

Cause of that water odor? Divers smell a mussel

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Prompted by dozens of calls complaining about the foul odor of the drinking water in Grosse Pointe Farms, two city officials sent scuba divers and a special video camera underwater to see what's happening at the water intake.

The intake is located about one-quarter mile offshore directly out from the Farms Pier Park. Gravity sucks water from the lake into a 3-foot-wide pipe. The pipe is protected by a concrete crib and the opening itself is covered by a grating.

The water goes through the pipe to a pump located in the park which then propels it to the treatment plant at Chalfonte and Kerby. There the water is treated and purified. The intake provides water to some 16,000 people in Grosse Pointe Farms and City and another 6,800 in Highland Park.

Leon Sehoyan, a Grosse Pointe Shores resident, along with Dan Holly of Grosse Pointe Farms and Mike Bailey of the Woods went underwater with a video camera while Farms city manager Rich Solak and water superintendent Darrel Schuurman watched what was happening below on television.

The underwater expedition was videotaped as part of an effort by the city to collect information on the lake's ecology and determine why the water — which has won taste tests, Solak said — has a foul smell and peculiar taste from time to time.

Recent tests have shown that despite the smell, the water is still safe. Chilling the water eliminates the odor, Solak has found.

The three divers guided the camera around the crib which is encrusted 3 to 4 inches deep with zebra mussels. The camera was able to get close enough to see the mussels, with shells open, eating algae. They closed sharply when approached by a diver.

The mussels varied in size, but none were larger than the tip of a finger. They were attached to each other in no particular order and were easily removed by hand. When still wet, they had a slimy, phlegm-like coating that kept them attached to one another. Their shells are sharp.

The weeds in the lake are thicker and longer than they have been in years past. Sehoyan, who's been diving in the lake for years, said it's because the mussels are eating algae, thereby cleaning the lake and allowing the sun to warm the waters and create better growing conditions.

Many believe that's what caused the huge algae bloom earlier this summer that washed ashore and caused a foul smell from Grosse Pointe Shores to the City.

Deep below Cook Road, a barrel-like tunnel emerges

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

In the cool dark dampness, 30 feet below Cook Road in Grosse Pointe Woods last week, workers for Mancini Construction were using a red laser beam to guide their way while tunneling from Chalfonte to the west side of Mack.

"A laser beam is as close as you can get to a straight line," said Nick Mancini III of Grosse Pointe Woods.

His father, Nick Mancini II, also of the Woods, and uncle, Al Mancini Jr., own the company.

"Without a laser beam, it'd be real easy to get lost underground. You could easily get turned around and wind up at the lake," he said.

The 66-inch diameter tunnel will house 54-inch diameter sewer pipe that will take raw sewage from Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods to Detroit for treatment, bypassing the Milk River Pumping Station in Grosse Pointe Woods.

According to its contract with the Milk River Intercounty Drain Board, Mancini Construction had to complete part of the tunnel (including laying the pipe and paving over construction shafts) from Chalfonte to Holiday by Aug. 22, so as not to pose a nuisance to the students of nearby schools and their parents this fall.

The company met the deadline and is even ahead of schedule.

Workers had until the end of this month to tunnel from Holiday to Mack, but they reached Mack earlier this week.

Now they are tunneling to an alley on the west side of Mack, behind Da Edoardo's Restaurant. They currently access the tunnel through a construction shaft at Kings Court West and Cook Road.

To construct the tunnel, workers first dug a 30-foot shaft at Chalfonte and Cook June 16 after school let out for the summer.

When that was completed, a tunnel boring machine (TBM) was lowered into the shaft.

Powered by 440 volts of electricity, the TBM is about 9 feet long and 66 inches in diameter, with teeth on one end and a conveyor belt running through its middle.

The teeth bore through the earth, and the conveyor belt catches the dirt as it falls, carrying it to the rear of the tunnel boring machine, where the dirt and clay are dumped into little boxcars and taken away by a miniature train called a "dinky," Mancini said.

"On a good day, the TBM can clear 100 feet a day. On a bad day, it may be 75 or 80 feet," he said.

A bad day is when the machine breaks down or is running slow, he said.

Every four or five feet, the operating engineer stops the machine so that laborers can shore up the side of the tunnel with wooden boards (called lagging) and metal strips (called ribs), he said.

Once in place, the ribs and lagging make the tunnel look like the inside of a beer barrel.

Before the tunnel boring machine is restarted, the laborers lay more track for the dinky, Mancini said.

The dinky takes the earth-filled box cars to the tunnel shaft, where they are lifted out by crane. The dirt is then dumped into trucks and taken to a landfill, Mancini said.

After the digging is completed and the ribs and lagging are secure, the pipe can be laid.

The operating engineer and laborers — all members of building trades unions — are usually in the tunnel eight hours a day, and even eat lunch there, Mancini said.

They're kept in contact with the outside world via a telephone that's more like a walkie-talkie.

"It's not like a regular telephone. They can only talk with the outside crew on it," Mancini said.

All workers have gas masks and first aid kits. Natural gas tests are taken every morning, and there's a meter on the tunnel boring machine that constantly monitors the level of natural gas in the hole, he said.

Pipes on the sides of the tunnel also provide ventilation, he said.

Mancini Construction was founded by Nick Mancini III's great-grandfather, who immigrated to the United States from Italy and learned the tunneling business in Chicago. Later, he moved to Detroit, where he built a house on Whittier and formed his own construction company.

"When he died, my grandfather and great uncle took over the business, and my grandfather built a house on Hollywood and Morningside in Grosse Pointe Woods. I think it was one of the first houses on the street," Mancini said. "My father and uncle took over the business when my grandfather died."

Mancini Construction has also been hired to construct a sewer diversion chamber behind Da Edoardo's Restaurant on the west side of Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The chamber will separate storm water and solid waste and send it into separate sewers.

Construction on the diversion chamber will begin once the sewer is in place, and is scheduled to be finished by January 1993, according to the contract.

The alley behind Da Edoardo's will be repaved by another construction company next April, and Cook Road will be repaved between June and September next year, according to a pamphlet published by the Milk River Intercounty Drain Board.

Like it or not, Grosse Pointers have been stereotyped.

Pointers are conservative, some say; private; provincial; predictable.

"Grosse Pointe doesn't take the ribbing it used to," said Bruce Rockwell of the Farms. "The Pointes have done nothing but get better and better."

Rockwell is senior vice president at First of Michigan He's in charge of mutual funds and unit investment trusts. He also oversees all the marketing, advertising and public relations for the firm.

Rockwell's family moved to Grosse Pointe Park from Detroit in 1945. He grew up here; attended local schools; lived here most of his life; and is one of the Detroit area's biggest boosters.

"Twenty years ago — if you didn't go downtown — there wasn't much of a choice of restaurants. Now we have terrific places to go for dinner here," he said.

Besides great restaurants, like One23 (one of his personal favorites), Rockwell ticked off other Grosse Pointe attractions: the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, the Newcomers Club and the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, for starters.

"Where else can you see 1,200 people a Tuesday evening enjoying a concert and fireworks?" he asked, referring to the final performance of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's summer outdoor concert series. "That's a lot of people. It felt good. And most of the people drove home in 15 minutes or less when it was over."

As for the Newcomers Club, he said the club's bylaws limit membership to couples who

T.S. Eliot and Andrew Lloyd Webber have nothing on Grosse Pointe Shores.

The village's problem with cats may not inspire officials to write poems or musicals but it did prompt a letter to city hall signed by 24 residents representing 12 homes on Ballantyne and South and North Deeplands roads.

It's also the impetus for a new ordinance Shores Village president Ed Brady asked city attorney Ralph Houghton to write forcing residents to keep their cats under control. The ordinance will be discussed at the Shores' Sept. 15 board of trustees meeting.

The two-page plea for action said the residents of the three streets have seen an increase in cats roaming freely in their area and that they have "adversely affected the quality of our lives in an otherwise pleasant neighborhood."

They say the cats rummage through trash; chase and eat birds leaving remains and feces; walk on outdoor dining tables; annoy dogs that are properly confined to their yards; sun themselves on other people's window sills; enter houses; expose residents to fleas; destroy pachysandra beds; and refuse to leave yards even after the residents shout and clap at them.

According to police chief Dan Healy, a large part of the cat problem stems from one resident who has five felines. She has promised to get rid of all but one.

Healy told the council that if a cat can be caught, it is impounded and returned to its owner, if he or she can be located. If not, it is given to a local veterinarian.

The new ordinance is expected to be patterned after Grosse Pointe Woods and Grosse Pointe Farms ordinances which say all animals should be kept under control at all times.

Thief takes bath

A 2-foot tall cement bird bath that was filled with flowers was taken from the front yard of a home in the 600 block of Blairmoor in Grosse Pointe Woods between 11 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 22, and 9 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 23, police said.

Local SOC officials testify in Lansing

Three Grosse Pointe residents spoke against proposed cuts in services to seniors at a hearing in Lansing Aug. 20.

They were Ann Kraemer, executive director of Services for Older Citizens, Frances Schonenberg, secretary of the Detroit Area Agency on Aging and past president of SOC, and Mary Evelyn Self, president of SOC.

Written testimony was submitted by Jim Haley, mayor of Harper Woods, and Jean B. Rice, Grosse Pointe Woods councilwoman.

Self said that 12 years ago, due to reorganization, SOC was given the opportunity to choose an Area Agency on Aging. The agency chose to join the Detroit Area Agency in 1980.

Proposed changes in the intrastate funding formula by the Michigan Commission of Services to the Aging will cut the percentage of the total share to the Detroit Area Agency.

About $60 million is dispensed by a funding formula which is revised periodically based on U.S. census data. Fourteen grants management agencies in Michigan, called Area Agencies on Aging, are affected by the proposal drafted by Michigan State University, a neutral entity, for the study and development of recommendations.

The Detroit Area Agency on Aging will experience cuts in funding under the new formula which will be voted on the Commission on Aging's business meeting Sept. 18.

Self asked why directors, seniors and service providers have not been given the opportunity to tell the commission what is needed to retain and improve services in the metropolitan Detroit area.

Voicing her concerns as an agency director, Kraemer said:

"As responsible management, we at SOC have already planned our services for the fall quarter." If cuts are implemented Oct. 1, she said there will be layoffs.

Schonenberg urged the commission to postpone for one year a decision on what the funding formula should be for the next 10 years.

4 contend for Woods administrator job

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

One step closer to selecting a city administrator.

That's where the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council stands after interviewing four candidates for the job Tuesday night.

Because the interviews were held after press time, the outcome was not available for this edition.

Scheduled to be interviewed were: Jerome R. Kisscorni, city manager of Tecumseh (at 7:30 p.m.); John D. Berchtold, village manager of Lake Orion (at 8:10 p.m.); Scott S. Randall, village manager of La Grange, Ill., (at 8:50 p.m.); and Phillip H. Belcher, acting city manager of Grosse Pointe Woods (at 9:30 p.m.).

"I don't know how many we received, exactly, but we had a whole lot of resumes, and we finally narrowed it down to these four candidates," said Mayor Robert E. Novitke.

The resumes were reviewed by the council's search committee, which consists of councilman Ted Bidigare (chair), councilwoman Jean Rice and Novitke.

Retired city administrator Chester E. Petersen helped the committee research the accuracy of the resumes and then the committee narrowed the list of candidates down to four, Novitke said.

He said the committee sought candidates who had: a masters' degree in public administration or a closely related degree, seven to nine years' municipal management experience, experience in municipal finance and labor relations, knowledge of zoning and planning requirements, good interpersonal and communication skills, the ability to work with a variety of citizens and commissions, the ability to work as a team with the council and department heads, and the ability to provide leadership and entrepreneurial management for the community.

Novitke said even if the council were to tentatively agree on a selection this week, the candidate chosen would be interviewed a second time before being offered the job.

The next step after that would be negotiating a contract, he said.

"If we can't agree on a candidate, we may have to look at hiring an executive search firm," he said.

The council has been conducting its search ever since Petersen, who had been Grosse Pointe Woods' city administrator for 30 years, retired Dec. 31.

At first, the council focused its search on the metro Detroit area.

"We did go through a series of reviews of applicants, but we had some concern that the search wasn't broad enough," Novitke said.

In April, the council began advertising for a city administrator in state-wide and nationwide trade journals.

The council interviewed several candidates last spring, and had offered the job to Greenville city manager Gerald Felix before the search went national. But he and the council could not reach agreement and his name was withdrawn from the running.

Asked if the council had a deadline for selecting a new city administrator, Novitke said, "I've had a few deadlines in the back of my mind, but they've all come and gone."

"It's not like the city would be in bad shape if we didn't hire a new city administrator right away. You know we have Mr. Belcher working as acting city administrator and things seem to be going well."

"On the other hand, it sure would be nice to have this over with and to be able to go on to other things. But we don't want to make a mistake, so we're taking our time, and making sure we check everything that needs to be checked."

Mailman gets special delivery

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Letters to the editor, thank-yous and brickbats, birth announcements, wedding announcements, subscription orders, payments and press releases.

These are just some of the things that comprise the stacks of mail the Grosse Pointe News receives each day.

For almost three decades, the heavy responsibility of delivering that mail to the Grosse Pointe News has fallen on the shoulders (and knees) of Robert A. Maxwell, who recently celebrated his 45th anniversary with the United States Postal Service.

In honor of his lengthy service, he recently received a brass pin and a certificate of achievement from John M. Horn, field division general manager and postmaster of the U.S. Postal Service, Detroit division.

The Grosse Pointe News is just one stop on route No. 3636, which Maxwell has had for the past 28 years.

He said it takes him about five hours each day to do his route, which includes about 42 businesses and some 200 homes on Kercheval, Radnor Circle, Hall Place, Warner Road, Deming Lane, Briarwood Place, Lee Gate, Stanton Lane and Handy Road in Grosse Pointe Farms.

"I hope I didn't leave anyone out," he said.

A resident of Highland Park, Maxwell, 69, was born and raised in Marshalltown, Iowa.

He moved to Detroit in 1942.

Too young, too late

Two 13-year-old girls from Grosse Pointe Farms who were walking along Mack about 2 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 18, were stopped by a patrolling Farms police officer at the Pointe Plaza shopping center because they looked too young to be out so late.

He drove the girls to the Grosse Pointe Farms police station, and an officer called their parents to come pick them up.

The parents said they didn't know their children had been out, and police gave them a copy of the city's curfew ordinance, which says that youngsters under 15 are not allowed outside from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m., and youths 15 and 16 are not allowed outside from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m.

The girls were let off with a warning and released to their parents at 2:48 a.m.

It didn't float away

A two-man flat-back canoe was stolen from its hiding place in the bushes in the front yard of a home in the 300 block of Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms on Thursday, Aug. 13, police said.

during World War II, in search of a job. He found one on the assembly line at Ford Motor Co.

"But all of the old-timers there said, 'You jitterbugs' — that's what they called us young boys — 'won't have a job here once the war's over,'" Maxwell recalled.

In March 1947, he joined the postal service and moonlighted as a janitor for the J.L. Hudson Co.

"Mr. Hudson was the best boss I ever had," he said. "But after the Detroit riot, they closed down the night shift. He offered me another job during the day, but I turned it down because I already had a day job at the post office."

Maxwell said the best part about his job is the people he gets to meet.

"The people on route 3626 are valuable gems to me," he said. "They're all so nice."

Although he's had opportunities to change his route over the past 28 years, he said he chose not to because he likes his customers so much.

He said he plans to work one more year and then retire. But first, he's taking two months off to have knee replacement surgery at the University of Iowa Hospital and to recover in his hometown.

"That's Marshalltown, Iowa," he said, "50518."

Residents must hook up, but still resist paying up

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

After a judge ruled that two Shores residents with faulty septic tanks must connect to the village's sewer system, the pair filed a third-party complaint against village officials, demanding that they pay for the hookup.

On July 29, Circuit Court Judge Helene White denied a temporary restraining order sought by Wayne County to stop residents Patricia Galvin and Carl and Marion Larson from discharging pollutants into Lake St. Clair.

White also dismissed a hearing where the two could show cause why the restraining order shouldn't be granted.

Although test results showed some leakage from the septic tanks occurred, White ruled that neither of the two homeowners were doing irreparable harm to the lake, according to Robert Berg, attorney for Galvin and the Larsons.

"It's important to note that the minute amount of leakages into the lake from these two is nothing compared to the tonnage (many cities) discharge into the lake," Berg said. "That's why the county couldn't prove irreparable harm."

White also ordered them to begin work on hooking up their homes to the sewer within 100 days from the date of the order which was Aug. 6.

Galvin and the Larsons then filed a third-party complaint against the village, saying that it is the village's responsibility to pay for the sewer hookup.

"The purpose of the third-party complaint is basically that they want to be treated as equals with the other residents of Grosse Pointe Shores and nothing more, in terms of (this issue)," Berg said.

The complaint also asks for a reimbursement of all the sewage taxes the two homeowners have paid to the village without receiving the service.

The two families have always wanted to hook up, Berg said, but they believe it's the village's responsibility to provide a sewer line in front of their properties to hook up to.

The suit was served on the village on Aug. 14, and was discussed briefly at the Shores village council's Aug. 18 meeting. The village has not answered it yet.

"The important thing is that within 100 days from Aug. 6 they have to get a plow in the ground," said Ed Brady, Grosse Pointe Shores village council president.

At University Liggett School, we make no apologies for our demanding curriculum. Our upper school students' rate of success in Advanced Placement classes is among the highest in the country.

James Kim is a sophomore in the mechanical engineering program at the University of Michigan. He completed his freshman year with a 3.8 GPA. While a student at ULS, James compiled enough AP (college) credits that he may shorten a five-year degree program to three and one-half years.

"At ULS, I developed an intense work ethic which has helped me immensely in college," James says. "That work ethic was more rigorous than that of friends of mine who attended public schools. ULS prepared me well in the areas of study and work habits and trained me to have the self-discipline to study and work hard at college."

Woods man takes part in festival

By Rachel J. O'Sullivan

Portland, Ore. — Life in the Navy isn't always easy for Lt. J.G. Paul A. Remick. But for the 24-year-old son of Leonard R. and Dolores L. Remick of Grosse Pointe Woods, everything was coming up roses when he and his ship, the USS Chancellorsville, were invited to participate in the 1992 Portland Rose Festival in June.

A fleet of more than two dozen Navy, Coast Guard and Canadian ships sailed into Portland Harbor to promote the Navy and celebrate the time-honored tradition of the Rose Festival.

The ships docked along the pier in the shadow of the ferris wheel, giving Remick and his shipmates an opportunity to show off their ship and explain their jobs to Portland tourists.

"I assist the ordinance officer with various weapons systems aboard," said Remick, a 1985 graduate of Bishop Gallagher High School in Harper Woods and a 1990 graduate of the University of Notre Dame.

Grosse Pointe Farms' loss is Grosse Pointe City's gain as two Hill businesses got approval to open up shop in the City.

The beauty salon 131 Rielle, which has been located in the basement of 131 Kercheval, will move to the former Shetler's Drugs on Fisher, across from Grosse Pointe South High School. The salon will be renamed Salon Rielle and will occupy three-quarters of the building. The remaining part of the structure will be occupied by American Dry Cleaners.

Gabrielle Cockell, co-owner of the Rielle salon with her husband, David, said the store will be restored to closely resemble the original building. The wooden facade will be removed to reveal enamel blocks used extensively in the 1930s when the building was constructed.

Cockell extensively researched the building while trying to capture the original look. In doing so, she discovered the building had been everything from a cobbler's shop to a bakery to a restaurant. It was even a beauty salon from 1936-39.

The City council approved a parking variance for the store, which is expected to open the second week in September.

Cockell said the salon will expand its current hairdressing, nail, skin and massage services and will add three employees.

In addition, Young Clothes, a Hill fixture for more than 40 years, will open shop in the former Revco building in the Katherine Stedman Baubie has been named president of the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library for the 1992-93 year.

Baubie named Friends president

She has served for the past two years as chairperson of the Promotion and Recognition committee which initiated the Great Grosse Pointe Read Aloud, the Author! Author! program and the library's involvement in the Detroit Free Press Gift of Reading program.

The 1992-93 Friends Board of Directors will hold its first meeting in September.

"I look forward to working with the Friends Board and the excellent library staff to continue to listen to the needs of the community and serve those needs," Baubie said. "We have a dynamic group of people on the board this year, a good blend of returning veterans and enthusiastic newcomers."

Newly elected officers include vice presidents Edward Deeb and Joseph Clor, and treasurer Robert Hackathorn. Newly elected trustees Ann Dalby, Stephen C. Brownell, Rod E. Gauvin and Susan Zuger will join returning board members Connie Frey, David Gaskin, Patricia Jeffs, Anne Musial, Sarah Rainey, Linda Schneider and Donald Sweeny III.

Sally Giacobbe will continue as staff secretary, and Kate Callas will continue as public relations consultant.

The Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library is one of the larger library support groups in the nation, with more than 1,800 individual members. Chartered in 1948, the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library regularly purchases books, equipment, materials, furnishings and original artwork for the library. The Friends group also sponsors adult and children's programs and special events.

Volunteers needed

The State Court Administrative Office is seeking volunteers to serve on the Wayne County Foster Care Review Board. Volunteers will be named to serve on one of the six boards currently operating within the county.

The Michigan Legislature established the Foster Care Review Board Program in 1984 in an effort to improve children's foster care programs throughout the state.

The Wayne County Review Boards meet monthly to review a representative sample of cases of children who are placed in foster care as the result of abuse or neglect.

Currently, Foster Care Review Boards are operating in Genesee, Ingham, Jackson, Kent, Lenawee, Muskegon, Oakland, Saginaw, St. Clair, and Washtenaw counties.

Board members will be selected to reflect a cross-section of the population of the county. Volunteers must live in Wayne County. Employees of the Department of Social Services, Juvenile Court, or a child placement agency are ineligible to serve on Foster Care Review Boards.

Volunteers will be expected to meet approximately one day each month in Wayne County and to attend an initial two-day training program in Lansing in November. The expenses for attending the monthly reviews and training sessions are reimbursed.

Citizens interested in volunteering for the Wayne County Review Board should write the Michigan Foster Care Review Board Program, 1200 Sixth Street, Rm P-150, Detroit 48226, or call (313) 256-1540.

The deadline for submitting applications is Sept. 4.

Is right wing too powerful in the GOP?

President George Bush energized the GOP National Convention and his national following with his acceptance speech last week but a major question still remains about the GOP tactics in the 1992 campaign.

The question is whether Bush and the GOP organization went so far to placate the party's right wing at their convention that they will cost themselves some of their independent and moderate conservative support in the fall campaign.

Many Democrats and even some Republicans think that party leaders did bow too often to the radical right in drafting their platform, in scheduling many of their convention speakers and in their denunciations of the Democratic ticket and the Democratic Congress.

True, it will be up to the general public to decide in November whether the Republicans were justified in their often personal and sometimes even mean-minded attacks in order, as they said, to answer Democratic charges.

However, despite such criticism, the GOP convention did narrow the lead of the Democratic ticket, according to the early post-convention public opinion polls, but did better with men than with women.

That was understandable in view of the attacks on Hillary Clinton and the veiled criticism of working women in general. In effect, it appears the GOP convention turned many women away from the party.

Bush pleased his audience and his followers with his pledge to seek another tax cut if he is re-elected, a proposal that has been widely criticized.

In the first place, a new tax cut would further postpone the day when the nation could finance the restoration of the national infrastructure, increase federal support of education and meet other national

Michigan a battleground state

Republicans as well as Democrats are describing Michigan as one of the battleground states in the 1992 presidential campaign.

GOP pollster Richard Wirthlin has said the election will turn on the states of Michigan, Ohio, New Jersey, Illinois and Pennsylvania. He added that George Bush will have to campaign in those states, as he already is doing here.

Bush started out winning the state's presidential primary in 1980 (over Ronald Reagan, no less), then was part of the Reagan-Bush team that won that fall and again in 1984, carried Michigan on his own in 1988 and was an easy victor in the 1992 presidential primary.

Yet that record of victories could come to an end in Michigan in November. The state's economic recession and its continuing heavy burden of unemployment offer the Democrats and Gov. Bill Clinton a good deal of hope.

In his speeches last week around Michigan and at the Detroit Economic Club, usually not an easy touch for Democrats, Clinton made an excellent impression.

Led by Gov. John Engler, the GOP is attacking Clinton's proposed new fuel economy standards that would require auto manufacturers' fleets to average 40 miles per gallon as contrasted with the current 27.5 mpg. The critics see the loss of 40,000 autoworkers' jobs.

On his visit to Michigan, however, Clinton met with Big Three auto executives as well as with UAW President Owen Bieber and emerged to say that while he does desire to improve auto fuel economy, he would be flexible on how to achieve it.

These developments and planned return trips to Michigan by both candidates indicate that Michigan, a GOP state in the last five presidential elections, is really turning into a battleground this year.

needs. Such a cut obviously would also make it more difficult to reduce the national deficit.

True, a tax cut might help revive business temporarily, but it is unrealistic to recommend that it be paid for by further budget savings without specifying which programs would have to be cut. Bush typically left those decisions to Congress.

Overall, too, the president dealt timidly with the economic issues that seem to be central to this year's presidential contest. While convention discussion of those issues was left to the president, he still failed to offer much of a recovery program or even to try to explain his long delay in recognizing the national recession on his doorstep.

The Republican convention also seemed to be schizophrenic in its approach to the nation's problems. The party got so busy looking backward at its past achievements that it forgot to get into that "vision thing" about the future that Bush has been wrestling with for four years.

In the end, in fact, many observers felt that more major messages sent from Houston dealt with the faults of the Democrats than with the future of America and what the Republicans would do to improve it if the GOP lease of the White House is extended.

It is true that the future course of the campaign — whether or not it follows the low road Bush embarked on earlier this week — will be set by Bush and James Baker, his new campaign manager.

But if George Bush loses his re-election bid, he can blame not only himself but the GOP right wing that prefers to protect its own narrow agenda even when it threatens to cost the party victory.

All aboard for the future

With the support of the councils of all five Pointes and Harper Woods, the futuring project now is poised to broaden its appeal to the people of the entire community.

After last week's approval by the councils of Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods, the project now has the endorsement of all six municipalities for its study of ways to save money through consolidation of services now provided independently and through other governmental efficiencies.

A steering committee made up of one representative from each cooperating municipality will meet soon to better define the common areas of interest and to refine the study model outlined in earlier sessions after consultations with Edward Barlow, a nationally recognized futurist.

Then, on Oct. 3, all citizens of the six communities will be invited to attend a half-day session with Barlow to discuss the trends, the issues and the makeup of task forces in various areas of interest.

We think the study is an excellent one both in its aims and in the process it plans to follow.

First, it is often said that to know where we are and where we are going we also need to know where we have been. Futurism encompasses that view because the experiences of the past as well as those of the present point to the direction we now seem to be going.

Second, by seeking citizen advice and cooperation, the project could serve as an educational tool by tapping into the broader community's own resources of ideas.

In the Pointes and Harper Woods, there surely are many experts and students of government in addition to those in official circles who would be willing to offer suggestions for constructive change.

In these days of widespread public frustration with and cynicism about government at all levels, a re-examination of local government with an eye on the future makes good sense.

If it gets good input from private citizens, the project could even revitalize our local governments and make them more efficient and more responsive to the needs of the people they serve.

HOW DO YOU SPELL RELIEF?

A view from the sidelines

by Wilbur Elston

After watching both the Democrats and the Republicans, I think it is time to abolish the national political conventions.

Conventions once served to select candidates for president and vice president. Now that responsibility has been taken over by the state primaries and caucuses that pick delegates pledged to specific candidates.

As a consequence, the conventions have become mere advertising and entertainment spectacles designed to showcase their nominees and their political beliefs and to serve as launching pads for the fall political campaigns.

As presently constituted, the conventions do not really serve an educational purpose. Neither party permits much public discussion of dissident views.

The Democrats banned a pro-life governor from the platform because he would not endorse their nominee. The GOP permitted some discussion of issues at platform committee hearings — but not on the convention floor where it could have had an educational effect.

As a working newspaperman, I have attended five national conventions, three of Republicans and two of Democrats, and I've followed most sessions of recent conventions via TV, radio and newspapers.

This year I was really disappointed in the GOP convention. As a citizen and a political independent, I was embarrassed that so many GOP speakers would deliver such an all-encompassing attack not only on all Democrats but also on independents and others who don't happen to agree with the GOP 100 percent.

In fact, I thought I was listening to a revival of the old House Un-American Activities Committee, now happily defunct, when Pat Buchanan contended that the Republicans were the only good guys in politics and hinted darkly, just as the HUAC used to do, that dissidents really had no place in America.

I doubt that conventions give either party much more than a temporary "bounce" in the national ratings. Thus abolishing the conventions could spare the public the blizzard of disinformation, charges and countercharges that "snowed" us this year.

If the Republicans and Democrats still want to meet, let them address their constituencies on closed-circuit television financed, if necessary, by the taxpayers. The cost would be worth it.

Letters

To the Editor:

On its meeting Aug. 10, the Grosse Pointe Board of Education discussed various options regarding the cost/benefit ratio of renovating the current site of board offices at 389 St. Clair.

This is a subject that has been the cause of much heated debate for the past several years. Now the board is faced with the option of improving the St. Clair facilities or renovating Barnes School, currently being used for community education courses and special functions.

In the last 10 years, numerous appraisals, surveys, studies, and proposals have been ordered by and presented to the board, not without some cost, I presume, to the taxpayers. Money has also been allocated for maintenance and improvements of the facilities on St. Clair.

The sentiment of many of the board members is that the building is in such a state of disrepair, that along with the need to downsize the school system, it is no longer beneficial to the system to be burdened with the building. In fact, a board member referred to the structures as "an embarrassment."

More letters on page 8A

Has it ever occurred to the board what the neighborhood would be like with a parking lot or condominiums on the street, with its increased traffic, noise levels and lighting? Bon Secours Hospital, which has shown interest in the property in the past, has already gobbled up enough of the neighborhood. Left unguarded, who knows when it will end.

Having been a resident of St. Clair for several years I look at the buildings and the neighborhood with pride. Ours is an area that is unique even to the Pointes. The buildings stand as a testament of our long and diverse history. This is an invaluable lesson for any community.

Had the board acted sooner, renovation costs could have been considerably less. To wantonly ignore or sell out on our culture and history would be a shame. Procrastination and a lack of foresight would seem to be the only cause for embarrassment on the board's part.

10 years, still learning

In September I'm planning to attend my 10-year high school reunion so I've been taking stock of my life and evaluating — much like voters are being asked to do — if I'm better off now than I was then.

Friends — many of whom I've only kept in token contact with in the last decade — and others with whom I've been close have been calling me asking if I was going, why I was going, if we can go together, if we could hang around with each other once we get there so we won't be embarrassed, and getting a contingency plan together in case it's mind-numbingly dull.

We ask each other if we've seen anyone recently — no; if we're nervous — not really; and what we hope to accomplish by forking over eighty bucks (for me and a date — like anyone would show up without a date) for what the invitation called "heavy hors d'oeuvres" along with an evening with a bunch of people who we haven't seen in 10 years and really didn't miss all that much anyway.

I guess curiosity is one reason. We all want to know how we compare with the rest of the people in our class. We all need to know that no matter what was said about us in high school we really weren't — and still aren't — losers. We also need to watch how the mighty, the school's elite, have fallen. We hope.

I Say

Ronald J. Bernas

I've learned some hard truths since the principal mispronounced my name and I walked across the stage at the Ford Auditorium to pick up my diploma. They're life lessons that forced adjustments in outlook for a sheltered young boy who only in the rarest of circumstances questioned what he was told and never dared say anything bad about anyone else.

I learned that adults — and I count myself one now — are fal-libile. And not just the strange old man down the street, or the bosses or the teachers you're supposed to find fault with when you're 18, but businessmen and lawyers and doctors and housewives, too.

That was a big lesson to an 18-year-old, but an even bigger one was when I learned that one must overlook those faults as others overlook yours.

I've learned that despite what we're told as children, cheaters do too prosper. That realization frustrated the idealistic young man who believed honest people were rewarded. I've also learned that I don't care if they prosper because I don't want to be like them anyway.

I've learned that nothing lasts forever. When I graduated high school my parents were married. After a divorce they've both gotten re-married, sold the home I grew up in and moved away. And one of the best, most alive people I ever knew — someone I was friends with since junior high and whom I graduated high school with and one of the few I wanted to see at the reunion — died a slow, painful death from cancer.

I've learned part of me must still be the shallow 18-year-old who made snap judgments based on appearances because

I've been furiously doing situps for several weeks trying to get rid of what 10 years of learning I liked beer has given me.

But I've also learned there's more to people — well, most people — than meets the eye.

I've found that you must never stop learning, even if it's just gaining knowledge about the human condition by watching others.

And most importantly, I've learned that sometimes the best thing to do in the face of adversity is to laugh, and the best person to laugh at is yourself.

I've learned that I was a fool when I graduated high school. And I've learned that that's OK because most people are.

But the biggest fools are the people who go back to their 10-year reunion not having learned a thing.

Good scouts

Former members of Boy Scout Troop 297 have been friends for more than 50 years. They got together recently (with some wives and a sister) for a cookout at the home of Joe Callahan of Grosse Pointe Shores.

Among the guests were their 91-year-old scoutmaster William R. Kay and the Rev. Edward Hurley, who is now the associate pastor at St. Lucy Catholic Church in St. Clair Shores.

Others who attended the reunion: Helen Zettner, Rev. Jerome Stine, John McNeely, Sister Clement Stine, Charles Lombardini, Halina Callahan, Marie McNeely, Helen Lombardini, John Zettner and Joe Callahan.

Call 1-800

Toll-free 800 service was invented by AT&T 25 years ago this month. The first year, 7 million 800 calls were placed. Last year, 10.17 billion 800 calls were made, roughly 40 percent of the calls that go through the AT&T network on a typical business day.

"Toll-free calling has made businesses more accessible and responsive to consumers," said Ana Gabriel, AT&T public relations manager. Entire industries have been sparked by 800 service.

"Imagine trying to call a catalog company without one. Shoppers today can order everything from clothing to flowers to pet potbelly pigs over 800 numbers."

AT&T keeps track of some of the most unusual uses of 800 numbers. Here's a sample:

- At the IBM Personal Systems HelpCenter, a technician took a call from a customer who asked some sophisticated questions about his PS/2 computer. The conversation was interrupted when the customer's mother called him for dinner. "I can't come down now Mom," hollered the caller, who turned out to be a 10-year-old boy. "I'm talking to IBM."

- Customer representatives at GE have been asked whether it's safe to drink the water from a dehumidifier and whether refrigerator racks can be removed and used for barbecuing. The answer in both cases is a resounding NO.

- One Lands' End customer used the company's 800 number to do some truly last-minute shopping. He called from the hospital's birthing room to order a diaper bag. His wife's contractions were less than two minutes apart and they were arguing about whether or not to have the bag monogrammed.

- Whirlpool's Customer Assistance Center gets a slew of calls every year from customers who have accidentally locked their ovens with their holiday turkeys inside. Dozens of Christmas dinners have been saved by Whirlpool consultants who talked callers through the procedure to unlatch their ovens.

How to get certificate honoring vets

Q — I understand that there are presidential certificates that commemorate a veteran's death. My husband was a World War II veteran who died several years ago. Would I be able to obtain one?

A — Yes. The Presidential Memorial Certificate is a parchment certificate with a calligraphic inscription expressing the nation's grateful recognition of a veteran's service. Certificates are issued in the name of honorably discharged, deceased veterans. Eligible recipients include next of kin, other relatives and friends.

Other family members and friends may request a certificate in the name of an eligible veteran. The veteran may have died at any time in the past. The local VA regional office generally originates the application for a certificate without a request from the next of kin.

But when a service member dies on active duty or if the veteran was not receiving a VA benefit, the next of kin may request a certificate. Requests should be accompanied by a copy of a document to establish honorable service. VA regional offices can assist in applying for certificates.

Well, it's a squirrely world, even for pundits

"How come you don't write about Big News anymore?" Cousin Elvira wanted to know. "You used to spout off about international affairs and political sleaze and stuff like that. Now all you write about is squirrels. You're letting down punditry worldwide."

Nancy Parmenter

Yikes. Punditry? Pundits are supposed to have an opinion about everything. Wait — an informed opinion. The only person who thinks I know everything is my mother.

But I have an excuse. I've been upset about Woody and Mia. The personal lives of movie stars usually manage to play themselves out without any input from me, but this is different. How could their intellectual, creative, independent, non-possessive, equal — and, yeah, neurotic — relationship devolve into such a sad soap opera with psychologically incestuous overtones? I am heartbroken.

OK, OK, it's not only that. We pundits just hate to admit it, but there are some things we don't understand. And today's world is full of imponderables.

I don't understand how Africa can continue its horrifying slide into chaos while the world stands aside. Bloodshed, starvation, disease, anarchy, tribal animosity appear to be carrying parts of the continent into oblivion.

I don't understand Serbians and Bosnians, either. How can there be so much hate and so little interest in trying to find a workable solution?

One pines, not for the Cold War, but for the order it imposed. And one (at least this one) is reluctant to see that human nature unleashed from that constraint is unable and even unwilling to maintain order — or, perhaps, willing to use any means at hand to impose some ugly and self-serving order on others. This is humanity in its most debased manifestation.

I'm a born compromiser; I don't get implacability.

So some of the things I don't write about are because I don't understand them. I don't understand the state's insurance tangle, either.

One hundred and eighty degrees around the circle are things I don't write about because every other columnist does. No snide word passed my pen when Dan Quayle misspelled "potato" and an extremely minor humorous footnote somehow blew into a national crisis. The coverage was ridiculous in the extreme, first, because no one in this country can spell, and, second, because it distracted from the real issues.

Take the ineptitude thing. It misses the point completely. Quayle is an average intellect, an ordinary golf-playing nice guy with family money. He's nobody special, but he's doing OK in the not-very-special job of vice president.

But the nobody special is also the standardbearer for the conservatives. He isn't inept at all. In my book, the word is "scar-ry." Like Ronald Reagan before him, Quayle wants to dismantle government and narrow citizens' rights. He belongs (very affably, to be sure) to the "I've got mine, tough if you haven't got yours" school. He actually subscribes to the Republican platform, which believes business should be unleashed, gays have no civil rights, and women aren't smart enough to decide what's good for them. And he'll run for president next time.

Now that I'm getting warmed up, let's get shut of this draft-dodging thing that dogs Clinton like it dogged Quayle four years ago.

Has everyone forgotten what it was like in the late '60s? It was a time when only the disadvantaged were drafted. Deferments made it possible for men with the means to avoid the draft and pile on college credits. Only a few people needed to out-and-out object by running to Canada or going to jail; most used either graduate school or the National Guard to avoid actual service.

The difference between Clinton and Quayle is that when their feet were held to the fire 25 years later, Clinton had the guts to speak honestly about his intellectual conflict concerning the war, while Quayle tried to pretend that weekend warriors in the National Guard were facing the same fire as the soldiers in the Vietnam jungle.

One more reason not to write incessantly about governmental doings at home or abroad is that, increasingly, real people feel that the government has nothing to do with their real lives.

It isn't that no one cares if there's genocide in Bosnia or Cambodia or Sri Lanka or Somalia. But people feel powerless to prevent it, living in a country that acts quickly when its economic interests are affected, but slower than a turtle (if at all) when the concerns are merely humanitarian. (And a country, I might add, where both the general public and the press are so provincial and inward-turned that they don't really understand what's going on elsewhere, and therefore can't make truly informed decisions.)

Besides, there are plenty of concerns right in our own houses. Call it selfish, but if you are losing sleep, it's probably over a job, or teenage rebellion, or financing your retirement, or adult children too poor to afford good health insurance. It isn't because George has a power problem with Saddam, or even because (much closer to home) Ed McNamara has a power problem with Bob Ficano. Starvation on another continent is sobering, but too distant to raise one's personal dander.

Right now, most of the political discussion at home is either superficial or deliberately obfuscating. Voters grope their way to a new consensus with few to lead the national conversation.

Political analyst William Greider says the American political system has been destabilized by the end of the Cold War every bit as much as the systems in Eastern Europe, though for different reasons. Further, he says, our system depends so much on hierarchical authority and secrecy that citizens have almost no way to test the truth for themselves.

And that leaves us pundits groping, too.

Rocks in their heads

Two suburban gals, who have strong roots in New England, were shooting the breeze concerning landscaping ideas for their yards. It developed that each of them had yearned for a rock as a focal point on the lawn. And that was the beginning of an escapade few men could comprehend.

My neighbor wanted to give a rock to her husband for Father's Day. It would be a gift fraught with symbolism, a concrete (pardon the pun) reminder of a solid man, father, husband, etc. My reasons, other than esthetic, were colored by memories of huge rocks scattered by Mother Nature throughout the woods surrounding our summer home. I used to sit on my thinking rock as a young girl, daydreaming, reading or sulking as the mood warranted. For as long as we have lived in our present home, a rock was one of those silly items of "stuff" I'd like to have one day, right up there with a gazebo and a horse!

So we girls made some phone calls, got some leads, hopped into the car and headed for the quarry. After 15 miles or so we reached our turnoff and headed up a gravel road. We tromped across the mud and gravel to a trailer where we asked who was in charge and made our wishes known. A burly type in a baseball cap pointed out the door to a large barren area dotted with rocks, and suggested we look it over and make our choices.

The rocks came in all shapes, sizes and colors. My friend was in search of a treasure approximately the size of a large trash can. (We knew this, because we had hauled a receptacle out for size estimate.) I had decided that our yard could handle a larger rock, as in mega boulder. We made our tentative choices and headed back to the trailer to talk price. In our research we had learned that one can pay anywhere from 5 to 20 cents a pound, which meant nothing to us as we attempted to estimate the weight of our choices.

At the trailer we were informed that we would need to hire outside contractors to load the rocks onto a truck and take them to a weigh station. We were told that it is impossible to guess the weight of a rock by size, as they are made of varying components, some of denser material than others.

After determining the price of the rock by weight it would be necessary to find outside help to transport the rocks to their new homes. It had never occurred to us that a heavy truck would have to traverse our manicured lawns to place the rocks in their final resting places, tearing up grass along the way. On our drive home sans rocks we noticed how many rocks are placed at the base of driveways. There's a reason for this. Those babies don't roll easily!

It became apparent that these decisions could not be made "lightly" and would take careful planning and calculating. Indeed, this could be a "heavy" investment. The gazebo and horse were sounding more feasible by the minute. And why not another nice tie for Father's Day?

If my neighbor or I decide to install a sprinkler system one day, necessitating tearing up our lawns, perhaps we will have our rocks. In the meantime, the rocks around here will remain in our heads!

Unequal

To the Editor:

I have been an attorney in the Detroit area for the past 25 years. During this period I have been aware of a wide disparity and inequity in the funding of our school districts.

Based upon this knowledge and my knowledge of constitutional law, I believe that our state's public school financing system, which is based substantially on local property taxes and results in wide disparities in school revenue, should be held to violate the equal protection clauses of our state and federal constitutions, since the funding scheme invidiously discriminates against the poor because it makes the quality of a child's education a function of the wealth of his/her parents and neighbors.

Many wealthy districts have excellent educational facilities, whereas the poor districts, because of the inability of the property holders to spend more, have schools wherein the class size is much larger, courses offered are fewer, inadequate counseling is available, artistic programs are lacking and buildings are old and rundown. Therefore, the educational opportunities made available to children in some districts, such as Detroit, are substantially inferior to the educational opportunities available to children of other districts.

As a result of the preceding inequities, many students in poorer districts are not as well-educated or adjusted wherein they are able to effectively function in our society. The effect of this is apparent. However, as time passes, our standard of living could be severely affected because of the lack of trained workers.

Other states, such as Arkansas, California, Florida, Minnesota, New York, Ohio and Texas have already acted to proclaim their state's similar school financing laws unconstitutional. If our state legislature will act to provide more funds to impoverished school districts, our state's law may someday justly treat everyone fairly and assist everyone to acquire quality education and do much to prevent unequal job opportunity, disparate income, and limited ability to participate in the social, cultural and political aspects of our society.

To the Editor:

Threatening rains notwithstanding, once again the splendid sound of our own Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of maestro Felix Resnick, rang out over Lake St. Clair, ending as always, with Sousa's rousing "Stars and Stripes Forever" and brilliant fireworks, to the cheers of a large and enthusiastic crowd.

We are so fortunate to participate in this great annual tradition on the beautiful grounds of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, our community center par excellence. May it continue in years to come, for the enjoyment of audiences and performers alike.

Many people

To the Editor:

When the Grosse Pointe Symphony performed at the last concert of the summer Music Festival, it was the input of many people who made it possible:

Dr. Mark Weber, director of the War Memorial;

Alex Sucek, founder/artistic director of the festival;

All the related staff at the War Memorial;

The Grosse Pointe News for providing the opportunity to publicize this event;

Felix Resnick, conductor, and members of the Grosse Pointe Symphony who played on though inclement weather threatened;

And most especially our audience who braved chilly weather to give our orchestra an enthusiastic acclaim.

The Grosse Pointe Symphony Board thanks all of you.

Delightful

To the Editor:

Thursdays on the Terrace is such a delightful event and I want to make sure no one misses it. Thursday, Aug. 27, and Thursday, Sept. 3, will be your last opportunity to experience Thursdays on the Terrace at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford Activities Center, 1100 Lakeshore.

Tea is served from 3 to 5 p.m. Most enjoyable is the selection of bread and crackers, cheese and fruit, and wine or herbal iced tea, served on the terrace of the activities center, adjacent to the cut flower garden.

Following tea you are able to view the 37 paintings from the 17th through 19th centuries, including some of France's greatest masters, such as Boucher, Renoir, Degas, Gauguin, Pissarro, Courbet and Monet.

The exhibition is touring six cities in the United States. Admission is $5 a person and includes tea and entrance to the exhibition. Advance reservations are required. This is a lovely way to get together with friends as the summer draws to a close.

Finally, it's less painful to get rid of hemorrhoids than it is to live with them.

Hemorrhoids can be as uncomfortable to live with as they are to discuss. And when they become severe, conventional surgery often seems like the only option. But now the St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan offers a different option — hemorrhoid treatment through laser surgery.

Are there many advantages to laser hemorrhoidectomy surgery? Yes. It's usually an outpatient procedure. In most cases there is a decrease in blood loss, less pain and reduced swelling and drainage.

And most importantly, laser surgery patients may recover faster and may be back doing the things they want to do without the pain or discomfort of hemorrhoids.

The St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan offers an independent staff of skilled laser trained surgeons, specially trained nurses and state-of-the-art laser equipment. For a referral to a qualified laser surgeon or for more information on laser surgery call the St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan. It's a decision you'll find easy to live with.

Local Friendship Force to host German ambassadors

By Jerome Allotta
Special Writer

When Grosse Pointe Woods residents Lillian and Ed Zemmin read about the Friendship Force while vacationing in Florida, they recognized its potential for a cultural exchange with foreigners within the confines of their own home.

Since joining the local chapter of the organization this spring, the Zemmins hosted New Zealanders in June, and will guide two Germans coming to the Detroit area in September.

Started as a way of moving diplomacy from the formal setting of the conference table to the more homey atmosphere of the dinner table, the Friendship Force has achieved some enviable results.

The Friendship Force, established in 1977, is a private, non-profit organization with members in more than 40 countries. Its purpose is to bring citizens together through international exchanges.

The success of these exchanges is not measured by deals made or treaties signed but by handshakes and friendships formed. Through the Friendship Force, contacts are made at the grassroots level, where individuals have a chance to promote international understanding and cooperation with people of all nationalities, races, creeds, and political beliefs.

Since 1977, more than 90,000 citizen ambassadors have embarked on exchanges of goodwill, involving the sharing of culture, language, and ideas.

The philosophy behind the Friendship Force is for hosts, who receive a nominal fee from the organization, to open their homes and their hearts and commit time to their ambassador guests. There are no stringent guidelines for hosting. Members can host for a day or a week, whatever suits them.

Hosts in the United States are mostly retirees, but ages range from 25 on up.

Doris Finlay, president of the Detroit area chapter of Friendship Force, started in September 1991, said that through the organization ambassadors are more likely to see things they wouldn't ordinarily encounter if they were to stay at a hotel.

"That's where the real difference lies — you get to see how people live their lives every day... with a little embellishment," she said with a laugh.

The Friendship Force of Greater Detroit, which was founded by Lech Gurne, will host 13 ambassadors from Braunschweig, Germany, from Sept. 25 to Oct. 2. They will be welcomed into the homes of host members — who live in communities from New Baltimore to Brighton and from Grosse Pointe to Birmingham — and given an intimate look at life here in Michigan.

The Detroit area chapter, which includes about 90 members, has its headquarters in Shelby Township.

Other Michigan Friendship Force chapters are located in Grand Rapids and Traverse City, and there is a growing push to form a club in Lansing.

In less than a year since its inception, the Detroit area chapter so far has hosted groups of Russians and New Zealanders.

Upon arrival, ambassadors are greeted by a welcoming party at the airport. Hosting members know in advance who and how many will be staying in their homes, where ambassadors are treated to bed and breakfast. Lunches and dinners are often eaten out. Paying for these meals is usually alternated between host and ambassador.

When Andrei Popov stayed with the Finlays, he treated his hosts to a bit of Russian culture by cooking them borscht, a soup made of beets, sour cream, sometimes meat, and topped with dill.

Activities and small trips are prearranged, but the emphasis in the exchange is on building friendships, often long-term relationships, rather than travel.

"Faces, not places," said Wayne Smith, founder of Friendship Force International, "is the goal of our organization."

For the Germans, trips to Niagara Falls, Greenfield Village and the Henry Ford Museum are in the works. These trips are at the ambassadors' expense.

Finlay said that the language difference usually doesn't present much of a barrier. Many of the ambassadors from overseas have some fluency in English, and exchanges are usually made so that people have some fundamental similarities, based on brief profiles submitted to Friendship Force headquarters in Atlanta.

"Because I was a kindergarten teacher at one time, I'm interested in anyone who's in teaching," said Lillian Zemmin, who will host two German women with her husband in September. The fact that the Zemmins have fluency in German and the Germans speak some English will help the visit go smoothly.

Each Friendship Force member pays an induction fee of $15, $20 for a family. Ambassadors pay separately for transportation. In the United States travel abroad is arranged through Friendship Force headquarters, which books flights in bulk and uses any profits to run the office, said Finlay. In October, a group of Brazilians will visit the Detroit area, and plans are under way for members of the Detroit chapter to represent the United States as ambassadors in a visit to Israel and Egypt next March.

The Friendship Force has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize by U.S. Congressman Ed Jenkins. "There is evidence and testimony that the Friendship Force, while devoid of actual political activity, has had an influence on the collapse of the Berlin Wall, the advance of democracy in the former Soviet Union and the promotion of peaceful solutions to problems in the Middle East and China," Jenkins said.

The Nobel prize winner is announced by the committee in Oslo, Norway, in October.

The Friendship Force was organized 15 years ago by Presbyterian minister and former missionary Wayne Smith, who still serves as its president. Smith currently is living in Moscow with his wife and daughter, where he is pastor of a nondenominational church and is organizing relief programs to supply the Soviets with food and medical supplies.

The organization coordinated its first successful international exchange between Atlanta and Newcastle-upon-Tyne, England, on July 4, 1977.

While the Friendship Force is not an official program of the United States or of any other government, former President Jimmy Carter and Mrs. Carter have personally supported the organization from the beginning and are still among its prime movers. Mrs. Carter is honorary chairperson and is an active member of the international board of directors.

So there!

Two Detroit men were arrested Aug. 7 after they were stopped by Park police on Mack for speeding.

After the stop was made, the driver got out of his car and approached the police car, then got back into his car and sped away.

Following a short chase, the car was stopped and the driver was apprehended after a violent struggle. Police determined the man was wanted by the Detroit Police Department on an outstanding warrant. The passenger in the car was wanted for a parole violation.

After he was brought under control the driver told the police he had AIDS and that he hoped he had infected them.

Anna Dodge's Packard traced to bucolic Romeo

Anna Dodge drove a Packard.

Well, not personally, but she owned at least one and kept it in her automotive stable at Rose Terrace, the estate that the Dodge Brothers car- and truck-building empire bought.

Mrs. Dodge's chauffeur arranged the sale of a special-body 1938 Packard limousine to our friend Joseph Szilagyi. That transaction took place almost 40 years ago. We learned about it when we met Szilagyi while researching a story about Kurt Ziebart.

Ziebart and Szilagyi worked together at the Packard dealership that once occupied the graceful-but-now-empty building on East Jefferson at Lakepointe (most recently Lakepointe Oldsmobile). They repaired Packards there in the 1950s, and when they weren't doing transmissions or brakes or tune-ups, they were experimenting with some goop they knew would inhibit rust on car underbodies and panels.

The goop wasn't the invention, though. It was the application process that eventually made the Ziebart name synonymous with rustproofing and a kind of household word before galvanized steel and aluminum butted in on the industry.

Anyway, Ziebart and Szilagyi used to sneak out on the pier at the Little Club late at night back then to do a little unauthorized fishing. Could it have been there that they learned about the Packard being for sale? Might have been, since Rose Terrace was next door.

Szilagyi bought the Packard limousine and held onto it for a few years. He says he eventually sold it to Alvin McCauley, formerly of Packard, who in turn sold it to a Detroit restaurateur named Don Stockol. Waino Husko bought it from Stockol, and today it rests in pastoral splendor in Romeo.

I know because I saw it. So did Joe Szilagyi, who patiently drove out to the Huskos with me for a visit.

Husko had been in touch several months earlier, extending an invitation to see the Packard and several other things the retired General Motors design staff employee has collected.

Automotive-wise, Husko also owns a monogrammed V-12 special-body Packard that belonged to Horace Dodge; an early-production Corvette; and a mid-'20s Ford pickup carrying a cutter sleigh in its bed. He also has a couple of rare imported vehicles, one with a fancy body from a French builder whose name we could barely distinguish under the flashlight in the enormous, closed barn where it's kept. The other is a low-slung British sports car.

Husko said the identity of these two needs to remain secret, as potential buyers have been after him for some time, checkbooks in hand.

In the garage beside his historic 1834 home in Romeo, the designer/collector shields a perfect soft-yellow '55 Chevrolet Bel Air four-door sedan and a '69 Pontiac GTO from the elements. The family's everyday Cadillac is forced to live outside.

A vintage Ford tractor straddles the driveway; the chicken coop and pig house both are stuffed with parts, tools and various treasures. An antique corn picker was rusting quietly in the afternoon sunshine.

The Dodge-family Packard was last used in the '60s when the Huskos' two daughters were married. One of the men said he had heard it might be worth $100,000. Szilagyi said when he owned it, he changed the 10 mm sparkplugs to 14 mm, "so they wouldn't blow out."

They inched their way among the collectibles and peered with flashlights under the Packard's hood. In the cavernous building, dust and cottonwood seed have been settling on vehicles, fireplace mantels, stained glass, beams, books and other treasures for years. Szilagyi admired the beautiful carpentry of the barn ceiling.

Szilagyi and Husko exchanged training and work backgrounds. Husko said he was briefly with Massey-Ferguson. Now 81, he retired many years ago from General Motors. He has been collecting cars and a variety of artifacts from estates for years.

Szilagyi, 76, said he once worked on a Packard owned by Joseph Stalin. A Soviet army officer watched him the entire time, he said. He also did J. Edgar Hoover's car at the same facility on East Jefferson at St. Antoine. No one observed him on that occasion, he added. At least not that he noticed.

"I almost went to work for GM in 1963," Szilagyi recalled. "Chrysler made me an offer and I went with them in product planning and development."

The Husko homestead was only partially furnished at the time of our visit. Favorite chairs had been moved to an apartment where the couple temporarily lives. Mrs. Husko is recovering from a debilitating stroke. She comes out to the tree-shaded house to do things like mow its 3-1/2 acres of grass.

Some time ago, bees nested above the living room; honey stains the white ceiling and, in the worst of times, drips down onto the carpeting below. Mrs. Szilagyi offered a solution. She said hairspray may put an end to this apian empire-building. It stops the creatures in mid-flight, she explained.

The wives demurred from the barn expedition. They sat behind the house, near the 35-foot well which still supplies household water, enjoying a perfect summer afternoon after sampling little chocolate-covered ice cream confections.

Inside the back door there's a collection of hats on a rack. Toy cars race across a walnut bureau. There are interesting containers and glass and porcelain. In the cellar, with its steep steps, beamed ceiling and dirt floor, sits a wooden wash tub on legs. More items line shelves.

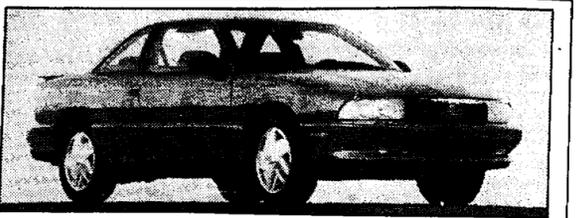

Mrs. Husko said she wouldn't mind getting rid of a lot of the things they have adopted over the years. Her husband shows no such inclination. He promised to attend to several collectibles as he examined the Packard papers Szilagyi had bought.

"Joe, will you come back out again sometime and we can talk about engines?" Husko asked.

Olds Achieva: Pleasant it is, sexy it's not

Oldsmobile restyled its smallest car for 1992 and changed its name from Calais to Achieva. A later addition to the line is the Achieva SCX coupe. An SCX with 2.3-liter Quad 4 dual-overhead cam engine and five-speed manual transmission was a pleasant car, but not very exciting for being billed as sexy and fun-to-drive.

It has no trouble getting up to speed on the freeway, but this is not a muscle car. There's no feeling of power in the lower gears, there's no tamed rumble in the exhaust and there's too much engine noise.

The Achieva is an excellent design, with ample interior space and smart, fashionable exterior styling. A ride selector lets you choose between soft and sporty suspension settings.

But some might think the $16,000 sticker price a bit steep. With a base price of about $12,700, the value of the SCX package of modified engine and sporty styling touches may seem dubious.

Cars will be smarter by the end of the decade, study says

"Smart cars" will drive out of the science fiction stories and onto U.S. highways in the next decade, according to a University of Michigan survey of experts in North America, Europe and Japan.

Radar systems that warn of obstacles, radios that receive warnings of traffic tie-ups, electric maps that compute shortest routes, and "adaptive cruise control" that keeps a car in pace with other cars are some of the technologies that will be available before the turn of the century, the U-M study forecasts. "The concept of intelligent vehicle-highway systems (IVHS) has gained increasing prominence as a promising approach for improving the road transportation systems in North America," according to Steven E. Underwood, assistant research scientist at the U-M College of Engineering and author of the forecast. "Five years ago, the practical relevance of these systems to current transportation problems was envisioned by only a handful of enthusiasts, but now the field has emerged as a significant area of applied research and development in road transportation," he adds.

Based on confidential surveys of experts, the "Delphi Forecast and Analysis of Intelligent-Vehicle Highway System Through 1991" looks at 30 automotive technologies that are part of IVHS development, including driver information systems, route guidance and navigation devices, collision warning and avoidance technologies, and traffic management, fleet location and dispatch systems.

For each system or technology, the survey forecasts the likely market penetration and cost to the customer for different segments of the auto industry, including luxury sedans, sport coupes, commercial vehicles, public-sector fleets, freight carriers and toll-collection authorities.

Motorists information systems — including radios that receive information about congestion or accidents on the route chosen by the driver, devices that display maps and other information, and "may-day" transmitters to send out distress calls — will be introduced in the early 1990s and in widespread use within the decade, according to the U-M study.

"Within 15 years, most vehicles will have some form of localized traffic information radio for route-specific traffic reports," Underwood says. "And as the cost of static storage devices goes down, more vehicles will adopt on-board 'yellow pages' services."

Although systems that help drivers select the best routes to their destinations will be slower to develop, the survey respondents expect that nearly 5 percent of the vehicles on the road in 2000 will have some form of 'route guidance' technology, and it will be commonplace — used by more than 50 percent of the vehicles on the road — within 25 years.

Collision-avoidance systems, or sensors that warn drivers of objects in the vehicle's path, should reach 5 percent of the automotive market within 10 years, according to the U-M survey. The cost per vehicle is estimated at $325 to $500. "Within 30 years, collision-avoidance systems will be required on all vehicles," Underwood says.

"Automatic braking systems will follow on the heels of frontal warning systems with a lag of between 6 to 10 years, until the systems are mandated," he adds.

An extension of standard cruise control, adaptive cruise control, which matches the speed of a vehicle with the speed of vehicles in front, "will be the most popular item of the control systems," Underwood says. At a cost of $400, adaptive cruise control will be included on 5 percent of all vehicles by 2004, and on 50 percent of vehicles by 2015, according to the survey respondents.

"Platooning," or systems that electronically join vehicles in small groups to follow a lead vehicle, and "chauffeuring" systems that would assume control of vehicles on limited-access highways will never be used in a significant number of vehicles, according to the U-M survey.

"Most respondents indicated that they would never be adopted without government support," Underwood says. "And if they are eventually adopted, their use will be confined to a small portion of the population."

One of the first IVHS systems that will win wide acceptance is automatic toll debiting and billing, according to the U-M survey. Devices at toll booths will be able to identify vehicles as they pass through and bill the owners or deduct the value of the trip from a debit card encased in the vehicle.

"Road pricing" systems, that assess fees to drivers based on usage or other criteria, "will take a while to catch on, but when they do, they will become widely deployed at a fast rate," Underwood says. One promising use of the technology is to assess road fees based on demand in order to manage congestion, he notes.

The survey was sponsored by the U-M Program in Intelligent Vehicle-Highway Systems in the College of Engineering and the Transportation Research Institute.

Clinton talks economics in Detroit, gets mixed response

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton last week told the Economic Club of Detroit that George Bush was making good on his promise to "do what it takes" to get elected.

"It's obvious that George Bush is a lot more interested in beating me than in helping you," Clinton told the 2,300 people who attended the luncheon.

Clinton's attack was an effort to neutralize Bush's post-convention "bounce" in the polls that threatened Clinton's 20-point lead.

The Arkansas governor had originally planned to outline his economic policy, but a good portion of his hour-long talk was spent fending off barbs delivered in President Bush's acceptance speech the night before.

He was suffering not only from Bush's attack, but from the results of an overnight poll done by CBS News and the New York Times which showed Clinton's lead in the polls had diminished to the point where the race was a dead heat.

Clinton and Bush are expected to target Michigan and its 18 electoral votes — Clinton to woo Reagan Democrats back to the fold and Bush to keep them. Bush campaigned in Clinton Township Tuesday and vice president Dan Quayle is expected to be in Grand Rapids tomorrow for a rally.

His economic plan puts people first, Clinton said, and he reiterated his idea to end the current welfare system, making it a second chance, not a way of life.

"The American dream is in trouble," Clinton said.

He outlined his plans to help promote business by pushing for tax credits for investment in new plants and equipment, tax cuts for those who make five-year investments in new businesses and tax credits for companies that expand new technologies.

Companies that move jobs abroad and shut down plants in the United States would no longer receive tax breaks.

He would fully fund the Head Start program and institute apprenticeship programs for those who do not attend college and provide loan programs for those who do. Those loans would be paid back with community service, a sort of Peace Corps within U.S. boundaries.

His plan was met with equal parts optimism and skepticism, with experts lauding and paning it, but it seemed to arouse more interest than did Bush's plan outlined in his acceptance speech the previous night.

On Monday, in response to his critics, Bush proposed a $10-billion plan to retrain the unemployed and underemployed workers.

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Charles Fisher III, left, chairman and president of NBD Bancorp, talked with Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton before the Arkansas governor's speech to the Detroit Economic Club. Fisher told reporters he thought Clinton handled himself well, but when asked whether Clinton would make a good president, Fisher hedged.

Decision kills invocation, benediction at G.P. graduations

By Jerome Allotta
Special Writer

Last June the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that nonsectarian prayers delivered at a public school graduation violated First Amendment provisions separating church and state.

For Grosse Pointe schools the decision will forbid the invocation and benediction — a time-honored practice — at school graduation ceremonies. "I think it's unfortunate that we cannot continue a tradition that has been a practice at our schools for decades," said Carl Anderson, a school board trustee. Others are looking for a way to circumvent the ruling, proposing baccalaureates — religious celebrations honoring graduates — and parent-sponsored graduations. But if diplomas are to be handed out, then these functions would be considered school events and therefore subject to the high court ruling.

Baccalaureates have been held in the Grosse Pointes in the past, but were phased out years ago from apparent lack of interest.

Ed Shine, superintendent of Grosse Pointe schools, said the "law is clear" and that the schools intend to obey it. "If people have complaints we will listen to them and try to help them understand the law and that we must obey it," said Shine.

The ruling in the case of Lee vs. Weisman, was the latest in a 30-year series of decisions by the Supreme Court restricting prayer in public schools. The decision came as a surprise because several justices, including Anthony M. Kennedy, who wrote the majority opinion, had previously suggested they intended to rework the judicial standards governing the separation of church and state.

Kennedy wrote that the First Amendment had been violated by what he called "pervasive" government involvement in a religious activity that left students no other choice but to participate.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice Antonin Scalia said, while no one should be compelled to participate, "it is a shame to deprive our public culture of the opportunity, and indeed the encouragement, for people to do it voluntarily."

The case which gave rise to the court's June 24 decision involved a nonsectarian invocation and benediction delivered by a rabbi at a Providence, R.I., junior high school graduation ceremony. A student, Deborah Weisman, and her father, Daniel, filed suit against the school's practice, endorsed by the city's school board, of inviting members of the clergy to offer prayers at graduation ceremonies. The practice had been common throughout the United States.

The federal District Court in Providence and the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, in Boston, both agreed with the Weismans and their American Civil Liberties Union lawyers that the prayers were unconstitutional. The basis on which these courts ruled was a 1971 Supreme Court decision, Lemon v. Kurtzman.

That case, which the Bush administration sought to overturn, had established three tests for government-sponsored religious activity: it must have a secular purpose; it must neither advance nor inhibit religion as its primary effect; and it must avoid "excessive entanglement" of government with religion.

Country comes to the city at the State Fair

With summer upon us, preparations are being made for the season's biggest event, the 1992 Michigan State Fair. The oldest fair in the nation, the 144th annual Michigan State Fair will run Aug. 28 through Sept. 7 and will offer something for everyone. This year's lineup includes many new and exciting events: an electrifying Tae Kwon Do competition, and the thrill of demolition derby. Many old favorites such as Kachunga the Alligator Wrestler and the Thorn Apple Valley racing pigs are returning to beguile fairgoers as they have in the past.

Ridge Boys, Bobby Vinton and Sawyer Brown.

Grandstand entertainment includes the smash-em up USA Demolition Derby.

The Michigan State Fair Coliseum will be a horse fancier's dream as the best equines, riders and trainers compete in a variety of contests. Arabians, Clydesdales, and saddle mules are among the breeds to be shown. The elegance of dressage and the electricity of barrel racing are just a few of the equestrian events to be featured at this year's fair. And, the Dodge Ram Tough Truck Rodeo returns with its bronco riding, calf roping and bull riding competitions.

Local entertainment, featured in the Coliseum Grove, is always a favorite at the Michigan State Fair and will present local favorites Alexander Zonjic and Norma Jean Bell. The ear-splitting twang of hog calling and husband calling won't overshadow the assortment of activities at the fair. Clowns and marching bands, special days for senior citizens and veterans, and children's contests galore are among scheduled events.

Agriculture and livestock will take center stage in the fair's exhibition areas as Michigan's farmers showcase their finest products. Championship beef and dairy cattle, sheep, swine, and poultry will be displayed, along with the best vegetables and produce, maple products, and wine the Great Lakes State has to offer.

Everyone can take part in community and fine arts at the fair. Participants of all ages are encouraged to take part in this year's wide slate of activities.

Combined with midway rides, great food and souvenirs, the 1992 Michigan State Fair promises educational opportunities and entertainment for people of all ages. I-696 affords easy access to the fairgrounds, located at the corner of Eight Mile and Woodward in Detroit. Admission to the fair is $5; $2 for children 6-11 years of age; and children 5 and under will be admitted free. Parking for the day is $4.

Friends to picnic

The Friends of Belle Isle will host a picnic on Sunday, Sept. 20, from 3 to 7 p.m. in the casino on the veranda.

There will be food provided by the Normandie Restaurant and music by Don King & Friends. There'll also be tarot card readings, croquet and other surprises.

Cost is $10 a person. Proceeds will benefit the Belle Isle Senior Center.

For tickets, call Diane Maynard or Gloria Byers at 267-7135.

The group is asking people to send in their favorite memories of past times on the island, particularly at the casino, for a contest. Photos should be at the office by Sept. 14. Winners will be announced at the picnic. Send entries to Friends of Belle Isle, 8909 E. Jefferson, Detroit, Mich. 48214.

Rentenbach to aid MD telethon

Eric Rentenbach of Grosse Pointe Park will participate in the 27th annual Muscular Dystrophy Association Labor Day Telethon that begins at 9 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 6, and runs until 7 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 7.

The telethon, on Channel 2 with anchor Joe Glover, will feature 40 minutes of network entertainment, patient stories and updates followed by 20 minutes of local segments, aired at 20 minutes past each hour.

Rentenbach, who has Duchennes muscular dystrophy, chaired a superdance while he was in high school that raised $3,200 for MDA. He will begin art school this fall at the University of Michigan. His parents are Paul and Joyce Rentenbach of the Park.

Finally!

The weather held out for at least one beautiful night on the grounds of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial for the Sun Sounds Orchestra Aug. 6. The wet weather this summer made this the only Thursday night concert held outdoors in the Sounds of Summer series, co-sponsored by St. John Hospital and Medical Center. Karl and Jackie O'Keefe, above, were among the many who took advantage of the weather.

Jaguars head to Ford House

The 25th Concours d'Elegance, sponsored by Jaguar Affiliates Group of Michigan, will be held on Saturday, Sept. 12, at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House. It will feature more than 125 cars, from all over the Midwest.

Vintage saloon cars, as well as new XJ-6 roadsters, will grace the grounds. Special cars will highlight the show, like the classic SS 100, Jaguar's first real sports car introduced in the 1930s. More recent XK-SS models, E-type roadsters from the 60s and 70s, and perhaps even the all-new XJ-220 supercar will be on display.

Jaguar memorabilia will also be displayed, commemorating both the competitive shows and community activities the club has been involved with during the past 25 years.

Besides the car competition, the Jaguar organization also uses the concours as a fundraiser, with all parking fees donated to Boyssville.

Admission is $5 a person, with no charge for children under 12. The gates will be open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. There is ample parking outside the grounds for $2 a vehicle.

Those interested in entering a car should contact chairman Otto Hahne at 588-1009 for more information.

Local officers of the Jaguar Affiliates Group of Michigan are Jerry Stocking of Grosse Pointe Woods, treasurer, and James Campbell of St. Clair Shores, British Sports Car Council.

Calling all cars

The freshmen at Grosse Pointe North will wash cars on Saturday, Aug. 29, at Standard Federal Bank at Mack and Cook Road from 2 to 5 p.m.

The fundraiser will help the class of 1996 with their homecoming.

More students are needed as well as parent chaperones. To volunteer or for more information, call 886-9134.

Study shows productivity increases with age

We know it, but do they know it?

That is a question many older workers ask themselves when they are pondering whether to retire, stay on the job or seek new employment.

They know they are still capable of doing a good job but suspect their employer thinks otherwise. Laws against age bias notwithstanding, years can make a difference in being released from a job or hired, however misguided the employer may be in his view of the competence of older workers.

What employers need to know is that work performance improves with age, according to the results of the largest U.S. research project ever conducted on aging and productivity.

Researchers David A. Waldman, Ph.D., and Bruce Avolio, Ph.D., of the State University of New York, analyzed the results of 13 employment studies and found that as you grow older, your productivity increases moderately but steadily.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

The study also found that professional and blue-collar workers improve at about the same rate in terms of productivity but the former group still rates higher with the employers and coworkers.

The reason given was that professionals may have more stimulating jobs and are more likely to be allowed to take on new roles as they get older. Blue-collar workers, on the other hand, increase their productivity whether they like their work or not.

Such findings are particularly reassuring to an employee who has reached the age of 65 but wants to stay on the job until the legal age of 70, but may be more encouraging to those who have been offered the early retirement golden handshake.

The decision to leap or linger can be agonizing. Those who haven't taken time to plan may be overwhelmed by a swirl of financial and emotional questions.

Before the time comes when you might be offered an early retirement buyout package, you should carefully weigh these questions. Is retirement right for you and is it right for you now?

You should sit down with a financial adviser. Examine your projected income — and your expenses. Retiring on a fixed income is always a gamble against unpredictable increases in your cost of living. And a one-shot cash bonus won't buy the world.

"When you're offered a large lump sum, it's tempting to jump for it," says Chris Mackaronis of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

"But if you retire now, you may have years ahead of you. And that is a long time to stretch out one lottery win, so to speak."

Retirement experts say you will need at least 60 to 70 percent of your preretirement salary to maintain your standard of living. The sources of this income can be pensions and Social Security, investments and second careers.

Take stock of your personal goals. Study your finances. Most important, trust your instincts. Your final decision should be based on your own feelings about work and retirement, not those of anyone else.

Whether you decide to stay on the job or retire, it's important to take care of your health so that it will not fail you if you want to continue working or spend your time in active retirement. Diet, exercise and rest are necessary to the body's upkeep and vigor.

Another factor is keeping mentally alert. Help in that department can come from a series of brain aerobics designed by brain trainer Dudley Lynch, who encourages people to put the brain through daily exercise much as they would with physical exercise.

One of his suggestions is to imagine yourself doing a task before the fact. You will prime your mind for actually doing the task. You'll also exercise your right brain hemisphere's visualizing apparatus.

Another suggestion is to practice predicting the future. If you're looking for a parking space, try to anticipate where the first open space will appear and you'll put your forward-thinking frontal lobes to work. Many of us have had experience with that one, such as what the boss will say to you for coming in late or how you can justify a spur-of-the-moment expensive purchase.

Being active is another must, such as going into politics which would cause your brain's limbic system to become alert because that's where the powerful chemical emotions originate.

Doing crossword puzzles, and playing spatial and manual-skill games are other activities we have all engaged in without realizing that they challenge the brain's chemical and electrical mechanism.

How about defending unpopular ideas? That will make good things happen to both your most basic senses and your most idealistic sensitivities. You'll exercise the oldest and least adaptive structures in your brain that get in the way as you deal with a changing world.

Brain exercises can do wonders for your attitude, keeping you young at heart — and mind.

VA information

Q — My wife is buried in a Department of Veterans Affairs national cemetery that is now closed. We had always planned to be buried together. What can I do?

A — Even a "closed" national cemetery will be able to accommodate the burial of the spouse of someone already buried in the cemetery. Closed means lack of space prevents the cemetery from accepting full casketed burials of those without a spouse already buried in the cemetery. Most closed national cemeteries also can accommodate burial or inurnment of cremated remains.

Q — Would I be able to reserve space in the national cemetery of my choice?

A — No. Gravesites in national cemeteries cannot be reserved. Funeral directors or others making burial arrangements must apply at the time of death.

Zokas named Maire principal

Karen Zokas, a former assistant principal in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, has been named principal of Maire Elementary School.

Zokas received a bachelor's degree in science from Western Michigan University and a master's in education from Oakland University. She is currently enrolled in a Master of Leadership Program at Eastern University.

Zokas has been holding a series of "Meet a New Friend Days" in order to meet Maire parents and students before school starts. Students are encouraged to visit her at the school on those days and to make or bring something that represents what makes them special. Three "New Friend Days" have already been held. The last one is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 1, 10 a.m.-11:30 a.m., at the school.

The Maire PTO will also host a coffee on the first day of school, Wednesday, Sept. 9, from 8:30 to 10 a.m. for parents to meet Zokas.

Two other Grosse Pointe public schools will open with new principals. Nancy Salamas, a former assistant principal at Pierce Middle School, was appointed principal of Kerby Elementary School after serving as interim principal since December 1991. Former Maire Principal Jay Flowers has moved to Poupard Elementary School, replacing James Cooper, who retired.

One other principalship in the school district remains open. The position of North High School principal has not been filled. Assistant Principal Thomas Teetaert has been named acting principal while the search continues.

Pierce Middle School is also interviewing for a new assistant principal.

Scholarship

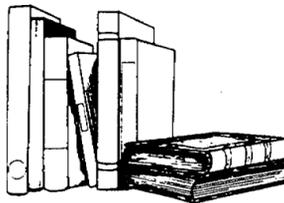

Matthew Recht, a graduate of Grosse Pointe South, was named as 1992 recipient of a J. Walter Thompson Company College Scholarship Award. Selection was made by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation and was based on exemplary academic and extracurricular achievements. He is shown with his father, Tom, right, as Grosse Pointe Farms resident and JWT Executive Management Director Steven Brown makes the award presentation.

Dauids attends physics institute

Mark Davids, a physics teacher at Grosse Pointe South, is one of 45 high school teachers from around the United States who will return to school with fresh physics ideas this fall after participating in a special teacher enhancement program at the U.S. Department of Energy's Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory (Fermilab) in Batavia, Ill.

The Topics in Modern Physics National Institute (TMP) is a three-week program in which teachers learn about the universe — its basic particles, forces and how it works — by coming to Fermilab, home of the world's highest energy particle accelerator, the Tevatron.

Teachers participating in TMP obtain firsthand information about high energy particle physics and astrophysics research which they are expected to share with colleagues and can use to instruct students pursuing physics studies.

Students receive medals

Honorees from Harper Woods included Bethany Strunk, Bishop Gallagher; Scott Pokriefka, Harper Woods; Carl R. Hauss, Lutheran East; and Michael LaClair, Notre Dame High School.

Names of the recipients were announced by U.S. Rep. Dennis Hertel. The medals, awarded annually to high school seniors, are presented to students who have consistently demonstrated a keen understanding and commitment to the social sciences.

This includes their record of academic achievement as well as government and community involvement. Recipients are chosen by their high school administrators and department heads.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE pursuant to Act 5, Public Acts of Michigan 1982, that on Thursday, September 3, 1992, at 8:00 o'clock p.m. at a conference session, the Board of Education of The Grosse Pointe Public School System will hold a public hearing at the South High School Library, 11 Grosse Pointe Blvd., Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan 48236 on the levy of a proposed millage rate of 32.6497 for operating purposes.

The present voted millage of the school district of 36.9000 mills for the General and Library Funds has been reduced by the "Headlee Amendment" to 35.0789. The Board of Education has complete authority to establish that 32.6497 mills be levied in 1992 for the General and Library Funds from the present authorized millage rate.

The maximum additional proposed millage rate for the General and Library Funds would increase revenues for operating purposes from ad valorem property tax levies in 1992 otherwise permitted by Act 5, Public Acts of Michigan in 1992 in the amount of $5,057,197, or an increase of 9.2% (the increase will be $5,057,110, or 9.0% for General, Library and Debt Funds.)

The figure for increase in revenue for operating purposes is based on the latest estimate of state equalized valuation of property located within the school district.

The purpose of this hearing is to receive testimony and discuss the millage levy. Not less than seven (7) days following the public hearing, the Board of Education may approve any portion of the proposed millage rate.

This notice is given by order of the Board of Education.

Linda Schneider, Secretary
Board of Education

have moved to the area. When they've lived here for a certain number of years, they have to quit. "I have some friends who have threatened to move away — then move back — so they can stay in the club."

Grosse Pointe is full of upbeat people, he said, and most have a sense of pride in their community and their wide range of activities.

Rockwell attended Grosse

Pointe schools through the ninth grade. "My father didn't think I was becoming the academic whiz he wanted me to be, so he trucked me off to Cranbrook School," he said. "I really wanted to go to Grosse Pointe High School.

"I didn't become a whiz, but I got through."

Rockwell went off to Trinity College in Connecticut, where he earned a bachelor of arts degree in history.

"I graduated in the summer of 1960 and I had no idea what to do next. I was looking around. I went to see a friend's father at First of Michigan. I signed on as a stock broker trainee.

"I think my first task was stuffing envelopes."

He was elected to the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council in 1963 and served the city for six years. He retired from the council, but was recently appointed to finish the last two years of former councilman Harry Echlin's term when Echlin resigned.

The term will be completed in November 1993. Rockwell said he would not run for the council again.

"I dislike campaigning," he said.

"It was a real eye-opener when I ran for the city council the first time. I didn't realize what I was running for. Once I got involved I realized here is a little city you could pick up and drop down in Ohio or somewhere and it could run itself very nicely, thank you. It is a well-managed operation, efficiently run by the people who live in it.

"I didn't expect to find such a high level of dedication from volunteers. I guess $50 a month qualifies the job as 'volunteer.'"

"That was the re-birth of my feelings about Grosse Pointe and my appreciation for the Grosse Pointes."

Rockwell has been a member of the Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation for about eight years and is a member of the board of Grosse Pointe Cable, where he serves as secretary. He is also treasurer of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial's board of directors.

"I'm going to take a War Memorial class this fall — probably something to do with computers. I'm doing it just because I've never taken advantage of their wonderful courses," he said.

Rockwell remembers going to War Memorial dances when he was a junior high school student. "The War Memorial's mission is clear. I don't see it changing. It will only improve, with broadened support. The physical plant needs upgrading, especially the exterior," he said.

"The War Memorial doesn't need to get bigger, just better."

Rockwell said he sees exciting improvements in Detroit's future. "I can't imagine working anywhere else but Detroit. There's so much good about the city. The layout, for instance. It's on a major river; between two countries; with a special waterfront. What Mike Ilitch is doing for the theater district and the ballclub really makes you feel good. There's more feel-good coming."

New political leadership is coming to Detroit, Rockwell said. "The names that are being talked about are bright, concerned individuals with an understanding of what needs to be done. I'm encouraged.

"Detroit is evolving into a city with new projects. It needs political change at the top. It will regain its luster."

Rockwell's hobbies are golf, travel and photography. One of his favorite people is his mother, Kathryn Rockwell, who lives in Grosse Pointe Farms and will celebrate her 90th birthday Sept. 2. He has three sons: Jeffrey, 30, who lives on Mackinac Island; Christopher, 28, who lives in Albany, N.Y.; and Alexander, 25, who lives in Syracuse, N.Y.

Bruce Rockwell has been a Grosse Pointe booster since he moved to the Park in 1945. He's treasurer of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial board of directors; secretary of the Grosse Pointe Cable board of directors; a member of the Grosse Pointe Farms council; and he serves on the Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation board.

Water

The intake is clear of zebra mussels, thanks in large part to the three-inch chlorine line installed by the Farms and Highland Park last year as a preventive measure.

"We want to make sure we don't have the same problem that Monroe had," Solak said, referring to the downriver city that had to shut off its water for a few days in the winter of 1990 because zebra mussels had clogged the intake pipe.

Solak said the Farms will take a two-step approach in reaction to the water problem.

First, the city will locate an expert who knows about zebra mussels to determine if that is indeed the causing the bad taste and smell of the water.

Also, they want to determine if the water can be treated at the plant. However, the drawback to that approach is that it is only masking the problem, not treating it, Solak said.

He said that the information gathered by the divers will be shown to state officials and the city will press them to get involved.

"As far as the lake is concerned, it's a state or a federal problem," Solak said. "All we can do is to try to keep the intake as clean as possible."

Sehoyan applauded Solak's efforts.

"The zebra mussels are a million-dollar problem today," he said. "It needs to be addressed before it becomes a billion-dollar problem. It's great that we have a city that cares. We need to get the state and federal governments involved soon."

Writing wasn't bad enough?

Eagle-eyed pharmacists who thought something was fishy alerted Grosse Pointe Park police to two phony prescription scams last week.

The first incident happened at 2:54 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 19, in a pharmacy in the 15300 block of Jefferson.

A man handed the pharmacist a prescription, and the pharmacist recognized it as being fraudulent. He notified the police department, and officers arrested the suspect inside the store and a second man waiting inside a car.

The second incident happened at 10:20 a.m. Thursday, Aug. 20, in the 15200 block of Jefferson.

A pharmacist questioned the name of a doctor on a prescription a customer wanted filled.

The customer and two companions were arrested as they tried to leave the area, and police confiscated prescription blanks and false identification that were in the suspects' possession.

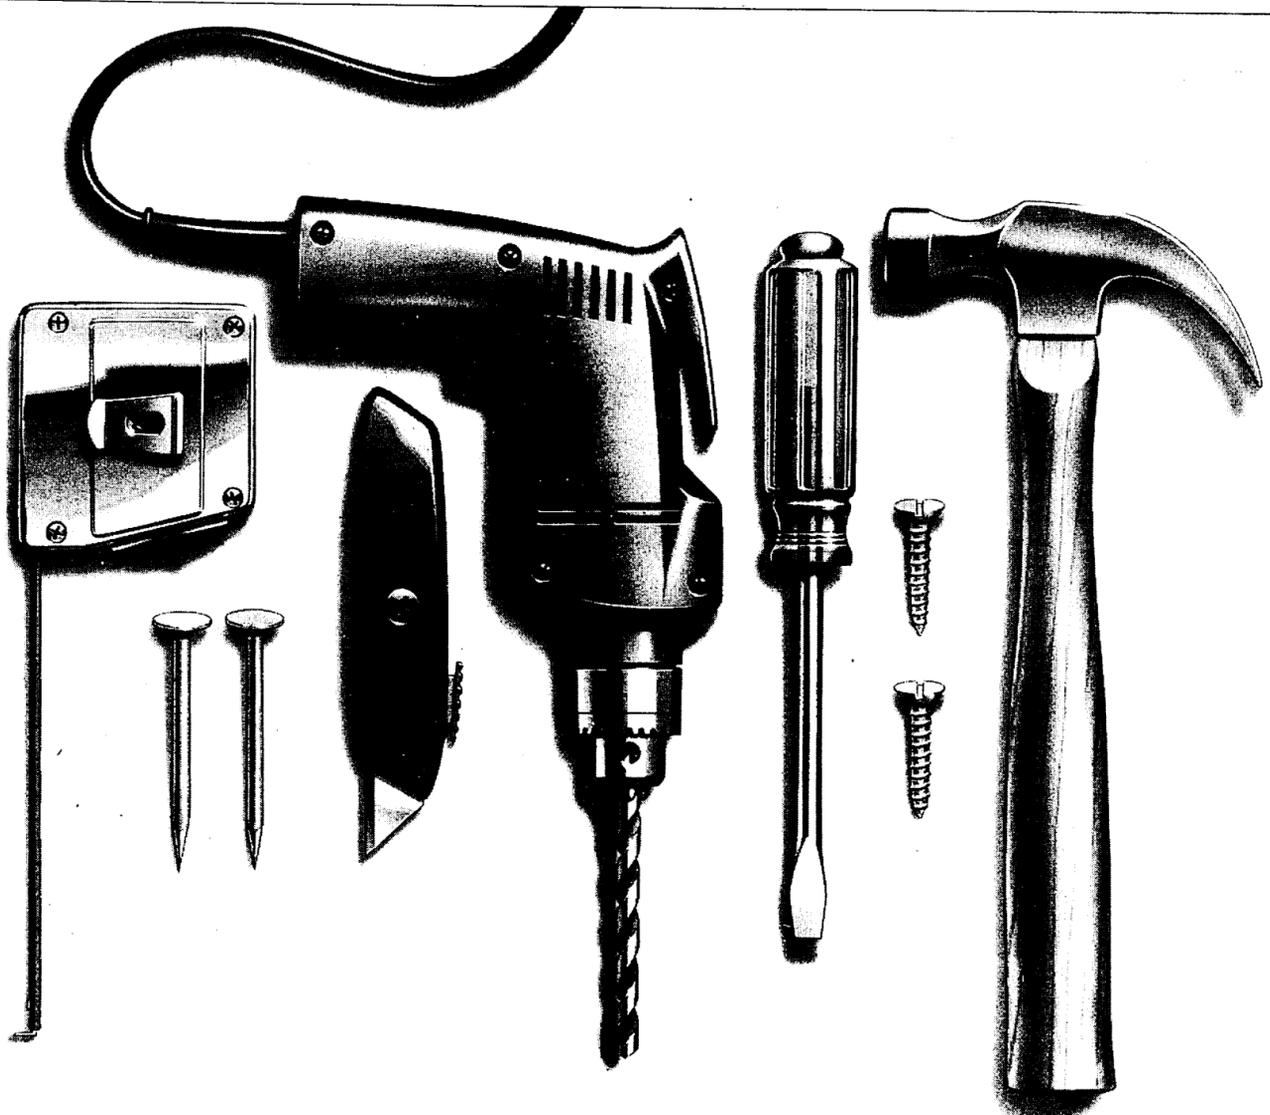

Watch out below

A woman was arrested by Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers at 10:57 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 8, in the 15000 block of Mack for disorderly conduct.

The woman was throwing items from an upper window of an apartment building onto the pavement and parked cars.

She appeared highly intoxicated, combative and irrational, and attempted to take her clothes off, according to the report.

A Detroit policewoman assisted in the arrest.

BBB serves to make buyers and businesses beware

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

If you question a store's advertising claims, if you want to trace a company's track record before doing business, or if you enjoy shopping, then the Better Business Bureau of Detroit and Eastern Michigan would like to hear from you.

Located in Southfield, the bureau has been helping companies and buyers beware since 1917, said Debbie Nigbor, director of operations.

"There are two bureaus in Michigan," she said. "Our bureau services the entire eastern portion of the state, including part of the Upper Peninsula."

The other bureau covers the western side of the state, she said.

They are among nearly 200 bureaus nationwide that belong to the Council of Better Business Bureaus, headquartered in Arlington, Va.

The first bureaus were formed in 1912 as "vigilance committees" created by advertising clubs to correct abuses in advertising.

Promoting honest advertising and ethical selling practices is still high on the council's agenda.

In addition to providing advertisers with guidelines, the bureaus monitor advertising claims and sales techniques and refer illegal practices to the proper law enforcement agency.

Volunteer shoppers help the bureaus monitor businesses.

If a bureau member or employee sees an advertisement that looks too good to be true, or if the bureau receives calls that a store is misleading the public (for example, by pulling a "bait and switch"), then the bureau may send one or several volunteers to "shop" the item in question.

"In the majority of cases, we tell them to go through the sale process, but to stop just short of actually buying the item," Nigbor said.

"They're supposed to get all the information they need to make an informed purchase, and then say to the salesperson, 'Let me get back with you. I have to think about it.'"

After they leave the store, the volunteers complete a form describing their shopping experience and forward it to the Better Business Bureau, she said.

The store personnel don't know the identity of the shopper, or that the shopper is a volunteer for the Better Business Bureau, Nigbor said.

"We are currently recruiting shoppers," she said.

Volunteers must complete a training session, which is usually done on a one-on-one basis, and they can choose to work as little or as often as they wish. They may also select the neighborhoods where they'll shop, she said.

Better Business Bureaus also have volunteer arbitrators who help resolve buyer complaints against companies.

"We have close to 300 arbitrators working for our bureau, so we probably won't be recruiting for those in the near future, but I may be wrong," she said.

Arbitrators need not be lawyers, but they must complete a training course.

Bureaus also release information they have compiled about companies, including: the length of time the company has been in business or been known to the bureau; a summary of complaints and other news about the company that the bureau has received in the past; information developed through special bureau investigations; and whether or not the company is a member of the Better Business Bureau.

"However, we never recommend a company, nor do we compare one company to another or give legal advice," Nigbor said.

Also, bureaus can't help void contracts that do not contain fraud or misrepresentation, nor can they make collections, give out credit information, act as a reference, give endorsements, or appraise products.

Each Better Business Bureau is a private, non-profit organization that is funded through grants, donations, and dues from its member businesses.

About 3,200 businesses belong to the Better Business Bureau of Detroit and Eastern Michigan, Nigbor said.

Dues vary according to the size of the business, and may be more than $215 a year, she said.

What do businesses get in return for being a member? "Well, most importantly, I think, it lets their customers and potential customers know that they believe in truth in advertising," Nigbor said.

"Also, we let them know there are certain advertising standards they must adhere to," and if they breach those standards, their membership may be suspended or revoked, she said.

Members may also call a special Better Business Bureau hotline day or night, whenever they are facing in a problem, she said.

The Better Business Bureau of Detroit and Eastern Michigan receives about 1,700 calls each day, and has a staff of 16 who work in six departments: advertising, inquiry, complaint, automotive, marketing and administration.

The bureau is governed by a board of representatives from 39 companies, and representatives from 16 of those companies serve on the executive committee, which meets once a month.

For more information about the bureau, or to volunteer or access its business files, call 644-9100.

Pointers serve on Better Business Bureau

Grosse Pointe Farms residents William Cudlip and Charles DeGalan are two of the people who help make the Better Business Bureau (BBB) of Detroit and Eastern Michigan work.

Cudlip is chairman of the bureau's executive committee, and DeGalan serves as a volunteer arbitrator, helping resolve disputes between consumers and auto dealers.

Senior vice president and director of operations for Young & Rubicam Inc., Cudlip said he got involved with the Better Business Bureau 11 years ago, when his company became interested.

"Part of my responsibilities at Young & Rubicam involve handling community affairs," he said.

As a result, he was asked to be his company's Better Business Bureau representative.

The bureau's executive committee meets once a month, he said. At those meetings, members discuss the operations of the bureau (for example, how many calls it had over the past month and how they were handled) and future plans. On occasion, it holds a hearing to determine whether or not a business' membership should be suspended or revoked for rules violations.

"That doesn't happen often, but occasionally we have to hold a hearing," he said.

He said the bureau recently completed a three-year plan that involved moving its offices from Detroit to Southfield, computerizing its files, and switching to an electronic telecommunication system, which allows touch-tone phone users to access information about companies anytime, day or night.

"Our ability to respond to a call-in has doubled or tripled" since the bureau installed its new telecommunication system less than a year ago, he said.

The bureau moved from Detroit to Southfield last winter "because the bulk of our members are out in that area, and we decided we should be closer to them," he said.

DeGalan, who worked in the computer industry before retiring, has been a volunteer arbitrator in the automotive department of the Better Business Bureau since 1985, he said.

"A friend recommended me," he said. "He had done some arbitration work at the national office. He told me that some arbitrators are lawyers, but you needn't be. You just need a lot of common sense."

"He also told me the best arbitrators are people who come from a big family and who have a large family. I met both criteria. I have six kids, and I was one of five."

The arbitration service provides consumers a cheaper, quicker alternative to filing a lawsuit against a company.

The service is free to consumers, and the arbitrator's decision is binding upon the company, but not upon the automobile owner/user, DeGalan said.

The Gregory Boat Co. a marina located near downtown Detroit, has successfully merged from Chapter 11 reorganization. Operating continuously since 1906 as a family business, the Gregory Boat Co. features two marinas and provides both spring and summer boat dockage as well as winter storage. The company also brokers new and used boats.

vor of the automobile company, the (car) owner or user might feel like he's been had. This way, he can refuse to accept my decision and take his case to court," he said.

The arbitration process starts when a consumer calls the Better Business Bureau and says he has taken his vehicle in to be repaired several times and can't get any satisfaction from his car dealer, DeGalan said.

The bureau then gives the consumer forms to fill out, describing the problem in detail.

Both the consumer and the company must agree to participate in the arbitration process before an arbitrator is called in.

"If you have a General Motors vehicle, look at the contract you got when you bought the vehicle. It says in fine print that GM is obliged to participate in arbitration proceedings, so the company agreed to it when you bought your vehicle," he said.

He said he has only arbitrated disputes involving GM vehicles, and Cudlip said that Ford and Chrysler do not use the bureau's services because they have their own arbitration procedures.

After both parties have submitted documents supporting their claims, a meeting is scheduled with an arbitrator. The meeting is held in a conference room at the Better Business Bureau's office in Southfield, and is attended by the consumer, a representative from the automobile company or dealer, and one or more arbitrators, DeGalan said.

"The last case I had, I was one of three arbitrators. For some reason, the company wanted three. But in the past six years, I was the only arbitrator in the cases I handled," DeGalan said.

The consumer gets to tell his side first, followed by the company's representative, "much like the legal proceedings you see on TV," DeGalan said.

After that, the meeting is recessed and the arbitrator inspects the vehicle and takes it for a ride to try to re-create the problem the customer has described.

When he's done, the arbitrator reconvenes the meeting and hears from both sides again. Then he adjourns the meeting and must render a decision within 10 days, DeGalan said.

"I usually write my opinion the next morning," he said. "I like to sleep on it. Sometimes, I'll go to bed thinking one way and when I wake up in the morning, I'll find myself siding with the other party."

He said it usually takes him a few hours to write his opinion, because he has to weigh the facts on both sides.

He has to complete a six-page form that asks a lot of "how" questions, he said, such as "How many times was the vehicle taken in to be repaired," "How was it repaired," and "How long did each repair take?"

"After answering all those questions, the facts fall in line and make it easier to write an opinion," DeGalan said. "The actual opinion itself is only a couple of paragraphs."

Even though he's had some tough cases where making a decision was very difficult, he said he enjoys being a volunteer arbitrator.

"I'm retired, and now it's payback time for me," he said. "I want the system to work as well for other people as it has for me."

Lynn Michaels, Grosse Pointe Woods resident and owner of Hlinsky Communications Inc., has changed the name of her company to Hl Communications Inc. and is moving the firm to 20651 Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods. The new telephone number is 882-2277.

John E. Swegles III of Roney & Co. in Grosse Pointe Farms will host a seminar called "Company Retirement Plan." The seminar participants will discuss 401(k) retirement plans and age-weighted plan techniques to direct retirement benefits to older, higher-paid employees and owners. The seminar will be Thursday, Sept.

Queasy rider

Shortly after 1 a.m. on Aug. 12, a drunken man waved down a Grosse Pointe Park police car because he wanted a ride home.

The police discovered he was wanted on several warrants filed by the Detroit Police Department. He was arrested.

Van's stereo taken in smash and grab

Someone removed a stereo receiver, tape deck and compact disc player from a locked 1992 Ford minivan that was parked in the driveway of a home in the 1000 block of Hollywood in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The theft occurred sometime between Sunday, Aug. 23, and Monday, Aug. 24, police said.

The thief entered the vehicle through a smashed front window, and exited via the driver's door, police said.

Hay fever sufferers scratch and sniff from mid-August until first fall frost

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

From mid-August until the first frost of the fall season, 40 million Americans — one out of six — are plagued with swollen eyes, itchy ears, scratchy throats, drippy noses and periodic spasms of sneezing and sniffing.

• It's hay fever season.
• These people are allergic, but not to hay. And they don't have fevers.

They owe their misery to a hardy, prolific weed, a vagrant that sprouts in vacant lots, creeps into residential gardens, flourishes along highways and spreads itself across open fields. It's ragweed.

"Ragweed is a common weed in the midwest," said Dr. Pamela A. Georgeson of the Grosse Pointe Allergy Clinic, 20136 Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods. "Actually, it's prevalent almost everywhere east of the Rockies.

"It's a plant that requires wind for pollination. The pollen spores are microscopic and blow everywhere. It's a hardy weed, with deep roots; a scavenger plant that we can't hope to get rid of. Ever."

Hay fever — more properly called seasonal allergic rhinitis — usually refers to a specific allergic reaction to ragweed or other pollens. It affects about 16 percent of the population.

Georgeson and her colleagues, Dr. Peter A. Nickles, Dr. Wayne N. Pierantoni and Dr. Reina O. Salazar, are allergy specialists.

Allergies run in families, Georgeson said. "You can blame one of your parents. If one of two parents has allergies, there's a 30 to 40 percent chance one of their children will have allergies."

Allergies often develop as the child grows, she said. The child is born predisposed to allergies. Then he is exposed to the allergens.

In people who are predisposed to allergies, allergens cause the production of antibodies which accumulate in the cells of the nose, eyes or bronchial tubes. When enough sensitizing antibodies have been formed, contact with the pollen produces the sneezy symptoms of hay fever.

It may take several seasons to develop a sensitizing antibody, also known as IgE, but once the level is high enough, the antibody begins attacking the cells. The cells fight back by releasing several chemicals — one is histamine, which causes swelling of the mucous membranes of the nose and eyes and increases the secretion of mucus. These are the symptoms of hay fever.

Georgeson said three methods are effective in the treatment of hay fever:

• Avoidance. "You can stay indoors. You can leave the continent. Ragweed is pretty much confined to the North American continent. You can take a cruise. You can keep your windows closed. You can keep your air conditioning on. You can roll up the car windows when you're driving."

• Medication. Hay fever medications are either antihistamines, which dry up runny noses and relieve itching and sneezing, or decongestants, which reduce swelling. Many remedies are a combination of antihistamines and decongestants.

There are nasal sprays that treat symptoms, she said. And there are preventive nasal sprays that are prescribed a few weeks before rag-weed begins to pollinate and continue to be used through the season.

There's even a cortisone nasal spray for very bad cases, Georgeson said. Most of the stronger stuff requires a physician's prescription, but many over-the-counter hay fever remedies are quite effective, she said.

• Injection. For severe cases, weekly injections are 85 percent successful, Georgeson said.

"Several months in advance of the season, the patient begins receiving weekly injections of dilute amounts of pollen. The dosage is gradually increased, week by week. The body builds up a blocking antibody against the action of the pollen. After about five years, this treatment may alter a person's immune system to help it fight hay fever attacks.

"This is as close as we can come to a cure," she said.

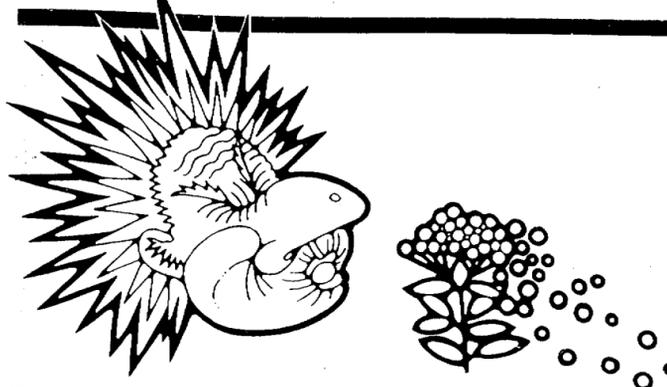

"Sometimes hay fever can trigger asthma, a disease of the bronchial tubes that causes shortness of breath, wheezing, a tight feeling in the chest and a tendency to gasp for air. Asthma is a serious condition and needs to be treated by a physician."

How can you tell whether you have hay fever or just a common cold?

Georgeson said a cold is usually associated with a fever, aches and pains and lasts seven to 10 days.

An allergy lasts more than two weeks and the nasal mucous drainage is clear and persistent, she said.

"Most people try over-the-counter allergy medications first. If these don't work, they should see a doctor."

Arts & Scraps moves to new facility; plans grand opening

Arts & Scraps, a non-profit organization that recycles discarded materials for children's craft projects, has moved to a new 2,600-square-foot facility at 12110 Morang in Detroit.

The community is invited to the grand opening from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 29.

Last year, Arts & Scraps redirected 11 tons of materials (things like paper, fabric samples, wood, foam and scraps of plastic) that would have been discarded by businesses and individuals. Instead, the items went to 30,000 children in schools, scout troops and community organizations.

More than 50 volunteers contributed hundreds of hours to clean, paint, build partitions and move the organization to its new office.

New Detroit Inc., the Skillman Foundation, De Roy Foundation and the Detroit Edison Foundation donated funds and Sherwin Williams, Erb Lumber, the Detroit Council of the Arts, Ad-Stat of Detroit and Gannett Outdoor have made in-kind donations.

Arts & Scraps also offers educational programs such as adult workshops on how to encourage children's creativity; field trips; and single item art kits, which are packaged by scout troops and delivered to 1,000 public school children in Detroit each month.

Grosse Pointers involved in Arts & Scraps are Lamont Buffington and Bill Grogan, board members; Colleen Oglesby, Corinne Tyler and Peg Upmeyer, staff members.

For more information, call 52-SCRAP.

Cocktails and a silent auction will be from 6 to 8 p.m.; dinner and a live auction begin at 8 p.m.

Tickets to the black-tie event are $175. For information, call 872-WINE.

Starry, starry night:

Under the Stars XIII, the Detroit Institute of Arts' annual fundraiser, will be Saturday, Nov. 14, in the galleries and courtyards of the museum.

The Chrysler-Plymouth division of Chrysler Corp. is a major corporate sponsor of the benefit. Chrysler will display its new 1993 Concorde at the event and DIA director Samuel Sachs II said the car may be auctioned during the evening.

Organizers of the event — arguably Detroit's biggest, most elaborate benefit of the year — hope to raise $150,000 for the DIA's general operating fund.

Honorary co-chairmen for Under the Stars XIII are Mr. and Mrs. Lee A. Iacocca. Co-chairmen of the organizing committee are Jill Williams of Grosse Pointe and Aviva Robinson of Bloomfield Hills.

Tickets are $400 or $300 a person for cocktails, dinner and dancing; late-night tickets are $75 a person for dancing, hors d'oeuvres, dessert and cocktails.

Drinking and diving may end up being a pain in the neck

Drinking and diving can be just as dangerous as drinking and driving.

Alcohol slows down coordination. It can make you feel giddy, impairing your judgment. That may not be a problem when you're lying on the beach, but you could be risking your neck if you enter the water.

Dr. James Fox, vice chief of the Department of Emergency Medicine at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, says the victims of alcohol-related diving accidents are often teenagers who don't think to look before they leap.

"I think a good rule of thumb anytime you're in a water sports activity, certainly when diving into pools or into lakes where you aren't familiar with the depth of the water, is to go feet first. Many of our diving accidents, where there is significant trauma, are associated with alcohol intoxication and those people who are under the influence of alcohol don't usually have good judgment. Unfortunately, it results in cervical spine injuries or fractures to the neck and they can have profound consequences on the health of the person," he said.

Fox says that operating a boat also requires good judgment. The majority of boating fatalities are known to be alcohol-related. He encourages choosing a designated alcohol-free driver when your party takes to the water this summer.

"We need to be aware that alcohol and water sports can be a dangerous combination. Many people who go to the beach are consuming alcoholic beverages and are perhaps taking risks that they don't normally take, all in the hopes of having a good time. But unfortunately, many of these good times turn into tragedy," Fox said.

Colony Town Club elects officers

The Colony Town Club has elected its officers for 1992-93. They are Frances Fox, president; Pat Boggs, first vice president; Joan Palmer, second vice president; Barbara Madaraz, recording secretary; Henrietta McNally, assistant secretary; Sylvia Wiard, treasurer; Gladys Zenetti, assistant treasurer; Eleanor Anderson, corresponding secretary; Burke Hadley, assistant corresponding secretary; and Jean Dickinson, publicity.

New board members are Marion Huegli, Jane Kinney, McNally, Betty Sullivan and Wiard.

Retiring board members are Millie Davis, Edith Smith, Ruth Graham, Evelene Malcolm and Jan Coulter.

The Colony Town Club's first event of the fall season will be a riverboat cruise on the Detroit on Thursday, Sept. 10. Chairman is Mrs. Frank Unti. Committee members are Mrs. Ernest Collins and Mrs. Richard Huegli.

The Pastor's Corner

The Roar

By the Rev. William C. DeVries
First Christian Reformed Church

I estimate I lost 2.67 years. From the end of my life, that is.

I was scared. Shocked is probably a better word. I gasped for air for several minutes.

I was on the Ford freeway. I was cruising smoothly with relatively light traffic. Windows were down and music was up.

I never saw the tandem dump truck. We both hit the rough section at the same time and the beds of the empty truck roared like a pair of Civil War cannons.

I knew I was still alive because I could feel my heart throbbing in my throat. Crashing through my reverie was the reality not only of where I was — but of the tremendously impressive forces which surged all around me.

I was vibrantly alive. A bit shaky, but very freshly alive.

The Bible says in several places that "fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."

It's that time again when we take up afresh the tasks of learning and, we hope, wisdom. Wisdom is something more than "book learning," however. It involves the well-applied living of a life of true quality. It means applying our learning in a balanced way to daily decisions to promote well-being beyond our own mere private concerns.

Part of the Christian message is that this quality living grows out of a fear. It seems to me that this message is not about an anxiety or a horror. Rather, it's about a shock — a sudden realization of some reality which strikes awe within us at the deepest level of our being.

This shock may be repeated many times during a lifetime, but each time it will be new and revitalizing. It is the awareness of a joyously solemn force surging around the center of our living.

It should be noted that this fear is "of the Lord."

Not just any shock can produce more than a tingling in the toes and thumping in the throat. It's the inexpressible shock that this awe-filling force is personal and is love as well as justice.

The message is that God is surging and roaring around the center of our lives with awe, justice and love. To open the windows of the heart and hear this roar is to find a real wisdom and purpose to life.

School is starting on many levels and in many places. The book learning is only a reverie if we are not open to the roar — the shock — the fear of the awe-filling power, justice and love of God.

When you hear that roar, you may think you've lost a few years. But what you live, will really be alive.

Lifeline Center offers crisis counseling course

Lifeline Counseling Center, a Christian counseling ministry at Grace Community Church (formerly Ebenezer Baptist Church), will present a 15-week crisis counseling course from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday evenings from Sept. 8 through Dec. 15.

The series is designed for those who want to be more effective and understanding communicators and listeners either in their daily lives — or on the phone at Lifeline.

Among those who have taken the course in the past are pastors, youth ministers, professional and paraprofessional counselors, Sunday school teachers and lay persons. Instruction focuses on problems arising from substance abuse, child abuse, spouse abuse, rape and suicide as well as skills to help deal with grief and bereavement, emotional disturbances and difficulties with teenagers.

There is also a seven-week course on biblical counseling taught by Robert Johnston on Tuesday evenings, Sept. 8 through Oct. 20. Registration for both classes will be held from 6 to 7 p.m. Tuesdays, Sept. 8 and 15. For more information, call 882-LIFE.

Lutheran Center plans annual art show

The fourth annual Christian art show, "Art in the Autumn," sponsored by the Lutheran Center, will be held Saturday, Oct. 24, through Friday, Oct. 30, at the Lutheran Center, 579 E. Nine Mile in Ferndale. Serious adult artists may submit work until Tuesday, Sept. 8, for the non-juried, mixed media show. Entries should be original and must depict a Christian message or theme. The title of the work, a brief description and a photo or slide should accompany each entry. For more information, call Helen Mauser at 541-0788.

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD ♠♥♦♣

A pinch of, "maybe I should have," is worth no more than a nip of, "I would have if," at the bridge table and the principal cause for snags in advancement. Hiding behind such failures with alibis for why will never help you or your partner find daylight.

A sequence of bids that often causes this malady is your partners double of opponents strong one no trump opener (15-18 H.C.P.). There are three key considerations you must evaluate before deciding whether to pass or pull partners double.

1. Have you a majority of the unaccounted for 9-10 H.C.P.?
2. Does your hand tend to be defensive; flat with texture? (Nines and tens)
3. Does the vulnerability favor your partnership defending?

If the answer to all three is yes, then pass and penalize. If the answer is yes to the first and one other, it is likely you should pass and penalize. If no to the first and one other, bid your longest suit for it is unlikely you'll defeat the opponents seven trick contract.

Dr. George Belanger playing with one of his longstanding bridge pals, Bob Bessert, was faced with just such a dilemma one Friday afternoon at Judy's duplicate not so long ago. After due consideration sitting with the south cards he chose to defend and passed with every expectation of causing East/West considerable discomfort. On this one the good doctor didn't require a second opinion for we support his diagnosis.

George had 6 of the unaccounted for 9-10 H.C.P. and East could therefore have no more than 4. He knew that his partner and West held approximately 30 H.C.P. Unless you're intending an early bridge demise you never double an opponents strong one no trump without equivalency. Bob had significant texture and the enemy was vulnerable. George knew the stage was set for a great Shakespearian tragedy.

Bob got off to a magnificent lead which declarer won with his spade ace. What declarer should next do was extremely perplexing for North/South quietly lay in wait knowing that the no trump would have to play most of his cards from his hand as dummy was near entry empty. Foresightfully declarer played a club to dummy's queen which won and back came a small diamond to the nine, ten and Bob's queen. At trick 4, Bob led a low heart which George let declarer win with his queen after playing his nine. West could still win his spade king and club ace for a five trick total, but it was a dismal result as the mean team defending won a spade, four hearts, two diamonds and a club and a plus five hundred. It was a top on board twenty-four as no other North doubled or a not too confident South pulled it fearful of a sour result.

How to find support, escape from an abusive relationship

By Richard F. Jones III, M.D.
President, American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists
If you often feel helpless, restricted, unsure of yourself and alone, take a closer look at your home life:

- Does your partner criticize you frequently about your clothes, your weight, or the way you do things around the house?
- Are you often discouraged from making phone calls or planning activities with friends outside your home?
- Do you find yourself keeping secrets from your partner, because you are afraid of the consequences?
- Do you feel coerced into acting in ways that you normally would not act?
- Are you ever pushed, hit, choked, thrown down, or threatened with a weapon?

If these circumstances sound familiar to you, chances are you are involved in an unhealthy and abusive relationship. Although your world may seem isolated and hopeless, you are not alone. Millions of other women are struggling with similar difficulties. And many women have found the courage and support to escape to a new and rewarding life.

There is certainly a brighter and more fulfilling life for you, if you want it. The key to making a change is facing the problem and seeking support. For the short-term, find someone in whom you can confide — a friend, a relative, a doctor, a nurse or a clergy member. Arrange to contact him or her if you are in danger. Try to set aside money and important documents in case you need to make a quick exit. Learn to recognize the signs of trouble and leave before a violent episode occurs. If you need immediate help, call the police.

Figuring out a long-term solution is not easy. You may have confusing feelings of love and loyalty toward your partner while knowing inside that the relationship is threatening your well-being. You may be afraid to break off on your own, especially if you have children or have been financially dependent on your partner.

Free booklet

Free copies of "The Abused Woman" (APO83) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 409 12th Street, SW, Washington, DC 20024.

Seek advice from those close to you in whom you have confided. Counseling also can help you improve your self-image and give you a positive outlook on life. No one can determine what is best for you, but by discussing possible options and seeing your situation from others' points of view, you are likely to discover yourself what is the best course of action.

Not everyone needs to or wants to escape from a troubling relationship. Sometimes difficulties can be worked out. But if you feel that your current situation is hopeless or dangerous, you owe it to yourself to try a new start.

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE KETTLE

SHARING IS CARING

In 1898, the New York World hailed The Salvation Army kettles as "the newest and most novel device for collecting money." Now, 100 years after the first kettle was set out, instead of just providing Christmas dinner, the money raised is also used to provide grocery checks so families can buy and prepare their own dinners at home. And this is important when times are as tough as they are, because you never know who will need that extra bit of help... it could be your neighbor, a friend, a relative, or it could be you. Help The Salvation Army, join us in standing together to help meet the needs of those going through difficult times. Contact your local Salvation Army or stop by a kettle for more information.

A ride on the chew-chew train is an elegant trip indeed

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

There are all kinds of reasons to take a trip on Walled Lake's Star Clipper Dinner Train.

For starters, it's an experience unlike any found in the Detroit area. The three-hour train ride through Walled Lake and the surrounding area in an elegantly redone railroad car makes one feel as though he's stepped onto the set of an Agatha Christie movie. Rich burgundy colors in one car and deep greens in the other provide a plush atmosphere in which to relax and enjoy the scenery.

Another reason is the entertainment. One car offers a cabaret and the other car — to continue the Agatha Christie aura — offers murder mystery evenings.

But the main reason to take a trip on the dinner train is, of course, the dinner. The meal was elegant, cooked perfectly, adventurous with ingredients but not so adventurous that it puts you off. And it's served by one of the most pleasant waitresses around.

The dinner train is run by Larry and Judy Coe, who have owned Coe rails, a freight rail company, since 1983. The dinner train has been operating for about 14 months.

"And it's been a hit from the day it opened," Judy Coe said. "People love it."

It's easy to see why. The dinner train consists of two dining cars, originally built in 1956 by the Budd Company, and they are the only two Budd cars in existence today. One car seats 72 people, primarily at tables of four. The other car, to make room for the piano and cabaret, seats 68. If there are only one or two in your party, you'll find yourself seated with two other people, which adds to the experience of the trip.

Strategically placed mirrors not only make the car seem more open, but also allow one to watch the entertainment without straining the neck.

Impeccably clean inside and out, the two cars are connected by an $800,000 kitchen where Chris Dewart has free reign, Judy Coe said. Everything served on the train was made on the train and nothing served was ever frozen. The three cars are joined by an auxiliary power car.

The menu changes monthly depending on the availability of ingredients, but it always includes a mouthwatering prime rib. Two other selections, generally a poultry and a fish dish, are also on the menu. When making reservations, you have to know what you want and how you want it cooked.

August's menu includes a chicken breast filled with crab meat and asparagus with a lemon cream and a walleye with hazelnuts and leek cream. September's menu will feature a chicken breast wrapped around roast duckling and fresh apples served with a Michigan cherry sauce and baked salmon.

All meals come with soup — ours was a delicious combination of shitake mushrooms and kiwi fruit — a salad and dessert — which was a white chocolate mousse.

One Monday a month, Dewart tries out his newest ideas on the staff, which offers suggestions. It's a nice touch because the servers, unlike those at many restaurants, know how the food tastes.

The coffee after dinner is a vanilla almond blended especially for the Coes.

It's interesting to watch the servers and their carefully choreographed method of bringing food to the tables. The staff is accommodating, almost to a fault — perhaps it's because there's no reason to push you to eat quickly and get out so they can turn the table over to a new customer.

Or perhaps it's because they like working on the train.

"We're like a family here," Judy Coe said. "We all help each other out and work on the train because we love it and because it's so unique."

She's right. Where else can you dine and wave to curious onlookers stopped in their cars? Or look out the window on a starry night and see blue herons standing in a marsh? Or watch the rain fall softly on a quiet lake?

For the real sightseers, the staff has set up some jokes along the train's eight-mile route. If you look closely, you can see a scarecrow with a Coe Rail T-shirt and a creature in a blackish lagoon.

The Coes say reservations are necessary. Recently their daughter and her husband were in town and couldn't even get aboard. And nearly all of New Year's Eve 1994 is booked.

In addition to the dinner train, Coe Rail offers one-hour tours in a vintage 1917 train. Both trains can be rented for company parties and gift certificates are available.

The Star Clipper Dinner Train leaves promptly at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and at 7 p.m. Sunday. It's closed Monday. The train offers packages with local hotels for a truly romantic weekend excursion.

For information, reservations and directions — it's only about 45-minutes away — call (313) 960-9440.

Don't 'Stay Tuned'

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

"Stay Tuned" might have been a better film if it went all the way over the top instead of straddling the fence, stuck between two channels, neither of which offer much for viewers.

As it is, this parody of America's fascination with television is just like most of what's on the medium today — mind mush. And only lukewarm, too.

It might have worked with better casting. But then again, who better to spoof the boob tube than John Ritter, a man whose name is synonymous with mediocre television.

The movie plays as though it were made for video but the producers thought they'd try it out at a theater first. It's the kind of movie that will play much better when you've only spent $2 to rent the video and you're able to talk through it.

Ritter plays Roy Knable, a television addict who signs his soul away to a man named Spike (Jeffrey Jones), who offers him a free trial of a new type of cable system. It comes complete with a more-than-state-of-the-art television and 666 channels.

His wife Helen (Pam Dawber), disgusted at the couch potato her husband has become, threatens to leave. But before she gets away, she and her husband are sucked into the satellite dish and wind up in a bizarre world called Hellvision.

The couple must face 24 hours of trials on television. They become part of television shows and movies. If they survive the day of programming, they are free, if not, their souls become the property of the devil.

So they are zapped with the quickness of a remote control from game show to wrestling match to an old gangster movie, among others. At each of these destinations, Spike's minions (one of whom is SCTV's Eugene Levy) attempt to kill the couple.

There's also a nifty cartoon segment when Roy and Helen become mice and are chased by RoboCat. (It's the only time Ritter shows any credible emotion.) The segment is written and directed by Chuck Jones, the Academy Award-winning creator of Looney Tunes cartoon characters. If you look carefully, that's his face on the stamp Roy uses to mail a letter.

There are some clever sight gags — when flipping channels, we see advertisements for shows like "Three Men and Rosemary's Baby," "Golden Ghoulies" and "thirtysomething to life" — a sensitive drama about life in prison.

Aside from that, the laughs are few and far between.

The movie fails as a television spoof because it's nothing more than the tepid, safe, non-challenging stuff it attempts to parody. And we get that at home for free.

'Diggstown' is a hit

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

In a rapier-sharp battle of wits, two men, one a big-time hustler, the other a professional con-man, take each other on in "Diggstown," a riotous action comedy about unorganized boxing.

Diggstown is a seedy burg in Texas where the main attractions are boxing and betting. Appropriately, the town has been named for a champion boxer who fought there, Charles M. Diggis.

He suffered brain damage when an unscrupulous promoter injected him with drugs because it was the only way he could get him to throw a fight.

Meanwhile, in Georgia, Gabriel Caine (James Woods) is about to be paroled from prison. During his stay he has stashed away quite a sum of money as a promoter of bare-fisted boxing matches. He also helps prisoners escape.

One of his escapees is a card-shark and pool hustler who he sends to Diggstown to set up a big scam. With the bait in place, Caine rides into Diggstown after being released. As soon as he arrives, he challenges the town's claim to fame by announcing he has a better fighter than Diggis ever was.

Enter John Gillon (Bruce Dern), the crooked manager who turned Diggis into a vegetable. He now owns the town, which he has taken over by winning mortgages with bets on fixed matches. Caine looks like an easy mark and Gillon confidently sets him up to back a wager where the winner takes $2 million and Diggis' town. Caine has a problem, though. He has to convince Honey Ray Palmer (Louis Gossett Jr.) to come out of retirement and meet the challenge. In his prime, Palmer was known for his powerful punch. But he is now retired and 48 years old.

Based on the novel "The Diggstown Ringers" by Leonard Wise, the movie is "The Sting" of the boxing ring. And director Michael Ritchie knows how to keep the action moving.

The fight scenes are exciting to watch but the fun comes from the by-play between Dern's gentleman-villain and Woods' sharp-edged grifter, — even more so between Woods and the elegant, dignified Gossett. All three perform with immense style.

Rowdy, brutish, vulgar, "Diggstown" packs plenty of punch.

De Palma's shocking 'Raising Cain' will raise pulses, too

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

Striking visual images and shocking thrills make Brian De Palma's "Raising Cain" fascinating viewing.

He has chosen to parody the conventional psycho-drama with a story-line that is contrived and improbable but which is played out against beautifully executed images.

Long a pretender to the Hitchcock throne, he returns to the master's milieu in this film after his less-than-successful, "Bonfire of the Vanities."

The action centers on Dr. Carter Nix (John Lithgow), a man with three more personalities than he really needs.

chologist who has given up his practice to try his theories on his own child, Amy (Amanda Pombro). While his oncologist wife Jenny (Lolita Davidovich) practices at the local hospital, he takes Amy to the park where he exchanges pleasantries with the mothers there.

Instead of an intercom to Amy's room, he has a video hookup enabling him to keep constant check on her. The first view we have shows him cuddling and cooing to her at bedtime. He is the perfect father.

But all is not as it appears. Carter is the son of a Norwegian authority on childhood development, Dr. Nix, also played by Lithgow. He is the victim of his father's experiments on split personalities which resulted in Carter becoming Cain Nix (again Lithgow), a sneering, evil lout who surfaces to do Carter's dirty work. Intermittently he is Josh, his 7-year-old self, and Margo, a nebulous character whom Carter fears.

Missing from "Raising Cain" is the graphic violence we have seen in early De Palma films. Instead, we have a terrifying situation in which Carter's doctor-father commands his disturbed son to steal babies for future experiments. The horror becomes more pronounced when we learn that Carter is planning to hand his own daughter over to his father.

Meanwhile, Jenny meets her former lover, Jack (Steven Bauer), realizes she is still in love with him and the romance blazes again.

In the teasing mish-mash plot, De Palma seems intent on keeping the viewer as confused as the psychopathic Carter.

Lithgow has said that he is great in this movie. That's not far from the truth.

De Palma's visual talent, themes and moods are brilliantly displayed here. And if you don't take the film too seriously, it even works as psychodrama.

Malone's biting wit makes 'Foolscap' a special treat

Foolscap

By Michael Malone

Little, Brown. 392 pages. $19.95

According to Noah Webster, that distinguished compiler of words and their meanings, the definition of foolscap is 1) a cap or hood, usually with bells, worn by jesters, 2) a conical dunce's cap worn by schoolchildren as punishment, or 3) paper in sheets measuring approximately 13x16 inches.

These definitions all apply, one way or another, in Michael Malone's magnificent spoof, "Foolscap," his seventh novel. Along with each of his previous books, this latest effort amply displays his amazing versatility; each book possesses its own distinct style and subject matter. Obviously, Malone, unlike the majority of contemporary novelists, is not a cookie-cutter author writing book after book using the same plot formulas and stereotypical characters.

Instead, he has a colorful imagination which steers him far away from composing stylistic works in an ever-deepening rut. Furthermore, Malone's poetic and amusing gift of language as well as his inspired plot development and satiric portraits of all the characters in "Foolscap" will establish him as an author to be reckoned with in terms of literary enjoyment and first edition collectibility.

This book concerns the many picaresque escapades of Theo Ryan, a young respectable professor at Cavendish University in Rome, N.C. He is one of the mainstays of the English department, and he is also the world's foremost authority on American playwright Ford Rexford. Theo has written the first volume of a definitive biography of the dramatist, a wild womanizer and boozier, whose gigantic appetites lead him to loud binges of notorious proportions and generate wide publicity. In spite of the middle-aged Rexford's inability to finish his latest play, Theo still has hopes of steering his friend toward a more restrained lifestyle for the sake of his play's completion.

Rexford lives in Tilting Rock, a mountain retreat not far from the university campus, and Theo tries to interest the English department in the possibility of acquiring Rexford's manuscripts and papers. Jonas Marsh, a reclusive professor, is one of Theo's senior cohorts, and "Theo considered inviting Marsh home to dinner with him tonight, of talking more about such things, but after watching the elegantly dressed man race his ladder in a frenzy back and forth in front of the bookshelves, charity failed him. Probably Marsh would have declined anyhow. Still, it seemed to him that the Restoration specialist looked lonely as he left him there in the otherwise deserted Ludd Hall, crouched atop his mahogany ladder, brushing dust from his beautiful books with his ivory white handkerchief."

Theo, the only child of theatrical people, has composed a play himself, "Foolscap," about Sir Walter Raleigh. He has shown his script to Rexford, who immediately and enthusiastically offers a number of suggestions for improvement. After Theo makes the suggested changes, he finds himself abroad for the first time, in pursuit of theater backers for his play. "To the young literary scholar, being in London was like walking around inside his own head, like living in a great sprawling book of all the poems and plays and novels he'd spent his life reading. Fiction was up every alley, history around every corner. Theo paced Raleigh's walk along the battlements of Bloody Tower. He stood where Raleigh had died, and placed his hand against the cold stone marker of the headless grave."

While in England, Theo tracks down Dame Winnifred Throckmorton, a retired don and an authority on Raleigh. The ancient dame is an eccentric personality, feisty as well as extremely shrewd and perceptive. With the connivance of her colleague, Jonas Marsh, who has also come to England, Dame Winnifred shows Theo a way to secure a proper place in literary history for "Foolscap": "Dame Winnifred had spent the eight years of her retirement tracing the dispersal of Raleigh's large library and his literary effects. She had deduced from her research that if there was a lost play, chances were it had been bundled in the volumes bought by the first Earl of Newbolt. For, after a dissipated youth, this man had apparently turned into an insatiable reader, or at least an insatiable collector, of books, and by his middle years had become so obsessed with his bibliophilic hobby that his wife, the infamous Countess Charlotte, had been able to indulge in a series of love affairs (one of them the subject of a play by a famous Restoration wit), without the bookish earl ever noticing her late hours."

Theo, too, anxiously pursues Rexford, who has come to England and fled to the countryside with his latest romantic passion, a young graduate student from Cavendish. It seems almost impossible that Theo will succeed in finding the elusive Rexford and his unfinished play, a pursuit that leads him over the dales of the British pastoral scene. In spite of his uncontrolled manner, readers cannot help having a twinge of admiration for the boisterous and blasphemous playwright; Rexford's mannerisms and habits are outsize as befitting a great writer, and, along with the hapless Theo, we are sometimes coerced into forgiving him his manifold sins.

In the Cavendish section of the book, we are hugely entertained by Malone's biting sketches of university personnel — all the way from bombastic Dean Buddy Tupper Jr. of the flat-top haircut, General Irwin Kaney the senile president of the university, the trouble-making Marxist professor Herbie Crawford who is constantly egging on the students to support left-wing causes, the token black woman on the faculty, Jorvelle Wakefield, Dean Claudia Pratt the prissy dean of the college, and scores of others who are sketched in hilarious acid detail. The British, too, are subjects of amusing portrayals, their scholars, noblemen, and lower classes, all limned perfectly with an unerring eye for the striking aspect.

Elizabeth Walker's Bibliofile column and Irene Walker's Elegant Eating column run on alternate weeks in this space.

Local author T.R. Peters Sr. recently received word that his sonnet, "Rapture of the Deep," was selected as "one of the best poems submitted to The World of Poetry organization during the past 17 years."

He has been invited to the group's eighth annual convention in San Francisco next month to receive a gold medal and be inducted into The Homer Society of International Poets.

Peters was featured last month at the Rabble Coffeehouse's Summer Poetry Series. On June 4, he read several of his poems to a capacity crowd.

His novel, "Two Weeks in the Forties," will go into its third printing in a new limited and illustrated version this fall.

Peters is also the author of a play, "Mensa Meeting," which premiered at the Southfield Hilton in 1987. His highly praised short story, "The Return of Thornton Booker," appeared in the March 1992 issue of The New Censorship, a literary magazine published in Denver.

He is currently at work on part three of his trilogy which is set in the Wayne State University area circa 1949.

Rapture of the Deep

Plunging into a sea of blue-green foam
Then a lurching fantail down

A strange descending prehistoric gnome
Drops chuteless toward a watery ghost town.

Fish, millions of elusive silver shades
Move impassively by like gray-armored Legions
As a black Satanic figure from Hades
Angles deeper into unknown regions.

He stops, Debussy faintly from somewhere
Confused, he darts up, then a deeper swim
As full crescendo the music permeates his air
He gasps as a wild rapture seizes him.

Later, through the depths a lifeless thing does soar
While above, dark mutinous waves break toward shore.

Remember when? Then share your Michigan stories

Do you have a "uniquely Michigan memory?" A story or an event that could only have happened in Michigan?

Then Victor Enterprises wants to hear from you. The company, a Warren-based publisher, has started work on "Echoes of the Peninsulas," a collection of experiences and tales written by everyday people.

You don't have to be a professional writer, just somebody who wants to share a special and uniquely Michigan memory, said Victoria Mielke, owner of Victor Enterprises.

She has received stories about the view from the Mackinac Bridge, an adventurous fishing or hunting trip, even a quiet walk in the woods with a loved one.

To submit your experience or anecdote, Victor Enterprises prefers it typed, double-spaced format, but neatly hand-printed manuscripts are also acceptable if you don't have access to a typewriter.

Send all submissions, along with name, address and a short biography of yourself to Victor Enterprises, P.O. Box 1704, Warren, 48090-1704. If you have any questions, direct them to the same address. A winter 1993 publication date is planned.

Now you're cruisin' — new ships mean lower prices

This is the time of year when we begin thinking about winter vacations. Frankly, with the kind of weather we've had this summer, most of us are ready to head somewhere sunny right now.

Anyway, as we consider our options, one of them will surely be cruising.

There are more staterooms than ever on the market so the deals are getting better and better. The best cruise rates can be obtained one of two ways — book early or at the last minute.

If you're picky and don't have a flexible schedule, the latter option probably isn't the best for you. So you should consider booking right now if you want to get the best deals. All cruise lines are offering incentives to get their cabins filled early. Some examples:

Renaissance Cruises offers a $2,000-a-person savings on its cruises to the Seychelles Islands if you book six months in advance. Princess Cruises will knock off $1,500 a couple on selected cruises if you sign on by Oct. 31. On Windstar Cruises, if you book and pay for your trip 150 days before departure, you'll save 30 percent on the advertised rate.

One reason for those deals is that there are even more cruise ships entering service, which means more rooms to fill. Here is a rundown on the new ships which have entered or will begin service in 1992.

Crown Cruise Lines' newest vessel, the 820-passenger Crown Jewel, made its world debut at the Olympics in Barcelona, Spain, where it housed a number of corporate guests. Beginning Sept. 5, the ship will offer five-port Canada cruises between New York and Montreal during the fall. Then there will be two trans-Panama Canal cruises, after which the ship will return to its new home port of Palm Beach on Dec. 5.

Majesty Cruise Lines has introduced the $220 million Royal Majesty which will carry 2,354 passengers. It arrived in New York in mid-July and is now working its way down the coast to Miami, which will be its home port. Regular cruises begin Sept. 10.

Norwegian Cruises Lines' Dreamward will celebrate its maiden voyage out of Fort Lauderdale on Dec. 6, when it will begin sailing on alternate weeks to the western and eastern Caribbean. From May to October, the ship will be based in New York for weekly sailings to Bermuda. It can accommodate 1,246 passengers.

Much anticipated is the arrival of the new Statendam, owned by Holland America Lines. It will be the fifth ship to bear this well-respected name. It will carry 1,266 passengers and will offer a mixed itinerary of trans-Panama Canal and Caribbean/Bermuda cruises. Look for this to be a big winner with traditional, upscale cruisers.

The Club Med 2, sister sailing ship to the Club Med 1, will leave its French shipyard in September for a two-month promotional tour. It will then be homeported in New Caledonia where it will offer three-, four- and seven-day sails through the surrounding Pacific islands beginning Dec. 15. On June 15, she will reposition in Guam offering three- and four-day trips to Tinian, Yap and Saipan. It has room for 392 passengers.

The $125 million Radisson Diamond was christened in May and has received much attention for its futuristic design — it is the world's first twin-hulled cruise ship. (I don't care what you say, it sure does look funny.)

The ship holds 354 passengers in 177 cabins and was built specifically to accommodate corporate conferences and incentive groups. It is based in San Juan and will offer Caribbean cruises of four, five and seven days.

The 1,300-passenger Costa Classica started sailing from Port Everglades, Fla., in January and then moved to the Mediterranean for the summer. After Oct. 10, it will be based in Miami where it will sail alternately to the eastern and western Caribbean until May 1 when it will return to Genoa for the summer. Costa Cruise Lines will introduce another new ship, the Costa Allegra in December. It will hold 800 passengers.

Celebrity Cruises introduced its Zenith in April. It carries 1,374 passengers and is based in Port Everglades. Two other intimate ships entered service this year, the 212-passenger Royal Viking Queen and the 114-passenger Renaissance VIII.

That is a total of 12 new ships and more are coming on line next year.

If you want to learn more about cruising, Hudson's Travel Service is hosting two Cruise Nights — Sept. 2 at the Hyatt Regency, Dearborn, and Sept. 9 at the Guest Quarters in Troy, both at 7 p.m. Representatives of several cruise lines will be present. Make reservations by calling 374-5220 or 683-5960. The cost is $2.

War Memorial details fall travelogue schedule

The Grosse Pointe Adventure 1992-93 Series features nine complete evenings of the finest travelogues, personally narrated by professional filmmakers.

Enjoy a lakeside dinner at 6:30 p.m. in the Fries Ballroom followed by a film at 8 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Drive in Grosse Pointe Farms. The 1992-93 schedule includes:

- "America's Favorite Places" on Monday, Sept. 28. Filmmaker Ed Lark shows you what you have missed, what you have seen or what you plan to see. From our National Parks to New Orleans' Mardi Gras, America has it all.

- Howdee Meyers and Lucia Perrigo share the secrets of Venice on Monday, Oct. 12. For 1,000 years, the Venetians turned their water wonderland into treasure islands. See all the brilliance, beauty and beguilements of the world's most seductive city.

- Rick Ray narrates his film, "Iceland: Europe's Outback," on Monday, Nov. 16. See the bizarre, forlorn frontier of fire and ice, warmed just enough by volcanic activity under the Earth to be habitable. Find out why Icelandic people have the longest life expectancy.

- See the antique trains and barges of Europe on Tuesday, Dec. 8, narrated by Ken Lawrence. Nearly 150 years ago in Germany the steam locomotive was invented. Gradually streamlined, see how it became more and more efficient.

- Filmmaker Curt Matson shares "The Romance of Austria" on Monday, Jan. 18. Here is culture, historic background and a way of life that epitomizes the word "European." Today, Austrians continue to develop the arts against the magnificent backdrop of Alpine and romantic river scenery.

- Willis Butler shares his adventure "Filming the World" on Wednesday, Feb. 10. This is the story behind the scenes of the glamorous, humorous and dangerous adventure of filming the world for over 40 years. The story combines 19 journeys across the Pacific and over four continents.

- See firsthand Lindbergh's historic flight from New York to Paris on Monday, March 15, narrated by filmmaker Robin Williams. Lindbergh barnstormed across the United States, flying the mail routes. It was a natural progression as he realized the fantastic possibilities of flight.

- From Roman ruins to Byzantine frescoes, you'll see evidence of Yugoslavia's mosaic of cultures on Monday, April 19 with filmmaker Frank Klicar. Examine the long-reaching political and social legacy of the country's past rulers.

- Experience a British summer with the help of filmmaker Jim Cole on Tuesday, May 11. From the southern tip of England to the very northern most point of Scotland, explore the many diverse cultures and the long, exciting history of this land.

Tickets are $34 for the series of nine films; or $160 for the series of nine complete evenings (dinners and films), or $450 film only; $14 dinner only; $18.50 complete evening. Call 881-7511 for more information.

Greenfield Village offers fall family fun

Under autumn's canopy of changing colors, visitors to Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village can count on a fall full of fun.

Visitors to the 93-acre indoor/outdoor museum can discover a host of national treasures: from Thomas Edison's Menlo Park Laboratory and the Wright Brothers Cycle Shop to an array of presidential vehicles, a lunar Rover and Paul Revere coffeepot.

Special fall events and exhibits — from one of the nation's premiere gatherings of vintage motor cars to a look at American's love affair with technology — highlight the stories of resourcefulness, innovation and ingenuity found daily at the historic complex.

The fall season opens with plenty of "brassy" activity as antique Fords, Packards and Hupmobiles roll into Greenfield Village for the Old Car Festival, Sept. 12 and 13. Hundreds of horseless carriages built before 1929 will parade through the village and compete for the title of Grand Champion, while drivers participate in tests of skill at this prestigious annual car meet. Old-fashioned bicycles, music and costumed interpreters add to the atmosphere of the weekend, a tradition since 1950.

Railroad Days will "steam" into its second year at Greenfield Village Sept. 26 and 27. Visitors can check out the feel of workin' and travelin' on the railroad as they explore 19th- and 20th-century refrigerator, passenger and freight cars or compare coal-burning and diesel locomotives. Kids can enjoy hands-on activities, games, and model trains, too. Visitors can push a multi-ton locomotive on the turntable, operate a handcart or visit a "hobo camp."

The season of plenty comes alive during Fall Harvest Days, Oct. 2-4. At the 1880s Firestone Farm, the entire community — and visitors, too — will work together to bring about a successful harvest. Visitors can help the farm hands harvest crops from the garden and shell corn, or watch a steam-powered thresher in operation as draft horses pull the plow. Demonstrations, hands-on activities, games and music throughout the village re-create traditional harvest celebrations.

Thousands of Michigan-grown apples have a pressing engagement with the historic machinery at the village's Martinsville Cider Mill from Sept. 17 through Oct. 18. Sweet, tangy cider will be available for purchase at selected village food shops.

Inside the Henry Ford Museum, visitors can enjoy a host of eye-catching and thought-provoking exhibits. "Possible Dreams: Popular Mechanics and America's Enthusiasm for Technology" explores 20th-century Americans' fascination with gadgets and projects portrayed in a magazine, that has been both beacon and mirror of popular sentiment since its founding in 1902.

Elsewhere in the museum, the Innovation Station will delight "innovators" of all ages. The unique, interactive learning game challenges visitors to develop problem-solving skills as they work in teams to direct brightly colored balls through a system of interconnecting tubes and activity stations.

Special observation windows afford a look at work-in-progress on Made in America, a vast new permanent exhibition which is to open Dec. 5. Covering 50,000 square feet and three centuries of industrial development, it will be the world's largest and most complete presentation of the American manufacturing story in any museum.

The American Life Collection Gallery showcases top-quality furniture that has been reproduced from the collections of Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village for today's home. The 2,600-square-foot gallery, located near the Museum Store, displays fine furniture and decorative accessories which have been reproduced, adapted or interpreted by respected manufacturers of home furnishings. As an added convenience, a dealer resource center identifies participating retail outlets across the nation.

Open daily from 9 a.m. to 5

The Amish Way visited

Tucked away in northern Indiana, the Amish live simply.

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial is sponsoring a trip to discover "The Amish Way" on Tuesday, Sept. 15, from 8 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. Twice a week the Amish's otherwise quiet little town bustles with activity as treasure seekers come from far and wide to buy, sell and trade their wares at the Shipshewana Flea Market.

The enormous country sale with more than 1,000 outdoor vendors is a big part of the community's uniqueness. Wander through the stalls that are teeming with items from socks to perfume, handcrafted lawn ornaments to Amish dolls. In the town itself, there are friendly shopkeepers and stores abounding with bolts of calico, dolls, folk art and hand-stitched quilts. Before returning home, sit down to a country style feast prepared in the Amish kitchen of Essenhaus.

Tickets are $53, and include motorcoach, box lunch and dinner. Call 881-7511.

Corktown reunion slated

A Corktown reunion is scheduled for Friday and Saturday, Oct. 17-18, in the area surrounding Most Holy Trinity Church in Detroit.

Activities for all ages including art, music, history, food and more are scheduled.

Anyone who would like to contribute to the reunion by sharing time, old photographs, genealogies or memorabilia can call Rose S. Ierne at 962-5660.

In addition, a brunch will be held Sunday, Oct. 18, at the Gaelic League after Mass at Most Holy Trinity Church or St. Peter's Episcopal Church. Reservations may be made by calling Edward Dyar at 626-7732.

Art 'n Apples is Sept. 12-13

The Art 'n Apples Festival organization is planning this year's juried art fair, Sept. 12-13, in Rochester Municipal Park.

Art 'n Apples is an outdoor art fair featuring 275 artists, live entertainment and children's art activities. The two-day event is the major fundraiser of the non-profit Paint Creek Center for the Arts, 407 Pine Street, Rochester.

The festival is looking for volunteers for this year's fundraiser. Individuals and groups are needed for various tasks on Friday, Sept. 11, through Sunday, Sept. 13. Interested persons should call the Paint Creek Center for the Arts at 651-4110.

Travel down the Amazon at Macomb Center Sept. 10

Ted Bumiller narrates an all-color film of the Amazon at Macomb Center for the Performing Arts at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 10. The film is the first of 10 travel programs of the 1992-93 travel series coordinated by lecturer and TV personality Dennis Glen Cooper and sponsored by Diplomat Travel.

Call the Macomb Center box office at 286-2222 Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tickets are $4.50 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. Group sales are available. Visa/MasterCard are accepted.

Bumiller, a Cincinnati architect, started traveling in his high school days by canoe. Now traveling by raft and ship, his latest adventure explores life along the Amazon flowing from its headwaters in the Peruvian Andes 4,000 miles to the Atlantic in Brazil. Along this mighty river are Lima — City of Kings, the Lost City of the Incas, Rio de Janeiro, lofty mountains and vast jungles rich in the mystery and legend of South America.

Macomb Center for the Performing Arts is a cultural program of Macomb Community College. The Center is located at Hall (M-59) and Garfield roads in Clinton Township.

For additional membership information, call Warren Damman at 881-8252.

Few changes in rules for prep sports

High school sports fans will have to look closely to catch the rules changes in basketball, football and soccer that will go into effect this year.

Most of the changes made by the National Federation of High School Athletics are administrative. The most obvious deal with the welfare of the players.

A soccer player who has been knocked unconscious or apparently knocked unconscious, may not re-enter the game without the written authorization of a physician.

An injured basketball player must now be removed from the game until the next available substitution opportunity if the coach or other bench personnel have to go on the floor to attend the player.

Among other soccer rules changes is a new definition of parrying, which includes any action by the goalkeeper to de-

The high school sports season will get into full swing next week. Members of Grosse Pointe South's boys soccer team are shown during one of their pre-season workouts. Football, girls basketball, girls tennis, boys golf, boys and girls cross country and girls swimming teams are also hard at work getting ready for the fall season.

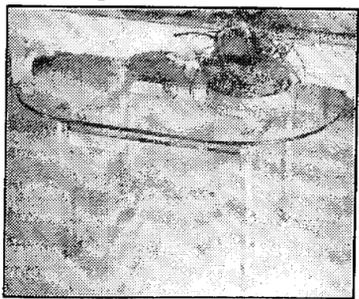

Suzette Atrasz, left, and Christine Jamerino represented the Pointe Aquatics swim club at the 1992 Long Course Junior Nationals in Charlotte, N.C., earlier this month. Atrasz swam the 100 and 200-meter breaststroke events, while Jamerino swam the 100 and 200 breaststroke and the 200 individual medley.

She returned this season to lead the Black and White with seven first-place finishes as Radcliffe placed second in the Sloop Shrew Trophy competition.

Local skier trains in France

There's no off-season from skiing for Megan McRill of Grosse Pointe Park.

The eighth-grade honor student at Pierce Middle School recently returned home from Les 2 Alpes, France, where she attended the Neige Sans Frontiere Summer Downhill ski camp.

The training camp consisted of 18 athletes, ages 12-17, from American, Canadian and French ski teams.

Head coaches were Ron Bonnevie and Joyce Kujala from the Green Mountain Valley ski school in Waitsfield, Vt. Kujala has been McRill's coach and trainer since she was 7.

The European training program allows athletes to work out during the summer months in climates and snow conditions not available in the United States. Les 2 Alpes had 15 inches of fresh snow for training on July 4. The camp also provided a multi-cultural experience for the athletes.

McRill competes in slalom and giant slalom and is a level J-3 skier with the Central United States Ski Association. She trains locally during the fall and winter with the Hurricane race team and the Bayview race team.

She races during the ski season primarily in northern Michigan, but also competes in Vermont.

McRill competed in the Central U.S. regional finals the last two years, representing Michigan women in her age group in the five-state region.

The last three summers, McRill attended the Government Ski Camp in Mount Hood, Ore. She also participated in winter training camps in Colorado, Vermont and Canada. McRill spends a portion of the winter school semester at the Killington Mountain School in Killington, Vt., where students receive individual tutoring with assignments from their home school.

Megan is the daughter of Lannie and Sherry McRill. Her brothers Brandon, 10, and Courtney, 4, are also promising skiers.

Rules

flect the ball down or away when it could have been caught with reasonable effort.

The new rule prohibits the keeper from intentionally parrying the ball in the penalty area and then repossessing it before it has been played by another player.

The restriction does not include situations where the ball accidentally rebounds from the goalie when he is making a save or playing the ball.

The penalty is a free kick from the spot of the foul.

Other basketball rules changes involve the process for assessing team technicals for administrative infractions.

Team technicals will now be limited to one per team for submission of roster and starters and one per team thereafter, regardless of the number of infractions.

During play, the technical foul assessed for reaching through the throw-in plane has become a team technical rather than an individual technical.

Visible rule changes in football begin when the snapper places his hands on the ball, after which he will not be allowed to remove them. Additional neutral zone encroachment restrictions begin at that point.

Points of emphasis in the rule books for 1992-93 include handchecking, rough low post play and taunting and baiting in basketball; bench conduct and serious fouls on breakaways in soccer; and pass interference, illegal contact and identification of eligible receivers in football.

Farms holds synchronized swim show

"Classic Rock" was the theme for the recent Grosse Pointe Farms synchronized swim show at the Pier Park.

Each age group performed a number, as did coaches Jenny Jones and Jeannie Schrage.

Several special awards were presented before the show. Most improved swimmers were Anne Garvey and Anne Peoples; best attitude, Michelle Ritter; rookie of the year, Monique Perreault; biggest fishes, Amanda Dumler and Jackie DeHayes; biggest helper, Kim Quasarano; and most congenial, Katie Spertie.

Christin Feldman

Feldman takes third in Chicago

Christin Feldman of Grosse Pointe Park finished third last week in the U.S. Sailing/Rolex Junior Women's Championship at the Columbia Yacht Club in Chicago.

Feldman, 16, took three thirds, a fifth and a 12th in her five races. The lowest finish is thrown out, so Feldman had a total of 14 points, a seven-point edge over the fourth place finisher.

Defending champion Rebecca Harris of Vacaville, Calif., took first in the 68-boat fleet to keep the Leiter Trophy in her possession for another year. Harris won all five races.

Danielle Brennan of Northport, N.Y., was second in all five races to finish with eight points. Brennan was also runner-up in 1991.

Several other Grosse Pointers competed in the event, which is the premier national sailing competition for women 18 and under. Sailors used radial rigged lasers, a 14-foot high performance racing dinghy.

Gretchen Uznis of Grosse Pointe Farms was 11th with 46 points, Lila Marie LaHood of Grosse Pointe Shores was 20th with 71 points, Bridget Murray of the Farms was 46th with 177 points and Joanne Davies of Grosse Pointe City was 51st with 209.

"I LOST 164 LBS. EASY! WITHOUT DIETING!"

ABSOLUTELY NO HUNGER • NO DRUGS • NO CALORIE COUNTING

AS SEEN

ASTOUNDING WEIGHT LOSS WITHOUT DIETING OR EXERCISE

A major development for weight control has finally happened. Clinical studies are completed in the U.S. and Europe and the news of this discovery is sweeping the country. This discovery could eliminate all diets enabling anyone to lose pounds and inches without dieting or exercise.

RESEARCHERS DISCOVER CALORIE BLOCKING FORMULA

While medical researchers were compiling studies on lowering cholesterol levels in humans, they "accidentally" discovered that everyone in the test group lost weight. Significant amounts of weight! One patient lost over 30 pounds according to the published report in the British Journal of Nutrition. Further research concluded that a certain ingredient in the formula they were testing was producing this effect. These findings are published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition and ACTA Medica Scandinavia.

"Before taking Kaitrim 2, I weighed 230 lbs. I lost 30 lbs. in 30 days even though I ate anything I wanted. I now weigh 170 lbs. Total weight lost is 60 lbs."
Keith Daley, CA

EAT ALL YOU WANT & STILL LOSE WEIGHT

The clinical tests conducted at prestigious universities in Sweden and Finland on this formula led to astounding discoveries. This ingredient bonds with a portion of your food, blocking absorption of calories. This means that substantial amounts of calories pass through your digestive system without turning to fat and in turn your body burns up stored fat. Rapid weight loss is the result. The report further states, "Body weight was significantly reduced even though the patients were specifically asked not to alter their dietary habits." This means that you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and as much as you want.

WARNING: Since Kaitrim 2 is so effective at removing fat and cellulite and has no side effects some people can lose weight too fast. Don't allow yourself to become too thin. If you start to lose weight too fast, simply skip a day or two of use. Before starting your weight loss program, check with your doctor to be sure you are in normal health.

PROVEN SAFE AND EFFECTIVE

This formula is not a drug and produces no side effects. It is entirely natural, in tablet form, taken before mealtime. It has been proven to induce weight loss without altering normal eating habits. Clinical tests and thousands of satisfied users have verified the safety of this formula for long term use.

A U.S. company has received worldwide exclusive rights to distribute this powerful all natural formula under the name Kaitrim 2.

FAST ACTING

How nice it will be to be able to eat anything and not have to count calories ever again. Just remember to take your Kaitrim 2. Those calories won't mean a thing as the fat cells are being shrunk. It's working for you 24 hours a day and you don't feel a thing except you see the difference in yourself. A slimmer you. A healthier you. Most people comment on how much better they feel! How great you'll feel about yourself in new and sensuous clothes. See the results the very first day! People have reported losing the first 10 pounds within a few days and up to 50 pounds the first month. Even if you want to lose 100 pounds or more Kaitrim 2 can be your answer.

ARE YOU WORTH IT?

You bet you are! Whether you want to lose 10 or 164 pounds you owe it to yourself to make that change and look and feel like a million. It has never been easier. Think what you will look like a few short weeks from today, slender with a more youthful figure. The research has been completed and thousands have joined in the fight against fat. Now it's your turn to take that step to a happier and healthier life. No matter what you might have tried in the past, be it diets, diet pills, or clinics, you will now be able to reach your desired weight. You will do it easier, faster, safer, and for less cost. We guarantee it. You are guaranteed prompt shipment by UPS. Order right now!

FREE!

During this special promotion every order of Kaitrim 2 will contain not only the clinically tested fat burning ingredients that are derived from natural plant sources, but will be enhanced by 14 natural vitamins and minerals that are essential to your good health. TO WORK FOR YOU TOO!

"Not long ago I weighed 349 lbs. and wore size 46 pants. I tried everything to lose weight; the only thing that worked was Kaitrim 2. I lost 164 lbs. and feel full of energy. The best part is that it was easy! I have recommended it to everyone I know. I plan to lose another 40 lbs. with the help of Kaitrim 2. Thanks." Joy Verch, FL

Pointe builder, Lakeside team up for Homearama

By John Minnis

Builder Anthony Fierimonte of Grosse Pointe has joined merchants at the Lakeside Mall to build the first Homearama model home ever participated in by a shopping center.

"We were fortunate Lakeside picked us to decorate our home," said Fierimonte, a partner with Sorrentino Builders of Clinton Township.

"The home, I have to admit, is really unique. The interior decorator (James Cousins) did an outstanding job."

Dubbed "The Lakeside Lifestyle," the 3,018-square-foot traditional single-family home will be among 13 homes featured at the 10th annual Homearama/Condorama running Sept. 3-27 in The Vineyards subdivision at 19 Mile and Ryan in Sterling Heights.

The "shopping center home" is the first completed through the efforts of 45 retailers and nine interior decorators from Lakeside, said

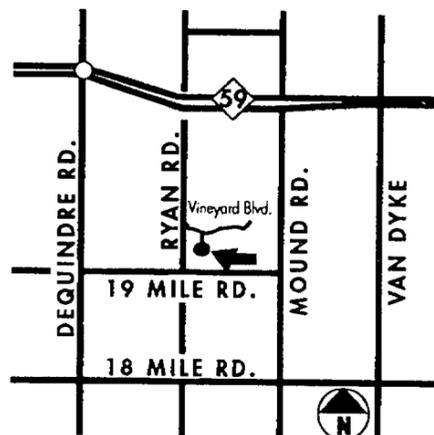

Karen MacDonald, marketing director for the mall.

"Because the product leaves one overall impression, that of a livable home for a family of the '90s, it's hard to believe so many people participated," she said.

Among the Lakeside department stores contributing furniture and accessories were Crowley's, Hudson's, JCPenney and Sears.

"If you can imagine the tremendous detail and scope of the merchandise from those stores, you can get some idea of what we've done in The Lakeside Lifestyle," MacDonald said. "On top of that, we had eight top decorators coordinating every detail, from reading glasses and fax machine in the study to the espresso candies and champagne bottle with cork chocolates in the butler's pantry."

The house, designed by architect Russo Bennett Associates, features four bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, double leaded glass entry door and a formal foyer with ceramic-tile flooring, a cathedral ceiling and loft over the family room, first-floor library and master bedroom with a cathedral ceiling and a Jacuzzi whirlpool in the master bath and another one outside.

Fierimonte said Cousins did the rooms in new, vibrant colors that work well.

"They're comfortable," he said. "You want to crash, no matter what room you're sitting in."

The price of the home starts at $244,900.

Detached condominiums start in the $150,000 range and the attached condos begin at $130,000.

Another Grosse Pointe builder, Palazzolo Brothers, has two homes in the Homearama at The Vineyards.

"The Princess" is a 1 1/2-story, 2,575-square-foot contemporary single-family home ranging in price from $205,000 to $245,000. It features four bedrooms and 2 1/2 baths; a cathedral ceiling in the gathering room and foyer; first-floor master suite with a tray ceiling, double sink and walk-in closets; large kitchen with box-out window and nook with bay window and an exterior staircase to the basement.

The other Palazzolo Brothers home, "The Hemingway," boasts 2,990 square feet and lists for $235,000 to $285,000. The traditional Colonial features four bedrooms and 2 1/2 baths; 2-story living room with floor-to-ceiling windows; 9-foot ceilings throughout the first floor; tray ceiling in the master bedroom; fireplaces in the master bedroom and family room; Jacuzzi whirlpool in the master bath; a bonus room on the second floor and an exterior stairway to the basement.

Homearama/Condorama hours are 3 to 10:30 p.m. weekdays and noon to 10:30 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and Labor Day.

Admission is $6 with ample free parking. Refreshments will be available for purchase. For more information, call 313-737-4478.

PETERSEN

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

Petersen: No-nonsense get-away

The Petersen, with its barn-shaped gambrel room, is a no-nonsense vacation get-away with a distinctively country flavor.

The compact design helps keep building costs low and maintenance time at a minimum. A deck, which wraps around two-thirds of the home, provides a substantial increase in living space when weather permits.

Unlike an A-frame cabin, where the steep roofline leaves minimal usable floorspace on the second floor, the gambrel-roofed cabin loses very little of its upstairs space to the roof slope. Consequently, both upstairs bedrooms are much larger than those usually found in small cabins.

Each of the bedrooms has its own closet, and they share a bath. The one with the balcony is sure to be the favorite. Built in a location with a panoramic view, this perch would be ideal for watching sunsets, birds, changing seasons and wildlife or keeping an eye on children.

The living area, downstairs, is also quite large, open and bright. With the fireplace so close to the front door, dirty and snowy footgear can be shucked off immediately after entering, and left to dry where it's warm. The stairway is also conveniently close, allowing people to run upstairs quickly for dry clothing.

Despite its compact size, the gallery kitchen offers more cupboard and counter space than most cabin designs. The main floor bathroom has cafe doors, and a compartmentalized water closet, allowing two people privacy at once.

For a study kit of the PETERSEN (208-02), send $7.50 to Today's Home, P.O. Box 2832-T Eugene, Ore. 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Home Tips

Grated orange peel — Grated orange peel is sometimes hard to find in the supermarket, so I make my own.

Every time I use an orange, I wash it, take off the ends and any bad spots and peel the ring into long strips. I then let the strips dry on a paper towel before crushing them in the blender.

I place grated orange peel in a jar and use it on breads, salads or in other dishes as a delightful seasoning.

Barbara L., Sandusky, Ohio

Baby wipes — Here's a helpful tip for mothers who use pre-moistened baby wipes. To keep the top ones moist and the bottom ones from getting soggy, I store the container upside down.

Virginia R., Surf City, N.C.

Laundry detergent — The humidity where I live is very high, and my laundry room is outside. As a result, I've found that powdered detergent cakes up.

Liquid detergents would answer my problem, but I think the store-brand powders are more economical and just as effective.

I buy the economy-size powdered detergent and pour it into a plastic milk carton. It never cakes and is easier to handle.

Bea K., Houma, La.

Handy glove — I always keep my worn-out cotton and knitted gloves. I put one on, spray it with furniture polish and give the furniture the "white glove" test. It can also be sprayed with glass cleaner to dust favorite collectibles.

It's an easy, quick way to get work done, and best of all, the gloves can be thrown in with the laundry.

Housing affordability gains linked to low interest rates

Housing affordability conditions for both first-time and repeat buyers posted rousing gains for the second quarter of 1992 compared to the same time last year, according to the National Association of Realtors' first-time home buyer and composite Housing Affordability Indexes released recently.

Although affordability conditions remained ripe during April, May and June of this year, marginal rises in the median price of single family homes continued to thwart the ability of first-time home buyers struggling to raise downpayment funds.

NAR President Dorcas T. Helfant noted, "If housing is going to kick-start this economy, government has to provide consumers with the right tools to overcome downpayment barriers — low interest rates alone do not buy a house."

The average effective interest rate during 1992 has been 8.41 percent, the lowest since 1973, when a gallon of gasoline cost 38 cents, she added.

The distinct rise in composite and first-time home buyer affordability indexes compared to a year ago is tempered by an increasing disparity between the two groups. An affordability gap of 35 percent separated the first-time buyer index from the composite index during the second quarter of 1992, while last year the difference was 34.4 percent.

NAR Executive Vice President Almon R. "Bud" Smith commented, "The affordability index shows progress, but doesn't reveal the frustration felt by many potential first-time home buyers. Our recent homeownership survey shows that three-quarters of current renters are willing to make substantial sacrifices, even postpone retirement, to start climbing the homeownership ladder. Yet almost half cite problems related to downpayment as the reason they remain renters."

NAR's composite Housing Affordability Index, which measures affordability factors for all home buyers, rated 121.2 for the second quarter of this year, compared to 111.4 in the second quarter of 1991.

When the index measures 100, a family earning the median income would have exactly the amount needed to purchase a median-priced resale home, using conventional financing and a 20 percent down payment. Since the median is the midpoint, the composite shows that half the families in the nation had at least 121.2 percent of the income needed to qualify for the purchase of a home with a median price of $103,600, and half did not.

In comparison, the first-time home buyer index shows the ability of renters who are prime potential first-time buyers to qualify for a mortgage on a starter home. When this index equals 100, the typical first-time buyer can afford the typical starter home under existing financial conditions. The first-time buyer median income represents the typical income of a renter family with wage earners between the ages of 25 and 44 years.

During the second quarter of this year, the first-time home buyer index measured 78.7, compared to 73.1 for the second quarter of 1991. The first-time index shows that the qualifying income needed for conventional financing covering 90 percent of a $88,100 starter home was $29,833. Yet the median income of prime first-time buyers was $23,485 — a difference of $6,348 per year.

Helfant attributes first-time home-buyer difficulties to a hesitant legislative atmosphere:

"Attractive interest rates continue to boost trade-up buyer activity as well as first-time buyer curiosity, but if consumers could responsibly apply IRA and 401(k) funds toward a home purchase, the market would surge. The nation needs pro-consumer policy, not reluctance."

Under affordability conditions for all buyers during the second quarter of 1992, a family earning $20,000 per year would have sufficient income to qualify for a $68,000 home with a $54,400 loan. A family earning $30,000 would qualify for a $102,000 home using a $81,600 loan. For a family earning $40,000, qualifying for a loan of $108,800 would enable them to purchase a $136,000 home. Finally, a family earning $50,000 annually would be able to buy a $170,000 home after qualifying for a $136,000 loan.

Household Help by John Amantea

Q. It seems that whenever I have to sand a painted surface, I have problems with paint buildup on the sandpaper. What can I do about this?

A. It's an unfortunate fact of life that paint buildup occurs when you sand. It's a result of the friction of sanding which heats up the paint, making it soft and sticky, so instead of coming off as dust, it gums up. To avoid some of this, at least, don't apply too much pressure, particularly if you're power sanding. Also, be sure to use the correct sandpaper.

To sand paint, you need an "open-coat" garnet sandpaper (reddish brown), or a "close-coat" silicon carbide paper with a stearate coating (usually a grayish color). The paper should be marked on the back of the sheets or on the package.

Both garnet and silicon carbide are sharp, so they cut rapidly, thus reducing friction. Open-coat means only 50 percent to 70 percent of the surface is gritty. The spaces in between the grains help stop clogging. With this type of paper, you'll be able to see the backing between the grains of abrasive.

Close-coat's entire surface is covered with grit. This makes the paper cut more quickly, but it also clogs quickly. To reduce this, a soft, slippery substance, zinc stearate, is applied around the grains.

Both of these types of sandpaper will work well, but I think the garnet is best for rough, exterior paint removal. Carbide should be used for fine, smooth sanding. Keep in mind that while garnet paper is less expensive, it doesn't last as long.

Caution: If you're thinking of sanding old, lead-base paint, stop right there! Lead dust is very dangerous, and it's so fine, you won't be able to protect yourself with a dust mask. Of course, you won't be able to tell by looking at paint if it contains lead, but, chances are, if it's more than 12 years old, it's likely it does. Lead-based paint was made until 1978, but it was still being sold in the early 1980s. To ensure safety, contact the local health or housing department in your area to help you test the paint in your house.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

Spool holder now folk art — The clutter of thread, scissors, thimbles, buttons and other necessities for sewing has presented a special storage problem. We now have sets of drawers with pegs for spools, but in the past the thread holders were often made at home. In the 18th century, thread was kept in fabric "pockets" with many small sections, and by the 19th century, boxes of wood, ivory, whalebone, metal and other materials were used. Standard wooden spools came into use about 1830. Small thread boxes were made to be given away as advertising premiums by 1850.

Collectors like any of the hand-made wooden spool holders. Some elaborate wooden pieces have drawers, posts, movable reels, and pegs on several shelves. These unique examples are considered folk art, and large pieces can sell for $150 to $300.

Q. It seems that during most of my young life my mother's china closet contained a figure of a British bulldog with the British Union Jack flag on his back. I now own him and noticed that on the base are the words "Royal Doulton, England."

A. The bulldog was a symbol of Britain at war during World War I and II. Royal Doulton made khaki-colored bulldogs wearing army hats in 1917. In 1941, they made a series of seated bulldogs that had Union Jack flags draped on their backs. Other World War II dogs had cigars and hats that made them look a bit like Winston Churchill. The Union Jack dogs were advertising pieces in 1919 and again in 1932. Your dog is worth about $350.

Q. I have a Charles Eames chair labeled by Thonet. It was made about 1954. It has bentwood arms, legs and curved back and seat. The back is mounted with rubber and steel bolts. The seat is covered with pseudo cowhide. Any value?

A. Thonet, the French furniture firm, made the Bentply line of furniture in the 1950s and 1960s. The plywood pieces competed with the popular designs by Alvar Aalto, Charles Eames and others. The Thonet pieces were not designed by Eames; he worked exclusively for Knoll International Inc. Your chair is probably one of the Bentply pieces made by Thonet and would be worth only about $75. A marked Eames chair with cowhide is worth $1,000.

GROSSE POINTE NEWS
THE CONNECTION
August 27, 1992

Primitive appeal

SPOTTING A TREND? A glance at designers' fall, 1992, collections makes it clear that animal prints continue to be a hot motif. Sometimes they serve as a single splash of patterned color in an otherwise monochromatic look, as in this contemporary classic from Calvin Klein (left). In some cases, they're featured as all-over prints, as in this dramatic Bill Blass pantsuit (center). And, sometimes, animal prints are playfully provocative, as in this sultry side-slit suit from Carolina Herrera (right). Whatever the approach, the effect is delightful.

The '90s woman

BEING A SLAVE TO FASHION IS JUST NOT FASHIONABLE ANYMORE. Women want options. They are wearing what fits their moods and tastes — and they won't be subject to the whims of the fashion world ever again. Smart designers who recognize this fashion-forward movement are re-thinking the ways in which they design. The three eveningwear pieces above — all from Giorgio di Sant'Angelo for fall '92 — represent three totally different looks. di Sant'Angelo knows that one evening a woman may want to look elegant in a long, slinky design, another night she may want to ruffle some feathers with a dramatic pant suit, and on another occasion, she may want to totally change her look with a short, flowing dress. Fashion's future depends on the consumer, not the designer...isn't it nice to be the choreographer of your own destiny?

Hair: What's in and what's out for fall '92

How long does a hairstyle last? "Even very classic shapes need a seasonal change," according to Etienne, Manager of Vidal Sassoon Salon in New York. Increasing volume, changing the angle of a bob, moving the part, and applying styling product with new techniques, can update last year's look. "In addition to regular salon visits, it's a good idea to have your stylist work with you to re-evaluate your look at least once a year," he says. "New cutting, coloring and perming techniques and products are ongoing. Good stylists keep up with the trends and can offer new suggestions in all of these areas, generally without a fee."

What's new this year? "The new cuts are classic, structured shapes and complement this season's strong menswear influence," Etienne says. "Look for more rounded, simple, sleek shapes." Today's hair has a new energy — it's clean, healthy, well-conditioned without being weighted down.

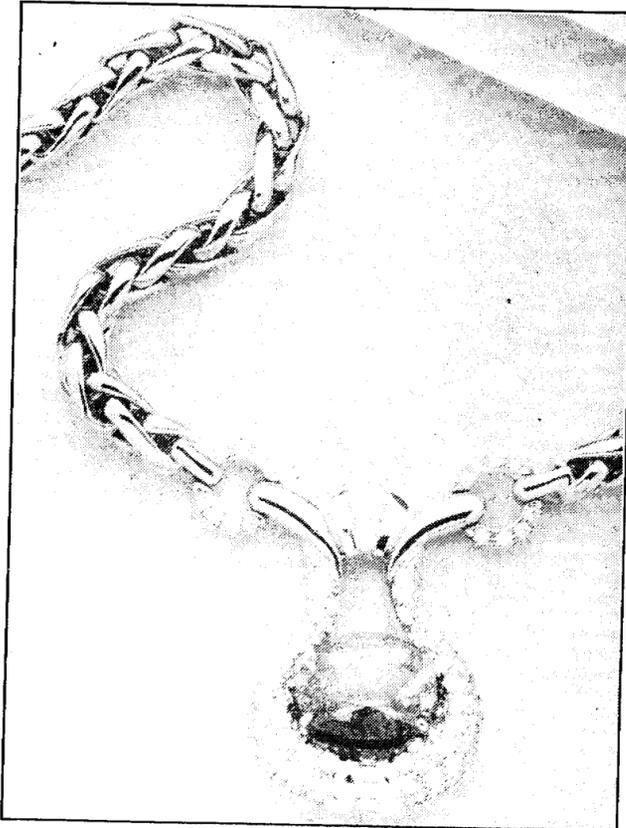

"This time last year, that look couldn't be achieved because conditioners, by nature, weigh hair down. So, we asked our laboratories to develop a product that conditions hair without the buildup." The result is Vidal Sassoon's Stylist Choice, customized shampoos and conditioners that help prevent buildup before it happens, even on fine hair.

Weighted down hair, associated with traditional heavy conditioners, can keep today's soft, rounded shapes looking flat instead of fashionable.

Here are more of the "ins" and "outs" of hair fashion from the experts at Sassoon:

- | IN | OUT |

SUAVE AND SOPHISTICATED — A relaxed cardigan blazer, such as a forties-influenced sweater from Laura Ashley, is an alternative to dandy dressing when a jacket is too constraining.

Modern man

MENSWEAR HAS TAKEN A NEW TURN for fall, 1992, with brighter, bolder interpretations of traditional favorites. Modern but classically influenced, sports jackets for today's man have an updated traditional look in both color and fit. Gone are the days of limebacker shoulder pads and drab grays and blues. Instead, men can look forward to a season of cleaner lines, large check prints and an assortment of flashy colors (including fire engine red). Designer Donna Karan has broken new ground with a premier line of menswear (above left) in customary Karan colors and shapes. At right, many a man's favorite, a t-shirt and Levi's jeans, creates a winning look when paired with a sport coat from Gianni Versace's V2 line.

Leather for any weather

LEATHER WAS EVERYWHERE on the runways for fall '92. Here, proof from designer Donna Karan that you can bundle up and still make a fashion statement in her three-quarter length leather trench in espresso. Shown with gray turtleneck.

Bowl them over

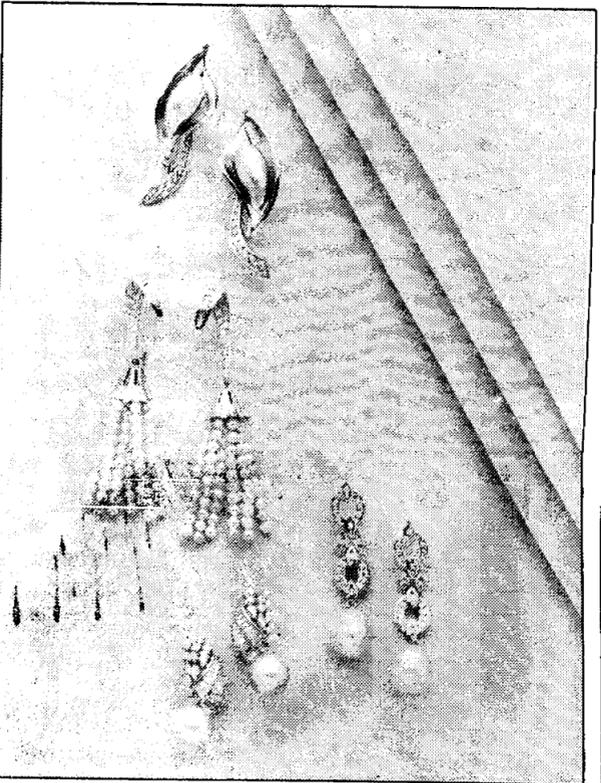

STRIKING ACCESSORIES add a dimension of drama to this decidedly city-chic offering from Perry Ellis for fall, 1992. Designer Marc Jacobs has a flair for the fanciful; here, a menswear-inspired bowler, sparkling belt, studded leather choker and bracelet, top off an ensemble that combines the best of effortless elegance and casual comfort.

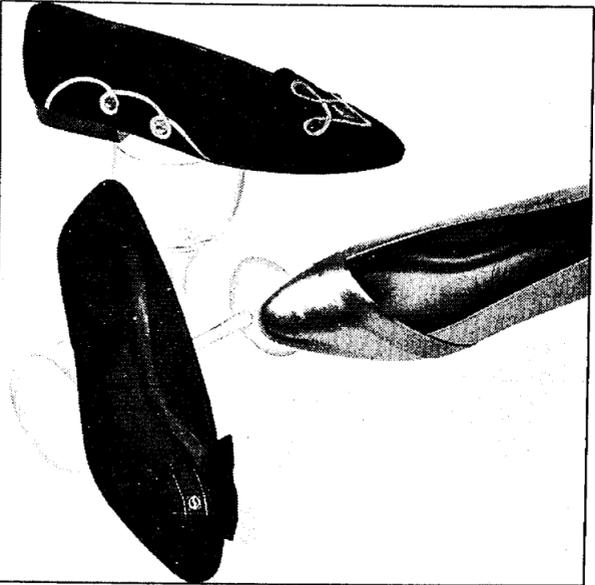

Good Vision: A Back-to-school Basic For Children

Grosse Pte. Wds., MI — For the start of the school year, a professional eye exam for children should be a back-to-school basic along with new shoes and other supplies, according to Tim Wylie of Woods Optical. "It may, in fact, be the single most important examination a child receives at the beginning of the academic year," said Tim Wylie. "Many school-age children may be inaccurately labeled as slow and unable to keep up in class because of correctable, but undetected, vision problems." According to Richard L. Hopping, O.D., of the Better Vision Institute, a non-profit organization, one in six children between 5 and 12 years old has vision problems that can affect reading and learning ability. "Youthful eyes change very rapidly and as they do, early detection is essential to a child's success in school," Tim Wylie said. "A host of difficulties - confusing similar words, even frequent daydreaming - all might be vision-related." Other indications of possible vision problems include: Dislike and avoidance of close work; Turning or tilting the head to one side; Closing one eye while reading; Trouble finishing timed written assignments; Moving closer to a book or desk when reading; Excessive blinking or rubbing of eyes; Losing place while reading; and Complaints of headache, nausea and dizziness. For elementary school children, having poor vision can interfere with learning the basics. A child's eyes are still developing at the same time he or she is learning language, math and other fundamental skills. Testing vision skills annually — as a back-to-school basic — can help a child's education.

Pearls are the focus in fall fashions

The Classics Are In — and pearls will be a highly preferred gem for this fall. With all the new fashion innovations this season, the subtle warmth and luster of cultured pearls imparts a distinctly feminine accent. While pearls are still used in many classic ways, there now are a number of versatile jewelry ideas being implemented with pearls. They include: Cultured pearls being worn with mystery clasps — several cultured pearls in one necklace are inset with a threaded clasp that is hidden within each pearl. This allows the same necklace to be worn at several different lengths or as two single strands or even mixed with a bracelet — all with the same strand of pearls. Pearl enhancers — these are pendants set with pearls or other gemstones that can clip onto pearl necklaces as well as gold chains or silk cords. Earring jackets for pearls — these are earring jackets that can be worn with cultured pearl studs yet they still allow the pearl stud to be worn separately. In addition to the new versatile concepts in cultured pearls, the classics remain popular: Cultured pearl necklaces and bracelets — in single, double and triple strands often accented with jeweled clasps. Mabe pearl earrings — set in classic gold bezels as well as contemporary dangle styles. To accent both classic and contemporary fashions, explore Pearl jewelry this season. Pictured here are the following (all from Edmund T. Ahee Jewelers 20139 Mack Avenue Grosse Pointe Woods): Top — American cultured pearls set in custom designed (by Pamela Ahee Thomas) gold earrings accented with diamonds. Middle — 6 strands of cultured pearls dangle from gold tops set with baguette and brilliant cut diamonds. Bottom left — Lustrous South Sea Pearls are accented by a spray of baguette and brilliant cut diamonds and 18 karat gold. Bottom right — Baroque South Sea Pearls dangle from 18 karat gold channel set with brilliant cut diamonds.

The shining season

FOR FALL '92, IT'S YOUR TIME TO SHINE. Designers have brightened up the runways with evening wear that literally sparkles. Bob Mackie, long known for his fun and funky fashions, has taken elegance to a new dimension with a gold strapless gown (left) that features a figure-flattering pleated skirt and slightly dropped torso. From Norma Kamali: a glamorous bugle bead dress (center) with a wide V neckline that will make you the star of the show. Ralph Lauren's jet black sequined minidress (right) shimmers provocatively. It's a sure-fire attention getter.

PARISIEN CHIC pictured left. The beautiful style and elegance of Paris couture is evident in the lines of this Saville suit. The longer straight black skirt mirrors the drop of hemlines in fashion this fall. It is offset by the deep, rich, red wool crepe blazer and it's ornate closure. Style and elegance in large sizes has never been more chic.

and other earth tones, so important to the "Western Look" that's not for Fall. Just pull on your best cowboy boots, and throw on your shiniest silver, and you're ready to ride, in a great all-around romper embellished with studs.

A COBBLER'S VIEW OF THE PRESIDENTS

According to an American Indian proverb, you can't judge a man until you've walked a mile in his moccasins.

Since 1850, Johnston & Murphy has handmade footwear for every U.S. president — 29 in all. The tradition continues with J&M master craftsman Domenich DiMeola, who has personally crafted the footwear of all America's modern-day presidents from Harry S. Truman to George Bush.

"Seven of the nine presidents I've handcrafted footwear for have chosen from one of two classic styles — either the Envoy or the Ambassador," DiMeola says.

The Envoy — a delicately perforated handmade wing tip — fit the more regal sensibilities of John F. Kennedy and Richard Nixon.

The Ambassador — a clean, understated straight tip — was well suited for the no-nonsense, straight-talking styles of Harry S. Truman, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

Notable exceptions to the dominant two-shoe American political system are the J&M shoes crafted for presidents Lyndon Johnson and Gerald Ford.

Johnson, known for lounging around in his underwear in the presence of his personal advisors, sacrificed classic style for personal comfort. According to DiMeola, the brash Texan complemented his plain-talking style with even plainer-looking footwear.

In today's high-tech age, handmaking shoes is a dying art. Johnston & Murphy remains the only American manufacturer of superior grade men's footwear to still employ full-time cobblers. Each handmade J&M shoe requires more than 165 separate operations, and the company's two craftsmen are able to make only six or seven pairs of shoes a week.

Fashion for the great outdoors

The Ancients claimed that the god Vishnu searched the depths of the sea for a pearl to adorn his daughter on her wedding day. Since pearls were considered carriers of love, happiness and good fortune, this was indeed an appropriate gift.

Of course, even without magical powers, pearls are an excellent choice for a bride. On this special day she wants to look her best, and nothing is as flattering as the pearl's unique glow.

MEMBER AMERICAN GEM SOCIETY

A mixture of masculine appeal and savvy styling makes dandy dressing one of this winter's hottest looks.

A well-tailored shirt is the foundation of dandy dressing. To reflect a polished look, select a style in crisp white cotton. Don't limit yourself to the men's department when considering your choices. Today's designers have a host of blouses that fit the necessary requirements.

Pants are a must. City chic is best captured with classic grey flannel trousers, while stretch jodphurs bring country charm to dapper dressing.

Your figure and lifestyle should be major considerations when choosing which look is the most suitable. Either way, this season's tailoring captures the male persona without camouflaging the female shape.

A jacket and waistcoat ensemble completes the dandy basics. Options can vary from traditional pinstripe coordinates to colorful separates, such as a mustard check blazer and mahogany suede vest.

For city chic, select a fitted gabardine jacket long in length and sharply tailored. Softer lines and a shorter silhouette capture country dressing, especially when executed in rich wool.

If a jacket is too constraining, substitute a relaxed cardigan blazer. Laura Ashley offers such an option this season with a forties-influenced sweater. Its draped appeal and pale celery color bring a softer edge to dandy attire.

A few well-chosen accessories complete the look. Essentials include a broad-brim hat to convey mystery, a silk cravat for drama, gloves as a touch of sophistication, and classic oxford shoes for the sensibility that is pure dandy.

SOFTNESS SETS THE PACE for the '90s: Classic black eveningwear is reinterpreted by Randolph Duke in an ultrafine, ribbed jersey made of Micromattique™ microdenier polyester. The modern featherlight fabric adds luxurious softness and drape and enhances the comfort of this elegant, seasonless style.
