By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Applications are still available for residents who want to participate in the Grosse Pointes/Harper Woods Futuring project which officially gets underway Sunday.

Peter Waldmeir, a member of the Futuring steering committee, urges everyone who has any interest in the community to take part in the unique project.

"I would like to see people of all ages there," Waldmeir said. "Young families, senior citizens, high school students and college students, too. They are going to be here for a long time; they need to offer input on what they'd like their community to be."

The first meeting is from 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 25, at Grosse Pointe South High School. The project aims to define a collective future for the area and to put into motion plans and policies that will ensure that future comes to pass.

Participants will be assigned to study groups in six different areas. Those areas are: public facilities and services, financial and economic vitality, beautification and preservation, leisure and culture, public safety and human services.

Applications are available at all city halls and allow participants to state a preference as to what committee they would like to serve on. For more information, call your city manager.

Remember to set your clock back Saturday night!

G.P. City is without a mayor, well, kind of

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe City is a city without a mayor, sort of.

Last week, Mayor Lorenzo D. Browning resigned his seat, citing "very personal reasons." That meant his job was open.

Monday, at its first meeting since the resignation, the council had to do two things: Accept the resignation and elect a new mayor. The City charter says when a mayor steps down, a new mayor will be appointed from among the council to complete the departing mayor's term. Browning's term expires in November 1993.

The resignation was accepted unanimously, but it becomes effective only upon election of a successor — and that the council was unable to do. No councilmember was able to garner a simple majority of four votes from the six-person council.

First, councilwoman Myrna Smith nominated Peter Waldmeir. He received three votes, from Smith, himself and Lisa Bradley. Carl Rashid, Susan Wheeler and Dale Scrace voted no.

Scrace nominated Wheeler who received two votes, from Scrace and herself.

Wheeler then nominated Scrace who received votes only from Wheeler and himself.

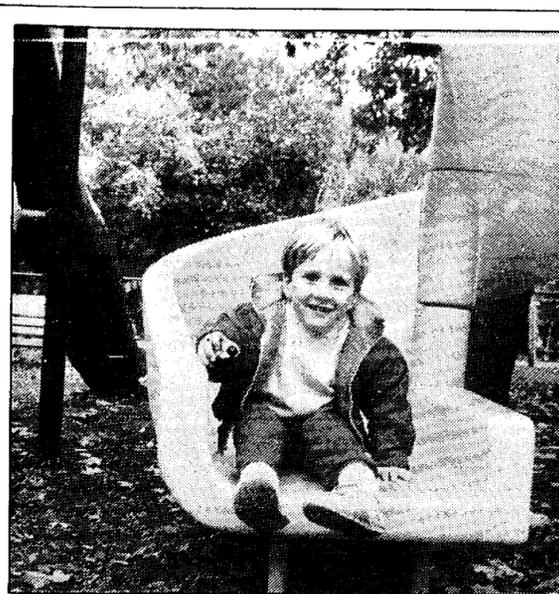

Finally, Bradley nominated Smith, who collected only two yes votes, from Bradley and herself.

Deadlocked, the council recessed and met for more than 30 minutes privately before coming back to the council chambers with a different voting procedure — secret ballots.

The same four councilmembers were nominated in the same order by the same person who nominated them in the first place and no consensus was reached.

Smith asked if the city could hold a special election to allow residents to select a replacement. But according to city attorney John Fildew, the city cannot hold an election to replace someone who is still in office, and because of Browning's stipulations, he is still mayor until a successor is named.

Deadlocked, the council decided to call a special meeting at 5:30 p.m. Nov. 2, for the purpose of electing a new mayor.

Mayor discusses 21 years of service; says 'I love this town'

Lorenzo D. Browning

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Soon to be former Grosse Pointe City Mayor Lorenzo D. Browning isn't looking back at his two decades of service on the Grosse Pointe City Council.

Instead, he is focusing on the future, which is exactly the reason he resigned last week.

"I didn't expect to run for another term in November 1993 when my term is up, and I thought I had to do this now," said Browning, who is 78.

He would not discuss why he resigned, saying the decision was made for "very personal reasons."

Technically, he is still mayor because his resignation becomes official only upon appointment of a successor; however, the council was unable to come to a consensus at its meeting Monday. The members have called a special meeting for Monday, Nov. 2, to elect a new mayor.

Browning was appointed mayor in August 1983 when then Mayor David Robb resigned. He was re-elected in 1985, '87 and '89. He had been a councilmember since he was appointed to the job in July 1971.

"I love this town and if I can do something to make it a better place, I'll do it," Browning said. "That's why I stayed around so long."

Browning has been a resident of the City since 1960; before that he lived in Grosse Pointe Park. He has worked in various capacities in the marine industry including service aboard ship for more than five years on both ocean-going and Great Lakes vessels. He was a navigating officer aboard a troop carrier during World War II.

He served as executive vice president of T.H. Browning S.S. Co. and its successor companies since 1946.

His family also owned Boblo Island amusement park from 1949-79. He has served as assistant division manager of the lake division of Republic Steel Corp. and executive vice president and chief financial officer of Datavision Inc., a securities company, from 1983-87.

He's been a member of the board of directors of Maccabees Mutual Life Insurance Co. and has been a delegate to the Wayne County Community Development Block Grant Council since its inception and is currently vice chair. He also served on the board of SEMTA for three years.

He and his wife Elizabeth Anne have seven children and 14 grandchildren.

The City hasn't changed too much in the 21 years Browning has served it, and Browning said he likes it that way.

"We've done some things that are pretty good for the City, but it wasn't just me, as mayor, who did them," Browning said. "It was the council."

The City recently purchased two parcels of land — one is adjacent to Neff Park and is being used to expand the park, and the other abuts city hall and will be used to expand city offices.

He has been on the council which oversaw expansion of parking at Bon Secours and the razing of a row of shops to make room for the construction of a new bank, two projects melted steel and why it's impossible to pull the middle pickle out of a jar: The packers quickly and expertly line the inside of the jar with pickles and then they jam the last two or three pickles in the center, she said.

"Definitely the foundry work and pickle work had something to do with it," she said, tongue in cheek, on why she was hired at Covideo, a unit of Anthony M. Franco Inc. and member of the Ross Roy Group.

She was named the Outstanding Woman in Agency Middle Management this summer by the Detroit chapter of American Women in Radio and TV for her work in the broadcast industry. In addition, she received Telly and gold Questar awards this year, and bronze Mercury and bronze Questar awards in 1991 — all in national and international video communications competition.

The Grosse Pointe Woods City Council struggled with the age-old conflict Monday night of how to protect the city's residents through government regulation without unduly infringing on their privacy.

The council considered several proposed ordinances, including two somewhat controversial ones regarding composting and handbills.

The council asked city attorney George Catlin to draft the latter two proposals after the city received a few complaints from residents about bad compost piles and solicitors who refuse to take no for an answer.

The first proposal says compost piles must be built and maintained in such a way "as to prevent the escape of offensive odors to adjacent property and to prevent the presence of rats or other disease vectors."

Also, it says "compost piles shall be situated to minimize visibility from the street or adjacent dwellings."

Councilmembers Jean Rice and Peter Gilezan said that language is too vague, and asked that provisions regulating the size, placement and construction of compost bins be added to the proposed ordinance. Mayor Robert E. Novitke, however, said, "I have a problem with being overly restrictive. If you say that a compost bin can't be 30 feet from a neighbor's yard, then on some lots you won't be able to have a compost pile, because a lot of our lots are narrow."

Councilman James Alogdelis said he did not think a composting ordinance was necessary.

"I feel this way," he said. "When the municipality overregulates the citizens in this community, it takes something away from them."

He said that if someone feels his neighbor has a compost pile that is a nuisance or a health hazard, that resident can complain to the public safety department, which will investigate.

If the claim is substantiated, the compost can be ticketed under existing health and nuisance laws, he said.

Most proposed ordinances have two readings at two separate council meetings before the council votes on adopting them.

Class of '57 — on ice

Those attending the 35th reunion of the Grosse Pointe Class of 1957 at the Hunt Club last weekend were in for a cool surprise. Confronting them as they walked in was a huge ice sculpture of their alma mater, now known as Grosse Pointe South. Organizers of the reunion, from left, were Bill Rohloff, Liz Riley Binkowski, Sherry Mason Ninkovich, Anne Dewey Partell and Mark Murray. which sparked a lot of resident opposition. "You have to look at what's being said and by whom when you make a decision like that," he said.

One decision he would like to have made was to allow the expansion of Kroger in the Village.

"This community needs that expansion," he said.

Browning says one of his biggest successes is that he started gathering the mayors of the five Pointes and Harper Woods for regular meetings.

"We can talk about what's happening in the other cities and see what they're doing to solve their problems," he said. "It's been very helpful."

Browning said he is leaving the City in good hands, but declined to offer any advice regarding the future.

"I will miss the council," he said. "You can't be involved with something for so long and not miss it. But I have said I will offer time on certain things if they need it."

"I think I was a pretty good mayor because I can see the problems and see how they affect the city. But I'd want somebody else's opinion on that."

The council agreed by a 6-1 vote to consider Monday's reading as the first one for the proposed composting ordinance, and scheduled the second reading for Monday, Nov. 2.

The council also authorized Catlin to put the changes requested by Rice and Gilezan into the proposed ordinance.

Rice voted against the first-reading motion, saying the council should postpone it until after Catlin comes up with the wording of the suggested changes.

Novitke said the proposed handbill ordinance came about in response to residents who said that solicitors continued to leave handbills on their doors after having been repeatedly told not to do so.

The proposal would require a business that wants handbills delivered in the Woods to seek a license from the city. Each employee who delivers handbills would also have to be registered with the city.

The company must pay a $25 license fee, plus a $2 registration fee for each person who will be delivering items in the Woods.

Under the proposal, it would be a misdemeanor to deliver items to homes and apartments where signs that say "No solicitors or vendors" in one-inch-high letters have been posted.

Councilman Ted Bidigare asked, "How do we address the issue of the neighborhood kid who wants to provide a service, like lawn cutting, and goes around passing out fliers?"

"According to this, we'll flog him and send him to jail," Councilman Bill Wilson said.

Novitke suggested paring down the ordinance so that it only includes the part that makes delivering handbills to a house where there is a "No solicitors" sign a misdemeanor.

He also sought to add a provision in the proposed ordinance that would allow the city to fine or take legal action against a business if its materials are delivered to a home where a "No solicitors" sign has been posted.

However, Catlin said that would infringe on the business' right to "due process" because the business could claim it did not authorize the delivery.

Under the proposal, action can only be taken against a delivery person if the police catch him delivering a handbill to a home where a "No solicitors" sign has been posted, Catlin said.

The council voted to postpone the second reading of the proposed handbill ordinance to Nov. 2, and Catlin will make some changes in it before that time.

Committee studies science program

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Schools' science curriculum has been taken to the lab and a group of 18 teachers and administrators is dissecting it to determine what to save and what to excise.

The formation of a study committee is not an indication there are serious problems with the current curriculum; rather, committee members say the study is part of an ongoing process to keep the district in line with national standards.

Each year, the district studies one area of the overall curriculum. Last year, math was analyzed and re-evaluated. Next year, the district will fine-tune the music program.

The Science Evaluation Committee, which met for the first time earlier this month, will follow a three-step process and submit an advisory report to the board of education by next May, said Ardis Maciolek, North High School science teacher and committee chairperson.

"This is part of a process that occurs every five years," Maciolek said. "We also want to make sure we are in line with Public Act 25, that we are teaching the students what they are supposed to be learning according to the Michigan core curriculum model."

Public Act 25 was passed by the Michigan Legislature in 1990 and requires all state public school districts to begin and maintain a school improvement process. Part of that process is updating and improving the core curriculum: reading, science and math.

Grosse Pointe schools have always had written curriculum that is re-evaluated and updated on a regular basis, said Dr. Alfreda Frost, assistant superintendent for curriculum and evaluation. While she and other committee members believe Grosse Pointe's science curriculum is excellent already, they also feel there is always room for improvement.

"We'll be looking at a tremendous amount of material," Maciolek said of the first phase of the study. The committee is expected to examine at least 20 reports from across the country about different science teaching approaches.

Some of the things the committee will be looking at include:

- Replace the "layer cake" structure of separating studies by teaching the interdependence of the difference sciences with math, technology and computers. Find ways to integrate science with history, English and social studies.

- Reduce the amount of science taught in a year and focus on the process. Instead of having students memorize vocabulary lists, teach them how to conduct laboratory exercises.

- Look at Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) scores in relation to the current science requirements and curriculum.

"There is an emphasis more on the hands-on approach," Frost said. "In some schools, the children open up their textbooks to chapter three and read about trees and flowers. Here the students engage in activities to discover the concept of why and how leaves change colors."

While the high school has always emphasized laboratory methods, Frost said the middle and elementary schools need to pick up the pace.

Once the committee has completed data research, it will conduct a needs analysis, Maciolek said.

"We can look at this from two perspectives," she said. "We can look at the negatives and ask what is missing from our program. Or we can look at the positive side and say, 'we don't need to redo the whole program but what can we refine?'"

The committee also will look at some peripheral problems with the program, including how advanced placement students can get from one high school to the other when the district does not have a transportation program, and how to better utilize the planetarium.

3 injured in car accident

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Three people were hospitalized following a car accident on Mack near Harvard in Grosse Pointe Park about 11:30 a.m. Monday, Oct. 19.

A 24-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms man, who was alone in his Pontiac Grand Am, tried to make a left turn from westbound Mack onto Harvard, said Park Police Sgt. James Armbruster.

He turned into the path of another Pontiac that was traveling east on Mack, and his car was broadsided and flipped over, landing on a Detroit Free Press news box on the easement between Mack and the sidewalk, Armbruster said.

The other car — which was occupied by a 75-year-old driver and her 83-year-old female passenger, both of Detroit — struck an adjacent Wall Street Journal news box before coming to rest next to overturned car.

Park public safety officers stabilized the injured Farms man while Detroit firefighters used the "jaws of life" to free him from his car. The rescue took half an hour, Armbruster said.

Park officers treated the three victims for spinal and neck injuries and lacerations at the scene and then took them to St. John Hospital, he said. The elderly passenger also suffered a broken leg, he said.

"An interesting thing is that no one had seatbelts on," Armbruster said. "I'm surprised that the injuries weren't worse than they were."

The Farms man has been ticketed for "failure to yield," which is a civil infraction, Armbruster said.

Kercheval in Village to be closed

Kercheval in the Village between Cadieux and Neff will be closed to traffic on Friday, Oct. 30, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. to allow costumed children 12 and under to trick or treat.

Parking along Kercheval will not be allowed after 2:30 p.m., and buses will be rerouted to St. Paul and Charlevoix.

A Grosse Pointe Shores man who lives in the 900 block of Lakeshore said two stone statues and about 500 bricks that were stacked on a pallet have been swiped from his yard.

He told Shores police of the thefts on Oct. 16.

He said that an 18-inch stone statue of a squirrel and a 3-foot-tall statue of a girl with curls were stolen sometime between Oct. 10 and Oct. 15.

The bricks started disappearing — about 50 at a time — six months ago, he said.

College night returns

Students are encouraged to attend the annual college night at Grosse Pointe South High School from 7 to 9:35 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 28. The program, which has a record number of colleges — 180 this year — will have college representatives set up in booths in both the main gymnasium and in classrooms. The program is open to both South and North high school students and parents.

who wanted to be a nurse, physical therapist or social worker when she was growing up.

Her father wanted her to study business, Alstott said, and while she was at Ferris State University in Big Rapids, she took a vocational planning course "on a whim." The tests showed she would be suited for work as a physical therapist or social worker or in TV. "I thought TV sounded interesting," she said.

While at Ferris, Alstott applied for and was accepted as an intern at Standard Oil of Indiana in Chicago. Her seven months living in the heart of the city and working for a major corporation was a cultural shock, Alstott said, but also was an adventure and a worthwhile experience.

"I missed the trees and birds a bit," she said, and returned to the Saginaw area and landed a job with a production company that made corporate training films for GM and other accounts.

"It was still the beginning of the video age and corporate video," Alstott said. She cut her teeth on producing films in foundries.

The company expanded into the Detroit area and Alstott was spending more time in the Motor City. When a friend began a production company, she found another person who had video equipment and the three teamed up to produce films for companies, including the initial training film for Buick's Reatta Craft Center in Lansing.

Alstott said that after a year, she felt it was time to get into a larger market and she considered moving to California or Boston. "But I really liked Michigan," she said.

She became an account representative for Film Craft Video in Farmington Hills and "started to pound the pavement and build contacts," she said. "I really jumped into it feet first."

Describing her career as "a lot of hard work and a few breaks," Alstott said that meeting Anthony Franco, the public relations mogul, was one of her breaks. She introduced herself to him at a press party and it was the right time — his firm was expanding its video unit. She began working at Covideo in 1988.

Part of her work involves training clients in how to deal with the media in a crisis situation or when there are layoffs or restructuring, and how to field questions and get the most out of an interview.

"We trained a client who was scheduled to appear in what would surely be a confrontational interview with Mike Wallace on '60 Minutes,'" she said. "Part of the training was showing him how to sit so that Wallace didn't physically dominate him by leaning in and thereby forcing our client to lean back defensively."

"During the interview, Wallace suggested to our client that he could sit back in his chair, if he liked. Our client politely declined. After the interview, Wallace told him he had been well-trained."

Alstott produced two public service announcements for the Au-Sable-Manistee Action Council featuring Michigan native Pam Dawber as spokesperson. She flew to Los Angeles to videotape the spots at Dawber's home.

The council is dedicated to the preservation of the environment, natural resources and quality of life in the upper Au Sable and Manistee river basins. Alstott's father is the unpaid executive director and one of the founders of the group.

Alstott also produced public service announcements for the Detroit Police Officers Association with Detroit Tigers pitcher Frank Tanana and a public service announcement for the Juvenile Diabetes Association with Ted Nugent.

In 1990, Alstott was named executive producer at Covideo, handling supervision and new business. "I'm in charge of assigning projects and overseeing the general big picture," she said.

Her work has ranged from coordinating production of a video news release in Mombasa, Kenya, to scouting production locations in South Korea.

Much of her spare time is spent on the water. "I've been around boats all my life," she said.

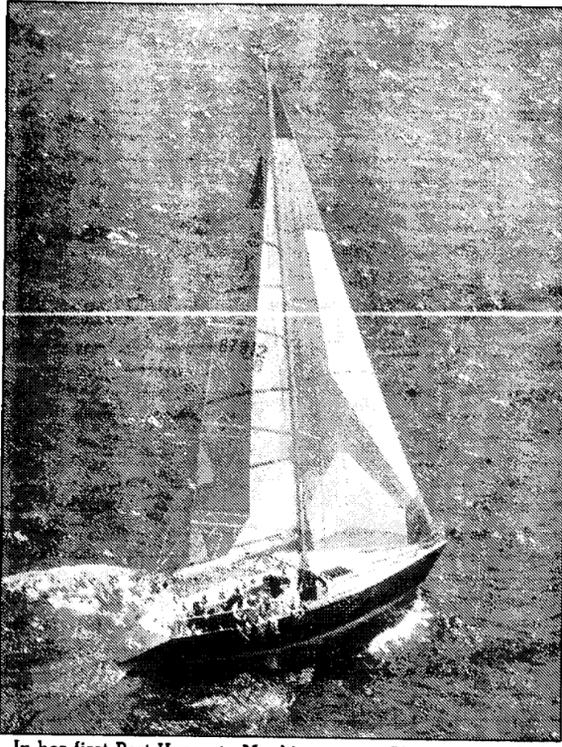

As a junior member of the Detroit Yacht Club, Alstott has raced 18-foot Flying Scot sailboats. She placed third last year in the novice division.

Now racing on 44-foot sailboats, Alstott participated in her first Port Huron to Mackinac race this year aboard the Victory of Burnham.

"I didn't know how I would do without my daily hot shower," she said. "It was fabulous. I have boat fever now."

Alstott recently joined the Founders Society of the Detroit Institute of Arts. She enjoys visiting her parents in Lovells, near the Au Sable River. "I really like movies and estate sales and I'm an Eastern Market person," she said.

After living in a carriage house in Grosse Pointe Farms for four years, Alstott recently bought a condo on the border in St. Clair Shores.

In her first Port Huron to Mackinac race, Alstott sits with the crew of the Victory of Burnham.

Julie Alstott talks with studio musicians before shooting a corporate video.

Do's and don'ts when dealing with the media

- Listen to the reporter's premise. The premise may be wrong, and you may wind up confirming the wrong premise with your answer.
- Always anticipate that questions may touch on a variety of topics, not just the one you believe the story is about.
- Give the reporter as much in writing as possible, especially if the reporter is new to the beat or the city.
- Never say "no comment" to a reporter. It sounds like a cover-up.
- Don't attack the interviewer. The reporter always has the last word.
- Do not expect the news to hold until a news conference. If more than one person knows about a specific development, chances are word will get to a reporter, who will try to scoop your news conference. Time your news conference to protect your information.

Pointers trade attacks over county post

A tough and sometimes nasty battle has erupted as two Pointers fight to succeed David Cavanagh as the 1st District's member on the Wayne County Commission.

The contest between Andrew Richner, a Grosse Pointe Park councilmember who is the GOP nominee, and George Fitzgerald, a Grosse Pointe Woods businessman nominated by the Democrats, is becoming increasingly personal as the election nears.

But are these distracting side issues really important as 1st District citizens seek to elect the most able representative to the county commission?

For example, we do not see deep significance in Richner's charge that Fitzgerald may not own property in Wayne County, even if it is true, which Fitzgerald says it isn't.

After all, the law only requires a candidate to reside and be a registered voter in his district. And people's announced intentions of where they live usually are sufficient to satisfy that regulation.

Witness President George Bush, whose legal residence is in a Texas hotel room that he occupies a few days every year.

Opinion

Similarly, Fitzgerald's charge that Richner's law firm received vendors' fees from Wayne County shouldn't disqualify him from serving on the commission. Richner says he's an employee, not a partner, doesn't profit from his firm's county work, has not done any such work himself and has no plans to do so.

So in the time remaining, let's hope that these two young men stick to such issues as what can be done to improve Wayne County services without hiking the costs and how we can make Wayne County a more attractive and profitable place for business, labor and people to locate.

Both candidates do have ideas on such matters.

Fitzgerald recommends that the county improve its industrial base by using incentives such as tax breaks and use of the county's infrastructure to help new businesses get started.

Richner believes the county should investigate further privatization of county services and recommends the appointment of a commission of business, labor and government representatives to investigate possible savings by going that route.

Richner already has talked with several current reform-minded commissioners about the need for an independent audit to review the board's annual budget of $5.6 million. In such matters, he emphasizes, party designation is not important.

Fitzgerald says he would bring to the board the experience of an independent, moderate businessman who happens to be a Democrat. As a Democrat, he contends that he could work better with the heavily Democratic board to serve the Pointes than a Republican could.

Asked for their opinions on the three county proposals the current commission has placed on the Nov. 3 ballot, both expressed general opposition to all three.

With respect to the proposed one-half mill tax increase to finance health and mental health services, Fitzgerald says that the Grosse Pointe News in a pre-primary interview had misunderstood his statement and had incorrectly interpreted his support for putting the issue on the ballot as support for the levy.

Both Grosse Pointe News interviewers, however, believe they reported Fitzgerald's pre-primary comments accurately and stand by their earlier comments about them.

Both candidates oppose returning to county communities the receipts collected by a one-tenth of a mill levy to finance a youth services system that never materialized. Both think the money should go to individual taxpayers.

However, sharper differences between the two nominees show up in their answers to questions about state Proposals A and B which call for tax limitations which are seen as a threat to future Pointe school financing.

Richner sees both state proposals as resulting in more state control and as not being in the best interests of the local district. Fitzgerald endorses both but expressed reservations about C, the Cut and Cap plan.

The Grosse Pointe News sought to make a fair evaluation of these two young men on the basis of their backgrounds, experience and the proposals they offered in their interviews.

In the end, the News came down on the side of Richner who would, we believe, better represent the people and interests of the Pointes even on a commission controlled by Democrats.

He's personable, informed and intelligent and has just received the endorsement of Civic Searchlight as "preferred and well qualified" while Fitzgerald was rated as simply "qualified."

City's happy warrior retires

The man whose public career has been almost synonymous with the official life of Grosse Pointe City for more than two decades gave his last hurrah as a public official when he retired as mayor last week.

Lorenzo D. Browning, popularly known as "Red," began his public service to his community as a councilmember 21 years ago. He had continued in that capacity for 12 years before being named mayor back in 1983.

Since then, he had continued to serve as a councilmember as well as mayor, as the City charter requires. As a consequence, he had been in the forefront in developing the City's official programs and activities for more than 20 years.

In addition, he had served as president and trustee of the City of Grosse Pointe Foundation which helps develop and finance with private contributions other projects to benefit the City's people.

Serving the public was a way of life for "Red" Browning even before he began his public career. He and his family had owned the Island of Boblo firm and he had served first as executive vice president and later as president of the company whose boat service and amusement park were enjoyed by generations of metro residents until its 1979 sale.

Now it is hail and farewell to the popular mayor's official life but he takes with him into retirement the best wishes of not only his colleagues and constituents but of an even wider circle of friends in the Pointes and the metro area.

The D Words...

Veteran faces new challenger

If William R. Bryant Jr. of Grosse Pointe Farms, a veteran of 11 terms in the Michigan Legislature, is re-elected on Nov. 3, he will become the senior member of the House.

If his Democratic challenger, Elaine Hartmann, also of the Farms, should upset Bryant in her first try at public office, it would shock the Pointes, the state Republican Party and most of Bryant's colleagues in the House where he already is the senior GOP member.

Yet stranger things have happened. And Ms. Hartmann is making a contest of it, using lawn signs, door-to-door canvassing, appearances at public meetings and other techniques to make one of the strongest campaigns ever conducted against Bryant.

She has the reputation as a "can-do person," too. She served on Farms commissions on planning, historic preservation and traffic study, but her greatest achievement was the preservation of the historic Cadieux Farmhouse last year.

Both Ms. Hartmann and Bryant make strong recommendations for improvements in state school funding. Both oppose Proposals A and C, which would require cuts in school operating taxes and limit the future growth of property assessments, which would also limit future taxes.

Sympathetic to public demands for property tax relief, Ms. Hartmann likes the O.K. plan that would require the state to return to the 1970s practice of funding 50 percent of the schools operating costs.

To raise the revenue to achieve that goal, she would favor an increase in the income tax or the sales tax, or possibly both, since both of those taxes are low in comparison with other states while the Michigan property tax tends to impose a heavier load than comparable states do.

Bryant, the former GOP House leader, is the ranking minority member of the House education committee and vice chairman of the House taxation committee. In that latter capacity, he has been a House leader in opposing legislative attempts to trim more state aid from so-called "out of formula" districts like the Pointe district.

But he also has been an innovative legislator who first proposed the state tax amnesty program that eventually was adopted by the then Democratic governor, James Blanchard, with full credit to Bryant. It brought in additional millions in delinquent taxes in a one-shot revenue gusher.

With other House members, Bryant now is working on alternative ways to solve the twin problems of property tax reform and school funding. One would wipe out the school operating tax, raise the income tax and the business tax to replace it, and do away with most categorical aids, except special education, in the process.

If Republicans capture control of the House and Bryant is re-elected, he has been asked to run for speaker pro-tem but says he would prefer to chair one of the two committees on which he currently serves as vice chairman.

But Bryant says there are other reasons for seeking re-election and thus making his 12th run at the office.

If his Democratic foe should win, he says, the GOP defeat might influence the three-member U.S. District Court panel that has retained jurisdiction over reapportionment to reapportion the district out of existence.

Since he is the only Republican representing the Pointes in a legislative body, he believes maintaining a GOP district is important to a good many people in the Pointes and elsewhere in southeastern Michigan.

As a man who has faithfully represented the interests of Grosse Pointes for 22 years, and especially for his efforts in defending this community's public school financing, Bryant surely deserves the support of Grosse Pointes for another term as District 13's state representative in Lansing, despite Ms. Hartmann's valiant campaign efforts.

Vincent preferred in the 15th

Two incumbent Democrats who represent the Grosse Pointes in the 14th and 15th Congressional districts are expected by the experts to be re-elected but the GOP nominee in the 15th has a chance for an upset victory.

Dr. Charles Vincent, a Detroit area physician with impressive credentials, is winning strong support from Grosse Pointes in his uphill battle to deny Democrat Rep. Barbara-Rose Collins a second term in the 15th District, which now includes the Park, the City and the Farms.

Rep. John Conyers, however, who ousted state Sen. John Kelly of Grosse Pointe Woods in the primary, is a cinch to repeat in the 14th District and, in fact, John W. Gordon, nominated in the GOP primary, has for all practical purposes disappeared from the campaign.

In the 15th District, Vincent, chief of obstetrics and gynecology at Detroit Riverview Hospital, has a chance because of his program, because of the support he is winning in the expanded district by his aggressive campaigning, and because of the weakness of the incumbent.

Vincent concedes he does not agree with everything in the GOP platform. But neither do many moderate Republicans in Grosse Pointe and elsewhere.

He is pro-choice, but not pro-abortion; favors full funding for Head Start programs for all children, not just those in poverty, and believes in higher support for health and education programs to benefit children.

But, like traditional Republicans, he favors the balanced budget amendment, supports the North American free trade agreement as a way to create more jobs and favors a capital gains tax cut as an incentive for private investment.

While Vincent has received far less financial support from the GOP than the $250,000 he sought, he is encouraged by GOP allocations of $11,000 and private support that have boosted his war chest to $100,000.

Fifteen "sip and chat" fundraisers in the Pointes, others still scheduled, and the "tremendous financial and emotional help" from the Pointes also lifted his hopes.

So did reports that up to 25,000 Democrats, chiefly in Detroit, invalidated their primary ballots by trying to vote for him on the GOP ticket as well as for some Democrats. Ticket-splitting, while banned in party primaries, is permissible and welcome on Nov. 3.

But he is also encouraged when the Civic Searchlight, a good government monitoring agency, rated him "preferred and well-qualified" over Rep. Collins, who was rated only "qualified."

As a moderate Republican with views similar to those of many Pointes, as well as a man of accomplishment, ideas and programs, Dr. Vincent in our view would be an admirable congressman from the 15th District.

As for Rep. Conyers, a veteran congressman with 27 years of service, we endorse him, too, over the "missing" GOP nominee, John W. Gordon.

Conyers won his post as Governmental Operations Committee chairman because of his seniority, which puts him second among Michigan delegation members and adds to his Washington clout.

We credit him for seeking a universal health care system to serve all Americans and, in general, for proposing improved education programs as well as worker training and increased investment in infrastructure.

He also recognized his responsibilities to his expanded district, now including the Woods, the Shores and Harper Woods, by converting his campaign office in Harper Woods into a permanent office.

He also took part in another Grosse Pointe News interview to help inform his new constituency about his views and policies, in contrast to Rep. Collins who declined to be interviewed after we refused her request for advance notice of the questions to be asked.

The 12 days of election

With almost two weeks — still? — to election day the already heated debate has turned into an inferno of lies, damn lies and cheap shots.

Even the politically uninformed are throwing their 2 cents into what has become the most talked about election of my politically aware life.

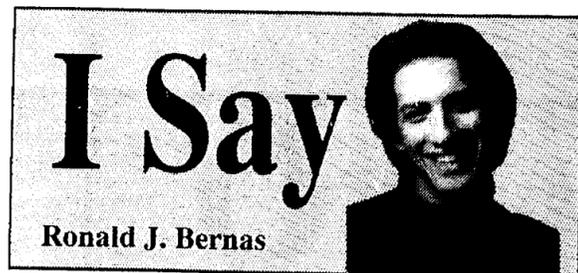

There are some who say any debate is healthy, but despite my First Amendment loyalties, I have to disagree. Misinformation is like a banana: If you don't keep an eye on it, you've got an ugly black peel covering a perfectly good piece of fruit. (Yikes, I've been watching too many Perot ads.)

Far from being a spin doctor, I've been listening to a lot of debate although my mind has long been made up as to who I'll vote for. I like listening to each politico use the same facts (Perot re-entering the race for example) and declare a victory for their candidate.

A lot of people have been asking me what I think. They believe I have some sort of special insight because I'm a journalist and, therefore I must be well informed.

Instead of giving my own ideas, I've collected 12 quotes — one for each of the days remaining until the election — uttered in the midst of often ugly debates about the fitness of the three candidates seeking the presidency and their running mates. I submit them for your enjoyment.

• About H. Ross Perot a friend said: "Everyone says it's time we get a businessman in the White House. That's the last thing we need. I'm a salesman and I come into contact with a lot of businessmen. Most of them have no clue about the day-to-day running of the office and most offices are run better and more efficiently by the drones when the boss is on vacation. They make decisions based on how many beans they have left regardless of what affect it has on their staff."

• About Dan Quayle a witty journalist said: "The nerve of Dan Quayle, the man who made a fictional television newscaster a campaign issue, to tell Al Gore, 'Don't believe everything you see on TV.'"

• About Clinton and Gore who appeared on "Larry King

Live" and referred to the president and vice president by their last names, with no courtesy title (which, knowing this woman, presumably should have been "their eminences,") a co-worker said: "What ever happened to courtesy and respect?"

• About Quayle, who told Al Gore in a debate "Lighten up, Al," this same co-worker said: nothing.

• About George Bush's attitude an acquaintance said: "I can't stand how smug he is all the time."

• About Bill Clinton's attitude a friend said: "I can't stand how smug he is all the time."

• About H. Ross Perot's attitude a friend said: "I can't stand what a hillbilly he is."

• About the second presidential debate a disgusted journalist said: "Aren't the Lions on?"

• About the vice-presidential debate a friend said: "I put on a video of 'Terminator II.' I figured it was less violent for the kids."

• About the election in general, a woman I just met, and have no desire to meet again, said: "I'm not voting because I don't like anyone."

• In a public service announcement about democracy in general, Dan Rather said: "Vote, it's your privilege."

• In a retort to Dan Rather's public service announcement about democracy in general an irritated journalist said: "No it's not, it's your duty."

Happy voting, and remember, if you don't vote, you have no right to complain about anything more than a headache for the next four years.

Take a message

Grosse Pointe News reporter Donna Walker called UPI in Washington last week. She asked to talk to White House Bureau Chief Helen Thomas concerning an interview with Thomas' sister, Grosse Pointe Park resident Katherine Mararak.

Walker got through to Thomas on the first try and the two chatted for several minutes.

Meanwhile, on the other side of the room, Grosse Pointe News reporter Shirley McShane stared in disbelief. She had spent the entire morning trying to reach a member — any member — of the Grosse Pointe School board.

After nearly a dozen calls, she still hadn't talked to anyone.

Two bits

Ruth Roberts of Harper Woods, formerly of Grosse Pointe Park, thinks shopping on the Hill is terrific and Leon Sehoyan is wonderful.

"I parked my car on Kercheval," she said. "I was looking in my purse for some money for the parking meter when Leon, of Leon's on the Hill, ran out and put a quarter in the meter. I was amazed."

In peak condition

Our news editor, Pat Paholsky, gets lots of mail.

She recently got a press release from the Prudential Insurance Company of America in Newark, N.J. about some students at St. Clare of Montefalco School who are participating in a fitness program sponsored by the company.

Trouble is — the letter kept referring to students in Grosse Pointe Peak.

Weather or not

The new edition of the 1993 Old Farmer's Almanac is out. It's the 201st consecutive annual printing and is being promoted by its publisher as "far and away the oldest continuously published periodical in North America."

It's full of useful stuff, like projections of statistical trends. For instance:

- College will become the high school of the 1990s.
- A new drug to eliminate hangover symptoms is being tested by the FDA.
- Spruced-up, better-tasting, more convenient, healthier

Margie Reins Smith

foods are on the way to local supermarkets: celery without strings, for example; super-sweet carrots; "skim" butter; edible cotton (EDIBLE cotton?); a special kind of yogurt that controls diarrhea; and crunchy raisins.

The almanac also lists all the world records held by one man, Ashrita Furman, a health-food store manager in Queens, N.Y. Furman is a self-described former wimp who has set 32 records for the Guinness Book of World Records. He even tells how he does it, starting on page 122 of the almanac.

• Furman holds the world record for the most squats in one hour: 2,550.

• Also for the fastest time running a marathon while juggling three objects: 3 hours, 22 minutes and 32.5 seconds.

• For the greatest distance walked with a full pint of milk on his head: 43.7 miles.

• For the most continuous forward somersaults: 8,341.

• For the greatest distance for pogo-stick jumping: 13.06 miles.

Debates seldom swing or sway

Debates, debates, debates.

Debates only serve to confirm your faith in the guy you preferred before the debates anyway. Refreshing as Ross Perot may be, Bushies still like Bush and Billies still go for Clinton. Wish both those guys would absorb some of Perot's political candor.

Isn't there something called a bushwilly?

Nancy Parmenter

And isn't everybody tired of the patriotism theme? Flagwaving worked for Bush four years ago and he can't seem to stop. No one is listening now.

But Clinton's response to the Moscow thing was pedestrian. Anyone with an imagination could have done much better. Like this intriguing scenario, for instance, offered by my fellow political observer and analyst Elsa Frohman:

Forget the talk of McCarthyism. Clinton steps right up to Bush's accusations that he was really talking to the KGB while posing as a tourist in Moscow back in '69. "Yes," Clinton should have said, "I talked to a young KGB officer named Mikhail Gorbachev and together we plotted the downfall of the Soviet Union by 1991."

Statements like that would make the election a lot more fun.

Amid varying regret and relief (depending on whom you talk to) that Windsor, and not Detroit, will have casino gambling, I met someone whose job is directly affected by such decisions. My seatmate on a recent flight was the director of food services on a casino riverboat in Iowa. (No, Iowa isn't landlocked — these are genuine Mississippi riverboat gamblers.)

Iowa instituted gambling for the reasons usually cited: It looked like a glamorous, pain-free way to collect some tax money. And, in fact it was. My new friend said the state kept the pot low in an effort to discourage organized crime.

The trouble is, Illinois saw how well this was working for Iowa and started allowing gambling, too. But Illinois didn't limit the pot. And now everybody interested in serious wagering is gambling on Illinois riverboats, leaving Iowa with mom-and-pop retirees risking five bucks on a slot machine — and my friend wondering if his boat will sail when the next tourist season rolls around.

So Windsor's decision on gambling may not be the last word on the subject.

Those people who went out to block hunters on opening weekend at the beginning of October certainly have more guts than brains. A person could get shot that way. Accidentally or not. I know.

On a sunny early-October morning, some friends and I went out to hike part of Michigan's Shore-to-Shore trail. Commune with nature, that sort of thing. We never gave a thought to hunters until: Kaboom!

A shot rang out, as they say in detective novels, only a few yards away.

"Yoo-hoo," I hollered. "Just want you to know we're here." My friends stared at me disbelievingly.

"He did that on purpose, you know," one said.

Trees rustled, branches snapped, and a hunter emerged, carrying a shotgun, camouflaged, green-and-brown paint on his face. "Don't worry," he smirked. "I aimed away from you."

He looked us up and down and added, "Only a fool goes out in the woods wearing white."

My heart plummeted, and I thought of the famous case in Maine a few years ago when a woman wore white mittens to hang her wash in the back yard and was fatally shot by a hunter who mistook the white for the flash of a deer's tail. Plenty of people in Maine thought she had it coming for her stupidity.

We could have asked, but didn't, what kind of hunter camouflages his face to hunt partridge (or else shoots deer with a shotgun in bow season). Or what kind of person shoots into the air to teach innocent or ignorant hikers a lesson? Most hunters you meet when you're out walking say hello instead.

A fellow who used to live in Grosse Pointe and still works here decided to attend a Detroit conference about city-suburb relations. As a believer in cooperation, he figured it was a good thing to discuss the stereotypes that block understanding.

So it came as a surprise when, part way through the discussion, one of the leaders said, in words dripping with preconceived notions, "Anybody here from Grosse Pointe?" Our friend raised his hand and all heads swiveled.

He toyed momentarily with the idea of telling them he had moved to Macomb County, imagining them overlaying the stereotypes of white flight and pickup trucks onto the images of exclusivity and servants' entrances. But he didn't.

Maybe we should change our name(s) to East Detroit.

Boy, have the people at the office got my number.

One of our colleagues spent his vacation reading Jeremy Rifkin's "Beyond Beef." Alarmed (and grossed out), he offered it to the desk jockeys in the newsroom.

No doubt figuring the book would give them one more unwanted warning about their cholesterol levels, they all turned it down — with a chorus of "Give it to Nancy!"

Well, if you think the meat-packing industry has improved since Upton Sinclair revealed tuberculous spittle in your sausage 80 years ago, you're not going to like what Rifkin has to say.

The politics and terrible environmental effect of the beef culture are bad enough, but the real shock value of the book lies in the descriptions of diseased cattle and lousy quality control in the slaughterhouses. Don't read it over lunch.

Opposed*To the Editor:

At its meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 22, the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library adopted the following resolution on Proposal C and A which will appear on the Nov. 3 Michigan ballot:

It is hereby resolved that the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Library oppose Proposal C ("cut and cap") and Proposal A (House Joint Resolution H).

We oppose Proposal C because it would take away local control of our library since most of the library's budget comes from locally voted library millage. While the state of Michigan claims that it will pay back lost revenue (conservatively projected as $2.2 million over five years) from the "cut" portion of Proposal C, we are aware that the state is currently over $800 million in debt. Without a dramatic turnaround in future revenue there is not now and will not be state funds available to make up this lost money. Funds lost to the "cap" portion of the proposal ($1 million over 5 years) will not be reimbursed by the state.

The Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library also oppose Proposal A because, while there is no direct harm to the library in the first five years, the library does receive services from the Grosse Pointe School System which will definitely be affected by Proposal A.

We ask that you join us in opposing Proposal A and Proposal C.

Misery index*To the Editor:

Isn't it ironic that in this current election season, there is an overwhelming emphasis against big government and business-as-usual in Washington, D.C., yet the candidate leading in the polls plans on expanding the scope and power of government more than any other candidate in this year's presidential race?

Why do we keep hearing about how terrible the economy is today when the current "misery index" (inflation rate plus unemployment rate) is half of what it was 15 years ago during the Carter presidency?

Brian C. Joondeph, M.D.
Grosse Pointe Farms

Private education*To the Editor:

All candidates agree that public education in the United States is in a deplorable mess, particularly when weighed on a global scale. They do not agree on what to do about it.

George Bush believed a choice-of-school plan would help because it would compel school improvement, or loss of students to better schools. To implement the plan, he would introduce "vouchers" to be spent at their school of choice.

Candidate Clinton stridently opposes the voucher plan because it would include private, including religious, schools. He said it would "take public money away from the public school system."

Two flaws are immediately apparent in Clinton's "reasoning" — if such it may be called. First, if improved education is the object, religious schools today are doing an often-proved superior job compared to public schools. Poor people, but wise parents, are spending scarce money for tuition at a religious school because they want what better-than-public education offers for their children.

Second flaw: Is Clinton saying that attendance at a religious school disenfranchises that student's family as "members of the public"? Any way you look at it, that's asinine.

Let's assess Clinton's taking-money-away-from-public-schools statement, using our Grosse Pointe as a model. That's somewhat distorted of course because Grosse Pointe is more affluent than most systems. But the principle holds.

Grosse Pointe schools are being funded at a yearly cost of $7,162 per pupil. I know a family with five children, all of whom were raised in Grosse Pointe but educated K-12 at a religious school. That $7,162 per year multiplied by five children totals $35,810 in public education money not spent on this family every year for 13 years of K-12 education. That totals a tidy $465,550 left in the school district till, or used to educate five other kids for 13 years.

But that's not all. This family of five kids paid school taxes every year — the same rate as everyone else; no deductions. The family has lived in Grosse Pointe for 45 years.

School taxes every year for 45 years averaged around $3,000, or a total of about $135,000 cash paid into the school system without a penny of benefit taken out. In fact, some of the kids took typing in the summer and swimming in the winter — cash on the line; $10 for typing, 75 cents per swim. Thus, this family of five children saved the school district $465,000 in funds budgeted but not spent, plus $135,000 in school taxes paid out with only esoteric, not real, benefits to the family, and cash paid out for facilities used. The total is $600,550 in entitlements not claimed and taxes without benefits.

So much for Clinton's anti-voucher "taking money away from the public school system." Yet

Clinton plans greatly expanded spending on what he calls "education and training."

Everyone agrees guns, crime, AIDS and sex are major public school problems. They yearn for religious and moral values in school as an antidote. Kids from private, religious schools are turned out into society backed by these desirable qualities. That could be a tangible result of the use of the voucher principle. And whatever moral value that thus accrues has been presented to the bankrupt United States fully paid, up to now, by parents and sponsors — in addition to their own plateful of school taxes.

There is more. All five of the children cited had Jesuit Catholic university education and graduation, thus sparing the state $2,000 to $3,000 or more in residential tuition, yearly per-student costs. That's another $60,000 gift to all the other taxpayers from the parents of the private, religious school-university educated children cited.

Incidentally, has anybody checked the contributions of the anti-religious-school-voucher in the United States? These sidebar contributions from the private-education sector have gone quite unnoticed, and largely unappreciated.

Yet, Clinton would tax us more to set in concrete a national monopoly on education. Monopoly is always bad. How's your mail service been lately?

Support

To the Editor:

The need for help has never been greater in metro Detroit than at the present. Times are difficult, with the recession, layoffs, government cutbacks and business downsizing.

Among those unmet needs are health and medical care as more individuals and families lose insurance coverage along with loss of job and income.

Many agencies are struggling to find funding to assist in relief for the growing problems. United Way has, for 44 years, been a reliable source of funding. It is working this year to raise $63.6 million.

United Way agencies help 1.89 million people in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties each year. Money that is raised here stays here, and only a dime out of each dollar raised is used to cover fundraising and administrative expenses.

The remaining 90 percent goes to providing services to the community, making the United Way overhead one of the lowest of any charitable organizations in the nation.

The Visiting Nurse Association is only one of many health-related organizations supported in part by United Way contributions. We hope everyone gives generously to support United Way because the money funds 145 agencies in the tri-county area.

Taking issue

To the Editor:

Talk about election rhetoric and emotions, how can there ever be "a disproportionate concern for the truth" as Katharine Gee alleges in her letter of Oct. 1?

When she bases a pro-abortion argument on support from 36 religious groups, she seems to be saying whatever the majority wants should be imposed on all. That may be democracy in action but it does not necessarily result in truth. Such majority rule inevitably leads to the mob's sacrifice of the individual (as when the majority decides Socrates should drink hemlock) and degenerates into "might makes right" (as when the Nazis invaded their European neighbors), and finally results in anarchy when the rule of force breaks down for lack of an intellectual grounding in truth.

In contrast, the United States of America was founded as a constitutional republic, where the power of the federal government was severely limited, most powers being retained by the states and individual citizens. The limited power which was given to the federal government was also balanced among the legislative, judicial, and executive branches, and further limited by the Bill of Rights to protect the rights of the individual — the true minority, being a minority of one.

Logical thought processes are mired in confusion when Ms. Gee alleges that the Republican Party is legislating its views in "a clear violation of the establishment clause of the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution." The establishment clause refers to the statement: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof..." The Republican Party is not Congress, nor can it claim a majority of representatives and senators at this time.

Actually, members of Congress legislate their views constantly, often with unfortunate results since those views can be as ill-informed as Ms. Gee's. She has elevated four men who have never held public office nor any official post in the Republican Party to Republican leaders in her emotional election-year rhetoric.

Furthermore, calling "Hitler and the Third Reich, all Christians" is absolutely false and a malicious libel to true Christian believers worldwide. The fact is that Hitler's early mindset was incubated in the occultic Thule Society, of which he was a member, and flowered when he adapted ancient Germanic runes as Nazi symbols in establishing a state religion based on Wotonic types from paganism. True Christian believers, like Dietrich Bonhoeffer who stood up to Hitler, were imprisoned and murdered along with the 6 million Jewish victims of the holocaust.

A person has a right to express his or her opinions (and I would fight for that right on their behalf), but in a constitutional republic, every right carries a responsibility, and those opinions should be disciplined by facts which have been researched and are known to be true. Reason and reality are wonderful curbs to emotional excess.

Finally, in a republic, no one should be forced to support with their tax money a social/eugenics program, such as abortion, which many consider immoral. Peter Jennings on ABC nightly news of Oct. 1 announced that 5,000 family planning clinics would close if federal funding was withheld because those clinics would not agree that only a medical doctor should discuss abortion with a woman. One must conclude from this: (A) these family planning clinics are really abortion advocacy clinics, (B) the public is not supporting such activity through their tax-deductible contributions to abortion advocacy groups, such as Planned Parenthood, (c) abortion advocates are themselves not putting their money where their mouths are by supporting their family planning clinics, and (D) the abortion lobby fights, therefore, to force all taxpayers to support their abortion programs. That is not the American way.

Those who are of the mind set that enforces their views on all, regardless of the rights of the minority, should learn that tomorrow they may be one of the minority.

The foregoing principles explain why I am proud to be a member of the Republican Party, a group in which individual beliefs are tolerated, the rule of law is respected, and one advocates his views through persuasion, not force.

I invite all who value individual liberty and fear majority/mob rule to join us and vote for limited government on Nov. 3.

Adele Huebner
President
Women's Republican Club of Grosse Pointe Lafayette clinic

To the Editor:

I have been with the Lafayette Clinic since 1958. In the halcyon days of Dr. Jacques Gottlieb and prolific funding from federal and state governments, the ideal of research, training and service was being realized. We were internationally known and admired. It was fertile ground for young psychiatrists to learn how to be psychotherapists and psychopharmacologists; patients got the best of both worlds and were often helped.

In time, the money dried up and the best departed; what remained was a melange of civil service bureaucrats, putting in their time for salaries, fringe benefits and pensions and a few dedicated teachers, researchers and therapists. More and more, administrators replaced therapists and precious time was allocated to counting beans and shuffling papers. Hack appointees were breathing on the necks of world-famous researchers, telling them what to do. Gone were the days when Dr. Gottlieb would receive a ridiculous order from Lansing and throw it into the wastebasket.

Civil rights' lawyers block research and commitment; cynical attempts to save money got the revolving door spinning, more and more mental patients were released to the "community" and the "community" threw them on the street, as we so vividly saw on television on the night of Oct. 15. Hopes were that what trickled down would add up to something, but there was a hole in the bucket.

There is a widespread abdication of commitment and responsibility, of idealism and integrity: It is everywhere, in government, industry, education, religion and the professions. It is hoped that whoever wins the presidency and occupies the seats of the legislature and the Supreme Court will provide leadership and be role-models for constructive change, but I still think it is up to every one of us to be a "point of light" and do what we can do, instead of pointing fingers at others and looking to leaders, legislation and further taxation. If we look at the history of great leaders, you will see that they have been few and far between, and that their accomplishments have not been lasting. It is up to every one of us to carry the torch and do what has to be done.

No specific proposals? That is right. Each of us has a potential for creativity, hard work and idealism. Finally, it is up to each and every one of us to do what we must do to improve the world around us, to leave it a better place for our having been there.

In the words of Santayana, "We must welcome the future, remembering that soon it will be the past; and we must respect the past, remembering that once it was all that was humanly possible."

LOOK WHAT MOLLY SAID...

14E DETROIT FREE PRESS/FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1992 S

Andiamo Italia is alive in spirit and good food

It's the best of both worlds for Aldo. The fine Italian chef who presided for some 35 years over his own restaurant on Kelly Road and Seven Mile, where he did everything from butchering the veal to skimming the stock, is back in the kitchen. This time, since joining Andiamo Italia, he has the luxury of a staff.

No wonder he feels free to roam the dining room in his white coat, looking as if he might be checking to see if you are taking your allergy pills but probably suggesting the ravioli verdi. There are plenty of people in the kitchen, including talented young chef Jeffrey Kay, to keep the pots boiling while the old master chats with his fans.

Aldo couldn't have done it in the old days. Still, he remembers those busy days fondly, and he seems to regret giving up the place that bore his name and the menu on which virtually everything was "alla Aldo." Now "alla Aldos" are more discreetly sprinkled through the menu, just three of them among the dishes from Rome (his hometown), Venice, Milan and New York (steak, of course).

Aldo Ottaviani is obviously rejuvenated in his new role as chef-patriarch. He looks hearty and relaxed and is reverently referred to by all at Andiamo as "Mr. Aldo." That's appropriate, considering what a difference his presence has made. The kitchen is much improved at this restaurant that was less than thrilling before Mr. Aldo's arrival. And even after he was on the scene, it took some time to get the place rolling.

Now, I'm impressed with its fresh spirit and the kitchen that seems to be humming along in fine form, well represented in the dining room by a sharp young staff that knows the menu and discusses it intelligently.

At dinner this week on a usually quiet Tuesday night, it wasn't so quiet at Andiamo after all. There was an impressive crowd dining on cozze alla Livornese (mussels in spicy tomato sauce) and linguine with white clam sauce at the white-covered tables to the accompaniment of the player-less electronic piano belting out everything from "Give My Regards to Broadway" to "Girl from Ipanema."

Some guests were returning after having been at Andiamo for the special Monday dinner spotlighting the dishes of Liguria, Italy's northwest coastal region, said to be the birthplace of ravioli. That says something about the new scheme of things here.

Our table started with ravioli verdi (who could resist Mr. Aldo's recommendation?), and it was excellent, the green pillows stuffed lightly with finely minced chicken and veal in a robust tomato sauce. Then some of the excellent minestrone alla Milanese. There's no soup any better when it is prepared with care, as it is here — full of random-cut vegetables and bits of pasta in broth that has picked up all of the flavors.

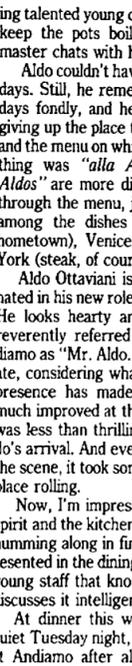

Maybe the salad course is a bit routine, with its simple lettuce and cucumber approach in creamy garlic or raspberry vinaigrette dressing, but main courses rise well above that. In fact, the bocconcini di vitello alla Aldo (plump medallions of veal tenderloin with a thin veil of Fontina, sparked with tomato and prosciutto) was one of the best veal dishes sampled this year. The other element on the plate was an array of firm-but-tender miniature fall vegetables brightened with tarragon. Lovely.

And so were the marinated, char-broiled spring lamb chops, five of them on the plate, and completely self-sufficient without the side dish of mint jelly. They were also accompanied by the tiny fall veggies.

The menu offers a number of appealing choices, from the house-made pastas including fettucine with tomato and vodka sauce, lasagna with meat sauce, and gnocchi in a choice of sauces, to made-to-order risotto, chicken sauteed with wine and black olives, and Dover sole with tarragon-butter sauce.

Let's not even talk about the pastry tray.

No wonder the rooms are full of life on Tuesday. ★★ ★

How to keep the cold out and the heat in this winter

The north wind doth blow — not yet, but soon. But before it comes blustering in, there are tasks to be done.

So a few hints on how to keep the cold on the outside and the heat on the inside of our homes might be in order. There is more than comfort at stake. Money also is involved. We just can't afford to let any of that precious heat escape.

The Community Services Administration reminds us that older Americans spend more than 30 percent of their income on energy. It rises to 45 percent for some low income brackets.

Older people have been affected more than others by rising costs. The health of some older people depends more on comfortable temperatures in their homes than is the case with younger adults.

Oftentimes their homes are harder to heat because when they were built, energy was plentiful and cheap. There wasn't the concern for insulation that there is now.

However, the main reason that retired people have been hit harder than others by skyrocketing fuel costs is that they were already spending a large share of their incomes on fuel and utilities when the crisis started.

As energy prices surged for many, heating and utility bills became the dominant item in their budget, forcing aside such basic needs as food and health care.

If you wonder whether your home is adequately insulated, make a survey of the house. Check what insulation you have. Are there sufficient storm windows and doors? How about the weatherstripping around windows, doors and joints? At today's prices, weatherstripping can bring big returns.

Choose a cool windy day for your survey. Test for drafts around windows and doors and under the doors. A lighted cigarette can be used for checking leaks. Place it near suspected leak points. If the smoke deflects, cold air is leaking into the house. Check for drafts where pipes go through floors, walls and ceilings.

Attic leakage can be ascertained by feeling for drafts along the edge of the attic door. If cold air is coming down the stairs, there must be air leaks in the door or ceiling.

Beware of windows fogged with water or frost. It's a sign of heat loss.

Correcting these sources of heat loss is not expensive. Caulking and weatherstripping are the most effective improvements that can be made to any home. As much as one-fourth of the heat wasted is due to cracks, gaps and spaces that can be plugged.

Simple instructions for caulking, ing, weatherstripping and insulating are available in The Department of Housing and Urban Development's booklet, "In the Bank . . . Or Up the Chimney." It's available through the U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, for $1.70.

Another method of gaining heat is to let the sun shine into the home during the day and then close the drapes at night to conserve that solar heat. Cold floors can be insulated with old rags and newspapers placed under the rugs.

You may find that your home requires improvements involving some investment.

However, the more fuel and utility costs rise, the more you can save from increased investment in energy conservation and improvements. You will get rapid returns at today's and tomorrow's fuel prices.

The National Bureau of Standards says that an investment in six inches of attic floor insulation will be returned by fuel savings within one year in a region of relatively mild winters.

The bureau has developed a system which almost anyone can use to find the best combination of energy-saving measures for a house.

It gives you a "heating and cooling index" for your house based on the climate you are located in, and your cost of fuel for heating and air conditioning.

The index figures are then applied to charts covering seven types of weatherization; insulation in the attic, around the ducts; installation of storm windows and doors. You can order this workbook for calculating your home insulation problems from the U.S. Government Printing Office also. Its title is "Making the Most of Your Energy Dollars in Home Heating and Cooling." The price is 70 cents.

If you decide to use a contractor for your home improvements, choose one with a reputation for honesty and good workmanship. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development advises that you talk with people for whom the contractors have done work. Consult your local community action agency or area agency on aging, chamber of commerce or better business bureau. Ask your lender about the contractor if you are financing the project with a loan. Check the place of business to see that it is not a fly-by-night operation.

Read and understand every word of any contract before you sign it. If it is difficult to comprehend, ask for an interpretation from someone other than the contractor. Never sign on the dotted line with anyone who makes fantastic promises. Reputable dealers are not in the give-away business.

Never make a final payment or sign a completion certificate authorizing final payment until all the work has been completed to your satisfaction.

Most of the money you spend for energy-saving on your own residence is eligible for income tax credit. The maximum credit is $300 which would be the amount deductible from your tax payment if you spend $2,000 for energy-saving and solar improvements.

Another method of saving heat is to lower the thermostat, but that has limitations. Medical opinion generally agrees that older persons in normal health can live at 70 degrees Fahrenheit without harm to health or danger of hypothermia (accidental low body temperatures) and current opinion seems to be that most older persons can adjust to temperatures as low as 66 degrees Fahrenheit without harm to health.

The process should take place gradually, lowering thermostats one or two degrees a week over a period of 20 or 30 days.

Just setting the thermostats back a few degrees will save a surprising amount of energy. Lowering temperatures at night also is a great fuel-saver. Turning the thermostat down five or 10 degrees before going to bed can mean savings of 7 to 15 percent on your fuel bill.

If you need financial help with energy problems, you don't have to be in the lowest income brackets to get assistance. If you are 60 years or older, a good place to start to search for solutions to energy problems is the local information and referral service or your area agency on aging.

The Wool & The Floss gets its big break — in disguise

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

A Grosse Pointe City store raded yarn for ice cream earlier this week for the chance to star in a national television commercial.

The McCann-Erickson advertising agency transformed The Wool & The Floss, located on Fisher Road (across the street from Grosse Pointe South High school) into an ice cream parlor — complete with neon window signs — for a Buick commercial.

Filming took place Monday, and police from Grosse Pointe City blocked off part of Fisher, preventing cars and pedestrians from disrupting the shoot.

Jean Candler, owner of the Wool & The Floss, which sells needlecraft supplies, has a bit part in the commercial.

She plays "the lady who serves ice cream" and will be seen inside the store through a window, said producer John Marshall.

"Jean has been very good to us," Marshall said. "She let us take over her store and turn it into an ice cream parlor, inside and out. We thought she was so terrific that we asked her to be in the commercial."

Marshall is with the Giddens, Marshall & Short (GMS) production company, based in Los Angeles. He flew in from L.A. for the shoot.

Candler said being in a commercial is "weird," and that when the advertising agency asked permission to use her store, she "just thought it would be something neat and different to do."

She said the film crew started work on her store Sunday, and that everyone involved with the commercial had to be "on location" at 6:30 a.m. the next day.

"When we were putting up the ice cream signs," Marshall said, "a few people came up to us and said they thought this was a great location for an ice cream store, and wanted to know when we were going to open because they wanted some ice cream."

"Being from Los Angeles, I wouldn't think this is ice cream weather, but apparently they did."

He said location scouts searched more than a week for an appropriate site. They took pictures of storefronts in Utica, Northville, Franklin, "and places I had never heard of," he said, before the producers selected The Wool & The Floss.

"We really tried to find an ice cream store to begin with, but this store looked very quaint and pretty and nice," Marshall said.

He said the Farms and City public safety departments were very cooperative, and that South students did not interfere with the filming.

"We had no problems with them whatsoever. Some of the students from the school's television production class came out and asked a few questions, but that was all right," he said.

Bill McConkey, agency producer with McCann-Erickson, said the commercial will include other scenes shot at locations outside of Grosse Pointe.

In the local scene, a shiny maroon-colored four-door Buick (heading toward the lake) pulls in front of the ice cream parlor.

The driver — a well-dressed, middle-aged woman with her hair pulled back — gets out of the car and helps a boy, who appears to be about 7, out of the back seat. The boy scampers to the door of the building and opens it for the woman. Through the large front window, they can be seen ordering ice cream.

The actors repeated the scene many times Monday morning, as the camera crew watched from the other side of Fisher and as passersby tried to see what was going on.

Candler said the film crew used real ice cream for the shoot. But don't bother asking for a cone there now — the store is back to normal.

Marshall said the commercial will probably be on television within a month.

This is at least the second time a commercial has been filmed in the Grosse Pointes within the last five months.

On May 15, two homes on Roslyn Road in Grosse Pointe Woods were filmed for an Oakland Press commercial.

Some people thought "The Wool and The Floss" — shown here in costume — actually was an ice cream parlor.

Grosse Pointe South students plug in local broadcast nationwide

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

The corner of Fisher Road and St. Paul was the center of national-level activity twice in the past week. Motorists may have been inconvenienced Monday by road blocks on St. Paul as a Los Angeles film crew shot a Buick commercial at a local store.

But students at the Grosse Pointe South High School instructional television studio saw the assembly of directors and camera crews as a chance to watch the professionals in action.

One week earlier, as Grosse Pointe South hosted a national teleconference on improving the nation's reading standards, motorists on St. Paul may have noticed the large satellite dish parked next to the high school. This time the fledgling broadcasters had an opportunity to take part in the action.

While it may be true that the teleconference sponsors selected South High as the conference site because it was the most inexpensive, Dr. Julie Corbett, instructional television coordinator, saw the conference as an immense opportunity for her students.

"I saw it as a learning experience for my students," Corbett said. "They (conference organizers) had to take a risk with us; there's not a professional here. That's why we were so delighted they wanted us."

The live broadcast originally aired from 6 to 8 p.m. Oct. 14 on Grosse Pointe Cable public access Channel 20 and was transmitted via satellite to 35 states.

Copies of the production are being made to distribute both locally and nationally, Corbett said.

The whole conference was produced by a crew of 14 students under Corbett's direction.

The students designed and decorated the set and operated the cameras and broadcast equipment. The up-link satellite dish was rented to the studio at a cost of $2,500 for two hours. Corbett said the Michigan Department of Education picked up the tab.

Although the broadcast lasted two hours, students worked days ahead of time and hours afterward.

Chris Neumann, a senior, operated the switcher, a control board that selects which camera will be broadcasting the picture on the television screen. Describing the teleconference, Neumann said the atmosphere was "intense" and it didn't let up until the last hour of the broadcast.

During the conference, Corbett said the students not only had to make sure everything went as planned from the technical side, they also had to work with caterers and make their guests comfortable.

At one point, Neumann recalled, the control room grew extremely hot and stuffy and everyone wanted a glass of ice water. None of the students were accustomed to working uninterrupted for such a long stretch, he said.

While all appeared to run smoothly to the untrained eye, the two-hour teleconference was not without its trying moments, Corbett said.

During a practice run the night before, Corbett said the equipment went berserk. A computer began acting up, the switcher went down and then both tape machines jammed.

Somehow the crew managed to resolve all the technical problems before air time, she said. During the broadcast, a few minor problems surfaced. Taped segments didn't roll on cue or a microphone didn't pick up someone's voice. But Corbett said the conference moderator was an experienced professional who handled the rough moments with finesse.

South High School was paid $5,000 for producing the conference. Corbett said the money will go toward the purchase of new lighting equipment for the television studio.

But a few minor problems didn't prevent conference coordinators from asking the students to produce a second teleconference in January on special education, Corbett said.

Since the instructional television studio is an extremely popular class at the high school, Corbett said she had more student volunteers than she needed for the conference.

She selected the most advanced students to produce the conference. On that team was camera operator Marsha Zeller, who is a senior and also a member of the Tower staff. She is currently producing two other projects, one for the school district's science department and the other for Grosse Pointe Memorial Church's Foundation for Exceptional Children.

And 1992 graduate David Andora designed the surrealistic set. Hoping for an abstract, "MTV look," Andora draped the set in sheer theatrical netting. He then backlit the flowing material to create a relaxed, dream-like setting.

Corbett plans to analyze the taped production and use it as a way to teach the students what worked and what didn't during their first live broadcast.

DSO members give recital

The Lyric Chamber Ensemble will present two of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's most popular members in recital on Sunday, Oct. 25, at 8:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Featured artists Emmanuelle Boisvert (DSO concertmaster) and Marcy Chanteaux (DSO assistant principal cellist) will present a program highlighting eastern and northern European composers. They will be accompanied by pianist Fedora Horowitz. The program will include Edvard Grieg's Violin Sonata Zoltan Kodaly's Sonata for cello and piano, "Legende" and "Scherzo Tarantelle" for violin and piano by Henryk Wieniawski, and the Saint Saens cello sonata, Op. 32.

Grosse Pointer Boisvert was a member of the Cleveland Orchestra before her appointment in Detroit in 1988. She is a member of the St. Clair Trio, a Detroit-based ensemble performing in recital throughout the Midwest.

Chanteaux, also of Grosse Pointe, came to Detroit to succeed Mischa Kottler as pianist for the DSO, and four years later joined the cello section of the orchestra. Four years after that she was appointed assistant principal cellist. She is a graduate of the Cleveland Institute of Music. With a large number of concertos in her repertoire, she performs frequently as soloist with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, as well as with many metropolitan area orchestras.

Horowitz, founder and artistic director of the LCE, was heard last season as soloist with the Birmingham-Bloomfield Symphony.

Admission is $16; $14 for students and seniors. Tickets may be purchased at the door, or ordered in advance by calling the LCE at 357-1111.

Self-defense seminars for women scheduled

By Roxann M. Klein
Special Writer

A middle-aged woman was standing at the bus stop in Grosse Pointe one morning when a man grabbed her from behind.

She froze in fear, yet was able to drop her umbrella to her side and swiftly raise it, hooking the man's groin. As he toppled to the ground, she escaped down a side street.

Martial arts instructor John Stec relayed this true story during the 20th Century Self Defense for Women seminar held in August at a UAW local hall in Sterling Heights.

The seminar, sponsored by a group of martial arts instructors, covered tips on how women can reduce their risk of being a victim of sexual assault, statistics on sexual assault crimes and rape in Michigan and in the United States, and information on date rape.

The seminar also gave women strategies to use when driving alone, self-defense techniques, household and purse items that may be used as a weapon and how to apply force to the body's pressure points.

Stec explained that socio-economic conditions, age, race and occupation are not determining factors in sexual assault or rape cases.

"Anyone, anywhere may be sexually assaulted or raped," Stec said. "It doesn't matter what neighborhood you're in or your social status."

Incidents like the one he recounted are happening all over the nation, Stec said.

Information provided by the Sexual Assault Institute of Michigan reveals that more than 2,000 rapes occurred in Michigan's eight largest communities in 1990.

According to David Praitm, also a martial arts instructor, Michigan ranks third in the nation behind California and Texas in the number of reported rape cases.

The eight instructors who conducted the seminars include internationally certified martial arts instructors and directors of accredited martial arts programs who are also certified by the Michigan State Police in physical training and defense tactics.

Praitm and Stec are both accomplished martial arts instructors — Praitm an eighth-degree black belt and Stec a sixth-degree black belt.

They teach the following defense strategies to help women avoid being victims of sexual assault or rape:

- Be aware of your surroundings and use common sense.
- Be verbal if faced with a potential attack. Shout, scream or yell "fire."
- Run if you can.

Escape was stressed as the prime consideration when faced with a potential sexual assault, but if that is not possible, then various self-defense tactics may be used.

They include using the back of the head, elbow, fist, knee and foot to strike body pressure points, temporarily disabling an attacker. Several punching and kicking techniques were also taught for striking pressure points, such as:

- An extended knuckle or heel palm punch to the infra-orbital area under the nose, or into the throat in an upward or 45-degree motion.
- Punching or kicking the space between the rib cage, the side of the ribs or the groin with the ball or instep of the foot.
- Using the elbow or fist to strike the groin, the area between the rib cage or inside the thigh to thwart an attacker from behind.
- Kicking the shin bone or common peroneal nerve (along the trouser seam) of the outer thigh with the ball or instep of the foot.

The staff also demonstrated how household items, like a book, belt, broom or cooking pot, may be used as a weapon or for distraction. Other items that can be used include hairspray, a pen or a hairbrush.

Praitm said that learning self-defense techniques does not guarantee that a woman will not be sexually assaulted, but he said that 70-80 percent of women who tried to defend themselves against an attacker were successful and only received minor injuries.

Stec agreed.

"You must be fully committed if you're going to use defense tactics — kick, scratch, bite, shout — even if it's someone you know," Stec said.

An alarming amount — 75 percent — of rapes are committed by people known to their victims, Praitm said. "It doesn't matter if it's your boss, your boyfriend or your husband's best friend," he said. "If he is trying to sexually assault you, don't hesitate to use self-defense techniques. Your survival is what's most important."

Approximately 35 percent of all rapes are date or acquaintance rape and about half of those occur on the first date, Praitm said.

Leo Mayer, a fifth-degree black belt, offered the following precautions when on a date:

- Be alert to specific behaviors. If the conversation repeatedly digresses to sexual innuendos, this may be cause to cancel the date.
- Be sure to take money for cab fare.
- A woman should never leave a place alone with someone she's just met.
- If a woman has to say no more than once, she's said it too much.

Mayer also urged women to trust their instincts.

"If you sense something's just not right, leave or call a friend to come get you," Mayer said.

Mayer also urged the following safety precautions when driving:

- Have keys in hand when walking to your car and look under the car and in the back-seat before getting into the vehicle.
- Keep the doors locked when driving.
- If you think you're being followed, drive to a populated area such as a store or go directly to a police station.
- Don't stop for someone who has car trouble. Note the location, then send help.
- If you're stranded with a car that's broken down, sit on the passenger side so that a potential attacker will think the driver is getting help and may be back soon.

If you're home alone, safety precautions include either not answering the door or telling the person at the door "that your husband is sleeping and you'd have to discuss any trans action with him," Mayer said.

Mayer said a similar strategy may also be used if a repair person is in the home — "My husband is asleep in the bedroom so can you work quietly?"

Light timers were also suggested. Mayer said if a window or door is ajar when you get home, do not enter your house but go to a neighbor's house and call the police.

A seminar will be held at the Tompkins Community Center in Grosse Pointe Park on Oct. 26-27. The cost is $89.

For more information, call 757-7753.

When my routine pregnancy suddenly wasn't...

I was glad I'd chosen Hutzel. From the beginning, my pregnancy was described as "normal." So when I wanted a private room—one where labor, delivery, and recovery could all take place—my doctor had no objections. But if something went wrong,

I wanted to know my baby and I would also have the most knowledgeable specialists and the latest medical technology nearby. So I chose The Detroit Medical Center's Hutzel Hospital.

To my surprise, Hutzel's private LDRP (Labor, Delivery, Recovery, Post-Partum) rooms were among the most spacious and beautiful I'd seen. I was glad I could be in one—and that I'd chosen Hutzel. Because at the last minute, my baby developed complications and a team of Hutzel specialists was right there to provide the care we both needed.

Like a lot of other women, I've learned there's no such thing as a "routine" pregnancy. Thank goodness there's Hutzel Hospital.

CPAs give divorce tips

Negotiating alimony payments. Determining custody and child support. Dividing property and assets. These can be complicated — and emotional — aspects of any divorce. The Michigan Association of CPAs urges you to put some of your emotion aside to consider the tax consequences of your decisions.

Alimony and child support

Knowing the variety of forms alimony may take can influence how much money you will offer to — or accept from — your spouse. Alimony consists of cash payments to a spouse or former spouse as ordered by a court or specified in a divorce decree.

The person receiving the alimony must report it as income. The spouse who pays alimony can deduct it, regardless of whether he or she itemizes deductions. Alimony payments in excess of $15,000 a year must meet additional tax law requirements to qualify as alimony.

Many expenses that you pay on your spouse's behalf after the divorce can be considered alimony. For example, payment of your spouse's share of the mortgage costs, his or her medical or dental expenses, and educational or training programs needed to re-enter the work force may be considered alimony in the eyes of the IRS and entitle you to a bigger tax deduction.

Child support is not considered alimony and is not deductible for the person who pays it. Child support payments are fixed amounts and can only be changed by a court ordered modification to your divorce decree.

Dependency exemption

The parent who has custody of the child for the greater part of the year is allowed to take the dependency exemption. The custodial parent can give this right over to the other spouse for one or more tax years by signing IRS Form 8332.

Distribution of property

Rules about the division of property vary depending on whether you and your spouse reside in a community property state or a common law state. In a community property state, each of you owns half the property, even if one of you has legal title. In a common law state, the person who holds legal title of the property is likely to be recognized as the sole owner.

Regardless of where you reside, however, any property acquired by one spouse before the marriage or any gifts or inheritances received during the marriage are generally considered separate property and are not usually divided as part of the divorce.

Property settlements negotiated as part of the divorce are generally tax-free. So, for example, an individual can transfer appreciated property, such as real estate or stocks and bonds, to a spouse in lieu of alimony payments without incurring any capital gains tax.

Selling your home

If you decide to sell your home and then split the proceeds with your former spouse, each of you generally must pay a capital gains tax on your own portion of the proceeds. You can escape this tax if within two years you purchase a new home costing at least as much as your share of the old home's adjusted sales price.

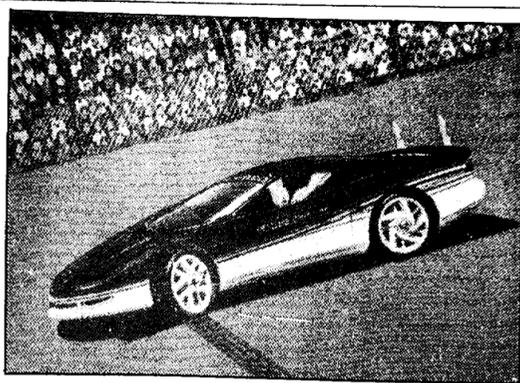

If you have lived in your home for at least three of the last five years, and are at least age 55 at the time of the sale of your home, you may exclude from your income $125,000 of gain realized from the sale of the house, provided you have not previously taken this exclusion. You both may qualify to exclude your portion of the gains if you each meet the residency and age requirements and are divorced at the time you sell your home.

Pensions and retirement benefits

Some spouses seek to receive benefits from their former partner's pension, company profit-sharing plan or individual retirement account. The amount of benefits to be paid to the participant's spouse must be specified in a court order known as a Qualified Domestic Relations Order (QDRO). Benefits paid to the recipient are subject to the same tax treatment as all retirement plans.

Deductions and professional services

If you need professional tax advice in negotiating a fair settlement, you may take a tax deduction for the fees paid to a CPA or another tax adviser. However, you cannot deduct legal fees and court costs for obtaining a divorce.

Chevy says no performance modifications will be needed to get its Official Pace Car up to speed. However, the limited-edition Z-28s pace car clones Chevy is certain to market next spring will not have lights, harnesses and firefighting equipment.

Roma Cafe

THE OLD WORLD TRADITION CONTINUES

Take 102 years of Italian tradition, mix it with the flavor of success - the kind that evolves from family recipes and wonderful homespun stories, blend well in the original building located at 3401 Riopelle in Detroit, and what you have is the most famous of all Italian restaurants in the Midwest - Roma Cafe.

Founded in 1890, Roma Cafe was once a well known boarding house. It was sold to the Sossi family in 1936, and has since evolved from generation to generation while preserving the same wonderful old world Italian tradition that marked its birth so many years ago. Little did the Sossi family realize in 1936, that their investment would turn into one of Detroit's truly great landmarks.

What makes an Italian restaurant a landmark? It certainly has a lot to do with history. Present owners, Hector Sossi and his daughter, Janet Belcoure Sossi (third generation of the Sossi family), can tell you many stories and events that have taken place in the Roma Cafe, but one of the most unusual came in the form of a phone call Janet received recently. "A gentleman called me one day and made reservations here because he wanted to celebrate his 50th birthday at the very spot he was born", Janet said. Sure enough, the gentleman showed up for his birthday party with birth certificate in hand - upon which showed the Riopelle address as his birthplace.

there for...to take very good care of their guests. Most of the waiters at Roma Cafe have spent their entire career in the employ of the Sossi family. They know most of their customers by name, which is not surprising, because after spending an hour with any one of these professionals, you will feel as if you had just dined at your best friends home.

If Pasta sounds tempting, you might want to try the Spaghetti Carbonara (creamy Pasta sauteed with Pancetta, Egg and Parmigiano), or, the Spaghetti a la Roma (Spaghetti topped with Meat Sauce, Mushrooms and Cheese broiled in a Casserole). There are 18 different Pasta selections to choose from, but if for any reason you don't see the one that you desire, your waiter will happily have it prepared for you.

If Veal is your passion, you are at the right place. Roma Cafe is notorious for their veal dishes, such as Veal Scaloppine a la Tosca, Veal Salti In Bocca, or Veal Cacciatora. The biggest seller, however, is their famous Veal Parmigiana. Many Italian restaurants have tried to duplicate what Roma Cafe has accomplished in the last 100 years...serving the finest veal dishes available in the Metro Detroit area.

The steaks are all U.S.D.A. Prime Beef and many are prepared Italian style, such as Strip Sirloin alla Pizzaiola (Prime New York Strip served with an extra thick piquant Tomato sauce). Seafood dishes are also marvelous. Roma Cafe has everything from Broiled Scampi to Frog Legs to Broiled Lobster Tails.

There is no better way to top off a Roma Cafe feast than with a wonderfully delicious dessert that Janet

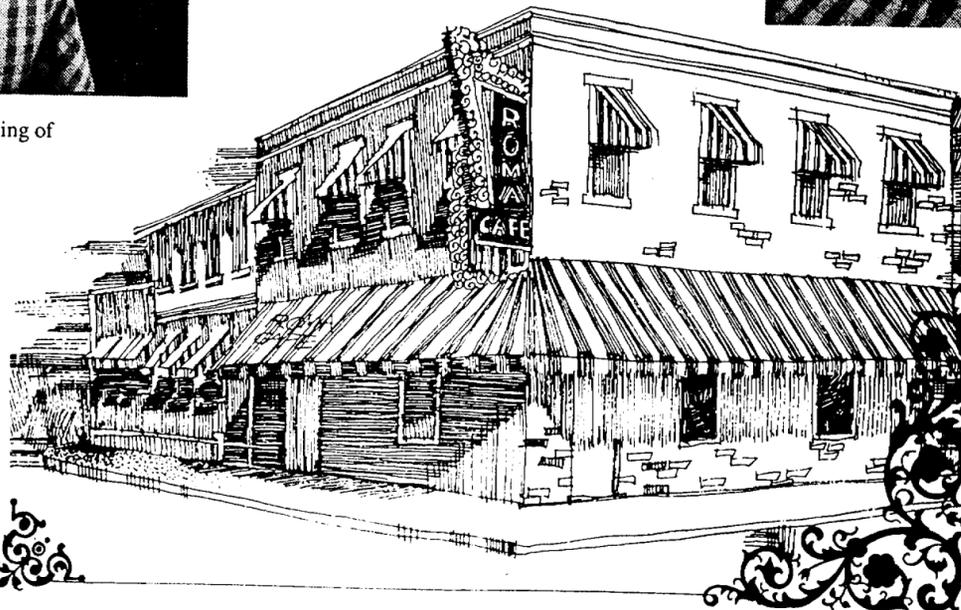

As you are presented the extensive menu and gaze upon the many wonderful Italian specialties, the fragrant aroma of sauteed garlic wafts from the kitchen area. You wonder what dish is being prepared and try to identify it on the menu because anything that smells that good must be the entree selection you decide upon.

But first, let's try some appetizers. Escargots a la Bourguignonne, Oysters Rockefeller or Casino, Prosciutto with Melon are just a few that are available. Shrimp cocktail and Oysters on the Halfshell are contenders to be decided upon too. That fragrance from the kitchen wants to make you order them all.

Yes, history is an important part in the making of a landmark, but in the restaurant business, you cannot demonstrate a 102 year history unless you serve excellent cuisine. And, if cuisine is the measure of longevity, then the Roma Cafe will certainly be around for at least another 100 years.

When you settle in at the Roma Cafe for a relaxing lunch or dinner, you will realize the old world charm that has made this place famous. There is no neon, art deco glitz - no marble walls that resemble museums. What you will find at Roma Cafe is a real warmth of red and white checkered table cloths, oil paintings, and elegant waiters that know exactly what they are and her father brought back from Rome. Tiramisu (which means "pick me up") absolutely melts in your mouth. Made with a base of espresso and liqueur cream, this phenomenal dish is a must!

There is an art to Italian fine dining and the Sossi family have preserved this priceless masterpiece called the Roma Cafe in the Old World tradition. Janet's ancestors surely look down from the heavens and smile at family and friends for preserving their history by creating a landmark known for 100 years of dining excellence. We understand that Janet has a young child... more than likely the Roma Cafe will still be a landmark 100 years from now. It's tradition!

Two Pointers square off in Wayne County commissioner race

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Two Grosse Pointe residents will square off in the race for the vacant 1st District seat on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

George Fitzgerald, 33, president of The Fitzgerald Co., an investment firm, is the Democratic contender. Andrew Richner, an attorney and Grosse Pointe Park councilman, is the Republican nominee.

Despite their political affiliations, both say they are independent and would be able to work with the whole board of trustees.

"I'm not beholden to anyone except for the residents of the 1st District," Fitzgerald said. "But as a Grosse Pointe Democrat I can work with the board of commissioners to provide the best service for the Grosse Pointes and the rest of the 1st District."

"My party affiliation is irrelevant," Richner said. "I believe we should do away with party politics at the county level. I will work with the independents on the board for what is best for the county and my district."

The candidates agree that Detroit City Airport expansion should be resisted, taxes should be lower and the Pointes should receive more services from Wayne County.

The candidates disagree on where Fitzgerald lives to whether Richner has a conflict of interest in running for a county post.

Fitzgerald has been endorsed by nearly all local law enforcement organizations including the Wayne County Sheriff's Department and the Detroit Police Officer's Association. Richner has been endorsed by the mayors of all five Pointes.

Richner said his first action, if elected, would be to hire an independent auditor to study the county's finances. He said he would also work to eliminate commission perks and privileges, including cars and staff, and make the board more responsible to the people.

He would also appoint a committee composed of representatives from labor, business and government to study possible privatization of various county programs.

Fitzgerald said he would work to get a better accounting of all county money and services and would offer incentives to businesses which move into the county.

"We have to build and improve our industrial base," he said. "We have to bring the jobs back."

The candidates agree on how they would vote on the four county ballot proposals:

- They say Proposal 1, which restructures the county to give the board of commissioners more power, should be defeated.

- Proposal 2, which would refund taxes to the communities that were collected for a youth home that was never built receives a no vote from both potential commissioners. The two say they would rather see the money go directly back to the taxpayers.

- The third proposal asks for one-tenth of a mill for 10 years to support health and mental health services. Richner and Fitzgerald would vote no because they believe the county has enough funds, it just needs to use them better.

- On the final proposal which calls for 1 mill for three years to support Wayne County Community College, they said they'd vote no because the school still has to prove it is fiscally responsible.

But there are sharp personal differences.

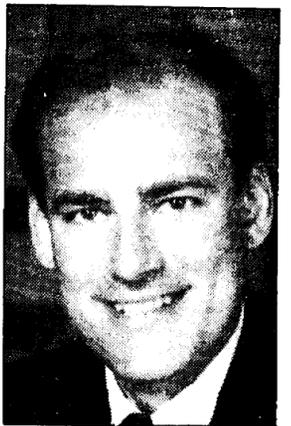

Richner has accused Fitzgerald of not having a primary residence in Wayne County, let alone in the district. Fitzgerald said he owns property in Macomb County, but his primary residence is in Grosse Pointe Shores.

Fitzgerald said Richner has a conflict of interest in running for the board because the law firm at which he is employed has performed work for Wayne County.

Richner said that as an employee he doesn't decide who the firm's clients are and he doubted the veracity of checks from Wayne County to the firm of Pepper, Hamilton & Sheetz, the law firm where Richner is employed.

George Fitzgerald

Furthermore, Richner said he was not yet working at the firm when the work for the county was done.

Both candidates say the other's charges are scurrilous and detract from the importance of the real issues.

"I think as an independent, moderate businessman who happens to be a Democrat, I can best represent our district," Fitzgerald said.

"I have new ideas and a commitment to the community that will help bring changes to county government," Richner said.

Hartmann challenges Bryant for seat in state House

William Bryant

Elaine Hartmann

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Who will represent the residents of the five Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods, and a small section of Detroit in the Michigan House of Representatives over the next two years?

Voters in the 1st District will decide Nov. 3. They must choose between incumbent William Bryant, and Democratic candidate Elaine Hartmann.

They recently answered questions about several issues, including the four state proposals that will be on the ballot, Proposals A, B, C, and D.

Proposal A would limit the amount by which an assessment on a home could go up each year to 5 percent or the rate of inflation, whichever is less, not counting new construction. When the property is sold, the assessment would be updated to reflect 50 percent of the home's current value.

Proposal B would limit the number of terms politicians can serve in state and federal elected offices. State representatives would only be allowed to serve three two-year terms under this proposal.

Proposal C, backed by Governor John Engler and also known as "Cut and Cap," would cut school operating property taxes 30 percent over three years, and would limit property assessment increases to 3 percent a year for both homes and businesses. When the property is sold, its assessment would be reset at 50 percent of its market value.

Also under Proposal C, the state must make up for the revenues school districts will be losing under the plan, but it does not say where the state will get the money to meet that requirement.

Proposal D is the Automobile Club of Michigan's proposal to cut auto insurance rates by limiting medical benefits.

William Bryant

Experience: Bryant has served 11 terms (22 years) in the Michigan House of Representatives. He is the ranking minority member on the House education committee and is vice chair of the House taxation committee. He formerly served on the House civil rights and urban affairs committees.

Bryant ran unopposed in the Aug. 4 Republican primary and received 4,905 votes.

He said House minority leader Paul Hillemonds has asked him to run for speaker pro tem — assuming that Bryant retains his seat and that the GOP gains control of the majority of seats in the House.

However, Bryant said he would prefer to be chair of either the taxation committee or education committee.

State Rep.

Background: Bryant, 54, and his wife, Lois, live in Grosse Pointe Farms. They have two children, Jennifer, 25, who is married, and Andy, 22, who is single and a student at the University of Southern California.

Bryant graduated from Princeton University with a bachelor's degree in geology, and received his law degree from the U-M Law School.

He has written a book titled "Quantum Politics," which is scheduled to be published by Jan. 1, he said.

"It's about how we can and need to be conducting ourselves and our political processes in the quantum physics model of the universe, and not the Newtonian model of the universe," he said.

In the Newtonian model, everything in the universe is separate, he said. In quantum physics, everything is connected.

"When you understand that everything is related, you have to be much more careful about what you change and don't change," he said.

Why running: He gave five reasons.

To get more state and federal funding for the school systems; to ensure that the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods aren't separated under a reapportionment plan that is still being considered by a three-member U.S. District Court panel; because he feels the Democrats would have a better chance of winning if he did not run; because he thinks the Republicans have a better chance than ever of winning the majority of seats in the state House and he would like to be part of the majority for a change; and because the issues still interest him.

Elaine Hartmann

Experience: Hartmann has never before sought or held elected public office.

She faced another newcomer, Deanna Maher Scallen, in the Aug. 4 Democratic primary and won by a vote of 3,777 to 2,652.

She was appointed to and has served on several commissions in Grosse Pointe Farms, including the planning commission, historical preservation commission and traffic study commission.

Background: Hartmann, who declined to give her age, lives in Grosse Pointe Farms with her husband, Joseph. Their daughter, Amy, is married and is an assistant U.S. district attorney in the Detroit drug unit.

A retired teacher (she taught elementary education and art for 34 years in Detroit, Ferndale and Hawaii), Hartmann owns an interior design company.

She formed the non-profit group of investors that saved the Cadieux Farmhouse from demolition last year.

Located on Jefferson at Cadieux in Grosse Pointe City, it is one of the few remaining farmhouses that were built by French settlers in the Pointes.

A developer wanted to demolish the structure, but Hartmann's group bought it, renovated it, and built an addition off the back. After several months of searching for a buyer, the group sold the house last week. The new homeowner promised to seek a historic designation for the house from the state, Hartmann said.

"We lost about $21,000 on the deal," she said. "But we're still glad we did it for the sake of preservation."

She is a member of the Michigan Women's Campaign Fund, the Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe and the Grosse Pointe Democratic Club, and raises funds for Most Holy Trinity Church in Corktown.

Why running? She said she has been frustrated by the inability of the state Legislature — and more specifically, Bryant — to deal with many issues, including school aid and auto insurance reform.

"I think the Legislature needs people with open minds and new perspective in order to get something done," she said.

Where they stand . . .

On school finance and taxes:

Hartmann said the state should pay 50 percent of the cost of operating schools as it did in the 1970s. Currently, it pays about 32 percent, she said. The state can increase the level of funding by keeping its promise to use profits from the state lottery on education, she said.

If need be, she said, the Legislature can increase the state income tax and sales tax, which she says are too low when compared with other states.

To provide relief to homeowners, especially senior citizens, she said she would raise the ceiling on the homestead income tax deduction.

The Legislature shouldn't increase property taxes because they are already too high, she said.

She said she is against proposals A and C, and that she favors a proposal that is currently being discussed in the state Legislature — the Olmstead-Kearny (OK) proposal.

The OK plan would prohibit a school district from levying more than 30 mills, and would not require out-of-formula school districts like Grosse Pointe to share their funds with other districts, she said.

Bryant said he and the Republican caucus are working on a proposal to wipe out all school operating property taxes and replace them with an income tax that would be determined and levied by each school district in the state.

"This proposal doesn't touch bonded millages — which are used to pay for brick and mortar structures — because they are set far into the future and are needed to pay off long-term debt," he said.

The state would increase the per-pupil aid it gives school districts under the proposal, he said.

If a school district decided to levy an income tax that brings in more than twice the amount of money the state gives the district, then the school district must share part of the extra proceeds with the state, he said.

Also, he said he wants to put "relative income compared to state income" into the equation that determines whether or not a school is "in-formula" or "out-of-formula," to help people who have high property values but low incomes.

He said he wants to raise the homestead income tax deduction from $1,200 to $2,500, and that he is against proposals A and C.

Bryant also said that the Michigan Education Association (MEA) should come up with a state-wide salary schedule for educators, that teachers should not be allowed to strike, that the teachers and school districts in Michigan need to agree to binding arbitration, and that when drafting settlements arbitrators should only be allowed to consider the amount of money the school district has available, and not the money it might have available if a future millage passes.

On Proposal B:

Both Hartmann and Bryant are against it.

"I can't understand why people can't just vote against someone if they don't want him," Hartmann said.

She also said Michigan will be at a disadvantage in Congress if Proposal B passes because senators and representatives from states that do not impose limitations will be able to gain more seniority and thus more power than members from Michigan.

"And," she said, "it limits your choice of candidates. I think we should concentrate on registering people to vote, and that we should forget about term limits."

Bryant said that the term limits under Proposal C are "way too quick for representatives on the state level who are usually most productive in their fourth through seventh terms."

He said he understands the evil of any entrenched majority, but that it's good to have members who have seen issues "come down the pike before are able to handle them objectively and not emotionally."

On Proposal D:

Bryant is for it; Hartmann is against it.

Vincent challenges Collins in U.S. 15th District

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

In her first bid for re-election, U.S. Rep. Barbara-Rose Collins, a Democrat, is being challenged by Republican candidate Dr. Charles Vincent.

Collins represents the 15th Congressional District, which comprises Grosse Pointe Farms, Grosse Pointe City, Grosse Pointe Park, River Rouge, Ecorse, and a large part of Detroit, stretching from Greenfield to I-94 and along Lyndon, Gratiot and Kelly to the Detroit River and Lake St. Clair.

The district was reorganized this year due to population changes as recorded by the 1990 U.S. Census. The 15th District consists of parts of the old 1st, 14th and 13th districts.

Barbara-Rose Collins

Experience: A U.S. congresswoman for two years, Collins served on the Detroit City Council from 1982-91, in the state House of Representatives from 1975-81, and on the Detroit school board from 1970-73. She was challenged by Tom Barrow in the Aug. 4 Democratic primary and won by a vote of 37,472 to 17,774.

However, in the Grosse Pointes (Farms, City and Park), Barrow trounced Collins by a vote of 2,375 to 275.

Collins was interviewed by the Grosse Pointe News in July (the story appeared July 30) for the primary, but an aide said she was too busy to be interviewed at the newspaper office in October on questions relating to the general election.

Background: A resident of Detroit, Collins, 53, attended Wayne State University, where she studied political science and anthropology. She is a widow and has a son, daughter and grandchildren.

Dr. Charles Vincent

Background: A resident of Detroit, Vincent, 59, is chief of OBGYN at Detroit Riverview Hospital and within the last year he has opened clinics on the lower east side of Detroit to help combat Wayne County's high infant mortality rate.

He said in the United States, nine babies out of every 10,000 who are born die before their first birthday.

In Michigan, the figure per 10,000 is 10.6, and in the 15th District, it is 33.

"That's higher than many third world countries," he said.

One of his clinics is located on Kercheval at Alter Road in Detroit.

His wife Martha is director of volunteers at Harper Hospital. Their daughter Heather is a producer for ABC News, and their son, Charles II, is an ear, nose and throat specialist in San Francisco. Both are graduates of University Liggett School.

Born in Oklahoma, Vincent received his bachelor of science degree in chemistry from Michigan State University in 1954, and his medical degree from Wayne State University in 1958.

He is an associate professor of OBGYN in the Wayne State School of Medicine, and was associate dean for 17 years.

Vincent was chief of OBGYN at Detroit Receiving Hospital for 20 years and chief of gynecology at Hutzel Hospital for 17 years.

Experience: He received 2,919 votes in the Aug. 4 Democratic primary, defeating Timothy Theodore, who received 777 votes, and John W. Savage II, who received 702 votes.

Vincent was also the top vote-getter in the Grosse Pointes. His total in Grosse Pointe City, Farms and Park came to 1,773 votes, compared to 485 for Theodore and 347 for Savage.

Vincent switched from the Democratic to the Republican party this year, but said he views himself as an independent.

In 1980, he was selected by the Democratic party to run for the Michigan State University board of trustees and lost to a Republican.

In 1990, he ran for Congress, and again lost to a Republican.

Appointed by Gov. William Milliken and later Gov. James Blanchard, he served eight years on the Michigan State Board of Medicine, five years as chair.

He served seven years on the state attorney discipline board, having been appointed by the

State Rep.

On the economy and unemployment:

Bryant said the United States is caught up in a global-wide recession, and that American workers can improve their situation by continuing their education.

Hartmann said the state and nation can create jobs by improving their transportation systems and education.

On affirmative action:

Both candidates said they favor affirmative action programs but are against quotas.

Bryant, however, makes an exception when it comes to quotas for police officers and businesswomen.

"It's untenable to have a white army (of police) occupying a black city," he said. "... The other place it's necessary is in the corporate world, where people have discriminated against on the basis of gender."

Hartmann said she believes in lessening the tension between the races by providing everyone with equal access to education and jobs.

On Detroit/suburban relations:

Bryant said, "There needs to be ongoing, honest communication with the city and the suburbs, but it's hard to know the degree to which that is possible as long as Coleman Young is the mayor. He seems to thrive on the tension, but then some of the suburban leaders are the same way."

Hartmann said, "I think the city and the suburbs have to get together to improve Detroit. We can't isolate ourselves in the suburbs, and we need a mayor of Detroit who is willing to work with the suburbs. You can't build a wall around Grosse Pointe."

On the environment:

Bryant said that as a former geology student, he is constantly "throwing bills in the hopper" to improve the environment, and that sometimes his ideas clash with those of President Bush.

For example, he said he differs with the president when it comes to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

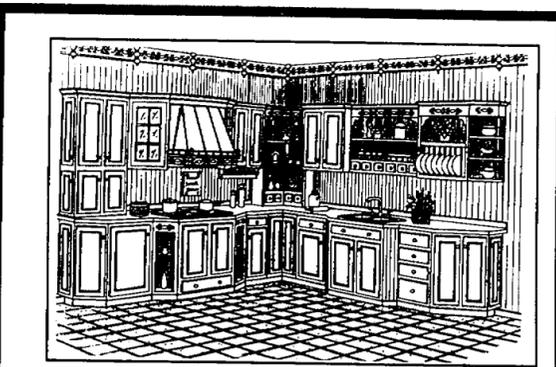

"There's a provision in GATT that would prevent a nation or a sub-nation from having 'overly strict' laws, which says to Costa Rica, for example - 'you can't protect the hardwoods in your rainforests, because it would raise the price of hardwoods on the open market.' That to me is ridiculous," Bryant said.

Hartmann said she favors Sen. Al Gore's plan for the environment, which includes a plan to increase the car mileage to 45 miles per gallon, and that the Legislature needs to improve the quality of and preserve the Great Lakes and Lake St. Clair.

On abortion:

Bryant said he is neither pro-choice nor pro-life, but somewhere in the middle. Hartmann said she is pro-choice.

HEALTHWATCH

This year, 500,000 kids will learn about bike safety the hard way.

The hard facts

Every year, scores of children are treated for serious head injuries caused by bike accidents. Even a simple fall can result in a concussion, and possibly brain damage.

The importance of bike helmets

A well-made bicycle helmet provides invaluable protection. Encourage your child to use one by wearing one yourself. Kneepads, elbow pads and tough jeans also help absorb impact.

No monkey business

Stress the importance of bike safety to your child. No curb jumping and no friends on the handlebars. Kids should walk their bikes across intersections. And they should stay off oversized bikes; they're a common cause of accidents.

A final note

state Supreme Court, and served for five years as a commissioner of health for Detroit.

He has served on the board of trustees of New Detroit and chaired its youth and substance abuse committees.

A former president of the Wayne County Medical Society, he is a member of the board of trustees of the Michigan State Medical Society and the Michigan delegation to the American Medical Association.

Why running: "I know our district does not have any representation in Congress," he said. "Outsiders are hoping we re-elect her (Collins) because that way they'll have no competition. She doesn't know what she's doing."

Last spring, he said he approached the Democratic leadership and asked if they would support him in a second bid for Congress.

He said the party declined to support him after he said that if elected, he would not let his votes be dictated by contributors.

Three days later, he said, the vice president of the national Republican Party asked him to run for Congress as a Republican.

"I told him that some of my views differ from the national Republican party's, and he said, 'We want you anyway,'" Vincent said.

Vincent said he was still paying off the $60,000 debt he piled up during his last bid for office, and that he would not run without financial assistance from the Republican Party.

So far he has received $11,000 from the state and national GOP combined, far short of the amount he expected, he said.

Why didn't he back out when it became evident the party funding wasn't there?

"Because I had already declared my candidacy," he said.

He received $5,000 from the American Medical Political Action Committee to run in the Aug. 4 primary and $5,000 to run in the general election Nov. 3.

He has held various fundraisers — including 15 "sip and chats" at the homes of supporters in the Grosse Pointes. Altogether, he has raised about $100,000 for his campaign, he said.

Where Vincent stands on . . .

County proposals: He supports the county proposal to levy a 1-mill tax to fund Wayne County Community College, and supports the proposal to levy a half-mill tax to fund mental health programs.

Education: He wants to lower the number of children in elementary classrooms to 15, make available more federal loans for college students, and provide lower interest rates on those loans or some other type of credit to students who agree to perform a needed community service over a certain length of time.

Taxes: He said his goal is to save taxpayers money by cutting out waste in federal government. To pay for school reform, he said he would increase the tax on cigarettes and alcohol, and redirect money that is currently being used on the military to the nation's schools and other domestic programs.

Vincent said he likes independent presidential candidate

H. Ross Perot's idea of raising the tax on gasoline 10 cents a year over the next five years.

"We have to change people's ideas through leadership," he said. "Currently, for every 85 cents this country is taking in, it's spending a dollar. You don't have to be a genius to realize we can't keep doing that."

He said he's in favor of a balanced budget amendment.

Crime: "You know, 85 percent of people in prison haven't finished high school," he said. "We could help solve our crime problem by convincing children to stay in school, but they won't stay in school if they don't want to. How simple it would be to make kids enjoy going to school."

Also, he said he supports the Brady bill, which would provide a waiting period for gun purchases.

Health care: "There is a tremendous amount of waste in health care, and we need someone who knows where that

STATE PROPOSALS ON BALLOT

Proposal A - A proposal to limit annual increases in homestead property tax assessments and provide separate tax limitations for different property classifications. The proposed constitutional amendment would: 1. Limit for each homestead property (excluding new construction) the annual assessment increase to 5% or the rate of inflation, whichever is less, until the property is sold. Whenever property is sold, adjustment assessments according to current market value of property. 2. Create separate millage for determining the maximum revenue increase allowable for two classes of property: residential/agricultural and all other property classifications. 3. Permit the use of the combined inflation rate for 1992 and 1993 to calculate millage rollbacks for determining the maximum property tax revenue increase allowance in 1993. Should this proposal be adopted?

Proposal B - A proposal to restrict/limit the number of times a person can be elected to Congressional, State Executive and State Legislative offices. The proposed constitutional amendment would: Restrict the number of times a person could be elected to certain offices as described below: 1. U.S. Senator: two times in any 24 year period. 2. U.S. Representative: three times in any 12 year period. 3. Governor, Lt. Governor, Secretary of State or Attorney General: two times per office. 4. State Senator: two times. 5. State Representative: three times. Office terms beginning on or after January 1, 1993 would count toward the term restrictions. A person appointed or elected to an office vacancy for more than 1/2 of a term would be considered elected once in that office. Should this proposal be adopted?

Proposal C - A proposal to exempt property from a portion of school operating property taxes and limit annual increases in all property tax assessments. The proposed constitutional amendment would: 1. Exempt property from the following proportion of school operating taxes: 10% in 1993; 15% in 1994; 20% in 1995; 25% in 1996; and 30% in following years. 2. Require the State to reimburse school districts for the property tax described in paragraph (1) above, up to the millage rate levied in 1991. 3. Limit for each parcel of property (excluding new construction) the annual assessment increase to 3% or the rate of inflation, whichever is less, until the property is sold. Whenever property is sold, adjustment assessment according to current market value of property. Should this proposal be adopted?

Proposal D - A proposed legislative amendment would: 1. Reduce auto insurance rates by 20% (average) for policyholders accepting $250,000 in personal injury protection. Extra coverage made available at added cost. 2. Require profit refunds when underwriting profits exceed 5%. 3. Permit Insurance Commissioner to waive company's obligation to reduce rates or refund profits if needed to assure fair rate of return. 4. Allow policyholders to waive residual liability insurance. 5. Limit fees paid to health care providers. 6. Allow rate reduction for five consecutive claim free years. 7. Require coordination of benefits with health insurance. 8. Limit right to sue by setting higher standards for injuries and preventing drivers over 50% at fault from collecting damages. Should this proposal be adopted?

COUNTY PROPOSALS ON BALLOT

Proposal #1 - Shall Section 4.113 of the Wayne County Charter be amended to assure a County Commission review and approval of the reorganization plan at least once each four years, by clarifying that a plan expires 180 days after the start of each term of the CEO, or sooner if a new plan is adopted?

Proposal #2 - Shall the authority granted to the Wayne County Commission to levy one-tenth mill for a Model Youth Services System until 1997, be changed to allow that all funds not expended within one year after collection for that purpose be instead returned by grant to municipalities in proportion to the amounts collected from each municipality, for the purpose of providing local youth programs?

Proposal #3 - Shall the County of Wayne be authorized to levy an additional tax of one-half mill (50 cents per thousand dollars of State Equalized Valuation) on the taxable property within the County of Wayne for ten years from 1992 to 2001, for the exclusive purpose of supporting health services and mental health services to fulfill the charter mandate in Section 3.117 to assure an adequate level of physical and mental health services for the residents of the county?

Natural Law candidate Meade runs for Congress in 15th district

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Jane Meade, who is running for Congress on the Natural Law ticket, admits that her party suffers from a recognition problem, but she believes it is the party of the future.

The Natural Law Party was formed on April 20 in Fairfield, Iowa, to "bring the light of science into politics," according to a pamphlet put out by the party.

"Education is what it all boils right down to," said Meade, of Grosse Pointe Farms, who is taking on Republican Dr. Charlie Vincent and incumbent Democratic Rep. Barbara-Rose Collins in the 15th Congressional District. "We all want a healthy and prosperous America. To me, the Natural Law Party offers hope for a better way of achieving all our goals."

The party has a presidential ticket — Dr. John Hagelin, a quantum physicist, and Dr. Mike Tompkins — on the ballot in 31 states and boasts more than 100 other candidates, including seven in Michigan.

"What the party says just makes sense," Meade said. "Education is the key. The solutions to the problems exist, but they have been ignored."

The Natural Law Party platform states that it could cut the nation's $815 billion health bill in half, trim $32 billion from the prisons, law enforcement and the courts, and eliminate inefficiency and waste, saving another $140 billion.

All these items could be taken care of with better education, Meade said.

"For example, adult-onset diabetes is totally preventable, yet we spend millions of dollars a year in diagnosis and treatment instead of educating people that it is preventable," she said.

The party has taken positions on issues that it believes offer something for everyone from the far right to the far left, Meade said.

Among those positions are elimination of political action committees, restricting lobbying and giving voters the exclusive right to raise salaries of elected officials. The party also would shorten the campaign season to four months — two months before the primary and two months before the general election.

The party says it would reduce crime through education, urban revitalization and reduction of societal stress.

The party would create healthier, better educated citizens who would, therefore, need less health care, Meade said, adding that one way to reduce stress and create healthier citizens would be to promote the use of transcendental meditation.

"Relaxation techniques are very important in staying healthy," Meade said. "They've done studies on transcendental meditation in prison and found that it reduces behavioral problems and recidivism."

Hagelin's wife is a teacher of transcendental meditation.

tion to help eliminate the need for abortions, but believes the decision to terminate a pregnancy should be made by the woman. But it also believes government should not pay for the operation, arguing that private charitable organizations could fund abortions.

Lowering taxes to create a better business climate is also a main priority of the party.

If elected, Hagelin would create a multi-party Cabinet, an idea adopted later by Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton.

Meade said she decided to run because she has always wanted to be part of the solution. She said she's always believed in most of what the party says, and adds, "When the pupil is ready, the teacher appears."

She is a divorced mother of four adult children, and has been active in numerous volunteer activities. She was a founding member of Detroiters at Heart, which promotes Detroit in the suburbs. She is a trustee of the Michigan Cancer Foundation, board member of the Michigan Historical Museum Foundation; the Grosse Pointe Historical Society; and the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

She is currently president of the Credit Life Insurance Agency.

"I think my life experiences make a good background to serve in office," she said. "I am not doing this for me. I'm doing it to improve the quality of life for all people."

But what are the odds of a Natural Law victory?

"I'm optimistic," she said. "Especially on a local level. If it's meant to be, I'll be elected."

waste is," Vincent said.

He said he is against socialized medicine, which Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton has proposed and which Canadians have.

"It hasn't worked in any country in the world," he said, noting that in Canada, health care is rationed to each region based on its population. For example, he said, there is one CAT SCAN machine in Canada for every 500,000 people. Patients are placed on a list and usually have to wait two to three weeks before it's their turn to be scanned, he said.

"If we go with a socialized system, it will save us money, but we will have a few more deaths," he said.

He says a lot of waste could be cut out of the present health care system through malpractice reform.

He said doctors often perform tests on patients that aren't really necessary because they are afraid if they don't use every test that could be remotely applicable in a patient's case, the patient may later sue them for malpractice.

Vincent said he would not touch Medicare, nor would he tamper with company-sponsored insurance programs. He said he would do away with Medicaid and replace it with a basic health care package for every American who has no other insurance.

That package would include an annual physical exam, the right to basic laboratory studies, and health care education, so that people have a better idea of what does and does not require a doctor's care, he said.

Jobs: "I think people need to be reasonable with their expectations about how much they can make without being skilled," he said.

The economy: He said the federal government can help Michigan's economy by implementing enterprise zones, by going slowly on any additional mileage requirements for vehicles, and by providing more funds for the state's schools.

He said he favors the nation's existing foreign trade agreements and supports President Bush's stance on keeping the tax on capital gains low.

"As a businessman, I know that my business grows when I reinvest in my business," Vincent said. "The only way I can do that is if I pay less in taxes. People who make more than $200,000 a year create jobs and are not dumb people. If you impose a $200,000 limit (Clinton has proposed taxing people who make over $200,000 a year more), they will find a way to make $190,000 a year."

The environment: "Environmental problems create health problems," he said, "but they can't come before the economics of this country. We need environmental standards, but we don't want to limit ourselves so much that we're hurt by it."

Abortion: He said he is pro-choice.

If a woman does not want a baby and can't get a legal abortion, he said, she will get an illegal abortion, try to abort the baby herself, or have the child and then neglect and abuse it.

He said he has seen it all "time and time again" at the hospitals and clinics where he has worked.

"The day I decide I will take care of every baby that isn't wanted, I will change my mind about abortion," Vincent said. "But until that time, I don't think it's fair for me to make someone not have an abortion. There's a lot of ways of killing a person. You can kill a person before they're born, or after they've been born and been made to suffer."

His chances: "I think I will do extremely well in the Pointes and everywhere there are thinking people," Vincent said.

Incumbent Conyers challenged in 14th District Congressional race

By Shirely A. McShane
Staff Writer

Fourteen-term incumbent John Conyers will face Republican candidate John Gordon in the Nov. 3 race for the 14th U.S. Congressional District seat.

The newly mapped district now covers Grosse Pointe Woods, Grosse Pointe Shores, Harper Woods, Highland Park, part of Dearborn Heights and part of Detroit.

Gordon did not respond to requests by the Grosse Pointe News for a candidate interview.

Democrat Conyers, 63, is Chairman of the House government operations committee — an oversight committee that makes sure the federal government is enforcing the laws and looks out for fraud, abuse and waste.

He was born in Detroit, graduated from Northwestern High School and served in the U.S. Army from 1950-53, where he attained the rank of second lieutenant. He served one year in Korea.

His 27-year political career began when he was attending officer candidate school at Fort Belvoir in Virginia. Conyers said he would often sit in on congressional sessions. U.S. Rep. John Dingell's father was his representative at the time, Conyers said, so he made it a point to meet him. As his interest in government grew, Conyers eventually was asked to work for Dingell.

Recently graduated from the Wayne University school of law in 1958, Conyers set up practice down the street from Dingell's office. A short time later, Conyers was appointed by the governor as a referee in the Michigan Workman's Compensation Department, requiring him to leave his practice. He resigned his position as workman's compensation referee to run for Congress in 1965.

Here are his views on a variety of local, state and national issues:

STATE AND LOCAL BALLOT ISSUES: Conyers firmly believes that state ballot Proposal B, which would restrict legislative terms in office, is unfair and will not solve the problem of gridlock in government.

"(After the election) there will be a lot of new faces in the legislature; the largest number of new faces going into Congress in the 20th century," he said. "Gridlock does not turn on senior members, it turns on the relationship between Congress and the executive."

Conyers suggested changes

Personalize your phone number

Michigan Bell's new custom number service lets customers personalize their telephone numbers much as they do when they buy vanity license plates for their cars.

A customer establishing service for the first time ordinarily is assigned a phone number that's randomly drawn from the company database. With the introduction of Michigan Bell Custom Number Service, businesses and residence customers now may request specific customized telephone numbers for a one-time charge of $38.

"Customers have told us they want more control over their numbers," said Diane Andriotakis, Michigan Bell public relations director. "Now they are limited only by their imaginations — and the availability of the number they want."

Subscribers to Custom Number Service will be able to pick any telephone number — not currently in use — from the bank of numbers normally assigned in their area, Andriotakis said.

"With Custom Number Service, people can tell friends to call them at 555-LISA or 555-CALL or 555-6000," she said. "The possibilities are amazing."

While a Custom Number might spell a person's name (555-MIKE) or a cute acronym (555-PALS), only a numerical listing will appear in phone directories.

In the past the company has helped customers obtain such numbers on an informal basis — a practice Andriotakis called "costly and time-consuming."

be made to the executive branch of government rather than the 535 Congress members.

Term limitation, in effect, will reduce Michigan's influence in Congress, he said.

"The reason you stay in Congress is you end up being chairman if you are of the right party," he said.

Conyers opposes all four state ballot proposals and predicted all but Proposal B would probably be rejected by the voters.

Proposal D, which promises to reduce auto insurance premiums by an average of 20 percent by cutting medical liability, is a "scam," Conyers said.

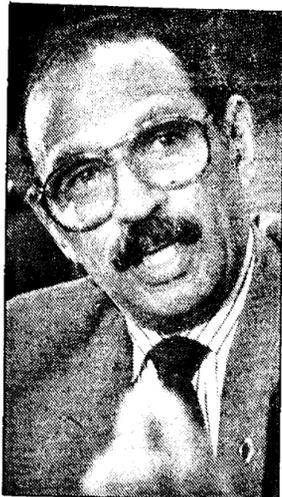

He is also against proposals A and C, which would limit property taxes.

"The two tax proposals are so confusing. Not many voters really exercise that much care after they vote the party ticket and they've found a couple of judges whose names they know," he said. "By the time they get to the propositions they are glazed over."

At press time, Conyers said he strongly supported the Wayne County Community College millage initiative but did not yet have a position on other Wayne County ballot questions.

14TH DISTRICT ISSUES: Conyers said his new district faces many complex challenges, including a fading industrial base, crumbling infrastructure and joblessness.

"I'm trying to knock down the walls and get people in the city and in the suburbs to understand how we're really in this thing together," he said. "If we don't create more jobs, if we don't get our industrial base back and get the economy moving, Grosse Pointe is going to get hit — in a different way and in a lesser magnitude — like Detroit. It's not like we're two independent principalities operating and we're accidentally next to each other."

His solutions include redeveloping the area's industrial base. Small businesses need to be able to gain entry in the economy, he said. He said unemployment is as high as 60 percent in some census tracts in his district.

"How can you talk about family values when the wage earner doesn't have a job? Or when economic circumstances mess up the family?" he asked.

Improvements to the district's infrastructure might be realized with the help of a $151 billion surface transportation bill passed in Congress this year, he said.

The money (dollar amounts funneled to Michigan have yet to be determined) will be allocated over a five-year period to rebuild bridges, highways, roads and sewers and could create an estimated 10,000 jobs for every billion dollars.

THE NATIONAL DEBT: Conyers said there are two philosophies for reducing the nation's $4.1 trillion national debt: cut and reduce or spend the country's way out of debt.

He said government has to begin rebuilding America's cities, which were once the repository of all that was good about people living together and which now have become the repository of all that is bad about people living together. He said he supported the Local Partnership Act, a bill introduced earlier this year that never made it out of a House committee. A similar measure failed in the Senate, as well, he said.

The proposed legislation would have channeled federal dollars to local government based on population, unemployment and tax effort.

He said building a sound economy begins with a Congress and executive that can work together to reduce the trade imbalance, vote on a balanced budget and be careful approving appropriation bills.

He said an all-too-common paradox is the Congress member who will vote in favor of a budget-balancing bill then turn around and approve appropriation bills.

THE ENVIRONMENT: Conyers said a balance must be struck between economic development and protecting the environment. He didn't offer any solutions, but said one cannot be sacrificed for the other.

"It's a very big problem that has to be approached by people who are sensitive to this balance," he said. "The present administration has been insensitive to this balance."

Conyers said he sits on a committee that has been pushing to elevate the Environmental Protection Agency to a Cabinet department.

"When we wrote the bill two years ago it passed by a majority in the House, but the administration wouldn't buy it," he said. "The Senate never took it up because the administration was opposed to it."

Conyers said if he is re-elected he will begin to pursue the matter again.

HEALTH CARE: Reforming the nation's health care system is one of Conyers' foremost platform issues, he said.

Currently he is working on House Bill 5500, for universal health care coverage. While the bill is in committee, Conyers said he and other members plan to visit England and Germany to study other national health care systems.

With health care administrative costs rising 13 percent annually, and everyone from laborers to doctors living without health insurance, Conyers believes everyone should have health insurance and not have to rely on whether their employer is generous enough to offer a plan.

THIS SUMMER ALANA CAN BE LIKE ANY OTHER KID, AND FORGET HER HISTORY.

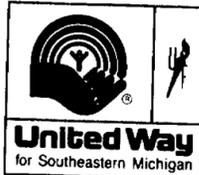

Alana is eight years old. For the last six years she has battled leukemia. That's six years of hospital visits and treatments twice a week. It's no way to spend a childhood.

But thanks to your donations to the United Way, agencies like the Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan can send kids like Alana to "Special Days" Camp. A place where Alana can enjoy carefree days of swimming, canoeing, and newfound friends.

The United Way supports 145 agencies. Nearly 90 cents of every dollar you contribute goes directly to work, since only 10.4 cents goes toward campaign and administrative costs. Your contributions help the homeless, and fight child abuse, right here in Wayne, Oakland, and Macomb counties. So please give to the United Way, and help kids like Alana leave their history in the past.

VOTE NOV. 3 Because it matters who's there!!!!

Paid for by Committee to Re-elect Bill Bryant State Representative, 331 Mt. Vernon, Grosse Pointe Farms, MI 48236

After the votes are cast: a look at the Electoral College

While many Americans may remember something about the Electoral College from their U.S. history classes, chances are good that most of us do not fully understand what this assembly is or what role it plays in electing the president and vice president of the United States.

So here's an Electoral College primer — a brief overview of what the Electoral College is, its origins and the controversial role it plays in modern politics.

• What is the Electoral College?

The Electoral College was established by Article II of the U.S. Constitution to provide the direct election of the president and vice president. The assembly is made up of "electors" from all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

• How many electors does each state get?

Each state is allotted a number of electors equal to the number of members in its congressional delegation, that is, the total of its U.S. House of Representatives members, plus its two U.S. senators. Although the District of Columbia has no vote in Congress, it receives three electors.

• What role do the electors play?

When voters go to the polls on Election Day, they are casting a vote for both a presidential candidate and a slate of electors paired with the candidate. These electors are chosen by the candidate's political party. The winning slate of electors meets on the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December to elect the president and vice president. Customarily, they meet in their state capitals, where each elector casts one vote for a presidential candidate and one vote for a vice-presidential candidate. The results then are sent to the president of the U.S. Senate.

• How are the votes counted and how many are needed to win?

By law, the votes are counted on Jan. 6 before a joint session of Congress. A majority of electoral votes is needed for a candidate to win. This year, if each state appoints the number of electors to which it is entitled, the total of electors will be 538. Therefore, 270 votes are needed to declare a victor. If the Electoral College fails to reach a majority, the House of Representatives elects the president, and the Senate selects the vice president.

• Are the electors required by law to vote for the presidential candidate who headed the slate on which they won?

Twenty-six states have no such requirement. Nineteen states and the District of Columbia state that electors are bound to vote for the candidates who head their slates, but do not have penalties for violators. Five states — New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Washington — have established penalties. Of the more than 16,000 electors who have been chosen since the first election, however, only eight have violated their pledges.

• Has a presidential candidate ever lost the popular vote in November and still won in the Electoral College?

Yes, three times. In 1824, Andrew Jackson received 37,000 more popular votes than his opponent, John Quincy Adams. However, neither candidate won a majority in the Electoral College, so the election was turned over to the House of Representatives, which selected Adams as president. In 1876, Democrat Samuel Tilden received 250,000 more popular votes than Republican Rutherford B. Hayes, but lost by one electoral vote. And in 1888, history repeated itself when Democrat Grover Cleveland lost to Republican Benjamin Harrison, despite having drawn 90,000 more popular votes than Harrison.

The Electoral College was created by the framers of the Constitution out of concern that the general populace of the fledgling nation could not be well-informed about the candidates, as well as to appease states' rights proponents who wanted state legislatures to choose the president.

As its function has evolved over time, the continued usefulness of the Electoral College has come into question. Critics of the system believe it is archaic and could create a crisis in public confidence in government by sending a popular-vote loser to the White House because he or she received the majority of electoral votes. "The Electoral College is an antidemocratic institution," said U.S. Sen. James Exon (D-Neb.) when, in 1988, he introduced a constitutional amendment to abolish it. "With its 'winner take all tradition,' votes for opposing candidates in each state are essentially eliminated from consideration."

Proponents of the system argue that the Electoral College has not "misfired" since 1888, and that its elimination would disrupt the federal system of checks and balances and separation of power. Responding to a proposal to abolish the Electoral College in 1979, U.S. Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) stated, "The question is whether we are going to retain federalism or not; it boils down to that."

Over the years, the debate has spawned more than 100 efforts by various members of Congress to revise or abolish the Electoral College. To date, none has passed, so it looks like this unique American institution is here to stay.

Letters Not another politician

To the Editor:
Another politician in the White House is not a national priority, and both candidates seem far too adept at "waffling" and weaving.

Ross Perot is a practical economist with a record of ability in fiscal management.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the City Council, meeting as a Board of Appeals under the provisions of Section 5-14-1 of the 1975 City Code will meet in the Council-Court Room of the Municipal Building, 20025 Mack Plaza, on November 2, 1992, at 7:30 p.m., to hear the appeal of Mr. & Mrs. Thomas Curcuri, 20714 Morningside Drive, who are appealing the denial of the Building Inspector to issue a building permit for construction of an addition to the residence at 20714 Morningside. The building permit was denied due to a deficiency in the required rear yard setback and such addition would also exceed the 35% maximum allowable lot coverage in residential districts as set forth in Section 5-4-3 (F) of the Zoning Ordinance of the City of Grosse Pointe Woods. A variance is therefore required. All interested parties are invited to attend.

Proposal B threatens everyone's rights, Milliken says

By William G. Milliken
Former Governor

In every American village, township and city, the first Tuesday in November is Election Day, when voters decide between competing political candidates and sometimes bring political careers to a screeching halt.

But in Michigan, there is more to this election than meets the eye. This year, in addition to choosing between dozens of new candidates vying for seats in the Legislature and the Congress, we are being asked in Proposal B to give up our most important power — the right to elect whomever we want.

Proposal B is Proposal "Bad" for Michigan. Essentially, promoted by a few special interests, it would take away from voters in our state the ability to drive government; it would put their rights on automatic pilot.

At a time when millions of newly freed men and women across the globe have at last gained the power to go to the polls to demand that their government stand and deliver, our own voters are being asked to sit and defer; to take the power to elect and remove public officials out of the voting booth and put it into the statute books.

Voters know what the organizers of term limits are hoping they'll forget: Elected positions in government in the United States don't belong to the occupant, they belong to the people. And right now, the American electorate is the envy of the world for its ability to use the tool of the ballot and decide which politicians to support and which to dump.

We don't usually think of an election as a process of hiring someone, but that's really what it is. We're hiring the people we think will best lead the fight for the changes we want, for our priorities, for jobs and education, health care and the environment. If they serve us well, we ought to be able to keep them on the job. We need to hire the best ones we can to fight the armies of unelected lobbyists, bureaucrats, activists and party bosses, the professionals with no term limits who roam the halls of government with their own special interests every day.

One of those special interests, a national organization funded by Oklahoma oilmen David and Charles Koch, has poured some $200,000 into the campaign committee that is trying to enact Proposal B. David Koch was on the Libertarian Party's 1980 ticket that called for eliminating Medicare and Social Security and abolishing child labor and minimum wage laws.

Fighting to keep the power of free elections is as old as the Constitution. Putting the power of term limits on the books instead of the ballot was debated and rejected by the Constitutional Convention more than 200 years ago.

Today, the wisdom of that decision to trust the people to change government is all around us. By the end of the 1980s, the Michigan House of Representatives had a turnover rate of 63 percent. Of the 38 members of the Michigan Senate in 1982, only 18 remained after the 1990 election, more than a 50 percent turnover. The defeat or retirement this year of more than a third of Michigan's members of Congress already proves that voters don't need a new state or federal law to make decisions for them about politicians. That's what Election Day — Term Limits Day — is all about.

The year 2000, little more than eight years away, is more than the beginning of a new century; it's also an anniversary. Two hundred years before, in 1800, Thomas Jefferson was elected our nation's third president. He was reluctant to run and had to be drafted by the Democratic Republican Party.

But that year he led a ticket that swept across the political landscape, driving the Federalists from power in both the House and Senate. No shortcuts, no gimmicks, no quick-fixes, just the power of the voters.

What a shame if we mark our turn in the history books by taking decisions about public office from the hands of the voters and turn them over to the pages of the calendar.

Cottage Hospital medical records department welcomes a new citizen

The Cottage Hospital medical records department was red, white and blue with pride on Oct. 9 as the staff welcomed a new U.S. citizen to their department.

Twenty-three-year-old Roland Del Rosario came to live in the City of Grosse Pointe from the Philippines with his mother, two brothers and one sister in 1985. He has worked at Cottage Hospital for the past three years, starting out in environmental services and now as a medical records clerk. His mother, Catalina, works in the Cottage operating room.

There were about 100 people participating in the swearing-in ceremony held in Detroit on Thursday, Oct. 8, said Roland Rosario. It was the final step in a two-year process, which included a lot of waiting for his application to be approved and processed and an oral examination. He was asked a variety of questions about United States history and government. But he had studied hard, and passed the exam with flying colors — red, white and blue.

He is a physical therapy student in night-school at Macomb Community College.

Chest pain: take it seriously

By Michael McMillin, M.D.
Director, Cottage Hospital
Emergency Department

One of the most common ailments that patients seek emergency treatment for is chest pain. Patients get concerned, and rightly so, that their chest pain might be a sign of a heart attack or other serious problem.

The first and most important rule about chest pain is: If you have any doubt about what is causing the pain, have it evaluated immediately by a physician. All too often, patients ignore their pain, attributing it to some minor complaint such as "heartburn," when in reality, it is a more serious condition such as angina or a heart attack.

Patients also are reluctant to come to the emergency department for evaluation because if nothing is wrong, they feel like they are wasting the doctors' time. Nothing could be further from the truth. It is the job of emergency physicians to not only treat serious disease, but also to rule it out.

Here are some of the characteristics of chest pain from different causes.

- Pain coming from a heart attack or angina is often described as a heavy pressure sensation in the middle of the chest, which may radiate to the jaw or down the arms. Associated with this, the patient may experience nausea and vomiting, sweating, lightheadedness, shortness of breath and weakness.

Generally, this pain is not worse with deep breath or movement, but can be worse with exertion and relieved by rest. However, not all patients will have these "classic" symptoms. Some people, including diabetics, may not have pain at all, or have pain in their upper abdomen.

Treatment for a heart attack requires hospitalization. A new medication may be given in the emergency department to dissolve a blood clot which can be causing the heart attack. But to be effective, this medication must be given early in a heart attack. That is one of the reasons why prompt evaluation is so important for someone with chest pain.

People at increased risk for a heart disease are people with diabetes, hypertension, elevated cholesterol levels, smokers and those with family history of heart disease. While we can do nothing about family history, we can improve our risk factors by stopping smoking and controlling an elevated blood pressure, and through proper diet and regular exercise.

- Certainly many other processes other than heart disease can cause chest pain. The chest pain associated with pneumonia tends to be worse with deep breathing and accompanied by a cough and fever. Treatment is with antibiotics, sometimes in the hospital. Also, pleurisy, which is an inflammation of the lining of the lung often due to infection, can cause sharp chest pain which becomes worse with deep breathing. Treatment is with anti-inflammatory medication and, sometimes, antibiotics.

- One of the most common causes of chest pain is pain from the chest wall. A muscle strain or bruise to the chest wall can cause pain which is worse with deep breathing and movement of the trunk. Treatment for this generally is heat and anti-inflammatory medication. But again, it is important to recognize that a more serious disease can mimic a less serious problem, and it is wise to be checked by a physician if in doubt.

- Heartburn, or what doctors call esophagitis, can cause a burning-type of pain in the middle of the chest, often relieved by antacids and made worse by certain foods. Treatment for this condition may consist of antacids and medication to reduce acid production in the stomach. Along with the treatment, a work-up to rule out cardiac disease is usually indicated.

- A less common cause of chest pain, but one that can be serious, is from a pneumothorax or "collapsed lung." Generally occurring in younger patients, the lung spontaneously collapses, and the patient may feel sharp chest pain which is worse with deep breath and accompanied by progressive shortness of breath. The treatment for this condition often requires a tube in the chest to relieve the excess pressure and to re-expand the lung.

- Another less common case of chest pain seen in the elderly is the herpes zoster, or "shingles." The patient will have a severe, burning-type pain in a particular location on the chest or body. The pain may continue steadily for several days, and subsequently, a characteristic blistering rash will appear. Treatment is usually with antiviral medication and pain medication.

- A pulmonary embolism, or blood clot to the lung, is a serious cause of chest pain which can be life threatening. It causes sharp pain which is worse with a deep breath. It also is associated with shortness of breath and, sometimes, coughing up blood. Treatment involves hospitalization and a blood thinner.

- Finally, pericarditis, an inflammation of the lining of the heart, can cause sharp pain in the middle of the chest, often worse with certain positions. Treatment usually involves observation in the hospital.

These are some of the more prevalent causes of chest pain that we see in the emergency department. Obviously, it can be difficult to differentiate the causes of chest pain from the symptoms alone. Determining whether a serious disease is present requires physician evaluation and diagnostic tests.

Ruling out serious disease is an everyday part of an emergency physician's job, and treating serious diseases in a timely fashion can be life saving. Don't "guess" with chest pain. Visit your local emergency physician.

Michael McMillin, M.D. is board certified in family practice and emergency medicine and is the director of the Cottage Hospital Emergency Department.

Learn about UFOs

Once secret U.S. government documents indicating proof of Unidentified Flying Objects (UFOs) are the focus of a lecture at Macomb Community College on Tuesday, Oct. 27.

"UFOs: The Hidden Story" is a 90-minute lecture and slide presentation concerning U.S. government restraint on public information about UFOs. The information is based on previously classified documents that have been secured by the Freedom of Information Act by several researchers.

Robert Hastings, an independent UFO researcher and lecturer, will conduct the presentation. Hastings, an electron microscopist from Albuquerque, N.M., spends several weeks a year lecturing on UFOs. He has spoken at more than 200 colleges and universities nationwide.

Hastings' interest in UFOs began in 1967 when they were tracked on radar at an air traffic control tower at Malmsstrom Air Force Base, near Great Falls, Mont. Since that time, he has devoted countless hours to researching UFOs and to bringing before the public the facts about UFOs that he believes have been suppressed by the U.S. government.

The program will be held from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in room K-301, of the Student Community Center on Macomb's South Campus, 14500 E. Twelve Mile Road, in Warren.

There is a $5 registration fee per person; $3 with student identification. Registrations must be received by Friday, Oct. 16, at Macomb Community College, Attn: Student Clubs and Organizations, 14500 E. Twelve Mile Road, Warren, Mich. 48093-3896.

Laparoscopic hysterectomy.

Now it's easier to get over the surgery and get on with your life.

There's nothing easy about facing a hysterectomy. But now there's a gentler surgical technique that could make recovery from hysterectomy much easier. And, it's available at the St. John Laser Center of Southeast Michigan.

The laparoscopic hysterectomy procedure uses lasers and state-of-the-art surgical scopes that require much smaller incisions than traditional abdominal hysterectomies. This may mean less blood loss, less pain, a reduced hospital stay and a much faster recovery.

If you're facing a hysterectomy, call the St. John Laser Center for our free brochure about this gentler alternative to traditional surgery. This call may be the first step toward getting on with your life. 800-962-7777

Students at community and 4-year colleges compared

A new University of Michigan study contradicts previous research findings that students who attend community college are at a "definite disadvantage" in pursuing a baccalaureate degree or graduate work.

According to the U-M study, for those students who are successful in a community college and who transfer to a four-year college for their junior and senior years, "having attended community college does not appear to lessen the likelihood of their graduating from college, enrolling in graduate school or aspiring to attend graduate school in the future."

"In other words, students who attend community college and then enter a four-year college are no less likely to succeed than students who were in the four-year college from the start," says Valerie E. Lee, associate professor of education, who conducted the study with research assistants Christopher J. Mackie and Helen M. Marks.

The study contradicts a vast body of research that had shown that attending community college exerts a "definite disadvantage in persistence to a four-year college degree." According to these findings, community colleges function as "gatekeepers" to the higher education system, providing an inferior and usually terminal higher education experience for students less advantaged in terms of class, gender and race.

As community colleges moved increasingly from a focus on academic or vocational or professional pursuits, many researchers predicted that the likelihood of community college students going on to the baccalaureate would decrease. These predictions were based on data collected in the early- or mid-1970s, Lee notes.

Using data from the High School and Beyond Study, Lee tracked 422 students who graduated from high school in 1980, entered community college and transferred to a four-year institution within four years. These students were compared with 1,899 students whose educational experience was exclusively in four-year institutions.

By 1986, 69 percent of both groups had graduated or were poised to graduate from a four-year institution.

While 76 percent of the group who began in a four-year institution aspired to graduate school, 70 percent of the transfer group intended to continue their educations. Likewise, while 19 percent of the four-year group were already in graduate school by 1986, 11 percent of the transfer group were.

Lee attributes these differences, however, to factors other than the community college experience itself, including the greater tendency of community college students to attend school part-time, transfer into larger institutions, and attend institutions that do not offer graduate degrees.

When Lee took into account these and other differences between community college transfers and students who began college in four-year institutions, she found no difference in the two groups' likelihood of going on to graduate school.

"While community colleges do not act as 'transformational' institutions for the considerable numbers of students who come to them with social and academic disadvantage, neither do they act as 'residual inhibitors,' for the relatively able and motivated students who use these institutions as less expensive routes to further post-secondary institutions," Lee says.

In a previous study, Lee reported that only 24 percent of community college students go on to pursue a bachelor's degree at a four-year institution and that "the major disadvantage to community college lies in the institution's inability to facilitate transfer for the students who wish to do so but who do not necessarily have the academic record or skills to make this easy to accomplish without assistance.

"However," she says, "these new findings show that for the relatively more advantaged community college students who do transfer to four-year institutions, having attended a community college does not seem to inhibit their progress through the higher education 'pipeline.'"

Family report card, tip sheet offered

As a companion to its "Family Works! Report Card" released this summer, Family Service Detroit and Wayne County has developed a "Tip Sheet for Building Strong Families."

The sheet is filled with ideas and suggestions on improving family life. Topics include showing appreciation to family members, sharing family history, handling conflicts, tips for working parents and dealing with stress.

In response to demand, additional copies of the "Family Works! Report Card" have been printed. The report card is a simple quiz families can take to determine the strength of their day-to-day life.

Both the "Tip Sheet for Building Strong Families" and "Family Works! Report Card" are available free of charge.

"The development of the tip sheet is a perfect companion for those families which want to improve their score after taking the report card quiz," said William C. Bishop, president of Family Service Detroit and Wayne County. "Our goal with these two pieces is to stimulate discussion on many issues among family members."

"Family Works!" is sponsored nationally by Heinz U.S.A. and Family Service America (FSA). Locally, Family Service Detroit and Wayne County, a member of FSA, is working with WXON-TV 20 to promote the campaign in the Detroit area.

Copies of the report card and tip sheet can be obtained by calling the administration office at (313) 961-1584 during business hours, or writing to Family Service, 220 Bagley, Suite 920, Detroit, Mich. 48226. Quantities are limited.

As big six-o nears, a little auto lore and wisdom is in order

"You can run, but you can't hide." That was the ominous message delivered by an eerie, hooded specter that looked out of a birthday card; ominous, because I had reached 59 and was beginning to cast about for some way to hide from the big six-o that looms next year on my birthday anniversary, which I share with Lee A. Iacocca.

Lee turned 68 on Oct. 15, and while he can run Chrysler Corp. (for a couple more months, anyway) he, too, cannot hide. Aside from the anniversary of our births, Iacocca and I have little in common except for a lifelong interest in automobiles, which made him rich and famous and has kept me in debt and out of cash much of my life.

This arrival at the eve of 60, which I had always regarded as the threshold of old age but am now reassessing (no doubt in a vain effort to hide), caused me to reminisce about my life not as a builder of automobiles but as a consumer of them. With age and several decades of auto writing as my credentials, I would like to share some of my experiences and perhaps draw some wisdom from them.

The earliest car I can remember was my father's '34 Ford business coupe, a two-seater in which I stood in the middle between the seats. This would be very illegal now, but was all right then.

But the first car I realized even at the age of 4 or 5 was a cut above the rest was a light brown '34 Chevrolet convertible with rumble seat that Uncle Duane, my mother's younger brother, a handsome devil who smoked and hung out in bars and was learning to be a mechanic, showed up in one day at our home in East Liverpool, Ohio. He gave us all a ride and I got to share the rumble seat with Aunt Delores.

Much was made of the fact that all the young ladies were after Duane, and I assumed it was because of his magnificent car. Anyway, I learned that if you want to attract pretty young women, you should drive a convertible. I have owned a number of convertibles the romantic effect of which is dubious, but I did develop a strong love for open-air motoring, which persists to this day. (I own two convertibles now.)

I recently viewed a videotape of the movie "Grand Canyon" (which I thought was excellent) and was impressed with a scene in which a father is teaching his son to drive on the streets of Los Angeles. What impressed me was the patience and calm demeanor of the father (played by Kevin Kline) as his son narrowly averted disaster while attempting a left turn and a lane change.

My father showed similar strength of character when he was teaching me to drive in his beloved '49 Dodge (beloved by him; as a cool 15-year-old hotshot, I had contempt for such mundane, utilitarian cars; I would own a long string of them through my life) and I raced through a red light at Schoolcraft and Wyoming near our home on Detroit's west side.

I got my driver's license on my 16th birthday by going into the Schaefer Precinct where a policeman drew the perilous duty of riding with me on a road test. I passed, as did millions of other eager teenagers, but the Detroit Police Department wisely shifted this chore onto the Michigan secretary of state office.

And my father wisely turned over driver training responsibilities to a professional driving instructor when my mother decided in her 40s that she would learn to drive. They never got divorced, and I suspect that is one reason why.

I was eager to own my own car, of course. I did not know it at the time, but my father was also eager for me to get my own car, as I bombarded him with a galaxy of reasons why I needed to use his Dodge. So when I began caddying at the Detroit Golf Club and determined that I was making enough money to support a car, he arranged a purchase from his father. Now grandpa was even less cool than my father, so my first car was a boxy, gray '42 Hudson. But I was eager and couldn't wait for the car of my dreams. I just wanted a car.

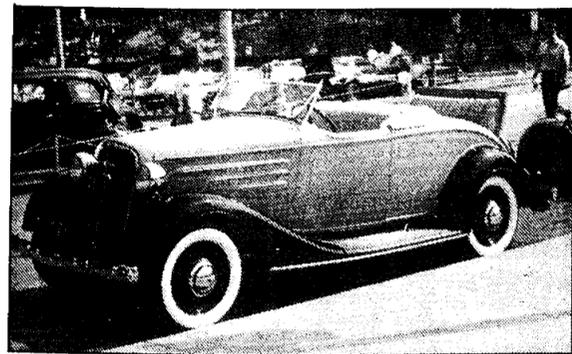

My father came to hate that '42 Hudson as much as I did, mainly because of calls for help from Pontchartrain Drive or some such place that this dread machine had broken down.

I had agreed to a price of $250 for the Hudson, paying a certain amount each month. One day, I spotted a car of my dreams (there were a lot of them) on a used-car lot at the corner of Grand River and Ohio. It was a '46 Ford Sportsman convertible, with wooden doors and trunk, a most wonderful machine for which the friendly used-car salesman wanted only $450!

I figured that if he would give me $250 for the Hudson, I would owe him only $200 for the Ford. He laughed. "That junker isn't worth half that," he said. "You paid $250? Boy, someone saw you coming. Where'd you buy it?"

"From my grandpa," I admitted. The dealer explained that the $250 had come from the Used-Car Blue Book dealers used, but that is was for an excellent specimen, which my car was not.

I drove the Ford home in all its wretched splendor. The wooden trunk lid had decayed and there was a hole in it big enough to reach in and take out the spare tire. And there was a loud clunk in the engine, which I would later come to identify as a broken piston rod.

Photos by Jenny King

A '34 Chevrolet Cabriolet with rumble seat, the same as Uncle Duane's, even to the light brown finish and the red spoke wheels.

But I was in love.

Dad was not and told me that I was even a bigger fool than he had thought, which was very big indeed. I took the Ford back, but nonetheless told him what the dealer had said about Grandpa having seen me coming and so on. Dad conceded they may have overestimated the value of this particular piece of junk and renegotiated a price with grandpa of $125.

While this was going on, I graduated from high school and got a job as an apprentice typographer at Fred Morneau Typography Co. on Woodward and Elliot, a union shop next to the Bonstelle Theater. The printers' union ran a weekly lottery and I won $250 after only a few weeks of putting in a dollar a week. Needless to say, I was delighted.

"I want to pay grandpa the rest of the money I owe him for the car," I announced after dinner one night. That was $90, about three weeks' pay.

"Where did you get all the money?" mom asked. "I won $125 in the union lottery," I said, forgetting that my father, as makeup editor at the old Detroit Times, spent a lot of time in the composing room there, also a union shop, working with the typographers.

"That's interesting," he said.

"I saw a posting in the composing room that an R. Wright had won $250. You know anything about that?"

I knew I was in trouble. Mom was upset that I would lie about my gambling winnings, but dad understood. "Oh yeah, I guess it was $250," I explained feebly. I paid off grandpa and traded in the Hudson (for $25) on a '46 Nash, beginning a lifelong interest in Nashes and their successors.

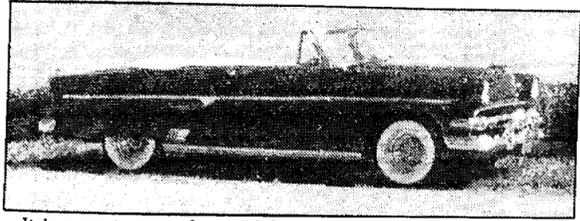

The lesson in the Hudson affair is: "Don't buy a car from a relative or close friend." Over the years, a number of new-car dealers and salesmen have echoed that dictum. One dealer told me that when you buy a car from your dealer brother-in-law, you assume he is giving you the best price he will give anyone. "Not true," he said. "A stranger will walk into the dealership an hour later and beat him down to a price of $200 or $300 better than you got."

When I was older and more sophisticated in the ways of buying cars, I pursued my love of Nashes and lust for convertibles to Iowa, where I bought a very handsome '64 Rambler American from an Iowa farmboy (a graduate of Iowa State)

See AUTOS, page 31A

Combining my Nash and convertible interests was this '64 Rambler American parked next to a '36 Ford roadster in Illinois.

It is easy to see why a '53 Ford Sunliner convertible would be tempting to joy-riding young car thieves.

the way home, somere between La Salle, Ill., Chicago, I heard an odd nd in the rear of the car. I ed into a McDonald's park-lot (and parked next to,
ly enough, a beautiful '36 1 Cabriolet) and found that of the rear brakes was disected. Lesson: Iowa's not so erent from Detroit.

have had four cars stolen over the years, three of them mine, one a factory model that I was evaluating. The cars and the motivations of the thieves may say something about how society is changing.

The first convertible I owned was a '53 Ford I bought while a student at Wayne State University in 1958. It was one of the best-looking cars I have ever owned, so it should have been no surprise to me when it was stolen while I was at a ballet performance at Masonic Temple. (I have stayed away from ballet ever since.)

After about a month, the police contacted me and said a woman had called about an abandoned car in front of her house near Grand River and West Chicago. I went there and found it was indeed my car, undamaged, apparently just taken for a joy ride by some young men enamored of its rakish good looks.

Fifteen years later, thieves stole my '73 Ford Pinto station wagon (yes, I wondered why, too) while I was at a Detroit school board meeting. Police found this car quickly, with all the chrome stripped off the driver's side. Apparently, the thief took the car for some needed trim parts.

In the closing days of American Motors' independent life, I was driving a Jeep Wagoneer which belonged to AMC so I could write about it for The Detroit News. I parked in the Eastern Market on a Saturday morning to buy some bagels, and returned about 10 minutes later to find it gone.

I called a public relations man at AMC, who seemed almost pleased that thieves would be interested in one of that corporation's products (sales were not very good). I tried to report the theft to the police, but the computer was down, so I had to wait until Monday.

When I reported the theft
Monday, the police had already found the car in Highland Park, where it had been stripped of wheels, tires, stereo and radiator. "They were professionals," an officer told me. "It was probably stripped and abandoned before you got home."

Early last summer, a truly ratty '82 Ford EXP I owned was stolen by a thief who smashed a window to get in, broke the steering column and pulled out the ignition lock to get it started. Everyone scratched their heads in disbelief. Why would anyone steal such a junker? I had figured it was theft-proof because it was so bad.

When I called the police to report the theft, a woman police officer cut me off, saying "I can't take this report, we already recovered the car. Call the sex crimes division to find out when they will release it."
Release it?

"Yes, it was used in commission of a sex crime and may be held as evidence."

I got the car back about two weeks later, and it required more repairs than it was worth.
The sex criminal had also stonen stereo speakers and the battery, in addition to damaging the steering column and breaking a window. I had it fixed and sold it to cover most of the costs of repair.

The lesson? Over my auto-owning life, primary reasons for stealing cars have gone from joy-riding to stripping cars for the lucrative stolen parts market to stealing cars for the commission of other crimes.

But that's just an observation, not a lesson. The lesson is that you cannot predict what car will be a target for theft.
Chevrolet Corvettes and Camaros are very popular and more likely to be stolen than most, various reporting agencies say, but if a rusty, battered EXP is not safe, what is?

Well, say insurance industry sources, if you don't want your car stolen, buy a Rolls-Royce.
Only one has been stolen in the United States in the last five years.

So if you have a birthday coming up, ponder your automotive life. And ask for a Rolls-Royce. But be prepared for Lee Iacocca to tell you to buy American.

SEATBELTS
Everybody's Wearing Them

Keep 'em rolling right with these simple tips

They're easy to overlook.
When the family car is running smoothly, they're taken for granted, and all's right with the world. But when they're flat, you're going nowhere; and when they're worn, controlling your car can be difficult.

We're talking tires — the only contact your car has with the road.

AAA Michigan recommends motorists inspect their car's tires regularly to pinpoint tell-tale signs of wear and ward off potential trouble.

General advice from Gerald Gutowski, manager of AAA Emergency Road Service, is to keep tires properly inflated.
Pressure should be checked with a tire gauge when tires are cold.

"Checking tire pressure may take a few minutes, but it's worth it," Gutowski said. "A tire that's just 25 percent underinflated can lose 20 percent of its life."

Also, make sure the tires are the same size, the same brand and tread pattern, and don't mix radial-ply with bias-ply.

In Michigan's Winter Wonderland, snow tires are beneficial even on front-wheel drive vehicles.

Other tread warning signs and what they signify:

- When one side of the tread wears more than the other, try a wheel alignment.
- When the center wears first, you're overinflating.
- When the edges wear before the center, you're underinflating.
- Uneven wear is usually caused by old shock absorbers or wheels that are out of balance.

• When the tread is worn across two or more grooves, the tire should be replaced.

Despite taking all precautions, though, tires do go flat — and too often when you're miles from a telephone and have no way to call for help.

If you must change your car's tire yourself, for safety sake, with the car on level ground, place a block or rock behind wheels to keep the car from rolling. Before raising the car with a jack, first loosen the lug nuts to keep the wheel from spinning. Then change your tire.

Consult the owner's manual for instructions on positioning and operation of the jack.

A final word: Make sure the spare tire is kept inflated.

Aluminum

A limited number of aluminum-bodied Defender 110s will be imported by Land Rover North America Inc. this year. The U.S. model, with suggested price of $39,900, is a five-door wagon with front bucket seats, rear bench seat and four folding jump seats in the cargo area. Powered by a 3.9-liter, 180-horsepower V-8 engine, Land Rover has a top speed of about 90 mph. A 5-speed manual gearbox is the only transmission offered. Capable of towing 7,700 pounds in its low range, and 5,000 pounds in high range, the Defender has oil coolers for both the engine and transmission. Land Rover Defender, to be sold through qualifying Range Rover dealers, is covered by a three-year, 42,000-mile limited warranty, and owners get nationwide 24-hour roadside service.

The story hour

Photos by Leah Vartanian

On Thursday nights in September the place to be was the Grosse Pointe Central Library.

At least if you were a preschooler. For the fourth year in a row, the library offers a children's bedtime story hour, which brought more than 50 pajama-clad little ones and their stuffed animals to the library.

Children's librarians Helen Gregory (shown at right), Gloria Sheridan, Margaret Kitchel and Toni LaPorte each hosted one of the four evenings. It was also a way for the community to meet the children's librarians, who are spread out among the library's three branches.

Sweet dreams were had by all.

Features visit St. Clare

... those that fly above the earth, those that walk or crawl on or beneath the earth and those that swim the waters of earth..."

They were all there to assist and amaze the students of St. Clare as the Living Science Foundation visited various classrooms at the school recently.

There were programs on the diversity of life, reptiles, the Amazon, Australia, and animal behavior which provided hands-on and "in your face" experiences for children that will not soon be forgotten.

Fifth-grader Martha Serafyn said it because, "Instead of looking at slides, we saw actual animals."

Joseph Wierzbinski, grade three, liked the land turtle and he learned that, "a land turtle can't go in water." He thought "the program was great!"

Junior-high teacher Lou Ann Knaus thought that it was an excellent program, while third-grade teacher, Julie Luka, capitalized the staff comments by saying, "It was a wonderful hands-on experience!"

Third-graders Candice Owens, Ernie Browne and Kevin Koster used words like "neat," "cool," "fun" to describe their experiences. Darin Polla was more detailed, but not any less enthusiastic, when he stated "the thing I liked best about Scaly Survivors was all the reptiles. I learned about new kinds of reptiles like Sheldon the Red Footed Tortoise. I thought the Scaly Survivors was great."

North scholars commended

Four members of the class of 1993 have been named commended students in the 1993 National Merit Scholarship Program, according to Thomas Teetaert, acting principal of Grosse Pointe North.

A letter of commendation from the National Merit Scholarship Corporation will be presented by the school to Amy Boal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Janssens of the Woods; Renee Dwaihy, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Norman Dwaihy of the Woods; Sara Saberi, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Mohammad Saberi of the Woods; and Daniel Weber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Weber of Harper Woods.

About 35,000 commended students throughout the nation are honored for outstanding performance on the 1991 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test. The commended students have shown exceptional academic promise by placing among the top five percent of more than one million program entrants.

Parenting workshop planned

A "Workshop on Parenting," a joint project of the Grosse Pointe Public School System and the Grosse Pointe PTO Council, has been set for Saturday, Nov. 7, at Grosse Pointe North High School, 707 Vernier, Grosse Pointe Woods.

The workshop will focus on 17 topics in the three-hour session beginning at 9 a.m. Topics of interest to parents facing various problems will be discussed, ranging from "Starting young - working together to raise drug-free kids" to "Letting go, but not too much" and "The non-custodial parent."

For a $5 admission fee, parents will be able to attend three sessions conducted by experts in counseling, social work, child behavior, family law, substance abuse and psychology. Advance registration is urged, with checks made payable to the Department of Community Education.

Other topics include setting guidelines, study skills for the middle school student, the single parent dilemma and time management for the high school student. Copies of the program are available at the Grosse Pointe Public Library as well as in each of the district's 14 schools and at the Department of Community Education, Barnes School, 20090 Morning-side Dr., Grosse Pointe Woods. Call 343-2178 for further information.

Schools honor 10 volunteers

The Grosse Pointe board of education on Oct. 10 honored 10 volunteers who have made significant contributions to the district over a long period of time.

Honored were Dr. Bill Brownscombe, president of the South High School Dad's Club; Mary Collins; Kerby Elementary School PTO president; Kris Grabowski, PTO vice president at Maire; Steve Keller, chairman of the Millage Renewal Committee, member of the Committee Against Cut and Cap and past Ferry Elementary PTO president; Diane Marston, described by the board as an "all-around volunteer" who has contributed at Trombly Elementary, Pierce Middle and Grosse Pointe South High schools; Kathy Quilter, president of the South Mother's Club and advocate for supervised teenage parties; Julie Scott, who designed costumes for the Pierce choir and has volunteered at the South clinic and career resource center; Ken and Nancy Straske, both of whom helped the North High School concession stand rise to new levels during the last school year; and Don Sweeney III, whom the board called the public library's best friend, for his leadership of the Friends of the Public Library and his service as treasurer of the 1991 bond campaign.

St. Clare students, from left, Colleen Mott, Darin Polla and Steve Tironi appreciate one of "God's creatures."

Join the fun at Maire festival

Maire Elementary School's Fun Fest will be held tonight, Oct. 22, from 6 to 8 p.m. Coney Island dinners will be on sale for $2.50 and include a hot dog, beverage, bag of chips and an ice cream sandwich.

Entertainment includes games, face painting, a balloon man and Karaoke singing. Children will be able to decorate their own trick-or-treat bag for Halloween. The evening is sponsored by the Marie Elementary School PTO.

A lesson in safety

It's never too early to learn how to safely flee a burning building. Kerby kindergarten students recently practiced how using the Safety House, which is part of the Safety Town project. Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officer Don Dewey said the children get inside the house, which simulates a first-floor and second-floor bedroom setting. Then, as non-toxic smoke is fed into the house, the children are instructed to roll off the beds, crawl along the floor and feel closed doors before opening them. Dewey said the little house on wheels that travels to fire departments and schools in Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods has been an effective tool in teaching fire safety. Safety House was donated by the Friends of Bon Secours Hospital and is the property of the Grosse Pointe schools.

Student Spotlight

Theresa Sabella

Each week in this column, we focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a woodworking project, a book review.

Theresa Sabella, a fifth grader at Maire Elementary School, has written a poem about autumn. She is a student in Mrs. Goldsmith's class and the daughter of Tom and Carol Sabella of Grosse Pointe Park.

Fall

Fall is my favorite season, it's wonderful, and that's my reason.
Cause leaves start falling, all brown, yellow, and red, orange, green, and others that haven't been said.

All the trees start losing leaves, as if the trees were old, and that one reason happens to be, neither hot, nor cold and that is the time of year, when you crunch leaves with your feet, and all the kids are so excited when it's time to trick-or-treat.

In fall you dress more warmly though I'm sure you won't freeze, and instead of a blast of snow in your face, a calm cool breeze.

Fall is beautiful the leaves are alive with color fall is different it's unlike any other

Volunteers being sought

Spanish Heritage (SHE), a not-for-profit student exchange organization dedicated to promoting Spanish language and Hispanic culture in North America, is seeking enthusiastic volunteers to be area representatives for its program.

Area representatives serve as liaisons for high schools, host families, students and SHE offices and recruit qualified North American teenagers to go abroad. Volunteers are reimbursed for their expenses.

If you feel this is an ideal way to learn about Spanish and Latin American culture while sharing your local area with eager high school teenage students, call Warren Clague collect at 612/470-0211 or 1-800-888-9040 for further information.

The Olympiad man

Gov. John Engler has proclaimed Saturday, April 24, as Michigan Social Studies Olympiad Day. Grosse Pointe Park resident George Farmakis, state director of the Olympiad, was on hand to receive the proclamation.

Kid co-hosts sought for Thanksgiving parade

WDIV-TV Channel 4 is putting the call out for children to "co-host" the annual Michigan Thanksgiving Parade.

Enthusiasm and a sharp eye for colorful parades are prerequisites for a chance to join Mort Crim, Carmen Harlan and Chuck Gaidica for color commentary on the 66th annual Michigan Thanksgiving Parade. The parade airs Nov. 26 at 9 a.m. on Channel 4.

For the third consecutive year, WDIV is holding open auditions for children between the ages of 8 and 12. Auditions will be held Saturday, Oct. 24, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the WDIV studios.

All kids must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

They should come prepared to talk about Thanksgiving Day, the parade and their fondest memory of the holiday season.

Aside from "co-anchoring" the parade, the kids will appear in some of the behind-the-scenes updates that will air during WDIV's coverage of pre-parade activities on Wednesday, Nov. 25, beginning at 7 p.m.

Brownell bash

The first family fun night for the 1992-93 school year will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Oct. 23 at Brownell Middle School, 260 Chalfonte, Grosse Pointe Farms.

Horse program needs volunteers

The Easter Seal Society of Macomb County, 4-H, and Macomb County Cooperative Extension Service are looking for volunteers to help out in their horseback riding for handicapped program. The therapeutic riding program requires the assistance of adult side-walkers to ensure the safety of the children.

The program is held at First Impression Farms in New Haven and meets at various times during the day and in the evenings from April to November.

Roller Kerby

Families of the Kerby Kinship program recently held a roller skating outing at Great Skate in Roseville. The program is open to all Kerby families and serves as a forum for parents to discuss parenting issues like peer pressure, homework and slumber parties. Kinship members meet four times each school year. Enjoying their day of fun are, from left, Katherine Heffner and daughter Chelsea, Kevin Spezia, his mother, Gerry Spezia, and sister, Fiona.

St. Clare students elect new council

secretary; and Theresa Franzinger, treasurer. All are eighth graders except Franzinger who is in the seventh grade.

Lake level

Lake St. Clair at the end of September was at elevation 575.27 feet above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or 36 inches above chart datum.

This was about 9 inches above what it was a year ago, and about 1 inch above one month ago.

The September monthly mean level of 575.35 feet was about 12 inches above the long-term average for September.

The lake, however, remained about 19 inches below the all-time high September monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986.

The forecast shows that at the end of October, the level of Lake St. Clair will be about 7 inches below what it was at the end of September. The level of the lake is expected to continue its seasonal decline into January.

The water level in March 1993, is expected to be about 13 inches above the long-term average for that month, or about 5 inches above what it was at the same time in 1992.

St. Clare grads wanted

The whereabouts of all past St. Clare of Montefalco graduates are being sought so that the school can update its class-list directory.

Anyone who may have an updated list of graduates is asked to send a copy to: The Graduate Connection, The St. Clare of Montefalco Graduate Directory, P.O. Box 120117, Norfolk, Va. 23541-1117.

The school is also urging reunion organizers and others with updated class lists to fax a copy to Josie Paolucci at 804-466-7764, or call toll free at 1-800-359-3552 to phone in any pertinent graduate information.

The new directory will include up-to-date information on St. Clare of Montefalco graduates from all class years and will help them get in touch with each other, make career connections and plan social gatherings.

SEE HOW THEY RUN: Pointe marathoners tell why they do it

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

When Michael Skaff of Grosse Pointe Woods jogged across the starting line at the first Detroit Free Press Marathon 15 years ago, he didn't intend to run the entire 26.2 miles. He had never run more than six miles at a stretch in his life.

"My wife, Carolyn, was an aerobic dancing instructor. She and her instructor friends wanted to run a marathon. Sort of," Skaff said, with a smile.

proximately 15 miles along the course. She drove to Grosse Pointe and waited. "When I got there, I felt good," Skaff said. "I said I'd keep on going. I walked a little. Then I ran more."

Skaff completed his first marathon in a little more than four hours. "It took me a year to recover," he said, "but I was hooked."

Skaff, who is 56, ran the Detroit Free Press/Mazda International Marathon for the 12th time last Sunday. It was his 15th marathon in all, includ-

Bill Enright said he had always wanted to run the Boston Marathon, so he entered the Free Press event to get a qualifying time.

Marian described herself as a competitive, type A person. "I like the challenge. You can mark your progress with each marathon. I like the feeling of achievement."

Bill said he enjoys the feeling of accomplishment too.

"There's such a good feeling at the end of the run. At the beginning, standing in Jackson Park in Windsor, I ask myself 'Why? It's cold. It's dark. It's tough.' But there's such a good feeling at the end of the run. I like that."

Keith Ridler, 40, and Marty Zwolan, 35, both Grosse Pointers, ran Sunday's race with the hope of bettering their times. It was Zwolan's third marathon. He was a high school baseball player. He did some running in college and competed in tournament racquetball.

"I started running to stay in shape for racquetball," he said. "Then I got away from racquetball and into racing. I got involved in some 5K and 10K races and I was striving to do better. People kept talking about that elusive distance - 26.2 miles."

He described himself as a competitive person. "Initially, you run a marathon to see if you can go someplace you've never been before. Can you finish? Can you beat off that demon that tells you to stop after the first 15 miles or so?"

Zwolan ran the Free Press Marathon, his first, in 1991. "After your first," Zwolan said, "you say to yourself, 'I did it. I've met my goal.' Five minutes after the race you say you'll never do it again. Ten minutes later you say, 'Maybe I'll do it in two years.' Fifteen minutes later you want to do it again next year."

Ridler said he's a competitive person. "I was inactive when I was younger. About eight or nine years ago I started running with some friends. This will be my 24th marathon."

Ridler joined a training class offered by the Free Press before running his first marathon. "I felt so 'up' after that, I wanted to do another."

Skaff didn't start running until he was 40. He played baseball, basketball and football in high school. "I was just somebody who played," he said. "I wasn't a star."

"One year we went to Florida. I had a bad back. I found I could walk without too much pain. Then I started jogging to the beach. I jogged a little farther each day. When we got home, I started slowly increasing my distance because it felt good."

Skaff said he runs no less than four or five miles every day. Since his first marathon in 1978, he has developed his own training schedule to prepare for long-distance competitions. "During training I put in 15- to 20-mile runs. The last long run is about three weeks before the race."

"The second time I ran a marathon I cut a half hour off my time and I felt fine afterward."

See RUN, page 5B

Michael Skaff of Grosse Pointe Woods does some leg stretching exercises before going on his daily 4- to 5-mile run. He has run in 15 marathons over the last 15 years, including Sunday's Detroit Free Press/Mazda International Marathon.

"They wanted to start the race; run through the tunnel; and when they got to Greektown they were going to stop and have a nice breakfast."

"I said I'd go with them. So I got in a van with all the ladies and we drove downtown. We all started running. They got to Greektown and said, 'Here we are. We're quitting now.' But I felt good, so I kept running."

In those days, the marathon course came through Grosse Pointe. Skaff's wife said she'd meet him there, ap-ing one in Chicago and one in Hawaii.

Marian Enright of Grosse Pointe Park, 38, ran her 13th marathon Sunday and her fifth in Detroit. For her husband, Bill Enright, 42, it was his third. They both started running about a dozen years ago.

"When I quit smoking, I ran about 70 miles a week the first year," Marian said. "Now I run six days a week, 50 miles a week. I was doing the miles, so I thought, 'Why not do a marathon?'"

The Pastor's Corner To be a man

By the Rev. Jack T. Ziegler
Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church

Not long ago I gave a talk to a group of men on the subject of men, more specifically on the need for men who know what it means to have a mature spiritual grounding. It is a subject that intrigues me, but it surprised me to see the spark it triggered in a number of others.

I preface this article by affirming my admiration for the women's movement and my support for women in positions of leadership at all levels of government, business and the church. In no way is what follows intended as reactionary to this fine movement, except perhaps, as it calls men to a level of mature masculinity that has gotten lost somewhere along the way.

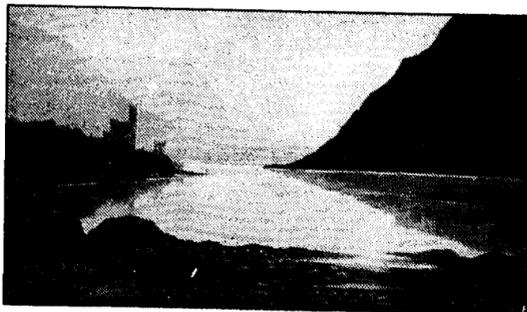

In earlier cultures, even primitive cultures where roles were most easily defined, men were often active in rituals and rites of passage that helped a boy become a man. That might have included hunting and fishing, but it also included spiritual aspects of reverence and respect. To what degree this was ever achieved in reality is arguable, but the fact remains that the concern and the process were often there.

The process for becoming a man today often omits this quest for mature spirituality as an essential part of what it means to be a man. The Scouting movement at its best combines some of these important elements, but confirmation classes, communicants' classes, and even bar mitzvahs lack the fire that helps a boy become a man. Indeed, there are those who believe we have surrendered the ceremonial rites of passage to gangs and drug lords whose rigorous rites of initiation are most effective. But are their ends what it truly means to be a man at his fullest?

Our world, our community, our religious communities, desperately need men who know what it means to be a man at his fullest, finest self. Where are the men in our churches, for example, and where is the "man" in our men?

The answer, of course, is that they are all around us. They are the males of 6 and 60, from all backgrounds and in all walks of life, who secretly sense deep within themselves the calling to a caliber of living that far exceeds what we males regularly display.

I'm discovering that men have a surprisingly strong desire to be responsive to that deep inner calling within us. So why not just do it! We need to be responsive so we can be of help to boys and young men who are struggling to know what it means to be a man — finely tuned, carefully balanced and alert. We owe it to them; we owe it to women; perhaps most of all, we owe it to ourselves.

Under the plan, MTRC will become a program of Family Service and the merged agency name will remain Family Service Detroit and Wayne County.

Bill Enright, left, finished the Free Press Marathon with a time of 3:07:41. Marian Enright, right, finished with 3:42:43. They've been running for about 12 years.

"I'm a type A person. I'm competitive. Marathons are exciting. It's the thrill of competition. In the end, a marathon is all mental; not physical."

He finished Sunday's race with a time of 4:10:22, slower than he would have liked. "But I feel good," he said. "No blisters. My legs are fine. It was unbelievably cold. I've never been so cold before. I had no feeling in my hands — even with gloves on. The wind, the rain, and on one stretch in Windsor, there was ice on the road."

Zwolan said the weather for Sunday's Free Press/Mazda Marathon was the worst he's ever encountered. "It gave new meaning to the slogan 'Michigan: the water/winter wonderland.' The new course was fabulous," he said, even though his 3:28:25 time was not as good as he hoped it would be.

"The spectator support was wonderful. It was well organized. I'll do it again."

Ridler finished in 3:04:50 and agreed that the new course was more attractive. "It was more segmented and each segment could be managed, one at a time. But the weather was miserable. I ran one in worse weather. In Buffalo, it was probably colder and it was slushy."

Marian Enright said the weather was the worst she's encountered in any of the 13 marathons she's run. "Usually, at the end, some people are walk-running. You can run past some of the walkers if you have the energy. But this time, it was so cold you had to keep running."

Bill Enright said the new course was a big improvement and the crowd support was wonderful. Both Enrights finished Sunday's race close to the times they predicted. Marian's time was 3:42:43. Bill's was 3:07:41. "We run in different time zones," she said.

Scaff said his daily runs are a way to release stress. "I'm not in this for health, although that is one of the by-products of running. Running gives me one hour a day to myself. It's good therapy. Also, when I run, I notice what's around me. It's a different kind of serenity."

Bridge

HAVE A PLEASANT TRY AT PERFECTION
BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD

Though there have been moments of chagrin in my checkered bridge career, I have learned much. One..... good breeding can best be displayed at the table by concealing how much you think of yourself and how little you think of others. Two..... I truly hold in veneration that little band of world specialists who carry no banners, nor beat any drums for their presence and play at the table is all that is required to substantiate their mastery.

I'm not sure which of these world masters is supreme, Georgia Belladonna, Benito Garozzo or Pietro Forquet. Any selection process would require considerable deliberation for the evidence supporting each ones brilliance is considerable. For lack of the proper decision making panel to call upon as I pen this, I would cast in favor of Mr. Garozzo. I have thrice had the amazing training to play against him and it was an amazing incursion into the world of exceptional expert play. His partnership with fellow blue teammate Pietro Forquet was for years untouchable which significantly contributed to seven consecutive Bermuda Bowl victories. Then in 1969 in tandem with the great Belladonna, they were acclaimed the sovereign pair in the world and instrumental in Italy's Third World Olympiad victory. Maybe our illustrious couple of Bobby's, Hamman and Wolfe, are today their equal, but just maybe!

I first met Benito in '84 in New York after he had moved to the states. Our last close encounter was at Bal Harbour in the Spring of '91, when he and Lea DuPont placed just ahead of Bobby Goldman and I in the flighted open pairs. I once asked Tom Smith how good was Lea? His answer was instant. "Benito has helped her become a very fine player." Hopefully, we can get these two to Detroit some day. You'll enjoy their play.

Here's a hand from their partnership that dramatically exhibits Benito's superb technique.

Declarer had two aces to lose and what was he to do with the spade suit? He ruffed West's lead and played to dummy's trump queen and East ace. East wasn't stupid and played his spade ace before getting out with a heart which was again ruffed. You say Benito was lucky to find the spade ace. I say he wasn't! Ask yourself whether West would double the three spade bid with three to the jack, ten, small? Obviously not! The spades had to be four/one with East holding the singleton ace or he wouldn't have had enough high card stuff to warrant his bids. Now your say why did East prematurely play the space ace? Benito concluded that East realized he would be end-played if he waited. At trick (5) a diamond to dummies ten extracting East's last trump. Now a club to the ace and back to the king. While the jack could have been successfully finessed, experts prefer sure bets. At trick (8) dummy's small club was ruffed and the trump king was played. Here was the beautiful four card ending.

When Benito played his trump jack, West had to unprotect his spades or throw his high club. Neither play could win for the defenders.

'Plaid' pays homage to '50s music

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Who said the hole in the ozone was all bad? If it weren't for that, we wouldn't have had a chance to hear Forever Plaid, the group, in the only concert they ever performed.

"Forever Plaid," the play, was written and directed by Stuart Ross as a tribute to the '50s-era guy groups like the Four Aces and the Four Lads. It's been playing off-Broadway for years and has had record-breaking runs in a number of other cities across the country. It's easy to see why people love this show.

The play tells the fictional story of Frankie, Smudge, Jinx and Sparky, the four friends who form Forever Plaid. In 1964 on their way to their first big gig in 1964, they were killed when their car was hit by a busload of Catholic schoolgirls on their way to see the Beatles on the Ed Sullivan Show.

Now, thanks to the hole in the ozone layer and some other astrological stuff like the alignment of the planets, the group

This election year is scary enough, but it's Halloween, so lots of brave souls use these autumn evenings to seek out those things that go bump in the night.

Accordingly, listed below are all the local haunted houses we know about.

Happy haunting.
The Friends of the Alger Theater is sponsoring "Phantom of the Alger" again on Oct. 23-25 and Oct. 30. The activities will include 12 exhibits that would make Stephen King's skin crawl, as well as a children's Halloween story hour.

The haunting runs from 6 to 9 p.m. each day with the children's story hour from 5 to 6 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 24.

House admission is $3; story hour admission is $2. All proceeds will benefit the restoration of the Alger Theater, with a portion of the money to be donated to St. Matthew's Church Boy Scout Troop 148, which will provide the volunteers for the haunted house.

The Alger Theater is located on the corner of Warren and Outer Drive on Detroit's east side. Call 343-9087 for more information.

The Grosse Pointe War Memorial is sponsoring an evening on Tuesday, Oct. 27, featuring a haunted hayride.

These houses are for haunting

For $23 a person, the evening begins with a short motor-coach ride departing from the War Memorial at 5:45 p.m.

Then there's a 40-minute tour of terror aboard a tractor-drawn wagon through woods haunted by vampires, ghosts and other monsters. Afterward there will be doughnuts and spider, er, cider. The trip is not recommended for children under 5. Call 881-7511.

Children under 12 will find Halloween extravaganza at the Detroit Zoo during the fourth annual Zoo Boo, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. beginning Tuesday, Oct. 27 through Oct. 31.

Children are encouraged to wear costumes (no masks, though) and will be loaned a flashlight to discover a series of "pumpkin people" decorating scenes from children's favorite cartoons and stories inside the zoo entrance. At the end of the trail, treats and a musical show await. Tickets are $3 and can be purchased only in advance at the ticket office. Call 398-0900.

The Wyandotte Jaycees will present the group's 17th annual haunted house, called "The Dungeon of Doom" and located at McKinley, just off Biddle (Jefferson) in Wyandotte.

The house is a half-mile endurance test through 14,000 square feet of ghoul and features a 36-foot Suicide Slide.

The house is open every day through Oct. 31 on Sundays through Thursdays from 7 to 10 p.m. and on Fridays and Saturdays until midnight.

The scariest cats can go through with the lights on from 6 to 7 p.m. on both Saturdays. All money goes to the Jaycees. Tickets are $5 and family discounts are available. The lights-on tour is $2.

Those who wish to venture to the west side can visit the Novi and Farmington Jaycees' Haunted Bar, featuring 13 rooms of gloom and doom every day (except Mondays) through Halloween. Hours are Sunday through Thursday 7 to 11 p.m. and Fridays and Saturdays from 7 p.m. to midnight.

The cost is $6 for adults; $4 children and the house (located at the corner of 12 Mile and Meadowbrook) is handicap accessible.

For $3 the kids can visit Polly Pig's Pumpkin Palace to make crafts and cookies while the adults get scared. Call 347-3860, ext. 217.

Closer to home, but no less scary, the Wertz Warriors are sponsoring their haunted house through Oct. 31 at the corner of Gratiot and Market in Mount Clemens. Witching hours are Sunday through Thursday from 6 to 9 p.m. and Fridays and Saturdays from 6 to 10 p.m.

Victims 9 and older are $4; everyone else is $3. Group rates are available. Call 791-5268.

All proceeds will be used to help pay the costs for more than 900 Michigan Special Olympians to compete at the State Winter Games scheduled for February at Sugar Loaf Resort.

Lakeside Mall is turning itself into a scary place now through Halloween night. Children can hear hair-raising stories at 2 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays and also at 5 p.m. Oct. 31.

Face painting takes place from noon to 4 p.m. on Halloween day, and at the Original Cookie Company kids can decorate their own spooky cookies. Call 247-1744.

At The Magic Bag Theatre

- 5 - Outstanding is able to return to Earth for one evening to perform their dream concert.

They're doing it at Fernalde's Magic Bag Theatre in an open-ended run. But don't wait.

The goofy story — which includes charming monologues about their relationship with 45s and the time they met their idol Perry Como — is only a framework for the magical musical numbers sung with tight harmonies by four extremely talented young men. Bruce Blanchard, Jonathan Brody, Todd Heughens and Rick Meads as the Plaids have the perfect blend of naive, wide-eyed hope and boyish charm to make the show work.

Not to diminish their excellent performances, but it would be hard for them not to do well with the songs they perform. They are all '50s standards that, despite their corniness and their overly lush arrangements, are welcome any time.

"Rags to Riches," "Three Coins in the Fountain," "Chain Gang," "Kingston Market" and "Catch a Falling Star" were only a few of the more than two dozen splendidly performed standards.

There's even a version of the Beatles' "She Loves You" gone hilariously awry. But perhaps the highlight of the evening is a three minute and 11 second version of "The Ed Sullivan Show" complete with spinning plates, Senor Wences and an accordion player.

The guys got the eager audience involved and even brought someone onstage to play piano and dance with them.

The audience hooted approval; they cheered, they laughed and gave a standing ovation. They didn't want it to end.

While those of a certain age who remember dancing to these songs in high school may find the most in "Plaid," there's enough for their children, too. In fact, a girl no more than 8 sitting in front of me found the entire proceedings fascinating.

You will too.
"Forever Plaid" is playing Wednesdays through Sundays in an open-ended run at Fernalde's Magic Bag Theatre on Woodward north of Nine Mile. Ticket prices range from $19 to $24. Call 644-2531.

The art of politics

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

It all started when Roma Anderson, owner of Anderson and Co., a Grosse Pointe Farms art gallery, saw a painting called "We the People" by S. J. Woolf.

It depicted a political convention at the height of its frenzied activity. Anderson thought it would be a nice window-display during the week leading up to the election.

Then she saw E. L. Henry's "Election Day 1844" and thought that might make a nice companion piece.

What it has evolved into has not only filled the store windows, but the entire gallery. It's called "Politics in Art" and opens with a special party tonight, Oct. 22, and runs through Nov. 5.

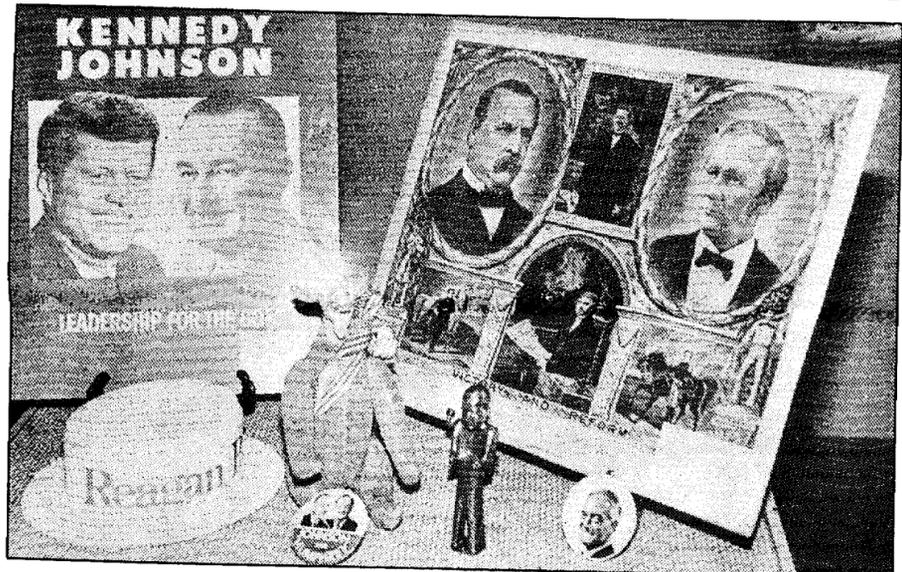

"We wanted a fun exhibit. And we think people will enjoy what we've collected," Anderson said, glancing over a conglomeration of campaign materials ranging from posters and buttons to frisbees and jackets.

In addition to "We the People" and "Election Day 1844," there will be other oil paintings, including a portrait of George Washington.

A collection of political cartoons, some from Lincoln's day, was loaned by Pointer and Detroit News political cartoonist Draper Hill. And Jerry Roe, a Lansing historian, has loaned several items from his extensive array of historic and odd campaign memorabilia.

There's a teddy bear with a moose head that was popular when Teddy Roosevelt led the Bull Moose Party, and a parol urging people to vote for the McKinley/Roosevelt ticket. A few walking sticks are included in the display, one with a peanut for the handle (a symbol of Jimmy Carter) and another with a likeness of Grover Cleveland as the headpiece.

There's the mean-spirited: A smiling Spiro Agnew, which, when wound up, dances like a clown to the "Can Can." The odd: A chess set featuring the

Fifteen years later, the substitute is still blowing strong

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Chet Bogan and his Wolverine Jazz Band started working at Lido's on the Lake in St. Clair Shores in 1977 as a substitute band for four weeks only.

Little did he know that 15 years later he would still be playing at Lido's, outlasting three owners and hundreds of pop and more modern bands.

But that's just what happened and he will mark that anniversary in a two-week celebration at Lido's on the next two Tuesdays — the day on which Bogan's been performing for a decade and a half.

"Maybe we missed a few when there was a big snowstorm or something like that, but other than that, we've played every Tuesday," said Bogan, who lives in Grosse Pointe Woods, said. A little has changed in those years. First, the band's name. When Bogan created it he called it the "Wolverine Jass Band." As he got away from the pure New Orleans jazz style they played when he formed the group 17 years ago, he moved the spelling into the mainstream, too.

The band has always been comprising six musicians and a female vocalist. The musicians have come and gone but the vocalist has always been Dixie-belle.

"She's a great gal," Bogan said. "She's really a good performer."

The other constant is the group's arranger — Bogan. "I've always done the arrangements myself," he said. "Most bands have three instruments that play together, but not in harmony. I put in three- and sometimes four-part harmonies for a really tight sound."

"We went to one of our first jazz festivals in 1978 and we had something no other band had — music stands. They all use them now. It's not enough to go up onstage and have a good time, you have to have charts."

But Bogan always has a good time when he plays and he feels that's the reason for his band's longevity.

"Very few bands last in one place for too long, but we have because we have a lot of followers," he said.

And what is it they come back to hear? "We build a kind of a rapport with the audience," he said. "You see, in order for me to play, I have to play what I like, and if I like it, I know the audience will."

Bogan's love for music — and in particular his horn — started early. He was 11 when he first took cornet lessons and by the time he was 14 he was performing regularly.

He played to put himself through dental school, then performed as a sideline while he practiced dentistry. A few years ago he retired after some 30 years in the profession. He and his wife Evelyn have been married since high school. They have two children. Since his retirement, he's been doing more with his music than ever. He recently bought a computer which he uses to write music for the Wolverine Jazz Band's fourth album which he will record in his basement studio. And he's not planning on leaving Lido's any time soon. "It's been great there. I've loved it," he said. "I've been pretty lucky."

Chet Bogan and the Wolverine Jazz Band will celebrate the group's 15th anniversary at Lido's on Oct. 27 and Nov. 3. Call 773-7770.

MOT's 'Music Man' delivers a Wells Fargo wagonload of fun

By Donna Walker
Staff Writer

Anyone who thinks there could be no Professor Harold Hill other than the late Robert Preston should see James Brennan in the Michigan Opera Theatre's production of Meredith Willson's "The Music Man" at the Fisher Theatre.

Brennan makes the lead role — that of con man Professor the new pool table at the town's billiard parlor, which is owned by the mayor.

If Hill has his way, he'll sell a ton of instruments and uniforms, and then leave town with the money before fulfilling his promise to teach the children how to play.

The true test of any Harold Hill has got to be the musical number "Trouble" ("with a capital T, which rhymes with P and that stands for pool.") The rapid-fire, tongue-twister lyrics make this song tough to master, but Brennan, with his wonderfully expressive voice, has it down perfectly. He manages to make each word sound distinct, and grows a few for impact, all the while dancing and performing gymnastic tricks across the stage.

Marian (the town librarian/piano teacher) Paroo, the leading female character, is slow to respond to Hill's charm, but by the second scene you will have succumbed to Brennan's.

And the nice part is, he's just beginning to romance you.

Jeanne Lehman — a Broadway veteran, as is Brennan — shines as Paroo. Her lovely soprano voice is made for songs like "Goodnight My Someone," "Will I Ever Tell You," and "Till There Was You."

She plays Marian with the right amount of warmth and reserve, and even dances a mean "Shipoopi."

Brennan and Lehman are backed by an excellent supporting cast, which includes Grosse Pointe Woods resident Lili Kaufmann, a master of accents who gets to use her best Irish brogue as Marian's mother, the widow Paroo. Although the cast is too large to mention everyone, MOT vocal intern Meghan Hakes of Manchester deserves to be singled out for her outstanding performance as Zaneeta Shin, the mayor's oldest daughter and — "Eee gods!" — the original Valley Girl.

Director Brent Wagner and choreographer Mary Jane Houdina turn in well-done performances. Their work — and Brennan and Lehman's balancing skills — are showcased in the hilarious scene in which Hill creates mayhem in the library to get Marian's attention.

The sets, lighting and costumes are also noteworthy, and conductor Suzanne Acton, of Grosse Pointe, the music woman behind this production, and the pit crew of musicians are to be commended for their work.

All in all, opening night was almost, but not quite, perfect. It was difficult to hear Marcellus (played by Dearborn native David Podulka) in "Shipoopi." Also, people who expected to see a marching band come down the aisles during the final scene — which is sometimes done in productions of "The Music Man" — were disappointed.

Detroit's Pershing High

School Marching Band, in their gold and black uniforms, played outside the Fisher on opening night, and bands from other metro Detroit schools are scheduled to do the same throughout the show's run.

Rini Willson, wife of the late Meredith Willson, was in attendance on opening night. The MOT says this is the first professional production of "The Music Man" in Detroit in 30 years. It's good to see folks are still taking good care of River City, and that the train still stops there. But if you want to catch it, you'll have to hurry. The show runs only through Sunday, Oct. 25. Call 874-SING.

Violinist Mutter wows recital audience

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

Anne-Sophie Mutter has it all. She's beautiful, she's gracious, she's intelligent, she plays the violin like a wizard and the audience went crazy over her brilliant performance at Orchestra Hall last Thursday.

It could hardly have been a

Music

more difficult program. But the playing rose to new heights with each work as Mutter and her inestimable pianist, Lambert Orkis, added new depth and stature to the music.

Their opener, the solo violin sonata by Maurice Ravel, is not often performed because it's fiendishly difficult, but she played it with verve and complete assurance.

What she had referred to in her exclusive interview with the Grosse Pointe News as its jazzy quality was especially obvious in the second movement, verging at times on blues. Mutter achieved a remarkable merger of classic technique and control with the pop idiom that had inspired Ravel in the Paris of the '20s.

The piano part was no less challenging and was handled with comparable skill by Orkis. What was equally impressive was the superb unanimity of style and interpretation between the two. Their ensemble playing was uncanny in the sharing of every shading and nuance of phrase. But that was only the beginning. The Schubert "Fantasie in C Major" followed and took the audience to a higher thrill. This is a work composed near the end of Schubert's short life when it is theorized that the composer was fired with inspiration to leave a body of instrumental music before his impending death. Listening to the intensity of this music, the theory is easy to believe, but the "Fantasie" gained even greater impact and power from the passionately controlled performance of the two artists.

The work moves from a simple, impassioned statement of a theme — the melody of a Schubert song — to brilliant developments and variations with dramatic contrasts in dynamics, without ever losing the overall shape of the theme.

Yet even this was prelude. The third work was Beethoven's master sonata for violin, "The Kreutzer." It is almost unfair to make any other music share a program and be compared to it. And whereas Mutter and Orkis were able to add to the creative stature of the Ravel and Schubert works, they could do no more than fulfill the eloquence of the Beethoven — but they did that brilliantly.

While being swept along by the genius and emotional power of this masterwork, it was a joy to recognize the beautifully conceived accents and emphases, the highly expressive phrasing and depth of understanding in their playing.

Because of the drama and virtuosity of "The Kreutzer," it has sometimes been described as a double concerto without orchestra. It certainly received a virtuoso concerto treatment at the hands of Mutter and Orkis. And the audience, wild with enthusiasm, brought them back repeatedly for bows.

The house was well rewarded for its enthusiasm. The encores amounted to another mini-concert, at least for those who had the good sense not to leave after the first. For as though Mutter needed to let us know that she had still more styles, moods, techniques and tone qualities to display, she treated the house to generous pieces by Debussy, Brahms and Massenet, winning new cheers and ovations each time.

The Brahms especially deserves a mention. It was his "Hungarian Dance No. 1" and she played it with a gypsy fire that was distinctive from even the most lively parts of the rest of the program.

The regular symphony series continues this evening and tomorrow and Saturday with guest conductor Yakov Kreizberg and pianist Lorin Houlder. The program is the Katchaturian concerto and Rachmaninoff Symphony No. 2. For tickets and information call 833-3700.

Pre- and post-Grace Monaco studied

The Grimaldis of Monaco
By Anne Edwards
Morrow. 368 pages. $23.

Ever since that glamorous ollywood princess, Grace Kelly, left her tinsel kingdom in 1956 to marry Prince Rainier of Monaco and became a mune princess, Americans have been particularly fascinated by the miniscule principality and its rulers.

Predictably, a score of books have appeared after that fairy-tale marriage, and "The Grimaldis of Monaco" by Anne Edwards is just the latest entry in a growing bibliography of this rocky kingdom and its ruling family.

Digging deeply into musty archives, Anne Edwards has unearthed many colorful details regarding the Grimaldis, from the 12th century to the present. Here is even a helpful genealogical chart showing all the rimaldis from Otto Canella through various descendants down to Rainier III.

Apparently, dynastic intrigues were rife: many of the ales inherited the throne of onaco through their mothers. Consequently, they lost the Grimaldi name but these men quickly adopted the name in order to more fully legitimize their claim to the principality.

So, in this day, if Rainier's and Grace's son, Prince Albert, dies without an heir, his sister, Princesse Caroline, a widow with three children, will succeed her father.

For those of us shocked by the naughty antics of young Princess Stephanie, Edwards reminds us that most of the Grimaldis were not pillars of moral rectitude. Observing their dark past, Edwards says that "this early history of the Grimaldis, 'an ambitious, hot-blooded, unscrupulous race, keen to plunder, swift to revenge and furious in battle,' is entangled from the 13th to the 16th centuries not only with the wars of the Genoise but with the quarrels and hatreds, the conquests and stratagems of other Italian republics. Whenever there was fighting to be done, it seemed, a Grimaldi laid his hand upon a sword and led his followers into battle."

Quite a contentious lot they were, not only fighting foreign armies but also quarreling among themselves. More likely than not, the Grimaldi princes did not live in harmony with their wives, and, therefore, there was nearly always domestic strife as well as hostility toward either France or Italy.

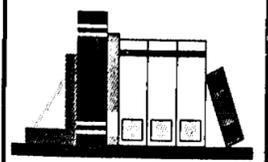

Later French kings, from Louis XIII to Louis XVI, promulgated a number of charters guaranteeing freedom to the princes of Monaco to rule their tiny piece of rock on the Mediterranean Sea, although with certain restrictions regarding control of Monaco's foreign policy and financial affairs. One Grimaldi princess was even executed, a la Marie Antoinette, during the French Revolution.

Eventually, gambling casinos were allowed which provided badly needed funds for the principality as well as the usually strapped rulers. It was not until the emergence of Aristotle Onassis in this century that Rainier discovered that the ownership of Monte Carlo Casino and its properties was controlled by the wily Greek and his consortium. Because this dominance was detrimental to Monaco and its people, Rainier forced a showdown which ousted Onassis and allowed Rainier to assume a more democratic rule.

With the sparkling arrival of Grace Kelly, things took a decided turn for the better in Monaco. Because of her consuming interest in the arts, she encouraged the establishment and growth of culture, such as theater and ballet and other fields of artistic endeavor.

Undoubtedly, she was also a tourist attraction along with the gaming tables, but she was also a tireless patron of social causes. Without pretentious fanfare, Princess Grace devoted her life to Monaco in support of her husband, who increasingly relied on her advice and good judgment.

BIBLIO-FILE

By Elizabeth P. Walker

Too, "she traveled quite frequently during the late seventies. Ireland had become one of her favorite places to visit and she was researching her Kelly-Irish roots... Irish literature also became a compelling interest. She had recently inaugurated the Princess Grace Library on the Rock and was speedily building up a research center for Irish scholars, with many rare books and the manuscripts of James Joyce and many other famous Irish writers."

After her tragic death in 1982, "Monagasques could date the principality's history in the 20th century as Before Grace and After Grace. Her union with Rainier had been the turning point in Monaco's esteem. She brought dignity and international celebrity to the principality, giving it a recognition factor apart from the gaming tables at Monte Carlo."

Edwards has given us a full, colorful history of the Grimaldis, past and present, with entertaining highlights of their checkered history. After being exposed to their follies and successes, we have to admire their survival to the present.

Elizabeth Walker's Biblio-file column runs on alternate weeks in this section.

'Candyman' is a creepy, bloody thriller

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Urban legends are a staple of slumber parties and campouts in suburbia.

Everyone younger than 35 who grew up in the suburbs knows the one about the baby sitter who kept getting phone calls telling her to check the he'll appear behind you breathing down your neck. And most likely rip your guts out with the hook that he has in place of a hand.

Helen Lyle (Virginia Madsen) is a graduate student writing a thesis on urban legends when she hears about Candyman. She also hears that the residents of the Cabrini Green projects in Chicago attribute at least one vicious murder to him. So along with her trusty sidekick Bernadette (Kasi Lemmons) they take off to the projects to photograph the murder scene for their thesis.

What they find there is the Candyman's spooky lair where residents leave candy as a sacrifice to appease him.

Of course, the Candyman does appear in the ominous form of actor Tony Todd and he slowly draws Helen into his grasp. Todd is deceptively scary as the Candyman, he's not a scene chaser, or an eye-roller or a sneerer as too many villains are these days.

Although the film has a few loose ends, a couple of holes in the plot (what horror movie doesn't), a silly ending, and some annoyingly politically correct conversation thrown in for good measure, the story is so imaginative and tightly written that it makes one wonder why Barker lags so far behind Stephen King in popularity. There's enough going on that the film still is compelling between the blood letting, of which there is a lot. As the Candyman says: "Blood is for spilling."

Helen Lyle (Virginia Madsen) enters the Candyman's lair in the creepy new thriller of the same name.

As directed by Bernard Rose, the film moves forward with the quick images of a video — not surprising because Rose cut his director's teeth on videos for UB40, Bronski Beat and Roy Orbison. Philip Glass' score helps set the eerie mood, too.

Madsen — who was recently seen as Carolyn Warmus in a television movie — is quite good as Helen, whose controlled life gradually erodes into unspeakable horror.

"Candyman," like most urban legends, deals with more than just some guy in a hockey mask with a big knife. And like most urban legends, it'll stay with you for a while. It's just the right film for an autumn evening. Leave the lights on.

All these stories happened to a friend's cousin and anyone who tells one will swear it's true.

That might just be what makes "Candyman" so darn spooky. Clive Barker has taken an urban legend and turned it into a book — "The Forbidden" — and from there into a very creepy movie.

The legend of the Candyman is this: If you look into a mirror and say his name five times,

Heart-less

The Theatre Arts Club will open its 82nd season with the Pulitzer Prize-winning play "Crimes of the Heart," scheduled to be performed at the Player's Playhouse on Friday, Oct. 23, for members and their guests. Warm hearted, imaginative and zany, the play humorously examines the plight of three sisters betrayed by their passions. A priggish cousin and an awkward lawyer make the sadness and gravity of the situation somehow seem hilarious. The play is directed by Marie Carpenter and produced by Jean Dickinson. Set design is by DeLores Haska. Members of the cast are, back row from left, Nancy McCullough, Julia Keim and Irene Blatchford. In the front row, from left, are Karen Quarnstrom, Donna Ridella and Monica Locke.

'The Mighty Ducks' scores big

By Marion Trainor

Parents who take their children to see the comedy drama "The Mighty Ducks" will find that this Walt Disney film has much to offer beyond the excitement of watching a wonderful cast of kids play peewee hockey.

The story is set in Minnesota where peewee hockey is as important as NHL games. Some of the teams have equipment, money for ice time and a coach.

Others, like the feisty group of ragtag kids we meet in "The Mighty Ducks," must do with less, such as using newspapers for kneepads. All this is about to change, though.

Gordon Bombay (Emilio Estevez), an uptown cutthroat lawyer, is charged with drunken driving and sentenced to public service coaching an inner city pee wee hockey team — which, of course, turns out to be the Ducks. The judge hopes it will bring him down a peg and return him to the practice of law with a better attitude.

The job brings back memories of his own hockey days when, as a star player on a peewee team he was humiliated by a coach when he flubbed the shot that would have won the championship. He doesn't get off to a great start, but the kids set him straight and with his skill the Ducks come together as a team and make the playoffs.

Their chief rival in the race to the top is the Hawks, a moneyed group which is coached by the mean-spirited tyrant who bullied Bombay.

"The Mighty Ducks" is on the same scale of good entertainment as "The Bad News Bears." It has a lot of laughs. Estevez and the kids are excellent. "The Mighty Ducks" is a slam-bang winner.

Croquet league captures Pointers' fancy

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

There's a sport that combines the skill of golf, the strategy of chess and the angles of billiards.

It's croquet — River Place style — and it's a long way from the back-yard game that nearly everyone played as a kid.

"If back-yard croquet is checkers, this is chess," said Scott Wilson of Grosse Pointe Farms, who has played in the River Place leagues since their formation in 1990.

Wilson, whose team is called Mallets for Hire ("That's because we've had so many sponsors"), started playing croquet about 10 years ago in a chamber of commerce league in Detroit. When the River Place leagues were established, he and some of his former teammates got the call.

"They wanted some people who knew the game," Wilson said. "We won the first year because we knew the rules, but now a lot of the other teams have caught up."

Tim Weldon of Grosse Pointe Park started playing last May when the outdoor season started, but he has already developed an appreciation for the game.

"It's addictive," Weldon said. "I love the competition and it's a sport that makes you think. When you play a match for an hour and a half you're exhausted mentally and physically. There's constant strategy."

One of the new teams in the league this season is sponsored by Sparky Herbert's in Grosse Pointe and is made up of Grosse Pointers Mark and David Van Osdol, Phil and Dean Rahm, Matt McKenna and Tucker Holland.

"We rented the course for a party, played a couple hours and really enjoyed it," said Mark Van Osdol, who is the team captain. "We decided to get six guys together and play, and Darryl Finken, who owns Sparky Herbert's, has been real helpful."

As captain, Mark is the only member of the team who can discuss strategy with a player during a match.

"We're all pretty much equal players, but it's good to have a third person to present another option before a shot," he said. "You have only 45 seconds to take a shot and there's a lot to think about. You don't know what your shot is until the team before you takes its shot. You have to think about where you want your ball to end up and where the other team can send you with its shot."

The outdoor season at River Place ended last week with a tournament. Now the players are gearing up for indoor play, which begins Monday, Oct. 26.

"We have the only indoor court in the United States," said Mary Pittman, a Grosse Pointe Park resident, who is the director of the River Place Athletic and Croquet Club. Pittman is also certified by the United States Croquet Association to referee and teach.

"The referee settles any disputes or questions that might come up and runs the deadness board. It can get pretty hectic when there are three doubles pairs on the lawn at the same time," she said.

River Place can handle 32 teams in its summer leagues and 16 in the winter. This summer there were 15 teams with six players apiece.

Jere Johnston, who is the president of River Place Holdings and an accomplished croquet player, had to literally beg for players to start the league three years ago.

"I went to some of the businesses in the area and asked them to get me six players and dress them in white. I said 'I don't care if you have to pay them to play, just get them here,'" Johnston said. "We got four teams together and that was the start of it."

In two years, the league grew to 24 teams, but this season there was a decline in participation.

"It peaked the second year because all the players were at the same level," Johnston said. "Now many of the players have advanced and others aren't that intense. That's why we've gone to beginner, intermediate and advanced leagues. I've participated in many sports, including sailing and triathlon, but this is the most mentally exhausting. You have to think three or four shots ahead."

Johnston, who recently com-

Three local teams qualify for net finals

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe will be well represented at the girls state Class A tennis championships in Midland this weekend.

All three of the local Class A teams made strong regional showings last weekend to qualify for the state competition.

University Liggett School and Grosse Pointe South had a 1-2 finish in the regional hosted by ULS and Grosse Pointe North finished second to Port Huron Northern in the Sterling Heights Stevenson regional.

"All three teams can do well in certain flights," said ULS coach Chuck Wright, whose team edged South 25-24 in the regional. "If Heather (Heidel) can play we should be seeded in the top four in five flights. Our first three singles players are undefeated and our No. 1 doubles team's only loss was to a team from Toledo.

"Our second doubles team has lost twice to Grosse Pointe South's (Angela) Roxas and (Alexandra) Wehmeier, but it's always been close. So much depends on the luck of the draw when you get that far. If one of your unseeded players gets a bad draw it can really hurt you."

Last year ULS' string of 11 straight state championships was interrupted by Kalamazoo Loy-Norrix as the Lady Knights finished third. ULS has been ranked No. 1 in Class A throughout the current season and goes into the finals as the favorite.

North and South rule cross country leagues

Lady Devils win 14th title

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Folks looking for the definition of dynasty don't have to search any further than Grosse Pointe South's girls cross country team.

The Lady Devils beat Romeo 20-43 last week to wrap up their 14th consecutive league championship. The victory gave South a 6-0 mark in the Macomb Area Conference White Division. Coach Steve Zaranek's squads haven't lost a league meet since 1979.

South will also be the heavy favorite in the MAC White Division meet Saturday at Metropolitan Beach. All three divisions of the MAC will compete on the same course with the first race scheduled for 9:30 a.m.

Romeo took first place in last week's meet and the Lady Devils grabbed the next nine spots on the strong running of Sarah Gordon, Sandy Dierkes, Rachel O'Byrne, Mary Rowe, Heather Whitten, Amy Balok, Heidi Wise, Melissa Wise and Lisa McCurdy.

South will also host the Class A and B regional meets at Metropolitan Beach on Saturday, Oct. 31, with races beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Boys CC

South's boys cross country team wrapped up its second straight MAC White dual meet championship with a 24-37 victory over Romeo.

Dan Quinn finished second to Romeo's Chris Hincks, but ran a strong race.

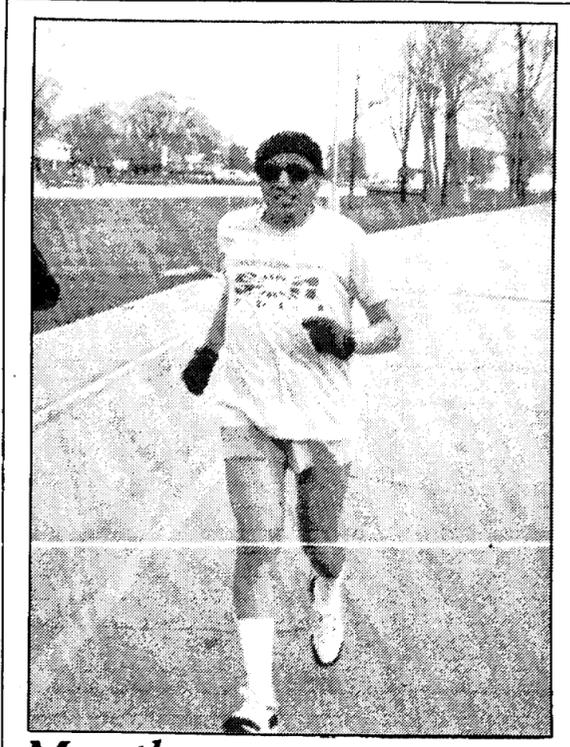

"Dan was neck-and-neck with him until the last mile," said South coach Tom Wise. "The meet was run on Romeo's course and Chris knows the turns a little better."

Pat Butler, Josh Wood, Tim Nicholson, Dan Taylor, Adam Rhodes and Tom Coyle followed Quinn across the finish line for the Blue Devils.

Wise said he was also pleased with the performances of Matt Stentz, Chris Alif, John O'Loughlin, Chris Johnson and Matt Weaver.

The Blue Devils finished 6-0 in the White Division and will try Saturday for their second straight league meet championship.

"The thing we have to do is beat the No. 2 runners from the other teams," Wise said. "If we do that we should have no problem winning. If we can't, Warren-Mott or Utica could be a problem for us."

Marathon man

Former Grosse Pointe resident Pete Bolos, 79, who now lives in St. Clair Shores, completed the recent Detroit Free Press Marathon in 5:29.48. Bolos has competed in several marathons after a career as a boxer.

Norsemen beat unbeaten foe

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North's boys cross country team made up a lot of ground after losing its first Macomb Area Conference Blue Division meet to L'Anse Creuse.

"They got us out of the chute when we weren't ready," said Norsemen coach Pat Wilson after his team earned a share of the dual meet championship with a 24-34 victory over previously unbeaten Cousino.

North, Cousino and L'Anse Creuse finished in a three-way tie for first place with 7-1 division records.

The three leaders will try to settle matters Saturday in the division meet at Metropolitan Beach.

"We've improved a lot since that first meet, but I'm sure L'Anse Creuse has, too," Wilson said. "All three of us have very young teams. I thought we might be a year away because we have only one senior, but everybody else is as young or younger than we are."

Wilson was impressed with his squad's effort against Cousino.

"Before that meet we'd had only two times under 18 minutes and in that one our first seven were all in the 17s," he said. "Everyone on the team set personal bests except for one who had a bad back and he

Sophomore Mike Schmidt, who has been the Norsemen's leader in the last several meets, finished second overall with a time of 17:11.

"He's always been in the top four or five, but in the last three weeks he's made a break to the front," Wilson said. "He was 14 seconds ahead of our second man (Dave Bonkosky) which is the biggest gap of the year. Usually it's been six or seven seconds."

Bonkosky was fourth overall in 17:25. Marty Bogen was fifth (17:26); Mark Phipps sixth (17:27); and Bill Stevenson seventh (17:25). Bob Stevenson ran a 17:44 and Mike Weigand a 17:47 to round out North's contingent.

Girls CC

North's girls cross country team also wrapped up the MAC Blue title, finishing 9-0 in the conference after a 15-50 victory over Roseville and a 19-27 triumph over Cousino.

Jessica McLain finished first overall for the Lady Norsemen with a time of 19:01. North's Becky Clor, Nina Misuraca and Alissa Zepke took the next three spots and Anna Collinson finished ninth to complete the Lady Norsemen's scoring.

North's girls improved their overall dual meet record to 11-0.

Defense keeps North's title hopes alive

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

It was fitting that a defensive play would decide Grosse Pointe North's 10-3 double overtime victory over Clintondale last weekend.

"It was a very defense-oriented game," said Norsemen coach Frank Sumner after North defensive back Carl Bommarito knocked down a fourth-down pass in the end zone to preserve the win that kept North's hopes alive for at least a share of the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division title.

"Both teams hit very well. They had us defended well and we did the same to them."

North, which is 5-1 in league play, will be assured of at least a tie if it can beat Lakeview on Saturday in the Norsemen's homecoming game.

"It's all up to us now," Sumner said. "If we take care of business we'll be OK, but we have to focus on beating Lakeview. We can't look past them because they're 0-7."

The Clintondale game was scoreless through regulation time. North failed to score after a fumble recovery on the Dragons' 13-yard line when the Norsemen got a high snap on a 26-yard field goal attempt.

Clintondale also failed to score late in the first half when a short punt gave the Dragons a first down on the North 25. Later, an interception gave Clintondale a first down at the Norsemen's 29, but again the North defense held.

North tied the score on a 28-yard field goal by Scott Spada.

The Norsemen had the first possession in the second extra period. Eric Peters picked up six yards on first down and Mike Haskell took the ball inside the one on the next play. Spada then went into the end zone on a quarterback sneak and kicked the extra point.

Clintondale lost five yards on its first play, then had to go to the air in a desperate attempt to stay alive. A pass on second down fell incomplete. Then Jeff Young sacked the quarterback for a six-yard loss. With fourth down coming up, Sumner called timeout.

"I wanted to remind the kids that they would probably come Carl's way because of the formation they were in," Sumner said. "He made the big play. He also did a good job on third down. We got the sack because he had his man covered so well."

Haskell picked up 62 yards in 23 carries and Peters finished with 44 yards on the ground.

North had several defensive standouts. Nick Temkow had 16 hits, one more than Matt Dube. Mike Mikelic and Jeff Adams each had nine hits.

Temkow and Rob Hamilla each recovered fumbles and Pete Fox and Steve Guest had interceptions for the Norsemen.

Fraser back ends Devils' bid for title

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's football team saw enough of Fraser's Lyle Smith to last a lifetime last weekend, but the Blue Devils wouldn't mind seeing him at least once more.

"If we can win our next two games (against Ford II and Grosse Pointe North) we should make the playoffs," said Blue Devils' coach Jon Rice after Fraser eliminated South from the Macomb Area Conference White Division race with a 9-7 victory. "Then we'd probably see Fraser again."

The Ramblers, who are 7-0, lead the region's point standings and would meet the fourth-place team, which could be South or Grosse Pointe North.

This week South has to get past a strong Falcons' team in a game Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Sterling Heights Stevenson.

"They're big as usual and they still have that run and shoot offense, which you don't see a lot in high school," Rice said. "Ford has a lot of quickness at quarterback and running back."

"We put some good hits on him, but he still managed to get a couple yards every time he had the ball," Rice said. "Usually he breaks loose for some long gains, but he had only one run in double digits. That shows what kind of defense we were playing."

The winning 68-yard drive took 16 plays and ate more than nine minutes off the clock. Fraser's ball-control offense also held the ball for the final 5:38.

"We were hoping we could get the ball back one more time," Rice said.

Chad Hepner's 53-yard touchdown run midway through the first quarter and Tim Har-mount's extra point gave South a 7-0 lead.

Fraser cut the lead to 7-3 early in the second period on a 38-yard field goal by Matt Fishburn.

Twice the Blue Devils had drives stopped by major penalties on third down and short yardage situations.

"Those hurt us big time," Rice said.

South had several defensive standouts in the game, including Ted Hanawalt and Bill Gough, who led the team in tackles. Don Leal and Shawn McCann also played well. The Blue Devils allowed only two pass completions as defensive backs Jeff Nyenhuis and Paul Gentile and linebacker John Wortman had excellent games.

North posts two wins

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North's girls basketball opponents won't fatten their scoring averages against the Lady Norsemen.

In fact, they're having trouble scoring at all.

Last week North beat Fraser 46-20 and posted a 40-32 win over Warren-Mott to improve to 5-1 in the Macomb Area Conference White Division and 10-2 overall, and both times the Lady Norsemen held their foes to single-digit scoring in the first half.

Tonight, Oct. 22, North will have to be at its best defensively and offensively as it tries to hand Grosse Pointe South its first league loss. It's South's home game, but it will be played in North's gym because the Blue Devils' home court is still under repair.

"The game against Mott was two completely different halves," said coach Gary Bennett. "We were very good in the first half and led 19-5 at halftime. Our defense caused them a lot of problems. They didn't even get a shot for long periods of time."

"The second half was a complete turnaround. We weren't getting to spots on defense. Mott changed its defense and we didn't handle it well and we missed a lot of layups."

The Marauders got within seven points of North in the second half.

"Maybe we shouldn't have told them at halftime that they played a great first half, but I don't like to play mind games with the kids," Bennett said. "But for some reason we didn't come out with the same concentration in the second half."

Heather Arioli carried the Lady Norsemen on offense with 17 points and also had seven rebounds. Alanna Morrison and Amy Sacka each scored six points and Maureen Zolik had five steals.

North played a strong second half in its victory over Fraser after leading 14-7 at the intermission.

"Our constant pressure got to them," Bennett said. "We got a lot of layups off turnovers and this time we made the shots."

North broke the game open when it outscored the Ramblers 15-4 in the third quarter.

Kristen Loeher led the Lady Norsemen with 11 points. Laura Cartwright had six assists and six steals.

peted in the midwest regional against top players from several states, said that physical ability isn't as important as mental prowess.

"In that respect, croquet is like sailing. You can weigh 300 pounds or 150 pounds and still be successful," he said. "In golf you have to be very coordinated to hit the ball 250 yards, but croquet doesn't take that type of coordination to be successful. Also, men and women are equal. Last year the national doubles championship team was a man and a woman."

Johnston estimated that one-quarter to one-third of the River Place participants are women.

Beginner classes are conducted each Wednesday at 5 p.m. for folks who might be interested in playing croquet. There are also videos available for players who want to learn more about strategy.

River Place offers croquet-only memberships, which include a reduction in individual lawn and league fees; eligibility for club tournaments and the croquet challenge ladder; free use of the video library; and the privilege of representing the club at local, regional and national tournaments.

For more information about River Place, call 259-1106.

"We want to expose as many people as we can to the sport," Pittman said. "They'll meet a lot of nice people and there's plenty of good competition. It can get pretty heated at times, but it's all in fun."

Lady Devils brilliant against Ford

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's girls basketball team put on a clinic in the first half of its game with Ford II last week.

"They played incredible team basketball," said coach Peggy VanEckoute after the Lady Devils built a 46-9 halftime lead and coasted to a 71-24 rout of the Falcons.

"They were totally unselfish with their passing. We ran the fast break so well and were making two or three passes before shooting. We just played super basketball on both ends of the floor."

It was a performance South hopes to duplicate tonight, Oct. 22, when it plays Grosse Pointe North for the second time this season. The Lady Norsemen figure to be South's toughest

Adlloch still rules

Adlloch and Associates Realtors must like the feeling of being on top of the Neighborhood Club Men's Hardball league.

The team won its seventh straight championship by nipping the Bad Sticks 1-0.

"I'm proud of our team," said Adlloch general manager J.V. Reno. "The Bad Sticks have always been our toughest competitor and we're just happy we were able to hold them off and win by one run."

Crescent pair takes first

Crescent Sail Yacht Club's Paul Deeds and Dorothy Hoffman edged Bayview Yacht Club's Mike Uznis and Greg Ryan to take first place in the recent J. Otto Scherer Memorial Regatta.

It was the closest finish in the 29-year history of the event, which caps the Detroit River Yachting Association junior sailors' summer program. The regatta honors the late J. Otto Scherer, who lived in Grosse Pointe Park, and is hosted by CSYC on water adjacent to its facilities.

The two top boats were tied with 5 3/4 points after the final race, but first place was awarded to Deeds and Hoffman because they had finished ahead of Uznis and Ryan in two of the three races.

Third place was also closely contested. Peter Feldman and Russell Nutter, sailing for Bayview, took the bronze medal by a quarter-point over Mike Hendrie and Natasha Lie of Crescent Sail.

All of the participants, who sailed in Flying Junior sloops, displayed exceptional boat-handling skill in heavy seas and 30-knot winds. Deeds and Hoffman executed perfect starts, despite the challenging conditions.

"We saw some of the best sailing and best competition I can recall," said race committee chairman Herb Mainwaring, a past commodore at CSYC.

Other members of the race committee were commodore Jack Schulte; past commodores Bill Herbert, Gene Bertelsen and Frank Boehm; and Jo-Dan Harting, Chuck Collins, Bernie Tonowski, Ed Boothroyd and Marie Mainwaring.

Mrs. J. Otto Scherer, 94, presented the trophies and congratulated all the participants.

Barons win easily

Chris Morkut and Bronson Gentry each scored two touchdowns and David Grant played outstanding defense to lead the Grosse Pointe Red Barons to a 40-6 victory this week over the Sterling Heights Redskins.

The Red Barons also got tackles from Chris Woods, Pat McPherson, Ben Burns, Jeff Kalkhoff, Phil Cataldo and Steve Gayman. Kevin Brandon had a good punt return and T.J. Mooney handled the kicking.

In the junior varsity game, Grosse Pointe scored on a 54-yard run by Mark Weber and a five-yard run by Danny Griesbaum. The Red Barons also got good performances from backs Ted Swarthout, Rory Cleary, Jimmy Louisell and J.J. Kinkele.

The blocking was handled by Mike O'Sullivan, Tom Davis, Andrew Hendrie, Pat Ball, Joe Slavik and Brian Granger.

The Red Barons got tackles from Scott Koerber, Ricky Pesta, Eric Dunlap, William Solomon, Jeremy Linne, Jack Lucido, Steve Allor and Dean Cataldo.

In the freshman game, the Red Barons got three touchdowns from Josh Lorence and another from K.C. Cleary. Lorence scored two extra points and Grosse Pointe added another conversion on a pass from Andy Hill to Mike Luzi.

The Red Barons were led in the trenches by offensive linemen Mike Cataldo, Andy Delmege, John Laga, Don Northey, Don Badaczewski, Joe Goczycza, Mark Lindeman, Noah Cheek, Austin Clayton, James Burns, Tony Gatliff and Anthony Allor.

Defensive standouts were Michael Prieur, Jason Rusko, Haider Samhat, Brandon DeGuvera and Sean O'Sullivan.

competition for the Macomb Area Conference White Division title. The Lady Devils posted a seven-point victory in the first meeting of the season between the crosstown rivals.

Angela Drake led South with 26 points against Ford II, but Stephanie Coddens had 24 points, 17 rebounds, seven assists and nine steals in a brilliant all-around performance.

Shannon McGratty had 10 points, six rebounds and four steals; Susie Faremouth contributed nine points, five rebounds, four assists and four steals; and Sarah Foley collected six assists.

Earlier, South rolled past Romeo 54-21 in a game that was marred by 25 fouls by the Bulldogs.

The Lady Devils, who led 38-8 at halftime, made 17 of their 29 free-throw attempts.

Coddens had 19 points and five rebounds, while Drake had 17 points, 10 rebounds and five steals.

Foley had three assists and three steals and Faremouth collected four points and four assists.

Lady Knights split games

University Liggett School's girls basketball team had several strong performances last week as it beat Lutheran Westland 47-35 in a Metro Conference game.

Juli Grant led the Lady Knights with 15 points. Jamila Hoard collected nine points and 11 rebounds to help ULS improve its record to 5-2 in the conference and 6-6 overall.

Earlier the Lady Knights dropped a 57-27 decision to Metro Conference leader Lutheran North.

ULS wins district opener

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

University Liggett School's soccer team got state tournament action started on a winning note this week as the Knights rolled past Bloomfield Hills Roper 8-0.

One more victory could send ULS into the Class C-D district championship game against Rochester Hills Lutheran Northwest on Friday at 4 p.m. at Oakland Christian.

"Northwest has beaten us twice, but I think we can beat them if we play our best," said Knights' coach David Backhurst. "They beat us by one goal the first time and 5-2 last week, but I don't think they're three goals better than we are. Maybe they'll be a little complacent going into Friday's game."

"They have three real good offensive players we have to concentrate on. They also have an excellent sweeper so if we can attack from the flanks we can score on them."

Jeff Backhurst led the way against Roper with four goals, while Gary Spicer had two goals and two assists.

"That's the kind of leadership you want from your senior captains," David Backhurst said.

Frank Tymrak scored the other Knights' goal.

Halfback Henry Ackerman turned in one of his best efforts, although he didn't figure in the scoring.

Last week ULS dropped two of its three games. The Knights bowed to Lutheran Northwest 5-2 as Omar Sawaf and Chris Corneau scored the only ULS goals.

The Knights avenged an earlier 1-0 setback by Hamtramck with a 3-2 victory over the Cosmos.

Hamtramck scored during the first five minutes of the game, but ULS came back with goals by Tymrak and Alex Dale to take a 2-1 lead. Matt Spicer scored the Knights' other goal in the second half.

The Knights closed out the week with a 3-0 loss to Lutheran North.

"We were missing two starters because Corneau twisted his knee against Hamtramck and Eric Lindauer was ill," David Backhurst said. "North outplayed us, but Vince Harkins was spectacular in goal. He made 27 stops and some were spectacular. One he dove at and it stuck to his fingertips like he had glue on them."

Grosse Pointe North, in the regional championship game at Macomb Community College on Friday at 3:30 p.m.

"They're a good team, but I think we can play with them," Christensen said.

Last week, South beat Utica 5-1 but the Blue Devils' performance didn't please the coach.

"We just went through the motions," Christensen said. "For 20 minutes we played some of the worst soccer I've ever seen."

Messacar and Mike Reynaert each scored two goals for South and Meehan tallied the other one.

game with the first of his two goals. Tim Reynaert scored the other goal for South, which led 5-0 at halftime, from a corner kick by his brother.

"We came prepared to play after a tough week last week," Christensen said. "We had a lot of good performances."

Karl Davids, a junior midfielder called up from the junior varsity, played well as did sweeper Andy Bramlage.

John Mullin, who has been pressed into duty as a goalie after a season-ending knee injury suffered by Chris Dowe, played well.

South played Roseville in its second pre-district game last Wednesday. A victory would send the Blue Devils' against De La Salle, a 1-0 winner over

South booters rout Ferndale

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's soccer team bounced back from a lackluster performance with one of its best efforts of the year to stay alive in the state Class A tournament.

"I thought we played real well," said Blue Devils coach Mark Christensen after his team began tournament play with an 8-0 rout of Ferndale. "I was concerned with Ferndale because it beat U-D Jesuit 5-0."

Pat Meehan and Ryan Messacar were a winning combination for South. Meehan scored five goals, including four in the first half, and all of them were a result of passes from Messacar.

Mike Reynaert opened the scoring six minutes into the

PLEASE DON'T DELAY! SPAY OR NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY!

An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy.

Halloween has witches' cauldron of plant lore

Some plants that come to mind at this witching season of Halloween are the dragon trees, native to the South Seas, and the mandrake, which is said to scream when it is pulled from the ground.

The legend in the Solomon Islands is that the dragon tree is so named because it grew from the grave of a sea monster and is considered to be the most potent magic plant of all. The resin from this plant, called dragon's blood, was brought by Venetian merchants to Europe in medieval times and was considered to be an excellent love incense. If burned near an open window for seven midnights in a row, the escaping fumes were guaranteed to bring back straying lovers or attract new one, whichever seemed warranted.

The mandrake is the oldest magic plant in botanical history. In the Bible it is mentioned as an aphrodisiac, and in Greek legend it was called the plant of Circe and credited with the power to turn men into swine. In the Dark Ages, its roots were an integral part of every witch's cauldron, and in the Middle Ages, a concoction of mandrake was an opiate and a love potion.

Everyone believed that the mandrake grew under the gallows, and if anyone heard it shriek as it was pulled from the ground, he would go mad. The name means "the dragon resembling man."

Some other spooky plants are the carnivorous ones. Strictly speaking, most plants don't eat, they drink. But one category of plants, startlingly enough, eats.

Carnivorous plants sound pretty dangerous, but they really make very interesting house plants and are much more friendly than they sound. One local woman, wishing to send a plant to her small nephew who was suffering from chicken pox, ordered a Venus flytrap. The child was delighted and fed it tiny bits of hamburger. In due time, the child recovered and went back to school, but the plant died of overeating.

Carnivorous plants are ideal for terrariums, because they do well in high humidity and, once they are established, require very little attention. The best ones to choose are Venus flytraps, the exotic fringed sundews, and campion, or catchfly, because they are fairly small and do not grow to a great height, but if you have a big container you could consider cobra lillies or pitcher plants, which can reach a height of about 4 feet.

The main requirements for all these plants are water, humidity and plenty of light. The more sunlight they can have the better. Cobra lillies and pitcher plants like their roots in standing water, while sundews, catchflies and Venus flytraps like moist soil.

If the plants have plenty of sunlight and moisture, you don't really have to feed them anything, but they do occasionally enjoy a tiny bit of raw hamburger or an insect or two. But they don't want any of the standard plant foods or fertilizers, which upsets their digestive systems.

Halloween evolved from a Scotch-Irish festival, which dates to pre-Christian times. The Festival of Shamhain, the God of the Dead, was held on Nov. 1, the first day of the Celtic year. Later, this was combined with the Christian feasts of All Saints Day on Nov. 1 and All Souls Day on Nov. 2.

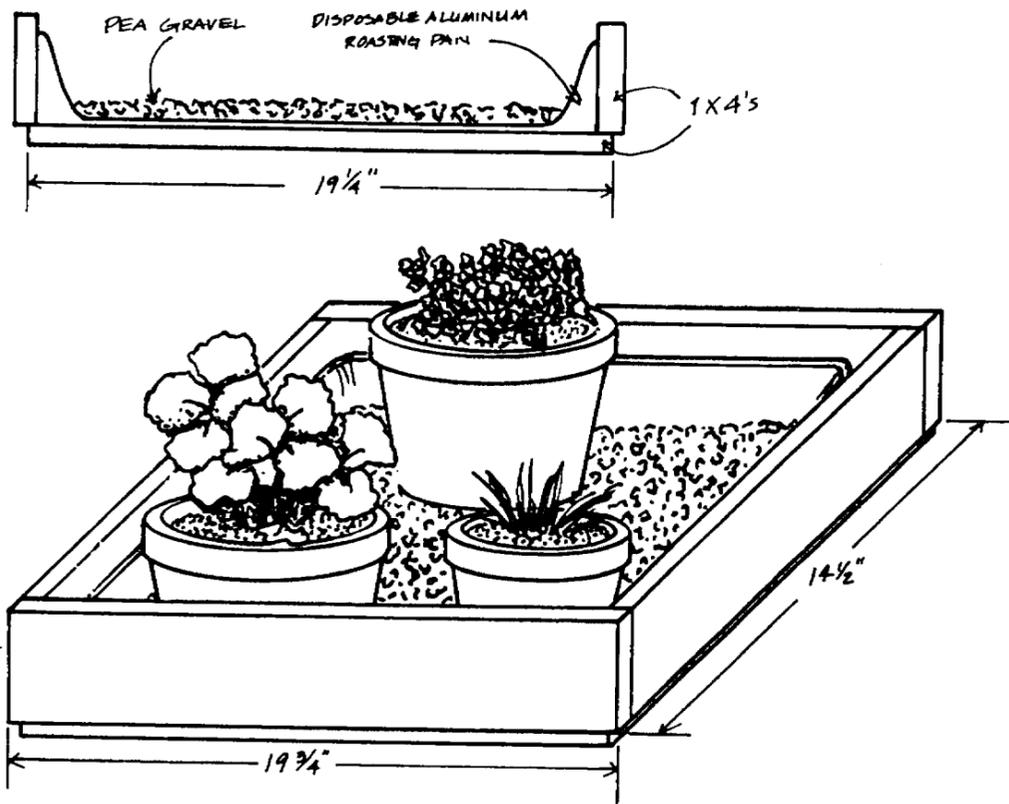

In medieval Britain, elves, fairies and ghosts were believed to haunt the Earth at this time and it was customary to build huge bonfires to ward them off. The early jack-o'-lanterns were small, and contained "bonfires" to protect the house.

Pumpkins, called pompions by the earliest settlers in this country, were among the chief food sources of the American Indians, second only to corn, and were considered to be under the dominion of the moon. They come in all sizes, from the newly developed miniatures to the county-fair-winners of huge girth. Their use as jack-o'-lanterns is an American idea adapted from the lanterns which had been made of big, hollowed-out turnips in England since medieval times, and even earlier in Scotland and Ireland.

Deadly nightshade, a symbol of sin in the Near East, is another lovely Halloween plant. Its purple and yellow flowers have a sinister look and the berries are extremely poisonous. Then there's hellebore, described by the Bishop of Down thus: "And green its glaucous leaves expand with fingers like a mermaid's hand."

Happy Halloween!

Bring your garden indoors with this easy-to-build, leak-proof plant container made with western softwood.

Fall's the time to move your garden indoors

As the thermometer begins to drop, it's time to start thinking about bringing some of those tender herbs and flowers into the house. The plants will love it and you'll love the added color during the long dark days of winter.

This leakproof tray, made from versatile softwood, makes an attractive and useful container to house a collection of small potted plants. You can keep the tray on a counter top, window sill or floor — wherever there's sufficient light for your plants to grow.

The wood container is built around a disposable aluminum roasting pan, so pots can be watered without damaging either the container or the surface it's sitting on. The aluminum pan, available at any grocery store, comes in a variety of sizes, both larger and smaller than the 12-1/2 by 18 size selected for this project.

The sides and base of the container are made from standard 1x4 lumber, with the base inset 1/4-inch on all sides. For a 12-1/2 by 18 pan, you will need two lengths of 1x4 for the sides, each 19-3/4 inches long; and two lengths 13 inches long for the ends. You'll also need four 19-1/4 lengths of 1x4 for the base. (Note: Pan sizes vary significantly so be sure to purchase the pan before you build the container. Dimensions can be adapted to fit almost any size pan.)

Build the outer frame by connecting the sides and ends with carpenter's glue and 4d finishing nails, three per joint. You can avoid splitting the wood by pre-drilling the nail holes using a drill bit slightly smaller than the diameter of the nails. For a more finished appearance, use a nail set to recess the nails, then fill the holes with putty.

Turn the frame upside down and center the bottom boards on the base. There should be 1/4 inch between the edges of the base and the outer edge of the frame, on all sides. Glue and nail the base in place with 4d nails, using three nails at the ends and five or six along the side edges.

Sand and finish the container to match your decor. Since it will not be subject to water damage, you can use any interior stain, paint or varnish.

With the aluminum roasting pan in place, you may want to add a small amount of pea gravel or other small stones to keep the pots from sitting directly in water. Now you're ready to bring your garden indoors.

Tool and materials list (dimensions given are for 12-1/2" x 18" roasting pan):

Materials:

- 1 disposable aluminum roasting pan
- 13 linear feet of 1x4 lumber
- 1/2 pound of 4d finishing nails
- Carpenter's glue
- Wood putty (optional)

Tools:

- Saw
- Hammer
- Drill
- Nail set (optional)

For a free list of other do-it-yourself projects you can build with softwood, write to Western Wood Products Association, Dept HI 992, Yeon Bldg., 522 SW Fifth Ave., Portland, Ore. 97204-2122.

Design, construction expo at Hyatt

The American Institute of Architects Michigan has teamed up with the American Society of Interior Designers of Michigan, the Construction Specifications Institute Detroit, and the Society for Marketing Professional Services Michigan to organize the first annual Design and Construction Expo '92. The convention will be held at the Hyatt Regency Dearborn on Thursday and Friday, Oct. 29-30.

Previously an annual fall event sponsored solely by AIA Michigan (The Michigan Society of Architects), this year marks the first time the organization has reached out to communicate with other design professionals representing the built environment in a convention setting. By meeting together, the allied organizations hope to provide a more comprehensive, value-enhanced educational program.

More than 40 professional seminars are directed at architects, interior designers, specification writers and other members of the building industry. Focusing on the convention's theme, "What a Great Idea!", innovation will be the key topic of this year's programs.

A wide spectrum of interests within the sponsoring organizations will be covered through the series of innovative programs in five separate tracks: design, marketing, practice, technology, and specifying. Of particular interest this year will be the series of marketing seminars which focus on the art of persuasion and how to use it effectively to get work during these trying economic times. Expo '92 will also feature nearly 100 industry-related exhibits.

The events of Expo '92 will be capped off with an evening's celebration of design talent, individual and firm honors at the annual AIA Michigan Design Awards and Recognitions banquet.

Buyers: Timing is everything

By Doug Stranahan

Regional Director
Century 21 of the Great Lakes

The old adage that "timing is everything" especially applies to buying a new home. And trying to be at the right house at the right time and get it for the right price, can be tricky. Here are some guidelines to assist you:

- Turn to the real estate section of your newspaper. Monitor the market and track home prices. Expect to spend 90 days watching the real estate market through advertisements. Question and investigate homes that are advertised month after month. Hard-to-sell properties could either be a warning sign or simply overpriced for the value.

- When a real estate agent provides you with descriptions of homes currently on the market from the Multiple Listing Service (MLS), ask for a list of homes that were on the market within the last six months or year in the same neighborhood. Compare asking prices to actual sales prices for the same type of homes.

- In addition to monitoring housing prices, learn to identify hot, up-and-coming neighborhoods by tracking selling prices from week to week. If one neighborhood experiences price booms while other house prices are sluggish, it's clear which community to invest in. If you're passionate about an upscale area — and on a budget — prepare to buy a fixer-upper and invest some money in renovation. Conversely, beware of buying a beautiful home in a marginal area. You may not get your money back when you sell.

- Keep close watch on the fluctuating mortgage interest rates. Low interest rates are the most inspiring reason to buy property. Watch the rate of U.S. Treasury bills. According to Sonny Bloch, well-known show host and real estate author, T-bills are a sure way of predicting the rise and fall of mortgage rates.

- Also watch the national discount rate, the rate at which banks can borrow money from the government. When the discount rate drops, banks pay less for borrowing the money and in turn reduce mortgage rates to the borrower.

Predicting when a market is ripe for homebuying is not an exact science — even for real estate experts. However, by following these simple tips — and staying on top of real estate trends — sales patterns and interest fluctuations, you are sure to get the best house for your buck.

Central air vs. window units

By Joe Zorc
PM Editorial Services

If you are considering installing central air conditioning, you first should look at all your options and weigh the benefits of both central air and window units.

With regard to window units, determine how much of the house you plan to cool, ask an appliance dealer how many square feet of space each unit can condition and add up the cost of all the units you will have to buy. Also figure in the cost of installing the upgraded wiring in all the locations.

As a comparison, get three bids from separate central-air-conditioning contractors. Make sure they all are licensed to work in your area and are insured. Ask them how they would run the duct work and where they would place the compressor (usually outside) and the fan (usually in the attic, a small closet or in the basement). Remember, the compressor must have adequate ventilation around the unit and should not be placed in a corner or too close to the house.

When determining where the central-air fan should be put, keep in mind the benefit of installing it in the upper part of the house, since cool air falls naturally.

In contrast, if you plan to install central air conditioning with a heat pump and do away with the furnace for heat, you may want to put the fan in the basement and registers in the flooring. This way, as the air rises, you get the best use of the heat.

Also ask central-air-conditioning contractors how much patching of the walls will be required and try to get them to give you a complete patch job. They will be more careful if they know they will have to hire someone to patch their holes. Also make sure the electrical work will be included along with the controls. You also may want special directional registers. In addition, programmable thermostats can be installed to increase the efficiency of the system.

There are many other factors that should be considered when deciding between central air and window units. Central air is efficient, quiet and gives you an even distribution of air. Window units, on the other hand, take up window space and are unattractive and noisy. They also are difficult to insulate from rodents and have to be stored in the winter.

Central air conditioning probably will cost two to three times that of window units, but overall, the money is probably well-spent — not only in terms of personal comfort, but also in the higher resale value that central air gives to your house.

Household Help by John Amantea

Q. My wife and I just purchased a new condominium in the Northeast region. The rooms are moderate in size, but the closet space could be larger. We are trying to utilize the space we have in all of our closets to its full potential, but with little success. Can you suggest anything we can do about this?

A. You probably couldn't increase the actual size of your closets, but you can put them to better use. By first assessing your personal needs, you can determine exactly what you need to do. If both of you will use the same closet in the bedroom, for example, determine what type of items will be stored.

For starters, the most common closet organizers are installed fabricated wire systems and prefabricated wood organizers. You can purchase the wire units in either vinyl or epoxy-coated wire baskets, and they come in many assorted styles. The coated wire units are popular because they are sturdy, lightweight and even allow for ventilation. They also require no finishing or maintenance, but assembly may vary with different manufacturers.

On the other hand, installing prefabricated wooden organizers will require the assembly of hardware and its components. Materials may also vary with manufacturers, but these units are primarily heavier than wire units and therefore much stronger.

Both wire and wooden units are acceptable, so you can decide which is most feasible for your convenience. Installing any of the closet organizers is quite basic. Your local home decorating store should have all the information you will need to create your own type of organizational system.

Q. The bedposts on my bed have decorative knobs at the top, and one of them is very loose. I have small children in my home, and I suspect they have handled and played with the knobs. However, I have used a good commercial adhesive, but sooner or later, the darned things come loose. Do you have any solutions?

A. There is hope, even though those little critters may or may not manhandle your bedpost knobs. You probably have an existing dowel of wood through the center of the knob. If at all possible, try to remove the old dowel and force the next size up into the hole of the bedpost. You may need to carve some wood from the post with a chisel to get a snug fit. Finally, if you prefer, also add a good adhesive to the job for extra strength and durability.

Landscape design course offered

A Landscape Design Study Course is being offered to those interested in expanding their knowledge of landscape design. The course will include use of plant materials, ecology, land utilization and planning, and developing a greater appreciation of surroundings.

The two-day program consists of 11 hours of lectures presented by community business leaders and educators.

Charles W. Cares, professor emeritus, landscape architecture at the University of Michigan, will present "Development of Landscape Architecture 1930 to 1992."

Patricia Cornelisse, landscape architect, M. S. Smith & Associates Inc., will present "Plants and Design" and "Standards of Evaluating Landscape Design."

"Public Works" will be offered by Robert Cowell, vice president, O'Boyle, Cowell, Blalock & Associates Inc., and "Small Parks" by Bob Doyle, associate, Johnson, Johnson & Roy Inc.

Michael J. Dul, Michael J. Dul & Associates Inc., is presenting "Landscape Architectural Accessories," while Scott G. Kunst offers "Preservation of Historic Sites and Structures."

A lecture on "Conservation of Natural Resources" will be handled by Dr. Charles Nelson, Michigan State University.

Donna Schumann, professor emeritus, biology, Western Michigan University, is presenting "Color" and "Design and Maintenance."

The study course will be held Nov. 3-5 at Mercy Center in Farmington Hills. It is sponsored by the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan.

This is the third in a series of four study courses. It is not necessary to take each course or to take them in order. It is also possible to attend only one day of lectures. The courses were developed by the National Council of State Garden Clubs in 1958 and are held throughout the country.

If all four courses are completed, it is possible to receive a National Council Critics Certificate.

Home Tips

Easy address — I have a tip which I find very useful to me and maybe others as well.

I cut out my typed name on letters and fliers I receive in the mail and use them for my return address labels. The name is very easy to read. (You'll notice I used one on my letter to you.)

Marie W., Fond du Lac, Wis.

Exercise imagination — When I bought an exercise bicycle, I thought I'd finally be able to get the exercise I needed without leaving the house. However, I never realized how boring it is to just pedal and pedal.

One day I realized my 8-year-old daughter had racked up more miles than I had. She'd use the bike while watching her afternoon cartoons. I don't watch much TV, so I adapted the idea and read a magazine while exercising. Now, I get the exercise I need and I'm doing something I enjoy at the same time.

Harriet N., Spokane, Wash.

Neat painting — When I plan to do any painting, I turn my clothes inside out. It saves the "good side" for many more days of use.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

What's in a name? Does an artist's or maker's name signed on an antique make it more valuable? Usually. An oil painting signed by the artist always has added value. A toy signed "Schoenhut" or a chair marked "Belter" or a glass vase marked "Tiffany" have more dollar value than similar unmarked examples.

Some types of antiques were never marked. Porcelain made in and near Paris in the 19th century was only identified by its appearance. Old Paris or Paris porcelain is very white and usually has elaborate gold trim. The best pieces have painted scenes and well-shaped handles. Trust your eye and your good taste when buying Paris porcelain. Quality always speaks for itself.

Q. I have a slot machine that is a Mills 5-cent model with a wood and metal case. The front of the case has stars, an eagle and three glass windows. The serial number is 281071. It works. Is it legal to own an old slot machine? In my state, it is illegal to own a new one.

A. The serial number on your machine was used about 1930-1931. You may have a Mills "Front Okay" machine with three reels. The machines were made from 1923 to 1932. The front display showed gums or mints so they could be considered vending and not gambling machines.

Public use of an old slot machine can still get you in trouble in some states, but most law-enforcement officers do not bother owners of antique machines kept for recreational use at home. You may want to call your local police department to learn the laws.

An old machine like yours is worth at least $3,000 in working condition. It would be sad to have it confiscated and destroyed.

Q. Did Gustav Stickley make metalwork as well as furniture? I have a copper bowl marked "Craftsman Co." with the compass and the words "Als Ik Kan." I also have other copper pieces marked "Craftsmen Inc." with a similar drawing. They seem different, and I wonder how the real Stickley is marked.

A. Gustav Stickley wanted good-quality copper pieces to be used with his furniture. Drawer pulls, hinges, lamps, buckets, vases, umbrella stands, boxes and candlesticks and other copper pieces were made from about 1900 to 1915. Some pieces were marked "The Craftsman Workshops, Gustav Stickley" with the compass and slogan. Some had just the logo or just the Stickley name.

Renovating your lawn after the hardships of summer

Renovating Your Lawn

1. Mow existing grass short
2. Dethatch with a power rake or thatcher
3. Spread seed and Scotts Starter, Fertilizer over area
4. Water several times a day

Illustration courtesy of The O.M. Scott & Sons Company

During the summer, your lawn withstands a lot of hardships. There are the kids playing baseball, catch, Red Rover and frisbee. Then there's the penetrating heat and lack of rain that parch your lawn and leave it dryer than the Gobi. The final straw is the cutworms, chinch bugs, and white grubs that have a summer picnic featuring your lawn as the main dish. Come fall, your lawn probably needs some attention.

Because of the cooler temperatures and more regular rains, fall is an ideal time to renovate your lawn. It is recommended, however, that you start your renovation project early in the fall to allow time for grass to grow at least one month before winter temperatures set in.

According to the lawn care experts at The O.M. Scott & Sons Co., if your lawn has a few isolated brown patches smaller than a dinner plate, you can easily patch each area individually. If you have more than a few spots, and they are larger than a dinner plate, you need to re-seed that part of your lawn.

The most common problems a lawn may face are brown spots where no grass is growing, or areas where grass is thin and you want to thicken it up by overseeding. The following are guidelines for each process:

Repairing Brown Spots

1. Loosen top 1/2 inch of soil with spade, rake, or other cultivating tool.
2. Sprinkle with seed and starter fertilizer, rake lightly, then cover area with mulch (peat moss or similar material). Or, spread a lawn repair mix, which contains seed, starter fertilizer, and recycled paper mulch.

3. Keep moist until grass begins growing.
4. Mow once grass reaches 2 inches.

Overseeding

1. Mow existing grass short, so it is about 1 inch.
2. Detach with a power rake or thatcher (if needed).
3. Cut shallow slices or grooves through turf and 1/4 inch of soil.
4. Spread seed and starter fertilizer over area.
5. Cover area with mulch.
6. Water several times a day.

Fall is an excellent time to dethatch most lawns (especially bluegrass). Thatch is the excess undercomposed material that builds up between the soil and grass blades. Removing excess buildup allows for better movement of air, water, and nutrients; provides good seed-to-soil contact when overseeding thin turf areas, and stimulates new growth. As with lawn repair and overseeding, it is a good idea to dethatch early in the fall before lawn growth slows or stops for the year. Power dethatchers can be rented from your local garden center and are recommended for large lawns.

For more information about lawn care, call Scotts toll-free Consumer Hotline at 1-800-543-TURF.

After a disaster strikes, deduct your losses

(Prepared by the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants)

If your personal property was destroyed as a result of a flood, hurricane, earthquake or vandalism, you probably weren't thinking about your taxes as you surveyed the damage. However, as the Michigan Association of CPAs points out, you may be able to obtain some financial relief by taking a tax deduction for a portion of your casualty loss.

What is a casualty loss?

For tax purposes, casualty losses are those that result from sudden, unexpected or unusual events, such as tornadoes, hurricanes, floods, and fires. You cannot take a deduction for damage to your property that occurs as a result of gradual deterioration or normal wear-and-tear, such as soil erosion that weakens the structure of your home, damage from termites, or even a leaky roof.

In some instances, you may claim a casualty loss for a car accident, provided the accident did not result from your own negligence. Deductions are also allowed for losses caused by theft, including robbery and embezzlement. However, you must be able to prove that a theft has taken place.

If you had money deposited in a personal savings or checking account in a bank or credit union that later went bankrupt or became insolvent, you may elect to take a casualty loss deduction for the money you lost.

How much of your loss is deductible?

Tax deductions are allowed only for uninsured losses. The deduction for each casualty is then limited to the uninsured amount in excess of $100. The $100 base applies to the total amount of damages per casualty — not per item. The aggregate unreimbursed losses in excess of $100 are then deductible as an itemized deduction to the extent that the total exceeds 10 percent of your adjusted gross income (AGI).

As a rule, the amount of a loss is the lesser of the property's adjusted basis or fair market value. The adjusted basis is what you paid for the property, minus depreciation, plus an increase in value as a result of improvements.

Here's an example. A sudden storm hits your area causing a tree to crash through a window, thereby damaging your stereo equipment. The stereo system was purchased for $6,000 six years ago. However, its fair market value before the casualty was only $3,000. You are therefore entitled to a deduction of $3,000 less $100, assuming this amount exceeds 10 percent of your AGI.

When can you deduct your casualty loss?

In most instances, you must deduct the loss in the year in which it has occurred. However, if you live in an area that the federal government declares a disaster area, you can claim your loss either in the year the loss occurred or during the previous year. To take a loss in the previous year, file an amended tax return.

Proving your losses

The IRS expects you to be able to document the amount of the deduction you are claiming. Documentation can consist of photographs of your home or property before and after the damage occurred, receipts for items lost or destroyed, or even newspaper clippings about a particular event. Appraisers' estimates of the damage can also help you to make your case before the IRS.

CPAs recommend that after suffering a casualty loss you carefully record and file your repair bills and insurance reports. These will help you prove the extent of the damage to your property to the IRS and help you substantiate your tax deduction.

Architects say building activity is bouncing back

By Dennis Smith
AIA News Service

The construction industry often is considered a bellwether for the economy of the country. Architectural design, the first step in the construction process, might be called the bellwether of the bellwether. If so, we're in for good news: Architectural practices and the building industry in many regions of the country seem to be showing early signs of economic recovery, according to an American Institute of Architect's (AIA) national poll of 300 randomly selected architecture-firm principals in 48 states.

The telephone survey, conducted for the AIA by Reliance Communications of Annapolis, Md., is one of the earliest indicators of what appears to be an economic comeback for the profession and the building industry, observed Executive Vice President/CEO James P. Cramer. "We have measured the economic climate and the level of new business opportunities for architecture firms since the beginning of the new year."

More than half (52 percent) of the participants believed the economic recession — as it pertains to firms in their areas — has bottomed out, while only 20 percent did not feel the recession had turned the corner and 28 percent were not sure. In addition, 44 percent reported that business opportunities for architecture firms in their regions have increased since January, 31 percent responded that the level of opportunities has remained the same, and 25 percent stated that opportunities have decreased.

"Given the fact that two-thirds of the participants said that firms in their areas suffered a great deal during the recession," said Cramer, "we are encouraged that now more than half believe it has bottomed out and nearly half said business opportunities have increased since the beginning of the year."

Hiring and layoff trends seem to have balanced out nationwide. For example, 51 percent of respondents said the number of architects employed by their firms stayed the same, 24 percent said the number of architects rose, and 25 percent reported the number declined. Larger firms were more likely to hire or lay off architects; smaller firms were more likely to employ a constant number of architects.

Health-care, educational single-family residential, renovation, and government buildings were the types cited by respondents as the building types that experienced the most increases in recent years. Areas of great increase during the 1980s — such as commercial buildings, offices, and hotels — were mentioned less often.

As might be expected, some regions fared better than others. New England, one of the first hard-hit regions, is showing positive signs of recovery. Business opportunities have increased since the beginning of 1992, according to 53 percent of firm principals surveyed. In addition, 43 percent believed the recession had bottomed out, while 38 percent weren't sure and only 19 percent claimed the downward spiral continues.

Other regions experiencing upswings, according to many of their local participants, were West South Central (Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, and Texas), East South Central (Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi, and Tennessee), and East North Central (Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, and Wisconsin). Conversely, only 13 percent of respondents from the Pacific region (Alaska, California, Hawaii, Oregon, and Washington — one of the last areas hit by the recession — reported increases in the number of architects employed.

Architects give gold medal

By Stephanie Stubbs
AIA News Service

You may not know architect Benjamin Thompson, FAIA, of Cambridge, Mass., but chances are good that you have benefited from the joy he transmits through his work.

During a career that has spanned more than 40 years, Thompson has been a guiding light for the architectural profession's responsibility to the people it serves, the urban context it enhances, and the natural environment it preserves and respects.

Collectively considered, Thompson calls his ideal "The City of Man," and it shines brightly in his "festival marketplace" architecture across the country — Boston's Faneuil Hall, New York's South Street Seaport, Baltimore's Harbor Place, Washington's Union Station retail renovation, and Los Angeles' Century City Marketplace — as well as abroad, from Dublin to Yokohama.

For his lifelong work, the American Institute of Architects has bestowed on Thompson the AIA Gold Medal, the highest award given to an individual architect. Since its inception in 1907, the Gold Medal has only been awarded 50 times.

The list of its past recipients reads like an honor roll of architects and includes Frank Lloyd Wright, Louis Sullivan and I.M. Pei.

Thompson's festival marketplaces uniquely reflect the special character and culture of the cities in which they are built.

Many of the projects, including Faneuil Hall and Union Station, entail transformation of treasured old works of architecture into vital, exciting "people places," a process pioneered by Thompson and known today as "adaptive use."

Equally indicative of Thompson's architectural skills are his individual building projects, which strive to coax natural light into the building interior and to unite the building with its surroundings.

Projects as diverse as the renovation of Boylston Hall at Harvard University, the Ordway Music Theater in St. Paul, the Law Library of New York University, and the recently completed Broward Center for the Performing Arts in Fort Lauderdale, each demonstrate eloquently the magic of the architect's touch and his deep concern that "architecture should reflect man's hope and faith, interpret life, and transmit joy."

Such work has earned for Thompson and his partner and wife Jane Thompson, and their firm, Benjamin Thompson and Associates (BTA), scores of awards on local, state, and national levels, including the 1987 AIA Architecture Firm of the Year Award.

Improving indoor air quality has important health benefits

It is not uncommon to find between 14 and 17 pounds of dirt, mold and other debris in most home heating and cooling systems. That's why the American Lung Association recommends regular purification of a home's air duct system to remove mold, fungus, dustmites and allergy causing dust.

"Indoor air quality has become a bigger and bigger health issue for homeowners," comments Gary Marowske of Flame Furnace Inc. "Both older and newer homes hide significant amounts of pollutants. New indoor air cleaning techniques can dramatically improve the quality of indoor air."

The newest indoor air cleaning techniques involve more than simply having a furnace company vacuum out the heating and cooling ducts. The best indoor air quality systems use an air compressor that deep-cleans heating and cooling coils, water and drains. Toxic materials that adhere to metal are removed and oxide is sprayed to sanitize all ducts.

This indoor cleaning method can also increase the efficiency and life expectancy of home heating and cooling equipment.

"The EPA reports that a buildup of only .042 inches of dirt in a heating and cooling system can result in a decrease in efficiency of 21 percent," reports Marowske. "Without a doubt, improving indoor air quality has significant health and economic benefits."

Indoor air quality procedures can cost between $250 and $500. For further information about this procedure, contact Marowske at Flame Furnace Inc. at 574-1700.

Parti Hints

Plan well. Planning gives an impression of effortless ease, and frees you to enjoy the party along with your guests.

Invite a variety of guests that have things in common other than their jobs so that the entire evening won't be spent "talking shop"! You might consider hanging a sign at the entrance stating: "At this party there is a aspiring actress, a commercial pilot, three avid golfers, a fledging writer and two anonymous comediennes." Conversation will be off and running from the start.

Be sure to send invitations two-three weeks in advance of the party (a week earlier for holiday events - people's social calendars book up quickly). Be sure to indicate the dress attire so that everyone is prepared.

Plan a fun surprise for your guests...it could be anything from a magician to a psychic hired to entertain mid-party, to a game or treasure hunt involving all of your guests.

Come to PartiGiant for the convenience, ease and fun of purchasing all your parti needs. We can help you with everything from the invitations and paper products to decorations, hors d'oeuvres and entertainment!

"Throw me the ball, Daddy!"

"PAUL"

Designed by America's Foremost Dollmaker, just $69<sup>95</sup>

Actual size of doll is 10 1/2 inches, kneeling with baseball glove.
FINISH AND MAIL

For his first birthday, "Paul" was given his own baseball uniform and a tiny fielder's glove. Now he begs Daddy to take him out to the park. The moment "Paul" sees his friends there, he starts to show off a bit — as little boys will do! He crouches down in the shortstop position, and reaches out his mitt to catch the ball. Daddy has to laugh at his son's deep concentration, but to the other children, "Paul" is a real baseball star today!

"Paul," by artist Yolanda Bello, is an original issue in the Yolanda's Precious Playmates doll collection — a wonderful statement about the joys of friendship, even at a very tender age. Certified Premiere Grade by the Ashton-Drake Galleries, "Paul" can be yours to cherish for only $69.95. Hurry... he's issued in an exclusive, hand-numbered edition, so order today.

is Certified Premiere Grade

At the Ashton-Drake Galleries, our experts have evaluated "Paul" very carefully against The Uniform Grading Standards for Dolls—the ten standards developed by us to determine artistry and craftsmanship. Because "Paul" has met all ten standards, he has been certified Premiere Grade—the Standards' highest rating.

"Paul's" head, arms, and legs are handcrafted of fine porcelain. You can just tell this little player's concentrating very hard (he sticks out the tip of his tongue as children often do,) and his hand-set brown eyes sparkle in anticipation of the pitch. His chubby cheeks and chin are hand-painted for the flushed look of an active baby boy. "Paul" is dressed in a hand-tailored, three-piece uniform with the number "1" appliqued on the back. His matching baseball cap is custom-monogrammed, and his leatherlike mitt is padded and stitched to be authentic.

Each doll is hand-numbered, comes with a matching-numbered Certificate of Authenticity, and bears the signature of artist Yolanda Bello.

A Collectible Doll with Investment Potential

Yolanda Bello Boy Doll	Edition End	Issue Price	Average Market Value*	Change
"Jason"	1986	$48	$855	+$807
"Matthew"	1989	$58	$279	+$221
"Little Jack Horner"	1989	$63	$146	+$83

*Based on limited retail sales reported in a 1992 survey of leading doll dealers. Actual prices realized by collectors may be lower.

The doll you buy today may be a wise investment for the future. Once an edition is sold out, those who want a doll from the edition must pay whatever the market will bear, if and when one becomes available from dealers or at auction. That's why collectible dolls often sell for more than their original prices within only a few years of being issued.

Of course, not all dolls increase in value; values can go down. But dolls of superior artistry and craftsmanship—such as "Paul" and other Premiere Grade dolls—have excellent potential to appreciate.

Bear in mind that "Paul" is an important boy doll by this renowned artist, much like the exceptional dolls in the chart. When we recommended those Yolanda Bello dolls, we felt they had the right credentials for market success. "Paul's" potential also seems promising.

To order "Paul," simply complete and mail the attached postage-paid Reservation Certificate today.

OUR ONE-YEAR UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE

You may, without hesitation and for any reason whatsoever, return "Paul" to us at any time within one full year after you receive him. We will refund (or credit your account if you pay by credit card) your full purchase price, including postage, with no questions asked.

Yolanda Bello
America's Foremost Dollmaker

Yolanda Bello has won more than sixty prizes for her work in juried exhibitions, including five Best of Show Awards. One of her greatest career accomplishments is her Yolanda's Picture-Perfect Babies® collection, which earned top doll awards from the National Association of Limited Edition Dealers in 1987, 1988, 1989, and 1991. Ms. Bello also earned the 1985 Doll of the Year Award from the International Doll Academy. Her winning doll was featured on "The Today Show" and was highlighted in USA Today.

"No matter how much they're loved, children really need other children — Precious Playmates — to help them blossom and grow," says Ms. Bello. "Paul" knows what it means to be part of a team, so of course he's looking for lots of recognition from his little friends. That budding instinct for team spirit is just what I was trying to capture when I created him."
