Lake St. Clair high-water levels near record set in 1986

By John Lundberg
Staff Writer

Lake St. Clair has reached alarming water levels which now have reached one foot below record levels recorded during 1986, the year many businesses and residents sustained heavy flood damage.

According to city services director Tom Barwin, the water level recorded on April 1 was 576.35 feet above sea level — about one foot below the highest level recorded in 1986. The reading was also taken on a calm day, which means any reading is low compared to a rough day with high easterly winds. "We're not trying to scare anyone," he said. "(But) everyone should be cognizant of these lake levels."

Barwin added that the lake typically reaches its peak levels in June, when the record levels were recorded in 1986. The lake still has to absorb an influx of water from Lake Superior caused by snow melting.

The city has been notified of impending high water coming from Lake St. Clair during 1997 by the Army Corps of Engineers.

St. Clair Shores city manager Mark Wollenweber said residents need to be prepared to take steps to combat possible flooding. The high risk area is east of Jefferson, including canals, and flooding will likely be experienced if high easterly winds occur.

An informational meeting regarding the high water levels of the lake will be held on Wednesday April 9, at 7 p.m. in the Lakeview High School auditorium. Experts from the Corps of Engineers will be on hand to bring residents up to date on the most recent data available regarding flooding and sandbagging. Any resident who has questions is urged to attend this meeting.

Last Thursday, March 27, the temperature topped out at a balmy 70 degrees, enticing people around the Pointes out of their houses and offices and out to the Parks, including Farms moms and grandmas and their children, above, at the Pier Park playscape.

Meanwhile, work has begun on a new Tot Lot, right, a $50,000 project.

Pier Park to install up to $50,000 in play equipment for toddlers

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

When the Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park opens this Memorial Day, it will be celebrating a season of big change.

The park's Tot Lot is the newest item to get approval from the Farms City Council to receive a facelift. The proposed Tot Lot renovations join the $225,000 in renovations of the Bathhouse currently being worked on for use this summer season.

At the council's March meeting, it unanimously voted approval of up to $50,000 for a complete overhaul of the Tot Lot — a play area with equipment particularly geared toward 2-to-5-year olds.

The planned renovations will be the first for the Tot Lot in more than 20 years. Farms Parks and Recreation Director Dick Huhn said.

In fact, the Tot Lot and Bathhouse renovations are "one of the larger renovations projects taken on in years," Huhn said, adding that those improvements have been far less disruptive than the 1986 repaving of the park's parking lot and construction of the new front gate house and park entrance.

Park administrators and an eight-member Tot Lot

Renovation Committee, consisting of area parents, were reviewing bids from two contractors as of press time.

Huhn said he expects the project to actually cost somewhere more in the realm of $20,000 to $30,000. Costs will be kept down by not contracting out all the work. Huhn said some Farms parks and recreation employees, and department of public works employees, will assist with the Tot Lot overhaul.

They expect to order the equipment by March 28, Huhn said. Installation of new play equipment likely

Site-based budget process under way in Grosse Pointe public schools

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

The process of setting budgets for the various sites and programs in the Grosse Pointe Public School System is well under way.

It began earlier this year when the Program Advisory Committees (PACs) for each of the district's 14 buildings met and discussed priorities with the building principals.

PACS are made up of teachers, parents and members of the community who do not have children in the schools. The role is voluntary. The site-based budgeting process has been in use since 1988. Before that, funds for each site were allocated almost entirely by the central administration.

The proposed budget packages for 1997-98 will be presented by PAC members to the school board in a series of hearings in May, and are subject to further review by the central administration and the school board before a final budget is approved in June.

"The parameters for next year's budget are basically the same; we tweaked it a little bit but nothing major this time around," said superintendent Suzanne Klein.

The school district is working with a "target" budget amount of about $75 million for next year, said Chris Fenton, assistant superintendent for business. To support that, the school system may levy about 6.6 or 6.7 mills (of the "bold harmless" or "gap" millage approved by voters in 1994). The school system received $6.275 per-pupil from the state for the 1996-97 school year and is expecting an increase that may be between $137 and $158 for next year.

The public education system in Michigan is expected to receive a 6.3 percent, or $541 million increase, according to the 1997-98 budget released by Gov. John Engler in late February. The total recommended school aid budget for the next fiscal year is $9.1 billion compared to the $8.6 billion for the 1996-97 year.

Klein said PACs are made aware of what they cannot make recommendations on:

- Retirement contributions, which are set by the state
- Salaries, which are negotiated and set forth by contracts
- Mandatory curricular programs
- What they can make recommendations on:
- Defining what the school's goals and priorities are how will the budget reflect them?

Farmer Jack store clears first hurdle to build on site

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

A more modern, larger supermarket in Grosse Pointe Woods came one step closer to reality when the Grosse Pointe Woods Planning Commission recommended to the Woods city council a plan that would mean the end of the former Red Lobster restaurant building and the beginning of a new era in Grosse Pointe grocery shopping.

The commission, at its regular meeting on March 25, held hearings on Farmer Jack plans concerning the recently purchased Red Lobster restaurant building located at 20422 Mack.

The plans as presented to the commission, said Woods city administrator Peter Thomas, call for the destruction of the restaurant. Before it was a Red Lobster it was a bowling alley, and the building is quite large, Thomas added.

A 35,000-square-foot supermarket would be built on the site, Thomas said. The current Farmer Jack supermarket, located next door, would then be torn down and the property would be used for parking. The plan also calls for Farmer Jack to lease part of Christ the King Lutheran Church's parking lot, which will be used for customer parking.

The Farmer Jack plan had the support of both St. Michael's Episcopal Church and Christ the King," said Thomas. "Their land abuts the Farmer Jack property."

Farmer Jack representatives also requested a conditional rezoning of some property they wish to use because the property is currently zoned for community facility use, not business. The commission recommended that the council also approve the rezoning request.

The commission, Thomas said, did ask Farmer Jack representatives to make some minor alterations to their plans, including making the grocery store's parking lot lights to be similar to the decorative lighting currently on Mack.

'The Farmer Jack plan had the support of both St. Michael's Episcopal Church and Christ the King. Their land abuts the Farmer Jack property.'

Peter Thomas
Woods city administrator

Farmer Jack representatives also told the commission that the trees that are currently at the rear of the parking lot and in front of residential homes need to be preserved, Thomas said. Their thinking is that the trees act as sound buffers and help obscure homeowners' view of the parking lot. They also want to put up a board-on-board wooden fence to further separate the parking lot from the homes.

This fence exceeds heights set by city ordinances, Thomas said, and the council must grant a variance in order for the fence to be built. The commission recommended that the council do so.

The commission's recommendations were placed on the council's April 21 meeting agenda, said Thomas. The council meets at 7:30 p.m. in the city municipal court chamber.

The council, acting as the zoning board of appeals, will then review the plan and hear from those who wish to speak out in favor of or against the plan. The council, said Thomas, is not obligated to follow the planning commission's recommendations and may demand alterations to the plan before approving it, approve the plans as presented or reject the plans outright.

Looks as if Pointes need more pools

The swimming pool at Grosse Pointe High School is one of the community's most popular spots. It is busy practically all the time. This picture was taken during one of the Saturday morning sessions when the youngest group works out. There are about 75 in the class and when they all get in the pool at once, it's hard to find water. Members of the high school varsity team help instruct the kids. There are swimming classes for all ages and both sexes. (Grosse Pointe News photo April 3, 1947) will take place early to mid-May, Huhn said.

The plan includes the installation of new metal and plastic play equipment that will meet current safety guidelines, along with a special fiber and wood-chip play surface that will comfort the fall of a toddler using the playground.

The color scheme of the equipment is red, green and blue, which is consistent with the park's other play area which enjoyed a $90,000 renovation some four years ago, Huhn said.

While that play area is targeted mostly for children ages 5 to 13, it does contain some transitional areas, including a small slide, that would attract children ages 2 to 5.

However, the new Tot Lot will focus on equipment that will be more enticing to its intended age group. Benches for parents will also be a part of the plan, as will small tables and benches at which toddlers may sit.

City of Grosse Pointe resident Paul Muelle is the landscape architect for the project. Muelle — an architect for Huron Clinton Metro Parks — works daily on architectural projects relating to unique properties and concerns associated with recreational needs and safety.

"We're thrilled to have Paul working with us; he has tremendous experience in this area," Huhn said.

Muelle also served as the architect for the Richard Elementary School playscape.

Wollenweber said the city is not encouraging anyone to wait for the meeting, however. Because of the current conditions, he is advising residents to act now to prevent possible flooding.

The city is taking all steps necessary to assist residents. Officials have placed a lake measuring graphic behind city hall on 11 Mile to help demonstrate to residents how high the water level is. Up-to-date water levels are also being broadcast on the city's local cable Channel 5 to inform residents of conditions. The city is prepared to do whatever is necessary to safeguard life and property.

Sandbags are available from the department of public works. The first 100 bags are free for residents living east of Jefferson. After that they are 35 cents apiece, and sand is available for delivery at $5 a yard.

Barwin said since accurately predicting the weather depends on "100 variables," no one can predict how far overland flooding will extend, and city officials are advising residents of this potential condition so that they may immediately take the steps to preserve their property.

Sewer separation work hard on Park roads

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park residents can look forward to some intense road repair later this year, thanks to a harsh winter and continued construction of a separated sewer system.

City manager Dale Krajniak said that construction on the separated sewer system will continue for the rest of the calendar year. Right now crews are working in and around Patterson Park, building the lift or pump station that will act as the collection and discharge point for storm water into Lake St. Clair.

The lift station is being built inside the park, said Krajniak. It will be 40 feet under the ground so when it is complete there will be only a small building marking where the station will be in the park.

In addition to building the lift station in the park, construction crews are also out on Essex working on a deep tunnel project, said Krajniak. This involves the use of underground drilling equipment to dig the tunnels needed to place the pipes that will feed into the lift station in Patterson Park.

"Deep tunneling is progressing," Krajniak said. "The tunneling along Balfour should be completed in the next 30 days. Our next deep tunneling project will be along Fairfax from Barrington to Trombley, and from Trombley back to the Essex project that is currently being completed."

Because most of the tunnel is underground, disruptions to streets won't be as severe as in the Essex area, said Krajniak. That project is where five pipes converge to transport water to the lift station. As a result, the hole in the ground has to be bigger than in other areas around the Park.

Road repair projects must be coordinated with the sewer construction project, said Krajniak. It does not make sense to repair roads now that might have to be dug up in a year to build a separated storm sewer line, he noted.

Later this spring crews will begin repaving the streets torn up as a result of the winter sewer construction. Repairs could not begin earlier, explained Krajniak, because of state regulations limiting the weight of construction equipment on roads during winter because of the cold.

"Cold roads are more vulnerable roads," said Krajniak. "So during the winter there are weight restrictions placed on roads. As a result, asphalt manufacturers don't even begin producing the asphalt needed for road resurfacing until April."

"Streets that will be repaired this year will be milled and then resurfaced. The city engineer has just started inspecting streets to determine which ones rate the highest priority in terms of need of repair."

Part of the problem, said Krajniak, is that the winter of 1995-96 was especially harsh on the city's roads.

"We didn't get a lot of snow this year, but we did have a lot of freezes followed by thaws followed by freezes," Krajniak said. "That kind of weather is harder on roads than if the temperature stayed below freezing for the winter."

The reason thaw and freeze weather is hard on the roads, said Krajniak, is that water gets between cracks in the street. When water freezes, it expands, and this causes the cracks to become bigger, which eventually leads to potholes and generally poor roads.

In a few weeks, the city engineer will present his road repair priority list, said Krajniak. The city has about $200,000 budgeted for repairs this year. And once the city council receives the list, a vote will be taken on which roads to repair.

Sweet spring

Claiming he just always wanted to do it, a Woods man, Howard German of North Brys, went to the Grosse Pointe library, read some books and successfully tapped his maple tree. In the first three days, he collected 3-1/2 gallons of sap, which boiled down to 1-1/2 cups of syrup — and the tap's still running!

Ameritech aim to improve service doesn't please all

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Ameritech is planning improvements to its cellular telephone network that should provide more services and better sound for customers. But for some customers, the solution doesn't really help.

City of Grosse Pointe resident Chuck Howe is a big user of cellular telephones. Through his business, he said he has about 15 cellular telephones, and because of the popularity of cell phones, has had difficulty in using the service.

When he called to complain about the difficulty in getting an open line, Ameritech representatives told him that beginning in late 1997, the company should be able to provide better service by using digital equipment that breaks down radio signals into computer codes, making it easier to transmit. This method compresses the radio signal, freeing more airwaves for customer use.

Currently, Ameritech uses analog equipment which sends voices over the airwaves directly. Ameritech spokesperson Cheryl Conway said that the company will also have more radio bands to send phone signals with, so that should also make it easier to get a line with a digital cellular telephone.

The new system will be overlaid on top of the old analog system, said Conway. So Ameritech's 2.5 million analog cellular phone users will still be able to make and receive calls on their old cell phones. Digital telephones will have better sound, and additional services like voice mail as well.

That's the problem, said Howe. If someone wants to take advantage of the new system, that person will have to purchase new cellular telephones. For someone like him, who must have several phones, that's an expensive proposition.

"What I object to is the notion that there is a magic bullet coming down the line that will fix the problem of sound quality and getting a line when you want it," said Howe. "In order to get that magic bullet, you have to purchase new equipment. In the meantime, Ameritech is still selling analog telephone service, adding new customers to an already saturated cell phone system."

Lee's Resale experiences trouble

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Woods police officers have received a number of complaints from area customers about difficulties encountered in receiving their property or money owed to them from sale of clothes at Lee's Fashion & Furs.

Detective Sgt. Thomas Podeszwik of the Woods public safety department said that his department has received a number of calls from people who have left clothes and furs at Lee's for resale.

Podeszwik said that those calling in say they have had difficulty in obtaining money for the sale of clothes left on consignment or in getting the clothes back that they left on consignment.

"We have been advising people who have complained to file an action in civil court," said Podeszwik. "We have consulted with the Wayne County prosecutor's office and were told that when a person leaves something on consignment they are entering into a contractual relationship with the person they leave the items with whom they wish to sell."

The seller, Podeszwik, acts as an agent for the person putting objects on consignment. Because the relationship is contractual, it falls under the jurisdiction of civil court.

"We can only act if we have evidence that the person who takes something on consignment intends to permanently deprive the owner of his or her property," said Podeszwik. "We have no evidence of that. Lee's owner, Patricia Mester, has made good on claims when people have been able to get in touch with her."

The store has been closed for the past few weeks, said Podeszwik, but the owners have been good about speaking with public safety officials.

When contacted by the Grosse Pointe News, Mester said that she has been sick and that she is the only person in the store who takes items on consignment. People wishing to find out about their items need to speak with her. The store opened again on April 1.

This Pointer turned after-hours interest in fitness into a day job

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

When Ken Welch moved to Grosse Pointe in the early 1990s, one of the first things he looked for was a place to exercise. He was surprised to discover there wasn't a neighborhood gym where a person could go after work and lift weights.

Rather than search neighboring suburbs for the facility he was looking for (he doesn't like the corporate, mega-gyms where club members get lost in the crowd) he decided to open his own.

Welch, 47, of Grosse Pointe Park, can't say for certain if his facility — Pointe Fitness and Training Center on Mack in Detroit (across from Staples) — is the first of its kind in or immediately adjacent to the Pointes.

But since his place opened in February 1995, there has been a "fitness boom" in the Pointes.

There are now three exercise studios/gyms in the Pointes, in addition to the aerobics and weight training classes offered through continuing education and neighborhood organizations.

"People are becoming more and more aware of the importance of fitness (especially as the baby boom population ages). It is one of the best ways to stay young," Welch said.

Since opening his store-front gym two years ago, Welch has made a 100-percent commitment to being visible not only at his business but in the community.

Shortly after securing a building and getting a loan to start the business, Welch left his job of 16 years at Wyandotte Henry Ford Hospital.

At the urging of his wife, psychologist Penny Hale, whom he met while working at Wyandotte Hospital, Welch decided the only way to make a first-time experience at self-employment work was to devote all his energy to the venture.

On a middle-of-the-week afternoon just before Easter, Welch's gym was lightly populated with seniors and students. Between fielding phone calls coming in at the reception desk, Welch paused to speak with club members about their workout.

He knows his customers. There's the 55-year-old man whose wife died two years ago. He came into the club looking for something to do to occupy his time and has been coming back ever since.

Despite a "bad knee" he has been conducting a respectable workout, Welch said.

Then there's the harried accountant whom Welch convinced had 20 minutes a day three times a week to dedicate to fitness.

"What jams people up (about beginning and maintaining a fitness regimen) is that they expect too much of themselves," he said. "If they can't fulfill their expectations, they get discouraged and give up. They get busy, they get behind and they think it's no use."

Another factor, he said, is not having realistic expectations and goals. People shouldn't compare themselves to images in magazines or on television, he said. It is sometimes difficult for people to remember that it's the job of a model or actor to look good, he said. The rest of us devote our time to other things: our jobs, our families, and somehow, in our spare time we think we ought to be able to transform ourselves into sculpted masses of muscle.

In addition to running his fitness center, Welch teaches fitness classes at the University Liggett School's upper school. He sponsors a number of youth teams — soccer, softball, volleyball and the Grosse Pointe South High School varsity and junior varsity cheerleading teams.

POINTER OF INTEREST

Ken Welch opened his gym on Mack in Detroit (just across the border from Grosse Pointe) in 1995 and has made a point to get to know each of his customers. He particularly hopes to get the fitness message out to young people.

This fall he plans to teach a weight training class, aimed at women, through the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

His community involvement also includes being current president of the Business Connection networking group (which meets each Wednesday at the War Memorial) and a recent invitation by Wayne County commissioner Chris Cavanagh to join the citizen's advisory board.

Born and raised in Wyandotte, Welch's introduction to fitness began with joining his high school's rowing team. After graduation, he rowed for the Wyandotte and Ecorse boat clubs.

He competed in eights, fours, doubles and singles, both on the national and international level. (Although they often came close, Welch said his crew never won any national or international competitions.) He considers rowing the ultimate sport, requiring intense training, discipline and focus.

For years, he awoke early to train for two hours, went to work, then trained for two more hours in the evening and topped the day off with a five-mile run.

"The poetic, controlled motions (of rowing) and the intense pain your body goes through to create that motion — it is the ultimate sport for getting and staying in shape," he said.

In fact, Welch has several rowing machines in his gym and he uses them to motivate club members by staging competitions for best time in the 1,000- and 2,000 meter races. The top placers receive a variety of prizes.

The variety of jobs he has held over the years — everything from optician, laborer, musician and high school rowing coach — have given him the experience and confidence to start his own business, he said.

This is especially true of his job at Wyandotte Hospital, where he was hired as a mental health assistant.

Over the years his responsibilities grew and by the time he left he was a treatment coordinator in the behavioral services department.

"I learned a lot about people and myself at the hospital," he said. "Running your own business is everything I expected it to be, from the headaches to the triumphs. There are times when things are tough but I have never regretted doing this, never felt it was a mistake."

As to what the future holds, Welch said he will continue to focus on the business and reach out the community.

OTT ROBINSON

Can Ford heal GOP as he did the U.S.?

Can former President Gerald R. Ford, Michigan's only contribution to the nation's list of 42 presidents, now do for the Republican Party what he did for the nation after he took office in 1974?

In an interview, Charlie Cain of The Detroit News asked Ford whether he agreed with some moderate Republicans, such as former Gov. William Milliken, that "the GOP has become too beholden to the political right."

"I vigorously oppose any element of our party dominating, controlling the party purse," Ford responded.

"Our Democratic friends in three presidential elections (George McGovern in '72, Walter Mondale in '84 and Michael Dukakis in '88) represented the left wing of the Democratic Party. They all lost. Republicans cannot regain the White House unless they operate to have all elements participate and go down the middle of the Republican philosophy. The extreme views left or right will never win a presidential election."

Opinion

As the only non-elected president, Ford did succeed in his mission of healing the wounds, political and otherwise, that had been inflicted by the administration of former President Nixon before he resigned.

That accomplishment was performed by the low-profile Ford who was immensely popular in both houses of Congress, as a result not only of his long service as a U.S. representative from Michigan, but also because of his commitment to fairness.

True, many young voters today have forgotten or never really knew Ford as president, but with his quiet call for the GOP to "go down the middle of the Republican philosophy," he is reminding party leaders of the best route to success in American politics.

And so now he is seeking to serve as the healer of his party by pointing to the fact that moderation offers the best hope for victory for the GOP.

In his interview in The Detroit News, Ford also recalled that during his service in Congress, "there was a high degree of civility," and that while there were "vast differences politically, the tone was entirely different."

"There were debates on substance," he went on. "Today... a lot of the debate gets into personal vendettas, charges and countercharges. I think it's a serious development and I hope it can be turned around."

He also criticized modern political fund-raising as "unhealthy" and said the Clinton White House has "abused that more than any White House in history."

In his first 11 congressional elections, he said, he had spent $20,000 per election, and $40,000 in the last two because he thought he had a strong Democratic opponent.

That same district, he went on, in "the last election, I think both the Republican and Democrat spent over a half million dollars."

Asked about Gov. John Engler's chances of getting either the presidential or vice presidential nominations in 2000, Ford said he thought Engler had done "a first-class job as governor of Michigan."

"There is no question that come 2000, he (Engler) will have the credentials," Ford said. But, he added, "If he runs and gets re-elected (as governor), then he is an even more viable candidate (for president)."

Not everyone sees Engler as a moderate, and some critics would challenge Engler's record on financing the public schools.

But Ford's comments surely will benefit the governor and enhance his standing with most party leaders, especially those who move to the center.

Impeach Clinton? It's doubtful

Both Democratic and Republican congressmen from Michigan doubt that President Clinton's campaign troubles will result in impeachment or a forced resignation.

Most of them seemed to agree with the comments of GOP Sen. Spencer Abraham who, in a story by Richard A. Ryan, The Detroit News senior Washington correspondent, said:

"It would be really inappropriate to analyze or even be discussing it at this early stage."

Abraham stated he had heard no serious conversations on the Senate side of the Capitol about the issue, and, in fact, most of the talk has come from the House GOP members.

Abraham added that he thought it important that the members avoid prejudging anything because Congress would have to sit in judgment if any attempt were made to force Clinton out of office.

Democratic Sen. Carl Levin defended the president, and did not really answer the question put by the News reporter. Instead, he emphasized the president's "great ability to stay focused on the issues that matter most to Americans."

Rep. Bart Stupak, Menominee Democrat, stoutly defended the president and insisted that "there is no basis for any type of impeachment of the president or vice-president."

"You have to have serious violations of the law," he went on. "You have nothing like that here. Bob Barr's call (a GOP member who had proposed Clinton's impeachment) is way off base."

Rep. Fred Upton, St. Joseph Republican, said he was "appalled" by the "almost daily drumbeat of new revelations" but added that he still did not think they were "strong enough to tie directly to the president and be an 'impeachable offense.'"

The Michigan congressmen, both Republican and Democratic, are wise to join the state's U.S. senators to avoid calling for the president's impeachment, because no serious charges have yet been proved against either of the Clintons.

But with hearings scheduled in both houses, and some Republicans obviously aiming to get the president, there still is a possibility that proof may be discovered about some issue on which the president is culpable.

Yet, like all citizens, the president must be regarded as innocent until proven guilty.

A view from the sidelines

Best movies? But not for all

We had seen two of the supposedly best movies of 1996, but we didn't rate either one as high as Hollywood did at the recent Academy Awards dinner.

"The English Patient," for example, was rated best picture, and also won a flock of

Big Ten OK

The Big Ten, derided by some Detroit sports writers, still did well in the two national basketball tournaments that finally ended the season at the college level.

Michigan, as everyone knows by now, won the National Invitational Tournament by playing more consistent basketball than it had during the regular Big Ten season.

That was a tribute to the coach as well as the players who finally found that teamwork paid off in their NIT games as it had in their winning games in the Big Ten.

And Minnesota, which one Detroit sports writer had picked to lose its first game, was the only Big Ten team to reach the final four, and gave Kentucky a good fight until the final minutes.

So Minnesota, the Big Ten champs, showed some class and their coach was named as the coach of the year for bringing his Gophers into the semi-finals of the tournament.

additional awards at the annual ceremonies. But my wife and I found it confusing and too long.

If we had read the book in advance, as my son-in-law did, perhaps we would have caught on earlier to the flashbacks, but for us it was not a great success. Admittedly, however, it displayed some great photography.

As for "Fargo," also nominated as best picture of the year but just an also-ran in the final standings, we didn't understand what made it even a contender.

The accents adopted by most of the actors and actresses might have been appropriate years ago, but no longer, except perhaps in some isolated town populated chiefly by Scandinavians.

Perhaps it was highly rated entertainment because the local police chief was a woman. She did win the best actress award, but the movie still didn't score too well with us. Older Minnesota friends we've talked with about it agreed.

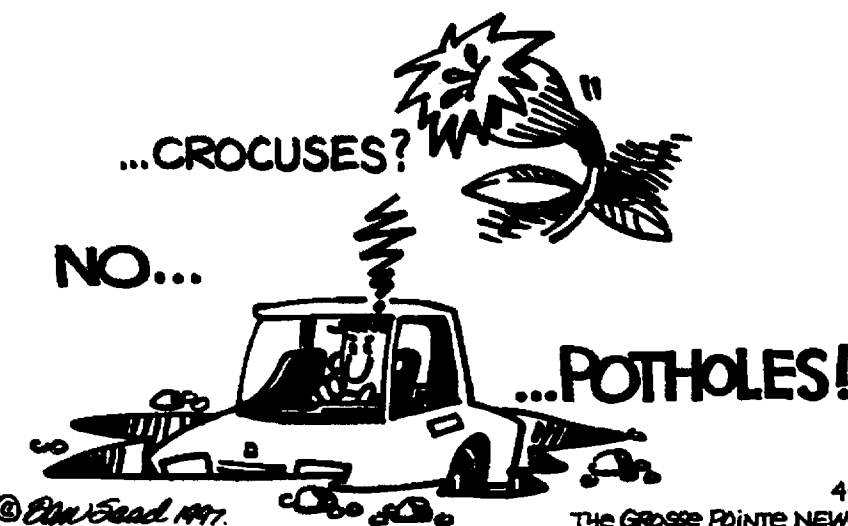

In fact, for oldsters it is difficult to find modern movies that we can understand. Our best bet is an old but still popular movie that runs its full length on a cable channel without the distractions of long commercials.

"Indiscreet," shown recently, was such a movie, with two old-time stars (Weren't they Cary Grant and Ingrid Bergman?) but very little action that might be termed "indiscreet" by today's so-called standards.

But the actors appeared to be enjoying themselves, the plot was simple but understandable, and the scenes avoided the violence that too often seems to be the mark of modern movies.

So perhaps the movies of the 1990s have just passed us by.

WHEN THEY OPEN, YOU KNOW SPRINGTIME HAS COME TO THE POINTES...

Gulf War Syndrome

To the Editor:

Chemical weapons are an insidious and indiscriminate killer.

The Pentagon just announced that 20,000 American troops may have been exposed to Iraq chemical weapons during the Gulf War, possibly causing "Gulf War Syndrome." The symptoms include fatigue, memory loss and nausea.

There is a world-wide effort to pass the Chemical Weapons Convention, an international treaty banning production, possession and use of chemical weapons. Existing chemical weapons and production facilities would be destroyed, and an inspection/verification system would ensure compliance.

This treaty began under President Reagan; negotiated and signed by President Bush; supported strongly by President Clinton, Joint Chiefs and the secretary of defense. The U.S. chemical industry, including Dow, DuPont and Union Carbide, helped craft the provisions and supports the CWC.

If the Senate fails to ratify, trade restrictions could cost the United States $600 million in lost exports per year. The United States will be unable to join the bodies used to influence inspection procedures and budgetary decisions.

The United States must ratify the CWC by April 29, when it becomes international law. We must build support in the Senate for the CWC.

Contact your U.S. senators and urge them to ratify the CWC. Remind them of the overwhelming support of the public, three presidents, the military and the chemical industry.

Proud of schools

To the Editor:

With all of the negative remarks made about our school system or individuals within the district, I thought it may be of interest to your readers to hear some good news.

Perhaps I am a bit prejudiced being a past president of the Grosse Pointe North Parents' Club and the parent of a 1996 North graduate. Yet when my son's school sent us a notice that he had made the dean's list, it reminded me that our school district has a great deal to be proud of.

Our son, Michael Ludington Fairchild, is a freshman at the University of Notre Dame. He entered as an above 4.0 GPA student. At Grosse Pointe North, he was on the varsity soccer team and president of the Student Association. Michael Aubrey, son of Lorraine and Michael Aubrey, was vice president of the Student Association, and is also a freshman at Notre Dame. Peter Blake, son of Peter and Louise Blake, was a 1994 graduate of North. He also held the position of president of Grosse Pointe North's Student Association and is now in his third year at Notre Dame. Donny Pierce, son of Sis and Donald Pierce, is the current president of North's Student Association. He has been awarded early admission to the University of Notre Dame for the upcoming 1997-1998 freshman class. So, next year there will be three past presidents and one vice president of Grosse Pointe North's Student Association at the University of Notre Dame.

These young men and women are all-around students. They are scholars, athletes and civically minded young people who are products of the Grosse Pointe School System.

We're proud of our students in Grosse Pointe and many of the finest universities and colleges in this country are proud to have them as their students now.

Pets, peeves and more

I have one pet. Two pet peeves. The peeves are about food and religion, but a sub-peeve is about pets.

A good salad can be ruined by its lettuce. Not the lettuce itself, but how it's presented.

Lettuce should not be allowed into a salad bowl until it has been washed, trimmed, tamed, and cut down to size. Proper size is bite-sized.

Bite-size is the dimension of an extremely small person's mouth.

Not Martha Rae's mouth; not Mick Jagger's mouth. Bite size is not the size of a teacup; not the size of a bread box; not the size of the salad-preparer's fist.

I want mouth-sized lettuce. Less than 2 inches in diameter. About the size of a saltine cracker cut in half, or smaller.

Eating in public is often challenging. Poise, decorum, dignity are often at risk. Some foods, I think, are deliberately designed to make the eaters look like buffoons. Think about tacos, spaghetti, bagel sandwiches, hard rolls, caramel candies, watermelon wedges, ripe plums.

Salads should be easy to eat. I don't think it's appropriate to have to cut a salad with knife and fork. And when I order a salad at a restaurant, I don't want to send it back to the kitchen for re-sizing.

I Say

Margie Reins Smith

I shouldn't have to spear a chunk of lettuce, separate its leaves, fold them into accordion pleats and bend them lengthwise and crosswise so they'll fit in my mouth.

I want dignity.

My second pet peeve is the use of the word "Christian" to describe something that's decent or kind or caring or righteous or ethical or moral.

"That would be the Christian thing to do," someone says, referring to an offer to help someone in trouble, or the speedy return of a valuable found item, or the execution of a kind deed, or a gesture of forgiveness.

These acts may, indeed, be "Christian" things to do.

They may also be Jewish things to do; or Buddhist things to do; or Muslim things to do. Or whatever.

Christians don't have an exclusive patent on kindness and ethical behaviors.

So there.

Now, some minor peeves.

• Mispronunciation of the word "Feb-ru-ary."

• The "fluff" cycle on my dryer. What's it for?

• People who don't keep their dogs' water dishes filled. "Hey, he has two toilets to drink out of..." they'll say.

• Sales clerks (and others) who call me "Dear" or "Honey."

• Spike heels.

• Head tables at banquets. Especially if I have to sit at one. Even more especially if the salad has fist-sized lettuce in it.

• Racist jokes.

• Fireworks. Sunsets. Sunrises. If you've seen one, you've seen them all.

• Highfalutin awards presented for trivial accomplishments. One year (long, long ago) my sorority chapter earned the Minnie Mae Prescott Award for Gracious Living.

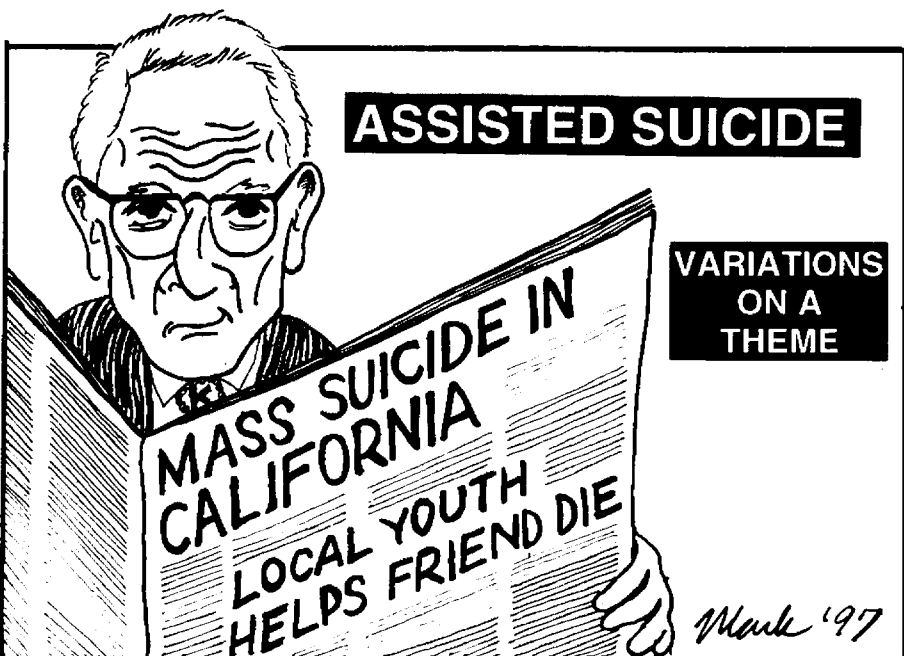

This meant we didn't pick our teeth at the dinner table and we didn't scratch or spit in public and we were exceedingly polite to strangers on the phone.

Big deal.

The '650-lifer' punishment is a crime

By Monica Pratt

The rise of Tim Allen's career is one of the great success stories of this decade. His television program, "Home Improvement," captivates American audiences with his "regular guy" humor, which has also led to success on the big screen and in books. Today, Allen reaps the rewards brought by his gift for making people laugh. But there was a time in his life when no one was laughing, especially Tim Allen.

In October 1978, Timothy Allen Dick was arrested with over 650 grams of cocaine (about 1.4 pounds) in an undercover drug bust at the Kalamazoo airport.

Later, when Timothy Dick became Tim Allen, he would say the bust "probably saved my life." But at the time of arrest, his future was far from bright. Just a month before, Michigan lawmakers passed one of the harshest drug laws in the country, the "650-lifer law."

A conviction for delivering more than 650 grams of cocaine or heroin meant that Timothy Allen Dick would spend the rest of his life in prison. No breaks, no parole, no kidding.

The law that threatened Tim Allen's future and set a precedent for mandatory drug sentencing laws across the country was enacted quietly by Michigan lawmakers, eager to throw the book at drug kingpins. Tacked on to a massive public health bill, the law passed without hearings or economic analysis.

Michigan judges weren't consulted either. The new 650-lifer law prohibited judges from using discretion when sentencing, giving discretion instead to the prosecutor who brings the charge. This harsh treatment of defendants eventually led to almost uniform disapproval of the law by judges, prison officials, attorneys and even the bill's sponsors.

Paul Rosenbaum, the bill's original sponsor said, "The statute is flawed because it eliminates a judge's ability to exercise discretion. It has been used to snare too many who fit the language, the letter of the act, but who in no way fit the intent, the spirit of the act."

Rosenbaum's comments describe Jedonna Young. Arrested in October 1978 (the same month as Allen), Young, a 25-year-old mother and heroin addict, received a life sentence without parole for possession of over 650 grams of heroin with intent to deliver.

Young's co-defendant, James Gulley, was the target of a major undercover investigation. Police observed Young placing a plastic bag that contained heroin in the trunk of a car she was driving with Gulley. The Sixth Circuit Court in Young v. Miller found that beyond this instance, Young was not a partner in Gulley's business, had no criminal record, and was a drug addict, not a kingpin.

"In this case, we believe that the tiger trap may have sprung upon a sick kitten. We are not at all convinced that petitioner Young is the type of 'kingpin' drug dealer the Michigan legislature has targeted for its harshest punishment," wrote the court in 1989.

Young's case is not an exception. Michigan Department of Corrections data for 1996 show that 86 percent of the inmates serving life under the 650 law had no prior prison record at the time of their arrest, and seven were teenagers when convicted for life. Drug offenders now represent 15 percent of Michigan's total prison population, a 932 percent increase since 1983.

Longer sentences and increased prosecution of nonviolent drug offenders has cost Michigan taxpayers big money.

To keep pace with the exploding prison population, the corrections budget increased 1,428 percent between 1976 and 1996, from $65 million to $1.27 billion, making it one of the fastest growing segments of the state's budget.

In 1986, prison spending consumed 6.4 percent of Michigan's general fund, but by 1996 it consumed 15.1 percent. It is projected that drug offenders will occupy more Michigan prison beds than murderers, rapists and violent criminals in 1997.

Are people like Tim Allen and Jedonna Young great enough threats to public safety to justify this enormous outlay of tax dollars and use of scarce prison space?

Allen was lucky enough to know other drug dealers to turn in in exchange for a reduction in his sentence. He ended up being prosecuted federally, did two-and-one-half years in prison, and went on to a successful career. Young wasn't so fortunate. As a low-level drug addict, she had no valuable information to trade for her freedom. Instead, she will sit in prison until she dies. She has already served 17 years behind bars.

Michigan legislators have tinkered with the 650-lifer law, but never fixed it. The legislature recently passed a bill that permits juveniles convicted under the 650 law to serve 25 years without parole, instead of life, but that improvement does not help inmates like Young. For both fiscal and social reasons, Michigan lawmakers need to finish the job and repeal or further modify this draconian and counterproductive measure.

Another sign of spring

Eat your heart out!

His peers keep cooking up honors for Lucy's Tavern chef Rob Imesch, who was voted Chef of the Year by the American Culinary Federation in '96.

This year Rob will receive the Chef's Professionalism Award from the Chef's 200 Club of the Federation in a presentation at the Chef's Ball April 28 at the Fern Hill Country Club.

"This award is for a chef member who promotes the welfare of the club and community," says Rob.

His qualifications included being food coordinator for the St. Ambrose Church playscape construction project, in which he put together between 1,500 and 2,000 meals (breakfast, lunch and dinner) for the volunteer workers over a five-day period.

"I couldn't have done it without my co-chairman, Patricia Buttiglieri, who lives in the Park," he says.

The enterprising chef got all the fixin's donated by local places including Sparky's, Jumps, Lucy's, Blue Pointe, Bruegger's, Little Caesar's, Chianti Villa Lago and East Side Bagel.

Read between the lines

Almost everyone reads thrillers and romance novels, but when you get to the non-fiction shelves of our local libraries you can see what interests characterize Pointers in particular.

So, what are we reading? For the month of February (the last complete month FYI has), here are the top seven most popular categories for the Central Library and the number checked out:

- Travel — 591.
- Medical — 387.
- Art — 281.
- Antiques — 197.
- Business — 178.

• Cooking — 176.

• Gardening — 55.

"Gardening is usually high," says the library's director, Vicky Bloom. "Winter is the slow time."

Laboring in the vineyard

Drop in early some weekday evening at Sparky Herbert's and you may find owner Darrell Finken, surrounded by bottles and wine glasses, hard at work.

What's he doing? Tasting wines for the famous Sparky cellars.

A few weeks back it was with the Park's Anthony Delsener, president of Vintners Ltd., and the samples were from northern France, near the Rhone Valley.

"We stock dozens of different wines — hundreds of bottles — and I'm always interested in upgrading," says Darrell, who would be hard-pressed to keep ahead of all the vintages if he wasn't so diligent.

How often does he have to check things out in the vino department? "Every couple of weeks, at least," Darrell says.

He does it all himself. Some bosses just won't delegate the tough jobs.

Plates make their Pointe

Is it FYI's imagination, or are there more and more of those clever license plates around town these days? A few of the latest crop:

2LTL2LT, on a red Ford Mustang convertible at Yorkshire and Mack.

6 KIDS, Red Mercedes, Kercheval & Notre Dame.

UMVMSU, sporty Olds Bravada on Fisher at Kercheval.

REDBENZ, cherry-red Mercedes 560SL coupe in the parking lot at Patterson Park.

VOLBAL on a green Explorer outside Damman Hardware.

DR RX, white Chrysler Town & Country by St. Paul School.

4X FORE, red Jeep Wrangler by Damman's.

BEATS 2, '69 Road Runner in the Woods.

ISELLAU, white Century 21 van parked in front of a house for sale.

THNXLUV, red Pontiac convertible at Cadieux and Jefferson.

TO COLD on a beige van outside Jake's in the Village.

GPAC, black Caddy on Fisher in front of the GP Athletic Club.

AIR DR, blue Olds in the War Memorial lot.

MI AMOR, on a Nissan Maxima in the Village.

FUN, red Mercedes convertible behind Rite-Aid.

PERK, red BMW 325 LS on Fisher at South High.

REPACK, black Jeep Grand Cherokee in the Mack Avenue post office lot.

ELMO, white station wagon on Fairfax near Westchester. (Is the driver ticklish?)

Date gets later

A communication mixup had June in March instead of April in last week's FYI. That's right: June Mabarak's ceramics showing at the Mack Avenue Framing Gallery is this Friday, April 4.

Surgery isn't fun.

Some operations are called "elective," meaning the patient has a choice to make regarding the lifestyle he chooses. Certainly cosmetic surgery is mostly elective, but there is an area which involves the choice of comfort.

If one has suffered for years with an old injury that has turned into painful arthritis, a person has a choice of continuing to live a restricted lifestyle, foregoing sports, trips and routines that once were taken for granted, or having corrective surgery in the hope of alleviating the condition.

These choices are not lightly considered. For some it is an easy decision, pencil in a few weeks off for recuperation and time the operation for a dull time of year when there's not much going on. For others, much consideration and scheduling goes into the decision-making.

For my spouse, no time was a good time for a hip replacement, but the calendar suggested that several months before golf season would be the best if we admitted that time had run out for procrastinating.

So it was two weeks ago that we awakened at 4 a.m. to be at the hospital at our appointed time. The operation went as scheduled and the patient seems to be progressing within the normal parameters. I have promised to respect his privacy and not to delve into the gory details. Who but family and close friends wants to hear the details anyway?

What we do want to do is convey our gratitude to the countless people for their kindnesses to us during the past few weeks. Many of these expressions of compassion occurred within the confines of St. John Hospital. The nursing care was excellent. The support care from nurse's aides to maintenance personnel was superior. They were agreeable and willingly responded to our concerns and wishes.

When we returned home there was a small army involved in the rehabilitation process. We have had daily visits from visiting nurses and physical and occupational therapists. After evaluating the home turf, as to bathroom access, height of beds, stairs to be negotiated, etc., they were able to offer their expertise as to the best methods of navigation for the patient. Blood work, temps and therapy were all accomplished in the comfort of our own home and with little discomfort or disturbance.

On our first outing, back to the hospital for a doctor appointment, courtesy continued to follow us. Doors were held, elevator buttons pressed and help offered with the wheelchair. These thoughtful gestures came from all directions, hospital patients, cleaning crews and visitors of all ages and nationalities.

I remember taking my mother to an appointment once and she started to cry. I asked her what was upsetting her. She answered that someone had just opened a door for her. She had been such a proud independent woman and thoroughly hated being dependent on others. She was deeply touched at any kindness shown to her by complete strangers. I finally know what she was feeling.

As I have stated, surgery is no fun. True, it can be fraught with inconvenience and pain. However, the caring support team of strangers and friends goes a long way in easing the journey to recovery. We thank those in the field of healing, the professionals involved, the friends who sent cards, gifts, food or flowers and called with words of cheer. You all helped to make an uncomfortable experience a little easier. Bless you.

Mulling extra-terrestrials, UFOs and comets

By Victor Bloom MD

The mass suicides of 39 members of the Heaven's Gate cult continues to attract our attention. In recent memory the Branch Davidians cult was reduced to ashes in a conflagration at Waco, Texas and in more remote memory there was the mass suicide of the Jim Jones cult by cyanide-laced Kool-Aid.

Bloom

Why do people get attracted to cults and why do they kill themselves? The answer is a complex interweaving of mental illness and a distortion of religion and reality.

Sound religious beliefs are based on basically normal functioning and a good contact with reality. Various mental illnesses are associated with abnormal and deviant functioning, based on a relative loss of contact with reality. This is often due to faulty transmission of neuronal messages. Recent research has taught us that neurochemical imbalances may be genetically determined, as well as environmentally produced.

It is well known by mental health professionals that some people who are otherwise intelligent, articulate and highly functioning, may also be harboring paranoid suspicions or obsessing about needless worries.

In the case of schizophrenia, there is a mechanism we call losing boundaries such as the boundaries between the real and the unreal, fantasy and reality, the conscious and unconscious.

It is one thing to be a good Christian and pray for strength, understanding and faith, faith in the knowledge that there is an immortal soul which survives bodily existence. It is another thing to take it upon yourself to release your spirit by committing suicide, and to think you can ride a space-ship in the tail of a comet and fly to heaven.

Members of this group succumbed to a charismatic leader and to blurred boundaries between organized religion, science-fiction and New Age philosophy.

What has happened with the otherwise intelligent and intact people of the Heaven's Gate cult is that the natural boundaries between fantasy and fact were broken down. It is one thing to fantasize taking a space-ship to heaven; it is another thing to think you can really do it. Searching the shelves of Barnes and Noble, I found several bookshelves under the heading, "New Age." Within those bookshelves I found several dozen books about UFOs and people sending messages from previous lives. Their names were Seth, Michael and Emanuel. Apparently some readers are avidly searching for more information from the other world from them.

There are whole bookstores presently taken up by New Age books, which have common themes of extraterrestrial travel, extraterrestrial visitors, time warps into other dimensions and various other pseudo-scientific theories to explain supernatural phenomena and mystical experiences.

What gives credence to some of these theories is archeological "evidence" which cannot be explained any other way but to assume that we have had visitors from outer space. Of course, so far such evidence is not completely clear or convincing. Carl Sagan has reminded us that we are probably only one habitable planet out of billions and billions, and if we are sending space probes to other planets, who can deny that other superior intelligences have not been visiting and studying us?

In fact, one of the latest media trends is the documentation of stories by individuals who have claimed to have been abducted and experimented upon by creatures from outer space in flying saucers. Spielberg's, "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" is an early prototype of this fantasy and recent re-releases of "Star Wars" and "Star Trek" and "2001" give further credence to the idea of space travel.

It is as if we have over-populated our planet and are killing ourselves with toxic waste and a disturbed ecology and have nowhere else to escape. It is one thing to escape in fantasy, and another to escape in reality. The media and information explosion have enabled us to push the envelope of possibilities and our creative mind knows no limits to the imagination.

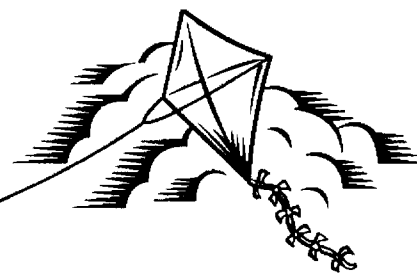

Many years ago there was a popular book on psychotherapy called "The Fifty Minute Hour." In it was a story called, "The Jet-Propelled Couch." It is about a brilliant but psychotic scientist who claimed to travel to other planets. In his free-associations on the couch, he was telling his analyst all about his relations and conversations with intelligent beings on Mars, Venus, Saturn and Jupiter. The analyst, trying to understand the mind of his patient, was enthralled.

The gifted analyst gave credence to the patient's story by not challenging it, but just listening. Ultimately the therapist came to know the details of his patient's fantastic world as he came to know the depth and complexity of his mind. The story became so interesting that when the patient was finally able to relinquish it, he was cured and the analyst was able to write a fascinating case report.

The story lets us know that there is not a fine line between fantasy and reality, that the complexity and creativity of the human mind often blurs the boundaries, sometimes with tragic consequences. Shakespeare suggested that our waking life is but a dream, but still we do well to maintain a firm and clear distinction between our daydreams, our night-dreams and reality.

Dr. Bloom is Clinical Associate Professor of Psychiatry in Wayne State University's School of Medicine. He lives and practices in Grosse Pointe Park.

A telephoto lens enabled Monte Nagler to "move in close" and capture this delightful, spontaneous shot of a young girl in Shanghai, China.

Capturing the fleeting moments of childhood is a priceless joy

By Monte Nagler
Special Writer

Did you know that children are the most photographed of all subjects? After all, only a photograph can provide an enduring record of the growth and activities of a child.

Because these pictures will grow more meaningful and priceless as time goes by, the photographer must use the utmost care and attention to portray the precious times of childhood.

Most important in photographing children is capturing their spirit. Some kids are natural "hams" and will respond delightfully in front of the camera.

But others become very aware of the presence of a camera and will not react well to posing directions.

Stiff poses and artificial expressions will tend to replace a natural look and it is only after the camera is put away that the child's naturalness returns.

But if a child is enjoying a toy or an activity of his own choosing, he or she becomes unaware of the camera and capturing the child's "spirit" will be easy.

So concentrate on candid.

The unplanned and the unexpected provide the opportunity for that exceptional photograph of your child. The objective is to capture the fleeting expression and momentary action rather than attempt to pose the situation.

If you are, however, shooting in a more controlled, posed environment, let the child "do his own thing." Let him assume positions or facial expressions that reflect his personality.

It's very important to get on the child's level. Even get down on the floor. Pictures looking down on kids are not flattering. Children live in a world of giant adults and huge surroundings. By getting low, you can capture a child's perspective and greatly improve your pictures. Try using a telephoto lens. A lens of 100-200mm in focal length that allows you to keep your distance will be far less intimidating to a youngster.

If outdoors, shoot for an overcast day. Overcast weather provides the best lighting for "people" pictures.

The lighting is soft and harsh shadows are eliminated. If it is sunny, position yourself so that the sun is behind your subject and then use fill in flash to add sparkle to the face.

If indoors, try using natural light from a window. You may need a faster film in this circumstance.

By photographing children naturally, you'll be able to record the spirit of youth that your family and friends will enjoy for many years to come.

Drunken driver hits parked cars

Grosse Pointe Farms police heard a loud crash immediately outside their station on Kerby Road on Thursday, March 27, around 2:40 a.m.

A 42-year-old Grosse Pointe Farms man who had been heading southeast on Kerby toward Grosse Pointe Boulevard told police he fell asleep behind the wheel of his 1996 Ford Taurus, drove his car to the left of the center of the road and crashed into a 1995 Jeep Wrangler that was parked. The Jeep rolled with such force into a parked Aerostar van that it traversed across Kerby and into a picket fence.

The release of airbags in the Taurus woke up the sleepy driver who was coming home from a bar on Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Park. The man admitted to having consumed "two vodkas, two beers, and two wines."

He failed field sobriety tests police administered to him. His preliminary breath test, and two subsequent blood alcohol tests registered 0.129, 0.12, 0.13 respectively.

The man's car, which suffered extensive front-end damage, was impounded. He was arrested and charged with operating a car under the influence of liquor, possession of an unlawful blood-alcohol level, and "driving left of center." His court date had not been scheduled yet, according to police reports.

A Grosse Pointe Woods man reported his car was shot at and a passenger window shattered while he was driving toward I-94 from Mack at 7:40 p.m. on Monday, March 31. He said he believed the shot came from a home along Moross and reported the incident to Detroit police. No one was injured.

Check kitters caught by police

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers were called to a bank across the street from police headquarters when a teller noticed that the signature of the endorser of a check matched the handwriting of the maker of the check.

The incident took place at about 11:20 a.m. on Tuesday, March 25. After noticing that the check appeared to have been forged, the teller checked bank records, including the signature card. Records showed the signature of the check endorser was false and that the account was closed in late 1996.

So the teller called police, and detectives crossed the street in unmarked patrol cars, blocking vehicle escape routes. The man trying to cash the check was captured on foot and his three companions were caught as they attempted to drive away.

All four men are being held in the Wayne County jail, two for uttering and publishing while the other two are being held on previous warrants.

A traffic stop turns up a gun

Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers turned up more than they expected when a routine search of the stopped vehicle turned up a handgun at about 12:17 a.m. Friday, March 28.

The whole thing began when an officer saw a car go through a red light. The car was stopped in the area of Harper and Woodmont. A background check of the driver revealed that he had never obtained a license. The driver told police, after he was ordered out of the car, that he had just obtained a permit and it was in the car.

When Woods officers searched the car for the permit they came across the purse of the car's passenger, a 19-year-old Detroit woman. The purse contained a handgun with the serial number filed off. The woman was charged with carrying a concealed weapon and is free on personal bond pending her arraignment.

Armed robbery in the Park

A Park couple walking in the 800 block of Berkshire were held up at gunpoint at about 6:30 p.m. Sunday, March 23, when a juvenile exited a car that had stopped in the street, pointed a rifle at them and demanded money.

Neither one of them were carrying cash, but the man gave the gun-wielding suspect his wrist watch. The suspect continued to shout at the couple and demand money, but eventually fled to the awaiting vehicle which was occupied by two other males, one a juvenile and the other an 18-year-old.

The two victims were immediately helped by nearby residents who heard the shouting and called the Park police. An unmarked patrol car was sent to the area and officers saw the getaway vehicle leave the scene of the crime. The officer in the unmarked patrol car followed the getaway car and informed fellow officers that it was heading on north Wayburn. When the getaway car went past Mack, it was intercepted by several patrol units that were waiting for the suspects' car.

The three suspects were immediately taken into custody. The two juveniles were placed in the Wayne County Juvenile Home and the adult is being held at press time in the Grosse Pointe Park jail while warrants are being prepared to charge him with armed robbery.

Local retailer supports art programs

Despite an influx of research that proves the validity of an arts education, budget cuts are making the high school art teachers' job increasingly difficult.

Whether it's lack of funds for basic supplies to shrinking amounts of space for students to display their work, teachers today are forced to find innovative ways to maintain programs and stimulate student interest.

The Great Frame Up store on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods is participating in a chainwide program of adopting local high schools, called Creative Self-Expression (CSE), that is helping art students at Grosse Pointe North and South high schools.

The CSE program involves the donation of mat boards, art portfolio cases for all students, T-shirts and a juried art exhibition of student work at the local store.

Approximately 25 students, whose work is selected by the art teachers, will be featured in two shows, each running from 6:30 to 8 p.m. North students' art work will be shown on Wednesday, April 9, and South's show will be on Wednesday, April 16, at the Great Frame Up, 20655 Mack near Vernier.

One of the best things about CSE is that it not only showcases the work of talented art students, but also provides opportunities and incentives for those who have taken an individual art class in addition to their core studies. Its purpose is to help foster creativity in all students, said Sue Maurer, North art teacher.

"This is our first year in the program and my students are really looking forward to it,"

Maurer said. "This is one of the few opportunities for the students to see their work displayed in a gallery setting."

Jack Summers, art teacher at South, stressed the importance of strengthening the ties between art and business today to create a better partnership for tomorrow.

"Bringing art into the business community allows everyone to see its value," Summers said. "It means a lot to see this kind of support for the arts in our local business community."

The arts should not be regarded as a privilege, but rather, as a fundamental part of a high school education, said Tom Recht, owner of Grosse Pointe's Great Frame Up.

Foundation says 'Thanks'

Some of the children who attend the Foundation for Exceptional Children just want to say thank you to all of those people who have donated their time and money to two recent fundraisers — the foundation's 20th annual Benefit Party and the Robin Hood Ball.

Thanks to committee people Michelle Hartman, Julie Lattimore, Kim King, Matt Kornmeier, Pam McShane, Bill Grambo and Hal Smith, the Robin Hood Ball raised $5,000, which will be used to fund the foundation's therapy and summer camp programs.

U-M students gain hands-on field experience

They hike in heat and rain, sometimes simultaneously, as they tramp through Michigan's forests. University of Michigan students from the "Woody Plants" class have been studying trees in their natural habitats for more than 30 years, regardless of the weather conditions.

Taught by U-M biology professor Warren Wagner and forest ecology Professor Burton Barnes, the course combines lectures, laboratory work and weekly treks to Ann Arbor forests, the Highland Recreation Area to the east and south to Milan.

"Students enjoy getting out in the woods," Barnes says. "It's obvious that you can't study a 100-foot-tall oak tree in the classroom."

Wagner and Barnes designed the course in 1965, emphasizing field work that demonstrates to students the diverse habitats and national woody plant species. Collections of leaves, twigs, buds, and fruits are available in the "Woody Plants" lab for students to study seven days a week.

Students learn scientific and common names of more than 180 species — their form, bark, and the site conditions where they live.

Jacqueline Courteau, who took "Woody Plants" three years ago and became the class' teaching assistant last year, says the course "opened my eyes" in terms of the diverse species and colors of trees.

Harold Zald, a fourth-year senior in the School of Natural Resources and Environment, enrolled in "Woody Plants" two years ago and found the class "special."

"This class is not about how to make money or how to memorize some useless facts that can never be applied to your daily life," Zald says. "It's about how we should reach out to the world and learn why nature is organized the way it is."

Zald claims professor Barnes and Wagner as the two most exciting teachers on campus. He said their enthusiasm in teaching encourages students to research different names and structure of plants on their own.

"Some people even study samples of plants collected during the field trips at home,"

Zald says.

Wagner believes "Woody Plants" helps students develop a sense of appreciation for nature and the beauty of life. He said the course reminds university students that learning in a natural setting is as important as their work on computers and in classrooms.

"I fear that life is centered around computers," Wagner says.

Both Wagner and Barnes said the course also prepares students for the variety of conditions they will encounter when they conduct field work in disciplines like archaeology, anthropology, biology and natural resources. Students become used to the less than ideal conditions.

The 'B' in Buick no longer stands for boring

Truth is, "boring" hasn't applied to many of the cars in the General Motors Buick division's lineup for quite some time. But the Century, that lovable, dependable stalwart which was forced to wait some 15 years for a proper make-over, had come to symbolize dull.

Available in recent editions as a sedan, coupe and station wagon, it was absolutely perfect for the driver who wanted a nice-looking, conservative, functional vehicle. In the last couple of model years, Century buyers were finally treated to cupholders, well-marked and usable knobs and buttons on the instrument panel, improved seats — the things that owners of trendier vehicles were taking for granted.

But a car designed for a middle-of-the-road buyer at the onset of the Reagan years is going to look its age, even with some softening of the front and rear decklid lines along the way. While the mid-size front-drive car didn't change, other makes did. And ours is a competitive marketplace and market share to the auto makers is paramount. Buick knew it needed to attract younger buyers. The average age of Century owners is said to be late-60s. The division will drop its smallest, most affordable nameplate.

Skylark, after this model year, losing that opportunity to bring young people into the family. It didn't appear to accomplish that objective.

But product planners have been working hard to keep Century competitive. Presumably they will keep Century competitive by keeping it simple and attractive to older buyers and maybe even filling out the owner's manual.

That marketing objective has been met by many. Century is trying now without the built-in Catera.

Century's image isn't easy to change. But it can be done. Century went from a school bus to a hot rod; it became a Road King; Mercury is transforming itself from a bank vice president's limo to a sought-after vehicle for upscale families.

Today's Century is bigger than its predecessor. Its wheelbase is 4.1 inches longer; both front and rear tracks are inches wider.

And it is stylish. Don't smirk when you read that Buick is putting it up against the likes of Toyota Camry and Ford Taurus. With a base model priced under $20,000, we think it offers substantial competition to those favorites.

For 1997 Buick provided its Century with an all-new chassis and four-wheel independent suspension. No underpowered four-cylinder engine in a base model on this one.

There's just one engine available: the 160-hp 3.1-liter 3100 V-6 which has been continuously refined over the years. It is mated to a four-speed automatic with overdrive. The result is pretty good performance and very acceptable mileage: 20 mpg city/29 mpg highway.

Platinum-tipped spark plugs extend the time of a first major tuneup to 100,000 miles.

Antilock brakes are standard. So are dual air bags.

The Century Limited, an upscale model, features variable-effort steering which adjusts to road speed. It offers extra assist for parking and is more resistant at highway speeds.

Century has driver lockout protection. This feature disables the power door locks when the key is in the ignition. Power door locks with a five-second delay for the absent-minded are available. And here's an interesting option: grind protection to disable the starter when the engine is already running. These things are taking all the risk out of driving, aren't they? Now we must find new and better ways to publicly humiliate ourselves.

The new Century offers child security rear-door locks as standard equipment. Century Limited buyers may choose integrated rear-seat child seats. But lest you fear the sedan is designed only for younger drivers, there is so much headroom that almost anyone can wear a proper chapeau inside this car.

The back seat is raised slightly above the front seat, thus creating an effect Buick calls "theater seating." Rear-seat passengers can see better out of the windows. Rear-seat room is more spacious than in a Camry or an Accord.

The Century feels larger than it is. Big-car fans who aspire to Park Avenues and Cadillacs will like this. They'll also like the quiet ride the Century delivers, especially while cruising on interstates.

Buick has done a good job in isolating road noise. It's out-See AUTOS, page 13A

Autos — Potholes loom large on spring horizon

side the Century, where it belongs. The car has that substantial GM feel and ride. It's not as sporty and nimble as the Taurus and Camry. It seems more like a luxury car. We had only a few complaints about our Century Limited.

Much as we love the steering wheel-mounted radio controls, we found the "seek" button too close to the steering wheel rim.

Often the simple act of turning a corner or piloting into a parking space caused an unpleasant switch from CBE classics to a neighboring rock 'n' roll station.

On occasion, the attractive curved top of the instrument panel produced a few rattles.

The safety belt on the driver's side didn't always fully retract and prevented the door from properly closing.

Good stuff includes the Twilight Sentinel headlights that stay on a generous amount of time while you fumble your way into your home.

The remote keyless entry is nice on any car. The one in the Century had the good sense not to beep or squeal when the car is locked from the key fob.

The Buick Century dates back to 1936. That was the year Buick began using names instead of numbers to identify its models, Buick says.

The nameplate ran up to the war years, then disappeared until 1954 when it was re-introduced as a midsize high-performance car.

The name again was retired after 1958. In 1973 it was back.

The first front-drive Century bowed as a 1982 model; the '97 represents the first all-new version in a decade and a half.

Base prices start at $18,395 for the Century Custom and $19,770 for Buick Century Limited.

Looks like a sure bet to transport Buick into 2001 and beyond. In style and luxury.

In Wayne County alone, road crews fill approximately 200,000 potholes per year. At an average depth of four inches, stacked one on top of the other, that's two Mount Everests or 45 Empire State Buildings.

Those four inches can cause significant damage to your car, with most pothole claims reported in late winter and early spring. AAA Michigan typically receives between 10,000 and 15,000 pothole claims annually.

Potholes cost the average American more than $100 per year in vehicle repairs for new shock absorbers, blown tires, wasted gas, body work and even broken windshields, says Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager. And with today's sophisticated technology, pothole vehicle damage can cost as much as several thousand dollars to repair.

How can motorists avoid these expensive repairs?

"Keep your eye on the road," says Basch. "If contact with a pothole seems imminent, slow down and try to steer around it without endangering traffic in adjacent lanes."

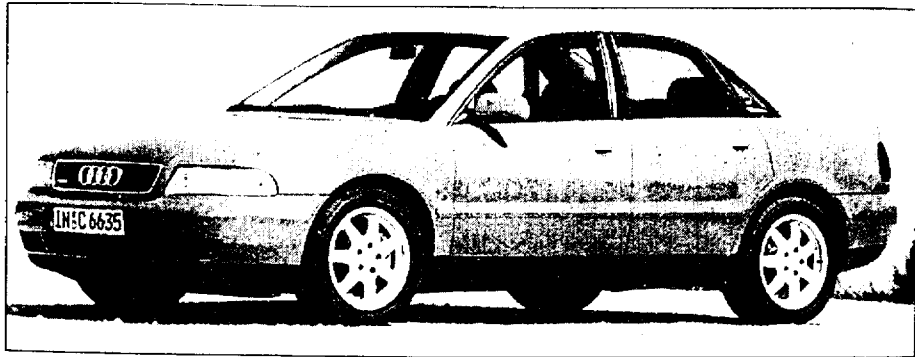

Preventive maintenance can also lessen the jarring effects of an unwanted encounter of the pothole kind.

"Be sure to take your car in for a checkup if steering, ride, tire or noise problems appear," says Basch. "Keep your tires properly inflated and steering and suspension components in good condition. Especially critical are the shock absorbers or struts, which prevent excessive rebound or bottoming out on severe bumps."

Potholes are created when snow or rain seeps into cracks on the road surface. The moisture freezes during cold weather, causing the ground and pavement to expand upward. When temperatures rise, a cavity is created as the soil returns to its normal level. Heavy traffic causes the pavement to crack and fall into the cavity beneath, creating a pothole. Due to weather conditions and roads in need of repair, potholes appear to be "blooming" more this season than in past years.

Slated for introduction this summer is the '98 Audi A4 2.8 with five-valve V-6 engine, delivering 190 hp.

Lincoln's new '98 Navigator luxury sport-utility will be introduced in dealer showrooms in July, but dealers are taking orders now.

The comet Hale-Bopp lights up Michigan's April sky this year

April will bring striking views of Comet Hale-Bopp to Michigan sky-watchers, according to University of Michigan astronomer Richard Teske.

Teske recommends looking for the comet about an hour after sunset.

"At that hour it should be hanging motionless in the northwest about two hand-breadths above the horizon, its tail extending almost vertically upward," he says. "The comet's head will appear to be a fuzzy star as bright as other stars in that part of the sky."

For best results, Teske recommends picking a dark observation site with a low, uncluttered horizon far away from artificial lights.

"Comet Hale-Bopp will remain visible during all of April," says Teske.

"For the first two weeks, it will appear about the same altitude above the horizon when darkness descends. After April 15, it will gradually get lower in the sky from night to night. Seen from a good observing site, the tail looks half as long as the handle of the Big Dipper and actually extends over 20 million miles."

Comets are creations of the sun, Teske explained. "A comet's brilliant head, its tail and all of the phenomena we see, are caused by the sun itself. As the comet draws closer to the sun, its head and tail grow more prominent. They fade as the comet recedes from the sun."

The heart and core of every comet is a solid icy fragment of space debris three to eight miles across, the size of a single Earth mountain.

This core is made of frozen water, frozen methane and other ices in which gritty, rocky bits are embedded.

Space photographs of the nucleus of Comet Halley showed it to be shaped like an Idaho potato.

Astronomers believe a huge number of these chunks exist in the dark, deep freeze of space far beyond the farthest planet Pluto, left over from the formation of our solar system.

"Some of these icy lumps enter the inner solar system from time to time, plunging unseen, toward the warming fires of the sun, guided by its gravitational pull," Teske says. "When a comet nucleus comes closer to the sun than Jupiter's orbit, its surface ices begin to evaporate in the increasing solar glare."

The ice becomes hazy, rarefied gases spreading out for 200,000 miles around the still solid nucleus, said Teske.

"Sunlight has caused some of the ice to evaporate; now sunlight causes the gas to glow, making the comet visible. This is the bright head of comets like Hale-Bopp," said Teske.

When the comet moves within the orbit of Mars, a tail appears — the result of two additional solar effects. One of these is the solar wind which blows perpetually outward from the sun into interstellar space.

"The tenuous gas of the solar wind pushes on the rarefied gas of the comet's head creating part of the gossamer tail which we see streaming rearward energized by sunlight," Teske explained.

The second effect is called "radiation pressure" of sunlight. While the effect is a small one, it is real and important.

Planetary scientists must account for its effect upon spacecraft traveling to distant planets, lest the vehicles arrive at their destinations hundreds of miles off course.

"In making a comet tail, the sun's light pushes on the tiny rocky bits associated with the comet's nucleus, forcing the bits rearward into the tail. There they reflect sunlight in all directions adding to the tail's illumination."

"Hale-Bopp will be closest to the sun on April 1, at a distance from it slightly less than our own distance from the sun," Teske says. "That should make April a time of enhanced brightness and tail length and make for a fine comet show."

Great Lakes water levels are above average

During the month of February, precipitation was above average on each of the Great Lakes basins except for the Lake Superior basin which received below average precipitation.

For the year-to-date, precipitation is 49 percent above average for the entire Great Lakes basin.

The net supply of water to each of the basins was above average in February.

In comparison to their long-term (1918 - 1996) averages, the February monthly mean water level of Lakes Superior, Michigan, Huron, St. Clair, Erie and Ontario were 10, 19, 29, 22 and 12 inches above average, respectively.

Shoreline residents are cautioned to be alert whenever adverse weather conditions exist, as these could cause rapid short-term rises in water levels.

Lake St. Clair at the end of February was at elevation 576.12 feet above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or about 46 inches above Chart Datum.

The February monthly mean level of 575.79 feet was about 29 inches above the long-term average for February. The lake was about 12 inches below the all-time high February monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986.

The forecast shows that the March monthly mean level of Lake St. Clair will be about four inches above what it was at mid-February. The lake is expected to begin its seasonal rise in March.

The water level in mid-August is expected to be about 23 inches above the long-term average for that month, or about 10 inches above what it was at the same time in 1996.

Advanced retirement planning is good for our emotional state

Joseph Willing, former director of the Duke Institute on Learning in Retirement and now a teacher there, takes an unique view in his book "The Reality of Retirement."

He contends that it is not so much what happens "to" people who retire as to what happens "in" people. From a philosophical point he explores the change that comes with the transition from work to retirement.

He believes that it is difficult to accept the fact that we are dispensable. That things for which we are responsible will be handled by someone else. He also raises the question of whether we were essential in the first place.

We are subtracted from it

Senior Men's Club hosts lunch at Grosse Pointe War Memorial

The Senior Men's Club of Grosse Pointe will have their luncheon meeting at 11:15 a.m. on Tuesday, April 8, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms.

The featured speaker will be Mona Gualtieri, who is currently the Cadillac sales representative in the North Central region of the United States as the fleet manager for Rinke Cadillac Co.

In 1978 Gualtieri formed Executive Vehicle Sales Inc. (EVS) to offer her experience, expertise and services as they apply to the acquisition of a new vehicle. EVS was the outgrowth of Gualtieri's 14 years in vehicle sales and leasing with a major Detroit dealership. She will discuss the options of buying or leasing a car.

The next special event is the but the operation goes on. It is still traumatic to realize that what has not been accomplished will never be accomplished.

Some retirees equate retirement with aging, he contends, but aging is inevitable. This is a mistake. The retiree is entering a period when he has an opportunity to plan a satisfying life.

Another aspect of retirement is how it will affect a wife. The tendency is to view the husband as the one being uprooted and the wife as being unaffected.

This is not always true. In the case of the working wife, if the husband is intent on moving to a different area, she would have to give up her job.

By Marian Trainor

Even if they do not relocate, her job stands in the way of travel.

Another situation is when the wife also would like to retire, but the husband's benefits are not sufficient to maintain their standard of living. Resentment can arise because she is the wage earner while her husband becomes a man of leisure.

The manner in which a man is retired needs some rethinking also, according to Willing. He suggests that there should be a ceremony. There is some sort of celebrating for all our other major life stages — birth, marriage or death.

He is not talking about an office party but one that includes wives, children and other people who made up the man's social network. He is not leaving the office, the job or the company. He is leaving a lifetime vacation.

Travel is usually high on the agenda of retirees, but there is a difference between vacation travel and travel as a retiree. One man described the return from his trip as a kind of psychological jet lag. "I'm back," he said. "But back to what?" Retirement is not a permanent vacation. It loses its appeal when it's ongoing.

Willing believes that few people complete the process of adopting new ways in less than a year or two. "Action," he says is the key word. Not action that takes the mind "off" things but the kind the puts the mind "on" things. One needs interests with meaning, activities that matter and concerns that make a difference in the world.

Another feeling that comes with retirement is one that their accomplishments at work were made at the cost of subordinating objectives to those of the company.

Sometimes it is one of indignation that his sacrifices were made to provide for his wife and children. Often the truth is while he did work for his family he also worked for success.

Children are another consideration. The enigma here is the displacement of young adults who have left home themselves and how they feel when parents break up a home — roots are shaken loose. This doesn't mean parents who want to relocate shouldn't. What is important is that each member of the family knew that it is a wounding experience for mom and dad to sell a home and that no matter where they move, the children are always welcome.

All through the book, the author makes the point of the need for advanced planning for retirement. Not only for the financial reasons but for emotional reasons.

We recognize the necessity of investing in our careers when we are young. We should also be able to recognize the necessity of investing both the time and money in our retirement.

An important point to remember is that we should not expect more of life or of ourselves after retirement. The experience of retirement changes us, but it does not transform us into other people. We remain, basically, as we were.

Life is a constant process of letting go, not of holding on.

In retirement we let go of work — an occupation where we have spent most of our lives.

Attention: Turbulence ahead
— keep seat belts fastened!

By Joseph Mengden

You're at 37,000 feet, airborne to California, when the captain's voice intones the headline above — Attention: Turbulence, keep seat belts fastened!

Mengden

Sounds almost like last Thursday's stock market forecast. Volume on Thursday, 470 million shares on NYSE, was about average, only most of it was downward.

During the day, the DJI fell 218 points, but a strong recovery in the last 30 minutes of trading brought the close to down only 140 points, or 2.04 percent, at 6,741. Looking back to year-end, the DJI is still up 4.5 percent, even though it is down 5.0 percent from its high of 7,085 last February.

The Fed chairman's request, for a 1/4 of 1 percent increase in the Fed Funds rate, was approved by the Federal Open Market Committee ("FOMC") on March 25. Not only did short-term interest rates ratchet up 1/4 (as predicted by LTS, and others, last week), but the bellwether 30-year Treasury Bond tanked on Wednesday and again on Thursday. Whereas, at year-end, the "Long Bond" was priced to yield 6.50 percent, last Thursday it closed to yield 7.14 percent. This produced a price loss, since year-end, of 7-3/8 points, and a Total Return (the Price Change plus Interest Income) of minus 5.75 percent.

If you historically track back interest rate changes by the Federal Reserve, they don't do it only once. Usually, changes come in twos, threes, or fours, before changing direction. The average time to repeat is 30 to 60 days. The FOMC is not scheduled to meet until late May, but bond markets are already discounting another ratchet up.

What do I do now? Most every week, LTS is asked, "What should I do now?" Since LTS is retired as a licensed broker and adviser, LTS cannot give specific advice. But I can urge you to again review your investment objectives, update your personal balance sheet, income tax bracket and your will.

The Fed chairman is happy if inflation stays at or below 3 percent annually.

So what is 3 percent inflation?

Investment	Value	Percent
Emergency Reserve	$ 50,000	6.0
Equities	625,800	75.8
Municipal Bonds	150,000	18.2
TOTAL PORTFOLIO	$825,800	100.0

Here's how our Model Portfolio is doing now, Income and Yield-Wise:

Investment	Annual Income	Percent Yield	Taxable
Emergency Reserve	$ 2,250	4.50	Yes
Equities	11,953	1.91	Yes
Municipal Bonds	9,000	6.00*	No
TOTAL PORTFOLIO	$23,203	2.81	Part

*based on cost, not market value.

tion? Well, over 10 years, it means your dollar today will be worth less than "six-bits" (that's 75 cents). If your dividend income from stocks isn't growing at more than the 3 percent inflation each and every year, then your purchasing power is getting further behind each year.

Is there a perfect asset allocation ratio? Only the one you feel most comfortable with over the long term. Since the fixed income from bonds won't change, then the dividend income from equities must not only grow enough to cover the inflation of the equities income, but must make up for the lack of growth from the fixed income bonds.

That's why many professionals recommend an asset allocation of more than 50 percent to the equities' portion, maybe 60/40, or 2/3-1/3, or even 75-25 percent. This is the allocation of the remainder, after deducting the emergency reserve.

Let's say our model portfolio of $500,000 was created on March 27, 1992, about 5 years ago when the DJI closed at 3,231. Let's say, we play conservative, and we put aside $50,000, or 10 percent, in the emergency reserve. It's earnings will float with short-term interest levels. That leaves a remainder of $450,000 for investment.

Being aggressive with equities, we used the 2/3-1/3 allocation formula, and bought $300,000 of high-grade, high-growth, "big-cap" stocks. The other $150,000 went into Michigan municipal bonds, maturing in 10 to 15 years, the interest income being triple tax-exempt.

Where is that portfolio today? The emergency reserve and the Michigan municipal bonds are valued about the same as original cost. Let's assume our high-grade, high-growth, "big-cap" stocks only did as well as the DJI (they probably did much better), so with the DJI now at 6,741, our portfolio is up 108.6 percent in market value, over original cost. The accompanying chart shows the present asset allocation of our model portfolio, valued at market.

Note the over-concentration in equities, above, as compared to our original asset allocation of 60 percent to equities. Next week we'll show how this can be remedied.

G. P. Farms woman works to develop breast cancer vaccine

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

In a small, cramped office and laboratory in a tall building downtown, one Grosse Pointe Farms woman is pursuing big medical advancements to help women avoid death from breast cancer.

Dr. Wei-Zen Wei is working on producing a vaccine for breast cancer.

About 2,000 Michigan women die each year from breast cancer, Michigan has the sixth highest breast cancer death rate in the nation, and Harper Woods and the Grosse Pointes have one of the highest breast cancer death rates in the state.

Wei, who has a doctoral degree in biology from Brown University, teaches doctoral-level courses in immunology and microbiology at Wayne State University, and heads a six-person research team at the Barbara Ann Karmanos Cancer Institute.

Wei's team is among several research groups working at the Institute which was created when Peter Karmanos Jr., chairman of Compuware Corp., donated $15 million — the largest contribution ever in Michigan to fight cancer — in memory of his late wife who died of breast cancer in 1989 at the age of 46.

Wei's team shares information with other researchers at Karmanos, as well as with the medical research community worldwide, which also is tackling similar issues in gene therapy so that vaccines may be developed.

In order for a vaccine to work, the body must be trained to recognize when a foreign cell is present. When the body can make such a distinction, it can mobilize certain cells to chop the foreign cancerous cells into pieces, destroying its ability to damage the body. (Cancer is the unchecked multiplying of certain cells within the body.)

The particular vaccine Wei is working on likely will be ready to try on human beings in about two years or less.

Dr. Wei-Zen Wei
Currently, Wei and her colleagues use mice to test their reaction to segments of genes injected into them. (Genes are very long protein molecules.)

Speech! Speech!

Are you a member of a civic group looking for a speaker to address your group at a future meeting?

The Health Action Team (HAT) of the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods is teaming up with officials from the Barbara Ann Karmanos Cancer Institute, and area hospitals to provide speeches on breast cancer.

One Grosse Pointe or Harper Woods woman dies every 16 days from breast cancer, according to Wayne County Health Department statistics.

The speeches provide insight on the newest known factors that may increase a woman's risk of developing breast cancer. The goal is to inform women with the most up-to-date information, and to impart GPHW area specific data to rally women to action.

To schedule a free, 30-minute speech, call HAT chairperson Amy at (313) 885-9966, or Steve Gold, of the Wayne County Health Dept., at (313) 467-3364.

Race for the Cure

It's still not too late to sign up for the Race for the Cure — the 5K run and walk to be held Saturday, April 19 at the Detroit Zoo, at Woodward Avenue and Ten Mile (at I-696). The race is sponsored locally by the Barbara Ann Karmanos Cancer Institute.

What the Race Events' Proceeds Support

Seventy-five percent of proceeds from the event are used by the Karmanos Cancer Institute to fund breast cancer awareness and early detection programs, and to assist low-income women needing additional tests following abnormal mammograms. Remainder of proceeds is used by the Komen Foundation to help fund its National Grant Program.

Last year's race netted $200,000 for breast cancer research and early detection and treatment programs in greater Detroit.

and athletic abilities are encouraged to participate in the events.

Expected Number of Participants

Nearly 15,000 runners and walkers are expected to participate in the event this year.

According to Race Chair Jane Hoey, the institute's assistant director of breast cancer education and outreach, more than 700 breast cancer survivors are expected to attend the 1997 event.

"Those 700 survivors are our neighbors, co-workers, friends, and family members. They're proof that we can make a difference in this disease," said Hoey, a former Women and men of all ages

Health Expo: A new addition to Race for the Cure Events

For the first time in the six-year history of the annual Detroit area Race for the Cure event, a new dimension will be added — a Race for the Cure Expo.

From noon until 8 p.m. on Friday, April 18, the Oakland YWCA will be turned into an exposition site featuring health and fitness displays and speakers, music, entertainment, door prizes and visits by special guests.

The Expo is free and open to the public. Race for the Cure national honorary chair and Olympic runner, Francie Larrieu Smith, will conduct running workshops. Priscilla Welsh, a world-class distance runner who is also a breast cancer survivor, will give an inspirational talk.

Other events planned for Expo day include: a breast cancer awareness update conducted by area physicians; a fitness consultation and nutrition sessions; and informal active sportswear modeling sessions throughout the day.

Race participants can pick up race packets and T-shirts at the Expo. The Expo also provides a last minute option for late registration to participate in the Saturday, April 19 race day events.

The Expo is sponsored by Jacobson's. The Oakland YWCA is located at 839 Crooks Rd. at Normandy (13 1/2 Mile Rd.) in Clawson.

Vaccine

they are like architectural blueprints which determine the characteristic of cells formed in the body.)

The specific gene Wei is working with appears greatly amplified in 20 to 40 percent of breast cancer cases. In fact, the gene, called Her-2/neu, also appears in high numbers in people diagnosed with cancer of the lungs, ovaries, and head/neck.

"My ultimate goal is to find and characterize new breast cancer genes; so that eventually we can develop a cocktail of vaccines to give to a person, and one of those manipulated genes will be the one that addresses the cancer gene most amplified in their body," Wei said.

Spoken like an optimist? But they are also the words of a passionate, yet humble, scientist. She almost blushes and fidgets at the notion that people such as her are remarkable in their efforts to help others.

"I am just doing a job I am trained for," she said, downplaying her efforts.

She said her doctoral studies trained her to think a certain way, to constantly ask questions, to learn from mistakes, and to look at problems creatively.

She said her creativity really comes out in her applications for grants. Bringing in research dollars is her primary job. Without grant money, she and her team work without pay, which last happened in 1991.

"Being creative is a must in grant writing. We have to show that we are thinking of things here that our colleagues around the world have not thought of," Wei said.

Grant writing, unfortunately, is grueling work that can result in being rejected. The time she spends in the lab, in contrast, could almost be described as her fun and easier work, even though it means synthesizing genes, cloning them, growing them, making cultures, injecting reconstituted gene sequences into mice, and monitoring their change.

Her grant applications compete against many others from around the world. They are judged by a committee that meets periodically in Washington. Wei, herself, has been selected to sit on grant writing committees.

Despite the constant battle for dollars, and the slow progress of working with something as complex as genes, Wei also has good reason to be optimistic; they have achieved huge successes so far.

For example, to even be working with the gene Her-2/neu for utilization within a vaccine, they had to decode its entire sequence — all 4,000 nuclei of it. That took the world community of medical researchers, including Wei, about 10 years.

They have identified the entire gene, also known as a protein molecule. They have identified every part of the proteins' building blocks, known as amino acids.

In short, Wei and her team now know every part of the gene and what is each part's function.

Then Wei's team modified the gene so that the gene's building blocks — proteins — are forced to locate in an area of the cell that will make the cancerous matter more easily recognized and trapped by the body's disease-fighting cells.

"Since we know every part of the gene and what it does, one thing we have done here is we took away the first 80 amino acids which contained the instructions of where the protein is to locate. Now it doesn't know where to go, so it remains outside the cytoplasmic membrane instead of across it," she said gleefully of this optimal position.

"In this position (located outside the membrane) we have the foreign body isolated, and we can now aid the T-lymphocytes (the body's disease-fighting cells) to recognize that the foreign body is indeed garbage."

Then the body can proceed on its own — the disease-fighting cells can dispose of the cancerous cells by chopping it up so that it is no longer a cancerous whole but useful, and recyclable, amino acids for the body.

Unlike chemotherapy and radiation, the proposed breast cancer vaccine will not be painful.

"No more painful than a flu shot or small-pox vaccine. In fact, those vaccines operate inside the body in the same way this vaccine will," Wei said, also emphasizing that on a daily basis a healthy body is reutilizing useful amino acids from broken down cells.

Wei has stayed patient, but focused and determined through the years of piecemeal progress to decode the gene and re-direct how it operates.

"In this business, you learn how to pace yourself, or you will burn out," she said, admitting however that she brought her laptop computer with her to do some work while on a ski trip out west with her husband, Kuang-Chung Wei, and their sons John, a junior at University of Michigan, and Benjamin, a sophomore at Grosse Pointe South High School.

Sometimes she said she feels she cannot completely relax because every day's work brings her that much closer to helping people beat cancer.

The responsibility may seem oppressive; and the nature of gene therapy is piecemeal, long-term and even agonizing at times. Yet Wei emphasizes that there are many less complex things in life that she manages to enjoy.

"I love to cook a meal; I love to teach Sunday school (at Grosse Pointe United Church); I love to make crafts; I love to shop in the Village and on the Hill; and I love raising my children," she said of John and Benjamin, both of whom are accomplished cello players.

On Saturday, April 19, Wei and her family will participate for the second time in the fundraising "Race For the Cure" 5K Run/Walk hosted by the Karmanos Cancer Institute. She describes the race atmosphere as one of camaraderie and happiness, despite the fact that hundreds of participants have battled cancer.

She will return to her office and laboratory the following Monday even more inspired — that is, if a higher level of commitment and passion are possible in a person already so dedicated.

Composite Lodge No. 499; Joe Arcand, Golden Spice of Life Catering; Fran Miller, Children's Home of Detroit (receiving the check); and Dan Carroll, Golden Spice of Life Catering.

Smith lived his life dedicated to the betterment of the City of Detroit and its people. As a businessman, Smith was a real estate investor who owned property throughout the Detroit area. As a philanthropist, he supported the arts, health care, low-income housing development and job training programs that served the people of Detroit.

His recently settled estate of over $4.5 million has endowed the Raymond C. Smith Foundation Fund of the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan. The Smith Fund will perpetuate his interests in developing Detroit neighborhoods and enhancing the Detroit metropolitan area for the benefit of the general public.

"Raymond Smith was a lifelong Detroit and anything he could do for the City was important to him," said Joan Warren, a friend of Ray Smith and Community Foundation Trustee. "He was a quiet gentleman who loved to make life better for other people."

Smith began working with the Community Foundation in 1988, many years before he died in 1995. He asked that following his death the former trustees of his private foundation including Warren, David L. Denn and William C. Rands III, advise the Community Foundation on distributions from the Smith Fund.

"He learned his devotion to Detroit from his father, who was in the family grocery business," said Rands. "Ray always felt he owed his family's success to the people of Detroit."

Over the years, his private foundation supported such programs as the renovation of the fountain in Hart Plaza, an after-school program for youth run by the Church of the Messiah on East Grand Boulevard, and the Cyprian Center, which is a rehabilitation and housing center for adults with developmental disabilities.

"Ray helped build a new facility for the Cyprian Center and named it after his parents, Conrad and Ida Smith. He never wanted public recog-

"Ray Smith loved his community and chose to leave a legacy for its future," said Mariam C. Noland, president of the Community Foundation. "We look forward to carrying out his interests throughout the generations to come."

The Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan, founded in 1984, is a permanent collection of endowment funds, built by gifts from thousands of individuals and organizations who are committed to the future of southeastern Michigan.

Guided by a 49-member board of civic leaders, the Community Foundation administers assets totaling $150 million making grants to outstanding charitable projects primarily in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw, Monroe, Livingston and St. Clair counties as well as throughout the State of Michigan and the United States. The foundation has distributed over $40 million in more than 6,500 grants since its founding.

Phantom returns: More than 300 friends enjoyed a lively evening of bidding and action at the recent Academy of the Sacred Heart's 40th annual benefit, PHANTOM of the AUCTION, at the Detroit Athletic Club.

Guests enjoyed buying gifts for their kids from the hundreds of items at the silent auction, with the most active bidding centering on Beatrix Potter items, sports equipment and the basket of 30 Beanie Babies donated by the sophomore class. A highlight of every auction is the one-of-a-kind student creations — paintings and quilts, this year — that elicited numerous bids from parents representing those grades of students.

As guests dined on an elegant dinner, academy parent and WDIV-TV news anchor Steve Garagiola teamed with longtime academy supporter and auctioneer Bob DuMouchelle of Dumouchelles Galleries in Detroit to conduct a most successful live auction of 45 exciting trips and packages. High bidders took home exotic jewelry, furniture pieces, sports memorabilia, furs, student creations, Oriental rugs, art and plans for special vacations and private parties.

Dessert and dancing to the nine-piece Bill Meyer Orchestra topped off the gala evening. All proceeds from PHANTOM of the AUCTION directly benefit educational and scholarship programs at the academy.

The Academy of the Sacred Heart, Michigan's oldest independent school, offers a college preparatory curriculum for girls in preschool through upper school and boys in preschool and lower school. A member of the international network of Sacred Heart Schools in 35 countries, the academy educates students of many cultures and faiths from throughout metropolitan Detroit. The Academy of the Sacred Heart was founded in Detroit in 1851 and moved to its present campus in Bloomfield Hills in 1958.

SEQUENCE

The Pastor's Corner

Relative distance

By the Rev. E.A. Bray
Grosse Pointe United Church

By leaps and bounds our world has become so small that everywhere and everyone is only a hop, skip or a jump away. I recall reading letters written in the mid-1800s between a man and his son. The father lived in the "old country." The son lived in America. (It was one of the son's descendants who shared the letters with me.)

How very aware of the distance between them they were. How overwhelmed by the thought that within the time one's words reached the other, the writer might not even exist anymore.

You could feel the joy each had in receiving new word from the other. You could also feel the pain each felt at the distance between them.

Today, I can "catch a plane" and be at my son's home or my daughter's home within three hours — and they each live half a continent away, in opposite directions.

I can pick up a telephone to talk with either one within seconds.

I can e-mail a letter to them almost as quickly as my fingers can type it. Distance almost means nothing anymore.

Distance is, however, a word that is still an obvious factor when applied to how people feel about their relationship with God. Throughout all of humanity's existence, there has always been the ability to be in instantaneous contact with God.

Yet something within us all makes us more inclined to see God as distant and far-removed from our lives.

God does not see it that way, however.

Perhaps it is because the Creator is still as big today as ever and, unlike our world, cannot be shrunk down to a "more manageable" size.

It is my impression that there are a lot of people who would be more comfortable if God were more controllable and we could mold God more to our liking.

The truth be known, God is probably more like that father left behind in the old country. Only in God's case, the children don't always write back.

Thankfully, God does not give up on any of us, but keeps trying to connect, knowing we each, in reality, are closer to our Creator than just a hop, skip or a jump away.

Jazz concert at Unitarian Church, Sunday, April 6

If spring could choose a way to express itself musically, it probably would pick jazz — and jazz of the "it don't mean a thing if it ain't got that swing" variety.

Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church, 17150 Maumee in the City of Grosse Pointe, is providing a special opportunity to hear jazz in celebration of the season during a special worship service on Sunday, April 6, from 10:30-11:30 a.m. in the sanctuary.

Church member and lyrical jazz pianist Bess Bonnier will honor the spirit of the spring accompanied by bassist Paul Keller. Interspersed among the musical selections, all of which have spring in the title or a spring theme, four church members will read spiritual passages as well as those containing witticisms and anecdotes of jazz greats.

John Engstrom, a Detroit attorney and Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church member, organized the special service, which is open to the public.

"Unitarians believe truth comes from a number of different sources and that worship can take many forms. Music is a celebration of God's message," Engstrom said.

He believes jazz is especially suited to the Unitarian openness to others' beliefs and expressions of them.

"In jazz there's freedom to express oneself in the moment," Engstrom said.

Bonnier is a master of expression in that genre. She has earned praise from jazz masters such as Barry Harris, Tommy Flanagan, Sir Roland Hanna and Thad Jones. She has played at international jazz events and has been a featured artist on National Public Radio. Still, this energetic and talented artist has chosen to live and play where she was born.

Bonnier is the regular solo pianist at the Detroit Institute of Arts each Sunday afternoon in the Crystal Gallery and plays often in area clubs. In addition, she has recorded three albums, the latest of which, "Bess Bonnier and Other Jazz Birds," has just been released.

Paul Keller was voted Most Valuable Player at the 1994 Montreux Jazz Festival. But he also earned the title "Busiest Bassist in the Detroit Area." He leads the 16-piece Bird of Paradise Orchestra, is co-leader of the Keller/Kocher Quartet, has recorded numerous albums as both a principal player and as a sideman. And there is hardly a big band or jazz artist one can name with whom he has not played at one time or another.

Celebrate volunteers

By Roberta Lady
Special Writer

As one can read almost anywhere, the health care system in this country is currently undergoing perhaps the most dramatic changes in history. Hospitals are merging or closing, managed care plans are replacing traditional insurance coverage at an increasing rate, the government is getting involved in the length of hospital stays, and the changes just keep coming.

Roberta Lady

became a Reach to Recovery volunteer to help other women diagnosed with this frightening disease.

Another of our volunteers works in the cardiac rehab department at the hospital, instructing and helping patients with their exercise programs. Several years ago, she had a triple-bypass operation and became a patient of the cardiac rehab program at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital. She was so impressed with the care she received and with her personal outcome, that she volunteered her services to help other heart patients.

The majority of hospital volunteers do not begin volunteering for such heroic reasons. The reasons given for starting volunteer careers vary; however, there are some common themes.

Some feel a duty to give back to the community, others need to occupy time and still others want to fulfill a need to help others.

Whatever our reasons for beginning, we remain hospital volunteers for two main reasons.

The first is that volunteering is extremely rewarding. Every volunteer with whom I have ever spoken, refers to the good feeling he or she gets from working at the hospital.

We all feel that we get much more out of the experience than we could ever put into it.

The second reason given for remaining a volunteer is that we very quickly come to feel that we are an integral part of the hospital. We care about it as much as the salaried staff does.

Most hospital volunteers refer to "my" or "our" hospital when they discuss their volunteer jobs. A volunteer may be the first person encountered by a first-time patient or visitor to Cottage Hospital, or the last face seen by a harried employee on his or her way home. In all cases, we try to make those encounters as pleasant as possible.

We are proud to be associated with Henry Ford Cottage Hospital and we want patients and visitors to leave with a positive impression. That is as important a part of our jobs as the tasks we are given to do.

The week of April 13 is Volunteer Week in the state of Michigan. It is a week that is set aside to honor the women and men who give so generously of their time to hospitals and charitable institutions.

During that week, do something nice for a volunteer you know. Better yet, contact one of our fine east side hospitals (the Volunteer line at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital is (313) 640-2455) and become a volunteer yourself.

As any hospital volunteer will tell you, it will be one of the most rewarding experiences you will ever have.

Roberta Lady is the president of Cottage Hospital Auxiliary. She has been a volunteer for four years.

Lose weight — without fad diets

April Fools' Day is a time of practical jokes. But sometimes, the joke is on the public, and it's not a very nice joke. That is why the American Heart Association is using April Fools' Day week to kick off a "War on Fad Diets" — because right about now, people are desperate to lose that extra "winter weight."

Many Americans are desperate to try just about anything to shrink their waistline — fast.

Here is the bad news. There are a lot of fad diets in circulation that promise rapid weight loss, frequently by overemphasizing one particular food or type of food. Sometimes these unhealthy diets are even rumored to come from the American Heart Association. For example, last year, a "cabbage soup" diet, which recommended a very limited menu, was erroneously promoted as being endorsed by the association.

"Many people crave instant results and turn to fad diets, like the cabbage soup diet, because they believe the myths that certain foods — in this case cabbage — have magical weight loss properties," said

Charles Webb, M.D. and president of the American Heart Association, Michigan Affiliate.

"These fad diets leave out a major component of any weight loss or weight maintenance plan — physical activity. People who wish to lose and maintain weight should try walking briskly 30 minutes a day most days of the week. Simple activities like walking can also help reduce the risk of heart disease.

"Even if people can withstand the boredom of a fad diet for more than a few weeks, they can develop nutritional deficiencies, because no one type of food has all the nutrients for good health," adds Webb. "Most people eventually return to their old eating habits, which were responsible for their weight gain in the first place.

"Even if an individual can change their eating habits for a short time, it is difficult to maintain a fad diet over time. Successful dieters prepare themselves by setting clear goals, anticipating roadblocks they'll encounter, and deciding beforehand how they'll deal with challenges. They're also committed to modifying their usual way of eating. Becoming overweight doesn't happen overnight, neither does losing weight and maintaining weight loss," says Webb.

Here's the good news. Recently the American Heart Association issued revised dietary guidelines that emphasize flexibility in food selection. Although the organization still recommends keeping total consumption of fats to no more than 30 percent of a total diet, the new guidelines suggest that people consider their diet over the course of the week, instead of one day. This allows some flexibility in choosing foods and fits the theme of consuming a variety of foods and reducing guilt from eating something high fat now and then.

To learn about the American Heart Association recommendations for eating a nutritionally balanced diet, losing weight and maintaining a healthy weight, or reducing the amount of fat in your diet, contact the American Heart Association's Metro Detroit Office at (810) 557-9511, or visit our Web site at www.americanheart.org.

Your Skin

by Lisa A. Manz-Dulac, MD

Wrinkles, scars and other lines that bother you can be addressed in many different ways.

After taking basic preventative steps (like wearing your sunscreen!), your treatment options range from simple to aggressive. There are self-applied topical creams to help with mild conditions. Other options, such as skin peels and collagen, require your physician's involvement.

More advanced techniques include CO<sub>2</sub> laser resurfacing as well as other traditional forms of plastic surgery.

To find your own best option, always start by talking with your health care advisor.

OTT ROBINSON

A riotous, rambunctious trip on the Salmon

I should have been prepared when I talked with Thyra Warren before our rafting trip on the Salmon River in Idaho. "The most important thing you will bring is a rain suit," she advised. But little did she and I know that it wouldn't be enough.

Oh, the rain suit was fine for traveling down the river in the oar boat. In fact the September weather was so balmy that most days we had stripped to T-shirts and shorts by noon. No, it was what we weren't planning for.

Her husband Dave, owner of Warren River Expeditions and the oarsman on one of our two boats, had offered us the opportunity to kayak alongside the big inflatable rafts, each of which contained six passengers and the oarsman. So, for a day and a half, I took the helm of the inflatable kayak along with John Moore, a just retired school teacher from the Pine Ridge reservation in South Dakota. He and I did just fine together.

Then my husband Chet decided he should try it with me. And, again, we were competent as we discovered the nuances of getting through the rapids nose first, cutting around rocks and staying upright. Well, almost. Maybe we got just a bit cocky, maybe it was destiny. But at the final rapids before lunch, we encountered a deep hole in front of a huge boulder and, over we went. In river parlance, we "went swimming" at Lanz Bar.

My, oh, my did the camera shutters click as we were dragged out of the frigid water by our life vests and, of course, we would hear about our little "episode" for the rest of the week. However, after that we considered ourselves river veterans and the waves that splashed over us hardly bothered.

This five-day rafting trip down the Main Salmon River of Idaho was filled with other adventures, although none of them were quite so "invigorating." The scenery was as breathtaking as we'd anticipated and the river quite peaceful and lovely, when we weren't barreling through the white-water on the "River of No Return."

Dave Warren, 35, has run this river over 125 times. Our other oarsman, Dick Hauff, 62, had also made the trip plenty of times as well during his years as supervisor of the Salmon National Forest. Even Dave's dog was experienced; this was Maria's 10th trip this season. We felt plenty secure.

I'd been concerned that it might be a bit crowded in paradise, that we would encounter many fellow floaters on the river, but that didn't happen. The number of outfitters and private rafters who can "put in" on any given day is strictly regulated and everyone paces themselves so as not to interfere with one another. So, although we would occasionally pass by another raft or campsite, for most of the time we were all alone, and it was splendid.

The 425-mile Salmon River begins at elevations above 8,000 feet in the Sawtooth Mountains and ends at its confluence with the Snake River at an elevation of 905 feet, draining 14,000 square miles of land.

Next to Hell's Canyon on the Snake River, this is the deepest gorge on the continent. The portion of the river we were floating was a 79-mile stretch between Corn Creek and Vinegar Creek... from road's end to road's end. The only way in or out of this area is by jet boat or airplane.

This trip had been publicized as being for "seniors," because instead of camping on beaches at night, we were to overnight in river lodges. However, Dave Warren and a few other innovative outfitters have discovered that people of all ages like the lodge-to-lodge concept, both for the physical comfort of real beds and bathrooms (OK, there were a few outhouses) and for the wonderful hospitality of the lodge-keepers.

These hostilities provided a whole other set of memories.

Travel Trends

By Cynthia Boal Janssens

One of the funniest occurred the first night. When we gathered for our room assignments at the Salmon River Inn, we were informed that two couples would have to share a room with four bunks. We were one of those couples and let me tell you, were the men squeamish. "Heck, I haven't shared a room with strangers since I was in the Army," muttered Herb Livesey, our new roommate. His wife Joann and I chuckled; it was no big deal to us. The next morning, there were a few jabs about snoring, but otherwise we'd made a couple of new friends.

In general, the lodges were funky. They are used primarily by hunters (moose, elk and bear) and steelhead fishermen — few niceties, plenty of card tables. But the people who operate them are special.

For example, the River of No Return Lodge is run by cousins Gail and Stan Watt. Potato farmers by trade, they had traveled six hours from the town of Blackfoot to host us for the night. The mashed potatoes they served — match! — were to die for. "In fact, I dug these spuds right out of my back yard this morning," Stan boasted. And he served coffee from an old-fashioned aluminum percolator with a glass bulb on top.

At the White Water Ranch, a woman's touch was clearly evident and we surely appreciated the gourmet vegetarian meals prepared by Michel Lloyd. She and her husband, Brandon Lever, and their 5-year-old daughter Rae live here year around as caretakers of this impressive spread which was homesteaded in 1897. We spent an extra half day here, giving us the opportunity to watch the weekly mail plane fly in and out, delivering groceries and packages. We also helped Brandon pick a tree loaded with pears, which he was trying to save from bears who came to eat the fruit at night.

At China Bar we were treated to a whole salmon fillet grilled by owner Mike McClain, who later serenaded us with guitar tunes and poems by a beach campfire. I must say that the sleeping bags and outhouses were more than offset by being able to hear the river rushing by at night.

Our final night was at Shepp Ranch, certainly the most elaborate of all of the lodges. The Shepp is run as a full-time guest ranch by Lynn and Michael Demerise, and is popular with families who come for week-long stays. "If you want to ride, float, fish, hike and be in the wilderness, this is the place," Mike explains.

One of the hands is 19-year-old Scott Vairo from Traverse City. He says he first came to Shepp Ranch on a hunting trip with his father (yes, he did shoot an elk) and liked it so much that he returned to work there. He plans to attend college in Idaho during the off-season.

This country has that effect. I want to go back to the Salmon River. I want to bring my children and grandchildren here. Either we'll do a family rafting trip, or we'll come to Shepp and stay put. Either way, I will be back.

A six-day float trip with Warren River Expeditions costs $1,175 per person; a six-day lodge trip costs $1,450. Seniors and children are discounted 10 percent.

For more information, contact Warren River Expeditions, P.O. Box 1375, Salmon, Idaho 83467; or call (800) 765-0421. Visit their Web site at www.RaftIdaho.com. For information on the other lodges, outfitters and all of Idaho, call (800) 714-3246.

Bartoli's a vocal sensation; Perlman's not bad on narration

Here are thoughts on three CDs featuring major musicians, all but one performing in our area within the span of several weeks:

Cecilia Bartoli "Chant d'Amour." Songs by Bizet, Delibes, Viardot, Berlioz and Ravel; Cecilia Bartoli, mezzo-soprano; Myung-Whun Chung, piano (London) Rating: ★★★★★ (out of 4)

The Rome-born Bartoli canceled her March 29 recital in Ann Arbor. Disappointed fans can find solace in her latest CD, devoted to French songs.

Bartoli is an authentic vocal sensation. At a time when many singers seem primarily concerned with imitating each other, the 30-year-old Bartoli imbues her voice with such deep personality you could almost write her biography based solely on her singing.

In addition, she's blessed with an unusually flexible voice of an extremely wide range that seems able to conquer any technical difficulties thrown at it. The one recurrent criticism leveled at her voice is that it is a comparatively small instrument that has trouble filling a large hall.

There's no problem with volume on a CD, of course, and Bartoli's latest, in which she is superbly partnered by Myung-Whun Chung, shows her phenomenal gifts to especially good advantage. Except for Delibes' popular "Les Filles de Cadix," the repertoire on the CD will probably be unfamiliar to most listeners. Hearing her sing them, though, should soon make all 19 songs old favorites.

Especially winning: Bizet's "La Coccinelle," wherein Bartoli mimics the voice of a ladybird; "Havanaise," composed by one of Bartoli's leg-

OFF THE RECORD

By John Guinn

endary ancestors, the great mezzo-soprano Pauline Viardot; Berlioz' stunning "Death of Ophelia"; Ravel's "Chants populaires," where she switches handily from French to Spanish to Italian to Yiddish.

Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, Dennis Russell Davies conducting Music of Shostakovich, Vasks and Schnittke (ECM New Series) Rating: ★★★★★

The Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, led by the Toledo-born Davies, will play at the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts on Saturday, April 19.

Old-timers will remember the widespread fame this orchestra achieved under Karl Munchinger, who founded the ensemble in 1945 and headed it until 1987. Its fame continues under Davies, who was named chief conductor in 1995.

The three selections on this CD, all for string orchestra, are performed with deep intensity and high polish. Rudolf Barshai's orchestration of Shostakovich's Eighth String Quartet illuminates in a startling way what is perhaps the most deeply personal of the late Russian composer's works.

"Musica dolorosa," composed in 1983 by Latvian composer Peteris Vasks, was prompted by the death of his sister and the political oppression endured by his fellow citizens.

Yuri Bashmet's orchestration of Alfred Schnittke's Trio Sonata gives new meaning to the composer's unique writing style.

While all three pieces were composed in this century, none is unapproachable. In fact, these glowing performances may just change the way you think about contemporary music's ability to reach audiences.

Itzhak Perlman "Classical Zoo" music of Rossini, Respighi, Sibelius and Saint-Saens; Atlanta Symphony Orchestra (Telarc) Rating: ★★★★★

This CD contains borrowed goods. Each of the performances (Rossini's "La Gazza Lutra" Overture, Respighi's "The Birds," Sibelius' "Swan of Tuonela" and Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals") has been issued previously by Telarc.

They are apparently being reissued to serve as fillers for Itzhak Perlman, who appears only in the Saint-Saens, where he narrates rather than fiddles.

In general the performances, led by Yoel Levi and Louis Lane, are more correct than inspired, although the Saint-Saens, originally issued to accompany a new set of poems written and narrated by Peter Schickele of P.D.Q. Bach fame, is played with panache.

Perlman's narration of new texts by Bruce Adolph is disarmingly well done. He takes on a variety of accents — Yiddish, German, French, Brooklyn — with excellent results. Adolph's poetry, while not supplanting the standard Oden Nash collection, is intermittently witty.

Perlman is set to perform with Neeme Järvi and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at Orchestra Hall on Sunday, April 13. It is no secret that his playing of late has been plagued with technical problems and indifferent artistry, which makes one wonder if his successful narration on this CD might prove a more satisfying way to experience his gifts.

Go X-treme and get Airborne at local man's new skate park

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

Today, April 3, a long-time dream comes true for a local man and his business partner, both of whom are avid inline skaters.

Mark Farnen, 46, of Grosse Pointe Farms and Rick Gadd, 40, of Chesterfield Township are opening Airborne Skate Park at 28070 Hayes, just north of Martin Road in Roseville.

The park will boast several apparatus upon which various stunts and skating can be done by beginner to advanced in-line skaters and skateboarders. (See accompanying graphic of apparatus.)

The style of skating is called aggressive. Although a television program on ESPN has nicknamed the sport "X-treme skating."

Although just opening, Farnen and Gadd have landed the opportunity to have Airborne Skate Park host the American

Association's National Inline Aggressive Competition on Saturday, June 21 and Sunday, June 22.

Airborne also is being considered for a second major skating competition to be held in September.

ESPN likely will televise the June competition, and tickets will be available to view it in person. In the competition, skaters are expected to fly 10 feet into the air above the top of the 11-foot tall special half-pipe apparatus patented by Farnen, a manufacturer's representative for several companies that sell inline skate equipment and accessories.

In fact, the skaters will be near the ceiling of the 26-foot tall, brand new, light industrial building.

The building — on Hayes overlooking the track at Macomb Community College — was originally built to house a nickel plating business, but no industrial tenant moved in.

Farnen and Gadd said they were thrilled to lease such a safe, clean, new building as this one after they wasted almost $10,000 during the past four months trying to secure a building and necessary permits and variances in Macomb Township. The township board squashed the skate park from locating in their area because they said the business plan lacked the required number of parking spaces.

In contrast, Airborne has its own parking lot and circular driveway.

Farnen said he doesn't expect a lot of cars to be parked at Airborne since most of his clientele is under 16 years of age.

"Many of our members will be dropped off, but we do have a lot here for those who don't skate," said Farnen, who skates about 75 to 100 miles per week, and is founder and president of the City Rollers Inline Skate Club.

Indeed, Airborne also boasts the following features:

- a video game arcade
- a Nautilus weight room
- a pro shop for skating apparel and equipment
- a limited food area (vending machines) with plans to expand to offering pizza, and
- a skating equipment repair station.

In addition, an open balcony overlooking the entire skating area will accommodate two pool tables, vending machines, and big screen TVs.

Farnen and Gadd, owner of "Hit the Trails" sports store, plan to use the televisions sometimes to televise videos of aggressive skating competitions.

Sometimes the "stars" appearing on the TV screens will be area youths. Farnen and Gadd plan to offer skating lessons, and lessons on how to use some of the apparatus.

Some lessons will be videotaped and reviewed with youngsters and their friends so they can see their mistakes.

More than 120 people have purchased memberships to the skate park already, with about 75 percent of them being Grosse Pointe area residents.

Most of the memberships were sold to boys rather than girls. Memberships are about $100 per year, with a $5 fee per skating session. Different membership packages will separate skaters by age. Older teens and adults will be encouraged to sign up for skate times between 7 and 10 p.m.

"Social" memberships are available for $30 per year for those who don't skate, but have friends who skate. Social members will have access to the skate and weight room, and

Spring scene

Scenes like this will soon be common on the soccer fields in Grosse Pointe. Here several players from two teams in the Neighborhood Club's kindergarten soccer program chase the bouncing ball.

X-treme skating apparatus

Wall ramp with nine inches of vertical pitch at top. Skate up it, and "stunts" can be done at top.

Half pipe — Made of wood, 16' wide by 40' long, 11 feet tall with 12 inches variable pitch at tops. Like a wall ramp, stunts can be done at top. Advanced skaters should be able to start at bottom and get to top after going back and forth about four times. Skaters will traverse half pipe at about 25 mph. Metal half pipe is 20' wide, and skaters can travel at 25 mph.

Spine — similar to wall ramp and half pipe. Skaters can perform "stunts" at the top of each, such as planting a hand, or handstand, or turning around in mid air, or going from one half pipe side to the other.

Rail — Skaters traverse toward it and jump or step onto it, and "grind" with skates tangent to the rail. Variations on grinding maneuvers also can be done. Beginners start with a grinding rail which is only inches off the ground. Advanced skaters progress to rail 4' or more feet off the ground.

Fun box with rail — Made of wood. Skater can approach the box and do a variety of maneuvers: jump up and grind on rail, flips and jumps.

Highlights

Youth T-ball

Youngsters ages 4 through 6 can sign up for the Neighborhood Club T-ball program.

The season will begin Saturday, April 26. Teams will meet on Saturdays to practice and play games.

A child must be 4 by Aug. 1, 1997, to play pre-kindergarten instructional T-ball.

Pre-kindergarten games will be scheduled for 9 and 10:30 a.m., while youngsters 5 and 6 will play each Saturday from 9:15 to 10:30 a.m.

The registration deadline is April 8. The league fee is $60. Registration may be done in person or by mail to the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo, Grosse Pointe, 48230.

Participants must also have a current club membership, which may be purchased at registration. For more information, call 885-4600.

Youth inline hockey

Inline hockey leagues will be forming at the Neighborhood Club for children in kindergarten through grade eight.

Games will be played on weekends from April 26 through June 14.

Children in kindergarten and grade one will participate in an instructional league that will practice 30 minutes each week before playing a 30-minute game. The older children will play a game each weekend.

All participants must provide their own skates, hockey stick, helmet with full cage or face shield, knee and elbow pads, hockey gloves and a mouth guard.

The league fee is $60 and the registration deadline is April 10. Players must also have a current club membership.

Registration may be done in person or by mail to the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo, Grosse Pointe, 48230.

Some openings for NAYB event

North American Youth Basketball still has some openings for its first Detroit area spring youth basketball tournament.

The tournament will be held from May 9th through 11th at Schoolcraft College and other area sites.

There will be 10 brackets of competition — fifth and sixth grade boys and girls, seventh grade boys and girls, eighth grade boys and girls, ninth and 10th grade boys and girls and 11th and 12th grade boys and girls.

The entry fee of $80 guarantees each team a minimum of two games. The deadline to enter is April 18.

For more information or an entry form, contact the NAYB national office at 800-787-3265 or local representative Mike Trudeau at (810) 469-4242.

balcony areas.

Plans are in the works for membership privileges to extend to private parties held after hours at Airborne. Social membership purchasers would be included.

Despite Farnen and Gadd's entrepreneurial dreams, they are both married with children, and do not want youths to spend so much time at Airborne that their grades in school suffer.

In fact, they have a clause in the contract that every member must sign allowing parents to revoke their child's membership privileges if they see school work performance suffering a result of excessive time spent at the skate park.

While tuned into the importance of disciplining youths, Farnen and Gadd are also tuned into the culture of youths. The skate park plays music from the hottest new bands, and soft drink and area radio stations are clamoring to post their signage at Airborne to attract a younger clientele to their products.

Also a part of the skating culture, "dog tag" necklaces will be issued to identify Airborne membership, Farnen and Gadd said. Stickers, too, for members to wear on their helmets will show what skill level they have attained.

For more information, call Airborne Skate Park at (810) 776-7500.

Royals earn berth in state tourney

Several Grosse Pointers were members of the Michigan Royals 16-and-under girls AAU basketball team that qualified for the state AAU tournament.

The Royals posted a 3-1 record in the recent eastern regional at Birch Run.

They will be one of 16 teams competing for the state championship in Grand Rapids this weekend and a trip to the national tournament in July.

Grosse Pointers on the team are Lindsay Simmon of Grosse Pointe North, Meghan McGahey and Caitlin Shapiro of Grosse Pointe South and Mary Claire Hathaway, who attends Regina.

The team is coached by Mike Shapiro of Grosse Pointe.

The Royals lost their regional opener 53-47 to the Mid-Michigan Cougars.

The Royals trailed by 14 points with five minutes remaining but rallied to cut the Cougars' lead to two points with 30 seconds to go. Mid-Michigan hit a three-pointer as time expired for the final margin.

The Royals won their next three games, rolling past the Orion Vipers 72-43, beating the Owosso Wizards 55-52 and edging the U.P. Connection 56-53.

Other members of the Royals are Stephanie Martin and Jennifer Dumm of Fraser; Laurie Kingstrom, Regina; Julie Becker, Bishop Gallagher; Matille Thebolt, Immaculate Conception; Krista Marinello, Lakeview; and Kelly Huber and Leslie McAlpine, Lutheran North.

South skaters honored by Metro League

Several members of Grosse Pointe South's hockey team received post-season honors from the Michigan Metro Hockey League.

Terry Brennan was the most valuable player in the East Division. He also made the all-Metro team and the East Division first team.

Adam Whitehead made the East Division first team, while Nick Linn and Matt Farr were East Division second-team selections.

Bob Bopp was named East Division coach of the year after leading South to the division title.

Whalers' rally nets Pee Wee title

A two-goal deficit in the playoff championship game in the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association's Pee Wee house division, didn't faze the Whalers.

"The boys worked hard all year and everybody on the team contributed," coach Mike

Haas said after the Whalers came from behind to beat the regular-season champion Grizzlies 4-3.

"Even when we were down 2-0, the boys were confident they could come back and win. I was proud of their effort all year."

Goalies Joe Gaylord of the Whalers and Michael Bill of the Grizzlies were outstanding in a scoreless first period.

Bob Karle put the Grizzlies on the scoreboard during the first minute of the second period and teammate Chris Casazza made it 2-0 in the final minute of the period. But the Whalers got some momentum back when Calder Gage scored with only five seconds left in the second period.

It carried over into the third period as Jeffrey Moore and Evan Scott scored during the first two minutes to give the Whalers a 3-2 lead. Gage added his second goal of the game later in the period and it turned out to be the winner when Karle scored again for the Grizzlies with two minutes left.

The Whalers had assists from Johnny Coleman, Greg LaTour, Robbie McCurdy, Ryan Haas, Andrew Sweeney and Eric Kelly.

Nick Hoban, Jeff Schroeder, Chris Burger and Casazza collected assists for the Grizzlies.

Metro D hoops camp now taking registration

The fifth annual Metro D basketball camp will be held during three weeks in July at Harper Woods and Lutheran East high schools.

Camp directors John Switchulis, Jim Champine and Jim O'Connor have worked all four years at the Metro D camp and they've worked together at basketball camps for 14 years, including the Macomb Community College camp.

Boys ages 12 through 18 will meet from July 7th through 11th from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Girls 12-18 will meet from July 14-18 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Boys 8-12 will meet from 9 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. from July 21-25, while girls 8-12 will meet from 1:15 to 5 p.m. from July 21-25.

The cost is $140 for the older players, while the registration fee for the 8-12-year-olds is $90.

Each camper receives a T-shirt and shorts. The full-day campers get a hot lunch daily.

For more information or to have a camp brochure mailed, call 884-3057.

Haskell homers for Michigan

Former Grosse Pointe North standout Mike Haskell was the only bright spot for Michigan's baseball team in a recent 19-3 loss to Alabama.

Haskell, who is the Wolverines' starting catcher, had a double and home run for Michigan.

Hallmark Wallcovering offers fire retardant paint

A new paint product, which will make children's rooms, playrooms, game rooms or any other area of the house safer in the event of a fire, has recently been introduced by Hallmark Wallcovering and Paint. "Majic Kidproof Fire Retardant Wall Paint" has been formulated to include Fire Barrier II — an UL recognized product that creates a protective coating that is resistant to fire.

The new product, which is the first of its kind available to do-it-yourselfers, is available at the Grosse Pointe Woods Hallmark Wallcovering and Paint outlet at 19849 Mack.

The paint finish will slow the spread of flames and retard their ignition, in addition to providing the durable, scrubbable decorator finish of kidproof paint. "Unlike other types of fire retardant coatings that blister and emit problem gases, our special blend will only char, thereby slowing the travel of a flame across a wall or surface," says product manager Guy Naylor. "Use of this product may make a difference in keeping your family safer."

Majic Kidproof Fire Retardant Wall Paint is the first such product available to the do-it-yourselfer that includes a fire retardant element. "The addition of Fire Barrier II makes our unique kidproof product even more family-friendly," says Naylor. "This paint's special fire retardant property gives a room extra protection against the ignition and spread of fire, providing more time to escape death or injury."

Majic Kidproof paint is already known for its durability, scrubability and stain resistance, combined with a soft eggshell finish. "Now, this product gives families both the attractive finish they want with the safety and durability they need," says Naylor. "It's perfect for every room in the house that is subject to wear and tear."

The paint is available in white and tint base, making it ideal for custom tinting. For more information, call (313) 881-9760.

HOME INSPECTIONS

You have just found the "perfect" house, but it is important to remember that it may not be perfect. You should have a structural inspector go over the house from the foundation to the roof so that you can make an informed decision.

A structural expert can give you crucial information about the plumbing, wiring, heating and air conditioning systems. He will check the roof, give you an indication of the condition of the appliances, and help you set up a long-term budget for replacement and repairs. The inspector can also show you where the water cut-off valve and circuit breakers or fuse box are located.

Your Realtor can advise you about how to include an engineering inspection in your offer to purchase and give you the names of inspectors in your area. The purchase of a home is a major investment, and the cost of an inspection is well worth the peace of mind it provides.

Laura resides and works in Grosse Pointe as a top realtor for Coldwell Banker Schweitzer covering the Grosse Pointes, St. Clair Shores and Harper Woods.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying or selling, call her at (313) 886-4200 or (313) 201-8070.

Unclogging the jets in the upper rim

Q. I have a toilet that has a mind of its own. Sometimes when it is flushed, the water will spin around and come up to the rim and almost overflow. Sometimes it will flush normally.

Before I purchase a new toilet, is there something I can do to determine what the problem is?

A. My favorite test for a questionable toilet is to give it the bucket test. Get a large pail, fill it with about three gallons of water and dump it into the toilet bowl. Slow at first, then if it is going all right release the last of the water all at once.

Did it go down quickly? If it did it must not be clogged internally or in the drain pipe. Do it again, this time listen to the shower and basin drains. Did they gurgle? If they didn't it probably means the vent to the roof isn't plugged.

Great, we now know what the problem isn't. What is it? My guess is it's probably calcium buildup in the jets in the upper rim of the toilet bowl, especially if it is about 30 to 40 years old. In the old days my father sold muriatic acid to de-lime a toilet. He'd pour a quart of it into the overflow tube in the middle of the toilet tank, wait 20 minutes and then flush. Sometimes this procedure will take several doses to completely clean the jets in the rim.

Today we have a toilet de-limer by ROOTO that seems to do a bet-

Ask Mr. Hardware
By Blair Gilbert

ter and quicker job. We add a step by having customers remove about one half of the water in the bowl before pouring the de-limer in the overflow tube. This enables the product to remove some of the lime in the trap of the bowl. It has been known to clean some of those unsightly stains at the same time. The real beauty of this operation is that you don't have to shut off the water, call a plumber, or have much more skill than be able to pour some acid into a one inch hole. That is the dangerous part; the product is an acid and not to be used carelessly.

For about $3, an average person can bring new life to a toilet that they were about to replace — probably with less quality.

If you can't find the time to do it right when will you find the time to do it over?

Send any questions or comments to: Blair c/o Gilbert's Pro Hardware 21920 Harper, St. Clair Shores MI. 48080, (810) 776-9532. E-mail at blair@multi-techcx.com

Public Health Week: Get the lead out

People dismiss lead poisoning — "it's someone else's problem, I keep my house clean." The truth is, homes painted before 1978 (the year of the lead-paint ban) may pose a serious health risk.

Most victims of lead poisoning are children. The effects can be devastating. Lead from paint, dust and soil can be dangerous if not managed properly.

If ingested or inhaled in the form of fine particles, it can create severe health problems. Lead in the body can cause serious damage to the central and peripheral nervous system, the cardiovascular system and the kidneys.

Exposure to high concentration of lead can cause retardation, convulsions, coma and sometimes death.

Lead-based paint in good condition is usually not a hazard. Peeling, chipping, chalking or cracking lead-based paint is a hazard and needs immediate attention.

If you suspect lead hazards exist in your house:

- Clean up the paint chips immediately.
- If you rent, notify your landlord of peeling or chipping paint.
- Clean floors, window frames, sills or other surfaces weekly. Use a mop or sponge with warm water and a general all-purpose cleaner or one made specifically for lead. Remember, never mix ammonia and bleach products together because they form a dangerous gas.
- Thoroughly rinse sponges and mop heads after cleaning dirty or dusty areas.

- Wash children's hands often.
- Keep play areas clean. Wash pacifiers and toys regularly.
- Keep children from chewing window sills or painted surfaces.

• Make sure children eat low-fat, nutritious meals high in iron and calcium. Children with good diets absorb less lead.

• For larger lead hazards, contact a lead abatement contractor, a person with special training for correcting lead problems.

Brochures exist for special situations such as renovations in homes with lead-based paints. Call (313) 467-3300. Children and pregnant women must be absent from homes during work periods.

Wayne County celebrates Public Health Week, April 7 - 13. The Wayne County Public Health division's scope of operations includes the evaluation of community-wide health needs and environmental conditions. The staff monitors air, land and water pollution, tracks diseases and substance abuse and makes sure children are immunized.

"We so often take for granted how large a role our county public health workers play in everyone's lives," says Edward H. Mc Namara, Wayne County executive. "This is the time of year we step back and acknowledge the many people who work to make our lives healthier."

Public health officials are targeting each day of the week with a particular health topic.
