

ROM, if you want to, around the world at the GP library

By Maureen McNulty
Staff Writer

Although browsing, reading and research will always be central to any library, the future for books, ironically, is not as certain.

That's due to advances in computer technology, such as the Grosse Pointe Central Library's CD-ROM system, which are slowly being integrated into everyday library functions.

The problem is, many traditional library patrons describe themselves as "computer illiterate" with minds that tend to float upon hearing words like "hard drive" "floppy disc" and "modem."

"I think people may be a little bit afraid of them," said Kate Callas, a member of Friends of the Library.

But Blaine Morrow, coordinator of automated services at the Grosse Pointe Central Library, is confident that once people try a system like the CD-ROM, they'll be surprised at the wealth of information at their fingertips and how easy it is to access.

"Some really jump right into it," Morrow said. "There's a retired gentleman who loves to come in and use it. He's learning about it as he goes along. "The young people love it.

There's no problem getting them to use it. The problem is keeping them off of it so others can use it."

According to library statistics, from July 1991 to June 1992, Grosse Pointe library patrons used CD-ROM approximately 18,800 times, spending 5,000 hours on the systems.

CD-ROM, which literally means Compact Disc-Read Only Memory, is identical to a music compact disc except that it stores mass quantities of information instead of music. Everything from novels to phone books or encyclopedias to local business executives are available at your fingertips through a CD-ROM system.

Grosse Pointe librarians have been working with CD-ROMs since 1985. The first public program, InfoTrack, a popular system that carries 600 magazines dating back to 1985, was installed in 1986 and the staff has been steadily increasing the number of systems ever since.

The central library currently has eight different CD-ROM systems and three "platforms" (computers) to sit at. The Park branch has two CD-ROM systems and the Woods branch has none.

CD-ROMs can only be read or printed out. The information on the discs can't be changed or erased, so they are not susceptible to computer viruses and are virtually indestructible, being encased in the same unscratchable material used in bullet-proof glass.

For library users, a CD-ROM system means eliminating the steps of going to a card catalogue, finding your subject, title, author and reference number and then finding the

Woods told to lay low

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

A St. Clair Shores couple is suing Grosse Pointe Woods for allegedly blocking their view of the Woods' Lakefront Park.

Vincent and Josephine Vitale live in the 23300 block of Doremus in St. Clair Shores, across from Lakefront Park on the other side of the Milk River.

They claim their home's previous owner signed a title agreement with Grosse Pointe Woods on Sept. 12, 1956, in which the Woods agreed not to obstruct the view of the park from the Doremus property, said the Vitale's attorney, Alan T. Ackerman, in documents he filed with Macomb County Circuit Court on June 18.

Ackerman said the city has violated that agreement by adding boat docks, fishing piers, dirt mounds, and other items that obstruct the view from the Vitales' property.

"This easement of view has been taken and destroyed without the commencement of condemnation proceedings or the payment of just compensation," Ackerman wrote.

He is asking the court for a permanent injunction requiring the Woods to remove all the existing sight obstructions and to forgo the construction of any more.

Also, he is asking the court to award the Vitales damages in excess of $10,000.

"I hope we can get this thing worked out," he said. "The Vitales have no ill will against the city. They just want the agreement that's in place to be followed."

George B. Catlin, Grosse Pointe Woods city attorney, said he doesn't believe the city has violated the title agreement.

He said that, according to the agreement, anything that the city builds in a certain area around the old bathhouse must be less than 5 feet tall.

"The city may have put in three or four boat docks in that area on the Milk River, but they do not infringe on that five-foot line-of-sight easement," he said.

Grosse Pointe Woods acquired the property for Lake-

Woods parents seek indoor winter playground

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

A group of 69 Grosse Pointe Woods mothers hopes the city will pick up on its idea to create an indoor playground for children under 5 and their parents.

The group calls itself the Woods Winterplay Association, and was founded by Jane Krynski, president, and her sister-in-law Margaret Fitzgerald, public relations officer.

"What we'd really like to do is take one of our local playgrounds and enclose it with a roof and walls, so that children can play there under the supervision of their parents in the winter," said Krynski, a veterinarian who has two children, Peter, 2, and Erin, 11 months.

"But since that's impossible, what we have proposed is the next best thing."

The group wants to use the bathhouse at Lakefront Park for an indoor playground from 9 a.m. to noon Monday-Friday, Nov. 1 through April 1.

It would be open to Woods children ages 5 and under who are accompanied by a parent or guardian.

"Our indoor playground would be just that," Krynski said. "It wouldn't be a child-care facility. There would be no instruction or day care. It would be a place where mothers — or fathers, or grandparents — could come to get out of the house and be around other adults for a few hours, and where kids could run around and blow off steam."

The indoor playground would have carpeted or matted areas where the children could play on portable equipment, such as slides, swings, rocking horses, teeter-totters, tunnels and a small climbing gym, she said.

There would also be balls, blocks, puppets and other toys to help children develop their gross motor skills, she said.

One corner of the bathhouse would be designated a "quiet area," where children could sit on bean bag chairs and look at books.

In addition, there would be a matted or carpeted "infant area" where adults could play with their babies, and there would be benches where parents could sit and talk to each other while watching their children at play, Krynski said.

"As the program grows, or as needs dictate, other stations could be added, such as painting, drawing, making music, or fine motor activities involving games and puzzles," she said.

Krynski presented her group's plan to the Woods city council on Monday, July 6.

She asked the council to direct the department of parks and recreation to institute the indoor playground program, or, at the very least, allow the Woods Winterplay Association to use the bathhouse for the program.

She said the association has estimated it would cost $2,530 for equipment, $500 for carpets, and $200 for taxes.

Also, they estimate it would cost $2,500 a season to employ someone to open, close and tidy up the playground each day.

"Our group is prepared to go out and seek donations and run this ourselves if that's what we have to do," Krynski said.

However, she said she would prefer to have the city offer the program through its parks and recreation department, because the program's founders will probably lose interest in the playground once their children are too old to use it.

"We hope any indoor playground will last well past the time we're mothers of young children," she said.

If the funding of the program were left up to the Woods Winterplay Association, the group would charge parents $30 for the first child (ages 1-5) to use

Pointer of Interest Ruth Roby Glancy

By Margie Reins Smith

Ruth Roby Glancy of Grosse Pointe Farms has worked a 40-hour week since she graduated from the University of Michigan 30 years ago and has never received a paycheck.

On a sunny afternoon in June 1962, she picked up her bachelor of arts degree (a major in English, de rigueur for women in the early '60s), turned in her rented cap and gown, and set out to make the world a better place.

Glancy intended to begin working on a master's degree in business administration.

She never got an MBA. Never got a paying job, in fact. But she has definitely made the world a better place.

"I take my volunteer work very seriously. I try to be professional," she said. "The fact that I don't get a paycheck in no way diminishes what I'm doing, or in no way diminishes my commitment."

Early on, Glancy got involved in event-type fundraisers: charity balls, auctions, parties and one-time benefits.

She soon discovered that her abilities were better suited for leadership positions. During the last 30 years, Glancy has been a mover and a shaker for dozens of Detroit's non-profit organizations. She sits on the boards of some of Detroit's most visible educational, cultural, medical and civic organizations.

She is currently concentrating on the the Detroit Zoological Society, where she is presi-

Park seeks to remap shore areas, eliminate flood plains

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park residents will be able to kiss costly flood insurance premiums goodbye if a proposal from the city administration floats with the Federal Emergency Management Association (FEMA).

The city is asking FEMA and the federal agency's local agent, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, to remap the Park, eliminating its 100-year and 500-year flood plains.

The term "100-year flood plain" is applied to a relatively low area that is expected to flood once every 100 years to the point where flood water flows over the sills of basement windows and causes structural damage to homes and businesses.

The term "500-year flood plain" is applied to relatively higher areas that are expected to flood only once every 500 years.

If a person mortgages or re-mortgages a home that lies within a flood plain through a federally insured financial institution, that homeowner must purchase flood insurance.

Flood insurance is usually cheaper the greater the designation of the flood plain. A homeowner in the Park's 100-year flood plain may pay $600 a year for flood insurance, while a resident in the 500-year flood plain would normally pay less.

FEMA has said the Park's 100-year flood plain will experience severe flooding when Lake St. Clair's water level reaches 577.46 feet above the mean sea level at Father's Point, Quebec.

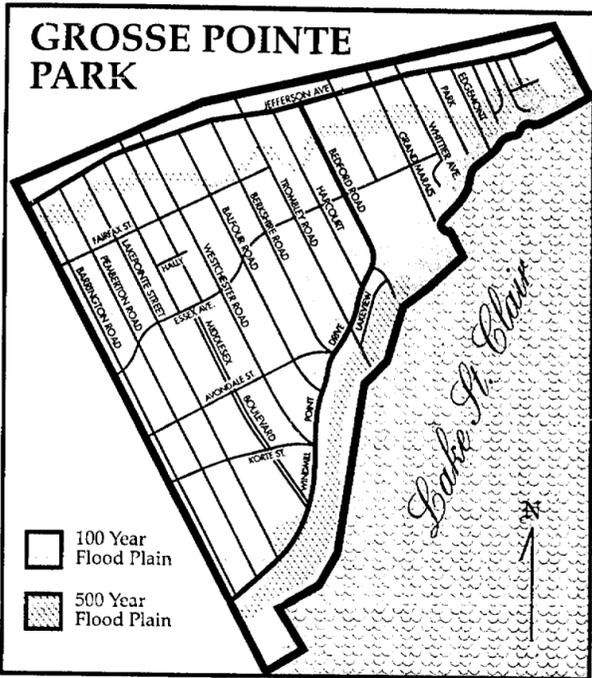

Illustration RICHARD DILORETO

In 1986, the lake's high water mark was recorded at 576.16 feet above the mean sea level at Father's Point, the highest it has been since 1900, said Dale Krajniak, Grosse Pointe Park city manager.

Jim Ellison, director of the Park's public service department, said that in 1986, during the period when the lake was at its highest, Essex Road, which is in the city's 100-year flood plain, flooded up to the curbs. However, residents could not collect on their flood insurance claims because the water had not gone above the sills of their basement windows.

For years, the city thought about elevating the rims of the 100-year flood plain, which can be thought of as a triangular saucer.

"If the saucer is surrounded by elevations high enough to protect it, it won't flood, and we could get rid of the 100-year flood plain designation," Ellison said.

The rims of the saucer are roughly Jefferson (which is naturally high and requires no improvements), the shore of Lake St. Clair (which needs to be elevated at certain points), and Fox Creek in Detroit. Until recently, the Park thought steel seawalls would have to be installed on either side of Fox Creek to elevate that rim.

"That was our biggest cost concern in the past," Krajniak said. "In 1986, we estimated that it would cost $2.2 million to install steel seawalls and pilings at Fox Creek." Also, the city would have needed Detroit's cooperation to install the seawall, Krajniak said.

Recently, FEMA had Detroit's flood plains remapped by the U.S. Army Corp of Engineers. On the old map, the area in Detroit from Fox Creek to the Park was shown as a 100-year flood plain. On the new map, that area does not appear as a flood plain, indicating improvements were made to Fox Creek without the Park's help.

If the Fox Creek rim has been taken care of, it looks like the 100-year flood plain designation could be removed if the Park constructed clay-based earthen berms at three points along Lake St. Clair, Krajniak said.

Those points are at Windmill Pointe Park (near the marina), at Grand Marais, and near Bishop Court, he said.

"We don't have to elevate them very much, only 1 to 3 feet," Ellison said.

Since 1986, the city has built berms along the shore at Trombley, Bedford and Edgemont, and residents have built seawalls at other points along the shore.

"In 1986, we estimated it would cost $200,000 to build six berms, of which three have been completed," Krajniak said.

However, the actual cost has been much lower, because the city built the three existing berms with clay that was excavated during the construction of sewers and other projects within the city, he said.

The biggest cost has been for topsoil and landscaping, he said.

If the 100-year flood plain designation is removed, then the 500-year designation could possibly be removed, Krajniak said.

"I think the only reason why those areas are 500-year flood plains is because they border or are surrounded by the 100-year flood plain," he said.

Grosse Pointe Park will send its proposal to FEMA and the DNR within the next two weeks, and U.S. Rep. Barbara-Rose Collins, D, (15th District, which was formerly called the 13th District) has pledged her support, Krajniak said.

Tire slasher goes on spree in City

Several Grosse Pointe City residents were victims of a tire slasher on the night of July 2-3.

The slasher struck cars parked at 13 residences in the 600, 700 and 800 blocks of Washington, and may have slashed the tires of and stolen a license tab from a car that was parked behind Kroger's in the Village on the afternoon of July 3.

About 9:10 a.m. July 3, Grosse Pointe City police received a call from a resident who said he saw a suspicious, older model, white over orange Volkswagen van on Washington about 12:15 a.m. that day.

A horse is a horse, of course, but for some kids it's more

By Maureen McNulty
Staff Writer

How can a child in a wheelchair go for a walk in the woods?

That was the question confronting Mary Kennedy, Ph.D., director of Grosse Pointe's Foundation for Exceptional Children.

She found the answer this summer: on horseback.

Many of the children at the foundation — who have disabilities such as cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy, Down syndrome and attention deficit disorder — participated in the "Exceptional Equestrian" program, a summer horseback-riding program for children and adults with handicaps held at the Tollgate 4-H Education Center in Novi.

"A horse gives them freedom and freedom of expression," said Kennedy. "The warmth of the horse makes them relax, and the motion of the horse is excellent for their muscles and the gait of the horse makes use of muscles that they're not using."

The benefits the disabled, young and old, receive from riding are immeasurable, experts say, ranging from physical, psychological to emotional. It's therapeutic for those with physical disabilities by increasing their muscle strength, motor control, sense of balance and coordination. Most importantly, it increases everyone's self-confidence and self-esteem.

"They gain a sense of independence because they are actually able to solely maneuver the horse," said Sandra Knight, a volunteer at Tollgate. "When they're able to get around and not have to rely on a wheelchair, or if they have difficulty walking, it gives them a wonderful sense of self-direction and heightens their self-esteem."

The Exceptional Equestrian program, the third largest of its kind in the country, provides horseback riding for about 300 children and adults throughout southeastern Michigan. It has helped people who are blind, deaf, amputees, spina bifida or who, for any medical reason, could not participate in a regular riding program.

The program is run with the help of 300 volunteers who walk, and run, along both sides and in front of each horse and rider, assisting them when needed.

The Exceptional Equestrian program started three years ago at the 60-acre Tollgate Center, located on Meadowbrook Road just north of 12 mile adjacent to the Twelve Oaks Mall, and the average age of child riders is 11.

This is the first year children from the Foundation for Exceptional Children have participated.

"It's our first year but it won't be our last," Kennedy said. "It helps the children so much. Some of them can't hold their heads up and this improves their balance and their entire skeletal muscular system."

Some of the children, such as those with muscular dystrophy, sit in special saddles and others, who cannot sit alone, sit on a special pad bareback on the horse with an adult behind them. But all the children are taught to control the horse as much as physically possible, leaning right or left to turn the horse and standing in the stirrups when they want to stop.

The foundation children, who attended two-hour sessions once a week in groups of eight, finished their five-week summer program last week, leaving behind not only memories of walking or trotting on horseback, but also brushing, feeding and caring for the horses.

For some parents like Theresa Miller, whose daughter Kate, 3, has Down syndrome and is enrolled in the foundation, there was an additional benefit to the horseback riding program: her older daughter, Claire, 8, who has no handicaps, was also able to participate through the foundation's "Hand 'n Hand" program for the siblings of disabled or handicapped children.

"It's a real nice situation. It's a great benefit to the handicapped child because then they have a role model for speech and social play," said Miller, "and it benefits the 'normal' child because it helps them develop a more humane attitude, be less picky and they don't fight as much. It seems to develop a quieter spirit in them."

"It can be a very stressful, traumatic situation and cause a lot of problems for a family when a child is born with a handicap. It can be devastating. So I try to keep everybody talking."

"For the first couple of years, we just had to devote all of our time to Kate because she really needed it. That can really cause resentment and (through Hand 'n Hand) Claire has fun playing with other kids who've kind of gone through the same thing."

Miller, of Grosse Pointe Park, said Claire now sees her sister as someone who provided five-weeks of horseback riding this summer, not to mention swimming, field trips and summertime activities at the school.

Nationwide, Exceptional Equestrian programs provide

Kate Miller, 3, thrived under the structured supervision of Tollgate's Exceptional Equestrian program. By the end of five weeks, she listened to instructions more carefully and learned to stand up in the stirrups when she wanted to stop the horse.

$1 million and they don't have funds even close to that figure.

"We could have over 1,500 handicappers ride here every year, vs. the 300 we have now," Knight said. "Right now, we have 50 to 100 riders on a waiting list."

"It's so frustrating to see a rider make wonderful gains through our summer program and then spend at least the first couple of rides the next year just trying to make up what they lost. If we had a year-round arena, that regression in skills would go right down."

The Foundation for Exceptional Children also is struggling for money to support the horseback-riding program. Even with a group rate and other breaks from Tollgate, cost of the program still came to $1,200 for 16 children, including transportation via the school's van for some of the children. Only half of the school's children participated this year.

"We still haven't paid the entire bill yet," said Kennedy, who's hoping donations and other fundraising activities will make up the difference.

But no matter what, she says, she wants the children to stay in the program.

"One child is terribly afraid of cats and dogs, but loves the big horses," she said. "There is just nothing better than horseback riding for people with physical disabilities."

A fundraiser for the Exceptional Equestrian program, the "Tollgate Challenge Cup II," featuring an auction and polo match, will be held Sunday Aug. 16, from noon to 4 p.m. at the Detroit Polo Club. In addition to the polo match, there will be music, food, a live and silent auction and a performance by the Exceptional Equestrian drill team.

For more information about tickets, sponsorships or donations, call Cynthia Richards at Tollgate: (313) 347-3860.

If you would like to make a donation toward continuing the horseback-riding program at the Foundation for Exceptional Children, contact Dr. Mary Kennedy at the foundation, located in the east wing of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore Drive, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236. Telephone: 885-8660.

Special children 'blossom' with boundaries

By Maureen McNulty
Staff Writer

The Foundation for Exceptional Children in Grosse Pointe Farms is a year-round teaching program for children with physical, mental or emotional disabilities, specializing in preschoolers.

The children who attend have disabilities such as muscular dystrophy, autism, cerebral palsy and Down syndrome. They range in age from 2 to 11.

"No two children who come here are the same," said program director Mary Kennedy, Ph.D., who's been with the foundation for 18 of its 38-year history, the last seven years as the school's director.

Although not chartered by the state as a school, the foundation works closely with local public schools in efforts to ultimately mainstream its students into a regular school setting.

"Our goal is to get them into public schools," said Kennedy. "We evaluate, find the right program for them and work with the parents. It's difficult because some school systems are really not doing their jobs."

The foundation, which just ended five-weeks of summer school, will open again on Sept. 8 and run through June. The foundation tries to keep enrollment at no more than 35 students but, Kennedy said, she will talk to anyone.

"I always give tours and will sit down and talk with the child and parents," she said.

Kennedy said she interviews the children with their parents and, if there's space and if she and the foundation's board of directors approve the child's acceptance, then the child is kept on a short probationary period, to make sure there are no severe behavioral problems which would endanger the other children.

"We have three classes," she said. "One for the very young, one for the intermediate group and one for the older children. We have about 30 students and a teacher and an aide in every classroom, so these are much more individualized programs."

Kennedy added that there are also quite a few volunteers who come in to assist the teachers and the foundation hires physical, speech and dance therapists on an individual basis.

"You can do a lot more with these kids with that kind of individual attention," she said.

Parents, sometimes, fail to do at home the very thing they expect the foundation to do: socialize and teach their children, one employee says.

"Some kids come in here at 5 years old without being potty trained," said Margerate Stockard, an employee of the foundation. "I guess parents feel sorry for them so they don't set boundaries or discipline them enough. But here they get discipline and boundaries and they blossom beautifully."

School days are from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday and consist of teaching the children everything from cleaning up after themselves to working on computers.

"We keep things as normal as we can in the classroom and out," she said, adding that during the five-week summer session, the program includes more outdoor activities, such as swimming, horseback riding, field trips and picnics.

Children attend the program from all over the tri-county area and it receives no state or federal aid.

"We do all the fundraising ourselves. We're literally keeping our doors open by begging," she said.

Fundraisers such as selling Christmas cards and throwing an annual winter pizza party require mandatory participation by the parents of the students.

"Parents are required to be involved in fundraising for the program," said Kennedy, to help keep tuition down to $100 a month, or about a dollar an hour.

The program has a van available to pick children up and take them home for an extra $80 a month.

The foundation is located in the east wing of the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, next door to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 16 Lakeshore Drive, Grosse Pointe Farms, 48236.

Put yourself in the picture

Did you get back from Yosemite last summer only to discover that the friendly stranger who shot you and your spouse in front of Yosemite Falls "chopped off" your heads and the falls are tumbling at a hard-to-believe 45-degree angle?

Or did you just return from Europe to find that your tour guide had the jitters and all of the pictures he took of the two of you in front of the famous landmarks are blurry?

There's a lesson to be learned here. You can't always trust that eager-to-help stranger or your guide to get the shots you want.

Solution: Take the pictures yourself by using your camera's self-timer.

You'll need a tripod or solid ledge to do the trick. Just mount your camera on the tripod or set firmly on a ledge or wall. Place your spouse in the viewfinder and allow room in the picture for yourself. If you're tall, give plenty of room at the top so that you don't "lose your head" when you see the final results.

As in all good photography, check your backgrounds to include subjects you want and to eliminate things you don't want. If the distant mountain makes a fine backdrop, make sure your aperture is small enough to capture it in the depth-of-field. Or if you want to zero in on just the two of you, use a wide aperture to blur an unwanted background.

Once your exposure and composition are set, you're ready to go. Set your self-timer, trip the shutter, and start moving into position. You'll usually have 10 seconds to get yourself situated. Count down the seconds silently so you'll know just when to spread that smile across your face. You'll hear and see the shutter trip so you'll know when the shot is over.

Another use for a camera's self-timer is when you forget to bring your cable release for that scenic picture you're steadying on a tripod. The self-timer will assure a sharp, crisp picture. Also, many new cameras don't have provisions for a cable release. Here, again, your self-timer will get you the shot.

Don't always trust your photography to the potential errors of a stranger or to a camera that may not have a cable release. Proper use of your camera's self-timer will guarantee you'll bring home the photographs you want.

Intruder makes self at home in smoke house

Someone apparently had an intimate party in the Safety Town smoke house in the parking lot of Barnes School in Grosse Pointe Woods recently.

A Woods officer who was pattrolling the area at 4:49 p.m. Saturday, July 18, saw that the door to the smoke house was open.

Upon closer investigation, he discovered that someone had pried off the front door lock.

A strobe light and fire extinguisher were missing from the smoke house, which is used to teach children how to act in a fire emergency. One of the windows was open, and rain had gotten inside the house.

Sneaky snake

A Grosse Pointe Shores woman was startled when she saw a 2-foot-long black-and-gold-striped snake on the rocks near the lake, behind her home.

She called police about 2:35 p.m. Monday, July 13, and asked them to remove the creature from her property.

The responding officer tried to catch the snake with a shovel, but it slithered under the rocks and out of sight. The officer decided to leave the snake alone, since it appeared more afraid of people than vice versa.

The next day, police caught the snake, and took it to the Grosse Pointe Animal Clinic.

The animal clinic didn't know what kind of snake it was, so it called the Belle Isle Nature Center to come and pick it up.

"We had it over night, in a bucket, and it was kind of funny," said Linda Niczay, a receptionist at the Grosse Pointe Animal Clinic. "In the morning, the doctor went to get the snake so he could give it to the man from Belle Isle Nature Center, and he couldn't find it. The snake had gotten out of the bucket."

The snake was found in a dark corner of the animal clinic's kennel, she said. At last report, the snake was residing at the Belle Isle Nature Center, and employees there were trying to identify it.

Doors bashed

Someone entered St. Clare of Montefalco School in Grosse Pointe Park between July 10 and July 13 and kicked open the doors to the front office and principal's office.

Nothing appeared to be missing, police said.

Low mourn can-do guy who couldn't ate last week dealt both kindly and harshly with Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, the newly crowned Democratic nominee for president.

He did emerge as the star of the Democratic national convention, with his party united behind him in a new and more moderate stance and with his running mate, Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee, acclaimed as a perfect fit to form a strong team.

But Clinton was forced to share the headlines about his sound (if too long) acceptance speech with the stories about Ross Perot's withdrawal and to shift his attention back to a two-man race for the presidency.

Even more important, many Republicans and even some Democrats believe that the end of the Perot campaign will benefit the GOP in the long run. They see Bush and company as relieved of the pressure of running against two challengers and now ready to concentrate their fire on the Democratic ticket as well as the Democratic Congress.

Yet some observers, including many Democrats, think the Democratic ticket has more to offer to Perot backers who were demanding a change than the Bush administration does. They say Bush faces a hard sell in persuading not only the former Perot followers but the American people that he is an agent of change after 12 years in the White House as a defender of the status quo.

Opinion

Neither party really mourns Perot's withdrawal even though both Clinton and Bush paid tribute to him for helping to energize many people who had lost faith in the democratic process. In fact, both sides were pleased that in politics the can-do guy couldn't.

True, some of Perot's followers still mourn his withdrawal but others feel betrayed. What the majority will do is still open to question. They have at least three alternatives: to back Clinton as a substitute agent of change; to support the president; or to sit sourly on the sidelines, more disenchanted with politics than ever.

Clinton did come out of the convention with more than a 20-point edge over the president in the popularity polls, with the addition of a few more percentage points

Democrats indict 'King George'

Democrats last week charged President George Bush and his administration with the longest list of political failures since the Continental Congress issued its Declaration of Independence from England.

The 1776 declaration indicted King George III for more than 25 offenses against the colonies, ranging from imposing taxation without representation to waging war against them.

But a multitude of 1992 Democratic convention speakers sounded a plethora of indictments of Bush — the Democrats equivalent of King George — for failure to meet the nation's many needs.

The Bush administration's shortcomings, the Democrats said, ranged from causing the recession and failing to provide either jobs or help for the jobless to seeking to halt the right to an abortion.

The most moving platform performers, however, were two AIDS victims who accused Bush of having failed to provide adequate federal funds to care for victims and finance additional research into the cause of the disease now taking an increasing toll of Americans of all ages.

At their own upcoming convention, the Republicans, of course, will reply with their own indictments not only of the Democratic ticket but of the Democratic Congress as well.

in another survey that found that Clinton, not Bush, was the more popular second choice of the Perot people.

Whether that big lead will last is doubtful, as the Republicans opened up the heavy artillery on Clinton and the Democrats over the weekend. Their major argument is that the supposedly moderate ticket still represents the traditional "tax and spend Democrats" with Clinton portrayed as the "failed governor" of a small and backward state.

Yet Clinton offered the nation a fairly sound assessment of its problems, inspiring the Democrats and many others in a national TV audience with his call for better lives for all Americans and emphasizing that his party had moved back to the moderate center on major issues.

In addition, Gov. Mario Cuomo's oratory in nominating and endorsing Clinton gave the party's 1992 campaign an enthusiastic launch while Gore set out the environmental and family issues with more fire and conviction than expected.

Yet the Republicans already are hinting darkly at finding more scandals in Clinton's closet and are reminding their backers that the president has promised to do what he needs to do to win.

Bush has proclaimed that he will not move into full campaign stride until after the GOP convention in Dallas but both parties already have energized their propaganda machines.

That means that starting right now, the public will have to be ready to sort out the wheat from the chaff and the facts from the fiction. In short, prospective voters would be wise to adopt the adage, "Let the buyer beware," in evaluating the 1992 political sales pitches.

A GOP county commissioner?

The recent reapportionment of Wayne County that returned Grosse Pointe Park to the 1st County Commissioner District has been followed by two important developments that brighten GOP hopes of capturing the commissioner's post for the first time in a decade.

The first is that the district's new boundaries give the GOP at least half and in one estimate as much as 57 percent of the eligible voters. The second is that the population shift helped convince David Cavanagh, the incumbent Democratic commissioner, not to seek re-election but to run instead for county clerk.

Seeking the GOP nomination are three Grosse Pointers, Andrew C. Richner and James Robson, both members of the Park City council, and Frederick Chuck Kaess, making his first try for elective office.

Seeking the Democratic nomination are two young scions of well-known Grosse Pointe and Detroit area political families, Jane Gillis and George Fitzgerald. Neither has held elective public office but neither is conceding the seat to the GOP.

Questioned in separate interviews, the candidates offered their opinions on a variety of issues that are covered in detail in the news columns of today's issue of the Grosse Pointe News.

After reviewing their answers and their credentials, we give the edge to one Republican and one Democrat on the basis of their experience in governmental activities, although it was an especially close call in the GOP contest.

Among the Republicans, James Robson gets the edge on the basis of his seven years of service on the Grosse Pointe Park City Council and his 18 years of police experience. He now is executive lieutenant and head of the detective bureau in the Wayne County Sheriff's Department.

Because the choice is so close, we also suggest an alternative GOP candidate, Andrew Richner, Robson's colleague on the Park council, who is supported by the mayors of four Grosse Pointe municipalities — Park, City, Shores and Woods — as well as by former Farms Mayor Joseph Fromm.

For the Democrats, we give the nod to Fitzgerald because of his study of criminal justice, his experience as an administrative assistant to State Sen. John Kelly and his belief as a businessman that county government needs to be run more like a business.

To return to Robson, his background as an employee of the sheriff's office ought to be beneficial to his constituents because almost half of Wayne County's budget goes for law enforcement activities and crime is a major concern to Pointers.

While critics contend he really is a Democratic sympathizer because he works for a Democrat, Sheriff Robert Ficano, Robson denies the charge. He cites his votes for Republican Presidents Ronald Reagan and George Bush in past elections, his ballot for Gov. John Engler in 1990, and his opposition to Ficano's re-election.

Richner is our second GOP choice by a narrow margin because he has become actively concerned in Pointe governmental problems, even though he has been on the Park council for only a year.

As an example, he wins credit for passage of the Park council's recent resolution calling upon the county to rebate to taxpayers the revenue collected from a one-tenth of a mill levy imposed to finance a juvenile facility and juvenile services that never were provided.

In his private law practice, Richner works on bond financing and corporate and international transactions. He chairs the finance and flood plain committees of the Park City council to which he was elected in 1991. He also has been active in GOP state and national politics.

Democrat Fitzgerald would offer incentives to industries to move into the county, make Wayne County an international port and create better relations between Detroit and its surrounding suburbs for the benefit of both.

He supports the vote the commissioners have authorized in November on the one-half mill tax increase to help support the county's underfinanced health and mental care programs but regards it as a temporary bandage to be used only until the health system can be streamlined and improved.

As indicated earlier, news stories covering interviews with the two candidates unranked in this editorial, Republican Kaess and Democrat Gillis, appear in the news columns along with coverage of the views of the other three candidates for the county commission.

Seeking a dubious privilege?

Two Grosse Pointe Farms women are seeking a dubious privilege in running for the Democratic nomination for state representative in the Aug. 4 primary.

We call it a "dubious privilege" because in November the Democratic nominee in the 1st Legislative District (formerly the 13th) will face the veteran incumbent, Rep. William R. Bryant Jr., also of Grosse Pointe Farms. Bryant, unopposed in the primary, is the senior Republican in the state Legislature with 22 years of service.

Yet neither Elaine Hartmann or Deanna Maher Scallen appears to be daunted by the prospect of taking on Bryant in the general election, even though neither has run for public office before.

However, both are long time supporters of education and services for children, favor legislative measures to improve funding of public education, and fear the erosion of home rule to state and federal agencies.

Both also have important achievements in their records. Ms. Hartmann, who has been a member of the Grosse Pointe Farms Planning Commission and other Farms commissions, was the person who formed the nonprofit citizens corporation that saved historic Cadieux farmhouse.

Assigned as an educational coordinator to a Detroit shelter for abused and neglected children, Ms. Scallen discovered the shelter was in effect denying the children the right to appropriate education, eventually forced it to close and persuaded the state to set up an improved monitoring system for such institutions.

Ms. Hartmann, a retired Detroit school teacher, opposes the proposed "cut and cap" referendum proposal and, instead, wants the state to increase its share of school funding from the current 34 percent to 50 percent. She also is concerned about the lack of affordable housing for Grosse Pointe senior citizens and the legislative failure to act on child care issues.

For her part, Ms. Scallen contends she has a simple agenda as a would-be legislator: to make a better and safer world for children. As an educator, reading specialist and social scientist for 25 years, she believes the key to helping children is to improve education. But she has a broader social agenda, too, including cutting from the Department of Social Services funds appropriated for education but not used for that important service.

From these brief samples of their work and aims, it is clear both candidates have experience, backgrounds and interests that commend them to the voters and qualify them for the post they seek.

Our choice for the nomination is a close call but we give Ms. Hartmann an edge.

If it's all the same to you

Editor's note: If this column, which ran last week, did not seem to make its point, that's because it didn't. The last paragraphs — in italics — were inadvertently left out.

Lawyer are ambulance-chasing sharks. Politicians are dishonest. Ditto used car salesmen. Public relations people are high-priced hacks.

Southerners are lazy. Northerners are rude. The sun has scrambled the brains of people who live on the West Coast. And the people in the East are intellectual snobs who think their feet don't stink.

All Catholics are papists and Protestants are thin-lipped prudes. All TV preachers are Elmer Gantrys.

Pro-choice people are baby killers and all right-to-lifers favor, ironically, the death penalty. Democrats tax and spend and Republicans look out for the rich, because they're all millionaires themselves.

Male hairdressers are effeminate. Opera singers are fat. The young, who know everything, drive too fast, and old people, who don't know anything, drive too slow. All fat people are slobs and the really skinny ones are sexually repressed.

Homosexuals invented AIDS to get even with heterosexuals who, even if they profess otherwise, are gay bashers at heart. Housewives sit around all day and watch the soaps and women who have paying jobs are bra-burning feminists.

Athletes are dumb jocks and all-A students are wimps. Welfare mothers deliberately have baby after baby so they can get more money from the government and the ladies who "do" lunch spend their days shopping for clothes for their next trip. They're the ones, by the way, whose husbands are making it with the secretary.

I Say

I could go on, but you get the idea. We've all heard these stereotypes. Some of us believe several, or more, of them even though we're too intelligent to admit it.

Somehow, all lumped together like this, they sound a little silly. And they are. Stereotypes stem from ignorance and our penchant to categorize people.

Which leads me to the one that always gets my blood boiling: Journalists are always looking for sensationalism so they can sell more papers.

If you think about it, the person who makes that statement is, in a perverse sense, insulting him or herself by implying that most readers are voyeurs.

The stereotype grew out of the period in newspaper history called yellow journalism, when competing papers engaged in bitter rivalries and tried to outdo each other with extra editions which were sold on the street.

I've never thought, consciously or otherwise, that a particular story we've printed would sell more papers. That's not my job. My job is to inform readers of what's going on in local government and the schools, who's getting married and who had a baby and who died, and how the local teams fared.

Besides informing you, my job is to make you think and, if you become incensed about something you read, move you to act and effect change.

Sometimes I hear people say they don't read newspapers anymore because there's nothing but bad news in them anyway. Well, those people are better off with their heads buried in the ground, so when someone shoots them in the rear, they won't know it's coming.

Newspapers are not supposed to make you feel warm and fuzzy all the time — there are romance novels and inspirational literature that'll do that. An account of the news of the day or week — the front line of history, as it's known — should make you feel grief, anger, hopeful, anxious, relief, happy, sad — all of the emotions that are part of the human condition.

And if we do our job well, readers will come to rely on us for information. It's a heavy responsibility and I don't know of one journalist who would risk that sacred trust with a deliberately slanted story. Unfortunately, there are some unscrupulous operators out there and they are the potholes we have to contend with on the road to truth and accuracy.

It's true that we look for juicy quotes, because, like good seasoning, they spice up a story. But there's a difference between a good quote and sensationalism.

As far as selling papers, we know what makes those copies move: weddings, engagements, births, deaths, team photos, any photo with people, announcements of honors and awards, club news — all the things that make up a community of folks who live together and have a common interest.

Now, if only we could elect an honest person to public office...

AIDS and your dentist

To the Editor:

The very unfortunate but singular case of a dentist likely transmitting the AIDS virus to patients has led to a rash of theories and stories about the potential for patient infection during a dental visit. These are generally short on fact and science but high on speculation.

It's important that the public be aware of the steps that are taken by dentists to protect against the spread of any infection during dental care. These measures are called universal precautions, which means always using the same infection control procedures with each patient.

These procedures include washing hands and changing gloves between patients, the use of other protective barriers such as masks and gowns, the use of disposable items, and the proper sterilization and disinfection of instruments and equipment that are reused, in accordance with guidelines from the Centers for Disease Control.

In a dental office, all instruments, including the dental handpiece, are sterilized or disinfected to kill bacteria and viruses, including the AIDS virus. Instruments that can withstand high temperature are steam or dry-heat sterilized, while other instruments that cannot be heated are scrubbed clean and then sterilized or disinfected in chemical solutions.

These infection control procedures work. They are used every day in dental offices and other health care settings across the country. Their effectiveness in preventing the spread of infection is borne out by the fact that there has never been a confirmed case of either the AIDS or hepatitis B virus being transmitted through dental instruments.

Millions of people can and do routinely visit their dentists without becoming ill. When the public reads or sees theories or speculation about the possibility of disease transmission, these should be tempered by the reality of the precautions routinely taken by dentists to protect their patients' health.

Dentists in our community encourage patients to ask questions about their infection control procedures. We want every patient to be comfortable knowing that we are using all the steps necessary to protect their health.

Sloppiness has become so routine that we expect it

Hoo boy Our new neighbors moved here direct from Germany and hot under the collar. They're international sorts and have lived in the United States before, but this is the first time the contrast hit them so hard.

shopping center is planned near Homearama's Victoria Park is just what this doctor ordered. According to reports, the shopping strip will be home to a supermarket and a police mini-station and four or five other stores yet to be lined up.

Shopping was the missing link in the array of new housing along Jefferson in Detroit. If the grocery store is up to market standards, it's my guess some Park residents may find it convenient, too.

Sporting goods catalogs are featuring UV protective sun visors for dogs. But I still see a lot of children going without sunglasses or hats...

Congratulations to the Liggett second-graders who earned money to buy rainforest acreage along the Mexico-Belize border. Jaguars, tapirs, howler monkeys and any number of parrots dwell there — and they all need our help...

Now I like to eat as well as anyone, but a certain Mack Avenue restaurant that shall remain nameless really should rethink its policy on super-enormous giganto-sandwiches. A club sandwich there is not only enough to feed three or four people, it is too big to get into the human mouth.

A sandwich that big is just obscene. No one needs that much food. It's a microcosm of exactly what's wrong with American-style consumption.

I sent it back...

Is it true that the Farms and the City are going to spend a combined total of $60,000 on their centennials? You can put on a pretty nice party for $60,000. Is it taxpayer money? Just asking...

It's about time the Park steps up to its responsibilities regarding clean water. For years, residents along Fox Creek have been complaining about sewer discharges.

It's true that Detroit can back-flush Fox Creek, but that doesn't completely clean up the effluent — it just reduces the problem. And maybe it's true that the Park doesn't discharge all that often, but I'm skeptical about the city's claim that it's only twice a year.

It was about five years ago that residents complained to the DNR that the Park was conducting dry-weather discharges much more often than that. But, since dry-weather discharges are illegal, the Park denied the allegations. It didn't come to anything beyond a warning at that time.

But ask the residents of Harbor Island and Ashland, the people whose yards border the creek. Cruddy stuff in the water wasn't limited to dead fish and bad smells. There's often raw sewage, tampons, condoms — and the debris floats right up into their yards.

Nobody should have to put up with that. The overflows into the creek are carried out to avoid flooding low-lying streets in the Park — a laudable goal — but a sewer separation would accomplish the same thing and keep the creek clean, too.

Yes, I know the project would cost upward of $2 million. That's a lot of money. But I wonder how much the residents of Boston or the Jersey shore have had to ante up for their sewer projects?

Sewer separation is going to come to every community in America, sooner or later. The bill will be absolutely staggering. No wonder Park residents don't want to pay it.

I know. Where I live, a sewer separation project is grinding its way along even as I type. It will cost about a million — only half as much as in the Park — but the cost will be divided among 513 households.

That ain't hay.

Good for the Woods to try to get a refund on taxes paid for a defunct project. Wayne County taxpayers have been charged millions since 1988 for a juvenile offender program that never got off the ground. (The Woods' share is about $230,000, and most cities in the county have paid a similar amount.)

So the city is asking for its money back.

I don't know that the county would have the money to give back, even if it were interested in cooperating. But taxpayers are getting fed up with having their funds raided and misappropriated.

At the state level, the raiders have tried to tap insurance funds, boaters/harbor funds, land conservancy funds, non-game wildlife funds.

In Macomb County, a tax that was levied just to help a four-year degree program at the community college move toward self-sufficiency is on the ballot again. Officials say now that the program will never be able to support itself.

At the federal level, financial peccadilloes involving Social Security, savings and loans, defense purchases and Iran-Contra are so common now that it's almost quaint to think how scandalized we were at the 1920s' Teapot Dome ripoff.

Summertime and the livin' is . . . noisy

Whatever happened to the lazy, hazy days of summer? This is supposed to be the time of year we can kick back, run barefoot in the grass, splash in the pool and smell the roses. Where are the sighs of gentle breezes and the sounds of the birds? They are being replaced by the sounds of works in progress.

It would seem that everyone who has had a project to launch has jumped in with both feet in our neighborhood and all around the town. Such is the nature of things when the seasons limit us. At the first blush of spring the lawn mowers begin their incessant din and the town turns into a beehive of outdoor activity.

In our neighborhood at this very moment the following is taking place. Across the street a driveway has just been black-topped. Two pools are being serviced and the trucks are out front. Two lawn services are doing landscaping, windows are being replaced in a house across the street and a truck the size of Las Vegas is parked in their driveway. Next door a house is in its 13th month of renovation and the pounding and sawing and parade of trucks continues. For the past week we have listened to the sawing of bricks, which isn't unlike having a dentist's drill in your mouth hour upon hour.

One practically needs a permit to park in front of our house. Over our back fence there has been a backhoe for the past 10 days roaring around the yard and keeping us from enjoying our porch with the doors open. Next door to that yard there is a roofing project now in its third week and the music is turned up in order that we may all enjoy the workmen's selections.

All of the above sounds of summer are in addition to the constant strains of tree sawing, dogs barking and a neighbor's pesky alarm system that goes off with regularity. I can't believe I'm saying it, but I actually like the rainy days and the relative quiet that accompanies them. We do love our neighborhood and our good neighbors, but this summer's activities simply cannot be ignored and it seems a good time to tug at their legs a bit. Let's just say it isn't a good summer for swinging in a hammock and sipping lemonade in our neck of the woods. The loft just may take a vacation one of these days . . .

Romania: Ceausescu leaves legacy of distrust

By Mark Milosch
Special Writer

On a recent trip to Romania I learned a lesson about kindness and hospitality.

Asking for directions in a small town, I met an old gentleman who led me to my destination, a medieval castle, paid the guards to let me in after hours, posed for pictures, took me back to his office, made coffee, gave my wife a gift, told me about his work as a professor of philosophy and sociology, signed a copy of his book for me, arranged for our hotel room and dinner and refused even a pack of cigarettes in return.

But then while I sat slack-jawed he informed me that under Ceausescu there had been no persecution of religion (freedom of religion was always guaranteed under the constitution, he assured me), that there had in fact been marvelous industrial progress, and that in general Ceausescu was a great man.

As for the police state, the blackouts, famine and murderous repression of the 1980s, caused by Ceausescu's policy of selling abroad everything the country could produce, "c'est la vie."

He was perfectly sincere. What I learned is that kindness and hospitality can coincide with the most abject political degradation.

This is one form of such degradation — when an otherwise decent and reasonable person utters the most obvious lies and defends the most inexcusable barbarisms for no reason and with complete sincerity.

He could just as well have avoided the subject. But he was eager to wag his finger at me and explain that freedom of religion was guaranteed by the constitution.

He wanted to set the record straight. Like Ceausescu in his trial, pounding the table in indignation at an ungrateful people, the old man had told lies for so long he believed them.

Ceausescu's real legacy, however, is not the remaining Communists, but the degradation of everyone else.

In a nation where only three years ago there were 10 million secret microphones, where one out of every three people sent a weekly report on their friends to the secret police, where spies sat behind fences and bushes to listen to schoolkids' conversations, how can people have normal relations with each other?

Forty years of wondering which of their friends, co-workers and family are informing on them has left them permanently suspicious, tense and inclined to suspect people to be enemies rather than treat them as friends. Ceausescu destroyed the Romanian's ability to live a normal life.

Over and over, when I was invited into people's homes in the villages or talking to friendly citizens in restaurants and stores in Bucharest, everyone said they want to leave. Many of them seemed to think of little else. Ceausescu not only destroyed Romania's economy, but its self-respect as well.

This is the real problem when an 11-year-old boy hears I am from America and says, "America is good. Someday I go to America."

Well, Romania is good, too. "No! No good here!" he cries.

But Romania is beautiful. "No! No beautiful here!"

This is the problem when two doctors, husband and wife, roar with laughter when I tell them I like their country.

This is the problem whenever I point out anything nice about the country or say that I've enjoyed my stay and all the Romanians present shake their heads in utter disbelief.

Despite the hospitality Romanians show to visitors, they confided that with each other normal life is impossible. A Romanian writer, who is moving to America, told me that after the revolution everyone felt good for a few weeks but then they realized they had no friends.

Their friendships were really alliances made to protect themselves. When the police state was relaxed, "friends" had nothing left in common. And those who could, left.

The ability to give and expect the most basic trust and human sympathy had been destroyed. Ceausescu made millions cooperate in the region's worst police state and in doing so he made them ashamed of themselves and their country. Most people couldn't make themselves believe obvious lies like the old man who took me up to the castle.

Under Ceausescu they used to whisper with bitter humor "We are a nightmare in the mind of a madman." "Alas, the madman is dead but he nightmare is not over yet."

Agency seeks host families

Michigan families are needed to host 14 French boys who want to spend four weeks experiencing American style living. Evelyn and Julian Prince, state coordinators for Nacel Cultural Exchanges, are looking for host families for the 14 boys who are part of the 157 French, Spanish, and German exchange students scheduled to arrive on Friday, July 31.

Families don't have to speak French to be a host family, since the students have had from four to eight years of English language study. Their parents supply the children with pocket money and pay for their transportation and insurance.

The program organizers match students with prospective families according to general interests and specific activities they would like to participate in. Some American families take their guests on trips; others share their everyday life.

Families interested in hosting a French boy from July 31-Aug. 28, or a French or Spanish student during the school year, should call the Princes at 313-626-6641 or the Nacel national office at 1-800-NACELLE (622-3553).

2 Pointers bid for Democratic nomination in 1st Wayne County district

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Two young, long-time Grosse Pointe residents are vying to be the Democratic nominee for the 1st District county commission seat.

Current 1st District commissioner David Cavanagh, a Democrat, is running for Wayne County clerk. Although the 1st District includes the staunchly Republican Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods, it has traditionally had Democratic representation because of the large segment of Detroit which, until the recent reapportionment, made up more than half of the district.

The most recent reapportionment made the district slightly more Republican, and without a Democratic incumbent, it's certain the Pointes will have new representation on the county board.

George Fitzgerald

George Fitzgerald is 33 years old, but says he has been active in Democratic politics for 20 years. He comes from a long line of Fitzgeralds who have held offices in state government.

He graduated from Wayne State University with a degree in criminal justice and is now president of Fitzgerald National Corp., an employee trust fund planner. He's held appointed public offices and has served as an administrative assistant to state Sen. John Kelly and on the Michigan Democratic central committee.

He ran for the same commission seat six years ago but was defeated.

He is active in several volunteer programs, most notably East Area Security Targeting, a group that he founded which helps keep east side Detroit communities safer through citizen input. In 1990 he was honored by the state Senate for his volunteer work.

Fitzgerald is running as a businessman who believes the government needs to operate more like a business.

"Basically what I'm about is maintaining and enhancing our economic base," he said. "I want to use the experience I earned at the state level and bring it to the county. Right now, Wayne County needs some good leadership."

One way to maintain and enhance the economic base is to encourage industry to move into the county by use of incentives, he said. With new markets opening in Europe and the border of Canada so close, it makes sense, he said, to make Wayne County into an international port.

He would also work to create better relations between Detroit and the surrounding suburbs. A closer working relationship will benefit the suburbs as much as it would the city, and a better city means the suburbs are more desirable, too, he said.

He believes the county should learn to expedite the services it provides its residents, especially in the areas of road and sewer improvements.

He will not oppose the .5 mill increase which will be on the ballot in November to help bail out the county's failing health services. He said it should be used as a temporary bandage while the system is studied to see how it can be permanently streamlined and improved.

"I'm glad the residents get a chance to vote on that issue," he said.

Fitzgerald believes a new Tiger stadium — if one is needed — should remain in Detroit, and county voters should decide how it would be financed.

The money the county has been collecting since 1986 for a juvenile home that the county subsequently decided was not feasible should be used for juvenile programs and the contributing cities should be given a proper accounting of how the money was used, he said.

"I've grown a lot in the six years since I ran the first time and I think I have a lot to offer the people of Wayne County," he said.

Jane Gillis

At 29, Jane Gillis is a newcomer to the political scene, but her family has a long history in law. Her father is a retired Court of Appeals judge and is now the Grosse Pointe Shores municipal judge.

She is an attorney for Philip F. Greco Title Co., a title insurance firm. She has a law degree from the Detroit College of

Jane Gillis

Law and a bachelor's degree from Western Michigan University. She's been an intern in Recorder's court and the Michigan Court of Appeals and has worked as a law clerk for the Wayne County Circuit Court. She also did legal research for the county commission.

She was president of the Detroit College of Law student senate and a volunteer for Big Brothers/Big Sisters and for the Dominican Literate Center, which teaches illiterate adults to read and write.

Her experience with the county is a big asset, she said.

"I'm the only candidate who has any experience working with the commission," she said.

The greatest challenges facing the county are maintaining a balanced budget, and doing something to cut down on crime, she said.

"Crime is a really big problem in Wayne County," Gillis said.

She would like to see new, better thought-out juvenile offender programs instituted and stricter rules regarding early release of prisoners.

"I don't think it's right to release felons because the jails are full when the Hamtramck jail is half empty," she said.

Gillis also believes the county should return taxes it's been collecting from its cities since 1986 for a juvenile facility which the county decided not to build.

"I think the voters were misled and the feasibility of a juvenile facility should have been looked into in advance," she said.

If returned, the money should go to juvenile offender programs in the cities, she added.

Airport expansion is also an issue. She believes City Airport shouldn't be expanded, especially in light of the $1 billion expansion at Metro Airport, and noise is still a problem.

"There are good federal noise abatement programs that need to be used," she said. "I want

New Jeep Grand Cherokee triumphs over tough terrain — even I-94

The "all-new" 1993 Jeep Grand Cherokee is satisfying, but not extraordinary. Kind of like the McDonald's milkshake I've wagered fellow free-lance auto writer Paul Eisenstein.

When I met him climbing into a test Grand Cherokee last month, he said he, too, had been skeptical about Chrysler's new showpiece sport utility vehicle — which looked for all the world like the predecessor, the Cherokee/Wagoneer, in the spy photos and preview drawings.

"They'll sell every one they build," Eisenstein proclaimed when last we met. Thus the basis of our wager, for I figured Chrysler won't set any records with the Grand Cherokee. There are too many other SUVs available now, and most of them are excellent and backed by aggressive marketing programs. They have had features the Jeep just now is adding, and they are price competitive.

A few weeks ago we climbed aboard a test vehicle of our own and I'm not backing down from the wager, though I wish we'd made the terms of our bet a little more specific. If Chrysler cuts back on original production plans for the Grand Cherokee over the next 12 months, there's no way I can collect my milkshake. On the other hand, the McDonald's next to the facility where Paul and I verbally shook hands has since moved out, so maybe I can tell him I meant a shake from that particular outlet.

The '93 Grand Cherokee is handsome, easy to get into, and performs and handles well. It's also the first sport utility with driver's side air bag, and 4-wheel anti-lock brakes are standard, Chrysler reports.

Our neighbor corporation — which turns out these new trucks at its Jefferson North Assembly Plant, where Kercheval dead-ends into Conner — lists these other Grand Cherokee attributes:

- The 4.0-liter engine is the most powerful standard six available in a compact sport utility in horsepower rating, plus the best 0-60 mph capability.

- The optional V-8 has a 6,500-pound tow rating, highest among compact SUVs.

- There's a choice of three 4WD transfer cases, including an all-the-time 4WD option.

- The new vehicle has a longer wheelbase (4 plus inches) than the Cherokee/Wagoneer for a smoother ride; its overall length is 8 inches longer, and it has more hip and shoulder room front and rear than the Cherokee/Wagoneer.

- Grand Cherokee is the first Jeep vehicle to offer a split-bench rear seat.

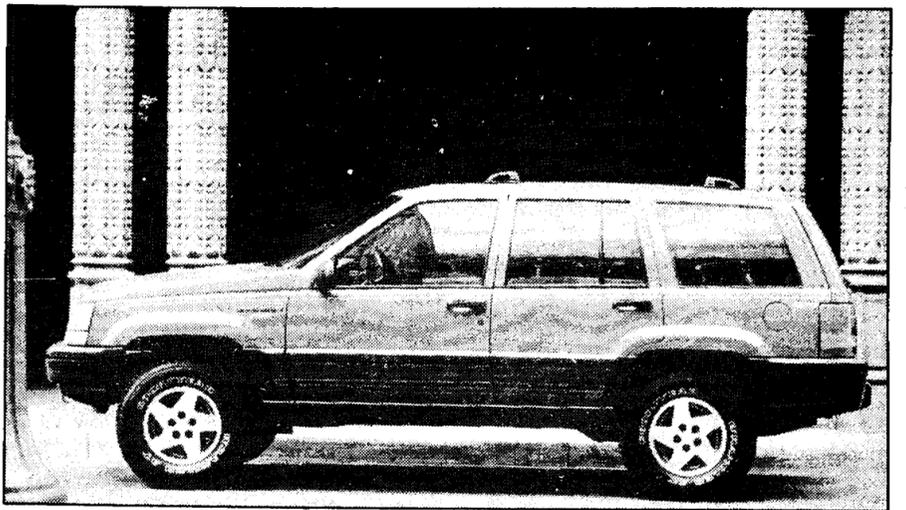

Chrysler says its abundant cupholders are appointments not available in competing sport utilities. Really, that was the only thing listed in the press release. And actually, that was all we could discover, too, and it didn't overcome our disappointment at our $21,878 vehicle that had manuallylocking doors, crank windows and manually adjustable outside mirrors. Yes, that sounds niggling and picky, but setting mirrors by punching their edges and leaving fingerprints here and there is quite unacceptable. Especially in a vehicle priced at over $20,000.

While it is noticeably more roomy inside, and the ride is much more car-like than the older Cherokee, we found no particular reason to choose the new Grand Cherokee over competing nameplates like Chevy S-Blazer, Ford Explorer, Nissan Pathfinder, Toyota 4Runner and Isuzu Trooper.

A month or two ago we drove the Pathfinder, a plush rascal that for some reason we found very appealing. (Was it the power remote mirrors?) Its wheelbase is a little shorter than Grand Cherokee's, as is the overall length. It's not as wide, and its additional height makes it slightly harder to get into. But according to the 1992 Automotive News Market Data price list, a Pathfinder XE with V-6 engine, automatic transmission, 4WD and air conditioning runs just under $22,000. Our base Grand Cherokee started life at $18,980; a package with air, radio and rear window defroster tacked on another $1,836, and automatic was another $877, putting it at the same level as the Japanese-built vehicle. In a showdown, we'd pick the Nissan.

Reporters Put Jeep to Test

utility to the ultimate test when it sent reporters — whose ranks include some of the world's worst drivers — from cities and small towns on cross-country test runs in two new Jeeps. Between April 15 and early June, a variety of drivers took the vehicles on the worst roads and into some of the strangest areas they could find along northern and southern routes, putting 20,000 miles on the Grand Cherokees.

"Despite our best efforts, we failed to get the Jeep stuck in some serious mud," wrote Dave Backman, reporter for the Kenosha News, Kenosha, Wis. "The mud was half up the wheel, if not more, and we deliberately tried to get it stuck and she walked right through it."

Fred Peterson, editor of The Outdoor Press in Spokane, Wash., took the Grand Cherokee to the Sand Dunes Potholes area outside Moses Lake, Wash.

"Several off-road vehicle fans watched as I pulled into a big dune," he wrote. "I knew they were thinking I'd get stuck, and if I did I was going to ask them to dig me out. Even without shifting into low range, the Jeep pulled steadily and smoothly up the 100-foot high dune."

About the toughest test we set before our Grand Cherokee was cruising ever-lumpy I-94 and climbing what I call Garbage Heap Hill, the overpass just west of the Hamtramck Assembly Plant and north of the city's infamous new incinerator with its blinking tower and stinking air. (The Jeep did just fine.)

The new Jeep — only the eighth Jeep to be launched in 51 years — features a generous 23-gallon fuel tank, offering travelers a greater cruising range.

Chrysler says it assigned a team of 20 engineers and technicians to the task of adapting air bag technology to the conditions a sport utility vehicle might encounter off-road.

"An important part of our plan was to develop a generic off-road test matrix so air bag systems could be developed for future Jeep vehicles and Dodge trucks," says George Aboud, safety programs manager for Chrysler's Jeep/Truck platform team.

"We tested for snow plowing, running into dirt or sand piles and even winch jerk/tow maneuvers so the air bag wouldn't deploy at the wrong time." Grand Cherokee's air bag deployment threshold is between eight and 16 mph, depending on the violence of the impact. These are about the same parameters used in passenger cars, Chrysler says.

Most off-road touring is done at slower speeds. A localized impact strong enough to trigger the device would have to be a simultaneous front and rear hit, according to Aboud.

A neighbor stopped over to admire the bright-red paint on the new Grand Cherokee. He loved its looks, but declined to take it for a spin. Maybe Paul Eisenstein is right. New Grand Cherokees already abound in our neighborhood. A colleague thinks the Jeep name is so well-established it alone will help make the new model profitable for Chrysler. However, before I shell out $1.10 for Paul's milkshake, I'm going to check Grand Cherokee inventory numbers and scope out Joe Ricci's Mack Avenue lot, just to make sure they're all sold.

Correction

An alert reader recently phoned to ask about the "Six Special" Cadillac for 1993, mentioned in our July 16 column. Cadillac's 60s Series goes way back to the 1930s. The paragraph should have said the "Sixty Special" is the '93 name for the former front-drive Fleetwood.

Hugh C. Riddleberger

Services were held for Hugh C. Riddleberger, 76, of Boca Raton, Fla., formerly of Grosse Pointe, who died July 17, 1992, in Florida.

An educator all of his life, Mr. Riddleberger was the headmaster of Grosse Pointe University School from 1963-69. He was also headmaster at Trinity School in New York City and, for the last 11 years of his career, at Landon School in Bethesda, Md. He retired to Chestertown, Md. and later to Boca Raton.

He graduated cum laude from Hamilton College, in Clinton, N.Y., and later received an honorary doctorate from Trinity College, in Hartford, Conn.

He is survived by his wife, Jane; daughters, Patricia Truitt of Washington D.C., and Elizabeth Cundy of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; a son, Hugh C. III of Washington, D.C.; and seven grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to Alzheimer Association, Boca Raton.

James W. Burns

A memorial service will be held Saturday, Aug. 1, at 10 a.m. at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church for James W. Burns, 83, of Dunedin, Fla., formerly of St. Clair Shores, who died Feb. 19, 1992, in Dunedin. His ashes were inurned at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Columbarium.

Born in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, Mr. Burns was a housepainter and dairy farmer and lived in the Memphis and St. Clair areas for more than 40 years.

He is survived by his wife, Williamina; a daughter, Joyce Yost of Jackson; two sons, Donald, of Portland, Ore., and Benjamin, of Grosse Pointe City; 11 grandchildren; two sisters, Anne Diack and Josephine Lalonde, of Ontario, Canada; and a brother, Rowland, also of Ontario.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Children's Home of Detroit, 900 Cook Road, Grosse Pointe Woods, 48236.

Alfred B. Fitt

Services were held in the Washington area for Alfred B. Fitt, 69, of Washington, formerly of Grosse Pointe, who died July 7, 1992, at George Washington University Hospital.

Mr. Fitt was a general counsel to the Congressional Budget Office from its founding 17 years ago until his retirement at the end of June this year.

Born in Highland Park, Ill., Mr. Fitt moved with his family to Grosse Pointe, where his father was the rector of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

He attended Yale and received his law degree from the University of Michigan. During World War II, he served in the Army.

In the early 1950s, Mr. Fitt was a partner in the Detroit law firm Latham & Watkins and from 1954-60, he was on Gov. G. Mennen Williams' staff.

In 1960, he moved to Washington as a staff counsel for the Senate Judiciary Committee. He also wrote speeches for Lyndon B. Johnson in his campaign for the vice presidency on the Democratic ticket led by John F. Kennedy.

In Washington, he also worked with the Federal Aviation Administration, the Department of the Army, the Department of Defense and the CBO, where he was credited with making important contributions to its structure, function and style of operation.

From 1969-75, Mr. Fitt served as an adviser to the president of Yale University, Kingman Brewster, and was a frequent contributor of articles on public affairs to the New York Times and other publications.

His first marriage to the former Patricia Hewitt ended in divorce.

He is survived by his wife, Lois Rice, of Washington; four children, Cate Fitt, Benjamin Fitt, Ann Fitt, and Craig Fitt; two stepchildren, Susan Rice and E. John Rice Jr.; and a sister, Mary Fitt McCarthy.

Lloyd H. Stephens Jr.

Services were held Saturday, July 18, at the A.J. Desmond & Sons funeral home in Troy for Lloyd H. Stephens Jr., 55, of Pontiac, formerly of Grosse Pointe, who died at home July 15, 1992.

Mr. Stephens was a master architect with Yamasaki and Associates in Troy and had been working in Munich, Germany, for the past nine months as a consultant for the firm.

Major projects that Mr. Stephens worked on with Yamasaki included: the World Trade Center, New York; Temple Beth El, West Bloomfield; U.S. Naval Headquarters; Saudi Arabian Airport; and the Royal Mosque in Saudi Arabia.

He was a graduate of the University of Michigan and received his architectural degree from Kalamazoo College.

He is survived by a son, Lloyd H. Stephens III of Harper Woods; a daughter, Kristyn Naziri of Spring Lake; his mother, Marion Hunt of Harbor Springs; and sisters Carol Badger and Suzanne Albert.

Interment was in White Chapel Cemetery in Troy. The Rev. Dr. Roy R. Hutcheon officiated.

Lawrence H. Werner

Services will be held today, Thursday, July 23, at 11 a.m. at St. Dorothy's Catholic Church for Lawrence H. Werner, 87, of Grosse Pointe City, who died at St. John Hospital in Detroit on July 20, 1992.

Mr. Werner, who attended the University of Detroit and Lawrence Institute of Technology, was a retired professor of electrical engineering at the General Motors Institute in Flint.

He is survived by his daughters, Joan Cushman and Janet Thomas; a son, Lawrence E.; 16 grandchildren and 19 great-grandchildren.

He was predeceased by his wife, Hazel, and a sister and a brother.

Interment was held in Mount Olivet Cemetery in Detroit.

Angela Catani

Services were held Thursday, July 16, at St. Ambrose Church for Angela Catani, 89, of Grosse Pointe Park, who died at St. John Hospital in Detroit on July 14, 1992.

Born in Cuggiono-Milano, Italy, Mrs. Catani was a homemaker.

She is survived by her son, Louis; five grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

She was predeceased by her husband, Angelo.

Interment was in Mount Olivet Cemetery in Detroit.

Arrangements were made by the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Park.

G.P. Theatre presents annual awards

"Puttin' on the Ritz," — appropriate to the elegant setting of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel ballroom — was the theme of Grosse Pointe Theatre's 36th annual Clarence Awards dinner-dance Saturday night.

Clarences (so named for the group's first production in 1948, Booth Tarkington's "Clarence") were awarded in three separate technical, musical and acting categories.

Emcees for the event were Ross and Donna Rutledge, who came (and danced) as Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

Receiving awards for Best Director was Patricia Villegas for her work in the British farce, "Noises Off." Villegas also received the award for Best Non-Featured Actress for "Ah, Wilderness!"

Best Actor and Actress were Timothy Higgins and Marie Boyle for their roles in Stephen Sondheim's fairy-tale-based musical, "Into the Woods." Higgins played the Baker; and Boyle, the Witch. Boyle also won the award for Best Costumes for "Into the Woods."

Other acting awards included: Best Supporting Actor, Dean Erskine, "Ah, Wilderness!"; Best Supporting Actress, Terri Turpin-Amato, "Steel Magnolias"; Best Featured Actor, John Oleksiak, "Guys and Dolls"; Best Featured Actress, Carol Purdon, "Steel Magnolias"; and Best Non-Featured Actor, Harry Stutt, "Guys and Dolls."

Technical awards included: Best Producer, Martin Bufalini and Marie Devlin, co-producers of "Guys and Dolls"; Best Stage Manager, Mickie Pizzimenti, "Noises Off"; and Best Technical Director, Harry Stutt, "Noises Off."

Other awards were presented for: Best Musical Director, John Diebel, "Guys and Dolls"; Best Vocal Director, Ruth Ellen Mayhall, "Guys and Dolls"; Best Lighting, Chuck Sortor, "Ah, Wilderness!"; Best Properties and Best Set Dressing, Marisa DiSante, "Steel Magnolias"; and Best Makeup, Craig

Juleff and Virginia Large, "Into the Woods."

There were two ties in the awards presentation: Dean Erskine, "Noises Off" and Lois Bendler, "Ah, Wilderness!" tied for Best Set Design; and Dennis Babel and Jef Fisk, "Into the Woods;" and John Casey, "Guys and Dolls," for Best Sound.

The prestigious Worker of the Year awards went to Harry Stutt and Yvonne Hewlett.

Ruth Ellen Mayhall, incoming president of the group, announced the season and directors for 1992-93. "Nunsense," a musical spoof about the misadventures of five nuns putting on a talent show, will run Nov. 4-14 and will be directed by Manus Nemeth. "Sly Fox," a farce by Larry Gelbart, author of M.A.S.H., will run Jan. 20-30 and will be directed by Sal DeMercurio. "Death of a Salesman," Arthur Miller's powerful drama, will be presented March 3-13, directed by Barbara Bentley. Neil Simon's wild contemporary comedy, "Rumors," will run April 14-24 and will be directed by Patricia Villegas.

The season will close with "Mack and Mabel," the musical love story of Mack Sennett, master director of early Hollywood slapstick comedy, and his greatest star, Mabel Normand. "Mack and Mabel" will be directed by Timothy Higgins.

Ticket information about the new season can be obtained by calling 881-4004. For other information about Grosse Pointe Theatre, call 886-8901.

to work on a committee which will deal with that issue."

She opposes the proposed tax increase to bail out the county health department which county residents will vote on in November, she said.

"The indigent health care system is a good idea, but I don't think it's a good idea to just slap a new tax on the residents every time some money is needed," she said.

She believes the county should instead look at ways to cut waste in the system.

"I don't want my property taxes to go up," she said. "And I know other people don't want theirs to go up, either."

If elected, she would like to work on a committee that hires contractors and lets bids for projects — two areas she deals with daily in her present job.

"My legal education lends itself well to one of the principal skills needed to be a successful commissioner — the ability to analyze complex issues so a comprehensive solution can be developed and implemented."

Home burgled

Someone broke into a home in the 1100 block of Wayburn in Grosse Pointe Park and ransacked through the first floor while the residents were sleeping upstairs. The incident occurred between midnight and 7 a.m. Monday, July 13.

The thief entered the home by removing a screen and crawling through an open window. An AM/FM radio, a guitar and 35mm cameras and related equipment were stolen, police said.

Amanda Ault

Ault chosen for art seminar in Colorado

Amanda Ault, a Grosse Pointe South junior, has been selected as a participant in the Marie Walsh Sharpe Art Foundation 1992 Summer Seminar.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Ault of Grosse Pointe Park. Ault will attend Session 3 from July 19 to Aug. 1 with 19 art students.

Only 80 students were selected to be Sharpe Scholars from the 820 applications submitted. Students were selected on the basis of slides of their art portfolios.

The Summer Seminar is held on the campus of The Fountain Valley School in Colorado Springs, Colo., and is designed to offer an intensive visual art studio program.

The two-week program will permit students to gain a stronger foundation of skills and understanding in the visual arts through experiencing college-level drawing and painting classes in a group studio setting.

Artists-in-residence will serve as the primary instructors, providing instruction, giving specific problems to solve and assignments to complete. Seminars concerning careers in art, the development of a portfolio, presentations in art history, and small group discussion with artists will be included.

Rader tops in science

Lynn Rader is this year's North High School science winner for both the Madame Curie Award for Excellence and the Rensselaer Award for outstanding junior in science and mathematics.

She will be a senior in the fall.

The Madame Curie award is given to the top junior woman in science, with one award per high school; the Rensselaer is given to the junior who shows promise in science and math after three years of high school work.

How it's done

St. Paul School students concluded their art classes with a visit from Detroit artist and Center for Creative Studies instructor Richard Jerzy. He spent the entire day so that art students could observe his oil on masonite still life in all stages of progress.

350 students celebrate thinking

Three hundred and fifty students from the Grosse Pointe Public School System's nine elementary schools spent a recent Saturday morning learning how to "pump up their thinking skills."

The special program, hosted by Kerby Elementary School, was the ninth in a series of annual enrichment festivals designed around a single theme for students from first through fifth grade.

Twenty-four presenters offered sessions ranging from "Toothpick Architecture" and "Prehistoric Thinking" to "Baffling Beaver Behaviors" and "Math Magic."

This year's elementary festival of thinking was organized by Susan Nowosad, elementary enrichment coordinator and resource teacher for the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

"Our schools are putting increased emphasis on higher-level thinking skills for all students," she said. "This festival provided the opportunity for elementary students to develop positive attitudes about thinking and problem solving."

ULS to host parents in get-together

University Liggett School will host a casual coffee and dessert get-together on Wednesday, July 29, at 7 p.m. in the school's John L. Booth Library, 1045 Cook Road, Grosse Pointe Woods.

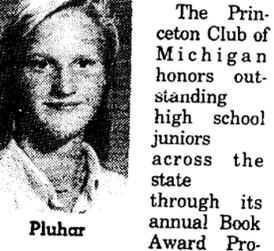

The event will provide parents of children of pre-kindergarten age through grade eight the opportunity to learn more about University Liggett School and its model pre-kindergarten, lower school and middle school educational programs. Parents will have an opportunity to meet the school's new headmaster, Matthew H. Hanly, and to take tours of the school, if they desire.

The event is open to the public; there is no charge. Babysitting will be provided. Parents are encouraged to bring a friend. If you cannot attend the coffee but would like more information, call the admissions office at 884-4444.

Pluhar nominated

Erika Pluhar, Grosse Pointe South junior, was nominated by South for the Princeton Book Award.

Pluhar

The Princeton Club of Michigan honors outstanding high school juniors across the state through its annual Book Award Program. The criteria for selection includes: displaying concern for the opinions of others while demonstrating exceptional leadership, talent and competence in both academic and non-academic pursuits.

Only 10 Princeton Book Awards are given statewide.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Pluhar, she was a runner-up this year.

University Liggett School, where she is chairman of the development committee; and Detroit Medical Center, where she is an officer and member of the joint conference committee.

She is also on the boards of Music Hall Center; Harper Hospital; University Liggett School and the Michigan Center Foundation.

She is the former vice chairman of Detroit Receiving Hospital and University Health Center; past director of Women's United Foundation; a member of the Detroit Institute of Arts' women's committee; former chairman of the DIA's "Under the Stars" ball; past president of the Junior League of Detroit; past director of the Detroit Athletic League; past president of the Detroit Institute for Children; and founder/director of the Tennis & Pets benefit for Children's Hospital of Michigan.

"I never got around to my deer," Glancy said, during an interview in the bright, comfortable peach-and-cream-colored library of her Grosse Pointe Farms home. Seated on a cushioned sofa, surrounded by additional crewel-design fabrics, shelves lined with colorful books and stacks of magazines, she toyed with a pair of hornrimmed eyeglasses as she talked about her family, her pets, her garden and her unerring devotion to the cause of volunteerism. Dressed in black sweater, black print skirt and a colorful necklace of carved wooden beads, her hair pulled back in a loose, no-nonsense ponytail, Glancy recalled the last 30 years of a volunteer career that reveals a strong commitment to Detroit.

"There's no place I'd rather live," she said. "I enjoy the climate. I love summer in Michigan. Spring too. I have deep roots in Detroit and in the Detroit area. I've lived here all my life."

"There are those who say, 'She's just a volunteer,'" Glancy said. "I say if there were no volunteers, this country would be without many services and organizations that we consider essential and that enhance the quality of life."

"Businesses are recognizing this more and more, she added. "Many businesses are asking employees to assume volunteer roles."

Glancy began her volunteer work at the Detroit Artists Market, the Detroit Institute for Children and the United Foundation. All have turned out to be long-term commitments.

"In 1968, the United Foundation had its first Healthorama," she said. "The purpose was early detection of various health problems, a pioneering concept in this community even though it had been tried in California and in Pittsburgh."

Glancy served as president of

the Junior League of Detroit from 1972-74.

"During my term I tried to focus on the downtown Detroit area," she said. Projects during her presidency included Art to the Schools, the Poison Control Center, Kern block landscaping and LINC (Linking Individuals to Needs in the Community.)

"The DIA has taken over Art to the Schools; Children's Hospital has the Poison Control Center; the Kern Block landscaping, which was supposed to be temporary, is still there; and LINC is on its own," she said.

From 1974-78, Glancy was chairman of the Music Hall Center. "It was going to be torn down," she said. "We did fundraisers. I traveled a lot to New York City and I learned about restoration. It was a full-time commitment."

At the same time, she was on the board of Harper Hospital and University Liggett School, where she chaired committees for long-range planning for both organizations. She served as president of the ULS board of trustees for five years.

Glancy has found her niche. "In a trustee role, I'm involved in overall governance. Planning is so important to the success and viability of every organization."

"So many organizations have been forced to change... because of diminished sources of public funding. The corporate community is assuming greater responsibility. Foundations are growing. Individuals are coming forth."

It's hard work, Glancy said. "Detroit has a tremendous number of needs and raising money is difficult. It takes persuasion."

She is a former trustee of New Detroit Inc. Her husband, Alfred R. Glancy III, chaired New Detroit Inc. shortly after her tenure there.

"We have not worked as a couple until now," she said, re-

Gigantic sidewalk sale in Village

Friday Night Live and Saturday Too, a gigantic sidewalk sale, returns to the Village the weekend of Friday and Saturday, July 24-25, as the merchants take to the streets and sidewalks with merchandise and bargains. The rain date is Saturday, Aug. 1, from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., if necessary.

During Friday Night Live, July 24, from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m., Kercheval will be closed between Cadieux and Neff to lend to the party atmosphere. Village merchants will be out with their clearance items, overbuys, off-season merchandise and bargains of all sizes and shapes. Price reductions will range from 20 percent to 80 percent as room is made in the stores for new fall merchandise.

The festivities will include music by The Baldock Mountain Ramblers from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on the Village Plaza and The Banjoes of Michigan from 6 to 8:30 p.m. in the Kroger block. Barbershop Quartets, including The Goodwill Blenders, will stroll the three block area from 6 to 8 p.m.

Face painting by Casey the Clown, psychic readings, balloons and on-street food sales including our own Cafe Le ferring to his chairmanship of the Detroit Medical Center board.

"I try not to publicly contradict him," she said smiling. "I wait until I get home."

"Al is extremely supportive of all that I do."

The Glancys have four children: Joan Mitchell, 28; Alfred IV, 24; Douglas, 15; and Andrew, 8.

Ruth Glancy loves gardening. And animals. She has three dogs, two cats, a canary, two newts and lots of fish.

Her interest in animals has much to do with her involvement in the Detroit Zoo.

"In the late '80s, David Lawrence of the Detroit Free Press asked me to co-chair a fundraiser for a new chimpanzee exhibit at the zoo," she said. Her committee raised $6.5 million from the private sector for the new exhibit. The balance of the $8 million project came from city bonds.

Glancy is currently president of the Detroit Zoological Society.

"Some people are opposed to the existence of zoos. But zoos are for recreation, education and conservation. I think the education and conservation aspects are particularly important. Close to a million people visit the Detroit Zoo every year," she said.

"There's no comparison for a child between seeing a penguin in a zoo and seeing a penguin in a book. When you actually see an animal, you can understand more easily the majesty,

Community band to perform

The Grosse Pointe Community Band will present two concerts — the first on Sunday, July 26, at Farms Pier Park, at 7 p.m.

Sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Farms Parks and Recreation Department, the concert is open to Farms residents who have park passes.

The second concert will conclude the Village's "On the Plaza" series on Thursday, July 30, at 7 p.m. at Kercheval and St. Clair. The public is invited.

In the event of rain, the band will perform in Grosse Pointe South's auditorium at 7:30 p.m. the same day.

Membership in the band consists mainly of Grosse Pointe residents and is offered through the Department of Community Education. Conductor is Ralph Miller.

Selections to be played at the concerts include several Sousa marches, "The Entertainer" by Scott Joplin, "My Fair Lady," "The Light Cavalry Overture" by von Suppe, "The Wizard of Oz" and music by George M. Cohan. Admission to both concerts is free.

dignity and wonder of the animal world.

Take the chimpanzee exhibit, for instance.

"You can't beat actually seeing mothers taking care of their babies. You can't beat actually seeing, firsthand, the interaction among the chimpanzees.

"I'd rather see a species survive in captivity with hopes of some day returning it to the wild."

Many of the zoo improvements during the last few years have not been highly visible projects, she said. The elephant house was refurbished, the Rackham fountain was restored, new drinking fountains were added, a facilities audit was done for the whole park and priorities were established for future improvements. Recently, a major grant was approved for signs, graphics and way-finding improvements.

"A lot is not glamorous, but is necessary for visitor and animal comfort. We're very concerned about the animals' quality of life," she said.

The Detroit Zoo was founded in 1928. "We already have a fine design. We have a fine collection," Glancy said.

Looking to the future of the zoo: Glancy said she dreams of the establishment of an endowment fund for the zoo. She would also like to build an auditorium and classrooms for on-site educational programs. "I'd like to bring more school children to the zoo and provide tools for them to learn about animals."

She would also like to build an area for viewing polar bears underwater. "I've seen this in a number of zoos. It's incredible to see what graceful swimmers they are."

She'd also like a gorilla exhibit. And more money for refurbishing the zoo.

Looking to her own future, Glancy said she'd like to spend more time with her children during the next 10 years. She'd like to travel with her husband more often.

Looking to Detroit's future: "Detroit has tremendous opportunities, but some serious problems to address: No. 1, jobs and employment; No. 2, the school system; No. 3, health care (Michigan is not attractive for physicians); and No. 4, drugs, crack particularly," Glancy said.

Crime, she said, is not on her list of Detroit's most pressing problems.

"Crime is a result of these other things. Solve the other problems on the list — and the crime will solve itself," she said.

She said the southeastern Michigan region needs more cooperative efforts. "The suburbs can't do it alone. Detroit can't do it alone. The region needs energetic leadership — people who assume responsibility for getting a job done and meet challenges."

There's so much in Detroit to be proud of, Glancy said. "I am upset with people who accumulate great wealth in Michigan, then move away. They don't support Michigan or Detroit."

Looking to her plans for that ever-elusive master's degree in business administration: "If I had it to do over, I would have gotten my MBA right away. Now I have too many commitments."

Jane Krynski of Grosse Pointe Woods, with her children, Erin and Peter, is working on the indoor playground so that she and other parents will have someplace to take their children in the winter.

the indoor playground for up to three hours a day, five days a week, for five months.

The fee for the second child would be $20, the fee for any additional children would be $15, and children under the age of 1 would be free, she said.

She said that is much less than what is charged by other children's programs that are offered by professional and community organizations over the winter.

"It's difficult for parents who are just starting out to afford those kinds of classes for their children, especially when they're working to repay school loans and have mortgage and car payments to make," she said. "The indoor playground would give them a less expensive alternative to these structured programs."

The indoor playground would only be open to Woods residents.

"We don't want to be exclusive," she said. "We'd like to open it to the general public, but we just wouldn't have room for everyone. We'd only be open three hours a day, and at the most, we could only have about 20 people in there at a time, which we assume would mean 10 parents and 10 children, and we already have 69 parents in Grosse Pointe Woods who said they would like to use it."

The city council unanimously agreed to send the proposal back to the Grosse Pointe Woods Citizens Recreation Commission for review and recommendation.

Krynski had talked with the commission in January and February, and the commission seemed in favor of the proposal. However, no formal recommendation was made by the commission to the city council at that time.

Councilwoman Jean Rice said she had two big problems with the indoor playground: the cost of liability insurance (which she said would be much higher than the $1,000 premium that Krynski said one insurance company quoted her), and storage of the play equipment.

"We have a lot of groups that ask to use the bathhouse," Rice said, "and we can't have these toys lying around all the time."

Krynski said that Tom Whitcher, the director of the department of public works, was looking into the availability of storage space in the DPW building.

She and her sister-in-law got the idea for the indoor playground from a Parents Magazine article last summer.

"The article made it sound really easy to start up an indoor playground, but it hasn't been," Krynski said. "I didn't realize all of the little details that were involved."

Since January, she has had several meetings with city officials, including the mayor, and she said she was pleasantly surprised to learn that they would take the time to listen and work with her.

"It's been really interesting to see the government in action," she said, "and even if nothing comes of this, it has been a wonderful learning experience for me."

For more information about the Grosse Pointe Winterplay Association, call Krynski at 881-1178.

article, if the library owns it, and copying it, page by page.

In fact, advanced CD-ROM systems like ProQuest, which the central library has on a trial basis for a few more weeks, show the reader an exact black and white image of the magazine article, pictures included, and will magnify pages for easier reading and print out the entire article, instead of just one page.

"The system is pretty fancy. No one in the metro area has anything like ProQuest," said Morrow, who said he's not sure if the central library will be able to afford to keep the system permanently.

The great benefit for libraries having a CD-ROM system is the massive amount of data that each disc can hold. In libraries like Grosse Pointe's, with precious little storage space, that means the capability to carry many more resources.

"It's very impressive. A single disc can carry four months worth of the New York Times, including all Sunday papers, magazine sections and special sections," said Morrow, adding that photos and graphics, which take up tremendous amounts of space, are included.

"A lot of reference books are being replaced by CD-ROM.

The entire Thomas Register, which takes up about three library shelves, can fit on one disc."

A single disc can hold 300,000 pages of text, as opposed to floppy discs, which can hold 1,200 to 1,400 pages of text.

"We used to have three encyclopedias out there on CD-ROM," Morrow said, "but the staff couldn't use the business resources because the kids were always using them for browsing in the encyclopedias. So we had to take them out until we have the money to put in more platforms. We'd like to put an encyclopedia feature in our Youth Services section."

Morrow said about 95 percent of the library's work revolves around CDs, including transferring card cataloging information, which comes from the Library of Congress on CDs, into the central library's system.

The discs are also guaranteed to last at least 10 years, "but some say they last up to 100 years," Morrow said, "and that's a lot more impressive than the life of the books we buy."

A nice feature of CD-ROMs is that many of them provide free software, meaning, if you have a personal computer at home, you can bring in a floppy disc and copy as much information as you want for your home library, from Standard & Poor's reference material to computer games.

"Games, obviously, are the most popular feature of this," Morrow said. "The author writes them and anyone can copy them for free."

Some programs, however, ask that users pay a $15 registration fee if you like the program and decide to keep it. That also entitles you to upgrades of the program.

Will libraries of the future be made up of CD-ROM systems instead of books?

"This, or some modification of it, is the wave of the future," Morrow said.

"It's already replaced some books. Books won't become obsolete — people will always want to curl up with a good book — but if you look at all the advances in electronic publishing, it's quicker, more effective, a lot easier to update and has all the advantages that books have and very few disadvantages. If you look at the storage space alone, it's very impressive."

Swimmer robbed Lawsuit

While a Grosse Pointe Farms man was swimming in the pool at Pier Park in the Farms, someone took his wedding band, Rolex watch, Reebok tennis shoes and keys from his duffel bag, which he had placed near the south fence of the pool area.

The theft happened sometime between 6:45 a.m. and 7:30 a.m. Friday, July 10, according to police.

A park employee said he saw a man near the bag, but didn't see him take anything. He described the man as being white, 6 feet 1 and 200 pounds, with brown hair.

Gunman arrested

A man told Grosse Pointe City public safety officers that he was walking on Neff at Charlevoix in Grosse Pointe Park about 1:30 a.m. Monday, July 6, when a white man in a gray Pontiac Sunbird pointed a gun at him.

Police found the car shortly thereafter and arrested a suspect in the incident on a charge of felonious assault.

front Park in 1948, Catlin said.

In 1956, the city wanted to issue bonds to build a swimming pool at the park. The previous owners of the Vitales' house requested a court injunction to prevent the city from building anything that would interfere with their view, Catlin said.

The title agreement was proposed as an out-of-court settlement, and the city agreed to it so that it could proceed with the pool, he said.

That swimming pool was located near the old bathhouse, and has since been filled in and made into a grassy area.

A hearing was scheduled for 9 a.m. Monday, July 20, in Macomb County Circuit Court Judge Frederick D. Balkwill's courtroom.

At that time, Grosse Pointe Woods was to show cause why the court should not enter a preliminary and permanent injunction against the city.

Balkwill took the matter under advisement, and will issue an opinion on it sometime in the future, a Macomb County Circuit Court clerk said.

Republicans in running as GOP sees chance for seat on county board

Donald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Wayne County Republicans think this may be the year for Pointes to finally get GOP representation on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

In previous years the Pointes accounted for less than 10 percent of the 1st Commission District, with heavily Democratic Detroit making up the lion's share. The districts were redrawn last year in accordance with the 1990 census figures, giving the new district slightly more to the Republicans.

That, coupled with the fact that there's no incumbent, means the Republicans have a good chance at the seat, they believe.

Three Grosse Pointe residents are competing in the Aug. 4 primary to be the Republican nominee in November.

Frederick C. Kaess

At 54, Frederick C. Kaess is making his first bid for public office. A former auto executive for Chrysler and General Motors, he retired from GM in June.

"I've never run for anything in my life, but I thought this was a good time to try," Kaess said. "First of all because there's a Republican chance, and secondly because I'm not a member of the old-boy network. I'm an independent who doesn't owe anyone anything."

Due to his recent retirement he will be able to devote more time to county government, he said, and he will be more easily accessible to constituents.

Chief among the issues is the reduction of crime, he said.

"Crime, largely drug-driven, particularly among the youth, has severe long-term broad-based negative implications for all Wayne County communities," he said. "I would work toward getting better interaction between Wayne County and the Detroit police force. Something has to be done to stop the drug situation. All concerned parties — Wayne County, Detroit, schools, parents, churches — all have to work together for the mutual benefit."

While he is unsure about the recent ballot proposal to raise money for a bailout of the county health care system, he is opposed to a similar bailout proposal for Wayne County Community College. He believes the college needs to show fiscal responsibility before receiving any more funds.

He is also opposed to any expansion of Detroit City Airport. The Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) favors extending one of the runways at the airport for safety reasons, but, Kaess said any further expansion is unnecessary, especially when it is generally known that Macomb County and the northern suburbs want an airport and that most people are opposed to City Airport expansion.

He believes the county should refund the money it's been collecting for a juvenile facility that the county decided not to build. The cities should get their money back to use for juvenile crime programs, he said.

If a new Tiger Stadium is built, Kaess would like to see it remain in the city, perhaps in the area of the Fox Theater.

He said if elected he would like to work on a finance committee, which is where his background lies.

He said his abilities to listen, weigh all sides of a conflict and to reach a consensus are reasons he'll make a good commissioner.

Andrew Richner

Andrew C. Richner, 31, is an attorney and is making his first bid for county commissioner. He was elected to the Grosse Pointe Park City Council in November, a position he will resign if elected to the county board.

While on the council, he helped fight the proposed split of the Pointes into two county commission districts, curtailing their power to elect a Republican representative.

Richner is an attorney specializing in bond financing and corporate and international transactions.

He believes the key issues in the election all revolve around money.

"County property taxes have increased 75 percent since 1986," Richner said. "The county's focus is wrong. It should cut costs, not look for more money. We need new ideas on the board."

One of the "new ideas" Richner would bring to the board is privatization of certain services — perhaps the road department for starters — which he says would save the county thousands of dollars a year.

He is opposed to any expansion of Detroit City Airport.

Because Wayne County is so inefficient, it is losing jobs to surrounding counties, he said. He thinks the board should do what it can to bring jobs and families into the county.

"If Wayne County wants to compete we ought to encourage business to come here and families to live here," he said. "We've missed the boat on international trade. We should encourage more trade opportunities between us and Canada and the new markets in Europe."

One way to encourage businesses and families to come to the county is to keep taxes low, he said noting that he recently presented a resolution to the Park council asking for the county to reimburse the taxpayers for the money they've been collecting for the juvenile home which was deemed unfeasible. The resolution passed unanimously.

He thinks the health care bailout would be unnecessary if the county handled its funds more carefully and cut fat out of the budget.

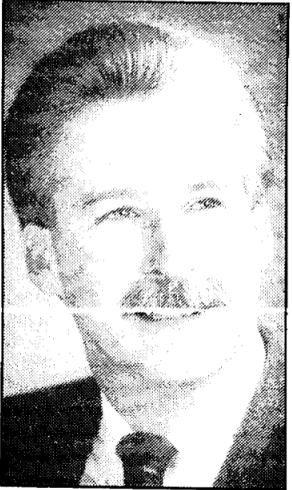

He opposes a county-wide tax to fund a new Tiger Stadium.

"Taxpayers shouldn't be funding a business," he said.

"I want to make a contribution to Wayne County government because it's the one branch of government that needs the most improvement," Richner said.

tials have been called into question by his GOP opponents. Robson denies the allegations.

He worked to keep the Pointes in the same district so they would have more political clout when a preliminary reapportionment plan threatened to split them up, he said. He said he is the only Pointe official to testify against the split before the Wayne County Apportionment Commission.

James Robson

"I look upon this question by my opponent as a smoke screen meant to divert attention from the real issues," he said. "Instead of who's a better Republican the focus should be on who is the most qualified and most effective commissioner. If you take an objective review of my credentials, I am the most qualified and will be most effective."

He says his years as a county employee have earned him an insider's knowledge of the government and he believes he could hit the ground running.

"I know the Wayne County woods and they can be treacherous," he said. "I know the soft spots in the budget, I know the administrators and have a good rapport with the county executive, where our current representative doesn't."

Robson said that bad relationship is one reason the Pointes get "an abysmal return on our tax dollars."

He says he would like to see the county spend more money on law enforcement on the east side and bring more members of the sheriff's marine division to Lake St. Clair. He believes the county and Detroit police should work together on certain cases — such as drug enforcement — for better results.

He is opposed to any expansion of City Airport and said the first thing he would do with the money the county budgets for his commission staff would be to hire an attorney to fight expansion.

He would like to revitalize the east side of Detroit because "a healthy east side is beneficial to the Pointes."

He opposes the health care bailout, saying the ballot proposal is "not well thought-out," and that the county has so much fat in its budget that it doesn't need any more money.

He said the county should return the funds it's collected for the juvenile home to the taxpayers and said he would not support a Wayne County-Detroit Tiger Stadium venture until Detroit's Mayor Young is out of office.

"I believe I have an established commitment to the people of the Pointes," he said.

James E. Robson

James E. Robson, 44, has been a county employee for 18 years. He is currently an executive lieutenant for the Wayne County Sheriff's Department assigned to Metropolitan Airport. He is in charge of special operations, the detective bureau and hostage negotiations.

Robson, too, is a Park councilman, having served on that body for seven years. If elected he would step down from the council. He also said he would be required to take a leave of absence from his position with the county, resulting in a $10,000 a year pay cut. County commissioners earn $42,000 a year.

Because the county has been run by Democrats for decades, Robson's Republican creden-

Neff Park expansion is approved

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe City's Neff Park just got 43,200 square feet larger.

The City council on Monday unanimously approved a recommendation to turn property it purchased adjacent to the park into more recreation area.

The recommendation came out of an 11-member committee which was chaired by councilmember Carl Rashid Jr., and was made up of two other councilmembers and eight neighbors of the park.

The City purchased the land at the foot of Lakeland, and the house and garage that stand on it, in June 1991 for $895,000. City residents are being assessed .3 mills to pay for the property.

In accordance with the recommendation, the house — which is in disrepair — will be razed and the area will be landscaped to bring it into conformity with the rest of the park. The garage will remain for a year or two and be used by the City for storage. It will eventually be razed.

Residents at the meeting expressed concern about how long the garage would stay and whether there would be access to the park or the garage from Lakeland. The council assured the residents that the garage would be torn down and that access to the park will continue to be from Jefferson Avenue only.

No date has been set for the destruction of the house.

The committee unanimously approved the plan after considering splitting the property and selling the house, converting the house into a community center or leasing the house.

The City will now create a master plan for redevelopment of Neff Park, taking the new land into account.

City resident Mark Weber praised the council and called the purchase "a great investment in the future."

The venture also assists in maintaining the independence of people who are homebound. The program serves Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Lake level

Lake St. Clair at the end of June was at elevation 575.01 feet above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or 33 inches above chart datum.

This was about 4 inches below what it was a year ago, and about the same as one month ago.

The June monthly mean level of 574.98 feet was about 4 inches above the long-term average for June. The lake, however, remained about 26 inches below the all-time high June monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986.

The forecast shows that at the end of July, the level of Lake St. Clair will be about 3 inches below what it was at the end of June.

The level of the lake is expected to begin its seasonal decline in July. The water level in December 1992, is expected to be about 1 inch below the long-term average for that month, or about 7 inches below what it was at the same time in 1991.

2 Grosse Pointe Democrats square off for chance to battle Bryant

Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Two Democrats, both from Grosse Pointe Farms, are vying for the chance to unseat Republican state Rep. William R. Bryant Jr., also of Grosse Pointe Farms, in the November election.

Running in the Aug. 4 Democratic primary are Elaine Hartmann and Deanna Maher Scallen.

Bryant serves Michigan's 1st state legislative district (formerly called the 13th District), which serves the five Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods, and a small section of Detroit (from Moross to I-94 to Bedford to Mack).

Former Republican leader of the Michigan House of Representatives, Bryant has been in office 22 years. He is the Republican vice chair of the House taxation committee and a member of the House education committee.

He is running unopposed on the Republican side.

Hartmann and Scallen have much in common. Both are former teachers; both say the only way to cut crime is by improving education; and both say that the state should contribute 50 percent of the money needed to operate school districts, as it did in the 1970s.

However, they have somewhat different ideas about where the state should get the money to increase school funding.

Both are against the state's "Robin Hood" plan for education, which takes money away from wealthier, out-of-formula school districts like Grosse Pointe's and gives it to poorer in-formula school districts.

This is the first time either has run for public office.

Also, both favor the control of handguns and automatic weapons, and both have strong opinions about the Benjamin Gravel murder case.

Gravel, of Grosse Pointe Farms, was ambushed and murdered by a group of teenagers in February 1990.

Six teenagers were charged in the case. Two were tried as adults and were found not guilty. The other four were tried as juveniles and found guilty. Recorder's Court Chief Judge Dalton Roberson sentenced them to state juvenile detention facilities until they are 21.

Many people said their sentences were too light. Roberson defended his actions, saying that under the law, he only had two choices, and the other was to sentence the teens to life in prison, which he felt was too harsh. The case is being appealed.

Elaine Hartmann

out-of-formula districts like Grosse Pointe to share their funds with other districts.

Also, she said she would seriously consider raising the state's sales tax to fund education, and would try to get the Legislature to make good on the promise it made many years ago to use all the profits from the state lottery to pay for education.

As a state representative, she said she would also promote reuse of homes and businesses in the Grosse Pointes for senior citizen housing.

She thinks the state gasoline tax should be increased by 6 cents to pay for the repair of Michigan's crumbling roads and bridges, creating much-needed jobs; and that the tax on cigarettes should be increased to pay for health care programs.

On the issue of abortion, she said she is pro-choice.

Also, she said she is in favor of the state Legislature giving judges the option of sentencing juveniles who are on the threshold of adulthood and who have been convicted of a felony crime to some term in prison less than life.

"I would have liked to see them (the defendants in the Gravel case) spend some time in prison," Hartmann said. "I think the big thrust of our state penitentiary system should be on rehabilitation, but you have to wonder, if they get to the point where they're killing people on the street, is rehabilitation possible?"

Why seeking office? "I have been frustrated by the state Legislature's inability to deal with so many issues that affect all of us. The yearly struggle over the school aid act is a good example. So is the auto insurance reform bill. I think the Legislature needs new people with open minds and new perspectives in order to get something done. I also think it needs people who know how to work cooperatively and how to compromise when necessary. I can do that," she said.

Map of the Michigan House of Representatives' First District

Deanna Maher Scallen

She received her bachelor of arts degree in education, specializing in high school social studies and English, from Wayne State University in 1963, and her master's degree in reading and language arts from Grand Valley State in 1980. From 1984-86, she took professional development classes at Michigan State University.

The first non-attorney member of the juvenile section of the Michigan Bar Association, she is also a member of the Inter-Faith Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe, the League of Women Voters (Detroit and Grosse Pointe chapters), Detroit/Wayne County Homeless Strategy Coalition, Greater Detroit Inter-Faith Round Table, Eastside Mothers of Detroit, Catholic Interracial Council, Wilshire Drive Block Club Association, St. Paul on the Lake Catholic Church, Children of Mary (Grosse Pointe Sacred Heart Academy), and Pax Christi USA.

Issues: Scallen said if elected she would push for "a more cost effective delivery of services that we as taxpayers are supporting."

For example, she said the millions of dollars the state gives the department of social services each year for children's education is not closely monitored. Also, she said it is illegal for the state to give that money to the DSS, and that it should be given to the department of education.

Under the state Constitution, she said, the department of education should be responsible for educating children who are under the supervision of the department of social services.

Currently, DSS children can work toward a general equivalency degree, but they can't earn education credits that may be applied to other schools and colleges, because the DSS education programs aren't accredited by the state, she said.

"The bottom line is that social workers aren't equipped to be educators," she said.

If those millions were returned to the department of education, that money would be directed to local school districts, which would be responsible for educating children living in shelters. That would benefit local school districts, Scallen said, because the state counts each child who lives in a shelter as 1 1/2 children when paying tuition.

She said she would push for Michigan to take better advantage of matching federal funds to "rebuild and clean up our urban areas," and lobby for better enforcement of environmental polluter-pay laws.

Taxes will probably have to be raised state-wide to pay for road repairs, she said, but she is not sure which taxes should be raised. She said she wouldn't want to raise property taxes because they are already high, and that she is against raising the gas tax because it would hurt Michigan's travel industry.

Instead of giving judges the option of sending juveniles to prison for a term less than life in cases like Benjamin Gravel's, Scallen said the state needs to improve its rehabilitation programs, which are practically non-existent in most youth homes, she said.

"If (the youths in the Gravel case) were sent to an adult penal institution, you could forget about them. They'd be thrown in with hard core criminals, and would grow to be more like them to survive that environment," she said.

On the abortion issue, Scallen said, "I'm pro-choice, as long as the woman is provided with real choices, and not just abortion. If a woman is pregnant, and she already has a child or children, and she is their only means of support, then pro-choicers should provide a way to help that woman keep her unborn child. I often think that if people on both sides of the fence concentrated their efforts to benefit the children who are already here, we wouldn't have this issue of abortion."

Why seeking office? "My entire agenda is to make a better, safer world for our children to live in. I've worked with different community-based organizations, and I came to a point where I thought I could best serve that agenda as a state legislator."

school in Bloomfield Hills, Birmingham, Rochester, West Ottawa and Holland public schools from 1963-79. She also worked as a reading specialist/consultant in Zeeland public schools for seven years, and as the educational coordinator at the Open Arms shelter for abused, neglected and "at risk" children in 1988.

"I learned the term 'at risk' means children who have committed crimes or who are suspected of committing crimes, but haven't been caught yet by the law," Scallen said.

She discovered the shelter was receiving $189,000 a year from the state for educational services, but was not using that money for its intended purpose. She resigned and spent 13 months building a legal case against the shelter, which she brought before the state Senate. She argued that the shelter's operators were violating the state Constitution by denying children access to the same type of education offered in the school district where they were residing, and that the operators were misappropriating taxpayers' money for their own private interests.

The state closed the shelter in 1989 and created the Michigan Foster Care Systems Task Force. Scallen was appointed to the task force's education committee.

In 1989, she founded Anawim Inc., a nonprofit corporation made up of community leaders and business people in the Grosse Pointes and Detroit.

The corporation planned to acquire the former St. David of Wales Church building in Detroit and turn it into transitional housing for pregnant teenagers and at-risk mothers and their children, but backed out of the deal when it learned there were underground fuel storage tanks beneath the church that could have leaked over the years. The corporation is looking for a new shelter site, Scallen said.

To Be At Lakeside's Children's Shakespearean Festival Or Not To Be. That Is The Question.

July 20 - August 16 Performing Arts Court

For four weeks, watch the wonderful world of William Shakespeare come alive as Lakeside brings today's children the sights and sounds that influenced this beloved playwright. Hear the music, the language, see the costumes and dances he so memorably brought to the Elizabethan stage.

Medieval-style flags and trumpeters will decorate our entire Center, as will Shakespearean-era garden beds, and costumes actually worn in Hollywood's many Shakespearean movies. (Don't miss the herbal knot garden in the Lord & Taylor court).

And, each time a child attends a weekend event, he or she will receive a personalized "Young Shakespeare Award."

The Music of Shakespeare's World

Monday - Friday, July 20 - August 14 7:00 p.m.

Shakespeare In Action!

Saturday, July 25 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m.

New York's Theatreworks USA brings the Bard front and center in an exciting glimpse of Shakespeare on stage. Using slapstick humor and stage combat, the plays become passionate vehicles for savoring Shakespeare somewhat differently. The audience will engage in active dialogue, discovering parallels between modern-day life and England in the 16th century.

Shakespeare EnGarde!

Sunday, July 26 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m.

New York actor, fight director, and educator Steven Andresen focuses on Shakespeare with a hands-on learning approach that uses movement, vocal work and stage combat.

Shakespeare, Stratford Style

Saturday, August 1 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m.

Lisa Brudy, Education Assistant for Stratford Festival in Ontario, Canada, celebrates the Festival's 40th anniversary by sharing a behind-the-scenes look at their theaters, costumes and actors. Children can try on costumes and see some exciting props actually used on stage.

Shakespearean Dance

Sunday, August 2 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m.

The Society for Creative Anachronism of Michigan performs dances popular during the time of William Shakespeare. They'll also invite kids from the audience to join them on stage for two dance games especially for children.

Shakesperience!

Saturday, August 8 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m.

A puppet show adaptation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" immerses children in the vibrant world of the Renaissance, and even lets them interact with the puppets. Designed, written and performed by The Shakespeare Festival/LA of California.

Dress Up Your Shakespeare

Sunday, August 9 1:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m.

The Folger Shakespeare Library of Washington, D.C. presents a three-part workshop consisting of: (a) a demonstration of Elizabethan costumes — up to four children at a time can dress up in costumes while an actor explains each part of the costume; (b) making medieval brooches like painted pasta jewelry; and (c) ruff-making — creating the lacy, pleated collars of the Elizabethan period.

A Sign Of Shakespeare

Saturday, August 15 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m.

Will & Co. of Los Angeles, California perform two renditions of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" — the first in sign language with a signing cast and a speaking narrator, and the second with a speaking cast and a signing narrator.

Shakespeare Live!

Sunday, August 16 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m.

Students of Utica Community Schools, under the direction of teacher Maryann Foxley, use language and costumes to perform acts from a variety of Shakespeare's works.

Have Lunch With Shakespeare

Show your good taste.

Receive a 100% cotton canvas "Will Power" lunch bag when you spend $200 at Lakeside in a single day, from one or more stores. Or purchase one of these especially appetizing bags for only $5. Available at the Lakeside Information Center. Offer good while supplies last. Limit one to each $200 worth of purchases.

Do you have $10,000 lying around, gathering dust?

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

The economic forecast is ... well, ... foggy, hazy and partly cloudy. The nation has sunk in the doldrums of a recession. We've heard month after month of predictions — everything from gloom to timid optimism to bright-eyed assurances of imminent recovery. But financial analysts are faced with the fact that we're still stuck in an economic stationary front.

good." Long would like to see interest rates go up. "Higher interest rates are a sign that economic activity is picking up." His advice for those with maturing CDs: "It depends. If you don't need the interest in the initial CD investment for living expenses, I'd take the money to another CD," he said, "or I'd put it in a Michigan tax-exempt money market fund. "If you need the interest to live, I'd suggest looking for a good utility stock with a 5 percent or more yield." For long-term investments of three or four years, Long suggested a few good stocks: Rubbermaid, American Home Products, Coca Cola and Procter & Gamble.

"You can find good ideas by opening your kitchen cabinets and medicine cabinets and reading the labels," he said. Long said he would stay away from defense-oriented and bio-technology stocks.

Wayne Pittel, a stock broker in the Grosse Pointe office of Roney & Co., stressed the importance of identifying goals before investing $10,000. "You have to honestly evaluate what risk you are willing to take and what average annual yield you can live with," he said. "Then ask a professional to go through the investments that are available today, starting with the lowest risk and working up to the highest yield. Let him or her know when to stop..." Don't let your maturing CDs rollover at today's low rates, he said, "without first looking into what else is available." Pittel suggested U.S. treasury bills, notes and bonds and the country, often with jumbo rates and they're available even to the small investor."

The trend is for interest rates to go lower, Pittel said. "The economy is not overheating, but the discount rate is at 3 percent now and it will not go to zero. "The yield curve is such that short term rates are maddeningly low and long-term rates are stubbornly high," he said. "So, long term rates (like mortgages) could come down, while short-term rates stay flat or edge up."

Dean Gulis, director of research for Roney & Co. said that long-term (10- to 30-year) rates for mortgages could be one-half point lower in six months, with short rates unchanged. "This would be due to low credit demand and low inflation numbers," he said.

Pittel said the secret is to catch a trend early and leave it early. For example, he said, "Biotech and medical stocks were hot last year, but not this often best for the investor. Find someone you trust and don't be afraid to educate yourself about something new."

Grosse Pointer Aileen Swaney Ziegler, director of financial and estate planning for Godfrey Hammel, Danneels & Co., a financial planning firm, said her advice to someone wanting to invest $10,000 would be a combination of common stock mutual funds, U.S. Treasury investments and money market funds.

"The specific allocation would depend on the individual situation," she said.

People with maturing CDs should not fall prey to peddlers of so-called high yield investments, Ziegler said.

"Because of the anxiety about current low interest rates, some people are doing emotional switching to aggressive investments they would not even consider in normal circumstances."

"Depending on the composition of the rest of their portfolios, some good replacements for maturing CDs might be U.S. Treasury security mutual funds (short or intermediate term) or U.S. Treasury notes (5-10 years); utility stocks or stock mutual funds; and a portion in money market funds."

Ziegler said interest rates will probably stay low for the short term, but start rising gradually later this year.

WE LISTENED

The condominium homes at Harbor Place are a direct result of listening to your lifestyle needs and desires. Our early sales have been an outstanding success, because we built to your specifications.

Again, we've been listening. The Blake Company is pleased to announce the beginning of Phase II, but this time we're adding a fresh new concept. It's a 2-bedroom Ranch Home with total one floor living. Like in our successful Cluster Home, our Ranch Home has a large kitchen, luxurious bath, storage, security system and attached 2-car garage. We also listened to your price range which is why we can offer the Ranch Home from $244,000 and our Cluster Home from $264,000. Both models are available with pre-construction pricing.

Our Cluster Homes are located in the private, secure gate-house community at Harbor Place. Harbor Place is the Grosse Pointe areas most exclusive condominium development, situated on the shores of Lake St. Clair. Boat slips are also available for purchase or lease.

Stop by our sales office and see the Cluster Homes at Harbor Place, after all, you helped build them. We listened.

The Harbor Place sales office will be open from 1-5 p.m., closed Wednesdays. To visit the site, enter from Jefferson through Riviera Terrace, 100 yds. North of Nine Mile Road, in St. Clair Shores.

AAUW installs 1992-93 officers and directors

The Grosse Pointe branch of the American Association of University Women, America's largest and oldest women's organization, installed its officers and directors for 1992-93 at last month's meeting.

Officers are Rose Evanski, president; Elizabeth Schaefer, president-elect; Ann Schumacher, vice president, development; Aralynn Vinande, vice president, general program; Charlotte Adamaszek, vice president, membership; Ruth Cain, recording secretary; Mary Ann Lawlis, corresponding secretary; and Linda Gregg, treasurer.

AAUW stresses education and equity for women and girls. The Grosse Pointe chapter was represented at the organization's recent Great Lakes regional conference, held June 19-21 at the Dearborn Inn, by Schumacher, Vinande, Corinne Smith, Gloria Weber, Evanski and Rosemarie Dyer, past president.

For information about membership in the AAUW, call Adamaszek at 882-0966.

O'Loughlin brothers receive scouting awards

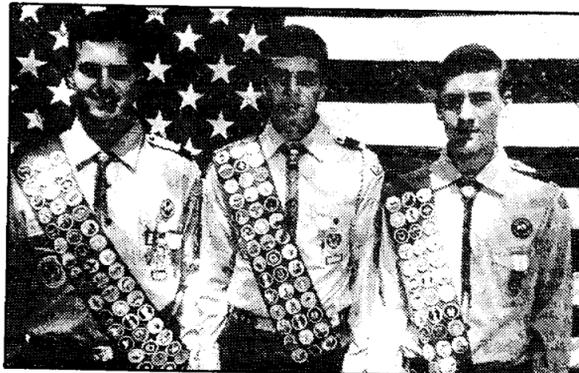

Three Grosse Pointe brothers, Charles O'Loughlin, 17, John O'Loughlin, 16, and Timothy O'Loughlin, 14, were awarded the Ad Altare Dei Catholic religious medal in Boy Scouting at a Court of Honor ceremony May 18 at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

The three brothers, members of Boy Scout Troop 96, are active members at St. Clare of Montefalco Church. Each received an individual letter of recognition from Archbishop Adam Maida for his achievement, hard work and active Christian participation in the community.

In addition, as an Eagle Scout, Charles was awarded the bronze palm and the gold palm. All three brothers are honor students in the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

At an earlier ceremony the same evening, Charles was inducted into the National Honor Society at Grosse Pointe South

High School. They are the sons of Mary Louise and Charles O'Loughlin of Grosse Pointe Park.

English Speaking Union elects new directors

The annual meeting of the Michigan branch of the English Speaking Union was held June 14 at the Orchard Lake Country Club.

Mrs. Mark Stevens, a member of the board of directors for six years, was recognized for the contributions she and her husband have made as patron members of the Michigan Branch since it was reinstated by Mark Stevens after World War II.

Elsie Holmes Peck, associate curator of the Detroit Institute of Arts, was the speaker.

Five new directors were installed: Carol Kavan, Lenore Marshall, Dr. Ralph Cooper, Mary Irwin and Karl Plaun.

Founders' fabulous fundraiser to feature fantasy, fashions

The Detroit Institute of Arts' Founders Junior Council (FJC) will present its famous annual fundraiser, Fash Bash '92, at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 4, at the Fox Theatre.

The fashion and entertainment extravaganza, sponsored by Hudson's and the FJC, will feature on-stage fashions and fantasies. As usual, the get-ups of some of the guests, to be viewed in the lobby before and after the show, may... just may... upstage the entertainment.

The whole affair promises to be a surrealistic experience.

Sponsors will create a fantasy world with jugglers, fire eaters, illusions, aerialists, tumblers, contortionists, stiltwalkers and more — along with fashion models wearing the latest fall trends.

Michael Davis, comedian and juggler, will host the evening. Davis has appeared on the "Tonight Show, Saturday Night Live, 20/20, Late Night With David Letterman" and in his own HBO special.

Fashion themes on stage will include things like "Best Western" (fringed skirts and boots); "Guys & Dolls" (pinstripes, suspenders, fedoras and ties); "Wild Thing" (faux animal skins); "La Resistance" (bomber jackets, leather coats and vests); and more.

Myron Johnson, artistic director of Ballet of the Dolls, a Minneapolis-based dance/theater company, will choreograph the presentation.

Tickets are available in three categories: $100 tickets include valet parking, a pre-Bash cocktail and hors d'oeuvres reception and auction, and a post-Bash afterglow at the State Theatre; $35 tickets are for seats on the main floor or mezzanine; $25 seats are in the balcony. Tickets are available at the DIA ticket office, the Fox Theatre, Hudson's and Ticketmaster outlets. For information, call the DIA at 833-2323.

Founders Junior Council president Kathy Rines announced that the proceeds from Fash Bash '93 will be used to open all galleries of the DIA on Sundays, beginning this fall.

"In past years, Fash Bash proceeds helped us fund very worthwhile art acquisitions and DIA programs," Rines said. "However, this year we could think of no better gift to the community than to open the entire museum to everyone at least one day a week."

Founders Junior Council, one of several DIA auxiliary organizations, is made up of 750 young-at-heart members and is the largest special interest group of volunteers of the Founders Society. For more information about the FJC, call 833-0247.

Bravissimo: William F. Stephens, a Grosse Pointe South High School junior, and John Anthony Rutherford, a University of Detroit High School sophomore, have received the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra's Nester Memorial scholarship.

The Thomas Nester Memorial Scholarship, set up in memory of the founder of the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra, was designed to reward talented young people by giving them a chance to play with a symphony orchestra and to perform as soloists.

Stephens is a student at the Center for Creative Studies Institute of Music and Dance, where he has been studying percussion for eight years. He's a member of Grosse Pointe South's orchestra, symphony band and jazz band, and is percussionist for the school's choir. He has performed with the Grosse Pointe Community Band, the Michigan Youth Symphony Orchestra and the Michigan Youth Symphonic Band.

Stephens won 10 first-place awards for snare drums in 1990 at a national competition of the American Guild of Music. In 1992, he earned a perfect score at the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association's state festival.

Besides all this, Stephens has a 4.1 grade point average at South.

Rutherford is an honor student at U. of D. High School and is a member of the National Honor Society. He has studied trombone for seven years and attended the University of Michigan All-State program at Interlochen for four years. He was principal trombonist with the Metropolitan Youth Symphony and participated in the State Honors Orchestra at the Michigan Youth Arts Festival.

Rutherford is a member of the high school's symphonic band and was a featured soloist at the Mid-Winter Fine Arts Festival. He's also a member of the U. of D. High School Brass Ensemble.

Students up to 11th grade may audition for the Nester Scholarship. Winners receive $400 and are expected to participate in rehearsals and concerts during the season.

Scottish games: The Saint Andrew's Society of Detroit will hold its 143rd annual Highland Games Saturday, Aug. 1, at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores. Activities will include competitions for pipe bands, Highland dancers, drum majors and athletes as well as children's events, Scottish arts performances and Scottish vendors. Admission is $5 in advance; $7 at the door. For more information call Liam F. Neary at 937-9547.

Last Judgment

By the Rev. Gordon A. Mikoski
Grosse Pointe Memorial Church

It has been raining a lot this summer, don't you think? Being from Seattle, I hardly noticed. I wouldn't have mentioned it except that everyone around me keeps talking about the wet weather as if it must be a sign of something apocalyptic.

Reasons for the strange weather range from the volcano in the Philippines to the Gulf War oil field fires to the hole in the ozone layer. I wonder what Hal Lindsey's explanation is; I'm sure it's a winner.

My own theory is that it's God's gracious way of dealing with the problem of sun worship, so rampant this time of year.

Speaking of things apocalyptic, I was struck the other day by something I read about the end of the world in the Gospel of Matthew. I found Jesus' teaching about the Last Judgment rather shocking. It's not at all like we usually picture it with pearly gates and rosy cheeked cherubs floating amid the clouds.

Furthermore, there won't be any reading of personal or professional pedigrees. Nor will there be a listing of our various distinguished accomplishments. The criteria for determining our ultimate status are as surprising as they are simple.

The things that matter to the One we will face on that day are these: feeding the hungry, giving drink to the thirsty, welcoming strangers, clothing the sick, and visiting the sick and the imprisoned. How we care for the most vulnerable and the most needy in our world is what will really matter in the end. We have the opportunity and the responsibility in the here and now to act with compassion toward those who are in need.

Rain or shine, today is a good day to reach out and help someone.

"In as much as you did it to the least of these brothers (and sisters) of mine . . . you did it to me."

St. James Lutheran plans Bible school

"Together in Jesus' Name" is the theme of vacation Bible school at St. James Lutheran Church, 170 McMillan in Grosse Pointe Farms. Children in the community between age 4 and sixth grade are invited to attend the one-week session from 9 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday, July 27-31.

Students will study the Bible and participate in art activities, music, service projects, recreation and worship. For more information or to register, call the church office at 884-0511.

Post-adoptive birth parent group meets

A free support group for birth mothers and fathers who have released their babies for adoption will meet Wednesday, Aug. 5, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at A Friend's House, 28111 Imperial in Warren, south of 12 Mile and east of Hoover.

Group members, including adult adoptees, share experiences, discuss loss and conflict issues and gain support. The group is sponsored by Catholic Services of Macomb. For more information, call 468-2616.

NACEL seeks host families for foreign exchange students

NACEL, a cultural exchange group, is seeking Grosse Pointe, Harper Woods and St. Clair Shores families to host students from France, Germany and Spain for a few weeks this summer.

The students are between 14 and 18 years old. They pay their own transportation costs and insurance and they have their own spending money. Host families and students are matched according to interests and preferred activities. The students have studied English and want to experience life with American families.

French and Spanish students will arrive July 31 and leave Aug. 28. German students will arrive July 29 and leave Aug. 25.

Host families don't need to speak a foreign language, since the teenagers are coming here to practice their English.

For more information, call NACEL's Grosse Pointe/Harper Woods representative, Phyllis Reeve, at 331-2378; or NACEL's St. Clair Shores representative, Connie Firestone, at 296-2392.

Vacation Bible school is offered at Woods Presbyterian Church

The theme for Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church's annual vacation Bible school will be "Marketplace 29 A.D.," a repeat of last year's successful experience.

This year, 20 more spaces are available for children in fourth and fifth grades. The school runs from 9 a.m. to noon the week of Aug. 3-7.

Children will relive Biblical times through music, dances, games, crafts and stories. Parents may join their children on Friday for a celebration festival. For information, call 886-4300.

Couple to Couple League meets July 26

The Couple to Couple League will begin its next series on natural family planning Sunday, July 26, from 2 to 4:30 p.m. at St. Vincent Ferrer, 1075 E. Gardinia in Madison Heights.

The series continues once a month on Aug. 23, Sept. 27, and Oct. 25.

Private counseling will also be available. A registration fee includes all materials. To register or for more information, call Bill and Linda Hughes at 545-2763.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

I think Confucius would have been an exceptional bridge master for his lessons on excesses were marvelous. Take this one which has application to each of us. "To go beyond the limit of one's gifts is as wrong as to fall short of the same." And this from the fun pen of F.S.F. "In duplicate, anyone can win unless there's a better entry." I believe that quotation was created by F. Scott Fitzbridges.

We all know players who act badly; like everything that can, happens to them. Their bridge life has been an endless stream of skunked fishing trips, five day drunks, lousy partners and cards and modern transportation with bad transmissions.

Confucius also wrote, "Knowledge rests not upon truth alone, but upon error also."

Suggestion... say to yourself when in a slam that's in a jam or a game that ain't making, "I'll truly do what I can with the cards at my disposal and try to get the opponents to help me." My good readers, you will be astounded how often the outcome is favorable. Berating your partner when the dummy hits the table top only forewarns the opponents there's a problem. Even a grimace or modified grunt is enough to alert them. Keep a straight and stoic face even if you like what you see. Plan your play at trick one and proceed in tempo as though you were enjoying a quiet Sunday afternoon walk in the country.

Today's example of North using his gifts extravagantly is mysterious for he wasn't that bad a player, but no names will be stated which could stain a reputation. Suffice to say, South was a very good player who had agreed to the date to check on his partners progress.

I was sitting southwest and had a front row seat at the festivities which followed.

Many north's would bid two no trump (Jacoby's big spade raise) but this pair had agreed that that would show at least fourteen plus H.C.P. with slam implications. I use the bid the same way and North's calls did an excellent job of describing his hand until he went into orbit over four spades. To this day, neither of us have asked Mr. Excess sitting north for an explanation and I think our silence got thru to him. Nevertheless, our expert south was in a slam off two clubs and maybe even a diamond, but he displayed not a smidgeon of displeasure. I am quite sure that this confident table presence contributed to the result.

After a moment or so of thought, he quietly called for the heart king and at trick two, in tempo asked for dummy's club deuce. East thought for less than a second, panicked and played his club ace! Someone had once told him that experts steal tricks early and East was obviously mighty afraid of a singleton king. There was, but it was in the wrong hand. He tried to recover by playing a diamond at trick (3), but declarer rose with his ace, played trumps and clubs pitching his diamond losers making the impossible slam.

I urge each one of you to kibitz an expert. It's time well spent and the opportunity will do wonders towards the improvement of your game.

Magic Bag offers a lot to cheer about

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Any self-respecting critic would look down his nose at "Foiled Again," a new production which opened at Ferndale's Magic Bag Theater, and say, "Well, it's cute, but it's not great theater."

Then there's the human side that says, "Who cares? It's entertaining, the music is pretty and the actors look like they're having a lot of fun."

So, as long as the audience enjoyed it (which it did) and the critic enjoyed it (which I did), that's all that matters. Uplifting, thought-provoking social commentary be damned — it's summer, let's laugh.

"Foiled Again" is the first offering of Three Guys Productions. The play is two one-act farcical melodramas written by Wilbur Braun and set to music by Gerry Castle and Mike Vigilant, two of the Three Guys. The third Guy, Dan Castle, appears onstage, leading the excellent ensemble cast.

Audience members are encouraged to cheer the hero — which they do after they get over the embarrassment — and boo the villain — which they do readily — and to sit back and enjoy themselves, which is easy.

In the first melodrama, "Curse You, Jack Dalton!" the action takes place in an estate on Hotsy Totsy Avenue in England. In typical melodrama plotline, a matriarch promises her wealthy son, Jack, to a gold-digger. He, of course, is in love with somebody else — Bertha, the maid.

The gold-digger, Anna, is aided in her nefarious schemes by Egbert, a black-mustachioed, black-caped villain who helps because he wants to marry Jack's ugly — but disgustingly rich — sister Eloise.

Throw in a long-lost brother and a happy ending and the melodrama is complete.

What makes "Curse You, Jack Dalton!" and the second act, "He Ain't Done Right By Nell" work so well is not as much the script (which, while often hilarious, jumps in time and place) as it is the music.

The lovely melodies by Gerry Castle stick in your head and the lyrics by Vigilant are witty and humorous without being forced.

The lyrics are strained on purpose with great comic results in the song Jack sings to Bertha, which he introduces by saying he'd sing more about her if more words rhymed with her name. Lyricist Vigilant found, hilariously, that there's no "dearth-a" of words on "Earth-a" that rhyme with Bertha.

The music is a mixture of various forms, ranging from an excellent Patsy Cline parody called "I Won't Take Your Lyrin' Lyrin' Down," to a spoof of "Les Miserables." One wanted more songs and less story.

The other thing that makes the show work is the excellent cast. All people onstage are local talent, but it doesn't seem like it. The singing voices are strong and the comic timing and characterizations are right on.

Dan Castle stars in both shows playing first Jack the hero and then Hilton the villain. Looking like a cross between Big Boy and Jackie Gleason, he is an excellent physical comedian who is so comfortable on stage he toys with the audience, teases the other actors when they flub a line and ad libs hilariously when technical things — like a door not opening properly — go wrong.

Cindy Pritchard as Bertha and then Granny is his equal, slipping from an Ethel Merman imitation to Bart Simpson effortlessly. She shows she can really burn up a number when

Brush up your Shakespeare at Lakeside Mall

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

This is the summer of William Shakespeare's content.

He'll be the most talked about guy in Sterling Heights from now through Aug. 16 as Lakeside Mall hosts its Children's Shakespearean Festival, the first of its kind in the area, and perhaps in the country.

The festival is part of an outreach program which the mall calls YES, the Youth Enrichment Series, said Karen Mac Donald, the mall's marketing director. Last year the mall hosted its first summer enrichment program which centered on communications and more than 1,000 kids participated.

"We polled the kids and asked them what they would like to see and one answer kept coming up — theater," Mac Donald said. "We wanted it to be educational and entertaining at the same time."

And the planners figured where there's Will, there's a way.

For a month, unforgettable characters given immortal words by Shakespeare's pen will fill the mall's performing arts court, bringing the Bard's world to the bargainer's world.

Youngsters will be able to see three renditions of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Two versions will be done by Will & Co., of Los Angeles — one in which all the actors use sign language and the action is translated through a speaking narrator and one version with speaking actors and a signing narrator.

Shakespeare, an offshoot of the California Shakespeare Festival in L.A., will present a shortened version of "A Midsummer" with puppets, during which students can interact with the play's characters.

But what about those who can't understand it even when they do hear it? Fret not, instant translations for the Shakespeare-impaired will be available. (For instance, "Good morning" means "What's up?" and "Hark, what light through yonder window breaks?" means

"Hubba hubba.")

As a culmination to the festival, students from Utica Community Schools will perform several scenes from a variety of Shakespeare's works, under the direction of some of the professional actors.

But the plays aren't the only thing, Horatio, there's more.

North America's best-known Shakespeare company — the Stratford Festival — will be represented by an actor who will teach children fencing, pratfalls and other techniques of stage combat. He will also bring costumes from Stratford for display.

The Folger Shakespeare Library is also bringing Elizabethan costumes and will guide children in making clothing period-accents, neck ruffs for the boys and brooches for the girls.

Dances, many of which are seen in Shakespeare's plays, will be taught by the Society for Creative Anachronisms, a local performing arts company.

And, since music is the food of love, British pub songs, madrigals and lullabies will be taught and performed.

Concerts will be performed on ancient and rare instruments like gitterns, citterns and dulcimers. The instruments, some more than 2,000 years old, will be available for children to look at and play.

For those who aren't interested in doing, the mall is full of Shakespeare-oriented decorations, including several noted costumes like those worn by Bruce Willis and Cybill Shepherd in the "Moonlighting" spoof of "Taming of the Shrew."

The mall recently put the finishing touches on 11 traditional English knot gardens, featuring more than 500 plants and flowers which are mentioned in Shakespeare's plays. A lecture about the gardens will be at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 5, for the garden enthusiasts.

"We wanted to have something for everyone," Mac Donald said. "And there's been a lot of interest in it; it appears that everyone's interested in Shakespeare. The children's cable television channel Nickelodeon will cover part of the event for their Nick News."

Events will be occurring all the time; for a more detailed schedule, call Mac Donald at 247-1744.

To get to Lakeside Mall, take I-94 east to the Selfridge Road exit, turn right on M-59 (Hall Road). The mall is five miles on the left.

Attic, Strand theaters announce 1992-93 season

If you hate "Hamlet," but love a good romp in a Roman forum, you'll love the Attic Theatre's 17th season. The Attic is offering seven great plays, three at the New Center Theatre and four at the Strand Theatre in Pontiac.

The season opener, in collaboration with the Mosaic Youth Theatre of Detroit, is Elizabeth Swado's "Runaways," playing Sept. 17-Oct. 18. This exuberant and hauntingly beautiful musical features a cast of 18 Detroit area teenagers.

The Strand Theatre in Pontiac will debut with the critically acclaimed play "Our Country's Good," running Oct. 15-Nov. 15. In 1789 a cast of convicts, most of them illiterate, rehearse and perform the first play ever presented in Australia. "Our Country's Good" celebrates the strength of the human spirit to persevere and flourish under the most adverse circumstances.

The Strand Theatre then presents the hilarious musical comedy "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." Attic favorite Herbert Ferrer leads the cast as Pseudolus, a rough slave to a Roman family, creating topsy-turvy situations in his schemes to become "free." "Forum" is scheduled to run Dec. 10-Jan. 10.

The fourth show of the season is "Square One," by Steve Tesich, the oscar-winning author of "Breaking Away." This two-character play is all about love, marriage, and society's communal future. Miriam Yezbick and Gordon Reinhart return to the New Center stage in this bittersweet lament for the future based on a darkly sardonic view of the present. "Square One" can be seen Jan. 28-Feb. 28.

March 4-April 4 brings Sophocles' "Antigone" to Pontiac. The production will mark the return from New York of actress Mirjana Urosevic in the title role. A moving portrayal of the classic conflict between divine and human law, Antigone, a woman alone, fights against the power of the state to control the individual.

"The Good Times are Killing Me," by nationally syndicated cartoonist Lynda Barry, is a spirited account of one crucial summer in the life of a girl on the verge of adolescence in the 1960s. Music and dance and the accelerating civil rights movement converge on the streets of a changing blue collar neighborhood. The play will receive its Michigan premiere at the New Center Theatre

April 15-May 16. The wonderfully outrageous "I Hate Hamlet," by Paul Rudnick, will close season seventeen at the Strand Theatre, May 27-June 27. Directed by Gordon Reinhart, the play is a ghost story in the tradition of "Blythe Spirit" and "Topper." John Barrymore, the last great American Shakespearean actor, returns from the dead to help a self-centered young actor play Hamlet in Central Park. The play is, above all, a tribute to actors — it celebrates theater, in all its artifice and happy dementia.

Special subscription and group rates are available. Contact Deb McGarvah at the Attic Theatre offices, 313-875-8285 for further information.

Community Band plays MOTP

On Thursday, July 30, the Grosse Pointe Community Band will bring the sounds of Glenn Miller, John Phillip Sousa and other great American composers to the Grosse Pointe Village shopping area, as part of the Music on the Plaza concert series. The performance will begin at 7 p.m. and is at the intersection of Kercheval and St. Clair in the Village.

"We like to do something more traditional in each series," said John Denomme, MOTP coordinator. "This group plays its concert band and Big Band era repertoire with a lot of flair."

The concert was scheduled to be the last in the 1992 MOTP series, however, inclement weather caused the cancellation of Kenn Cox and the Guerrilla Jam Band. It will be rescheduled in August.

The MOTP series is presented by the Grosse Pointe Village Association in cooperation with Bon Secours Home Medical and Bon Secours Pharmacy. The Community Band concert is sponsored by the Merry Mouse/Cafe Le Chat Restaurant.

Park offers two concerts

Park favorite Bob DuRant and his 10-piece orchestra will play its Big Band sounds at Patterson Park on Sunday, July 26, at 7 p.m.

DuRant is a Grosse Pointe native and plays often in Grosse Pointe in the summer. His group has been together for more than 25 years. It will feature vocalist Cathy Locke.

The Blue Lake International Symphonic Band will perform at Patterson Park on Friday, July 31, at 7:30 p.m.

The band of high-school aged students is returning from a two-month tour of Belgium, Germany, Denmark and the Netherlands. Pointe youngsters Roger Clark, Jill Esler and Rob Esler are members of the group.

The concerts are open to all residents of the Pointes with a valid park pass from any Grosse Pointe. They are sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Park Recreation Commission and city council.

Kids 'n' plays

In its second season at Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, Showtime at the Play House offers outdoor, family entertainment on Tuesday evenings July 28 and Aug. 4 and 18 on the shores of Lake St. Clair. The grounds open at 5:30 p.m. for families to bring in their picnic suppers before the performances begin at 6:30 p.m. The shows will be held on the meadow, and blankets or lawn chairs are recommended. Admission to each performance is $3 and reservations are requested. The Edsel & Eleanor Ford House is located at 1100 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Shores. For more information call 884-4222.

Writer's diaries disclose a long struggle with self-doubt

Edited by Susan Chitty
Viking. 356 pages. $25

A vastly liberated woman of the early 20th century, Antonia White (1899-1980) is mercilessly exposed in her unblushing diaries. The editor of "Antonia White: Diaries 1926-1957" is her eldest daughter, Susan Chitty, who aims a somewhat unforgiving light at her mother and her sexual peccadilloes. It disturbs me that the editor in her carefully selected excerpts of White's notebooks apparently is motivated to reveal her mother warts and all to a prurient public eager to read unsavory details of a wanton life among the British literati.

One revealing diary entry shows White's early resentment of her mother: "It is a source of great unhappiness to me that I have no name. I rejected my first name — Eirene Botting — it is the first time for years that I have dared to write it — because it felt so terrible to me, so degrading. Yet I feel one sins in rejecting one's name . . . And what is Antonia White? James Stephens said the name conveyed nothing to him; it was the blandest name he had ever heard . . . It is odd that I take 'Tony', the name by which all my friends know me, from my mother's nickname for me as a child and her own name of White, since all through my childhood and after I hated, despised and rejected all of my mother and would like to have been only my father's child . . ."

Although White suffered from severe writer's block, she managed to compile a respectable output: four novels, a short story collection, playscripts, many journalistic articles in newspapers and magazines, plus innumerable translations of French books.

A 1933 entry notes that "the usual misery at the thought of writing; even of making notes here. The thought of the second book depresses me terribly yet I want, not to begin it, but to have begun it. I am re-reading 'Anna Karenina' with great pleasure and only wish I could attempt a book on a scale like that. So many groups of distinct, yet intertwining lives, all so broad yet so sharp in detail."

More than a year later, White dismally confesses: "A month gone and no more done to the book but for once I have not been lazy. Faced with freelancing again I am rushed off my feet. Opening connections 'Time and Tide,' 'Mirror,' Varley and Milliken (an advertising agency), etc. Propose to read at least 25 vols of Balzac this winter." Also, she makes interesting observations on other writers she has read: "At present sunk deep in Harriet Martineau: very much attracted in spite of her complacent priggishness and self-righteousness. A very true nature there; honest and unflinching and courageous. One gets nourished by the oddest people . . ."

In a later entry, White admits that "to write a play would satisfy all my ambitions. It would make me widely known, it would bring me considerable money and I should really enjoy the process once I got started. It would free me from the drudgery of Fleet Street articles, put up my prices on them, leave me free for months at a time. And it is a nice compact piece of work, unlike a novel; it could be done in a few weeks." Throughout her life, White was constantly haunted by financial worries which often drove her to accept commissions for translations and journalistic hack work.

Greenfield Village puts fun on the menu for 'A Taste of History'

Peanut soup and venison ragout join candy made from potatoes on the menu of historic American goods at Greenfield Village's special weekend event, "A Taste of History," on July 25-26.

With cooking demonstrations and hands-on activities throughout the village, visitors can feast their eyes on two centuries of American culinary artistry, then savor those flavors by purchasing samples at a special food tent on the Village Green.

"We'll show 20th-century consumers how food influenced lifestyles in the 18th and 19th centuries," said Jim Maier, the museum's executive chef. "As we go from the farm to the table top, we'll be tracing the roots of many foods we take for granted today."

Foodways of the 18th-century American colonists will be examined at the Connecticut Salt-box House, where costumed interpreters prepare a duck dinner on the open hearth. Out in the garden, visitors can learn about the vegetables and herbs that spiced up many a Colonial stew. At the 1880-era Firestone Farm, visitors can take a turn at the butter churn and watch demonstrations of milking cows and making ice cream and cheese. In the farmhouse kitchen, a hearty Pennsylvania German-style meal is prepared on a coal stove, then served to the farmhands as they gather for supper.

The sweeter side of 19th-century life can be experienced at Edison Homestead, where visitors can help whip up some potato fondant and watch peanut brittle being made as an example of where candy came from before the invention of vending machines.

Detroit News food editor Robin Mather will be on hand for special daily presentations at Town Hall. Focusing on Michigan's farm history, Mather will discuss how the types of food available shape people's attitudes and approach to life.

Sample portions of a variety of historic foods will be available from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. daily. Menu items include gooseberry mini tarts, chocolate bread pudding, turtle bean soup, venison ragout, chervil spinach tart, hoppin' John and good old-fashioned lemonade. Selected recipes will be available at no charge.

Admission to "A Taste of History" and all special weekend programs is included with Greenfield Village admission. Village hours are 9 a.m.-5 p.m. daily.

Historical society offers church tours

Few major cities in America can boast the number of churches still standing as living monuments to the wealth of architectural styles and craftsmanship once practiced in Detroit.

For 20 years the Detroit Historical Society (DHS) has sponsored tours of these living monuments and taken people of varying religious backgrounds on visits to the diversified churches in the metropolitan area.

The churches span a history dating from the 1700s and reflect the growth and change of the city. As Anglican, Catholic, Methodist, and Presbyterian denominations outgrew their humbler beginnings they frequently sold their churches and schools to smaller congregations. Urban renewal and the building of expressways displaced neighborhoods at an even faster rate — as did the flight to the suburbs. These changes brought about the inevitable decline in attendance which forced many churches to close.

Of those which remained, many are included in the DHS Historical Church Tours. Many participants join the tours for a nostalgic visit to the church associated with either their own or a family member's baptism, first communion, or marriage.

Historic church tours are available year round on the first Monday of each month (on holiday weekends the tours are postponed until the following Monday). Parking is available in the secured lot at the Detroit Historical Museum, 5401 Woodward and Kirby. The Historymobile will provide transportation to the churches. At noon a brown bag lunch will be served at one of the churches. Participants return to the museum at 3 p.m. Cost is $11 a person, $9 for DHS members. Prepaid reservations are a must as space is limited and telephone reservations are not accepted.

Call 833-7934 for additional information or send a large, self-addressed envelope with double postage to the Detroit Historical Society, 5401 Woodward, Detroit, Mich. 48202 for a brochure listing many other tours and workshops sponsored by the museum and DHS.

The good old songs

Borkowski & Rosochacki are scheduled to perform at the Grosse Pointe War memorial tonight, July 23, at 8 p.m. Called Detroit's answer to the Everly Brothers, Borkowski & Rosochacki have made a name for themselves with their extensive repertoire of golden oldies. Their energetic music starts where Peter, Paul and Mary left off, and is sure to take the audience down memory lane with renditions of Simon and Garfunkel, Harry Chapin and Cat Stevens hits. Before the concert, Grosse Pointe cabaret singers Ann and John Diebel will perform. The Sounds of Summer series is co-sponsored by St. John Hospital and Medical Center. All concerts are held rain or shine (in the ballroom in case of rain). If held indoors due to inclement weather, seating is on a first come, first served basis. Grounds are open at 6:30 p.m. and patrons are welcome to bring picnic suppers and beverages. Individual tickets are $6.50 or a package of four is $20. For more information call 881-7511.

An Arriva Entertainment and Marketing, Inc. Presentation

By the time she was 25, White had spent a year in an insane asylum. Even though she recovered from her mental illness, she was always fearful of its return. Consequently, she relied on psychoanalysis for many years. She was born a Catholic but turned her back on her religion; later she became reconciled to the church. A 1934 entry reveals that "I have not written the history of this summer here because it is not a thing I can write yet. Since this curious change came over me about a fortnight ago I can hardly remember what it felt like. It is less actual to me than the asylum which has now acquired a kind of poetic intelligibility for me . . . I do not think I have ever suffered so sharply and persistently before . . . The Carlyle book is certainly a burden. I feel capable of reading sensibly for it; making notes, etc., but recoil at the thought of reducing all that to a clear shape and writing anything of my own . . . I rarely take a book about with me now and Keats' letters have lasted me nearly two months . . ."

Her own two daughters, Susan and Lyndall, remained estranged from her for long periods. Although a caring mother, White seemed strangely unable to fathom her children; many diary notations complain of their unresponsiveness to her overtures. She was on much better terms with her three ex-husbands and their new wives and families. Unfortunately, White's multiple love affairs never lasted long, and they usually ended disastrously for her; it seems that her tragedy was her inability to sustain harmonious relationships with either husbands, lovers or children.

For the most part, her women friends were loyal and often provided financial as well as moral support. Because of her religious conflicts, instability, and fear of becoming penniless, White frequently was stymied in her efforts to produce original work. In spite of her handicaps, she has a number of books available today in new editions, thus proving that she was an original writer who continues to attract appreciative readers.

Elizabeth Walker's Biblio-file and Irene Burchard's Elegant Eating columns run on alternate weeks in this space.

Poems wanted for new contest

A grand prize of $500 is being offered for the best poem in a new contest sponsored by Sparrowgrass Poetry Forum. Thirty-four other cash prizes will also be awarded. There is no cost to enter.

The rules are simple: each poet may enter one poem only, 20 lines or less, in any style, on any subject. Contest closes Sept. 30, but poets are encouraged to submit their work as soon as possible. Winners will be notified by Nov. 30.

Book signing

Third Coast Booksellers will hold the second of its author book signings and readings by welcoming Amal Naj, author of "Peppers," published by Alfred A. Knopf from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, July 25, at the store located at 15129 Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Park.

A Wall Street Journal reporter and former Grosse Pointe Park resident, Naj will sign copies of his book, a study of the chili pepper complete with recipes.

For more information, call Third Coast at 822-1559.

Magic Bag

she sings the vampy "Chemistry."

In fact, when the two of them are onstage, they generate the same feeling you got from the old "Carol Burnett Show" skits when one of the actors would go off on a tangent intended to make the other actors laugh. It's a load of fun.

The rest of the cast — Sharon Hendricks, Diana Marie Balsama, Steve Tadevic, Ken Ebaugh and Tania L. Velinsky — handle their parts well. Tadevic is a standout in the first act as the evil Egbert.

This is the first Three Guys Productions effort and it looks like they have a winner. It runs through Saturday, Aug. 1, and will be followed by "Phantom of the Op'ry" a musical spoof of "Phantom of the Opera" with book by Tim Kelly and music and lyrics by Castle and Vigilant.

The Magic Bag Theater is located in Ferndale at Woodward and Nine Mile. Call 544-3030 for tickets and show times.

Cool World: Disjointed flash

Marian Trainor
 Social Writer
 If it's a far-out fun time at the movies you're after, the fantasy adventure "Cool World" will suit you fine. It's s wacky as they come and one in great style.

Animator Ralph Bakshi skillfully blends live action animation and brilliant set design into a film that bursts with energy. He's created a collection of cartoon characters like you've never seen before and see-wheeling action that's only possible in Looney Land.

It's like a three-ring circus. Just when you've become comfortable with a setting and some continuity, you are whisked off to another with different action and a whole new group of floating, bouncy toons, some weird, some mean and some scary.

This is no "Little Mermaid" or even "Roger Rabbit." There are no dreamy, memorable songs. The score is as raucous as a rock concert.

You may become a little disoriented but you'll never be bored.

The sets are a show in themselves, sort of like a non-stop fourth of July fireworks display.

The theme of the story, if there is one, seems to be that when two different worlds collide the results are disastrous.

In "Cool World" we have a universe that exists only in the head of Jack Deeb (Gabriel Byrne), an underground comic book artist and ex-con. It's an exciting world he fantasizes, and one that in a strange way invites him to enter it. That urge to join his make-believe characters in their fancy-free life becomes impossible to resist after he creates every man's dream doll, Holli Would (voice and eventual body by Kim Basinger).

With every stroke of his pen he becomes more infatuated with his Pygmalion until he is catapulted into a land he invented and into a club where Holli is performing.

And what a performance. The place sizzles as she moves her luscious body, with curves like you've never seen, in a gyrating dance. Deeb is spellbound. He's ready to spend the rest of his life in this whirling dervish country.

But Holli has other plans. She wants to cross over to the "real" world. She knows, but doesn't care, that this change would upset the equilibrium of both worlds.

Her plan to seduce Deeb into bringing her into his world is thwarted by Frank Harris (Brad Pitt), a human who was also hurled into Looney Land after a motorcycle accident in 1945 — which makes him a longtime resident, since it is now 1992.

He has even created a job for himself. He polices the area seeing that "Cool World's" first law is not broken; "No sex between noids (humans) and doodles." He is very serious about his mission. He has resisted Holli's charms and those of his true love, and he is determined that Deeb will not fall into Holli's trap.

Deeb, oblivious to the antics going on around him, is unaware of Holli's conniving ways and despite Harris' diligent surveillance she manages to trap her unsuspecting creator into changing her into a living, gorgeous woman.

"Cool World" is a laugh-provoking, unhinged exercise in flash and dash that keeps the senses reeling with bursts of color, strange shapes and lively action.

Against a fascinating menagerie that includes a huge purple gorilla, baby rabbits that get flattened by anvils and Keystone cops, the "noids" and "doodles" play out their frenetic parts.

Basinger, both as a "doodle" and "noid," gives a seductive performance. Pitt is funny as the oh-so-serious detective Harris, and Byrne is sufficiently oblique as an unsuspecting vulnerable artist.

They are upstaged by the strange pop art creatures and feasts of color that make "Cool World" a world apart from any other make-believe world you've ever visited.

Pat's People

Pat's People will bring a little bit of Belfast with them on Thursday, July 30, at 8 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. The four Belfast bards will perform classic Irish and Scottish folk tunes. Popular at concerts, festivals and Irish clubs from Boston to Vancouver — with side trips to Ireland — they have also been featured on TV and radio. The eastside's barbershop quartet, Just Friends, will put you "In the Mood" with a brief presentation just before the concert. The series is co-sponsored by St. John Hospital and Medical Center. All concerts are held rain or shine (in the ballroom in case of rain). If held indoors due to inclement weather, seating is on a first come, first served basis. Grounds are open at 6:30 p.m. and patrons are welcome to bring picnic suppers and beverages. Individual tickets are $6.50 or a package of four is $20. For more information call 881-7511.

War Memorial offers Toledo Zoo day trip

The young and young at heart will delight in a trip to the Toledo Zoo, rated one of America's best, on Thursday, July 30, from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. sponsored the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Take your child or grandchild on a day to remember. Of course, the nearly 2,000 animals are the main attraction — giraffes, leopards, zebras, rhinos and much more.

Lunch is casual-cafeteria style at Tony Packer's Cafe made famous by Corporal Klinger of TV's "MASH" — always a fun experience. Then, it's off to the Firefighters Museum where history fills old Firehouse No. 18 with memorabilia including rigs from the 1920s and '30s, a watchman's desk and vintage uniforms. The real fun is the fireman who leads the tour and brings it all to life.

Tickets for adults are $26 and include motorcoach, admissions and lunch. Tickets for seniors 62 and up and children 11 and under are $25 (children must be accompanied by an adult). Call 881-7511 for more information.

'Kismet' at Stony Creek

Combine the beautiful Michigan outdoors with the pageantry and excitement of exotic Morocco and what happens? Summer Shakespeare's production of the comic musical, "Kismet."

Opening Friday, July 24 at 8 p.m., Summer Shakespeare's big red and white tent at Stony Creek Metropark's Eastwood Beach will be transformed into brightly colored and always magical Morocco. Here audiences will meet poets, villains, beautiful women and lovers. Songs such as "Baubles, Bangles and Beads," "Stranger in Paradise" and "Not Since Nineveh" will guide audiences on a musical search for love.

"Kismet" will run each weekend through Aug 9. All shows are at 8 p.m. and tickets are $10 for adults and $8 student/seniors. There is a $2 per car vehicle park admission fee. For tickets and information call 1-800-47-PARKS. This production is supported by the Michigan Council for the Arts and Cultural Affairs and the Macomb Arts Council.

Richmond Community Theatre's fall season will open with "Kismet" on Sept. 10-13 at the Richmond Center for the Performing Arts.

'Cheers to Children' concert to benefit Children's Hospital

Children of all ages will be delighted by a special benefit concert for Children's Hospital of Michigan on Sunday, July 26, at 3:30 p.m. at Orchestra Hall. "Cheers to Children" will be led by DSO music director Neeme Jarvi and features "Cheers" personality Kelsey Grammer.

Kelsey Grammer has charmed "Cheers" fans for seven seasons as the pompous, egotistical, and comical Frasier. With this benefit concert for Children's Hospital of Michigan, Grammer will have the opportunity to showcase his classical stage training as he narrates Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf," as well as leading the DSO in a rousing performance of Sousa's march, "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Former patients treated at the hospital will join Grammer and the orchestra on stage to perform Leopold Mozart's "Toy Symphony" with toy instruments.

Children's Hospital of Michigan is one of the nation's leading pediatric care centers, treating children for 106 years. Located in The Detroit Medical Center, three blocks from Orchestra Hall, Children's provides specialized care for youngsters from birth through adolescence in more than 50 areas of pediatric medicine, surgery and nursing.

Tickets are $10 and are available from the DSO box office by calling 833-3700 and at all Ticketmaster locations or by calling 645-6666.

Man Trouble' is in trouble

Ronald J. Bernas
 Staff Writer
 Perhaps the proper title for "Man Trouble" should have been "Script Trouble." Or "Direction Trouble." Or "Focus Trouble."

Either way, this tedious, uneven comedy is in trouble.

The movie stars Jack Nicholson as Harry, a small-time scam artist who runs an attack dog training business. He's unwashed, unkind and thoroughly unlikeable.

He has a wife, Adele, who he married because she owns a building out of which he wanted to run his business.

She's trying desperately to save the marriage through counseling but he is unwilling and insulting — he calls her Two Jims, for instance, because she's Japanese.

Then there's Ellen Barkin who plays Joan, an opera singer going through a divorce, which is the least of her problems.

She has a major concert engagement, her house is burglarized, someone is making obscene telephone calls to her and there's a mass murderer running around killing women.

For protection she calls Harry, who shows up with a dog and keeps coming around because he's interested in her. For some reason she's interested in him, too. Fear and loneliness make even the shadiest, shabbiest men look good, presumably.

When Joan's sister disappears after writing a book about her love affair with a corrupt multi-millionaire, Joan enlists Harry's help in locating and rescuing her.

The problem is that despite decent performances by Barkin, Nicholson and Beverly D'Angelo, who plays the sister, the movie is boring, unfocused and flat. The script, by Carole Eastman, doesn't build to anything. There are some funny scenes, most notably during the rescue, but they're too far apart to build any momentum. Even an encounter with the mass murderer — the most action the film offers — seems dull.

The script flirts with women empowerment ideas, yet ends with Joan — despite her culture, education and obvious intelligence — unable to stand on her own two feet without a man — in this case a married, horny, scheming, two-bit con — to support her.

When watching a movie, it's nice to at least like the characters who fall in love and to know that despite their differences the lovers are good for each other. "Man Trouble" doesn't do that.

'Casablanca' evening slated

Begin the evening at 5:30 p.m. with a light dinner at the War Memorial and then leave your parking worries behind as the motorcoach takes you to the Fox Theater for the evening showing of "Casablanca" on Wednesday, July 29. Suspenseful, gloriously romantic and filled with crackling dialogue, this legendary movie starring Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman is filled with incomparable on-screen magic.

The evening's menu is a steak sandwich or chicken breast sandwich. Please indicate your choice at time of reservation. The coach returns to the War Memorial at 10 p.m.

Tickets are $31 and include the motorcoach, a light dinner and a movie ticket. Call 881-7511 for more information.

Series continues

Clear and lonesome lead vocals, sweet harmonies, fiddling, songs that tell stories, and highly spirited instrumentals come together to leave you feelin' good when the Clear Folk Bluegrass Band performs on Monday, July 27, at 8 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Voted the eastside's "Best Kept Secret" in Detroit Monthly, the 35th Summer Music Festival lights up the Lake St. Clair shoreline every week. Music lovers are invited to purchase or bring their own meals. Picnic suppers are $7.50 and must be purchased by 5 p.m. the preceding Friday. Tables will be provided for those purchasing picnic suppers who also hold reserved seat tickets. Individual tickets are $12 each for reserved seating; $7.50 for lawn admission; and half price for children under 12. Special ticket packages are also available. All concerts are on Monday evenings at 8 p.m.; grounds open at 6:30 p.m. In case of inclement weather, concerts will be held indoors.

Little house on Neff offers big amenities, good price

By Jerome Aliotta

After seeing the new house designed by Gary Haberkorn at 547 Neff, it seems clear that fears of city officials and neighbors about building on a narrow, 36-foot-wide lot were unfounded.

Almost two years ago, when Haberkorn wanted to put up a slightly bigger house on the footprint of a 1910 cottage built there, he was forced to file suit in Wayne County Circuit Court after being denied permission to build by the Grosse Pointe City zoning board.

In the end, Haberkorn won a consent judgment and the result is an architecturally unique, 1-1/2 story home with more living space than the outside might suggest.

With zoning restrictions limiting the house to no wider than 22 feet, no longer than 54 feet and no higher than 20 feet, Haberkorn, using virtually every square inch of these dimensions with maximum efficiency, has come up with a three bedroom, 2-1/2 bath dwelling custom built from top to bottom.

"It is a quality house," said Haberkorn, a securities broker and first-time architect. "It cost me a lot more than what I could have built it for."

An "empty-nester" home designed for retirees or families with grown kids, the house was constructed by Grandview Homes and is listed with Schweitzer Real Estate for $189,000.

Sparing no expense when it came to materials, Haberkorn has installed fine oak floors in the main hallway, kitchen and great room — the largest room in the house, off the kitchen, with a cathedral ceiling, brick fireplace and two doorwalls on either side facing the back yard.

The kitchen and adjoining dining area are fitted with Mutschler cabinets and counter tops with ample room for a couple of bar stools. There is a utility room off the hallway large enough to house a stackable washer and dryer, and a little further down is a half bath, which Haberkorn calls the powder room, with a pedestal sink.

Located in the front of the house is the master bedroom suite, offering a bathroom complete with shower stall and Jacuzzi tub.

A bright red, six-paneled, steel door opens into an airy two-story foyer with the stairway at the right leading up to two more bedrooms. Haberkorn has accommodated two rooms upstairs in this low-roofed house by using dormers on either side.

About 12 feet by 12 feet, each has its own sink and are cleverly linked, without denying privacy, to a full bath. Haberkorn has plans for carpeting all the bedrooms. A would-be buyer would have the choice in color if he or she acts soon.

From the top of the stairs, a small loft area overlooks the foyer, lighted by a hexagonal window above the front door, and there is a tiled ledge ideal for plants on top of the coat closet. Also, in the foyer ceiling an outlet has been rigged for a chandelier.

There is plenty of storage space

throughout, with two large closets, illuminated by track lighting, in the master bedroom.

In all, the house affords 1,725 square feet of living space. There are many extras such as energy-efficient double-paned, aluminum clad windows, crown molding (not found in too many houses these days) along the ceiling in the kitchen area and foyer, a high-efficiency furnace and water heater, central air and cable outlets.

The long basement running the full length of the house offers an additional 1,200 square feet of living area for the buyer who wants to refinish it. A flue is available for installing a prefab fireplace, and a special 12-inch steel I-beam has been used on one side of the basement, freeing up space by eliminating stanchion poles.

The yard has been freshly landscaped and sodded, and there is a new two-car garage in the back.

When Haberkorn, a Grosse Pointe Park resident, purchased the property for investment purposes in April 1989, the lot was occupied by a 1910 era Belgian cottage, vacant for several years. The house was in such disrepair it could not be renovated under the requirements of Grosse Pointe City zoning laws.

If renovation costs for bringing a house up to code are more than the state equalized valuation of the property (half its market value) then reconstruction is prohibited, the law states.

So Haberkorn decided to tear down the old house and build a new 1-1/2 story home. The lot, however, is too small, or substandard — as are almost all of the lots on the west side of the 500 block of Neff — for the home Haberkorn planned. He requested zoning variances from the city to allow him to build. That's when Haberkorn ran into another obstacle.

The house he planned on the 36-foot-wide lot — zoned for a two-family dwelling, yet too small for even a single-family dwelling — would have been about a foot wider on each side which would have added more square feet to the house. But the board of zoning appeals, consisting of the city council and mayor, denied Haberkorn the variances he requested. Several neighbors on Neff attended the hearing and opposed the new house, saying they favored an empty lot.

Therefore, with a parcel of land that no new house could be built on and a dilapidated house that could not be renovated, Haberkorn took his case to Wayne County Circuit Court, charging that the board's decision was an abuse of discretion.

Haberkorn's great room lives up to its name with a cathedral ceiling, fireplace and two door walls.

A year and a half later, when the city learned that the judge presiding over the suit was inclined to rule in favor of Haberkorn, the two sides quickly reached an agreement, which was entered into the court records as a consent judgment.

Haberkorn finally began building the new home in April 1991, two years after he bought the land. Today, with only a few finishing touches left for completion — such as sanding and staining the oak floors — the home is ready for occupancy.

Overall, Haberkorn said his only wish is that he had been permitted a higher roof line to allow a better pitch on one of the dormers.

"I would do it again. It was fun," he said. "As much as a pain in the butt it was dealing with the city before we started building, it was fun. I think everyone in the long run will come out ahead."

And as for the neighbors who were against the idea of a new house: "Whether they're happy with it or not I don't know, but I don't hear any complaining and I do get a lot of compliments on it," Haberkorn said. "As far as I know it's raised property values (in the neighborhood) if nothing else."

Carrots, peas: Veggies that changed history

Those of us with flourishing vegetable gardens have our hands full these days both controlling the weeds that proliferate overnight in response to all the rain we've had lately and discouraging the hungry insects and other pests that feast on our prize crops when we aren't looking.

Now that we are nearing the end of July we begin to think about early harvests in our vegetable gardens.

Carrots are so common for everyday cooking that we sometimes overlook their aristocratic history. This elongated root vegetable came to us from Afghanistan by way of Europe and arrived on our continent some time before the Mayflower. Carrots probably had a lot to do with saving the colonists at Jamestown from starvation.

Carrots are related to parsnips, caraway and parsley and combine well with all of them. Did you know that the beautiful Queen Anne's lace flowers you see along highways and in meadows in late summer are really wild carrots? Pull one up and sniff at the root and you'll recognize the familiar carrot smell. Queen Anne's lace roots are edible. You just have to cook them a lot longer than domesticated carrots, but they taste the same.

Carrots are grown now year around by produce people in the warmer states, but before that the carrots of summer gardens were stored in root cellars and were an important part of the daily diet of our forebears. That's why they crop up so often as stew vegetables and as the hearty and aromatic base of so many soup and stock recipes.

Peas go back a long way too. The oldest evidence of the cultivation of peas has been found buried in mud which lay beneath the ancient pile houses of the Swiss lake dwellers of 5,000 years ago. Pea seeds have been found in ancient Egyptian tombs, and green peas were a garden staple in England at the time of the Norman Conquest.

Garden peas made their way to America with the earliest settlers and were the favorite vegetable in the Monticello garden of Thomas Jefferson.

More than a century ago, Gregor Mendel chose peas for his research subject in the studies that first revealed the laws of heredity. These biological principles became the basis of our very productive modern method of making both new and improved varieties and hybrids of flowers and vegetables.

The lovely pastel blossoms and clinging vine tendrils of the sweet pea, which produces profuse flowers but no peas, is a member of the same family and has ornamented gardens almost as long as its edible cousin. Sweet peas are annuals and are native to Sicily. They were introduced into Europe about 1700.

In their wild form, the sweet-pea flowers were almost always purple and for the first century after they debuted in Europe only a few other colors were developed. But in 1870 an English florist, Henry Eckford, began a program of plant breeding to further develop the sweet pea. He was very successful and sweet peas of many colors became popular in Victorian gardens.

American sweet peas date from 1886 when a seed-raising industry was begun in California. Of course, the blossoms of edible peas look the same as those of sweet peas, but are not as big and showy. All vegetables have flowers, a fact we tend to forget in our eagerness to get to the edible crops. Most farmers and vegetable gardeners don't pay any attention to the flowers and regard them only as a means to an end. But vegetable flowers are pretty and can be used very effectively in flower arrangements.

Eggplants, for instance, have star-shaped blossoms in a lovely lavender shade that are small miracles of delicate texture and decorative symmetry. Squash blossoms, on the other hand, are large and flamboyant and a clear yellow. In the American Southwest, the Indians wear squash blossoms as decorations and eat them cooked in a variety of ways. In some areas, the women pin up their long hair in elaborate shapes copied from the form of the squash blossom and in Navajo and Hopi silver jewelry the squash blossom is a favorite motif.

The flowers of oakleaf lettuce are a total surprise. They are similar to yellow asters, and runner beans have delicate cherry red flowers. Potato blossoms, the flowers of onions and carrots, and the flowers of many herbs have a delicate beauty we may never have noticed before. Marie Antoinette wore potato blossoms in her hair and set a new fashion, and the spiky purple flowers of garden mint have long been used in pot-pourris for color and fragrance.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Q. What is the difference between an imitation stone and a synthetic stone in a 1950s' piece of jewelry?

A. It is important to know what you are buying, and the names that are used can be misleading. A natural or real gemstone is one that has been taken from the ground, cut, polished and not altered by dyeing, heating or any other method. An enhanced stone is a natural stone that may have been heated or treated in some way to enhance the color. A synthetic stone is made in a laboratory.

Sapphires, rubies, emeralds and a few less-expensive stones can also be made synthetically. Synthetics have been made for at least 50 years. A stabilized stone is not a natural stone, but crushed gemstone that has been soaked in an acrylic. This method has often been used with turquoise. Imitation stones are made from plastic, glass or other materials. "Simulated" and "pseudo" are terms used to describe simulated stones. Natural stones are the most expensive. A similar quality stone that has been enhanced or is synthetic will cost less. Stabilized and imitation stones are found in costume jewelry.

Q. My two clear glass vases are about 8-7/8 inches high. Each vase is cut and etched with a picture of a log cabin, a floral design, a cider barrel with the words "hard cider" and a flag. What can you tell me about them?

A. William Henry Harrison ran against Martin Van Buren in the 1840 presidential election. Van Buren's supporters tried to influence voters by saying Harrison was a backwoodsman who drank too much hard cider. Dishes, glassware and fabrics were made with pictures of the famous log cabin, the cider barrel and often his slogan, "Harrison & Reform."

The voters liked his tough country image, and he was elected. Unfortunately, he died of influenza three months after his inauguration. Your vases may be unique examples of political memorabilia from this campaign. It would require research to determine their exact value, but they are worth more than $250 each.

Fine antiques need proper care. For a copy of the Kovel's booklet, "Taking Care of Textiles," send $2 and a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope to Kovels, P.O. Box 22900, Beachwood, Ohio 44122.

Home Tips

Shower caddy — I used to keep everything except my shampoo on the bathroom counter. Now I've found the perfect thing to hold all my bath items.

I picked up a three-tier wire basket and hung it on the ceiling next to the tub. It's perfect for holding conditioner, bath oil, shampoo, washcloths and extra soap.

All I do is reach over for anything I need without having to get out of the tub.

Linda T., Princeton, Ill.

Stick it to 'em — If you're concerned about people breaking in through your first-floor windows, an easy and inexpensive way to deter them is to plant some bushes with thorns underneath the windows. I use rose bushes and big pyracantha under mine, and I know I wouldn't want to get tangled up in them!

Loretta P., Cleveland, Tenn.

Pipe cleaner — I found a small nick in my wooden coffee table. It was very noticeable because it went through to the raw wood. I used a pipe cleaner as a tiny brush. All I did was dab a little in the stain and apply it into the nick, covering it perfectly without getting any on the wood around it.

Karen D., Franklin, Tenn.

Garden logs — I'm a 72-year-old woman who has a mini-garden. Instead of buying landscaping timbers to keep my flower beds raised and bordered, I use rolls of old newspapers tied with wire. They also keep the grass out.

Cora B., Washingtonville, N.Y.

Porch light signal — My children love to play outdoors. Calling them when it became dark often led to me yelling at the top of my lungs, until I came up with this idea.

When it's time for the kids to come in, I turn the front and back porch lights on and off rapidly. They always notice this special "signal," and I get to save my voice.

Minnie L., Anderson, Ind.

Dish pans — I use plastic dish pans (rectangular) as drawers on bath and kitchen shelves. I clean old ones I would otherwise have thrown out and use them.

This has more than doubled my shelf capacity. I keep an inventory taped on the outside, or you can print right on them. (I don't do this because I switch mine around.)

I think they're just great. I have the seldom-used items in the pans up high all marked and tidy. They're easy to remove and clean, too.

Stella M., Middlebury, Vt.

You will need to rent certain safety equipment from an equipment rental dealer. These will be specialized devices for the type of work you need to do:

Hook Ladder: Several different types of hook ladders are available, including one which has a separate hook attachment which goes on an ordinary non-extension ladder. All of them will have a hook that goes over the peak of the roof to hold a ladder, making it safer to climb up and down the roof. A word of caution: Make sure you have help putting the ladder up on the roof.

LAKE MICHIGAN — LELAND AREA

Local hoopsters give college scouts an eyeful

By Chuck Klonek
Sports Editor

The Michigan Royals didn't win any trophies in the national AAU girls basketball championships in Clovis, N.M., but they gained something almost as important.

"We got some great experience against some of the best players in the country and we proved that we can be competitive with the best teams," said coach Tom Dailey.

"One of our goals was to have our players be seen by college coaches, and judging from the calls I've been getting every since we came home, they liked what they saw. I expect there'll be a ton of scouts when (Grosse Pointe) South and Regina play this fall," he said.

The Royals 16-and-under team consisted of several area players, including Angela Drake and Stephanie Coddens, who'll be seniors at South in the fall, and Regina standouts Paula Sanders, Monique Bell and Gretchen Super.

The Royals won two of their three games in pool play to advance to the quarterfinal round. They crushed Vermont 92-65 and beat California 59-53 before dropping a 79-69 decision to West Texas.

"We led by five points at halftime in the West Texas game but they came out in a press in the second half that was just a little better than our press breaker," Dailey said.

"That (West Texas) team has played about 40 games this summer. They've been in tournaments in Portland and Phoenix. In Michigan we do things lower key than that. We haven't had any games since the state tournament in May. We were just short of game experience. We hadn't played enough together."

The Royals lost a 79-76 heartbreaker to New Jersey in the first game after pool play and were eliminated with a 76-66 loss to Arkansas.

"There were a lot of college coaches watching the tournament and during warmups they were talking about how our game with New Jersey was going to be a blowout because we didn't have the size or athletic ability of that team, but we played them right down to the wire," Dailey said.

The Royals held a halftime lead in the Arkansas game and trailed by only three points with 1 1/2 minutes remaining, but they were forced to foul and Arkansas hit its free throws.

"We had five-minute breakdowns in the games we lost because of our lack of depth," Dailey said. "It was especially costly when we ran into foul trouble in the last game."

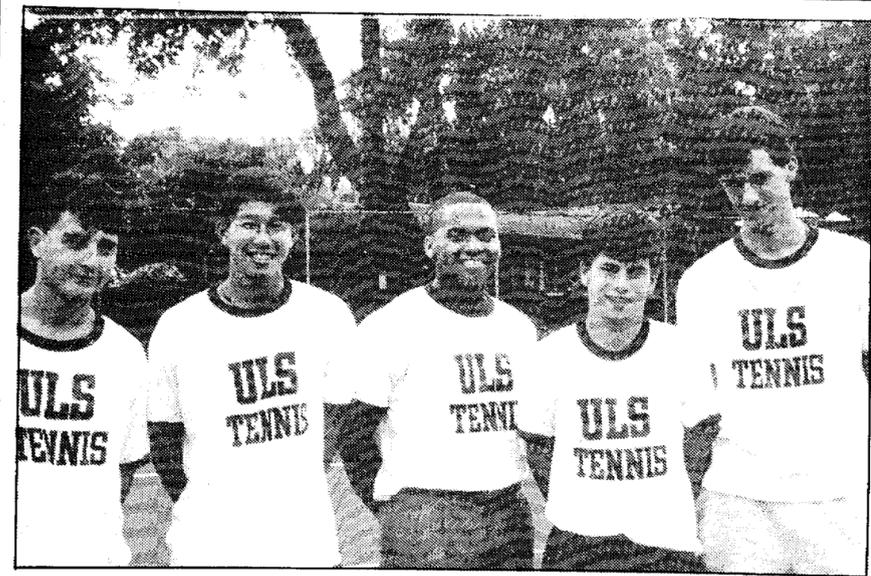

Dailey was pleased with the balanced scoring and rebounding he got from the Royals.

Drake had an outstanding tournament and was the leading scorer on the team, while Sanders was the top rebounder.

"They're fired up to go back next year as an 18-year-old team," Dailey said. "They know what they have to do to advance further and they're ready to do it. They have every reason to be proud of what they accomplished this year."

Dailey also praised two fathers, who served as assistant coaches in the tournament.

"I had a lot of help from Don Drake and Paul Sanders," he said. "Their assistance was invaluable."

All-State Knights

Five University Liggett School tennis players have been named to the Class C-D All-State first team selected by the Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association. From left are Omar Sawaf, Jason Go, Cheo Ramsey, Pat Alle and Ken Prather. Go won the state championship at No. 3 singles and Prather was runner-up at No. 2. Ramsey played first singles for the Knights. Alle and Sawaf played No. 1 doubles and finished second in the state meet. Prather, Ramsey and Go were June graduates from ULS, while Alle and Sawaf will be seniors this fall.

South trio on All-State teams

Grosse Pointe South junior Kevin Brennan got a hot bat at the right time to earn some post-season baseball honors.

Brennan, who finished with a .440 batting average and drove in 31 runs, was named to the Class A first All-State team selected by the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association.

"He really got hot toward the end of the season," said Blue Devils' coach Dan Griesbaum. "He had been a solid player for us all season, but was our offensive leader in the tournament games with (Grosse Pointe) North, (Detroit) Southeastern, East Detroit (East-pointe), Roseville and Brother Rice.

"I think the cold weather at the beginning of the season affected him like everyone else who had a slow start. We always knew he was a good hitter."

Brennan also pitched and posted a 7-1 record with two saves as South advanced to the regional championship game where it lost to eventual state Class A champion Brother Rice.

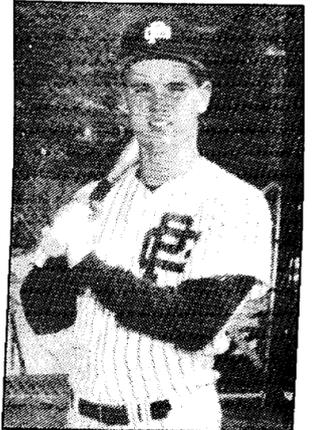

Brennan, who was one of the scoring leaders on South's hockey team last winter, is a good outfielder with excellent speed and a strong, accurate arm.

South also had a pair of academic All-State selections in senior second baseman Dan Minadeo and junior outfielder Brad Dunlap. Both had grade-point averages of 4.0 or better.

Brennan and pitcher Fritz Coyro each made the all-region first team, while Brian Blake, Matt Recht and Tom Kolajeski joined Minadeo and Dunlap as all-academic selections for the region.

"We had 13 players make all-academic for the MAC (Macomb Area Conference) and the district," Griesbaum said. "We also have five all-league players, six all-district, two all-region and one All-Stater. That's a pretty good representation."

Champs at Newport

Dean Balcirik, left, and Mark Pinney, both of Grosse Pointe Woods, paced a 10-boat One-Design 14 fleet (Grand Prix division) at the Michelob Newport Regatta held recently on Narragansett Bay and Rhode Island Sound. Grosse Pointe skippers Eric Ryan, Barron Meade and Adam Lowry finished third, seventh and ninth, respectively, in the same division. Each boat sailed 18 races in the event.

Winning team

Mike Uznis, right, and his sister Gretchen, of Grosse Pointe Farms, took first place in the eight-boat, One-Design 14 fleet (Standard Division) at the Michelob Newport Regatta held recently on Narragansett Bay and Rhode Island Sound. Peter Feldman of Grosse Pointe Park skippered the second-place boat in the division.

Barracudas wrap up swim championship

Five double winners helped the Grosse Pointe Farms Barracudas beat the Grosse Pointe Woods Warriors 255-220 to wrap up the championship in the Lakefront Swimming Association.

The Barracudas won 26 of the 43 events.

Double winners for the Barracudas were Bill Lloyd, boys 10 and under 50-meter freestyle and 25 butterfly; Katie Critchell, girls 10 and under 50 freestyle and 25 butterfly; Martin Mathews, boys 12 and under 50 freestyle and 50 backstroke; Amanda Dumler, girls 12 and under 50 backstroke and 50 butterfly; and Rob Lloyd, boys 14 and under 50 freestyle and 50 butterfly.

Other winners were John Markwick, boys 8 and under 25 freestyle; Julie Mazer-Schmidt, girls 8 and under 25 backstroke; Blair Wills, boys 10 and under 25 breaststroke; Jill DeHayes, girls 10 and under 25 breaststroke; Kenny Mazer-Schmidt, boys 12 and under 50 butterfly; Jenny Rolka, girls 12 and under 50 breaststroke; Fitz Ollison, boys 17 and under 50 freestyle; Jamie Mertz, boys 17 and under 50 backstroke; Geoff Stults, boys 17 and under 50 breaststroke; Kathie Schrage, girls 17 and under 50 breaststroke; and Susan Llewellyn, girls 17 and under 50 butterfly.

The Barracudas' five winning relay teams were Mathews, Kenny Mazer-Schmidt, Dave Grant and Mike Lavelle, boys 12 and under medley; Jenny Miller, Rolka, Dumler and Katherine Kleinert, girls 12 and under medley; Markwick, Marc Mathews, Leah France and Julie Mazer-Schmidt, 8 and under mixed freestyle; Wills, Joel France, DeHayes and Critchell, 10 and under mixed freestyle; and Tophier Ollison, Bill Lloyd, Stults and Fitz Ollison, boys 57-year freestyle relay.

New coach

Meghan McMahon, a 1983 Grosse Pointe South graduate, was appointed head varsity women's tennis coach and faculty member at Columbia University-Barnard College in New York City. McMahon was the state Class A first singles champion in her senior year at South. She competed at No. 1 singles and was a four-time All-Ivy League and three-time All-American tennis player at Yale University, where she graduated in 1987 with a B.A. in English literature. This spring, McMahon received her master's degree from the Jane Addams College of Social Work at the University of Illinois-Chicago. She is the daughter of Brian and Diana McMahon of Grosse Pointe Park.

Softball champs

Pointe Aquatics swimmer honored

Carly Piper, a member of the Pointe Aquatics swim club, was the best in her class at the recent Different Strokes Dearborn Recreation Dolphins swim meet.

Piper won the 8 and under girls high point trophy by winning three of the four events in her class. She took the 50-meter backstroke in 46.29; won the 50 freestyle in 39.27; and touched first in the 50 butterfly in 48.4. She also took a third in the 50 breaststroke (57.45).

Two other Pointe Aquatic swimmers also took firsts in the meet. Michelle Vasapoli won the girls 13-14 50 and 100 freestyle events and Mike O'Connor captured the boys 13-14 200 butterfly.

Vasapoli was also second in the 400 freestyle, third in the 200 freestyle and sixth in the 200 individual medley. O'Connor was fifth in the 400 freestyle, seventh in the 400 individual medley and eighth in the 200 freestyle.

Tony Atrasz had a runner-up finish in the boys 13-14 200 breaststroke, a third in the 100 breaststroke and a sixth in the 400 individual medley.

Cortney Piper was third in the girls 11-12 50 and 100 breaststroke and fourth in the 400 freestyle. Andy Shelden had a third in the boys 11-12 400 freestyle and was fifth in the 100 butterfly.

Jeff Shelden took third in the boys 13-14 400 freestyle, 400 individual medley and 200 butterfly.

Rachelle Atrasz was seventh in the girls 11-12 200 freestyle. Several Pointe Aquatics swimmers earned places in the tough Open competition. Suzette Atrasz was third in the girls 400 freestyle and 100 breaststroke and fourth in the 200 breaststroke. Steven Williams was third in the boys 1,500 freestyle and fifth in the 400 freestyle. Brett Collins finished sixth in the boys 100 butterfly.

Woods Warriors brave two swimming rivals

The Grosse Pointe Woods Warriors swimming team improved its record to 4-0 last week with victories over Grosse Pointe Park and St. Clair Shores in the Lakefront Swimming Association.

The Warriors won 24 individual events and six of seven relays in a 262-214 victory over the Park.

Double winners for the Woods team were Melissa Jamerino, girls 8 and under 25-meter freestyle and girls 10 and under 25 butterfly; Brent Nielubowicz, boys 12 and under 50 freestyle and 50 breaststroke; Courtney Piper, girls 12 and under 50 freestyle and girls 17 and under 50 breaststroke; Steve Williams, boys 17 and under 50 freestyle and 50 butterfly; Lidia Szabo, girls 17 and under 50 freestyle and 50 backstroke; Carly Piper, girls 10 and under 25 backstroke and 25 breaststroke; and Christine Jamerino, girls 14 and under 50 breaststroke and 50 butterfly.

Other firsts for the Warriors were posted by Vickie DeCarlo, David Nielubowicz, Kyle Tanneimer, Christy Freundl, Donnie Marcolini, Beth Janutol, J.P. Gamrat, Kevin Paavola, C.J. Fenton and Theresa Northey.

The Warriors came from behind to beat St. Clair Shores 277-194. They lost the 17 and under 200 medley relay and led by only 13 points after 11 events, but won eight of the next 11 to open a 39-point gap.

The Warriors won 23 individual events and five relays.

Hostetter sets pace in youth golf tourneys

Rob Hostetter of Grosse Pointe Farms is definitely the player to beat in the age 13-15 division of the Macomb Junior Golf Classic.

Hostetter, who will be a junior at Grosse Pointe South, shot a 39-37-76 at Hickory Hollow last week to win his second straight tournament in the series. Mike Reabe of Woodhaven and Joe Ciaramitaro of Mount Clemens tied for second place with 77s. Reabe won a one-hole playoff.

Earlier, Hostetter shot a 39-35-74 to win the tournament at Cedar Glen. His one-under 35 on the back nine included birdies on the par 5 12th and 16th holes.

Alex Bieri of Grosse Pointe Park tied for sixth place with a 40-40-80 in the Cedar Glen tournament.

Paul Power of Grosse Pointe Farms lost a two-hole playoff to Tim Fox of Mount Clemens and wound up third in the 16-17 division at the Hickory Hollow tournament. Power shot a 37-40-77.

Bryan Pokone of New Baltimore was medalist with a 37-39-76.

Two Grosse Pointers finished in the top 10 in the 16-17 division at Cedar Glen. Mike Klobuchar of Grosse Pointe Woods was in a four-way tie for fifth place after shooting 38-43-81 and Bill Gehrke of Grosse Pointe City was ninth with 42-42-84.

Scott Aniel of Shelby Township was the medalist at Cedar Glen with a 74.

The next Macomb Junior Golf Classic tournament will be held at Pine Valley on Friday, July 24. The last two tournaments in the series will be at Cracklewood on Monday, Aug. 17, and at Stony Creek on Thursday, Aug. 20.

For registration forms, call Macomb Junior Golf Classic directors Rich Terry (656-5059) or Chet Boss (286-7845) or the host course.

Indiana swept Penn State 2-0 in the Grosse Pointe Park Little League Minor Division World Series. Indiana and Penn State tied for the regular-season championship and Indiana won all four of its playoff games to finish with an overall 18-4 record. In front, from left, are Michael Battjes, Nicholas Caverly, Wesley Gietek, Michael Deron, Ahmed Maki and Nate Minnick. In the middle row, from left, are Mike Alvin, Alex Haggart, Matthew Battjes, Thomas Basco, David Murawski and Jonathan Danko. From left in the back row are manager David Dysert and coaches Ed Deron and Larry Haggart. Not pictured are Thomas Orozco and coach Mark Battjes.

Indiana wins Park crown

Two close victories over Penn State gave Indiana the World Series championship in the Grosse Pointe Park Little League Minor Division.

The World Series matched the two teams that had finished the regular season tied for first place with 12-4 records. Indiana opened the best-of-three World Series with a 15-12 victory, then came from behind to beat Penn State 7-6 in the second and final game.

Mike Deron's home run and six RBI by Matt Battjes helped Indiana build a 15-6 lead before Penn State rallied for six runs in the top of the sixth to cut the margin to three runs.

Indiana shortstop Ahmed Maki made two outstanding plays to stop Penn State threats. Mike Alvin was the winning pitcher.

Paul Lochirco had three hits, including a home run, for Penn State.

Tom Basco's double, his third hit of the game, highlighted a four-run rally in the top of the sixth that gave Indiana a 7-4 lead in Game 2 of the series. Penn State scored twice in the bottom of the sixth. Maki, who pitched for the second time this season, picked up the victory with a strong performance.

Battjes made the top fielding play for Indiana, snaring a line drive in left field while Penn State was leading 4-3.

Lochirco had his second straight 3-for-3 performance for Penn State.

Indiana reached the World Series with a 21-10 playoff victory over Purdue as Battjes and Deron each collected three hits and Nick Caverly hit a home run, leading off the bottom of the first after Purdue had taken a 5-0 lead in the top of the inning.

Basco was the winning pitcher.

Matt Shefferly had three hits, including two home runs, and Andy Christians also homered for Purdue.

Miami takes division title

Steve Thill homered and Michelle Champine and Hobie Schleicher collected two hits apiece to lead Miami to a 9-4 victory over Wichita and the World Series championship in the Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Little League Minor Division.

Miami scored four runs in the third inning to open a 6-3 lead and never trailed again.

Scott Vandekerckhove, Brad Case and Jimmy Christman were the offensive standouts for Wichita.

Austin 3, Memphis 2
Jason Rusko homered for Austin, which got strong pitching from Michael Janis and Chris Waldmeir. Memphis' Matt Nantas had a great defensive game.

Omaha 2, Austin 1

Bo Brink doubled in the first run and Bryan Duncan drove in the winning tally for Omaha. Austin's Peter Paterak had two hits.

Wichita 5, Tucson 4

Brad Case, Jim Christman, Joe Karam and Justin Fish provided the offense for Wichita. Tucson's Mike Sudomeir, Brad Coe, Richie Ruzeycki and Matt Morawski each had hits.

Austin 18, Dayton 4

Randy Faust, Jason Rusko and Chris Waldmeir each had two hits for Austin. Peters and Rob Karlik had Dayton's hits.

Wichita 3, Omaha 1

Matt Jubera, Matt Muer, Brad Case and Jim Christman each had hits to support the strong pitching of Scott Vandekerckhove. Ray Lombardi and Bo Brink had Omaha's hits.

Wichita 7, Austin 3

Wichita clinched the American League championship behind the pitching of Matt Jubera and Brad Case. Bobby Ritter, Mike Janis, Chris Waldmeir and Dan Burlingame led the Austin offense.

Norbs finish with a win

The Grosse Pointe City Norbs swimming team had six double winners as it ended its dual meet season with a 255-210 victory over the Grosse Pointe Sharks.

The Norbs won 29 of the 43 events.

Double winners were Jason LeRoy, boys 12 and under 50-yard freestyle and 50 backstroke; Lindsay Sandercott, girls 12 and under 50 freestyle and 50 butterfly; Amanda De-fever, girls 14 and under 50 freestyle and 50 backstroke; Kelly Rau, girls 10 and under 25 backstroke and 25 butterfly; and Pat Mullin, boys 12 and under 50 breaststroke and 50 butterfly.

Other winners for the Norbs were Cory Winingger, boys 14 and under 50 freestyle; Tim Reynaert, boys 17 and under 50 freestyle; Ashley Wolter, girls 17 and under 50 freestyle; Bronwyn Getz, girls 8 and under 25 backstroke; Trevor Dougherty, boys 10 and under 25 backstroke; Kelly O'Hara, girls 12 and under 50 backstroke; Krist Laumanis, boys 14 and under 50 backstroke; Becca Walter, girls 17 and under 50 backstroke; Steve Thiel, boys 10 and under 25 breaststroke; Jamie Stathum, girls 12 and under 50 breaststroke; Liz Cugliari, girls 14 and under 50 breaststroke; and Lauren Beckenhauer, girls 14 and under 50 butterfly.

The Norbs also won four of the seven relays. The winning teams were Chuck Ruifrok, De-fever, Walter and Reynaert, mixed 17 and under 200 medley relay; LeRoy, Pat Howe, Mullin and Brendan Shine, boys 12 and under 200 medley relay; O'Hara, Stathum, Sandercott and Julie Krease, girls 12 and under medley relay; and Craig Wilson, Winingger, LeRoy and Laumanis, boys 57-year 200 freestyle relay.

Other swimmers who turned in strong performances for the Norbs were Kathryn Wayman, 8 and under; Caitlin Howe, Liz Wolfgram and Katie Abel, 10 and under; Pat Howe, Christopher Ruifrok and Krease, 12 and under; Brendan Mullin, 14 and under; and Brad Dunlap and Anita Warner, 17 and under.

Fishing rodeo scheduled for Pier Park

Grosse Pointe Farms and City will hold its 44th annual Family Fishing Rodeo on Saturday, Aug. 8, at Pier Park in the Farms.

Youngsters 17 and under, who live in the Farms or City, are eligible to enter. Awards will be given for the biggest fish, most fish and first fish, along with other categories.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. at the Pier Park Gate. Entrants should bring their park pass. No advance registration is required.

Fishing will be held, rain or shine, from 9 to 10 a.m. The awards presentation and drawing for parents' prizes is scheduled for 10:30.

For more information, call the Farms pier at 343-2405.

Results from Lake St. Clair sailing events

The Detroit Regional Yacht Racing Association recently completed its spring series.

Following are the top three finishers in each class, their owners and home clubs. Boats are ranked according to the best three performances in five races.

JUDE O holy St. Jude, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near Kingsmen of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I come. I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg you whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent petition. In return, I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked. Say three Our Fathers, three Hail Marys and Glorias. Publication must be promised. St. Jude, pray for us and all who invoke your aid, amen. This Novena has never been known to fail. I have had my request granted. J.R.J.	101 PRAYERS NOVENA TO ST. PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY OR NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

BUY A VAN AT MSRP* OF THE CHASSIS ONLY AND THE MARK III CONVERSION PACKAGE IS ON US!

Mr. Ulysses Reddock
Detroit, Michigan

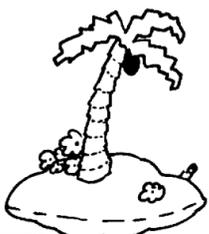

To All Potential Van Buyers:

I just purchased a brand new Mark III Conversion Van from Al Long Ford. After looking at all the conversion vans I could find this one is positively the BEST on the market. As an owner of a 1990 Ford also, the improvements in the van are wonderful. This is the van of the future. The only thing better than my new van was the service I received from Al Long. Not only will I never buy another type van but I will never buy from anywhere else. Thank you Al Long Ford!!!

Sincerely,
Ulysses Reddock
