

Caring Callers right on, help save stricken widower

By Jenny King
Special Writer

Although she was several miles away and unaware of it at the time, Marcia Powell helped save a life last month. This is how the drama unfolded:

It was a pleasant Tuesday morning and Powell, a volunteer for the Caring Callers of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, was trying by telephone to reach a widower who lived alone.

When there was no answer after repeated attempts, Powell notified supervisor Nancy Trowern and explained her concern.

Trowern, of Grosse Pointe Park, got in her car and drove to the widower's residence. The doors were locked, copies of the Wall Street Journal and Detroit Free Press lay on the steps and his car was in the garage.

Trowern got back in her car and headed for the local police station.

"When the woman behind the desk asked if she could help me, I answered, 'Well, I think so,'" Trowern said. "Then I explained how Caring Callers keeps in daily touch with single members who request the service and how this gentleman seemed to be home but wasn't answering the phone or the door."

The dispatcher told Trowern a squad car would swing by. It arrived just as she returned to the widower's home.

After trying the doors again, Trowern and the officers looked through a window and spotted a person on the floor of the study who appeared to be moving. The police radioed for an EMS vehicle and then broke into the home.

The owner had suffered a severe stroke and had been unable to help himself," Trowern said.

"This is one reason we started Caring Callers," said Powell, a retired nurse who lives in St. Clair Shores and who, with Farms resident Elizabeth Williams, launched the volunteer group as a part of Memorial Church's Parish Life Council about four years ago.

"Elizabeth had some connection with Sinai Hospital on the west side where they already were calling individuals regularly to make certain they were all right.

"We felt it was very worthwhile and hoped it would grow. Sometimes that daily telephone call is the only human voice a person living alone hears — except for those on the television."

Trowern said that many of the nine volunteer callers at Memorial Church have been with the program since its inception because they enjoy this act of reaching out and making

No turkeys here

The fifth annual Turkey Trot at St. Clare of Montefalco School last Thursday drew an enthusiastic response from students, parent volunteers and the community. With a student body of 485, there were 435 students who participated in the voluntary run for turkeys and other prizes, according to Hank Burakowski, principal. The event instills and encourages physical fitness and helps build school and community spirit, he said. Streets around the school are closed off by police and students from kindergarten through eighth grade compete in five levels.

Libraries get boost as board has rare meeting

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Responding to criticism that the Grosse Pointe school district does not pay enough attention to its public libraries, the board of education assembled on Nov. 16 as the board of library trustees.

Although the Grosse Pointe schools have overseen the library budget and operations since 1929, superintendent Ed Shine said it is a rare occasion when the school board assembles as the library board. Generally, library matters are attached to the agenda for the school board meetings, he said.

The library governance committee, appointed by the school board in 1991 to study the future needs of the Grosse Pointe public libraries, reported to the board of education in September that the schools do not devote enough time and attention to library needs.

"From the committee's perspective, the school board appears to be so busy with the school system that it doesn't have time for the library,"

Shine said.

The committee also made several recommendations to the school district, including the formation of a full-time library board of commissioners or establishing a district library system, which would be governed by the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

Of the 379 library systems in Michigan, Grosse Pointe is one of 33 operated by a school district. Most libraries are under municipal control.

A third option presented by the committee was to simply maintain the status quo.

Shine is studying the options and will make a recommendation to the board in early 1993.

"We have a hiatus between when the (committee's) recommendations were made and when I will make my recommendation to the board," Shine said. "I felt it was incumbent upon us to fill that gap. If there is a perception that the board of education is not devoting

Mulch ado about trees

After the holiday season has passed and the Christmas tree needles have turned brittle and brown, take the tree down and bring it to Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Jan. 1 and 9.

Sponsored by Brownell Middle School, the "Recycling Expo-Christmas Tree for Mulch" program will be available to Farms and Woods residents.

Organized last year by the Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling, the program collected more than 1,000 Christmas trees that were ground into mulch. The mulch is then made available to residents.

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

The staff at Georgian East Nursing Care facility in Grosse Pointe Woods was all abuzz last week in anticipation of Laura Warmoes' upcoming birthday celebration.

Warmoes will turn 100 this Saturday, Nov. 28. Her son, Al and his wife, Ellen, will co-host the two-hour party.

Born in Belgium, Warmoes immigrated to the United States in 1919 to escape the devastation left by World War I.

"I remember the war breaking out," she said. "We had to leave Belgium where I was born. We gathered my brothers and sisters to set out for France. There was no other way except to walk."

Warmoes remembers that during her journey to France, she and her siblings washed clothes for British soldiers in exchange for food. Another time, Warmoes and her family had a job cleaning a 30-room house.

"We would clean one or two rooms a day," she said.

Warmoes and her nine siblings (three brothers and six sisters) arrived safely in France following a 200-mile-trek.

She sailed to the United States and a short time after arriving on American soil, Warmoes met the man she would be married to for 40 years, before his death in 1960.

"Laura still has family members living in Europe," Ellen said. "As a matter of fact her sister Marie recently died in France at the age of 105."

Georgian East activities director Patricia Harney said Warmoes has been a resident since February and is still quite active. In addition to sitting on the executive board of the resident council, Warmoes cooks, gardens and bowls in the nursing home's strike 'n' spare league.

Al and Ellen have been busy planning the centenarian celebration that will include a few surprise phone calls and visitors.

The community is welcome to attend the two-hour celebration beginning at 1:30 p.m. Well-wishers may send birthday greetings to the Georgian East.

Friends of the Library begin membership drive

The Friends of the Grosse Pointe Library's 1993 membership campaign is now under way.

Old Friends are asked to renew their memberships and new Friends are encouraged to join. Since 1948 the Friends group has rallied community support to ensure that the libraries can continue to offer a high level of services, programs and events.

Each year the Friends provides funds for adult and children's programs, as well as for new books and equipment. In 1993 the Friends contributed $65,000 to the library for books, audio visual materials, computer equipment and software, to preserve and enhance the art collection, and to maintain and beautify the grounds.

Over the past two years the Friends have enabled the library to broaden programming by sharing resources with the Grosse Pointe schools, the Neighborhood Club, the War Memorial, local businesses and other community groups.

During the coming year the library will strengthen ties with Grosse Pointe Community Education by co-sponsoring adult classes and by sorting and storing used books and holding a used book sale in the Community Education building.

Plans are under way for a National Library Week celebration featuring the third annual Great Grosse Pointe Read Aloud. The Friends will continue to help fund fine children's programs, such as the recent visit by author Doug Cushman, and to sponsor community programs like the Gift of Reading.

The Friends want to invite all library users who value the important role libraries play in the community to become members. Membership applications are available at all branch libraries.

For more information, call Sally Giacobbe at 343-2077.

Anne Smith and Tom Keppelman were among 20 volunteers who turned out for the Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library's annual membership mailing during the week of Nov. 16.

City grants variances

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Local developer Brad Elvidge got just what he wanted from the Grosse Pointe City Council, even though it looked like he wouldn't.

Elvidge had asked the council for several variances for four houses he plans to build on four 50-foot parcels on St. Clair between Jefferson and the school board offices.

The four houses will have attached garages in front. Elvidge asked for a variance to build a four-car garage on each of the houses, should a buyer request that. Two of the houses will be set three feet from the side lot line, requiring another variance. The zoning ordinance calls for an 8-foot setback. All the houses will be set more than 30 feet back from St. Clair.

Plans are to sell them for at least $325,000.

City planning consultant Brandon Rogers told the council that in his opinion the proposed houses were too large and that the plan looked like "putting a Detroit Lion in a size two uniform."

And the council didn't like it either.

"We don't like what we see," councilman Carl Rashid said.

But most of the residents who showed up at the council meeting did. They thought the construction would be a great enhancement to the street and the community.

The council then met privately and granted the variances, but limited the garage size to 650 square feet or less. Elvidge had asked for a 748 square-foot garage.

Only councilmember Myrna Smith voted against the proposal, because she felt the three-foot side yard setback was unacceptable.

Middle school program earns kudos

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Middle school students are finally getting the attention they need.

Too old for elementary school and too young for high school, middle school students have literally been caught in the middle, without a curriculum geared to their needs.

Realizing that pre- and early adolescents need a program designed specifically for their needs, the Grosse Pointe School System began studying in the late '80s the present middle school program and ways to change it.

The study was conducted by the district's strategic planning team beginning in 1988. The board of education adopted the plan in 1990. And in the 1991-92 school year, the changes were implemented at Pierce, Parcels and Brownell middle schools.

The four major changes in the program are:

- Expanding the school day to a seven-period day.
- Clustering teachers and students into teaching teams.
- Creating a 20-minute adviser/advisee period to replace homeroom.
- Changing the curriculum for sixth, seventh and eighth grade students and adding more electives.

The 14 months since the program began taking shape have been a combination of hard work, struggles, frustration and a number of early successes, said Leo Warras, Pierce principal.

Warras, Brownell principal Donald Messing and Parcels principal Glenn Croydon and a number of middle school teachers discussed the program at the Nov. 9 Grosse Pointe board of education meeting.

An evaluation of the program's first year showed everything but the adviser/advisee sessions appeared to be working well.

Traditional junior high or middle schools were characterized by six-period days, teachers that had little control over programs outside of their classroom and a limited number of electives offered to students, Warras said.

"That is OK if you accept the notion that pre-adolescents are miniature versions of adolescent high school students," Warras said. "That is OK if you accept the notion that an 11-year-old is the same as a 17-year-old."

Studies of middle schools have shown that 11-year-olds and 17-year-olds are "worlds apart," Warras said.

Although that may seem obvious, Marjorie Parsons of the district's department of curriculum and evaluation said most junior high and middle schools posed as either scaled-up elementary schools or scaled-down high schools.

"Junior high schools were scaled-down high schools," Parsons said. "This was done for administrative convenience rather than for learning. Adolescent learning was not as well understood then as it is today. Junior high didn't have an identity of its own."

The three middle school principals said the teaching team concept appears to be working well.

Under this system, about 75 students are matched with a team of three or four teachers for a substantial portion of the day. The team teachers then have a common planning period in which to meet and discuss ideas, problems and issues of concern.

Teaching teams also allow the teachers to help each other and alleviate some of the students' difficulties understanding what is expected of them. Following elementary school, where students had one teacher for the year, students entering middle school often are frustrated with six different teachers, each with his or her own homework and testing expectations.

Teaching teams provide continuity in homework and testing for the student, Warras said. Teams also have a built-in flexibility.

Classes such as science, math and social studies, for example, can be linked using a theme approach to make learning more relevant, he said.

Curriculum changes in effect include one full year of science for sixth grade, a semester unit of adolescent issues for seventh grade and a semester of health for eighth grade students. Electives in music and choir also were expanded from a semester to a full year.

The seven-period day appears to be working well, although one Pierce science teacher said the additional period has cut into time between classes, causing some students to be late or to be excused during class time to go to lockers or the rest room.

Croydon said the biggest obstacle to making the adviser/advisee program a success is that teachers need more knowledge and experience conducting the non-academic program.

As defined in a district-generated handout, the adviser/advisee program is a block of time set aside at the beginning of each day for supportive attention to pre-adolescent self-expression, personal growth and smooth transition between elementary and high school. The program is designed to provide the framework and atmosphere for students to better relate to each other and to their teachers about social, emotional and academic needs.

"In its first year, the adviser/advisee program was highly structured," Croydon said.

"Each grade level did a certain activity each day of the week. It was almost too structured and rigid."

The middle school teachers and counselors, who work on the program together, continue to try new approaches to make the program work.

Teachers also expressed concern about how the changes have affected them.

"We've been working our hearts out," said Jean Johnson, a teacher at Brownell. "But we have to be careful of burnout; we can't do everything at once."

Another teacher, Joanne Case, said she enjoyed teaching more in the last year than all of her 23 previous years of teaching. But she said the second year should be a refinement year, to improve upon the previous year.

"This year we allow more flexibility, increase team-building activities to bring the students together more," Croydon said.

Parsons said the four elements of the program are all designed to bring about conditions for change.

Expected results of those conditions are: more productive use of school time, increased parent involvement, enhanced opportunities and the integration of skills and contents across disciplines.

For the 1992-93 school year, Messing said the focus for improvement will be on increasing communication with parents, more parent-teacher conferences, increasing the use of interim reports so that every parent receives a report at the end of each quarter and continued improvement of weak areas.

"People ask if this was worth it in terms of cost and effectiveness," Parsons said. The middle schools received a 9 percent increase in funding to implement the new programs, she said. With that 9 percent, the program yielded 75 percent improvement.

By every account that is available, the success of the program is evident.

Mistaken identity

When a Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officer was called upon in court last week to identify a man he had arrested last June for driving with a suspended license, the officer took one look at the man and knew he wasn't the defendant in the case.

Police reports indicate that the person who appeared in court, a 47-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods man, was shown a picture of the person arrested using his identity. The man said it was his former stepson, a 42-year-old man believed to be living in St. Clair Shores.

Charges against the Woods man were dropped. Police said the city attorney will review the case to determine if charges of fraud and false identification should be brought against the stepson.

Youth suspected in Park vandalism

A Grosse Pointe Park juvenile is suspected of being involved in a rash of broken windows that has occurred in the city since Oct. 6, Park police said.

At 7:13 p.m. Nov. 15, Park police received another report of a rock being thrown through a window, this time in the 1300 block of Wayburn.

An officer checking the area saw two suspects, who fled when they saw him.

The officer stopped the pair, who had been smashing bottles in alleys and still had some bottles with them.

One of the juveniles had been seen in the area of other broken window incidents when those crimes were reported, and was identified as a suspect in the incident on Wayburn on Nov. 15.

Police called the suspect's mother, who "as usual, denied the possibility her son could be involved," Park police said.

The juvenile was then released.

Library support groups confused about roles

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

A recent meeting devoted solely to the needs of the Grosse Pointes three public libraries was good news to those interested in the future of the institution.

At least that's how Jim Fausone, chairman of the Advisory Library Commission (ALC), assessed a Nov. 16 meeting, the first in recent history, of the Grosse Pointe board of library trustees.

"This meeting is not going to resolve all of the issues outstanding, especially the governance issue," Fausone said. "But we can tell (the board) what we've been doing and where we're going."

The ALC was established in 1990 as mandated by the Library of Michigan for all school systems responsible for the function of public libraries in their district.

In order to qualify for state aid, the school districts had to appoint a five-member ALC to provide citizen participation in reviewing program development and improvement of services within the libraries. ALC members are not employed by

Library fee may increase

The Grosse Pointe library board of trustees is considering an increase in fees for non-resident library cards.

The item was discussed by the board at its Nov. 16 meeting. The board will not take action until its next meeting, scheduled for February 1993.

The current $25 fee for non-residents has not been reviewed in a number of years. Several other public libraries in the Detroit area, including Dearborn and St. Clair Shores, now charge $50 for a non-resident card.

The Harper Woods Public Library charges $32. The library administration suggested to the board an incremental increase to $35 by 1993 and that the fee be re-evaluated in 1994.

Grosse Pointe's three public libraries issued 152 non-resident cards in the 1991-92 fiscal year. People who work in the Grosse Pointes, students, senior citizens, non-resident students attending private schools in Grosse Pointe and some former residents are eligible for fee exemptions.

Board members discussed many alternatives, including raising the fee to $50, offering discounts to senior citizens and charging a fee of $46 — the per-resident cost to support the libraries.

the school district or the libraries.

The ALC is separate from the Library Governance Committee (LGC), a 12-member panel appointed by the board in 1991 following the defeat of a bond issue to build a new library. The LGC was charged with examining other methods of library governance.

In September, the LGC made three recommendations to the board of education on ways to oversee the libraries. The district could either appoint a library board of commissioners as a full-time entity devoted solely to the library, establish a district library to be operated by the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods municipalities or continue having the board of education oversee the institution.

Meanwhile, Fausone told the board the ALC has operated without clearly defined guidelines and now wonders where its role fits in with the LGC and the board of library trustees.

"We have been successful in being a sounding board for the administration and management," he said. "We also played a role in the site budget process by gathering community input on budgeting issues."

The committee also is working on strategic planning for the library's future in terms of training programs, improving staff relations and the possibility of implementing technological advancements like CD-ROM (compact disks storing the encyclopedia and other reference books which can be displayed on a computer screen).

After encouraging board members to educate themselves on the operations of the library, the ALC offered the following suggestions:

- All board members should take a behind-the-scenes tour of the libraries to "see the conditions we ask our staff to work under."

- The board should decide quickly and decisively the governance issue. How will the board of library trustees and the ALC's roles work under each of the options?

- The library director, Charles Hanson, should report to the board of library trustees in the same manner that school superintendent Ed Shine reports to the board of education.

- The board should prepare a position paper on library contract issues. Negotiations for library staff begin in spring 1993.

- For budgeting purposes, the board should set goals on what percentage of the budget will be spent on materials and technology for the library.

In response to the ALC's request for a clear definition of roles and responsibilities, the board drafted a written definition.

The original definition stated: "Review areas of public library service which strengthen the development of these services along with any recommendations that might be passed along to the board of education (acting as board of library trustees)."

After one ALC member said the definition did not make sense, Shine verbally clarified it to read: "The board (shall) direct the ALC to review areas of public library service and make recommendations to them at meetings in February and April 1993. If the board decides in April to continue to function in that capacity rather than form a (library commission) or district, the board will consider a recommendation from the ALC as to how they see their role and responsibility complementing and supporting the library board of trustees and the public library."

The board unanimously approved Shine's clarified version of the ALC's role and responsibilities.

Fausone did not wish to comment on the revised role and responsibility statement because he has not seen a written copy of it, he said.

In response to the ALC's recommendations, trustee Carol Marr said she is aware of the conditions in the libraries. The public, however, is not aware, she said, referring to the proposed $7.6 million bond issue to expand the library system defeated by voters in 1990.

"The building campaign failed because people thought their needs were being met by the library," Marr said.

Fausone said the ALC will continue to meet on a monthly basis to work on administrative policy and management issues, as it has in the past. He predicted the ALC will have a new set of recommendations to present at the February 1993 library board of trustees meeting.

Goodfellows to sell papers on Monday

For the 79th year, Detroit's 310 Old Newsboys, assisted by police officers, will hit uptown and downtown street corners on Monday, Nov. 30, from 6 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., hawking Goodfellow editions of the Detroit News and Free Press to raise money for 43,000 packages for needy kids.

Goodfellow President James A. Michelson noted that this year's goal of $950,000 is ambitious.

"Our goal is high, but so are our hopes," Michelson said. "We won't stop working until we reach it because the Old Newsboys are determined that no child go without a Christmas. We've already bought the merchandise on credit and now we have to raise the money to pay for it."

Goodfellow committees have been busy since last January and months ago completed their off-season buying. These gifts are being packaged according to age and sex of recipients right now in the Detroit News warehouse. Three out of five school children in grades kindergarten through eight will receive a Goodfellow box.

"Our members take great pride in the fact that every single dollar they raise is used for the children," Michelson said. "All administrative costs are paid by the Old Newsboys. And that's what I call charity without overhead."

Michelson also pointed out that in addition to Christmas packages, which are the main focus of the 79-year-old organization, the Old Newsboys' Goodfellow Fund of Detroit also carries on a year-round shoe program that supplies free shoes for school-aged children on request of the Attendance Department of the Detroit Board of Education.

An ongoing dental program in cooperation with the U of D Dental School provides dental care for many needy children between 5 and 13 while a long-time campership project sends hundreds of deprived city kids to summer camp.

Lists of children scheduled to receive Goodfellow boxes are provided by teachers and the attendance department.

If you miss your Old Newsboy on Nov. 30, mail your tax-deductible contribution to the Old Newsboys' Goodfellow Fund of Detroit, Post Office Box 44444, Detroit, Mich. 48244.

Victoria stolen

A 1992 Ford Crown Victoria was stolen sometime overnight on Nov. 1 from the 1200 block of Bedford in Grosse Pointe Park. It was found at 7:44 a.m. Nov. 2 in the 1300 block of Buckingham, Park police said.

Can Boomers lead us back to greatness?

It's not unusual for younger generations to attack older generations. Nor is it unusual for older generations to find fault with younger generations.

But what does seem to be strange is that the Baby Boomers, who leveled such strong attacks on their elders only a few years ago, are now making equally strong attacks against the Thirteeners generation which is succeeding them.

In effect, there is a new generation gap between the fortysomethings and the twentysomethings that will help define this final decade of the 20th century, according to Neil Howe and William Strauss, writing in The Atlantic Monthly.

Their contention is that each time the Boomer generation has been on the attack, it "has claimed the moral and cultural high ground, casting itself as the apex of civilization and its age-bracket adversaries as soul-dead, progress-blocking philistines."

Well, that usually has been the point of attack of all younger generations. Perhaps the difference in this case is that the

Boomers have launched a new attack on the younger generation after having worn themselves out attacking the older generation.

But let's try to straighten out the names of the generations the authors are writing about. They identify the seven generations born since the Civil War this way:

The Missionary generation, 1860 to 1882; the Lost generation, 1883 to 1900; the GI generation, 1901 to 1924; the Silent generation, 1925 to 1942, the Baby-Boom generation, 1943 to 1960; the Thirteeners generation, 1961 to 1982, and the Millennial generation, 1982 to 2000.

The writers claim the GI generation became "the most powerful generational voting bloc in the history of global democracy," but say that the Boomers have not prospered and, indeed, were it not for the rising economic power of women and two-income households, they would be falling behind.

Yet despite financial problems, Boomers "overwhelmingly consider their careers better, their personal freedoms greater and their lives more meaningful than those of their parents." That means "the American dream lives on for them in the form of a finely tuned inner life."

Well, if that's the view of the Boomers, it's no wonder they now are in conflict with the Thirteeners, the 13th generation of America since our democracy began.

But are the Thirteeners a "young-adult wasteland of academic nonperformance, political apathy, suicide pacts, date-rape trials, wild and hate crimes," as the authors claim?

True, the Thirteeners are often the victims of the deepest recession since the Great Depression and that means they are at the bottom of the totem pole for society's jobs, income and status.

But at the same time they sense that in their bleak future they will also have to serve as the clean-up crew to rehabilitate the society that the generations ahead of them have so badly messed up.

And they are, the authors admit, "pragmatic, quick, sharp-eyed, able to step outside themselves and understand how the world really works."

In the end, if we accept the Atlantic's prediction, the Thirteeners will have so much influence that they will create a better world for their children, the Millennials, after a nation-wide consensus emerges that America's childhood must be repaired and improved.

"Two decades from now," Howe and Strauss conclude, "Boomers entering old age may well see in their grown Millennial children an effective instrument for saving the world, while Thirteeners entering midlife will shower kindnesses on a younger generation that is getting a better deal out of life (though a bit less fun) than they ever got at a like age."

And the authors add, for good measure, that these "best damn kids in the world" will herald "a resurgent American greatness." The implication is that it might be a time comparable to that left by the GI generation after World War II.

To end on a note of optimism is appropriate as our nation ponders its future under a new Baby-Boomer president now in a position to do more than offer advice to the generations behind and ahead of him.

Happy Thanksgiving to all!

Thanksgiving, the dictionary says, is a national holiday celebrated in the United States on the fourth Thursday of November "as a day of feasting and giving thanks for divine goodness."

Nowadays, because Thanksgiving also marks the beginning of the Christmas shopping season, the holiday runs the risk of being overtaken by the preparations for Christmas.

Not only do the holiday decorations go up and the Christmas sales begin before Thanksgiving, even the 16th annual Santa Claus Parade occurs in the Pointes just the day after Thanksgiving this year.

In the time bank, it's almost as if someone is issuing an order, "Get out of the way, Thanksgiving, the Christmas season is about to begin."

However, in spite of the pushing and shoving, Thanksgiving Day remains for many of us a time for family reunions as well as a day to give thanks for divine goodness.

This year, we again have much to be thankful for, in our own lives, in our community, in our nation and in our world.

Our nation is at peace, the cold war has ended, and a bitter and sometimes nasty presidential campaign has, thankfully, run its course. Gridlock appears to be over in Washington, if not in Lansing, and there are encouraging signs that the dark clouds of the recession are lifting, too.

Yet national, ethnic and other differences still plague Eastern Europe, the Middle East, parts of Africa and trouble spots elsewhere on the globe. And some parts of our own nation have been struck by unusual disasters, natural and otherwise, in the past year.

Despite these drawbacks, however, most of us can still say, as we join our families in feasting and reunions, "Happy Thanksgiving to all."

No boom in assessments?

Fear that local property assessments would increase into big double-digit figures next year is apparently unfounded.

That was the word from the Michigan Association of Counties after it made an analysis of statewide assessment increases to try to predict what would happen when the current one-year property assessment tax freeze ends Dec. 31.

Preliminary estimates of assessment increases by 53 equalization directors indicated that the average two-year county-wide assessment increase will be about 8.6 percent.

That figure is fairly consistent with estimates that put Grosse Pointe assessment increases in the 8 percent to 10 percent range for the same two-year period.

In the Detroit metropolitan area, the estimate for western Wayne County was an 8 percent increase, while the figures for the rest of Wayne, including the Pointes, had not yet been analyzed. The preliminary estimate for Macomb County was 7.7 percent and for part of Oakland County it was 6 percent.

Most of the major assessment growth, according to the Michigan Association of Counties, occurred in recreational properties, and especially those adjacent to the Great Lakes and inland lakes in the upper part of the Lower Peninsula.

Leelanau County, for example, topped the association's list with a 21 percent increase in assessments. The big rise apparently reflected what the association termed "exorbitant prices" for vacation or retirement homes overlooking Lake Michigan and Lake Huron.

In the Pointes, however, housing prices which determine assessment rates have tended to level off in the past two years, a fact which accounts for the estimate of a more moderate 8 to 10 percent rise over the two-year period.

Despite the rise in assessments, the Headlee Amendment still will limit the tax increase for any local unit of government to the 3.6 percent rate of inflation, unless local citizens approve an override vote.

In the Pointes, the next tax bill to be issued next month will be the big one for the schools and county levies but it will be based on the 1991 assessments, not the higher ones for 1993.

Well, that's some consolation.

'Red' is still the City's mayor

To his credit, Mayor Lorenzo D. (Red) Browning has accepted the Grosse Pointe City Council's invitation to reconsider his recent resignation.

Browning resigned for personal reasons, which included the illness of his wife, who subsequently died. With the council divided, nobody could obtain the majority necessary to win the appointment to fill the post, even after eight votes.

Then the council made a good decision.

It asked Browning to reconsider his resignation, which had not become effective anyway because, under council rules, he was to have served only until his successor was chosen.

Browning acquiesced — and the veteran of 21 years of service as councilman and mayor remains in office.

Congratulations to Red and others concerned for a common-sense solution to a problem of succession.

To the Editor:

United Way is very important to this community. Vital programs are provided by the 145 health and human service organizations supported by United Way. United Way is the largest private funder of health and human services in the tri-county area.

But United Way must raise $5 million more to meet the needs of this community. We're short, and we can't afford to be short, because the people who count on us can't afford to be without us.

That's why we're asking that everyone please join in an unprecedented effort to raise the needed funds. Those who have already given we thank you and are asking to consider giving a little more.

Those who have not yet made a pledge, we are asking to call our toll-free hotline. Unless we raise the necessary funds, many of the charities that we support will be forced to cut back their efforts, which help the elderly, abused, homeless and disabled and more.

Individuals should call 1-800-456-3729 to contribute, or send checks to United Way, 1212 Griswold, Detroit, Mich. 48226. Companies wishing to organize employee campaigns should call 226-9200, for assistance from a United Way staff member.

With your help we can continue to provide hope to so many.

Bad rap

To the Editor:

It seems as though you cannot pick up a newspaper without reading something about some crime or other perpetrated by misdirected youth.

I have been a frequent complainer about all of the negative reporting that goes on in this society.

I would like to take the time to tell you about some of the typical average youth of Grosse Pointe. The cast of Grosse Pointe North's "Comedy of Errors" celebrated their cast party by going bowling at Lake Shore Lanes and then having an all-night get-together at our home.

A nicer group of young people you couldn't hope to meet. They were well-mannered and genuinely enjoyed each other's company. My house was left in decent shape, no one got into trouble.

I feel kids get a bad rap today and that the majority are like this group from Grosse Pointe North.

If there is any criticism I have, it is that there is no place for young people to meet. Where do kids go in the Grosse Pointes?

But that is another issue. Today I just wanted to take the time to state something positive about our children and to let them know that even though we accentuate the negative, we appreciate the great kids we have around us right here in Grosse Pointe.

Meow: A kitty's eye view

Eileen, my three-legged wonder cat, was getting a little cheesed with the attention Socks, the First Puss, was receiving last week.

We were on the couch in our usual positions — me stretched out and she perched above my shoulder. Her eyes were particularly green as she watched the press corps try to get Socks to smile or whatever it is cats do when they're photographed.

"What's so special about that cat? Look at her markings, she looks like Groucho Marx," Eileen meowed.

"Well, look who's jealous." "Jealous? Me? Of her? Who'd be jealous of a cat with a name like Socks? It's almost as bad as Tipper."

"Don't be catty, now."

"Ha, ha. I mean it. She was the subject of a People magazine article. And not even under the 'Pets' category. She was 'On the Move.' La-de-da. We know more about her than we do about Kitty Dukakis."

"Cute." "We know more about her than we know about Clinton's Cabinet."

"Oh, give him time."

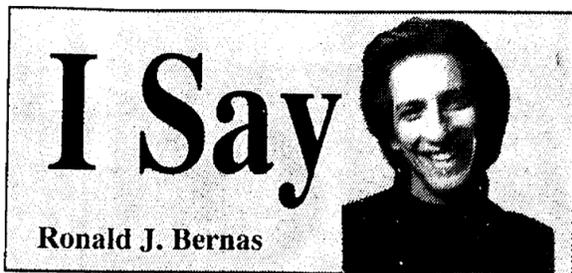

"We know more about her than we do about Millie and that mutt wrote a book, for crying out loud. If you asked me, I could write a book."

"Sounds like a song cue."

"You're very smart today."

"Thank you."

"All that time I was homeless, having my babies in the street, being forced to eat a few of them, the accident which took my leg, you saving me, deflea-ing me, feeding me. Our troubled relationship. Now that's a story."

Ronald J. Bernas

"Sounds like the makings of a mini-series. Maybe Judith Krantz will ghost write."

"Maybe I'll just write it and keep the royalties for myself, Mr. Negative. Maybe I'll call it 'Owner Dearest.'"

"You're awful touchy today. That hairball still lodged?"

"No sympathy, huh?"

"Not after the way you kept me up with your meowing."

"It's just that we know too much about that cat, and she's nothing to write home about."

"Well, thanks to Jennifer Flowers, we know more about Socks' dad, Bill, than we do about any other president."

"That thing about the mole on his thigh —"

"— among other things —"

"was a little much. You know, you should run for president. I'd be a great asset to your campaign. And think how good you'd look, saving a homeless cat from certain death."

"I could never run for president."

"Why not?"

"Well, first of all, I don't jog and every presidential candidate for the last several years has jogged. I don't think the press corps would enjoy my morning ride on my stationary bike."

"Morning ride?"

"OK, monthly ride."

"Why else?"

"You know how I am. I have trouble making my point when I speak."

"That never stopped George Bush."

"No, you know what I mean. I'd lose every debate I ever entered. I suffer from chronic treppenwitz."

"What's that?"

"When you think of a brilliantly witty comeback several hours after it's needed."

"Oh."

"I'd answer too many biting attacks with 'Oh yeah?'"

"You probably would."

"Sez you."

"Think about it. We'd make a great team. With the right packagers I'll be eating mice in the Lincoln bedroom by the turn of the century."

"You've never told me about your years on the streets. Did you do anything that could come back and haunt us?"

"Oh. I inhaled."

"Inhaled what?" "Isn't 'Wheel of Fortune' on?"

"You're avoiding the subject."

"No, I'm not. It's just that secrets are good for a relationship."

"Come on."

"I'm going to sleep now. Be quiet."

Turkey talk

In the midst of purchasing, preparing, stuffing, basting and roasting the holiday turkey, what if you have a question about food safety?

No problem. The United States Department of Agriculture has a meat and poultry hotline with real live home economists at the other end, ready to answer questions.

Hotline hours are normally 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. eastern standard time, weekdays. During November, hours are extended, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. On Thanksgiving Day, hours will be from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Optimists and friends will prepare housing for homeless and disadvantaged families and hope to have 50 families in homes by the holiday season.

"Let's Get Rollin' II" is looking for businesses, organizations and individuals to join them as they paint 50 housing units at the two locations.

43,901 Reasons To Buckle Up

43,901 deer were hit by cars in Michigan in 1990, causing 1,957 injuries to motorists, and one death.

Wearing a safety belt doubles your chances of avoiding injury or death. And with all those deer on the road, that's 43,901 chances for a belt to save your life.

Tie a red ribbon on your car

"Tie One On For Safety" is the message of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), Wayne County Chapter, in the annual red ribbon holiday campaign running Nov. 25-Jan. 1, 1993.

Remembering that about two out of every five Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related crash at some time in their lives and 1,673 alcohol-related traffic fatalities occurred nationally between Thanksgiving and New Year's Eve 1991, MADD, Wayne County Chapter, government, businesses, community leaders and citizens have joined together in a stance against drunk driving.

This marks the sixth year that MADD and Wayne County supporters are asking local motorists to "Tie One On For Safety," a simple concept with the goal of saving lives. By tying a red ribbon on a visible location of a vehicle, you symbolize a pledge to drive safe and sober during the holiday season and throughout the year.

MADD will host Red Ribbon Night at the Joe Louis Arena on Thursday, Dec. 3.

Adoption: The hole at the center

Just look at their tousled curls and endearing smiles, little unwanted babies who have found a loving home.

"Adoption: What a beautiful choice," says the voice-over in the anti-abortion commercial. And it is.

Nobody knows that better than I, whose family ranks would be considerably shrunken if it weren't for adoption.

Adoption gives everybody inof telling me I didn't matter," she said.

Zimmer has found some comfort in adoption activism and is currently president of the Adoption Identity Movement of Michigan, a group with a legislative agenda that also assists people with the adoption search process. The group believes that depression is extremely common among birth mothers — and adult adoptees.

Zimmer tells the story of an art therapist she knows who is an adoptee. The woman looked back at her own childhood artwork and realized that many of the pictures she drew depicted a child alone or a child without a face, revealing an inner emptiness and lack of sense of self.

"People think that if you just give the child love, that will be enough," Zimmer said. "But it isn't necessarily so. Lots of adoptees say that their life isn't whole till they can see their birth mother."

This is the kind of thing most people prefer not to know, I think. Adoption is a much more satisfying alternative if one can believe that it will make things right again for everybody. Finding out that even the adopted children often feel a hole at their center is a comfortless prospect.

As a relative of four adopted people, I feel my eyes filling with tears as Zimmer speaks.

Twenty-five years ago, someone very close to me had a baby "out of wedlock," as people used to say in the bad old days. In a pigeonhole of my desk, I keep the poem she wrote when she gave her baby son away. It still breaks my heart to read it.

"I will never know the true color of his eyes/I will never hear his voice or see him walk/I could only give him love — it is not enough," wrote the agonizing young mother.

That little boy never knew how his mother felt.

Today, of course, adoptions are more open. Birth mothers frequently are able to choose the parents of their babies. They can maintain some contact, by mail, by sending gifts at birthdays, and sometimes even delivering them in person.

My little granddaughter, an only child, told her mom not long ago, "I wish my birth mother would have another baby for us so I could have a little brother." We all wrote it down in our diaries and thought it was pretty cute, but of course she's still too young to have a real idea of the situation.

Like most adoptees under the modern regulations, she has a box of pictures and family history and mementos that she'll be able to look at through the years. Not much has been made of that box so far, considering her tender years, but we can't help wondering whether it will make a difference to her emotional health.

Our own adult adopted kids have nothing. No name, no ethnic identity, no health history, no idea what anyone looks like, whether anybody agonized over giving them away. No wonder they sometimes feel empty inside.

Adoption support groups like Zimmer's are working to change that. Bills currently in committee in Lansing would make records open to anyone, adoptee or birth parent, regardless of when the adoption occurred, unless they file a denial-of-access form.

Good as it sounds, though, Zimmer says the bill doesn't face easy sailing. Right-to-life groups oppose it, fearing such access will discourage adoptions.

Further impeding the bill is the likelihood that the Legislature will impose the state's heavy bureaucratic hand on the search process — a process that Zimmer says already works slowly and clumsily.

"We tried to get someone from the state office to come to speak to us and gave up after trying for eight days," she said. "They didn't even answer the phone."

Which is, of course, why groups like AIM must help people with their searches.

Reader John Conley sends along an E.L. Doctorow essay on presidential character that appeared in The Nation. As one might expect, it gives no quarter to Republican presidents (and not much to Jimmy Carter, either). But what struck me most in this spirited essay was Doctorow's satiric view of human nature, as seen by conservatives:

"(The election strategy) relies on the mordant truth that the right-wing politician has less of a distance to go to find and exploit our tribal fears and hatreds than his opponent who would track down and engage our better selves."

What a chillingly pessimistic view of humanity. Somebody tell me it ain't so. Please.

involved a second chance at happiness. The saddest thing about adoption is that it can't reach everybody who needs it.

There's another sad aspect about adoption that few pay attention to: In spite of the best intentions, birth mothers and adoptees often suffer ongoing emotional distress, sometimes for the rest of their lives.

"It's a real heavy-duty thing, I'll tell you," says Pam Zimmer of Grosse Pointe Woods, who gave up her daughter 22 years ago and has grieved for her every day since then. When her daughter reached 18, Zimmer searched for her — and actually found her within a few months. But the young woman and her adoptive family decided they didn't want to make personal contact or even correspond.

"I have honored that," Zimmer said. "At least I know she's all right."

But Zimmer went into a deep depression. Being denied contact seemed "just another way

Thanksgiving: Time to reflect

It's fast approaching, that season of reverence, joy, chaos, jingle bells, choir voices and occasional insanity. But first, before we immerse ourselves in our personal versions of the holiday season, we are given a time for reflection and gratitude. Each of us has intensely private reasons to give thanks to whomever we recognize as a Higher Being and it is appropriate at this time of year that we pause to consider our myriad blessings.

We are fortunate to live in a community where so much is offered to so many for so little in exchange. We have fine schools, parks, libraries, a variety of clubs and meeting places, a beautiful stretch of land on water, magnificent trees, fine public services and public servants and, above all, people who care about each other.

Our cities unite to decorate their business areas to bring joy and beauty to our citizens. We plant and nurture. We worship together, take food and clothing to those in need and reach out over and over again throughout the year. We recognize and give thanks for the privilege of being able to live in a comfortable pocket of the Midwest, where family values are played out daily.

We are thankful to have lived in this century when so much has evolved and the indomitable human spirit continues to prevail. We have seen men walk on the moon, we have witnessed the demise of dictatorships and the crumbling of the walls of tyranny. We have survived wars, hurricanes and earthquakes. The powerful vitality of our brothers and sisters and the respect we share enables us to reach out to each other.

Politicians may argue that we are not better off than we were a few years ago, and I would disagree. We have fought battles, universally and privately, we have been wounded and scarred, but we continue to move ahead and anticipate the dawning of each new day with renewed challenges and hope. Disease and starvation are still evident in too many parts of the world, but we are able to offer assistance and become involved more than ever before. Our dedication and commitment to eradicate these inequities remains a passionate priority.

Let us remember, on this Thanksgiving Day, all of the good things that have been a part of our lives as well as those things we have learned through our disappointments. We are grateful for the family and friends with whom we share our bread as well as those who have joined us in the past. And though physically they are not at our tables, their presence is felt by all and there is comfort to be derived from those feelings. We are grateful for the bounty that is ours, the warm shelter of our homes and for the many blessings we have taken for granted.

It is a time to take inventory and acknowledge the gifts we have received. Happy Thanksgiving...

Reasons why leaders failed to outlaw slavery

This is the 16th in a series of articles about the Bill of Rights, courtesy of the Commission of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

Why did the delegates at Philadelphia in 1787 fail to deal with the abolition of slavery?

It was not an oversight. The Puritan influence was very much present, especially in New England, and many political and intellectual leaders in Washington's day objected to slavery on the grounds that it was immoral, contrary to religious teaching and violated the principle, ably expressed in the Declaration of Independence, that "all men are created equal."

But the primary objective of the key leaders — Washington, Madison, Hamilton, Wilson and others — was to create an effective national government to replace the feeble confederation of 13 wholly independent states that had been established under the Articles of Confederation.

The framers were political realists who knew that failure to secure their primary objective — a Constitution — would result in failure to establish a workable political union between the states.

Come to the parade!

The Grosse Pointe Village Association's 16th annual Santa Claus Parade will start at 10:30 a.m. on Friday, Nov. 27, from the corner of Fisher Road and Grosse Pointe Blvd.

The parade will march down Kercheval through the Village shopping district before ending at Kensington Road in Grosse Pointe Park.

Dick Clark, from the Department of Public Safety, will lead the parade as he has for the past 16 years. He'll be joined this year by an equestrian color guard.

Santa Claus will be on the final float of the parade. After he has completed the Parade route, he will accept the key to the City from the Grosse Pointe

They also recognized that if they tried to abolish slavery, delegates of the plantation states, whose economy was built on slavery, would probably walk out of the Constitutional Convention, leaving the states with the feeble Confederation.

The true sentiment of many northern leaders was shown when the Confederation Congress in 1787 — while the delegates were meeting in Philadelphia — passed the Northwest Ordinance, forbidding the extension of slavery in the Northwest Territory from which Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin later emerged.

This was a painful choice for the delegates from New England, but they were concerned with the challenge of forging a new nation out of the 13 sovereign and independent states, each of which had its own army — and, in some cases, navy — and each of which was able to control what people and what goods could cross its borders.

Without a strong national government, the victors of the Revolutionary War would face many dangers; border disputes and commercial rivalries were likely to lead to warfare, with England, Spain and France competing to exploit internal conflicts.

Although France had been allied with the colonies during the Revolution, she could not be expected to stand by while Spain and England were vying for control of the rich lands of the North American continent.

The framers' failure to craft a political solution abolishing slavery reflected both the magnitude of the problem and the violent passions that were aroused on both sides of the issue. Those passions finally erupted in the Civil War, the bloodiest conflict in all history, up to that time.

Without a doubt, the perpetuation of slavery in the antebellum period constitutes one of the bleakest chapters in our nation's history. It also serves as a powerful reminder that our forefathers paid a heavy price to secure the liberties that we enjoy today, and that we should not take those liberties for granted.

The American Red Cross Southeastern Michigan Chapter is issuing an emergency appeal for volunteer drivers.

Because Job Bank volunteers (laid-off workers who volunteered for the Red Cross during their down time) were called back to work, the Red Cross has been shorthanded. Many people who rely on the Red Cross for transportation are unable to get to medical appointments. Also, volunteers who assist at bloodmobiles cannot get there because of the short supply of drivers. General Motors 75th Anniversary

You can live well — or not so well — into your 80s

Do you really want to live longer? You are 75 years old, or possibly 80.

You probably never really expected to reach that age, or perhaps you never thought about it. The chances are that you are pleased and even proud of your accomplishment.

Your accomplishment? Was it? Well, not entirely. This is a gift from our people — our society — who, in their generous support of medical research, have made it possible for you to live so much longer than your parents.

Unlike the French Canadian's bargain with the devil in an old folktale, these extra years have not committed you to anything, so far.

But a bargain does lie in front of you. On average, you can extend your life into the late 80s or beyond if you agree to follow three pieces of advice — the bargain, so to speak.

One, that you exercise effectively (no marathon training), a little over half an hour each day, most of it walking.

Two, that you cut down on the fat you eat to the point where fat furnishes less than one-third of the calories that you consume.

Three, that you do not smoke. I can sense people screaming, "But I'm addicted to tobacco." Or, "Smoking is my greatest comfort and satisfaction in life." Or even telling me to "go to hell" with no explanation.

Genes can be against you, but they were also against at least one of your parents and, where possible, that should make you work harder against their particular problem.

And remember, I have touched on the three things that account for 75 percent of the earlier-than-necessary deaths. But hear me out.

There is another factor of even greater importance that deeply affects the three points. That is, do you really want to live that much longer?

If you don't see any point in exchanging "good old habits" for an added 10 or 15 years at the end of your life, it must mean that, in your present thinking, you will not miss what you could do in an extra decade or more of living.

Your hesitancy about welcoming more years could mean that too many of your old friends are gone — the smokers, the heavy eaters and those who shunned exercise.

Or it could be that you wake up in the morning wondering, "What am I going to do today?" Or you could be depressed (for which much can be done now).

Senior Health

By Dr. Roger O. Egeberg

Or perhaps you feel that you haven't been needed for a long time, or that you miss the social relationships, the companionships, of the work place.

You have much company among your friends and associates who are eager to escape the pattern of their working years. You'll hear comments such as: "I've worked for 30 years for this and now I'm going to enjoy it." "No alarm clocks. No bumper-to-bumper traffic." "No meetings. And boy, was I getting tired of that job."

You'll also hear comments from a different group: "I don't believe it. Now that I've earned the rest I'm going to use it." "Why walk any more than I have to?" "I feel fine — great — and what I've been eating for the past 40 years agrees with me." "Gosh, I don't smoke more than a pack a day." These are the people whose average life span you can beat by eight to 12 years. If you enjoy your work, keep on. If you have plans for a second career, go to it. If you have been waiting for time to write, do it.

Or follow that strain of curiosity that you had about anthropology, the Renaissance, American history and much more. Follow them, and should you feel you have a talent, take up creative arts — painting, sculpting.

Almost any activity that makes you wake up with a satisfying, happy attitude toward the day ahead is a good reason for wanting to stay alive as long as you feel up to it.

Whatever the reasons for a pallid view of added years in your life, the underlying fact is that you may have a diminished self-image, that you just don't think you're worth very much, or that what you do isn't worth doing.

A positive self-image is the key to satisfaction with your life, an image that gives importance to your being here on Earth. You realize you are needed in accomplishing something useful, great or small.

Or you may be growing — increasing your knowledge or improving your skills. For those of you who do not have more "definite plans for your golden years," volunteering, assuming responsibilities, could become the reasons that would make you want to live longer.

Much needs to be done in the community, in the city, in the state or on the federal level — so much to do and not nearly enough people eager to do it.

There must be real wants in your community that your neighbors are trying to fulfill, from improving its appearance, to making it a safer place, to influencing what is being taught in the public schools.

There comes a deep satisfaction and, with it, happiness in helping others — people or causes.

There is still a great shortage of volunteers in this nation known for its volunteerism. Volunteers are important in planning, advising on financing, making useful contacts, providing transportation, or on the other hand, becoming involved with youth activities, and finally, visiting the lonely.

The list is long and becomes longer when it challenges those who are volunteering. There are two wonderful outcomes from volunteering.

It helps specific people, or a community, or a cause, in all of which you can feel you are a definite part. It also hoists the flag of your self-image, and that flag can fly high.

raphy and breast cancer; we were already doing it."

Weber was a natural for the job. When she started in 1983, she had a 21-year background as a public health nurse in Wayne and Oakland counties.

She covered a walking district in Detroit's inner city where she had to track down people who either had moved or had no address.

"I loved the independence and I loved the idea of being able to spend time with people," she said. "People there had barriers to health."

In some cases, getting a person to wash his hands once a week was a breakthrough, she said. "You had to take your successes in small doses," she added.

When she went to work for the Oakland County Health Department, it was younger and smaller, she said, "and they gave you a lot of latitude."

She started a public health hospital liaison program there in the mid-1970s.

Weber grew up on the east side of Detroit, on Yorkshire near Harper. The oldest in a family of four children, she attended St. Matthew's School and Dominican High School and earned a bachelor of science degree in nursing at Mercy College.

Studying nursing was a natural decision, she said. Her mother and her aunt were nurses, and, at the time, she said the choices were nursing or teaching or becoming a secretary. While she was at Mercy, she worked at Bon Secours Hospital.

She and William Rutledge were married 17 years ago. A former teacher at Parcels Middle School, Rutledge teaches business law at Macomb.

They spend their summers at a house they built on Bois Blanc Island in the straits of Mackinac and traveling. Their last trip was to Egypt.

Weber starts her day three or four times a week with a 6:15 a.m. aerobics class and said she loves to cook and loves to eat. Two recipes she created were published in Better Homes and Gardens and Bon Appetit magazines.

Weber has an abiding interest in family history and has traced her roots back to 1853 when the first Weber came to Detroit from Germany. He located in the downtown Gratiot area and her great-great-grandfather's brother owned Weber Furniture.

Her great-grandfather's sister married a Gaukler of Gaukler's Pointe, whose son sold the property to the Ford family in 1914. Weber has compiled a history of her family with documents and photos.

She and her husband are members of the Graphic Arts Council of the Detroit Institute of Arts and she said she has become a minor expert in modern art glass. They are members of Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church.

Callers

friends. This, however, was the group's first emergency.

"Church members must want us to call them, give us their consent, plus information like the names and telephone numbers of neighbors and family," Trowern said. "It isn't enough for one of their children or friends to only suggest it."

Bon Secours Hospital's 55PLUS program based in St. Clair Shores includes a volunteer calling project, too, said Peggy Brey, director of aging services. Not only is its volunteer base (nine callers) the same as the church's, it actually was started at the suggestion of one of Memorial's founders, Elizabeth Williams.

"Elizabeth helped educate us and get us going," said Brey. "Our volunteers currently are calling 10 people over the age of 55. To date, we've not had a crisis."

At Memorial Church, volunteer Caring Callers are assigned to make calls the same day of the week for a month. If, after a few tries, they are unable to reach the member at home, they telephone a neighbor for follow-up. Through the months and years of calling, the volunteers form friendships with respondents.

And they get to know their habits — which in the case of the stroke victim may have slowed the process a bit. He was an avid gardener, Trowern said, and frequently would be outside in the yard when the phone rang each day.

"Now he's recovering in a nursing home in the western part of the state," she said.

News spreads fast, Trowern said. Since the incident, new people, including a friend of the stroke victim who is in his mid-80s, have been signing up to receive calls. "The calling service isn't just for elderly people," she said. "And we're always happy to welcome volunteers who'd like to spend a few hours a month making calls."

time to the libraries, this would be a good time to begin doing that."

Last week's meeting was the first of three special sessions scheduled by the library board. Future meetings are set for February and April.

"The criticism is justified," said Gloria Konsler, school board president. "We were never asked to do this. But when it was brought to us we said, 'Let's do it.'"

At the outset of the meeting, Konsler expressed enthusiasm that the school board was meeting in a library board capacity. She also asked the audience, heavily populated by library employees and supporters, to have patience with the board and to give it time to become comfortable in the role.

Shine said each month, when he meets with other district administrators to prepare the school board meeting agenda, he gives library director Charles Hanson the opportunity to present agenda items.

Typically, the items are such that they can be addressed at a board of education meeting, he said, and it would be pointless to schedule a separate meeting to act upon one agenda item. Shine added that the school district has never denied a request for a special meeting to address library issues.

"So when we received a report that the board of education is not spending enough time with the library, one could get a little perplexed because the issues are not being brought forward," Shine said.

Hanson said libraries are complex organizations and most book-lending institutions have an established governing board that meets on a regular basis solely to discuss library issues.

"This (meeting) is an opportunity for us to work together and focus on developing priorities to bring us ahead," Hanson said.

Shine said he is hoping last week's meeting and the two scheduled for 1993 will help the school district and the community better understand the needs and goals of the libraries.

Furniture filched

Three pieces of wicker furniture were taken from a front porch in the 1300 block of Nottingham in Grosse Pointe Park between 7:15 p.m. Nov. 7, and 9:45 a.m. Nov. 8, Park police said.

Intruder robs woman in car

Detroit police are searching for a man who robbed a woman as she was driving east on Jefferson at Alter Road shortly before 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 17.

The woman said she was stopped at a light at the intersection when a man forced his way into her car. She said the man threatened her, hit her with an umbrella and cut her hair with shears.

She drove into the driveway of the Grosse Pointe Park police station, where the man exited the car and fled with her watch and $150.

A Detroit police tracking dog followed the suspect's trail north on Lakepointe but lost the scent at St. Paul.

The victim said the suspect was a white man, about 25 years old, 6 feet tall, well-groomed, with blond hair. She said he was wearing a gray jogging suit and maroon gloves.

Armed robber gets 15-30 years

A 27-year-old Detroit man has been sentenced in the Feb. 26 armed robbery of a Detroit woman at a pay phone next to the Jefferson/Wayburn bus stop in Grosse Pointe Park.

On Nov. 16 in Wayne County Circuit Court, Tony Raynell Hampton was sentenced to 15 to 30 years in prison in the robbery of the 54-year-old woman.

Park Lieutenant David Hiller said Hampton was sentenced as a habitual offender, and, as such, he will serve at least 15 years, "with no time off for good behavior."

The robbery occurred about six weeks after a woman was murdered at the same bus stop.

Hiller said police are still investigating the murder. No suspects have been named yet in that case, but through the continuing investigation detectives have identified several suspects wanted in other cases, including Hampton, Hiller said.

Hard-boiled prosecutor cracks down on egg baby abuse

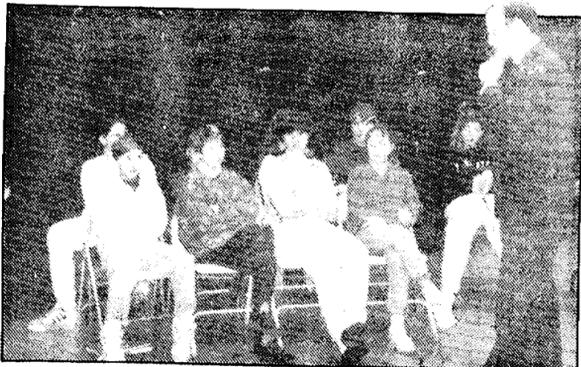

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Three Pierce Middle School students were tried in a mock session of the Grosse Pointe Park Municipal Court on Nov. 13 for their alleged crimes against egg babies.

Defendants Dave Presnell, Chris Casetta and Katyn Szymanski seventh graders at Pierce were charged by prosecuting attorney Bill Hoey with various degrees of child abuse for the cracked, broken (and in one case eaten) eggs they returned to their teachers at the conclusion of a preparenting unit in their life skills class.

An eight member jury found Presnell guilty of second degree child abuse. Casetta's trial ended with a hung jury and Municipal Judge Kirsten Frank declared the proceeding a mistrial. And Szymanski was found innocent of fourth degree child abuse charges.

Testimony at Presnell's trial revealed that his egg baby (which symbolizes a human in fact in his care) was dropped on the floor twice and then consumed by Ginger, the family dog. The egg fell on the floor twice, Presnell said, after it rolled out of its basket, which has a missing handle and lacks a cover.

Hoey said second-degree child abuse was the appropriate charge because of Presnell's serious parental omissions which caused injuries on two occasions. Omission, as defined under the Michigan child abuse statute, is the willful failure to provide the food, clothing and shelter necessary for a child's welfare, or the willful abandonment of a child.

A defendant found guilty of second degree child abuse, which is a felony, can receive a maximum four year prison sentence.

Presnell expressed remorse for his actions, telling police in a written statement that he "should have made a wire cover for the carrier."

Casetta, who witnesses say was last seen with an egg that had suffered fatal cracks, was charged with fourth-degree child abuse. But at the conclusion of Casetta's trial, the jury was unable to agree on who was responsible for the various cracks found on classmate Brendan Shine's egg, which was in Casetta's care at the time of the accident.

According to police reports and witness statements, Shine entrusted his egg to classmate Christina Soper while he left the room for a minute. When he returned, his egg was cracked in two places the admitted guilt for one crack, which occurred, he said, when he tried to affix a bow tie to the egg. Soper said Casetta grabbed the egg from her hand and then she saw something fall onto Shine's chair. Soper said she was not able to say, with total certainty, that she saw Casetta drop the egg.

In his statement, Casetta said that Soper let him hold the egg and then he handed it right back. He said he does not remember dropping the egg, although it might have happened over. There were two women in the front seat and a man in the back seat.

The officer frisked the man and found a medicine vial in the crotch of his pants. Inside the vial were 23 rocks of "crack" cocaine.

The man was arrested and the women were released. No weapons were found in the car, which turned out not to be the vehicle Detroit police were seeking Pierce student Abigail DeFrance, testified to the truth of Szymanski's statement to police. DeFrance's testimony apparently convinced the jury Szymanski was innocent of child abuse.

Egg-baby project organizers Valerie Moran and Pat Pompi, both life skills teachers at Pierce, said the egg baby unit and trials are the final phase in an interdisciplinary unit in which life skills students cared for the eggs, social studies students examined the court process, English students wrote on the theme "actions have consequences," journalism students covered the story and art students drew pictures of the proceedings.

Unwise 'crack'

A 23-year-old Detroit man who was arrested by Grosse Pointe City police for possessing 23 rocks of crack cocaine was bound over for trial in Wayne County Circuit Court at his preliminary examination, which was held recently in Grosse Pointe Park Municipal Court.

Corey Dorcan Williams has been charged with "possession of narcotics," a felony punishable by four years in prison and/or a $25,000 fine.

He was released after posting a $5,000 bond.

Williams was arrested by City police about 9 p.m. Oct. 30.

A City officer heard that Detroit police were looking for a car in which a shotgun had been seen.

Two minutes later, he saw a car matching the description of the wanted vehicle on Mack at Nottingham.

The officer pulled the car

Girl Scouts tour Europe for month, visit 6 countries

Ten senior Girl Scouts, under the auspices of Grosse Pointe Senior Troop 327, traveled for one month to six European countries.

The group, led by co-leader Marge Parsons, with Sue Schiewe assisting, included Allison Armstrong (who had moved to Maryland earlier this year), Julie Amyot, Gail Bellanca, Anna Collinson, Anne Koenig, Rebecca McCurdy, Lindsay Mergos, Katrina Novak, Nicole Robbins and Sue Ulicny.

The girls, each of whom attended either North, South or Regina high schools, spent several months in selecting not only the countries to be visited, but in planning both the specific itinerary and places and sites to tour.

Working in various fundraisers over several years and saving money from myriad part-time jobs gave each girl the funds needed for the trip — with only minimal help from others.

While visiting England, France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria and Germany and two Girl Scout/Girl Guide World Centers, the group got opportunities to experience and to learn about others in special ways.

London was approached in tourist fashion by visiting the British Museum, Buckingham Palace and the changing of the guard. A walking tour included Covent Garden, St. Paul's Cathedral, Piccadilly Square, the Tower of London and the Crown Jewels, Big Ben and the Houses of Parliament, the Thames River, Sherlock Holmes' flat and the Madame Tussaud Wax Museum.

They rode the subway to Pax Lodge, the new World Center of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides. The train ride to Windsor Castle and then Stonehenge whisked the group into ancient times and united it with the scientists and historians who have been trying without success to fathom the mysteries of the giant stone columns.

Dining at an English pub and at the original Hard Rock Cafe and enjoying the stage play "Me and My Girl" rounded out the return to modern London.

The 90-minute catamaran cruise from Dover, England, to Calais, France, allowed time for photo opportunities with the White Cliffs as backdrop.

Paris marked the group's first experience with the extensive youth hostel accommodations which flourish throughout Europe.

Because of its central location, many of the sights and sounds of Paris were within easy walking distance, including the Latin Quarter, the Louvre, Notre Dame, the Eiffel Tower, the Champs d'Elysees and Arc de Triomphe.

Using public transportation, the group visited Jim Morrison's grave, the palace and grounds of Versailles and the newly opened Euro-Disney amusement park.

The group then took a boat ride up the Seine, shopped for souvenirs and sampled some French cuisine.

Traveling by cab to the train station in Gare Lyon and then to Frasne, to Berne and finally to Frutigen and by bus to Dey/Adelboden, Switzerland, the girls hiked to the Girl Scout/Girl Guide World Center "Our Chalet" located high in the Swiss Alps.

Girls from five continents and many countries enjoyed eight days of touring and hiking under guidance of the chalet staff. Other activities included mountain climbing, rappelling, walking on glaciers and exploring glacial caves.

They hiked to cheese makers and wood carvers high on the mountain side.

The next hostel destination was in Venice, which included tours of its famous gondola factory and mask studio. There was a walking tour of the city, and a day at Lido Beach.

Mozart's birthplace and home, a tour of the city, shopping and a "Sound of Music" tour rounded out the first day in Salzburg, Austria.

The sights and sounds of Munich occupied the group's attention for the ensuing days and included listening to the late afternoon Glockenspiel as well as the evening Glockenspiel lullaby at Marienplatz, visiting Oberammergau, home of the famed Passion Play and Neuschwanstein Castle — after which the Walt Disney Sleeping Beauty Castles are patterned — and Lindhof Castle.

A tour of the city, followed by a visit to Hofbrauhaus, completed the planned events in Munich.

Following a suggestion from another tourist, the group went to the Dachau concentration camp and was moved by the pictures and relics preserved there.

For their final day in Munich, the group visited and swam in the Munich Olympic Stadium.

The group traveled to Mainz and spent a full day cruising up the Rhine River, past many historic castles and villages, to Koblenz.

Postscripts to the trip are still occurring as the girls and their leader meet to exchange photos. Meanwhile, they are planning their next adventure.

Be wary of check writers

Whether you're running a garage sale or a business, always ask to see the customer's driver's license or Michigan I.D. card before accepting a check as payment, Grosse Pointe City Detective Dennis VanDale said.

Recently, a couple of garage sale operators and two businesses in the City got burned by not following that rule, he said.

They accepted checks with a local doctor's name on them from a woman who claimed to work for him, VanDale said.

The woman has never worked for the doctor, and the checks were stolen from his home, possibly during an "open house" on Oct. 24, VanDale said.

"She tried using the checks at other stores, but when she was asked to show her I.D. there, she left," he said.

Witnesses said the woman is about 5-foot-8, in her late 20s, and has blond hair. On some occasions she was accompanied by a child between the ages of 2 and 4, he said.

Yes, Virginia, there really is a Woody at Woody Pontiac

Woodrow W. Woody, the kindly, grandfatherly gentleman who asks for our order on the Woody Pontiac television commercials, then waves and says he will see us later, marked his 85th birthday shortly before Thanksgiving. And he would be the first to say that he has a lot to be thankful for.

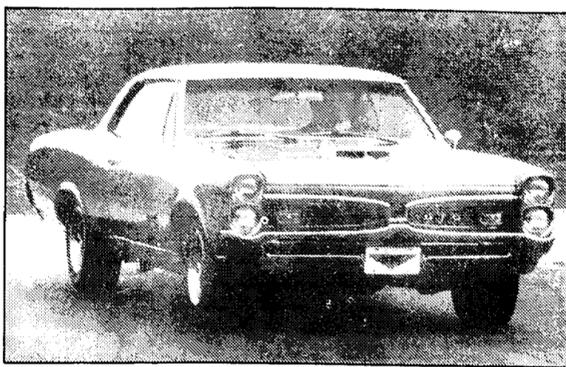

For just about half his life, more than 42 years, he has sold Pontiacs and only Pontiacs — well over 100,000 of them — and made thousands of friends at his dealership on Jos. Campau in Hamtramck.

Despite the prolonged recession, Woody Pontiac continues to operate in the black, largely because Woody still comes in every day and pays attention to details that create a successful dealership, said office manager Mona Louis. He is a "people person," she said, and the long service of many employees (Louis has been with Woody Pontiac for 32 years, for example) attests to this.

"Mr. Woody personally greets everyone who buys a new car," she said. "Our service department kept the dealership open during World War II, when there were no new cars to sell, and it is still the key to our success. We have 95 percent service absorption (a long-time business formula which calls for the service department to cover overhead for the whole dealership) and a 98 percent Customer Satisfaction Index rating."

He is widely recognized by Detroit-area residents because of his appearances in his own television commercials, admonishing us in the manner of a gruff but kindly grandfather to buy a Pontiac and to buy it from him. Often he is greeted in public as a friend by people who suddenly realize they have never met him.

Outside his office overlooking Jos. Campau above the dealership showroom (his "world headquarters," he says) are hundreds of photographs recalling decades of memories, including shots with several presidents — Bush, Reagan, Ford, Nixon, even back to Eisenhower and photos with business celebrities, particularly fellow country patriots, such as Danny Thomas and Toby David.

Photos with Pontiac executives — John DeLorean, Pete Estes, Bunkie Knudsen, Jim McDonald, Bob Stempel, go all the way back to Harry Klingler, who was Pontiac general manager in 1939, when Woody applied for the open franchise in Hamtramck.

Though his friend George Bush was voted out of the White House and his friend Bob Stempel was ousted as head of General Motors, Woody remains optimistic.

"The future is unlimited," he says. "Business is going to skyrocket." Woody preferred Bush, but said it may be time for a younger generation to take over and wished Bill Clinton all the best and said he thinks he will do a good job.

He was less sanguine about the ouster of Robert Stempel as chairman of GM. He said it didn't make sense because he believed Stempel to be the best possible man to turn GM in new directions. He shook his head, then smiled gently as he does on his TV commercials, and changed the subject.

He said that when President Bush made a campaign appearance in Hamtramck earlier this year, he was secretary Marlin Hoyer called Woody to ask if he could use his dealership as a media center. "Of course," Woody told him. Woody was invited to greet the president on his arrival at Selfridge and to tour Air Force One.

"Presidential flight attendant Rebecca Lynn Schulz, a very charming young lady, showed me around this magnificent airplane," Woody said. "She showed me a large leather chair which had a brass plate on it which read 'George.' Near it was a chair with the nameplate 'Barbara.' I sat in George's chair." He chuckled at the memory.

Born Woodrow Shikany in 1907 in Bejederfel, Lebanon, he came to the United States with his family in 1912 and settled in Minneapolis. The family moved to Detroit in 1929 and Woody went to work at the Hudson Motor Car Co. assembly plant on the east side. It was while working there that he met his future wife, Ann Martes.

The young Woody had always worked to help support the family, so he did not finish high school, at least not in the usual manner. After he had become a nationally known Pontiac dealer, built the Hillcrest Country Club, served as president of the Hamtramck Chamber of Commerce, the Hamtramck Rotary Club and the Metropolitan Detroit Pontiac Dealers, he went back to Hamtramck High School and got his diploma in 1965, the only person ever to graduate and enter the school's hall of fame at the same time.

Woody had developed an intense interest in the retail end of the automobile business and in 1936 he left Hudson to work as a salesman at Mack-Gratiot Chevrolet. Within two years, he had bought his own used-car lot at Vernor and Mount Elliott on the near east side. He applied for a Pontiac franchise in Hamtramck in 1939.

"This is a Polish town and you're Lebanese," Woody was told by a Pontiac sales executive. "Why do you want a dealership in an area where you're going to fail?"

"If you give me the franchise, I'll marry a Polish girl," Woody said. That is what happened and, with Ann Woody playing an active role in the business, Woody got the franchise in 1940 and built it into a high-volume dealership with a solid reputation for fairness and good service. The cars have changed over the years, but Woody remains loyal to Pontiac, the only franchise he ever held.

The Pontiac was introduced in 1926, a companion car to the Oakland, but it quickly eclipsed its parent. Named after the famous Indian chief, the Pontiac was the first marketing "niche" car, designed to fit between the low-priced Chevrolet and the upscale Buick and Oldsmobile in GM's lineup.

Sales in 1926 (76,696 cars) were a first-year record for any make, topping the previous mark set by Chrysler in 1924.

After Pontiac's meteoric rise — the 500,000th Pontiac was built in June 1929 — the Oakland Division's fortunes plunged after the stock market crash. The decision was made in 1931 to kill the Oakland and change the division's name to Pontiac. Under Harry Klingler, who was Pontiac general manager when Woody got his franchise, the division prospered and in 1940, sales approached the quarter-million mark. Woody's timing was impeccable.

After World War II, Pontiac continued to enjoy success as kind of a conservative step up from Chevrolet or an alternative to the more venturesome Oldsmobile, but sales had hit a plateau. A new V-8 perked up Pontiac in 1955, then a new era began in 1956 as Semon E. (Bunkie) Knudsen, son of the legendary William E. Knudsen of Ford and GM fame, took over. He assembled a team of young performance-minded engineers that included E.M. (Pete) Estes, John Z. DeLorean and Malcolm (Mac) McKellar, and they remade Pontiac into the division that "built excitement."

Pontiacs from the muscle-car era — GTOs, Bonneville's, Trans Ams, Grand Prix's and a number of rare special factory hot rods, such as the Catalina Super-Duty — are favorites with collectors. A more recent entry, the innovative mid-engine Fiero, seems likely to achieve collector-car status. Fiero GTs already have a following.

It is difficult to get Woody to talk about the past, because he instinctively looks to the future. His current project which excites and occupies him is planning a new Hamtramck civic center, municipal center and town square.

But finally, he did look back: "The makeup of our city has changed, but we have made many new friends here, too. Many of my customers come in from suburbs and are grandchildren of people I dealt with over the years. I matriculated with their elders. But most of our customers now live in Hamtramck and Detroit." He paused, deep in thought.

"I am blessed. I am truly a happy man. I have no fears of the future, no regrets about the past."

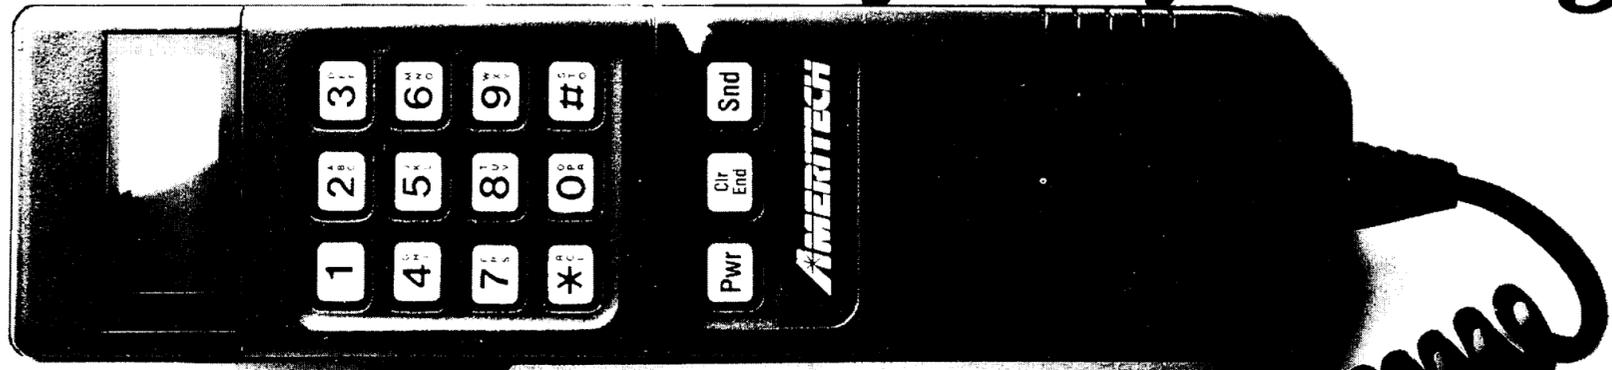

Woody Pontiac provided cars when Pope John Paul II visited Hamtramck. A solid churchman, Woody has been active in efforts to achieve peace in his troubled homeland. As always, he is optimistic.

"I think we will see great progress soon," he said.

This painting of Ann and Woodrow Woody hangs in the showroom on Jos. Campau.

This'll have everybody talking.

Donna Walker Writer
A Tulsa, Okla., company is being investigated for mail out after giving a Grosse Pointe woman an offer at seemed too good to refuse.

The woman received the offer the mail on Friday, Nov. 13, from Worldwide Protection, a credit card insurance company she had never heard of.

The notice said, "Congratulations. We are unable to contact you by phone. Therefore, we are advising you in writing that our obligation to hold your award will expire within 72 hours of receipt of this notice. You are absolutely guaranteed at least one of the following five awards for participating in our National Promotion: 1992 Ford Taurus; fabulous Hawaiian holiday; $2,500 casher's check; complete Sony home rack stereo system and color TV; or $1,500 cash.

"For details and shipping arrangements, you must call 1-800-258-5289. Call now, we will pay for the call."

In smaller print, on the bottom of the notice, it said, "This offer is not available to the general public. This is not a time-share or lottery. This is a valid premium incentive offer. Any tampering will void this offer. Void where prohibited by law. Only one call per household."

Her interest was piqued, so she called the number, and was told first by a saleswoman, and then by a salesman for Worldwide Protection, that she would have to pay $150 for the credit card protection service, and that she must buy the service to receive one of the "guaranteed" prizes listed.

They told her that she would not have to pay for the service until after she received her prize.

City Detective Dennis Van Dale said, "She didn't think she needed the protection, but she thought it was a good deal because any one of those prizes was worth more than $150."

She agreed to buy the service, and gave the salespeople private information, including her checking account number, during the sign-up process.

Afterward, she wondered if that was wise and called City police.

VanDale said, "Most mail scams involve 1-900 telephone numbers. They make their money by keeping you on the line a long time, because they charge you several dollars per minute for the call. But this was a 1-800 number, so they had to make their money some other way."

City police called the U.S. postal inspector in Detroit, who said the company's objective might be to get customers' bank account numbers.

"Some people might think, what can you do with a checking account number if you don't have a check," Van Dale said. "Well, what you can do is transfer money from that account to another account. It's called 'electronic debiting.'"

Fearing the company would take money out her bank accounts without her knowledge, the woman closed her accounts and opened new ones, VanDale said.

He said the U.S. postal inspector in Detroit told him that he would notify the postal inspector in Tulsa about the possible mail fraud.

"Once again," VanDale said, "the bottom line is there is no such thing as a free lunch. If an offer sounds too good to be true, it probably is."

Teach your cat to use the litter box properly

A friend of mine who was having some difficulty getting her new cat to use its litterbox asked if there were any special tactics that would help eliminate kitty's potty training problems.

As always, the Michigan Humane Society came through with flying colors when faced with a pet-care challenge.

The society provides several troubleshooting suggestions. But before trying any of these ideas, please remember that although you may be frustrated or angry with kitty's behavior, it's not her fault, not consciously, anyway. As with any other behavioral problem, you must approach it gently and without aggression. Never strike or beat your pet. They only know what they've learned.

Kitty's "mistakes" could be happening for any number of reasons, the first being habit. If kitty was never properly taught to use a litterbox, begin to retrain her, starting with closing off the room where the mistake keeps happening and reward her when she uses her box with positive reinforcements, like small treats, a special cat-nip toy or a loving embrace (very important for successful behavior modification).

Odors have profound effects on kitty's willingness to use her box. Familiar scents breed frequent visits. Be sure to clean urine spots thoroughly, using an "odor eliminator" (found in pet stores) or vinegar and water. Never use ammonia since to a cat it also smells like urine.

Pet Pourri
By Kathleen Ferrilla

If kitty's box is dirty, shame on you! Keep that box clean with plenty of fresh litter, changing it once or twice a week, and be sure to scoop out any feces between cleanings. If you use alfalfa litter, switch to a clay litter. Many cats won't respond to alfalfa litter so try other brands.

Also, the box should be placed in a private area that's convenient and quiet and makes kitty feel safe. Don't put the box by her feeding area — pets won't soil areas where they sleep or eat unless they have no choice.

Rivalry is also a possibility. If kitty has to share her box with another cat, it's no wonder she refuses to use it. Having more than one cat requires more than one litter box. Get each of them their own box.

Illness could be a factor in kitty's unwillingness to use her box. Be aware of signs indicating urinary infection or other ailments, like crying, blood in the urine, straining or frequent urination. If you notice kitty having any discomfort whatsoever, or displaying any of the above signs, get her to the veterinarian. If left untreated, some illnesses can be fatal.

Hormones can also play a large role in resisting the box. Male cats that have not been neutered have an instinctive need to mark their territory, even if that territorial domain happens to be inside your house.

The Michigan Humane Society says the way to remedy this problem is to "get that boy neutered." As you know, you should do this regardless of kitty's gender or temperament.

Lastly, and what I see as the most disheartening reason of all for deviant behavior, may be you. Yes, you. Take an honest look at the relationship you have with your pet and ask yourself, "Do I give my pet enough attention? Do I spend enough time with my pet?" Give your pet more attention, and it may not have to resort to such unpleasant tactics to get it themselves.

Many of us are unaware of kitty's emotional dependence on us because of the impression she gives, but don't let her fool you. She needs our love, praise and attention just as much as our canine companions do and would surely wither without it.

If you have any pet-care questions or comments, write to Kathleen Ferrilla, c/o Grosse Pointe News, 96 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich. 48236.

Pierce and Parcels middle school students wore red ribbons and decorated their school halls with hand-made posters during National Drug Awareness Week, Oct. 26-30. But ribbons and posters served only to increase the students' awareness of the dangers of drug use. Issues of the causes and effects of drug use, role playing and research helped the students understand the dangers of drug use and reasons why children never should begin. Teacher Nicol Straka said the students are learning about drug abuse as part of a semester long health unit. In addition to drug awareness, students also study nutrition, teenage pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases and smoking and eating disorders. Students will be presenting oral reports at the conclusion of the unit, Straka said.

A night on the hill

A half-dozen shops will remain open until 9 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 1, in order to raise money for Richard Elementary School.

Christmas shoppers are invited to spend the first-ever Richard Night on the Hill browsing (and buying) at Something Special, Sports on the Hill, Puzzle Works, Images Jewelry, Dukes Antiques and Quill Printers.

Gift and craft vendors will display their wares in the lobby of 63 Kercheval. Refreshments will be served by several of the participating merchants. A portion of the shops' proceeds will be donated to Richard School.

Santa eats pizza

If the spirit of Christmas present hasn't paid a visit to your home, come to Richard Elementary School at 176 McKinley in Grosse Pointe Farms for the annual Richard Santa's attic and pizza dinner fundraiser.

Between 1 and 4 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 5, Richard will host family caroling at the gazebo on Kercheval, a pizza dinner, an appearance by Santa Claus and a performance of the Grosse Pointe South High School choir.

Justice honored

Veteran Grosse Pointe South High School math teacher Carl Justice was honored recently by the Michigan Council of Teachers of Mathematics for his years of dedication and service to the mathematics education of students in the K-12 level.

Justice was one of 177 teachers and administrators given certificates of recognition at the 43rd annual conference in October at Northern Michigan University in Marquette. He has taught all levels of math and has served as department chairman, senior class adviser and coach of the South mathematics team.

Alumni Day is Dec. 17

The ninth annual Grosse Pointe South Alumni Day, sponsored by the high school and the South Mothers' Club, is scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 17, in the South gymnasium.

Alumni day has been designed by South's counseling and guidance department to assist students in making the transition from high school to college as smooth as possible.

Recent south graduates, in cooperation with the admissions officials of the respective colleges, will return to South to share their new college experiences with current juniors and seniors.

A college fair format, similar to College Night, will be used. Each college represented will be assigned an appropriately identified table in the gymnasium. College freshmen and sophomores will sit behind tables and field questions about college life.

Seniors will be excused from their classes on a voluntary basis from 12:35 to 1:15 p.m. Juniors will be excused from 1:25 to 1:55 p.m.

Representatives from 75 colleges are expected to be on hand to assist the students. South alumni interested in assisting in the program may call Margie Prokop, Mothers' Club Alumni Day chairperson, at 343-0219.

Ident Spotlight Carolyn Gorski

The Curse

The day before Halloween I went to a party store in a small town and I remembered seeing one pumpkin in the back that seemed like it was hiding. I asked someone who worked there, "How much is it?" She said, "That one's not for sale."

three years and no one has bought it. Also, each Halloween there has been a full moon out and we saw a witch riding on her broomstick. She put a curse on the pumpkin."

I didn't believe any of this, so I gave her $10 and walked away with the pumpkin in my hand. As I walked home, I felt weird. I put it down and rested and then I felt fine. I started walking again, but then felt weird.

At home I laid down and took a nap. Later I went downstairs and something grabbed my leg. I thought it must be my imagination. Was it the Jack-o-lantern?

I decided to make a game of this. I called five of my friends over and they brought six croquet mallets. We smashed my pumpkin. As I smashed, its blood came out. Now I am always going to listen to the salesman.

Erik Knudson

Erik Knudson, the son of Virginia and Gregory Knudson, is the third grade at Richard School.

What Was It?

One Halloween night I was carrying my lantern to the attic. Something grabbed my leg.

I looked down. There was a goblin hanging on to my foot. I was in pain. It said, "Help me." It was bleeding. I ran downstairs to get the medicine kit.

It said, "Someone stabbed me with a knife." I fixed him all up. He could fly now, so he went to find the one who got him. He never came back again.

Knudson

Year 2000

By the year 2000, many companies with older workforces may find that their aging, higher-paid workers make them uncompetitive. This will be particularly true of companies in slowly growing industries or ones in which productivity is defined by production systems rather than by worker knowledge or skills, according to Workforce 2000, a U.S. Labor Department publication.

Stephanie Shepard

Stephanie Shepard, in the third grade at Richard School, is the daughter of Karen and William Shepard.

I am an Ant

I am a black ant with eight legs. I am fat I eat a lot of food. I am speedy. Sometimes I'm tired I can be a slowpoke.

I see things huge. Things are enormous to me because I am so small. People look like they're going to smash me. It takes about an hour to cross a desk. Some other insects look huge, too.

Shepard

Once I was inside someone's house and a huge human came up and caught me. I was in a jar for about an hour. I got loose though one of the air holes. I was tired of being in the jar. He almost got me again, but I got out in no time. I grabbed some food and ate it all up and ran out.

Clare Burchi

Clare Burchi, the daughter of Barbara Patek and Alan Burchi, is in the third grade at Richard School.

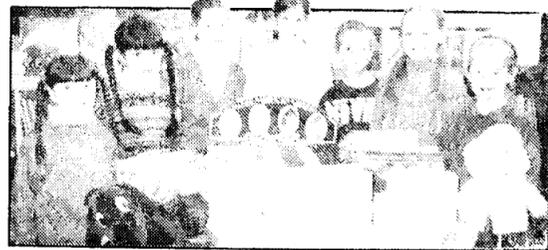

The First Insects

The very first insects roamed in the cold black forest 300 million years ago. They were the cockroach and the dragonfly.

An adult insect cannot grow any larger. It cannot because it has a hard skeleton. As little insects get older they often shed their skin.

Wasps, bees and termites build nests. They build very different kinds of nests. Some are simple. Some are complex.

Research works.

Books, books, books

Defer Elementary School students are preparing for the 1992 book fair to be held Dec. 1-5 in room 100. Adult night will be from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Dec. 3. The book fair is sponsored by the Defer PTO. Books are supplied by Third Coast Booksellers. Students helping to get ready are, from left, Amy Reid, Sarah Reid, Leah Lewandoski, Leah Dantzer, Pat Dantzer, Amy Worrell and Meghan Worrell.

Cindy Chu, a third grader at Richard Elementary School, is the daughter of Fung Yuang and Wu of the Farms.

Butterfly

I am a white butterfly. I am a middle-sized butterfly. I also have a thin body. My wings are three times the size of my body. People are much bigger than me. They are nice. They plant flowers for us butterflies.

Chu

Things that we see are big. No! No! Gigantic! Things look very, very scary since they are so big. At night it looks even scarier so we butterflies fly to something that looks like us so we can hide and sleep at the same time.

In the morning I look for those big flowers to eat for breakfast. While I'm eating, giants come out to play so I have to be careful.

Sometimes the giants let out a cat. The cat starts to chase me. While I'm having fun with it chasing me, it is a risky game because you could get caught. So be careful, you butterflies, when the giants let out a cat.

There's a Hands Down Difference Between the Wait Time in Our Emergency Department and Others.

The minutes can tick away — sometimes into hours — when you're waiting for treatment in an emergency room.

But at Bon Secours, we designed our Emergency Department so you spend more time in the treatment room than the waiting room.

We are able to do that with more professional staff, more treatment rooms and an X-ray right inside the Emergency Department.

That means at Bon Secours, you'll be feeling better faster.

It's what we expect.

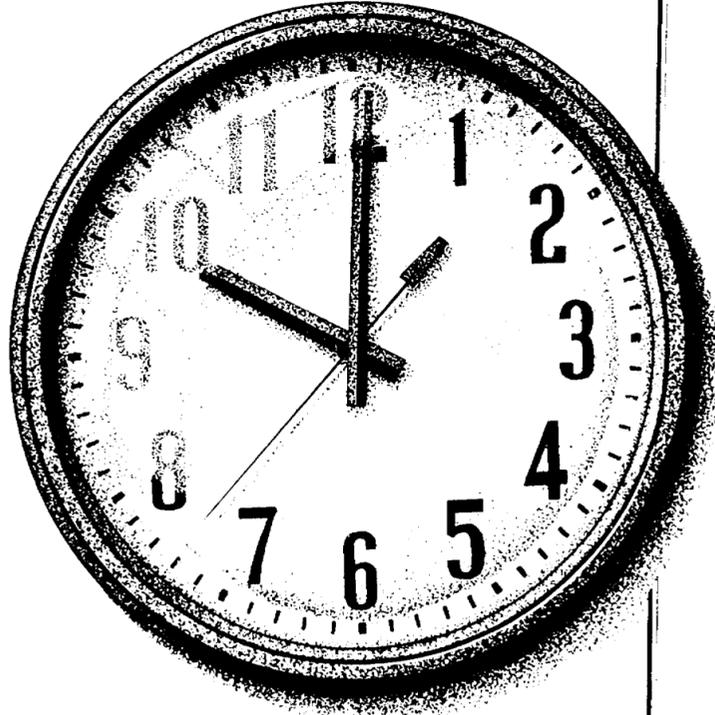

It's what you deserve.

Ford House plans holiday events

Edsel & Eleanor Ford House announces its annual Christmas tours schedule along with special programs for the entire family.

Yuletide festivities this year will include a toy exhibit, live theater for children, holiday teas for youngsters as well as a Sunday continental brunch and tour.

The historic home will be authentically decorated for the holidays with Mrs. Ford's specially commissioned decorations now through Jan. 3.

Traditionally, a large white-flocked tree, decorated with glass ornaments that were created in the 1950s for a party hosted by Eleanor Ford, stands in the Main Hall. The ornaments were hand-blown in the Ford Motor Company glass factory.

Tours of the 60-room home in Grosse Pointe Shores are offered to the public Wednesday through Sunday, beginning on the hour, from noon to 4 p.m. Two additional days, Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 28 and 29, have been added to the holiday schedule this year. Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for seniors (60 and over), and $2 for children (12 and under).

Continuing an annual tradition, Ford House will again present an exhibition of toys from the Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson Collection. "Young Hollywood" is the theme of this year's display, with toys dating from the 1920s to the 1980s and relating to Hollywood films and animations. Admission is free with holiday programs or tours.

'Malcolm X' showing to aid local group

The Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe, the Michigan Coalition on Human Rights and New Detroit, Inc. will host a benefit showing of the film "Malcolm X" on Wednesday, Dec. 2, at the Beacon East Theatre in Harper Woods.

The groups believe the film can make an important contribution to the discussion of racial issues in our society.

"Malcolm X" is seen by many in the African-American community as an important contributor to the struggle for racial justice, yet he is seen by many in the white community as a divisive influence in race relations.

Tickets are $10 ($5.75 will benefit the Racial Justice Center and Michigan Coalition on Human Rights) and can be purchased through either group.

Show time is from 7 to 10:15 p.m. The movie is rated R-restricted - under 17 not admitted without parent or guardian.

A follow-up program will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 9, at Barth Hall (St. Paul's Episcopal Church - Woodward and Warren in Detroit).

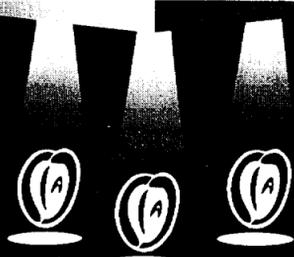

A follow-up program for members of the Racial Justice Center of Grosse Pointe will convene on Tuesday, Jan. 12, with a panel discussion focusing on the theme: "Malcolm X - Contributor or Barrier to Racial Justice."

The discussion will be held at St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran Church, 375 Lothrop, in Grosse Pointe Farms, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

'At ULS, I developed an intense work ethic which has helped me immensely in college.'

James Kim
ULS Class of '91
Entered ULS in Sixth-Grade, 1984
Sophomore,
University of Michigan

At University Liggett School, we make no apologies for our demanding curriculum. Our upper school students' rate of success in Advanced Placement classes is among the highest in the country.

James Kim is a sophomore in the mechanical engineering program at the University of Michigan. He completed his freshman year with a 3.8 GPA. While a student at ULS, James compiled enough AP (college) credits that he may shorten a five-year degree program to three and one-half years.

"At ULS, I developed an intense work ethic which has helped me immensely in college," James says. "That work ethic was more rigorous than that of friends of mine who attended public schools. ULS prepared me well in the areas of study and work habits and trained me to have the self-discipline to study and work hard at college."

ULS seeks students who, like James Kim, want a serious college preparatory experience. Our first admissions test session for candidates for grades six through 12 is Saturday, December 5, at 9:00 a.m. Call the admissions office today at 884-4444 to reserve a space for testing your college-bound student.

's Tribute Tree time

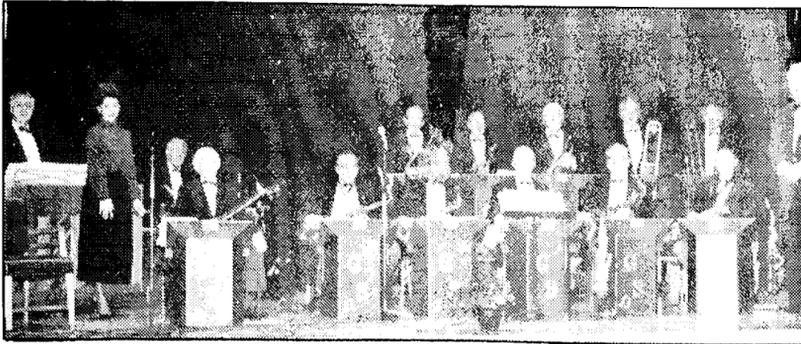

The community is invited to a part of the War Memorial Tribute Tree lighting on Thursday, Dec. 3, at 7 p.m. Men young and old alike gather to sing Christmas carols and say hello to Santa.

Why do people buy a Tribute Tree light? May Kay Diverno says she honors her parents and in-laws "because they are special people in our lives." Nancy Heenan said, "Instead of sending a Christmas card, I let a friend know that a light is still shining in my heart for the memory of their loved one." And Lynda Grippi said, "I let my mother know that my father hasn't been forgotten."

The evening offers a special feeling of community spirit, and an opportunity to pass on the tradition of singing old carols to children. After circling around the Tribute Tree, Santa appears on the balcony to say a few words.

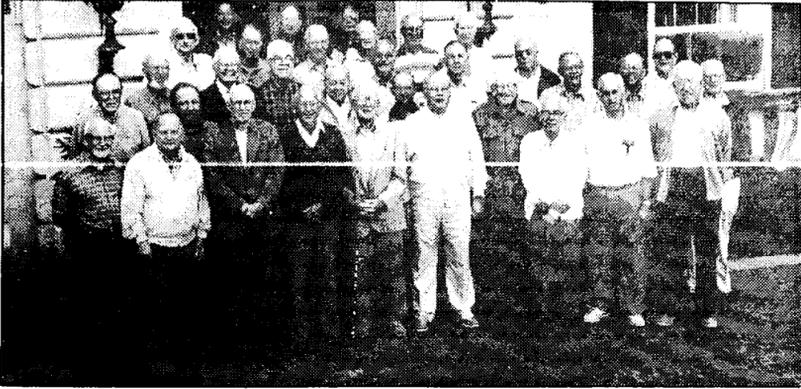

Then cocoa and cookies will be offered inside as participants warm up by the fire and meet with their neighbors.

Tribute Tree lights are available for $5; a remembrance card will be sent to the honored person. For more information, call 881-7511.

Christmas concert

Mel Stander and his 16-piece Gentlemen of Swing orchestra, above, will present the fifth annual Christmas concert for local residents at Barnes School, 20090 Morningside in Grosse Pointe Woods, on Tuesday, Dec. 15, at 1:30 p.m. Featured guest artists will be the choral group of the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club, below.

Community band to perform Dec. 2

The Grosse Pointe Community Band will offer a free concert for residents on Wednesday, Dec. 2, at 8 p.m. in the Parcels Middle School auditorium.

Selections to be performed on the free concert will include the "Midway March" by John Williams, "West Side Story" by Bernstein, the tone-poem "Alerseeelen" by Strauss, Leroy Anderson's "A Christmas Festival," and several marches.

The 60-member concert band, comprised of mostly Grosse Pointe residents, is sponsored through the Department of Community Education and rehearses Tuesday nights from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Local musicians who might consider playing in a band again are encouraged to attend the concert. Auditions are not required, and all instrumental sections would welcome new members.

For more information, call Community Education at 343-2178 or Ralph Miller, director of the band, at 343-2240.

Bon Secours, 'Y' team up to offer unique child care program

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

The notion that an employee who doesn't have to worry about the health and welfare of his or her child will be more productive has motivated a number of Michigan companies to add child care as a fringe benefit.

Consider what Bon Secours Hospital management has done for its employees. Through a mutually beneficial agreement, Bon Secours employees are able to participate in a child care program offered at the Lakeshore YMCA in St. Clair Shores.

Although the program is too new (it was established this spring) to calculate its success rate in numbers, Bon Secours was honored recently by the Michigan House Republican Task Force as part of the 1992 Michigan Child Care Challenge.

Spearheaded by State Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, the Child Care Challenge began in 1989 as a competitive program to encourage companies to establish child care programs as an employee benefit.

"Child care has always been a point of interest with me," Bankes said. "I thought, instead of educating parents on child care — because they already know how to do that — why not teach the employers? They can make the changes."

In 1986, Bankes assigned one of her aides to research the number of Michigan employers offering some type of child care to their employees.

Bankes' aide located 150 companies offering this benefit in 1986. Each year since the initial study, Bankes said the number of company-sponsored or organized child care programs has increased steadily. Today, between 700 and 800 companies have established such programs, she said.

Bon Secours was cited for its innovative solution to the employee child care dilemma, Bankes said.

"Bon Secours does not have adjacent property to build an on-site facility," Bankes said. "So they reached out to the community to find a program that was tailor-made for their employees."

Here's how the Bon Secours-Lakeshore YMCA program works: employees who need daytime child care go to the facility on Jefferson south of Nine Mile and present their company identification. The monthly membership fee of $40 is waived and all the parent has to pay is the weekly child care fee, said Tom Conley, Bon Secours human resources director.

The weekly charge is reasonable compared to the cost of other day-care facilities, Conley said. In addition, participating employees can opt to have the fee paid through payroll deduction.

"We have what is called a dependent care reimbursement account," he said. "Employees can take pre-tax dollars and defer those through a payroll deduction program allowing them to pay child care expenses through pre-tax dollars."

Conley said many hospital employees are in the 30 percent tax bracket, so the program provides them with a 30 percent savings on their child care costs.

Although Bon Secours employees must drop off and pick up their children at the Lakeshore YMCA, the St. Clair Shores facility offers a number of benefits not found at other child care centers, including weekend hours and full-time care during the summer.

"We are a seven-day-a-week operation," Conley said. "Most child care facilities operate on a Monday through Friday rigid arrangement. Schedules here are always changing."

And should a child become ill and unable to attend the YMCA or other child care facilities, Bon Secours now provides an area in its pediatric unit where employees can take their sick children for a fee of $10 a shift, Conley said.

But why was the Lakeshore YMCA so willing to take on additional children and offer reduced fees to Bon Secours employees?

Lakeshore was seeking to expand its facilities and needed a corporate sponsor, said Joanne Elkins, co-director of the facility's child care program. So Bon Secours paid a percentage of the YMCA's renovation costs in order to enable the facility to meet the needs of hospital employees.

"This was an idea we had been exploring for a number of years," Conley said. "Our employee make-up is 85 percent female, so the concern here is much more apparent. Even with all of the societal changes you see today, the female is still primarily responsible for the care of the children."

Employee requests for an on-site child care facility led to the formation of a task force that interviewed employees to find out how many wanted child care and what they were looking for, he said.

"The biggest demand was for infant care," he said. "Child care centers don't typically provide care for infants because of the stringent licensing guidelines."

Bankes said one of the reasons it is so important for companies to offer this type of benefit is that employees with families often miss an average of 10 days a year due to child care problems.

"When I talk to employers, I hear about high absenteeism, tardiness and a worker's inability to focus attention on the job," she said. "If employers could look at their employees as members of families as well as a part of the corporation, they could make the needs of the family and the corporation mesh, instead of having them diametrically opposed."

If an employee knows his or her child is secure, that employee will put forth a better effort by missing fewer days of work, being on time and focusing on the job, she said.

"And this isn't necessarily just for parents," Bankes said. "Employees may also need time to care for an elderly or handicapped parent, spouse or relative. Employers just have to use their imaginations to find out what will work. Another option is offering flex-time."

Conley said the Bon Secours program is too new to accurately gauge whether employee absenteeism and tardiness have decreased. He said employees having a child care problem won't admit it to their employer and instead just call in sick.

But Conley is optimistic. "We have seen a change for the better in morale," he said. "And I think we're going to see a change in the turnover rate."

Local law students publish book on international law

A new publication covering the field of international law will be published by the Detroit College of Law.

In announcing the premiere issue, Dean Arthur J. Lombard said, "The Journal of International Law and Practice will provide useful insights to both legal professionals and the international business community."

The book is the culmination of a two-year effort by a group of students at the school who saw the need for a publication that would present the issues of international law in a way that was both academically sound and stimulating.

"We wanted a publication with articles that had substance, but were not as academic and theoretical as traditional professional journals," said Antonio J. Soave, co-editor of the "Journal."

Edited and published by students, the publication's content will be monitored by an Honorary Advisory Committee. Its members are leading representatives of major international and U.S. corporations, the diplomatic community, the legal profession and academia.

The articles and sections are short and informative, avoiding the extensive academic information of a traditional law review. More important, the content covers those issues of international law that have present or potential impact on the entire business community.

"The goal is for a lawyer or international businessperson to spend an hour with this publication and come away with a good general understanding of current key issues in international law," said "Journal" co-editor James H. Perry.

Featured in the premiere 205-page issue is a report on the North American Free Trade Agreement as well as the complete draft of the accord.

This agreement has been hotly debated by all governments concerned and was a key issue in the recent presidential campaign.

It is important to the U.S. economy because, when enacted, it will establish a completely new set of trade relationships among the U.S., Canada and Mexico.

Other articles include: "Central America: New Opportunities, Old Risks" by His Excellency Crescencio S. Arcos; "An Air Defense System" by Michael C. McKinnon; and "Asia

Chris Elias of Farmington Hills used strong backlighting to add drama and impact to his cactus photo. He effectively made light the subject itself.

Photography

By Monte Nagler

Light fantastic

Did you know there's a photographic subject of great potential that is often ignored, frequently taken for granted and yet is used without exception in every photograph we take?

What I'm referring to is plain, old-fashioned, all-important light. Isn't it time we gave it more respect?

Obviously, light is used to illuminate all our photographic subjects, but now let's turn the tables and use light as the subject itself. If you do, you can produce dramatic and exciting pictures.

To begin with, those beautiful sunset/sunrise photographs we all shoot showing the sun as a brilliant fireball surrounded by a rainbow of clouds are in reality photographs of light as the subject. We've all been shooting sunsets for years but didn't realize we were photographing light itself.

In a backlit subject showing a striking silhouette, the lighting is the direct cause of the silhouette and is therefore indirectly the subject. The photograph shown here is just such an example. The "rim lighting" gives this photograph of cactuses important impact.

What about lens flare, the usually unacceptable reflections of sunlight bouncing off the glass elements in the lens?

Of course, in most of your shots, you want to eliminate lens flare by preventing the sun from entering your camera's lens. But how about deliberately allowing some lens flare in order to add an unusual and exciting effect to your picture? In doing so, the flare, or light itself, becomes your subject.

Here's an idea to help make "light" of your subject. With slow speed film and a strong foreground subject such as an old gnarled tree, shoot pictures with the sun directly in the viewfinder. But instead of heeding the meter, use the camera's smallest aperture and fastest shutter speed. In other words, underexpose your shot.

And for safety's sake, don't look at the sun through the viewfinder — look at a spot alongside the sun. This "underexposing" procedure will produce sensational photographs showing the sun as a "star," the foreground subject as a dramatic silhouette, and depending on the lens used and the time of day, some exciting lens flare. What have you really done here? You've made light your subject.

So begin to think in terms of using light itself as the subject. It's a fine opportunity to acquire a better understanding and appreciation of light. After all, as oils are to the painter, light is to the photographer.

Nagler to conduct seminar to market themselves and their photography.

As an added bonus, Nagler will have a variety of world-renowned original photographs from his personal collection to view and discuss.

For registration information, phone the continuing education services of Schoolcraft College at 462-4448.

HEALTH WATCH

Effective weapons in the battle against heart disease.

Stirring thoughts

Studies show that a diet rich in saturated fats and cholesterol can greatly increase your risk of heart disease. Unfortunately, some of the worst fats are lurking in recipes you've probably been making for years.

The next time you whip up a batch of cookies, consider low-fat substitutes. It's easy to do, and you'll notice very little change in the taste. You'll be sparing your heart saturated fats and cholesterol that build up in your arteries and strain your heart. You'll also eliminate fat grams and calories to help control your weight.

Turn the tables on heart disease

Try experimenting with these substitutions. Most won't affect your recipes.

'Sounds of Christmas' benefit will mix music, history

By Margie Reins Smith
Feature Editor

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society will present its fifth annual "Sounds of Christmas" at 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 6. The fundraiser promises to mix a musical celebration of the coming holiday season with an awareness of Grosse Pointe's heritage.

The two-part event will begin with a concert for the whole family at St. Ambrose Church, a parish founded in 1916. St. Ambrose Church's impressive Gothic structure has been a landmark in Grosse Pointe Park since 1926.

The bell tower at St. Ambrose Church is a Grosse Pointe Park landmark. The fifth annual "Sounds of Christmas" concert, sponsored by the Grosse Pointe Historical Society, will be held at the church.

"Tonnancour," a 78-year-old Georgian Colonial home in Grosse Pointe Farms, will provide the ambience for an afterglow for benefactors, patrons and friends of the society.

The home is owned by Dr. and Mrs. Larry Stephenson, and it's the second "Tonnancour" to be constructed on the site. Built in 1914, it was remodeled in the mid-1950s when the property was subdivided.

The musical portion of the afternoon will feature entertainment provided by several local churches: the St. Ambrose Liturgical Choir; the Christ Church Handbell Choir; the St. Clare Church Folk Choir; organist David Wagner of St. Paul Catholic Church; and song stylist Laurie Meeker.

The afterglow will feature a light supper, beverages and entertainment in a historic residence that's one of the Pointes' preservation success stories.

All proceeds from this year's "Sounds of Christmas" will be used for the society's latest project, a documentary film about the history of the Grosse Pointes.

"We're developing the script now," said Olivia Mandel, president of the society. "We're searching the archives and we're hoping people will dig into their attics and albums for old photos, papers and journals."

Back in 1914-16, when the St. Ambrose parish was founded and the present "Tonnancour" was completed, Grosse Pointe was in transition — changing from a fashionable summer resort community for wealthy Detroit families to a year-round residential suburb populated by executives from Detroit's growing automotive industry.

Woodrow Wilson was president; World War I blazed across Europe as the United States adopted an official position of neutrality; the Panama Canal was completed; Charlie Chaplin was making films; Irving Berlin and Duke Ellington were making music; Ernest Hemingway, Thornton Wilder and Robert Frost were writing; Rudolph Valentino, Harry Houdini and Lizzie Borden died; the Wright brothers secured a patent on their flying machine; and the most popular songs in the nation were "Bye Bye Blackbird" and "When Day is Done."

"Tonnancour" was built by Capt. Frederick William Fuger and his wife, Marie Archange Navarre Hall Fuger. Mrs. Fuger's parents, Alexandrine Louise Godfroy Hall and Theodore Parsons Hall, built the previous "Tonnancour," the site of happy childhood memories for Marie Fuger. It had been an ornate Victorian mansion with gabled dormers, wrap-around verandas on the first and second floors, and oodles of white-painted gingerbread details.

It faced Lake St. Clair and was surrounded by 63 acres of pastures, orchards, gardens and grounds. It was torn down to make way for the 1914 structure.

The first "Tonnancour" was a chateau in Quebec, the ancestral seat of the Godefroi family in New France.

"The first 'Tonnancour' is still standing in Trois Rivieres, Canada," Larry Stephenson said. "We've visited it. It's open to the public. We've done some research and we think there was another 'Tonnancour' even before that, in the Normandy area of France."

Hosts and hostesses for "Sounds of Christmas" include Crain Communications, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald G. Forster, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard O. Jaques, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Mandel, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred B. Moran II, Peter L. Robbins and the Stephensons.

General chairmen are Jeannie Davis, John J. Findlater, Mrs. Jon B. Gandelot, Ronald E. Kotz and Mrs. Stephen R. Vartanian.

Tickets are available at Grosse Pointe Florists, 174 Kerby in Grosse Pointe Farms or by calling 882-5001.

Benefactor tickets are $250; patron, $125; friend, $50. These include the afterglow at "Tonnancour."

For the performance only, family tickets are $35; single tickets are $20.

"Tonnancour" was built in 1914 and remodeled in the mid-1950s. The Georgian Colonial home will be the setting for the afterglow of the historical society's holiday fundraiser.

Adoption option: One of Focus: HOPE's holiday traditions — the "adoption" of senior citizens and families with children — helps thousands of less fortunate people enjoy the holiday season. Recipients are chosen from more than 85,000 children, pregnant mothers and elderly people who receive food every month from Focus: HOPE's Commodity Supplemental Food Program.

The program needs volunteers to donate and deliver food and holiday baskets, take a senior on a grocery shopping trip and contribute money and time.

The "Share With a Senior" and "Family to Family" programs are getting started this week. Focus: HOPE matches donors and recipients. For information about how to help, call 883-3131.

The Juvenile Diabetes Foundation

Life Directions is a non-profit organization dedicated to encouraging young people (ages 13-30) to grow as responsible people. Life Directions' programs use peer motivation to help young people help each other find direction in their lives.

The tribute dinner will begin at 6 p.m. with a reception and silent auction. Tickets are $125. For information, call 342-2020.

MORBID OBESITY

(Weigh 100 pounds or more above the expected normal weight)

Although genes play an important role, morbid obesity is primarily a result of food addiction. To kick the habit, one must stop the addicting process such as smoking, alcoholism, etc. cold turkey as a first step. It will be extremely difficult in case of food addiction (morbid obesity).

Morbid obesity is associated with:

| 1. High blood pressure | 6. Sudden death |
| 2. Diabetes Mellitus | 7. Arthritis of the lower extremities |
| 3. Coronary artery disease and blood vessel disease | 8. Carcinoma of uterus and breast |
| 4. High cholesterol | 9. Phlebitis of the leg |
| 5. Shorter life span | |

Success rate of various dietary and exercise programs is only 5%. Loss of weight is usually followed by regain of entire weight and more.

Success rate of stomach stapling is 70% to 80%. Hospital stay is about four days and complications are few. Most insurance carriers pay for the procedure. National Institute of Health has recommended this as a reasonable alternative to dietary, exercise and medical treatment.

Anyone considering this procedure must attend at least one meeting of "Staples For Life", an organization of former patients.

Bob Lee

Script gets funding from Polish government

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Bob Lee is not quite sure how he was introduced to the book "Way of the Lancer" by Richard Boleslavski and Helen Woodward, but he remembers he always thought it would make a good movie.

In February, Lee's nearly 50-year-old dream will start to materialize as filming of his screenplay of the book he read in the 1930s begins.

"I think it was a Book of the Month Club selection and when I read it, it stuck in my mind as a good basis for a movie," said Lee, formerly of Grosse Pointe Woods, and now of St.

Clair Shores. "I worked on and off on a screenplay and I finished it in 1987."

The book is a true story based on Boleslavski's experience with the famous Polish Lancer Regiment from 1915 to 1917. It tells of the regiment's battles against the German-Austrian armies on the eastern front and the effects of World War I on individual members of the regiment.

Lee spent several years trying to find an agent to promote and sell the script and looking for a director and funding.

Through friends in the movie business, Lee found Omar Kazmarczyk, an internationally known film producer, writer and director. He liked the script and showed it to Andre Krakowski, a Polish-born film director. He liked the script, too.

With Krakowski on board, the project got the attention of the Polish government, which earlier this year kicked in $2.3 million of the expected $5.2 million budget. Offshore financing picked up the rest of the bill.

"The Polish government subsidized it because of Krakowski, and because it's going to be filmed in Poland," Lee said.

The film will be cast early next year with most of the actors coming from Britain's renowned Pinewood Studios.

"This is very exciting," Lee said. "I'll be there to help out with things and I'll be the associate producer in addition to the author."

Lee has been in and around the movie business for a good portion of his 76 years.

He was a marine officer during World War II. That's when Lee became friends with William Rankin, an agent, producer and author of such films as "Boys Town" and "Pennies from Heaven." They worked together in Hollywood after the war ended.

Lee wrote several scripts that were made into movies, most notably "South Sea Woman" starring Virginia Mayo and Burt Lancaster. He dramatized Antoine St. Exupery's "Wind, Sand and Stars," with guidance from Orson Welles.

He left the movie business in the early '50s after his mentor Rankin died.

"He drank himself to death," Lee said. "And that was very sad to watch. Seeing someone as powerful as that fall apart like he did, it made me think."

He came back to Michigan and worked as a sales manager for Great Lakes Steel, then ran several small businesses and tried to build a steel mill in Zilwaukee before times got bad. But he kept writing, and he has several other screenplays under his belt ready to film.

But for now, his eyes are set on Poland.

Free puppet shows, arts and crafts, a petting farm, story telling, face painters, horse and carriage rides and Renaissance-era costumed performers will provide hours of free fun for the entire family. In addition, free parking will be available in Lot C, east of the center.

The day begins with Santa's Breakfast Buffet at the Summit Restaurant atop The Westin Hotel. A special children's menu will be offered at 8:30, 10, 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. The cost is $8.95 per child and $11.95 per adult (excluding tax and gratuity). DSO report:

Musical prodigies are mixed blessing

By Alex Sucek
Special Writer

A girl in her mid-teens played violin like a wizard last week at Orchestra Hall. For the serious amateur musician in particular, it is dismaying to see one so young play so well. But even setting aside the sensitive pride, prodigies are often long on technical brilliance and short on passion.

The issue was what the great and aging guitarist, Andres Segovia, had in mind when he told a young player in his master class: "Go to the taverna. Drink wine. Fall in love. Then come and play for me."

With the DSO presenting two prodigies, last weekend and this weekend, it's an opportunity to test the premise. Last Thursday, 15-year-old violinist Leila Josefowicz played the first of three performances of Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 3 with guest conductor James DePreist and the DSO. She left no doubt that she is a prodigious prodigy.

There is no hiding with that piece. It is probably Mozart's most familiar violin concerto and a standard on the concert circuit. The youthful Josefowicz played it with a verve and vigor that suggest more maturity than one might expect.

True to her reputation, she also produced a tone nicely balanced between sweet and gutty, avoiding the saccharine suavity that is often engendered by performers who have lost their good taste.

Her cadenzas absolutely sparkled with perfect double stops and clear, echoing cut-off phrases, all in perfect intonation.

It was a dazzling display supported handsomely and in the best of taste by DePreist and the ensemble. They played with a flair and delicacy that was genuinely Mozartian to a degree that the soloist did not quite match. But we can probably expect that it won't be long now before she does get to a taverna, sip wine and, perhaps, fall in love.

It will definitely be worth while to wait, then hear her play it again.

Her encore, Schubert's dramatic song, "The Erl King," transcribed for violin, testifies to that. Not only was her execution spectacular — all those triple stops and left-hand pizzicatos — she also managed to invest in the fiendishly difficult song much of the drama that exhausts even a great singer to communicate when performing the original. And the audience left no doubt that it considered it a real tour de force.

But then, so was DePreist's reading of Mahler's monumentally extravagant Symphony No. 1. It uses just about every trick in the orchestral book from off-stage trumpets to woodwind birdcalls plus a facsimile of "forest murmurs" and a peasant dance at a country fair. This symphony is a trip in itself.

DePreist was a super tour guide, leading orchestra and audience through Mahler's world of wonders with grandiose exuberance. This is crowd-pleasing music and it succeeded so well in all its excess that it brought to mind a favorite maxim of a well known Grosse Pointe gourmet teacher: "There's no such thing as too much butter." Considering Mahler's Viennese connections, one might add, "Or whipped cream on your chocolate torte?"

The finale, with the entire bass chorus of trumpets, trombones, French horns and tuba players on their feet is a straight-out thriller and left everyone feeling like they had eaten the whole torte and all the whipped cream too.

It provided a stark contrast to the loveliest piece of serenity that opened the concert, a so-called fanfare titled "Old and Lost River" by Tobias Picker. Contemporary in feeling, yet conventional in its harmonies, the simple melodies played almost in unison by the winds and strings were given a heavenly accompaniment by the harp in a soothing flow of gentle, transporting music.

Coming up Friday, Nov. 27, at 10:45 in a morning concert, is the first of three performances by pianist Helene Grimaud, another prodigy who, at 22, has just outlived that status. With Neeme Jarvi back on the podium, she will perform the "Burlusk" by Richard Strauss, a wonderful early work that anticipates much of that composer's later famous musical wit and sophistication.

For more information and tickets, call 833-3700.

LCE continues season

Four different local ensembles will present a mixed bag of music by composers from Russia, Romania, Poland, the Ukraine, Serbia and Greece during the Lyric Chamber Ensemble's concert on Sunday, Dec. 6, at 3:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

The holiday concert will feature balalaika soloist Gennady Zut, a recent Russian emigre, who will perform Russian folk music, accompanied by three members of the Balalaika Orchestra of Detroit. The Ravenna Serbian Singing Society of Detroit will perform "Pesma Sa Kosova," composed in 1991 by Ohio composer Nikola Resanovich and commissioned by the society in honor of its 60th anniversary.

At the concert, Resanovich will conduct his own composition, which contains melodies from the region of Kosovo, as transcribed by Serbian composer Mokranjac.

Also featured in the concert will be the Classical Bells Handbell Choir in selections from Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite."

Tickets for the "Eastern European Christmas" concert are $16, and $14 for students and seniors, and may be purchased by calling the Lyric Chamber Ensemble at 357-1111.

'Nothing Sacred' is dull, dull, dull

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

During intermission of the Hilberry Theatre's latest production, "Nothing Sacred," a theater-type (you know exactly what I mean) was impressing another theater-type with his insights on the play.

"I think it's a biting commentary on society," he said, pausing before adding, knowingly, "I don't think the audience is ready to hear what this play has to say."

He was trying to explain the tepid response to the show, an adaptation of Ivan Turgenev's 1862 novel "Fathers and Sons."

But the audience was, too, ready to hear what the play had to say. The trouble is that it has nothing to say.

Set in 1859 Russia, the play — billed as a tragi-comedy — centers on Yevgeny Vassilych Bazarov (Thorsten Kaye), a student revolutionary who espouses nihilism as a means to bring about social change. The problem is, he only talks about change, he doesn't do anything about it.

He's aided by his classmate Arkady Kirsanov (Christopher Newman), who looks up to Bazarov, but can't muster his friend's revolutionary fervor.

The two are spending some time at Kirsanov's father's estate. His father has a new son from an affair with a servant girl. He loves her, but will not tell her of his affection because of the differences in their class.

Kirsanov also has an uncle, Pavel (Michael S. Ouimet), a fop who clings to tradition and chivalry like a drowning man to a rope.

Pavel has an unhealthy attachment to Anna (Tami Evans), the daughter of Pavel's first love. Anna, however, is a revolutionary who wants Pavel and everything he stands for destroyed. She, incidentally, is having an affair with Bazarov, and, to top it off, she also becomes the object of Kirsanov's desire.

With all this going on it could have been fascinating. But something just doesn't work. And it's not the fault of the Hilberry company, it's the fault of the script by Canadian playwright George Walker.

The play is not funny or sad — two things necessary for a successful tragi-comedy. And it's achingly slow. And it explains certain things too much and other things not enough. As written, the characters don't seem to know what they're going to do next or why, or what their purpose in the story is.

And because of that, it seems the actors are walking through their parts. There is little spark

Cook up some fun in New Orleans

It is mid-morning and outside the rain is pouring. Inside, however, the room is cozy and we chat over steaming cups of hazelnut coffee. At my table there are women from Los Angeles; Lubbock, Tex.; Victoria, B.C., and New Orleans. And to my left, one gentleman — a flutist from Los Angeles who came with his wife.

Everyone is anticipating the three hours to come. We were summoned by an old-fashioned school bell and dutifully filed into the room as our names were called and took places at the round tables decked with red-checked cloths.

Into the room strides our instructor, and at 6-foot-9 and 350 pounds, Kevin Belton is imposing.

"Something you must all understand," he begins, "is that Louisiana cooking is not classic. No way.

"Down here we eat because it is a way to visit, not because we are hungry."

If you have ever visited New Orleans, you know exactly what he means. Simply put, it is a city of excellent food and visitors usually eat. And eat. And eat.

And here at the New Orleans School of Cooking we are about to learn something of what this wonderful cuisine is all about.

They call it "creole," and Kevin describes it as a blend of French (sauces), African (low fires), Indian (herbs and spices) Spanish (hot peppers), and Italian (red tomato sauces and pasta) food cultures.

There are subtle differences between creole and cajun, which he attempts to explain while dumping six sticks of real butter into a large pot. The 60 or so in the audience groan in unison.

"Now, listen here. We don't worry about what's in it. We worry about does it taste good. And if it does, is there enough?" he says.

The three-hour class includes lunch, which is the meal he is about to prepare. The usual menu is gumbo, jambalaya, bread pudding and pralines. Today, however, our meal will be different because we have some repeaters in class. So Kevin is preparing shrimp and artichoke soup, chicken etouffee, bananas foster and, of course, pralines.

"It is important for people to realize that our cooking is not Southern. It is not fried chicken and grits," he says.

He explains that for Louisiana cooks, a recipe is merely an idea. "If you don't like something, don't put it in. If you do, put in more. Our meals have always tended to be a combination of whatever foods were available."

We then learn to make a roux (a combination of fat and flour), the importance of "trinity" — chopped celery, onions and green peppers — and garlic ("If that is trinity," he intones, "this is the pope.")

All the while we are actually learning some real things about cooking, Kevin is entertaining us with lively repartee and facts about himself and his native city.

"I began cooking when I was about 9. I learned from my mother and grandmother. I always hung out in the kitchen and they were always cooking."

"The locals never wear a belt to dinner."

"Don't ever tell people what you are going to serve them, so you can change the name if it doesn't come out right. If your meat loaf flops, then you can just pile it on a plate and call it Meat Royale."

"How do you clean a praline pan? With two scoops of ice cream."

You get the idea. You don't have to be really interested in cooking to enjoy this hilarious but informative session. The men in class seemed especially appreciative.

Kevin's favorite phrases are "You with me?" and "Trust me on this," and we dutifully follow along.

How about using cayenne pepper? "We use it to taste, but not so a dish is really hot. You don't believe me? Hey, trust me on this? Try a taste!"

Just about now he asks a gentleman in the rear of the room to open the door. He does, and we are instructed to shout: "We're thirsty." Shoppers outside are startled, but soon we are served iced tea and cold Dixie beer.

For $15 a class, this is one of the great bargains in this fascinating city. The New Orleans School of Cooking was founded in 1980 by Joe Cahn, whom you may have seen on TV. It was the first of the regional, short-course cooking schools and has been duplicated in such places as Sante Fe. In fact, it is imitated in its own city by the Cookin' Cajun Cooking School in the Riverwalk complex.

Cahn's school has been so successful that he was named 1991 Restaurateur of the Year by the Louisiana Restaurant Association, quite an accomplishment for someone who doesn't own a restaurant.

And recently, Cahn's businesses were acquired by Smithfield Companies (the ham people). "I do believe," he says, "that we are the only cooking school ever traded on the stock market. But nothing is going to happen. I'm still here and we aren't going to sell hams."

The New Orleans School of Cooking has been located in the Jackson Brewery complex at 620 Decatur Street on the river since 1984. Adjacent to the school is Joe's Louisiana General Store, which is loaded with the ingredients, books and utensils needed to prepare this cuisine. It also sells the best fresh pralines in the city.

Cooking classes are offered Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. They fill up fast so reserve early. Phone (504) 525-2665 or write the New Orleans School of Cooking, Jackson Brewery, 620 Decatur St., New Orleans, LA 70130. To obtain a copy of the store catalog, call toll-free (800) 237-4841.

Redford makes this 'River' trip special

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

A beautifully written autobiographical novella becomes a poetic film in "A River Runs Through It."

A mesmerizing film, it reels the viewer in with the grace of a fly fishing line flicked into circles against a blue sky.

The book and the film tell the tale of the author's youth in Montana as he attempts to understand a stern father and a reckless brother by describing the magical bond that became their touchstone — fly-fishing.

It was by going back in time that the author, Norman Maclean, was able to work through the enigma of his family relationships and decode what his father had presented as a riddle: "It is those we live with and love and should know who elude us." It was his way of saying all that was unspoken and mysterious about the people he loved best.

For Maclean there was not a clear line between religion and fly-fishing. That belief permeates the story until the last line, "I'm haunted by waters." Lyrical and literary, "A River Runs Through It" was not easily adapted to the screen. It is quite an accomplishment that Robert Redford, who produced, directed and narrates part of the story, succeeded so well.

Much of the credit goes to screenwriter Richard Friedenberg, who expanded the original work, using family history gathered from the writer (who died in 1990) and his children. He developed the boys' relationship to their father (Tom Skerrit), a Presbyterian minister, and Norman's courtship of his wife Jessie (Emily Lloyd) while still maintaining the tone of the book.

Set in 1920 in Missoula, Montana, where the Black River dissects the surrounding pristine wilderness, at a time when this was a "world with dew on it," we enter the home of the Rev. Maclean where we meet his wife, Mother Maclean (Brenda Blethyn) and his two boys, Norman (Craig Sheffer) and his younger brother, Paul (Brad Pitt). Reverend Maclean is strict in a firm, quiet way.

The boys are taught at home by their father and we see Norman writing and rewriting an essay many times until it is acceptable. The boys are not resentful because there is a common bond that unites the generations — fly-fishing — which their father patiently taught them.

Norman grows into a serious young man anxious to find his place in life. Paul is a rebel and daredevil.

Norman goes away to college and later is offered a position as professor at the University of Chicago. Paul becomes a reporter on the local paper and continues his do-and-dare activities, getting into bar-fights and gambling against the odds with unscrupulous, dangerous opponents.

Paul returns to Missoula on a visit and meets the vivacious Jessie, whom he will later marry. While Norman excels in life, it is on the river that Paul shines. Here he is a better man than his father. And that is a disquieting thing.

It is Paul who in the end fights his way through neck-deep churlish waters to cast his line in his own style, and disappears as if swallowed up by the eddy only to rise with his catch, a fish bigger than any ever caught. It is a metaphor that is a vindication of his chosen lifestyle and a trophy proving that he too has achieved success.

Skerrit is just right as the boy's stern, loving father. Sheffer as Norman, through whom we know Paul, gives a good performance as the serious brother. Pitt, with his engaging smile, golden hair and carefree spirit, is great as Paul. This lofty, elusive theme is underscored by cinematographer Phillippe Rousselot's poetic vision of western wilderness in the early years of the century. "A River Runs Through It" is a film to be savored as well as seen. It is supremely special.

'Jennifer 8' is a stylish thriller

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

"Jennifer 8," a suspense thriller with a distinctive approach, opens with a gruesome shot of a badly decomposed hand that has been found in a garbage dump.

Is this going to be one of those films that depends on the grizzly to keep us interested, we wonder? Not at all. The severed hand, with all its horrible implications, is the only gruesome scene. There seems to be no way of identifying the victim but there are indications it's a woman and that she has been murdered and her body parts scattered in various locations by a serial killer.

With such a flimsy lead, the local police file it away under the code "Jennifer 8" because she is the eighth girl who has disappeared. The police decide to wait for the murderer to make a false move.

Enter John Berlin (Andy Garcia), a new man on the force who has transferred from the Los Angeles homicide division because of marital problems and the hope that the life of a homicide detective in Eureka, a small town in northern California, will be less stressful. But he is determined to identify the girl and the killer.

Using the police laboratory, he examines the hand and with sophisticated equipment finds scars and fraying on the outer layers of skin under the fingertips.

The discovery, puzzling and seemingly meaningless at first, results in a breakthrough. In his investigation he discovers that all eight victims were blind, which leads him to Helena Robertson (Uma Thurman), a student at the local school for the blind. He becomes attracted to this girl with the beautiful face and delicate grace.

Berlin is pressured to drop the case because, he is told, it is a waste of time and he is stirring up resentment among the other officers. They accuse him of trying to show them up.

But Berlin becomes even more determined to pursue the case when a masked man enters Helena's room. She escapes, but now knows that she is slated to be "Jennifer 9."

A bang-up surprise ending brings the case of "Jennifer 8" to a thrilling close.

The film has an outstanding supporting cast. Berlin's boss, with his scraggly beard and fondness for painting by numbers is admirably played by Kevin Conway. Kathy Baker and Lance Henriksen, are convincing as Berlin's faithful friends and John Malkovich coolly goes for the jugular in his insidious and brutal interrogation of Berlin when Berlin is arrested for murder.

Written and directed by England's Bruce Robinson ("The Killing Fields"), "Jennifer 8" is a striking atmospheric film. Scenes such as the one in the garbage dump are morbidly accented by torrential rain. Heavy snow and wind make Berlin's attempt to trap the killer a precarious one. The room and halls of the school for the blind are dark and strangely silent and gloomy, all of which contributes to a terrifying touch particularly when the killer enters Helena's room, a scene reminiscent of the Audrey Hepburn film "Wait Until Dark."

Thurman is fragile and lovely as the sensitive Helena. Garcia, in his first true starring role, is intense and focused. He is the central force in this entertaining film that softens the shock of suspense with a gentler theme of friendship and love.

North, South, East & Jim West

"North, South, East & Jim West" is a multifaceted production which introduces youngsters age 5 and older to four different cultures and as many kinds of puppets.

Jim West brings his Theatreworks/USA production from New York to Youtheatre's "Puppets at the DIA" series on Saturday, Nov. 28, with performances at 11:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the Detroit Institute of Arts lecture hall.

From China, an imaginative story about a boy and his dragon uses cardboard boxes and cloth strips to create a giant dragon onstage. An inspiring North American Indian legend about a boy who yearns to fly uses hand puppets and cutouts to concoct a colorful story totem pole. The lively African tale of Anansi the Spider features hand shadows. Finally, Jim West brings Hans Christian Andersen's heartwarming ugly duckling to life on the drawing board. West includes a demonstration of puppet-making so young people leave the show with creative ideas to take home.

Individual tickets for both children and adults are $6 each; groups of 10-29 are $5 each; 30 or more, $4 each. Minimum age for admission is 5 years.

To request a season brochure or to order tickets for performances throughout the Theatre season by credit card, phone (313) 963-2366. On the day of performance, available tickets go on sale at the DIA ticket office a half-hour before curtain time.

South's Higel swims into state record books

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's Kim Higel had all the ingredients she needed to set the state high school swimming record in the 100-yard backstroke.

"All last week she felt that she could do it," said Lady Devils' coach Fred Michalik after Higel won the event for the second year in a row. "She came up here with the right attitude, she got a good night's sleep last night and she had a good warm-up. Ninety percent of this sport is mental attitude. I'll bet most of the swimmers here feel they should have gone faster, but didn't because they weren't mentally prepared."

Higel, a senior, was the fastest qualifier in the 100 backstroke in Friday's preliminaries at McCaffree Pool at Michigan State University. Higel's qualifying time was 57.20. Anne Wenglariski of Lansing Waverly was the second fastest qualifier in 57.49.

That was only a hint of things to come for Higel, who won the 100 backstroke last year in 56.93.

Her winning time in this year's championship heat was 56.23, breaking the meet record of 56.55 set by Kristy Heydanek of Midland Dow in 1989. She also broke Heydanek's pool record of 57.19, set the previous year. The Class A meet sites alternate between Michigan State and Eastern Michigan.

"When her foot touch was 13.2 at the start and 27.6 on the first turn I knew she had a good chance at the record," Michalik said. "Her first five strokes were right where we wanted them to be. She went out with a little more speed. We worked on a few little things that helped her get the record."

Higel led from start to finish and pulled away from Wenglariski, who was second in 57.22, in the last 25 yards.

"I just wish I'd had five more like Kim. She's willing to work all year and she has great parents, which means a lot," Michalik said.

Almost lost in Higel's record-breaking backstroke race was her fourth place finish in the 200 freestyle with a 1:54.43. Amy Troesch of Ann Arbor Pioneer, which won a fourth straight team championship, won the 200 freestyle in 1:52.59.

"Kim told me she just 'swam' the 200," Michalik said with a smile. "She was really shooting for the backstroke and wanted to save herself for it."

Michalik also got some satisfaction from watching sophomore Suzanne Toledo of Portage Northern win the 100 butterfly and the 500 freestyle.

"She's been swimming for me at the (Grosse Pointe) Yacht Club since she was 11, but her father got a job transfer before her freshman year in high school," Michalik said. "We worked with her a lot in the fly because she was breathing wrong, but she did it all right today."

Toledo set a meet and pool record in winning the butterfly in 56.47. Although she didn't break the record, she was a runaway winner in the 500 freestyle in 4:54.71. Troesch was second in 5:04.71 and Grosse Pointe North's Lidia Szabo took third in 5:07.82.

South's 200 medley relay team of freshmen Kathy Storen and Kathryn Tusa, sophomore Stephanie LaFond and Higel took eighth place in 1:52.69.

"They're right on the edge for All-American consideration," Michalik said.

North finished in a tie for 10th place, which isn't as high as coach Mike O'Connor hoped for before the meet, but better than he expected after Friday's preliminaries.

"I feel a lot better than I did 24 hours ago," O'Connor said after the meet. "The girls came back nicely to make the top 10. We had a terrible first day, but we got our act together."

"Lidia really turned it around for us. She swam poorly in the 200 freestyle prelims, but came back from the adversity to qualify third in the 500. I think that picked everybody up."

The Lady Norsemen have finished in the top 10 in seven straight Class A state meets, the last six under O'Connor's direction.

A pair of thirds were North's best showings. Szabo pulled away from Livonia Stevenson freshman Tina Caranicholas in the final 50 yards of the 500 freestyle and Christine Jamerino, who won the 100 breaststroke last year, recovered from a disappointing preliminary round to take third in 1:08.04.

Grand Blanc's Sarah Salenski won the breaststroke in 1:06.15 and Livonia Stevenson's Mandi Falk was second in 1:06.5.

Jamerino qualified eighth in the 200 individual medley, but came back strong on Saturday to win the consolation heat in 2:11.21 and finished seventh. Her time was better than the sixth place finisher in the championship heat, but the top six qualifiers are assured of the first six places in the finals.

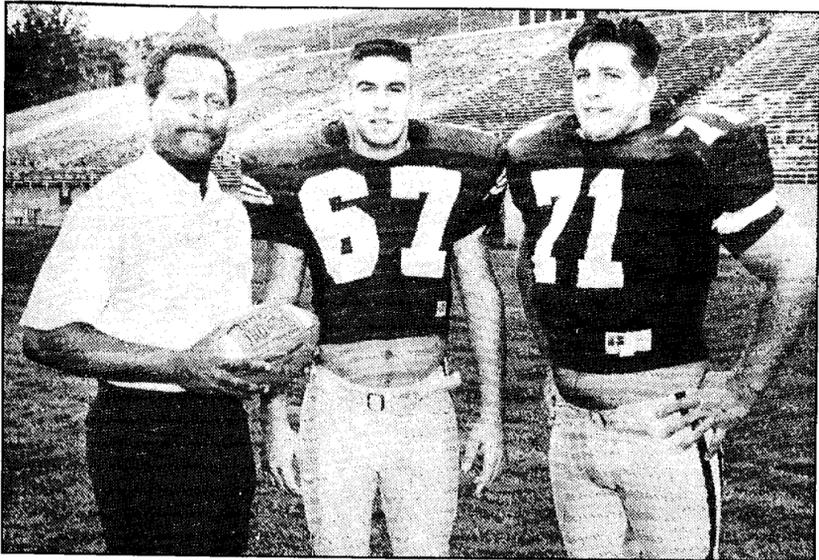

North's Suzette Atrasz won the consolation heat in the 100 breaststroke after qualifying eighth. Her seventh-place time was 1:08.44 and it also beat the sixth place time in the championship heat.

The Lady Norsemen's team of Jamerino, Szabo, Atrasz and Heidi Milne took ninth place in the 400 freestyle relay in 3:41.53.

"Christine did a great job because she literally came right out of the water after swimming in the breaststroke," O'Connor said.

North was 15th in the 200 medley relay, despite a strong backstroke leg by Charlotte Finkelman.

Szabo was 20th in the 200 freestyle (2:00.57); LaFond took 16th in the 50 freestyle (25.21) and 18th in the 100 butterfly (1:01.49); and South freshman Megan O'Loughlin was 17th in the 500 freestyle (5:28.91). South's 400 freestyle relay team was 15th in 3:44.35.

Local Broncos

Grosse Pointe North graduates Adam Korzeniewski, center, and Dave Van Dale were members of Western Michigan University's football team. With them is assistant coach Henry Mason. Korzeniewski is a freshman linebacker, who was redshirted this season. Van Dale is a senior, who has been a starting guard for two seasons.

Regina nips North in girls district hoops final

By Chuck Klonek
Sports Editor

Amy Sacka's smile told the whole story when the Grosse Pointe North senior walked to the bench. Lady Norsemen coaches Gary Bennett and Ray Ritter had just called a timeout

"She came over to the bench and said, 'This was awesome,'" Bennett said after his team turned in an outstanding effort despite dropping a 40-37 decision to the Saddlelites.

"I think the girls realize how well they played and that we were proud of them. I was hoping we would get better as the season went on and we did. We played our best basketball of the season this week and we'd have played even better next week — if we were still playing."

Regina advanced to the Fraser regional where its first opponent was Hazel Park.

"I don't know how many of these I can take," said Regina coach Diane Laffey, whose team won a close battle with Grosse Pointe South in the district opener on the Saddlelites' home court. "Grosse Pointe North played an outstanding game. My hat's off to them. This was one game where it's a shame there had to be a loser."

A 13-0 run during the second quarter turned out to be the difference for the Saddlelites, who improved to 19-4 with their three district victories. Regina forced several turnovers with its fullcourt press during the surge that gave the Saddlelites a 21-14 lead with 1:34 left in the first half.

Guards Tiffany Romeo and Maria Kady came off the bench and gave North some problems with their quickness. The pair also combined for seven of Regina's 13 points in the run.

"That opened things up for us a little bit, but North took the momentum away in the second half," Laffey said. "I didn't know if the press would work because North handled Finney's press so well (in the Lady Norsemen's 65-41 victory earlier in the tournament)."

A three-point play by Stacey Harris gave Regina its biggest lead of the game, 28-17, midway through the third quarter. North missed some easy shots later in the period and the Saddlelites took a 33-23 lead into the final quarter.

"We just couldn't get our shots to fall for a while," Bennett said. "We were getting good shots, but they didn't drop. That could have been the difference in the game."

A basket by Heather Arioli, a layup off a steal by Maureen Zolik and a three-point goal by Alana Hansen in the first two minutes of the fourth quarter closed the gap to 33-30.

Twice Regina stopped bids by the Lady Norsemen to close the gap to a single point when Tamika Bates and Romeo blocked North shots. Amy Ostrowski sank the first of two free throws to put the Saddlelites ahead 38-34 with 47 seconds remaining, but Hansen answered with a three-pointer to make it 38-37 with 14 seconds to go.

North was forced to foul when Regina put the ball in play and Romeo dropped in both free throws with one second left to seal the victory.

"Tiffany and Maria both gave us some quality minutes off the bench," Laffey said.

Bennett was delighted with the way North battled back in the fourth quarter.

"They could have folded, but instead the girls decided they were going to compete," he said. "We didn't make any major adjustments. It was more mental than anything else. We became the aggressor and put the pressure on Regina. I'd like to see what would have happened if we'd had another minute to play."

Bennett said there were several keys to staying close to Regina.

"We had to block out. When they beat us by 27 points earlier in the year they got a lot of second and third shots," he said.

"When they worked the ball inside we had to 'jam down' and not let their big people dribble around. We wanted to make them feel congested and force them to pass the ball out. Sanders scored 13 points and (Monique) Bell got a couple baskets, but none of them came easy."

"Finally, we wanted to show composure and patience on offense. We wanted to make their defense move and we got some decent shots by doing that."

Hansen led North with 12 points, while Arioli added 11 and Zolik scored eight. Arioli had seven of the Lady Norsemen's 20 rebounds. Zolik had four steals and two assists; Hansen had three steals and two assists; and Sacka, who played another excellent defensive game, grabbed five rebounds and had two steals.

Sanders had 11 rebounds to go with her 13 points and played a strong all-around game.

"She's a very unselfish player," Laffey said. "She's a great team player. She's so quiet, though. I think sometimes the other girls wish she'd yell at them a little more."

Bell scored six points for Regina and Romeo and Kady added five apiece. Bates grabbed nine rebounds.

North 65, Detroit Finney 41: Hansen scored 26 points and Amy Sacka added 13 as the Lady Norsemen had little trouble with the Detroit Public School League semifinalists.

"We were concerned because Finney had some real good guards, but I think when they pressed us it just got us into the game more," Bennett said.

North never trailed after a 12-2 spurt midway through the first quarter. The Lady Norsemen led 17-12 after the first quarter and held a 33-24 half-time lead.

North's lead eventually reached 28 points late in the game.

"It really boosted our confidence when we got some layups," Bennett said. "We're not a great scoring team but when the points came easy for us we really felt we could make it tough on them."

Alanna Morrison and Zolik each scored nine points for the Lady Norsemen and Arioli, who had 11 rebounds, added seven points.

North finished its season with an 18-4 record, losing only to Grosse Pointe South and Regina.

Good start

Our Lady Star of the Sea's fifth and sixth grade girls basketball team got off to a good start in the St. Veronica's Thanksgiving Tournament with a 26-20 victory over St. Germain.

Star of the Sea guards Annie Peacock, Lindsay Hawkins and Meg Guillaumin had outstanding games, while teammates Sarah Rahaim, Jennifer Janowski and Michelle Romain dominated the boards.

Star of the Sea will play St. Veronica on Friday at 12:30 p.m.

Habs blank two foes in Little Caesars play

The Grosse Pointe Habs Squirt A travel team has been perfect in its last two games in the Little Caesars Amateur Hockey League.

Alex Thomas scored the winning goal with 4 1/2 minutes remaining to give the Habs a 1-0 victory over the league-leading Warren Capitals. Line-mates P.J. Mallon and Brandon Przepiorka drew the assists.

Goalie Mark Mathews earned the shutout with solid help from defensemen Matt Beardsley, Brett Beres, Chip Chapin, Justin Fish, Mike Kasiborski and Ian Parish.

The other forward lines of Dan Socia, H.J. Richardson and Nick Maitland, and Louie Maitland, Randy Graves and David Smith also played well against the quick and talented Capitals.

Beres had three assists, while Beardsley, Fish, Parish, Maitland and Maitland collected one apiece.

The Habs broke the game open with five second-period goals.

C.J. Lee and Mathews shared the goaltending.

The Habs are 6-5 in league play and the two shutouts lowered their goals-against average to 2.00.

The Habs will play in the Little Caesars Thanksgiving Tournament and in the Silver Stick Tournament at the St. Clair Shores Civic Arena in early December.

Lady Devils leave tourney with strong performance

By Chuck Klonek
Sports Editor

Peggy VanEckoute had no regrets over the way her Grosse Pointe South girls basketball team played in its Class A district tournament game with Regina last week.

The only thing that disappointed the Lady Devils' coach was the final score.

"We played excellent basketball," VanEckoute said after the host Saddlelites emerged with a 50-37 victory. "Our passing was sharp, the defense was great and we executed our offense. I think we just got tired in the fourth quarter."

South took a 33-29 lead into the final eight minutes, but Regina scored the first six points of the fourth quarter during a 19-1 spurt and never trailed again.

The Lady Devils, who had won 19 straight since losing the season opener to Regina, were only tested by Grosse Pointe North during the league season, so it was seldom that the South starters played a whole game.

The Saddlelites play in the tough Catholic League Central Division and many of their games were settled by five points or less.

This was the second year in a row that an excellent South squad has been knocked out of the tournament in the first game by a strong Regina team.

"I wish we wouldn't always have to meet them in the district, but I guess there's not much that can be done about it," VanEckoute said. "I'm sure Plymouth Salem, Plymouth Canton and (Livonia) Ladywood feel the same way about being in a district together."

The Regina contest was the final game for four South seniors — Angela Drake, Stephanie Coddens, Sarah Foley and Susie Faremouth.

VanEckoute said they'll be missed.

"Those four really helped put our basketball program on the map," she said. "Ever since they were in the ninth grade they've been willing to do whatever it takes to make us a winner. Angela and Stephanie are probably the two best players I've coached and Sarah and Susie were excellent role players."

South jumped out to an 11-1 lead and still had a 14-9 advantage at the end of the first quarter as Drake and Coddens each scored seven points.

Neither team mounted much of an offensive attack in the second quarter. Regina's Stacey Harris put back her own rebound with 16 seconds left in the first half to bring the Saddlelites within six, 23-17, at the intermission.

Coddens, who led all scorers with 20 points, had eight of South's 10 points in the third quarter.

"Whenever we pulled up a notch, Regina pulled themselves up," VanEckoute said. "Both teams played very well."

Regina coach Diane Laffey felt relieved to have stayed alive in the tournament.

"They gave us a scare — too much of a scare," she said.

VanEckoute said there were several things South had to do and the Lady Devils were successful in most of them.

"We had to play great defense and not let (Regina) work the ball inside to Paula (Sanders) and Tamika (Bates)," she said. "We wanted to keep the game at our tempo. Usually we like to fast break and spread out the floor, but because of their small gym we felt we had to play more of a half-court game.

"We had success pressuring their ball handlers at midcourt whenever we did it in the first half and we tried to collapse on the post. Our forwards did a nice job of fronting Sanders and Angela came in behind her."

Sanders had 10 of her 16 points in the second half, most coming after Drake drew her fourth foul early in the final quarter.

"It was pretty much a standoff between Paula and Angela until Angela got her fourth foul," VanEckoute said. "That was a turning point; you could see the change in the way we played."

Drake fouled out with just under three minutes to play, finishing with nine points and seven rebounds.

"There weren't many rebounds because both teams played a patient offense and there weren't many missed shots," VanEckoute said.

"I couldn't have asked for a better effort from my starting five. Susie and Sarah played super defense and Shannon (McGratty) did a nice job on the boards. The kids on the bench were giving their support, too. It was a real team effort. We had a super season and I hope people don't judge our success by how far we advanced in the tournament because we lost to a fine ballclub."

Area hockey skills school will hold a winter session

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

The Great Lakes Hockey Skills School will offer a second, winter session this year.

"This is a good way for kids to stay on top of their games in the middle of the season," said Costa Papista, the director of the school which will be held Dec. 28-31 at the Grosse Pointe Community Rink.

"They'll be able to apply the things they learn immediately, instead of having to wait until the season starts like they do after summer skills school. They hold a lot of these in Canada, but this is the first time we've had one in Grosse Pointe."

Papista, a former Ontario Hockey League player who attended Grosse Pointe South and University Liggett School, and associate director Jim DePuys have held a summer hockey school for three years. This winter Papista is co-coach, with Steve Doughty, of the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association Mite Blues.

Among the instructors at this summer's school were NHL players Jimmy Carson, Dave Barr, Keith Primeau and Mike Hartman; Red Wings' assistant general manager Doug MacLean; and Don MacAdam, a former Red Wings' assistant coach who is now head coach of the Ottawa Senators' American Hockey League farm club in New Haven, Conn.

The winter school will feature power skating instruction from Stefany Panelli, who teaches skating classes at the Fraser Ice Arenas; and hockey skills instruction from Papista. "Stefany will teach the fundamental skating skills and I'll teach anything that has to do with hockey skills — puck control, shooting, etc.," Papista said.

"It will be concentrated instruction; one hour a day for four days. We're limiting enrollment to 15 skaters per group. That way we can provide more individual instruction."

There will be four age groups — mini mite for ages 5-6; mite for ages 7-9; squirt for 10-11-year-olds; and pee wee for ages 12-14. The two younger groups will be on the ice from 9-10 a.m., and the older players will have the 10-11 a.m. slot.

The registration fee, which includes a souvenir hockey jersey, is $65.

Call 963-1583 for a registration form or for more information.

Kisskalt plays a lead role for ULS

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Two weeks ago, Eric Kisskalt was playing the lead role in "Mousetrap" at University Liggett School.

Last week, he played the lead role for the Knights' hockey team with three goals in ULS' season-opening 6-2 victory over Riverview Gabriel Richard.

"He only had four days of practice before the game, but he had a real good game," said coach John Fowler. "He came to me early in October and said he had a chance to play the lead in the school play, but it would mean missing some early hockey practices. I told him, 'Do it.' It's something that will help him a lot more than a few early practices in a five-month season."

Kisskalt led the Knights with 33 goals and 68 points as a sophomore last season.

Fowler said he was pleased with the effort of the entire team as it beat the squad that eliminated the Knights in the regional finals of last season's state tournament.

"I think the guys were surprised at how well they played for a first game," Fowler said. "And we can only get better. You never know how well it's going to go until you play that first one."

ULS got excellent goaltending from seniors Tom Best and Chris Eldridge. The two divided the work in the nets with Best stopping 13 of 14 shots in the first half of the game and Eldridge turning away nine of 10 shots in the second half.

"We're going to alternate them every game," Fowler said. "That's what we did last year and it was successful. Having two goalies like this is a luxury few teams have."

Jay Ricci, who has moved from defense to left wing on the Knights' No. 1 line, opened the scoring a 1:21 of the second period with an assist from Matt Spicer. Richard tied the game a minute later, but Kisskalt broke the deadlock during a power play at 5:34.

ULS broke the game open with shorthanded goals by Kisskalt and Omar Sawaf in the last two minutes of the period.

"That's a good way to end a period, especially when the other team is on a power play," Fowler said.

Ricci and Kisskalt added third-period goals before Richard scored its second of the game.

ULS returns from the Thanksgiving break with home games against Cranbrook on Wednesday, Dec. 2, and against Notre Dame on Friday, Dec. 4. The Knights then travel to Saginaw Nouvel on Dec. 5.

MCC hosts baseball camp

Macomb Community College will host its annual Holiday Baseball Camp from Dec. 21-23 at the south campus fieldhouse.

The camp is open to players from grade school through college ages.

Former Detroit Tigers' outfielder Bruce Fields will visit the camp to speak on hitting techniques.

The program consists of clinics in hitting and bunting, throwing and catching, pitching, middle infield play, first and third base play, outfield play, baserunning and sliding and stretching skills.

The entry fee of $60 includes the use of batting cages and machines, pitching mounds, tees, weight training equipment and lockerroom facilities.

Instruction will be given by MCC baseball coach and camp director Len Perkins and assistant coaches Rudy Furchak and Jim Collins.

For more information, call 445-7476.

Bessert picks on MSU, Buckeyes

Former Grosse Pointe North hockey standout Link Bessert must enjoy playing against the Big Ten schools in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

Bessert, a senior forward at Illinois-Chicago, has four goals this season and they've all come against Michigan State and Ohio State.

Bessert scored twice in the Flames' recent 4-3 loss to Michigan State and he also had a pair of goals, including the game-winner, in a 3-2 victory over Ohio State on Oct. 30.

Champion rider

Jessica Graziani, 9, of Grosse Pointe Shores was the 1992 Small Pony Hunter Champion in the Hunter/Jumper Association of Michigan. The Ferry School student, who has been riding for five years, and her pony, What a Keeper, competed at several top horse shows in Michigan. Next month at the Hunter/Jumper Association dinner, Jessica will receive the Court-Lin-Frae Farm trophy for accumulating the highest point total in her division. She trains three times a week at the Fox Meadow farm in Temperance.

Baseball lessons

Macomb Community College's athletic department will offer one-hour pitching and hitting lessons from 8 to 11 a.m. at the south campus fieldhouse from Dec. 28-30.

Trained coaches will spend one hour working individually with players on pitching or hitting techniques. Each player will receive a videotape of the lesson.

The cost for a one-hour session is $30.

For more information, contact MCC baseball coach Len Perkins at 445-7476.

SPAY or NEUTER YOUR PET TODAY! An altered pet is a healthier and happier companion. Also, it spares you the grief and pain of having puppies and kittens destroyed when no homes can be found. Countless numbers of sweet, innocent little ones are euthanized every day in shelters across the country because a pet wasn't spayed or neutered. If we cut down on the numbers of unwanted litters being born, we will also cut down on the number of abandoned, lost and unwanted animals to destroy. A Thanksgiving Wish

May your holiday be rich in the things that make life worthwhile: a table filled with the fruits of the harvest...a house filled with loving friends...and the joy of sharing the season's bounty.

The Grosse Pointe News and The Connection Wish You a Safe and Happy Thanksgiving Holiday

[Excerpts from original case transcript.]

"Me and Willie walked a brown and white dog into the abandoned house."

It isn't only adults who inflict hurt on helpless animals. Kids do it, too. In this case, it was two boys, ages 9 and 11. On a puppy, age 6 months.

"I told Willie that we can make him a stunt dog."

Sometimes the nature of the hurt is sheer neglect. Sometimes it's physical abuse of the most terrible sort imaginable.

"I took his front legs and Willie took his back legs..."

The Michigan Humane Society exists to make a difference for the victims of such cruelty. By providing medical treatment, food, shelter, and boundless compassion.

"...and we carried him upstairs to the window and dropped him out of it."

Since he was brought to us, Sid, our friend in the photograph, has been rapidly recovering.

However, to offer our ongoing services to all animals in need, we need to rely on your generosity. Please express it in its most tangible form: a check. Which can do something truly extraordinary. It can turn hopelessness into hope.

Yes, I would like to help.

An ideal Christmas gift

WHAT BETTER CHRISTMAS GIFT FOR "THE BOSS" — whoever that might be in your family — than a present that is attractive, different, long-lasting and on-the-spot practical: the Boss Step Saver hand vacuum by Eureka. Forget all that you've ever heard about under-powered hand vacuums. This powerful lightweight vac, with a 25-foot electric cord and brush roll, will tackle the toughest cleaning tasks in the home, on furniture, on stairs, in the car, the kids' room, and anywhere that dirt and dust gather. Pet hair is a specialty of the Boss Step Saver. The unique visor flips down for doing vertical surfaces like stair risers, and then easily turns up for flat surfaces. It has a transparent dust container so that you can see when it needs to be emptied. On Christmas morning, it will especially come in handy to sweep up those cookie crumbs that Santa left behind. At $29 in many stores, the Boss Step Saver is a gift that will still be valued for years in the future.

Golfers tee off for the new year with metalwood clubs

This holiday season, giving the golfers on your gift list a "midsize" metalwood club may score an ace, especially if they want to stay ahead of the game in 1993.

Taylor Made's Tour Preferred System 2 Midsize family of clubs, designed to be the longest, most accurate and forgiving on the golf course, are a smart alternative to the oversized clubs flooding the fairways.

The System 2 Midsize club head is 18 percent larger than Taylor Made's standard club head, while its weight is precisely distributed around the perimeter via Taylor Made's exclusive "Inner Cavity Weighting" system. This results in greater accuracy and longer distance, especially for off-center hits. The Midsize has a larger striking surface and optimum hitting area — the "sweet spot" — than typical oversized clubs.

"Because of their larger club face, most oversized clubs have thinner walls, which throw off weight distribution, and leave more room for error," says Mark King, vice president of sales at Taylor Made. "Our Midsize line gives golfers the advantage they're looking for, without being uncomfortably large."

For the avid golfer on your list, that means Taylor Made's System 2 Midsize driver is the ideal gift for the game.

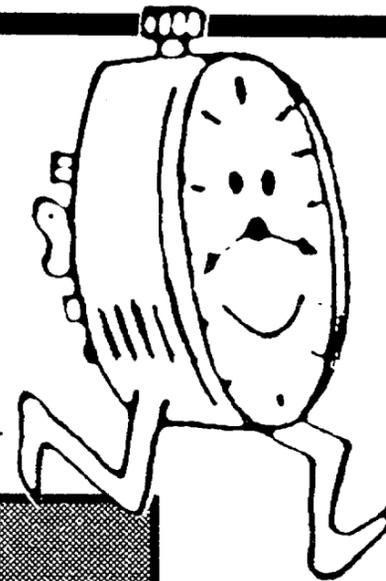

Available in four driver and two fairway wood configurations, the System 2 Midsize carries a suggested retail price of $165 for a steel shaft, and $292 for graphite or titanium shafts.

Drivers are available in lofts of 8.5, 9.5, 10.5 and 11.5 degrees, a No. 3 wood of 15 degrees, and No. 5 wood of 21 degrees.

Romancing with chocolate

Picture yourself hosting a holiday dinner party for your beau. The fireplace is ablaze, the table is set with silver and crystal, and the conversation is smooth. You are both warm and relaxed. No cares. Just chocolate.

Earlier that evening, he arrived with a surprise for you: one of the most lusciously decadent chocolate desserts you have ever experienced. Nothing like having a dessert made especially for you.

There's also nothing like giving a special dessert to a friend — especially if it is elegant and simple.

You can share this chocolate experience by following two easy suggestions from Lindt & Sprüngli, the family-owned Swiss chocolate company that has been making gourmet chocolate for almost 150 years.

Lindt's Swiss Master Pastry Chef Arthur Oberholzer recommends this bittersweet chocolate mousse recipe for anyone who is passionate about chocolate. The key to its elegance, he says, is in the richness of the Swiss[®] chocolate.

BITTERSWEET CHOCOLATE MOUSSE

Preparation time: 20 minutes
Number of servings: 4-6

- 2 bars (3 oz. each) Lindt Excellence chocolate
- 2 tablespoons sweet butter
- 2 eggs, separated
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons dark rum
- 1 teaspoon strong coffee
- 1 cup whipped cream

In a double boiler, over low heat, melt chocolate and butter.
Beat egg whites until stiff. Set aside.
Beat egg yolks with sugar until pale yellow and light.
Add rum and coffee.
Fold in chocolate mixture, then fold in egg whites and whipped cream just to blend.

Pour mixture into serving bowl or individual dishes.

Refrigerate several hours before serving.

Another gift idea

Or, if you'd rather bring a box of chocolates, the 1992 Lindt Holiday collection is designed to please even the most discriminating chocolate lover. Made in a variety of flavors and packaged in a selection of chocolate boxes festively adorned for the holidays, Lindt chocolates make perfect stocking stuffers, hostess gifts, and corporate gifts.

The chocolates also will complement any holiday gathering — whether it's a formal dinner party or a relaxing time with family and friends. Lindt chocolates are available at supermarkets, drug stores, department stores, and specialty stores.

ALWAYS AN ELEGANT GIFT for the holidays: a box of Lindt chocolates.

The following recipes from the Cuisinart test kitchens illustrate the versatility of two of the gifts that are sure to please every cook on your gift list.

EGGNOG

Served at holiday time, this rich beverage is traditionally made with eggs and spirits. This fresh, no-cholesterol eggnog has a rich flavor and consistency and only 1 gram of fat per serving.

- 1 cup (8 ounces) egg substitute
- 1 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 3 cups (24 ounces) skim milk
- 3 teaspoons rum extract, or light or dark rum
- Ground nutmeg

Yield: 1 quart (Eight 4-ounce servings).

Insert Blending/Mixing attachment on end of Cuisinart® Quick Prep® Vari-Speed™ Hand Blender. Mix egg substitute, cornstarch and sugar in 2-cup container or bowl and blend on low speed until smooth, about 15 seconds.

Add 1/2 cup of skim milk and blend on low speed to combine, about 5 seconds.

In a large saucepan, blend remaining milk, rum extract and egg-cornstarch mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, until mixture coats back of a wooden spoon, about 12 minutes.

Refrigerate eggnog until well chilled, about 4 hours.

Dust with ground nutmeg before serving.

Frozen variation: For a festive frozen dessert, freeze eggnog covered in a bowl until firm, about six hours. Spoon or scoop into dessert bowls.

Top with a dash of ground nutmeg before serving.

CITRUS FISH STOCK

With your Cuisinart® Juice Extractor/Juicer, you can make a flavorful poaching liquid. This blend of lemon, lime, carrot and celery juices is ideal for fish and poultry.

- 1/3 cup (3 ounces) lime juice
- 1/2 cup (4 ounces) carrot juice
- 1 cup (8 ounces) celery juice

Yield: 1/4 cup (6 ounces) Citrus Fish Stock.

Combine juices in a medium-sized sauté pan or skillet and simmer over medium-high heat. Add fish fillets, cover and reduce heat to low. Cook until flaky, about 10 minutes.

Increase heat and remove fish fillets to warm platter. Reduce sauce to half; pour over fish.

Serve immediately.

A GREAT GIFT — In 1973, when Mike Kuby was in the 9th grade, he was given a geometry project assignment. He created a game board with geometric shapes and called it "Traverse." The "A" that he received from the project was the first of many honors for Traverse. And Educational Insights has made it available at specialty toy and teacher supply stores, to be enjoyed by kids of all ages!

New strategy game invented by 9th grader makes great gift

In 1973, when avid game player Mike Kuby was in 9th grade, he was given a geometry project assignment. With a little inspiration from his 90-year-old Aunt Fanny, he created a challenging board game called Traverse. It combined aspects of Chinese Checkers and chess, and because the playing pieces consisted of geometric shapes, he received an "A" on the project. The good news for parents and kids alike is that today, Traverse is an award-winning game and a perfect holiday gift to buy for family and friends.

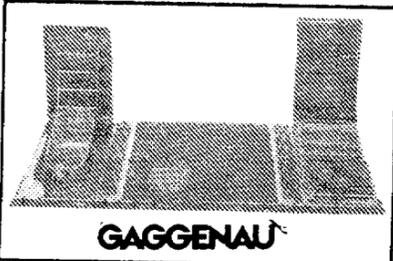

Traverse was named "Best Kid-Tested Toy" by Children's Magazine. It was also selected by Mensa (the high I.Q. society) as one of the "Best New Mind Games," and captured kudos from Children Magazine, Parents' Choice and Taylor Top Ten, to name just a few.

Each of two to four players gets eight colorful, geometrically-shaped pieces to play with. The goal of the game, which is played on a checker-type board, is to get all the playing pieces from the starting row to the opposite row to win. The shapes of the pieces — diamond, square, triangle, and circle determine the directions they can move. Simple and advanced rules challenge players of all ages.

Traverse is recommended for ages eight to adult, and retails for $19.95. This "new family classic" can be found in specialty toy stores and teacher supply stores nationwide.

What music lovers want for Christmas

A unique holiday idea

Does that perfect holiday gift seem to go out of style before the new year rolls around? Are the floral print ties from 1989 now hanging behind the Hawaiian print shirts from 1979? How about last year's ultra-juicer...is it collecting dust since you discovered it takes a bushful of oranges to make enough juice for breakfast? Before you purchase this year's fad for that special someone, you may want to consider a gift with some staying power.

If you are among the 31 million U.S. households with a home computer, or are looking to join the ranks, there is one gift that won't go out of style or gather dust in the closet. It's IBM's newest productivity software, OS/2 2.0, and it is designed to make your home computer the powerful tool it was always meant to be.

It will allow you to juggle tasks faster than you ever thought possible. This means more time for candlelit dinners with your loved one, and help with the kids' homework like never before. (They'll probably find OS/2 2.0's built-in games more entertaining than video games...and because of its versatility, the kids will find it an excellent learning tool.)

The key is multitasking, or running several different software programs simultaneously. In other words, you can update your database, calculate your spreadsheet, type a letter in your word processor and retrieve electronic mail messages from PRODIGY — all at the same time. You don't have to wait for your computer to finish one task before you start a new one.

What about when your fourth grader sneaks in to play the latest computer game while you've stepped away to let your spreadsheet compile? With OS/2 he won't harm your spreadsheet data if he accidentally pushes some keys. OS/2 offers application protection to isolate programs from one another — as it runs thousands of existing DOS, Windows and OS/2 applications.

While the power may seem intimidating, OS/2 comes with an easy-to-use graphical interface designed to mimic a desktop. Colorful objects, called icons, guide the user through their on-screen desktop. There are also on-line tutorials and contextual help to answer questions and provide tips.

During this holiday season, why not give the unique gift of PC software. Think of it this way: OS/2 is just as attractive as roller blades, but you and your family can experience all the power and thrill in a crash-free environment.

To order OS/2 call: 1-800-3-IBM-OS2.

Festive Holiday Cookies

"Star of David" Chocolate Cookies

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup Nestlé cocoa
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup (2 sticks) butter, softened
- 1 cup confectioners' sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Preheat oven to 375° F. In small bowl, combine flour, Nestlé cocoa and salt; set aside.

In large mixer bowl, beat butter, confectioners' sugar and vanilla extract until creamy. Gradually beat in flour mixture.

Shape dough into two balls. Between sheets of wax paper, roll each ball of dough 1/4-inch thick. Cut with 2-inch star-shaped cookie cutter. Place cut-outs on ungreased cookie sheets. Pierce each cookie three times with fork.

Bake 8 to 10 minutes until set. Let stand 2 minutes. Remove from cookie sheets; cool. Makes 4 dozen.

Low-Calorie Snack Ideas For Popcorn Lovers

(NU)—Trying to control your weight means you have to find a tasty snack without feeling guilty.

And that's where popcorn comes in. It is still tops when it comes to being light and delicious. And few snacks are as affordable or fun to make. On the nutrition side, hot air poppers provide the best popping method.

In fact, many well-respected diet programs list hot air popcorn as an allowable exchange for a slice of bread. A three-cup popped serving has only 97 calories and only a trace of fat.

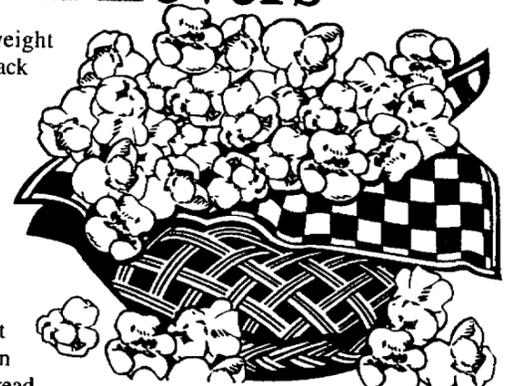

However, it's loaded with complex carbohydrates and dietary fiber. On the cost side, after the initial $20 investment for an air popper is made, an average serving of hot air popcorn costs only about five cents. According to a study by The West Bend Company, the same serving of microwave popcorn costs an average of five times as much.

But whether you're watching your weight or eating everything in sight, a few ingredients and some experimentation make snacking fun. Try these recipes next time you make a batch of popcorn. Enjoy them. But don't be afraid to experiment on your own.

Party Mix Pop

- 6 cups popped popcorn
- 4 cups any Chex cereal
- 1 cup salted nuts
- 1/2 cup butter
- 5 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon lite seasoning salt
- 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper

Preheat oven to 250° F. Place popcorn, cereal and nuts in large roasting pan. Melt butter in small pan over low heat. Remove from heat. Stir in Worcestershire sauce, garlic powder, seasoning salt and cayenne. Pour over popcorn mixture. Toss with hands to coat thoroughly. Bake 45 minutes, stirring every 15 minutes. Remove and serve.

Great Excuse for Having A Party!

Calorie Cutter: Use 1/4 cup diet margarine. No nuts—in the recipe, that is, not at the party.

Yield: 11 cups.

Here's another good recipe from the highly acclaimed book, For Popcorn Lovers Only, by Diane Pfeifer:

Rocky Pop Trail Mix

- 8 cups popped popcorn
- 1 cup diced dried fruit
- 1 cup assorted unsalted nuts
- 1 cup chocolate or carob chips
- 2 teaspoons powdered sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon

Place popcorn in large bowl. Toss in fruit, nuts and chocolate or carob chips. Sift sugar and cinnamon over mixture and serve.

Great Idea for Hiking Outdoors or Back To the TV From the Kitchen.

Calorie Cutter: Sprinkle with 1-2 packets sweetener in place of sugar. Use 1/4 cup fruit and nuts. Skip the chips.

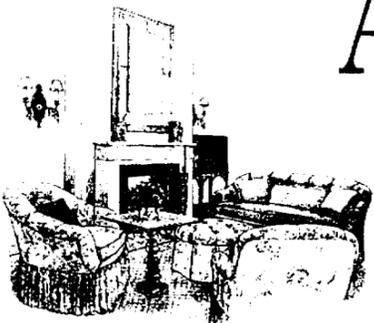

Shortcut: Toss 3 cups of commercially prepared trail mix into popcorn.

Yield: 11 cups

KEEP THOSE PRECIOUS HOLIDAY MOMENTS FOREVER — on video-tape with Sharp's 8mm TWINCAM camcorder.

Have a high-tech holiday

Whether you need to find a holiday gift for that hard-to-please person or want an extra-special present for someone dear, the latest consumer electronics products can make this holiday season memorable for everyone on your gift list.

For the video buff, Sharp Electronics Corporation recently introduced the Twin SlimCam — the world's lightest full-size VHS camcorder, weighing a mere 3.5 pounds. You can focus in on the smiling faces of children as they open gifts and still capture the glimmering tree in the background with this camcorder's unique dual lenses, a zoom lens and a super wide-angle lens.

By recording directly on a VHS tape, you can enjoy the holiday spirit all year long by playing the tapes on any standard VHS VCR.

The Twin SlimCam's low-lux recording capabilities can even capture dim holiday scenes, like the flames of a crackling yule log. Picture-in-picture, instant zoom, fade and wipe features are easy to use, making home videos look fantastic. With all these great features, you may have more fun videotaping your presents than opening them!

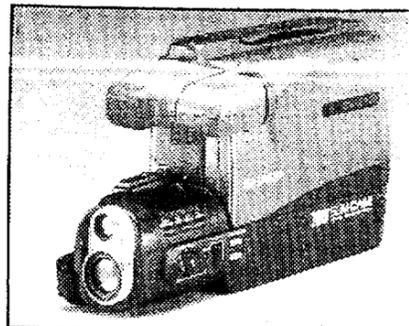

For the people who believe the best gifts come in small packages, Sharp's 8mm TwinCam also provides dual-lens capabilities in a compact camcorder.

Holiday travel...the fun way

YOU CAN GET THERE FROM HERE — Kids will have a variety of ways to travel this holiday season, with the Flip Track Rail & Road Set, a versatile vehicle set that's new from Fisher-Price. The set has planes, trains, trucks and cars, and a two-sided track that flips from railway to roadway to create endless layouts of fun.

Practical Christmas presents

'Tis the season to be merry — and, with the current economic climate, to be practical as well. That's why a gift of fire protection makes a perfect Christmas present for almost anyone on your list.

Fires damage or destroy more than 2,000 American homes and businesses every day. Most people store their important papers, documents, photographs, family heirlooms, and other possessions conveniently at home, but in unprotected areas.

That's why a Sentry® Fire-Safe® security chest or security file makes a Christmas gift that will truly be used and appreciated. The only home storage containers of their size to pass the Underwriter Laboratories (UL) tests for fire protection, a security chest or file will give peace of mind that its owner's important possessions are safe. Available in two sizes, the Sentry Fire Safe security chest is only slightly larger than a shoebox, so it can be stored easily in a drawer, closet, or even under a bed.

The security file, on the other hand, is specially designed not only to protect important documents such as contracts, tax data or business records from fire, but to organize them in conveniently accessible hanging folders.

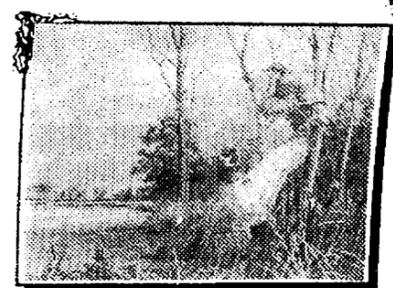

Convenient and practical, the Sentry Fire-Safe containers are also priced right for most gift-giving budgets. Selling for suggested retail prices of about $43 for the chests and about $94 for the file, the peace of mind they'll give far outweighs the cost.

Sentry Fire-Safe chests and files are part of a complete line of UL-classified storage units available at Walmart, K-Mart and Home Depot. For the nearest store, call: Sentry Group, at (800) 828-1438.

The Austrian-American Ski School at Boyne offers an exceptional childrens' program complete with lessons and supervised playtime. Both Boyne resorts offer a funland for kids complete with snowcaves and cartoon characters.

The "Heather Express" high speed detachable passenger chairlift at Boyne Highlands takes skiers to the top of the slopes in less than 3 minutes, leaving more time for skiing. Skiers of any ability level can load and unload easily and safely.

The "Mountain Express" high speed chairlift at Boyne Mountain is the only 6-passenger lift operating in America. The chair is located on McLough slope and provides access to all levels of skiing terrain. Skiers can ride to the top in less than 2 minutes.

Boyne USA installs country's first six-place chairlift

Boyne Mountain Resort this year will operate the United States' first sixplace chairlift, which is expected to shorten lift lines and make loading and unloading easier.

According to Boyne Mountain Area Manager Alex Campbell, this detachable features prevents the chairs enroute to the top, travelling at about 1,000 feet a minute, from slowing.

Mountain Express is located at the base of the McLough Slope. It will carry an estimated 3,600 skiers an hour at about two minutes a trip. To load the chair, six "chutes" will be located on each side of the chair's base. The chute will open when it is time for skiers to load.

Skiers of all abilities can ride the new lift. Beginners especially will like the location of the unloading area, which now is much closer to slopes like Cold Springs, Ram's Head and Deer Run.

Boyne Mountain Expands Beginner Area

Boyne Mountain Resort has moved, improved and expanded its beginner's area to make it more "user friendly."

Boyne Mountain Area Manager Alex Campbell said the new beginner's slope is located in front of the Civic Center entrance. It is 800 to 1,000 feet long, with two rope tows and a children's funland area with moguls, snow caves and cartoon characters.

"The key issue is accessibility," Campbell said. "Now you can rent skis, buy lift tickets, and you're very close to the rope tow. Everything is in one general area."

Boyne USA Ski Rates

Weekend packages at Boyne include lodging Friday and Saturday nights, breakfast and dinner Saturday, breakfast on Sunday, all-area lift tickets and group (adults only) ski instruction on both days. At Boyne Mountain, this weekend package starts at $235, per person, double occupancy, and at Boyne Highlands, $260.

Regular weekend non-package lift rates at both resorts are $35 for adults on Saturday and $32 on Sunday. New half-day adult rates are $27, for 1-4:30 p.m. skiing.

Midweek packages include a $60 room and lift special, per person, double occupancy, at Boyne Mountain, and $80 for the same package at Boyne Highlands.

Midweek lift tickets are $30 for adults for a full-day, and $20 for a half-day of skiing. Popular ski week rates, including lodging, meals, day and night skiing and lessons start at $580 at Boyne Highlands and $550 at Boyne Mountain.

AMERICA'S FIRST 6-PLACE HIGH-SPEED CHAIRLIFT

Coming to Boyne this season.

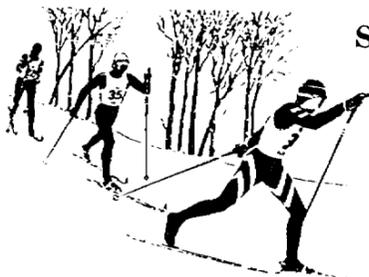

You'll want to ride it...again and again. Zooms to the top of Boyne Mountain in two minutes, but loads and unloads smoothly at crawl-speed. Wonderful for beginners and kids, too. Watch for it. Better yet, come try it.

Also, there'll be a new beginner area at the Mountain and a kids' funland. Write for information or call 1-800-GO-BOYNE.

Skiing's Diversity Michigan's Challenge

"Michigan's winter economic intake is roughly 25 percent of the $6.7 billion overall annual tourism industry," said AAA Michigan Member Services Director Peter Erickson. "Last year an estimated 8,000 new people were introduced to skiing while lift ticket sales rose 9.6 percent statewide. Resort operators are working to make this season even better."

To bring the 1992-93 ski season into focus, consider:

- Expansion — Resort operators have spent more than $1 million in renovations, additions and improvements. Although Michigan now has one less ski area than last year (Timber Creek Resorts near Spruce closed), most of the 43 operating offer longer runs, up to a mile. Most also offer more slopes and lifts.

- Snowmaking — Because of Michigan's unpredictable weather, 25 percent of the areas surveyed have bolstered snowmaking forces, enabling skiers to take to the slopes as early as Thanksgiving and as late as Easter. The reason most resorts close by the end of March is for lack of skiers, not lack of snow.

"When most of us look out the window and see green grass, we can be certain that Michigan slopes — even those within an hour's drive — are blanketed in white," said Erickson.

A Michigan Travel, Tourism and Recreation Resource Center study shows that lift ticket sales increased 9.6 percent statewide last year compared to the previous season, due to more skiable days. That's because machines can do the trick when Old Man Winter takes the day off.

- Programs — Most Michigan resorts offer cost-savings or special programs for children, reflecting the trend in family skiing. Incentives range from "kids ski free" to lodging discounts to special daycare or children's lessons.

"We're seeing more adults returning to the sport with their children," Erickson added. "As a result, there's more focus on family packages and activities."

- Cost-conscious skiers can note that more than half of Michigan's ski areas have not raised lift ticket fees this season. (Costs range from $3 to $35.) Three resorts in the Upper Peninsula — Pine Mountain, Indian Head and Marquette Mountain — have lowered prices.

- Challenges — But, avid skiers haven't been overlooked. Seven resorts have improved their expert or racing slopes.

Just two years ago, snowboarding accounted for less than 5 percent of an average area's skiers. This year, it's at least 10 percent. All but six of Michigan's ski areas not only allow snowboarding on the slopes, they also groom special areas such as "half-pipes" to keep "shredders" happy, Erickson added.

Another popular program is NASTAR (National Standard Race) racing, because participants last season — the third highest in the country. Twenty-three Michigan areas offer NASTAR this season.

- New skiers — While lift tickets for a family of four can reach $140 a day, the Michigan Ski Industries Association has developed a program to lure beginners called "Discover Michigan Skiing." Between Jan. 4-31, more than 20 participating areas will offer a 90-minute beginner's lesson, beginner-area lift ticket and rental equipment for $20 per adult and $10 for children, seven to 14 years. Participants also receive a coupon for $20 off ski clothes and equipment at participating shops.

Skiing Vacations

Skiing vacations have never been so popular. Snowmaking machines, high tech lifts, superb accommodations and transportation improvements have taken all the stress out of this popular vacation. However, many Michigan ski fanatics hesitate to take on the more advanced ski slopes because of the high price tag usually associated with their dream ski trips. This year many ski resorts are offering special packages and options to increase their share of the competitive ski trade.

Imagine a week at the elegant mountain resort of Beaver Creek, Colorado's own "European Hideaway". Snow Country rates Beaver Creek as #1 on the continent for child care and in the top five for ski school and services.

Want a ski trip with a Western flare? Make Steam Boat your destination. Great night life and a layout that allows friends of different abilities to use the same lifts make it an ideal group experience. Steamboat offers exceptional ski programs as well as kids ski free policy.

Obviously there are skiing options for everyone: families, singles or groups. All inclusive packages often save you money because many airlines have blocked air space at discounted rates. Most packages can also be customized to your exact needs. So start planning your dream ski trip before the snow falls and beat the rush.

For information on ski packages call Connolly Travel at 885-3100.

Sugar Loaf Resort

Extreme Skiing, Fun and Variety

Extreme" skiing, the term used for jumping off cliffs and flying down sheer mountain faces, is all the rage of the Rockies. At Sugar Loaf Resort, we have our own form of extreme skiing... extreme fun for the whole family! Our emphasis is on extreme variety, something for everyone in your group. Sugar Loaf Mountain provides skiers with 500 vertical feet of terrain — everything from extremely relaxing, mile-long Sugar and Spice to the ultimate extreme, "Awful, Awful," the Midwest's steepest. And don't forget the "Manitou Extreme," the hottest race hill in Michigan. The instructors in our Kids Klub also go to great extremes to ensure that the children have fun while learning. Finally, the view from the top of the mountain is extremely beautiful. Lake Michigan, the Manitou Islands, a host of inland lakes and the picturesque countryside make an unforgettable scene. So, when you think of extreme skiing, don't think of cliff jumping. Think of Sugar Loaf Resort and picture the beautiful views from the top of our mountain, the variety of our slopes and the extremely wonderful time your whole family will have when you come for a visit.

Sugar Loaf Resort is a year-round resort and conference center complete with downhill and cross-country skiing, 18-hole championship resort golf course, tennis courts, exercise room, indoor and outdoor pools and a variety of restaurants and lounges. Located 18 miles northwest of Traverse City in the Leelanau Peninsula, accommodations include hotel rooms, townhouses and condominiums.

Snacks for Busy Hostesses

Everyone loves to get together with family and friends around the holidays, but no one has the time to prepare for the get-togethers. These dip and snack recipes are created for people with limited time. Whether you're hosting the party or taking a snack to a party, you'll want to try all of these:

1/2 teaspoon tarragon
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Dash hot pepper
1 teaspoon mace
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1/4 pound butter, softened
1 pound cooked, shelled shrimp

Combine all ingredients except shrimp in blender. Blend with pulsing action, scraping down sides of container as needed until mixture is smooth. Add 3 or 4 shrimp at a time. Continue pulsing action until shrimp is coarsely chopped. Refrigerate. Serve with crackers.

Makes 2 cups.

Cucumber Dip

1 6-oz. package of cream cheese
1/2 cup sour cream
1/4 cup cucumber, grated
2 tablespoons celery, chopped
1 tablespoon chopped onion

1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup finely chopped salted peanuts
2 tablespoons minced red onion
1/8 teaspoon dill weed

Beat cheese until well blended. Stir in remaining ingredients. Chill one hour for ease in handling. Shape to form a holiday bell. Cover and chill one or two hours to blend flavors. Just before serving, insert a piece of green pepper in top for stem of bell.

Selecting toys that are good for your children and fun, too!

PLAY IS FUN FOR CHILDREN. And with "good" toys, like BRIO's Wooden Railway, children can also develop through play. Good toys stimulate children's imaginations, challenge with problem-solving situations and enhance their self-esteem.

Which toys will you select for your children this holiday season? Will you choose this year's "hot" toys that have been advertised again and again on television? Peter F. Reynolds of BRIO Corporation suggests choosing toys that are "good" for your children and fun. BRIO toys have won numerous national awards for play value, durability, quality and safety.

"Play is very important to children's development. They have fun while they play, but they also learn. That's why making sure our children have 'good' toys is so critical," says Reynolds. "'Good' toys encourage children's creativity and stimulate their imaginations," Reynolds continues. "They are also open ended, meaning that children can play with them in many different ways over many years."

Reynolds recommends that parents and grandparents keep in mind the following guidelines when shopping for toys this holiday season.

- Safety. Safe toys have no sharp edges; do not propel objects; and have pieces appropriately sized for the child's age. Parts are securely fastened, and there are no harmful chemicals or flammable materials.

Remember, too, to supervise the play area. A "safe" toy may be used in an unsafe way or pose a hazard for a child too young to play with it, such as a toddler playing with the small pieces of an older child's toy.

- Multiple uses. An open-ended toy, such as blocks or building sets, encourages children to create their own play. It can be used in different ways by children of different ages and stages of development. There's no right or wrong way.

In contrast, a closed or structured toy usually has limited use and, so, it can curb the child's creativity.

- Durability. Toys should be made of quality materials. If a toy breaks, it can pose a safety hazard as well as cause disappointment for a child who has lost a plaything and the chance to fully explore it.

- Sensory appeal. Sounds, textures, colors and shapes add to a toy's interest and help children develop their senses.

- Age appropriateness. Choose toys appropriate for the child's age. Many children receive toys that are too old for them. Too often we push them to that one higher level, which can be frustrating and undermine their self-esteem.

- The child's abilities. Children need to be encouraged and challenged. But if they're asked to leap six feet and they've never jumped more than two, they're not going to try. Two-and-a-half feet may be a better target.

Challenge them but give them a goal they can achieve.

- Social interaction. A good toy can include other playmates. Children sometimes like to play with other children — and they learn by doing so. They also like to play with adults, so some of their toys should encourage parent-child interaction.

- Empowerment. Children learn by doing. They discover they can affect their environment. Children are empowered through their accomplishments and successes in play.

- Moderation. Children often have too many toys, which can be both overwhelming and over stimulating. Rather than buying a lot of toys, choose a few open-ended toys that offer many different play experiences. Also, rotate the toys available for play, and store others for future use.

To find toys that provide years of fun and enhance children's development, consider visiting a specialty toy store. These stores feature toys that meet the criteria of good toys and have sales people who are knowledgeable about toys and their appropriateness for various ages as well as stages of development.

Specialty toy stores will often provide an opportunity for children to "try out" toys before purchasing them, giving parents the opportunity to observe how certain toys interest and stimulate their child.

For more information on good toys and a list of specialty toy retailers in your area, please call BRIO toll-free at 1-800-558-6863, ext. 5.

CAPTURE THE SPIRIT of one of the world's best-loved Christmas songs with Waterford Crystal's "Twelve Days Of Christmas" ornament and bell. This 18th century folk carol, which was a parlor game played by both children and adults during the height of its popularity, celebrates the festivities during the 12 days between Christmas and Epiphany, when the Magi offered the first Christmas gifts of gold, frankincense and Myrrh. Today, the tradition continues with Waterford's commemorative series. Now in its ninth year, this season's items are etched with the date and an image from the carol's ninth verse, "Nine ladies dancing." The pieces are available at department and specialty stores nationwide, with suggested retail prices ranging from $35 to $98.

Get charged for the holidays

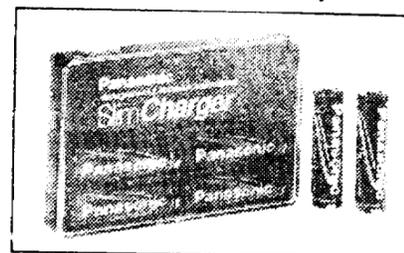

Give someone a SlimCharger and watch them get a charge out of their electronic gifts this holiday season.

The SlimCharger is a pocket-size battery charger for all on-the-go battery needs. It's perfect for keeping rechargeable batteries ready to use with personal stereos, electronic games, calculators or any other battery-powered portable gift you've received for the holiday.

Available from Panasonic Batteries, the SlimCharger recharges the same set of batteries hundreds of times. In fact, a single set of rechargeable batteries in a motor-driven toy could replace some 2,000 alkalines. So it's easy to understand why using rechargeable batteries instead of conventional disposable types can save the user hundreds of dollars a year.

The Panasonic SlimCharger is about the same size as an audio cassette, and holds up to four AA or AAA batteries at a time for charging.

It's the perfect accessory to any portable electronic gift you give — or receive — and it's available with or without additional rechargeable batteries. Suggested retail prices start at $14.99.

TURKEY—A NUTRITIOUS YEAR-ROUND FAVORITE!

(Washington)—On Thanksgiving, more Americans will sit down to a meal featuring the same main dish—roasted turkey—than any other day of the year. How many birds will be cooked during the third week of November? The estimate is 425 to 450 million pounds of raw turkey. That's about two pounds for each man, woman and child in the U.S.—enough for a meal plus plenty of extra for leftovers.

Come Thanksgiving evening a lot of people will be holding their stomachs and muttering something about never eating turkey again for as long as they live. But chances are that's just a temporary condition. After all, some of the best turkey dishes are those that are prepared from the extra turkey remaining after the big feast.

As a matter of fact, turkey has rapidly become a year-round favorite, no longer reserved just for enjoyment at Thanksgiving. Turkey is now a part of the regular menu in approximately 40 percent of U.S. households. This is up from 26 percent just four years ago.

And, turkey sandwiches are especially popular, with people consuming turkey more often as part of a sandwich than any other way. Turkey sandwiches now account for 44 percent of all turkey consumption.

A whole roasted turkey is a time-honored entree for holiday feasts. Not only is the aroma of turkey and dressing cooking in the oven yearned for each year, but taste buds perk up in anticipation for the delicious sandwiches, soups or casseroles which may make an appearance after the feast. Buy an extra-large turkey to ensure plenty of turkey "planned overs." It's an economical way to stretch memories of those good-tasting holiday flavors.

For those who want to savor the flavor of turkey again and again, here's a collection of new, innovative turkey "planned over" recipes.

Turkey and Cornbread Salad (Serves 4)

- 1 cup cornbread stuffing mix
- 2 cups cooked turkey cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1/2 cup whole kernel corn, drained
- 1/4 cup green peppers, coarsely chopped
- 1/4 cup onions, finely chopped
- 1 jar (2 ounces) chopped pimientos, drained
- 1/2 cup reduced-calorie cucumber or buttermilk salad dressing

In large bowl, combine 3/4 cup cornbread stuffing mix, turkey, corn, green peppers, onions, pimientos and dressing. Cover and refrigerate 4 hours or overnight.

To serve, top salad with remaining 1/4 cup stuffing mix.

Approximate nutrient content per serving: 294 calories; 24 gm protein; 10 gm fat; 26 gm carbohydrate; 728 mg sodium; 54 mg cholesterol.

West Coast Turkey Chili (Serves 6)

- 1 cup green peppers, chopped
- 1 1/4 cups onions, chopped

- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2 cans (15 1/2 ounces each) kidney beans, drained
- 1 can (28 ounces) stewed tomatoes, crushed
- 1 cup red wine
- 3 cups cooked turkey, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1 tablespoon chile powder
- 1 tablespoon fresh cilantro, chopped or 1 teaspoon dried
- 1 teaspoon crushed red pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

In 3-quart saucepan, over medium-high heat, saute green peppers, onions and garlic in oil 5 minutes or until vegetables are tender-crisp.

Add beans, tomatoes, wine, turkey, chili powder, cilantro, red pepper and salt. Increase heat to high and bring mixture to a boil; reduce heat to low and simmer mixture, uncovered, 25 minutes.

Turkey Waldorf Sandwich (Serves 4)

- 1 cup cooked turkey, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1/2 cup celery, diced
- 1 small Red Delicious apple, cored and cut into small cubes
- 2 tablespoons walnuts, chopped
- 1 tablespoon reduced-calorie mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon non-fat yogurt
- 1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/8 teaspoon cinnamon
- 4 lettuce leaves
- 8 slices reduced-calorie raisin bread

In medium-size bowl, combine turkey, celery, apple, walnuts, mayonnaise, yogurt, nutmeg and cinnamon. Cover and refrigerate at least 1 hour or overnight to allow flavors to blend.*

To serve, arrange a lettuce leaf on a bread slice. Spoon 3/4 cup turkey mixture over lettuce leaf and top with another bread slice. Repeat with remaining ingredients.

*Note: Turkey mixture will keep up to four days in refrigerator.

- 1 can (4 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1 can (14 ounces) whole artichoke hearts, drained and quartered
- 1 jar (2 ounces) chopped pimiento, drained
- 2 cups cooked turkey, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1 cup Swiss cheese, shredded

In 2-quart casserole, combine rice with seasoning packet, water, mushrooms, artichokes, pimiento and turkey. Cover and bake in 350° F. oven 1 hour and 15 minutes or until liquid is absorbed.

Top casserole with cheese and bake, uncovered, 5 to 10 minutes or until cheese is melted and golden brown.

Approximate nutrient content per serving: 270 calories; 24 gm protein; 8 gm fat; 25 gm carbohydrate; 572 mg sodium, 53 mg cholesterol.

Yuletide dressing:
'Tis the season to allure

AN EVENING DAZZLER: Oscar de la Renta's sensual, new fragrance, Volupté, in a gleaming 1/2 oz. refillable purse spray inscribed with the designer's signature.

No well-heeled woman would consider herself fully "dressed" without the necessary accessories beyond shoes and purse: jewels and fragrance. And it is these very accoutrements which can lend loads of glamour — particularly during the holiday season, when getting dressed to the nines is anticipated with as much relish as exchanging gifts.

For holiday evenings, when flirtation reaches new heights and silhouettes are dramatic and daring, try a sensual scent that enhances your confidence — one that is elegant, exotic and, above all, alluring, like Oscar de la Renta's newest fragrance, Volupté.

Apply fragrance not only to your usual pulse points — behind the ears and on wrists — but also in cleavage, behind the knees and on the inside of ankles. When you take a twirl on the dance floor, you're sure to leave an enthralling trail. Here are some other ways to create a captivating aura:

• Think excitement, fantasy, drama.
For extra dash, wear seductive styles most appropriate for romantic evening hours: beaded dresses that you pour yourself into, dramatic necklines and the sexy new, long and slender skirts with revealing slits.

• Delight with the unexpected.
Select simple shapes in opulent, sumptuous fabrics: a cashmere twin set paired with a full silk skirt, perhaps finished off with long, leather gloves. Daringly mix exuberant patterns, like a bold floral motif offset with a plaid, relying upon color to lend a common note.

Update a classic look by unconventionally teaming evening wear with casual pieces: a flirty satin, tulle or taffeta skirt with a denim shirt, white tank or a "T." Top it off with a denim or a leather jacket and sexy, satin pumps.

Invest in "important" jewel-studded, glittering bijoux: striking, unusual earrings that dare to be noticed, bold cuffs and brooches.

Carry a sparkling evening purse just big enough to house those ever-so-personal essentials like a bejeweled compact and a beautiful purse spray: "objet d'art" that simply demand — and deserve — to be fleetingly admired. Every Volupté devotee will want to slip a purse spray into her evening bag to refresh her scent throughout the wee hours of the party!

Evening luxe: tips for festive dressing

• Stimulate the optic nerve, too.
Shots of color masterfully combined with texture electrify the night: consider a shocking pink in gleaming satin, a magenta in iridescent silk, or a brilliant emerald green in a lush velvet.

A stress-buster gift that makes holiday travel easier

At peak travel times, especially during the holiday season, there are a multitude of problems that confront the unprepared traveler. These include the challenge of purchasing an airline ticket at a reasonable price, putting up with airport traffic, and dealing with uncooperative luggage.

To address these perennial needs, a variety of technologically enhanced products has been introduced. These include everything from more comfortable dress shoes to computer organizers to luggage that's easier to handle.

Step 1: Look for products that incorporate the benefits of new technology in wheel design so that they are easier to control and maneuver. A good example is the patented EasyTurn™ Tracking System from American Tourister, a revolutionary new wheel design that prevents luggage from tipping over — an otherwise common, annoying and physically taxing problem.

Step 2: Look for products that are ergonomically designed with better balance to make lifting and wheeling them easier. Also, look for luggage that contains added room for packing and special compartments for personal items.

Step 3: Look for a combination of style and function. A suitcase that looks good, but isn't easy to carry or wheel, isn't much help at all. A good example is the newly-introduced Genesis collection which has successfully combined style and function in its hardside and softside pieces.

For more information on American Tourister's EasyTurn Tracking System or the Genesis Collection, contact American Tourister, 91 Main Street, Warren, RI 02885, or call 1-800-635-5505.

A timeless gift

FAMILY HEIRLOOMS AND COLLECTIBLES are an important part of everyone's holiday season. Tree ornaments, nativity scenes and special Christmas plates pass from generation to generation, adding wonderful new memories along the way. In this tradition, Howard Miller, the nation's largest clock company and a name synonymous with superior craftsmanship and beautiful design, proudly introduces its first-ever collectible Christmas anniversary clock for 1992. This intricately crafted, domed timepiece stands nine inches high, is decorated with beautiful holiday wreaths and ribbons, and plays "Jingle Bells" on the hour. Destined to become a treasured family collectible, only 10,250 1992 Christmas anniversary clocks were made. Each is printed with "First Edition." Future Howard Miller Christmas collectible clocks will be printed with "Second Edition, Third," etc. For information, please write: Howard Miller, 860 East Main Avenue, Zeeland, MI 49464.

No more soap on a rope, no more tacky ties, no more cheap perfume and no more useless gadgets that end up stored away in the basement.

This holiday season, give that special someone the ultimate stocking stuffer: a revolutionary active matrix liquid crystal display (LCD) color television that fits in the palm of your hand.

The SharpVision 4M-T30U portable television from Sharp Electronics Corporation has a four-inch screen (measured diagonally), weighs a mere 1.14 pounds and is only 6.5 inches wide, 4.5 inches high and 1.8 inches deep.

LCD has fast become the screen technology of choice for TV viewing. Not only does active matrix LCD offer remarkable picture quality and bright colors, it also is remarkably thin and lightweight. In addition, the display runs on low voltage, so it can easily run on batteries for a long period of time.

This 68-channel SharpVision LCD television ushers in the beginning of the "LCD revolution." The unit also has direct video and audio inputs, making it ideal for travel and recreational use. You can hook it up to any additional audio source — such as an earphone or headphones, or any video source, such as a VCR or camcorder — so you can enjoy your favorite videos virtually anywhere. Great for sports fans, this mini-TV easily can be taken to a game to watch instant replays.

Because Sharp's flat panel LCD television utilizes an active matrix system, it provides crisp and bright images with an extremely wide viewing angle, without any distortion, flicker or image retention.

"The compact design of the 4M-T30U four-inch lets viewers enjoy superior picture and color quality in ways never before possible," says Sherman Langer, general manager, Sharp's Consumer LCD Products Division. "It is a perfect holiday gift for people who appreciate advanced technology and truly stunning picture quality in a TV, but who also want the versatility of viewing it on the go."

Industry experts feel that the market for LCD products will grow rapidly in the future. Due to exceptional convenience and picture quality, LCD televisions are expected to gradually replace standard televisions which have bulky CRT picture tubes. Because these next-generation televisions will be flat and thin, you will be able to hang televisions on the wall like a painting!

With a suggested list price of $599, this is an ideal gift which is sure to bring smiles for years to come. To find out where to experience portable LCD technology, call 1-800-BE-SHARP for a SharpVision dealer near you.

Toys that put the ho, ho, ho in kids' holidays

ALL ABOARD FOR HOLIDAY FUN — The Ride Around Train from Playskool is a train that preschoolers can actually ride on.

A train children can really ride on, a garage with a working wireless remote-control door, and a tea party where ordinary tap water "brews" into pink tea, are just some of the toys making magic for kids this holiday season.

These innovative new Playskool toys have been created by a unique "management team" that includes parents and kids — and, of course, the toy makers at Playskool.

Inside Funlab, the company's on-site research facility, children test out all Playskool toys. Researchers and toy designers observe behind a two-way mirror and new toys under development are often changed and adapted based on the children's play patterns. And to get a parental perspective, the company talked to moms and dads across the country about what they want from a toy.

Keeping busy in the garage

Playskool's Garage has the most exciting, magical element of a real garage: a real, working wireless remote control garage door opener. This two-story, two-car garage also has a trash chute, a winch on the second floor to hoist accessories up, a basketball hoop and, of course, the family car, which comes with removable tires kids can change, a dipstick to check the oil and an attachable trailer. To complete the picture, a posable "dad" figure is also included.

Preschoolers will be busy having fun this holiday season with Busy Balls, a new toy with colorful balls that zip through funnels and down twisting tracks for lots of turning, flipping and racing fun from top to bottom.

Kids can easily fit the tracks together to form different tower combinations and all pieces from both sets are interchangeable to endlessly expand the fun.

Riding the railroad

There's no training needed to be a conductor on the Ride Around Train, a battery-operated train that preschoolers can actually ride on. Ride Around Train comes with 14 feet of multi-colored track so the train can ride on the railroad; it also operates off-track on the floor.

To give a real railroad feel, Ride Around Train features the electronic sounds of a whistle and bell.

The holidays are prime time for parties, and kids can have a tea party that's magic using ordinary tap water and the Magic Tea Party. Pour ice-cold water into the tea cups and pink-colored pretend "tea" magically appears. Then fill the jam jar with ice water, dip the knives into the jar for pretend strawberry-colored "jam," and spread the "jam" on the cookies for a colorful treat!

At this party, cleanup is just as much fun — flip the serving tray over, fill the basin with warm water to magically wash away the tea and jam.

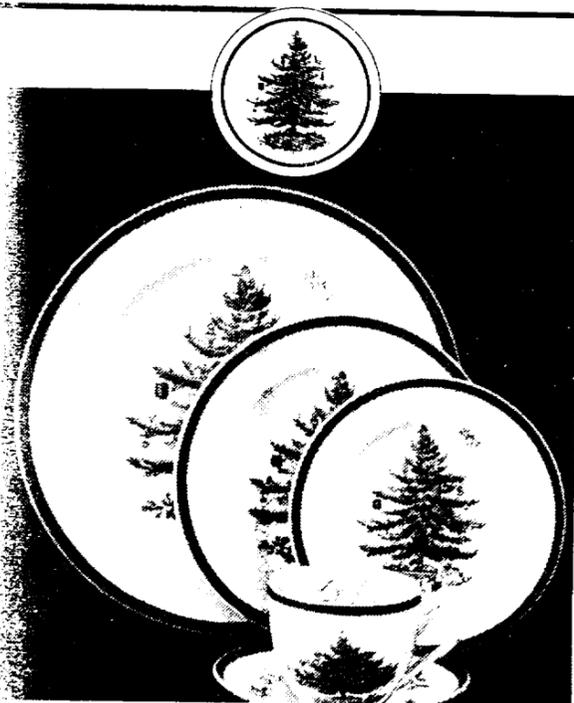

Updated classics for today's kids

In addition to these great new toys, classic favorites have been refreshed and revitalized for '90s kids. There are new Play-Doh playsets like the Fun Sounds Play Shop, where kids make lots of crazy Play-Doh shapes accompanied by wacky sounds as the Play-Doh extrudes.

Tinkertoys, a classic construction toy since 1913, has been redesigned with bigger, brightly-colored and easy-to-assemble plastic pieces that allow kids to build bigger structures than ever before.

And Mr. Potato Head, America's favorite spud, has gone soft for his 40th birthday with Soft Stuff Potato Head, a new version of the toy with 15 easy-to-attach pieces that adhere with fabric fasteners.

Questions about any of Playskool's innovative toys can be answered by calling, toll-free, 1-800-PLAYSKL on weekdays from 8:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. EST. Ho, ho, ho and happy shopping!

While peace on earth may be a common holiday theme, fighting one's way through crowded malls filled with endless choices can make shopping feel like going to battle.

Santa gets the message

For households that want the convenience of a cordless phone along with an answering machine, PhoneMate's 2650 may be just the number.

Incorporating the company's Ultra Clear Noise Reduction Circuit, which significantly reduces background noise, the 2650 provides the clearest reception possible in a cordless model.

In addition, users can access many functions with the handset, including screening calls, listening to messages, and leaving memos for other household members.

Leave season's greetings

Designed for the home or office, PhoneMate's Model 8800 with advanced digital technology offers the unique feature of two digital outgoing messages with five different modes of operation.

For instance, users can switch between two messages — day/night or home/business — that can be changed by remote access from touchtone phones. In addition, those subscribing to a distinctive ring service can program the unit to play one message with the standard ring, and the second message with the distinctive ring.

Or, users can leave a confidential message and give callers a special access code to hear this recording, while using the other outgoing message as the primary greeting.

The 2650 retails for $199.95, while the 8800 carries a suggested retail price of $129.95.

PhoneMate, Inc., designs, engineers and markets proprietary telecommunications products for home and small business use. Its products are available in consumer electronics and department stores nationwide.

New electronic toys and books put a world of sound at kids' fingertips

When we were growing up, there were two ways to hear the roar of a lion: go to the zoo or stay home and pull a string on a big plastic contraption. The roar from the lion at the zoo was rich, deep and very real. The roar from the contraption sounded more like your brother snoring.

Today's kids would never dream of using such archaic technology — not with the startlingly realistic sounds made possible by computer chip technology. The latest generation of electronic toys, books and games place an amazing array of sounds and music at a child's fingertips — and does so at very reasonable prices.

Here's an overview of some terrific gift ideas which are guaranteed to sound great:

Golden Sound Story Books have become a huge success, thanks to their combination of classic stories, zany sound effects and such favorite characters as The Little Mermaid, Berenstain Bears and Robin Hood.

As you read a story, you'll come to a picture. Simply press the matching picture on the touchpad and you'll hear silly noises, goofy melodies and even characters' voices.

In Big Bird's Talking Bingo, Bert, Ernie, Grover and Big Bird team up to help youngsters learn their ABC's in a game that's interactive, colorful and fun. Used as an alphabet primer, a child touches the letter B on the touchpad to hear Big Bird say "Bert, Bert begins with B." With friends, it's time for a great game of Bingo, with Big Bird randomly calling out letters of the alphabet.

One great money-saving feature: the unit turns off automatically, saving battery life. Suggested retail price is $36.95.

Big Bird and the gang return in Sesame Street All-Star Band. It's like giving a child an entire orchestra, with horns, whistles, cymbals, flutes and more. In fact, just about everything a child touches makes music.

Start a preprogrammed song by touching a square, then change to one of five instrument sounds by pressing a star. Add one of four comical sound effects by pressing a star.

Big Bird even gets the last word: touch his square and he says "Oh boy!...Great!" Sesame Street All-Star Band sells for about $35.

Sound Safari uses electronic sounds to create a unique board game for kids. Players follow the sounds of the jungle, trying to be the first to finish the safari trail.

There are six remarkably life-like sounds in this fast-paced game (including a lion's roar which puts those string contraptions to shame). Snakes, elephants, apes, frogs and drums round out the jungle fun.

The whimsical drawings are hits with kids, too. For ages three and up. Suggested retail price is $23.

Free offer pops-up holiday cheer

It's not often that a company gives you a gift for the holidays, but Kodak has done just that. Kodak invites kids to enjoy the sights and sounds of Christmas around the world with "Mickey's Christmas Around The World," a pop-up adventure book and audio cassette.

The book chronicles the journeys of Mickey, Goofy and Pluto, who help Santa deliver presents around the world. Children will experience the excitement of the holidays while learning the customs, traditions and songs from France, Sweden, India, Mexico and the United States.

"Mickey's Christmas Around The World" ($16.98 value) is just $5 with six proof-of-purchase USA symbols from Kodak Gold Plus Film, or free with one proof-of-purchase USA symbol from a Kodak Star 35 camera. All checks must be received by November 30, 1992. For more information and promotion details, please call the Kodak Information Center at (800) 242-2424, ext. 46.

Great holiday gifts inspired by Wall Street

MAKE WALL STREET TRENDS YOUR INSPIRATION for holiday gift-giving with bright shirts, eye-catching ties and bold suspenders for weekday style, a sophisticated, premium Scotch for after-work enjoyment, or the newest in golf or sports equipment for weekend relaxation.

Stumped for a holiday gift to please your favorite business man? This holiday season, consider a gift that reflects the latest trends on Wall Street, the hub of America's financial scene.

Wall Street fashion changed slightly over the past year. The traditional Brooks Brothers suit remains a favorite; however, fashionable Wall Streeters have moved on to much brighter and colorful accessories.

Dress shirts are no longer basic white or pale in color. Instead, men are choosing shirts that are much livelier and bolder in color. Try giving your dad, brother, husband or favorite uncle a box full of brightly-striped shirts, which are particularly popular among the Wall Street crowd.

Ties remain an essential part of a man's wardrobe. Wildflowers and paisleys are no longer the trendsetters. Instead, striped ties are returning to the scene — but today they're much brighter in color. In addition, a unique, eye-catching tie remains a favorite in the crowd to draw attention or set a mood.

"We've noticed a rather strange trend in ties. It may sound odd, but we're seeing a lot of people wearing bow ties with fish on them," comments Mike Barton of Moran's Bar & Grill in Manhattan.

Another possible gift idea is a pair of brightly-colored suspenders.

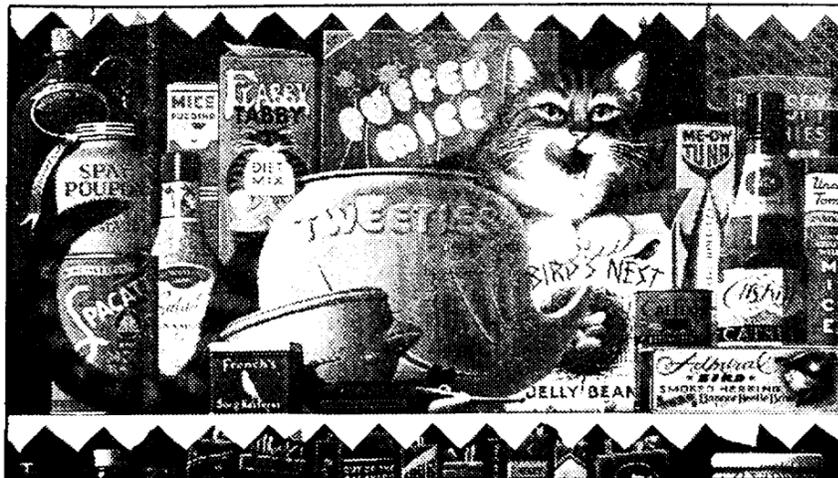

After business hours and weekends are the time for relaxing. For Wall Streeters, that means favorite hobbies and leisure activities. Try shopping your local golf shop for the newest in golf accessories, such as an oversized driver. For something unexpected, give a gift certificate for golf lessons from the local pro. A new tennis racquet or membership to a racquetball or squash club are other sure bets.

Many Wall Streeters appreciate a fine beverage after a long day of hustle at the office. Scotch whisky, regarded as a sophisticated drink enjoyed by connoisseurs around the world, is enjoying increasing popularity with the business set. "Today's drinking habits are a reflection of current lifestyles. People are focused on quality, not quantity, and after a long day at the office they truly enjoy a drink with more taste," comments Tony Adler, an investment consultant from New York.

With its unusual tri-sided bottle and elegant gift box, Pinch, a 15-year-old blended Scotch Whisky, makes a perfect gift for the hard-to-please. Add a couple of elegant crystal glasses, and this gift will dazzle anyone.

So, with a little imagination and creativity, the ideal gift is at your fingertips. From Manhattan to Montana, Wall Street chic will fit even the most difficult businessman on your shopping list this season.

New cordless power tools

THE PERFECT GIFT FOR THE DO-IT-YOURSELFER, The Skil® Flexi-Charge™ Interchangeable Power System is a new family of cordless power tools that all can share the same removable, rechargeable 3.6-volt battery pack and Twin Pack charger.

Every do-it-yourselfer (DIYer) needs a versatile set of power and hand tools to handle household repairs and workshop projects. This holiday season, give your favorite DIYer a gift that offers convenience and flexibility — and helps protect the environment.

A new family of cordless power tools designed and priced for the DIYer that features the professional tool benefit of removable, rechargeable batteries that are more easily recycled is now available from Skil Corp.

The Skil® Flexi-Charge™ Interchangeable Power System is the first broad line of DIY cordless tools that all can share the same removable, rechargeable 3.6-volt battery pack and Twin Pack charger.

The first four tools in the line include two 3.6 volt screwdrivers and two pistol grip Drive-R-Drills™, a 3.6 volt and a 7.2 volt unit. Your DIYer can add to the family later in the year when Skil introduces additional products.

While professional-grade tools have had removable battery packs, DIY tools have used batteries that are integral to the tool, and were not easily removable.

If a user ran out of power while using a cordless power tool, such as a screwdriver or drill, the tool had to be placed in its charger for several hours to be recharged, interrupting completion of the project.

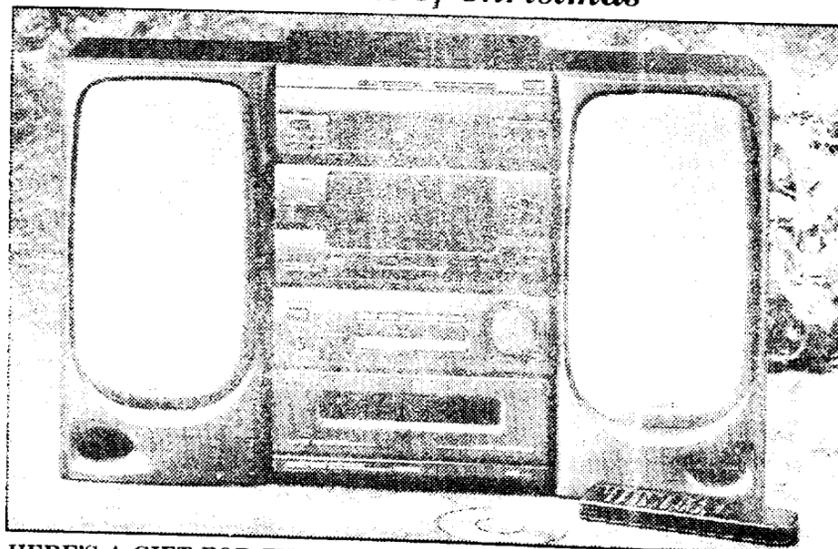

And when the tool no longer accepted a charge — after five to seven years — the entire tool usually would be discarded.

With the Flexi-Charge System, the chargers recharge the battery outside of the tool, eliminating any "down time." The tools are always ready for use, since up to two batteries can be charged at once. And because the nickel-cadmium battery packs are removable, they are easier to recycle.

Furthermore, since the unique chargers can be used for any or all Flexi-Charge batteries, consumers can economically purchase additional tools in the line without the need for additional chargers or batteries.

The Skil Flexi-Charge Interchangeable Power System is an ideal gift for the DIYer who seeks innovation, convenience, economy and compatibility with the environment.

Give the gift of global power: the Presidency of the United States

We've all heard that, in the United States, any man, woman, or child can become the President. This holiday season you can make that dream come true!

Shadow President is a new personal computer simulation game from D.C. True ("Dreams Come True"), Ltd. With an IBM or compatible personal computer and Shadow President, you are the President!

So, if you're having trouble thinking of the perfect gift for your friends and family members this year, give them the Presidency. Empower them to create the world of their dreams.

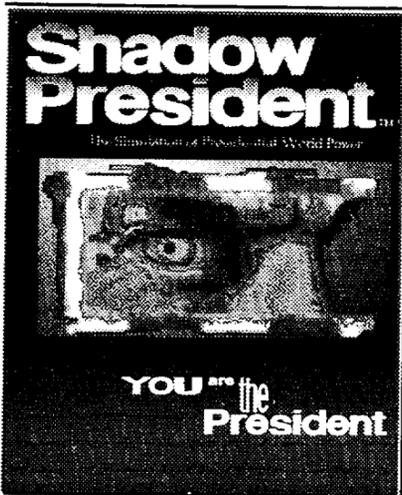

You are the President

Imagine the excitement as you step into your challenging new role as President:

It is June 1, 1990.

*The Berlin Wall is falling.
The Middle East is about to explode.
No one has heard of "Desert Storm."
And no one would believe a Soviet coup.
Welcome to your first day on the job.*

Shadow President equips you with information and power, including the CIA World Factbook, numerous executive actions, various forms of foreign aid, the U.S. budget, and a Cabinet of Advisors. It is up to you to change recent history and create the future. Your actions will determine the fate of your nation and the world.

YOU ARE THE PRESIDENT of the United States in Shadow President, a new PC simulation game from D.C. True, Ltd. At the controls of the most powerful nation on Earth, you can change the world and create the future of your dreams.

With a little creativity, your holiday gifts will be remembered year round

Use a little creativity this season to buy holiday gifts that can be enjoyed year round.

For the youngster on your list, try a school lunch kit. Thermos lunch kits feature cartoon favorites which will add to children's enjoyment throughout the lunch hour.

Outdoor sports enthusiasts will enjoy the convenience and durability of Thermos vacuum bottles and ice chests for fishing, hunting and camping trips.

Tabletop grills make a great portable and space-saving gift for outdoors enthusiasts, students and apartment dwellers.

"Shadow President allows you to experience firsthand the challenge of making decisions and taking actions that affect not only your country, but the entire world," says Robin Antonick, company founder and the driving force behind the product. "In this simulated environment, you can have fun while being mentally challenged. With Shadow President, the world is your laboratory."

The world at your finger tips

Exploring the world is easy with Shadow President. You have global, regional and country maps at your command. You can zoom into any of over 150 countries to get detailed information.

The on-line CIA World Factbook gives you more than 600 pages of actual intelligence, including everything from a country's birth rate, major industries and form of government to the phone number of its embassy.

Shadow President is not only an exciting game for you and your family, it is educational as well. Based on over seven years of research conducted at Tufts University, your actions drive the simulation. You set your own agenda, and the entire world responds to your decisions.

What is the world like with you as President?

Now that you are President, are you filled with the holiday spirit? Will you give humanitarian or economic aid to other countries, and send peace delegations to your enemies? Or will you aggressively attempt to disarm your rivals by executing a coup attempt, blocking trade, or even launching a nuclear attack?

Remember that your Cabinet members will advise and guide you. You can ignore them, but they may choose to resign. If your popularity or leadership effectiveness falls too low, you run the risk of impeachment or even an assassination attempt.

As the Shadow President, you must remember that there are a limited number of days until the election. The American public will be watching!

To give the ideal gift — the Presidency — for the holidays, simply go to your local software retailer and ask for Shadow President. At a suggested retail price of only $69.95, Shadow President can also be ordered by contacting D.C. True, Ltd., 1840 Oak Avenue, Evanston, IL 60201 (Telephone: 708-866-1864).

Traditional gas grills make perfect gifts for couples, parents or in-laws.

You can give your holiday gifts an added touch by providing an extra treat. Include special recipes and spices for year-round grilling enjoyment; hide a toy surprise inside the lunch kit; or fill your sports-enthusiast's cooler with favorite lures or hunting guides to guarantee hours of outdoor excitement.

Another unique gift idea: Combine the Thermos carafe with a Thermos Coffee Cone and a package of freshly-ground specialty coffee. By scooping flavored coffee or tea into the cone, and pouring hot water through, you have a freshly-brewed treat in just minutes.

With gifts like these, you will be remembered all year through.

The gift of music — instruments for those on-the-go

If you're looking for unique Christmas gifts that are easy to use and go anywhere, now there are instruments for that special someone who has just discovered a hobby in making music or is continuing to cultivate it.

The Yamaha PSR-300M electronic keyboard, for example, has advanced computer chip technology that puts considerable music-making features in the hands of the user for a relatively small amount of money (just under $400). This new breed of keyboards, with its realistic sounds and features will surprise even the professional.

The PSR-300M has an Automatic Accompaniment feature that adds rhythm, matching bass lines and chords, to make it easier for the user to create an entire band of sounds right away. Or, if the musician prefers, he or she can record an original accompaniment to play back while performing.

In addition, the keyboard user can layer two voices and play them in unison, or play two different voices at the same time on opposite ends of the keyboard. The PSR-300M keyboard comes with 100 preset sounds and can be played with headphones to practice in privacy.

For the perpetual tapper, a digital drum may be the ideal outlet for the urge to keep a beat. The Yamaha DD-12 Digital Drum, for instance, is a self-contained unit — roughly the size of a holiday serving tray — that can be taken anywhere. By simply hitting any of the eight electronic drum pads, the user can play 75 different percussion sounds — the harder the tap, the louder the sound.

There are 100 rhythm patterns built in that you can play while strumming along on a guitar or any other instrument. It also has a headphone jack that allows the drummer to play at any time without disturbing others. The DD-12 is available for just under $300, including the drumsticks.

For more information on the DD-12, PSR-300M and other Yamaha instruments, contact an authorized Yamaha Musical Instrument dealer in your area or call 1-800-932-0001, extension 450.

Scaled-down cooking for today singles

In America today, 57 percent of the population is made up of one- or two-person households. This figure reflects a dramatic increase from previous generations; no longer are extended families the norm. Now career-minded singles, dual-income couples, single-parent families, "empty-nest" parents and "young-at-heart" seniors are the majority. This article is devoted to providing this group with turkey recipes designed to serve these singles and duets. It's also filled with valuable shopping, selection and preparation tips.

Turkey is the right choice for today's busy lifestyle. It's convenient, versatile, flavorful and nutritious with more than 30 different forms at the market from which to choose. Turkey is the perfect ingredient for any menu or cuisine.

In the fresh poultry section, you can find a wide selection of tray-packed, ready-to-cook turkey products like turkey breast cutlet and tenderloins, turkey thighs or turkey drumsticks. Specialty products range from ground turkey or turkey sausage to turkey franks, ham, bologna or smoked turkey breast. Now it's easy to prepare meals in an instant!

Turkey is nutritious. While providing a great source of protein, it's also naturally low in saturated fat and cholesterol. A 3-ounce cooked, skinless portion of turkey breast has just 119 calories, one gram total fat and 55 mg cholesterol.

Here are some creative ways to make convenient turkey products fit into your busy lifestyle.

Working Hard, Playing Hard...

That's the typical lifestyle of single adults and dual-career

couples. It's difficult finding time and energy to prepare fast, nutritious meals that are satisfying and appealing. You want convenient recipes that allow time to relax and enjoy. Equally important is the need for entrees low in fat and calories but rich in valuable nutrients to fuel your hectic lifestyle. Try Smoked Turkey and Fresh Vegetable Salad. To save preparation time, stop at the grocer's deli meat counter for the smoked turkey and salad bar for vegetables.

Smoked Turkey and Fresh Vegetable Salad (Serves 2)

- 1/2 pound smoked turkey breast, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1 cup fresh broccoli florets
- 1/2 cup yellow squash, thinly sliced
- 1/2 cup carrots, coarsely grated
- 1/4 cup red sweet peppers, thinly sliced
- 1/4 cup green onions, thinly sliced
- 1/3 cup reduced-calorie mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1/2 teaspoon dill weed
- 1/4 teaspoon dried parsley
- 1/8 teaspoon garlic powder

1. In a medium bowl, combine turkey, broccoli, squash, carrots, peppers and onions.
2. In a small bowl, combine mayonnaise, mustard, lemon juice, dill, parsley and garlic powder.
3. Fold mayonnaise mixture into turkey and vegetables. Cover and chill at least one hour.

Approximate nutrient content per serving: 269 calories; 27 gm protein;

13 gm fat; 13 gm carbohydrate; 1378 mg sodium; 48 mg cholesterol.

Child's Play...

It's not easy for single parents to meet the challenge of pleasing a child's taste while serving a nutritious and convenient meal. On busy schedules, it's difficult balancing "valuable" sharing time with youngsters, managing a career and preparing a satisfying meal. But with a little preplanning, you won't have to worry about the age-old question, "What's for dinner tonight?" Serve Tex-Mex Turkey Casserole for a fun and flavorful one-dish meal using low-fat ground turkey.

Tex-Mex Turkey Casserole (Serves 2)

- 1/2 pound ground turkey

- 1/4 cup onions, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/4 cup green peppers, chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon chili powder
- 1/2 cup chunky salsa
- 1/3 cup no-salt corn chips, crushed
- 2 tablespoons reduced-calorie cheddar cheese, shredded

1. Preheat toaster oven to 350° F.
2. In a medium-sized non-stick skillet, over medium-high heat, saute turkey, onions, garlic, green peppers and chili powder 3 to 5 minutes or until turkey is no longer pink. Remove meat mixture from heat; stir in salsa.
3. Spread mixture into a 2 3/4 cup casserole dish; top with corn chips. Bake 10 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese, and bake 5 minutes or until cheese melts.

Approximate nutrient content per serving: 312 calories; 23 gm protein; 18 gm fat; 16 gm carbohydrate; 495 mg sodium; 78 mg cholesterol.

Alone at Last...

That's what "empty-nest" couples tend to say when their last child leaves home. Now you find adjusting your cooking to serve two people is new and exciting. Experiment with gourmet tastes and treat yourselves to special foods. But, don't underestimate the value of good nutrition, especially if you need a diet low in fat and cholesterol. For example, add a touch of class to everyday meals while keeping them "lite" by preparing Turkey Tenderloin Bundles. Baked in a foil packet, this easy entree steams itself in a white wine- and rosemary-flavored liquid.

Turkey Tenderloin Bundles (Serves 2)

- 1/2 cup carrots, julienned (1/4 inch)
- 1 turkey breast tenderloin (approx. 1/2 lb.)
- 1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/8 teaspoon dried rosemary leaves
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- Dash pepper
- 2 green onions, sliced into eighths
- 2 rings red sweet pepper
- 1 tablespoon white wine

1. Preheat oven to 400° F.
2. Place carrots in center of 12x16-inch foil rectangle. Top with tenderloin and sprinkle with garlic powder, rosemary, salt and pepper. Arrange onions and sweet pepper over tenderloin. Fold edges of foil up to form a bowl shape. Pour wine over tenderloin.
3. Bring two opposite foil sides together above food; fold edges over and down to lock fold. Fold short ends up and over.
4. Place foil bundle on a small cookie sheet; bake 20 to 25 minutes or until meat reaches 170° F. (Check for doneness by opening foil bundle carefully and inserting meat thermometer into thickest part of meat.)

Approximate nutrient content per serving: 150 calories; 27 gm protein; 2 gm fat; 5 gm carbohydrate; 226 mg sodium; 70 mg cholesterol.

Retired and Active...

By the year 2000, it is estimated that this group will make up over 25 percent of the population. With fewer commitments, these on-the-go seniors demand entrees that will satisfy sophisticated tastes while offering speed and simplicity. Value and nutrition are also very important. You want a diet low in fat, cholesterol and sodium to maintain peak health. Recipes like Bombay Turkey, featuring quick-cooking turkey breast cutlets and tangy mango chutney, are just right for your lively taste buds.

Bombay Turkey (Serves 2)

- 1/2 pound turkey breast cutlets or slices, cut into 1/2-inch strips
- 1/2 cup Red Delicious apples, cored and cubed
- 3/4 teaspoon curry powder
- 1 1/2 teaspoons margarine
- 1/4 cup mango chutney

1. In a small bowl, combine turkey, apples and curry powder; let stand 10 minutes.
2. In a medium-size non-stick skillet, over medium-high heat, stir-fry turkey mixture in margarine 2 to 3 minutes or until turkey is no longer pink. Stir in chutney, and continue to cook until heated throughout.
3. Serve over rice, if desired.

Approximate nutrient content per serving: 256 calories; 27 gm protein; 5 gm fat; 26 gm carbohydrate; 178 mg sodium; 70 mg cholesterol.

Shopping Tips

Preparing creative turkey entrees starts with smart shopping and selection.

- Rely on foods which are packaged in smaller portion sizes.
- When possible, select food items from the salad bar, bakery and bulk sections of the grocery store. This allows you to choose only the amount needed.
- Don't forget to take full advantage of the deli department. These fully cooked, ultra-convenient foods are ideal for preparing a meal at a moment's notice.
- Try to plan the week's menu in advance to minimize shopping time and impulse buying at the supermarket.

Preparation Tips

To have the most convenient and effortless meals, follow these guidelines.

- Make cooking do double duty. It takes almost as much time and energy to prepare one batch of a recipe as it does two. When possible, double recipes and divide them into individual-size portions; refrigerate or freeze for later.
- Use the microwave oven. It's great for speedy defrosting of meats and other foods.
- Proper storage of prepared dishes and food products is essential for keeping good food quality and taste.

LEFTOVER TURKEY OR CHICKEN and vegetables can easily be combined with Noodle-Roni flavored pasta to create a great main dish meal like the one pictured: Country-Fare Turkey.

Holiday leftovers turn everyday meals into fun family dinners

It's that hectic holiday season again, when normal dinnertime constraints are stretched even further by the added pressures of entertaining relatives and friends, and juggling the other demands of the season. So much energy is focused on making the enormous Thanksgiving and winter holiday dinners that the day-to-day meals don't always get a lot of attention.

Dinnertime during the holidays doesn't have to be stressful or boring, especially if cooks make the most out of those inevitable turkey (or any other) leftovers.

For great tasting, simple dinner ideas any time of the year, call the toll-free Rice-A-Roni/Noodle-Roni Main Dish Helpline at 1-800-421-2444. Callers are asked a brief series of questions and then, based on the ingredients (meat, vegetables, etc.), and product flavors they have on hand, are provided with a customized recipe.

The following recipes are just two examples of how busy cooks can make appealing, quick and easy one-dish meals in 30 minutes or less by combining leftovers, vegetables and Rice-A-Roni or Noodle-Roni flavored rice and pastas.

TURKEY TUSCANY

Old-world charm adds a lot to the holidays, especially when it's as easy to recreate and colorful as this recipe.

- 1 6.5-oz. pkg. Rice-A-Roni broccoli au gratin
- 2½ tablespoons margarine or butter
- 2 cups chopped cooked turkey or chicken
- 1 14-oz. can artichoke hearts, drained, quartered
- 1 medium red onion, cut into wedges
- ½ cup sliced, pitted ripe olives
- 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
- 1 cup (4 oz.) shredded mozzarella cheese

In large skillet, saute rice-pasta mix in margarine until pasta is slightly browned.

Stir in 2½ cups hot water, contents of seasoning packet, turkey or chicken, artichoke hearts, onion, olives and seasoning; bring to a boil.

Cover; reduce heat. Simmer 15 to 20 minutes, or until rice is tender. Sauce will be thin, but will thicken upon standing. Top with cheese; let stand 5 minutes or until cheese is melted.

Enhance your holiday photographs by following these tips from The Photography Information Council:

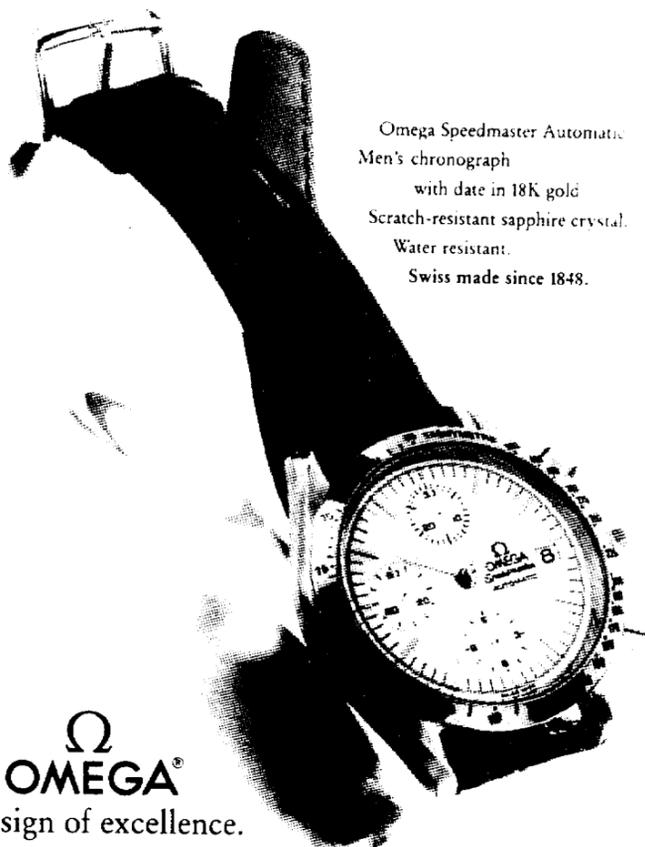

- Hold the camera vertically when photographing faces. Most people tend to hold the camera horizontally out of habit, ease of use, and comfort. Faces are vertical; thus, a vertical frame is more flattering.

- When photographing indoors by a window, stand with the window to your back. The subject should face the window so that the light is full and even, thereby reducing unflattering shadows. Rather than use a flash in this instance, use a higher speed film, such as ASA 400.

- Compose photos within the camera frame (rather than cropping later on), and be sure to pay attention to any distractions in the background. Before you press the shutter, be sure the composition is uncluttered.

FROM HEADING UP THE MOUNTAIN for the morning's first run, to a cozy fireside dinner, Ellesse brings ski and outdoor apparel to new heights.

"High-tech" products available at affordable prices

Whether you are an audiophile, videophile, computer addict, or just a fan of the world of consumer electronics, the big news is value.

"Today's technology-based consumer electronics products — from audio to home theater, and feature-packed telephones to CD-ROM — are exciting and affordable gift choices for consumers this holiday season. As the cost of technology continues to come down, so do the prices of many of today's hot products. Witness the rapidly falling prices of home computers, and the highly-affordable range of sophisticated CD products that are available," says Gary J. Shapiro, vice president of the Electronic Industries Association's Consumer Electronics Group (EIA/CEG).

What types of values can you look forward to this holiday season? How about compact disc players from around $125 and multi-disc players from around $200.

Home theater offers a wide range of value-laden gift choices — from amplifiers with Dolby surround sound to hifi stereo VCRs and the latest speaker systems. Also, home theater begins to pay for itself right away — you rent a movie for $2 to $3 and watch it with your family, on your schedule. Another remarkable economic benefit of home theater is that you can begin putting together a system by using some of the products you already own, and you can add other components or upgrade later, as your budget allows.

One of the fastest-growing segments of consumer electronics is home office, an area in which 36 percent of the U.S. work force is actively participating. The big value story here — and one of the biggest holiday shopping values — is the home computer. Today, you can buy a 486-compatible computer starting at around $1,200 (without a monitor). Another great value in the home computer area — and a great gift idea — is a new monitor. The newest models are coming in at 15 and 17 inches, a step up from the more traditional 14-inch monitor.

Also, notebook computers today have become as powerful as desktop computers. You can purchase a computer facsimile-modem card for around $150; personal organizers starting at around $60, with optional programming cards ranging from personal finance to tutorial chess to the Bible, starting at around $50. Other great holiday gifts for the home office fan are multi-line cordless telephones, and telephone answering machines that tell you who is calling, before the call is answered.

Other affordable holiday gifts include video games for kids of any age, including the powerful 16-bit game units for around $100, and the new CD-based game units which start at around $150. Video game software ranges from $25 to $75 for 8- or 16-bit games. CD-based games start at around $60.

CD-ROM, which offers computer and video game fans sophisticated programs featuring enhanced graphics and sound, is hot on the list of potential holiday gifts this year. And CD-Interactive, a sophisticated format which marries interactivity to imagination (for example, children can take a walk and enter the buildings on Sesame Street® to explore the wonder of discovery).

For the musically-minded person in your family, one of the newest electronic keyboards can be a great gift. These versatile products start at around $29 and up, depending on the features offered. Sage: Good advice for Thanksgiving stuffing

For many of us, Thanksgiving turkey stuffing would not be complete without that lovely, silvery herb, sage. The aromatic scent and the zesty taste combine perfectly with onions, celery and bread crumbs for the ideal accompaniment to turkey and all the fixin's.

One of the natural attributes of sage is that it helps to digest fats. Perhaps this is why it is so often paired with goose, duck, pork and sausage. Even the ancient Romans would dip sage leaves in batter, deep fry them and serve the little fritters at the end of a meal to aid digestion.

Although turkey has become the traditional mainstay of Thanksgiving dinner, and wild turkeys abounded in the New England woods in 1621, it is interesting that turkey was not on the menu at the first Thanksgiving dinner. Wild ducks and geese, venison, shell-fish and fish, all sorts of "sallet herbes," cornbread, wild plums and dried berries and wine made from wild red and white grapes comprised the bill of fare.

Although William Bradford, second governor of the Plymouth colony, noted that the settlers had planted turnips, parsnips and cabbage, these were not included in the feast and, as yet, no one knew what to do with the wild cranberries. But squash and "pompions" were baked in ashes for the first Thanksgiving celebration.

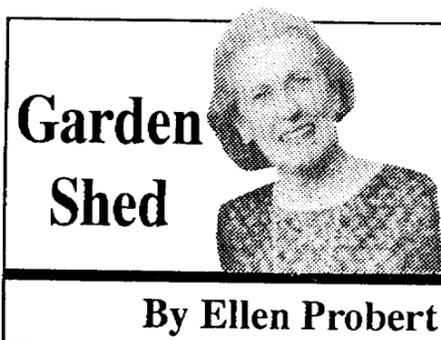

Herbs, including sage, were very important in the kitchens of early America. Not only were they used in every aspect of food preparation, but they supplied dyes, preservatives, potpourris, cosmetics and a very large part of the "amertia medica" of that time. Sage tea was often listed in manuscript recipe books as a remedy for digestive problems and to treat colds.

Herb teas have been popular for centuries — and never more so than now when they adorn the shelves of supermarkets, specialty shops and health food stores and come in many flavors and blends.

Young blackberry leaves possess the same taste as pure, good Chinese tea — without the caffeine — and hawthorne tea and parsley tea are said to be good for rheumatism and headaches. Sage tea is very versatile. It is often listed as equally good as a gargle for sore throats, a rinse for the hair, a healing lotion or, of course, a tea.

And don't forget that herbs are supposed to have magical properties, too, and were used in treatment of "spells, philters and simples" in a less enlightened day when witchcraft flourished and so-called "wise women" were consulted for everything from illness remedies to love-potions. The "wise women" were probably just very knowledgeable about herb lore, and the cures and formulas prescribed for ills were those which had been handed down for generations.

For the vast majority of early settlers, the woods and marshes, their doorstep gardens and hard-won orchards served as their pharmaceutical supply houses. The kitchen hearth and table provided the laboratory in which the many remedies, teas, liniments and potions were produced — as often by the Colonial man as by his wife. Samuel Johnson's 18th century dictionary defines "recipe" as a medical formula.

It is common knowledge that Thanksgiving began in New England and was a celebration of gratitude by the Pilgrims for being alive and prospering after that first year of deprivation. The first Thanksgiving was a party lasting several days at which the Pilgrims and their Indian guests feasted, and it was on this occasion that popcorn first made its appearance on the American party scene, an Indian contribution.

The Puritans were opposed to the observance of Christmas, which they regarded as a Catholic custom. During the Colonial period, therefore, Christmas was not a New England holiday except in Rhode Island, and presents were not exchanged until New Year's Day. For the orthodox Puritan, Thanksgiving took the place of Christmas as a time of festivity.

By the end of the 17th century, Thanksgiving had become a regular annual holiday. Cider was the most common beverage in early Colonial time and inheriting barrels of cider was as common as inheriting furniture or other household items. Every family had its own cider press.

The name "turkey" for our holiday bird has several possible derivations. One of the most reasonable is that it comes from the Indian name for this bird, "Tur-kee." Benjamin Franklin wrote that he wished the bald eagle were not our national bird.

"The turkey is a more respectable bird, and a true native of America," he said.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Extension service to sponsor free home-buyers workshop

By Debra Shepherd

Purchasing a home is one of the biggest decisions that most consumers will ever face, and the Macomb County Cooperative Extension Service hopes to help make that decision a lot easier for home buyers.

A two-part home-buyers' workshop will be conducted on Wednesdays, Dec. 2 and 9, from 7 to 10 p.m. at the VerKuilen Building, 21855 Dunham Road in Clinton Township.

The purpose of the workshop is to help prospective home buyers understand the home-buying process. Professionals from the community will be on hand to explain how to evaluate a home, and the roles of a real estate agent, attorney and lender. House-hunting, qualifying for a mortgage and closing costs are other topics that will be explored in the workshop.

The workshop is not just for first-time buyers; it's for anyone interested in purchasing a home. Participants are encouraged to attend both sessions of the workshop and those who do will receive a certificate of completion. If you are applying for a loan through the Michigan Initiative Program, you may be required to attend this kind of workshop.

The Michigan Initiative Program provides 30-year, fixed-rate loans to families with a maximum gross income of $51,300. The program allows home buyers to purchase a home with as little as 5 percent down. Half (2.5 percent) of the down payment must be savings, but the other half can be a gift.

Another advantage of the program is that it allows for a higher debt-to-income ratio for the purchaser than most conventional mortgages do — 33 percent of the applicants' gross monthly income is allowed for the house payment, and their total monthly debt can equal up to 38 percent of their gross monthly income.

There is no maximum mortgage amount and the applicant is not required to have a reserve (normally two house payments) in the bank at the time of closing, which is required for some other types of mortgages.

Anyone applying for a Michigan Initiative loan who has not owned a home within the last three years before their application date must attend a workshop, such as the one offered by the Macomb County Cooperative Extension Service.

The cooperative workshops are open to the public and are free. Anyone who is interested in attending should call 469-6430 by Monday, Nov. 30, to register.

Home Tips

Handy holder — I priced a storage container for used plastic shopping bags, and it was outrageous! I decided to make my own.

I cut an opening in a two-liter plastic soda bottle below the neck about an inch wide and three inches long — large enough to stuff the bags into.

Then I cut another similar opening about two inches from the bottom for removing the stored bags. I roll the bags from the bottom to eliminate the air in them. The ca-capacity of a single bottle is more than adequate and takes very little space on a shelf.

I like the organization it gives my kitchen. I hope others can use it, too.
Gina B., Rochester, N.Y.

Pass it on — My family always takes our previously read magazines to the laundromat, gas station or hospital waiting rooms. It helps people pass the time while waiting, and gives us a chance to recycle.

Pamela K., Talbott, Tenn.

Modest plan for first home

By W.D. Farmer

A covered porch entrance is to the living and dining rooms. The full kitchen is extremely well planned and sized for great meal preparation. It is shown with built in appliances and the built in stove is a combination oven and surface unit.

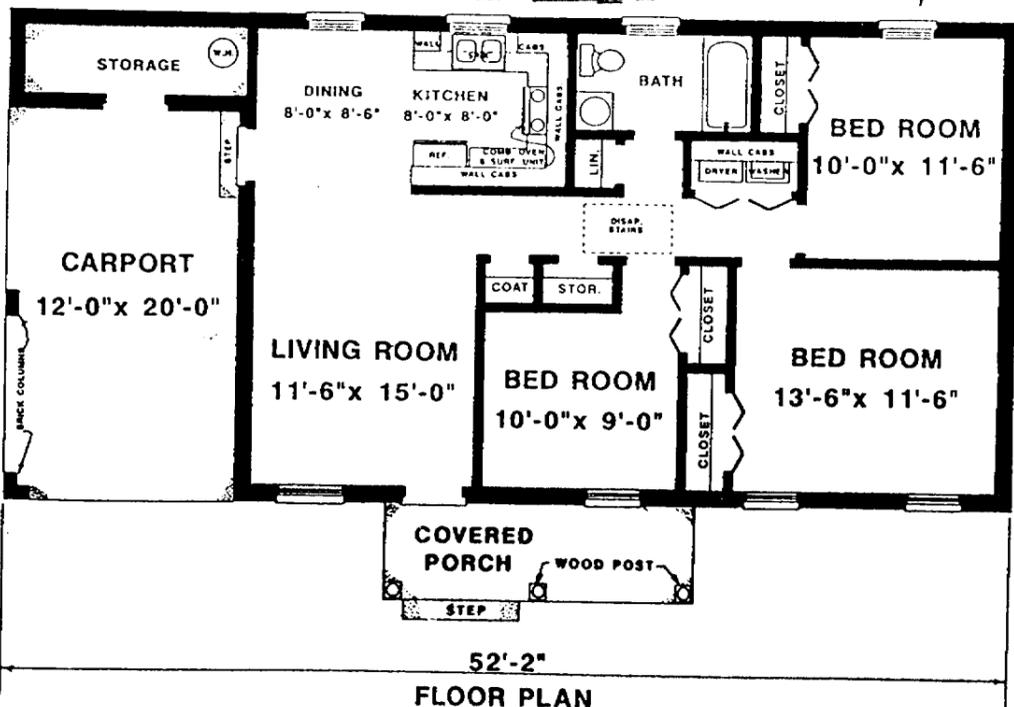

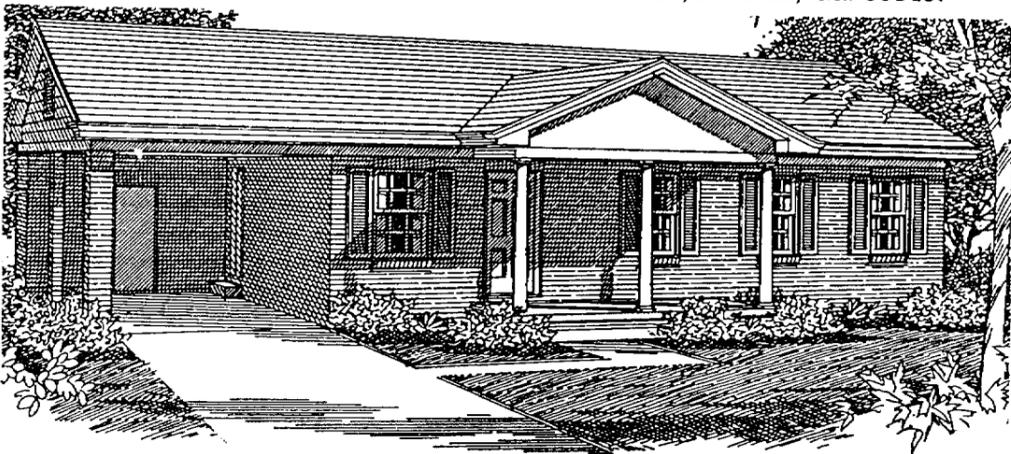

There are three bedrooms, a centrally located large bath and laundry facilities in the bedroom wing. Closets are comparatively plentiful for this small home.

Carport access is direct to the living and dining rooms and outside storage is provided at the rear of the carport. The plan is available with either slab or crawl space foundations.

The colonial exterior is constructed of brick veneer and the roof style is straight gable.

The plan is Number 196. It includes only 1,007 square feet of heated space. It is a computer generated plan. All W.D. Farmer plans are drawn in accordance with FHA and VA requirements and include energy efficiency details. For further information write W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, Ga. 30345.

Antiques by Ralph & Terry Kovel

On the waterfront — Children love to play with water and sand at a beach, and toy makers in the 19th century realized that pails, shovels, sieves, pumps and other types of toys would sell. Millions of pails and shovels were made by Converse and Schlesinger, the tin-toy makers.

Another best-seller was Sandy Andy, a sand-moving toy patented in 1909 by the Sand Toy Company of Pittsburgh, Pa. Water pumps were made of iron or tin by many companies in the 1920s and 1930s.

Old beach toys are very much in demand, and the colorful lithographed designs have a special appeal. The design often helps date the toy.

The abrasive sand and rough use by children make toys in good condition hard to find. Today, sand toys are usually made of plastic. An iron pump with good paint is worth about $25, but a well-decorated tin sand pail sells for over $200.

Q. I have been buying old paperweights and trying to learn more about them. Some of the books disagree on what seem to be basic facts. For example, I have a paperweight with a glass pansy on the inside. Some books claim that it was made in New England; others say France. Why?

A. The study of antiques is an ongoing process. The first books on paperweights were written in the 1930s, but by the 1940s, experts had uncovered new and more accurate information. One must always watch out for information in older books. The attribution of paperweights to Bristol, Sandwich, and Stourbridge is confusing, but this is true in all fields of antiques research.

Each year we learn something new and change the factory history information in our annual book, "Kovels' Antiques and Collectibles Price List." We still look in the old standby books for basic facts, but we also use the newest information available.

Q. Many years ago, my father collected violin-shaped bottles. I have continued with his collection, and I now have blue, amber, green and clear glass examples. Most are numbered on the bottom. Can you tell me about them?

A. The name "violin bottle" means different things to different collectors. Some flasks made about 1845 to 1870 are known as violin-shaped. They were made in the general outline of a violin, but did not have a number on the bottom, because they were made before automatic bottlemaking machinery was used.

In the 1930s, figural bottles shaped like violins were made. They were accurate copies of violins with strings and openings indicated in the glass; the number on the bottom is a factory mark. This type of bottle is still being made.

Q. "Josef Originals" is written on the bottom of each of my collection of porcelain figurines. I started buying them in the late 1950s and now can't find them. They were sold in department stores and Hallmark stationery stores. Do you know about them?

A. Josef Originals Inc. of Monrovia, Calif., made figurines and novelty items in the 1940s and 1950s. Figurines were often hand-decorated with luster glaze and highlighted with gold and rhinestones. The small figurines were of women in full skirts dancing, playing the concertina or piano, or holding a parasol or flowers.

Bank on it — The flag, the eagle and Uncle Sam remain symbols of the Fourth of July.

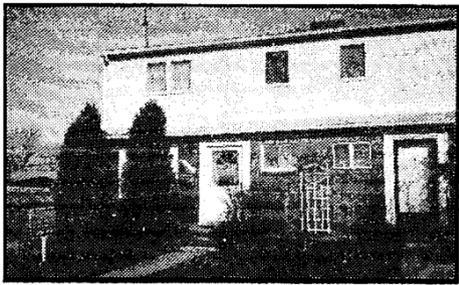

In the 19th century, these patriotic symbols and others such as George Washington and Independence Hall were seen throughout the year. Furniture featured wooden inlays of flags and eagles. Drapery fabrics and dishes were printed with pictures of Independence Hall. Banks were made with eagles or Uncle Sam.

Independence Hall inspired the most models. Perhaps it was because banks were popular souvenirs at the centennial celebration in 1876. At least 12 metal or glass still banks were sold on the grounds. The Enterprise Manufacturing Company, a hardware manufacturer in Philadelphia, recognized an opportunity to make a new product. They patented and made a series of banks for sale at the centennial, and they remained in production for 12 years.

Q. We went on a house tour and saw a chaise lounge in a corner of the master bedroom. The guide called it a "fainting couch." Can you tell me about it?

A. A "fainting couch" is the picturesque Victorian name for some types of sofas. The tightly corseted Victorian woman often felt faint and was able to "swoon" gently and safely into one of these armless couches. Some had a back and one arm and were called Grecian or Reclining couches; others were simply daybed-like pieces of furniture with no arms.

To fill in your set of flatware or goblets, send for a copy of the Kovels' booklet, "China, Crystal and Silver Matching Services." Send $2 and a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Kovels, P.O. Box 22900, Beachwood, Ohio 44122.
