

Jacobson's G.P. store among strongest; no reason to worry

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

Despite last week's announcement that Jacobson's stores in Dearborn, Kalamazoo and Jackson will be closed in March, a company spokesperson said shoppers at the Grosse Pointe store have no reason to worry.

"The Grosse Pointe store continues to be one of the most successful among Jacobson's stores; it always performs well," said Frederick Marx for Jacobson's.

"These store closings have no negative impact or ramifications for the Grosse Pointe store. These store closings are an isolated business decision," Marx said.

Depending on individual's perceptions, the three store closings could even be positive for Grosse Pointe shoppers.

More than half of the 344 sales associates and support staff who worked at the Jackson, Dearborn, and Kalamazoo stores have indicated that they would like to work at another Jacobson's store.

Such indications could mean not only more sales associates in the Grosse Pointe store, but possibly more seamstresses and tailors, Marx said.

Increasing sales staff and merchandise are always goals of retail, because of the direct, logical link to increased service, selection and sales. These closings may allow Jacobson's to do just that, he said.

The Jackson, Dearborn and Kalamazoo stores were among the smallest of Jacobson's 28 stores. Despite sales associates' efforts, the numbers were not good enough.

The Jackson, Michigan-based Jacobson Stores Inc. stores are located in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Florida, Kentucky and Kansas. Fiscal year 1995 figures show revenues of $413.3 million.

Conversely, Jacobson's opened a new store in Boca Raton, Florida, in November, and its sales are strong, Marx said.

Further good news is the background of the newly appointed chief executive officer, P. Gerald Mills, who lived in Grosse Pointe Farms and was an executive with Hudson's.

St. John returns to issue of parking

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Representatives from St. John Hospital have met twice in the last month with their neighbors to discuss the possibility of adding two stories to the hospital's parking deck at Moross and Linville.

According to hospital director of public relations Greg Jakub, hospital staff are looking at a plan to add two stories to the west parking deck.

"We have an ongoing need for additional parking at the hospital," said Jakub. "We've evaluated several possible solutions, and we feel the current concept that will work best is one that is similar to a proposal we made several years ago."

The idea, said Jakub, will be to add two stories to the west parking deck, which can be accessed from Linville at Moross. The idea being considered by hospital staff is to close off Linville at one end of the parking deck.

That would pretty much mean that entry and exit from the deck would be through Moross, Jakub said. Before the plan could go into effect, the hospital's board of directors will have to approve it.

Then, said Jakub, the Detroit city council will have to approve the plan.

"We have a long road to travel before this plan is a reality," said Jakub. "Right now we are studying what it will take to implement the plan, engineering resources needed, as well as the impact and benefit to the community."

The parking deck is in Detroit, said Jakub. The plan calls for the closing off of Linville in Detroit as well.

In the past, St. John officials have been in contact with local residents and have met with them on Monday, Jan. 6, and on Thursday, Jan. 23.

The two additional decks would double the parking structure's capacity — 250 to 500, Jakub said it's too early to come up with a broad cost figure, because the plans could undergo a lot of change depending on meetings with Detroit officials.

Three Tigers — two baseball players with the Detroit Tigers and mascot "Paw" — visited Kerby Elementary School on Jan. 17 to talk to the students about the importance of doing well in school. First baseman Tony Clark, shown here signing an autograph, and outfielder Kimera Bartee, told the children that they must set goals and then work to achieve them, whether it is a career in professional sports or something else. They also told the children that if they want to pursue a career in athletics they should also get a college degree so they have something to fall back on.

In a divisive vote, board names Klein superintendent

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

After searching the nation for the best superintendent candidate, the Grosse Pointe school board found that person in its own back yard.

In a special meeting Monday night, the board voted 4-3 to appoint interim superintendent Suzanne Klein as the new leader of the Grosse Pointe schools. Klein, 50, is the first woman to lead the Grosse Pointe district in its 75-year history.

Trustees Sears Taylor, Cindy Pangborn and John Mills cast the dissenting votes. Each said their "no" vote wasn't so much against Klein as in favor of one of the other two finalists, whom they felt had more leadership experience and accomplishments. All three pledged to work with and support Klein as their new superintendent.

The other two finalists were Robert G. Smith, assistant superintendent for curriculum and instructional services with the Spring Independent School District in Houston, Texas (Taylor and Pangborn felt he was the top candidate) and Robert M. O'Brien, assistant superintendent for curriculum, instruction, staff development and strategic planning, for the Upper Arlington, Ohio, school district (Mills favored this candidate).

Trustees voting in the majority said when they embarked upon the process last spring, they were looking for an experienced superintendent and a proven leader. Since the process began they found that in Klein, who stepped into the leadership position at a time when a lot of long-term festering issues had come to the surface, had done a good job of listening, healing and gaining the support of the community.

"We need a unifying leader to build on our strengths," said board vice president Carl Anderson. "That leader is Klein."

Anderson, board president Tim Howlett, secretary Jack Ryan and treasurer Steve Matthews said they selected Klein not only for the outstanding job she has done in her six months as interim superintendent but for her record in the last 26 years with the school district.

Ryan said he was impressed with her unique leadership style. Howlett said Klein was evaluated as a highly qualified candidate by Hazard and Young and the search process, which cost the district at least $15,000 "validated the quality of our school system."

"This isn't about being against Klein," said Pangborn. "She has served the community well. We want someone with a proven record. Not a rookie with a lucky shot."

The lengthy meeting Monday night, which drew more than 100 audience members and dozens of speakers during public comment, was marked early on by controversy over a flier written and distributed last Sunday by Mills, which called the search process a "sham" and alleged the board acted unethically by manipulating information made available to the public in order to favor Klein.

Mills had discussed his concerns with the board and said if they were in favor of Klein, he'd distribute the flier to the public.

"I seek the truth. I have no hidden agendas. I'm probably not going to seek re-election so I'm not wooing anyone's votes," Mills said. "But the truth was bent and the process was violated."

Mills said Klein was given an unfair advantage by getting the interview questions in advance and given an opportunity to update her resume when the other two candidates were not. Other board members denied the allegations.

Taylor and Pangborn backed Mills' action, saying the process fell apart within the board vice president Carl Anderson. "That leader is Klein," Anderson, board president Tim Howlett, secretary Jack Ryan and treasurer Steve Matthews said they selected Klein not only for the outstand-

Farms board ready to hear property assessment appeals

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

When property assessments are sent out next month to Grosse Pointe Farms residents, the local board of review will be in place to hear any appeals, since the Grosse Pointe Farms city council squared away the final appointment of the decision-making body.

Unanimously approved at the January city council meeting, council members reappointed Farms resident Elizabeth Stajniak as an alternate member to the board of review.

Stajniak is an attorney; the council tends to select someone with an analytical background and/or one that would grant him or her familiarity with the value of property in Grosse Pointe Farms, said James Nash, the city controller for the Farms.

Typical choices are attorneys, realtors, insurance agents, and people within the building industry, Nash said.

Stajniak had previously served a three-year term, again as an alternate, on the Farms Board of Review.

The board is made up of three Farms residents. They are retiree Harold Nobel, Greg Nelson, who is an executive with a construction company; and attorney Dave Johnston.

On March 11 and March 24, these men will review any appeals submitted in writing and/or verbally. Farms residents wishing to appear in person should proceed to the Farms city hall as it is where the board convenes to conduct its work. Stajniak will be called into service in the event that one of three board of review members cannot complete his obligation to the appeals process.

The members are slated to work all day on each of the two appeals dates scheduled in March. The three members of the board of review are compensated $300 for their work; the alternate may receive $75 if called in to assist with a half-day session.

Combining the fact that there are 4,000 parcels of land in the Farms, and the history of appeals made in past years, it is likely that the board will be kept quite busy.

In 1996, the board reviewed

300 cases in which a Farms resident or an attorney representing an estate or commercial property within the Farms questioned the assessment, also known as the State Equalized Value (SEV) given to their property, Nash said.

Half of those 300 cases were mailed-in appeals, Nash said. Half were from people who came in person before the board to argue their case.

The state law regarding SEVs states that a home's SEV is generally equal to half the market value of the home.

Nash said that he hopes Wayne County, which prints the SEVs, can get them mailed to Farms residents in a timely fashion. The county is handling the process for 47 communities, and have been late in past years.

The county has the right to override the evaluations that local communities place on a home, Nash said. The county does so because it wants to make sure it gets its fair share of taxes, Nash said.

Valentines for veterans

Remember our hospitalized veterans on Valentine's Day! The War Memorial is collecting greeting cards to be delivered to the Detroit Veterans Hospital on Feb. 12.

A decorated collection box is located in the front desk area of the War Memorial. Just drop off your greeting Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Children as well as adults are invited to share in this project to let the veterans know that someone cares.

Any type of greeting is welcome. A supply of red hearts is available near the collection box for those wishing to sign a greeting while at the War Memorial. For more information call (313) 881-7511.

The 3-year-olds of Grosse Pointe Memorial Nursery School bring their valentines for hospitalized veterans to the War Memorial. Valentine greetings will be collected until Wednesday, Feb. 12, when they will be delivered to the Detroit Veterans Hospital.

Klein

Many members of the public came forward to praise Klein. Some pointed out her shortcomings. Others favored one of the outside candidates. Some felt the last-minute controversy tainted what should have been a celebratory moment and a new beginning for the school district.

"(These) win-at-all-cost tactics (by board members) have made us all losers," said Debra Carmody of Grosse Pointe Park. "These 11th-hour rumors prevent any kind of rebuttal."

Another community member said he thought it was unfortunate that the board couldn't find one person in the United States they could all agree on. Still others felt that if Klein is going to lead the Grosse Pointe schools she should live here (she lives on the west side) and her child should attend school here (her son goes to private school).

Board members said residency was not made a requirement of the candidate when the process began.

"We went through a lengthy search process, retained a reputable firm to conduct it and their conclusion was that Klein was certainly qualified and an outstanding candidate," said Howlett. "The search validated the quality of our school system."

Other members voting in the majority stood behind the process and called it solid, clean and fair.

The search process began last spring when the board hired the Chicago-based consulting firm of Hazard and Young to conduct a nation-wide search. Representatives from that firm interviewed various segments of the Grosse Pointe school community to develop a profile of the kind of superintendent the district wanted.

The firm then began screening the hundreds of applicants and continued to narrow the field until it presented six finalists to the board in early January. After conducting the first round of interviews, the board then narrowed the field to Klein, O'Brien and Smith. The final round of interviews were conducted publicly and aired on cable television.

protect the interests of eastside residents, said that it appears hospital representatives have been much more open than in the past.

"Our group hasn't met formally to discuss the hospital's proposal," said Heuer. "We will do that in February, so I can only speak for myself. I gather from people who live directly across the street from the hospital on Linville that they are kind of unhappy about the proposal but are also resigned to it. It has left a sour taste in some peoples' mouths."

Several Detroit residents have asked why the new parking deck can't be placed in the south parking lot, which feeds into Bournemouth, which is in Grosse Pointe Woods, said Heuer. He was told that it's cost prohibitive to do so, when compared to adding two decks to an already-existing structure.

"I can understand why residents who live by Bournemouth don't want a parking structure by them — we have the same concerns," said Heuer. "But this addition will increase traffic, and that is a major concern. I understand that Wayne County will be getting involved by repaving, or even redesigning the area at Moross and Linville, so that may help."

Hospital representatives have asked area residents whether they'd rather have Linville partially closed, or totally closed, said Heuer. The consensus seems to be to have the street totally closed.

Jakub said that he and other hospital staff will continue to meet with neighborhood residents in both Detroit and Grosse Pointe to seek their opinions and to keep them informed on what is going on.

Jakub estimates that if everything went well, construction of the extra two parking decks could begin this summer. But, he cautioned, that's a long time from now, and a lot could happen.

South Boosters pitch bathrooms as No. 1 priority for athletic field

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

If you build it, they will go.

That's the idea pitched by the Grosse Pointe South High School Boosters Club to convert a storage and concessions building on the athletic field into a bathroom facility.

In addition, the Boosters would like to enclose the bleachers to create a new storage area and visually enhance the view Fisher Road residents have of the field.

Boosters president Tom Mertz, along with vice president Don Lindow, pitched the idea to the school board at its Jan. 13 meeting. Board members said they would look into the matter, see where it falls in importance along with other building and site projects and whether there is any money budgeted for such a project.

Mertz explained the situation: Now that Grosse Pointe South High School has permanent lights on its athletic field, drawing larger-than-usual crowds to night football games, it does not have outdoor bathroom facilities to accommodate the 1,200 or so spectators and athletes at the games.

Anyone who has a need to use the facilities has a choice: cross the field to the nearby gas station on Kercheval or walk back to the school building on Grosse Pointe Boulevard.

"The facilities fall short for that number of people," Mertz said. "This needs to be attended to, to bring the athletic facilities up to expected and reasonable standards and comparable with our competitors' sites."

The proposal would modify the existing building into separate men's and women's rooms. The storage and concessions area would then be created by enclosing the bleachers, possibly with bricks engraved with donors' names, creating what Mertz called a visually enhanced view and a sound buffer for Fisher Road residents.

Mertz and Lindow said initial costs are estimated at $195,000: $30,000 of that could come from the athletic department's concessions receipts, which have been earmarked for the last 10 years in a special fund for the project. The Boosters have pledged to raise $50,000 and ask the school system to come up with the remaining $115,000.

"We have brought this idea as far as it can go without a commitment from the board," Mertz said. "If it's a go, we'll put everything back in action again."

Board vice president Carl Anderson said this proposal is another example of how the community can enter into a partnership with the school system to achieve common goals, such as what was accomplished last summer at Richard Elementary School with its playground project.

The Boosters would like to see the first part of the proposed project — the bathroom facility — in place by this spring.

DSO's music director is advocate for musicians

By Margie Reins Smith
Assistant Editor

A new work of art is framed and ready to be placed on the wall in the office of Neemi Järvi, music director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. Järvi's office is tucked away at the top of a steep flight of stairs to the right of the stage in Detroit's Orchestra Hall.

The frame contains a single sheet of music — 36 bars written for four trumpets — titled "One for Neeme." Järvi is proud of it.

It was composed on behalf of DSO musicians especially for Järvi on Jan. 5, 1997. It reads, "In gratitude for his support of our colleagues in the Philadelphia Orchestra."

Järvi supported the musicians of the Philadelphia Orchestra during their recent strike by serving as their guest conductor.

"There are lots of troubles and problems there," he said, referring to the Philadelphia strike. "Two of the greatest orchestras — besides the DSO — are the Philadelphia and the New York Philharmonic."

Järvi has always been an outspoken energetic advocate for musicians. He describes his leadership of the DSO as "a nice relationship between the orchestra and the conductor, between the orchestra and management, and between the audience and our sponsors."

Is he worried that his active participation in a musician's strike will backfire and destroy his chances for guest conducting? His recording contracts?

"I don't think I destroyed anything. Management may be unhappy, but I had to do it. Anyway," he shrugged, "I'm booked until the year 2005."

He hopes critics will not be too hard on him for this decision. "If they are, they might destroy one of the great relationships between musicians and conductors — right here at the DSO."

"These (DSO) musicians work every day under somebody's baton. The possibilities for them are to be excited; or bored; or happy. There are ups and downs and it all depends on the relationship with management."

Järvi was born in Tallinn, Estonia, in 1937. "My parents were always singing," he said. "They sang, played the mandolin, the balalaika and the guitar."

The xylophone was Järvi's first instrument. He also learned to play percussion instruments and the guitar.

Järvi has a brother 13 years older than he is, who he has always adored.

"I did everything he did. He became a conductor. So did I."

Sibling rivalry? "Yes, I suppose there was some rivalry," he said. "But now we have a nice relationship. My brother also played the violin."

Järvi played the xylophone with the Estonia Symphony Orchestra for the first time when he was 4 years old.

His mother provided encouragement for the brothers' music lessons.

"She wanted us to be professional musicians. She carried my xylophone to school for me," he said, with a smile. "She even did my school work for me when I was tired."

Järvi said his father was not involved in practical matters like schoolwork or transporting instruments to and from classes. "It was difficult during the war," he said. "Soviet tanks came into Estonia in 1940, when I was 3. Then Hitler took over — another occupation — until 1945. Then the Soviets burned our cities."

"My mother took care of us. All the time I played the xylophone. Also the piano."

When asked what his favorite instrument is, Järvi chuckled. "I'm a conductor. My favorite instrument is the orchestra."

He graduated from the Tallinn Music School with degrees in percussion and choral conducting. He continued his studies at the St. Petersburg Conservatory for training in opera and symphonic conducting.

He made his conducting debut in Estonia, at the age of 18.

In 1963, while he was in his 20s, he was named music director of the Estonian Radio and Television Orchestra. He founded the Tallinn Chamber Orchestra and was appointed chief conductor of the Opera House Estonia in Tallinn.

His reputation soon spread beyond the borders of Estonia. He appeared as a guest conductor with the Leningrad Philharmonic as well as major orchestras and opera companies in Great Britain, Sweden, Holland, Germany, Argentina, Canada and Japan.

His American debut was in 1979, conducting "Eugene Onegin" at the Metropolitan Opera in New York.

He first conducted the Detroit Symphony Orchestra about 20 years ago, when Antal Dorati was director.

"I got such a great response from the musicians," he recalled. "They were — are — such professional people. They have a serious attitude. They're technically prepared... like this morning," he said referring to a rehearsal for a recent series of concerts that included works by Debussy, Beethoven and Nielsen, a modern Danish composer.

After Järvi's historic performance conducting the Philadelphia Orchestra's striking musicians, he returned to Detroit and his beloved DSO.

"When I came back they played this fanfare for me. There was shouting. It was an unusual reception. They had a signed poster, signed by everyone," he smiled.

He's glad he supported the strikers. "I had to do it."

Järvi is well-known for his selection of new works by modern composers and his crusade to resuscitate neglected works of the old masters as well as unappreciated, little-performed music by newer composers.

"People want to hear Beethoven, Brahms, Tchaikovsky. But I still like to introduce music of other countries. Somebody must do these Scandinavian, Eastern European, Czech and Hungarian music. Also American composers like Amy Beach, George Chadwick and William Grant Still.

"Recording is important, as are tours and radio," he said. "It all takes a local orchestra to international standing." Järvi has made more than 300 CDs.

That's enough, he said. He has recorded, among other things, the complete works of Sibelius, Nielsen, Grieg, Svenson and Estonian composers Tübin and Pärt.

"The recording business in America is a difficult one," he said. "It takes huge amounts of money for the companies to record an orchestra. Often the company wants one thing and the artists want different things."

Järvi is looking forward eagerly to the completion of Orchestra Place, an $80 million development project associated with Orchestra Hall. Completion of an office complex, the first of three phases, is expected this fall.

"Orchestra Hall is not exciting outside," he said. "But inside, ahhh," Järvi said. "I'm looking forward to this beautiful expansion."

"Grosse Pointe is the most beautiful city in America. It's cozy. Full of nature. I feel at home here. It reminds me of my mother's summer place — the city of Pärnu on the Baltic Sea. It was a grand place," he said, remembering.

"It had big trees, and the sea. Grosse Pointe has the lake, but it looks like a sea. It has beautiful places to walk."

Järvi, who lives in Grosse Pointe Farms near Lake St. Clair, admitted he doesn't walk much.

"Sometimes I am lazy. I say, 'It's cold outside. I'm warm here in my home. I've got my computer.'"

"I use my computer for relaxation," he said.

Although at first he was intimidated by computer technology, Järvi said he now spends hours seated in front of the monitor.

"I thought at my age, to learn a computer, hmmm. This is too much for me. Now I'm busy. Loading programs. Scanning. Printing. I have a laptop and it's full already. I've organized and put all my CDs on it. I just click and there they are.

"I spend so much time at the computer," he said with a smile, "I can't stand up when it's time to stand up."

Järvi and his wife Liilia have three grown children. Their son Paavo is chief conductor of the Malmö Symphony Orchestra in Sweden and principal guest conductor of the Stockholm Philharmonic and the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra in Birmingham, England.

Their daughter Maarika is principal flutist with the Orquesta Sinfonica RTVE Madrid, Spain.

Their son Kristjan is studying conducting at the University of Michigan and is the founder and conductor of the Absolu Ensemble in New York City.

What would Järvi like to say to Grosse Pointers?

"I would ask them to come more often to the concerts and to support us. I'm grateful to Grosse Pointers for helping the orchestra and I'm proud to play music to the lovely people in Detroit."

Tired board names Klein school chief

The long search for a new superintendent of the Grosse Pointe Public School System came to an end about midnight Monday with the school board's selection of interim superintendent Suzanne Klein.

That came after an often bitter 3-1/2 hour meeting marked by charges and countercharges that raised questions about whether the board could get its act together and the members could cooperate despite the minority's promises to do so once Klein was named superintendent.

Board member John Mills had started the nasty exchanges by the circulation on Sunday of a flier contending the majority had been guilty of "deceit," "favoritism" and other improprieties in the search efforts presumably directed by the board's majority.

Mills signed some of the fliers but many were unsigned. He has been in the minority since his election and has voted with two other board members, Cindy Pangborn and Sears Taylor, against the four-member majority.

In fact, both Pangborn and Taylor were quoted as making allegations similar to those made by Mills that were carried in a free-distribution newspaper earlier in the week.

Mills' basic contention was that the "search was a sham," because, he contended, one board member had said in advance of the final selection the following:

"There is no doubt that the interim superintendent is the best of the lot."

We do not know what was said among the board members as they considered the final candidates, but Mills told us by phone Monday afternoon he had discussed his questions with other members.

However, we found no proof of any of his charges during the long discussion Monday night which centered on actions which were often meaningless since the minority claimed the public had been misinformed on some issues.

Yet that was a specious charge. It was the board itself, not the public, that was to make and did make the choice of a new superintendent.

And we did not see or hear evidence Monday night that either the public or the minority had been deprived of any information or the opportunity to get the same information that was distributed to the majority.

It is true, however, that some people in the audience came to the microphone to agree with and defend some of the minority's positions, although the great majority of those who spoke backed Klein.

After he responded to our follow-up question Monday afternoon with the comment that "there seems to be evidence" to support his charges, Mills had said he would prefer to postpone any further discussion until after the board meeting Monday night.

His charges, distributed chiefly on windshields of cars parked at community churches, basically amounted to a nasty attack on the majority board which at the time may or may not have decided to pick the interim superintendent as the new permanent head of our Grosse Pointe school system.

In fact, his flier offered no proof of any of the charges he makes in the six questions. Our impression is that once the minority found that the majority seemed to be favoring the retention of the interim superintendent, the minority trio began to find fault, even with procedures its members had earlier praised.

After commenting that "it quickly became evident the search was a sham," Mills' flier had added this charge: "If a majority of the board decides to ignore the 'world class' talent presented to us, I will call for an investigation into the following possible wrongdoing."

We did not hear him reiterate this demand at the evening meeting, even after the board had voted for Klein.

All of his six questions were denied or explained away by the majority, with the first asking whether a favored candidate had been provided with interview questions in advance; and the second asking whether an "outstandingly qualified candidate" had been discriminated against because he had attended a Michigan Christian College 25 years earlier.

Another question asked whether the board had spent more than $20,000 in the search even though the majority had already decided who would be the superintendent.

The other three also fell into the "When did you stop beating your wife?" category, and also were satisfactorily explained or denied.

Since neither Mills nor either of his cohorts offered any real evidence to support the charges contained in these questions, the board majority finally went ahead to vote for the hiring of Klein as the new permanent superintendent.

After the election of the new superintendent, all three minority members said that they really liked her and could work with her in the future. However, if they fail to do so, people in this district ought to consider the possibility of recalling all three, not only Taylor, whose term expires this year, but Pangborn and Mills as well.

The community must realize by now that it must move forward without the backbiting and the delaying tactics often practiced by the minority in the past, if the Grosse Pointe School System is to retain the high ratings that it possesses.

GOP loses control of board

In succeeding W. Clark Durant III of Grosse Pointe as president of the state Board of Education, Kathleen Straus of Detroit will shift the board's emphasis to greater attention to improving the present public school system.

In a telephone interview, Straus told the Grosse Pointe News that the board plans to challenge Gov. John Engler's recent attempt to shift more power from the board to the head of the state department of education, who is one of the governor's GOP appointees.

The challenge is expected to be made before the March 10 date on which the shift in power is scheduled to take place. Straus' contention is that the state school board's powers are set forth in the 1963 state Constitution, which cannot be unilaterally revised by the governor.

The Democratic-controlled board is also expected to challenge another gubernatorial order that will become effective July 1. It would transfer more power, leadership and supervisory measures from the board to the education department head.

In this case, too, the board will argue that the 1963 state Constitution requires that the power and the leadership and supervisory authorities also be exercised by the elected board, not by a political appointee.

Howard Simon of Detroit, head of the Michigan unit of the American Civil Liberties Union, has said Straus "will be a fierce defender of public education and doesn't take the view that the way to improve schools is to dismantle the system."

We agree with her in that respect and in her intent to challenge the governor's authority to transfer powers away from the board to the education department head.

After all, the great majority of the state's 1.6 million students attend public schools, even though in many cases they deserve better than they get from their local schools.

Straus told The Detroit News that she'll push the board to more closely monitor the 75-plus state charter schools, remove religious references from the board's mission statement adopted when controlled by the GOP, and revive a plan to require every school district to provide classes to teach certain basic skills.

Despite the fact that Democrats have taken control of the board, Engler spent three hours at the reorganization meeting, The Detroit News reported, and took part in discussions of recent student test scores as well as the shift of many duties from the board to the superintendent.

That shift, dictated by the governor, and his presence at the board meeting shows he is still trying to control the board in order to impose conservative proposals on the state's public school system.

But he has run into a tough as well as thoughtful Democrat in Straus who obviously is a strong supporter of the public school system.

Clinton next on the hot seat

Now that the U.S. House of Representatives has reprimanded Speaker Gingrich, it no doubt soon will become President Clinton's turn to sit in a hot seat provided by the opposition.

Many Republicans contend that Clinton "lied" his way to victory in November with false charges about the costs of various GOP-sponsored cuts or revisions in the majority's proposals, especially in Medicare and welfare.

In addition, the GOP raised a new series of charges during the final days of the campaign about Democratic fund-raising among non-citizens that are expected to start a new series of hearings, even though the Democrats already have returned millions in illegal campaign funds.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott of Mississippi has said, however, the top item on his agenda is the approval of the GOP proposal for a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget.

The president has opposed making that goal a constitutional amendment, but he has agreed to a balanced budget in which he has already called for more reductions in Medicare than he proposed last year.

Whether that will satisfy the GOP majority is questionable, however, because many Republicans said earlier they want to get the president to admit that during the campaign he had falsified their figures.

Reports indicated that most of the savings in Clinton's Medicare proposal would come from health care providers, with hospitals losing $45 billion in federal reimbursements for Medicare expenses and health maintenance organizations losing $46 billion.

Both figures represent savings over a six-year period. But another $18 billion in savings would come over the same six years from Medicare recipients through an increase in premiums charged.

Whatever Congress does, it is facing an administration estimate that now says that without any change in the Medicare program, the trust fund that pays hospital bills will run out of money in the year 2001.

Letters

Some school board members should shape up

To the Editor:

On Jan. 27, the Grosse Pointe school board was scheduled for a final vote on a new superintendent.

On Jan. 26, John Mills decided that this was a good time to distribute, on car windshields in area parking lots, a flier questioning the integrity of the search process and calling the process a "sham."

Mr. Mills has managed to attack the character and motives of school board members, the recruiting firm of Hazard and Young and the finalists in the search. One has to ask why?

If Mr. Mills had such grave concerns about the process, would not a more proper forum have been at a board meeting?

I do not recall any prior expressions of concerns arising from Mr. Mills. Cynthia Pangborn and Sears Taylor chose to call the search a "sham" in last week's Pointer News.

Again, days before the final vote. Again, with no previous expressions of concern regarding the process from Ms. Pangborn or Mr. Taylor.

The search process for a new superintendent has been well under way for some six months. Comments are made regularly at board meetings. Community forums have been held, and the final candidates were actually interviewed on local cable television recently.

Yet, neither Pangborn, Mills nor Taylor expresses any concerns until the 11th hour and their concerns are not properly brought before the board, but are broadcast in fliers and Pointer News interviews.

In addition, Ms. Pangborn's public comments at the Jan. 27th board meeting regarding Dr. Edward Shine's employment, a man not even currently employed by this school district, were inappropriate and inexcusable.

Mr. Mills' comments, at the same meeting, regarding the Michigan Open Meetings Act, were certainly not in the best interests of the Grosse Pointe school district.

As school board trustees, Ms. Pangborn and Mr. Mills have a fiduciary position toward the Grosse Pointe schools and the citizens they were elected to represent. Their public and inappropriate comments are certainly not in the best interests of the Grosse Pointe schools or residents.

I am not going to debate the various qualifications of the candidates for superintendent. This is a decision for the board to make.

However, I find the tactics of Mr. Taylor, Ms. Pangborn and Mr. Mills to be highly offensive. If you have a legitimate concern with the search process, then handle this concern in an adult fashion at a board meeting, not through fliers and one-sided interviews.

Questioning the integrity of the entire search process hours before the vote is not an appropriate or adult method of settling differences.

There have been ample opportunities for this discussion to have occurred in a public board meeting.

Mr. Mills claimed at the Jan. 27 meeting that he was asking questions, not making accusations. Perhaps questions should be asked where they can be answered, not left under windshield wipers.

Fear not with love

Here at the Grosse Pointe News, we rotate weekly who writes this personal column, entitled "I say."

The same is true for the Pointer of Interest article.

In addition, each staff member has a beat. In general, Shirley McShane covers schools.

Chuck Klonke covers sports. Jim Stickford writes the obituaries, and he covers the cities of Grosse Pointe Park and Woods — that means covering these cities council meetings, crime, etc.

I handle the business page(s), and cover the cities of Grosse Pointe Shores, Farms, and City.

Margie Reins Smith is the assistant editor and feature editor. She either writes the story appearing on the cover of the features section or she assigns someone else to write them. Among many things, she coordinates the health and church pages and birth, engagement and wedding announcements.

Essentially, the news staff conducts interviews and gathers information, and writes articles every Wednesday through Friday.

Monday is a "finishing day," a day to pull it all together, a day to check the police blotters, and the evening is spent attending city council or school board meetings.

Tuesday, the staff lays out the newspaper — all day. We break for lunch, but we do not stop at dinner time. The process continues into the evening.

Throughout the week, we answer many questions from community members who stop in or call us. We are happy to help.

But between Wednesday and Friday each week, the staff pauses a moment and asks: "Who did the Pointer of Interest this week?"

Someone responds with a name and a one sentence description of why the Pointer

Amy Andreou Miller

person is special. There's oohing and aahing.

And every week, someone in the newsroom asks, "Who's writing the 'I say'?"

But unlike the Pointer, we tend to shroud the "I say" in mystery till Tuesday, production day. We often confide to each other only a one- or two-word description of our upcoming "I say" column. Shirley once announced her "I say" was going to be about her shower curtain mildew. Last week, Margie wrote about her box collection.

The short description usually piques the interest of the staff. Heck, this column is meant to be for a staff member to provide some levity to the newspaper by writing about some idea or thing that so many of us encounter in our everyday, busy personal lives.

So, this week I announced I was going to write about "love" in my "I say" column.

It didn't pique their interest. Instead they looked panicked. Jim reprimanded me that he had a lot of obituaries to put in the paper. Margie patted her files of baby announcements. Shirley reminded me that the school superintendent selection needed space.

I admit my co-workers reactions were founded.

After all, they have witnessed me, a newlywed, wax on about how great my husband is. I buy him greeting cards occasionally on my lunch hour. He brings me dinner every Tuesday when our staff works late.

True, if I wrote about love, I could fill the newspaper. I feel blessed with the love of my husband, and our wonderful families and friends.

But I can be quick if I write about a negative aspect of love. So here goes.

Love does not conquer all, at least not permanently. It temporarily ruined my outstanding ability to be alone in a house — my house or someone else's.

When I was single, I was coveted as "the world's best house sitter" for people who went on vacation. I kept their houses safe, and I felt completely comfortable. So comfortable, I could walk from an upstairs bedroom to a basement laundry room to iron a blouse without turning on several lights or looking around corners. All this in a foreign house!

But last week, my husband went out of town on a business trip for the first time since we were married. For the first time, I noticed the creepy sound of the refrigerator humming, and all the other sounds our house makes.

The first night I slept with some lights on. The second night, I think I managed to return to my more reasonable, autonomous self.

But the experience gave me an idea for all the nay-sayers of love, and the upcoming Valentine's Day holiday.

Valentine's Day may be viewed as a "Hallmark" holiday by some. Other people say, "I don't need one day designated for me to tell someone I love them."

But I think my Valentine card to my husband may use new words to tell him how much he is loved. He makes the creepy sounds in our house unnoticeable.

So why not use this Valentine's Day holiday to reflect upon all the ways love alters us and empowers us? Even the silliest littlest experience can be enlightening.

Bolls are on a roll

If John and Marlene Boll live in the Shores, why does that Colorado paper have a big picture of them posing with former President Gerald Ford?

Maybe it's because the Bolls have a second home in Vail and their talents have been snowballing in that area's Beaver Creek community, where they are working to establish a new performing arts center.

No wonder Mr. Ford was smiling when he presented John with the Beaver Creek Citizen of the Year Award at the Vail Valley Foundation's annual fundraising breakfast on Beaver Creek Mountain Dec. 30. The former first citizen is on the committee for the arts center and John had spearheaded the drive to help raise nearly $14 million to fund the project.

Marlene hasn't been resting either. She's on the board of directors for the Vail Valley Foundation. "John and Marlene have made a tremendous contribution to the grand finale of Beaver Creek," says a foundation spokesman.

"It's an opportunity to fulfill a dream," says John.

Filming in the blanks

There it was last Thursday right on the big screen: The long-awaited movie "Grosse Pointe Blank" is coming to the Woods Theater.

When "Soon" was all the preview announcement would reveal of the Caravan Pictures film starring (and co-produced and co-written by) actor John Cusack with Dan Ackroyd, Alan Arkin and Minnie Driver in supporting roles.

FYI's sources say some wild liberties have been taken with the dark comedy's Pointe setting, with most of it shot in L.A., but locals will be sure to recognize a reproduction of South High and other landmarks around town.

In the story, Cusack plays a hit man with a heart, here for his 10-year reunion and planning one last "job" when he falls back in love with his old school sweetheart and complications ensue.

The results? For one, you'll never look at your Mont Blanc

Lone Wolf?

When the Woods' Emily Wolf went to a reception given by the Grosse Pointe schools to celebrate their 75th year last November, she had that one-of-a-kind feeling: None of her old schoolmates were there.

Emily, who's now 88, was Emily Rybacki when she graduated from the Grosse Pointe High School Class of 1925.

"It's nice to see they still use the same blue and gold school colors and the same motto that says 'Onward and Upward' in Latin," says Emily, "but of the high school's first graduating class, am I the only one left around here?" (There were only 24 back then.)

To bring things up to date, after graduating Emily worked for the old Grosse Pointe Board of Health at Jefferson and Rivald and married Fred Wolf, the famous WXYZ radio and TV personality, now retired.

If you have an FYI tip or used to pull Emily's pigtails, call Ken Eatherly at (313) 822-4091.

Straight facts on charter schools

By Dr. Ormand G. Hook

When Michigan legislators debated the state's first proposed charter school law in 1993, critics charged that these new, relatively independent schools would be elitist, or even racist. "At risk" children, the critics said, would be left for the other public schools to handle. Advocates, on the other hand, argued that charter schools would be inclusive, and would provide a haven for students who were "falling through the cracks" in poorly performing public schools. A verdict on which view is closer to the truth is now beginning to take shape.

Under the law, any individual or organization can organize a charter school in Michigan but each school must ultimately be authorized by a local school board, an intermediate school district, a community college or a public university.

The school then operates as an independent, nonprofit entity responsible to the body that authorized it. Freed of bureaucracy and the many strictures that regular public schools must endure, a charter school has considerable room for innovation but its admissions policies must be nondiscriminatory. If space cannot accommodate all students who wish to attend, students must be chosen by a random selection process.

A charter school is by definition a "school of choice" and automatically receives the state's "foundation grant," approximately $5,500, for each pupil in attendance. Parents do not have to secure the approval of their home school district first to enroll a child in a charter school, wherever it may be located.

More than 10,000 students enrolled last fall at the 75 operational charter schools in Michigan. Forty of the schools are located in the metropolitan areas of Detroit, Lansing, Flint, Grand Rapids and Saginaw. This is where the need for improvements and parental options has been great. Many of these schools have almost complete minority representation. Many schools have waiting lists and have had to use a lottery to select students from the huge response.

Central Michigan University has sponsored over 60 percent of the charter schools in the state. As of mid-1996, more than half, 53.5 percent, of the students enrolled in those CMU-sponsored schools were African-American, Hispanic, Native American, and Asian students. Caucasians made up 46.5 percent of the student population.

Though these numbers reflect the composition of all Michigan charter schools almost precisely, they are much different from those for the state's public schools as a whole, which are 78 percent white and 17 percent African-American. Early indications are that an unexpectedly large number of students with disabilities are enrolled as well.

These facts are in line with what's happening across the country. The Hudson Education Institute's Education Excellence Network found that nationwide, 63 percent of students attending charter schools in 25 states and the District of Columbia are minority group members. Fifty-five percent of the students were considered poor, while 19 percent have limited English abilities and 19 percent have disabilities.

Every charter school in Michigan is a fascinating story of perseverance and innovation.

Livingston Developmental Academy in Howell and Macomb Academy in Clinton Township have missions to assist special and at risk students. Two schools in the Upper Peninsula, Bahweting in Sault Ste. Marie and Nah Tah Wahsh in Wilson, offer a Native American culture in the classroom. Sierra Leone in Detroit and Sankofa Shule of Lansing offer an African-American emphasis. Walter French Academy in Lansing typifies many of the schools in its successful implementation of high standards that produce visibly courteous and studious pupils.

The biggest barriers in starting a charter school include a lack of start-up funds and difficulties in securing and financing physical facilities. But those barriers are being overcome by dedicated parents and educational entrepreneurs who believe strongly in their missions. The most frequently cited reasons for chartering a school are "better teaching and learning for all kids," "running a school according to certain principles and philosophy," and "exploring innovative ways of running a school."

One of the earliest advocates of the charter school idea was the Midland-based Mackinac Center for Public Policy. The law is now doing precisely what the Center urged years ago: "It is vitally necessary to free up the supply side of education, both to enhance competition and to create new opportunities for children in their respective neighborhoods." Signs are abundant that the general success of Michigan's charter schools is already goading other schools to find ways to improve.

Dr. Ormand G. Hook is the director of the Michigan Resource Center for Charter Schools at Central Michigan University and an adjunct scholar with the Mackinac Center for Public Policy.

Turn to the section titled "Women who are making their careers happen" in the January Cosmopolitan magazine and you'll see Amy Glendening, surrounded by flowers on Page 321 and looking like a flower herself.

Small wonder, since Amy, along with her genial co-owner David Urbank, runs Botanica on The Hill. The business partners started their upscale florist's in back of The Upper Crust in '95, business boomed, and they moved across to 92 Kercheval last October.

One reason for their success is a fine compost of abilities: She has a B.S. in Horticulture (specializing in floral design) from MSU and he's got a wide background in visual arts, plantscaping service, store management and garden design.

"We're a personal floral service specializing more in the premium and unusual flowers," says Amy. One of the services is a "Floral Subscription," beginning with an in-home (or office) consultation on flowers, colors and containers and followed by a varied menu of fresh flowers

The movie 'Shine' depicts recovery from mental illness

By Victor Bloom, MD
Psychiatrist/Psychanalyst

The movie, "Shine," is an inspiring true-life drama which vividly depicts the clinical picture of a severe manic-depressive psychosis and some of the psychological factors that contribute to it. It is a powerful object lesson on how mental decompensation can occur.

We are shown the family and childhood of a piano prodigy by the name David Gotthelf. At an early age he wins music competitions, but we see trouble brewing when the father insists that he MUST win. The father is a Holocaust survivor whose family was destroyed by the Nazis. His sense of family and survival are so intense that he cannot allow his son to leave the home for further schooling for his musical talent.

The father's childhood is crucially important, as he relates saving up for a violin when he was a child. Then his father smashed it. The father's latent musical talent is transferred to his son, who is encouraged to play a musical piece which is far beyond his youthful ability, the third piano concerto of Sergei Rachmaninoff. In music school this profound and inordinately difficult piece is called the "Rach-3," as if to reduce it to size, put it in its place.

The father is pictured as overwhelmingly powerful, as he is tyrannical in his direction and smothering in his affection. He is unwittingly making his son an extension of himself, which is always a source of later emotional trouble. The son naturally strives for independence and autonomy and needs to break away from the family, but the father treats this as treachery and disloyalty, lack of appreciation and disobedience, and disowns his son. Symbolically, he burns the precious album of newspaper clippings he has been saving.

Alone in London, having obtained a musical scholarship, the young pianist attempts the impossible, to play the Rachmaninoff Third, which the father loved, and which the father wanted him to play, albeit prematurely. The professor still thinks it is a gamble, but he himself had tackled the Rach-3 in his youth and actually impressed Rachmaninoff himself with his performance. He was the perfect teacher, but again the ambition of the father figure was to prove destructive. The teacher had suffered a stroke and was no longer able to play. The boy was to be his reincarnation.

Practicing to play this near-impossible piece was a labor of love, but also a neurotic obsession. The time came for the concert and everyone held his breath. David played with stunning intensity and virtuosity, but somewhere in the middle of the performance, he broke down, fell apart. Somehow he finished the piece, but along the way he could no longer hear it. He was merely getting by because of his memorization of the fingering. He had somehow lost himself, his humanity and became a pianistic automaton.

We see him in an asylum, receiving shock treatments and hydrotherapy. We hear him babbling word salads. He could have been schizophrenic or manic-depressive; sometimes the two clinical pictures merge, especially in the most severe cases. We see him get sympathetic custodial care, but no psychotherapy.

Somehow the years go by and he slowly regains contact with reality and some human relationships. He is a very difficult and strange person, but in some ways charming and endearing. He is childlike and various close friends take care of him and protect him.

Gradually, he regains his interest in the piano and plays in a local cabaret, where he is appreciated and applauded. Finally, a certain woman who seems to understand him comes into his life, and despite his bizarre behavior, she seriously considers his touching request that she marry him. She is an astrologer and she finds that it is in the stars that she devote her life to him, amazingly enough.

Still more amazing, with her love and guidance he finds his way back to the concert stage and plays again, displaying his considerable virtuosity to an appreciative audience in his home country of Australia. Now the fact of the matter is that he will be making a world tour this year, and has recorded the Rachmaninoff Third Piano Concerto, which anyone can simply buy in the record store. And he may be coming this way to play in person!

The acting performances are riveting, especially that of Geoffrey Rush, who plays the adult David Gotthelf. Rush had formerly been a famous Shakespearean stage actor in Australia, and spent time with the pianist in order to learn his mannerisms. I can say as a psychiatrist that the performance was very realistic, and I can also say that I have seen such recoveries before and know that they can and do happen.

I present details of the film in the hope that it will encourage more people to see it. I don't think that prior knowledge of the plot and outcome will spoil it for anyone. It is both moving and informative.

Letters

Thanks, Sheila

To the Editor:

I would like to take the opportunity to thank Sheila Turney for her 21 years of service to the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

I have known Ms. Turney since 1986 when she was principal at Trombly Elementary School. While principal, she committed us to the North Central Association (NCA) accreditation process — making us the first Grosse Pointe elementary school to become accredited.

Turney also involved our school in computer technology long before many people supported computers in the elementary schools.

Most importantly, Turney cared about kids. When observing in a classroom, she would often jump into the lesson with unrestrained enthusiasm. She encouraged the staff to focus on more difficult NCA goals that would impact kids in a positive, lasting way. When we were discussing target goals, she was pushing for huge, difficult-to-measure ones like creating multi-cultural appreciation and detecting gender bias.

Turney is an exciting educational leader. She is innovative, vigorous, inspirational and not afraid to be true to herself. I always viewed her as "living abundantly."

As Dorothy Thompson said, "Only when we are no longer afraid do we begin to live in every experience, painful or joyous; to live in gratitude for every moment, to live abundantly." That was Sheila.

Her departure is a great loss to many of the teachers, students and parents she has touched over the years. She will be missed by many of us.

Wrong premise

To the Editor:

Your editorial "A costly victory for Gingrich" published Jan. 16, 1997 is based on a wrong premise contained in the first paragraph. You said "Newt Gingrich, stood before the U.S. House of Representatives on Jan. 7 to apologize for embarrassing the House and its members in his efforts to win re-election as speaker." This is blatantly false. He had already been elected speaker and his apology was a part of his acceptance speech. In fact Gingrich was not even on the floor at the time of being elected speaker. He, in fact, made no campaign speech before the House on Jan. 7 attempting to secure his "re-election as speaker."

Therefore, the premise of the editorial is seriously in error. Even your claim that the chairwoman of the ethics committee "reversed herself, postponing the public hearings on the committee's report..." is in error. The dates for the hearings as well as the report of the special counsel had been set by the unanimous agreement of all the members of the committee, which included the Democrats. There was no partisan majority in the committee made up of 50 percent Democrats and 50 percent Republicans.

As for (Congressman David) Bonior, his vindictiveness, hatred and just pure lack of civility is evidenced by the fact that he filed more than 70 ethics violations against Gingrich, only one of which is presently being considered by the committee. That allegedly Gingrich used tax exempt funds to fund the college history course he was teaching. Has it been established, proven, that said course had a political objective benefiting Gingrich?

The only real charge is that Gingrich misled the ethics committee in supplying documents which were in error, although only a month earlier the committee had the correct information — and Bonior did not bring this charge. The committee had on hand the correct information when the so-called erroneous information was supplied them. What mistake was made here? How many of us have signed without reading papers prepared by someone we trust? However, you have failed to notice that Gingrich's apology assumed responsibility for work done in error by someone else. He should be commended not condemned.

Now we have the Democrats and Bonior possibly participating in a federal felony. How creditable is Bonior now?

Death is price of life; make each and every day count

Assisted suicide and living wills are not subjects which most people care to talk or think about. Yet death is the inevitable price that we must pay for life. We find it difficult to face up to the fact that the time will come when our stay on this Earth will come to an end.

We see this cycle of life and death played out in all living things around us. The seasons come and go; flowers bloom and fade; and creatures are born and die.

But we, as human beings, often choose to close our eyes and refuse to accept that we too are programmed by nature to live out an ordained cycle. Because we have been blessed with powers not given to other creatures on Earth, we like to think we are exempt from their fate. They die, we don't.

We rationalize that because we have a brain that has made it possible to gain mastery over so many forces of nature, we will somehow also conquer life's final obstacle.

To a certain extent we have. Science and medical technology have added years to our life span, but even the most optimistic findings point out that the biological clock cannot run beyond a certain time. Human beings, like all of nature's creatures, are mortal.

It is likely, if we were given one wish, many would wish for immortality. We look back on our mistakes and wish for time to correct them. We look into the future and think of all we might accomplish with more time.

We lament the swift passage of time, the days, weeks, months and years that pass too swiftly. We yearn to reign time in, to make it go slower instead of galloping to the finish line. We ponder what we have done with the time already passed, not stopping to cherish and be thankful for the good times that have been ours. We only wish for more.

There are those who are willing to try extreme means to gamble on a second time around. They spend huge sums of money to be frozen and revived at a later date.

There are even plans by one group to send bodies into outer space until science finds ways to replace death-dealing cells with live ones.

Can you imagine coming back to earth years hence and adapting to what would be totally alien, confusing and frustrating. That proposal often meets with some ridicule, like watching the night sky to identify the body of a loved one floating among the stars.

However, the quest for extended life is only human. The unknown is always scary. That journey beyond the perimeter of life is a mystery. It may be less of a mystery for those who have been blessed with the faith that beyond human existence a better life waits, free of travail and pain.

A few years back, there were several articles and books on patients who had been brought back to life by aggressive medical means.

They described their brief journey into the beyond as traveling toward a mesmerizing light and experiencing a sense of wondrous peace and tranquility. Even so, they welcomed their reprieve.

What the experience did for them was to intensify their resolution to live better, more meaningful lives. If we think about it, this is the one lesson that death has to teach.

Suppose we were guaranteed an indefinite extension of life. What would we do with that time? Without a time limit, would we feel any need to achieve?

Rather than wishing for a life that goes on forever, it seems more profitable to wish that life's end could come without undue suffering and pain. There is much to be accomplished in this area.

A well-publicized case is the one in which author Betty Rollins, "Till Cry Tomorrow," sat by while her mother took lethal drugs. After enduring months of chemotherapy and pain, her mother wanted to die. Although suicide is a felony under New York law, Betty Rollins was not charged. She has written a book about her mother titled "Last Wish."

While we sympathize with those who must make a choice of whether to watch a loved one die a painful death or help them die a peaceful death, there is no way that taking the life of another can be condoned.

There is a danger that it could be an easy way out for relatives who feel overburdened by the care and expense involved in caring for a critically ill person.

Unpleasant as it is to contemplate, a so-called mercy killing could become a means for impatient relatives to get their hands on inheritances.

It is a weighty question that calls for a hospital medical ethics committee to find answers for those who are terminally ill and want to be free of the agonizing process of dying.

There have been steps taken in that direction. When death seems imminent, doctors ask relatives if they wish to have extraordinary steps taken to keep the patient alive. If the answer is no, it is respected. It seems that the patient should have input into that decision while he is still in possession of his faculties and aware of the prognosis.

There have been stories told by people who sat at the bedside of a terminally ill patient and have sensed that person wanted to die.

The patient seems to live long enough to get past a holiday or to see a relative who has traveled a long distance to be with him. Finally satisfied that his last wishes have been granted the patient quietly drifts off.

Life is a mystery that we work to solve. Death too, has its mysteries that only faith can solve for some. For others it is a journey into the unknown.

Local Red Lobster heads for boiling pot in sky

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The closing of the Red Lobster restaurant means more than just the loss of a place with affordable seafood, it means that a valuable liquor license is now up for sale.

Realtor John Poponea said Red Lobster officials in the company's headquarters in Orlando, Fla., made a corporate decision to close down three Red Lobsters in metro Detroit.

Besides the Woods restaurant, they closed down Red Lobsters in Southfield and in Taylor, said Poponea.

"The restaurant closed down just after the beginning of the new year," Poponea said. "We are handling the sale of all three properties, and have not sold any of them yet. We don't even have a price for the properties yet."

What makes the sale of the Woods Red Lobster interesting, said Woods city administrator Peter Thomas, is that a Class C liquor license is included with the sale.

Thomas said the liquor license is owned by Red Lobster, and does not revert back to the city.

The company may, if it desires sell the property to an office developer, and sell the liquor license separately, or it may sell the property and the liquor license to someone who wishes to open another restaurant at that location.

Woods city clerk Louise Warnke said that the Woods city code allows a total of six class C liquor licenses to be issued in the city. A class C license allows a restaurant to sell beer, wine and hard liquor for consumption on the premises. The city also has issued one tavern license, which allows for the sale of beer and wine to be consumed on the premises.

In the past, said Warnke, the city council has been approached by restaurant operators and would-be restaurant operators about amending the city charter to allow the issuing of more class C licenses.

The state Liquor Control Commission (LCC), said Warnke, has a formula to determine the number of liquor licenses of any type that a city may issue. The LCC formula grants the Woods the right to issue more than six class C licenses.

But the council has gone on record stating that it will not change the city code. But the city charter gives those who seek a liquor license the right to place before the voters a ballot proposal increasing the number of liquor licenses.

Past efforts to place such a proposal on the ballot have been unsuccessful, said Warnke.

Because liquor licenses are limited in the Woods, said Thomas, it is a big deal when one becomes available.

"We've received a number of inquiries about the Red Lobster," said Thomas. "But as I've said before, the license does not revert to the city, and I tell anyone interested in buying the property or the license to contact John Poponea and Associates. They're the ones handling the sale."

Busy students

The students and staff at St. Clare of Montefalco School in Grosse Pointe Park are working on a new main hallway art project to replace the student-created but timeworn mural recently removed from the wall.

The new project will feature Pewabic tiles created by and representing every student in the school. The project began earlier this month when Melanie Basil, staff archivist at Pewabic Pottery, visited the school and shared a history of Pewabic tile with the students.

A display of Pewabic pottery is on loan at the school. In addition, Basil has been working with art teacher Katie McGrath so she can teach the students how to design and create their own tiles.

Open house

The Grosse Pointe Co-Op Nursery School is having an open house on Feb. 19 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Morning sessions are available for the 1997-98 school year in both the 3-year and 4-year old classes. The school is located in the Grosse Pointe Methodist Church, 211 Moross, Grosse Pointe Farms.

The only lakeside nursery school in Grosse Pointe — Memorial Nursery — is holding an open house on Wednesday, Feb. 19, from 9 a.m. to noon. The school is located at 16 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms. Call (313) 886-8529 for more information.

University Liggett School will host an open house on Sunday, Feb. 9, from 2 to 4 p.m. Tours, presentations and refreshments will be available at both the Cook Road and Briarcliff Drive campuses in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The ULS primary school (ages 3, 4 through kindergarten), lower school (grades 1 through 5) and upper school (grades 6 through 12) are located at 1045 Cook Road; the middle school (grades 6 through 8) is located at 850 Briarcliff. For more information, call (313) 884-4444.

The Grosse Pointe Academy is holding an open house on Sunday, Feb. 2, from 2 to 4 p.m. Families and friends of prospective students in the metro-Detroit area are all invited to attend. Visitors will learn about the academy's programs, educational philosophies and will tour the campus. Students and their families will be available to answer questions. For more information, call Molly McDermott, director of admissions, at (313) 886-1221. The academy is at 171 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Reunions

The Grosse Pointe South High School class of 1977 is holding an organizational meeting for its upcoming 20th reunion, at 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 2, at Sindbad's Restaurant. Call Pam Kincaid at (313) 371-0187 for more information.

Events

The University of Michigan Men's Glee Club, the second oldest glee club in the United States, will present an 8 p.m. concert on Saturday, Feb. 8, in the Grosse Pointe Community Center for the Performing Arts, 707 Vernier, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Since its founding in 1859, the U-M Men's Glee Club has represented the University both on campus and across the United States and abroad. It has won four first-place awards at the International Musical Eisteddfod in Llangollen, Wales.

SCHOOL NEWS

In recent years, the club has performed through Eastern and Central Europe. Selected by addition, graduate and undergraduate members of the glee club represent a cross section of all academic programs at the university and the majority are non-music majors. The club is directed by Dr. Jerry Blackstone.

The Grosse Pointe concert will feature musical selections from Renaissance motets, Romantic anthems, opera choruses, spiritual and college songs.

The concert is sponsored by the vocal music department at North; proceeds will benefit the choir's trip to Carnegie Hall this May. Tickets are available at the Grosse Pointe North High School main office, at the door the night of the performance or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: U-M Glee Club Tickets, 1636 Blairmoor Court, Grosse Pointe Woods, Mich. 48236. Ticket prices are $8 main floor, $6 balcony and $3 for students. Call Margaret Steele at (313) 343-2239 for more information.

Grosse Pointe North and South high schools are presenting back-to-back winter concerts featuring their bands and orchestras at 8 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 5 and 6, in the Parcels Middle School auditorium.

North's concert on Feb. 5 begins with the symphony orchestra, featuring senior concert master and pianist Chadylaurani on Bach's Piano Concerto No. 5.

The orchestra will also play the Unfinished Symphony by Schubert. North's Symphonic Band will present an original band composition by Jager, the Third Suite, and a popular arrangement of John Williams' symphonic marches.

Grosse Pointe South's band and orchestra follows on Feb. 6, with Handel's Water Music and the Don Giovanni Overture by Mozart. The symphonic band will play the Midway March, Amazing Grace and the Symphonic Dance No. 3 Fiesta.

Trombly Elementary School in Grosse Pointe Park is celebrating its 70th year and organizers of upcoming festivities are seeking alumni. Upcoming events include the "Trombly Post Office" on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at which students can have their postage stamps canceled with the school logo; a springtime supper and silent auction for Friday, May 2, at the Lochmoor Club and a June 6 ice cream social. For more information and to be placed on the mailing list, call Susan Tabert Griffin at (313) 823-2371 or Marjorie Paone at (313) 331-8887.

More than 100 artists will display, sell and compete for cash prizes at the Grosse Pointe South Art Fair from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 15, in the South high gymnasium. The fair will feature fine art and selected crafts in watercolor, oil, fiber, pottery, clay, dried flowers and textiles. Noted local artists Joan Lasher, Michael Derbyshire head the list of participants. A donation of $2 will be collected at the door.

Proceeds go to the South athletic programs and scholarship fund.

Grosse Pointe North High School department chairpersons, counselors and administrators will present information designed to help in course selection, schedule planning and pupil adjustment for students beginning at North in the fall at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 3, in the Grosse Pointe Community Center for the Performing Arts.

After a formal presentation, parents and students will have an opportunity to tour the building, visit classrooms and speak with department chairpersons, teachers and North students.

Contest

The 10th annual Michigan Foot Health Poster Contest is on from now through April 25 and is open to all Michigan students in grades kindergarten through 12th grade. The contest promotes Foot Health Month in April, by challenging students to construct creative posters depicting the importance of proper foot health. The contest is sponsored by the Michigan Foot and Ankle Health Foundation and the Michigan Podiatric Medical Association.

Entrants automatically receive a certificate of recognition and a chance to win cash prizes totaling more than $2,500.

The deadline for entries is Friday, April 25. Posters cannot exceed 16-inches by 20-inches and the phrase "MPMA Foot Health Month, April 1997" must appear on the poster; it must contain a slogan promoting foot health or podiatry. The contestants name, age, address, phone, school, teacher and category must appear on the reverse side of the posters. Categories are K-5, 6-9 and 10-12. Submit entries to the MPMA, 1003 North Washington Ave., Lansing, Mich. 48906. Call (800) 968-6762 for more information.

G.P. teachers ratify four-year agreement

The Grosse Pointe Education Association, representing the Grosse Pointe Public School System's 500 teachers, voted on Jan. 27 to ratify a four-year contract with the school system. Features of the agreement include an approximately 9 percent pay increase to be paid in increments over the life of the contract. Teachers also agreed to a $4 co-pay on health insurance and elementary educators will gain an increase in their planning time.

The board and the union had been bargaining since 1996. The previous employment contract expired on Aug. 31. Next, the school board must approve the contract and is expected to do so at one of its February meetings.

Search for G.P. schools principals continues

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

No sooner does one process end than another begins.

Now that the Grosse Pointe school board has named a new superintendent for the school district serving the five Pointes and a portion of Harper Woods, it must next focus on finding new principals for Defer Elementary and Grosse Pointe South high schools.

And one task likely will be completed faster than the other, board members said.

Defer principal Sheila Turney announced her resignation in late December and completed her last day on Jan. 10.

Retired central office administrator (and former Defer principal) Alfreda Frost is serving as interim principal at Defer.

"Frost has been most generous to the district," said Gene Washchuk, director of personnel for the Grosse Pointe schools. "She can walk in and do anything; she pulls the pieces together very quickly."

The process of finding Turney's replacement has begun and the first round of interviews was held this week. The district hopes to fill that post before the school year ends.

The district postponed initiating a search for South's principal until a new superintendent was found, since that person will need to be involved in the process.

(South principal Mary Beth Herrmann and Superintendent Ed Shine both tendered their resignations at the end of the 1995-96 school year).

In the interim, deputy superintendent Suzanne Klein was appointed superintendent and South assistant principal Russell Luttinen was named principal.

The second round of interviews for the Defer post hasn't been scheduled yet, said Washchuk, director of personnel for the Grosse Pointe schools, but will occur within a reasonable amount of time. He said the district advertised extensively at many universities, through their job placement bulletins.

"Response hasn't been high due to it being the middle of the school year, coupled with the fact that many people are no longer applying for administrative positions," Washchuk said. "It's hard to collect a good aggregate of candidates since many teachers are staying in the classroom and don't necessarily find administrative positions to be desirable ones."

Interest in administrative positions is on the decline, he said, because of the increasing pressure on people in those positions and the extensive amount of hours the job requires.

The pool of candidates at Defer includes three school district employees, one who just left the district for another job, and two candidates from last year's principal search at Kerby Elementary School, said Washchuk.

One or more candidates will then be presented to the superintendent, who will then recommend a finalist to the school board.

North's Opdyke named an outstanding student

Rebecca Opdyke, a Grosse Pointe North senior, has been nominated to compete in the National Principal's Leadership Award Scholarship Program sponsored by the National Association of Secondary School Principals (NASSP).

Opdyke

The Principal's Leadership Award Program is funded by Herff Jones Inc.

Opdyke now advances to the national competition, where 150 PLA winners will be chosen to receive $1,000 college scholarships.

Winners were selected based on their participation in service organizations, clubs and athletics; achievement in the arts and sciences; employment experience; and academic record.

In recognizing leadership in co-curricular activities as well as academic performance, the PLA scholarship helps assert the importance of a well-rounded education. While at Grosse Pointe North, Opdyke has been a National Merit Semi-Finalist, Student Association treasurer, National Honor Society officer, varsity tennis player, first chair flute and piccolo, president of the Valkyries Service Team, president of Close Up, an International Club officer, a member of the Grosse Pointe Public School System K-12 mathematics committee, a volunteer at St. John Hospital, a qualifier for the second part of the Michigan Mathematics competition and has received numerous awards and commendations in math, science, writing, flute and service projects.

Opdyke plans a career in medicine.

Drunk driving arrest made

Grosse Pointe Shores public safety officers arrested a Hazel Park resident Jan. 24 around 3 a.m. for operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol. His license was confiscated and destroyed; he was released eight hours later after posting $500 bond.

Officers first noticed the man driving his 1984 blue two-door Chevrolet north on Lakeshore where he was swerving repeatedly from lane to lane. The 40-year-old man was also driving 20 mph in a 35 mph zone.

Upon stopping him near Willow Tree, officers observed open beer cans in the car. He passed field sobriety tests, but refused to submit to a preliminary breath test.

Cars on Kerby vandalized

Theft or damage to two vehicles parked within the same block of Kerby occurred a few days apart last week. A man in the 300 block reported to Grosse Pointe Farms public safety officers that the driver's side mirror was broken off his 1994 Subaru sometime between Jan. 22 at 5 p.m. and Jan. 23 at 6:15 p.m.

On Jan. 25, a woman, also in the 300 block of Kerby, reported that the license plate had been stolen from her 1988 Toyota Camry. She said her car was parked in front of her residence when the theft occurred sometime between noon and 1 p.m. Police continue to investigate both matters.

Thieves rob home in City

A woman residing in the 900 block of Rivard reported to City of Grosse Pointe public safety officers that her home had been broken into Jan. 24, sometime between 5 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

In that short time, thief(s) removed a screen and broke out a window at the back of the home to gain entrance. They exited from the front door, taking with them the woman's television, VCR and assorted jewelry. Police are investigating the incident.

Batty party

City of Grosse Pointe detectives are seeking a warrant for aggravated assault against a 25-year-old male resident who allegedly struck a 23-year-old male with a wooden baseball bat, causing the 23-year-old to sustain a laceration to the head near his ear.

Two calls from people in the 500 block of St. Clair came into the police station on Jan. 26 around 3:40 a.m. reporting hearing and witnessing a fight ensuing outside.

The alleged assault was apparently prompted when guest(s) got out of hand, pushing a woman, at a house party held in the 17000 block of St. Paul.

Phoned-in felon

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers, while investigating several reports of thefts of cellular telephones in the 1000-1200 blocks of Balfour on Sunday, Jan. 26, at about 4 a.m. saw a man walking in the area. When they stopped the man to question him, they discovered he was in possession of three cell phones that were stolen in the past few hours.

The suspect was charged with three counts of breaking and entering, auto, by the Wayne County prosecutor's office. His bond was set after the Grosse Pointe News press time.

Home invasion

A family in the 1700 block of Bournemouth reported to Woods police on Monday, Jan. 20, between 11 a.m. and 10 p.m., someone entered their home and stole their VCR, worth an estimated $400.

Entry to the home was gained by smashing a window pane in the back door. When police searched the house, they found that the family's dresser drawers had been opened and searched. Nothing else appeared to be missing.

All blocked up

A Woods resident reported to police on Friday, Jan. 24, that two of his car's tires and wheel rims were stolen from his car while it was parked on Jackson between Hunt Club and Lochmoor.

Large cinder blocks were used to hold the car up after the wheels were stolen. The incident took place between 7 a.m. and 11 p.m. Friday.

One for the X-Files

Grosse Pointe Woods police received a report of a UFO heading west at about 2:24

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

a.m., Tuesday, Jan. 21. Officers receiving the report were told that a bright red light was heading west. The officers then went outside and checked the sky and indeed did see some sort of red light, described as brighter than a star, heading west launching what appeared to be fireworks.

Another officer on patrol called in to headquarters to report that he saw a red light in the sky as well. He said that it was heading west, but making sudden turns while doing so.

At this time, Woods officers have not determined what the light was.

Snow job

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers on Friday, Jan. 24 were called to investigate several thefts from garages that occurred overnight on the evening of Thursday, Jan. 23, on the blocks of Balfour and Berkshire.

They visited the home in the 3500 block of Somerset of a man previously arrested for similar crimes.

Tracks found in the snow in front of the suspects home showed that a snowblower had recently been pushed in the drive and inside the suspect's home. Detectives were let into the home by a relative of the suspect, who was found hiding in the basement. The suspect later told the police that he committed the thefts, but had already sold the items for drugs. A search warrant was executed, and a stolen car was found in the suspect's garage. The suspect is being held on $100,000 bond in the Wayne County jail.

Manners, patience will make our roads safer

As a young man, John Larson was a guy in a hurry. Slower drivers, road hogs, anyone who didn't live up to his own highway standards irritated him to the point that he blew past them, used his brights, or found other ways to express his indignation.

Today the medical doctor and manager of the Institute of Stress Medicine in Norwalk, Conn., is preaching patience. And using it.

"When I began driving — an exercise I love — I drove like my dad: fast, setting rigorous driving goals, and I became furious at the stupidity of some drivers," said Larson.

Deeply involved for many years in research in stress and heart attacks, Larson has increased the scope of his work to include anger and irrational driving, and what he calls "road rage."

Last year he published "Steering Clear of Highway Madness," subtitled "A Driver's Guide to Curbing Stress and Strain."

While we all get annoyed with other drivers at least some of the time, most of us don't get swept away by our anger on a regular basis.

Losing control, Larson said, may start with a simple everyday incident in which we are annoyed by another driver and express it in words, facial contortions or other physical movement.

"The person who feels increased anger and takes

Autos

By Jenny King

steps with his or her vehicle to somehow harass, inconvenience or interfere with the other driver is taking a real chance," Larson said from his office in Norwalk. "Your (future) actions now depend on the other driver's response."

By this second stage, he said, we've already crossed the line from rationality to a kind of madness. Some drivers take it to a third and even more dangerous plateau, which is to use their vehicles to inflict damage on another driver.

The AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety in Washington claims aggressive road manners are becoming a serious problem. The foundation says a recent study shows that rude, forceful driving is increasing and has, since 1990, been growing at a rate of about 7 percent a year. Foundation president David Willis has suggested Larson's behavior modification suggestions should be practiced by certain kinds of unsafe drivers.

In his book, Larson has categorized five types of drivers who are likely to cross the line. They include:

- The speeder, who must make good time, no matter what;
- The competitor, who is determined to be the first to the finish line;
- The passive/aggressor, who feels he or she loses status by giving way — and therefore won't;
- The narcissist, who thinks everyone should be just like him or her and is incensed when others aren't;
- The vigilante, a driver who is a self-appointed police officer, judge and jury, with the right to punish other drivers.

My own guess is that there's a little of all of the above in each of us. Fortunately, few of us begin to use our cars and trucks as tools or weapons, but who doesn't get irritated and make faces or grumble out loud about the driving habits of others.

And how about those highway stereotypes we enjoy? Younger person in a backwards baseball cap: must be a rude, fast and careless driver. Woman in a fur coat driving a luxury sedan: probably is more concerned about the next benefit ball than her driving. Middle-aged guy in a sport utility talking on the phone: likely to drive too fast on residential streets and wants to be the first to the best parking place. Older person in a conservative sedan: molasses in January was never this slow.

Larson said we rely on those stereotypes and on our personal experience when we notice other drivers, especially those whose behavior we find annoying. We fill in the blanks and imagine who they are and what they are up to.

The five dangerous types of drivers may be more prone to do that and come up with rather unflattering pictures of you and me as they pass us on an icy road or block us with intentionally slow driving or yell at us when we make a mistake.

Larson has some behavior modification ideas for drivers who lose control. They comprise learning to take more time, to be more understanding and to avoid taking slights personally.

For the speeder, Larson points out that the faster we go, the less we perceive. This relates to all facets of our lives, not just driving. The implication for driving is, of course, that we miss important sensory cues — sights and sounds that help us get where we are going in a safe manner. Not only are we more likely to have trouble finding our car keys when we're rushing, we are at greater risk of not seeing someone pulling onto the road ahead of us or of driving right past our freeway exit.

Larson suggests allow more time for our driving trips: up to 50 percent more time. "I remember the first occasion on which I decided to drive a long distance at a 50 to 60 mph speed, rather than my usual 70 to 75 mph," he said. "I decided to take my time, enjoy the beautiful fall colors and share my thoughts with my wife."

The time flew by, he said, the trip was more pleasant and less stressful. It didn't take a great deal longer to cover the same distance. He became a convert to slowing down.

All behavior changes must be rehearsed and constantly practiced, he said.

"I also believe that a system of driver safety report cards might help make our roads safer," Larson said. With this plan, we each would have an opportunity to do report cards on poor drivers and send them in to state motor vehicle departments.

It smacks of the vigilante, Larson admits, but it's not punishing in nature. He laments the anti-police mentality many of us cherish as a kind of tradition. We need a good system to help us develop more driving responsibility.

He also suggests finding good driver role models. We all have role models, he said.

"Unfortunately, they may be like the Mel Gibson character in the movie Road Warrior," he said. Or we get ideas from the driving styles in television ads featuring beautiful new cars zipping along curving mountain roads, then disappearing into dark tunnels.

Larson's dad was his driver role model, and as a salesman back in the 1930s and 1940s,

Michigan receives a B- in '96 'Rating the States' survey

Michigan has earned a B- in the battle against drunken driving. This is based on a survey released by Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), Advocates for Highway and Auto Safety, and Nationwide Insurance.

The 1996 "Rating the States" survey evaluated each state's efforts to tackle drunk driving — the nation's most frequently committed violent crime.

Michigan earned a B- in the 1996 survey, compared to the nation's overall grade of C.

Report cards evaluated each state and the nation's performance in 11 key alcohol-related safety areas, comparing the progress made since MADD's 1993 survey.

The report card for Michigan includes the following grades in the 11 categories which resulted in the overall grade of B-.

In 1993, Michigan received an overall grade of C.

More than half of the state's grade was based on two categories: data from the federal Fatal Accident Reporting System (FARS) and legislation.

The emphasis on these categories reflects the priority MADD puts on anti-drunken driving laws and in the bottom line measure of a state's performance: Reducing the number of people killed and injured in alcohol-related crashes.

Ten percent of the grade was based on law enforcement and 6 percent was based on victim issues.

The remaining categories accounted for between 3 and 5 percent of the state's grade.

Don Valone, chairperson of MADD, urges Michigan residents to take notice of the survey results.

"The safety of the driving public is threatened by a complacent attitude toward drunken driving. America is a mobile society where families and individuals cross state lines every day," Valone said.

MADD emphasized that alcohol-related traffic deaths increased in 1995 across the nation for the first time in more than a decade.

Surveys like "Rating the States," the group says, can help recapture the nation's attention regarding this crime which claimed 17,274 lives and injured nearly one million others last year.

In Michigan, approximately 566 people were killed and 15,905 others were injured in alcohol-related traffic crashes in 1995.

Results of the national

"Rating the States" survey were unveiled during a news conference in Washington, D.C., while MADD leaders across the country held news conferences to announce state report cards.

This is the third time MADD has conducted the survey. MADD surveyed the nation for the first time in 1991 and again in 1993, when Michigan received a C grade.

Without passage of key legislation such as a lower Blood Alcohol Content (BAC) limit of .08, MADD asserts Michigan could continue to see increased deaths and injuries due to drunken driving.

A recent study released by the Boston University School of Public Health showed that if all states passed at .08, highway deaths would be reduced by a minimum of 500 per year — a crucial step for MADD's mission.

Chairperson Valone reiterated that MADD's legislative goals have not been met, even though Michigan scored well in the survey.

Valone said MADD will be working to pass the lower .08 BAC legislation in the next legislative session; .08 is pending in the State Senate Judiciary Committee.

Full senate vote is not expected this session. The group is already working with lawmakers to find support for the legislation.

The 1996 questionnaire was mailed to each MADD state organization, which completed the survey with information provided by appropriate state governmental agencies.

After evaluating the data from each state survey, a panel of individuals known for their expertise and involvement in highway safety completed the state report cards by assigning letter grades for each category and for the state overall.

To receive a copy of the 1996 "Rating the States" survey, contact the Public Policy Department at the MADD, National Office at (214) 744-6233.

it was important for him to get places as quickly as possible. Time was of the essence.

"He was obsessed with 'making good time,' Larson recalls. 'I vividly remember riding with my father the 36 miles from our Wisconsin home to St. Paul, Minn.'

"Perched on the edge of the seat, both hands on the dashboard, I felt excitement and fear as he rushed along the narrow, winding, two-lane 1930s highway."

Like father, like son, he said. But the buck stopped with him. Larson says his own son once wore a football helmet during a drive. "It was his way of letting me know that the way I drove could result in an accident and affect his life."

The Road Warrior story is about uncivilized behavior. Larson points out that because human beings have been living, eating and working together for millennia, we've developed some manners and courtesies.

"We've only been driving together for about 90 years, so it's still uncivilized," he says.

Proposed Congregational Church

This is an architect's sketch of the edifice which the Grosse Pointe Congregational Church plans to erect soon on its property on St. Paul between Neff and St. Clair. The large plot of land, which includes considerable frontage on Neff Road, was given to the church by Dexter M. Ferry Jr. Future plans call for additions to the original unit. The Rev. Charles W. Scheid is pastor of the church, which now has 250 members. (Grosse Pointe News, Jan. 30, 1947)

Treasury inflation-bonds were offered Wednesday

By Joseph Mengden

As announced last week, the Treasury auctioned off $7.5 billion 10-year "indexed" notes Wednesday, Jan. 29. The offering details were pretty close to what we described three weeks ago (see LTS, Jan. 9).

Mengden

When bond dealers started trading last week, the "real" interest rate, the rate after inflation, sank as low as 3-1/4 percent. It climbed later, ending Friday at the 3.49-3.50 percent level, about what LTS forecasted Jan. 9.

The Treasury announced the results of the bidding this morning, including the details for all "non-competitive bids." LTS and most commentators urged individuals not to purchase these notes, except in tax-deferred accounts, because the semi-annual price adjustment in the principal amount of the notes is taxable interest income, even though no cash is received on this "phantom" income. Many money managers plan to purchase these notes as part of the "fixed income" portion of an asset-allocated tax-deferred account, such as an IRA roll-over.

Stock market has jitters

The Dow Jones Industrial (DJI) index peaked over 6,900 early last Thursday, but quickly erased not only the 56-point gain to that time, but tanked another 94 points, on an all-time record NYSE daily volume of 683.8 million shares. Friday was another roller-coaster day. By mid-afternoon, the DJI had retreated some 93 points, only to rally back to minus 10 points, then suffer another burst of selling to close off 59 points.

Overall, for last week, the DJI correction cost 136 points, or 2 percent, on weekly volume of 2.8 billion (yes, billion!), another record. For January, NYSE volume will probably average 500 million shares a day, compared to an average 411 million shares a day in 1996 and 302 million in 1992.

Let's talk...STOCKS

Why the sell-off? The most common reasons cited are rising interest rates and the advancing dollar (up 3 percent against the Japanese yen this year, and up 6 percent against the German mark). The 30-year Treasury bond yield is at its highest level in nearly four months, 6.99 percent last Friday vs. 6.35 percent in early December 1996.

The advancing dollar equates to an equal decline in the foreign currency being traded. Which means trouble for U.S. multi-national companies when they convert their exports into $U.S., with earnings reduced by the negative currency adjustments. The opposite works in favor of foreign companies whose products are being imported into the U.S. Without changing sales prices, these foreigners will increase earnings when they convert the dollars received into their local currencies. Currently, almost 30 percent of the goods bought by U.S. consumers come from foreign producers.

Byron Wien, the domestic strategist at Morgan Stanley, says, "This isn't the end of the bull market, it's a normal pull-back, nothing more." But two other strategists, Jeffrey Applegate of Lehman Brothers and Hugh Johnson of First Albany, have reduced the equity allocations in their model portfolios. Translated, that means, "Taking some profits by selling some stocks, and real-locating the proceeds, probably, to cash equivalents."

Taking stock

Since this is January, going on February, it's that time of year for you to "take stock" of your assets. You will be amazed to see how much your equity (stocks) allocation has grown. Maybe, you should think about reducing the present equity percentage back to its percentage level a year ago? After setting aside the capital gains taxes, you might consider some triple tax-exempt Michigan Municipal Bonds, which yield 4-1/2 to 5 percent in the 10-year maturity range?

Perpetual bonds

Last week LTS featured an article on "100-year bonds," also called "century bonds." But that's not all, there is also one issue of perpetual bonds, the Canadian Pacific 4 percent perpetual consolidated debenture stock, issued in 1921, with interest paid in U.S. funds. These $174 million bonds, which trade infrequently in the NYSE bond room, are rated BBB+ by Standard & Poor's.

The S&P Bond Guide shows a recent price of 58, which produces a "current yield" (also called a "stock yield," or "dividend yield") of 6.9 percent, about the same as 30-year Treasuries. Note that even though these "perpetuals" pay semi-annual interest, they have no sinking fund, no call or redemption provisions and no maturity. A word to the wise: "Individuals don't buy perpetuals!"

If you really think about it, the U.S. paper money in your wallet, called "Federal Reserve Notes," is actually a debt of the Federal Reserve, which has no maturity and pays no interest. Little wonder why it goes in and out of your wallet so fast!

Business People

Grosse Pointe Woods resident Mark C. Yuhn has been named international product manager at Urban Science. Yuhn will direct worldwide sales and marketing activities for "gain" — the company's new predictive modeling software and related consulting services. The gain software uses an advanced statistical analysis technology which allows direct marketers to create highly accurate customer profiles identifying and rating the likelihood that prospects will purchase a particular product.

Prior to being named to his new position, Yuhn had worked on the company's General Motors account. Before joining Urban Science in 1988, Yuhn was a senior cost accountant with General Motors Corporation. Yuhn holds both a bachelors and master's degrees in business administration from the University of Michigan.

City of Grosse Pointe resident Glenn W. Watson has rejoined the Detroit-based investment securities firm of Roney & Co. as its director of fixed income. He comes to the firm from McDonald & Company Securities, where he was a senior vice president in the investment banking group in Cleveland. In his newly-created position, Watson will be responsible for Roney & Co.'s public and structured finance group, municipal trading and underwriting and corporate and government bond trading.

Grosse Pointe Shores resident Sue Unger was recently among only eight individuals appointed by Michigan Gov. John Engler to a newly created State Court Information Management Commission. All of these appointments expire Dec. 26, 1998.

Unger, is Chief Information officer for the Chrysler Corporation. She was appointed to represent the general public. The Commission will link data among all state courts, the Department of State, the Michigan State Police, the Family Independence Agency, the Friend of the Court Office, the Department of Management and Budget, the Department of Treasury, and all prosecuting attorneys and any other agency designated by the Commission. It will make a detailed recommendation to the Supreme Court, the Legislature and the Governor to the design, implementation and operation of a computerized information management system.

Grosse Pointe Park resident Julie Jackson was recently named branch manager of Manpower's Detroit office directing recruiting, marketing and sales efforts and day-to-day operations. Joining Manpower in 1995, she is a Grand Blanc native, and graduated with an organizational communications degree from Western Michigan University. As the world's largest temporary help firm, Manpower sends nearly 1.5 million people on assignment to its 300,000 customers from more than 2,200 offices in 41 countries.

Grosse Pointe Woods resident Karen Kaleal, branch manager of Manpower's Troy office, was named the company's Quality Employee of the Year. She has been with Manpower since 1994. She held teaching positions prior to that, after graduating with a bachelor's degree in psychology from Wayne State University. As the world's largest temporary help firm, Manpower sends nearly 1.5 million people on assignment to its 300,000 customers from more than 2,200 offices in 41 countries.

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Tim Flanagan was appointed first vice president of the Michigan Chapter of the American Public Works Association on Jan. 1, 1997. Flanagan is a representative of Unique Paving Materials Corporation. The Michigan Chapter consists of more than 900 members in 10 branches around the state.

Grosse Pointe Woods resident Thomas M. Cullen recently was promoted to director of the Detroit office of Automotive Marketing Consultants, Inc. (AMCI). Cullen had been affiliated with the West Coast operations of AMCI. Cullen will oversee the company's current business with the domestic automakers and direct its new business activities in Detroit. Based in San Diego and Detroit, AMCI designs and executes product testing, marketing and training programs consulting for import and domestic automotive manufacturers.

Grosse Pointe Park resident Martin X. Petz, president of Communications Creative, was chosen to handle the advertising, public relations and promotions for the Michigan All Morgan Horse Show to be held at the Michigan State Fairgrounds in July 1997. This four-day show will feature more than 400 horses, and is the fourth largest of its kind in the United States. Communications Creative is a full service advertising, public relations and marketing firm located in Grosse Pointe Park.

The Metro East Chamber of Commerce is off to a good start for 1997. We have many plans set in place and others just waiting to commence.

THE LONG GOODBYE

The luxury tax has been the object of scorn by automobile manufacturers and car buyers alike since its inception in 1990. In 1993, the tax was lifted from boats and other luxury items, but remained firmly attached to cars. Now, all that is slowly coming to an end. An amendment attached to the recently signed Small Business Job Protection Act/Minimum Wage Bill calls for the luxury tax to be phased out by 2003. The bill lowers the tax rate for automobiles costing more than $34,000 to nine percent for the remainder of 1996, to eight percent on January 1, 1997, and lowers it one percent every year thereafter until the termination date of December 31, 2002. The bill contains a technical amendment to adjust the tax threshold (from the original $30,000 to $34,000) for inflation.

When you are considering purchasing a car, you are considering a significant investment, which is why we do everything we can to help you find just the right car for you. Plante & Moran to host business, leadership seminar

Plante & Moran, LLP, a Michigan-based public accounting and management consulting firm, will host The Masters Forum — a year-long executive education program geared to business owners, directors and senior managers. Plante & Moran is bringing The Masters Forum to Michigan following a nine-year history of success in Minneapolis.

The precursor to The Masters Forum, entitled Tomorrowday was presented by Plante & Moran in April 1996 to a sellout audience of 1,000 and featured speakers, including author and futurist, Alvin Toffler.

The Masters Forum, which will be offered at the Management Education Center in Troy beginning February 1997, features acclaimed thinkers in business and leadership management who take participants beyond conventional wisdom to formulate strategies for professional and personal success.

The Masters Forum roster of experts includes:

- Lester Thurow, economist and author of "The Future of Capitalism."
- James Collins, a four-time winner of Stanford University's Distinguished Teaching Award, now a consultant and author of "Built to Last: Successful Habits of Visionary Companies."
- Richard Ross, an expert on systems thinking, the foundational skill necessary for building a learning organization.

- Tom Morris, Notre Dame ethicist and professor, combines age-old philosophies with modern thinking to create a practical plan for contemporary success.
- Michael Treacy, best-selling author and consultant, offers strategies to help companies who have fought to get the top to stay there.
- Adrian Slywotzky, a strategist, focuses on growth and profit opportunities via value migration.

- Judith Bardwick, University of Michigan, Ph.D. and former associate dean, describes how to shift unproductive motives into positive ones, ridding organizations and individuals of an "entitlement mentality."
- Dennis Prager, a Southern California-based radio talk-show host address the subversion of basic values that were once unanimously accepted concepts of American life.

Full-year tuition, including all course materials, follow-up materials and audio tapes of each session, is $2,400. Fees for one semester are $1,400. Interested individuals should contact Melanie Ceo at (810) 827-0346 for a brochure and registration information.

Business Notes

Wine tasting to benefit abused, homeless animals

The Michigan Anti-Cruelty Society will host a benefit wine tasting at the Rattlesnake Club, located at the Stroh's Riverplace in Detroit on Saturday, Feb. 8, 1997 at 7 p.m.

A limited number of tickets are available for this event for a forty dollar per person minimum donation. All proceeds benefit the homeless and abused animals at the shelter and are tax deductible to the extent provided by law.

For tickets or additional information, call (313) 884-6449.

Workshop to be given: How to start, run a business

Wayne State University, School of Business Administration, Professional Development Division, will be offering Workshops on how to start or run a small business.

These two-hour long workshops are free and open to the public. Mr. Ed King, MBA, CPA and author has over 20 years of small business consulting experience.

Some of the topics participants will learn include:

- 10 hottest businesses of 1997
- 20 biggest pitfalls in starting/running a small business
- how to start with very little cash
- how to price a product or service
- why four out of five businesses don't last five years.

Workshops will be held:

- Saturday, Feb. 1, 9:30 a.m., Marriot Hotel, Troy
- Tuesday, Feb. 4, 7:30 p.m., Best Western, Sterling Heights
- Thursday, Feb. 6, 7:30 p.m., Holiday Inn Fairlane, Dearborn
- Saturday, Feb. 8, 9:30 a.m., Marriot Hotel, Troy.

Accounting and auditing conference to be held Feb. 6.

The Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants (MACPA) presents the Winter Accounting and Auditing Conference on Thursday, Feb. 6 from 7:50 a.m. to 4:50 p.m. at the Michigan State University Management Education Center in Troy.

Participants can choose from 15 general breakout sessions including Unconventional Accounting, Evaluation of Internal Control, Assurance Services and What's New on the Internet.

For those who like to get an early start and earn extra CPA hours, there are two "early-bird" sessions from which to choose.

Cost of the conference, which qualifies for up to nine accounting and auditing CPE hours, is $130.

For more information, contact the MACPA Conference Department at (810) 855-2288, call our fax at (810) 626-3793 for access to information, or visit our Internet home page at <http://www.michcpa.org>.

Grosse Pointe family is model of togetherness

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

The family that plays together stays together, so the saying goes.

In the case of the Selvaggio family — owners of Pointe Dairy Services Inc. — they not only play together, they also work together. And they've proved plenty of staying power.

The family is in business together, takes an annual vacation together, celebrates birthdays and holidays together and shares many of the same hobbies.

Hard to miss are the hundreds of framed family photographs displayed in the Grosse Pointe Shores home of Tony Selvaggio, 47, and his wife Theresa.

There is a group shot of about 30 Curis family members (that's Theresa Selvaggio's maiden name) vacationing together in Hawaii last year and Puerto Rico the year before. Theresa, Tony, and their kids join her siblings and their kids, and her parents for the annual trips. In the photos, they all genuinely look pleased to be vacationing together.

Like Tony, Theresa came from a close-knit family of seven. In addition, her grandparents lived with the family when she was growing up.

On the wall are not only photos of Tony and Theresa's three daughters: Stephanie, 13; Christina, 9; and Elizabeth, 4; but just as many photos of the children of Tony's brothers and sisters, Alex, 46; Johanna, 42, who both live in St. Clair Shores; Sara, 41, who lives in Grosse Pointe Woods; and Joe Jr., 40, who lives in Romeo.

Joe Jr. and his wife Marjorie spent last Saturday afternoon at Tony and Theresa's home in the Shores. Their kids were excited about playing with their cousins, who they see frequently.

They get together for an annual trick-or-treat outing at Halloween with 30 or more Selvaggios; Christmas dinner for 75 Selvaggios; or the Selvaggio family summer reunion in Grosse Pointe Shores park, which attracts about 75 for sack races, egg tosses and . . . more family togetherness.

All trophies given at the event were undoubtedly produced by St. Clair Shores-based Radke Hardware, owned by Marjorie's family. She too comes from a large, close-knit family.

Next to framed photographs, the family room shelves also contain models of motorcycles. Tony, Alex, and Joe Jr. all own Harley Davidson Heritage bikes — big touring bikes, Joe Jr. explained.

For the past five summers, the three brothers joined more than two-dozen other Harley fans from the state of Michigan and from around the country for a ride around South Dakota — Harley heaven.

But on this past summer's trip, the brothers witnessed Joe Jr. endure a terrible accident in which he broke his left leg in three places, four ribs and two cervical vertebrae. Joe Jr. is healing fine, but he gave up his motorcycle. At least one brother, Tony, followed suit. Alex is holding on to his bike, but Theresa and Marjorie say that's because Alex doesn't have a wife "to knock some sense into him."

The Selvaggio brothers also share their passion for cruising Lake St. Clair in their jointly-purchased speed boat that brother Alex keeps in St. Clair Shores.

The three brothers' offices are just down the hall from each other at Troy-based Pointe Dairy Services Inc. Tony is president, Alex is secretary, and Joe Jr. is treasurer. Their sister Sara runs the order department. First cousin Sal Rubino runs the warehouse operations.

Sounds like an atmosphere where one could be very comfortable . . . maybe even complacent?

Comfortable, loved, and supported but definitely not complacent, the Selvaggio brothers said.

"We push each other hard; we tell each other 'you can do better,'" Tony said.

People who are not blood related or related by marriage to the Selvaggios are welcomed easily into the family fold. Their company has many employees who have enjoyed the familial atmosphere so much they have stayed 20-plus years.

In the case of employee Charlie DiGrande, who retired last year with 19 years of service to Pointe Dairy, he returned.

"He said he missed everyone," Tony said, adding that DiGrande, a former driver, now trains other drivers.

The Selvaggio's successful wholesale dairy and food distributing company, which was started in 1968 by their father, Joe Selvaggio Sr., is celebrating its 29th year in business.

They are moving the business March 15 to a 34,000 square-foot facility, also located in Troy. It will allow them to consolidate their warehouses and distribution center under one roof. Previous locations have included another site in Troy, and one in Madison Heights.

For years, they have had a fleet of trucks. Pointe Dairy started by delivering milk only. Joe Sr. had just one truck. While he worked out of his home on Muir Road in Grosse Pointe Farms, selling milk on a one-man route, his son Tony delivered it daily.

Because of the difference in age of the sons, it took a few years before all three were an integral part of Pointe Dairy.

When Tony and Alex were just barely teens, Joe Jr. was a kindergarten. Back then, the age gap showed.

"Alex and I used to put Joe in a box with a football helmet, and push him down the stairs in our home," Tony said, describing their boyish shenanigans.

Each of the three sons grew up, then tried his hand at driving delivery trucks, setting up milk in the stores, and working the phones, thus making sales.

The company now operates six days a week and services more than 700 accounts, said Tony, the eldest offspring of Joe Sr., 77, and his wife, Beatrice, 74, who now live in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Complacent? No. Pointe Dairy is likely responsible for stocking your favorite grocery store with the milk, butter, eggs, orange juice, ice cream, croissants, cheese and more items that you purchase each week. They distribute about 30 product lines and count hundreds of different flavors and sizes of items.

In addition to servicing independent grocery stores (including the Village Market, Mulier's Market and Yorkshire Market in the Grosse Pointes), they also service catering groups, hospitals, school systems, fruit markets, party and convenience stores, restaurants. They used to serve the Wayne County jail.

Family cousin Nino Selvaggio uses their distributing service for his St. Clair Shores-based market.

Complacent? No. The Selvaggios recently decided to step beyond the distribution of other people's products. For the first time, they will make their own product.

In mid-October last year they formed Quality Juice and Beverage Corp. and launched Wild Orchard fruit juices.

It is the first of the new-age fruit juices to originate from this area, and be solely owned and marketed by a southeastern Michigan company, Tony said.

Since October, most of the 11 flavors of Wild Orchard fruit juice have been introduced to southeastern Michigan consumers.

Next week, they will release panda bear papaya. There are no panda bears in the juice, of course. Rather, all the flavors' labels carry a picture of an animal with colorful graphics.

Other flavors include aardvark

Less weight feels great

By Susanne Consiglio
Special Writer

The new year has arrived and if you're like most people, it's time to get started on a healthy diet to lose those five to seven pounds that have been sneaking up to your waistline since the Thanksgiving holiday.

Year after year we hear of friends and loved ones going on strict Jan. 1 diets, rigid to the point of coming to an end by February or sooner.

How do we get started?
By establishing goals that are realistic enough to live with day after day. It's not just about calorie and fat gram counting. It's learning how to develop motivation so that food is not the primary reward in life. You may simply eat out of habit and comfort without realizing this.

There is no need to starve yourself. Anyone who has tried the "famine diet" knows that it won't last much longer than a few days. Instead of dieting, which is a short-term approach, think of making changes that can last each month.

Of course you won't be perfect, as we all get off track, but you will have a much better chance of losing weight and keeping it off.

A steady weight loss of only 5-7 pounds a month, starting in January, can result in a loss of 35 to 50 pounds by July.

The Right Foods

Get to know the groups. Out of all the food groups, the fruits and vegetables seem to be the least consumed on a daily basis. Not wild about the taste? Why not try baked or roasted veggies or do more stir-frying, which is quick and easy in a non-stick frying pan.

Of course this is the time of year to enjoy hearty vegetable soups. Fruit can also be added to muffins. The more popular food groups are the breads/starches, proteins, and of course the fats. We need these food groups, but we also need to reduce the portion size, even if they are a healthier version. Enjoy your meals and have less of them.

Behavior tips for the new year

1. Focus on making small, gradual changes resulting in a weight loss goal of five pounds a month.
2. Get into the breakfast habit, even if it's only juice and fruit.
3. Eat a vegetarian meal at least once a week. Try rice and beans, lentils and noodles.
4. Drink more water. It's good for your skin and digestive system.
5. Leave a few bites on the plate when eating out, or bring half of your meal home.
6. Skip desserts in restaurants.
7. Sneak in 15 minutes of walking or other activity daily.
8. Choose lean protein foods: trim the fat and reduce the portion size. For reference, a deck of cards is a 4-ounce portion.
9. Stop eating at least two hours before going to bed at night.
10. Replace fat free cookies with fruit, yogurt or raw veggies during the daytime. It's a great way to cut down on "hidden calories."

Thanks for giving

Geri Hendrick of St. Clair Shores and Matthew Kucinski of Grosse Pointe Farms were among 10 volunteers from the tri-county area to receive special honors at the annual "Thanks for Giving" banquet held recently.

Volunteers from health care organizations were honored at the recent event which was hosted by honorary chairman Chuck Gaidica of Grosse Pointe Shores and WDIV-TV weatherman.

Hendrick began volunteering at age 80, six years ago, and currently devotes 190 hours a month to the hospital.

Kucinski is a senior at DeLaSalle High School who averages 30 hours of volunteering each week at the hospital and the St. John Surgery Center in St. Clair Shores.

Bon Secours offers heart screening

Bon Secours Hospital will offer a heart health screening that includes total cholesterol, HDL (good cholesterol), triglycerides and glucose levels using the lipid profile check and the Heart Test risk questionnaire.

You will receive your results within minutes and a health promotion specialist will consult with you to discuss how to decrease your risk. Recommendations will be provided for follow-up programs.

Heart health evaluations will be offered from 8 to 9:30 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 6 in the Bon Brae Center, 22300 Bon Brae in St. Clair Shores. The cost is $25 a person.

A 12-hour fast is necessary for test results to be accurate. To schedule an appointment, call (810) 779-7900 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Treatment is available for seasonal affective disorder (SAD)

Seasonal affective disorder (SAD) is a form of depression with symptoms that occur during the winter months, usually going into remission during the spring and summer.

Although it was first noted before 1845, it has only received wide public attention in the last decade or so.

Causes

It has long been known that sunlight, as it peaks and ebbs over the year, affects many animals' seasonal activities, such as hibernation or reproductive cycles.

Apparently, humans are no exception.

Researchers have tied SAD to melatonin, a sleep-related hormone that the human pineal gland produces and releases in the dark. Production of the hormone seems particularly active during winter, when the days are shorter and darker.

In 1980, a researcher named Dr. Alfred Lewy discovered that very bright light blocks the release of melatonin in people — and relieves winter depression. Patients generally respond to bright light therapy within four days of starting treatment — relapsing within four days after stopping the therapy.

Because so many people respond to bright light treatment, it's assumed that light has an antidepressant effect, and there have been no research findings to indicate anything to the contrary. A definite link between the patient's response and the way light affects melatonin, however, has not yet been established.

The disorder usually begins in early adulthood, and four times as many women as men are affected. For most people with SAD, January and February are the worst months.

Symptoms

The symptoms for SAD are rather specific to avoid misdiagnosis for other depressive disorders. They are:

- Regularly occurring symptoms of depression (sad, anxious or "empty" moods, decreased energy and interest, etc.) during the fall/winter months of at least three different years — two of them consecutively.

- At least three times as many instances of depression within a two-month time frame as during other times of the year.

- No other factors that could account for regular changes of mood (become unemployed every winter, etc.)

- Excessive eating and sleeping; weight gain.

Treatment

Phototherapy (light treatment, or therapy) has been effective in relieving SAD. Patients are seated three feet away from a full-spectrum fluorescent light (about 12 times brighter than ordinary room light) and asked to glance at it about once a minute. The only side effects it seems to cause are occasional eyestrain and headaches.

This article was prepared by the National Mental Health Association.

Suggestions for coping with SAD

- Discuss symptoms with your physician. You may be referred to a psychiatrist who may diagnose seasonal affective disorder, SAD, or subsyndromal SAD, and prescribe special light treatments to help relieve your symptoms. Some new anti-depressants are also helpful in treating some people with seasonal depression.

- If you have a medical diagnosis of SAD or subsyndromal SAD, and your doctor prescribes light treatment, do not skip or shorten treatment because you're feeling better — you may relapse.

- Get as much light as possible and avoid dark environments during daylight hours in winter.

- Allow natural light to shine through open windows and doors when temperatures are moderate.

- Reduce mild winter depressive symptoms by exercising daily, outdoors when possible.

- Stay on a regular sleep/wake schedule.

- Consider going without sunglasses except in very bright sunlight or decrease amount of time wearing them.

- Arrange family outings and social occasions for day times and early evening in winter.

- Try putting lights on a timer in your bedroom set to switch on 1/2 hour or more before awakening.

- Postpone making major life changes until spring or summer when possible.

Tuesday Musicales presents concerts

Tuesday Musicales of Detroit will continue its 1996-97 season with two February concerts in the Fries Ballroom of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The first concert will be at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 4. Grosse Pointer Carole Dolan will be chairman of the day. Emily Austin will be the general program chairman.

Christa Grix, harpist, will perform Sonata in D by John Parry and Impromptu Caprice by G. Piere.

Mary Sturman Nolmes, of Grosse Pointe, pianist, will play Nocturne No. 6, Op. 63 by Gabriel Faure and the first movement of Sonata No. 6, Op. 82 by Sergei Prokofiev.

Next, in this 200th year commemorating the birth of Franz Schubert, pianist Mary Siciliano and guest violinist Lillian Scheirich will present Sonata in A Major, Op. 162 by Schubert.

The closing selection will be the Trio in G minor, Op. 63, by Carl Maria Von Weber, presented by Helen Near, flutist; Karen Wingert, cellist; and Ruth Burczyk, pianist.

Tuesday Musicales's eighth morning concert, at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 18, is dedicated to American music. Marian Parkins will be chairman of the day.

The program will begin with "Recipe Number One," composed by Tuesday Musicales member Geraldine Schwartz, and performed by Sylvia Starkman, oboist; Claudia Hook, violinist; and Ruth Burczyk, pianist.

Pianist Marian Parkins will perform Sonata in E Major by Alexander Reinagle and "Seven Anniversaries" by Leonard Bernstein.

Violinist Victoria Haltom and cellist Nadine Deleury will perform "Close Encounters for Violin and Cello" by Samuel Adler.

Soprano Mary Sue Ewing and pianist Evelyn Evon will conclude the program with selections by Samuel Barber, Charles Kingsford, Kathleen Lockhart-Manning, John Carpenter and Richard Hundley.

The president of the Tuesday Musicales is Charles Wingert. Information regarding Tuesday Musicales membership is available by calling Hanna Lahti at (810) 358-3827.

Daddy-Daughter Dance

The Neighborhood Club will hold its annual Daddy-Daughter Dance from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 7, at 17150 Waterloo in the City of Grosse Pointe.

The event is for dads and for daughters aged 2-13. Grandpas, brothers or uncles are welcome as substitute fathers. The evening will include a DJ, dancing, refreshments and a keepsake photo.

G.P. Symphony presents concert on Sunday, Feb. 9

By Johanna Gilbert

Special Writer

To highlight the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra's program coming up at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 9, the words from "Cabaret" seem appropriate: "Come hear the music play. Life is a cabaret, old chum. Come to the cabaret."

Headlining the pops and classics event will be Ruth Burczyk, pianist; Margaret Ahee, dramatic soprano; Jim Jeffrey, baritone; and the Grosse Pointe Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Felix Resnick.

Lawrence LaGore, president of the symphony's board of directors, thinks a cabaret performance is just what the doctor ordered. "It will lift the spirits, chase away the dreariness of cold weather and increase blood circulation," he said.

many appearances with the Grosse Pointe Symphony. Although Grosse Pointe is her home, Burczyk is a recognized soloist with orchestras throughout Michigan and Wisconsin.

Ahee and Jeffrey will sing solos and duets. Both are members of the Entertainment Group, E!an Ensemble, founded and directed by Grosse Pointer De Shaheen. Jeffrey is also a long-time member of the Judelairens.

On the program will be selections from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," some Leroy Anderson favorites, the Warsaw Concerto and more.

Those who attend will be part of a drawing to be held during intermission for door prizes donated by Grosse Pointe businesses. Tickets are $15. For more information, call (313) 885-0744.

G.P. Children's Theater presents 'The Plain Princess'

The Grosse Pointe Children's Theater will present "The Plain Princess," at 3 and 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 8, and at 1 and 4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 16, in the Fries Auditorium of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

The present-day fairy tale is adapted from Phyllis McGinley's popular children's classic. It's the story of a spoiled little princess who gets everything she wants from her parents, the king and queen. Her royal temper tantrums cause a visiting prince to declare what nobody has dared to admit, that she is a "plain princess."

Sharing the lead role of Princess Esmeralda are Stephanie Rinderknecht and Brittany Seiter.

The prince will be played by Szymon Kietlinski and Ian Bojanic.

The king is played by Adam Steiner; the queen by Alaina Dahl.

Allyson Smith and Winter Keena will play the part of Dame Goodwit. Daughter Annabelle is played by Jenna Tocco and Shannon Peters; Dulcibelle by Tatiana Kouskoulas; Florabelle by Cameron Wills and Allison Osantowski; and Echo by Katie Klink and Tresbien Keena. Charles Keena is also in the cast.

Sally Reynolds is producer and director. Stelene Mazer is musical director.

Admission is $5.50 for students and senior citizens; $6.50 for adults. All seats are reserved and tickets may be purchased by calling the War Memorial at (313) 881-7511. For group reservations or birthday celebrations, call (313) 884-9649.

'A History of Reading' is a book for bibliophiles

"A History of Reading"
By Alberto Manguel
Viking, 372 pages, $26.95

"A History of Reading" is the spectacular brainchild of Alberto Manguel, a native of Buenos Aires and now a Canadian citizen. He has profusely studded each beguiling chapter with his creative survey of various phases of the birth and growth of reading. Each page literally vibrates with interesting and entertaining facts and insights on man's ability to make sense of words and to act upon them as the occasion warrants.

In his cogent introduction, the author states unequivocally that "... it is the reader who reads the sense; it is the reader who grants or recognizes in an object, place or event a certain possible readability; it is the reader who must attribute meaning to a system of signs, and then decipher it. We all read ourselves and the world around us in order to glimpse what and where we are. We read to understand, or to begin to understand. We cannot do but read. Reading, almost as much as breathing, is our essential function."

This book is divided into two main sections: Acts of Reading and Powers of the Reader. Also, each chapter is generously illustrated with pictures smoothly accompanying the text. Manguel opens with portraits of the early religious figures who were prominent in the development of reading — not books in the form of today's publications but scrolls and clay tablets.

We are soon introduced to St. Augustine, who appeared in Rome in the ninth century from his home in Carthage, North Africa, to set up a school. After a year he moved to Milan where he was offered a better opportunity to teach literature and elocution.

He admired Milan's bishop, the future St. Ambrose, whom he considered an extraordinary reader: "... his eyes scanned the page and his heart sought out the meaning, but his voice was silent and his tongue was still ... often when we came to visit him, we found him reading like this in silence, for he never read aloud."

Manguel explains that "Augustine's description of Ambrose's silent reading is the first definite instance recorded in Western literature." This habit of reading was, of course, very different than the popular method — that of voicing the words. Thus, "observing the reading of St. Ambrose that afternoon, Augustine could hardly have known what was before him. He thought he was seeing a reader trying to avoid intrusive visitors, sparing his voice for teaching. In fact he was seeing a multitude, a host of silent readers who, over the next many centuries, would include Luther, would include Calvin, would include Emerson, would include us, reading him today."

According to Manguel: "The written text, in Socrates' time, was not a common tool. While books existed in Athens in considerable numbers in the fifth century B.C., and a trade in books had begun to develop, the practice of private reading did not become fully established until at least a century later in the time of Aristotle, one of the first readers to assemble an important collection of manuscripts for his own use.

"A few years later, his disciples, Plato and Xenophon, recorded his disparaging opinion of books in a book, and their memory of his memory was thereby preserved for us, his future readers."

As a young boy, Alberto Manguel was tutored in German and French. His teacher "told me that his father, murdered in Sachsenhausen, had been a famous scholar who knew many of the classics by heart and who, during his time in the concentration camp, had offered himself as a library to be read to his fellow inmates. I imagined the old man in the murky, relentless, hopeless place, approached with a request for Virgil or Euripides, opening himself up to a given page and reciting the ancient words for his bookless readers. Years later, I realized that he had been immortalized as one of the crowd of roaming book-fahnen."

The author further enlarges on the topic of being read to: "In the courts, and sometimes also in humble houses, books were read aloud to family and friends for instruction as well as for entertainment. Being read to at dinner was not intended to distract from the joys of the palate; on the contrary, it was meant to enhance them with imaginative entertainment, a practice carried over from the days of the Roman empire. Pliny the Younger mentioned in one of his letters that, when eating with his wife or a few friends, he liked to have an amusing book read out loud to him."

In another chapter, Manguel discusses reading methods of various readers. According to James Boswell, "Dr. Johnson read a book with the same manners he displayed at the table. He read ravenously, as if he devoured it, which was to all appearance his method of studying. (He) kept a book wrapped in the tablecloth in his lap during dinner from an avidity to have one entertainment in readiness, when he should have finished another; resembling (if I may use so coarse a simile) a dog who holds a bone in his paws in reserve, while he eats something else which has been thrown to him."

We now come to the second section of this book which opens with a description of an ancient civilization, Mesopotamia. As Manguel elucidates: "Writing was quickly recognized as a powerful skill, and through the ranks of Mesopotamian society rose the scribe. Obviously the skill of writing was also essential to him, but neither the name given to his occupation nor the social perception of his activities acknowledged the act of reading, and instead focused almost exclusively on his ability to record. Publicly, it was safer for the scribe to be seen not as one who retrieved information ... but as one who merely recorded it for the public good. Though he might be the eyes and tongue of a general, or even a king, such political power was better not flaunted. For this reason, the symbol of Nisaba, Mesopotamian goddess of scribes, was the stylus, not the tablet held before the eyes."

Manguel discourses how certain people in the past displayed their books or imitations thereof. Unlike tools, furniture, and clothing, books inflict upon their readers a symbolism far more complex than that of a simple utensil. The mere possession of books implies social standing and a certain intellectual richness. Some home decorators made a fortune by providing long rows of bindings stuffed with waste paper to present an impressive library facade in some chateaus. In our time, tony interior decorators furnish walls with yards of books for those who are pseudo-intellectuals who enjoy masquerading as learned so as to impress their glibbie friends.

In the dwindling space available to me as an enthusiastic reviewer, I find it impossible to completely cover every and each topic so delightfully presented by the author. His knowledge is so vast and encyclopedic in its range that it would be hopeless for me to dwell at a reasonable length the manifold accomplishments of Alberto Manguel and his splendid book. Suffice to say every page is a sheer delight along with amazing richness of information. His gentle humor often surfaces among many of the tales he relates of readers and reading throughout history.

In conclusion, I quote the author's confession which appears on the last page: "The History of Reading, fortunately, has no end. After the final chapter and before the already mentioned copious index, our author has left a number of blank pages for the reader to add further thoughts on reading, subjects obviously missed, apposite quotations, events and characters still in the future. There is some consolation in that."

"I imagine leaving the book by the side of my bed. I imagine opening it up tonight, or tomorrow night, or the night after that, and saying to myself, 'It's not finished.'"

DSO and young Norwegian pianist make beautiful music together

The young Norwegian pianist, Leif Ove Andsnes, is familiar to Detroit audiences. He first performed here two years ago for Pro Musica at the DIA and then, three months later, played the Grieg concerto with the DSO.

Well-received on those occasions, he drew a crowd last weekend for a performance of the difficult and exciting 3rd Piano Concerto by Rachmaninoff.

Andsnes demonstrated that he has indeed arrived as an artist, tackling that knuckle-busting score with style and power and delivering a knockout performance.

It was a display of virtuoso playing that was both technically brilliant and emotionally fulfilling, providing full expression of Rachmaninoff's romanticism, without ever losing the sparkling intricacy of the challenging work.

The rise and fall of emotional intensity was a dramatic roller coaster with each new high more stirring than the last. That was possible only with the remarkable unanimi-ty and coordination with Neeme Järvi and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, which shared perfectly the free and expressive phrasing. They were in perfect harmony and in sync from start to finish.

The first movement cadenza was thunderous with overwhelming impact and then as the orchestra reentered, suddenly gave way to the most delicate filigree of piano and flute, exquisitely played.

It was obviously the kind of performance that Järvi genuinely enjoys accompanying, filled with spontaneity and required total focus. Järvi and Andsnes will repeat it in two weeks with the New York Philharmonic.

As prelude to this drama, Järvi opened the concert with two overlooked works by Tchaikovsky. Excerpts and Overture to the composer's first opera, "Voyevode" is a delightfully innovative collection of storytelling music with strong Russian folk flavor. It also is an early example of the bold strokes of Tchaikovsky's skill as an orchestrator. Järvi presented it with fresh charm and vitality.

The Cantata commemorating the 200th anniversary of Peter the Great's birth contains much music that also appears in other Tchaikovsky works. But a revealing perspective is here as a result of the music's use in the Cantata form.

Hearing the rich harmonies sung by a chorus achieves a special quality. Joining in the performance were the Choral Union from Ann Arbor and Russian tenor Vladimir Popov.

His voice has that distinctive Russian timbre in full measure and gave strong emphasis to the nationalistic feeling of the work. That is a quality noticeably absent from the sound of the chorus. Yet rather than detracting, it gave more emphasis to the tenor's narrative. Otherwise, the chorus sang with a beautiful tone and blend and displayed impressive power when called for. Their articulation also was impressive, being good enough to make it easy to recognize that they were singing in Russian. Reading the translation of the flowery text in the program suggested that it was really more worthwhile just to listen to the music.

The next regular concert set begins on Friday morning Feb. 14. Resident Conductor Leslie B. Dunner will present music of Berlioz, Singleton, Mussorgsky and accompany pianist Ursula Oppens in Mozart's concerto in F Major, K. 459. Call (313) 833-3700.

Safari travelers witness life, death, survival firsthand

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

Once in South Africa, the best accessible safari destination is Botswana. This small nation, once a part of the Union of South Africa, enjoys a stable independence on the northern border of the present Republic of South Africa. It also is the beneficiary of a remarkable natural phenomenon that, along with political stability, makes it a most wonderful place to experience wild Africa.

Far to the northwest in the mountains of Angola, winter snows feed a major river that flows into Botswana. There, on the level plain, the water spreads into a huge swamp called the Okavango River Delta. The water separates into small rivers, then streams which gradually diminish until they disappear in the desert. The water never reaches the sea.

This bounty of southern Africa's most precious resource creates a haven for a diverse and rich collection of animals and plants. From May to October (winter down there) the climate is pleasant and the region teems with life.

From the moment of entering a Botswana Airlines 737 in bustling, modern Johannesburg, there is a strong impression of being in the true Africa. Many local passengers are in native dress or more colorful versions of western attire. A British pilot is assisted by an all-Botswanan crew whose musical speaking style is an unfamiliar pleasure.

On the ground below, the bush veld appears increasingly dry and sparse. The sight of animals or a kraal of native huts is rare. The imagination speculates uneasily about the safari camp. That is all dispelled by the turmoil and bustle at the small airport in Maun and the hasty assistance of an agent from Gametrackers Botswana into whose hands we place our fate for the next six days.

A six-seater Cessna, flown with flair by an Australian bush pilot, carries us less than 1,000 feet above ground toward our first safari destination, the Kwaii River camp. As watchfully. The thought comes to mind that there is little need to go any further.

Camp routine is strict. Stay on the paths in camp. Do not go near the river or wander around at night. Wake up at 6 a.m. to tea delivered to your door. Join your guide at 6:30 a.m. in the ATV for the morning "hunt."

Facing herds of elephants is routine when traveling in Botswana. This one passed the group close enough for the travelers to touch. Nobody did.

opportunity arises, he banks and dives to provide views of animals below. Soon we swoop down to a dirt landing strip between two rows of acacia trees, where our guide is waiting in an all-terrain four wheel drive.

As we approach the camp on the banks of one of the Okavango's many branches, the plant life is more lush and the view from the porch of our cabin is like a dream. Thick reeds and grasses form a green carpet on both sides of the river. On one bank, a crocodile basks. Nearby, elephants graze or bathe. Upstream 100 yards, hippos are wallowing and one opens its cavernous mouth in a lazy yawn. On the far side, a herd of impalas feed "Lions are roaring near camp this morning. We are going to look for them," our guide explains.

It doesn't take long. A lioness has her eye on a lone baboon. Very much aware of her interest, he heads for the trees. The cat withdraws and we take to the trails.

Maphuto, a member of one of only three tribes who inhabit the country in harmony, grew up in a nearby village and used to be a hunter. His knowledge of the rules of the jungle is uncanny. Repeatedly he finds and points out animals that are all but invisible in the bush. He often drives within a few yards of them for us to see. The animals accept the vehicle, and us, as part of their environment. Approaching them slowly and discreetly seems to pose little risk. A leopard lurking in the dry grass some distance from the river ignores us as it watches and waits for a pride of lions to move on so it can cross over.

Just as hunger pangs strike, Maphuto pulls into the shade of a giant tree and unloads a huge picnic basket. A snack and a rest from driving revive us for more animal sightings until a late morning return to camp for a civilized brunch and siesta.

A late afternoon tour follows high tea and reveals a slightly different scene. Predators are looking forward to their time to hunt while the herds of zebra and various antelopes take their afternoon feed.

As the light begins to fade, Maphuto turns toward the riverbank in a remote area and points to the opposite side. A pack of wild dogs is feeding on a kill with a low chorus of growls as they tear at the carcass. Soon they run off and bring back their pups to feed, only to be challenged by a trio of spotted hyenas. Fighting over the remains is a snarl and scream, nip and run procedure. No animal risks being injured badly, but the battle is serious nevertheless. It is survival.

We watch in fascination until the dogs, after feeding on their kill, finally yield and the hyenas tear up what is left. It is the grim reality of the bush.

Morning and evening the scenario of the animals unfolds. Four herds of elephants gather within our view to water at a remote bend of the river in the sunset glow. Uncounted numbers of zebras, Cape buffalo, impala, giraffe and other grazing herds range across the dry plain. A pride of lions resting after a good kill lolls sleepily within five yards of our vehicle. We stay as quiet as mice. Only cameras click.

Then, at a turn in the road, we face a herd of elephants crossing our path with no time or space for us to turn around or back away. We are too close, which is threatening to the elephants. With a moment to think about it, Maphuto later explains, they might have decided to charge.

His solution is to choose a wide gap between two of the giant creatures and accelerate through it, fleeing down the trail. Once past them, we no longer threaten. We are safe.

As we passed between them, however, we are close enough to slap one big elephant rump, if we were bold enough. We aren't.

Once again our Aussie pilot gives us an aerial view. This time we see the full impact of the water. Papyrus-filled swamp and a network of channels and lagoons are home to hundreds of bird species as well as animals. After a short flight we arrive at Xaxaba Camp on an island mid-swamp.

Here we share turf with a tribe of baboons whose gaming and grooming provide endless entertainment. And here we tour the surrounding area in highly unstable, 15-foot dugout canoes (Makoros) poled through the shallow water by a guide standing in the stern.

We sit gingerly amidship, two per Makoro. Gradually, we find we are not about to capsize and we enjoy the new adventure. Beautiful, colorful birds of every size and description abound in the 10-foot high papyrus along the banks and in big trees on the islands. Here, an African eagle roosts imperiously on a high branch. There a giant owl. Bee-eaters zip past. Ibis and crane wade in the shallows. Multi-colored ducks and geese lurk among the lily pads.

We are never long without reminders of the jungle rule of life. Forming a long line of Makoros as we head out for the morning tour, we eye the herd of hippos in the middle of the lagoon by the camp. One rises up in the water and eyes us. Disturbed by the movement of so many canoes, it suddenly bellows and charges through the water. With a single motion, the guides turn their Makoros and pole them up on the embankment. Head guide, Tuelo, turns and roars at the hippo. It pauses, sinks into the water and only reappears again much further away. With hearts thumping, we resume our tour.

Back in camp at twilight, as some guests finish cocktails on the terrace overlooking the lagoon and others amble toward the dining area for the usual five-course, graciously served dinner, piercing screams draw all eyes, human and animal, to the marshy bank. A duiker antelope grazing too close to the water is in the jaws of a crocodile, which is dragging it into the lagoon. The croc's technique is to drown its victim, then consume it at leisure. For nearly two minutes, the cries of the doomed animal are agonizing. Then, awesome silence.

As at Kwaii, our guide escorts us with lamps to our cabin at night and reminds us not to come out in the dark. Animals roam through camp in the night. At breakfast, one woman complains she was kept awake by an elephant browsing on the cabin's thatched roof.

Hedge-hopping back to civilization in the midday heat and bumpy air, our Aussie air jockey is again on the stick. It now seems quite tame.

This is the second of three articles about Africa.

Detroit's Fox Theatre tops national charts in 1996

Detroit's Fox Theatre topped 1996 year-end charts in gross for venues of its size in North America (United States, Canada and Mexico). Amusement Business magazine recently named Detroit's Fox Theatre No. 3 in its 1996 "Top 10 facilities - 5,000 or Less" category. The theatre also earned the No. 3 position in Performance Magazine's annual list of "Top 10 Grossing Indoor venues 5,000 - 6,999."

As the largest surviving "motion-picture palace" of the 1920s in the world, Detroit's Fox Theatre is no stranger to such accolades. Since the theatre's restoration, the Fox has been ranked in the top 10 by both entertainment publications since 1989, claiming the No. 1 position for the top-grossing theatre of its size for both 1989 (Performance Magazine) and 1992 (Amusement Business). Attracting record crowds for a mix of concerts, annual variety and Broadway shows, restored classic films and family entertainment, 1996 saw the Fox play host to award-winning shows, including "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," "Cats," "David Copperfield" and "Sesame Street Live."

Sell-out concert performances included Bruce Springsteen, Ladies, Chris Isaak, Elvis Costello, ZZ Top, George Benson and David Sanborn, John Tesh, Tori Amos and more.

The Fox and its adjoining office building were purchased and restored by Michael and Marian Hlitch in July 1987. After nearly a yearlong renovation, the Hlitchs reopened the Fox on Nov. 19, 1988, allowing the theatre to reclaim its reputation as one of the most elegant of all performing arts and historical attractions in the world.

Known as the "anchor" of Detroit's Theatre District, the Fox Theatre's multimillion-dollar renovation project renewed not only the theatre, but also the surrounding office building that houses the world headquarters for Little Caesar Enterprises Inc., Olympia Entertainment Inc. and the Ford family, announced plans to build side-by-side stadiums for the Detroit Tigers and Detroit Lions in Detroit's Theatre District. The $505 million project, developed by the Tigers and Lions respectively, has the potential to spur shopping and new restaurants such as the Hard Rock Cafe (scheduled to open in 1998), in a continuing rebirth of the downtown area.

Mike Gottfredson is a picture of intensity as he pulls a rebound away from two Port Huron players during Grosse Pointe South's 10th straight victory last Friday night.

Unbeaten South streaks past two MAC rivals

By Chuck Klonke

Port Huron's basketball coach confirmed what Grosse Pointe South's George Petrouleas has known all along.

"He said Mike (Gottfredson) was the best guard he's seen this year," Petrouleas said after the Blue Devils beat Port Huron 67-45 to complete the first half of the Macomb Area Conference Red Division season.

South's win over Port Huron gave the Blue Devils a 7-0 league record and a 10-0 overall mark.

Gottfredson had an outstanding performance, scoring 21 of his 25 points in the second half, against the Big Reds. He also had eight assists and three steals. "Mike has been very solid for us all season. And he has that special ability to make the other kids better. He doesn't play just one end of the floor, either. His defensive play has been instrumental in our success, too," Petrouleas said.

The coach wasn't surprised that Gottfredson did most of his scoring in the second half as South overcame a three-point halftime deficit.

"The tougher the situation the more he seems to thrive on it," Petrouleas said.

Although the final margin was 22 points, the game wasn't that easy. South, which led 16-9 after one quarter, trailed 26-23 at halftime.

"I expressed some words of wisdom to the team at halftime and to their credit, they listened," Petrouleas said. "I think things were coming too easy and we got lax in some fundamental areas. We didn't box out well in the second quarter and Port Huron got a lot of offensive rebounds."

South went back up by seven points at the end of the third quarter and by the fourth quarter, Petrouleas was able to get all his players into the game.

As in most South games, Gottfredson had a strong supporting cast.

Steve Howson collected 14 points and five rebounds and Adam Hess finished with 10 points.

North hands Ramblers their first defeat

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Few folks gave Grosse Pointe North much chance of handing Fraser its first loss in high school basketball last Friday.

But among those who did were the ones who really mattered — coach Dave Stavale, assistant Mike Stevenson and the North squad.

"Nobody thought we could beat Fraser, but that's OK," Stavale said after the Norsemen's 50-46 victory in the Macomb Area Conference White Division. "Our kids wanted to prove something tonight — to Fraser, the league and anybody else who was watching.

"When I took over here five years ago, this is what I was building for. The chance to compete for a championship — and that's what we're doing. This is the biggest win we've had — so far."

Both teams are 6-1 in MAC White play. North's overall record is 7-2.

The Fraser-North struggle was a classic prep basketball game between two outstanding defensive clubs.

And the outcome wasn't decided until Ben Peters hit a pair of free throws with 3.1 seconds remaining to give the Norsemen a four-point lead.

Fraser called a timeout to make the junior guard think about his crucial free throws.

That's when Stavale borrowed a scene from the movie "Hoosiers."

"I told Ben, 'when you make these two free throws — and you will make these two free throws,'" Stavale said. "I've seen that movie a zillion times."

Stavale wasn't even worried about the huge height advantage his team was giving up inside to Fraser's 6-foot-9 Adam Nies and 6-6 Chris McCarty.

They were going to be guarded by 5-11 Leonard Harris and 6-2 Dave Hermann.

"Leonard and David both play a lot bigger than they are, so the size mismatch wasn't as great as it looks on paper," Stavale said. "We knew we'd give up some points inside, but we wanted to eliminate the kickout passes and the easy perimeter shots."

Balance helped Fraser win its first eight games by an average margin of nearly 27 points. The Ramblers blended the inside attack with some solid long-range shooting, but against North, Fraser didn't hit a three-point basket.

"We put a lot of perimeter pressure on them and had a solid defensive rotation," Stavale said.

Fraser led 12-10 after the first quarter and the Ramblers had a 22-16 lead at halftime.

Fraser's biggest lead was a 20-13 bulge with 2:12 minutes left in the first half, but Dave Stavale hit a three-pointer to keep the Ramblers from pulling away.

Fraser hit 16 of 18 free throws through the first three quarters, but down the stretch the Ramblers missed six of eight.

North missed only two of its 10 free-throw attempts in the fourth quarter and it was a free throw by Craig Ziolkowski — on Nies' fifth foul of the game — that put the Norsemen ahead to stay, 41-40, with 4:10 left.

A layup by Hermann, followed by two more free throws by Ziolkowski gave North a 45-40 lead with 2:43 to go, but a basket and two free throws by Fraser's Danny Luceri closed the gap back to one with just under two minutes remaining.

Neither team scored again

Lapse of 19 seconds dooms ULS hockey team

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

A lot of damage can be done in a mere 19 seconds.

Just ask the University Liggett School hockey team.

In the span of 19 seconds last Saturday, the Knights went from a 2-2 tie to a three-goal deficit against Jackson Lumen Christi in a Michigan Prep Hockey League game that ended with the Titans winning

"We were 60-40 in terms of dominating the game, but we had some trouble with faceoffs in the defensive zone and it resulted in three quick goals that cost us the game," said ULS coach John Fowler.

The Knights took a 2-1 lead at the 33-second mark of the third period on a tip-in of a rebound by C.T. Thurber. Lumen Christi's Jason Wells tied the game at 2-2 at 5:28 when he poked the puck into the net from a goalmouth scramble.

Then disaster really struck. Jeff Denton, one of the league's leading scorers, started the barrage with a goal at 6:12. His linemate, Mark Wilson, tallied nine seconds later and Marty Kirk gave the Titans a 5-2 advantage at 6:31.

That's when Fowler called a quick timeout.

"I told the kids they had to keep focused as a team," he said. "We weren't boxing out on the faceoffs or picking up the wingers. For a short period, we weren't thinking about what we should be doing."

Peter Birgbauer got one of the goals back at 12:39, but it wasn't enough to keep ULS from falling to 3-3-1 in league play.

Fowler lamented missed opportunities early in the game.

"Missed opportunities don't come back," he said. "We had some good chances in the first two periods and didn't finish. And when we got a two-man advantage late in the first period, we took a penalty to nullify it."

A power-play goal by Lumen Christi's Eric Baumgardner broke the scoreless tie at 11:46 of the third period, but the Knights' Chris Mitchell made it 1-1 at 13:14.

Eli Wulfmeier and Ian Watt each assisted on all three ULS goals.

Charlie Eldridge played well in goal for the Knights, turning back 29 shots. "Charlie tried to take the blame for some of the rebounds he gave up, but it wasn't bad goaltending that beat us," Fowler said.

"He played well. He didn't have a chance on most of the goals."

ULS hosts University School of Milwaukee for a pair of games this weekend. The teams will meet at 6 p.m. Friday and 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

Hepner qualifies for NCAA diving meet

Michigan State senior Chad Hepner dove into the NCAA swimming and diving championships with his first-place finish on the one-meter board in a recent dual meet.

The Grosse Pointe South grad had a total of 316.73 points, an NCAA qualifying score. Hepner also had a top finish on the three-meter board with 289.05 points.

Last year, Hepner was fourth on the one-meter board at the Big Ten championships.

solid all-around performances. "See is getting better all the time," Petrouleas said. "He's been giving us a lot of quality minutes."

Earlier, South led from start to finish in a 57-41 victory over Stevenson.

"It was a very workmanlike performance," Petrouleas said. "We jumped out early on them and never let them into the game."

Gottfredson led the way with 15 points and this time he had 12 of them in the first half. He also had six assists. Howson finished with 11 points and Chad Defever added nine.

South led 8-6 with just under five minutes to play in the first quarter. Then the Blue Devils went on an 8-0 run. Defever scored on a layup, was fouled and made the free throw. Howson scored on a putback and followed with a three-pointer to give South a 16-6 lead.

The opening quarter ended with the Blue Devils leading 20-9 and they stretched the margin to 38-20 at halftime. The Titans never got closer than 16 points in the second half.

"Our key people got some baskets early and we took advantage of every mistake Stevenson made," Petrouleas said. "They like to play a physical game, but we never gave them the chance to be physical. We put so much pressure on them."

Kevin Krause led Stevenson with 14 points, while Cass Przybylski added nine.

"Now we have the toughest part of the schedule ahead of us," Petrouleas said. "We start the second half of the league season with Sterling Heights Friday, then we go on the road to play Chippewa Valley and Ford. It won't be easy, but we can't look too far ahead and we have to keep improving with each game."

Grosse Pointe South's Mike Gottfredson drives past a Port Huron player for a layup during last week's victory over the Big Reds that kept the Blue Devils undefeated.

until Stavale hit two free throws with 32.9 seconds remaining after a steal by Hermann.

Fraser missed a pair from the line on its next possession, but Peters hit one of two with 19.5 seconds left. The Ramblers' Luke Bien scored on a putback with four seconds remaining. Peters was immediately fouled on the inbound pass and sank both free throws to seal the win.

There were a lot of heroes for the Norsemen.

"When you play a good team, you need contributions from more than one or two guys and we had everybody contribute tonight," coach Stavale said. "Nick (Aubrey) keyed the defense and kept pressure on the point guard. Hermann's intensity and fire helped us and he and Leonard really played well defensively. Dave (Stavale) hit some big shots and Craig Ziolkowski gave us a big lift off the bench. I'm so proud of the way he's handled going from starter to sixth man. He's ready to go whenever we need him."

Steve Champine fouled out on a questionable call with 1:23 remaining, but before he left he contributed 11 points, five rebounds and several assists.

Stavale led North with 13 points and Ziolkowski added nine, all in the second half.

Nies was Fraser's only double-figure scorer, finishing with 15 points, including eight in the first quarter. He had five rebounds, all in the first half.

Earlier, North beat Roseville 58-49 as Champine led the way with 18 points.

Harris and Hermann each chipped in with nine points for the Norsemen.

Coach Stavale said, after the Fraser game, that his team is finally where he wants it to be.

"We got started late because we had several key players on the football team (that went to the state semifinals) and I was impatient because I wanted us to get to the level where I wanted us to be," he said.

"It took time to regroup emotionally and physically. Unless you've been through it, you don't understand how demanding a season like this is. Ever since L'Anse Creuse North (the Norsemen's only MAC White loss) we've been improving every game. Tonight we played four outstanding quarters."

North has a MAC crossover game at Port Huron Friday. The Norsemen start the second half of the conference schedule when they host Port Huron Northern Tuesday.

Youth hurts South in dual matches

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

There are two distinct groups of wrestlers at Grosse Pointe South this year.

One is made up of the seniors. The larger group consists of the freshmen and sophomores who are getting their introduction to the sport. That's why the Blue Devils have struggled to win their dual meets this season.

"We're still a little raw in a lot of weight classes. We're not as physically strong as we'd like to be and we have a lot of inexperience," said coach Larry Carr. "But we're not giving up on the season. We're weightlifting three days a week and we're getting stronger."

"The four seniors are doing a good job. Zach Meyers and Joe Dwaihy have been with us four years and Brian Goldstein and Charles Carrier are in their second seasons."

South dropped a 57-18 decision to Anchor Bay in its only Macomb Area Conference Blue Division meet.

Dwaihy (135 pounds) and Meyers (189) won on falls. Goldstein (140) posted a 7-1 decision and Dominic O'Grady won 11-4 at 152 pounds.

Heavyweight Jordan Grover won on a pin. Jeremy Linne (119) won by a disqualification and Dwaihy won on a forfeit.

"Melvindale had some injuries and a couple of their kids in the upper weight classes didn't want to wrestle," Carr said.

Birmingham Seaholm beat South 64-15. The Blue Devils' winners were Dwaihy, who posted a 7-1 decision, and Goldstein and Meyers, who won on falls.

Marysville beat South 46-27 despite pins by the Blue Devils' Jamie Carrier (112) and Charles Carrier (125). Dwaihy won 10-4 and Meyers won by injury default.

Waterford Mott posted a 42-26 decision over South. G.J. Vasse (103) and Charles Carrier won on falls. Linne posted a technical fall and Goldstein earned an 8-3 decision.

South's winners in a 58-18 loss to Rochester were Dwaihy on an 8-1 decision and O'Grady, who edged his opponent 7-6.

The Blue Devils host Stevenson and Grosse Pointe North tonight, Jan. 30.

Norsemen have impressive marks

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

The records of some Grosse Pointe North wrestlers look like the odds for longshots at Ladbroke DRC.

Derek Phillips is 30-1. Kevin Brandon has a 30-3 record. And Gary Bordato is 29-2.

"Those are some pretty impressive records and they're getting them against the toughest competition we can find," said coach Art Roberts.

Last weekend the Norsemen finished fifth at the Holt Invitational, but Phillips and Brandon won individual championships and Bordato was runner-up in his weight class.

"Mount Pleasant, which is ranked sixth in the state, finished third and Bay City Western, which was ranked fourth, finished seventh," Roberts said. "There were a lot of good teams and a lot of good wrestlers."

Swartz Creek was first with 247 points, followed by Holt 226, Mount Pleasant 204 1/2, Plymouth Salem 199 and North 194.

One of the good wrestlers Roberts was talking about was Salem's Eric Coburn, who lost 6-3 to Phillips in the championship match at 119 pounds.

"He's a real good kid," Roberts said. "He came in 28-1 with all of the matches at 125. He's a real tough kid and Derek wrestled a great match to beat him."

"Sometimes our kids are a little disappointed when they don't win all their matches on pins, but you can't pin everybody, especially at this level. Sometimes if you're trying too hard for the pin, you can make a mistake and wind up on your back. We try to tell the kids they have to be ready for the good matches."

On his way to the championship, Phillips pinned Mark Fulger of Okemos in 1:45, got a 58-second fall against Midland's Jason Wood, beat Paul Mattern of Owosso 22-5 and pinned Bay City Western's Brian LaFramboise in 1:41.

Brandon won his championship at 125 pounds when Holt's Wesley Long defaulted because of an injury.

"Kevin was disappointed," Roberts said. "He really wanted to wrestle him. Long was a state qualifier last year."

Brandon had a good test in the semifinals when he beat Bay City Western's Charlie Spencer 9-5. Earlier, Spencer posted a convincing victory over Temperance Bedford's Paul Keane, who was a state runner-up in Division I last year.

Brandon won his first three matches on pins. He disposed of Salem's Josh Henderson in 1:10, beat Midland's Joel Stafford in 1:24 and pinned Jason Schueller of Grand Rapids Christian in 1:33.

Bordato dropped down to 152 pounds for the tournament and breezed through his first four matches before losing 13-7 to Swartz Creek's Steve Bright.

Bright, who was a fifth-place finisher in the state meet last year, is unbeaten this season. Bordato pinned Port Huron Northern's Ryan Verna in 1:02, got a 16-1 major decision against East Kentwood's Justin Leslie, pinned Nathan Robinson of Okemos in 2:20 and overpowered Salem's Anwar Critchfield 17-2.

North's two fourth-place finishers were Rick Pesta at 130 pounds and Eddie Wright at 140.

"Ricky was seeded sixth and he beat the No. 3 seed 7-6," Roberts said. "He's doing well as a sophomore. Eddie beat the fourth seed in the third round 7-2, then he got pinned with 20 seconds left in a match that was tied 2-2. And he lost 2-1 in the third-place match."

Sixth-place medals were won by Mike Renedettini and Ryan Stevenson.

Earlier, North edged Fraser 36-33 in a Macomb Area Conference White Division meet.

"We knew there were four matches that would be real close ones," Roberts said. "Rick Pesta won 6-3 at 130 pounds against a real good kid and Jeff Kalkhoff beat Tom Saad 8-2 at 145. It was 2-2 after two periods and Jeff got six points in the third period."

"The other two close ones were a 2-0 loss by Ed Ball at 171 and a 3-0 loss by Chad Cooper at 189."

Phillips, Wright, Bordato, Stevenson and Brandon each won their matches on pins.

"Another big match was at 112 where Matt Kellett lost 11-5, but didn't get pinned," Roberts said.

School's basketball fans got a chance to relax last Friday.

The Knights jumped out to an 18-7 first-quarter lead and kept adding to it as they beat Cranbrook Kingswood 67-38 in a Metro Conference game.

ULS is 7-1 in league action and is one of two Metro Conference teams with only one defeat.

The other is Hamtramck, 8-1, and the Cosmos host the Knights Friday.

"The kids never let up, and for us to compete in the league and the state tournament we have to learn to keep people down when we get a lead on them," said coach Bruce Pelt.

ULS dominated the boards and the Knights turned in one of their finest defensive efforts of the season.

"We held them to 26 percent shooting and we outrebounded them 35-14," Pelt said. "We held them to one shot and got the ball down to the other end of the court. We took advantage of our size and pushed the ball inside."

"I was a little concerned about the game because we'd been in exams all week and that can take a toll mentally on the kids. But our fresh legs paid off and we came out very aggressively on defense."

ULS' Charlie Strong started the game with a three-point play and the Knights maintained the lead the rest of the way.

Joel Parrott led ULS with 17 points, Brian Bruenton collected 11 points and nine rebounds and Justin Young added 10 points.

"Kevin Espy got in some foul trouble and Justin did a nice job running the team and keeping the flow of the game where we wanted it," Pelt said.

The Timberwolves clinched a spot in the Squirt B state hockey tournament with a 2-1 victory over the Flames in the championship game of the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association's pre-district tournament.

The Timberwolves won five consecutive tournament games to earn its spot in the state playoffs, which begin Saturday, Feb. 1.

The top-seeded Timberwolves, who are 20-2 overall, had their hands full against the seventh-seeded Flames.

After a scoreless first period, the Timberwolves struck quickly to grab the lead in the second period. Jimmy Pranger took a pass from Adam Kosmas and scored eight seconds into the period. The Timberwolves made it 2-0 with 2:51 left in the period when Nick Andrew scored after a pass from Robert Kensi.

Flames goalie Jeff Clor shut down the Timberwolves the rest of the way, but Timberwolves goalie Mark Beltz was keeping the Flames in check, helped by the strong defensive play of Gabe Konieczki, Kris Steis and Joe Kotwick.

The Flames, led by Paul Kossak, Tom Servais, Michael Hicks, Taylor Zalewski, Joseph Wiebelhaus and Drew Bedan, stayed on the attack and finally spoiled Beltz's shutout bid on a goal by Tylor Clor with 26 seconds remaining.

Other contributions for the Timberwolves came from Amelia Altavina, Mike Brown, Drew Casazza, Christopher Nowak, Jack Stevens and Drew Winter.

SQUIRT HOUSE

Assists: Adam Kosmas 2, Nick Andrew 2, Kensi 2, Joe Kotwick, Konieczki, Steis, Stevens, Beltz (Timberwolves).

Comments: The Timberwolves erupted for five goals in the third period to break open a close game. Drew Winter was in goal for the shutout. Anthony DeLaura, Dan Rosso and Christopher Bahash played well for the Sabres.

Timberwolves 3, Habs 1
Goals: Nick Andrew 2, Drew Winter (Timberwolves); Brian Altshuler (Habs).
Assists: Kris Steis, Drew Casazza, Joe Kotwick, Adam Kosmas, Winter (Timberwolves); J.T. Gage, Bobby Scarfone (Habs).

Comments: Two goals within 11 seconds in the first period were the difference for the Timberwolves, who received solid goaltending from Mark Beltz and hustling play from Christopher Nowak, Mike Brown and Gabe Konieczki. Andrew Wendzinski had a good game in goal for the Habs and Nathan Fredrick, Ross Mischnick, Peter Wendzinski, David Bargowski and Bryan Bargowski also played well.

Timberwolves 2, Sharks 0
Goals: Mike Brown, Drew Casazza (Timberwolves).
Assists: Robert Kensi, Nick Andrew, Adam Kosmas (Timberwolves).

Comments: An empty-net goal in the final seconds prevented the two teams from playing their third straight 1-0 game. Mark Beltz picked up the shutout for the Timberwolves. He had strong support from Kris Steis, Joe Kotwick, Gabe Konieczki and Amelia Altavina. The Sharks received solid performances from Alex Alvarez, Mike Raliff, Erik Johnson, Jimmy Solomon and goalie Byron Hauk.

Timberwolves 3, Flames 0
Goals: Adam Kosmas, Nick Andrew, Jack Stevens (Timberwolves).
Assists: Jimmy Pranger, Mark Beltz, Mike Brown, Kris Steis (Timberwolves).

Comments: Goalie Drew Winter recorded his fourth shutout of the season and teammates Christopher Nowak, Robert Kensi and Joe Kotwick also played well. The Flames were led by Paul Kossak, Drew Bedan, Joseph Wiebelhaus, Taylor Zalewski, Tom Servais and Brekan Kohltz.

Habs 6, Psycho Penguins 3
Goals: David Bargowski, Kevin Thomas, Bobby Scarfone 2, Ross Mischnick 2 (Habs); Ben Osborn, Matt Michels, Chris Bakalis (Penguins).
Assists: Scarfone, Peter Wendzinski, Bargowski, Kirk Gibson, Brad Benvenuti (Habs); Richard Ray (Penguins).

Psycho Penguins 5, Ice Dogs 1
Goals: Chris Bakalis 2, A.J. Staniszewski, Zach Zemenick, Ben Osborn (Penguins); Karl Hiedemann (Ice Dogs).

Assists: Pete Truba, Richie Ray, Osborn, Brent Brown, Scott Jarboe, Mark Andrews (Penguins); Steven Pokorski (Ice Dogs).

Comments: The Penguins received outstanding goaltending from Matthew Michels and strong offensive games from Eric Memminger, Staniszewski and Bakalis. Tommy Bogen and Brandon Koch were defensive standouts. Nick Frattini and Evan Wouters turned in a fine effort for the Ice Dogs.

Goals: Mike Brown, Amelia Altavina, Jimmy Pranger, Gabe Konieczki (Timberwolves).
Assists: Kris Steis 2, Adam Kosmas 2, Drew Casazza, Drew Winter, Pranger, Konieczki (Timberwolves).

Comments: Mark Beltz picked up his sixth shutout of the season with strong defensive support from Christopher Nowak, Robert Kensi, Jack Stevens and Nick Andrew. The Sabres received solid performances from Anthony DeLaura, Dan Rosso, Peter McGrath, Eddie Andrews and goalie Chris Bahash.

PEE WEE DIVISION

Whalers 2, Bruins 2
Goals: Andrew Sweeney, Jeffrey Moore (Whalers); Christian Gawley, Wargo (Bruins).
Assists: Robbie McCurdy, Greg LaTour (Whalers); Monaghan, Mark Cecchini (Bruins).

Comments: Both teams showed strong defense in the tie game. Joe Gaylord was in goal for the Whalers, while Craig Onderbeke was the Bruins' netminder.

Whalers 9, Sharks 0
Goals: Calder Gage 4, Jeffrey Moore 2, Greg LaTour 2, Andrew Sweeney (Whalers).

Assists: Robbie McCurdy 2, Johnny Coleman 2, Freddie Moore, Andrew Beer 2, Sweeney, Ryan Haas 3, Kevin Amori 3 (Whalers).

Comments: Joe Gaylord had another outstanding night in goal for the Whalers. Scott Cedervall, Mark Fragel and Pat Hogan skated well for the Sharks. Sharks' goalie Gus Malliaras made 23 saves.

Whalers 4, Blue Devils 2
Goals: Jeffrey Moore, Calder Gage 2, Andrew Sweeney (Whalers); Joe Perye, Eric Sobczak (Blue Devils).

Assists: Robbie McCurdy, Freddie Moore, Kevin Amori, Paul Jankowski, Andrew Beer (Whalers); Alex Fields, Sean Hogan (Blue Devils).
Comments: The Whalers never trailed after scoring twice in the first period. Goalies Joe Gaylord of the Whalers and Andrew Augustine of the Blue Devils each played well.

Whalers 2, Flyers 1

Goals: Calder Gage, Andrew Beer (Whalers); Anthony Ahee (Flyers).
Assists: Ryan Haas, Robbie McCurdy (Whalers); Brett Faber, Nishant Dixit (Flyers).

Comments: Evan Scott played an outstanding game for the Whalers. Joe Gaylord was the winning goalie. Andrew Scavone played a strong game in goal for the Flyers.

Whalers 6, Penguins 2

Goals: Robbie McCurdy, Greg LaTour, Andrew Sweeney, Calder Gage 2, Evan Scott (Whalers); Brian

Carleton 2 (Penguins).
Assists: Andrew Beer 3, Gage, McCurdy, Johnny Coleman, Ryan Haas (Whalers); Patrick Mott (Penguins).

Assists: Gage, Greg LaTour 2, Evan Scott, McCurdy 2 (Whalers); Danforth, Scarfone, Carroll, Tanneheimer, Spicer (Habs).
Comments: When the game remained tied after a five-minute overtime, the teams went into a shootout. During the shootout, McCurdy and Jeffrey Moore scored for the Whalers, while Spicer tallied for the Habs.

Grizzlies 3, Whalers 2
Goals: Bobby Karle, Jeff Schroeder, Justin Brantley (Grizzlies); Georgie MacKenzie, Andrew Sweeney (Whalers).

Assists: Tom Baxter, Trevor Clor, Casazza, Berger (Grizzlies); Johnny Coleman (Whalers).

Comments: Brantley broke a 2-2 tie with 43 seconds remaining. Josh Michael Bill of the Grizzlies and Joe Gaylord of the Whalers each made some excellent saves.

Pee Wee Bulldogs blank last two league opponents

The Grosse Pointe Bulldogs Pee Wee A hockey team completed its regular season on an impressive note with shutout victories in its last two games to finish second in Division IV of the Little Caesars Amateur Hockey League.

The only team that finished with a better record than the Bulldogs' 12-3-5 mark were the Royal Oak Eagles — and the Bulldogs tied them during the season.

"The players remained focused on the league games throughout the season and always came ready to play when there was an important game on the line," said coach Duffy Caillet.

The Bulldogs swept their regular-season series against the St. Clair Shores Saints, Mount Clemens Wolves, Muskegon Chiefs and Berkley Bears.

Grosse Pointe finished the season with a 6-0 victory over Muskegon and a 2-0 shutout of the Fraser Falcons.

Forward Erik Schleicher and second-year defenseman Danny Frusciano have demonstrated leadership on and off the ice all season.

The Bulldogs' line of Andrew Amato, Brandon Ernst and Bobby Colombo have accounted for most of the scoring, while Kenny Wicznerza, Mike Ryan, Mike Ambroz, Stefan Knost and Justin Rock round out the talented cast of forwards.

Jordan Winfield heads a steady defense corps that includes Andy Carter, Marc Callert, Alex Margosian and Bruce McKenzie.

The defense, combined with the excellent goaltending of Brandon Fearnley and Scott McKay, kept the Bulldogs' goals-against average at 1.8.

The Bulldogs are also coached by Dan Amato and Bruce McGregor. Bob Colombo is the manager.

ULS grad helps her college volleyball team

University Liggett School grad Stacey Corbin was a member of the Hamilton (N.Y.) College volleyball team that got off to the best start in school history.

The Continentals won their first six matches on the way to a 21-7 record that included a second-place finish in the Upstate Collegiate Athletic Association.

Corbin, a sophomore hitter, finished the season with 65 kills, 40 digs and 11 service aces.

Highlights

Lucido Real Estate won the Neighborhood Club's touch football league championship, but not without a battle.

Lucido suffered its first loss of the season when it bowed to Marge's Marauders 22-14 in four overtimes. But Lucido came back to win the rematch 14-0.

Some defensive adjustments helped shut down Marge's offense in the second contest.

Mike Gormley opened the scoring with a punt return for a touchdown and Shamus O'Keefe hit Sean Sullivan for a touchdown pass down the left sideline.

Keith Fannon had five interceptions for Lucido, which is sponsored by Alex Lucido of Lucido Real Estate in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Volleyball

The Neighborhood Club also crowned champions in its adult volleyball leagues.

The Sports Stop Diggers won the Monday night women's Blue Division, by beating the Shores Inn Aces. The Aces won the first match, forcing a second one in the double-elimination tournament.

"The Shores is the team that has given us the most trouble this season," said Dawn McGinnis of the three-time champion Diggers.

Both teams dug the ball out well and provided each other with challenging games.

The Diggers played most of the season with only five players, but picked up Sara Reichert late in the year.

"She has added a lot of strength to our team," said Jodi Collard.

Team members attribute their success to their ability to get along. The Diggers also use a 6-2 format, which gives them three hitters in the front row. It's a different scheme than the one used by most teams in the league.

Metropolitan Title Company won the women's Yellow Division with a 3-0 sweep of Pointe Fitness.

Many of the points came as a result of Roxanne Izzo's serving, but Metropolitan's ability to play well together was another deciding factor.

Amy Argo, Criss DePalma and Janet Hooper did a good job setting for Metropolitan, while the strongest hitters were Izzo and Lisa Kennedy.

The team has competed in the league for 14 seasons and was proud to go through the playoffs undefeated.

Excalibur Park earned the men's league championship with a thrilling victory over the Spiking Buddhas in a match that featured several exciting volleys and outstanding saves.

The Spiking Buddhas won the first match in the double-elimination tournament, but Excalibur took two of three in the second match, winning the first and third games.

"The core of our team has been together for 10 years, so we understand each other's strengths and weaknesses very well," said Wally Kiehler.

South spikers in semis

Grosse Pointe South's volleyball team suffered its first loss in the Macomb Area Conference White Division, but the Blue Devils didn't go down without a fight.

St. Clair posted a 13-15, 15-13, 15-7 victory over South, but the Blue Devils had some good performances.

Dana Mertz had seven ace serves. Heather Riedy collected nine kills and eight digs. Meghan McGahey had 10 assists and Dinah Zebot had five blocks.

Earlier, South won a MAC White game and advanced to the semifinals of the Ferndale Invitational tournament.

The Blue Devils beat division-rival Stevenson 15-6, 15-10. Riedy had six kills and three ace serves. McGahey had seven assists.

At Ferndale, South swept Bloomfield Hills Andover 15-10, 15-8 and defeated Milford Lakeland 15-5, 15-8 in pool

South gymnasts qualify

Grosse Pointe South's gymnastics team posted its second regional qualifying score when it had 118.05 points in a victory over Dearborn Edsel Ford.

Captain Jocelyn Lorenger led the Blue Devils with an 8.1 score on the vault and an 8.15 on the bars. Lindsey White and Jamie Lowden led the way on the balance beam with scores of 7.3 and 7.35, respectively.

White also had a personal-best 8.3 in floor exercise.

Other strong performances came from Courtney Schafer (7.55) and Kim Smale (6.4) on vault and Allie Schmitt (7.4) and Brianne VanElslander (7.2) in floor exercise. VanElslander's score was a personal best.

Others contributing were Kristen Schulte, Andrea Formolo, Julie Champion, Emily Mabley, Emily Strachen and Corrine Camaro.

"These girls are really starting to see their hard work pay off," said coach Jill Mattes. "We're expecting a very strong second half of the season."

play but the Blue Devils lost to Walled Lake Central 17-15, 15-12.

South beat Bloomfield Hills Lahser 10-15, 15-12, 15-13 in the quarterfinals but lost to tournament champion Walled Lake Central in the semifinals.

Beth Howson had 30 assists in the tournament. South's other team leaders were Zebot with 19 kills, Mertz with 16 digs and Tracy Summers with 12 aces.

South is 3-1 in the MAC White and 12-4-3 overall.

Design, Construction Expo '97 at Silverdome

"Minds and Materials in Motion" is the theme of the Design and Construction Expo '97. This is the midwest's largest construction exposition, scheduled for Feb. 5 and 6 at the Pontiac Silverdome.

According to show manager James McLaughlin, the theme is most appropriate considering what the industry accomplished last year and expects for this year. "The construction industry as a whole has been in dynamic motion for over a year, and there's no end in sight. Projects are under way everywhere you look. It's a great time for the industry, and that's been good news for our exposition," said McLaughlin.

The exposition has already benefited from the ripple effect of an expanding industry, according to McLaughlin. "As of Dec. 1, we had already filled 95 percent of the available space, and the phones were continuing to ring. The expo will be the largest show we have ever sponsored, with over 130,000 square feet representing more than 650 exhibit spaces."

In addition to presenting the latest in technology advances for the construction industry, Expo '97 will also be the backdrop for a press conference to announce another industry accomplishment. Over 20 of Michigan's construction associations have joined forces to produce a one-of-a-kind construction job-site safety video for children. The video, aimed at children in kindergarten through sixth grade, warns about the risks of playing on, or near, construction job sites. Over 200 third-graders from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties have been invited to participate in the premiere at the Silverdome on Feb. 5.

The show will be held at the Pontiac Silverdome on Feb. 5 and 6. Show hours will be from noon to 8 p.m. on both days.

Tickets are available at no charge prior to the show by calling (810) 972-1000. Attendees arriving at the show without a ticket will be charged a $10 admission fee.

THE NOSE "NOS"

Everyone picks on smokers these days. It is a hard habit to kick, even if you really want to. If your home is on the market, however, it may sell more quickly if you temporarily make it a smoke-free zone.

The sense of smell is the most powerful of all the five senses. Be sure to keep your home aired out while it is on the market. If the weather is good, you can smoke outside or while taking a walk or a drive. Avoid heavily-scented room fresheners which combined with the smoke can be worse than the smoke alone. It helps to wash the walls and have drapes and upholstered furniture professionally cleaned. This is really a serious issue for many buyers, so don't limit your audience.

Laura resides and works in Grosse Pointe as a top realtor for Coldwell Banker Schweitzer covering the Grosse Pointes, St. Clair Shores and Harper Woods.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying or selling, call her at (313) 886-4200 or (313) 201-8070.

Exclusive First Offering

Situated on one of the finest streets in Grosse Pointe just a few steps from the lake, this home has been lavishly updated and meticulously cared for, and it shows in every detail.

The first floor has a formal living room with fireplace, formal dining room, family room with fireplace, two powder rooms, laundry room and a state of the art new kitchen with Corian counters, halogen lighting and top of the line appliances.

The second floor has four generously proportioned bedrooms and three full bathrooms. The roof is new and there is a three car attached side entrance garage. Beautiful new professional landscaping and an underground sprinkler system for the lawn and all gardens.

This home is a masterpiece in every way!

Birds beat the cold using warm weather tricks

When you sit inside your comfortable house on these coldest of days, you have to give thought to the plight of birds. How do they survive these extreme temperatures and the winter storms that we are so sheltered from? What do they do to survive our winters?

Birds have the ability to sense upcoming changes in the weather. It is not uncommon to see increased feeder activity prior to a snowstorm. Birds eat more in anticipation that they may not be able to eat as readily once the inclement weather has arrived. Birds will also limit their activities in times of severe cold so as not to waste energy.

They are not as defensive of their territories when weather is severe. They will share feeders in an area that is usually regarded as their exclusive territory. Some birds store seed in their well-developed crops just before retiring for the night. This allows them to digest the food overnight and provides them with the energy they need to survive the rigors of winter.

Birds have a greater resistance to the cold than mammals do as a result of a number of differences in their structure in comparison with mammals. First of all, they are covered with feathers which allows them to insulate themselves. Their lower legs and feet are tendinous as opposed to being fleshy. Their bills are made of horn which gives up less heat than skin. Exposed skin of birds is minimal. They do not have projecting fleshy ears, tails or legs from which heat loss may occur.

Birds in northern areas such as ours are known to grow more feathers for winter than they have in the summer, in preparation for the cold months ahead. Smaller birds also have more feathers per unit of body weight than larger birds do. Additionally, birds have air sacs inside of their bodies which provide more complete inner ventilation, helping to regulate body heat. Birds will squat to keep their feet covered in feathers in order to prevent frostbite.

Birds

Birds will shiver in order to increase heat production within their body. Shivering converts muscular energy into heat. Birds will huddle for warmth inside a nest cavity or birdhouse, often-times sharing the space with many others of the same species.

It is not uncommon to see starlings gathered around the chimney to take advantage of the rising warm air. Other birds use the same technique under the exhaust of dryers.

On windy days, birds will stay sheltered in evergreens or in nest boxes or natural cavities. When the wind ruffles its feathers, the bird experiences a greater exposure of cold to its body. If a bird does feed during windy conditions, it will face the wind in order to keep its feathers from being ruffled.

Birds compensate for the losses to their species during the severe winters by reproducing in great numbers during years when winters are not as devastating. Therefore, when a harsh winter costs the species in mortality, the species can afford to take a loss. The carolina wren is a bird that reflects this tactic quite noticeably. In Michigan, we are at the far north extent of this bird's range. In summer, the population of the carolina wren edges northward from its usual southern range, gaining momentum during mild winter years in order to offset the losses that eventually cut its numbers back.

What part can we play in trying to help birds make it through the winters? Keep feeders full — especially at night so that the birds can stock up with a bedtime snack and also first thing in the morning so that they can start their day by restoring their energy. Keeping seed dry and replacing seed that has become wet will help to prevent disease as a result of mold. Birds need the higher fat content of suet, peanuts and sunflower. Offering shelled sunflower seeds helps save the energy that it would take a bird to shell the seed which can be vital in times of severe cold.

Following these tips can assure that you will help the birds as you enjoy them from the warmth of your home.

Bon Secours — among the 1st — offers BirthCare options

Bon Secours Hospital has earned its reputation as a leading provider of women's health care programs in southeast Michigan. In fact, 10 years ago, it was the first licensed Detroit-area hospital to feature full-service, single-room maternity care.

Here, the entire birthing experience — labor, delivery, recovery and postpartum (LDRP) — takes place in a comfortable, private room, with the expertise and emergency support of the traditional delivery room.

BirthCare at Bon Secours encompasses the complete obstetrical process, from prenatal preparation and care, to educational classes for expectant parents, grandparents and siblings. Certified lactation consultants are available to assist new moms and their babies to assure a successful breastfeeding experience before they leave the hospital. And once home, they are a phone call away should questions arise.

"When a woman is admitted to our BirthCare unit, she receives consistent, individualized care by her assigned nurse who typically follows her through the entire delivery. Being part of a community hospital allows the BirthCare staff to focus on more personalized care for patients and their families," says Linda Kovtun, nurse manager of Women's/Children's Services at Bon Secours.

Expectant couples can choose from three distinctive programs under the umbrella of BirthCare services. Each delivery is unique, so moms can tailor their BirthCare experience according to their needs or desires.

- Bed, Breakfast and Baby — Bed and breakfast accommodations are available on the BirthCare unit for mothers who are discharged, but whose babies require a continued hospital stay.

- BirthCare Home Advantage — A personalized program that allows parents to enjoy various childbirth and breast-feeding classes, home visits after delivery by a Bon Secours BirthCare registered nurse and 24-hour phone assistance.

- Rest and Reassurance — If mom requires or feels she needs an extra day in the hospital that will not be covered by her insurance, Bon Secours Hospital will cover the cost of the extra day. Home Advantage education and evaluation takes place in the hospital.

Peggy Wenturine's experience with Bon Secours' BirthCare unit was exceptional. The care she received from people such as registered nurse Sandi Roth made the birthing event that much more special.

Bon Secours launches 'Newborn Channel'

Bon Secours of Michigan Healthcare System has announced the birth of the "Newborn Channel," a closed-circuit TV network delivering post-natal information directly to new mothers in their hospital maternity rooms.

The Newborn Channel is broadcast in English and Spanish in more than 375 hospitals nationwide, reaching an estimated 1.1 million new mothers (29 percent of U.S. births).

According to Newborn Channel President Junior Winoker, "Its success and growth can be attributed to the increased need for information on postpartum and infant care. Working with hospitals all over the country, we are able to help provide that information in the comfort and convenience of the maternity room. That way, even with today's shorter hospital stays, the new mother is better prepared to take care of her baby."

The Newborn Channel delivers 24 hours of continuous programming, free of charge, to new mothers. It provides new mothers with up-to-date information on such topics as breast-feeding, general baby care, preventive care, postpartum self-care and postpartum depression.

"We're excited about adding this educational new service. It will enhance the already progressive BirthCare experience we offer new moms delivering at Bon Secours. Our maternity nurses strongly endorse the Newborn Channel. It is an effective vehicle for helping them prepare their patients for motherhood," says Linda Kovtun, nurse manager, Bon Secours Women's/Children's Services.

The Newborn Channel also complies with the joint commission on the Accreditation of Healthcare Organization's recommendations for closed-circuit patient education.

Mother's first day.

"My sister Kate and I have always done everything together. But differently."

"We both sang in the school choir."

"I was a soprano."

"I was an alto."

"We both went to the same college."

"I joined a law firm."

"I joined the Peace Corps."

"And we both went to the Family Childbirth Center at Cottage Hospital to have our babies."

"I wanted an obstetrician."

Everyone is different. At Henry Ford Cottage Hospital we want your first days as a new mother to be as special as they will be memorable. That is why we offer expectant moms so many options through our WomanWise health services network. At our Family Childbirth Center, you design a personalized birth plan, so you can decide the best delivery style for you. You can choose from Family Practice or Ob/Gyn physicians, or the East Side's largest team of Certified Nurse Midwives.

"We both wanted to stay in private Labor/Delivery/Recovery/Postpartum rooms so we could be in one comfortable suite for the entire experience."

"And we both wanted to take classes on childbirth preparation, infant care and breastfeeding."

"We probably should have taken the one on sibling relationships."

Henry Ford Cottage Hospital offers all the things you want, such as visitor schedules that you create and LDRPs where your baby stays with you for the length of your visit. Plus all the things you need, like ultrasound testing, prenatal exams and educational classes. And a full staff of pediatricians is available for your child's ongoing care. In addition, you have access to over 2,000 physicians in the Henry Ford Health System - a complete health network with a national reputation for medical excellence. While no two people can agree on everything, every expectant mom wants her delivery to be a great experience. The Family Childbirth Center gives you all the options you need to make that possible.

"We even delivered two weeks apart so we were able to share each other's big moment."

"It was a great experience for both of us."

"I had a boy."

"I had a girl. Of course."

Family Childbirth center focuses on healthy, happy start for mom and baby

Every mother deserves a happy, healthy pregnancy and delivery. At Henry Ford Cottage Hospital's Family Childbirth Center, this philosophy extends from the quality of care to the quality of the experience as well.

"We want all mothers to have a wonderful experience. So we've designed our center to offer the practitioner choices and delivery options our mothers want. The Family Childbirth Center provides very special, personal mother-baby nursing care, a comfortable and attractive atmosphere for themselves and their guests, and a unique pre-natal education and follow-up care component," says Pamela Joy, RNC, BS and clinical manager for the Family Childbirth Center.

Women who plan to deliver at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital have the ability to choose between several types of practitioners, either in private practice or from the Henry Ford Medical Group practice. These include physicians in Obstetrics and Gynecology or Family Practice, as well as Certified Nurse Midwives.

Henry Ford Health System's Nurse Midwives are growing in popularity due to the returning belief that childbirth is a normal, healthy process that does not necessarily require physician intervention. They take extra time to listen to their patients, and teach new mothers how to care for themselves and their newborns.

Whether she chooses an Ob/Gyn, a Family Practitioner or a Certified Nurse Midwife, the mother-to-be herself is at the center of the collaborative childbirth team at Cottage. "We have an exceptional group of nurses here. They truly advocate for the mother, letting her design her own experience within, of course, the limits of safety for herself and her baby," Joy says.

interest in their patients, suggesting and assisting with various comfort measures during labor, like relaxing showers, massages or warm packs to help the process along and reduce the need for medication.

"Their close, personal attention allows us to provide maternity care for most high risk mothers, those who may be experiencing blood pressure problems or premature membrane rupture, for example, in the comfort of the LDRP setting, rather than requiring them to be transferred out," adds Joy.

After delivery, the "couplet care" begins as the nurse works closely with the mother, helping her learn to breastfeed, bathe and diaper the infant, as well as instructing her on what to expect over the first few weeks. Then, the mother, her physician or nurse midwife and nurse together decide when she is strong and confident enough to take her baby home.

Since Henry Ford Cottage Hospital designed its LDRP suites in the early spring of 1991, they've received rave reviews from patient families and guests. Created to be a comfortable and attractive homelike atmosphere, many people compare the architectural detail and cherrywood and chintz furnishings to those found in an elegant hotel. But this elegant hotel room comes with the medical resources and expertise of Henry Ford Health System, including a pediatrician on site 24-hours-a-day.

New families create their own visitor schedule so they can share some special moments with others and have quiet and privacy when they need it. "And, unlike some LDRPs, at Cottage our mothers get to remain in this comfortable, private room, with its dining table and reclining sleep chair, for the entire length of their stay. Whether they deliver naturally or by C-section, everyone enjoys the same advantages," Joy says.

Sometimes the most comforting part of childbirth is simply knowing what is happening and why. Accordingly, expectant mothers and their coaches are encouraged to sign up for childbirth preparation classes at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital in the fourth month of pregnancy, even though they won't begin attending classes until they are 28 to 32 weeks along.

Those patients who are cared for by a Henry Ford physician or Certified Nurse Midwife have the added advantage of the Partnership in Pregnancy and Parenting (PIPP) program.

"PIPP provides education and support throughout the entire pregnancy — even after mom and baby have returned home," explains Joy.

At the first visit, and subsequent visits, mothers receive a PIPP binder and a series of helpful, printed handouts that explain the stages of pregnancy and what to expect before, during and after delivery. At each visit, the appropriate handouts are reviewed, then taken home for future reference.

St. John PEM provides 'big' care for 'little' kids

When a child has to go to an emergency room (ER) the experience can be frightening for a little one who sees the world from a much different vantage point than an adult. At St. John Hospital and Medical Center, a new emergency room design is helping to make ER visits more child-friendly.

The newly completed Pediatric Emergency Module (PEM) is one of eight modules which allow patients to be treated in emergency areas that are specific to their needs. Other modules include: Cardiology, Behavioral Medicine, Women's Health, Medicine, Trauma/Orthopedics, Express Care and Resuscitation.

The PEM, which treats infants and children up to the age of 17, is staffed by physicians, nurses and technicians who have completed specialized training in pediatric emergency medicine. Another benefit of PEM is the atmosphere and the specially sized equipment that is utilized there.

Robert Sills, DO, one of five pediatric emergency medicine specialists on staff at St. John, explains: "Pediatric Emergency physicians are specially trained in the diseases and emergencies of children. Having advanced training in the growth, development and diseases of children helps us to be better advocates for these patients."

St. John's PEM also provides a comfortable, less-threatening atmosphere for the children and their parents. Separated from the adult population, children have access to crayons and coloring books, infant formulas and juices. "Putting the children at ease is often a first step in treating the child," says Dr. Sills.

In addition to the comfortable atmosphere, St. John's pediatric emergency module is also equipped with specially sized beds, medications and equipment that has been designed for use with young children.

Perhaps one of the greatest strengths of the PEM is the availability of pediatric subspecialists for consultation, when needed. More than 60 pediatric subspecialists on staff at St. John represent specialists as diverse as Cardiology, Endocrinology, Gastroenterology, Hematology/Oncology and Urology. "Each of these subspecialists provides our pediatric emergency physicians and patients with access to their extensive expertise in their chosen field. This allows St. John to provide an unparalleled level of pediatric emergency care," says Dr. Sills.

As a Level I Emergency Center and the only designated trauma center on the eastside, St. John also offers transport teams that are available to pick up critically ill children and bring them to St. John for virtually any life-threatening situation. St. John is currently the only eastside hospital to offer all of these specialized pediatric services in one place.

St. John Hospital and Medical Center is the flagship hospital of St. John Health System, a growing network of community-based hospitals and health care services located throughout Wayne, Oakland, Macomb and St. Clair counties.

Secure your child's future with the right day care

Parents need to protect their children for the future. Therefore, one of the job descriptions that goes along with being a good parent is to provide future financial security for the children, including budgeting for the cost of raising a child, arranging for appropriate child care, planning on how to afford college tuitions, and purchasing life and disability insurance.

"Securing Your Child's Future: A Financial and Legal Planner for Parents," by Winifred Conkling, can help parents best prepare for their children's future. The book is divided into two parts — legal matters and money matters. Included in the book are worksheets and checklists of decisions that need to be made and resource sections that provide the names of organizations, books and references to check for more information.

According to Conkling, choosing the best child care for children is an important decision. When both parents work outside of the home, small children need to be left in "someone's" care. The question is who is the best someone to trust their children's care to.

BON SECOURS BIRTHCARE.

WE SET THE TRACK RECORD.

More than ten years ago, Bon Secours made headlines as metro Detroit's first hospital to bring expectant moms single-room maternity care. Our BirthCare unit was the pioneer in family-centered childbirth. And, it still is.

Today, Bon Secours BirthCare is recognized for the outstanding care and personal attention given to mom and baby.

visits the patient's home within 24 hours to examine mother and baby and continue the education about breastfeeding and caring for the baby, and to answer any specific questions or concerns.

The next day, she will visit again, then follow-up with a phone call in two weeks. "This helps us check on you and your baby's health, as well as remind you to schedule future doctor's appointments. The home health nurse and Family Childbirth Center professional staff maintain communication throughout the entire process, so both understand how you and your baby are doing," says Joy.

Whether it's your first time or your third, the Henry Ford Cottage Hospital Family Childbirth Center and its associated obstetrician/gynecologists, family practioners and certified nurse midwives are working together so that all mothers have a wonderful childbirth experience, each in her own individual way. Don't count fat grams in infant's diet

When it comes to the nutrition of their infants and toddlers, health-conscious parents should put their fat worries aside.

"It's very important for proper brain and nerve development that babies have an adequate daily fat intake until 24 months of age," says Jeanne Lewandowski, MD, medical director of the Bon Secours pediatric department.

Construction of the body's superhighway of nerves takes place at a rapid rate from birth until 24 months. Fat is the primary ingredient of myelin, which is a sheath that coats most nerve cells. Myelin serves as an electrical insulator that speeds the flow of nerve impulses.

"The fat in babies' diets is what lays the myelin down around the nerves throughout the body, but particularly in the brain," explains Dr. Lewandowski.

By the time a child reaches 24 months, his or her nerve development begins to slow down, so their fat intake can be decreased but not severely restricted.

To assure proper nutrition, the Academy of Pediatrics recommends breast milk for the first 12 months of a baby's life. But this isn't always realistic for some women, especially for working moms.

If mom chooses not to breast-feed, Dr. Lewandowski recommends an iron-fortified formula for the first 12 months of life.

At six months, most babies will start to take baby foods, which should be introduced one food item at a time to make sure the baby can tolerate it. For example, babies can be given a vegetable or fruit selection with their cereal a few times a day for five days.

Breast milk or formula intake should be reduced slightly as foods are introduced. After six months, if baby is tolerating a variety of iron-rich foods, parents can begin introducing whole cow's milk.

"It's imperative, though, that the baby is eating a variety of foods containing iron before he or she begins taking cow's milk.

Parents should limit milk intake to less than 26 to 32 ounces a day, as too much milk can actually inhibit the belly from absorbing iron and other important nutrients. There are some really chubby milk-fed babies who look healthy but are actually iron-deficient," says Dr. Lewandowski.

Once a child reaches age 2, parents can begin reducing the fat in his or her diet by changing to 2 percent or 1 percent milk, as recommended by their pediatrician.

Waiting for baby can be frustrating and overdue

By Fredric D. Frigoletto, Jr., M.D.

Most people can recall at least one baby who was born after the due date. Waiting for the onset of labor can be a frustrating time for mother and relatives alike.

Eighty percent of women give birth between 38 and 42 weeks of pregnancy, but about 10 percent of normal pregnancies extend beyond 42 weeks. These are called "postdate" or "post-term" pregnancies.

Since it becomes more difficult later in pregnancy to determine the due date, seeking prenatal care early in pregnancy is important in setting an accurate date.

Although most postdate babies are born healthy and delivered safely, certain risks may increase when a baby does not arrive by two weeks after the due date. These risks are thought to be due to a decreased supply of food and oxygen to the fetus from an aging placenta (the channel through which nutrients and other substances pass from mother to fetus). This results in decreased amniotic fluid (liquid inside the sac surrounding the fetus), thick meconium (greenish waste from the fetus's bowels) and the possibility that meconium will get into the lungs of the fetus.

When a pregnancy is post-term, the doctor may suggest several tests to monitor fetal well-being. These include:

- Kick count — Mothers can keep a record of how often they feel the fetus move. A healthy fetus tends to have about the same amount of activity every day. A sudden change in fetal movements, especially a decrease, may signal fetal distress.

- Electronic fetal monitoring —

Electronic instruments can be placed on the mother's abdomen to measure the fetus' heart rate in response to its own body movements, or the fetal response to uterine contractions.

- Ultrasound — As the fetus approaches full term, changes normally occur within the amniotic fluid and the placenta. Ultrasound, which uses sound waves to create two-dimensional pictures of the fetus, is another way to monitor the health status of the fetus.

If the baby's life or health is in danger, a doctor may decide to induce labor, or in some instances may need to perform a cesarean delivery.

In most cases, tests and careful monitoring during the final weeks of pregnancy and during labor can help ensure a safe delivery. If your baby is past due, discuss your options with your doctor.

Coping with your children's allergies

Many children are plagued by irritating, stinging allergies. Oftentimes their parents feel helpless and wish that there was something they could do to ease their children's discomfort. If your child has allergies, awareness may be your best weapon.

The most common food allergens are dairy products, eggs, strawberries, fish and shellfish, cereals, and some food additives. Food allergies can sometimes develop when a child is weaned too early. Try to breast-feed infants for at least the first six months of life, and longer if possible.

Introduce new foods slowly and carefully; make sure the baby has adapted to the new food before moving on to the next one. Start with baby rice and millet, and do not give wheat or milk during the first year.

"The Complete Home Healer," by Angela Smyth suggests identifying the foods or drinks to which you or your child may be allergic by creating lists of possible allergens. Any food that appears more than once on the following lists is a potential risk:

- List any foods that disagree with you or produce fatigue, skin reactions, hyperactivity, irritability and so on.

- List foods or drinks you consume every day.
- List any foods you regularly crave.
- List foods you would miss if unavailable.
- List any liquids you have begun to eat recently.

Knowledge is power when it comes to allergies. Be aware of the symptoms of allergic reactions like cramps, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, gas, migraine headaches, skin eruptions and irritations, hyperactivity, mood swings, fatigue, and food cravings.

The ABCs of decorating for kids and their future

Whether starting from scratch with a nursery or transforming an adolescent's room into a sophisticated pre-teen's retreat, decorating a child's room is a tall order. Thibaut, a leading manufacturer of wall coverings and fabrics, compiled these tips to help parents create rooms kids of all ages can call home.

- Make it a family affair — Involve your child in the decorating process, but make sure this is a room that you can live with, too. Shop around first, and then share your choices with your child. You might even tack wallpaper samples and fabric swatches to the wall and have a family meeting to discuss your options.

- Pick a theme — Personal touches, like a child's original artwork or treasured toys, are good inspirations for themes. It's easy to create a coordinated look with the wide variety of wallpapers, borders and companion fabrics available. Thibaut "Imagination" collection offers everything from celestial and circus motifs to bold stripes and checker board pat-

- Plan for growth — You'll find that basic patterns like geometrics or stripes, make classic statements that will last throughout childhood. If the room is set aside as a nursery for younger siblings, or you plan to redecorate as your child grows older, try more traditional juvenile patterns.

- Think like your child — Your tastes are not necessarily your offspring's, so you may make compromises on the overall theme. Yet both of you can still have fun with a little creativity. Suspend coordinating fabrics from the ceiling as an alternate to a canopy bed, make a fort in a room with an Old West motif, or revive an old toy chest or favorite chair by covering with wallpaper borders.

- Seek advice — You'll find retailers a helpful source for good decorating advice. Store displays, wall covering books and magazine articles are also great inspirations. For the names of local retailers, call Thibaut at 1-800-223-0704.

You and your baby: Treating diaper rash

By RICHARD J. BROWN, M.D.

Diaper rash, or diaper dermatitis, is one of the most common skin inflammations in infants. The diaper area is vulnerable to inflammation because the baby's sensitive skin is warm and moist, and it is exposed to bacteria and irritants, like the ammonia compounds in urine.

Most people agree that diapers are a necessity, but they can be a problem for baby's skin trapping the irritants that lead to diaper rash — and can make for one cranky baby! How can you best care for your baby's skin?

The best way to prevent diaper rash is to keep the baby dry — by frequently changing the diaper, exposing baby's skin to the air (when practical), and applying a diaper ointment to provide a protective layer between baby's sensitive skin and irritants.

Unfortunately, no matter how well you care for your baby's skin, diaper rash is likely to occur at some time. When that happens, quick, soothing treatment is best for your baby. If the diaper rash does not improve within several days, or worsens, contact your pediatrician.

Diaper rash ointments, like Balmex, effectively treat diaper rash by reducing redness and inflammation by providing an effective barrier against wetness. Balmex also has a pleasant, fresh scent and isn't thick or sticky, so it goes on and wipes off easily. In fact, four out of five moms preferred it over the leading diaper-rash treatment in recent clinical tests.

For a free brochure on diaper rash, write to Consumer Services, Dept. B, Block Drug Company Inc., 257 Cornelison Ave., Jersey City, NJ 07302-3198.

NEW ARRIVALS OF 1997

Grosse Pointe News and The Connection newspapers are planning their 3rd annual special edition featuring the babies of the past year. We hope you (and the little one) will participate by supplying us with a photograph of your child (only 1997 babies, please) for publication in this section.

This tabloid will be published January 29, 1998. Your child's picture, along with other 1997 area babies, will be the main attraction! News and advertising about clothing, feeding, educating and caring for your child will also be included. It will be very informative as well as a commemorative edition for you!

Please send a cute, clear photo (color or black & white, home or studio produced, preferably smaller than a 5x7) to Grosse Pointe News & The Connection, 96 Kercheval Grosse Pointe Farms Michigan 48236. Attention: Kim Kozlowski, Display Advertising. Complete the information slip with your child's full name, date of birth and hospital and return it with your photo. Please print your name on the back of the photo so you can pick it up at our office after printing.

Your picture must be received in our office no later than Tuesday December 23rd, earlier would assist our production schedule. (Late November and December birth photos may be submitted until January 6, 1998.)

We look forward to producing our annual "Baby Edition" and are sure you want your little one included. A limited number of extra copies will be available for purchase to give to family and friends.

The Grosse Pointe News & The Connection require a $10.00 fee to cover production costs. Please include a check, money order or credit card number with your photo.

When it comes to having a baby, mothers throughout the area know exactly what to expect. Because St. John Health System offers unsurpassed obstetrics services at both River District Hospital and St. John Hospital & Medical Center. Our coverage is wide-reaching in other ways as well. Both River District Hospital and St. John Hospital & Medical Center have the newest birthing centers in their area. And St. John Hospital & Medical Center is a major center for high risk pregnancies, so we can provide moms and babies everything from prenatal to more specialized care. All supported by the area's leading perinatologists and neonatologists. And as a system, we can coordinate a patient's care between facilities. All of which has earned us a very large following. Not to mention a very small one.
