

All systems go — futuring project takes off Oct. 3

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Like their counterparts in the other Grosse Pointes, the city councils in Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods want to know what the future holds.

On Monday, the two councils agreed to participate in a futuring study project initiated by Grosse Pointe Farms Mayor Gregg Berendt.

"Gosh, that's great," Berendt said when he heard the two cities had agreed to join the project. "I think it's a very positive step for all our communities, because this study is going to help chart our future."

The project will study ways the Grosse

Pointes and Harper Woods can save money and provide services in a more efficient way by consolidating some of the services they currently provide independently.

In all, six cities will participate in the project. The city councils in Grosse Pointe Farms, City, Park and Shores gave their seal of approval earlier this summer.

Each of the six cities will contribute $5,000 cash and $5,000 in service hours and supplies to the project.

If Harper Woods and Grosse Pointe Woods had not agreed to participate, the cost to the remaining cities would have been greater. Also, Grosse Pointe Park would probably have backed out of the deal, since the Park city council agreed to join the study on the condition that at least four of the other five communities participate.

The study will be facilitated by Edward D. Barlow Jr., a nationally recognized futurist, who made a presentation to the cities last May.

Each city will appoint a representative who will serve on the project's steering committee, said Grosse Pointe Farms councilman John Danaher.

The steering committee will meet after Labor Day "to better define common areas of interest and to refine the (study) model," Danaher said.

The study will begin on Saturday, Oct. 3, with a half-day session to which all citizens are invited, he said.

The session, to be facilitated by Barlow, will last from about 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and will take place at either the Grosse Pointe War Memorial or Grosse Pointe South High School, Danaher said.

Topics to be discussed at the session include process overview, trends and issues, and task force determination. Also, Barlow will give a presentation titled, "Journey Toward the Next Millennium," Danaher said.

It smells, yes, but it's not unsafe

Yes, Grosse Pointe Farms knows that sometimes the tap water smells, but there's not a whole lot that can be done about it.

According to city manager Rich Solak, it's the same thing that happened last fall when the city received several calls about the smelly tap water.

After extensive testing, the city determined that the water is safe and the smell is coming from dead and decaying algae. The algae is proliferating because zebra mussels are cleansing the lake, allowing the sun to warm deeper waters, providing better breeding grounds.

Solak said he's noticed the smell from time to time, but it follows no set pattern.

He urges residents to chill pitchers of water for drinking, which seems to make the smell go away.

If you have any water worries, call Solak at 885-6600.

History buffs lose, City OKs lot split

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The objections were heard and the Grosse Pointe City Council said it understood the concerns, but there was not a lot it could do.

The council unanimously approved lot splits for two parcels of land owned by developer Brad Elvidge because the requests complied to the letter with the lot split ordinance.

The two 100-foot lots on St. Clair between Maumee and Jefferson became four 50-foot lots with the decision.

It was the second time the proposal had come before the council. In July it was tabled after a number of residents objected to Elvidge's plans to tear down the two structures on the land.

One building is known as the Kramer Road House and is more than 100 years old. It once staged boxing matches and is believed to have been the first Pointe building with electricity. It was later converted to a three-unit apartment building and has been vacant for more than a year. A single-family home on one of the parcels will also be razed. It has no historic significance.

"Next year we'll be celebrating our centennial. It's a shame we won't have any 100-year-old buildings," said one resident.

Other residents said that if the city council had been more concerned with the city's history, something might have been done to save the buildings. One resident urged the council to create a historical commission to help residents establish historic districts within the city which would limit the way the land can be developed.

Residents also objected to the four lots, contending that they would clutter up the street. St. Clair, however, consists primarily of 50-foot lots, which is one of the reasons the council approved the split.

They also said it would destroy the homey feeling of the street.

According to the motion, Elvidge must get city approval of elevations, gradings and utility installation before proceeding with construction.

The council said it liked the idea of a historical commission, and that it would consider forming one.

Schools weigh options to winter taxes

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe School District, in yet another effort to cut expenses, is thinking of changing the way it collects the taxes due from residents.

For years the district has collected its share of taxes in December. But that meant that as of June 30 the district was effectively out of money.

Last week the board discussed possibly changing to either a 100 percent summer collection or splitting the tax collection equally between summer and winter.

In previous years, the district filled the gap between June 30 and the December collection date by borrowing money, investing it, and paying it back in December.

As a result the district was paying some $500,000 in interest each year. That was acceptable when interest earnings were higher than the interest expense. But with the troubled economy, the district is getting a lower return on its investments.

But the issue is not as simple as changing the date on the bills, according to school superintendent Ed Shine.

All taxes are collected by the individual cities which then give the schools their portion. Because the cities collect in the winter, a change could cause administrative difficulties, even if the cities agree to collect in the summer, he said.

If the cities did not agree, Wayne County would possibly be willing to oversee the collection but that would involve a fee and might not save the district much money.

The school system could collect taxes on its own, but again, the district would have to hire people and might not realize enough of a savings.

In addition, any change may mean a loss to some taxpayers, depending on whether they pay their taxes into an escrow account.

The district, however, won't take action until next summer and any changes, if made, would not go into effect until 1994, Shine said.

James Goss was in his 30s when he found his niche, working within the legal system, but it didn't come easy.

He graduated from Edsel Ford High School in Dearborn in 1959 "with no particular

Other than being the senior class president, who flunked his senior year, that is.

Scheduled to graduate in January, he got busy and earned a diploma in June.

College was not in his plans and Goss kicked around doing various jobs for three years until he decided it might be a good idea to continue his education.

"I vividly remember telling my mother at Easter break that this was much better than working," he said.

He graduated from Western Michigan University with a bachelor of business administration degree in 1966 and went to work for the accounting firm of Touche Ross. He was transferred to the Los Angeles office where he audited savings and loan institutions in Las Vegas.

Lawmaker pushes fight against mercury peril

By John Minnis
Assistant Editor

A St. Clair Shores legislator is calling for a comprehensive state strategy to control mercury contamination in the Great Lakes.

Chiding the Engler administration and the state Department of Natural Resources for lack of progress in developing a mercury-reduction plan, state Rep. Tracey Yokich, a Democrat, and state Rep. Mary Brown, D-Kalamazoo, have introduced their own plans.

"Mercury's continued threat to human and environmental health and to Michigan's tourism industry cannot continue unaddressed," Yokich said.

"We are developing legislation to achieve two goals. First and foremost, we need to control emissions of mercury into the environment. We know that most of the mercury in Michigan's lakes and streams results from atmospheric deposition of air emissions from municipal solid waste incinerators and coal-fired power plants. This legislation will control emissions from such sources.

"Second, because there is little we can do about mercury that is already in our ecosystems or that is deposited from outside our borders, Michigan needs to improve its system for sampling mercury levels in lakes and issuing fish-consumption advisories to the public."

Indeed, there are already public health fish-consumption advisories covering Michigan's inland lakes and the Great Lakes, including Lake St. Clair. Men, children 15 and older and women not planning to have children are advised not to eat more than one meal a week consisting of the larger fish of nearly all the species in the lake. Consumption of carp is discouraged for anyone.

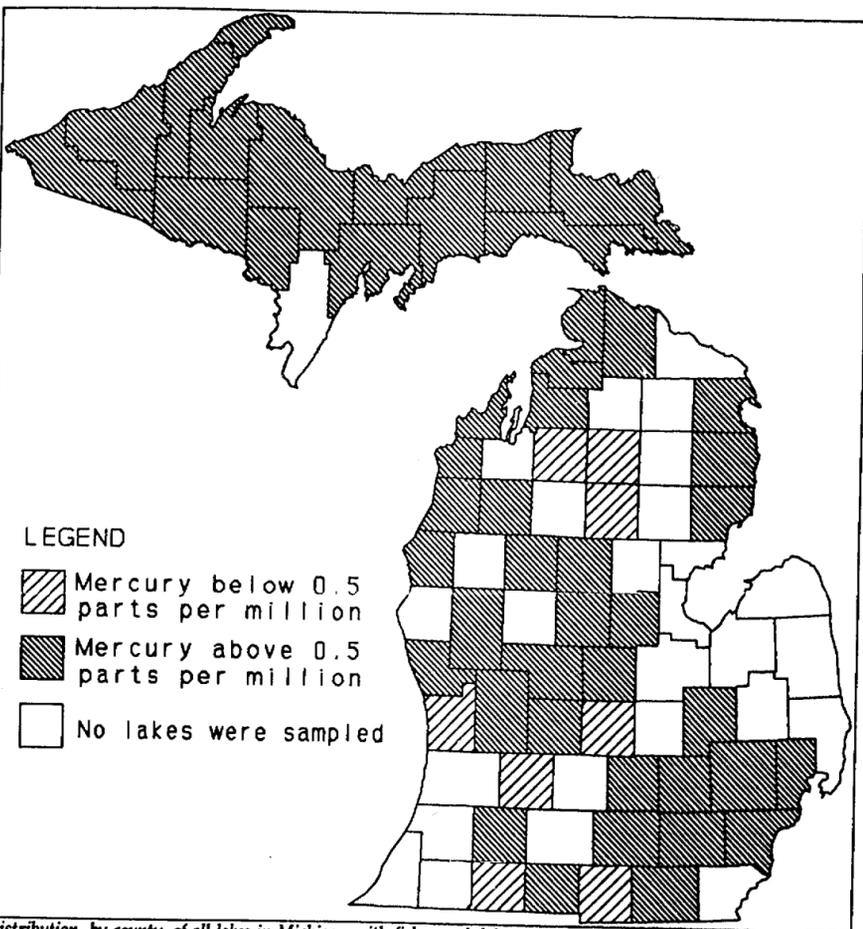

The advisories for women and young children are even more restrictive.

Nursing mothers, pregnant women or women who intend to have children, and children under 15 should not eat more than one meal a month of the larger fish caught in Lake St. Clair.

Larger fish have higher concentrations of mercury due to a process called biomagnification. Small amounts of mercury are absorbed by aquatic species lowest on the food chain. As larger species eat the smaller ones, the mercury is passed up the food chain until the largest fish at the top of the chain contain the highest amounts of mercury.

"Our first step must be to educate the general public," Brown said.

In conjunction with their mercury legislation, Yokich and Brown released a copy of the report, "Mercury: Master of Illusion, Environmental Puzzle," by the science and technology division of the non-partisan Legislative Services Bureau.

Distribution, by county, of all lakes in Michigan with fish sampled for mercury levels from 1981 to 1990.

The 33-page report and appendices describe the mercury contamination in Michigan and its threat to public health.

"I am hopeful," Brown said, "that this report will help pave the way for mercury-control legislation for Michigan."

Dr. Henry Cole, science and policy director for the non-profit Clean Water Fund based in Washington, D.C., said Michigan has one of the worst mercury problems in the nation.

In a 1990 report, Cole said mercury emissions in Michigan total 20,000 pounds a year, more than half coming from trash incineration and coal burning. Mercury emissions nationwide total more than 500,000 pounds a year, he said.

Once mercury is emitted into the air, it is washed to earth by rain and snow and then drains into lakes and streams.

Mercury, like lead, attacks the developing brains of children and fetuses, lowering intelligence and impairing hearing, speech and coordination. A pregnant woman who eats contaminated fish will pass mercury to the fetus through the placenta. Infants can be exposed to mercury through breast milk.

The Macomb County Health Department, however, had no records of children born with disabilities because of mercury passed on from a mother who consumed contaminated fish.

"It's a hard thing to track," Yokich said. "They may be a little slow in mental abilities (but the cause is not necessarily known). But everybody agrees it's quite toxic."

Yokich said the prudent thing to do is eat fish with caution, following the health advisories.

Of the 26 states that have fish consumption advisories because of the presence of mercury, Michigan and southern Florida suffer the nation's most serious contamination, Cole said.

Kathy Aterno, Michigan director of the Clean Water Fund, criticized the state Department of Natural Resources and the Engler administration for failing to provide a mercury-control strategy, which was promised by the DNR more than a year ago, she said.

"After a year of study, we have nothing to protect Michigan's people and environment from rising mercury levels," Aterno said. "We urge the Legislature to push the DNR and the governor to act on this contamination problem."

Mercury-control recommendations

The Clean Water Fund, a non-profit environmental organization based in Washington, D.C., said Michigan should take the following steps to meet the mercury-contamination problems in the lakes:

- Drop the proposed Oakland County incinerator — which would release another half ton of mercury a year into the environment — from further consideration and ban additional new incinerators for the next five years.
- Enact proposed legislation to reduce mercury and other toxic metals in packaging, a move already made by a dozen other states.
- Act on recommendations of a 1990 legislative committee report by limiting the mercury content of batteries and banning the sale of mercuric oxide batteries, which are significant sources of emissions from existing incinerators.
- Press for federal legislation to ban nonessential uses of mercury in commerce and phasing it out for most uses as replacement substances become available.

Kelly reflects on reasons for defeat in bid for Congress

By Tracy Wilson
Special Writer

Even after winning the lion's share of the Grosse Pointe vote in the Aug. 4 primary, state Sen. John Kelly wasn't celebrating.

His opponent, U.S. Rep. John Conyers, D-Detroit, captured about the same percentage of the vote in the much larger part of the new 14th Congressional District outside the Pointes, thereby swamping Kelly.

Kelly reflected on the race, citing fundraising problems, Democratic in-fighting and accusations of racism as factors that, together, contributed to his defeat.

"We couldn't get them (voting lists) in June, which blocked the money," he said. "It takes about a quarter of a million dollars to run a congressional campaign and without the lists, it was like we were wandering around in the streets aimlessly."

Kelly said his inability to wrest the lists from Wayne County officials was his biggest headache. As a result, he ended up running his campaign on a shoestring budget — about $30,000.

Wayne County is one of just a few counties in the nation that hasn't yet computerized its voting lists.

"(Wayne County Executive) Ed McNamara worked openly with Conyers, and Dennis Her-tel organized activities on the east side and in Grosse Pointe," said Kelly. "They were overt in trying to block me because I am a totally independent force in the Democratic Party. I am their enemy."

McNamara could not be reached for comment.

Kelly's campaign wasn't helped by the allegations of racism raised by some officials, including Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, who accused him of courting Harper Woods and Pointe voters with "racist" literature.

Kelly denies the allegation, but acknowledges that running in a black district was difficult. He said there were barriers a black candidate wouldn't have had to face.

"It's what it must have been like to be the first black person to move to Grosse Pointe," he said. "They ask why you would care. It's hard to convey that you genuinely care about the black community."

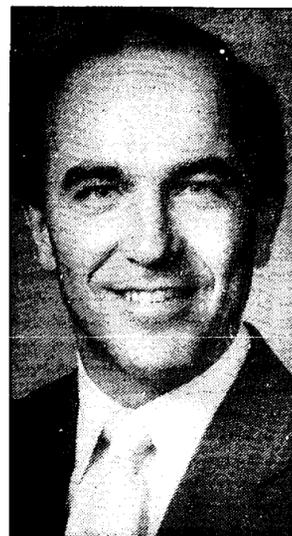

Conyers has been a familiar face for 28 years in the Detroit section of District 14, a part of the district Kelly said he knew he had to penetrate.

"The African-American community came out," said Kelly. "When you can effectively mobilize the black community around a race issue, you can counter anything."

The vote tally in the battle for the new District 14 was 39,311 votes for Conyers, with 38,907 of his votes coming from the Detroit part of the district. Conyers received 15 out of 214 votes in Grosse Pointe Shores; 217 out of 2,203 in the Woods and 172 out of 1,987 in Harper Woods.

Kelly received 12,087 votes in the Detroit section of District 14. In Harper Woods and the Pointes, he racked up more impressive totals — 195 of 214 votes in Grosse Pointe Shores; 1,830 out of 2,203 in the Woods; and 1,723 out of 1,987 in Harper Woods.

Kelly said he is disappointed over his loss, but also says Conyers deserved to win.

John Kelly

"You're either effective in getting your message out or you're not," he said. "It didn't happen for me, but I really haven't lost anything."

Tuition rates rise for non-residents

By Tracy Wilson and Jerome Allotta
Special Writers

The Grosse Pointe school board recently approved a 9 percent tuition increase for students who are temporary non-residents.

"It affects students violating residence requirements," said Chris Fenton, the Grosse Pointe district's finance superintendent. "They are charged for months out, if they move out of the district within the year."

The hike will affect about 10 to 12 families which are expected to move into or out of the district this year.

The maximum yearly tuition allowed by the state is $7,731 for elementary students and $8,001 for secondary students.

Tuition has gone up at the Grosse Pointe schools, but they are still well below the state guidelines.

"By keeping our rates down, we encourage students to attend school in those special circumstances where our policy permits out-of-district attendance," said Kathy Roberts, community relations coordinator with the Grosse Pointe schools. "We might let a high school senior pay tuition if his family has moved out of Grosse Pointe, enabling him to finish his senior year. We have a system of proof that is required."

For elementary students, tuition has gone from $3,780 for the 1991-92 school year to $4,140 for 1992-93; at the middle schools it has gone from $4,600 to $4,860; and in the high schools, the rate has jumped from $4,950 to $5,400.

Ed Shine, superintendent of Grosse Pointe schools, said that charging non-residents tuition is a longstanding, common and necessary practice throughout the state of Michigan. "They're (non-residents) receiving the educational benefits of the district without paying taxes, and so we charge them tuition until they start paying taxes in the district," said Shine.

The district's tuition policy does not allow full-time tuition students from other districts to attend the Grosse Pointe schools.

Buyers who can show a mortgage agreement, but can't move in right away may enroll their children in the Grosse Pointe schools and pay only for the days they are not residing in the district.

School officials say that Grosse Pointe schools attract a number of people from out of the district. They say they have to trace non-residents to be fair to the taxpayers in the community who support the schools.

"We just couldn't let people show up at the front door," said Roberts. "Sometimes we get complaints from people about whether someone is in fact a resident, but we're fairly confident it doesn't go unnoticed."

If school officials learn that a child is not a resident, they check and send a notice to the child's home if the investigation bears fruit.

"If they're non-residents and we find out this way, they don't have the option of paying tuition," said Roberts. "They are removed, not expelled — that carries a different connotation. I think most schools have policies governing this."

Fire called suspicious

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers were called to a trash fire in an alley near Mack and Lakepointe at 11 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 15.

The fire was quickly brought under control and public safety director Richard Caretti said it is being investigated because it is of suspicious origin.

A home on the alley and an Edison pole suffered damage and a neighbor who tried to put it out suffered first-degree burns on his hands, but refused medical treatment.

Water, water everywhere

Grosse Pointe Park residents can expect smelly brown water and lower water pressure for the next few weeks as the Grosse Pointe Park public safety department tests its fire hydrants.

"It's an essential task," said deputy director William Furtaw. "But in testing the hydrants we stir up the rust and people will have some brown water."

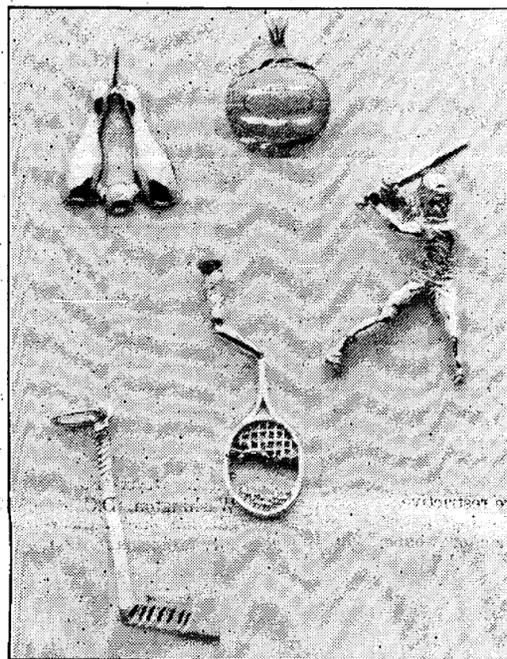

He advised residents to run the water until it's clear before washing clothes themselves.

He also said that people should expect water on the streets as the 350 hydrants are tested.

The work should be done by the middle of September.

'ULS did a lot in getting me ready for college.'

Sam Khatib
ULS Class of '91
Sophomore, Duke University

At University Liggett School, we take great pride not only in our outstanding record of college placement, but also, in the preparation we provide to assure our graduates' academic success in college.

Sam Khatib is a sophomore in the liberal arts program at Duke University. Sam maintained a 3.3 GPA in his first year at Duke, where he also was an avid participant in intramural sports. Sam found a high level of work and considerable academic pressure at Duke, but says, "ULS did a lot in getting me ready for college. The adjustment to college work was not as tough for me as for some of my friends who came from public schools."

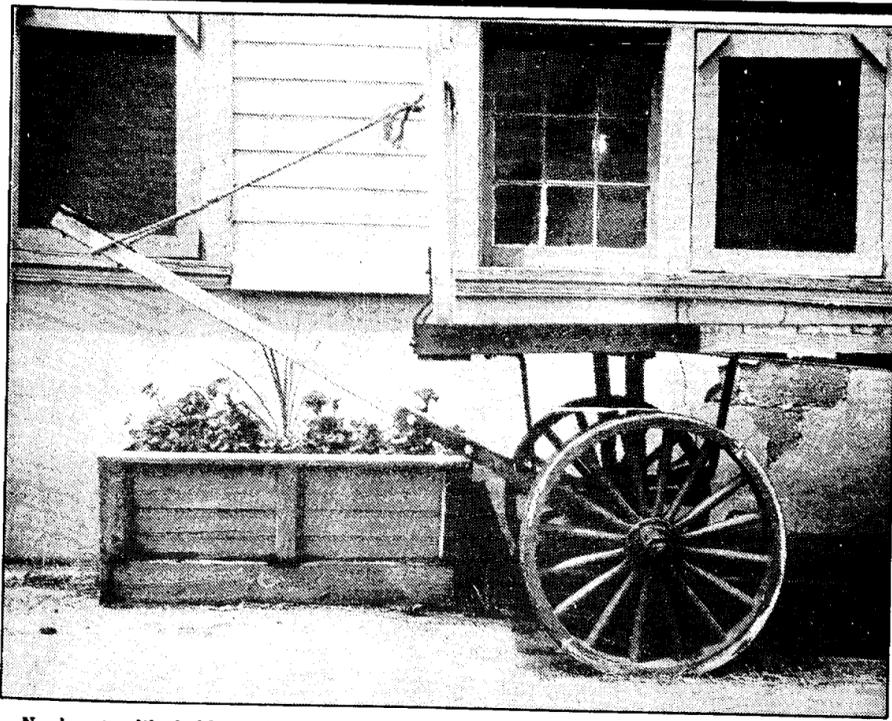

ULS seeks students who, like Sam Khatib, want a serious college preparatory experience. Limited space is available in the upper school at ULS for September admission. Call the admissions office now at 884-4444 to request an application or to schedule a test before school begins this fall.

Let ULS show you how much we can do for your college-bound student.

Nagler steadily held a point and shoot camera to produce this sharp and properly exposed photograph taken at Kensington Metro Park.

Simply 'point and shoot'

Most of my photography columns deal with cameras where the photographer has control over aperture, shutter speed, depth-of-field, etc. With interchangeable lenses and a full range of accessories, you might call these "photographer take charge" cameras.

Well, for those of you who may not want to take charge and want a simpler, easier-to-operate camera, consider the "point and shoot."

Point and shoot cameras can produce excellent results if you follow some simple guidelines and put a little thought into your shots.

To begin with, always hold your camera steady, tuck in your elbows and gently squeeze the shutter. Point and shoot cameras do not have a very fast shutter speed so it's important to keep them steady.

Remember with point and shoot cameras, you're not looking through the picture-taking lens so make sure your fingers are out of the way! This goes for camera straps, too, and if your camera has a lens cap, make sure it's been removed.

All metering is done automatically on point and shoot cameras. So, for proper exposure, place more ground in the viewfinder so you won't under-expose. If you want to darken the sky and clouds for a more dramatic effect, then place more sky in the viewfinder. The brighter sky will "call" for less exposure and a darker picture will result. Many point and shoots have a flash that functions when needed so it's easy to get proper exposure.

Another nice feature of point and shoot cameras is auto-load, auto-wind, and auto-rewind after your last shot. You really can't go wrong.

Using good compositional rules applies to point and shoot cameras just as much as to larger, more professional models. For example, use framing techniques such as overhanging three branches and lead-in lines such as a winding river or weathered fence. Use the "thirds" rule of subject placement so that the subject isn't smack in the middle of the viewfinder.

Photography

By Monte Nagler

Remember that point and shoot cameras use small apertures so your pictures will almost always be sharp from front to back.

And, of course, like any camera, use vertical or horizontal formats depending on which best fits the subject.

Be creative with point and shoot cameras. With some thought, planning, and an understanding of your camera's features, you can add many memorable shots to your photo album.

Community ed plans a busy fall

The booklet containing the fall program of activities for the Department of Community Education of the Grosse Pointe Public School System will be delivered to all residences in the school district by Aug. 26.

Registration for fall classes begins at 7 a.m. on Thursday, Sept. 10, at Barnes School, 20090 Morningside Drive in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Baker buoys GOP's hopes of '92 victory

Republicans everywhere welcomed the return of James Baker to the political wars last week to mend George Bush's stumbling campaign for the presidency.

Even Democrats admitted that Baker's initial outline of his plans for the 1992 campaign made a strong case for Bush's re-election on the basis of the administration's successes in domestic as well as foreign affairs.

True, there were legitimate complaints from Democrats and other critics over the risks that the administration is taking by removing the experienced secretary of state from his post at a critical moment in negotiations over problems in beleaguered Bosnia as well as in the Middle East.

Opinion

Baker returned to the White House to become the president's chief of staff, his personal counsel and his re-election campaign chief, but the appointment of an acting secretary of state left the way open for him to resume his cabinet post if he directs the campaign to success.

In making the case for the Bush presidency in a talk to State Department employees, Baker refused to concede any advantage to the Democrats even in domestic policy in which they have been gaining ground and popularity in recent months.

However, he seemed to echo the complaints of other GOP leaders that the party needs chiefly to get its message of its four-year record of achievement to the public in order to triumph at the polls.

Objective observers, however, feel that more than anything else the GOP needs some of the "vision thing" that Bush so sadly lacks and a more specific outline of his plans for the next four years. In TV interviews Sunday, Bush promised to set forth that future agenda in his acceptance address to the GOP convention tonight.

The president also made it clear, and his supporters emphasized the same point, that the GOP campaign expects to "demolish" the Democratic Congress as well as the Democratic ticket. If that is a GOP objective, the nation can expect another nasty presidential campaign, despite Bush's promises to avoid campaign "sleaze."

One thing is certain: Baker brings to his task an unusual amount of successful campaign work on behalf of Presidents Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan and George Bush. He wasn't always a victorious adviser, however, as he directed Bush's unsuccessful campaign for the U.S. Senate in Texas in 1970.

Perhaps Baker's greatest asset, however, is his ability, as an old friend going back to their common Texas days, to tell the president exactly how it is, even when it is something that George Bush may not like to hear.

Yet as Baker accepts his new assignment, it may occur to some people, including some Republicans, to ask why, if Baker is so good, he isn't the GOP presidential nominee or at least the GOP nominee for vice president.

Baker, however, has his eyes set on 1996, which means that both Bush and Baker have a great deal riding on 1992.

Mixed signals on abortion?

Seven of President George Bush's 31 vetoes in the past four years have killed Democratic Congressional efforts to liberalize U.S. abortion and family planning laws and regulations.

The vetoed legislation ranged from a bill that would have permitted use of federal funds for abortions for victims of rape or incest to a proposal to lift the administration's ban on federally financed research using tissue from aborted fetuses.

Those vetoes offer ample evidence of the importance that the president has attached to these issues not only in the past but in the 1992 presidential campaign.

Yet both the president and Vice President Dan Quayle in recent weeks have given confusing answers to questions about how they would treat members of their own families if a daughter or granddaughter sought to have an abortion.

In effect, both men said that while they oppose abortion, the final decision in such cases should be made by the women themselves. That, of course, is also the view of pro-choice supporters.

The Bush and Quayle comments raise an interesting question: Do they mean that while they would accept abortions for their own relatives, they would deny the right to make that same decision to women in general?

The answer would appear to be in the affirmative since both men endorse the GOP platform plank that reiterates the party's call for a constitutional amendment to ban abortion except when the life of the mother is threatened.

The 1992 GOP convention reiterated its stance this week despite the efforts of Republicans for Choice to moderate a view that those GOP women think could cost the party the election.

However, Barbara Bush in a pre-convention interview said she thought that abortion should not even be mentioned in the party platform. That is excellent advice but the Republicans are unlikely to accept it, especially since the Democrats earlier endorsed a pro-choice stand.

Yet the GOP's mixed signals on abortion raise the question as to whether the party is not trying to have it both ways on this issue, as it has on others. Even a spokesperson for the American Conservative Union concluded: "With three comments like that (by Quayle and the Bushes) in succession, you know it's a deliberate plan."

Romney joins Reagan critics

George Romney, Michigan's governor from 1963 to 1969, has become one of the many critics of former President Ronald Reagan on the federal deficit issue.

In recent media interviews, Romney blamed Reagan for starting the nation on its recent course of piling up huge annual deficits, a policy which helps explain why the former president is now viewed unfavorably by more people than view him favorably.

Romney also praised Sen. Warren Rudman, the retiring GOP senator from New Hampshire, and former Democratic Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts for their efforts in starting a new organization to "hold Congress' feet to the fire" on the deficit issue.

Romney sees a parallel between the Rudman-Tsongas organization, whose aims he strongly supports, and the Michigan citizens' movement that was responsible for adoption of a new state constitution in 1963.

In the former governor's view, both are the kind of grassroots organizations that are needed to seek out citizens' views and achieve a consensus on a particular issue.

To achieve their successes, however, such groups also need a charismatic leader. In Michigan's case, for example, that leadership was provided by Romney for the Michigan citizens group.

In fact, that successful campaign to modernize the state constitution first gave him the state attention that led to his nomination and election as governor and his six years in that office.

Since his later public service as U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, the former governor has continued his interest not only in party politics but in the activities of citizens' groups that can do much to solve public problems.

So in applauding the Rudman-Tsongas approach, he's speaking from experience with citizen volunteers as well as from his background in public service in both Lansing and Washington.

Poverty puts children at risk

Already known for its high unemployment and loss of industry, Detroit has won another dismal distinction in topping a list of the 168 U.S. cities with the highest percentage of children living in poverty.

In fact, an analysis of 1990 census figures by the Children's Defense Fund, a Washington nonprofit group, showed that Detroit's record was the worst in the nation, with 138,242 children, or 46.6 percent of those under 18, living in poverty.

Yet the report emphasizes that we're viewing a national problem with a quarter of all children living in poverty whether they are residents of New Orleans, Buffalo, Miami or Milwaukee, or impoverished rural counties in Michigan.

On the other hand, Livonia with a 3 percent rate tied with Overland Park, Kan., among cities having the lowest percentage of children living in poverty. Sterling Heights reported a 5 percent rate and Ann Arbor 8.4 percent on the same list.

In its report on the study, the Detroit Free Press said that poverty puts the next generation at risk of crime, sickness, pregnancy and not growing up at all. And it cited testimony of experts to support that conclusion.

That being the case, doesn't the problem require national attention and a national program to save all the nation's children from poverty and the social evils to which so many now are being exposed?

Global

To the Editor:

Recently, a team of seven Grosse Pointe South High School students had the honor of representing Michigan at the World Finals competition of the Odyssey of the Mind in Boulder, Colo. Our team gave the best performance they ever put on. They were confident and enthusiastic before an audience of hundreds of participants from 40 states and 15 countries. The South team placed second in the world, missing first place to the Hungarian team by one point. It was a remarkable experience.

Due to the support of our business community, the board of education, candy, bagel and donut sales and a number of private donations, we raised almost $4,000 to defray the nearly $6,000 needed to make this trip. Special thanks to Mr. C's Deli, Jones Chemical, PVS Chemical, Mr. Bradley, Sue Bacon, Jack and Debbie Liang, Gloria Konler, Frank Sladen and the South Latin Club for their generous donations. Dr. John Burl Artis and Bernard LeMieux were also instrumental in the solicitation of funds for our venture. The parents, particularly Lucy Peacock, Heather Niven and Sue MacKechnie, were dedicated and involved. We appreciated their assistance.

Odyssey of the Mind World Finals is truly a global experience. In Boulder, we were housed in a dorm with Russian, Polish, Japanese and Hungarian students. Our students competed side by side with their global peers in a creative problem-solving forum. These young people are our future. Experiences such as this enhance their perspectives and shape their attitudes.

The team, coaches and parents appreciate the support of the Grosse Pointe community.

And to Ashley, Beth, Ferd, Pat, Chris, Andrew and Adam ... congratulations!

Didn't vote

To the Editor:

At the recent primary election at Brownell at about 5:30 p.m., the nearest available parking spaces were too far for me to walk with arthritis to the voting place.

Therefore, I waited patiently in my car until someone would return from voting and drive away, thus leaving a place for my car.

After another half-hour or more, with no change in the scene, it dawned on me that the near places must be occupied by election personnel or even the persons peddling names of candidates whom they were promoting.

Finally, I turned around and drove home without voting.

Thanks

To the Editor:

We would like to thank officers Steve Poloni, Dan Fronczak and Jerry Milam for their participation in our annual block party. Their demonstration of emergency vehicles was thoroughly delightful and we all appreciate the time and effort these gentlemen put forth to make the party a great success.

Residents of North and South Duval Road

Watching a dream come true

The dream started with a thick volume, chock full of house designs and plans.

My son-in-law spent hours poring over drawings, selecting a handful from which he and my daughter began whittling away until only one remained — their house. It was a Cape Cod with lots of windows and a second floor balcony overlooking the living room.

They went looking for a lot upon which to build their dream. It was a long, arduous process that took many weekends and evenings.

They found the perfect site on the border of Oakland County — three acres of pine trees with a small clearing in the center near the front. Not many trees would have to be cut to make room for their structure of wood and glass and fieldstone.

My husband and I went to look at it. First there was a drainage ditch that, like a moat, separated the land from the road. It was either jump over the darn thing or walk down into a steep, wide hole covered with weeds under which, undoubtedly, there were snakes.

Then there was a formidable barrier of waist-high weeds one had to forge through to get to the clearing and it was populated with the biggest, thirstiest vampire-like mosquitoes. There was a thick carpeting of pine needles in the clearing. Every once in awhile, we'd hear scampering sounds from some of the wildlife that we never saw, but that we knew were watching our movements.

Nice, I thought, very peaceful, but I cannot visualize ideas and the dream was a couple of years away. The land had to be almost paid for before construction could begin.

Everytime we visited them, our son-in-law would bring out the plans over which he had laid tissue upon tissue of modifications — extending this wall, removing that one, adding another detail. He and my husband could walk through the house with their eyes and actually see rooms and closets and doors.

I Say

I could see a large piece of paper with geometric shapes that made as much sense to me as hieroglyphics. I have the greatest respect for people who can read blueprints — it is a talent that is beyond my ken.

Every week through every season, they visited their land, walking through their kitchen, putting the garage on the other side of the house and then going back to the original design. And every month after another payment, sometimes doubled, they moved closer to building.

In order to understand building laws and language, my son-in-law signed up for a course that builders take to prepare themselves for the test necessary for a license.

When it was almost time, they went shopping for a builder. They took their plans and their budget to one builder who told them it couldn't be done. Another one said it could.

It was a long, draining process. They could go with someone who promised everything and delivered half. So they checked references and talked to people and finally settled on one.

I started to get excited. I've never built a house and never wanted to. I don't have the stamina or the patience, but I always wondered what it would be like to see an idea become reality. This would be my vicarious experience.

To save money, they cleared the land themselves with the help of friends. They cut down trees and dragged the trunks to the side — one day they were Paul Bunyons, and the next day, aching and bruised lumps trying to put one foot in front of the other without too much pain.

Then the basement was carved out of the earth and the sides were coated with concrete. We walked around it and admired it. Then the garage floor went in. The skeleton of the house was next. We walked through, trying to visualize the rooms. Then there was a second floor and walls and a roof.

Every week, sometimes twice a week, we checked the progress and marveled over every step. We took family members and friends to visit. It was a birthing process that was wondrous to watch.

Builders, a group I never gave much thought to before, are artists in every sense. Like a potter who creates a thing of beauty out of a lump of clay, a builder creates — out of wood and nails and cement — a place where memories will be made.

Our kids moved in a couple of weeks ago. And despite all of the time and money and sweat they have invested in their house, they know they have miles to go yet before it's done.

And a lot to learn, such as how not to re-light the pilot light in the gas heater, as my son-in-law with the singed eyelashes and hair discovered recently.

It's been an enjoyable and frustrating experience, watching their dream take shape and I salute them and everyone else who takes on such an immense project. They are modern day pioneers all.

And then there were five

Tie down your children if you're planning on going to Windmill Pointe Park in Grosse Pointe Park this summer.

Maybe it's the cold weather that's been keeping residents — and seagull meal tickets — away, but the air rats have been very aggressive of late.

A young couple, taking advantage of a non-rainy, but still chilly day last weekend, put six Italian sausages on the grill and went back to reading their books. Not more than 30 seconds later there was a high pitched screech and the flutter of wings.

Looking up the couple watched as one of the seagulls flew away with a raw sausage in its beak. Just to be sure that's what they saw, they got up. Sure enough, only five sausages were on the grill.

Without much fanfare, the rest of the gulls ate the sausage and hung around, as though waiting for seconds.

The only thing missing in the scene — aside from the sausage of course — was scary music and Alfred Hitchcock walking serenely by in the background.

And speaking of food

Took a gander at Kentucky Fried Chicken's new Popcorn Chicken last week.

It looked a lot like what someone might scrape off the bottom of a deep fryer after making doughnuts or fish and chips.

Didn't eat it, but the people who did said it wasn't too bad.

And by the by, what is the Colonel doing with the skin he tears from the pieces to make their new, healthy skin-free chicken?

Just asking.

So do I need a sweater or not?

Everyone was so interested in Channel 2's attempt to steal Channel 4's anchor Carmen Harlan that we almost missed The Big Picture.

WDIV-TV Channel 4 has it, though. It's a new multi-zillion dollar 3-dimensional weather graphics system complete with bright colors, moving satellite pictures of the Earth and a lot of other stuff that is fun to look at, but doesn't tell me whether I need to bring an umbrella to work the next day or not.

Channel 4 weatherman — and Grosse Pointe Shores resident — Chuck Gaidica seems to like it, though — "Isn't this thing cool?" he asked viewers one night recently after an exceptionally perky demonstration of the system's capabilities.

Yes, it's cool, but, Chuck, it's just the weather.

Call me old-fashioned.

Taking stock

For those of you who might have missed the opening weekend of Grosse Pointe Summer Stock's production of the musical comedy, "Do Black Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect Up?" don't miss it this closing weekend.

Anyone who went to Catholic schools or anyone who's Catholic or anyone who's ever been a child will be entertained by the talented cast of high school and post-high school Grosse Pointers in the cast.

(Why is it that nuns are the topic for so many musicals?)

It is Grosse Pointe Summer Stock's second production — last year they did a nice version of Neil Simon's "Biloxi Blues". GPSS is a non-profit organization founded by Grosse Pointe South theater teacher Mary Martin to give a performing outlet to students who will be or are studying theater in college.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 21, and Saturday, Sept. 22, at the Performing Arts Center at Grosse Pointe North High School. Come from Mack or up Morningside, since Vernier is closed from Morningside to Lakeshore.

Tickets are $10 for adults and $8 for students and seniors. Call 885-8592 to reserve seats.

Conyers comes clean on the environment

Speaking of redistricting (as we were, just last week), it's only fair to concede its potentially good points, even while admitting it can be the source of a lot of frustration. But Grosse Pointers have been living with political frustration for years, as the heavily Republican Pointes continue to be blessed with Democratic congresspeople. On the other hand, the Pointes will likely be represented by incumbents, who have not only political baggage, but also political clout.

Nancy Parmenter

Let's not go over the old ground, plowed and replowed (but still true), that if the Pointes were consolidated into one city, this wouldn't happen. More than likely, other considerations, more local in nature, govern the consolidation question.

Whatever the case, the Pointes will now spend the next 10 years, as the last 10, joined with portions of Detroit, utterly unlike them and far superior in numerical strength, which will, in essence, choose the Pointes' representatives for them.

Look at the election results: Tom Barrow beat Barbara-Rose Collins 2-1 in the Pointes, yet she easily won the primary.

John Kelly out-and-out whipped John Conyers here, with a whopping 4,748 to Conyers' 404 (with Scott and Strickland reduced to mere zeros). Of course, technically speaking, this was only the first round, but in a practical sense, these two Democrats are overwhelmingly likely to win in November.

But wait — maybe the choices imposed on the Pointes won't turn out to be all bad. Although both legislators are seen as big-government urban champions, an appealing new side to John Conyers has recently come to my attention. And it's something that could go over big in Grosse Pointe.

John Conyers is an environmentalist.

Along with neighboring congressmen David Bonior and Sander Levin, Conyers has been endorsed by the Sierra Club. Here's what the organization's August newsletter had to say:

"Conyers has effectively used his Operations Committee leadership position to monitor how the federal government is fulfilling its environmental responsibilities. Over the past term, Conyers has also consistently voted pro-environment, and has cosponsored a number of environmental bills, including the California Desert Protection Act."

Conyers has a 92 rating for 1991 from the League of Conservation Voters; only departing Rep. Howard Wolpe ranks higher. Of course, a look back at the four previous years (when his rating ranged from 70 to 88) shows that Conyers is a recent convert. But let's not look a gift environmentalist in the mouth.

How long has the lawsuit against the Detroit incinerator been dragging through the courts? Four years? The case cries out for a modern-day Dickens to do a 1990s version of "Bleak House." This case is wearing out witnesses and robbing pocketbooks even as Dickens' protagonists were exhausted and impoverished by the British court system a century ago.

I nominate Tom Wolfe. He could do justice to the sorry mess. Just think of his court scenes in "Bonfire of the Vanities" (the book, not the film) or his hair-raising version of chimp experiments in "The Right Stuff."

Yikes. Only two witnesses remain to be called in the still-ongoing incinerator litigation, but it isn't likely that the case will end for several more months. The witnesses (for the environmental plaintiffs) are expected to testify about alternatives to incineration — alternatives that Detroit hasn't tried.

Detroit is the only city among America's top 10 not to have a curbside recycling program. It is surrounded by suburbs that either already have curbside pickup or are ready to go for it, yet Detroit has spent millions fighting the suit, when the same dollar outlay would have bought better environmental controls for the incinerator and instituted some alternatives to burning.

It's expensive stubbornness.

What is the difference between men and women? When women have a fender bender they hug each other.

My only two traffic boo-boos (neither of which caused any damage) have been caused by my not realizing how long my car was. Both times I hit cars when I was traveling about one mile an hour — and both times, I hit my friends. That they are still speaking to me says volumes about them as individuals and about the high tolerance/forgiveness factor in women.

The most recent car contact was last week after a meeting in Traverse City. In a brown study, I backed up to exit my parking space and smacked a vehicle so close it hadn't appeared in my rearview mirror. As my friends cheered and jeered helpfully from the opposite side of the street, I (first aghast, then relieved) got out to find that my pickup bumper was the same height as the bumper of Gini's four-wheel-drive utility vehicle. Whew, saved by macho engineering.

"Lucky thing Gini wasn't standing in front of her truck," observed Bob later. He's helpful too.

Gini does have one dent in her bumper. She got it when an old man driving an El Camino got nervous and slammed the accelerator instead of the brake.

"He leaped out and ran around his squashed rear fender," she said. "He was terrified that he'd wrecked his Alstate Good Driver sticker on the back."

Sixth Amendment defines basic rights of persons accused of crimes

This is the tenth in a series of articles about the Bill of Rights, courtesy of the Commission of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

The Sixth Amendment provides a person who is accused of a crime with a number of basic protections, including "the right to a speedy and public trial," the right to be tried by "an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed," the right "to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation," the right "to be confronted with the witnesses against him (and) to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor," and the right "to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

As is true of the criminal guarantees in the Fifth and Eighth amendments, many of the guarantees in the Sixth Amendment were drafted in reaction to the tyrannical practices that had been employed in infamous Old World tribunals, such as England's Court of the Star Chamber, and in colonial courts controlled by the British Crown.

The right to "a speedy and public trial" was included to prohibit the government both from imprisoning criminal defendants indefinitely while awaiting trial, and from subjecting criminal defendants to improper judicial procedures behind closed doors.

The right to trial by "an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed" grants the defendant the right to have the issue of guilt or innocence determined by fellow citizens drawn from the community rather than by a judge.

Interestingly, although the right to trial by jury in criminal cases was also guaranteed by Article III, section 2 of the original Constitution, the original Constitution did not explicitly refer to trial by an "impartial" jury.

The inclusion of an express guarantee of the right to an "impartial" jury may well have reflected the Framers' awareness that, when the concept of trial by jury was first introduced in England, jurors were not necessarily chosen because they were fair and impartial, but because they were already personally familiar with the defendant and the facts of the crime.

In addition, jurors in English criminal courts had historically been subject to strict controls, and were not always free to exercise their independent judgment in a case. Early English courts had occasionally used their powers to fine or punish jurors who did not reach a verdict that was to the Crown's sand along Grand Traverse Bay just wasn't enough. I rolled up my pant legs and waded.

Suddenly, a cloud of tiny brown transparent flies attached themselves to my white pants. Hundreds of the little guys, more arriving every second.

Watching, really watching, is a talent, a pleasure, a skill that can be learned with lots of practice. If you really look, you can see birds feeding their babies, a squirrel and a rabbit squabbling over seeds dropped under a birdfeeder, a spider stalking its prey through the grass, a yellowjacket locked in liking.

The requirement that the members of the jury be drawn from the "State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed" reflected the Framers' concern that the government would "import" a group of unsympathetic or hostile jurors from a distant city or state to the defendant's trial in order to win a conviction.

At the Virginia Ratifying Convention, William Grayson had objected to the guarantee of the right to jury trial in the original Constitution precisely because it did not guard against this kind of jury-rigging. Grayson argued that when "(t)he jury may come from any part of the state ...

(the conclusion ... is, that (the government) can hang any one they please, by having a jury to suit their purpose."

The right "to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation" requires the government to specify the charges against a defendant so that the defendant has notice of what charges he must defend against. The origins of this guarantee can be found in the 17th century English practice, which did not entitle the accused to review a copy of the indictment against him.

The right to "be confronted with the witnesses against him (and) to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor" guarantees the defendant the right to question his accusers and to call witnesses on his behalf.

By the time that the Bill of Rights was adopted in 1791, the accused's right to confront the witnesses against him had long been recognized as common law, and had been expressly recognized in several state constitutions.

The right of a criminal defendant to present witnesses in his defense was of more recent vintage, but was equally well-established, and had been recognized by the Congress in the Federal Crimes Act of 1790.

Finally, by guaranteeing every defendant the right "to have the assistance of counsel for his defence," the Sixth Amendment prohibits the government from stripping the accused of his ability to defend himself with the assistance of an attorney trained in criminal law and procedure.

In the courts of England, defendants charged with serious felony crimes were forbidden from having counsel represent them in court. This rule was partly explainable by the fact that criminal defendants in English courts were generally not required to stand trial against professional government prosecutors. The English practice was widely rejected in the colonies, however, where professional prosecutors were the norm.

In the Framers' time, the Sixth Amendment right to counsel was generally understood as guaranteeing criminal defendants the right to hire their own counsel if they could afford to do so.

The Supreme Court has since ruled, however, that the Sixth Amendment right to counsel further requires that, in both federal cases (Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458 (1938)) and state cases (Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335 (1963)), the government must provide counsel to represent criminal defendants who cannot afford to hire counsel on their own, and that the right to counsel is guaranteed regardless of how short the defendant's term of imprisonment may be if convicted (Argersinger v. Hamlin, 407 U.S. 25 (1972)).

Service

To the Editor:

As a lifelong eastsider, resident of the Pointes and product of the Grosse Pointe schools, I think a warm thanks is owed to outgoing Wayne County Commissioner David P. Cavanagh for his services to the Pointes over his almost six years in office.

He represented well the interests of the Pointes, the community in which he and his family live. Notable among the accomplishments Commissioner Cavanagh helped champion for the Pointes have been:

- The rebuilding or improvement to miles of county roads in the Pointes;
- The reconstruction of the Milk River system, a badly needed improvement to our infrastructure that other politicians avoided dealing with for years; and
- The successful battle to overturn the original redistricting plan that would have split the Grosse Pointes, which resulted in keeping the Pointes united within one county commission district.

While Commissioner Cavanagh pursued his representation of the Pointes without a lot of media attention, Pointers recognized what he did for our community. Even though he is a Democrat, our predominantly Republican community voted for him in his three campaigns for county commissioner.

And just recently, in his campaign for the county clerk office, Grosse Pointe residents voted for Dave Cavanagh by a two-to-one margin over the combined votes cast for the entire field of Democratic candidates running for that office. Other communities recognized his accomplishments as well. He took well over 75 percent of the cities and townships in Wayne County in the county clerk election.

The Pointes voted for someone in Dave Cavanagh they knew would look out for their interests in county government affairs. I know I speak for many of my neighbors throughout the Pointes in saying, "Thank you for your dedication to the Pointes, Dave Cavanagh. The Pointes got a fair shake from county government under your leadership as our representative on the Wayne County commission. We wish you only the best in what surely will be an outstanding career in the years to come."

Cat owners needn't declaw

The Michigan Humane Society veterinary staff is making a new product called Soft Paws available to cat owners. The protective caps are designed to cover the cat's individual claws to prevent unwanted damage to furniture, carpet, woodwork and other areas where cats like to scratch.

Soft Paws is an alternative for cat owners who want to have their pets' claws permanently removed. The protective caps are applied by the pet owner using a special adhesive. The caps will stay on several weeks and are not harmful to the pet.

The Soft Paws kit comes in four sizes: kitten, small, medium and large. The kit contains three applications and costs $12.

Coming clean

The seniors at Grosse Pointe North have been washing cars to raise money. The next car wash will be on Saturday, Aug. 22, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at Standard Federal Bank on Mack at Cook Road.

3 named to building authority

Grosse Pointe Woods' recently formed building authority has received its first set of commissioners.

On Monday, the Woods city council appointed Ed Barbieri Jr., Tony Miserendino, and Cliff Maison to the commission.

Barbieri was appointed to a two-year term and will represent the business community.

Miserendino's term is for three years and he will represent Grosse Pointe Woods residents.

Maison's term is for four years and he will represent the city administration.

After the initial terms expire, commissioners will serve three-year terms, said Phillip H. Belcher, Woods acting city administrator.

The three appointees were recommended to the council by the Grosse Pointe Woods Mayor's Mack Avenue Business Study Committee.

The building authority was created by the council on July 13.

The authority is a city-owned corporation and has the power to acquire, furnish, equip, own, improve, enlarge, operate and maintain buildings, parking lots/structures and other property for public use in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Also last Monday, the council adopted an amendment to the building authority's articles of incorporation, stating that the council can remove members of the commission at any time and for any reason.

Patriotic Detroiters push to light state Capitol dome

By Debra Pascoe
Staff Writer

Native Detroiters Andrew Anthos just wants to be patriotic. So why is he being shunned by state lawmakers and bureaucrats?

For seven years, Anthos has been pushing to have the state Capitol dome lit in soft red, white and blue lights on special holidays to honor soldiers who have fought for their country.

Anthos got the idea of changing the colors in the lights that illuminate the 144-foot-diameter, 40-foot high dome during a visit to the state Capitol in 1985.

"While I was looking up at the state Capitol, I thought how beautiful it would be to see the dome lit in soft lights in the colors of our flag. And what a tribute it would be to all the people who gave unselfishly to their country," Anthos said.

He's already collected signatures from more than 25,000 people representing 48 states, 68 Michigan counties and 224 municipalities. But not one state or local elected official will help him get the proposal before the state Legislature.

He said although former Gov. James Blanchard signed a poster promoting the idea, the former governor later said his signature could not be construed as an endorsement. Gov. John Engler has also ignored his pleas and turned Anthos away when he approached him on the streets of Lansing.

Sen. John Kelly, D-Grosse Pointe Woods, laughed when asked if he were aware of Anthos' plan.

"He doesn't even understand the idea of the lights. They are there to emphasize the architecture, not to send any other messages," he said.

Kelly also questioned Anthos' motivation.

"I don't know if it honors the soldiers; it may honor the red and blue lens makers," Kelly said.

Anthos said he can't understand why legislators are so opposed to his plan, especially after he shows them how much support he has from their constituents.

"If I thought it would be expensive, offensive or controversial, I wouldn't have done this," he said. "It's something I want to do for the people. It's not for me; it's for you."

Anthos said he's tried to determine how much it would cost to purchase colored lights or filters to put over the existing lights on the dome, but the state will not release the information. Nor will state employees give him the dimensions of the existing lights so he can get his own answers.

Dops, wrong one

The wife of a Grosse Pointe Park auxiliary public safety officer was parked on Mack on the Detroit side of the street when two men approached the car and pointed a gun at her.

Before they could say anything she sped away and drove to the Grosse Pointe Park police station. The two men were arrested in the 3400 block of Buckingham after a search of the area by Detroit and Park police.

Andrew Anthos displays one of the signs he shows to passing motorists promoting his plan to light the state Capitol dome.

But because the Capitol dome is lit every night anyway, purchasing the filters couldn't be that costly, Anthos said.

"If you can light up a Christmas tree, you can light up the dome," he said.

Anthos said he's been offered money to help his crusade, but has refused it.

Rather than accept donations, he encourages supporters to call or write their state representatives and let them know they favor the plan.

"This is something that I want done by the human spirit, not with money that came in the coffers," Anthos said.

He believes what he needs to make his campaign a success is someone with influence to speak on his behalf, someone to whom the state Legislature will listen.

But until then, he'll continue to walk the streets and roads of Michigan with his banner inviting drivers to honk if they support his plan.

WE ARE THE BOTTOM LINE

Owner satisfaction is up front in 'back end' of dealership

It's just 8 o'clock on a summer Friday morning, but Lochmoor Chrysler-Plymouth on Mack Avenue looks and feels like it's been up and running for hours.

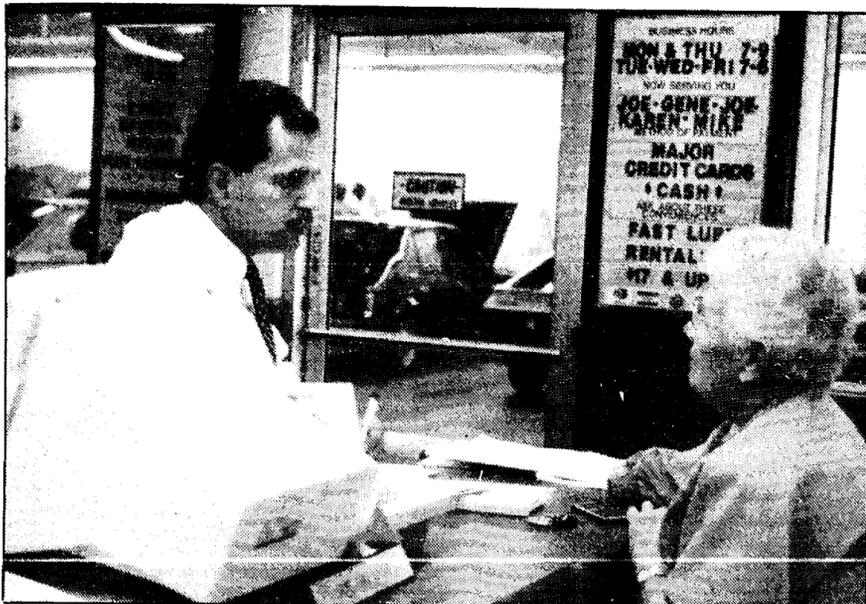

Several people occupy chairs along the wall in the new-car showroom. They are service department customers who've decided to wait for their vehicles. A few yards away on the write-up lane, customer service advisers continue to process a light but steady stream of cars and trucks coming in for maintenance and repairs — mostly New Yorkers and mini-vans this particular morning.

In the thick of it is a tanned gentleman in an incredibly white shirt, open at the collar. He's talking with customers, conferring with the advisers and checking with technicians.

He's the guy many would least expect to find in what is known as the "back end" of the business because he's the dealer. Traditionally a dealer's orientation and focus is new-car sales. And it's Friday, and dealers have been known to invest a fair amount of time on the fairways.

Gus Russo knows and appreciates the back end. "I try to spend about an hour here every morning," says the dealer. "I want to know when customers are not completely satisfied and this is how I can find out." Russo compares the dealership experience to that in a restaurant. Often we tell the wait staff everything is all right, he says, but we don't really think so and never return. And management never knows why.

For Russo, it's also a chance to work with his advisers and technicians. He directs a visitor to Pat Ward, a former vocational education teacher, now driveability specialist in Lochmoor's service department. Ward, who drives down from Joe Orlando, service adviser at Roseville Chrysler-Plymouth, listens carefully to a customer before putting repair order information into his computer.

Port Huron every day, appears very comfortable with all the electronics in the service area. Expensive black-cased diagnostic equipment coupled with personal computers allow technicians to trouble-shoot problems and to access the most recent service bulletins.

They make Russo nervous only because major new-model changes, like Chrysler's 1993 LH sedans, mean more expensive electronic gear for diagnoses and repairs.

Through a series of quick key punches, Ward brings a bulletin up on his p.c. screen. It gives him a step-by-step description of a specific repair. Technicians at this dealership are compensated according to a flat-rate schedule. That is, a set amount of time at a certain cost is established for each repair or maintenance procedure.

If Ward does his task in less than the established time, he can move right on to the next repair and earn more money than a technician who needs the full time allowance.

If, however, he doesn't fix it right the first time, he does the second fix for nothing, he says.

Ward admits he's constantly trying to do things faster and better, and, so saying, turns to begin work on a 3.0-liter engine with a hesitation problem.

"We've been averaging about 150 repair orders a day here," says Lochmoor's service manager, David Growt. "On a recent Monday, though, we were up to 170 ROs."

Similar to a hospital admitting area, complaints and problems are recorded and vehicles are assigned to various technicians. Customer service advisers like Donna Buscemi work individually with owners. It's a long workday that begins at 7 a.m. and lasts until things wind down around 6 p.m. On Mondays the service area is open until 9 p.m. and advisers generally stay right through.

At Lochmoor, service advisers are on their feet much of the time. They share computer terminals where they stand to input customer information. When not actually waiting on people, they are checking with technicians to see how repairs are progressing or they are phoning customers who have gone on to work or back home to update them on repair progress and charges.

Buscemi has been an adviser for five of her six years at the dealership. First working on the telephone switchboard and then in the warranty office, she moved out into the service lanes to discover first-hand how to do write-ups. "I've gone to classes, but they dealt mostly with customer relations," she says, stopping to load paper into the printer that produces hard copies of each repair order.

"Otherwise, I've watched the technicians, and have learned to ask lots of questions when an owner is describing a problem," Buscemi says. "I guess the thing that upsets me most is when a customer comes back to have the same problem repaired a second time. I feel responsible."

Ricky Bell, were he so inclined, could send Buscemi on a big guilt trip. The Detroit is back today to have his LeBaron sedan checked for a recurring problem.

"I've been here four times for various repairs since I bought the car from the used-car lot," Bell says cheerfully. He's waiting this morning, instead of coming back later in the day. He arrived at 7 a.m.

At Lochmoor, customers line up in their vehicles outside the service area, pulling into the garage as advisers are available. Service write-ups at Roseville Chrysler-Plymouth are done in a room apart from the actual service garage. Owners park their vehicles outside and walk in to talk with staff. Information is fed into computers which generate actual repair orders and also retain a service history of each vehicle at the dealership.

At Village Ford in Dearborn, customers leave their cars, enter a building behind the dealership showroom and sit with service advisers in their individual work cubicles — a far cry from Lochmoor's stand-up operation but one that also cost a princely sum to design and build, according to dealer Jim Seavitt.

The bottom line in all cases is customer satisfaction. The automakers are tough on dealers whose service department numbers indicate too many returns for the same problems. Factory customer satisfaction surveys highlight the information and tend to beat up on service managers and dealers when things aren't fixed right the first time.

Even though Ricky Bell doesn't seem to mind bringing his LeBaron back for noise or performance problems, he's skewing the numbers.

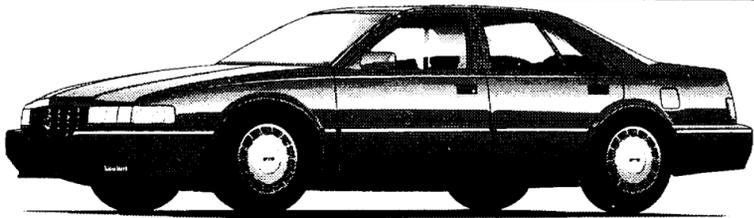

As he waits, service adviser Buscemi calls another customer to inform him that the rather substantial estimate she'd given him earlier was too low. It will run another $95, she reports, for an expansion valve plus labor. The owner gives his approval over the phone. "It will be ready for you this evening," she tells him, and, after hanging up, says breaking the news to him "wasn't as bad as I thought."

Toyota offers 3 toys for the big boys and girls

4Runner

A toy truck

Toyota's compact sport utility 4Runner SR5 is available with either a 116-HP 2.4-liter four or the 150-HP 3.0-liter V-6. The base model with smaller engine comes only as a 2-wheel-drive in the 2-door model. The more powerful version can be ordered as a 2-door or 4-door model, with 2WD or 4WD.

A 5-speed manual transmission is standard; a 4-speed electronically-controlled automatic transmission with fuel-economy/power modes is optional. A 4WDemand shift-on-the-move system allows the driver to shift into 4WD at speeds up to 50 mph.

Sleek and sexy, the award-winning 4Runner requires a climb-and-scrunch boarding move for most adults. With a floor fairly high off the ground, its overall height encourages keeping one's head down. The little sport utility is peppy, nimble and maneuverable, has enough blind spots to keep the driver guessing, even with all mirrors and craning neck in full use.

4Runner has 78.3 cubic feet of cargo capacity with the rear seat backs down, and properly equipped can tow up to 3,500 pounds. The best selling imported sport utility, 4Runner was the first truck of its kind to break the 100-problems-per-100-vehicles barrier in the J.D. Power and Associates 1991 Initial Quality Study.

Prices begin at about $19,000 and move up to about $23,000.

... and a toy wagon

The new Camry wagon out of Georgetown, Ky., is positively alarming. We discovered this fact every time we tried to use the spacious 4-door carryall outfitted with Toyota's electronic security system. Make the wrong move and the horn begins blaring and the headlights flash. Read the manual and discover there's more written about system malfunctions due to owner panic than about its proper and orderly use.

Leave a door open too long and the horn starts honking. Let your guest in first and pay the price of humiliation. Take it to the store and pray you can get the groceries in the back during the programmed time allowance lest the system chastise you in front of the other shoppers. In any event, never, never set down the battery-operated remote control key fob. Pressing the white button on it relieves noise, lights and anxiety.

Otherwise, we find no fault in this little well-planned beauty. There's plenty of head and leg-room inside for driver and passengers. A 2.2-liter 140-horsepower four with 4-speed automatic is the base powerplant. A 3.0-liter 185-horsepower V-6 with automatic is available on LE models. A third seat is optional. Interior volume with second and third seats folded flat is 140.8 cubic feet.

A driver-side airbag is standard on all Camry wagons; ABS brakes are available on all models. Toyota has taken special measures to eliminate the noise that often accompanies the practical station wagon design. Hollow structural areas along the roof edge are filled with foam rubber to help reduce wind noise. The chassis and body utilize steel-and-resin sheets and asphalt-sandwich panels for noise absorption.

Toyota Camry wagons start at about $17,000 and go up to about $22,000 for the LE with a V-6 engine and ABS brakes. Fortunately, the security system is an option — one we would strongly suggest avoiding.

Previa

Another toy truck

Egg-shaped outside, with a rounded, aeronautical instrument panel inside, the Toyota Previa minivan provides comfortable if unusual transportation for up to seven people. Available in 2-wheel and all-wheel drive versions, the '92 Previa was the first minivan to meet all federal standards for passenger car safety, Toyota says. It has a driver's side air bag; ABS brakes are available on all models. Side-door intrusion beams protect driver and front passenger doors as well as sliding side door.

A 2.4-liter twin-cam four cranks out 138 horsepower, enough to get you and your passengers and parcels wherever you need to go. Toyota says its mid-engine design gives Previa a flat floor and walk-through area from the front seats to the rear. Designed at Galt, Toyota's Newport Beach, Calif., styling studio and built in Japan, the minivan features an optional rear bench seat that splits in the middle and folds up against the sides of the vehicle, like big brother Land Cruiser's.

A dual air conditioning system, with separate front and rear units, is available on base models and standard on LE. The van uses generous use of glass, and even though it's already tinted to filter rays, anyone living in a sunny climate would be well-advised to order the dual air-conditioning system.

Though we felt a great sense of relief visibility-wise moving from the 4Runner into this multi-purpose vehicle, we were never quite sure what was directly behind us. At the driver's end, the stubby nose is so short you're never as close to a wall, door or another vehicle as you think you are, which in most cases is probably good. Expect to pay up to $27,000 for an LE model with All-Trac all-wheel drive.

Rutherford at Tanglewood

John A. Rutherford recently participated in the Boston University Tanglewood Institute, a program of musical study and performance this summer at the Tanglewood Music Center in Lenox.

Rutherford, who participated in the Young Artists Instrumental Program, has studied trombone for seven years.

A junior at the University of Detroit Jesuit High School, he is the son of Charles and Patricia Rutherford of Grosse Pointe Park.

Established in 1965 by the Boston University School for the Arts in conjunction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Boston University Tanglewood Institute has become known throughout the country for musical quality, enthusiasm and commitment. The Institute provides young musicians the opportunity to learn from members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, faculty members of the Boston University School of Music and other professional musicians.

John A. Rutherford

ULS will add preschool unit

Redstone Architects is nearing completion of plans for a new preschool addition to the University Liggett School campus on Cook Road in Grosse Pointe Woods. The new addition will replace a smaller, separate building that currently serves just the preschoolers.

The new addition to University Liggett will feature the most efficient layout and use of existing land, parking and vehicular circulation. The addition will total approximately 11,000 square feet of new construction, with some remodeling of existing space. It will feature three pre-kindergarten and one kindergarten classrooms, a 2,000 square foot gross motor skills room, two offices, a kitchen dining area and storage space.

The addition is designed to match the general character of the existing building in both materials and design and will incorporate the surrounding existing landscaping and large trees.

The addition will have a separate entrance featuring a glass canopy and brick archway that is reminiscent of the University Liggett School logo. Upon completion, the new preschool addition will allow for an expanded preschool program and will solve operational and energy inefficiencies.

The addition will be the fifth project Redstone Architects will have completed for University Liggett School in the last 30 years. The projects have included the renovation of the auditorium, offices and addition of a new main entrance, the Creative and Performing Arts Center wing addition and the science wing addition and the Booth Science Room renovation.

North class picture schedule

Students unable to attend their scheduled registration time or the make-up session should report to the auditorium at 8 a.m. on the first day of school, Wednesday, Sept. 9.

New students who have not yet registered may do so by calling Thomas Teetaert's office at 343-2205 for an appointment.

Math, science program links North students to 7 schools

For four weeks in July seventh grade students from Grosse Pointe and Detroit participated in the first summer program of the Wayne County Math/Science Network at Grosse Pointe North High School.

The program, financed by a state grant, is aimed at challenging students who have shown ability and/or interest in math, science or technology.

Network participants worked in teams, focusing on activities integrating math and science concepts, cooperative learning (students teaching students) and telecommunications.

Grosse Pointe North was linked by a Bulletin Board on a Macintosh computer, fax and speaker phone to River Rouge Sabbath Magnet School, Northville Meads Middle School, Plymouth-Canton High School, Detroit Beaubien Middle School, University of Detroit High School, Crestwood High School and Woodhaven High School.

Of 128 students who were accepted, 124 completed the program. Reaction by parents and students has been positive.

A Saturday morning program - one a month from October to May - has been planned but it is dependent on funding.

The original intent of the grant provided for the addition of "new" seventh graders each summer session as well as inviting back the previous year's participants. The goal would be to have all 34 Wayne County school districts with at least one site technologically linked with the telecommunications Network.

The potential for students, teachers and the community sharing ideas, curriculum, activities and data is great and is a step in the direction of 21st century communication in education and in the world of work. For more information about the program, call Dr. Kathleen Jacobson, Network director, 467-1394.

New science camp at War Memorial

The War Memorial will offer a second Living Science Camp, Marine Biology Camp, for kids 5 to 12 offered Aug. 24-28. The camp will meet Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Instructors are from the Living Science Foundation.

Children will explore ocean life using the new mobile marine study lab. They'll handle a sea anemone and other sea creatures while learning where they come from and how they live together.

Campers also explore the history of ocean life, learn about ocean habitats and geography, and how the sea affects the weather.

The day camp experience is filled with a mix of indoor and outdoor activity. Arranged by age, each group of 8 to 10 students will work with a fully qualified and professionally trained science interpreter. Older students (13 to 16) are encouraged to serve as volunteer assistants.

The camp is $185 a person. Campers bring their own lunch. Beverages and snacks will be provided. There is a 10 percent discount to a second sibling in family for the same camp. Call 881-7511.

Testing for new 9th, 10th graders

Required achievement testing will be done at Grosse Pointe South High School on Friday, Sept. 4, for all new ninth and tenth grade students and for all ninth and tenth graders who have missed one or more tests previously.

New ninth graders will be tested from 8 to 11:35 a.m. with two breaks in between in rooms 164-166.

New tenth graders will be tested from 8 to 10:50 a.m. in rooms 184-186.

All testing rooms are air-conditioned for the students' comfort.

The tests are being given at this time so that classes will not be interrupted for testing during the school year.

It is important that all new students and those who have missed one or more required tests take them on Sept. 4, since no make-up date is scheduled, according to South administrators.

The results of these tests are used by school counselors for educational planning and course placement purposes.

'ULS taught me how to write ... my college papers earn high marks.'

Abby McIntyre
Sophomore,
University of Colorado

We are certain that the writing curriculum at University Liggett School provides a strong foundation for success in college.

Abby McIntyre is a sophomore at the University of Colorado. Looking back at her high school experience, Abby says, "ULS certainly taught me how to write. All my college papers earn high marks and my overall grade point average is even higher than my GPA at ULS." Abby also credits ULS with teaching her how to think for herself and for giving her the self-discipline necessary to study effectively in college. This is especially important for Abby, since her college swimming practices run two hours each weekday from September through February.

ULS seeks students who, like Abby McIntyre, want to prepare thoroughly for a complete college experience. Limited space is available in the upper school at ULS for September admission. Call the admissions office now at 884-4444 to request an application or to schedule a test before school begins this fall.

Let ULS show you how much we can do for your college-bound student.

Sibling abuse serious problem in families, U-M study finds

Parents wince when they see their children screaming and smacking each other, but it shrugs it off, assuming it is porous and harmless. University of Michigan researcher, however, has found that nearly 20 percent of the subjects in a sample of 1,685 U-tudents had fought with brothers or sisters regularly, often violently. In a second study of 1,183 U-students, the researcher also found that 8.1 percent felt they had been physically abused by siblings. Findings from both studies indicate that the emotional consequences are long-lasting and reverberate well into adulthood.

The researcher, Sandra Graham-Bermann, assistant professor of psychology, also reported that when the fighting was "even," there seemed to be fewer long-term hard feelings or emotional consequences. But when there was lopsided bullying, both the givers and takers suffered emotional problems later as a result. Graham-Bermann presented her findings from the two studies Aug. 14 at the American Psychological Association meeting in Washington, D.C. In the first study, she asked the students to rank, on a scale of one to five, the sibling conflict they experienced at home in comparison with other families they knew. She also asked them to report whether they had been the victims or perpetrators, or if responsibility for the fighting was shared with the sibling. "We found that 71.9 percent felt they did not fight with their brothers or sisters any more than kids in other families did," she said. "However, 7.8 percent said they initiated serious conflict and 5.7 percent said they were victims of serious conflict. Another 6.7 percent were caught up in reciprocal conflict, where sometimes they started the fights and other times they were the victims."

In both studies, Graham-Bermann found that serious abuse was most likely to occur between older brothers and younger sisters. Women generally were the targets of abuse more often than men, and were more likely to feel that the conflict had been intense and painful. Males who "picked on" brothers or sisters were more aggressive and inflicted more physical violence than women who initiated fights, she said. Birth order, not unexpectedly, was a factor. Older siblings were more likely to harass and younger ones were more likely to be victims. Parents also were a factor. "The students who were caught up in sibling violence were significantly more likely to report that their parents fought violently with each other than were students who did not have significant sibling conflicts," Graham-Bermann said. Although nearly all the students noted that they and their siblings grew out of their physically violent behavior as they moved into their teens, the perpetrators remained hostile to their victims. "They simply shifted to assertive verbal exchanges," Graham-Bermann said, "which were more socially acceptable." The perpetrators also said they had shifted to using more positive problem-solving tactics as they grew older. "But the victims did not see it that way," Graham-Bermann added. "They felt that neither they nor their attacking siblings had developed more positive problem-solving abilities as they got older."

Men seemed to be less affected over the long run, although those who had been the victims of physical abuse by siblings were more depressed and anxious, and had lower self-esteem as young adults. Those who had been verbally and emotionally abusive to siblings also had somewhat lower self-esteem. There was one unexpected finding in the study. "The students who had been caught up in a reciprocal conflict that involved regular physical violence didn't seem to suffer much emotionally. Perhaps there is less guilt when the responsibility is shared," Graham-Bermann said.

"We also discovered that the perpetrators who said that their siblings had responded with severe violence when they had been picked on didn't suffer much emotional damage. They were less depressed and anxious and had greater self-esteem than the perpetrators whose victims had not fought back." Sibling abuse is a vastly underrated problem in American families, Graham-Bermann concluded. "We must focus on this behavior and recognize that the consequences linger into adulthood. Parents should intervene in these abusive relationships, and seek help if they cannot do it themselves."

Academy applications accepted

Congressman Dennis Hertel is now accepting applications for nomination to the U.S. military academies. Although Hertel is not seeking re-election, he is still afforded the opportunity as a current member of Congress to nominate outstanding young people to the Air Force Academy, the Naval Academy, the United States Coast Guard Academy, West Point and the Merchant Marine Academy. Any young man or woman between 17 and 22 who wants to be considered for a nomination to one of the academies for class entering in the summer of 1993 should submit a letter of request to Congressman Hertel at 28221 Mound Road, Warren, Mich. 48092.

All applicants must be U.S. citizens who reside within one of the following communities that comprise Hertel's district: Detroit (east side), Harper Woods, Eastpointe, Hamtramck, Hazel Park, Warren (portion), Sterling Heights, Utica, Center Line, Troy (portion), Grosse Pointe Farms, Grosse Pointe Woods, Grosse Pointe Shores, and Madison Heights (portion). Inquiries should be made to Congressman Hertel's Warren office at 574-9420. Nomination to one of the academies is based on a candidate's scholastic record, leadership ability and community involvement as well as a personal interview with the Academy nomination committee.

Edison continues 'Eyes and Ears'

With a new school year set to begin, students and their families again can count on Detroit Edison vehicles and crews for safe havens through the Eyes and Ears program. Nearly 600 Detroit Edison field employees in radio-equipped vehicles will watch for situations that pose possible dangers to children walking to and from school, said Robert J. Buckler, vice president, Divisions.

The Eyes and Ears program was launched by Detroit Edison and other local utilities in 1984 in response to a rash of assaults on students.

"The start of the school year is a good time to remind people that the Eyes and Ears program can provide help in any number of emergency situations," Buckler said.

All vehicles involved in the program are marked with the Eyes and Ears logo — an eye and ear accompanied by the program's name. The logo is intended to remind the public — especially students — that employees operating the vehicles are trained to ask for help from public safety authorities in the event of crimes, fires, accidents and other emergency situations.

Women generally were the targets of abuse more often than men, and were more likely to feel that the conflict had been intense and painful. Males who "picked on" brothers or sisters were more aggressive and inflicted more physical violence than women who initiated fights, she said. Birth order, not unexpectedly, was a factor. Older siblings were more likely to harass and younger ones were more likely to be victims. Parents also were a factor. "The students who were caught up in sibling violence were significantly more likely to report that their parents fought violently with each other than were students who did not have significant sibling conflicts," Graham-Bermann said. Although nearly all the students noted that they and their siblings grew out of their physically violent behavior as they moved into their teens, the perpetrators remained hostile to their victims. "They simply shifted to assertive verbal exchanges," Graham-Bermann said, "which were more socially acceptable." The perpetrators also said they had shifted to using more positive problem-solving tactics as they grew older. "But the victims did not see it that way," Graham-Bermann added. "They felt that neither they nor their attacking siblings had developed more positive problem-solving abilities as they got older."

South class pictures rescheduled

Undergraduate student photos will be taken at Grosse Pointe South from Tuesday through Thursday, Sept. 1-3, Principal John B. Artis said.

All photos will be taken during the regular registration period with juniors on Tuesday, Sept. 1; sophomores on Wednesday, Sept. 2; and freshmen on Thursday, Sept. 3. Senior graduation pictures are not taken during registration.

A flyer from Jostens School Pictures, which was included in the registration packet mailed last week, incorrectly listed Aug. 28 as Picture Day at South.

"We are using this means to notify parents that no pictures will be taken on Aug. 28," Artis said. "We hope the error will not inconvenience anyone."

Woods boy accosted

An 11-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods boy was walking his dog at 7:40 p.m. on Aug. 11 when a man in a van waved the boy toward the vehicle.

The boy got scared and ran away. The man is described as in his 40s with a receding hairline.

Eight ball, corner pocket

Grosse Pointe Woods police were called to a home on Aug. 14 because a resident was reportedly in trouble.

When they arrived they found that a 6-year-old boy had stuck his arm down the pocket of the family pool table and couldn't get it out.

After removing rubber bumpers from three sides, the police officers lifted the top and the child was able to remove his arm.

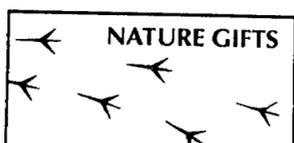

He suffered only a pinch to his finger.

Pointe doctor goes to great lengths to correct leg deformities

By Jerome Allotta
Special Writer

Dr. Deborah Bell is one of only 20 pediatric orthopedic surgeons in North America using the Ilizarov technique on children with limb abnormalities.

The surgical procedure is performed on patients, mostly children, who have one leg shorter than the other because of bone disease, congenital defects, or injury. The surgery is also used for correcting angular deformities such as twisted or crooked legs.

Since joining the staff of Children's Hospital of Michigan in 1991, Bell has performed 25 bone lengthening and deformity correction procedures. Bell recently received the prestigious Pioneer Award from the Pediatric Orthopedic Society of North America for investigative research on the effects of limb lengthening on articular cartilage. The Pioneer Award is presented annually for outstanding clinical and research contributions in pediatric orthopedics.

Bell, a Farms resident, is recognized internationally as an expert on limb lengthening and deformity correction. The procedure, which was first performed in North America in 1952, involves fracturing the bone of the abnormal limb and then attaching an external metal brace that gradually lengthens the bone and the limb. It is most commonly applied to the tibia (lower leg) or femur (upper leg). The space between the severed ends is increased by no more than a millimeter each day. New bone fills in the gap and after several weeks, depending on length deficiency, the defective leg will have increased to the length of the normal leg.

The average increase in length is around 2 to 3 inches, but a maximum of 10 is possible.

But an operation involving such extreme lengthening, as in dwarfs, may produce an abnormal-looking physique — long legs and a small abdomen. The surgery is usually performed on children, typically between the ages of 12 and 16, and on young adults, but it has been successful with older adults as well.

"It's easier for younger people to grow bone than older people, and the bone heals quicker with younger people than with older people," said Bell, who is associate chief of orthopedic surgery at Children's Hospital.

To increase the length of an abnormal leg, wires, about 10, are inserted through the limb, piercing the bone and soft tissues, and are attached to coils which encircle the leg and hold the bones apart. Hex bolts on the brace are turned four times daily which pulls the bones in opposite directions — a quarter millimeter for each quarter turn.

The apparatus is left on until the desired length is achieved and the gap between the bones is healed. A 2-inch lengthening adjustment takes about five months to heal, said Bell, who encourages walking on the leg within days of the operation. In order to form strong bone and accelerate the healing process, the patient should use the limb as much as possible. When the leg bears weight, bone growth is stimulated and at the same time, nerves, muscles and blood vessels, which are becoming longer, are prevented from deteriorating.

Patients usually remain on crutches until the apparatus is ready to be removed.

Bell said that patients can use a pool or shower with moderate inconvenience.

The average cost for the Ilizarov surgery and a 7 to 10-day hospital admission is $30,000.

Health insurance companies usually cover most of the bill. When this kind of surgery is undertaken for short adults or dwarfs, however, it is considered cosmetic and insurance companies will not pay.

The biggest controversy surrounding the technique is the uncertainty of how far a bone can be lengthened without causing permanent muscle injury or nerve damage. Bell studied the Ilizarov technique at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto where for five years she was a member of the orthopedic division and a faculty member at the University of Toronto.

The technique was developed by Dr. G. A. Ilizarov in Russia in 1952, and since that time has been used extensively there. European countries became the first to widely employ the technique, and in 1987 Bell assisted in the first bone lengthening operation of this kind in North America.

She is a graduate of Smith College in Massachusetts and the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine. Her orthopedic residency was completed at Harvard with subsequent fellowship training in trauma at Sunnybrook Health Science Centre.

Born in Chicago, Bell is engaged and has lived in the Pointes for the last year.

The Ilizarov brace allows surgeons to add inches to a patient's leg, particularly to children who have one leg shorter than the other.

to he enrolled at the University of Illinois in 1967 to work toward a master's degree in journalism. He accomplished that and also met his future wife, Rita Meyer of Louisville, Ky., in a class at the university.

Goss returned to accounting with Price Waterhouse, however, after "determining that journalism was a tough way to make a living."

The impetus to study law came, he said, when he and his wife were vacationing in Quebec. They were on a tour and Goss said he kept questioning the guide about the facts he was reciting to the tourists, then the guide, a law student, asked Goss if he were a lawyer.

That was his calling, Goss decided, and with the support of his wife, he enrolled in law school at Georgetown University. He earned his juris doctorate in 1974 and went to work for Miller Canfield Paddock and Stone.

The Goss family, then numbering three with newborn daughter Candace, moved to Grosse Pointe Park. Daughter Courtney was born the following year.

"There wasn't any money in law school and there wasn't money after law school," Goss said. "It was tight."

"A friend came to visit and brought a half dozen bottles of wine and we had a grand old time. I didn't know wine could be that good."

That began his quest to learn about wines. When the Detroit

Specializing in product liability, Goss shows a model of a lawn mower that was used in a recent court case.

International Wine Auction, a benefit for the Center for Creative Studies, was started in 1982, Goss was the first to volunteer. He co-chaired the auction in 1984, which raised $120,000 for the center. Goss has remained involved over the years with the annual event.

He has an extensive wine cellar in his basement — which he raids on occasion to give to various organizations for fundraising — filled with American, French, German and some Spanish wines.

Besides his volunteer work for the Center for Creative Studies, Goss is active with the Old Newsboys Goodfellows. His team of five members, in friendly competition with other teams, raised the most money last year. "It was the first year the team was formed and in light of that accomplishment, I suggested there should be an award for the top team," he said, laughing.

Goss also serves on the board of the Michigan chapter of the Leukemia Society of America as chairman of development. He is on the board of trustees for Adrian College, which has a large number of first-generation students.

"Although you don't go into charitable work looking for a rewarding experience, the people you meet are so enriching," he said. "My closest friends are the people I met through these volunteer activities."

After Goss got out of law school, he worked for eight years for Miller Canfield Paddock and Stone. He left to start his own practice, and five years ago, joined the firm of Dean and Fulkerson where he is a corporate trial attorney specializing in product liability.

His work takes him to North Carolina, Oklahoma, Seattle and Florida about three times a month.

"I enjoy what I do so much I hope my health and the challenge I enjoy from the profession will allow me to die in the saddle," Goss said.

He believes in doing things that involve the family, particularly trips which he plans with zest. The family traveled to London one year, Paris the next and last year went to Vienna for the holidays, where they danced at the emperor's ball, a very hot ticket, on New Year's Eve.

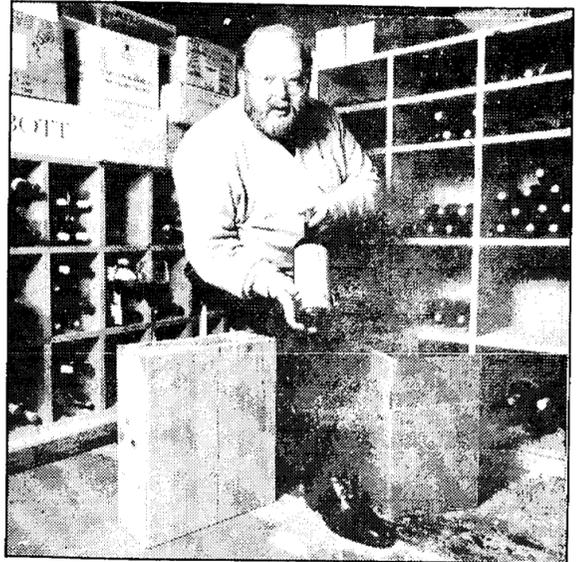

He began taking his daughters to University of Michigan basketball games when they were 3. He reports that they especially enjoyed the pop, popcorn and cheerleaders.

He takes pride in his family's achievements. His wife, who is involved with volunteer work, joined the workforce as a paralegal four years ago.

Daughter Candace, 18, graduated from Grosse Pointe South in June with a district service award for her contributions to the school. She was one of four students who received the award. She also scored fifth in the region in French studies. She'll attend the University of Michigan this fall.

Courtney, 17, returned last month from a visit to Italy with an Italian student who is staying with the Goss family for five weeks.

Besides collecting wine and stamps, he and his wife enjoy entertaining. "My wife is a marvelous gourmet cook and in the interest of continued marriage, I stay out of the kitchen," he said. "I plan the wine and get the flowers."

Balance your checkbook while driving to work

By Tracy Wilson
Special Writer

They're traveling longer distances and spending a lot of time and money while battling congestion on the roads.

That's why more and more commuters are rediscovering the joys of carpooling.

"You can balance your checkbook while you're driving," said Jan Becker, a coordinator of the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) Rideshare program. "There's a savings, you have someone to talk to and there's a reduction in stress too."

Carpooling with just one other person cuts commuting expenses in half.

Rideshare began as a way to reduce pollution and road wear.

People are matched with other commuters from their areas. And if seven or more people are driving to a given area, they can be matched up for a van pool, in which the state leases the vehicle to the group.

More than 2,000 people now participate in the Rideshare program.

If a commuter needs to get from Dearborn to Pontiac, Rideshare can use a computer or dig in a file for a list of all the people who travel that route.

People then start calling each other.

Surprisingly, even with the recent recession and an increased emphasis on the environment, the 1990 census revealed that carpooling has been in a decline.

"It's a mobile society," said Cathy Dunn, a Flint-based Rideshare coordinator. "It's easy for everyone to own a car, and fuel prices are low." But a jump in the gas tax and the dictates of the 1990 Federal Clean Air Act amendment could change this drastically. It may force employers to reduce the number of cars coming into their facilities.

"Government and private industry need to reduce road trips," said Dunn. "We've become too much of a one-person-vehicle society in the past 10 years. Now I think we're going to see more of a push for ride-sharing."

Rideshare started in 1977, with the formation of the State Employees Van Pool Program (SEVP). In 1983, SEVP merged with the MichiVan program, making the program accessible to all Michigan residents, not just state employees. Rideshare is self-supporting, except for marketing and administrative costs. It is trying to increase vanpooling in areas where there is no public transportation.

More than 3,300 car pools have been started through Rideshare in the last seven years.

Since the program was inaugurated in 1983, it has saved 2.4 million vehicle trips statewide; 2.1 million gallons of gas; and kept 2,479 tons of pollutants out of the atmosphere.

Rideshare offers callers a "matchlist" and tips for making the most of a carpool — avoiding side trips, making payment schedules for gas money and devising rules and arrangements for emergencies and days off.

Rideshare has a $262,500 budget, divided among nine local offices. Of the original 13 offices, four have been cut for lack of funding.

"Before, we had funding from the oil interest overcharge," Becker said. "The federal government had specified that that money be sent to beneficial projects a few years ago. The last allotment was in 1988."

"We do what we can to find them a ride. We're not running a bus company, we're flexible. The callers make up their own rules."

For more information about Rideshare, call (313) 963-RIDE.

Fall school fashions are neater, less expensive

By Debra Pascoe
Staff Writer

Slovenly dressing is out for back-to-schoolers, but that may not be much of a consolation to parents after they learn well-tailored and ironed (gasp!) clothing is in.

But it's still trendy to leave shoelaces loose or untied.

Fred Marx, marketing and public relations specialist for the firm of Marx, Lane and Co., said a renewed interest in personal hygiene is responsible for the trend toward neater clothing.

Hair blowing and shampooing, Marx said, are becoming "a national pastime" for youngsters.

This year students will be looking for clothing and school supplies bearing the name and/or characters from the popular television hit "Beverly Hills 90210."

Gone are the days when parents will see a bevy of school children standing in line for the bus swinging Mickey Mouse or Donald Duck lunch boxes, Marx said.

While the trend toward expensive footwear — specifically athletic shoes — continues, Marx said schoolchildren are less status conscious and into the "more relaxed kind of Gap feeling."

Ralph Lauren polo shirts are still "in," Marx said, but the Izod alligator is all washed up. Marx said the Izod is no longer "cachet" because the brand is readily available at less exclusive stores, like Marshalls and TJ Maxx.

Marx said that from a parent's perspective, back-to-school means shopping for outerwear, but kids want new clothing — especially in colors and styles that convey individuality and self-expression.

"Kids are still kids, but they're more aware," Marx said. "They look to their brothers and sisters for current trends, but they don't want hand-me-downs."

Students are still interested in comfortable sweats, but are rejecting fleecewear which, ac-ording to Marx, is now known as "grocery store active" — meaning, God forbid, mom's wearing them.

Youngsters are opting for the shiny, parachute-like synthetic materials, especially those bearing the Champion name.

While current trends indicate parents are spending more money to suit their children in style, they are more apt to "cross shop" — visit larger department stores like Hudson's or Jacobson's for specific name brands and turn to discount stores like TJ Maxx for the basics.

Marx said children's infatuation with non-contact sports like rollerblading also adds to the high cost of bringing up a junior.

Not only are rollerblades mandatory and expensive, all the "stuff" that goes with them — like helmets and knee pads — is also important.

But it's unknown how well those new Ralph Lauren's will hold up when knees meet cement.

Pianos to sell for a song

Wayne State University will hold its first piano liquidation sale from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 30, in the Schaver Music Building, Cass and Kirby. Those interested may arrange for a preview showing by appointment only.

Most of the more than 50 pianos are year-old institutional-grade instruments on loan from the Kawai Piano Co. to the university for students' use under a program developed by the music department.

Kawai sells the instruments to the general public after 12 months of use at prices substantially less than retail.

The instruments, in a variety of colors and finishes, range from uprights and studio pianos to baby grands and smaller grands, on up to a $35,000 7-foot 5-inch semi-concert grand.

Parking is available. For more information or to make an appointment for a preview showing, call the music department at 577-1795.

Free guide offered survivors of abuse

A free resource guide for adult survivors of childhood abuse and addictions is now available from The Independent Order of Foresters as part of the fraternal organization's commitment to preventing child abuse.

"Healing the Wounds of Childhood" describes what and who "survivors" of abuse are, programs and resources available across the country to help them, and provides tips on how to help a friend who is an adult survivor of childhood abuse.

The guide was written by Daniel A. Sexton, director of the Childhelp IOF Foresters Hotline. Sexton is himself a survivor of childhood abuse.

More than 2.5 million cases of child abuse are reported each year and experts estimate that thousands more go unreported. Many of these children grow up to become abusers themselves, unless the "wounds" of their childhood have been healed. Sexton's guide is a good first step.

Published by Childhelp USA, a national non-profit organization dedicated to the prevention and treatment of child abuse and neglect, "Healing the Wounds of Childhood" was printed as a public service by the IOF Foresters.

The IOF Foresters is one of the world's oldest and largest family fraternal benefit societies. In addition to the resource guide, IOF offers a series of free, effective parenting tips, and booklets on family stress. To order any of these materials, or for more information on IOF, call the IOF Foresters toll-free number: 1-800-922-4-IOF.

If you want just the facts, you want just the fax

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

In 1990 it was estimated that 3.5 million fax machines were in use in America daily. In 1991 that figure had climbed to more than five million.

By 1995 it's estimated there will be more than eight million fax machines in use — many in homes.

And to think that just a few years ago people asked "Do you have a fax machine?" Today, they ask "What's your fax number?" They just assume you have one in order to do business in today's high-tech economy.

Soaring fax use prompted Grosse Pointe Park resident Jonathan D. Ahlbrand to find a way to use those machines to help business people get up-to-the-minute information on everything from CD rates to congressional action to Standard & Poor's Blue List.

His company, World Data Delivery Systems, located in Harper Woods, is in the information brokerage business, Ahlbrand said.

"I was a securities salesman for a while and we faxed a lot of information back and forth and I thought it might be useful if there were a place where people could pick up the telephone and pull down information to any fax machine on a minute's notice," Ahlbrand said.

WDDS offers a variety of services all designed to get information immediately to anyone who wants it.

One service is called fax broadcasting, which provides simultaneous transmission of a fax to a specific list of people or businesses, sort of like a bulk mailing, Ahlbrand said.

It saves on printing and postage costs and the material is more timely. It also lets the sender know who didn't get the information due to an incorrect fax number.

WDDS is able to send 128 faxes at one time, approximately 7,000 an hour, 24 hours a day seven days a week, he said.

Ahlbrand said the company is doing a lot of business in connection with the upcoming presidential election. Updates on party maneuvers and campaign propaganda are faxed daily to newspapers and party supporters across the country. Election business currently makes up nearly 25 percent of the broadcast fax business.

Fax newsletters are gaining acceptance and WDDS also offers tips on how to produce them. Then there's fax-on-demand, a system where anyone who wants specific information can get it.

On line at WDDS are several data bases — such as the Standard & Poor's Blue List of municipal bonds, up-to-date quotes on the top 1,500 jumbo CD rates, mortgage rates and other financial and statistical information.

A person can call from any touch-tone telephone, request specific information and send it to any fax machine within 90 seconds.

Each fax transmission is sent from a computer file — not a sheet of paper put through a fax machine at WDDS — and that's why the information can be sent so quickly.

Because the document sent is not a fax of another document, it's cleaner and easier to read.

The service was successfully used earlier this year by the Detroit Free Press which teamed up with WDDS to send tax forms to all the late-filers who faced last-minute deadlines.

WDDS offers a similar service in conjunction with the New York Times.

The company also offers a fax box, where a business can store up to 20 pages of information.

A business might send out information on a new product to 1,000 other companies, telling them more information is available by calling WDDS and entering a specific code.

WDDS's information can cost a subscriber $5 to $50 a month and more depending on the service needed — or one can be an infrequent, non-subscribing user, paying only for specific pieces of information.

Fax broadcasting fees are based on the amount of information sent and how many people it's sent to.

The company has grown by 300 percent in the last year and Ahlbrand said he expects his staff of 31 to at least double in the next few years.

"It's a fun business to be in because we get to look at a lot of information people don't normally see," Ahlbrand said.

For more information on WDDS, call 886-8600.

Non-profit executives earn less, survey finds

Top management at non-profit groups in the Detroit area receive modest compensation packages significantly lower than their counterparts in private industry, according to a recent study by Coopers & Lybrand's Detroit office.

The chief executive officer of a non-profit organization in the Detroit area earns an average annual salary of about $55,000, ranging from just under $29,000 for smaller organizations with annual budgets less than $250,000 up to average salaries of $82,500 for groups with budgets of about $20 million.

In the private sector, the chief executive of a company generating about $20 million in revenues would have a salary of about $125,000, some 51 percent higher than non-profit counterparts, said Brian Wahby, senior compensation consultant at Coopers & Lybrand. "The study dispels any recent misperceptions that executives at non-profit agencies earn 'excessive salaries,'" said Jay Rudolph, a partner at Coopers & Lybrand. "The figures show that they earn much less than those in the private sector."

The survey covered 124 non-profit organizations of all sizes in the Detroit area that provide direct human services. The survey did not include governmental and educational groups. Coopers & Lybrand conducted this survey as part of its compensation consulting activities and the current interest in executive compensation for profit and non-profit organizations.

In addition to chief executive compensations, the study reviewed salary levels for chief operating officers, chief development officers, chief financial officers and chief human resources officers. Organizations were divided into four categories depending on the size of their annual budgets: less than $250,000, from $250,000 to $1 million, from $1 million to $5 million, and more than $5 million. In the plus $5 million category, budgets averaged about $20 million.

Overall salaries for other positions ranged from $46,000 for chief operating officers to $38,200 for chief development officers. For the largest organizations, salaries ranged from $64,700 for chief operating officers to $45,500 for chief development officers.

"With the comparatively low salaries earned at non-profit groups, it is easy to see why it may take longer to recruit top executives for these organizations," Walby said.

The Coopers & Lybrand report costs $50 and is available by calling Brian Wahby at 446-7413.

Research has prolonged life; now goal is to make it better

Looking backward is one of the pluses of being older. There are so many happy memories to relive; personal achievements to savor once more; gala occasions that knit the family together in a special way; loving friends who were always there when they were needed.

Remembering can be pleasant but we live in the present and must look forward to the future. Sometimes that can be a little frightening but it's not as intimidating as it once was.

Being older in America, with its strong emphasis on youth, has not always been a pleasant experience. Today that picture is changing. The average age is higher. Consequently there is more concern for the problems that once faced only a small segment of society.

In 1900 only 4 percent of the population was 65 or older. In 1976 that figure had jumped to almost 11 percent. By the year 2000 the over-65 group is expected to grow to 14 to 22 percent of the population, depending on future fertility levels.

Moreover, we are told that the expectations of future senior citizens will be higher. They will be more affluent, more accustomed to social services and proper support.

All of these statistics point to a better future for older Americans. No longer will they have to look to the past for everything that is good.

How will these improvements come about? There are many groups actively working for better housing, transportation, medical and social benefits. But the largest and most influential is the National Institute on Aging (NIA).

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

Its primary goal is not the prolongation of life, but its betterment. Its mission is to seek answers to critical questions. Its intent is to explore the changes that occur with age and to help all of us understand that these changes are not inevitably associated with decline. They can also be enriching, freeing older citizens to discover new and valuable perceptions of themselves and the world around them.

One of the areas the institute will address through research is the biological changes that occur with age. Some of them are evident but some require study, such as changes in the immunological system, the cells of the body, the nervous system, the muscles, the bones. If there are diseases caused by aging for which there is no cure, then there is a need to know how to manage them.

There has been progress in this direction. There has been a decline in deaths caused by heart disease, largely due to healthier lifestyles. In fact the chance of survival of older Americans has increased faster in the past than among younger age groups. The death rate for people 85 and over has dropped dramatically.

But there is more to living than just adding years. The goal of researchers is to lengthen the useful and active lives of older Americans and, at the same time, improve the quality of their lives.

To achieve that goal, researchers at NIA are seeking answers to what changes are due to aging, which to disease and what the effects upon each other are. These studies of the interplay between age changes and disease should benefit younger persons as well as older people.

For example, cardiovascular diseases are a leading cause of death among older people. But one-fourth of all heart attack victims are under 65. Exploring the relation of biological change, heredity and environmental stresses to cardiovascular diseases in senior citizens may aid in treating and perhaps reducing the occurrence of the disease in young and middle-age adults.

Research on developmental changes associated with age could improve the use of drugs by increasing their effectiveness and reducing the risk of toxicity through overdosage.

Drug dosages appropriate for the young may be inappropriate or even harmful for the older patient.

Another area of study is the place of older citizens in society. How do they perceive their lives, their health, status in society, their links to young people? How does the pattern of his or her life prepare the individual for retirement, change in income and often in status? How does the individual who has worked for 30 or 40 years find new values to replace the economic ones?

The attitude toward older citizens is an important field of investigation. Currently there is a poor general understanding of older people's values. How much money does a person make? How big is his house?

For most Americans retirement means a drop in income. Men over 65 on the average have half the income of men 10 years younger. The cost of maintaining a tolerable standard of living — a standard defined by previous lifestyle and current health condition — presents problems and warrants study.

People of all ages experience stress but it occurs more frequently among older people. They are more likely to suffer the death of contemporaries; isolation from family; inadequate income and other stresses. What is remarkable is the strength and capacity to deal with such stresses that is displayed by many older people.

In studying stress among older citizens, we may all benefit. These are natural questions for research and all of them are now being studied by the NIA. Most of these questions are not new. What is new is that many of them have answers.

The goal of research is to better the lives of senior citizens now and in the future. Discovery, development and dissemination of new knowledge is one way of achieving that goal.

It is exciting to think about — men and women working at the highest level of government to enrich our lives.

Presidents

Flashes, floaters: Normal or not?

Have you ever had the experience of seeing what appeared to be a particle or a cobweb travel across your line of vision?

These dots or specks are called floaters and they represent a normal part of the aging process of the eye. Sometimes flashes or light are seen with floaters, especially in the dark.

The center of the eye is filled with a clear jelly-like material called the vitreous. The retina, which enables us to see, is a thin layer of nerve cells lining the inside of the eye and attached to the vitreous.

With this picture in mind, Dr. Brian Joondeph, an ophthalmologist on the medical staff of St. John Hospital and Medical Center, explains what happens as our eyes begin to age.

"As one gets older, the vitreous gel shrinks and little strands form in the jelly, very similar to jello that's been left out for an extended period of time. These strands cast a small shadow on the retina which we see as a floater."

"The flashes are due to pulling on the retina by the vitreous gel. The retina is a nerve tissue and any pulling on it creates, in essence, a short circuit in the retina, which the person will perceive as light flashes," Joondeph said.

In most cases, floaters and flashes are a nuisance that one can learn to live with, he says, but sometimes they represent a serious vision problem.

"The floaters that we're concerned about are floaters that occur suddenly and a significant amount of them," he said.

A vitreous separation may create a hole or tear in the retina, he added.

It's important to see an eye care specialist if a sudden onset of flashes or floaters appear, Joondeph said, because a retinal tear, when left untreated, may progress to a retinal detachment, and this could result in permanent vision loss.

Almost all retinal tears can be successfully treated or sealed, he said. People who are nearsighted and those with a family history of retinal tears or detachment are included in the risk category for these problems.

Senior men to take in play

The Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club will meet at the Gem Theater on Thursday, Sept. 10, for the 2 p.m. matinee of "Forbidden Broadway."

Parking in the lot is $5; less expensive parking is available for those who don't mind a short walk.

Tickets are $14.50 from the committee, which is $5 off the standard price.

Seating will be in the cabaret section on the main floor. Drinks and snacks are available at the tables for four. Paid reservations take precedence over signing the reservation list. Mail checks to Art Hollar by Aug. 26.

There will be no special event in October.

Save Wednesday, Nov. 18, for the popular Thanksgiving dinner dance in the Crystal Ballroom of the War Memorial. Ben Grycan and his band will perform.

Hospice seeks volunteers

American Business Women's Association:

Working women meet every month to support each other, network and socialize

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

Judy Roarty, president of the Grosse Pointe chapter of the American Business Women's Association, is a feminist.

Diane Emerick of Grosse Pointe Woods, Dolly Bogel of Grosse Pointe Shores and Yvonne Miller of Clinton Township said the word "feminist" is too strong for them.

Dorothy Bond of Grosse Pointe Park said she — and the ABWA — stand firmly behind women who want equal rights, but "feminist" conjures up images of militant marchers and bra-burners. It's a bit too strong for the ABWA, she said.

"I'd call us steel magnolias," Miller said. She is a producer and meeting planner for the Sandy Corporation. She is chairman of the Grosse Pointe ABWA's ways and means committee and editor of its newsletter.

The non-profit ABWA provides support for working women. It also promotes professional advancement and education by sponsoring scholarships for women.

The 51-member Grosse Pointe chapter is part of an organization of 100,000 women (and a few men) in 1,900 chapters in the United States and Canada.

cal workers, professional people and entrepreneurs."

The Grosse Pointe ABWA chapter meets on the third Wednesday of each month, 12 times a year, at a local club. Meetings usually include a social hour, dinner, business meeting and a speaker. Attorney Carolyn Blanchard will speak at the next meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 16. Social hour begins at 6 p.m.; dinner is at 6:30; the meeting at 7:30.

The group sponsors other social events during the year for members and guests: a night at the races, for instance; a murder mystery party; a block of seats to see a presentation by the Grosse Pointe Theatre; and fashion shows and fundraisers to raise money for scholarships for deserving women.

Other projects include donations of time, expertise and funds to local organizations such as the Children's Home of Detroit and participation in fundraisers such as the annual Festival of Trees.

"We have fun raising funds," Roarty said.

"ABWA provides an outstanding way for women to network and support each other. It's also good for women who are looking for jobs, employers who are looking for people to hire, and so on. Sometimes members exchange services," Miller said.

"It's also a great feeling to give something back to the community," Bogel said, referring to the scholarships the ABWA gives to women each year.

For more information about the American Business Women's Association, or to make a reservation for the next meeting, call 469-0053.

The only requirement for prospective members is that they be employed either full- or part-time. The Grosse Pointe chapter includes women in sales, accounting, insurance, teaching, financial planning, engineering, and more. A large proportion of its members are owners of small businesses. "We even had a plumber once," Miller said.

Emerick owns her own business, dte Accounting; Bogel has been with Michigan Bell for 24 years; Bond is vice president of investments at Prudential Securities and owns a bed and breakfast on Mackinac Island; Roarty owns Bride's Bridal Salon in Eastpointe.

Miller and Roarty are charter members of the local chapter, which was founded in 1982. The national organization was founded in 1949.

"Ten years ago, most of our members were secretaries, bookkeepers and clerical people," Roarty said. "Today, more members are professionals and entrepreneurs, but we have a wonderful mixture of cleri-

"HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION" BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

I first became acquainted with Perry Johnson of Farmington Hills a score or more so years ago when he was becoming a talent to reckon with at the table. In those days, his bidding was somewhat inventive and such incaution on occasion caused catastrophes. In defense of this style, Perry had an uncanny confidence in his presence and position at the table and the aggressive nature of his way succeeded because of a remarkable ability to play his pasteboards extremely well. Actually Perry just loved to bid and his methods took full advantage of pre-empts and modest high card holdings. Shaped hands were treated with similar regard if he felt they had extensive playing power and this sometimes left a partner and always his opponents trying to solve a first class Agatha Christie mystery about his holding. The dynamic world class Zia Mahmood champions this accelerated fast moving style that leaves everyone wondering, but one can't discredit the exceptional results which support his exciting techniques.

A couple of years ago Perry did something in my opinion that was truly remarkable. He sought out the expertise and experience of a world class champion to discipline and season him in expert play. Not that he hadn't already tasted such table behavior and academics from earlier days of national play, but now the desire was motivated to prove competence, not to gratify his psyche. I believe Steve Landen of Southfield, a superb player in his own right may have helped Perry resolve that determination. As Steve recently said, "Perry's the type who must have purpose and his is to be very good at anything he has an interest in." That champion was the affable Jeff Meckstroth and the development of their partnership has been unprecedented and rewarding for both. In the Spring of '91, they came very close to capturing the prestigious Cavendish World Invitational Classic, one of the most grueling two-day pair games staged each year. Then this spring, everything fell in place in Pasadena and they ran away with the NABC Open Pairs, winning the event by better than three boards. That's somewhat like Count Fleet's fifteen length victory at the '41 Belmont Stakes.

I asked Perry for one of his favorite hands and as you could expect, it is a witty bit of Johnson fancy which took a pinch of good luck and produced a pound of glory.

North made a fine call over West's pre-empt and kindled Perry's next call. Pre-empts crowd the bidding and gave N/S no room to explore. Under the circumstances four no trump, ace asking, was certainly the superior call as Perry's high cards were the quick taking type and some elevation above game in spades seemed reasonable.

It was luck that the missing high trumps were finessable. That West had the singleton diamond queen and Perry guessed it. That North had a singleton heart. Other than that, the hand was routine. Perry even said he would have been disappointed if he'd only won a dozen. Such confidence should be in the Smithsonian and it's one of the reasons he's a winner.

HERE'S A NEW PERSPECTIVE ON CHILDBIRTH.

Family Centered Childbirth at Cottage Hospital.

At the Cottage Hospital Family Childbirth Center we look at childbirth a little differently, starting with our Labor/Delivery/Recovery/Postpartum (LDRP) rooms. It's childbirth with the comforts of home. From your specially designed bed to a reclining chair for Dad or your special guest, you will find your LDRP room to be the perfect place for a healthy, new beginning.

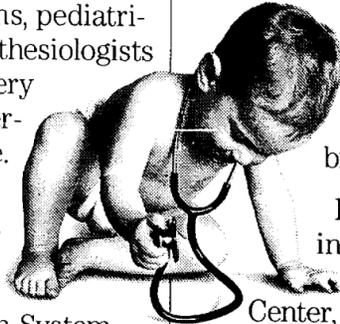

Our first concern is for the health and safety of you and your baby. While your entire childbirth experience takes place in the comfort and privacy of your room, you will be cared for by a full staff of highly trained experts including Board Certified obstetricians, pediatricians, anesthesiologists and your very own mother-baby nurse. It may be comforting to know that Henry Ford Health System perinatal and neonatal specialists are available 24 hours a day for the special needs of Cottage Hospital patients.

The birth of your baby is a very special event for your entire family. Make it even more special with the comforts and care of the Cottage Hospital Family Childbirth Center.

Fash Bash '92 fills Fox; amasses fresh cash for DIA

Fash Bash '92, the 23rd benefit for the Detroit Institute of Arts, raised a record $200,000 from a fashion-conscious capacity crowd at the Fox Theatre Aug. 4.

The annual fundraiser, sponsored by the DIA's Founders Junior Council and Hudson's, included an auction at the State Theatre which generated $87,000, and a glamorous fashion presentation involving more than 60 models, dancers and performers.

Comedian/juggler Michael Davis hosted the evening. Fash Bash co-chairmen were Ed Hogikyan and Mimi Strek of Birmingham and Tom Maksud of Detroit.

New board chairman for DSOH: Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall announced the election of Alfred R. Glancy III of Grosse Pointe as the new chairman of the board of directors at its annual meeting July 29.

"It is an honor and a joy for me to increase my involvement with this great orchestra," Glancy said. "Under the leadership of music director Neeme Jarvi, the DSO has achieved many fine artistic successes. I look forward to continuing the fine work of my predecessors, including Steve Miller and Walter McCarthy. The major challenge facing the board is launching and completing an endowment campaign that will ensure the viability of the orchestra for the 21st century."

Art exhibit: The Junior Leagues of Michigan have announced an art exhibition/advocacy project, "Focus on Michigan Families," to be held at the Scarab Club, 217 Farnsworth in Detroit, from Tuesday, Sept. 8, through Sunday, Sept. 27.

The exhibition, juried by Mary Denison, director of Detroit Focus Gallery, represents social problems that the Junior Leagues in Michigan are targeting for increased awareness and reform. The problems include children at risk, the elderly, health care, housing and homelessness, substance abuse and violence against women and children.

Participating Junior Leagues are from Ann Arbor, Battle Creek, Birmingham, Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Lansing and Saginaw.

The opening reception will be from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 13. There's no charge and there will be educational activities for children. The exhibition will be open to the public Tuesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m.

After the Detroit exhibition, the artwork will travel to the other Junior League cities in Michigan.

Reception: A recent reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cracchiolo of Grosse Pointe Farms welcomed the Rev. Timothy T. Shannon, the new president of the University of Detroit Jesuit High School and Academy. Among the Grosse Pointers there: Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Cornillie, David Cracchiolo, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence DuMouchelle, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Gitre, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Maliszewski, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick G. McKeever Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Theodore H. Getting ready for the ball

The Friends of Bon Secours met at the home of Craig and Beverly Curtiss of Grosse Pointe Farms recently to address announcements for the annual Autumn Ball, which will be Friday, Oct. 16, at the Country Club of Detroit.

Funds raised at the ball will be used to expand the hospital's BirthCare unit and to acquire new video equipment for laparoscopic surgery.

Tickets to the ball are $150. For more information, call 343-1652.

Historical Dept. needs volunteers

The Detroit Historical Department is seeking people who are interested in Detroit's history to become trained docents (tour guides) at the Detroit Historical Museum, 5401 Woodward at Kirby in the University Cultural Center. In addition to conducting tours, volunteers work on educational programs and assist with special events.

A free 10-week training program is provided at the museum and volunteers learn about Detroit's history, the Historical Department's collections and some tips on public speaking and touring techniques.

"Each year we receive hundreds of applications," said Frederick Stubbs, assistant curator of education and coordinator for the docent recruitment program. "This year there is a particular need for volunteer docents because of budget cuts. The program is a great way to learn about Detroit's history while meeting fascinating people. It also provides an opportunity to get a behind-the-scenes look at one of the nation's largest urban historical museums."

"The Detroit Historical Department has one of America's largest collections of urban historical artifacts — more than 250,000 objects that trace Detroit's history from Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac's landing on the banks of the Detroit River, through its birth as America's industrial capital."

"Late this fall we will open an exciting new exhibition chronicling the economic growth of the city, titled 'Furs to Factories: Detroit at Work, 1701-1901.'"

To qualify as a volunteer docent, participants must be available during the day, complete the 10-week training course which begins in September, and commit for a minimum of three hours a week for a year after the training period.

Anyone interested in volunteering should call Stubbs at 833-1475 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Mondays through Fridays.

The Pastor's Corner

Dealing with conflict

By the Rev. Robert E. Neily
St. Michael's Episcopal Church

Conflict is a problem of our time — conflict within families and between nations; conflict with others; and the conflict that goes on daily within our souls.

There are several creative things that Jesus said about dealing with conflict. For example, Jesus taught that we cannot resolve every conflict. On one occasion He said, "Do your best to settle your conflict before it goes to court." (He was talking to people like Bo Schembechler, Tom Monaghan — and us.)

But not all conflicts are reconcilable. That's why Jesus said on another occasion, "If they will not receive you, shake off the dust from your feet and move on."

He also taught that in seeking to reconcile differences there are times when God's timing is not our timing. You may say to someone, "I'm ready to forgive" or "Won't you please forgive me? Let's make up," and the response you get is pretty much a cold shoulder, or perhaps a muffled, half-hearted response.

And so you come back with, "Oh, so you won't forgive? What's wrong with you?" Sometimes you have to move aside and wait.

One of the hardest things I have ever tried is to reconcile myself to an irreconcilable situation and accept it. It's very painful, but it's also very healthy. Jesus not only said, "Forgive seventy times seven," He also said that if they won't hear you, and you have activated all the overtures for reconciliation, then let go. Leave it in God's hands and step aside. Turn your love and your kindness in another direction where it can do good. In other words, make every effort to reconcile your differences with another person, but if you are continually prevented from doing that (or you, wittingly or unwittingly, seem to be the roadblock) then let it go and move on.

You and I cannot make a reconciliation happen, but we can let it happen. We can surrender the conflict within ourselves and our conflict with others to God so that God works a reconciliation or, at least, a resolution to the situation.

To "reconcile" means to harmonize. It means to be open and not closed. It means to tap into a greater resource than our own limited knowledge or understanding. It means to throw open the window and let in some of the fresh air of God's spirit. It is to admit that there are more alternatives and more options for a creative response than you or I can imagine or dream.

Make every effort to reconcile, but if you are unsuccessful, put the matter into the hands of God and let it go — step aside, and move on. You have nothing to lose. You have peace of mind (and perhaps even the restoration of a relationship or friendship) to gain.

Stratford's "Two Gentlemen of Verona" is a perfect vehicle for the Young Company.

It's quite entertaining, this 'Mr. Sloane' at Stratford

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

Four brilliant characterizations and a remarkably artful script turn depravity into piercing dark humor in Stratford's latest venture into contemporary theater.

The piece is Joe Orton's "Entertaining Mr. Sloane," which was a controversial hit of the '60s in London's West End.

It would be no less provocative today except that society has brought the play's unmentionable behavior more into the open in the last three decades. Moreover, the caricatures of a sex-obsessed brother and sister and the psychopathic youth they both lust for are archly apt metaphors of contemporary morality and are delicately balanced between farce and reality.

In spite of Orton's avowed belief in using the popular language of the time, his script is never crude. In fact, the tender subjects and four-letter words are hardly mentioned directly. They come out in allusion and innuendo with an admirable economy of words that only emphasizes the ridiculously humorous side.

The scene of a middle-aged, middle-class woman seducing her young lodger and delivering the aside, "I'll hate myself in the morning," is preposterous in the telling. But it achieves the ring of ridiculous truth on stage as Barbara Bryne as Kath in her discount-mart negligee engulfs Mr. Sloane on the sofa.

Bryne plays the aging nymphomaniac to perfection. Her intentions are couched in euphemisms as she persists in playing mommy to her adopted son while luring him to bed.

Ted Dykstra as Sloane achieves an even more difficult feat of replicating wide swings of mood and behavior, seemingly rational at each moment yet psychopathic in their rapid, drastic and contradictory change. One moment he is Kath's son with sweet sincerity. In another he obviously relishes his anticipated role as lover and the power it gives him over both Kath and her brother. Then, when cornered, he is the sniveling felon justifying his fault by the deprivation of his orphaned childhood with clinched clinical jargon. Here again, it would be a horror if it weren't so bizarrely funny.

Meanwhile, Kath's brother, Ed, in a devastating characterization by Alan Scarfe, wraps his concealed urges in a smarmy respectability. Scarfe has a telling line with which Orton positions the character of Ed in his protestation of having achieved status. "I have two bank accounts," says Ed. Scarfe delivers it with a self-deprecating blend of righteousness and inferiority. And his chain smoking, his bandy-legged gait and affected upper class mannerisms are unnervingly effective in creating the character.

The fourth actor onstage is Kemp, played superbly by Edward Atienza. The father of Kath and Ed, he has refused to speak to his son for 20 years, after discovering Ed's sexual inclination. This, too, is gradually exposed as a pretense of respectability masking a phony pride.

The unfolding of the truth about each of them, as the clouds of their conventional posturing gradually clear, has a grim quality as we learn that Sloane has committed one murder and we watch him commit another.

But the really unbelievable drama is the competition between Kath and Ed for possession of Sloane and the humor reaches its darkest as an incredible deal is struck between all three. Yet again, as throughout the play, the shock dissolves into mirth as Kath brings down the curtain and the house with her final gesture on stage.

Orton's view of the world he portrayed here may well outrage much of his audience, and did at first, judging by the reports of the play's original reception in London. But he also piques the conscience and pretense of a society that pretends too much. And he does it with a mastery of stagecraft and a humor that's hard to resist. It certainly is irresistible when executed as well as this quartet has done.

"Entertaining Mr. Sloane" plays in repertory at the Avon Theatre until Oct. 17. For further information and reservations call (313) 964-4668 or (800) 567-1600.

Stratford's 'Gentlemen' are robbed by a boy and his dog

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

The brash and sometimes melodramatic style of youth is captured exuberantly in Stratford's latest Shakespearean offering. Appropriately, "Two Gentlemen of Verona" is a production of the Festival's Young Company at the Tom Patterson Theatre and the combination works like magic.

"Two Gentlemen" is generally considered a secondary work from the playwright's formative years. In truth, it does not match the masterful imagery, poetry and human insights of a "Romeo and Juliet" or "Love's Labor's Lost" (both in this summer's repertory).

Yet in its lines and in its famous song, "Who is Sylvia," there are many anticipations of the beautiful, moving texts that were soon to come in those later, more famous plays.

On the other hand, "Two Gentlemen" is totally effective as a lighthearted, melodramatic comedy. It provides welcome entertainment and escape from reality. What's more, this production makes the most of a couple of comic situations that are equal to any in all Shakespeare's plays.

The friendship — today we'd call it male-bonding — between two youths, its betrayal over a pretty girl, and the ultimate reconciliation are, in a word, unreal. But the interplay of the two youths, who could be called "gentlemen" only by Shakespeare, and the errors of their immaturity make for plenty of suspense and fun.

The Young Company is so totally in the spirit of this ingenious frolic that it makes you wonder if young players may not be a prerequisite for performing a work that appears to reflect the youthful (under 30) outlook of the author when he wrote it.

In any case, Mervon Mehta as Valentine and Scott Fisher as Proteus are the quintessential Elizabethan buddies who throw themselves into each new interest with verve and passion. The main interest is, of course, the girls, but feminists will take offense at the casual way both men seem to take their ladies for granted while emphasizing their own loyal friendship. On the other hand, the two love interests, Helen Taylor's Julia and Daria Martel's Sylvia, appear far more sensible and in control of themselves than the men. They glow, in fact, with charm, loyalty and dignity.

The biggest fun of the show, however, illustrates the old theatrical maxim to avoid sharing the stage with children and animals. Launce, the servant of Proteus and played by Michael Simpson, is teamed up on stage with his dog, Crab, played by Simpson's own pet Winter. This ungainly and highly engaging pooch and its master absolutely steal the show. Simpson's

Theater

Launce is a wonderfully gauche and impetuous character who gives in totally to his dog's superior audience appeal. And the dog doesn't miss an opportunity to yawn indolently, scratch for fleas and otherwise distract from its master's performance. The great joke of it is that Crab's behavior appears genuinely to be in reaction to Launce's lines. Perhaps it really does understand its real-life master.

The dog is part English bull terrier, short haired and mostly white with long legs, a long pointed nose and expressive large ears, and looks definitely Elizabethan. The obvious relationship between the two seems to work far better than having a trained, but strange animal play the role.

A word of praise is also in order for composer Keith Thomas whose new setting of the famous song, "Who is Sylvia," brings a refreshing new flair to this old familiar treasure. You can say that, in fact, about the whole production, which achieves a highly personal quality on the intimate Tom Patterson arena stage.

"Two Gentlemen of Verona" plays in repertory until Sept. 20.

'Single White Female' offers chills

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Last summer's biggest thriller showed a vengeful nanny turning a yuppie family's perfect little home into a battlefield in "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle."

This summer's psychological thriller, "Single White Female," features a demented young woman who turns an otherwise ideal New York apartment into something quite different.

It's predictable — even the moron behind me could easily follow the plot and guessed about the outcome non-stop until the usher came and told her to shut up — and it's formulaic, yet it still provides a creepy atmosphere and a good number of chills as it builds to its eerie climax.

What raises this thriller a step above most is the acting. Bridget Fonda and Jennifer Jason Leigh play well off each other, making their friendship and, later, hatred, feel real. As the two women struggle with their inner demons it shows in their eyes, subtly, and neither chew up the great New York scenery.

The story begins when Allison Jones (Fonda) kicks her live-in boyfriend Sam (Steven Weber) out of her life — and her rent-controlled apartment — after he cheats on her. She risks losing her apartment without someone to share the rent so she places an advertisement in the newspaper — "Single White Female seeks same to share apartment."

That's how she finds Hedra Carlson (Leigh), at first a mousy caretaker to Allison, who is at the end of her rope personally and professionally. Her computer-software business is on shaky legs, thanks to a bitter former partner and an opportunistic new client.

Allie and Hedy get along famously in the beginning, each woman filling a void in the other, making the other whole. But when Allison and Sam get back together, Hedra falls

Can't get your fill of the thrill on blueberry hill

Blueberries — you ought to have seen how it looked in the tin. The fruit mixed with water in layers of leaves, like two kinds of jewels, a vision for thieves.

— Robert Frost

Long before the Europeans arrived in the New World, the native tribes of North America gathered a variety of wild sapphire-colored berries as a food staple. The Indians called these fruits "star berries," because of the star-shaped calyx on the top of each berry. Today, we know them as blueberries.

Even though blueberries can be grown in countries other than Canada and the United States, 95 percent of the world's commercial crop still comes from North America. Cultivated blueberries have made the world a better place for all lovers of good food, but for those with a taste for a slightly tarter berry, wild blueberries are still harvested as well.

Wild blueberries are also treasured by bakers for their ability to hold their form during cooking. In fact, almost the entire wild crop is snapped up for commercial blueberry muffin and pancake mixes.

Commercially harvested wild blueberries are low bush plants. In New England and eastern Canada where most of these blueberries are grown, vast areas cleared of timber provide the perfect habitat.

Blueberries have more to offer than good looks and taste. They're nutritious, too. Like all fruits, they contain no cholesterol. Blueberries are also an important source of potassium and are sodium-free.

The North American blueberry harvest starts in mid-spring in Florida, and ends in early October in Michigan. The prime season for fresh blueberries is mid-June through September.

At 80 calories a cup, you can afford to eat blueberries out of hand, just like candy.

Quick blueberry tips:

- Revive your interest in hot and cold cereals. Add fresh or frozen blueberries.

- Pile blueberries in a cantaloupe half and add a dollop of yogurt.

- Spoon over ice cream or frozen yogurt, or alternate with sherbet to form a parfait.

- For a blue thrill, sprinkle blueberries in fruit and green salads.

- Drop frozen blueberries in sparkling water for a refreshing alternative to soft drinks.

- Take a tip from the Native North Americans. Serve poultry, fish and meat with a tangy blueberry sauce.

Caveat emptor — A blueberry is a blueberry is a blueberry — unless it's an artificially flavored "blueberry" found in some baking mixes. As with any food purchase, it pays to read the label.

Elegant Eating

By Irene H. Burchard

A free brochure with blueberry facts is available by sending a self-addressed business sized stamped envelope to: North American Blueberry Council, Dept. M, 190 Queen Anne North, 4th Floor, Seattle, WA 98109

The following recipes were provided by the blueberry council.

Blueberry Cobbler with Mapled Cream

2 pints fresh or frozen blueberries
2/3 cup sugar, divided
1/2 cup apple cider
2 T cornstarch
2 cups flour
2 t baking powder
1/2 t salt
1/3 cup butter or margarine
1 cup milk, divided
Confectioners' sugar, optional
Mapled cream (below)
Rinse blueberries, drain well. Combine blueberries, 1/2 cup sugar, cider and cornstarch.

Combine flour, remaining sugar, baking powder and salt; mix well. Cut in butter until mixture resembles cornmeal. Add 3/4 cup milk; mix until dough leaves sides of bowl. Turn dough onto lightly floured surface; roll to 3/4-inch thickness. Cut into six 4-inch rounds. Portion blueberry mixture into 6 12-ounce baking dishes. Top each with round of dough; brush with remaining milk.

Bake at 400 degrees for 30 minutes or until topping browns and blueberries bubble. Cool 20 minutes before serving. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve with mapled cream.

Mapled cream: Beat 1 cup whipping cream until mixture thickens. Gradually add 2 tablespoons maple syrup; beat until stiff peaks form. Makes 2 cups. Serves 6.

Blueberry Cheese Tart

1-1/2 cups vanilla cookie crumbs

6 T butter or margarine, melted
1/8 ground nutmeg
1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 t each vanilla and grated lemon peel
Blueberry topping (below)
Combine cookie crumbs, butter and nutmeg. Press into 9-inch tart pan with removable bottom. Beat cream cheese, sugar, eggs, vanilla and lemon peel with electric mixer until smooth. Spoon into cookie crust.

Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes or until firm. Cool. Spread topping over cheese-cake. Refrigerate several hours.
Blueberry topping: Combine 2 cups fresh or frozen (and thawed) North American blueberries; 1/4 cup each sugar and water; 2 tablespoons cornstarch and dash of salt in saucepan. Cook and stir about 4 minutes or until thickened. Stir in 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Cool to lukewarm. Makes about 2 cups. Serves 10 to 12.

Blueberry Bear Claws
6 T sugar, divided
1/4 cup each butter or margarine and almond paste
1 cup crushed vanilla wafers
1 T milk
1 package (16 oz.) hot roll mix
1-1/4 cups fresh or frozen blueberries
1 egg, beaten
Lemon icing (below)
Sliced almonds
Cream 4 tablespoons sugar, butter and almond paste until thoroughly mixed. Gradually add cookie crumbs; mix well. Add milk to moisten and set aside. Add remaining 2 tablespoons sugar to roll mix and prepare dough according to package directions; let rest 5 minutes. Roll in 24 x 8-inch rectangle. Spread with almond paste, cover evenly with blueberries. Starting on long side, roll up, seal and cut into eight 3-inch pieces. Make four evenly spaced slashes part way through each piece; bend into a curve so slashes open slightly. Place on greased sheet pans and let rise until doubled. Brush with beaten egg. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Drizzle with lemon icing. Garnish with sliced almonds.

Lemon icing: Add 1 to 2 tablespoons lemon juice to 1 cup powdered sugar and beat until mixture is drizzling consistency. Makes 1/2 cup. Serves 8.

Renaissance Festival turns 13 this year

For the 13th year the Michigan Renaissance Festival in Holly will allow visitors to step back into the 16th century for food, fun and entertainment.

The festival opened last weekend and will run Saturdays and Sundays (and Labor Day) through Sept. 27. Hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

This year's theme, "Discover the Adventure," promises added thrills and the festival includes a new performing venue — The Griffon Stage.

The stage was named after the ship Frenchman Rene Robert LaSalle used when he was the first to explore North America's waterways in the 17th century.

Sean and Dave — will fill the stage, juggling everything from machetes and torches to cannonballs.

In addition, the Renaissance Festival Academy will perform the age-old tale "Beauty and the Beast" three times a day.

The Renaissance Festival is staged at Hollygrove, a 200-acre wooded site in Holly. It's a privately owned business that brings out more than 150,000 people each year to sample the food and play the games of a bygone age.

Foods that are de rigueur for the Renaissance Festival are roasted turkey drumsticks, scotch eggs and soup or pasta in a breadbowl. All can be washed down with lemonade, wine or domestic or imported brew. New this year, Frankenth Brewery will demonstrate beer-making techniques during the festival.

Arts and crafts of more than 150 artisans — including pottery, jewelry, weaving, wood-working, blown glass and more — will be on sale.

And, of course, there's the always-popular (so get there early, real early) jousting on horseback that is staged three times a day.

Games and prizes are available for children of all ages, but each weekend has a different theme with its own special events. Romance is the order this weekend, Aug. 22-23; followed by the Tournament of Chivalry, Aug. 29-30; Peasant Olympics Sept. 5-7; Music and Dance, Sept. 12-13; Highland Fling, Sept. 19-20; and it ends with a Country Wine Affair on Sept. 26-27.

Adult tickets are $10.95 at the gate or $9.50 in advance at Kroger supermarkets, participating Total gas stations and the festival office. Tickets for children 5-12 are $5.95 at the gate and $5 in advance. Children under 5 are free.

Information about group rates and motorcoach rental can be obtained by calling the festival office at 645-9640.

The festival is located on Dixie Highway, one mile north of Mt. Holly. For directions, call the above number.

Birmingham's Art in the Park features 155 artists

More than 800 artists submitted slides of their work to Birmingham's 1992 Art in the Park, hoping to be one of the featured artists at this year's event. Five area jurors selected 100 of the best entries which will be on display Sept. 12 and 13. Returning to the fair will be 55 reinvented artists from last year's show.

Deborah Goldman, chairperson of the artist's committee, noted that the 155 exhibiting artists are as eager to be there as are the patrons anticipating this year's show.

Chris and Jag Pagnucco, co-chairs of 1992 Art in the Park, are expecting more than 50,000 people to attend the two day event, and hope to raise more than $70,000 for Common Ground, Oakland County's 24-hour crisis intervention agency. During 1991, Common Ground provided a number of off-site critical interventions to businesses and communities. More than 700 hours of service were provided to nine sites over a 10-day period to help the friends and families of the victims cope with the Royal Oak Post Office massacre.

Birmingham Art in the Park will be Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Sept. 12 and 13 at Shain Park in downtown Birmingham. For more information, call Becci Reedus, 543-3050.

apart and the happy friendship becomes hellish, building to a cat-fight in the apartment building's rat-infested basement.

There's a lot of talk about aloneness — can one be alone without feeling abandoned, and is being alone so bad?

Apparently it is, the movie seems to say. Despite the women-are-people-too themes that pepper the script, it appears that these two women — one an intelligent businesswoman, the other a nut case — need others to feel complete as a human being.

Director Barbet Schroeder can get into characters' heads (as evidenced by his previous works "Barfly" and the Oscar-winning "Reversal of Fortune") but with all this character development going on there's no real white-knuckle viewing.

The final showdown is eerie and oddly funny in parts which reduces the tension (as did that big-mouthed lady behind me). But it's a little too long in coming.

And that's the whole problem with thrillers like this.

You know the bad guy will win little battles on the way to losing the war. You know there are a few peripheral characters who are going to get killed — usually the ones you like best. You also know the climax is going to be a little too drawn out. And that's exactly what you get.

But as far as thrillers go, "Single White Female" is not a bad way to spend six bucks.

A pear in a bottle? How about a zucchini?

There is a special pear brandy that contains a full-sized pear inside the narrow-necked bottle. Did you ever wonder how this was achieved?

It's really not magic. The bottle is slipped over the baby pear early in the season while it is still on the tree. The bottle is then fastened securely to the branch and the pear continues growing to maturity inside the bottle. The pear and the bottle are harvested together and the brandy is added later.

Wouldn't it be fun to try this with cucumbers or zucchini in your own garden?

Choose a clear glass bottle with a small neck. Salad-oil bottles are good. When the zucchini is about 2 inches long, slide the bottle over it, being careful not to bruise or break the stem, a small part of which will go into the bottle too. Place the bottle on the ground under the leaves.

The zucchini should not be in direct sunlight all day because the bottle increases the heat. Let it grow as big as you want — perhaps almost filling the bottle. What a conversation piece for a cookout. Or a marvelous gag present for a fellow gardener.

There is a great deal of confusion in most people's minds as to whether tomatoes are fruits or vegetables. And it's all the fault of the U.S. Supreme Court. Botanically speaking, the tomato is a fruit, but in 1983, after an importer claimed that tomatoes were fruits and therefore not subject to duty charges, the court, apparently more interested in collecting duty than in accuracy, ruled that it was a vegetable. People have been debating the point ever since.

Incidentally, did you know that one mature tomato plant emits one gallon of water on a dry, hot day? And in one growing season, a single tomato plant requires 349 gallons of water; one corn plant, 54 gallons; and one sunflower plant, 130 gallons. No wonder farmers get upset during periods of drought.

Country people say that when the weather gets cold enough to silence the crickets it's time to pick all the green tomatoes, wrap them in paper and store in a cool spot to ripen for use later in the fall.

Those of us who belong to garden clubs tend to think of our own small group as a little, self-contained island of activity that is unique and special — which, of course, it is in many ways. But it is also a very real part of what has become a great force over the past 100 years and one which has had a tremendous influence on gardening all over the world.

The first garden club on record was the Athens Garden Club, formed by a group of women in Athens, Ga., in 1890. It was a small, local group established for exchanging gardening know-how and experience. Soon, other localities, hearing of the group, began to form their own garden clubs, and in 1913, the Garden Club of America was founded in Philadelphia.

The clubs began to multiply, and in 1914 many of them were amalgamated into the Federated Garden Clubs.

In the beginning, garden clubs concentrated on home gardening, but it was not long before they began to take on civic responsibilities as well, including wildflower conservation, preservation of wildlife and landscaping parks, public buildings, nature centers and highways.

Flower shows and horticultural demonstrations proliferated until world-class events, such as the Chelsea Flower Show in England, became annual occurrences.

There has even been a specialization in garden clubs as a result, with the formation of countless single-plant societies — the Rose Society, the Lily Society and the Hoya Society, for example. Scarcely a plant family exists that does not have its own group of loyal supporters.

Grosse Pointe has more garden clubs for its size than nearly any other community in the country.

A recent visitor from England said Grosse Pointe seemed like one vast garden situated on the shore of a beautiful lake. A nice thought. And very nearly true. How fortunate we are also to be surrounded by many lovely public gardens within easy driving distance. August is a good time to visit some of them.

The spectacular gardens at the Henry Ford estate at Fairlane in Dearborn and the equally spectacular gardens at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores were both designed by Jens Jensen, internationally renowned landscape architect. In the Edsel Ford gardens, there are 1,800 rose bushes in the rose garden, and vistas, meadows, pools and flower lanes delight the eye.

Wonderland on Times Square

By Stephanie Stubbs
AIA News Service

Times Square, smack in the middle of Manhattan's theater district, has branded its gritty, loud, show-off (but somehow endearing) self on the hearts of New Yorkers and visitors alike.

In the city's ongoing, decade-long war to clean up the neighborhood while preserving its brash but unique architectural character, a quiet battle has been won through the restoration of the Paramount Hotel on West 46th Street.

Haigh Architects of Greenwich, Conn., the firm responsible for the design, characterizes it as "hotel as theater, with guests, staff furniture, and accessories as a constantly changing cast of characters."

The architect carefully restored the elegant, 20-story Beaux Arts facade of the 1923 building to its original glazed terra-cotta and Carrara marble splendor.

To complement this elegance on the interior, Haigh Architects completely redesigned the two-story lobby, complete with a new, stone-clad grand stair. Small bars, meeting rooms, and facilities surround the lobby and reinforce its role as the hotel's "center stage."

In all, some 13,000 square feet of public space were renovated, along with 610 guest rooms.

Befitting the world on the theater, the Paramount takes on the illusion of a stage set through the magical genius of Parisian interior designer Philippe Stark. Playfully combining oversized and undersized details in everything from the wall paintings to the tissue holders in the bathroom, Stark has mixed up the scale of the objects and furniture until they create Alice-in-Wonderland spaces of comfort and delight.

The Paramount Hotel is one of only 10 buildings (out of 750 entries) chosen by a jury of esteemed architects and related professionals to receive a 1992 American Institute of Architects Honor Award. This award connotes outstanding built achievements by American architects and their clients.

"A surreal oasis in the midst of Times Square, the renovated Paramount Hotel transports its visitors to a vibrant, magic world," said the awards jury.

"Low lighting and dramatic, custom, avant-garde furnishings in bold colors lend a sense of other-worldliness. The main stair of the lobby is singularly dramatic as appropriate for the theater district, but also completely straightforward and functional. By using unusual cabinetry and fixtures, and by manipulating proportions, the architect manages to make the most of the very tight spaces of the original building."

Household Help by John Amantea

Q. I'm laying carpeting in my living room. Separating my living room and dining room is a wooden threshold. How do I work around this threshold to fasten my carpeting?

A. If the height difference between the threshold and the uncarpeted floor in the living room is more than a half inch, you can use a tack strip to hold the carpeting down near the threshold, just as you do in the remainder of the room.

If the height difference is less than a half inch, you'll need to staple the rug to the floor. Cut the carpet padding back about one inch from the edge of the threshold. Tuck the edge of the rug under about an inch to cover the area that doesn't have padding. Next, spread the carpet pile and staple through both layers of carpet into the subfloor.

Q. Every winter, our ceiling in the upstairs hallway recedes from the wall and leaves a gap anywhere from a quarter to a half inch wide.

However, everything goes back to normal in the spring. What's causing this?

A. Most likely, your roof is supported by manufactured trusses. The top chord of the truss is next to the outdoor temperatures in the winter, but the bottom one is warmer because it's covered with insulation. As moist air from your house goes into the attic, the top chord absorbs a lot of the moisture and expands in length. As it expands, it bows outward, because it's fastened at each end, and the interior walls keep it from bowing in. As this goes outward, the bottom chord and the ceiling that's attached to it, pull up, causing that gap.

The best solution to this problem is to hide the gap by covering it with a crown molding. If you nail the molding only to the wall, but not the ceiling, you will still get the gap, but it will be less noticeable.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Cheese, please — Cheese has been a part of many lunches and dinners in England and America. At the beginning of the 1800s, cheese was transformed into a dessert or a separate course, and to serve it with style, several new forms of dishes were made. The English liked a cheese trolley, a dish with curved sides made to hold a large wheel of cheese on its rim. This made it easy to cut a wedge from the wheel.

At the same time, cheese scoops were made of silver. These were like miniature long-handled shovels that dug hunks of cheese from the large wheel. By the 1860s, new types of cheese dishes were made. Wedges of cheese cut from the large wheel were served on covered glass or ceramic dishes. The cover was often made in the shape of the wedge. Large wheels of softer cheese were served on round plates with large dome covers.

There are few modern cheese dishes. Collectors search for the dramatic domed dish to use at dinner parties.

Q. We need dining-room chairs. I want to buy antiques, but my husband is afraid they will not be sturdy. Any suggestions?

A. It is difficult to find a set of eight or more matched antique chairs. Few sets with more than four chairs were made before the late 19th century. Most of the early sets seen today have been assembled through the years. Some styles, especially those used in the late 19th century, are very straight, and uncomfortable. Rush-bottom, caned and painted chairs may not take hard use.

Be sure to test the chairs with your table. Heights vary and your knees might bump the table top. Wooden chairs should be sturdy. Many have been given hard use for many years and have survived as antiques. If you have a limited budget, try to mix and match a set of chairs. Buy chairs of a similar style one at a time. This is the latest idea in some of the decorating magazines.

Home sales hit 3-year high

Sales of existing homes climbed in 30 states during 1992's second quarter compared to a year ago, pushing nationwide activity to the highest level in more than three years, the National Association of Realtors reported recently.

According to the association's latest quarterly survey of sales of previously owned homes, the increases ranged from 0.9 percent in Arizona and North Dakota to a high of 28.2 percent in Utah. A total of 12 states experienced double-digit increases, while two states, Indiana and Mississippi, remained unchanged. Figures were not available for Alaska and Maine.

Nationwide, sales rose 1 percent in the second quarter of this year compared to the same period a year ago. The seasonally adjusted annual resale rate for the second quarter was 3.803 million units, compared with 3.767 million in the same quarter last year. This is the highest level since the first quarter of 1989, when the resale pace hit 3.819 million units.

NAR President Dorcas T. Helfant said the continued increase in home sales experienced by more than half of the nation is a positive indication that the country's economy is in the midst of a steady recovery.

"Fueled in part by the lowest interest rates we've seen in 19 years and rising consumer confidence in the marketplace, the continued increase in home sales activity is solid proof that economic recovery is well under way," Helfant said.

The NAR survey, which covers sales of existing single-family detached homes, town houses, apartment condominiums and co-operatives, showed that every region but the South experienced a healthy boost in resales during the second quarter of 1992.

NAR Executive Vice President Dr. Almon R. "Bud" Smith said the increase in resales marks a shift in the marketplace.

"With historically high levels of first-time home buyers in the market, the combined total of single-family, condominium and co-op sales is better than many people realized," Smith said.

The region posting the greatest increase in resales for the second quarter of this year compared to the same period a year ago, was the Northeast, with a 4.3 percent rise. Leading the region were New Hampshire and Pennsylvania, which both showed a 16 percent increase in resales.

Ranking second among the regions was the Midwest, which posted a 2.5 percent increase. States showing the strongest increase were Kansas, with a 15 percent rise; Missouri, 13.8 percent; and Nebraska, 10.6 percent.

Home Tips

Get-well cards — When I send a get-well card to someone, I always put that person's home return address on it instead of mine if they're in the hospital. This way, if they leave the hospital before receiving it, they receive the card at home.

Tilly O., Buchanan, Mich.

Pantyhose dilemma — This isn't a tip, but I just thought I'd share this with other women. Why don't pantyhose manufacturers stitch in labels? Occasionally, I'll find just the right pair, but when I want to buy them again, I can't remember which brand, size or color I bought. A label sure would come in handy.

Jeannette T., Baldwin, N.Y.

Stake it out — I love herbs which I grow on my patio in large clay pots.

I sometimes have more little herb marker stakes than I need, so I use them as bookmarks.

Eileen H., Lark, Park, Ga.

Odorless garbage — Before baking chicken, I remove the skin, place it in a freezer bag and freeze it until trash day. This eliminates odors in my garbage can.

Linda F., Clinton, Okla.

Uninvited guests — When we go on picnics, I always hang a piece of half-eaten fruit on a tree a short distance from our table.

While the bees and flies feast on the fruit, we can enjoy our lunch without having to swat at them.

Tina H., Duluth, Minn.

Kitchen drawers — I always had kitchen drawers clogged with spatulas, serving spoons, etc., until I decided to take them all out and place them in a large vase.

Now, there's no more clutter. It's a lot easier to find what I need, and it looks very attractive.

Terry W., Ft. Lupton, Colo.

HIBBING

Hibbing: Contemporary cabin

In this contemporary cabin, windows in all the living areas face toward the back of the home to take full advantage of a vista, such as a meadow, river, mountain range, ocean or lake.

The Hibbing is a revision of one of Landmark's most popular plans, with changes in response to reader requests. The bedrooms are bigger, as is the utility room, and the home is built over a full basement.

While one might think, looking at the unique shape of this home, that it would be complicated to build, the structure is actually relatively simple — a hexagon and two rectangles.

The central high-vaulted hexagonal great room has open beams and combines the functions of kitchen, dining room and living room. The woodstove, seated on a wide hexagonal hearth at its center, provides a warm focal point for this bright airy and spacious central living area.

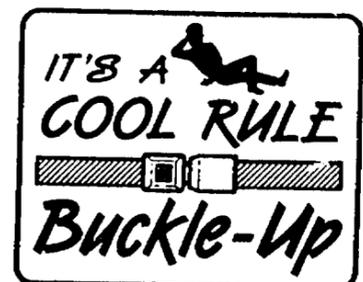

A modified U-shaped kitchen is separated from the rest of the room by nothing more than an eating bar. A utility room, complete with a utility sink and a wide counter, is conveniently located next to the kitchen, with a huge walk-in pantry

Two rectangular areas on nearly opposite sides of the hexagon house the sleeping areas, offering privacy to both. The master suite has a double-sided walk-in closet and twin vanities located outside the bathroom. Sliding doors here, and in the dining room, open onto a wide wrap-around deck.

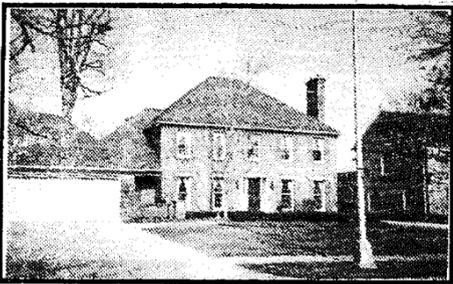

The two other bedrooms share a bathroom which, like the master bath, includes double sinks under a wide mirror, separate from the steamy bathing area and the toilet.

For a study kit of the HIBBING (209-28), send $7.50 to Today's Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Ore. 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Bresciami savors first major offshore victory

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Hollywood couldn't have written a better script for Joe Bresciami's first major offshore racing victory.

The Grosse Pointe Woods native, who is coming back from a serious accident earlier this year, ended a string of seven straight runner-up finishes to archival Agitator when he drove his Eastern Express to first place in Class D at the Race Rock Offshore Challenge. The event was held last weekend on Lake St. Clair near Metropolitan Beach.

"It's going to take a while for this to sink in," said Bresciami. "It's great to win, but to win in our back yard in front of my family and friends makes it even better."

Bresciami and throttleman Rob Kehrig flipped their boat 500 yards from the finish line while running in first place last April. Bresciami broke his arm in the mishap and had raced only once since then.

"I had some serious doubts about coming back," he said. "You don't think about things like that until it happens to you. Then it's always in the back of your mind. But I had to try to come back as soon as possible. The longer you put it off the tougher it gets."

"Winning this race was just what the doctor ordered. I feel like I'm right back to where I was before the wreck."

Last year, Bresciami was second in the national and world championships.

Bresciami completed the 126-mile, eight-lap course in 69:52 for an average speed of 96.09 miles-per-hour.

"We just had it dialed in," Bresciami said. "Rob and I are both from this area so we were pumped a little harder. We didn't back off at all. Even in the turns we were hitting about 90 mph."

The calm surface was ideal for Bresciami's 32-foot Douglas Skater.

"We run a catamaran and it runs better on the calm water than a V-bottom," Bresciami said. "The V-boats have the edge on rough water because they stay on the water better."

Grosse Pointe native Bob Kaiser, a former world champion in the Open Class, finished second in that division. Kaiser was driving Special Edition in his first race in nine years in front of a home crowd.

Open Class winner Spirit of Norway had an average speed of 111.23, about three mph better than Kaiser posted.

Kaiser and Bresciami weren't the only local racers to make a strong showing in the event, which drew an estimated 200,000 spectators.

Glen Williams of Grosse Pointe Farms was the throttleman on Spencerized, which took third place in Class A.

Williams is the junior varsity girls basketball coach and freshman volleyball coach at Grosse Pointe South.

"We were running real strong — about 70 miles-per-hour — on the first lap but then we broke down," Williams said. "We got the boat going again, but weren't able to challenge for first."

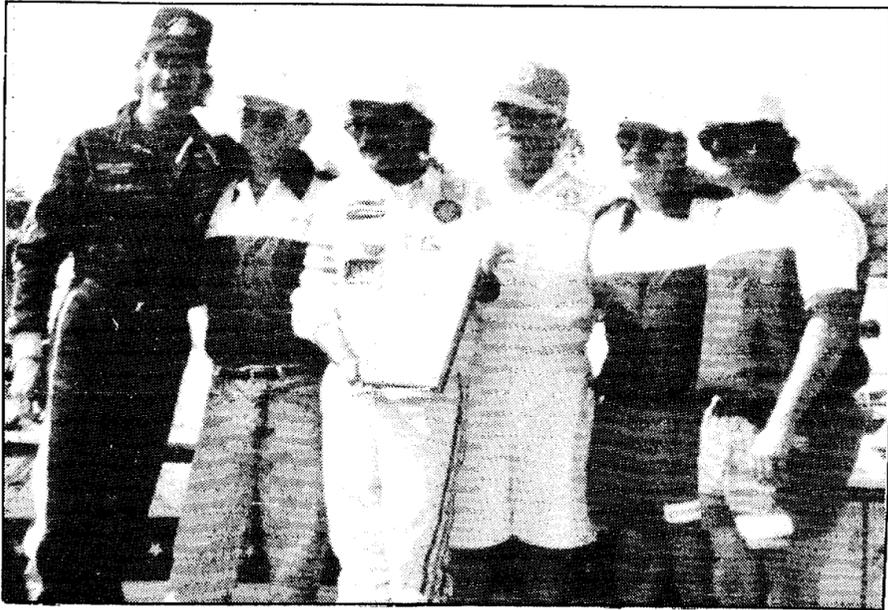

Williams and driver-owner Bob Spencer of Bay City finished third in three of their five races this season and wound up second in the point standings in Class A.

"We were two points out of first going into the last race of the season series in Monroe, but we ran into some 7-foot waves and our boat got beat up pretty bad," Williams said. "Fountain, which won the division, runs a great program."

"I was going to sit out this year, but I'm glad I didn't. It turned out to be a fun year."

Former Grosse Pointer Mark Stevenson, who now lives in St. Clair, finished eighth in the Pro Stock division.

GPHA surviving rough times

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

The Grosse Pointe Hockey Association is still skating along, but there has been some rough ice to navigate during the last couple months.

Now, members of the GPHA board are hoping smoother days are ahead.

"There have been rumors going around that the association has folded, but that isn't the case," said board member Terry Kasiborski, past president of the GPHA. "We're still alive and making plans for the coming season."

Registration dates have been scheduled for the second and third weekends in September and the Mothers' Club used equipment sale will be held during registration. The immediate task for the group is finding ice time for the 30 teams the association fielded last season.

"We have someone in the association who is willing to put an inflatable bubble over the ice surface at Heilmann Field (in the Seven Mile and Kelly area), contingent on our being able to obtain the rights to build a permanent facility," Kasiborski said.

"The bubble would only be a stopgap measure to get us through the current season. It wouldn't pay unless we get the approval for the facility for a longer term."

The board is trying to rent local ice time to support the house programs in the Mite, Squirt, Pee Wee, Bantam and Midget divisions. Like last year, the Mites will probably skate at McCann rink on the University Liggett School campus. The other divisions have arranged for some local ice time. The travel teams appear to have sufficient ice time for this season.

The association didn't renew its contract with the Grosse Pointe Community Rink when it expired after last season and that facility's ice has been rented for this season.

The GPHA's problems began when the proposed two-rink project at I-94 and Nine Mile in Eastpointe fell through because the association was unable to obtain a bank loan for more than $2 million.

The association had hoped to have at least one of the rinks ready for use at the start of this season and the project was progressing nicely until it came time for the loan.

Eastpointe approved the site for multiple construction and parking variances; St. John Hospital agreed to forgo the remaining term of its lease on the property; the GPHA was able to meet its required equity contribution of several hundred thousand dollars; and the developer, Fox and Associates, was in the process of raising another several hundred thousand dollars in private investment funds.

"Despite the best intentions of everyone concerned it just couldn't happen," Kasiborski said. "It certainly wasn't for a lack of effort. If anything, it might have been too ambitious a project to attempt in such a short time."

Mutants end Warriors' reign in swim league

There's a new champion in the Lakefront Park Association swimming league for the first time in nine years.

The Grosse Pointe Park Mutants scored 272 points to end the Grosse Pointe Woods Water Warriors' eight-year hold on the title. Strong relays and the deepest team of individuals in the league made the difference for the Park in the three-team battle for the championship.

Grosse Pointe Farms was second with 255 points and the Woods took third with 232. Grosse Pointe City had 128 points, followed by St. Clair Shores 123 and Grosse Pointe Shores 80.

The Mutants also won four of the six age-group trophies. They had the most points in 8 and under, 12 and under, 14 and under and the combined relays. The Farms took the age-group trophy in 10 and under and 17 and under.

The league meet at Windmill Pointe Park featured one broken record and one tied.

Christine Jamerino of the Woods set a meet record in the girls 50-meter breaststroke with a 31.34 clocking, while Julie Mazer-Schmidt of the Farms tied the record in the girls 8 and under 25 backstroke with a time of 18.7.

Ruth stars bow twice in regional

Two defeats in the Ohio Valley Babe Ruth regional tournament didn't put a damper on the post-season success achieved by the Grosse Pointe Farms-City-Park all star team.

"After losing two of three games in last year's state tournament, our goal was to fare better in the state," said John Hoben, who coached the squad of 14-year-olds.

"Certainly we couldn't have set our goal any higher than a state championship. Achieving that was a real credit to the boys' improving their individual skills during the year. Going to the regional was a bonus and a reward for their hard work."

The Farms-City-Park team won all four of its games in the state tournament, but dropped its regional opener in Effingham, Ill., to Appleton, Wis., 10-0. The Grosse Pointe squad then bowed out of the tournament with an 11-1 loss to Carmel, Ind.

Laver heads tennis field

Two-time Grand Slam winner Rod Laver will head a field of eight former tennis stars who will compete in the Ford Top Gun Grand Masters Tennis Classic at the Bloomfield Open Hunt club from Aug. 28-30.

Many of the pros in the three-day doubles tournament once dominated the sport. Joining Laver are Bob Lutz, Roy Emerson, the winner of 12 Grand Slam events; Australian Davis Cup hero Owen Davidson; Marty Riessen; and 1977 Wimbledon doubles champion Ross Case. Two other players will be added to the field.

Local players can compete in the Pro-Am events from Aug. 27-29.

A portion of the proceeds from the tournament will be given to the Police Athletic League (PAL).

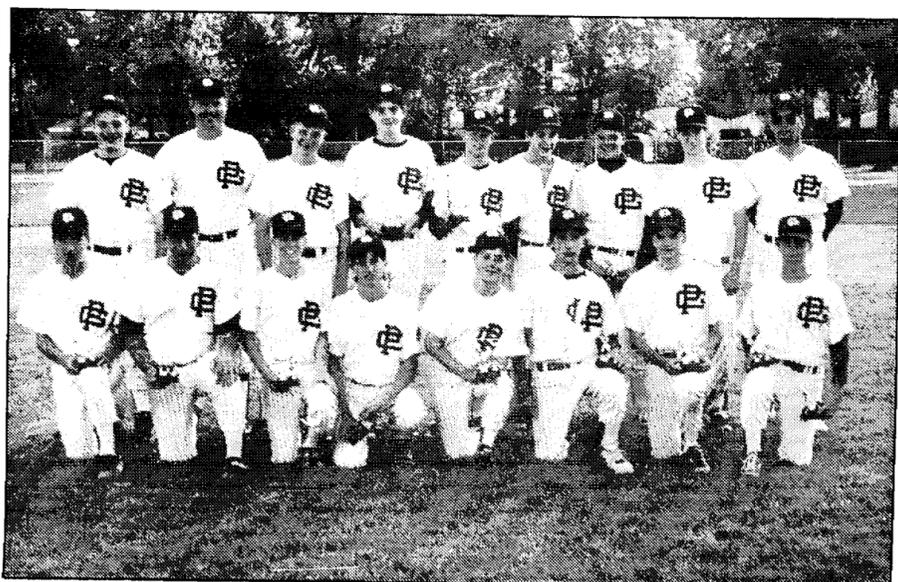

Tickets for the Ford Top Gun Tennis Classic can be ordered by calling 644-6600. Anyone interested in participating in the Pro-Am should call 644-9411 for more information.

Woods trio shoots well in WMGA event

Three Grosse Pointe Woods golfers did well in last week's Women's Metropolitan Golf Association tournament at Pine Valley in Romeo.

Marie Luber shot a 43-45-88 to win low gross in Third Flight. Mary Richards took low net honors in Third Flight with a 100, corrected to 67.

Elaine Jenks had the second low gross score in First Flight with a 44-42-86.

Pointers rule in Ann Arbor

Grosse Pointers Ryan Dloski and Anthony Stefani won division championships in the recent Ann Arbor Junior Open tennis tournament.

Dloski of Grosse Pointe Woods won the boys 14 and under division. Stefani of Grosse Pointe Shores rolled past the competition in the boys 10 and under division without losing a set.

Dloski, who plays at the Eastside Tennis Club and will be a student at University Liggett School this fall, defeated Nitin Gera of Okemos 7-5, 7-5 in the championship match.

Dloski and his partner, John Long of Ann Arbor, also won doubles, defeating Christian Amedia of Boardman, Ohio, and Michael Kosta of Ann Arbor 6-1, 6-3 in the final.

Dloski recently finished fourth in the Western Open Junior Tennis Championships in Indianapolis.

Stefani beat D.J. Spice of Cleveland 6-0, 6-0 in the boys

10 and under singles championship. He and Francis Rodriguez, also of the Shores, took second place in boys 12 and under doubles.

Rodriguez was runner-up in boys 12 and under singles. A.J. Rhode of Grosse Pointe Farms took fourth in the same division.

Woods crowns tennis champions

Jimm Ford and Brad Case each won two trophies in the recent Lakefront Park tennis tournament sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Woods Parks and Recreation Department.

Ford teamed with Mike Parker to beat John Bourget and Karl Haller 6-1, 6-4 in the men's doubles championship match. He took his second trophy with a 6-0, 6-3 victory over Doug Bohannon in the men's singles final.

Case won the boys 8-10 singles division and joined his brother Ryan to take first place in the boys 11-13 doubles competition.

This year's tournament featured expanded age divisions for children, allowing 8-year-olds to compete in singles and doubles.

Erin DiMaggio won the girls 8-10 singles; Kelly Kielbowicz was first in girls 11-13 singles; and Mike Vandenginste took boys 14-17 singles.

Dave Stavale won the most hotly-contested singles division, topping 22 other players in the boys 11-13 group.

Other doubles winners were Katie Phillips and Michelle Prush in girls 8-10 and Alex Groesbeck and Bobby Ritter in boys 8-10.

The tournament, which drew 92 Woods residents, was completed in five days despite some interruptions by the weather.
