-date, inexpensive small car that does everything well, include the Ford Escort in your search, along with Saturn and competing Japanese offerings.

There is a good chance you will buy American.

The Escort was redesigned for 1991, with strong influence from Ford's partner, Mazda. Two new four-door sedans were added for 1992, with deck lids instead of hatchbacks. "Our new LX and LX-EO four-door sedan models provide spacious trunks and room for five passengers," said Ross R. Roberts, Ford Division general manager.

Trunks are surprisingly spacious and individual fold-down rear seats in the LX provide extra cargo space if the rear seating is not needed. The LX is equipped with 140-inch wheels, two-speed interval wipers, four-wheel independent suspension, AM/FM stereo radio and 1.9-liter fuel-injected four-cylinder engine. Color-keyed bumpers and body side molding are also standard.

Autos

By Richard Wright

The LX-E is a higher-performance model powered by the Escort GT's 1.8-liter twin-cam 16-valve four-cylinder engine. Five-speed manual transmission is standard with either engine and a four-speed automatic transaxle is optional.

Escort base prices begin at $8,355 for the standard two-door hatchback four and go up to $11,933 for the new LX-E, a little above the base for the GT of $11,871. Base price for the new LX four-door is $9,795. Both the Escort and the Saturn are very competitive with their Japanese-built rivals.

Revolution in materials

Automakers are "on the threshold of a revolution in automotive materials," according to a University of Michigan survey, although steel will continue to be dominant.

"The survey indicates that 'high-priced' or 'exotic' materials will be more seriously considered over the next decade," said David E. Cole, director of the Office for the Study of Automotive Transportation at the U-M Transportation Research Institute.

"Ceramics, magnesium and composites are receiving increased attention as fuel economy and other regulatory pressures increase the value of a pound of weight saved and value-based material selection becomes the industry norm."

But steel will still be the primary automotive material, according to the "Delphi VI Forecast of the U.S. Automotive Industry Through the Year 2000: Materials." However, the proportion of steel used in vehicle exteriors is expected to drop to 60 percent by the year 2000, the study said.

By 2000, it is predicted that 20 percent of doors and fenders in North American-produced passenger vehicles will be made of thermoplastics, 15 percent from thermoset polymers and 5 percent of aluminum.

"The growth in both aluminum and polymer expectations is significant and indicative of competitive battles between a variety of materials for automotive structures and sheet elements in the latter part of this decade," Cole said.

The trend to use of aluminum in engine blocks and heads is expected to continue.

Tercel

Toyota's Tercel, completely revised last year, has several things going for it. How the designers managed to take the ubiquitous aero-jellybean look of today's cars and make it different and attractive for the little entry-level Toyota is a puzzle. Like the Paseo, this subcompact is tight and quiet. Toyota says sound-insulation material combined with vibration dampening sandwich panels in key locations help reduce road and engine noise.

Tercel, available in a base 2-door sedan, a 2 or 4-door deluxe sedan and a 4-door LE sedan, is powered by a 1.5-liter 12-valve fuel-injected four, whose 82 hp is sometimes hard-pressed to keep up in highway driving, but surely gets the job done. The base 2-door sedan equipped with 4-speed manual promises up to 37 mpg highway, which eases the pain of being passed so often. Transmission options include a 5-speed manual and 3-speed automatic.

We found the interior design excellent, with plenty of headroom front and back. Leg room is limited in the rear seat. Every Tercel is equipped with halogen headlamps, adjustable reclining front bucket seats, full carpeting and mist cycle windshield wipers. (Remember when entry-level models came with rubber floor mats and very ordinary seats?) Terrels begin at about $7,000 and, with all the bells and whistles, can go as high as $11,500.

Rollerblades

Pointe Farms, and Dr. Ron Laskowski, director of emergency medical services at Bon Secours Hospital.
"People shouldn't ride in the street, but they should try to pick an area that's nice and smooth when they go rollerblading," Laskowski said. "Sidewalks aren't very good, because people can trip if the cement is uneven, or their wheels can get caught in the cracks between sidewalk slabs, causing them to fall."

McMillan agreed, saying, "I can see how that could happen. We want people to ride on a smooth area, but we don't want them riding in the street, either."

So, where is a rollerblader to ride?

See related stories, page 13A

Laskowski, who has been rollerblading once and vowed "never again," said he has a friend who rollerblades with his family at Metro Beach Metropark between Jefferson and Lake St. Clair in Harrison Township.

A spokesman for the park said rollerblading is allowed on the bike path and in certain other areas of the park.

Also, some roller rinks allow rollerbladers to use their facilities (call first).

And, rollerblading is legal on private property, as long as permission from the owner has been obtained.

Most parking lots are private property, whether they belong to a business, a municipality, or the school district, and if the owner says "leave," the rollerblader has to scoot.

Because of the liability involved should someone get hurt, most owners — including the five Pointe municipalities — do not allow rollerblading on their parking lots.

Also, as a rule, rollerbladers can't enter stores while wearing their skates. Some stores post this rule near the door; at other stores, rollerbladers are told to leave as they enter.

Perry Drug Store on Kercheval on the Hill in Grosse Pointe Farms has a sign that says, "No rollerblades allowed in this store," posted on the door.

It's not because management is worried that rollerbladers will scratch up the floor, said Tom Tracy, assistant manager of the store.

"Being that we're in the drug store business," he said, "we're concerned that a rollerblader might run into a senior citizen or one of the other people walking down the aisles in our store."

The times determine the fate of fairy tale romances

Hardly a day goes by without a story about Princess Di.

It's news when a beautiful girl marries a prince, as in a fairy tale, and it goes awry. Fairy tales are not supposed to end that way. The prince and princess are supposed to live happily ever after.

The marriage of Prince Charles and his lovely bride Diana cast a rosy glow over a weary world. It was a story-book tale that enveloped the world in a romanticism that somehow shut out the reality of life. Lovers everywhere walked in its aura. Every bride found her prince and every groom his princess.

How sad it is, how disillusioning to learn that fairy tales do not always have a happy ending. The prince can turn into a frog and the princess can become bereft and vengeful.

However, Prince Charles and Princess Diana are not the first to capture the world's interest with a love story that made headlines. Not so long ago a king gave up his throne for the love of a woman. Theirs was a romance that endured.

It was called the love story of the century and began when they met at a party in London. He was David, prince of Wales. She was the wife of Ernest

The Senior Men's Club of Grosse Pointe will meet at the War Memorial on Tuesday, July 14, at 11 a.m.

The topic will be "Recycling, 1902 to 1992."

The presenter will be Burkhard Schneider.

Reservations at the last meeting were poor. There were 41 members who failed to cancel, so there was a loss. Dues may have to be raised if this continues.

The next trip is a visit to the Coast Guard station at Selfridge Field, Thursday, July 9.

Simpson, an American-born Briton. The bachelor prince was captivated by the dark-haired woman with the big blue eyes and he and the Simpsons became a threesome — and then a twosome. In 1936 King George died and David ascended the throne as Edward VIII.

Later Wallis Simpson accompanied the king on a Mediterranean cruise. The American press made much of it but the English press, in deference to the royal family, printed nary a word, even after Simpson filed for a divorce.

When the king informed Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin of his intention to marry her, Baldwin vowed to resign to protest the proposal that would have allowed an American divorcee to become queen.

It was obvious to Edward that he could not remain king and Defender of the Faith (a faith that frowned on divorce) if he married Wallis. His family was opposed to her; the government equally so.

Older readers will remember the eloquent and moving abdication speech he made on the radio in 1936: "You must believe me when I tell you I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and discharge my duties as king as I would wish to do, without the help and support of the woman I love."

He stepped down and became Duke of Windsor. She became Duchess of Windsor on June 3, 1937, when they wed in France at a chateau near Tours. They took up residence in a 30-room house in the Bois de Boulogne. Ostracized by the royal family, they were provided with a 2-million pound settlement and a yearly income of 60,000 pounds.

A vivacious woman blessed with a sharp wit, she was evidently exactly what the duke, a weak and indecisive man, was looking for. After many years of marriage, he still described her as his perfect woman.

"Without fault," he declared. Until his death in 1972 he held her in high esteem and never wavered from the belief that he had made the right choice. Theirs was a fairy tale love story that held true to the traditional ending — "and they lived happily ever after."

The Queen Mother Elizabeth never forgave him for abdicating which thrust her husband, George VI, Edward's shy, stammering younger brother, upon the throne. The burden of kingship is widely believed to have caused George's early death in 1952. The queen mother often referred to the duchess as "the woman who killed my husband."

The burden of kingship is widely believed to have caused George's early death in 1952. The queen mother often referred to the duchess as "the woman who killed my husband."

About London, she said: "I unsuited to its responsibilities," the columnist wrote.

The king's abdication in December 1936 after 10 months on the throne made way for his brother, George VI. A dignified and capable king through Britain's war years, he was the father of Queen Elizabeth, who has ruled since 1952. The Times of London wrote that Simpson might have saved the monarchy by ensuring a different line of succession through Edward's respected brother.

Two love stories — one that endured, the other crumbling. Different time. Different standards.

Divorce, which nearly brought down the monarchy half a century ago, is no longer considered a scandal even inside the royal family.

Queen Elizabeth's sister, Princess Margaret, divorced her husband in 1978. The heir to the throne, Prince Charles, married the daughter of divorced parents, and the parents of his brother Andrew's fiancée also are divorced.

If that casual attitude had prevailed in King Edward's time, who knows the story history would have to tell.

What to consider when shopping for rollerblades

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Rollerblades, which were introduced about 10 years ago, have overtaken rollerskates when it comes to sales, said spokespeople for local sporting goods shops.

Mike Shanley, manager of Shummer's Ski Shop in Grosse Pointe Woods, said his store is selling rollerblades for out three years.

"At first, we sold them mostly to kids, but I think I've sold more to adults over the past few years than to anyone else," Shanley said. "People who used to jog are switching to rollerblading because it's more of a low-impact exercise."

Dr. Ron Laskowski, director of emergency medicine at Bon Secours Hospital in Grosse Pointe City, said rollerblading is indeed a good form of exercise.

"I know one man who has lost 20 pounds since he took up rollerblading a few months ago," Laskowski said.

Plus, it can be an enjoyable way to get some fresh air.

"I want to buy some rollerblades," said Melissa Frenda of Grosse Pointe City. "My son has a pair and it looks like such fun."

But what should people look for when buying rollerblades?

Riding experience

First of all, people should consider what the riding experience will be like.

Rollerblades look similar to ice skates, but rollerblades are easier to use, Shanley said.

People who say, "I can't ice skate because my ankles aren't strong enough," may be able to keep their balance on rollerblades without difficulty, because the wheel platforms on rollerblades are 400 percent larger than the blade platforms on ice skates, Shanley said.

Also, rollerblade boots are generally made out of a hard plastic, which tends to provide more ankle support than the leather boots on most ice skates, he said.

"And, it's easier to keep your balance on pavement, rather than ice, because pavement isn't slippery," he said.

People who are used to roller skates will have to learn a different stride. Instead of moving their legs straight forward, rollerbladers propel themselves by moving their legs to the side.

Cost

At most of the sporting goods stores in the area, a new pair of starter rollerblades for adults can be purchased for less than $100. For serious practitioners, top-of-the-line rollerblades are available for more than $300.

At Metro Ski & Sports in Grosse Pointe Woods, adult rollerblades start at $79.99 and go up to $309.99.

Adult rollerblades start at $112.95 and go up to $229.95 at Sports on the Hill in Grosse Pointe Farms, said manager Rita Martin.

At Shummer's Ski Shop in Grosse Pointe Woods, adult rollerblades generally cost $69 to $289, Shanley said.

"You can go to Kmart and buy a cheaper pair that's made out of real inexpensive material, but the wheels and ball bearings will probably wear out in about a month, and often, it costs more to replace the wheels and ball bearings on cheaper rollerblades than the rollerblades themselves cost, boot and all," he said.

In addition to rollerblades, riders should also factor in the cost of buying protective equipment.

Protective gear

"Most of the rollerblading injuries we've seen happened to people who weren't wearing protective equipment," said Dr. Michael McMillan, director of emergency services at Cottage Hospital.

Cottage's emergency room has had a few injured rollerbladers lately, but none of them had closed head injuries, he said.

"Mostly, it's been people who fell and landed on their elbow or hand, causing injuries to those parts and their upper extremities," McMillan said.

However, Bon Secours' emergency room has treated four or five patients who suffered closed head injuries when they fell while rollerblading without a helmet.

"It's worrisome," said Bon Secours' Laskowski. "When people rollerblade, they should wear a helmet."

Rollerbladers should also wear knee pads, elbow pads, and wrist/hand guards, the doctors said.

Wrist/hand guards are important because when people are about to fall, they automatically stretch out their hands and arms in an attempt to lessen the impact, they said.

The bottom part of the wrist/hand guard cushions the blow to one's hand, and the upper part prevents the hand from snapping back, Shanley said.

Elbow pads, knee pads, and wrist/hand guards cost $20-$25 at local sporting goods shops.

Rollerblading helmets also cost about $25, but of the three shops contacted, only Shummer's Ski Shop sells them.

Used equipment

If you're thinking about buying a pair of used rollerblades, be sure to inspect the wheels, spokespersons at local sporting goods stores said.

Make sure the wheels have a lot of material left on them, and that they aren't worn unevenly. Also, make sure that the wheels spin freely. If they don't, the ball bearings may need replacing, which could cost as much as a new pair of rollerblades.

Why HCMA parks allow rollerbladers

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

The Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority (HCMA) allows rollerblading on certain paved areas of its parks, regarding the risk of injury as no greater than for other activities conducted in the parks.

For example, rollerblading is allowed on the hike/bike path at Metro Beach metropark, at Metropolitan Parkway and Jefferson in Harrison Township.

However, it is not allowed in other areas of the park, such as the cement plaza and the marina, because the potential for danger in those areas is too great, due to uneven cement and heavy pedestrian traffic, said William P. Sherman, HCMA director.

"It (rollerblading) is a very popular activity and I hope it doesn't come to the point where we would have to restrict it al-

Anyone who's ever played the driveway shuffle could understand the Secords' predicament.

David and Sue Secord, who live on Sunningdale in Grosse Pointe Woods, have a six-member, three-car family, and an attached two-car garage, which means, "One of our vehicles must remain outside in our driveway," Sue Secord told the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council.

"We wish to keep all our vehicles enclosed in garages."

The Secords asked the council for a variance that would allow them to build a second attached garage, separate from the existing one.

The additional garage would be large enough for only one vehicle.

Their plan met all of the city's zoning requirements regarding distance from lot lines, height and percentage of property coverage. The only roadblock was a city ordinance stating that each residential building should only have one private garage that houses not more than three motor vehicles.

Melissa Mellen, Woods building code official, told the council, "Both garages considered together will comply with the three motor vehicles maximum as stated within the ordinance."

The variance was approved last month.

Stony Creek metropark in Shelby Township and Metro Beach with a 22-mile-long hike/bike path within the next several years, Sherman said.

The $20 million path would be built with the cooperation of the municipalities that lie between the two parks (Harrison Township, Clinton Township, Sterling Heights and Shelby Township) and the federal government, he said.

The federal government will pay for most of the work ($15 million to $17 million), and the municipalities will also chip in if the HCMA plan goes well, Sherman said.

"We're very excited about the project," he said.

Rollerbladers may be excited, too, because Sherman said that as far as he knows, they will be allowed to use the paved path.

Harrison Township has already built a hike/bike path along Metropolitan Parkway, from Metro Beach to Crocker Boulevard, just before I-94, and federal funds have been used to build a hike/bike path along Metropolitan Parkway, from the other side of I-94 to Gratiot, Sherman said.

"Now, we're trying to figure out a way to connect the two paths. The problem is maneuvering the path around the freeway," he said.

2nd graders adopt an acre

University Liggett School second-graders learned about recycling and about saving the world's rain forests in the unit about ecology this year.

During May, the students of Mary Hindle, Ruth Bond and Peggy Dettlinger collected returnable bottles and aluminum cans for deposit. The second-graders collected a total of $167.20, which was donated to The Nature Conservancy's International Program. The conservancy has a project called Adopt An Acre, where citizens are able to buy and sustain rainforest land in the Maya Tropical Forest Conservation Project.

The money donated by the students will help protect land in Guatemala, Belize and southern Mexico.

Ritter honored

Elisabeth Ritter, Grosse Pointe South junior, won two awards.

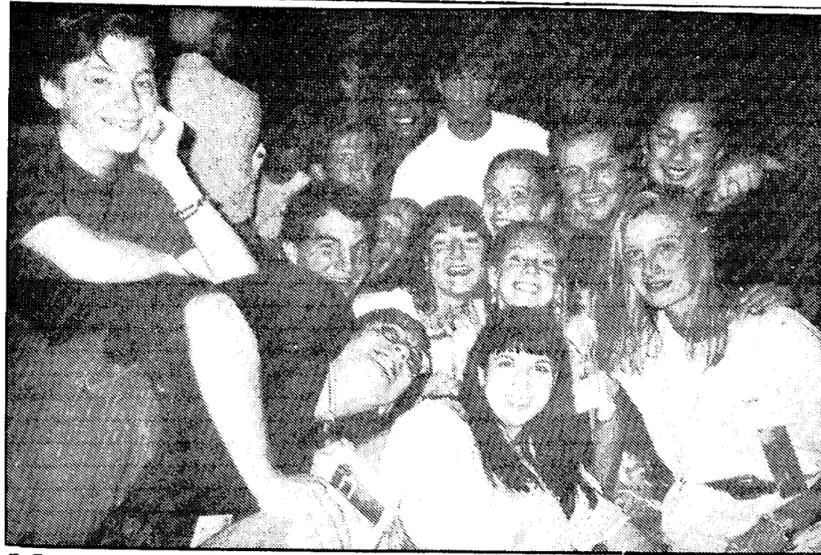

Ritter

She was presented with the Cornell Book Award which is given by the Cornell Club of Michigan to a high school junior who has demonstrated excellence in scholarship, has a keen interest in current affairs and has contributed to the school as well as the outside community.

She was also awarded a Certificate of Merit for being an outstanding junior girl in mathematics and science by the Michigan Tech section of the Society of Women Engineers at Houghton. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Ritter, she was ranked No. 1 in her junior class at the end of the first semester of her junior year.

Gwinnell honored

Andrew Gwinnell, 11, a student at Parcels Middle School, received honorable mention in the April 1992 Cricket League international writing competition. The Harper Woods resident's name appears in the July issue of the children's magazine.

Not just playing around

Grosse Pointe South's dramatists represented the school district well at the 1992 Thespian Festival at Ball State University during the last week of June. The actors and technical people were one of a dozen schools showcased by the festival, sponsored by the International Thespian Society, which honors the top theater programs in the nation. South performed "The Nerd" which went so well the audience was on its feet before the curtain call. Mary Martin, bottom center, who directed the show, said the festival was a great learning experience for her students. In addition to several performances, the students were able to take workshop classes in performing and backstage techniques. Several students were among the 147 who also auditioned for one of 10 scholarships given by the International Thespian Society. Heather King, center, was given a $1,000 scholarship.

High school students need immunization

A second measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) vaccination will be required this fall for new entrants, students transferring to a new school and students advancing to secondary schools, according to Dr. John

B. Artis, Grosse Pointe South High School principal.

In May 1992, the Michigan Department of Public Health enacted Emergency Communicable Disease Rules and Regulations which sets forth, in law, new measles, mumps and rubella immunization requirements for new students.

Basically all new students typically beginning with kindergarten (4 to 7 years old), children transferring to a new school and students advancing to secondary or tertiary schools will be required to have a second measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) vaccination.

Students not adequately immunized will be excluded from school in the fall. Exceptions are those individuals with documented blood antibody proof of an adequate measles protection, those on a medical or other approved waiver and those born prior to 1957 who were likely to have been naturally infected and therefore considered immune.

Doctors report that immunization appointments will be heavily booked near the end of August, so parents are encouraged to make appointments with their health care provider or the health department as soon as possible. The goal is to protect children from diseases that can be life-threatening.

The Wayne County Health Department will accept appointments throughout the summer for the convenience of parents.

South calculus team places 5th in nation

Grosse Pointe South's Calculus Team completed its ninth season by placing fifth in the nation in its final meet of the year.

Competing in the Calculus Division of the Continental Mathematics League, South's team placed tenth overall in the nation with a fifth place finish in the fourth and final meet of the last school year.

The main purpose of the competition is to increase interest in high school mathematics education, according to Carl Justice, team coordinator.

More than 300 of the nation's outstanding high schools competed in the Calculus Division of the CML.

In Region 5, which includes Midwestern states Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin, Jamie Elsila of South compiled a near perfect score of 39 out of a possible 40 points to place No. 1 in the individual scoring.

The schools compete in four meets each year during the regular school year. Any number of students may compete, but only the top six scores on a 10-point scale may be submitted in the team competition. Cumulative scores are kept on each student and on each school. Team members may change from meet to meet.

Elsila and Jeremy Gajewski were singled out by the Continental Mathematics League for their outstanding efforts during the 1991-92 season.

Rimanelli graduates from academy

Jon R. Rimanelli received his diploma from St. John's Military Academy, which he attended for three years, in Delafield, Wis.

He was a member of the Silver Rifles Drill Team, the NCO Club, the Smythe Scholar Society and the golf, tennis and downhill ski teams.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Rimanelli of Grosse Pointe Woods.

Student Spotlight Blair Foust

The following story was written by Blair Foust, 11, son of Julie and Tony Foust of Grosse Pointe. He completed the fourth grade at Richard School.

The Book That Bit Back

One day at school I was reading a big hardback book. It was a good book. As I read, the book got better. I gripped it tighter.

"Ow!" I let go of the book and looked at my hand. There was a big cut. I looked at the book. It had big, razor-sharp teeth. I hurled it across the room and it bit through a metal desk.

"Oh, my gosh." The book started to hop around and eat things and chomp off people's toes.

"Ow! Ee! Ow! Yow!" People were screaming and yelling.

I got up and tried to beat it with a chair, but it ate the chair.

I bashed it with a bucket, but it ate that, too.

I trapped it under a trashcan, closed the door and told everybody about the book. No one believed me until the book came into their classroom and ate their feet, toes, shoes, books, pencils, etc. Everybody ran and was in a frenzy.

"Ow! Ek! Yow! Ow! Eeee!" I was the only person near the book. I thought maybe if I knew what it wanted, I could stop it. I picked up a chair and a dictionary and said, "What do you want?"

The book answered, "I'm hungry for information, so I eat things and get their knowledge."

Then it jumped up and I threw the book at it and ran to the back of the room. I looked around and saw a dictionary. I scrambled over to the shelf and started throwing dictionaries at it. It ate them all.

I threw an entire set of encyclopedias at it.

That was all the informational stuff in the room, except the ... Revolutionary War stuff. I held my ground.

"I'll give you all this stuff if you promise to go away, OK?"

"OK," it answered. So like I said, I fed it all the stuff and it left. For a minute, I thought it would stay, but you can never judge a book by its cover!

grew, it swam with all of the other dinosaurs to California. That was just where the explorer and scientist were relaxing and that dinosaur ate them up.

After that the dinosaurs started to scare everybody and once everybody was gone from California, it started to lay eggs all over California. When they hatched, there were 100 dinosaurs, but only 50 grew to full height. So each of the 50 dinosaurs went and terrorized one of the 50 states.

But one girl in Colorado captured the leader and trained this mother dinosaur. One night she called all of her babies back from the other states and she taught them the tricks she had learned. That one girl made a dinosaur zoo in Utah, but it was ripped down and the dinosaurs died and that is where Dinosaurs National Park is now.

Jarasick Park One day some explorers found a new Hawaiian island and while doing so they met a scientist who had figured out how to make dinosaur eggs. So they became good friends.

But they were pretty mean guys and wanted to take over the U.S.A. So they started to make egg nests all over the island and the dinosaurs came out of these eggs and started to grow and eat and eat and eat.

But one day the scientists got carried away and made a different egg. And when that egg hatched and

This test doesn't require any scanning or screening. There's no blood involved. And you'll see the results right away. You'll find out that laser instruments are being used surgically in more areas of medical practice than you may think. And the use of lasers can result in surgery with less pain, less likelihood of blood transfusions and a quicker, easier recovery.

To learn more about surgery with lasers, ask your doctor, and call the St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan to begin arrangements for a consultation. You'll receive a free brochure telling you about all the benefits of laser surgery at the St. John Laser Center.

At your consultation, an independent physician will discuss your medical problem with you, and help decide if laser surgery might be right for you.

If this test has you thinking, call the St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan to find out more.

Because what you don't know might help heal you.

If you're fond of fondue, this restaurant's for you

By Maureen McNulty
Staff Writer

You remember fondue? Something you tried once after receiving a fondue set as a wedding present in the 1960s. Remember how much fun it was? An easy way to eat and entertain at the same time.

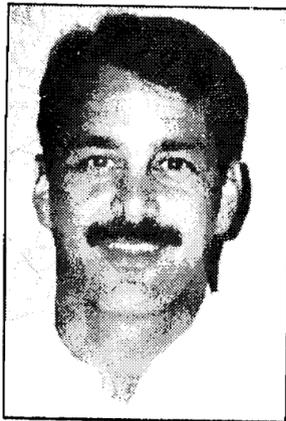

But it's 1992. Do you know where you're fondue set is? Don't worry. There's no need to dig it out of its dusty box now because La Fondue Restaurant recently opened in Royal Oak. All fondue, all the time.

Former Grosse Pointe Woods resident Tim Allard opened La Fondue, the only fondue restaurant in the Detroit metropolitan area, just after Christmas last year following what he described as a three-year odyssey into the world of fondue.

"I first got the idea about 10 years ago when I went with a friend and his girlfriend to a fondue restaurant in Atlanta. It was my first real exposure to fondue," said Allard. "It was great food and a great time. I couldn't understand why there was nothing like this in Michigan."

The restaurant seats patrons in intimate booths which have communal fondue pots inlaid in the center of each table. The pots are removable and can hold either melted Swiss or cheddar cheeses for appetizers, piping hot soybean oil for cooking chicken, beef or seafood entrees, and white or milk chocolate to dip fresh fruits and cake in for dessert.

Allard said he plans to introduce a broth fondue as an alternative to the hot oil for a lighter summer menu.

Fondue is a participatory dining experience, Allard said.

"It's the most communal of all dining experiences. It allows the customer to participate in the food preparation and allows a sense of sharing, especially when deciding which type of cheese or chocolate you want at your table," he said.

"Eating fondue lends itself to more conversation than the standard restaurant. We think it's an ideal place for a first date because you come in and you automatically have something to talk about."

Allard, who received his MBA from Wayne State University and is a graduate of Grosse Pointe North and Western Michigan University, was working as a purchasing agent for Electronic Data Systems and never considered going into the restaurant business for himself because he had no prior experience.

"But in a huge corporate environment like EDS, there was too much bureaucracy, politics and levels of management that always got in the way of what you really wanted to accomplish," said Allard, "so I started to look for something else and I remembered that fondue restaurant."

For three years Allard researched 15 fondue restaurants nationwide and found that many had been in business at least 10 to 15 years under the same ownership.

The last leg of his research included working in a Chicago restaurant that had been in business over 25 years.

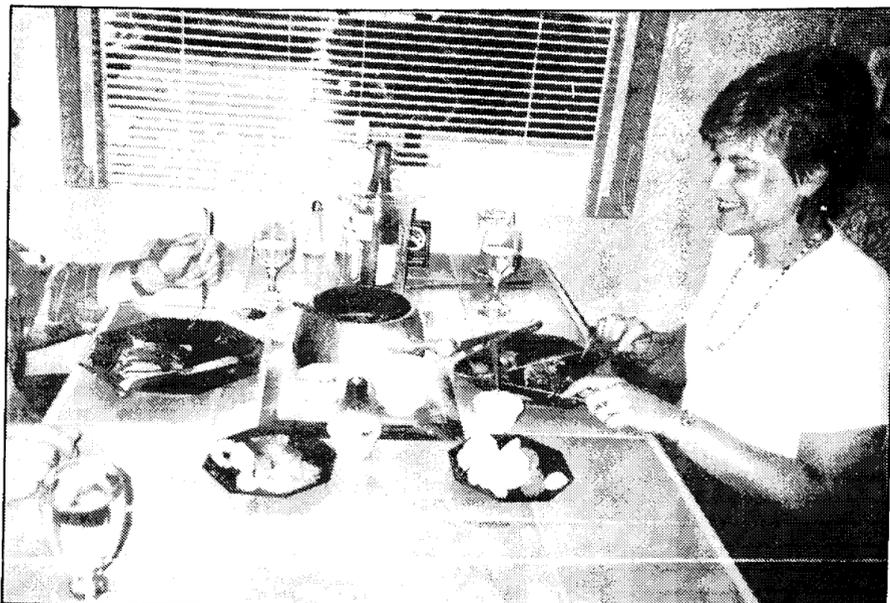

"It was very appealing," Allard said. "Quite often, restaurants go out of business because they change ownership and new owners change the concept."

At the Chicago restaurant, Allard also observed things he didn't want at his place, such as free-standing tables, which could topple over, an open flame below an elevated fondue pot and cramped seating.

"Safety is a primary concern and that's why I have the fondue pot down in the table a bit and why I wanted to have all booth seating, which limits me in flexibility because I can't just stick two tables together," he said.

Extreme caution is stressed in the menu and by servers when dealing with the hot oil and fondue forks. Even though a tempura batter is provided to coat the meat and vegetables before dipping in the oil, which helps steam cook them, occasional splattering of hot oil can occur.

"That's just territory you open yourself up to," said Allard. "But I don't know of anyone who's really hurt themselves. More often, people burn themselves by touching the hot pot."

And if you need to eat and run, Allard warns, La Fondue's not for you.

"Two people should plan on spending about two hours to finish a meal and about three hours if they get an appetizer, entree and dessert," he said.

"Fondue shouldn't be rushed. We don't control the meal, the customer does. One of the reasons we can't take reservations on Friday or Saturday night is because we can't control the pace of the meals."

"We have some people who spend at least 3 1/2 hours here, making it their dinner and entainment for the evening. They eat and chat and just have a good time."

At the half-year mark, Allard said business has been very good and much better than anticipated.

"We knew there would be interest and we knew we picked a good city to open in, with all the restaurants and downtown activities in Royal Oak. But we've just had tremendous word of mouth. Once the word got around, business just exploded," he said.

"We did really well in the winter months and then business slowed down a bit. But after the first few weeks of summer, business has started to pick up again."

In addition to spending several hours to eat a meal, plan to spend at least $40 for dinner and dessert for two.

La Fondue also offers wine, imported beers and cocktails.

The most popular entree (there are five to choose from), and the most expensive, is the Fondue Feast, which offers a taste of beef, chicken and assorted seafood.

The cheese fondue appetizers and chocolate fondue desserts, both for two, range from $6 to $7 per person; entrees range from $11 to $16.

La Fondue is located at 111 South Main, just south of 11 Mile, in downtown Royal Oak. Hours are Monday through Thursday, 5-10 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 5-11 p.m.; and Sunday 4-10 p.m.

Park council 'chicken's out,' tables proposed gourmet restaurant

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Parking problems may prevent a gourmet chicken restaurant from roosting in Grosse Pointe Park.

Sherwood Clifford wants to open the restaurant in a building he owns at 15102 Kercheval, which has, in recent years, housed a computer company called Automated Health Systems Inc.

His building is on the corner of Maryland, next door to Cupacino's, a coffee house that opened this spring.

"I don't want Kentucky Fried skinless chicken; that's not what this is about," Clifford said.

Rather, his restaurant would serve slow-cooked, rotisserie-roasted chicken, much like the Boston Chicken Rotisserie restaurant that is going up in Grosse Pointe Woods, he said.

"But I will also have Italian foods, like pasta salads," and a pizza-like bread on which customers can put their own toppings (one company markets that kind of bread under the name Boboli), he said. "It wouldn't be your typical fast food, which is frozen and heated up. It would all be fresh, healthy food, prepared at the restaurant."

He said the restaurant would be open for lunch and dinner. A full lunch would cost $5-$6, and a personal pizza may cost $7, he said.

His building has about 1,600 square feet of space, and at least half of that would be taken up by the kitchen, he said. In the remaining area, he'd like to set up 10 or 12 tables for dine-in service.

"About 60 percent of the business would be carry-out," and he might offer lunch delivery on a trial basis, he said.

Park Mayor Palmer T. Heenan told Clifford, "I'd like very much to eat your food, but I have difficulty with the parking problem, and I'm distressed that we might put pressure on other businesses in the area if we grant you a variance."

The city's zoning ordinance requires Clifford's proposed business to have four parking spaces, but because his building existed before the ordinance was adopted, he only needs 50 percent of that requirement, which is two parking spaces.

put in his building, and to deny him a variance would deny him the use of his building.

Miller said she voted against the motion because parking is available at an under-used parking lot down the street.

"I don't think it's unreasonable to ask people to walk half a block to get to a restaurant. We're just spoiled," she said.

Ausherman then made a motion to grant Clifford's variance request, saying, "I think anything that brings traffic to an area at night is good for all of the businesses in the area, because it promotes safety."

Miller seconded his motion, but a short time later, she and Ausherman withdrew it after Heenan suggested that the issue be tabled.

"It seems the council is uncertain on how to go with this. It's divided, which isn't such a bad thing, necessarily, but I think it would benefit all of us if we all had more time to study the parking issue, and if you (Clifford) had more time to come up with a parking plan," Heenan said.

The council voted unanimously to table the issue until July 13.

Food fight: Farmer Jack, Kroger duke it out in the aisles

By Margie Reins Smith

Feature Editor

Colorful full-page newspaper ads scream for attention:

Free watermelon . . . Lowest price in years . . . Double coupons valued up to $1 . . . Buy one, get one free . . . Open July 4th regular hours . . . Super Saver coupons . . . Why shop anywhere else?

Two of southeastern Michigan's heavy-weight supermarket chains, Kroger and Farmer Jack, are in the middle of a food fight.

And consumers are winning.

Kroger employees recently signed a contract with management after an eight-week strike in which they demanded higher wages, better benefits and greater job security.

Farmer Jack wants to keep all its new shoppers — the former Kroger customers who refused to cross the picket line during the strike.

Kroger wants its customers back.

"It truly is a buyers' market," said Ed Deeb of Grosse Pointe Woods, president of the Michigan Food and Beverage Association, a trade association for the industry. "People should stock up now, while they can enjoy good prices."

Deeb said competition is hot and heavy between Kroger and Farmer Jack, which are the only traditional supermarket chains with stores in the Grosse Pointes.

One competitive technique used by both supermarkets is the coupon promotion. The stores will double the cents-off for manufacturers' coupons up to $1.

"They're losing money on this," Deeb said. "The manufacturer picks up the face value of the coupon only." The rest is absorbed by the store.

Another technique: Farmer Jack offered more than a half dozen buy-one-get-one-free promotions on specific items last week. "This gives the retailer more control over the promotion," Deeb said. Kroger has also used buy-one-get-one-free promotions.

Both retailers are also offering low prices on popular midsummer picnic items.

"Kroger gave away free watermelons to customers who spent $50 last week," Deeb said. "Kroger wants its business back."

Deeb said Farmer Jack is running advertisements that thank its "new customers."

Kroger ads say "welcome back" to old customers.

It's war.

"Independent stores had the opportunity (during the strike) to capture additional sales. Now they also have to worry about keeping customers," Deeb said.

We did an informal, unscientific comparison of prices for typical picnic items sold at the two supermarket chains at stores in Grosse Pointe. We went to the Farmer Jack store on Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods and the Kroger store on Kercheval in the Village.

We had a shopping list.

The shopping trip took place Thursday afternoon, July 2.

Parking behind the Kroger store costs 25 cents an hour, and the meter maid was hovering nearby. Parking was free at Farmer Jack.

At the Kroger store, aisles were crowded and some shelves were empty as employees were busy re-stocking items and re-arranging displays.

"Consumers will see a lot of confusion, empty shelves and commotion for a while," Deeb said. "There will be some inconvenience."

"Nobody is making any money now. They're just positioning themselves. Kroger hopes to stabilize within 30 days, then be back to normal."

Both stores had adequate checkout lanes available. Seven of eight were open at Kroger; one out of five at Farmer Jack. There was no waiting in line at either store.

Both stores offered friendly service and most employees were congenial and helpful. The Kroger checkout person eyeballed manufacturers' coupons more carefully for expiration dates than the Farmer Jack checkout person did.

Here's what we found:

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

"He who bids too much and isn't provisioned often falters."
Ricky Whist Proverb Origin Unknown

I regret that today I must admit this columnist blew one; caught red handed in a mistake as declarer and no bluff or justification could alibi my plight.

The morning of May one, I arose and was ready to play brilliant bridge at Judy Thomas' Friday function, but in time it was apparent I wasn't so ordained.

My special friend, Jack Danaher, had agreed to pair me in play that day and such was always a fun moment for this one.

As the afternoon passed, we were progressing somewhere just above mediocrity. Then came board twenty-four and I was particularly miffed with what I perceived to be my partner's misjudgment. Normally he gathers a handful of queens and jacks and turns them into a meaningful descriptive bid. On this occasion, he was gifted with an ace and a king too which I felt effected his head negatively. Such power he seldom held and this prompted him to make a game forcing call after I was only able to project a paupers share of pasteboards. The result cost our average some additional slippage even though I later concluded, "we was fixed."

Now the traffic can't go just north and in time the opportunity for me to be suspect was set. Lamentably it was the afternoon's last board and we were in the thick of it to finish well out of first.

Jack had everything I could expect from the dummy. It was now up to me to succeed. A straight line of play would at best produce only ten tricks so I had to implement a better plan. Now that I'm a day or so past forty, it takes a little longer, but finally after much contemplation I decided on a dummy reversal which was my undoing. Unfortunately, I was an entry short of success and won only eleven tricks. "He who bids too much and isn't provisioned often falters."

My partner as always displayed a patience not graced by many and waited until the room had cleared and his comments would cause no discomfort. He then quietly scolded me in his ever so friendly way. "If I may take the liberty, I believe you had a better play for twelve tricks." How many of you see it?

Win the diamond ace. Win the heart ace and ruff a heart in dummy low. Ruff a diamond. Ruff a third heart with dummy's ace. At trick 5, play a small club from dummy and when East plays his queen duck it. At trick 7, ruff East's high heart in dummy then play the trump queen. 9, play a small club to your king and draw the trumps with your king/jack. At trick 12, play a club to dummy's ace and if the out clubs split three/three you're home free winning the last club in dummy. True, it's only a 36% probability the six missing clubs dividing evenly, but some chance is better than none and as Jack said, the reversal offered none as you didn't have enough entries.

'Southwest Fest' will raise funds for Capuchin Center

The Souper Summer Celebration XI, the eleventh annual fundraiser for the Capuchin Community Center, will have a Southwest theme this year.

"Southwest Fest" will begin at 8 p.m. Friday, July 24 at the Roostertail, and will include Southwestern foods, a cash bar and music by the Johnny Trudell Orchestra; Royce; Anthony Birchett & Co.; and the Sun Messengers.

Raffle tickets will offer guests a chance to win jewelry and prizes donated by Edmund T. Ahee Jewelry Co. First prize is a lady's diamond ring valued at $10,000; other prizes are more watches and diamond rings ranging in value from $325 to $3,990.

"During the summer, nobody counts the homeless," said the Rev. Lloyd Thiel, director of the Capuchin Center. "Nevertheless, the pain of not having a place to stay is as real as it is during the winter."

All raffle proceeds will go to the Capuchin Community Center to support its work feeding, educating and counseling the poor and less fortunate of Detroit.

There's no admission charge. Snacks are complimentary. For more information on the Souper Summer Celebration XI or the raffle, call 886-4600 Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

DSOH news: The Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall Volunteer Council has a new bunch of officers, board members and chairmen. Three Guys Productions brings Detroit more theater

By Ronald J. Bernas

Staff Writer

Their ideas are as simple as their name: Three Guys Productions.

They want to provide Detroit's theatergoers with innovative local productions and furnish Detroit's actors with new parts that will be fun to play.

So they formed a production company and are putting on a show. Well, two shows, actually. And four concerts. And they're bringing in one of off-Broadway's most talked about musicals.

They think they're on the way up, but their feet are firmly on the ground.

The three guys of Three Guys Productions are brothers Gerry and Dan Castle and Mike Vigilant — respectively songwriter, director/actor and scriptwriter/lyricist.

"This thing started off eight or nine years ago," said Dan Castle. "A group of us was doing two melodramas at a local theater and we thought it would be fun to musicalize them."

The two one-act melodramas were known collectively as "Foiled Again" and were already published works by Tim Kelly, the most published playwright in the country. They added songs with names like "It's a Dirty Shame I Ain't Filthy Rich," and "I Won't Take Your Lyin' Lyin' Down," sent it to a publisher — the same one who published "Foiled Again" — and it was published.

"Kyp Sinatra's Mobile Musical (Memorial)," an original musical, written by Vigilant, with music by Gerry Castle and original direction by Dan, came next. It's a spoof about America's greatest undiscovered (fictional) songwriter. Its almost-over-the-edge music — including America's dance craze "Do The Fetal Position" — and warped sense of reality made it a cult hit within their particular circle.

"There are a lot of adult innuendoes, it's not heavy, there's no message, and it's good and bawdy," Vigilant said.

"And that's why people liked it," Dan Castle added.

They also musicalized another Kelly script, "Phantom of the O'pry," a farce based on "Phantom of the Opera." Its list of songs includes "I Enjoy Being a Ghoul."

"Foiled Again" opens at Ferndale's Magic Bag Theatre as the first Three Guys production on Friday, July 10 and will run through Aug. 1. "O'pry" will open Aug. 7 and run through Sept. 5.

Both plays are proven crowd-pleasers. Not only did they draw sell-out audiences when they were produced locally, they were published and were performed in 300 different places across the country last year.

"I've been in shows that have been very serious and required a lot from me and I gave everything I had, and all 10 of the people who saw it liked it," said Dan Castle, who has done community and semi-professional theater for years. "These shows aren't that. They're fun for everybody."

"And Gerry is a tremendously melodic songwriter," Vigilant said. "People really enjoy his music."

All the talent is local, but that doesn't mean it's not professional caliber, Dan Castle said.

"The people in the cast can stack up to anyone," he added. "And as an actor, it's exciting to do things that haven't been done before, so we've got a lot of creative, talented people."

Two Grosse Pointe residents — Holly Graham and Tim Reinman — are in the two shows.

But the Castles and vigilants also know that local talent isn't the kind of draw that keeps a theater going, which is why they're hosting a Michigan Grown concert series.

A series of four Tuesday evening concerts will also bring people to the Magic Bag Theatre, which is not only the stage for their plays, but also is the base of operations for Three Guys Productions.

Blues duo Peter Madcat Ruth and Shari Kane play July 14; folk musician Mike Berst and his ensemble take the stage July 28; folk singers The North Country Opera tell their tales of northern Michigan on Aug. 11; and blues/boogie pianist Mr. B plays Aug. 25.

"We have to bring in the business to keep things going," Dan Castle said. "And we have to keep things going to bring 'Forever Plaid' here."

"Forever Plaid" is one of off-Broadway's biggest sensations. It's a musical comedy tribute to the guy groups of the late '40s and early '50s like the Mills Brothers, the Four Lads and the Platters.

The show has been selling out since it opened off-broadway three years ago and is playing open-ended runs to capacity crowds from L.A. to Boston.

Dan Castle was in New York on business — he's a theatrical insurance broker — and stumbled onto the play. Three Guys bought the licensing rights in Michigan for the play and will bring it to the Magic Bag in the fall.

"We're absolutely doing a real Broadway show," Dan Castle said.

"A lot of people are excited about what we're doing here," Vigilant said. "I think there's a place for this and for things we want to do."

Until recently, Vigilant worked for his father's land development company. He's now full-time at Three Guys. Gerry Castle is a senior technical analyst at Blue Cross/Blue Shield.

"Doing something like this has been the focus of my life for the last 10 years," Vigilant said. "We'd like to do all sorts of things here. We want to try out new works by ourselves and other playwrights and perhaps develop some actors' workshops or workshops on how to write musicals."

And, yes, they want to perform more of their own pieces, which Vigilant says is one of the main reasons Three Guys was formed. In various stages of completion are "Bowling, A Musical," which is self-explanatory; "The 13th Labor of Hercules," a new-age love story set in Greektown; and "Suburban Love Cries," tales of modern love.

"I think there's a place for a group like us," Vigilant said. "We'll find out if we're right."

'Taming of the Shrew' to play at War Memorial

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial will present the National Shakespeare Company's "The Taming of the Shrew" on Monday, July 13 at 8 p.m. The play has brought laughter to audiences for almost 400 years. Written in 1593, Shakespeare's farce about the battle between the sexes is still fresh and charming today.

The plot concerns a wealthy man (Baptista) of Padua, Italy, who has two daughters of marriageable age. The elder, Katherine (Kate) is beautiful but extremely willful. Her sister, Bianca, is also beautiful but more appealing to men. Their father will not permit Bianca to even think of marriage until her hellion sister is safely wooed and wed.

When a handsome gentleman named Petruchio arrives on the scene, the fun begins. He woos the difficult Kate in a hilarious romp, directed by Richard Corley with a talented cast of performers.

In the 1950's, Cole Porter was inspired by Shakespeare's "Shrew" to write "Kiss Me Kate," one of his most popular musical comedies. It continues to inspire modern television shows such as "Cheers" and "Moonlighting," which feature sparring couples who are attracted to each other but decline to make commitments.

The New York-based National Shakespeare Company is currently in its 29th year of touring.

Voted the eastside's "Best Kept Secret" in Detroit Monthly last year, the 35th Summer Music Festival continues to light up the Lake St. Clair shoreline at the non-profit, Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Road, in Grosse Pointe Farms. Friends, family, and co-workers will enjoy warm summer evenings with picnic suppers, moonlight and music, on the lakeside of the Renaissance-style mansion, built in 1910, and surrounded by colorful gardens.

Concertgoers are invited to purchase or bring their own picnic suppers. Picnic suppers are $7.50 and must be purchased no later than the preceding Friday, by 5 p.m. Tables will be provided for those purchasing picnic suppers who also hold reserved seat tickets. Individual tickets are $12 for reserved seating; $7.50 for lawn admission; and half price for children under 12. Special packages are also available.

All concerts are on Monday evenings at 8 p.m.; grounds open at 6:30 p.m. In case of inclement weather, concerts will be held indoors. The outstanding lineup of local and national talent also includes: The Best of Broadway: Monday, July 20; Clear Fork Bluegrass Band: Monday, July 27; Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band: Monday, Aug. 3; Grosse Pointe Symphony Concert and fireworks: Monday, Aug. 10 (rain date is Aug. 11). Visa/MC may be used to purchase tickets by phone with a minimum order of $20 (add 50 cents for handling), by calling 881-7511.

'Unlawful Entry' breaks in with thrills

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

The frightening power of evil to destroy unsuspecting victims, particularly when it is masked in charismatic charm, fuels "Unlawful Entry," a gripping crime thriller that esca-lates until it explodes in a surprising finale.

It contains within it memories of previous films in which a family is ravaged psychologically when trust was betrayed, such as "Fatal Attraction," "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" and "Sleeping with the Enemy."

In "Unlawful Entry" we have a police officer diabolically insinuating himself into the lives of a young couple because he envies their affluent life style and lusts after the wife.

The setting is a Los Angeles suburb where Michael Carr (Kurt Russell) lives with his wife Karen (Madeleine Stowe). With style and economy, director Jonathan Kaplan conveys the feeling that while the Carrs live well, they are financially over-extended and partners in an uneasy union.

One night Michael is working downstairs on plans for securing backing for his rock concert palace and Karen is watching television upstairs.

When she thinks she hears a noise, she calls for Michael. He grabs a golf club and searches the premises.

When he is satisfied that no one has broken in and is about to rejoin Karen, he freezes when an intruder bolts out of the closet and grabs a monster-kitchen knife and the negligee-clad Karen and dares Michael to do something about it.

Not wishing to harm anyone but rather looking for loot, the intruder drags Karen as far as the pool and throws her in. The only injuries Michael and Karen suffer are psychological. When they call the police, officers Pete Davis (Ray Liotta) and Ray Cole (Roger E. Mosley) respond. It is immediately apparent that Pete has designs on Karen. With his piercing blue eyes, black wavy hair and disarming smile, he is a handsome man who has no trouble impressing the ladies.

Karen, with her long flowing black hair, lovely face and per-

More blarney than science Bradbury's Irish tales are fun

Green Shadows, White Whale

By Ray Bradbury
Knopf, 271 pages, $21

Ray Bradbury, the noted science-fiction master, has departed, temporarily we presume, from his usual genre. His newest book, "Green Shadows, White Whale," is a delightful, rollicking concoction of fantasy and fact. On the surface, these are Bradbury's memories of 1953 when, as a young and relatively untried writer, he was abruptly summoned to Ireland by the famous screen director John Huston to write the screen play of "Moby Dick."

After spending seven arduous, hilarious, and extraordinary months in the misty land of green shadows, observing the quirks and the national character of its fey denizens as well as coping with the mercurial nature of the great director himself, Bradbury collected a bulging bagful of tales and recollections which he has woven into a magnificent garland. He has produced a rich novel worthy of taking its place in his oeuvre.

Several of his most memorable episodes have already appeared in various publications under a different form. Here Bradbury has cleverly incorporated his Irish tales into the new material to fashion a completely new book. He recounts his troubling encounter with a poor man on O'

Connell Bridge, caught in a merciless downpour, begging while singing. Then there is the amusing account of the anthem sprinters — Irish moviegoers who try to dash out of the theater at the last minute to avoid listening to the national anthem.

Bradbury describes a startling meeting he had with that exalted wit, George Bernard Shaw. The mischievous Irishman and the village priest exchange barbed witticisms concerning religion and blasphemies concerning the Irish psyche. This repartee highlights the importance that alcohol and imagination have upon the Irish character, and Bradbury grows to well understand and appreciate the Irish gift of gab, their inspired, drink-fueled conversations which cause the people of Eire to forever exaggerate in order to deceive their credulous listeners, especially those from across the sea in America.

A frustrating confrontation between our narrator and a beggar woman with a bawling babe-in-arms, leads Bradbury, his suspicions raised, to try to track down this pair only to be thwarted at every turn. Finally, he manages to run into them, and discovers that the babe is a middle-aged dwarf with years of experience in crying from the arms of his sister, posing as the mother. Their story wins the author's compassion and respect as he bids them farewell and good luck.

There is the electrifying saga of David Snell-Orkney and his faithful band of five young, winsome followers who sing in melodious voices while staring admiringly at such sights as the glazed windows in a church and the leaves blowing on the forest trees. This strange fairy-like group spends its time in contemplation, reciting poems and wandering. As one of the pub habitués sagely remarks to the author and others: "From a lifetime of travel and thought, it comes to the top of my mind there's a strange resemblance between the likes of them and the likes of us." Naturally, this acute insight causes a profound consternation among the pub customers, who question the comparison between themselves and a group of fairies who love beauty and nature.

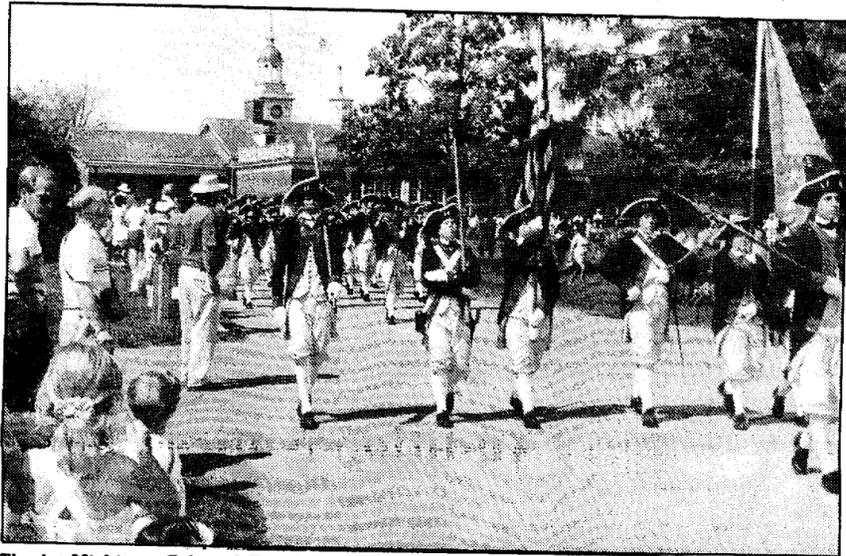

Generously interspersed among these Irish tales, so full of blarney and humor, are colorful scenes with Bradbury, the unconfident scriptwriter, and Huston, the dictatorial director, dueling one another with temperamental swords. Soon enough, Bradbury recognizes the malicious joking of his employer, and he is able, mostly, to gird himself against Huston's sallies. It is a surprising relationship, peppered with Huston's verbal attacks, but Bradbury has respect for the director's wide experience and intelligence in the arts. In spite of Huston's sarcastic overlordship, Bradbury succeeds under great duress in completing his screenplay which became the fine film, "Moby Dick."

At Finn's pub among the regulars, Bradbury's farewell meeting ends after he offers his heart-felt peroration, in answer to a question on how he felt about the Irish and their land: "Imagination. Good God, everything's wrong. Where are you? On a flyspeck isle nine thousand miles north of nowhere! What wealth is there? None! What natural resources? Only one: the resourceful genius, the golden mind, of everyone I've met! The mind that looks out the eyes, the words that roll off the tongue in response to events no bigger than the eye of a needle! From so little you glean so much; squeeze the last ounce of life from a flower with one petal, a night with no stars, a day with no sun, a theater haunted by old films, a bump on the head that in America would have been treated with a Band-Aid. Here and everywhere in Ireland, it goes on. Someone picks up a string, someone else ties a knot in it, a third adds a bow, and by morn you've got a rug on the floor. A drape at the window, a harp-thread tapestry singing on the wall, all starting from that string! The church puts her on her knees, the weather drowns her, politics all but buries her... but Ireland still sprints for that far exit. And do you know, by God, I think she'll make it."

Bradbury's use of language is marvelously expressive. This, wedded to his enthusiasm for the Irish and their Emerald Isle, has yielded a book filled with vivid episodes. It is alive with humor, compassion, anger, and bewilderment, and Bradbury does not stint anything in his loving tribute to Ireland and her uncommon people.

The 1st Michigan Colonial Fife & Drum Corps, above, provides the music and atmosphere for Greenfield Village's Colonial Life Festival, July 11 and 12.

Greenfield Village hosts Colonial days

Everyday life of the men, women and children who built a new American nation two centuries ago will be vividly recreated during Greenfield Village's Colonial Life Festival on July 11 and 12.

Colonial re-enactment groups from across the country will join the village's costumed interpreters in rekindling the early American spirit on the home front and the Revolutionary War battlefield.

"We'll present an in-depth look at Colonial life that's rarely seen in the Midwest," said Dan Kirk, coordinator of special programs. "Visitors of all ages can discover and experience a variety of domestic and military aspects of this colorful era."

The sounds of fife and drum music will fill the air, provided by the 1st Michigan Colonial Fife & Drum Corps, C.A. Palmer Fife & Drum Corps and more.

At the Connecticut Saltbox House, visitors can observe the day-to-day tasks a family performed in the 1760s, including preparing a meal on the open hearth and spinning wool.

Demonstrations and hands-on activities highlight domestic skills the colonists practiced — carding wool to make yarn and using a drop spindle, candle making and basket weaving.

African colonists are also represented by their crafts and art. Admission to the Colonial Life Festival and all special weekend programs is included with Greenfield Village admission. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village is located at Oakwood Boulevard and Village Road in Dearborn just west of the Southfield Freeway and south of Michigan Avenue.

Calligraphers to meet at Oakland University

Oakland University, Rochester Hills, will host MOSAIC, the Twelfth International Assembly of Lettering Artists, the week of July 11-18. Calligraphers from various countries will attend classes and lectures and view exhibits.

"The conference is an opportunity for calligraphers of all skill levels to enhance their love of letters," says Candi Schwark of Rochester Hills, director of the MOSAIC steering committee. "There are still openings for those who want to register."

Several Michigan artists are represented in the 150-item exhibit which successfully toured Russia before the dissolution of the USSR.

Several exhibits are planned for Meadow Brook Gallery and on the campus of Oakland University including a Lothar Hoffmann retrospective. Hoffmann, chairman of the graphic design department at the Center for Creative Studies, is the honorary chairperson of MOSAIC.

During the same week the Detroit Institute of Arts will display a collection of ancient manuscripts.

All exhibits are open to the public. For further information call Virginia Lee Clark at 548-2743.

Motor City Music Guide needs entries

Looking for a place to buy that hard-to-find import CD? Where to go to get your sound system repaired or replaced? A new venue to hear your favorite bands and jams?

The answers to these and a thousand other questions will be found in the Motor City Music Guide, a reference tool and source book unlike any other. In pre-production now, the music guide will be published this fall.

The music guide will contain subscription reference listings, display advertising, and an abundance of other useful information for anyone involved in Michigan's music community. Reference listings will be categorized in over 50 different areas, ranging from musicians (bands to individual players to rap artists), career guidance (management to song publishing to legal representation), recording (rehearsal to demo to 48-track master), packaging and manufacturing, sales and distribution, live performance (mobile DJs to neighborhood clubs to the Palace), professional and home equipment (sales, rental and service), video production, image support services, and full media listings.

Every aspect of making, selling, transmitting and appreciating music in Michigan will be covered.

The music guide represents an alliance of Michigan media veterans with an impressive track record of success. Detroit's award-winning weekly publication for the news and arts, The Metro Times, will handle distribution and support for the project. Genie Parker and Doug Trevethan of Zooming In magazine will be handling day-to-day operations.

They have recently completed production of the sixth edition of the Michigan Media Production Guide for the Detroit Producers Association. Under their control it has become one of the most acclaimed of the country's many local film guides. (Oscar-winning Michigan filmmakers Sue Marx and Pam Conn said, "We call it our production bible.")

Joining them is former Creem magazine editor Ben Edmonds, who has also managed the Doors and coordinated the music for the Emmy-winning film, "Dear America: Letters Home from Vietnam."

Unlike other directories, the music guide is more than just listings. "We'll offer entertaining features like 'Can't Forget the Motor City,' a special section in which transplanted Michiganders like Iggy Pop, John Sinclair, Berry Gordy, Don Was and Alice Cooper tell you what they miss about home. And 'Favorite Things,' in which Michigan media luminaries like Anita Baker, Ted Nugent, Aretha Franklin and others tell you their favorite cultural things to do around town. And 'Michigan Moments,' where writers like Dave Marsh, Club Koda and Stewart Francke report on significant dates in Motor City music history," Edmonds said.

For more information contact Parker or Trevethan at 542-3440.

Time went by and the classic film "Casablanca," starring the incomparable on-screen magic of Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman, celebrates its 50th anniversary at the Fox Theatre, where a new master print will be shown on the big screen. Perhaps the most legendary movie Hollywood has ever produced, "Casablanca" is filled with suspenseful action, glorious romance and crackling dialogue. The plot of this classic film unfolds during World War II in the Moroccan city of Casablanca, a metropolis teeming with Europeans desperate for passage to neutral Lisbon. Played by Ingrid Bergman, the character Ilsa is fleeing from the Nazis with her French Resistance-hero husband, Humphrey Bogart stars as a world-weary nightclub owner, American Rick Blaine, whose stoic philosophy is, "I stick my neck out for nobody."

Tickets for "Casablanca" are on sale now at the Fox Theatre box office, the Joe Louis and Cobo Arena box offices and all Ticketmaster outlets, including Hudson's and Harmony House. Michigan: Elk watching to parasailing Spending time outdoors in Michigan is easy with all the available golf courses, forests, beaches and lakes. But there are also many people who spend their time outside pursuing more offbeat activities.

Fortunately, both the Upper and Lower peninsulas offer enough diverse and unusual pursuits to keep adventurers busy, according to AAA Michigan.

Here are 10 examples of such summer ventures, starting with six activities suited for daring souls:

- Challenge yourself at Warren Dunes State Park near Benton Harbor where hang-gliders soar off 150-foot-tall sand dunes. Beginners can call the park, (616) 426-4013, to acquire names of hang-gliding instructors.
- A different type of gliding takes place at Frankfort Airport, home base of the Northwest Michigan Soaring Club. Weekends are a good time to arrange a glider trip 2,000 feet above Lake Michigan and the dunes.

- Rock climbers head to Grand Ledge near Lansing for some vertical maneuvering. The 40-foot-tall ledges along the Grand River provide a variety of climbing challenges. Grand Ledge city parks allow climbing, as long as participants sign a waiver of liability available at city hall. An area firm also provides day-long weekend classes for beginners.

- Silver Lake State Park near Mears sets aside 450 acres for off-road vehicles (ORV). Those without wheels can rent ORVs or take dune trips with commercial operators in the area. Pedestrians will find 750 acres of dunes reserved just for them.

- Grand Traverse Bay is the locale for people who want to strap on a parachute and attach themselves to a boat with a 300- or 500-foot line. Parasailers will fly 200 to 300 feet above the bay depending on the length of line selected.

- The sixth activity requires completing diving classes. But the effort pays off at the Thunder Bay Underwater Preserve near Alpena, which boasts the most shipwrecks per square mile of any spot in the Great Lakes. The preserve has dives suited for beginners, and dive boat charter service is available.

- Too daunting? Here are four activities for the more sedentary traveler:

- Pull up a lawn chair and watch the ships and boats cruise by. Michigan offers countless vantage points along the Great Lakes to enjoy marine traffic. One of the best sites is Algonac State Park along the St. Clair River. Close-up views of freighters and ore carriers are main park attractions.

- If viewing wildlife sounds more interesting, head to the Upper Peninsula for an opportunity to observe moose. The Marquette County tourism council distributes a free moose guide and Van Riper State Park explains the "moose lift" that brought these creatures back to Michigan.

- In the Lower Peninsula, elk take the spotlight near Gaylord. Dusk is a prime viewing time for motorists driving between Gaylord and Vanderbilt. The Gaylord Area Convention and Tourism Bureau has more information.

- Almost everyone has heard of Tahquamenon Falls, but more than 100 other waterfalls cascade over rocks and ledges in the Upper Peninsula. One spot worth checking out is north of Ironwood along County Road 513, also known as the Black River Parkway. Seven waterfalls are within walking distance of the road.

Michigan Opera Theater gets $100,000 grant

Michigan Opera Theatre has announced that the Detroit-based Skillman Foundation has awarded the company a grant of $100,000 in support of MOT's general operating budget for the 1992-93 season. The grant was $25,000 more than last year's gift.

"The Skillman Foundation has continuously demonstrated dynamic support of the opera company's efforts," said MOT general director David DiChiera. "This year's generous increase in operating funds comes at a crucial time in the opera company's history, and confirms the foundation's continued confidence in the direction MOT is taking to secure its future operations."

The Skillman Foundation was founded in December 1960 by Rose P. Skillman, widow of Robert H. Skillman, vice-president and director of Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. The foundation is a private, grant-making agency with assets of $350 million.

MOT Theatre is a non-profit cultural institution whose activities are supported in part by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs, the National Endowment for the Arts, and other individuals, corporations and foundations. Michigan Opera Theatre is an equal opportunity employer.

From flower beds to (pass the salt!) 15-pound radishes

Were you aware Michigan, long known for its gardeners, comes by this heritage naturally?

In ages past, a pre-historic race inhabited this area long before the American Indians were here, and the only record we have of its unusual ability and great intelligence are the so-called "garden beds."

When Europeans arrived in Michigan in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, they were astonished to find these symmetrical plots in southeastern and western Michigan. In 1827, historian Henry Schoolcraft wrote about these mysterious gardens:

"The garden beds are raised patches of ground separated by sunken paths and are generally in the shape of a wheel with spikes running out to a circular ridge from a circle within. (This is still a popular pattern.)

"Sometimes the ancient gardens were rectangles arranged in blocks. The gardens resemble the work of the ancient Mound Builders, who have left their creations scattered through the Midwest, but they are definitely for agricultural purposes. The garden beds and not the Indian mounds are the Antiquarian Monuments of this state."

Some of the ancient gardens are in the valleys of the Grand and St. Joseph rivers and others are scattered throughout the counties of Kalamazoo, Cass and St. Joseph. A few are in Macomb and Wayne counties.

Schoolcraft tells of seeing these gardens as early as 1827, and says that at that time one of the trees nearby was cut down and had 335 cortex layers, or rings, dating it to 1492. The garden was much, much older.

Archaeology is a science that provides us with fascinating facts about our past but, unfortunately, the march of progress and the growth of cities in Michigan have obliterated many of these prehistoric gardens. But now archaeologists are working to save the remaining ones as part of our state heritage.

An early horticulturist, Liberty Hyde Bailey, was born in Michigan in 1858 and lived in this state until his death in 1954. During his long life he, more than anyone else, transformed horticulture from a craft to an applied science. At Michigan State University in 1884, he set up the nation's first college department of horticulture and landscape architecture. At Cornell, as professor and dean of agriculture, he made botanists aware of the practical problems of horticulture and helped horticulturists overcome their prejudice against scientific classification.

Most important, he got both groups — horticulturists and scientists — to do their research in the field rather than in the classroom.

The first president of the American Society of Horticulture Science, he was a prolific writer and editor, and much of the work he started, especially in Michigan, continues today.

Speaking of ancient plants and their place in today's world, we might consider the aloe vera, sometimes called jerk leek. It's an amazing plant with a history replete with legend, superstition and science — all jumbled together — and is used worldwide in medicine, cosmetics, witchcraft and perfume.

Aloe is mentioned frequently in the Bible as an ingredient in perfume and in medicinal ointments. Aloes were widely grown as potted plants in ancient Rome and were shipped from the New World for cultivation in England in 1680. Concoctions of aloe juice were used in China as far back as 772 in treatment for skin diseases, and the Greeks and Egyptians used aloe in cosmetics as early as the fourth century B.C.

There are references to aloe vera being used in the Philippines in medicines from very early times and in Malaysia, the Congo, India, Mexico and South America from ancient times. It is nearly always described as the "mystery plant" or the "miracle plant." Now, in this age of sophisticated medical and pharmaceutical practices, the aloe vera is again being given attention by researchers. It has been rediscovered as useful in treating many afflictions, and it still carries overtones of its age-old aura of magic and mystery.

Perhaps its most common use is in the treatment of burns. If you have an aloe plant in a pot on your kitchen windowsill, you might try squeezing the juice from an aloe leaf on your skin to soothe a sunburn or a painful encounter with a hot saucepan.

They are easy to grow. The plants are hardy and will tolerate a lot of neglect and need only moderate watering. They are decorative as well as useful plants.

More and more gardeners across the nation are making a point of researching and growing antique varieties of flowers and vegetables. Perhaps this is an instinctive wish to go back to our beginnings and establish a kinship with the gardeners of prehistoric and ancient times.

For vegetable garden enthusiasts, nothing quite equals the excitement of growing the biggest tomato or the most symmetrical squash, and a perfect head of lettuce may be compared to the perfection of a lovely rose.

But a real triumph in your garden might be raising some Sakurajima radishes. They take about 70 days to grow, are the size of a watermelon and often weigh more than 15 pounds.

Once Sears offered homes for sale — by mail

By Vicki Moeser

Smithsonian News Service

In 1908, George Newman of Arlington, Va., was one of the first people in the country to pick up a Sears catalog and place an order for a new house. Newman's piece of the American Dream — a concrete-block house with eight rooms and a bath — cost him less than $800.

Sears, Roebuck and Co. had been selling watches, tombstones and farm equipment through its mail-order catalog since 1886. Its Modern Homes Department made its debut in the spring 1908 catalog, which listed four pages of houses. Later that year, Sears issued a 44-page catalog "Book of Modern Homes and Building Plans" featuring 22 styles. Over the next 32 years, more than 100,000 U.S. families ordered their homes from the world's largest retailer.

The homes particularly appealed to the middle-class. A 1913 model (featuring 10 rooms, 1-1/2 baths and a wrap-around porch with a balcony) listed for around $2,000 at a time when the average production worker made a little more than $500 a year.

No one knows how many Sears houses are still standing today. But, one thing is certain: In some parts of the country, they are too expensive for the average middle-class family to afford. Several have sold in suburban Washington, D.C., in the $300,000 to $600,000 price range.

"Sears houses were designed for popular tastes," says Dr. Mina Marefat, senior architectural historian at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. "The Sears architects — who were mostly anonymous — designed very traditional, very conventional houses. Sears provided economical homes with modern appliances for many Americans who otherwise might not have been able to afford them.

"The Sears houses tended to be picturesque and quaint — the quintessential image of the American Dream with enough variations to fit virtually every pocketbook," she says. Indeed, Sears offered hundreds of ready-to-assemble designs, from cottages to mansions.

"The designs Sears offered signify particular eras of early 20th-century history and reflect changing tastes and lifestyles," says Kathryn Holt-Springston, who leads tours of Sears houses for the Smithsonian Resident Associate Program, the institution's membership organization in the Washington-metropolitan area.

"The first homes were large and roomy. Those styles often included parlors and sitting rooms, but few had bathrooms. In the '20s, the homes were smaller, accommodating a trend toward smaller families.

"By the '30s, the homes were modified and more dignified. In many styles, big front porches were eliminated in favor of fancy entryways. Garages were popular add-ons."

Sears was not the only company to sell houses through mail-order catalogs, Holt-Springston points out:

"Several other companies, including Lewis Co., Alladin Homes and Montgomery Ward, offered similar kits that included standardized pre-cut and numbered lumber, doors, windows, paint, nails, blueprints and complete assembly instructions. But Sears was the largest."

She estimates that, all told, there were probably about a half-million mail order houses built in the United States.

In an era when labor was relatively inexpensive and power tools were virtually unknown, Sears' kit houses gained popularity due to the speed and ease with which they could be constructed. Some of the smaller cottages could be erected in a day.

"The owner supplied the land, foundation and permits, and Sears provided everything else — from the light fixtures to the furniture," Holt-Springston explains.

"Sears shipped all its houses by rail," she adds. "Consequently, the largest concentration of Sears houses was — and still is — in the Northeast and the Midwest." An unassembled house could fit into two or three boxcars. The number of parts, not including nails and screws, averaged about 30,000 for an ordinary home. A house would arrive at its destination two to three weeks after an order was placed.

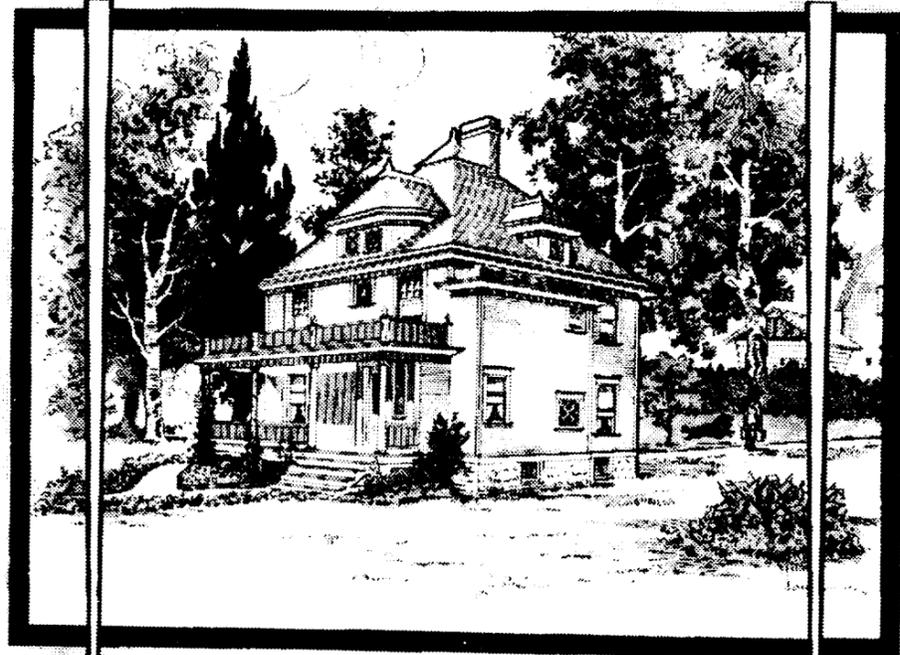

Another reason for the success of the Modern Homes program, no doubt, was Sears' attractive financing plans. By 1911, Sears was offering loans that typically ran for five years at 6 percent interest.

Although most of the Modern Homes business was with individual homeowners, Sears also dealt with organizations and corporations. During World War I, the retailer supplied ready-to-assemble hospitals to the Red Cross. Standard Oil Co. purchased hundreds of Modern Homes for its workers in Carlinville and Schopper, Ill. Bethlehem Steel erected Sears houses in Hellertown, Pa.

Usually, the catalogs featured an illustration of the exterior of the house, several descriptive paragraphs, floor plans and ordering information. Customers were able to modify the floor plans and substitute materials (requesting oak instead of maple trim, for instance) when they placed their orders.

The Modern Homes Department flourished during the postwar years. The 1917 Modern Homes catalog

Since 1886, Sears, Roebuck and Co. has offered everything from infant's clothing to tombstones through its mail-order catalogs. The retailer's Modern Homes Department made its debut in the spring 1908 catalog. Later that year, Sears issued a 44-page catalog (the cover is pictured here) devoted exclusively to ready-to-assemble homes.

boasted: "Enough houses have been built according to our plans and with our materials to shelter a city of 40,000 people."

Not surprisingly, Sears expanded its home furnishings during the first few years the houses were available. The 1929 catalog listed Miss E.L. Mayer, an interior design coordinator, among its staff. According to the catalog: "She must see that provision is made ... for pianos, davenport, radios, beds and dressers and that all conveniences appealing to the housewife are not overlooked."

"During the 1920s, the bungalow styles were particularly popular," Holt-Springston says. "The one- or 1-1/2-story homes with wide front porches dominated the catalogs."

These homes had such names as the Alpha (priced from $870 to $1,350), the Sunlight (in the $1,500 range) and the Sheridan (from $2,095 to $2,256).

"Another popular, early model was the Arlington," Holt-Springston continues. "As far as I know, there is only one Arlington model in Arlington, Va., which has about 1,000 Sears houses." Examples of the Arlington, with its wrap-around porch and cobblestone chimney, can be found in Manhattan, Kan., and Black Rock, N.Y.

St. Augustine: Neo-Spanish

On the one hand, the St. Augustine has a traditional Spanish flavor, with tiled hip roofs, stucco exterior, and an entry court. On the other, the St. Augustine utilizes a distinctive contemporary floor plan.

The main floor of the house consists of three large interlocking hexagonal cells. The central cell contains the main entrance, family room and walk through kitchen. The kitchen serves into the family room across an eating bar.

Because the main counter fits into one apex at the hex, it can take advantage of garden windows in both adjacent walls. The right hand unit, with living and dining rooms, joins at the entrance.

Windows in each of its five outside walls offer a 270-degree view. Half of this cell — the living room — is vaulted. The dining room has its ceiling soffited down to make a more formal, intimate space.

Guest room, utility room, pool dressings area, den — they all are in the left-hand unit of the St. Augustine and all in the same space. This multi-purpose area also includes a full bath, and a short hall to one of two outside patios.

Upstairs, the design of the St. Augustine becomes more conservative. A long hall connects three bedrooms and a master suite. The master suite at one end includes a private bath, walk-in closet and a private deck that forms the cover for the back patio.

The two central bedrooms are quite small, but the third, perched over the living/dining hexagon, is large enough to house two children in bunk beds.

For a study kit of the ST. AUGUSTINE (228-131), send $7.50 to Today's Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Ore. 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Sowing seed for a thick, lush lawn — a primer

So you moved into your new house this past winter and now that spring is here, you are left with a yard full of brown dirt. Planting seed to produce a thick, lush lawn is right around the corner.

According to the lawn experts at The O.M. Scott & Sons Co., the best time to plant grass seed is in the spring or early-fall. The temperatures are cool and the soil is moist during these times. Weeds are also less of a threat.

The first step in sowing new seed is preparing the soil. To start, loosen the top 2 to 4 inches of soil. For most projects this job can be done with a garden rake, but if your lawn is very large or the soil is hard, you may want to consider renting a tiller from your local garden supply center. When loosening the soil, small lumps (the size of a golf ball or smaller) should remain to hold water and seeds in place. Stones, twigs, and other debris should be removed. The soil should be level when soil preparation is complete.

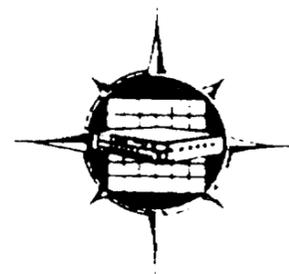

The second step is fertilizing and planting the grass seed. An application of a starter fertilizer is important because it provides important nutrients to the lawn in proper proportion to help new seeds grow and mature early. When planting and fertilizing, make sure the spreader applies the granules evenly and that it is at the appropriate setting indicated on the package. After the seed is planted, lightly pass a rake over the surface, blending the fertilizer and seed into the top 1/4 inch of soil. Spreading mulch (straw, peat, or compost) on top of the soil will help protect the seedlings as weather gets hot.

The most important thing to remember after the seed is planted is to keep the soil moist. Plan on watering your lawn several times a day the first week after planting. During the second week watering should be done once a day, and beginning the third week it should be done every two to three days, but more deeply. This ensures that the roots as well as the blades are getting water. Avoid walking on the lawn during the first few weeks of growth.

New grass should be mowed when it reaches two inches. Cut grass when the surface is fairly dry to avoid pulling out the new seedlings with muddy mower tires.

For answers to further questions about lawn care, call the Scotts toll-free consumer hotline at 1-800-543-TURF.

What is landscape fabric and how to choose one

In the category of gardening "ins" and "outs," especially when it comes to weeds in landscape beds and vegetable gardens, chemicals and plastic bags are "out" and environmentally-friendly landscape fabrics are "in."

What is a landscape fabric?

Landscape fabrics are barriers designed to prevent the growth of most broadleaf weeds. These fabrics are produced by weaving fibers together at right angles (woven) or by bonding short, or continuously spun fibers together through heat bonding, needle-punching, spin bonding, or other processes (all non-woven). The result is a fabric with the ability to block the light weeds need to grow.

Is fabric better than black plastic?

Without question. Plastic sheeting or ripped-open black bags do a good job of blocking weeds; in fact, they do too good a job. Their impermeability also prevents much-needed oxygen, moisture and vital nutrients from reaching plant roots. This ultimately results in sour soil which can permanently damage your plants.

Though landscape fabrics are more expensive than plastic, fabrics are quite cost-effective over time and they allow air, moisture and nutrients to penetrate the soil. A synthetic fabric has thousands of tiny "micro-funnels." Tapered at the bottom, the fabric ensures plants have every opportunity to receive all the nourishment they need, while the "micro-funnels" prohibit weeds from shooting through the surface.

Will a fabric last longer than plastic?

Unquestionably. Black plastic tends to tear easily and breaks down over time, exposing soil, which will eventually result in patches of weeds. Fabrics can last up to three years when exposed to direct sun and indefinitely if covered with a protective layer of mulch, such as gravel, wood chips or bark nuggets.

Where do I use a landscape fabric?

Anywhere weeds grow is an ideal place to lay a landscape fabric. For example, fabrics can be put to use around trees and shrubs, in perennial flower beds, beneath patios, and even to line potted plants. They may also be used in vegetable gardens.

How do I use the fabric?

When preparing to plant, first eliminate any visible weeds from the surface of the planting area. Cut the fabric to the desired size and cover the area with the rough side facing down. Then cut X's in the material and place plants through, into the soil. Most fabrics are easy to cut and will not unravel. If placing the fabric around existing plants, lay the fabric in strips on either side of them, or after using a scissor or knife to cut X's in the material, pull it over the plants.

In the vegetable garden, first till the bed, mixing in fertilizer and peat moss. Then lay down the fabric, using pegs to secure the strips. X's or O's can be cut into the fabric and vegetable plants placed directly through, into the soil.

Can I use fewer chemicals if I rely on fabrics?

Absolutely. Used properly, chemicals can be safe and effective, but many homeowners today are environmentally-conscious and want no chemicals applied anywhere in their yards. One sure way to a chemical-free garden is landscape fabrics, which, when laid atop the soil around plants and shrubs, eliminates the need for potentially hazardous herbicides and pesticides. Vegetable gardeners, especially, like fabrics.

Is it true that landscape fabrics help conserve water?

Very much so. Fabrics both cool and cover the soil. Moisture passes through the fabric into the soil and evaporates very slowly, an extremely important benefit which takes on even more significance in drought-stricken regions of the country. In fact, homeowners concerned about ever-increasing water bills and/or water conservation will be happy to know the use of a landscape fabric can reduce outdoor watering frequency by as much as 50 percent.

Why haven't I heard of landscape fabrics before?

Very good question. Landscape fabrics are a relatively new yard and garden product which employ modern technology. They're not an old stand-by like black plastic. However, times are changing and fabrics are gaining in popularity. Landscapers, architects, park managers and other professionals were the first to discover the fabrics and their many uses. Now, homeowners are discovering them, too.

How do I learn more about landscape fabrics?

Many gardening books, especially organic gardening how-to primers, now devote space to landscape fabrics. For additional information about fabrics and how to use them effectively to beautify your yard without wasting water, Easy Gardener has produced a free booklet titled, "Every Drop Counts - Water Saving Tips for Healthy Gardens." Send a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope to: Water Saving Booklet, Easy Gardener, P.O. Box 21025, Waco, Texas 76702-1025.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Art Nouveau is back in fashion — Styles change, and antiques can go in and out of style. In the 1950s, elaborate vases decorated with figures and flowers were ignored, and the slick look of the '50s or the demure patterns of the 18th century were preferred. The Art Nouveau designs with sensuous maidens and crawling foliage came back in favor with some collectors in the 1970s.

Today the pottery known as Teplitz, one of the best examples of this type of design, is bringing high prices. Several companies made art pottery in the area. During the late 19th and early 20th centuries, it was called Austria. The Amphora Porcel-lain Works run by Reissner, Stellmacher and Kessel used marks that included the initials RSK or the word "Amphora." The Alexandra Porcelain works of Ernst Wahliss used the name Alexandra and a crown. Large vases or figurines by both firms now sell for thousands of dollars. Art Nouveau is back in fashion for collectors.

To fill in your set of flatware and goblets, send for a copy of the Kovel's booklet, "China, Crystal and Silver Matching Services." Send $2 and a long, stamped (52 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Kovel's, P.O. Box 22900, Beachwood, Ohio 44122.

Q. When was hair jewelry popular? Is it really made of human hair?

A. Jewelry made from braided, curled or twisted hair was first popular in the 17th century. Mourning rings were given to the family and their close friends, and a bit of hair from the deceased was placed in a section of the ring. By the 18th century, more elaborate types of mourning jewelry were made, and rings and pins with pictures and curls of hair displayed under glass were popular. Tombstones, willow trees and other symbols of death were included.

The idea of keeping a lock of hair to make jewelry became popular. Strands of hair were trimmed from the head of the living, then braided into a chain or woven into an earring. Queen Victoria wore a pin made from her mother's hair, a gift for her 16th birthday.

Jewelry made primarily of hair was in style from about 1850 to 1900, and it was often made from the hair of a friend or relative. Some jewelry had fittings like catches and earring backs made of gold. To learn more, read the new book, "Victorian Jewelry," by Corinne Davidov and Ginny Dawes (Abbeville).

This is the time to look for memorabilia from the Columbian World's Fair of 1892 and the celebration of the 1492 voyage of Christopher Columbus. Modern items that stress the "politically correct" language and sentiment of 1992 will be important to collectors in the years to come.

FHA reverse mortgage plan helps seniors keep homes

High costs of living and low returns on savings threaten Miss Wise's nest-egg.

Without a solution, she is selling her home — her greatest asset — and she is frightened of her future. A financial lifeline, known as the FHA insured reverse mortgage, is helping Miss Wise convert her home equity into cash income and stay in her home.

Now, The Reverse Mortgage Co., a Southfield-based firm and a branch office of Georgia-based Unity Mortgage Corp., is offering the FHA reverse mortgage program to Michigan's older adults.

Piloted in 1989 in cooperation with the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), the FHA reverse mortgage program is active in more than 35 states.

The program allows homeowners 62 years of age or older to securely borrow against acquired home equity and receive loan proceeds in a manner they select — with no repayment until the homeowner no longer resides in the home.

The program assists individuals needing to supplement their income by converting home equity into spendable cash income while the borrowers always retain full ownership of their home. Cash income can be used to meet high health care costs, property tax debt, home repair needs and any cost of living that threatens the financial security of an older adult.

To assure their financial security, borrowers receive free informational housing counseling from an available network of HUD-approved counseling agencies before pursuing the FHA reverse mortgage program.

"Many older adults do not have extra money for unforeseen emergencies. Perhaps an extra $100 a month gives them peace of mind and allows them to stay in their homes," says Brigit Green, branch manager. "The program was developed so people would not have to decide between eating or fixing their home. The families are supportive because they know mom and dad need help, and the children may be unable to assist financially."

For more information, contact The Reverse Mortgage Co. at (313) 262-1492 or the nearest HUD office.

house," the Smithsonian's Marefat says. "Sears architects adapted their homes after popular existing styles. Tried-and-true designs were often updated. There were very few innovative, modern designs. The styles were often traditional and mixed. The result was something that was distinctly American.

"The fact that Sears made no attempt to be stylistically innovative may explain why these houses have received little scholarly attention," Marefat points out. "Indeed, few architectural history books even mention Sears houses." But one book,

"Houses by Mail" (the Preservation Press, 1986), is devoted entirely to Sears mail-order homes and includes reproductions from the catalogs.

By 1933, the Great Depression began to take its toll on the housing industry. Sears liquidated its mortgage financing program, and the company's 1934 annual report announced that the Modern Homes Department was discontinued. By the following year, however, the housing market rallied and Sears reentered the mail-order home business, although it did not resume financing.

Despite the resurgence in home sales, Sears felt profits were not sufficient to remain in the housing business.

The final "Book of Modern Homes" was published in 1940.

Today, George Newman's daughter-in-law, 80-year-old Louis Newman, lives in the home her husband and his father finished building in 1910.

Newman says the house has undergone some modifications, including modernizing the kitchen and bathroom. Even so, the place looks pretty much as it did when it was first built. She says that when workmen come to her house, they all say the same thing: "They just don't make them like this anymore."

Couple Finds North Shore Villas To Their Liking

Following his retirement from the auto, marine and builder's hardware business, Vernon Linsdeau of St. Clair Shores dabbled in real estate before he and his wife, Phyllis, began a well-deserved retirement.

A lifelong resident of the city, Linsdeau had a good feel for housing opportunities in the Shores; he decided that one of the two-bedroom condos being offered in the North Shore Villas off Masonic and Jefferson would be an ideal location.

"I've been retired and unretired a couple of times," says Linsdeau, from the easy chair inside his clean, quiet condo just off the entrance to the cluster home complex. But a couple health problems finally convinced him it was time to seek out a piece of property where he wouldn't have to shoulder the physical burdens of maintaining a home and yard.

"I had difficulty getting my wife into a condo," he says, but Mrs. Linsdeau is quite content now in their one-car garage, full basement layout, which provides enough space for their granddaughter, Taylor, to roam on her frequent visits.

The Linsdeaus appreciate that their new home allows them to be within short distance of their family, who also reside in the Shores and surrounding communities.

They enjoy the easy access to lakefront parks, the shopping centers at 13 Mile and Harper and Macomb Mall. They enjoy all this convenience without noise, traffic and congestion.

This is not to suggest that the Linsdeaus are a pair of shrinking violets. They enjoy the sense of community that neighbors both young and let's say, more "mature" share.

"We've got a nice mix of people that have been coming in — older couples, younger couples with children in school, single men and women who are working and some couples with no children."

The Linsdeaus, who were among the first to move into the complex in May of last year, find the physical surroundings inside to their liking as well.

They opted for a one-car garage set-up with laundry facilities just off the stairwell leading to the basement, which, unlike many complex residents, they have chosen not to finish.

Vernon says he and Phyllis did some minor upgrades to the kitchen appliances and cabinetry, which he says are "more than adequate," along with the closet space.

A walk into the bathroom and a quick flick to the switch that illuminates the dressing room type mirrors over the sink, and Vernon notes, "This is the first time in 60 years that I've had enough light to shave by. I was very impressed by that when I first viewed the place."

He and Phyllis share one bedroom, and the other doubles as both an office space for Phyllis, and a sleeping area for Taylor when she's visiting her doting grandparents.

For just under $100,000, Linsdeau sounds like a man at peace with himself and his investment, and equally happy with Piku Management Co., developers of the complex, where homes are still available.

"I've been surprised at how responsive the Piku people have been," he says, drawing on his experience as a former owner of a condo in Florida.

"They have gone well beyond what you might expect... We're very satisfied."

North Shore Villas in St. Clair Shores

Condominiums For Less Than $100,000

Imagine buying a brand new condominium in St. Clair Shores for less than $100,000.

Piku Management Co. is offering two-bedroom "ranch villas", off of Masonic, just one block from Jefferson and the St. Clair Shores Memorial Park. The community consists of 40 North Shore Villas homes, 16 are sold and occupied. Four homes are available right now, 2 for immediate occupancy and 2 will be custom finished to the purchaser's specifications.

North Shore Villas is what city planners call a "planned cluster residential community." The development is comprised of 10 ranch-style buildings with four homes each. On June 10th, ground was broken for 20 additional homes which will be available for September occupancy.

Piku Management Co. bought the 5-1/2 acres from the neighboring St. Clair Shores Community Education site; under strict city planners' supervision, developed the ranch-style cluster-home neighborhood.

The homes are within walking distance of the lake, area shopping and the St. Clair Shores public golf course.

The homes are designed to blend with the neighborhood, they fit in so well many people don't even know they're there — which means home buyers might not even know they exist.

Because there is a single entrance located off Masonic into the development, through traffic is eliminated, providing greater security to residents.

Buyers can choose one of five floor plans available, each with two bedrooms and a full basement. Most homes have a one-car attached garage, but a few have two-car garages.

Piku Management Co. is actually building custom homes. The company originally planned to offer only a few plans, but they found customers wanted flexibility.

Besides the bedrooms and basement, each home features a dining room, living room and kitchen with eating space. Floor plan choices include two baths and a first-floor laundry.

Buyers also have interior finish choices, such as cabinets, countertops, carpeting, tile and linoleum.

The Pikus pamper the buyers. Many are empty-nesters moving out of bigger homes. Even though they're downsizing, they've collected numerous belongings over the years, — which can be stored — in the full basement.

The extra space in the basement can also be used for an additional bathroom, recreation room, den or laundry.

Now is the best time to purchase a new condominium. Interest rates are lower now and Piku has also reduced the cost of North Shore Villas.

The standard one-car garage home is selling for $93,900, while the deluxe one-car home is $99,900. Both prices have been reduced by $5,000 on only the next two homes sold.

For the additional $6,000 cost of the deluxe home, features worth $7,290 individually are included.

The development is unique for St. Clair Shores. Chris Piku, the builder, and his father Frank Piku, a developer for 37 years run the family business.

North Shore Villas is the third condominium project that Piku Management has undertaken on the east side. The company built Lakeview Club townhouse condos on Jefferson between 11 and 12 Mile in the Shores and the impressive Riverview Club condos on the Clinton River.

Piku Management Co. stands behind its projects.

The Pikus are always accessible to their clients. They can arrive at the site in a matter of moments. That's the advantage of a local, established builder.

Condominium living has many advantages in addition to no yard or exterior maintenance and snow shoveling. Condo owners have the option of leaving for extended periods without security or maintenance concerns.

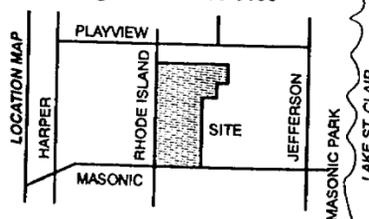

The best time to buy is right now, while interest rates are low.

Now is the best time to purchase a new condominium. Interest rates are lower...

With 20 percent down, a buyer can move into the $93,900 home with payments of $729 a month on a 15-year, 8.25 percent mortgage. The Association fee includes all exterior building and ground maintenance, landscaping, sprinkler system, snow removal, water, sewer and insurance for only $85 a month.

North Shore Villas is between Harper and Jefferson off Masonic in St. Clair Shores. Open house hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekends. Piku Management can be reached at 293-6760.

White Nights tourney yields title, memories

By Chuck Klonek
Sports Editor

Rebekah Ingall couldn't have been more conspicuous if she'd walked into the coaches' meeting in St. Petersburg, Russia, wearing a Halloween costume.

"The room was full of Russian men in suits and ties and I felt like everyone was looking at me and wondering, 'What's she doing here?'" said Ingall, the University Liggett School girls hockey coach. She was the assistant to Bowdoin College coach Lee Hunsaker on the United States Ambassadors team that took first place last month in the women's division of the first White Nights tournament in St. Petersburg.

"They were surprised to see a woman coach. I was really something of a novelty, but it was exciting," Ingall said. "It felt like we were in the United Nations."

Five of Ingall's ULS players — Michele Kryszak, Monica Paul, Becky Simpson, P.R.

Stark and Katie Frederick — played for the Ambassadors. The team also included former Grosse Pointe Carroll McCaffrey and three players from the Michigan Capitals hockey team — Danya Marshman, Sara Vogler and Stacey Chuhran.

"It was an adventure I'll never forget," Stark said. "The most important thing was the opportunity to go over there and experience a new city and a country we've all heard so much about. The fact that we won the tournament was just an added thrill."

Paul had visited Russia when the country was still under Communist rule and she noticed some differences in the people.

"They seem more relaxed," she said. "You'd see a lot of people on the streets selling things and it was all bartering. There would be a price, but no one paid it."

Simpson was impressed by the friendliness of the Russian people.

"I'll always remember how nice they were to us," she said. "Before we left I'd tell people we were going to Russia to play hockey and the reaction was, 'You're going to play against those big, mean beasts?' It was nothing like that. In fact, the Russians played cleaner hockey than the New England team we played."

The attitudes of the Russians also made an impression on Stark.

"We were all struck by the friendliness and openness of the other teams and the Russian people," she said. "I expected a lot of political discussions, but there was none of that. We all brought over things to give the people and they accepted them. We'd give bubble gum to little kids on the street and they took it. You wouldn't see that happen in America."

Stark said she'd love to have some of the Russian players visit Michigan.

"It would be fun. I'd take them to a supermarket, the movies and probably an NHL game," she said. "They love the New Jersey Devils because they have so many Russian players."

Simpson said the tournament gave her the feeling of Olympic competition.

"It's how I'd imagine the Olympics to be, with us representing our country," she said.

The group toured St. Petersburg and visited many of the historic sites in the ancient city, including the winter and summer palaces, St. Isaac's cathedral, the battleship Aurora and the Kirov Ballet.

On the ice, the Ambassadors posted four victories and a tie, including a 2-1 win over Latvia in the championship game.

The squad also beat the Ukraine 2-0, blanked Troika 4-0 and defeated Latvia 3-1 before playing a 2-2 tie with New England. Paul scored against the Ukraine and New England, while Simpson and McCaffrey notched goals in the Troika game and Stark tallied the winner in the Latvia game.

They tied the score with three runs in the third on a two-run double by Chris Sterr and Chris Campbell's RBI single; took the lead on a single by Steve Champine and back-to-back triples by Kevin Collins and Dan Sylvester; and put the game away with three runs in the sixth on hits by Chris Ford, Sterr, Keith Smith, Campbell, Troy Bergman and Kevin Schroeder.

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

WE WILL BE HAPPY TO PROVIDE ADVICE as well as a LIST OF ECONOMIC SERVICE SOURCES Call us at: 891-7188 Anti-Cruelty Association
