Lakeshore Optimists lend support for Cottage Fun Run

Members of the Lakeshore Optimist Club of Grosse Pointe are lending their support to the 17th annual Henry Ford Cottage Hospital Fun Run & Walk and Family Fitness Fest on Sunday, May 18.

"The mission of Optimist International is to support youth," said Bob Lucas, treasurer of the Lakeshore club. The group is involved with local children's services, including the Children's Home of Detroit, the Foundation for Exceptional Children, and the Lakeshore YMCA. It also offers college scholarship opportunities for area high school students.

The Fun Run & Walk and Family Fitness Fest fits into the Optimist Club's mission as it provides a healthy, educational and fun day of activities for children, as well as their parents, grandparents and everyone in-between.

Families can join in the free Dinosaur Romp mini-race for kids or the five kilometer Fun Run & Walk. They can learn healthy habits at Dinosaur Health Club for Kids displays, have a button photo taken with Health Henry, the Friendly Dinosaur, or receive complementary health screenings and information.

It will all take place in and around Henry Ford Cottage Hospital, 159 Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Sunday, May 18.

Early registration for the Fun Run & Walk is now under way. Entry forms have been mailed to previous participants; or call (313) 640-2456.

The annual Fun Run & Walk is sponsored by CHAMP (Cottage Hospital Athletic Medicine Program) and HAP (Health Alliance Plan) to highlight the importance of exercise in helping to keep the whole family fit and healthy. Also contributing to the event: the Kalosomatics program of Assumption Cultural Center, Hanson's Running Shop, Runners World Magazine, and the staff of the Henry Ford Health System's.

Sow, sow!

It takes a lot of work by dedicated people to hold the annual Grosse Pointe Woods flower sale. Beautification Commission members Angelo DiClemente, Kim Sorget and Bonnie Medura, show off some of the flowers that will be for sale this Friday and Saturday.

Woods to hold annual flower sale

Beautify yard, city at annual annual sale

Now that the weather seems to have finally shaken off the heavy hand of winter, gardeners might want to stop by the Grosse Pointe Woods city hall and see what they have for sale.

The city's Beautification Advisory Commission is holding its annual flower sale on Friday, May 9, and on Saturday, May 10.

The sale begins at 10 a.m. and ends at 7 p.m. on Friday. The Saturday sale begins earlier — from 8 a.m. — and runs to 3 p.m.

Event chairperson Kim Sorget said that there will be a large variety of flowers, such as orange begonias and pink impatiens, and including many other varieties of annuals, perennials and hanging basket plants.

For those interested in mulching, this year's sale will feature special 80-gallon mulching boxes.

The boxes will be for Grosse Pointe Woods residents only and will be on sale Saturday. The cost is $35. The boxes come with instructions on how to create a natural mulch that can be used to fertilize your garden.

In addition to plants and flowers, gardeners can also purchase concrete garden animals as well as other types of statuaries. Also for sale will be the latest edition of the commemorative Grosse Pointe Woods tile.

Plus, said Sorget, Mother's Day is on Sunday, May 11. The sale provides dutiful children throughout the Pointes the chance to get mom fresh plants for her garden.

Money raised in the flower sale will be used for beautification projects throughout the Woods, including plantings in city parks and along city streets.

The rule of law

On Sunday, May 4, Grosse Pointe Park celebrated Law Day at Windmill Pointe Park. Those who attended were treated to a Coast Guard helicopter rescue demonstration. They also had the opportunity to consult with attorneys and other experts on legal matters and ask questions about government programs like Social Security.

But that was not all that happened. Park court clerk Penny Caretti was honored by Grosse Pointe Shores attorney and president-elect of the State Bar of Michigan Edmund Brady for her efforts over the past years in creating a Law Day celebration that was both informative and entertaining. On hand to present Caretti with her certificate of appreciation were, from left, Edmund M. Brady Jr., Park Mayor Palmer Heenan, Penny Caretti and Park municipal Judge Carl Jarboe.

High school music director files suit to clear his name

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

After attempts to get the Grosse Pointe Public School System to explain to the public why he was to be involuntarily transferred from Grosse Pointe South High School last fall, instrumental music director Ralph Miller has filed a defamation of character lawsuit against two administrators.

The complaint, filed in Wayne County Circuit Court on Tuesday, May 6, names Russell Luttinen, South's interim principal, and Eugene Washchuk, the school district's personnel director, as defendants.

Miller, a 17-year employee of the Grosse Pointe school system, is seeking monetary compensation in excess of $10,000 and is asking the school system to recant statements made by an administrator that characterize his transfer as a "disciplinary action" and to explain to the community why the involuntary transfer was ever entertained, said attorney James A. Callahan of Petersmarck, Callahan, Bauer & Barbour of Detroit.

"We allege that both of these individuals have held Mr. Miller in a false light by indicating to other persons that the transfer (ordered on Aug. 13, 1996 and rescinded by the school board on Sept. 4, 1996) was a disciplinary action when in fact disciplinary action (in the teachers' contract) is specifically spelled out and a transfer is not one of the actions," said James A. Callahan, a Detroit attorney representing Miller.

By not offering the public (which came out in large numbers last fall to support Miller and his music program) an explanation of the events that had taken place, Callahan said the administrators defamed Miller's character.

"(T)he failure and/or refusal to explain the full circumstances of the transfer to the community. . . (left) the gossip mills of the community to conjure up all sorts of bizarre and unbecoming behavior attributable to Miller," Callahan said.

When the events were unfolding last fall, the school system issued a statement that read, in part: "The collective bargaining agreement between the Grosse Pointe school board and the teachers gives administrators the authority and responsibility to make personnel decisions in the best interest of the instructional program. That includes transferring staff to different assignments. Personnel issues cannot be discussed in public forum. Therefore, it is not appropriate to comment further on Mr. Miller's transfer."

Both Luttinen and Washchuk, along with superintendent Suzanne Klein, declined to comment on the lawsuit at press time because they had not yet received a copy of the complaint.

The legal action originated, in part, with events that took place during the 1995-96 school year. As a result of a conflict resolution mediator hired by the school district to work on a number of internal issues at the high school, a written agreement was drawn up at the end of last school year for Miller and another employee to sign.

The mediator also suggested that Miller and another teacher devise a plan to address the conflict that existed between them. Both submitted plans and Miller's allegedly was deemed unacceptable by (the principal at the time) Mary Beth Hermann.

At the same time, a number of personnel changes occurred within the system: Superintendent Ed Shine resigned, Hermann resigned and Lynn O'Connor's term as president of the teacher's union expired.

Due to these personnel changes, the lawsuit alleges that the agreements between Miller and the other employee were not disseminated as they should have been.

The suit further alleges that Miller was verbally informed on Aug. 13, 1996, that he was to be involuntarily transferred out of South. On Sept. 4, the

The suit also says that Luttinen "recklessly and with a substantial lack of concern for whether an injury resulted, informed a student reporter from the Tower student newspaper that the involuntary transfer of Miller was a disciplinary action . . . and thereby held Miller out in a false light to the community."

Furthermore, the suit alleges that Luttinen and Washchuk, outside the scope of their employment, called together parents of music students and discussed, without Miller's consent, his fitness to continue as instrumental music director.

Callahan said his client sought legal action because he asked the school district, in a letter submitted two months earlier, to recant the statements of disciplinary action and indicate that what happened was a mistake and a misunderstanding between the administration and his client.

"This is basically a reputation situation," he said.

Aah May! It's the time for flowers, city budgets

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

The month of May is the time for flowers, pleasant spring weather (hopefully), and city budgets.

Within the next three weeks, the city councils for each of the five Grosse Pointes will be adopting budgets for the 1997-98 fiscal year, which runs for each community from July 1 through June 30.

See accompanying chart for the dates that each community will hold a public hearing, and the date the proposed budget goes before its respective city council for approval.

The municipal government officials of all five Grosse Pointes choose annually the Grosse Pointe News to publish their proposed budgets. Readers can expect to see the budgets listed in the newspaper this week through the end of the month.

Also, the budgets are available for viewing by the public at each community's respective city hall.

Since the proposed budgets are being finalized this week, not all five could confirm whether millage rate increases will be a part of their budgets.

As of press time, the Woods was considering a millage rate increase, likely 1/2 mill, and would primarily be used for local road repair.

Cliff Maison, Woods finance director and treasurer, said in the ten years he has been employed with the Woods, the budget hearings have always been uneventful, with fewer than 10 residents in attendance.

Officials with the other Pointes echo Maison's viewpoint.

"We're highly serviced oriented. The residents want to see police coverage, park services, and the garbage picked up," said Maison, "and that takes man and woman power."

"It makes sense that the largest portion of our budget is salaries," he said.

"We're planning to keep our millage rate at 11.75 mills," said Farms city controller James Nash. "We enjoyed a $30,000 reduction this year in the cost of our property and liability insurance, so we are going to use that money to accelerate the time schedule of repairing our local roads without increasing our millage rate."

An 11.75 millage rate means that a homeowner would pay $11.75 per $1,000 of taxable value of his or her house and property. For example, a Farms resident with a $150,000 house would pay about $881 in taxes.

Moreover, the Park is expecting no significant changes on the budget, said Park city manager Dale Krajniak.

"In fact, we're looking at possibly slightly reducing the rates," Krajniak said.

He said the Park too enjoyed a $32,100 insurance dividend. But its dividend came for its worker's compensation insurance secured through the Michigan Municipal League.

The City of Grosse Pointe also enjoyed a $25,583 dividend from its workers compensation insurance through the Michigan Municipal League, said City Treasurer Dennis Foran.

The money saved will go into the city's general fund, and likely will assist with that community's commitment to repairing roads, sewers, and water mains.

One of the more interesting items on any of the Grosse Pointe budgets will be from Grosse Pointe Shores. City officials there are hoping to finally move forward with construction of a community center and resurfacing of tennis courts in the Shores' Osius municipal park, said Village Manager/Treasurer Mike Kenyon.

"We hope to begin construction on such a building in the fall, immediately after the park closes for the summer season," said Angela Kenyon, assistant to Shores officials.

Construction of the activities building is expected to make about a $550,000 dent in the budget; resurfacing of the 25-year-old tennis courts will cost about $50,000.

Both of these projects will be paid for with general tax dollars already collected, Mike Kenyon said.

The activities building will be a single-story structure between 4,000 and 5,000 square feet to be located next to the bathhouse.

Kenyon said the thrust behind the activities building project and the tennis court resurfacing is to provide incentive for the village's park to be more fully utilized by its residents.

"We're told that the Thompkins (activities) Center in Windmill Pointe Park is used daily. To hold an event there, people have to sign up nearly nine months in advance," Kenyon said.

He said the Shores would love to provide a building that people gravitate to that often to host their events, or for the Village to host events.

Shores residents will be able to rent the facility for private parties, Kenyon said.

The facility will have a heating and cooling system so that year-round use will be possible. It will also feature a kitchen, and will likely provide spur-of-the-moment shelter for picnickers during inclement weather.

The activities center will also be the site where voting will take place for Shores residents for future elections.

Woods sets static budget, except for streets, in 1998

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The proposed 1997-1998 budget for Grosse Pointe Woods calls for static spending in most departments expect one, the roads department.

Woods comptroller Cliff Maison said that the budget keeps pace with inflation, which last year was 2.8 percent. The only exception is the budget requirements for the major street fund and the local street fund, which will see increases of 4.8 percent.

"The proposed millage for next year's budget is 10.3035 mills," Maison said. "The current millage is 10.1863 mills. The general fund proposed budget is $10,214,000, compared with this year's budget of $9,737,500."

The proposed major street budget is $1.2 million, Maison said. This year's major street budget is $600,000. The proposed budget calls for doubling the fund. The local street fund budget should see an increase of $200,000 in the new budget — going from $1.7 million to $1.9 million.

"We are proposing the increased millage so that we can pay for increases in the street construction funds," Maison said. "Everything else in the budget remains pretty much the same, except for budget increases in line with the rate of inflation, which was about 2.8 percent."

Another change in the budget, said Maison, was the allocation of funds in the city's internal service department. Right now officials are interviewing experienced people to run the city's computer systems.

The problem with the systems, Maison said, is that each one is different. The court computer system is different from the accounting department's computer system which is different from the public safety department's computer system.

"Each system is required to do a different job," Maison said. "Each department got its system at a different time. We always sought the lowest bidder, so the vendor that supplied a department's particular system might not be the same vendor that supplied another department's system. The result is that we have a variety of systems with a variety of consultants operating the hardware and the software."

By hiring one person to manage all the systems, Maison said, the city can coordinate its computers and save maintenance money.

The Woods council will hold hearings on the budget at its May 19 meeting. State law requires local governments to announce budget hearings in advance and to hold public hearings before any increases in the local millage can be approved. The public is invited to attend the May 19 hearing.

Hazardous waste collection on May 10

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Want to get rid of that household hazardous waste, but never knew how? No need to worry because the third annual Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day is on Saturday, May 10, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the City of Grosse Pointe's Neff Park, located at the corner of Jefferson and Lakeland.

The event is sponsored by the City of Grosse Pointe, Grosse Pointe Farms, Grosse Pointe Shores and Harper Woods, said Brian Vick, administrative assistant to the City of Grosse Pointe's administrator. The trash hauler used by the five communities, Tringali Sanitation, has a clause in its contract that requires the firm to hold annual hazardous household waste collection days.

Calling it an idea whose time has come, said Vick, authorities expect over 500 people to take advantage of the opportunity to safely dispose of dangerous chemicals they may have been laying around the house.

"The materials in a variety of household products aren't safe to be taken into the local incinerator," said Vick. "We except gasoline, used motor oil and fuel, which often used to be disposed of by dumping down the drain. As our knowledge of what constitutes good ecology has grown, these kinds of practices have grown to be unacceptable."

Items being collected include drain cleaners, bleaches, expired medications, disinfectants, fluorescent lamps, fungicides, herbicide, insecticide, fertilizers, oil-based paints, pest control poison, as well as items from the garage like anti-freeze, motor oil, old gasoline, brake and transmission fluids and lighter fluid and propane cylinders, said Vick.

Each year a different community sponsors the collection day, Vick said. This year it is the City's turn. He urges people to transport any waste in a solid container that prevents spilling or leaking. Also, Vick urges people to label items properly.

"We don't want to mix chemicals that could cause health and safety problems," said Vick. "Unacceptable items include unlabeled waste, waste generated by business or industry, or anything radioactive, such as smoke detectors. Also no explosives or shock sensitive materials. We also won't collect latex-based paints, which can be disposed of by mixing with kitty litter and letting dry. It can then be thrown out with regular garbage."

Non-collectible waste can be disposed of by calling the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality at (517) 335-2730, said Vick. There is no charge for this service, but it is limited to resident of the five participating communities, so people who wish to make use of the service are asked to bring identification.

House amendment to help low-income home ownership

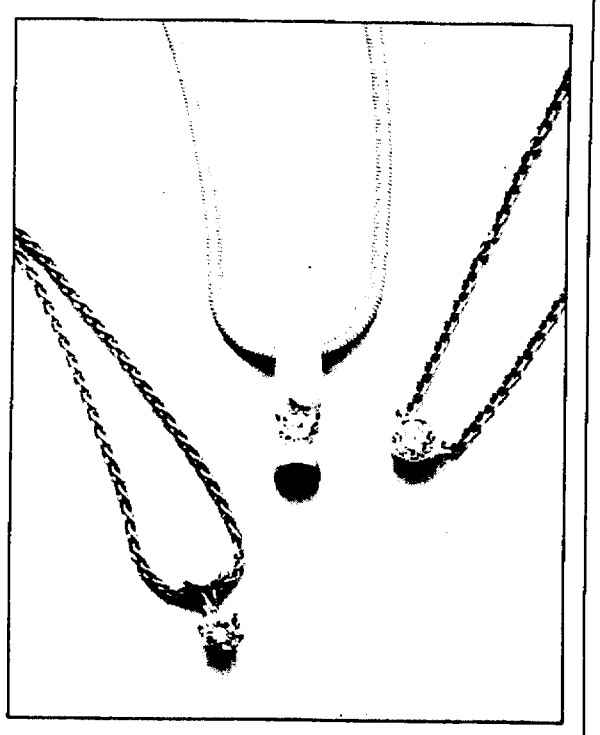

U.S. Rep. Nick Smith (R-MI) got passed an amendment to House bill HR 2, the "Housing Opportunity and Responsibility Act." The Smith amendment directs federal agencies to establish annual goals for additional home ownership units for low-income families.

These new owners would be required to demonstrate the ability to make a down payment and to continue to make payments on a timely basis. Smith's bill received overwhelming bipartisan support.

Smith commented that this is not a federal giveaway program. "Each new home owner would have to save a down payment, become knowledgeable about the responsibilities of home ownership, and demonstrate an ability to make timely payments," says Smith. "In short, this is yet another step in our efforts to empower people, not government."

Smith said conventional wisdom in Washington is that low-income families can't afford to own their own homes. Fortunately, many successful low-income home ownership programs such as Habitat for Humanity have proven conventional wisdom wrong.

Park woman seeks justice, perseverance of human spirit

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park resident Lola Glass Graves is a very spiritual woman.

Her spirituality is truly seen not only in her activities connected to the church she actively attends with her two children, Christ Episcopal Church in Grosse Pointe Farms, and not only in the weekly Bible study class she has participated in for three years. But, Graves also reflects it through all aspects of her personal and professional life.

Without a doubt, she said she believes "humanity is one" despite people's gender, race, age, religion, and socioeconomic background.

She embraces the responsibility of upholding "all that contributes to the indomitability of the human spirit."

As she says that, she smiles, thinking perhaps of her own resiliency to keep moving forward in her life, to support her children in a similar pursuit, and to support the forward movement of her loved ones, friends, and even perfect strangers.

Graves — who has a degree with honors in psychology from the University of San Francisco, and a law degree from Wayne State University Law School — is a partner in the Detroit law firm Cross Wrock. Her practice includes legal work regarding health care, immigration and probate issues as well as commercial litigation, and environmental law and zoning.

Graves serves on the boards of Bon Secours Hospital of Michigan, Urban Health Care Plus and Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health. She said she enjoys being a part of shaping the future of health care services for all types of people. The Bon Secours position provides her with insight into health care of people of a variety of socioeconomic backgrounds, including the affluent, Graves said.

Urban Health Care Plus provides health care for people whose monthly income is less than $250 a month.

"These are literally homeless people who list the Social Security office nearest them as their home address," Graves said.

"In the largest free society in the world, if we are to consider ourselves humane, the minimum we can do for each other is work to provide health care. It is fundamental to the 'pursuit of happiness' as recognized in the Declaration of Independence," Graves said.

She downplays the pro bono work she does helping indigent children in various cases in Wayne County.

She is happy to help the children. She said, "If anyone thwarts the growth and development of any segment of the population, it hurts us all. We lose the opportunity to see the best of what that person can develop into."

She believes that is true, too, of people with mental illnesses, and points out that many successful, kind-hearted people suffer from a mental illness. And their mental illness is allowed to take over more of their life, partly because people rob that ill person of a sense of community and of belonging, which is a key factor in helping the mentally ill function better and more happily within society.

Graves' compassion and knowledge in this area are part of the reasons Wayne County executive Ed McNamara recently appointed her to the Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health's 12-member board of directors.

McNamara said, "Lola Graves brings 16 years of legal experience to this board. Because she has represented mental health providers and mental health care recipients in her practice, she is sensitive to the special needs and concerns of this population."

Mentally ill people are viewed differently in some African villages, said Graves, a voracious reader of books about other world cultures.

"For example, in Burkina Faso, (West Central Africa) the mentally ill, who do not present a health hazard to themselves or others, live and work to the best of their capability among the community. There, the mentally ill are viewed as functioning on a different mental level, but not necessarily an inferior level because the integrity of their spirit is cherished," Graves said.

Spend five minutes with Graves and her natural teaching abilities come out. When explaining the symbolism in the Egyptian paintings on her home's walls or the historic significance of an ancient biblical place she has visited, she will gently say, "Now, as you know, such and such word in Latin or Arabic (both languages she has studied) means blankety-blank in English."

POINTER OF INTEREST

The "student" clearly did not know until Graves told him or her, but Graves phrases things in a team-spirit way that invigorates a person, encourages confidence in the person to contribute any points or questions they may have.

Teaching classes is something she has done, giving speeches and slide shows mostly about Egypt, Jordan, the West Bank and Israel to her women's spiritual group, Wellspring of the Spirit, which was founded by Grosse Pointe Shores resident Estela Rodriguez in 1993.

Graves' presentations include insights from the many trips to various parts of the world Graves has taken for spiritual reasons, as well as her love of studying comparative religions, Egyptology and astronomy.

She first went to these areas in 1983 when she was a delegate to the World Peace Through Law Conference in Cairo. She has gone back several times, and hopes to take her children someday.

Formed as a contemplative prayer group, Wellspring provides a ecumenical forum of discussion about the worldwide spiritual consciousness movement. It invites speakers to present their insights on related topics. Wellspring plans to bring Malidoma Somé, Phd., who wrote Of Water and the Spirit, to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, for a speech and for a 3-day workshop in Metamora, where the group has its retreat center.

Graves rejects the idea that some people actually believe that stepping on others is the way to get ahead. She offers this metaphor:

"People would waste tremendous energy to drive their cars with one foot on the brake pedal and one foot on the gas pedal. It would slow them down, and it is not in the best interest of their car."

It refers to the tremendous energy she said it takes to hate others. It keeps your mind and body (your vehicle) from helping yourself move forward because of energy spent putting your foot on someone else to keep them down.

She learned this lesson as a child raised in San Francisco. In her household, "I hate," and "I can't" were forbidden phrases, she said, and she continues the moratorium on those words with her children.

She grew up on a block of Surrey street, where there were about a dozen houses. Graves said the residents included an East Indian family, Jews who had survived Auschwitz, Mexican, Chinese, Italian, Swiss, Irish Catholic, Portuguese, German, Philippine, Japanese, and Nicaraguan families.

"Our block was a miniature United Nations," Graves said. (The United Nations was founded in San Francisco in 1945). That particular ethnic diversity exposed her to practicing Buddists, Hindus, Jews and Muslims.

"All the children on the block played together, and we recognized despite our differences, we were all children of God," she said. "When kids from other blocks came to play, and began any kind of hateful and prejudicial talk, We would let them know, 'We don't do that on our block.'"

Graves said her childhood was one surrounded in the love of several generations of family members all living in the same household or within a few blocks of each other. Her relatives near and far practiced what they preached to young Lola about love, tolerance, and respect for people different from oneself.

Her uncle and aunt Luther and Estelle Glass of Denver, who are black, campaigned for a young white Massachusetts man's bid for the White House. Luther was the vice president of the Colorado Democratic Party, and convinced other blacks that John F. Kennedy was a good choice for president.

Kennedy, in turn, invited Luther and Estelle to his inaugural ball. Unlike Lena Horne, they were among the few black people in attendance who were not famous entertainers or celebrities.

A few days ago Graves received a recent magazine article showing a still-trim Estelle, now in her 70s, modeling the gown she wore to that inaugural ball. The dress will be a part of a national exhibit on Jackie Kennedy Onassis and her influence on American style, which is touring the country this year.

For political causes, too, Graves and her children have extended some of their indomitable spirit. She was the fundraising manager for Michigan to help L. Douglas Wilder become the first elected black governor in the country. Wilder was governor of Virginia from 1990 to 1994; Wilder is also great uncle to Claire Elise and Reynolds Douglass Graves, and is the reason behind the middle name given to Graves' son.

For Grosse Pointe Park, Graves has served 10 years as the chairperson of the city's Downtown Development Authority, advising its city council on environmental, zoning, financial and legal aspects of municipal projects.

Graves prepped at Immaculate Conception Academy for girls in San Francisco, and graduated from University of San Francisco, run by the Jesuit brothers.

She came to Detroit when officials from the University of Michigan warmly recognized her senior psychology thesis from University of San Francisco.

She moved to Detroit to establish Michigan residency, but decided to pursue law instead of graduate psychology studies.

Before she started Wayne's law school, Graves was offered her first job in the legal field as a paralegal. The offer came from Dennis Archer, then an attorney with the law firm of Charfoos & Christensen, P.C.

Judge's ruling could upset term limits

A federal judge in California recently overturned that state's tough law limiting the terms of state legislators, a ruling that eventually could upset Michigan's state law limiting terms of both state House and Senate members.

U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken said that any law that keeps lawmakers from ever running for their seats again — even if they leave office and then seek to return — is unconstitutional.

Michigan, as well as California and some other states, limits state House members to six years in office — or three terms — and Senate members to eight years — or two terms. Altogether 20 states have passed some form of term limitation.

The Grosse Pointe News was and still is strongly opposed to term limits for at least three major reasons:

Opinion

It will cost Michigan the experience of some able state representatives and senators; will give increased power to legislative aides and lobbyists; and, in effect, will tend to reduce the effectiveness of the state's legislative sessions.

In fact, the state's term-limits law already is being blamed by Karen Holcomb-Merrill, Michigan's Common Cause director, for the absence of three Democratic leaders from important sessions of the current Legislature.

All of the three will be prohibited by the state's term-limits law from running again in 1998. As a consequence, Holcomb-Merrill theorized that the law could have been responsible for the legislators' absences.

It is worth noting, too, that the term-limits idea was pushed, and financed in part, by Republican sympathizers who sought to limit the long-term Democratic control of the House of Representatives in Washington.

But GOP control, having been won in the 1992 elections, tended to change many GOP representatives' minds. The result — they did not adopt the proposed constitutional term limit for themselves.

The California judge ruled that her state's "extreme version of term limits imposes a severe burden on the right of its citizens to vote for candidates of their choice."

One alternative she suggested would be to limit lawmakers to consecutive terms but not ban them from ever running again. However, the judge then stayed her order until a federal appeals court has time to consider the case.

An Associated Press story said that in 1998 at least 70 of Michigan's 110 House seats will be held by incumbents unable to seek re-election because of the six-year limit.

By 1999, the story said, no one in the Michigan House will have served more than four years. Four years later, the same would be true of the state Senate if the law isn't overturned.

A spokesman for U.S. Term Limits, the national group that helped push and finance term-limits legislation in Michigan and other states, agreed that Wilken's decision could be applied to Michigan.

But the spokesperson, Jonathan Ferry, doesn't think the ruling will be left standing by the appeals court, and added that the fact the judge stayed it herself indicated its weakness.

We don't buy that line. We think her action in staying her finding in the case simply showed that she was seeking to play fair with an obviously highly controversial and important issue.

In fact, we hope her ruling is upheld and the term-limits legislation is found to be unconstitutional in the highest court of the land.

DIA becomes political football

"While praise flows freely from outside, the city-owned museum (the Detroit Institute of Arts) is being treated like a political football at home."

That is the view of Joy Hakanson Colby, the well-known Detroit News art critic, expressed as part of her newspaper's major coverage of the financial needs of the DIA.

Now the institution faces decreasing support from its major private contributors after both the city and state have sharply trimmed their DIA appropriations.

Yet the DIA "still projects an impressive profile, as far as many art professionals around the country are concerned," Colby wrote.

"It ranks among the five leading U.S. regional museums and savvy visitors often toss out adjectives like 'superb' and 'fabulous' — based largely on the strength of the museum's permanent collections and the bright, meticulously groomed look of the place."

The city's current contribution of $400,000 a year is far exceeded by the $705,000 the city charges the museum for its police services.

In addition, state funding for the museum has been cut by a cumulative $40 million since 1991, a bill to put regional funding on the ballot died last December, and the Detroit City Council last month rejected a proposed privatization plan that could have saved the DIA.

Apparently the opposition came chiefly from 144 unionized city workers who are DIA guards, clerks and custodians, and the council members' feeling that they were largely "left out" of the DIA-management-reform discussions.

Bret Ceriotti, a DIA maintenance worker and union steward for AFSCME Local 542, has been quoted as saying he would rather see the museum close than have its management structure change.

Unless the Detroit city council members who voted against the new plan for the DIA change their minds, Ceriotti may get his wish to see the museum close if he continues to support his union rather than the city's best interests.

That would be a tragedy for the Detroit metropolitan area and the entire state, at a time when Detroit is showing some signs of economic recovery and a cultural renaissance.

Student opinion important, too

We're pleased to see the Grosse Pointe school board adopt the proposal by treasurer Steven Matthews to invite a group of student representatives to meet with the board to get a cross-section of student opinion.

At the first dinner session scheduled for Monday, June 2, prior to the board's meeting, a dozen students to be selected by principals and counselors from each of the district's two high schools will address at least two issues.

One will be the student viewpoints on policies and issues the school board has decided in the past year and the other will cover student viewpoints on general issues about school life.

In his proposal, Matthews stressed the importance of selecting students who reflect the student body and not necessarily those usually called upon to speak for their peers.

We assume these two proposed issues will serve as a starting point for the discussion of a wide range of other matters in which the students are interested and put high on their personal lists of importance.

As education writer Shirley A. McShane reported last week, Matthews read about the idea in a National Association of School Boards newsletter which reported on a Pennsylvania school board that has successfully used this approach to obtain student opinion.

Matthews told McShane that "test data and various documents tell us how we (the schools) are doing," but added that the board obviously is interested "in the students' viewpoint on how things are."

We think Matthews has proposed another excellent way to measure the success of the Grosse Pointe school system. If it turns out well, it could well become an annual event, as Matthews hopes.

Recollections of New Deal

For those of us who grew to adulthood in FDR's regime, the recent dedication of the memorial in Washington to the 32nd president brought back many memories of the New Deal days.

As a college student, I hardly noticed the 1933 bank holiday that seemed to halt spending by some of my better-financed friends, but I was sustained in my final year by a government-financed New Deal job.

After graduation in 1934, I had one chance to see the president himself when I began work as a reporter for the Minneapolis Star.

Assigned to cover the president's train in St. Paul, I found the president had failed to cooperate.

Instead of greeting the people and reporters, he went to bed early, and my two hours or more of patrolling the tracks beside the train were uneventful.

Unfortunately, I never got to see Roosevelt alive. By the time I was assigned to Washington, first in 1945 at the end of the war in Europe, and for a four-year assignment in 1950, President Truman and later President Eisenhower were in office.

Both are among my favorite presidents but obviously neither was an FDR.

Response to life ban on welfare for convicted drug users

To the Editor:

Fighting drug abuse with welfare checks as the carrot shows a complete ignorance about the root causes of societal ills.

Abuse of drugs, including alcohol, is termed in the medical and scientific community as "self medicating." A good deal of those who become hooked on either are addicted with a chemical imbalance in their system which sends faulty signals to the brain. Some psychiatrists call this bipolar depression or depressive illness.

Gov. Engler's ill-conceived plan to ban drug users for life from the welfare system is just as insensitive as it is political. Depressive illness, which leads to drug and alcohol abuse, addicts more Americans than cancer or heart disease put together and causes more lost productivity than both. Yet the misunderstanding of depression, even by the medical community, has led to its exclusion as a legitimate disease.

Since January, in order to conserve dwindling and many times wasted Medicare funds, patients suffering mentally related diseases are barred from receiving Medicare assistance.

What's puzzling is that more people suffer from mental illness, including depression, than any other major disease. Even more puzzling is the fact that recent studies have shown mental illness is just as physically related as heart disease or cancer. Yet what hospital or insurance company would fail to help a serious heart patient or one dying of cancer?

Mental illness, despite all the new scientific discoveries and advances in therapy, all the awakening among medical professionals that the many forms of mental illness are directly related to the body's physical metabolism, still carries the stigma that is prejudicial in the minds of the general public and, worse, in the unenlightened decisions of our elected officials.

The danger in banning welfare for life from convicted drug abusers is ensnaring those one-time abusers who've been successfully rehabilitated and need a temporary lift to once again become productive citizens. But, more importantly, it shows a blatant shortsightedness and disregard for the real facts of the matter, that drug abusers are more than likely suffering from depressive illness and that it can be cured with professional help.

Competitions don't count

To the Editor:

As a parent with a ninth-grade student in the instrumental music program at Grosse Pointe North, I have been very concerned regarding participation in band and orchestra competitions. There appear to be some people in the administration who feel that the program is inadequate because we don't have a case of trophies and awards.

Band and orchestra competitions are not a yardstick for the music program for a number of reasons; they do not improve the ability of students to challenge themselves in the type and level of music they play.

The pieces are circumscribed out of necessity by the evaluators for purposes of comparison, and in order for a school to be "competitive" it must, by necessity, gear the performance to the children who do not play well, i.e., "the lowest common denominator."

These events take up a great deal of time in preparation, and subtract from the number of concerts they can schedule. Furthermore, at these events, the students can sometimes wait many hours to play for the judges — they do not get to hear the other students play.

In terms of college admissions, for those students who plan on a music major, the only relevant criteria is how well you play, not how many awards your school has won.

Our current program encourages all students to play beyond their ability level, to stretch themselves and feel a sense of personal accomplishment as well as develop a love of music to last all their lives. Isn't this the kind of excellence that our school system tells us they wish to promote?

My son is eagerly looking forward to playing at Orchestra Hall. The memories of playing for an audience at one of the premier concert

Dogs: Mother Nature's optimists

Dogs are open books.

They're written in plain, conversational English. With drawings, footnotes and how-to diagrams.

My dog Ashley usually looks rumpled and ruffled and happy-go-lucky. She's the doggy equivalent of the cheerful freckle-faced gap-toothed kid with a cowlick, a smudged face, raggedy sneakers and an untucked shirt.

Ashley gets her hair done a little less often than I do. About twice a year, I make an appointment at Waggy Tails for a shampoo and blow dry.

They lather her, rinse her, fluff her fur and blow it dry. They clip her nails and trim the shaggy stuff around her paws and behind her ears. They straighten out the long tail feathers that give golden retrievers their special wag appeal. They tie a bow around her neck and give her a biscuit.

For a week or so after Ashley's "do," however, she looks like she's going to a job interview. She's classy, silky, cool and lean. She looks well-prepared, smart and thoughtful.

She knows she looks good. She struts around, proud of herself. She holds her head and tail high. She's snooty, even.

She hates the grooming process, however.

On the morning of the appointment, she sees I'm putting on shoes and socks and I'm getting my coat. She sees me reach for her leash.

Her eyes brighten; ears perk up; tail rises. She prances around my feet.

"Take me take me take me take me for a walk a walk a walk," she whines. "Please please please pretty please pretty please. Look at me. Here I am. Please please pretty please.I'll be good. Please please."

She sees me pick up my purse and put it over my shoulder.

"Uh-oh, not a walk. Oh please take me in the car in the car in the car. Take me take me take me. I love the car. Take me in the car. Me too. Here I am. Look at me. Me too me too me too. Take me please; take me take me."

She dances around my feet. Carries the leash in her mouth. Gazes expectantly into my eyes. Pants. Prances. Pleads. Raises one paw, then the other. Sits. Heels. Barks.

I open the car door and motion for her to get in the back seat.

"Oh boy oh boy oh boy oh boy. I'm going too. Me too. I'm included. It's my turn. Oh boy. Yippee yippee. Me too me too. Open the window please please please. Yippee yippee. Open the window."

Her happiness is complete. Riding in a car is heaven on earth, she says. The window is open; the breeze is warm. Dogs live completely in the moment.

We pull into the parking lot of Waggy Tails.

"Uh oh," she says. "Whoops. Wait a minute. Whoa."

"No no no no no. Not again. Not me. No. I don't wanna go. Don't wanna. No wanna. Take me home. Take me home. Let's go. Take me home. Take me home."

As I lean on the counter speaking to the groomer, Ashley turns toward the exit and flattens herself on the floor. I tighten the leash and brace myself. Her feet are stretched in four different directions. Her chin is on the ground. Her tail is motionless. She inches toward the door and tries to drag me back to the parking lot.

But — and this is why I love dogs so much — the next time I put on shoes and socks and get my coat and reach for Ashley's leash, what happens?

"Oh boy oh boy oh boy. We're going for a walk. Take me take me take me take me. Here I am. Please please please please take me. I'll be good. Here I am. Look at me. Oh boy oh boy oh boy."

They look for best possible scenarios.

I love optimisim. The world is better and people are better because of optimism.

The world is better and people are better because of dogs.

A clear message on mammography

By Spencer Abraham

Now it's official. After a long delay, the National Cancer Institute recently announced that women in their 40s should get regular mammograms. This announcement should clear up some of the confusion generated around this highly sensitive issue for Michigan women and their families.

Like many families touched by breast cancer, mine was particularly disturbed by the findings of a Consensus Development Conference convened by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) in January. That Conference concluded that we have insufficient evidence of mammography's benefits to recommend screening for women in their 40s.

My wife Jane and I are strong advocates of mammography because we know that this year alone an estimated 33,000 women between ages 40 and 49 will be diagnosed with breast cancer. These are women in the prime of their lives, whose children may be in elementary school or who are entering the peak of their careers.

They need the diagnostic help mammographies provide, and should not be left with the Conference's recommendation to decide for themselves, without NIH guidance, whether to have the screening.

The disappointing NIH statement was a reaffirmation of the National Cancer Institute's 1993 decision to rescind breast cancer screening guidelines, also for lack of scientific evidence. But we have abundant evidence that mammograms are a crucial tool in fighting this dreaded disease.

Breast cancer is a leading cause of death among American women in their 40s. And, while research has not been able to identify its cause, one thing is certain: regular mammogram tests save lives.

Breast cancer is 96 percent curable when detected in its early stages. As more American women have gotten screenings, mortality from breast cancer has begun declining for the first time.

As the National Cancer Institute reported last year, "these gains reflect the successes of both early detection and treatment advances." New studies also provide significant evidence that regular screening for women in their 40s can reduce breast cancer deaths.

The NIH statement downplaying the need for mammograms produced worrisome confusion. The failure to issue a single, decisive recommendation could have discouraged women from getting life-saving mammograms.

Without a clear signal, even women in their 50s and older — for whom the importance of mammography is uncontested — might have become more hesitant about screening.

In an effort to communicate to the National Cancer Institute my strong disagreement with such mixed messages, I cosponsored, along with Sens. Olympia Snowe (R-Maine) and Kay Bailey Hutchison (R-Texas), a unanimously passed Senate resolution urging breast cancer screening guidelines for women between the ages of 40 and 49. It resolved that:

- Additional studies are needed to further determine the benefits of screening women in their 40s.
- The National Cancer Institute should direct the public to guidelines issued by other health organizations until there is more definitive data.
- The National Cancer Institute Advisory Panel should consider reissuing its 1993 guidelines.

Action soon followed. We were especially pleased when the American Cancer Society, the nation's primary private advocate for cancer testing, announced its recommendation that women in their 40s undergo yearly mammography. Following this announcement, my colleagues and I again urged the National Cancer Institute to issue tightened mammography guidelines.

Finally, National Cancer Institute Director Dr. Richard Klausner stated that we have enough evidence of mammography's benefits for women in their 40s to justify the Institute's reissuing its 1993 recommendation.

This is a welcome pronouncement from the nation's top federal agency dealing with cancer-related public health issues.

It is estimated that this year more women in their 40s than women in their 50s will be diagnosed with breast cancer. For their sake and for the sake of their families, it is critical that we send a strong and clear message about the importance of regular mammography.

Now that the National Cancer Institute has joined this effort, we must resume the public education campaign. It is a question of saving lives.

Spencer Abraham is the Republican U.S. Senator from Michigan.

Wish granted for Charity

At Saturday night's 28th annual Viennese Ball and at the memorial tea the next day, both in the Crystal Ballroom of the War Memorial, the order of the day was the same: "At my wake, I want waltzes and champagne."

Ken Eatherly

"We are not mourning," said Alex Suczek at Sunday's event to honor his mother, Charity Suczek, who died last week at the age of 98. "This is a celebration of a great life."

On both occasions, the ballroom was crowded with those who knew and admired the unconventional but always poised lady who took cooking and the social graces to new heights for nearly four decades in the Pointes.

In a eulogy, Charity's stepson, Robert, repeated a favorite phrase of hers which could easily be taken for a motto: "Don't feel bound to always follow the recipe exactly."

"She believed that anything worth doing was worth doing with gusto, with every inch and fiber of your being," said her granddaughter, Johanna.

The grand lady of the souffle pan taught her last cooking class at Le Petit Cordon Bleu School of International Cuisine almost exactly one year ago and went into an active retirement which included accompanying her son and his wife, Marybelle, as they wind-surfed off South Padre Island.

"She watched us through binoculars and cheered us on," Alex said.

"Last Sunday she said she was tired, and lay down," he said. "I tucked her in, and she went to sleep.

"That was the last time."

At the War Memorial they waltzed Saturday night and played the music of Vienna Sunday. And both times the champagne flowed, along with some tears.

Wheels of fortune

The Black Beauty is back out in front of Lucy's on The Hill, thanks to a sharp-eyed FYI reader who spotted the bistro's delivery bike chained to a tree somewhere in Grosse Pointe and called manager Kathy Bujak Friday with the news.

As a result, the finder gets a gift certificate good for a lunch or dinner on the house. Bicycle delivery of lunchtime munchies all over The Hill will resume immediately, says Kathy, who revealed the "bike-naping" was all in fun.

Scavenging the Internet

The community-wide scavenger hunt that Trombly School teacher Anne Flanagan dreamed up for her third-grade social studies class was not only fun, it was a learning experience that took the kids into cyberspace.

"One of the things they had to do was to write ads in class and bring them in to the Grosse Pointe News," says our classified ad manager, Barbara Yazbeck Vethacke. "They came in in groups of three to five and dictated them to our ad takers, and the ads will be in Thursday's paper and also posted on our Internet web site."

What do third-graders advertise to the whole world? "Trombly teachers are cool," and, "Three thumbs up for Trombly" ought to give you an idea. To see the rest live and on line, log on to http:\\grossepointenews.com.

No bones about it

Featured in the Summer '97 issue of Window & Wall Ideas published for the interior decor trade by Better Homes and Gardens: The little gem of a doggie-motif bathroom designed by local decorator Linda Axe for last year's Junior League Show House, right here in G.P.

For a W.C. not much bigger than a doghouse, what could be better than pooch paper on the walls and paw prints on the sink and mirror?

The stuff of legends?

"Bagel Wars" may heat up with the arrival of yet another bagel emporium, set to open in the Village later this year, but Bruegger's isn't waiting. They've just unleashed their latest secret weapon at the Kercheval store.

Hot stuffed bagels.

More important, they're giving away samples. An undercover investigation by FYI revealed something that might shock tradition-bound Pointers: The hole is gone, replaced by a filling of melted cheese with either scrambled eggs and bacon, or spinach, or sun-dried tomatoes and pepperoni.

Are we ready for this?

I'll let you know, after I try another spinach and cheese Florentine.

If you have an FYI tip or dog decor in your domicile, call Ken Eatherly at (313) 822-4091.

Thanks for support

To the Editor:

The members of the committee organizing the flower sale for Grosse Pointe North High School want to thank the North parents and everyone else in our community who have once again demonstrated their support for students by ordering flowers, volunteering their time and spreading the word far and wide about our annual flower sale.

Thank you also to the businesses that have allowed us to advertise in their establishments. We also would like to acknowledge the many senior citizens who so very generously support our sale.

The annual flower sale at North High School and its companion, the Impatiens Sale at South High School, are the major source of funding for the Grosse Pointe North Parents Club and the Grosse Pointe South Mothers Club. With these funds the students, faculty and entire school community are able to receive vital funding to support enrichment activities and scholarships.

With so many cuts to public school funding looming in the future, there will be even more requests coming to our organization for funds. With your help, we will be able to continue supporting the students and others in our school community.

For those of you who have asked to have your flowers delivered, please watch for them on Friday, May 9, and Saturday, May 10.

If you are picking up your own order, come to the Grosse Pointe North High School gym on Friday from 2 to 6 p.m., or on Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon.

The various geraniums, hanging baskets of begonias, New Guinea impatiens, and ivy geraniums will also be available for sale in the gym during the same hours.

Once again, the Parrish Family Farm will bring in an added variety of flowers and vegetable plants for you to examine and buy. We hope you will be able to drop in and check out our flower baskets and planters already arranged by Cynthia Parrish and separate flowers for you to arrange yourself.

Thank you once again for supporting our local schools by purchasing our flowers this spring.

Traumatic car buying

To the Editor:

The article in your paper (April 24) Autos by Jenny King, exemplified the trauma some of us face when buying a car — used or new.

I traded in a 1991 Escort for a used 1996 Taurus with low mileage, which apparently had not been inspected nor had passed a rigorous exam. It died in my garage five times in five weeks, and I had to deal with tow trucks and no transportation.

By now I was far beyond my endurance and never wanted to see the car ever again. The dealer and I then discussed replacing it with another car of the same year and this time I asked to see the service sheets on them. They indicated electrical problems of which I wanted no part. So we progressed to replacing the deal with a new 1997 Taurus. It was a big stretch for my budget but I felt squeezed by the circumstances.

Later I learned that the original used car (lemon) had been in the shop with a battery problem, so they replaced the battery before I bought it. It had also been part of a fleet of leased cars.

I asked if the 1997 had the same features of the original purchase. Then I discovered, a few days later, that it didn't have ABS or delayed light turnoff — allowing me to get into the house with illumination.

Telling the dealer about the lack of ABS, he left the phone for a minute or so, came back and apologized profusely, adding "The way you drive you don't need that feature." Explaining that it was a $600 option — which I thought I was getting, and didn't, wasn't the $600 dúe me? Silly question from an old lady.

This wasn't an ordinary visit to the dentist — this was a root canal without a shot of something. As Jenny King wrote, the whole experience was confusing and humiliating, and I add, excruciating.

At least it starts...so far.

Fascinating article

To the Editor:

Even though I am not a golfer, I found the April 24 article by my colleague Dr. Victor Bloom about Tiger Woods fascinating.

Dr. Bloom has proven that choosing one's parents wisely is important, not only from genetic but also psychological perspective.

I was particularly impressed with the fact that not once did Dr. Bloom find it necessary to refer to the racial or ethnic backgrounds of Tiger's parents.

To the Editor:

Thank you for Phyllis Fries' fine series on hospices. She writes with sensitivity and compassion about the patients, their families and the hospice team.

To the Editor:

I am very concerned about a situation that is happening in Grosse Pointe Woods.

I'm sure anyone who drives westbound on Vernier between Mack and Harper is aware of the Grosse Pointe Woods police officer who sits in his little white, one-sided unmarked sports car day after day, handing out speeding tickets to whomever he can get his hands on.

That's fine, he's doing "his job;" however, a few issues need to be raised and questioned.

First of all, I can bet that 95 percent of the motorists he tickets are not Grosse Pointe Woods residents. He sits at the border of Grosse Pointe Woods and Harper Woods, catching every non-resident as they leave his city.

He then pulls them over in Harper Woods and ties up all the traffic in our city. Why doesn't he sit on Mack and catch all the motorists in Grosse Pointe Woods who speed?

One would have to question if this is clearly a discriminatory issue we have going on here.

Secondly, it looks to me like this police officer has a quota to fill by all the tickets he writes day after day. Correct me if I'm wrong, but I thought "quota filling" was not allowed anymore.

The third issue I would like to investigate is the fact that there are two speed limit signs posted on westbound Vernier between Mack and Harper. One sign reads "35" and a hundred yards down the road, the second sign reads "40."

Where exactly does the "35" end and the "40" start? I do believe this police officer in the little white unmarked sports car is taking advantage of motorists and "tricking" them unfairly into a speeding ticket so that he may "fill his quota" using non-residents of his city as they leave Grosse Pointe Woods.

I'm sure other people feel the same way as I do, but no one has spoken up about this until now. These issues certainly need to be investigated further, as there are allegations involved.

Defending department evaluations

To the Editor:

I am writing in defense of Grosse Pointe Public School's Department Evaluations which were denigrated in Barbara Jacquet's letter, "Let's evaluate music committee," which appeared in the April 17 edition.

This letter was circulated door to door which brought it to my attention and prompted me to write.

In her letter Ms. Jacquet asks many questions. If she really wants intelligent answers to her questions, I can't understand why she didn't address Dr. Klein rather than the Editor of the Grosse Pointe News.

Dr. Klein appears to have insightful leadership along with constructive and progressive ideas that will lead the Grosse Pointe schools into the next century with the highest level of excellence intact.

She has already achieved some wonderful accomplishments and is working on many more that will emerge in the near future. Her main focus is her commitment and dedication to improving our children's opportunities in education.

The high school instrumental music program is just one of many areas she is working to improve. With everything she has on her plate, I can't imagine she would take the time to address this issue if it were not a justifiable concern.

Isn't Ms. Jacquet aware these evaluations occur all the time in all departments on all levels in all schools in the current system? Doesn't she know this is one way Grosse Pointe

Charity Suczek, a great lady who was a role-model of mental health

By Victor Bloom, M.D.

Charity Suczek died peacefully in her home at age 98 and several hundred people attended a memorial wake held Sunday afternoon at the Fries ballroom of the War Memorial.

Dr. Bloom

It was a time for family and friends to gather and remember this marvelous lady who made Grosse Pointe proud.

She was known as the ultimate Cordon-Bleu French chef whose cooking lessons were memorable events to hundreds of Grosse Pointe ladies for generations.

Each lesson was a blend of haute cuisine and philosophy as our own Grand Dame held forth.

It was the closest many of us would come to real royalty. She was a blue-blood, she had what it took.

She lived life valiantly and fully. All those whose lives she touched were enriched.

There were stories upon stories. Immediate family got up to review the history of her long and momentous life, and then extended family, close friends and good friends came up to the microphone to recount their own favorite vignettes.

I am proud to be counted among her friends. In her nineties she took the opportunity to pick my brain about Freud and psychoanalysis, marriage and morals and the sexual revolution. She was not only interested in the arts, but in science and popular culture.

Most of her contemporaries died before her, but she was always making new friends and she especially enjoyed young people.

She knew she had lots to say and had no inhibitions about sharing her experiences and knowledge. Her name, "Charity," was most apt.

My wife attended her cooking lessons and I took some videotape footage. She would interrupt her cooking lessons to sit down, sip some wine and talk, talk about love and life and philosophy, about art and music and culture, about travel and history and beauty.

Her presence was spellbinding. We returned the favor by inviting her to dinner at our house.

It was like a final exam. Did our cooking pass muster? It did.

At the end of a lovely evening, Charity declared, excitedly, "the evening has just begun!"

"We are going to a Viennese Ball!" It was 10:30 Saturday night; we thought that since she was an old lady, that would be it. We were tired, 30 years her junior, and thought she was just kidding. But she was not!

Sure enough, her son, Alex had organized an old-fashioned Viennese Ball with an orchestra playing Strauss waltzes at the Fries Ballroom of the War Memorial.

Unbeknownst to us, Charity fully intended to have dinner with us and then go out dancing! Sure enough, the ball was in high gear and she waltzed with the best of them till midnight.

She knows how to have a good time and she pulls all the stops. Alex told the assembled that it was her wish that at her wake there would be music and champagne, and that is what we had.

It was not a sad occasion, because her presence was everywhere and memories of her were deep, intense and profound. That is the kind of person she was. She lived a rich and full life. There was nothing to regret.

There was no talk of her passing to another existence, no talk of everlasting life or heaven.

She was an epicure, perhaps a hedonist. She was not constrained or shy or bashful. She took in life and gave of herself.

She enjoyed a double fortune, and that is having a clear and alert mind up to the end, and considering her outgoing personality and giving nature, must have had an ideal childhood.

She had an abundance of everything that nature and nurture had to offer, and so she is a role-model of mental health.

As I said at the time, I saw no significant inhibitions or complexes; she was not at cross-purposes, she was all there, intact, unified, unique, creative and endlessly growing.

She left a legacy of bountiful goodness to all who came in contact with her. This is the kind of existence to which we can only aspire.

It's a consummation devoutly to be wished. Let her example be followed in so far as is humanly possible.

Ameritech/NCOA help make May Older Americans Month

At a Caregiver Resource Fair to launch Older Americans Month, Ameritech was recognized by the Administration on Aging as a leader in innovation and one of the first companies to step up to a public/private partnership to advance the needs of older Americans.

Bill Benson, acting assistant secretary for aging of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, applauded Ameritech's partnership with the National Council on Aging (NCOA) and sponsorship of the 1997 Innovations in Communications Technology awards.

The program fostered the development of new services for older adults.

The innovations of Merl Petzold of Grand Rapids and the Cleveland Alzheimer's Association were highlighted at the Resource Fair because they exemplify the theme of Older Americans Month, Caregiving: Compassion in Action.

Petzold adapted technology so that his wife Nadine, who suffers with multiple sclerosis, can now use the phone, TV, VCR and radio remote control without her hands.

His ingenuity has given Nadine the independence and security to be on her own for many hours.

A demonstration of the Alzheimer's Disease Support Center on the Cleveland FreeNet also was part of the Resource Fair.

This Internet service lets Alzheimer's disease caregivers "talk" electronically with other caregivers, get medical information, find information on research and public policy, and connect with other services they may need.

Ameritech and NCOA recognized this innovation as a creative solution to the isolation and distress that often accompanies caregiving.

These are just two of the Ameritech/NCOA award-winning innovations that demonstrate caring for older Americans.

- Indiana — Accessing Technology Through Awareness in Indiana (ATTAIN) Indianapolis. At computer work stations, people with disabilities can find out about interpretive services, accessible buildings, housing options, providers of assistive technology and many other topics.

- Wisconsin — Trace Research and Development Center, University of Wisconsin-Madison. Design of information kiosks and other computer and communications devices that enable people with disabilities to gain broader access to information.

Ameritech (NYSE: AIT) serves millions of customers in 50 states and 40 countries. Ameritech provides a full range of communications services, including local and long distance telephone, cellular, paging, security monitoring, cable TV, electronic commerce, on-line services and more.

One of the world's 100 largest companies, Ameritech has 66,000 employees, 1 million shareowners and $23 billion in assets.

has managed to maintain high educational standards despite a shrinking budget? This is an evaluation of the entire department which admittedly is in need of some upgrading. It is a comparison of the approved curriculum and its implementation.

Where does Ms. Jacquet get the idea this evaluation is an open season on Mr. Miller when he is not the only teacher involved in this evaluation. This is in fact the perfect opportunity for Mr. Miller to show off to the committee exactly how his program works, and Ms. Jacquet should welcome this evaluation as such an opportunity. It is also an opportunity to identify the weak areas in the department so Mr. Miller can get the assistance he needs to improve the program and Mr. Miller should welcome this evaluation as such an opportunity.

I cannot understand how any parent can be opposed to attempts toward better opportunities in their children's education.

Ms. Jacquet expressed a concern on a mandatory marching band program. The marching band, like all the instrumental music classes, was never mandatory. These were all elective classes to provide enrichment and not required for graduation.

How can we regain the former opportunities our students used to enjoy if the current standard isn't evaluated and improved, that standard being one teacher who is overextended and spread too thinly, trying to juggle both schools and God knows how many students.

For the casual band student who is happy to show up in class and play a few times on his horn, the current system is fine. However, if Ms. Jacquet's son were a prodigious and aspiring violinist, she might wish to provide him with more of a challenge.

It is not unusual for a 16-year-old to perform solo with the DSO, they just don't come from Grosse Pointe anymore.

I remember when they did and the whole community was proud of them. For their sake and for the sake of talented and hard working children, I welcome these evaluations.

They will ensure that the majority of parents and students are not ignored. They are an opportunity to identify the wonderful teachers who possess insight and leadership, while locating the needs in the department so that we can build a better program using the ideas and leadership of these teachers.

Further, I applaud Dr. Klein in her decision to implement this evaluation. I wish the best of luck to Mr. Miller, Mr. Cleveland and the other teachers involved in this evaluation.

Finally, I thank them all for their dedication to making better educational opportunities for our children.

Network supports candidates

To the Editor:

On Thursday, May 1, the membership of the Grosse Pointe Community Network voted to endorse and recommend that Joan Dindoffer and Joe Brennan be elected to the Grosse Pointe Board of Education on June 9.

Although this is an uncontested election, the Network felt it was important to interview and evaluate the two candidates in order to maintain the credibility of its endorsement process.

A committee of nine members, with a variety of backgrounds, reviewed the candidates' written responses and interviewed the candidates to determine whether these two individuals were both qualified and deserving of a vote of confidence by the Network and the community.

The committee overwhelmingly recommended that Joan Dindoffer and Joe Brennan be endorsed by the Network. Last June, we were able to rally the community behind two qualified school board candidates and we want to do the same again this year.

We think it is important for the community to demonstrate a showing of confidence for Joan and Joe and the Grosse Pointe schools by voting in the June 9 election.

Join us on Thursday, May 8, at Caribou Coffee, on Kercheval in the Village, from 6 - 8 p.m., to raise money for our 1997 scholarships in honor of three graduating seniors who have demonstrated a spirit of volunteerism and community service.

Joan Dindoffer and Joe Brennan will also be joining us at Caribou Coffee. We hope you will help the Grosse Pointe Community Network continue to make a difference!

Music Committee

To the Editor:

All parents of band/orchestra students were notified by letter that a committee had been formed and would be meeting to investigate concerns. The committee is comprised of seven administrators, three teachers, five parents and one private string teacher. Not even one student!

None of the parents or teachers who spoke out in support of the pre-August 1996 music program or the current band director are on this committee even though they specifically called to volunteer.

I question the clandestine appointment of committee members, the large number of administrators on the committee, and the blatant lack of student representation.

After sitting in on the April 29 Music Committee meeting, I now also question the motives of the committee. So far they have hired a consultant from Oberlin College, Dr. Erwin, who with additional consulting assistance from Mr. Jerry Johnson of Social Research, U-M, Ann Arbor, will prepare a survey, evaluate the results and make a formal recommendation for a music program to this committee.

During this meeting it was decided that the survey would be mailed to past and present instrumental music students and parents. Discussion then revolved around the issue of the survey questions; what questions to ask, and how these questions would be worded.

I was surprised to hear Dan Clark, a parent member of the committee, state several times and I quote: "I'm concerned about the questions. We don't want to ask questions we don't want to know the answers to."

We don't, Mr. Clark?

Isn't that the purpose of this survey; to query all with past and present experience with the music program to determine likes and dislikes, to generate suggestions and air complaints. This survey should document factually and statistically how best to serve our instrumental music students.

I question how the survey will be handled. There seems to be a lot of room for maneuvering and manipulating survey information and results. There was no committee discussion of how the integrity and objectivity of the survey results would be ensured.

Will these surveys be sent directly to a CPA firm for opening, recording comments and opinions, and compiling the information to ensure accurate and complete documentation?

There was no discussion of this matter even after the question was asked by the public which CPA firm would be compiling the results. The question went unanswered.

There is also the time issue. The committee is attempting to complete all the printing, mailing, compiling of information from the survey and the focus groups, act upon the resulting recommendation by June 1997, and to implement the changes by September 1997.

Wow! I question the committee's stamina and sense of reality.

Since the wheels have been set in motion, let's get the biggest bang for our buck!

I urge all instrumental music survey recipients to answer honestly and objectively. Take this opportunity to express your views, both positive and negative. Use the comments section of the survey, attend a focus group, elaborate on your needs and desires so we can move on to other important issues in our children's education like reading, math and science.

I invite you to join me in attending the next Music Committee meeting, Wednesday, May 14, at 7:30 p.m., 389 St. Clair. Personal comments may be sent in writing to: Dr. Erwin, Conservatory of Music, Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio. 44074.

Fore !

A Grosse Pointe Woods resident who lives in the 800 block of Renaud told police that on Sunday, May 4, at about 6:45 p.m. he heard a crashing sound in his house.

A search of the home turned up a smashed bedroom window and a golf ball amid the broken glass. Police are continuing to search for the hacker responsible.

A bank shot

A Grosse Pointe Park resident reported to police on Friday, April 28, at about 4:45 p.m. that someone was crouching behind the bushes by the Michigan National Bank at Jefferson and Barrington.

When officers arrived at the scene the suspect, who kept his hand in his coat pocket, attempted to run away, but was caught by police.

When the arresting officers searched him, they found a fragmentation hand grenade that was later determined to be deactivated.

The follow -up investigation revealed that the suspect, while planning to rob the bank, had a history of mental problems, and he was taken to the Cottage Hospital psychiatric unit for observation.

False alarm

Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers responded to two activated alarms at North High School on Wednesday, April 30.

The alarms were pulled at about 2:30 p.m. and the building was evacuated as a result.

When the alarms proved false a teacher reported to firefighters that she saw a young man pull one of the alarms and then flee the scene on a moped.

Police traced the moped to a Harper Woods resident who attends South High School, but was on suspension from April 29 to May 1.

The matter remains under investigation.

Excessive speed

A Grosse Pointe Woods patrol vehicle was on patrol in the area of Mack and Audubon at 11:45 p.m. on Tuesday, April 29, when the driving officer noticed two cars speeding.

The driver of the first car suddenly turned her vehicle toward the patrol car, and the second car, which was following the first car stopped and tried to flee the scene, but the driver was unsuccessful when the patrol car cut off his escape route.

The driver in the first car told police that she was being followed by her ex-boyfriend.

A background check on the man revealed that he was wanted in Detroit on several warrants, including larceny and driving while impaired. The suspect was freed on $500 bond pending court hearings in Detroit.

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

'Chop' -lifter

A Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officer was making a purchase at a grocery store on Mack in the city when he was contacted by a store employee who claimed to have seen a woman place some batteries and meat inside her purse.

The officer confronted the woman and asked her to open the purse. When she complied the officer found several cuts of meat including boneless center cut chops, baby back pork spare ribs, beef loin New York strip steak, medium-sized shrimp, as well as bottles of hair conditioner and shampoo, two packs of batteries and some cinnamon rolls.

The woman was taken to the Woods public safety headquarters, where she was booked and released on her own recognizance pending a court hearing.

Fleeing felons finally foiled

A Grosse Pointe Park public safety patrol car was in the area of Vernor and Audubon when officers saw two men running away from the vehicle between houses at about 4:19 a.m. on Wednesday, April 30.

The officers called for backup and began a search of the neighborhood. The two men were finally caught in the area of Charlevoix and Three Mile.

The city detective bureau questioned the suspects and determined that they were involved in several recent car thefts. They also named a third suspect.

The two men were charged with trespassing and obstructing a police officer, and were released on their own recognizance pending a hearing.

Fore gone flag

A woman residing in the 900 block of Lincoln reported to City of Grosse Pointe police that unknown perpetrator(s) stole a decorative flag sometime during the afternoon of May 1. The flag flying near the front porch of her home was green and blue with a golfer character depicted in the middle.

Loiterers wanted for other charges

Two felons hanging out in a car behind a Village business attracted enough attention to themselves that City of Grosse Pointe police ran a check on the license plate, and found that the two occupants, a man and a women, were wanted in connection with an unarmed robbery committed hours earlier in Detroit.

In addition, the man and woman had stolen the car they were driving. City police turned over the man to Detroit jurisdiction, and the woman to Chesterfield Township police. Each were wanted on outstanding felon warrants for those respective cities.

Purple blaze

A man residing in the 300 block of Rivard reported to the City of Grosse Pointe police May 2 that his 1995 Chevrolet Blazer was defaced with purple spray paint sometime during the night of May 1. He said he had parked his car in front of his home.

Car vandalized

A man residing in the 200 block of McKinley reported to Grosse Pointe Farms police that his 1996 Jeep Grand Cherokee was broken into April 29 when he was working late at his place of business in the 18400 block of Mack.

Unknown perpetrator(s) smashed the driver's side window, valued at about $200, and stole the man's cellular phone, valued at $400. Police continue to investigate.

Hubcaps heist

A woman residing in the 100 block of Touraine reported to Grosse Pointe Farms police that two hubcaps were stolen from her 1997 Town & Country van, sometime during the night of May 2.

Locals eyeing state award for McMillan project

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

Tonight, May 8, a group of Grosse Pointe residents are heading to an award ceremony at the state capital in hopes of bringing back a top honor from the governor.

The Grosse Pointe Farms community is among only five communities in the state to make the final round of the fourth annual competition for Gov. John Engler's "Innovative Spirit Community Service" award.

The nomination was for the innovative and cooperative spirit shown among officials from St. James Lutheran Church, Grosse Pointe Farms municipal government, and officials and parents both from Richard Elementary School and the school system during the closing last year of McMillan Road between Ridge and Kercheval that primarily affected the above-named parties.

"I think our community should win the award," said Farms city manager Rich Solak, who is one of the officials attending the ceremony.

"The project involved the cooperation of several groups, and truly created a winning situation for all," Solak said.

The project created the following positive outcomes:

• Creation of a beautiful campus-like setting shared by Richard Elementary School, St. James Lutheran Church, and the municipal parking lot.

• Heightened safety for the students who used to cross McMillan to traverse between the two playgrounds.

• Increased use of the playgrounds now that they are connected.

• Increased parking for the church, and the Hill shopping district which both have felt the strain from a lack of adequate parking spaces.

Two more rows, about 57 parking spaces, were added to the municipal lot, Solak said.

The church gave up a 170 square feet of its property (a triangular wedge shaped piece) to facilitate the project.

They include Sue Vogel, who nominated the project for the governor's award, Ruth Ann Mumaw, Robin Couzens and Kit Greening. Richard school principal Patricia Meek and Grosse Pointe Public School System Superintendent Dr. Suzanne Klein also assisted.

All of the above will accompany Rich Solak and the project architect to the award's ceremony.

The project was designed by City of Grosse Pointe resident Paul Muelle, an architect with Huron Clinton Metro Parks, specializing in park planning.

DESIGNING
YOUR KITCHEN

Every Homeowner is aware that the kitchen is the "Hub of the Home." It is the center of activity; the place for storage, preparation, cooking and disposal of our food. It contains our major appliances and, in today's lifestyle, it has become a family "gathering" place.

The kitchen requires more technical design expertise than any room in the home, so that it is both functional and attractive. A kitchen can be a pleasure to work in, if it is designed correctly with adequate provisions for proper storage, counterspace, clearances, placement of appliances, lighting and utilization of special cabinets and appliances to maximize function in unique situations.

Many retailers offer "computerized" kitchen designs, in which a computer "fills in" wall spaces with standard cabinets, without much consideration of the Homeowner's need or wants.

Since the kitchen is the most used and most expensive room in your home, don't you think it should be custom designed for you by a competent kitchen design specialist with 30 years experience and a referral list containing hundreds of satisfied customers in the area?

Bloomfield Custom Kitchens, now in its fourth decade as one of the most innovative and reputable kitchen remodelers in the state, has a custom design staff with a combined 80 years of experience and a work force of master tradesmen to make your dream kitchen a reality at a competitive price.

We serve the Grosse Pointes and have many repeat clients in the area. Our showroom - just 35 minutes away - features cabinetry by (4) different custom manufacturers and a wide selection of accessories and materials to complete your dream kitchen.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

Now that older is younger, those who reach age 65 have a whole new set of options to consider.

Not long ago, age 65 and retirement were synonymous. One day you were an active and valued member of an organization.

Twenty-four hours later and a day older, you were out the door. Never mind that you didn't feel any different physically or mentally. You were 65 and you were old.

To add insult to injury, you were stereotyped as old by your family as well. Attitudes changed and you had the feeling that you had not only been retired from work but from life as well.

You felt as though you had been placed in custodial care. Those around you began to urge you to take life easy. They decided what you should eat and when.

Some retirees welcomed the release from work and responsibility.

They were glad to sit back and let the world roll by.

Others fretted and fumed. They missed the patterned day of going to work in the morning and returning home at night. Then there were those who filled their time with hobbies cultivated over a lifetime.

How the timetable has changed. Sixty-five is no longer regarded as "old" in the sense that it once was.

We have added a new dimension to life's span. What was older is now young-old — ages 65 to 75.

What was once elderly is now 75 and older. I suppose a centenarian could be considered elderly.

In just 20 years the 65 plus group grew twice as fast as the rest of the population. By 2010 one-third of the population will be over 55.

The fast-growing segment is 75-plus.

Four generation families are increasingly common as people live longer.

The longer life span has a significance for all segments of society. Advertisers are beginning to realize that "over 65" is a big market for their products. Seniors have money to spend — their own.

They don't have to get it from their parents. We hear a great deal about retirees who have little spendable income.

That's true of those who live on Social Security but we are also told that most seniors are on a par financially with their younger compatriots, largely because they have incomes from pensions and investments.

Politicians should be particularly aware of the power of this increasingly important segment of voters.

Sixty-five percent of all persons age 55 to 74 vote as compared to 52 percent of the 35 to 44 age groups.

Charitable institutions owe persons age 65 and older a vote of thanks. Thirty-six percent in this age group devote time to charitable and volunteer work.

Educators need to recognize their importance also. They are eager and willing to learn new skills.

Nor does this age group shy away from what might be thought of as primarily of interest to those who are born into it — computers. Older persons are entering the computer market.

In a book titled "Computers for Kids over Sixty" authors Greg Kearlsley and Mary Furlong write: "teaching seniors to be computer literate was not significantly different than teaching any other age group about computers."

They found that older adults were more interested in educational aspects of computers. Not long ago 90 percent of all software was aimed at entertainment; now 50 percent is education or home productivity oriented.

In Menlo Park, Calif., more than 100 members of the Little House Senior Adults Community Center take computer classes.

Pioneering is not easy and that is exactly what this newly created young-old group of seniors must do. The opportunity to partake and live actively is a welcome gift. It is also a challenge.

The idea of older people moving into areas formerly considered to be open to younger groups takes some getting used to.

But it happens.

Hardly a day goes by that a newspaper or magazine doesn't tell of the achievements of older persons distinguishing themselves in competitive sports or making it big as entrepreneurs. What it takes is confidence, enthusiasm and dedication.

You may not be one of the Pepsi generation but your introduction into the Geritol group has been postponed.

Social Security briefs for the month of May

May is older Americans month

The theme for the 1997 celebration of Older Americans Month in May is "Caregiving: Compassion in Action."

Communities are urged to focus on the role of families and friends in the lives of our growing number of older citizens. Social Security offices will join state and local area agencies again in promoting a range of activities highlighting the important contributions of family caregivers.

They will also work with businesses, civic, educational and religious groups to promote increased public awareness which will support programs and services that assist caregivers in their vital work.

For more information about this year's Older Americans Month celebration, contact your state or area Agency on Aging.

The number is listed in your phone book under state or city/county government.

Social Security testing new disability process

The Social Security Administration (SSA) is testing a new method of processing disability claims based on the results of a year-long study of alternatives for streamlining the present system and alleviating a backlog of cases.

Testing of a model that combines eight key disability redesign initiatives will take place at eight sites around the country, and will have a universe of 30,000 cases randomly selected over a nine-month period.

Wednesdays to become new Social Security check day

People who apply for benefits beginning May 1, will not receive their benefit on the third of the month as in the past. Instead, they will receive it on a second, third or fourth Wednesday of the month.

Benefits received in June will be based on the new delivery schedule.

Current Social Security beneficiaries will continue to receive their benefits on the third of the month, and people receiving Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments will continue to receive their benefits on the first of the month.

The change is expected to even out the workflow of the agency by avoiding the peak of telephone traffic that generally accompanies check deliveries on the third of the month.

It is expected to help reduce telephone waiting times for all callers.

McNamara to speak at Senior Men's Club

The Senior Men's Club of Grosse Pointe will have their luncheon meeting on Tuesday, May 13 at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore, Grosse Pointe Farms. Lunch will be served at 11:15 a.m.

The featured speaker will be Edward H. McNamara, Wayne County executive.

He has held this position since January of 1987. As chief executive officer of Michigan's largest county, he oversees a $1.9 billion annual budget and a work force of over 5,000 people.

When Mr. McNamara first took office, the county was saddled with a $135 million deficit. A solvency plan eliminated the deficit and since then the county has recorded nine straight balanced budgets.

Among many achievements, McNamara has planned and begun a $1.6 billion expansion of Detroit Wayne County Metropolitan Airport.

In 1992 McNamara was named "The Nations' Most Valuable Public Official," on the county level, by City and State Magazine.

The Senior Men's Club bowling banquet will be held May 8 at the Harper Woods Community Center beginning at 6 p.m.

Some useful information about Social Security

Where your Social Security taxes go

Out of every dollar that most workers and their employers pay in Social Security and Medicare taxes:

- Sixty-nine cents goes to a trust fund that will pay their retirement benefits and their families' survivors benefits.
- Nineteen cents goes to a trust fund that will pay for their Medicare benefits when they reach 65 or if they become disabled.
- Twelve cents goes to a trust fund that will pay disability benefits to them and their families if they have to stop working because of a serious illness or injury.

Your Social Security taxes also pay for administering Social Security. The administrative costs are paid from the trust funds described above and are only about one cent of every Social Security tax dollar collected.

How to keep your Social Security records private

The law generally does not prohibit any use of Social Security numbers by the private sector.

Although Social Security can't prevent others from asking for your number, you should know that giving it to them does not give them access to your Social Security records.

If a business or other enterprise asks for your Social Security number, you can refuse to give it to them. However, that may mean doing without the purchase or service for which your number was requested.

Medicare covers mammograms under certain provisions

Medicare medical insurance (Part B) helps pay for X-ray screening for the detection of breast cancer, if the screening is provided by a Medicare-approved supplier.

Women 65 or older can use the benefit every 24 months. Some younger women covered by Medicare can use the screening benefit more frequently. Your Medicare carrier can tell you how often Medicare will pay for a screening mammogram for you.

Medicare also pays for diagnostic mammograms as needed when symptoms are present.

Getting baby's Social Security number

You do not need to fill out a special application or go to a Social Security office to get a Social Security number for your baby.

When your hospital representative or doctor asks you for the information needed to complete your baby's birth certificate, all you have to do is tell them to have your state's vital statistics office share the information with the Social Security Administration.

If you do, a Social Security card will be mailed to you.

The times to center your subject

Photography

By Monte Nagler

In past columns, I've often mentioned what is referred to as the "rule of thirds." This means placing the subject not in the center of the viewfinder, but rather off-center, closer to one of the corners of the viewing screen. Doing so gives a certain dynamic quality to your shot and makes the composition "flow."

If, for example, you were photographing a farm scene complete with barn, fence, trees, etc., your shot would benefit by "placing" the barn off center near one of the "thirds" and then using the fence and trees as lead-in's and framing.

But there are times you may choose not to locate your subject in one of the thirds. Smack in the middle may be best.

For instance, when photographing inside a church, placing the altar right in the middle of the viewfinder and using the symmetry of the pews as a lead-in will result in a strong picture.

On a recent trip to Louisiana, I visited the Oak Alley Plantation in St. Francisville. In composing my shot, I concluded that locating the plantation house in the center of the viewfinder would work best. I could use the symmetry of the oak trees to my advantage and the fence as a foundation.

Consider centering the main subject in some of your other photographs. Symmetrically photographing the steel structure of a building under construction will produce a dramatic picture. Shooting plowed furrows in a farmer's field leading toward that centered lone tree will be a handsome addition to your portfolio.

Study your compositions carefully and consider there may be times you want to center the main subject. Getting "back on center" will reward you with many good photographs indeed.

Schools have 3 administrative positions to fill

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

The announcement of Mason Elementary School principal Nelson Maylone's retirement this June means there are three administrative spots to fill in the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

Maylone's departure is the most recent. Defer Elementary principal Sheila Turney left at mid-year for a principal position at a charter school in Pontiac. Retired central office administrator Alfrieda Frost has been heading the school in the interim.

At Grosse Pointe South High School, assistant principal Russell Luttinen has temporarily replaced Mary Beth Hermann, who tendered her resignation in June 1996.

Decisions on both Defer and South are expected by the end of the fiscal year, June 30, said Eugene Washchuk, director of personnel for the school district.

"A decision has not been made at Defer at this time," Washchuk said. "We have two candidates, both (people from outside the district) and we need to examine all of our options before offering the position. We expect to have a decision within the next two weeks."

The search process for Turney's replacement began in January and several rounds of interviews have already taken place.

'I'll miss the kids most of all.'
Nelson Maylone
Retiring Mason principal

The South principal search was delayed until the school board completed its superintendent search, Washchuk said, because the superintendent is involved in the principal search. With the naming of Suzanne Klein as new superintendent in January, the South principal search has begun and currently is in the candidate screening process.

There are about 26 applicants, including interim principal Luttinen, he said, and the district hopes to have someone appointed by the end of the school year.

Meanwhile, Maylone announced that after 25 years in the public education business, he is ready for a career change.

At 46, Maylone is not ready for retirement from the work force. Rather, he will be involved in education on many different levels.

"I had the option of retirement this summer," he said. "And I started looking at all the other things I could do and decided to do something else. I'll be conducting math workshops for elementary and middle school instructors, teaching two classes at Michigan State University and writing a supplemental math textbook for middle school students.

Maylone has been principal at Mason school for two years. He came to the Grosse Pointe school district four years ago as assistant principal at Pierce Middle School.

He began his teaching career in the Allen Park public schools. He went on to teach math and coach track in West Bloomfield schools for 16 years, served as an assistant principal in the Brighton schools for three years before coming to Grosse Pointe.

"I'll miss the kids most of all," he said. "The daily, positive contact with the kids, at all levels."

Better than frogs?

Grand visit

Defer Elementary School third-grader Robert McCann-Moran shows his grandmother how to use one of the new computers in his classroom during the school's second "Grandperson's Day." The event calls for students to invite a special person in their life — a grandparent, a favorite aunt or uncle, a parent or a neighbor — to visit the school for the morning. Visitors are treated to an all-school assembly, classroom presentations, an interview asking them to talk about their lives and participation in hands-on activities.

Accolades

Three students at St. Paul Catholic School in Grosse Pointe Farms have recently earned top honors in essay contests sponsored by community organizations.

Ted Roumell, an eighth-grader, wrote the winning essay sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution, Louisa St. Clair Chapter. For his essay, "Trails West: Through the Eyes of a 13-year-old Cherokee," Roumell received a certificate, a medal and a dictionary. He is the son of Cathy Roumell of Eastpointe.

Kyle Simon of Detroit earned the top prize for his essay, "Why I Am Proud to be a Part of My Community." The 28th annual essay contest, "America and Me," was sponsored by the Farm Bureau Insurance Co. He is an eighth grader and the son of Beverly and Ron Simon. He concluded his essay with the observation: "Communities seem to change constantly. Some seem to grow old and weaken. Mine has grown in such a way that it has become stronger and better."

Sixth-grader Miriam Nahas earned fourth place in the essay contest sponsored by the American Immigration Lawyers' Association and the American Immigration Law Foundation. The theme of the essay contest was "Why I'm Glad America is a Nation of Immigrants." Nahas wrote a poem to express her sentiments. She is the daughter of Martha Nahas of St. Clair Shores.

Woods woman among 1997's 'Outstanding Teachers' for Macomb

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Special education teacher Jennifer Laethem thinks of all her students as family. She cares about them and wonders how they will do in the world when they are released from school.

"I believe all students have the capacity to learn," said the Grosse Pointe Woods resident who has been teaching special education for 22 years, and is currently the transitional needs teacher at the Lutz School for Work Experience in Clinton Township. "(I chose to teach special education because) it was my dream to be able to help people become all they can be."

Laethem is one of 55 Macomb County honorees in the 1997 Newsweek-WDIV Outstanding Teacher Awards and represents one of three honored teachers who work for the Macomb Intermediate School District.

With this yearlong honor, Laethem says she will continue to do what she has always done. "It's important to know your vocational outlook is still your focus," she said.

The Outstanding Teacher Award is achieved through a nomination process made by both parents and co-workers. She is honored to have this yearlong distinction which will draw attention to the work of all special education teachers.

In their nominations, Lutz co-workers described Laethem's "spirited enthusiasm (which) shows through in her willingness to take on any demand that helps the students. . . (She) demonstrates the highest level of professional commitment and competency in her work. She is often here for hours after the students leave and frequently comes in on her days off."

Each year she compiles photographs of special events at the school and creates a videotape of memories that she distributes to all her students. She has coordinated Spirit Week, volunteered as camp counselor and has been known to decorate the entire school for an upcoming dance.

Jennifer Laethem

She always recognizes student success, whether it's through verbal praise or awarding them points which, when accumulated, can result in rewards.

Laethem started the "Student of the Month" program at Lutz, which is another vehicle for recognizing student achievement.

In addition, Laethem believes in the partnership between home and school to achieve progress. As an example of that philosophy, she has been part of a home visit team for nearly a decade. Home visit teams involve teachers with parents so that both are working on the same goals for the student.

As a transitional needs teacher at Lutz School, she bridges the classroom with the community, which allows students to learn functional skills in a natural setting.

A recently enacted law now requires special education students to have a transition plan in place by the time they are 16 so that they may prepare for adult life roles. Laethem's class teaches the students how to gain daily living skills, job development skills, recreation and community participation.

An upcoming assignment for her students involves planning meals, preparing a grocery list and going to the grocery store.

"The community has become the domain for teaching students," she said.

In addition, she is the building representative on the Macomb Intermediate Sex Education Council and has been teaching human health and reproduction to all students at Lutz since 1993.

She credits her faith and her family as the two guiding lights of her life's work. Her parents were her first role models, she said, who opened her eyes to everyone's potential to care for others.

She and her husband, Jim, are lectors at St. Lucy's Catholic Church in St. Clair Shores and when her three daughters were at Monteith Elementary School, she was active as a room mother and on the PTO board.

"I believe teaching inspires one to believe in themselves," she said. "I instill this philosophy in my students by emphasizing their abilities rather than their disabilities."

Next Steps helps after a stroke

"Next Steps," a new support group for stroke survivors, their families and friends, will hold its first meeting from 2 to 4 p.m. Thursday, May 14, at Henry Ford Health System's corporate headquarters in Detroit.

A representative from the Veterans Administration will discuss benefits for veterans and veterans' spouses at the meeting.

SEQUENCE

May 10 is Letter Carriers' 'Stamp Out Hunger' day

May 10 is a day when residents throughout metro Detroit can, together, take a huge bite out of hunger in our communities.

Saturday, May 10, will mark the fifth anniversary of the National Association of Letter Carriers' (NALC) "Stamp Out Hunger!" food drive, a project so successful that nearly one million pounds of food have been collected from residents in the Detroit postal district since 1993.

The NALC, in conjunction with the U.S. Postal Service, Campbell's Soup Co., the AFL-CIO and the United Way, will be collecting nonperishable food items for distribution to the Gleaners Community Food Bank of greater Detroit.

NALC Branch One President Kenneth Kwolek asks that all residents throughout the metropolitan area place their nonperishable items in their mailbox or on their front porch. Letter carriers will collect the food items during the day.

This year's drive will be part of a nationwide effort that brought in an incredible 45 million pounds in food last year, tying the single day food collection record set the year before.

As postal service Detroit district manager Carl T. January Jr. points out, this year's drive will be just as ambitious.

"Postal carriers are a vital link within the community, and this is their day to really shine," says January. "Helping others is something we all should do, and I am confident that with all the support behind this food drive, this year will be the best yet."

Campbell's Soup Co. will cosponsor this year's event by printing 100 million awareness fliers, which will be distributed by letter carriers throughout the nation. Robert F. Bernstock, president of the company's U.S. grocery division, predicts that this year's drive will result in 70 million pounds of food being collected nationwide.

"Efforts such as this food drive are essential in helping the more than 30 million Americans affected by hunger, especially during this time of the year when hunger relief is not nearly as top-of-mind as during the holidays," says Bernstock.

As Gleaners Community Food Bank President Gene Gonya notes, collecting food donations is vital this time of year.

"Our greatest volume of donations comes around Christmas time every year, but supplies dwindle as the year progresses," says Gonya. "That's why this drive is so important. In only five years this has become the granddaddy of all food drives. We at Gleaners thank everyone who donates their food and their time."

Once the food items have been collected by the letter carriers, volunteers will assist in unloading and boxing the goods, which will be inventoried and distributed by Gleaners Community Food Bank.

Since opening its doors in 1977, Gleaners has collected, stored and distributed over 150 million pounds of food to the poor, infants, the ill and the hungry.

"It is an honor for us to work hand-in-hand with Gleaners," says Kwolek. "They are a first-class organization. Together, I am confident that we will help to nourish the community and wage a winning battle against hunger on May 10."

"This food drive is so important, because it helps us to help others," says January. "Everyone who donates food or volunteers their time is helping to make this day the immense success that it is."

Residents who are unable to donate food items on Saturday, May 10, can donate them on Monday, May 12, when the letter carriers will arrange for an auxiliary collection.

Job shadowing at Bon Secours a winner for area students

By John Lundberg
Staff Writer

Despite the years of formal training students in the physical therapy profession receive, it isn't until they are exposed to the day-to-day operation that they can fully understand the scope of their career path.

With that in mind, students from the Lake Shore, Lakeview, South Lake, Roseville and Harper Woods school districts visited Bon Secours hospital in Grosse Pointe April 15-16 in the second year of the hospital's Job Shadowing program. The program is intended to educate students interested in making physical therapy a career.

"These students are ID'd with those interested in a medical career," said Kathy Tumbarella, project coordinator and occupational health teacher with the Lake Shore school district. "The program gives the students a realistic idea (of what the career entails)."

Students in the 11th and 12th grades from the districts made this year's trip. They were assigned to various physical therapists at the hospital who led them around as they made their daily medical visits. Lisa Cervone, a physical therapist at the hospital, said she wished she had had a program like this when she was in school.

"It's nice for the gals to see a wide range of PT things to use," she said. "It is a totally different world (as opposed to school training)."

This is the second year the hospital has opened its door for students interested in physical therapy. Cervone said similar programs like open houses enjoy wide popularity with students from area districts.

"It really doesn't take time out of our days," she said. "The students follow us around (while making the rounds) and it gives us time to answer their questions.

"It really is a nice incentive for students to see what the job is like."

The students were exposed to the emergency room, the jobs of registered nurses and medical sales personnel, among others. Tumbarella said the hospital staff was "very gracious" and took the time to give the students a first-hand account of what their careers were like.

"The hospital staff really seemed to enjoy taking the time to explain their jobs to them," she said. "They were wonderful."

Thirty four students took advantage of this year's program. Tumbarella said the hospital has invited them back next year to again see the daily workload of hospital personnel.

Cervone, a former dental hygienist, said she looks forward to helping those interested in physical therapy.

"If I had had something like this when I was in school, I might have changed my career path earlier," she said.

HEAT says citizen involvement is key to reduction of carjackings

While the majority of Michigan carjackings take place primarily in densely populated urban centers throughout Michigan, Help Eliminate Auto Thefts (HEAT), a statewide auto theft prevention program, reminds all of Michigan's citizens to be aware of carjacking and auto theft prevention strategies regardless of where they live and remember that they can play a proactive role in their own safety.

One strategy is the HEAT confidential "tip" hotline (800) 242-HEAT, offering rewards to citizens with reliable information regarding auto theft and carjacking.

HEAT contends that by encouraging and rewarding citizen involvement, Michigan citizens play a role in their own safety and work together with law enforcement to prevent carjackings and auto thefts.

"We want Michigan citizens to avoid complacency and understand that carjacking and other auto theft related crimes can happen anywhere in Michigan," says William Liddane, director of the 11-year-old HEAT program. "All of Michigan's citizens must be educated about and play an active role in their own safety."

According to Liddane, a recent FBI carjacking study, reported by the National Insurance Crime Bureau (NICB), found that most carjackings take place at gas stations, parking lots, traffic lights, fast food drive-thrus and other areas where motorists are stopped or exiting their vehicles.

The study further reported that:

- Most carjackings occur between 8 and 11 p.m.
- Friday, Saturday and Sunday account for nearly half of all carjackings.
- More carjackings occur in December (27 percent) than any other month.
- Parking lots are the favorite areas, followed by residential driveways and gas stations.

With the goal of keeping Michigan residents safe this spring, HEAT once again offers the following carjacking prevention strategies and tips:

Getting in the car

- Walk with purpose and stay alert.
- Approach the car with keys in hand.
- Never leave keys in the ignition even for a brief period of time.
- Be wary of people asking for directions or handing out fliers. Trust your instincts.

On the road

- Keep doors locked and windows rolled up at least partway no matter how short the trip or how safe the neighborhood.
- When coming to a stop, leave enough room to maneuver around other cars, especially if you sense trouble and need to get away.
- Drive in the center lane to make it harder for would-be carjackers to approach the car.
- Don't stop to assist a stranger whose car is broken down. Instead, help by calling 911 and alert the police.

Getting out of your vehicle

- Park in well-lighted areas that are near sidewalks or walkways. Avoid parking near dumpsters, woods, large vans or trucks or anything else that limits visibility.
- Never leave valuables in view, even if the car is locked. Put them in the trunk or out of sight.
- Completely close sunroofs, T-bars and convertible tops.
- Try to park in garages with attendants. Leave only the ignition key, with no identification.

If it happens

- If threatened by a carjacker with a gun or other weapon, give up the car. Don't argue. A life is more important than any car.
- Contact law enforcement immediately and call the HEAT tip hotline to report what you know at (800) 242-HEAT).

While a variety of carjacking scenarios exist, gas stations and fast food drive-thrus continue to be the prime targets for carjackers.

In recognition of HEAT's ongoing mission to develop partnerships with organizations that support the public education of carjacking and auto theft prevention, this month, HEAT will team up with Metro Detroit service station owners and Associated Food Dealers of Michigan to fight carjacking.

A press conference with Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer on April 30 was held to kick off the initiative, followed up with the distribution of carjacking and auto theft prevention materials at these establishments throughout the metro area.

"We are thrilled to forge this kind of relationship with retail establishments that have a direct link with the public," says Liddane.

"The support of service stations and convenience stores brings full circle the message of citizen involvement that HEAT depends on."

HEAT tip callers are rewarded up to $1,000 if their tip leads to the arrest and prosecution of a suspected car thief, and up to $10,000 is rewarded if the tip results in the arrest and binding over for trial of suspected theft ring members and/or chop shop operators.

HEAT also awards $2,000 for information leading to the issuance of a warrant for a carjacking suspect.

Funding for the HEAT program comes from Michigan auto insurance companies.

Since 1985, HEAT has received 4,964 tip line calls, and awarded $1,628,540 to tipline callers.

This has resulted in 1,845 suspects arrested and 2,226 vehicles recovered, at a total recovery value of $23,904,169.

'Cruise' with Henry Ford Health System and AAA Michigan

Maintaining a healthy lifestyle, peace of mind and personal security are issues of importance to seniors. AAA Michigan Travel and Henry Ford Health System (HFHS) have teamed up to offer a "Healthy Living-Senior Style" cruise on board Holland America's "ms Veendam," sailing Nov. 16 - 23 for the Caribbean.

This unique cruise — the first of its kind — will include workshops and other activities that promote a healthy lifestyle and provide timely information relevant to planning for the future.

"The Healthy Living-Senior Style cruise provides the best of both worlds," says Michele Lepore, vice president for Senior Services at HFHS. "This package offers an outstanding vacation value, from travel-related adventures associated with a western Caribbean cruise, to access to the most current information on healthy living for seniors."

The lifestyle portion of the cruise will focus on three key areas: Healthy living — emphasizing health, wellness and fitness. Peace of mind — with discussions on the psychological aspects of life transitions.

Sense of security — covering personal business issues.

The cruise will also feature an exclusive "Meet and Greet" reception for "Healthy Living-Senior Style" guests, and a special hospitality desk staffed by HFHS employees and AAA Michigan travel representatives. The seven-day cruise will sail from Ft. Lauderdale, with stops in Key West, Fla.; Playa del Carmen, Mexico; Cozumel, Mexico; Ocho Rios, Jamaica; and Georgetown, Grand Cayman.

Special excursions include tours of Ernest Hemingway's home; the "Little White House," where President Harry Truman spent many a working vacation; archaeological sites such as Chichen Itza and Coba, the largest Mayan settlement yet discovered; Dunn's River Falls in the Jamaican rain forest; and snorkeling and scuba diving in the pristine waters of Georgetown.

According to Larry Dickens, travel marketing manager for AAA Michigan, the cruise is open to the public. As an added incentive, a one-time complimentary new membership or renewal of AAA Michigan membership is offered — up to $42 per cabin.

Offer does not apply to third and/or fourth passengers. Due to the large number of cabins reserved, special group rates will apply. Cabin rates for the cruise start at $1,285 — inside cabin, double occupancy. Persons traveling alone may request to share a cabin in categories F (outside) or K (inside). RM classic auction — it's for more than just the 'insider'

By Richard Wright

The Michigan International 97 auction, conducted by RM Classic Car Productions, Canton, at the Novi Expo Center is a very user-friendly auction, easy for the non-insider to understand and appreciate

The auction is big-time classic car business. RM is a respected classic car restorer, collector, and in recent years auction house. The auction itself is conducted by Kruse Inc., the premier classic car auctioneer.

But it is not as formal and stuffy as many classic car auctions. If you just want to gawk at the cars or if you are looking for something a little unusual you can drive everyday, plan to attend one of these RM events.

For example, one of the first cars I spotted upon entering the huge Novi Expo facility was a white '63 Alfa Romeo Guillietta Spyder, a car I had long had a secret interest in. It was in a typical pose, with its hood up.

Alfa Romeo has never been a popular make in the United States. It had a reputation of being too high-strung, too exacting for the American market. As one salesman said at a New York auto show when an auto writer sat behind the wheel and complained that the pedals were too close together, "You are supposed to wear fine Italian shoes when you drive an Alfa, not cowboy boots."

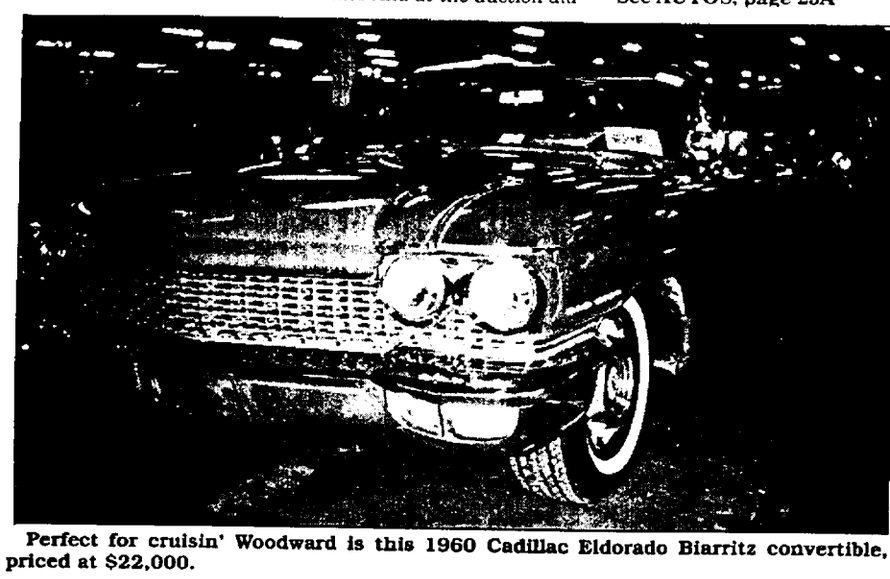

The Alfa Romeo had a body of aficionados in the United States, but to most Americans it was an obscure Italian car with an odd name. It had a reputation for speed and performance, but also for erratic behavior.

Alfa Romeo began in 1910 as the Lombardy Motor Manufacturing Co., Milan (in Italian, Anonima Lombardo Fabbrica Automobil, or A.L.F.A.) It was taken over by industrialist Nicola Romeo in 1915 and the Alfa became the Alfa Romeo.

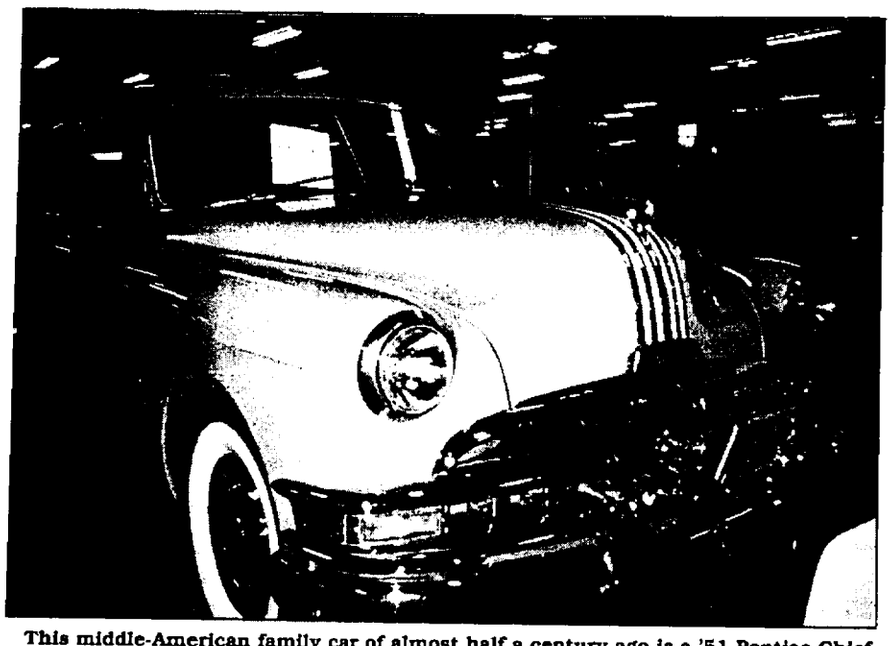

In the post-World War II import boom, the Alfa Romeo entered the American market, but never made much of a dent in it. The very sharp white Alfa at the auction did not sell and had a "Still-For-Sale" sign on it. The owner wanted $13,500.

See AUTOS, page 25A

This middle-American family car of almost half a century ago is a '51 Pontiac Chieftain Silver Streak four-door sedan. The owner asked $14,000; it didn't sell.

may be offered for sale on the floor of the event, as was the Alfa.

For people who can't quite bring themselves to spend thousands of dollars for a car in a matter of a couple of minutes with a hand motion, it allows further reflection and consideration.

The cars which have gone through the auction and not sold are interesting because the prices on them are what the owner believes they are worth. But no bidder agreed. Or bidders might have agreed on the value, they just didn't want that car.

Used car shoppers who want to buy something different but cannot take the excitement of buying at auction, could do a lot worse than checking out these cars that didn't make it.

If you like a modern, every-day-driver kind of an American convertible, there were two 1973 Mercury Cougar XR7s "Still For Sale." One seemed a remarkable bargain with a price of $4,000, assuming it was a good as it looked.

The other was almost identical except that it was black with a black top — the first was bronze with a tan top. The owner of the black XR7 wanted $16,000.

There were collector cars that didn't sell at the auction. A beautiful shovel-nose '32 Packard 900 Coupe Roadster had a price tag of $58,000. A beautiful yellow '38 Packard 120 Coupe roadster was on sale for $33,000.

Neither was what you would call an everyday driver, but there were several that could fit that category and still get you plenty of attention on the Woodward Dream Cruise in August.

Old enough to be a classics but modern enough for every-day (or every once in a while) driving were a '60 Cadillac Eldorado Biarritz convertible for $22,000; a block-long '63 Buick Electra 225 convertible for $10,500; a '51 Pontiac Chieftain Silver Streak four-door sedan for $14,000 and a '56 Chrysler Windsor V-8 for $8,000.

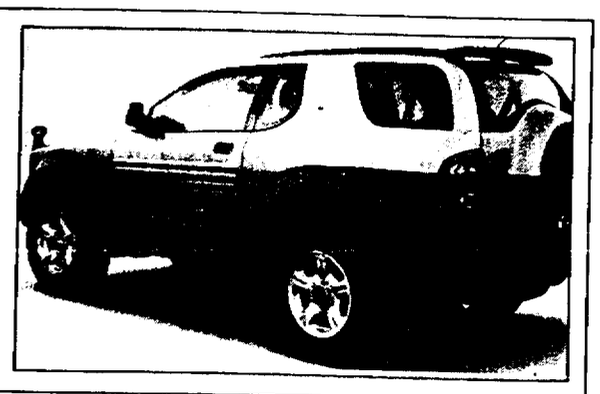

If you want something newer, there was an '88 Jaguar XJ6 for $5,800 and a rare and beautiful like-new '93 Lexus SC400 convertible for $37,000.

Collectors are not usually interested in kit-car replicas, but if you just want something different in a little sports car, there was a replica of a '39 Jaguar SS100, powered by a Ford six.

If you really want something different that you will have no trouble finding in the parking lot, there was a '37 Rolls-Royce Pill Windovers limousine that the valet would never mistake for anything else.

THE MATTER OF TIMING

"Pinging" is an abnormal form of combustion that causes shock waves in the engine's cylinders which cause the characteristic "pinging" sound. If left uncorrected, pinging can lead to the destruction of the engine or, at least, a reduction in its useful life. However, it is a mistake to rush into retarding the factory-specified ignition timing to solve the problem of pinging (on those cars in which it is still possible to do so). While this strategy could work, it could also reduce power and fuel economy, as well as increase the emission of engine pollutants. Instead, the exhaust gas recirculation (EGR) system should be checked for correct operation, and the catalytic converter should be checked with a back-pressure test for restrictions. A check should also be made for the issue of new "proms" containing ignition timing information in the form of a computer code.
If you hear pinging, don't try to diagnose the problem yourself. That's why we have the most up-to-date technology around available to do the proper analysis. At RINKE TOYOTA, reliability, precision, and reasonable rates are our commitment to you. Our technicians are very highly trained and routinely update their skills. You can reach us at 758-2000, or stop in and see us at 25420 Van Dyke.

Let's talk...STOCKS

By Joseph Mengden

Last week, LTS heard it again and again: "I would've, I should've, I could've, but I didn't! I didn't buy those stocks I should have bought, because I never took the time to identify which stocks I wanted to buy, if they ever did get cheaper!"

By Joseph Mengden

Now, the stock market correction of spring 1997 is over. The 9.8 percent decline from early March to mid-April didn't quite reach the 10 percent "official" correction level, but it qualified to be listed along with the 1994 and 1991-92 "mini-corrections." But nowhere near a "bust," like the one-day 22 percent decline on "Black Monday" in October 1987.

Last week, the whole stock market surged upward with the DJI up 332 points, or another 4.9 percent for the week; the S&P 500 up 47-plus points, or 6.2 percent; and the NASDAQ composite up 96 points, or 7.9 percent. Analysts were even more impressed that the rally ran through most stocks, since the high-tech weighted NASDAQ gained 26 percent more than the blue chip DJI, percentage-wise.

Now the DJI, as of last Friday, is within 14 points of its all-time high of last March. The Market Momentum is clearly in the hands of the bulls. But LTS thinks one might look back at what might have caused last Friday's exhilaration. It could have been, in part, the announcement of the accord to "balance the budget by 2002." But closer examination shows it was only a "deal," a verbal handshake, not a congressional bill or law, which may come later this fall. LTS remembers hearing in 1978 of plans to balance the budget.

The "deal" reportedly gives the Republicans some tax cuts for families and investors (a lower capital gains tax, maybe?) and Democrats will get some extra money now for education and welfare. But here's the catch 22: 75 percent of the deficit reduction savings is scheduled to fold in during the last two years (2001 and 2002), after President Clinton is on pension.

Since the possibility of the budget "deal" only started early last week, with the probability of some kind of a capital gains tax cut, maybe some potential sellers postponed their sales last week, awaiting clarification of the "effective date" of the tax cut? Would the final date be rolled back to include all sales on or after Jan. 1, 1997, or would it be set on a date to be announced by the heads of the tax-writing committees of Congress?

If shares that were to be sold were withheld from sale pending clarification of the tax-cut effective date, then the sell-side supply was reduced last week, with the market otherwise trending upward. Of course, when the effective date is announced, that selling pressure may hit the market all at once, with downside pressure evident.

Buy stocks you can see, feel, eat

That's an old Wall Street saying, worth saying again. Remember it was Peter Lynch (of Magellan Fund fame) who said: "You should be able to explain why you own a stock in two minutes to a 12-year old."

You are both an investor and a consumer. So why not look first at the stocks of companies which make the articles that you can see, feel or eat? Let's walk around your house and see what we find:

First, let's look into the medicine cabinet in your bathroom. Have you ever looked at the fine print on those labels? Crest toothpaste is made by Procter & Gamble (PG); Kleenex comes from Kimberly-Clark (KMB); Band-Aid's by Johnson & Johnson (JNJ); Listerine from Warner and Lambert (WLA) and Comrex by Bristol-Myers Squibb (BMY). Did you know that women buy more razor blades than men? Gillette, of course, by Gillette Co. (G).

The laundry room belongs to Procter & Gamble (PG), which makes Tide for the washer, Bounce for the dryer, Joy for hand-washing and Cascade for the dishwasher.

Your kitchen contains the "Who's Who" of Wall Street! In breakfast cereals, Wheaties and Cheerios are from General Mills (GIS); while Kellogg (K) makes Corn Flakes and Rice Krispies. Maxwell House Coffee is from General Foods, now a division of Philip Morris (MO), that big bad tobacco giant that also makes Kraft Foods and Miller Beer.

Bet your fridge either has Coca-Cola (KO) or Pepsi (PEP). And don't ever forget the Wrigley's gum (WYY). It was William O'Neil, the founder and publisher of Investor's Business Daily, who said: "Look for a stock in the top 1 percent or 2 percent of all the companies out there." You'll find quite a few of them in your house, where you can see, feel or eat them.

Graduation?

Do you call it "graduation" or "commencement"? Is this "the end" or "the beginning" of the life to be?

We parents, grandparents, relatives and friends receive these invitations this time each year. It's really a kind of "gray-mail" for a gift from the out-of-towners. Why not give a gift of appreciated stock, maybe five or 10 shares, just to expose the "child" to the high world of finance? Next week, LTS will tell you how to do it, painlessly.

Joseph Mengden is a City of Grosse Pointe resident, and a former Chairman of the Board of First of Michigan.

Important information about changes in the way you dial local calls that have a different area code.

When the 810 area code was introduced in 1994, some numbers in your local area received an area code different than yours. In an effort to avoid confusion about when to dial 1+ the area code with a local number, the decision was made to allow local calls in different area codes to be completed by dialing either seven digits or 11 digits. That is why today you can reach those local numbers by using either dialing pattern. However, effective May 3, 1997 the provision for dialing only seven digits will be eliminated. By eliminating this dialing option, Ameritech can duplicate telephone numbers in both area codes, providing additional telephone numbers.

If you place a local call on or after May 3, you must dial the area code or the call will not be completed. The cost of the call will remain the same. Local calls will not appear under the long distance portion of the bill.

If you have pre-programmed features like alarm systems, fax machines, modems, call forwarding or speed dialers, you may want to reprogram them now to include the area code.

Check non-emergency city numbers like fire and police to verify their area code so calls will complete without having to redial them.

Lower unemployment rates

The March unemployment rate in Michigan continued to plunge to an all-time record low of 4.3 percent, the best rate in Michigan since the state began tracking seasonally-adjusted rates.

Traditionally, unemployment rates rise early in the year, as holiday workers are let go and construction projects can't break ground because of the cold. But Michigan's red hot economy has more than made up for those factors.

This combined with declining welfare roles and lower rates of poverty, demonstrates the good thing that come from a favorable business climate.

Local family uses prize contest to launch new fruit juice

"Wanna have some fun in your mouth?

That's the question Grosse Pointe Shores resident Anthony Selvaggio, president of Quality Juice & Beverage Corp., hopes everyone will be asking this month and next as the company launches its new Wild Orchard fruit juice slogan by way of a contest that could have area residents winning great prizes.

From May through June 30, four billboards will announce the above fun slogan, and give a phone number (1-888-To-B-WILD) for people to dial in order to enter a contest.

The billboards will be at these locations during these time periods: I-94 and Whittier (May 1 - June 1), I-75 and Dequindre (May 1 - June 30) Woodward and 9 Mile in Ferndale (May 1 - June 30) and Lodge and Basil (May 1 - June 1).

Lodge and Schaefer June 2 - June 30, and 8 Mile and Shiawassee June 2- June 30.

The trip will be provided by Creative Travel of Rochester Hills.

Two first prize packages will offer winners a choice between a family membership to the Cranbrook Institute of Science or Cranbrook Art Museum, and the Detroit Zoological Society.

Three second prize packages including Wild Orchard T-shirts, caps and a week's supply of Wild Orchard Fruit Juice will also be awarded.

Everyone who calls the toll-free number to register for the contest will receive a free "Thirst Survival Kit" filled with information on Wild Orchard wearables, a lapel button, and a buy one adult/get one child free coupon (a $4 value) to enter the Cranbrook Institute of Science "Elephants" exhibit this summer.

Also, people can get their paws on Wild Orchard fruit juice and the entry blanks to win a Zoo trip for two, at some of the area's finer markets and convenience stores, including: Vic's International Markets, Randazzo's, Papa Joe's, Nino Salvaggio's, Western Market, Westborn Markets, Agrusa Markets, and more.

"The tie-in with the San Diego Zoo and our sponsorship of Cranbrook's 'Elephants' exhibit was a natural," said Joe Selvaggio, creator of the Wild Orchard brand and partner with brothers Anthony and Alex in Quality Juice & Beverage Corp.

The Selvaggio family, some of which are long time Grosse Pointe and St. Clair Shores residents, founded and have owned Pointe Dairy since 1968.

The company distributes Wild Orchard Juice along with Borden, Dannon, and other fine products. Most of the milk, juice, cheese, yogurt, and other such items area residents purchase from the grocery store of their choice was likely put there by Pointe Dairy, one of the area's largest distributors in the area.

This year they decided they not only wanted to distribute other juicemakers' products, but create their own juice.

After months of working on fresh, zingy combinations of juice, they launched Wild Orchard juice — all of which feature eye-popping animated graphics of animals on the labels of the bottle.

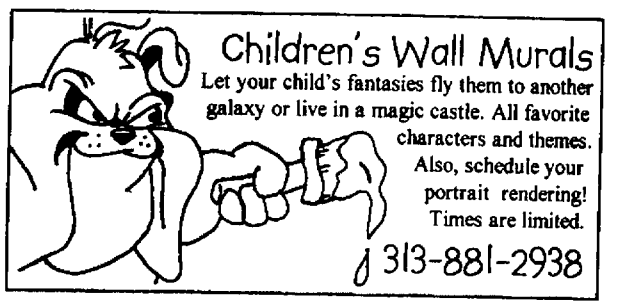

Eleven flavors of Wild Orchard fruit juice have been introduced in Southeastern Michigan including "Aardvark Apple," "Alligator Orange," "Pink Flamingo Lemonade," and "Wild Cat Cranberry" to name a few. More flavors will follow in mid-summer.

Wild Orchard boasts four purebred flavors features the highest juice concentration of juice on the market today, and seven hybrid mixed fruit combinations.

"We are looking to instill some hometown pride in the community being that Wild Orchard is the first 'new age beverage' to originate from the Detroit area," said Alex Selvaggio.

This billboard visible from I-94 is just one of the locations touting the contest launched by the Selvaggios, a local family who is the first Michigan-based company to make a new age juice beverage. Calling the phone number on the billboard registers people for chances to win prizes, such as a trip to the San Diego Zoo.

Security systems protect from more than crime

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

When people think of home security systems, they usually think of burglar alarms, said Jim Dusing of Grosse Pointe Alarms. But people should really broaden their thinking, he said.

"Home security is a really broad field that encompasses more than just anti-burglary," said Dusing. "Not only do we have alarms to protect homes from break-ins, we also have alarms for fires, for medical emergencies and for protection of the home itself."

Dusing remembers one case where a fire alarm was the difference between a small kitchen fire and a raging inferno. The incident took place in the Park, Dusing said. Two children, ages 9 and 11, were left home with a neighbor. She placed some biscuits in the oven, and told the children that she was going down the street for a few minutes.

When she returned to the house, she found the children wrapped in blankets and the Park fire department at the scene. It turns out that the oven was defective and started a fire in the kitchen almost immediately after it was turned on — and the children did not know what to do when it began smoking. Because the house had a fire alarm wired to the GPA headquarters, firefighters were called to the scene right away.

"That woman was only away from the house for 10 minutes," Dusing said. "If the fire department wasn't called until she came back, there would have been a lot more damage to the house. As it was, there was about $3,000 worth of fire damage, and it was limited to the kitchen."

Dusing said many people in Grosse Pointe leave town for extended periods of time during the winter. While they are out of town, they might have someone shovel their snow or pick up their mail, but for the most part the house is empty.

It is not unusual for a house that is unoccupied for the winter to have furnace trouble. If the furnace shuts down, the house temperature drops to below freezing in a short period of time. Pipes can freeze and burst. It's no fun to come home from Florida to find out that your pipes have burst.

One way to avoid that problem, said Dusing, is to install a high-low temperature monitor. The homeowner programs a temperature into the monitor — say 50 degrees — and if the temperature in the home drops below that mark, the monitor is activated and the alarm company is notified.

People at the alarm company can contact the appropriate party, a person or company designated by the homeowner, and the problem can be solved before it gets out of hand.

People can also have smoke alarms installed in their homes that do more than just make a noise when smoke is detected. These alarms will send a signal to the security company, which will then notify the local fire department, Dusing said. His company has about 2,000 businesses and homes wired with some sort of security alarm.

Many security companies also offer alarm service for those who might suffer from medical emergencies, such as with the elderly or the handicapped, people who may have a very difficult time calling 9-1-1, Dusing said. So the company offers special alarm systems for that kind of emergency.

Consumers of home security are purchasing systems that haven't normally been associated with homes in the past, Dusing said. For example, closed-circuit television or CCTV systems are being installed in homes now. Thanks to improvements in the technology, such systems are now smaller and more affordable, so it becomes practical to have them in homes.

Technology has also made it possible for the use of card access locks, Dusing said. Access is gained not by a key, but by an electronic key card the size of a credit card. The bearer only has to insert the card into the electronic lock to open a door.

It is now also possible for intercom systems and security alarms systems to use the same equipment, Dusing said. In the past, if someone wanted a security alarm and an intercom, two crews would have to go into the house and punch holes in the walls for the wiring. Now these systems can be combined so that only one crew has to go into the house. The systems are compatible.

It's now possible for people to have home security similar to the kind enjoyed by apartment dwellers.

When an alarm is activated, a signal is sent over the telephone wires to a central receiving unit, Dusing said. Reputable security firms, whether it's GPA or Guardian Security or whatever, have people monitoring the computers that receive the alarm signal. If there's a fire, or an indication that someone entered the home, the monitor can contact the local public safety department.

"Before we call the police we will try to call the home where the alarm was activated, because often alarms are accidentally set off," Dusing said. "So the homeowner might have a code word in case the burglar alarm is set off. When we call the home, the owner can give the code and we don't have to call the police."

Dusing was quick to praise all the Pointe public safety departments for their quick response time and for their patience with false alarms.

"We have a False Alarm Committee Team (FACT) that works with police and customers to find out what's behind a false alarm," Dusing said. "Many communities charge residents if a false alarm results in sending police or fire crews to a home or business. The Pointes don't do that, but we do everything we can to make sure that the problem is taken care of. Pets often set off alarms. People tell us that they keep their pets locked up, but dogs and cats have a way of getting around the house. We work with homeowners to make sure pets don't set off alarms."

Grosse Pointe Park public safety director Richard Caretti said that the alarm companies that service Grosse Pointe do a good job of working with authorities to solve problems. He said that his department has caught burglars because of alarms, but he also agrees with Dusing that false alarms are a problem.

"We don't mind if someone accidentally sets off their alarm once or twice," said Caretti. "These things happen. But if we get 20 false alarms from one home, it's then that we really have to start considering charging for false alarms that result in public safety officers going to a home. That is a big drain on resources."

What people have to realize, said Dusing, is that home security means protection of the entire home. Houses are threatened by more than thieves. They are threatened by fire, or by the elements. Residents are perilled by more than burglars. They are threatened by injury and accidents. A good home security service should take that into account.

The Pastor's Corner

Being a bearer

By the Rev. Ronald Corl
Redeemer United Methodist Church

His name is Nathan Christopher. The name Nathan means "gift" or "gift of God," and the name Christopher means "bearing Christ," or "Christ bearer."

To his loving parents and grandparents, he was truly a Gift of God, especially because of a couple of pregnancies that didn't work out. He was also a gift to his two older sisters because now they have a baby brother.

His parents also want Nathan Christopher to be a bearer of Christ.

So, a week ago last Sunday, they brought him to church to be baptized. Surrounded by his parents, grandparents, sponsors and his two older sisters, we gave him his Christian name, Nathan Christopher, and baptized him with water and the Spirit, in the name of the Father, and the Son and the Holy Spirit.

It was a great day for all, as together, family, friends, and congregation took responsibility for the love and the nurture of this gift of God.

We pray that we will do well to help him to be a bearer of Christ; of love and compassion for all, a true witness of the love and compassion of God.

After the service, a book of names got passed around to see what our names meant. It was fun and interesting. The name Ryan meant "Little King"; Dylan meant "With great influence"; Elizabeth meant "Consecrated to God"; and Christine meant "anointed" or "Christian."

There were other names not quite so romantic — like Douglas, which meant "flowing from the Black River," or Beverly, which meant "stream where the beavers swim."

Yet all of us — you, me, each member of our families, our neighbor next door, each child around the world — all of us are "Gifts of God."

And those of us who believe in Jesus and who call ourselves Christian, are called by God to be "bearers of Christ"; to show compassion as God shows compassion and to love as Jesus loved.

Oh, yes, what does my name, Ronald Kinsey, mean? I had to look it up. Ronald means "mighty power" and Kinsey means "royal victorious one."

Wow! There is no way that I can live up to those meanings. For the power and the victory and the true royalty belongs to Christ Jesus.

St. Paul Lutheran installs new associate pastor

St. Paul Ev. Lutheran Church will install its new associate pastor, the Rev. Christopher A. Frye, at both the 9 a.m. and 11:15 a.m. services on Sunday, May 11.

Emotional, physical abuse are equally harmful, study confirms

The effects of psychological abuse on battered women can be just as harmful as the physical violence they endure, a new study confirms.

Researchers Leslie A. Sackett, assistant professor of social work at Columbia (S.C.) College, and Daniel G. Saunders, associate professor of social work at the University of Michigan, said that "psychic injuries" to battered women are typically caused as much by emotional abuse as physical abuse, and can help to sustain abusive relationships.

"We conducted our study because, if severe enough, psychological abuse may lead to self-doubt, confusion and depression," Saunders said. "Battered women may subsequently have a difficult time seeing their options and marshaling the resources needed to leave the relationship.

"At first, a battered woman may respond to criticism and put-downs by trying to change herself, by trying to convince her partner they need couples' counseling, or by attributing his abuse to his drinking. Over time, many women realize that nothing they do seems to make a difference."

In their study of 60 victims of domestic violence (half at women's shelters and half in individual or group counseling) ridiculing of traits was found to be more severe than other types of psychological abuse, such as criticizing a woman's behavior, ignoring her or jealously trying to control her.

"Ridiculing of a woman's traits — an attack on her character— is more likely to shatter her sense of hope, security in the relationship, and even her sense of self," Sackett said. "Other forms of psychological abuse, on the other hand, are somewhat less likely to be taken personally."

According to Sackett and Saunders, ridicule is more likely than other kinds of verbal abuse to cause fear among battered women. While the amount of physical violence is the strongest predictor of depression and low self-esteem, both ridiculing and ignoring also are strongly related to these outcomes.

"The finding on the use of ignoring shows that it needs to be taken seriously as a form of abuse, with the potential for long-term consequences," Saunders said. "Being ignored may give one of the most negative messages possible about self-worth because it conveys the message that 'you don't exist.'"

While the study shows that their partners' jealous and controlling behavior was not likely to cause depression and low self-esteem among battered women, such emotional abuse had a higher correlation with physical violence than other kinds of psychological abuse

In addition, although women living in a shelter were more likely to report severe physical abuse, greater ridicule and more jealous control by their husbands or boyfriends, they did not experience greater depression, lower self-esteem or more fear than the non-sheltered women.

"The shelter may have provided enough support in a short period of time for previous depression and fear to lift, although self-esteem is less likely to change in such a short time," Sackett said. "Another possibility is that the more severe abuse experienced by these women caused traumatic symptoms that kept other emotional responses from surfacing."

In all, the researchers said that their results confirm the negative impact of emotional abuse on battered women and that counselors must help victims to understand that "character assassinations" can be as damaging to a woman's sense of self as physical violence.

The study will appear in an upcoming special issue of the journal Violence and Victims.

Redeemer Methodist plans Mother's Day service

A special service in celebration of mothers is being planned as part of the 10:30 a.m. worship service on Mother's Day, May 11, at Redeemer United Methodist Church, 20571 Vernier in Harper Woods (just west of I-94).

This unique service will present a drama that asks the question, "Who Is Your Mother?"

You may say, "That's a silly question. Of course I know who my mother is." But this question goes deeper. There is much, much more to this biblically based presentation.

Redeemer United Methodist Church provides child care as well as junior church for grade-school-age children. A fellowship coffee hour follows the service.

Women are never too old (or too young) to protect against bone loss

By Dr. Vicki L. Seltzer

Osteoporosis, the condition in which bones become so brittle that they break easily, was once thought to be inevitable in many older women. Now we know that women can take steps to protect against bone loss that leads to osteoporosis, and those who already have the condition can help strengthen bones to reduce further damage.

The diet and exercise that help older women preserve their bones can also help middle-aged or younger women lessen their chances of getting osteoporosis in later years.

In fact, protection begins in adolescence when a girl is building her bone mass. Health-conscious parents can give their daughters the knowledge and habits that will help them build and maintain strong bones throughout their lives.

Diet: Calcium is critical. From their teens to their mid-20s, women need about 1,200 milligrams of calcium each day, and pregnant and breast-feeding women need the same amount. Other women who have not yet reached menopause need about 1,000 mg of calcium a day. For postmenopausal women not on estrogen replacement therapy, the recommended daily intake of calcium jumps to 1,500 mg.

Dairy products (regular, low fat or nonfat), leafy green vegetables, nuts and seafood are important sources of dietary calcium. Women who cannot digest milk, or who, for other reasons, do not include adequate calcium in their diets can take supplements.

Exercise: Because it strengthens bones, regular weight-bearing exercise such as aerobic dancing, or even walking several blocks, is important for women of all ages. Many doctors recommend 45 minutes a day of such weight-bearing exercise, three days a week.

Older women, or women who have never exercised, should start out slowly and build up to the recommended guidelines. When constructing an exercise regimen, women of all ages should consult their doctors.

Hormone replacement therapy: Women are most vulnerable to rapid bone loss after menopause, when their bodies' natural supply of estrogen drops dramatically. Estrogen protects against bone loss, improves calcium absorption, and enhances the effect of exercise on the bones.

Many doctors now prescribe estrogen replacement therapy for postmenopausal women and for some women who experience severe menopausal symptoms. Women in these categories should consult their doctors to determine if estrogen replacement is suitable for them.

If women remember these steps to protect against bone loss — diet, exercise and (for many postmenopausal women) hormone replacement therapy — osteoporosis could become a rare condition.

Lecturer to discuss managing adult ADHD

Adults suffer from the disorder, too, but approaches to managing the problem may differ.

Terry Rudolph, Ph.D., will lecture on managing adult ADHD from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursday, May 15, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. Admission is $5 a person.

Rudolph will explore coping mechanisms and techniques adults can use to deal with problems attributed to ADHD, such as distractibility and procrastination, poor job performance, drug and alcohol problems, greater incidence of automobile accidents and higher rates of suicide.

Have a Pleasant Try at Perfection Bridge by Woody Boyd ♠♥♦♣

There are four sorts of bridge players.

- Those who know not and know not they know not. They are fools, so shun them.
- Those who know not and know they know not. They are willing, so instruct them.
- Those who know, but know not they know. They are timid, but have promise, so awaken them.
- Those who know and know they know. They are wise, so learn from them.

- Adapted from an Arabian proverb

I just returned from my eighth annual ramble in Gatlinburg, Tenn., at the Mid-Atlantic Bridge Association's magnificent April regional. Suffice to say once again they broke their own attendance record of 6,037 tables in 1996. Some 2,800 of those players attending earned over 36,000 master points during this six-day soiree which unquestionably makes it the premier regional tournament in North America for the fourth straight year.

It's hard to imagine this little old honky-tonk town in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains hosting the likes of such, but their playing accommodations at their seven-year-old convention center, marvelous hospitality and exceptional lodging and dining facilities are absolute status makers.

I usually have a couple of pre-arranged dates, but often I amble over to the partnership desk and I have been most fortunate in working out a play. This to me is a particular thrill when you finish in the money with one you have just come upon.

Last year you will remember my column from the '96 pageant in which I trumpeted the playing skills of one of bridge's great masters and very nice guys, Russ Arnold. This year I give you another of significant dignity; the likable first rate grand master Jim Linhart. The precipitous dimensions of his stature I can confirm are only exceeded by his exceptional skill at the table.

We had one contemplated date that by a series of conspiracies relating to my needs I amplified into three. It was a marvelous treat that I have never enjoyed more, but I believe he found challenge playing my four card major style and was extremely patient with my misadventures I will tell you about. Of course his lovely wife June is obviously a sanity saver, for the following day James looked no worse for wear.

As my readers know, I am as human as the next average player and able to display mediocrity with the best of them. There were three horrible no-no's that still hang heavy over my head which should have gotten me sentenced to life behind bars. My play of a two no trump partial was the first and the worst. The next was my inability in a six heart contract to allow for a 4-1 trump break and that was a close second. But the show of all shows was my absolutely inexcusable three no trump bid with 22 H.C.P. in the combined hands, and I knew it before I made that awful call. There were some other unbecomers, but my partner was as perfect an exhibit of tolerability as I've ever had the pleasure of trying to play well with.

Someday we'll get Jim and June out here for one of our regionals, and you will enjoy them immensely. Of course June will bring her parade of fancy bridge fashions which she markets over the label of "Jazzy Jackets" and at extremely reasonable prices, I should add.

No one will discredit the role luck plays in our game, but judgment, technique and concentration are much better weapons to rely upon. Today's hand resurrected from our play is just such an example.

No, I had not become unhinged, but my last bid was somewhere between indiscreet and total dementia. In match point play one should have a reasonable perception of accomplishment before trying to walk on water. My final double was that foolish, but Jim's pass suggested he had some ability to defend and a lot more confidence in me than was warranted.

My partner got off to a fine lead that gave us a modicum of opportunity for success. I won my diamond jack and switched to the heart nine which Jim let declarer win with his king. The trump ace, king followed and then a pause. Obviously declarer was now cogitating the location of the queen, jack which, because of Jim's low-level pass, he must have envisioned were with him, for at trick 5 he led his spade nine (conclusion: the play was lucky for us, but horrible technique by declarer). Jim ducked the spade play in tempo, but declarer guessed right, letting it ride. I played my ace as I didn't want declarer to revert back to another club play. At trick 6 I played my heart three, declarer's ten and Jim's jack. Next came the heart ace, then the five, which I ruffed. At trick 9 my diamond ace and partner's club queen was still a winner. In all we won a spade, 2 hearts, a heart ruff, 2 diamonds and a club for down one + 200 and a top. My reprehensible judgment doubling two clubs was off-set by declarer's awful technique at trick 5. Yes, we were lucky, but don't count on winning many pair events this way.

Expect the unexpected from collection of short stories

"What Goes Without Saying: Collected Stories"
By Josephine Jacobsen
Johns Hopkins University Press. 335 pages. $29.95.

Josephine Jacobsen is a remarkable octogenarian who lives in Baltimore and has published four collections of short stories along with volumes of poetry and critical essays. Her literary career has spanned more than six decades, beginning with the publication of her first poem at the age of 11, to her 1995 nomination as a National Book Award finalist.

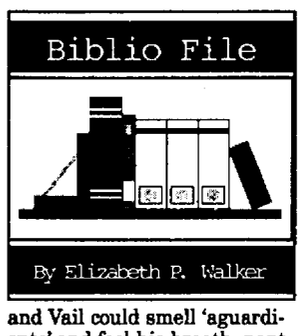

She has won many awards. Her poetry and fiction have been recognized and honored by the Academy of American Poets and she has won the Pen-Faulkner fiction award. In 1994 she was inducted into the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and in the following year she was a winner of the William Carlos Williams Award for her poetry.

During the early 1970s she served two terms as Consultant in Poetry to the Library of Congress, a post recently retitled National Poet Laureate.

In April 1997, the Poetry Society of America awarded Jacobsen the prestigious Robert Frost Medal for lifetime achievement.

With such a glowing literary distinction radiating about her, we naturally welcome her latest offering, a collection of short fiction, "What Goes Without Saying," a gathering of 30 of her previously published stories.

The opening story, "The Inner Path," plunges the reader into the bewildering misfortune of Peter Vail, who is a lone traveler on a walking tour of wilderness Mexico. He meets a strange woodcarver who inexplicably refuses to sell him any of his work. Suddenly, without warning, Peter Vail finds himself knocked down: "Breath gone, his face in the harsh stubble, he felt his arms wrenched behind him and immediately the bite of a thin tough cord. The man's knee, sharp as a bone, pressed into his back and Vail could smell 'aguardiente' and feel his breath, panting a little. Then a pain like a drill went through him so violently that for an instant it was unlocatable. It was in a hand. A sawing was going on, rhythmic and steady as a butcher's; he felt warm stickiness steal over his thumb, his wrist. There was a tearing jerk, and he was rolled over by a sandaled foot."

So, we are quickly introduced to the quirkiness of much of Jacobsen's prose; she is a master of the unsuspected twists of plot. For the most part, her characters are certainly not run-of-the-mill types, and her plots often spring surprises, all of which tends to leave readers a bit on edge and not knowing what to expect next. Peter Vail's horrifying experience has left him shaken, minus two thumbs, and we are left to plumb its meaning.

"Nel Bagno" is a frightening domestic crisis — that of being helplessly trapped in a 12th floor apartment in New York City with no way of escaping this nightmarish dilemma. Mrs. Glessner is already packed for her forthcoming flight, but she is trapped in her bathroom when she turns the handle of the door: "It was a glass knob, cut in facets, and it made a hard, thin sound as it hit the tile floor. Now it was possibly chipped, and the tile too, perhaps. Annoyed, Mrs. Glessner snatched it up: neither showed any sign of damage, and she took the knob with its projecting metal tongue and inserted it carefully back in its hole. But it refused to attach itself, and conscious of limited time, she knelt on the tiles with their small blue flowers and put her eye to the hole. She couldn't make out anything, and she again inserted the knob, but it refused to mesh with whatever ratchet caused its function; released, it would not even balance there."

In another story, "Sound of Shadows," Jacobsen displays her whimsical sense of humor in her account of an elderly widow who lives alone in a neighborhood where she has no friends. On top of that, she has weird dreams envisioning her home disappearing in an ever-widening crevice between two larger buildings: "For several years, Mrs. Bart visited the supermarket almost daily, for the exercise, bringing home four items, sometimes five. Then she found she could go twice a week. Once would be far better, but it is difficult to carry that much. So, twice a week she goes, as she has gone today, in the moist April afternoon. She forgot, in the presence of a home splitting like a vessel at sea, the hour, and she arrived at the worst possible time: five o'clock, with hordes of dreary, cross workers — she assumes they are workers, rushing there at this hour — and they look, if not cross, certainly dreary. It has been a bad experience — in the express-line checkout, the woman two-in-front has forgotten to have her bananas weighed; the line stalls, while the checker runs her pencil butt through her hair and the ten-items-or-less wire baskets gleam in place. To her right, in racks at eye level, a new cancer cure comes in huge letters; also aid for the disliked, the sexually inadequate, the doltish homemaker."

Annie and Dustin are a young American couple in "The Ring of Kerry" who are driving through Ireland on increasingly isolated roads to find their bed-and-breakfast farmhouse. Finally, "after a road so narrow that it has periodic cutouts, the little car swings slowly into a circular drive, with roses flaring in a grass center, and there is a handsome, pale yellow Georgian house front that looks out over lawns, and then fields, to a lake. Or a small pond? The scene has the arrested beauty of an engraving and it is just as still." The old housekeeper allows them to enter, and later they meet Mrs. Adair, the aloof, aristocratic owner of an estate that has obviously seen better days. In her condescending manner, Mrs. Adair manages to convey her disinterest in her guests, but later in the night the shoe is on the other foot. Mrs. Adair, in bed, has a fierce asthma attack which necessitates the immediate help of Annie and Dustin.

Jacobsen has a certain sympathy for those individuals who are singled out, unfairly, due to national prejudice in times of war. In "Atlantic City," during World War I, a young girl and her mother are residing in a hotel along the beach front. The narrator explains: "At this time my mother had a great friend named Mr. Zubach. He had come to America two years earlier from Berlin, and was now the assistant manager of our hotel, a job, I think, not much to his liking. Mr. Zubach was German, and I knew that Germans were evil — everywhere in posters Belgium and Marianna suffered violence at their enormous hands. Somehow I failed to make the logical connection. Mr. Zubach was my mother's great friend — a short, handsome man, with full, strongly defined red lips, and full green eyes, the color of the pulp of Niagara grapes. He had very broad shoulders and tiptoed slightly when he walked . . . then Mr. Zubach lost his job. There was no complaint about his professional ability, he said. It was just said that he had become bad for the hotel. The manager was friendly; but he knew that Mr. Zubach had tried to enlist in the American army. But he said to have Mr. Zubach in the inner office would be suicidal — a word I had never heard used in that way."

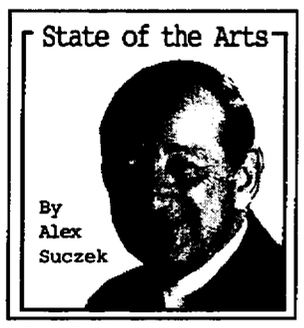

In another story, Jacobsen reveals her understanding of the gulf between classes — the poor vs. the rich. "The Pier Glass" tells of a wealthy divorcee vacationing on one of the Caribbean islands where she has an unfortunate encounter with a native chambermaid: "Cecilene was the girl that did my room — made the beds, vacuumed, did the bathroom, and turned down the bed at night. We got on just fine, and I will say she was an exceptionally pretty girl, in spite of the color. She had good teeth and one of those great big smiles, and a nice full trim figure. It took me a while to get her name. The locals have a lot of those fancy names. . . Well, I don't know which of the two of us was the most surprised. She must have been sure I was on my way to the beach, and I hardly expected her to be waving around my diamond and ruby ring." Accusations and denials fly about, but untold damage has been done to this once congenial relationship.

Josephine Jacobsen is a writer skilled in the art of keeping readers off-balance, waiting for the other shoe to drop. She writes with a poetic flair, which, of course, is to be expected, and her stories, many if not all, will likely remain vividly in the memories of those fortunate to find her books and to read them with undiluted pleasure.

Four works pay homage to idealism

For anyone not yet in the know, the DSO really means what it says when it bills Friday morning performances as "Coffee Concerts."

Balcony patrons have long-since discovered that the upstairs lobby is graced with complimentary coffee and baked goods before the concert. If you enjoy a mid-morning treat, it is worth arriving 15 minutes early for a pleasant chat over a hot cup and cruller.

Last Friday, as the concert began, things just got better and better. Resident conductor Leslie B. Dunner led off with Rimsky-Korsakov' s stirring Russian Easter Overture. Not only did it get the concert off to a thrilling start, it introduced the theme for the program: four works that pay homage to idealistic traditions.

The Easter Overture, of course, expresses the joy and triumph of the Resurrection in unique Russian fashion. The composer's distinctive orchestration suggests the sounds of church bells and balalaikas and rings with the ardor of an Orthodox Easter. Dunner maintained a relentless momentum through alternative expressions of the mystery and the joy of faith and ended in the thundering triumph of the Resurrection.

Every representation of a passage from the Gospel or the ritual was brought out in clear relief and punctuated by outstanding solos from the orchestra led by John Hughes and Marcy Chanteaux in the first chairs of the violin and cello sections.

Old Testament values are the underlying thoughts of Ernest Bloch's Hebrew Rhapsody for Cello and Orchestra, called "Schelomo" (for Solomon).

Between cello soloist Lynn Harrell and Maestro Dunner, this musical expression of the Book of Ecclesiastes was highly spiritual and profoundly moving in a completely different way. Harrell managed to invest it with both the sensuality of the Song of Songs and the pessimism of Solomon's despairing conclusion that "all is vanity." Here is the flavor of ancient Hebrew faith and Harrell developed fully the sumptuous and colorful imagery.

But Harrell's ability to enrich music he performs was most evident in Tchaikovsky's Variations on a Rococo Theme inspired by the Russian composer's ideal: Mozart.

Regardless of its homage to the Mozartian ideal, Tchaikovsky's creation achieved a romantic — rather than classical — rococo character. Harrell's deft mastery of the cello leaves him free to explore widely the lush and sensual phrasing inherent in the score and he did so with extraordinarily rich imagination and good taste.

The fourth work, purely orchestral, recalls the glittering culmination of an empire and an era. Ravel began "La Valse" as an homage to Strauss but completed it as a musical allegory of the death throes of the Austrian Empire and its ultimate collapse.

As Dunner opened the work, there was a palpable sense of a forced tempo of a regime living on borrowed time. He forged ahead with the music, projecting the inexorable feeling of a society hurtling to its fate, punctuated by moments of lyrical grace as the lilting waltz broke through. Without hesitation, Dunner projected the sense of the inevitable, maintaining a relentless flow and the increasingly urgent pulse that precedes a death. It was a gripping and exciting performance displaying a rare insight into the underlying theme.

The next concerts in the regular series bring guest conductor Jerzy Semkow in a program of Mozart and Mahler on Thursday through Saturday, May 8 to 10. For more information call (313) 833-3700.

AT THE MOVIES

By D. J. Honstain

What is our fascination with high school reunions?

Every five or 10 years we revisit a time and a place most of us would love to keep buried — our teenage years.

Romy and Michele, the spacy Mira Sorvino and Lisa Kudrow, never gave those years a second thought until Romy's chance meeting with an old classmate who informs her of the upcoming 10-year reunion.

Far removed from their Tucson home, Romy and Michele are now having a blast in the nightlife of Venice Beach, where by day Romy is a receptionist at a Jaguar dealer and Michele is unemployed.

They were both ridiculed throughout high school for their outlandish attire; and individually for Michele's scoliosis and Romy's crush on Billy, the prom king and the steady of prom queen Christie.

Having just two weeks to get the things that have eluded them the past 10 years (successful men and great jobs), they go on crash diets. Romy hunts for men and Michele hunts for a job.

Not being able to attain the perfect life in two weeks, they do the next best thing — they make one up.

This is extremely silly stuff. Walking that fine line between dumb and too dumb, the film has many goofy laughs:

Romy: "I was so lucky to get mono. It was like the best diet ever."

Or when Romy man-hunts at a club, then deadpans her getaway when she finds out he's a suit salesman: "I cut my foot earlier and now the blood is running in my shoe."

They have their own way of seeing things. Whether watching "Pretty Woman" for the 37th time; dancing together; or arguing about which of them is Mary and which one is Rhoda; they populate their own universe.

Sorvino and Kudrow are great fun together. They push each other to wonderful heights of ineptitude. They revel in the fact that they are so alike.

Romy: "I hate it when I throw up in public." Michele giggling: "Hey, me too."

These two are a perfect match. But the real treasure is Janeane Garofalo. She plays Heather, another high school misfit but with no venom to spare. Garofalo comes up with a character so over-the-top that it hits the target dead on. She's an up-tight, chain-smoking mean spirit who doesn't hold anything back. The kids in high school made her life hell and she's finally returning the favor.

Inspired by the fact that she could never finish a smoke between classes, she invents a quick smoke cigarette. But the scars from high school still linger. She had a crush on brainy nerd Sandy Frink, but Sandy only had eyes for Michele, who never gave him a second look.

En route to the reunion Romy and Michele change into power suits and try to transform themselves into successful businesswomen. But after a fight about (among other things) who's cuter, they decide to go their separate ways at the reunion.

We know they won't be apart for long. What lays at the core of "Romy and Michele" is a kind of "Revenge of the Nerds" fantasy that the tortured get sweet revenge on the tormenters. Unlike "Nerds" or films like "16 Candles" and "Pretty in Pink," where the stars aren't misfits, but merely misunderstood or from the wrong side of the tracks, Romy and Michele are truly clueless.

The final hilariously loopy dance sequence shows the "dance queens" couldn't cut a rug with a chainsaw. And that's what's so great, Romy and Michele make it square to be hip.

Awash in '80s new wave tunes (Devo, GoGo's, Thomas Dolby, Wang Chung) but suspiciously missing the perfectly suited "Girls Just Want To Have Fun," it's filled with Reagan-era flashbacks of Madonna-clad teens and feathered hair that makes the era seem as dated as the '70s. Only one overlong dream sequence disappoints in this very funny, keenly scripted and perfectly acted comedy.

We can only hope our own high school reunions could be this much fun.

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Talk about this year's University Liggett School boys tennis team and a big smile crosses the face of coach Bob Wood.

"They have the potential to be the best team since our 1978 squad," said Wood, who has won 23 boys state titles with the Knights, including three straight.

"They're the deepest team I've had and it's the first time in 32 years I've had the entire team back from the year before. We've always lost a couple."

This year there were no losses — only an addition.

"Aaron came through our middle school program and is a Western-ranked junior player," Wood said.

With Shumaker moving into the starting lineup, it meant Wood had to shuffle the deck that won the Class C-D title last spring.

And that's another thing that brings a smile to Wood's face — the willingness to put the team's success ahead of individual glory.

"Brad Cenko went from No. 3 singles to No. 1 doubles, Tyler Weisenbeck moved from No. 1 to No. 2 doubles and Jeff Kenzie went from second to third doubles," Wood said.

"All three of them won state championships last year, but they were willing to switch because they've placed the team first, ahead of any individual goals. If they hadn't been willing to do that, it could have ruined the chemistry of the team. I've seen it happen where great talent doesn't lead to team success because the team doesn't come first."

Ten of ULS' 13 players are seniors, which could have posed another problem for Wood.

"Sometimes you have trouble with kids in April and May of their senior year, but this group has made the same commitment to tennis that they did as 10th and 11th graders," the coach said.

"As a coach, you can't ask for more. We've asked a lot of them and they've done what we've asked with a smile on their faces."

It's also a team that can respond to challenges. The cumulative grade-point average of this year's Knights squad is 3.45. So if Wood or assistant coach David Tidwell tell the players something once, it sinks in.

Wood knew for sure that he had something special in this year's team when it won 20 of a possible 24 points in finishing first at the tough East Grand Rapids Invitational.

"We swept the doubles and we've never swept the singles or doubles before," Wood said. "Five of our top 10 players are four-year starters."

That quintet includes Shaun Jayakar, who alternates with Karim Jina at No. 1 and No. 2 singles; Peter Birgbauer at No. 1 doubles; Weisenbeck; Kenzie; and Eric Kim, who returned from a back injury and is playing No. 2 doubles again.

The doubles lineup includes

Coach of the year

John Hackett, who coached the Grosse Pointe Hockey Association Pee Wee AA Bulldogs to state and national championships, was named coach of the year at an awards dinner sponsored by Michigan Hockey magazine and Bauer. The dinner was held to honor the AA and AAA state champions. Grosse Pointe Woods resident Mark "Doc" Andrews was the master of ceremonies.

Knights use balance to win tourney

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Like every lacrosse team, University Liggett School has its "go-to guys."

It happened last weekend in the championship game of the ULS Invitational when the Knights were playing Lansing Waverly.

"We could hear them yelling during a timeout 'keep the ball away from (Kevin) Espy, keep the ball away from (Paul) Huebner,' so we just told our other kids to be ready and they were," said ULS coach John Fowler after the Knights won the title with a 12-7 victory over Waverly.

"Guys like Blair Ridder, Sergei Lie, Andy Adamo, Bray Miller, Charlie Eldridge and John Riddle all turned it up for us. We count on those guys, too. We don't want them to be shy about shooting."

Waverly, on the other hand, seemed lost when ULS concentrated on stopping its big scorers.

"They have their scorers and they have kids who aren't supposed to shoot," Fowler said. "They're programmed to get the ball to their studs and when that doesn't happen they try too hard and get frustrated."

ULS got an outstanding defensive effort from Justin Macksoud, who frustrated one of the Warriors' top players. Mike Gressman, Ian Watt, Tim French and Jason Campbell also played strong defensive games.

ULS jumped out to a 5-1 lead, but Waverly scored a pair of man-up goals and cut the margin to 5-4 at halftime.

"The kids were a little flustered at halftime, but I congratulated them on winning the first half and told them not to panic but to go out and win the third quarter, too," Fowler said.

The Knights still led by a goal after three quarters, but outscored Waverly 4-0 in the final period.

"Bray Miller's goal, which gave us an 11-7 lead, was a very big goal," Fowler said. "It was a beautiful breakaway play. Our fifth goal — by Blair Ridder — was also a gorgeous goal that really gave us a lift and got the crowd into the game."

Ridder had four goals and two assists, Huebner scored three goals, Lie had a goal and three assists, Riddle collected a goal and two assists, while Espy, Adamo and Miller each tallied once.

Goalie Jason Capen made 15 saves.

"It was an excellent lacrosse game," Fowler said. "Waverly really want to beat us after we beat them at their place earlier this year."

Espy led the way with four goals, while Huebner, Adamo and Riddle each scored two. Ridder, who had four assists, Ian Fines, Chris Mitchell, Miller and Lie each tallied once. Miller and Adamo also had assists.

Waverly beat Grosse Pointe South 17-8 in the other semifinal game.

Matt Moran led the Blue Devils with three goals and an assist. Adam Whitehead and Blake Ellis each scored twice and Jordan Ellis tallied once.

South beat North 15-2 in the consolation game as Jon Bayko, who missed the semifinal contest, led the Blue Devils with five goals and three assists.

Moran had three goals and two assists, while Whitehead, Clint Carpenter and Brad Balesky had two goals apiece. Jason Donohue scored once and Tim Brady and Chris Provenzano each picked up an assist.

Earlier, ULS beat De La Salle's B team 11-2 as Ridder scored three goals and Riddle collected two goals and two assists.

Eldridge had two goals and an assist, Fines tallied twice and Lie and Adamo had a goal apiece. Huebner picked up four assists, while Miller had one.

South wins seven straight

Grosse Pointe South's lacrosse team won seven straight games after dropping its first three outings of the season.

The Blue Devils rolled past Ann Arbor Huron 13-4 as goalie C.J. Lee had his second straight outstanding game.

Captains Jason Donohue and Matt Moran each had four goals and two assists. Charlie Norton and Adam Whitehead each had two goals and Chris Provenzano added one.

Coach Gary Donohue said he is pleased with the progress the team has made, but would like to see the Blue Devils take fewer penalties.

University Liggett School's lacrosse team celebrates after winning the ULS Invitational championship Sunday with a 12-7 victory over Lansing Waverly.

South tennis team gets a tie it enjoys

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South tennis coach Tom Berschback wasn't counting on anything but a lot of good tennis when his team met University Liggett School last week.

Instead, he got a tie against a veteran team that's favored to win its fourth straight Class C-D state championship.

"I expected them to win 5-3," Berschback said after the two teams played to a 4-4 tie.

"It's quite an accomplishment to tie a team as good as ULS is this year. We're mostly underclassmen and they're basically a senior team. Next year is our year, but we think we can do well this season, too."

South didn't get its tie until A.J. Rohde outlasted ULS freshman Aaron Schumaker 6-2, 7-6 (12-10), after trailing 5-2 in the second set at No. 3 singles.

South's No. 1 doubles team of John Berschback and Mike Case also needed a rally to beat ULS' Peter Birgbauer and Brad Cenko.

The Blue Devils trailed 5-3 in the first set before coming back to win 7-5, 6-1.

"That was one of their better matches," coach Berschback said of the two seniors who make up the No. 2 doubles team.

Karim Jina of ULS beat South's Preston Gaspar 6-3, 6-1 in first singles.

The story was a little different when the two teams met again last Saturday in a round-robin tournament at ULS and the Knights emerged with a 6-2 win.

"My freshman, Nick Lodzinski, did a great job to win fourth singles and although Tony Tocco lost 7-6, 6-3 to Shaun Jayakar, he played very well," coach Berschback said. "Jayakar is a very intelligent senior and for Tony to play him that close a match, shows how much he has improved.

"A.J. gave his all against Schumaker, but he could do no wrong in the tournament. He hit some great shots."

South's other victory in the tournament came at first singles with John Berschback and Case.

It's fitting that ULS would have such a strong team in the year that it christened its new tennis courts.

"The new facility is incredible," said Wood, who is as proud as a new father. "I've been around to most of the venues in the state and this is the finest I've seen."

There are eight courts located next to the Upper School and they're placed in such a way that spectators can watch several matches at once.

There's also a tennis center with an office and restroom facilities.

"It's totally self-sufficient," Wood said.

And it's going to get even better.

"We still have some landscaping to finish," Wood said. "Once that's done we'll know how the wind will affect the courts."

There's also going to be a wall of champions with team pictures of every ULS state championship team dating back to 1933.

"There's also a place for draw sheets so that spectators can see the entire tournament draw," Wood said.

Wood hopes that the Michigan High School Athletic Association will be impressed by the facility.

"We would be interested in hosting a Class C-D tournament some year," Wood said.

And the odds would be good that the Knights will be battling for the first-place trophy.

University Liggett School's tennis team got a strong message from Grosse Pointe South when the two state powers played to a 4-4 tie last Tuesday.

"It was very disappointing for us to tie South because we felt that with our veteran team, we should have had a little edge this year," ULS coach Bob Wood said after the Knights won six of the eight flights in last weekend's 30th annual ULS Invitational.

"We haven't beaten South very often and we felt this was our opportunity. That's why the tie was disappointing. It sent a message to our kids that South is a very good team and we used that to our advantage when we played them in the tournament."

This time the crosstown battle ended in a 6-2 victory for the Knights.

South's Nick Lodzinski won at No. 4 singles and the Blue Devils' No. 1 doubles team of John Berschback and Mike Case was also victorious.

ULS came back to win the last three doubles matches behind Eric Kim and Tyler Weisenbeck, C.T. Brown and Jeff Kenzie and Ralph Harik and Charlie Strong.

The tournament field, originally scheduled for eight teams, had to be cut to four because of weather conditions Saturday. The tournament then was played in a round-robin format.

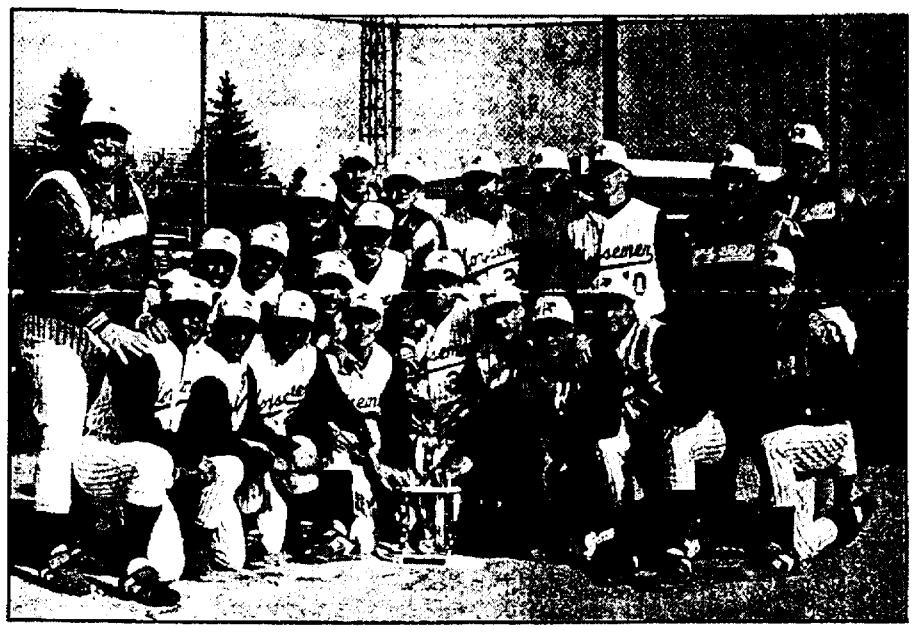

"This is the first time since 1988 that we've won six of the eight flights," Wood said.

South booters edge Utica

Courtney Schafer and Carrie Howe scored Grosse Pointe South's goals in the Blue Devils' 2-1 victory over Utica.

The win improved South's Macomb Area Conference Red Division record to 3-1-2. South is 6-2-4 overall.

Cardani's one-hitter carries Norsemen to Alpena title

There was a lot of pressure on Grosse Pointe North pitcher Jerry Cardani when he took the mound for the championship game of the Alpena Invitational last weekend.

Cardani knew he had to be at his best because he was facing Alpena left-hander Nick Alexander and the Norsemen didn't figure to score many runs against Alexander.

"He was rated as one of the top 25 prospects in the state," said North coach Frank Sumbera, "and when we faced him last year in the championship game he beat us 3-2."

Alexander turned in another outstanding performance last Saturday, but Cardani was even better as he blanked Alpena 1-0.

"Jerry threw a great game," Sumbera said. "He had a no-hitter until one out in the sixth."

After Alpena's hit, shortstop Steve Champine raced to his left, scooped up a ground ball, stepped on second and threw to first to complete an inning-ending double play.

It was second baseman Mike Ciaramitaro's turn to make a fielding gem in the seventh. Cardani walked the leadoff batter and he advanced to second with two out. Alpena's coach sent up a pinch hitter, who hit a liner between first and second.

Ciaramitaro dove for the ball, knocked it down and threw from his knees to first baseman Troy Bergman to end the game.

"It was a great play," Sumbera said. "If he doesn't get the ball to first in time, the tying run scores."

North scored the only run of the game in the fourth inning on singles by Bergman and Chris Morkut and Craig Ziolkowski's sacrifice fly.

The Norsemen also threatened in the first when Champine and Bergman singled with two out, but they were stranded at first and third when the next batter grounded out.

Champine also had two hits for North and Ziolkowski picked up one.

North reached the championship game with an 11-7 victory over Sault Ste. Marie.

The Norsemen overcame a 7-6 deficit with five runs in the sixth inning. Chris Sterr started the rally with a walk and singles by Rich Grosfield and Champine loaded the bases. Bergman followed with a single to drive in the tying run and Chris Mikula broke the deadlock with a two-run single. After a single by Morkut, Ziolkowski delivered a two-run single to cap the inning.

Ziolkowski went 3-for-3 with five RBI in the Sault Ste. Marie game.

The Blue Devils took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but North came back with three runs in the second, featuring RBI singles by Ziolkowski and Ciaramitaro and Sterr's sacrifice fly.

Sault Ste. Marie took a 4-3 lead with three runs in the third, but the Norsemen tied the game in the bottom of the third on a one-out double by Bergman, an infield single by Mikula, Morkut was hit by a pitch and Ziolkowski hit a sacrifice fly.

The Norsemen went ahead 6-4 with two runs in the fifth. With two out, Morkut was again hit by a pitch. Nick Aubrey ran for him and stole second and third. Ziolkowski singled Aubrey home, stole second and scored on Cardani's single.

But the Blue Devils regained the lead with three runs in the top of the sixth.

Mikula also had three hits for North, while Grosfield and Bergman collected two apiece.

"It rained all night Friday and most of Saturday morning," Sumbera said. "Usually we're done by 4 p.m., but we didn't get out of there until after 7. It was a long day, but well worth it."

North, which is 15-3 overall, won its only two games in the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division last week.

Champine pitched a three-hitter and struck out eight in the Norsemen's 6-2 win over Anchor Bay.

North never trailed after scoring three runs in the first. Grosfield doubled, Bergman walked and both scored on Mikula's double. Morkut followed with an RBI single.

The Norsemen picked up a run in the second when Cardani walked and eventually came in on Sterr's groundout. Anchor Bay scored twice in the third, but North added two more in the fourth on RBI singles by Cardani and Sterr.

Utica scored in the first but North tied the game in the second when Bergman doubled and scored on Mikula's single.

The Chieftains picked up another run in the third, but the Norsemen broke the game open with four in the sixth. Bergman again started the rally with a triple — his third hit of the game — and scored on Morkut's single. Cardani followed with an RBI single. After a walk to Ciaramitaro, Sterr hit a two-run single.

North added its final run in the seventh when Champine singled and came in on Mikula's groundout.

South streak reaches 10

Last Friday's 16-6 non-league victory over Harper Woods was the Blue Devils' 10th straight and improved their overall record to 12-5.

"Some of the kids were wondering if it was a record," said coach Dan Griesbaum.

"We won 11 straight in 1992 when we went to the regional final and we won 12 in a row in 1987 when we went to the Final Four before losing to Midland Dow."

South broke the Harper Woods game open early with four runs in the first inning and seven in the third.

Terry Brennan, Jason Mangol, Karl Freimuth and Nick Arrigo each collected two hits. Mangol and Freimuth knocked in two runs apiece.

Starter Pat Howe allowed two hits and one earned run to post the victory.

Earlier that day, South won its only Macomb Area Conference White Division game of the week when Mike Hamers blanked Port Huron 4-0.

"He was able to put everything where he wanted to," Griesbaum said.

"He was able to throw his off-speed pitches when he got behind in the count. In his last four outings, Mike has only allowed two walks."

Brennan, Chris McGratty and Andy Beaupre each had two hits for the Blue Devils, who are 6-1 in league play and trail unbeaten Sterling Heights by a game.

McGratty drove in two runs and Beaupre had one RBI.

South also posted an 8-5 non-league victory over U-D Jesuit.

The Blue Devils led 6-1 until the sixth inning when U-D rallied for four runs.

But Howe gave South some insurance in the sixth when he hit a two-run homer.

Mangol picked up the win, allowing six hits and three earned runs in five innings. Hamers pitched the last two frames and earned a save.

"Jason pitched a good game until he tired in the sixth," Griesbaum said.

"He allowed only one run and three hits through five innings."

Vandeweghe hit a triple and single and knocked in a run for the Blue Devils.

North still perfect in division softball

By Chuck Klonke

Grosse Pointe North's softball team chalked up two more Macomb Area Conference Blue Division victories last week after the Norsemen suffered a heartbreaking loss in a MAC crossover contest.

And the 6-5 defeat by Port Huron was even more costly because senior captain Sarah Post suffered a season-ending knee injury in a play at the plate.

"I think the girls went out flat after (the injury) happened, but they regrouped in practice Tuesday and were ready to play by Wednesday," said assistant coach Tim Van Eckoute.

Port Huron scored three runs apiece in the sixth and seventh innings to beat North 6-5.

The Norsemen took a 3-0 lead in the fifth inning and scored a run in the seventh, but the late rally fell short.

Megan Simon replaced Post at catcher and Kelly, who had been the designated hitter, moved to third base to take over for Simon.

"It was tough to move Megan behind the plate because she had been an all-district third baseman as a freshman, but she's caught before and Julie (Mack) is comfortable with her," Van Eckoute said.

"And Erin responded well to the move, too. In our next game with Anchor Bay, she had the first two balls hit to her and made nice plays on each of them."

Mack pitched a six-hitter and struck out four in North's 8-2 victory over Anchor Bay.

Sharon Smith led the Norsemen with four hits and drove in two runs, while Simon collected three hits and two RBI.

North scored a run in the first inning, added a pair of runs in the third and picked up one more in the fourth to open a 4-1 lead. The Norsemen broke the game open with four runs in the seventh.

The Norsemen had to battle from behind to beat Utica 9-7.

The Chieftains led 7-2 after the second inning, but Meg Guillaumin led a defensive effort that held Utica scoreless the rest of the way.

North erupted with five runs in the fourth inning, capped by Simon's two-run triple, to tie the game. The Norsemen took the lead in the fifth.

With one out, Lindsay Simmon doubled and scored on Smith's single. North picked up an insurance run inthe sixth on an error and Simmon's RBI double.

"Julie was upset with herself," Van Eckoute said. "After the second inning she told Bill (head coach Bill Taylor) 'That's it. I have to get my head in the game and start pitching better' and she did."

The Norsemen are 9-2 overall.

ULS runners beat first two Metro foes

The Knights, who are 6-2 overall, took 10 of 15 first places.

ULS was led by sophomore Jon Kish, who won the long jump with a leap of 18-feet-9 1/2.

He also ran the first leg of the winning 400 and 1,600-meter relays and scored in the 200 dash.

"Lutheran Northwest was the tough competition throughout the meet," said coach Phil Langford.

Blair Foust was fourth.

After the Crusaders took the first two spots in the 400, ULS came back with a 1-2 finish in the low hurdles. Light led teammate Karthiek Narala across the line.

Sonny Ford, Nowak and Mace McDonald finished first, second and fourth, respectively, in the 3,200.

Hamilton won the 200 with teammate Will Watson third.

Earlier, Nowak had second-place finishes in the 1,600 (4:32) and 3,200 (10:41) at the Toledo Relays.

Record long jump brightens Devils' day

Grosse Pointe South's girls track team lost its first meet in four years last week, but even in defeat the Blue Devils had something to brighten the day.

Sophomore Erin Smialek continued to shine in the long jump as she leaped 17-feet-2 1/2 in the 78-50 loss to Utica to break the five-year old South record of 17-1, held by Angela Drake.

Utica, which is undefeated this year, won with its depth in the sprints, hurdles and throwing events. South kept the meet close with its distance and jumping depth, but 1-2-3 finishes by the Chieftains in the 100 and 300-meter hurdles, the shot put and discus was too much for the Blue Devils to overcome.

Kate Crowley, Jonnie Vasse, Heidi Crowley and Kristin Nickel combined to outscored Utica 23-4 in the distance events.

Other bright spots for South were the performances of Sara Crowe, Liz Jarvis, Caitlin Hofmann, Isabel Roa, Kate Aiken and Bridget Horne.

Vasse broke the meet record in the 1,600 run with a time of 5:21. It shattered the old mark of 5:28, set in 1985.

Vasse returned to win the 800 in 2:25 and teamed with Crowe and the Crowleys to win the 3,200 relay in a season-best 10:04.

Smialek, on her sixth and final jump, leaped 16-11 to win the long jump. Her distance was a foot longer than the second-place effort.

North nips foe on Kotwick's goal

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

It took a while, but Sam Steinhebel's prayers were eventually answered Monday.

"I was praying for a goal," Grosse Pointe North's soccer coach said after Claire Kotwick scored with about three minutes remaining to give the Norsemen a 1-0 victory over Sterling Heights in a Macomb Area Conference White Division game.

"The weather was horrible. Everybody was slipping and sliding around. We had some chances, but couldn't buy a goal until Claire scored."

Kotwick's winning goal was a shot from the 18-yard line. The Stallions' goalie fielded the ball, but it squirted out of her hands and went into the net.

"It was nice to see Claire score because she's such a hard worker every game," Steinhebel said. "She's just non-stop. She's played a lot of defense, but we moved her up front to take advantage of her offensive ability."

Steinhebel said the victory, which kept the Norsemen tied with East Detroit atop the division standings with a 4-0-3 record, was the result of an excellent team effort.

Molly Peters recorded the shutout with help from her defense corps of sweeper Julia Rouls, stopper Erin Schmidt, Sarah Rahaim and Jessica Harrell.

"Molly is doing a great job for having never played goal before," Steinhebel said. "Her athletic ability really showed in our scoreless tie with South. She has six shutouts this year and has really been a pleasant surprise for us because we lost our No. 1 goalie with an injury early in the season."

Amy Nosek scored the only goal of the game in North's 1-0 win over East Detroit and Nosek had the Norsemen's lone goal in a 2-1 non-division loss to Ford II.

"I was concerned with our leadership at the start of the season because we had no returning seniors," Steinhebel said. "Three came out, but they were playing for the first time. But Andrea Muncy has done a great job as our captain. That's a difficult role for a junior, but she's done well and some of the other girls have stepped forward, too.

"It's been a difficult season for us because we've had to scramble around a lot because of injuries and illness. Sometimes we don't know from one game to the next how we're going to cover our bases, but we've been able to make the adjustments from game to game.

"I guess the best way to describe us would be a solid team that works hard all the time."

North has a 6-2-4 overall record.

Knights sparkle in the mud

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Bad weather seems to bring out the best in University Liggett School's girls soccer team.

Field conditions were horrible last Saturday when the Knights met Royal Oak Shrine in a non-league contest, but ULS played like it was bright and sunny as it beat Shrine, which was ranked 10th in the state in Class B-C-D, 6-0.

"They're mudders," coach David Backhurst said with a laugh. "I haven't seen that much hustle and jump from the team all season. Everybody played well. They must love to play in the rain and mud. They were making great sliding tackles all over the place."

Backhurst and Shrine's coach were debating whether to play the game or postpone it when the Shrine coach asked his players whether they wanted to play.

"That was his mistake," Backhurst said. "He never should have asked them because they said they wanted to play."

The weather conditions convinced Backhurst to move Abby Tompkins from sweeper to center-forward and Tompkins responded by scoring all six goals. The six goals broke the school record of four that teammate Casey Papa tied earlier this season.

"Abby had the game of her life," Backhurst said. "She looked like an All-American."

Tompkins opened the scoring three minutes into the game with a penalty kick that sailed just under the crossbar. A minute later she scored off a rebound and Tompkins made it 3-0 at halftime with another direct kick.

Tompkins continued her scoring barrage in the second half with three more goals.

"I moved Abby up front because she has a good long shot and I didn't think there would be much opportunity to dribble in for the short shot because of the slippery conditions," Backhurst said.

Backhurst said that he would probably leave Tompkins up front because Kristin Byron was playing well at sweeper.

"She did a great job at sweeper," the coach said. "I think that's her best position."

ULS outshot Shrine 34-15.

"But Shrine played most of the game without one of its better players, who turned her ankle," Backhurst said.

The Knights opened their four-victory week with a 5-1 non-league win over Oakland Christian.

Tompkins, who scored on a penalty kick in the first half, broke a 1-1 tie on another penalty kick four minutes into the second half.

Eight minutes later, Papa converted a rebound and freshman Millie Tompkins put the game out of reach with two goals.

"I didn't think we played well in the first half," Backhurst said. "We seemed very tentative."

Five minutes later, Papa stole the ball and scored the first of her two goals on a long shot.

"Casey is getting much better at making the shots from 20 to 25 yards out," Backhurst said.

Teitge scored again to give ULS a 3-0 lead and freshman Alex Brown completed the scoring in the final minute.

"Brooke and Ariadne are doing a nice job on the outside defense," Backhurst said. "They both give away a lot of pounds and inches to most of their opponents, but they're so quick on the jump and are tough to beat.

ULS had little trouble rolling past Harper Woods 10-0 in a Metro Conference game.

"I played most of my second-team players, freshmen and sophomores in the first half," Backhurst said. "They did a good job. They actually did a better job of passing than the first unit."

ULS had a 5-0 halftime lead on two goals apiece from freshmen Erin Ealba and Millie Tompkins. Papa scored the other Knights goal.

ULS is 6-4-2 after starting the season with three straight losses.

The Astros' David Harris allowed only two runs in three innings, while Jebby Boccaccio and Cole Van Assche played well in the outfield.

ULS girls top one foe

All eight University Liggett School girls competed in the maximum four events, but the Knights could do no better than a split in their Metro Conference track opener with Lutheran Northwest and Harper Woods.

ULS, which is 4-4 overall, was battling for first place right down to the final relay in the triangular meet, which was won by Harper Woods.

Erica Stock broke the Knights' freshman record when she cleared 4-feet-8 1/2 in the high jump. Freshman Amy Silverston won the shot put and finished third behind teammates Christina Oney and Brandy O'Neal in the discus.

Oney and Kristin Lingemann moved into second and 10th place, respectively, on the school's record sheet with a 1-2 finish in the 100-meter high hurdles.

Freshman Bisi Alli won the 200 in 28.8 and was second in the 100 in 13.5.

North pair places at Sterling

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

It was such a miserable day last Saturday that Pat Wilson gave his Grosse Pointe North boys track team the option of competing in the Sterling Heights Invitational or finding a place where it was warm and dry.

Frank Sumbera and Vince Meli were two who stayed around through the cold and rain and they were glad they did.

Both senior runners won medals at the meet, which draws most of the top track athletes in the area.

Sumbera was second in the 400-meter dash in a personal-best time of 53.3, while Meli grabbed a fourth-place medal in the 800 run.

"The conditions were horrible, but Frank dropped a second and a half off his best time," Wilson said. "He's doing a great job and has really helped our team. He runs in two relays and has won a couple of 400s. He gives us flexibility."

Wilson also likes the work ethic of Sumbera, who had played baseball at North until this season.

"He's worked hard from Day One," the coach said. "He started out with our more experienced sprinters and just blasted away."

Meli might have gained more from his 800 experience than just the fourth-place medal.

"This could be a valuable race for Vince, because he's never really been pushed before," Wilson said. "I was glad he got a chance to race. It should help him in the league meet and the regional."

North also won its two Macomb Area Conference White Division meets, rolling past L'Anse Creuse 87-50 and Anchor Bay 82-55.

Matt Atkinson and Jeff Blumenthal were double winners for the Norsemen against L'Anse Creuse. Atkinson won both hurdles races and Blumenthal posted personal bests in winning the shot put and discus.

Other individual winners were Tom Smyly, 1,600; Meli, 400; Nick Goerke, pole vault; and Steve Drader, high jump.

North also won two relays. The team of Chris Hirt, Sachin Shah, Meli and Smyly took first in the 3,200 relay, while the 400 relay team of Dave Massaron, Craig Hadgis, Chris Fici and J.R. Hiller also earned a first place.

Massaron won the 200 with a personal-best 23.9. He also had his best time in finishing second in the 100 to teammate Leonard Harris, who won the event in 11.2. Harris' time was also a personal record.

Atkinson again won both hurdles races. North also had firsts from Sumbera in the 400, Meli in the 800 and Hiller in the high jump.

The Norsemen swept the four relays. The 3,200 relay team of Hirt, Shah, Meli and Smyly remained unbeaten in dual meets. Sumbera, Paul Mooney, Hadgis and Matt Dula combined to win the 800 relay; Hiller, Massaron, Hadgis and Harris won the 400 relay; and the team of Harris, Sumbera, Smyly and Meli won the 1,600 relay.

"Three of the four are football players," the coach said. "It reminded me of my days at Lakeview where our relay teams were made up of football players."

Tips on selecting a contractor/builder

By Kathleen M. Wilbur
Special Writer

As spring approaches, consumers seem to associate the warm weather with paying taxes, spring housecleaning and moving forward with many projects they tended to procrastinate on during the cold winter months.

As the director of the Department of Consumer and Industry Services, I can tell you that requests for information about our many programs and services seem to increase twofold in the springtime. With that in mind, I want to spring forward and provide you with some helpful consumer tips.

Tips on selecting a builder/contractor

• Make sure the builder/contractor gets all necessary permits — building permits, electrical, plumbing, or other special variances — before the project begins.

• Confirm that the contractor has a valid license to do the work. The law requires that any building or remodeling contractor must have a state license if the work totals $600 or more for labor and materials. To verify the status of the license, call the department's License Verification Unit at (900) 555-8374.

• Get a written contract. The contract should include:

— The full name, business address, phone number and license number of the contractor and the salesperson who signed the contract.

— Detailed specifications for the job: materials, equipment, model numbers, colors, grades and a detailed list of expenditures.

— Start-up and completion dates to include unavoidable delays due to weather or unexpected circumstances, but with recourse if work slows down or stops without justification.

— A written warranty for labor and materials with information on about how long the work is guaranteed.

— A guarantee that the contractor has both workers' compensation and general liability insurance in case a worker is injured or unexpected damage occurs in the course of the project.

— A statement that the contractor is responsible for getting all permits and variances as well as getting the required safety inspections upon completion of the project.

— Any changes or modifications to the plan should be added to the original contract to include itemized costs for these changes.

— A provision for refunds or credits.

— Arrangements for site clean-up.

— A statement that contractor will provide signed lien waivers or release from suppliers, subcontractors or other workers to make contractor liable for all bills.

— The final costs, along with an agreed upon payment schedule, should be spelled out in the contract before you and your contractor sign it.

• Make sure you understand everything in the contract. You have three days to cancel a contract signed in your home; however, you have no right to cancel if you sign the contract in the builder's place of business.

• Ask the contractor for references and/or samples of work.

• Get estimates to compare costs, materials and how long it will take to complete the project.

• Never pay for the entire job in advance; make scheduled payments as the work progresses. Before final payment, make sure everything is completed satisfactorily.

• Ask for a paid in full receipt upon final payment along with a final "waiver of lien."

'Pond Workshop' to be held at Lapeer County farm

A "Pond Workshop" will be held at Nicklas' Farm, in Lapeer County, on Wednesday, May 14, from 6 p.m. until dark.

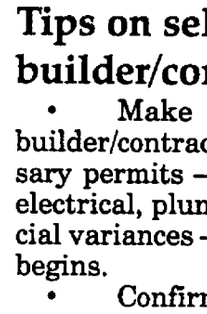

The speaker will be Dr. Don Garling, MSU Extension specialist in the fisheries and wildlife department.

Topics will include: General considerations for building, stocking and maintaining a pond; determining what the pond will be used for and how to achieve those goals; misconceptions concerning multiple uses for ponds; and controlling unwanted pests, including weeds.

The "Managing Michigan Ponds for Sport Fishing" bulletin will be available for sale at the workshop for $4.

Directions to Nicklas' Farm: Brocker Road is approximately eight miles south of I-69 and M-24 (Lapeer Road). When traveling north, turn west onto Brocker Road.

Stay on Brocker Road for approximately 31/2 miles (look for signs). The pond will be on the south side of the road. For additional information, contact the Lapeer County Extension office at (810) 667-0341.

MARGIN BARGAINS

When you are shopping for Adjustable Rate Mortgages (ARMs), the "margin" is almost as important as the initial rate. The margin is the percentage point above the average yields for Treasury notes on which future rate adjustments will be calculated. Let's compare two hypothetical one-year ARMs. The first may have an initial interest rate of 7% with a 2.5 margin, while the second begins at 6 7/8% with a 2.75 margin. Both loans have rate caps of 2%. Suppose that at the end of the first year of the loan, the average of the one-year Treasury note yield has been 5 1/2%. For each loan, the lenders will add the margin to that 5 1/2% average yield. Thus the interest rate for first loan would increase from 7% to 8%, and the second would go from 6 7/8% to 8 1/4%. While the first ARM had a slightly higher initial rate, it will have lower rates in subsequent years, unless the Treasury note rates increase enough to activate the annual caps on the amount of the increase. There is a wide variance among margins in ARMs offered by competing lenders, and this should be a factor when you decide on your loan.

Laura resides and works in Grosse Pointe as a top realtor for Coldwell Banker Schweitzer covering the Grosse Pointes, St. Clair Shores and Harper Woods. For professional advice on all aspects of buying or selling, call her at (313) 886-4200 or (313) 201-8070.

Dandelions, daylilies, violets and lilacs for ingredients

By Ellen Probert Williamson

Are you worrying that your lawn may be suffering an invasion of taraxicum officionale this spring? It is a worry that occurs annually when we observe the first cheerful dandelions starring the grass.

This little flower/weed is of Persian origin and the word officionale in its name refers to the medicinal qualities long associated with this plant.

Dandelions were known in ancient Greece. They are considered by many biblical scholars to have been one of the "bitter herbs" referred to in the Old Testament. Of course, most gardeners striving for a perfect lawn still consider them a weed rather than a bitter herb.

There are those who consider the dandelion a garden ornament and respect it for its medicinal and culinary properties. Then there are the lawn experts who try tirelessly to eliminate it.

Sometimes this leads the lawn experts to do inadvertent good deeds, such as the local resident who has taken to cutting his next door neighbor's grass not out of friendliness, but from a fervent desire to prevent dandelions from crossing the driveway and infesting his lawn.

But the dandelion is not all bad. Its flowers are beautiful and its roots do have value. More than 100,000 pounds of dandelion roots are imported by the United States every year. They are used in the manufacture of medicines, particularly in remedies for liver diseases.

Dandelions have a high vitamin value and both the leaves and the flowers are edible. Dandelion wine is an old-fashioned beverage made annually by people all over the country.

In Victorian times, a lady was always pleased to receive a bouquet of dandelions from her beau because, in the language of flowers, which everyone knew, this meant "I am faithful to you." The flower itself was a symbol of love.

Children love dandelions. Many of us can remember slitting the stems and putting them in a glass of water to watch the stems curl up into spirals, or with a big needle and thread, stringing the blossoms to make a lei to wear around our necks.

Very young dandelions are good in salads — leaves as well as blossoms — and the leaves, when cooked, are much like spinach. Dandelion buds, sauteed in butter, can be substituted for mushrooms in your favorite recipe.

The name dandelion refers, of course, to the lion's tooth name, "dent de lion," and to the toothed edges of its leaves. With imagination, you can perhaps compare the flower to a lion's mane, and the leaves to the jagged fangs of this noble member of the cat family.

Another edible flower which will soon appear in our gardens is the daylily. Daylilies have been grown for centuries by the Chinese as a cash crop and sold in the food markets.

Dried daylilies are exported to Chinese grocery stores worldwide under the names gumjum or gunstoy. Many of us enjoy the lovely colors and graceful shapes of the flowers but few people think of them as an important food source.

Daylilies are very hardy and have superior ability to withstand drought and compete with weeds. They require almost no care and are almost regarded as wild plants. So prolific are their blooms that most people are not aware that each one only lasts for a single day.

The elegance of daylilies lends them to all flower arrangements. Their flavor is similar to lima beans or chestnuts but a little sweeter. They have a very high content of vitamins, minerals and protein.

The flowers can be chopped and added to scrambled eggs or omelets. Torn blossoms are a nice addition to a salad. The flowers can be used as cups for chicken salad, or can be dipped in batter and French-fried. They can also be frozen.

Violets, like dandelions, tend to creep into our lawns and gardens and are wonderful salad ingredients too. They are actually richer in vitamin C than oranges.

The lovely lilacs of spring are also a good salad ingredient. Candied or crystallized with sugar, lilacs will keep their beautiful color and a degree of their scent almost indefinitely and can be used to decorate cakes or desserts or just to serve as confections. An ice mold filled with lilac blossoms is wonderful in a punch bowl at a party.

Even though the scent of lilacs is so strong and unforgettable it is virtually the only flower scent that cannot be captured by the perfumer by any means and therefore all the lilac perfumes available today are synthetic. The natural scent is too volatile and diffuses into the air so rapidly that it defies any method of capture.

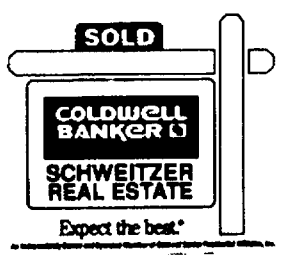

We look forward to all the blossoms of spring and summer, not only for their color, scent and form, but as a garnish and an ingredient in the foods we eat. Even dandelions somehow seem more friendly when viewed as something more than a perfect-lawn pest.

Lilly and Lilly's masterful group of Pennsylvania artisans (based in Turtle Creek) create the country's most exquisite custom made, frameless wood cabinetry for the home, kitchen and bath.

"They're definitely a step or two above the rest," says Pindzia. "Their cabinets bring warmth and personality to a room, and are so finely finished they're practically irresistible to touch."

The doors feature hand carved designs in natural flowing shapes and Lilly and Lilly's signature oval handles. Stylized designs are also available in a variety of standard and custom forms. "Every option is available, and customers should remember they're only limited by how far their imaginations will take them," added Pindzia.

"Our showroom is the only place you can immediately inspect the complete line of Lilly and Lilly cabinets, woods and designs," says Pindzia. "We welcome the opportunity to offer Lilly and Lilly to both consumer and fellow craftsmen alike." Riverside Custom Design + Remodeling can be reached by calling (313) 886-3188. Showroom hours are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Evening appointments can also be arranged.

Lilly hand-crafted cabinets are made of quality woods and veneers made of cherry, mahogany, hard maple or walnut.

Spring rain may bring mold and mildew

Spring rains bring damp weather and dampness is an invitation to mold and mildew to develop, said Cheryl Krysiak of the Michigan State University Extension Service.

Mold and mildew — both members of the fungus family — have an odor and appear as dark gray blotches on surfaces. Like fungi, mold and mildew need moisture to grow. They thrive in humid, poorly ventilated and improperly cleaned places.

- Shower stalls and tubs.
- Toilet bowls and tanks.
- Basements.
- Unventilated storage areas, luggage and trunks.
- Collecting trays at the bottoms of frost-free refrigerators.
- Fan blades and air conditioner coils.
- Air vents and filters in heating and cooling systems.
- Carpet backings, especially on floors below ground level or where spills were improperly dried.
- Closet and shelf walls.
- The water chambers of dehumidifiers, humidifiers and vaporizers.

To remove mold and mildew:

- Use disinfectants such as a chlorine bleach mixture — one-half to one cup of liquid household bleach to a gallon of water. Rinse and wipe as dry as possible. Keep windows open and exhaust fans going until the surfaces are dry.
- Use anti-mildew tub and tile products. They will remove the stain and help prevent future mildew growth.

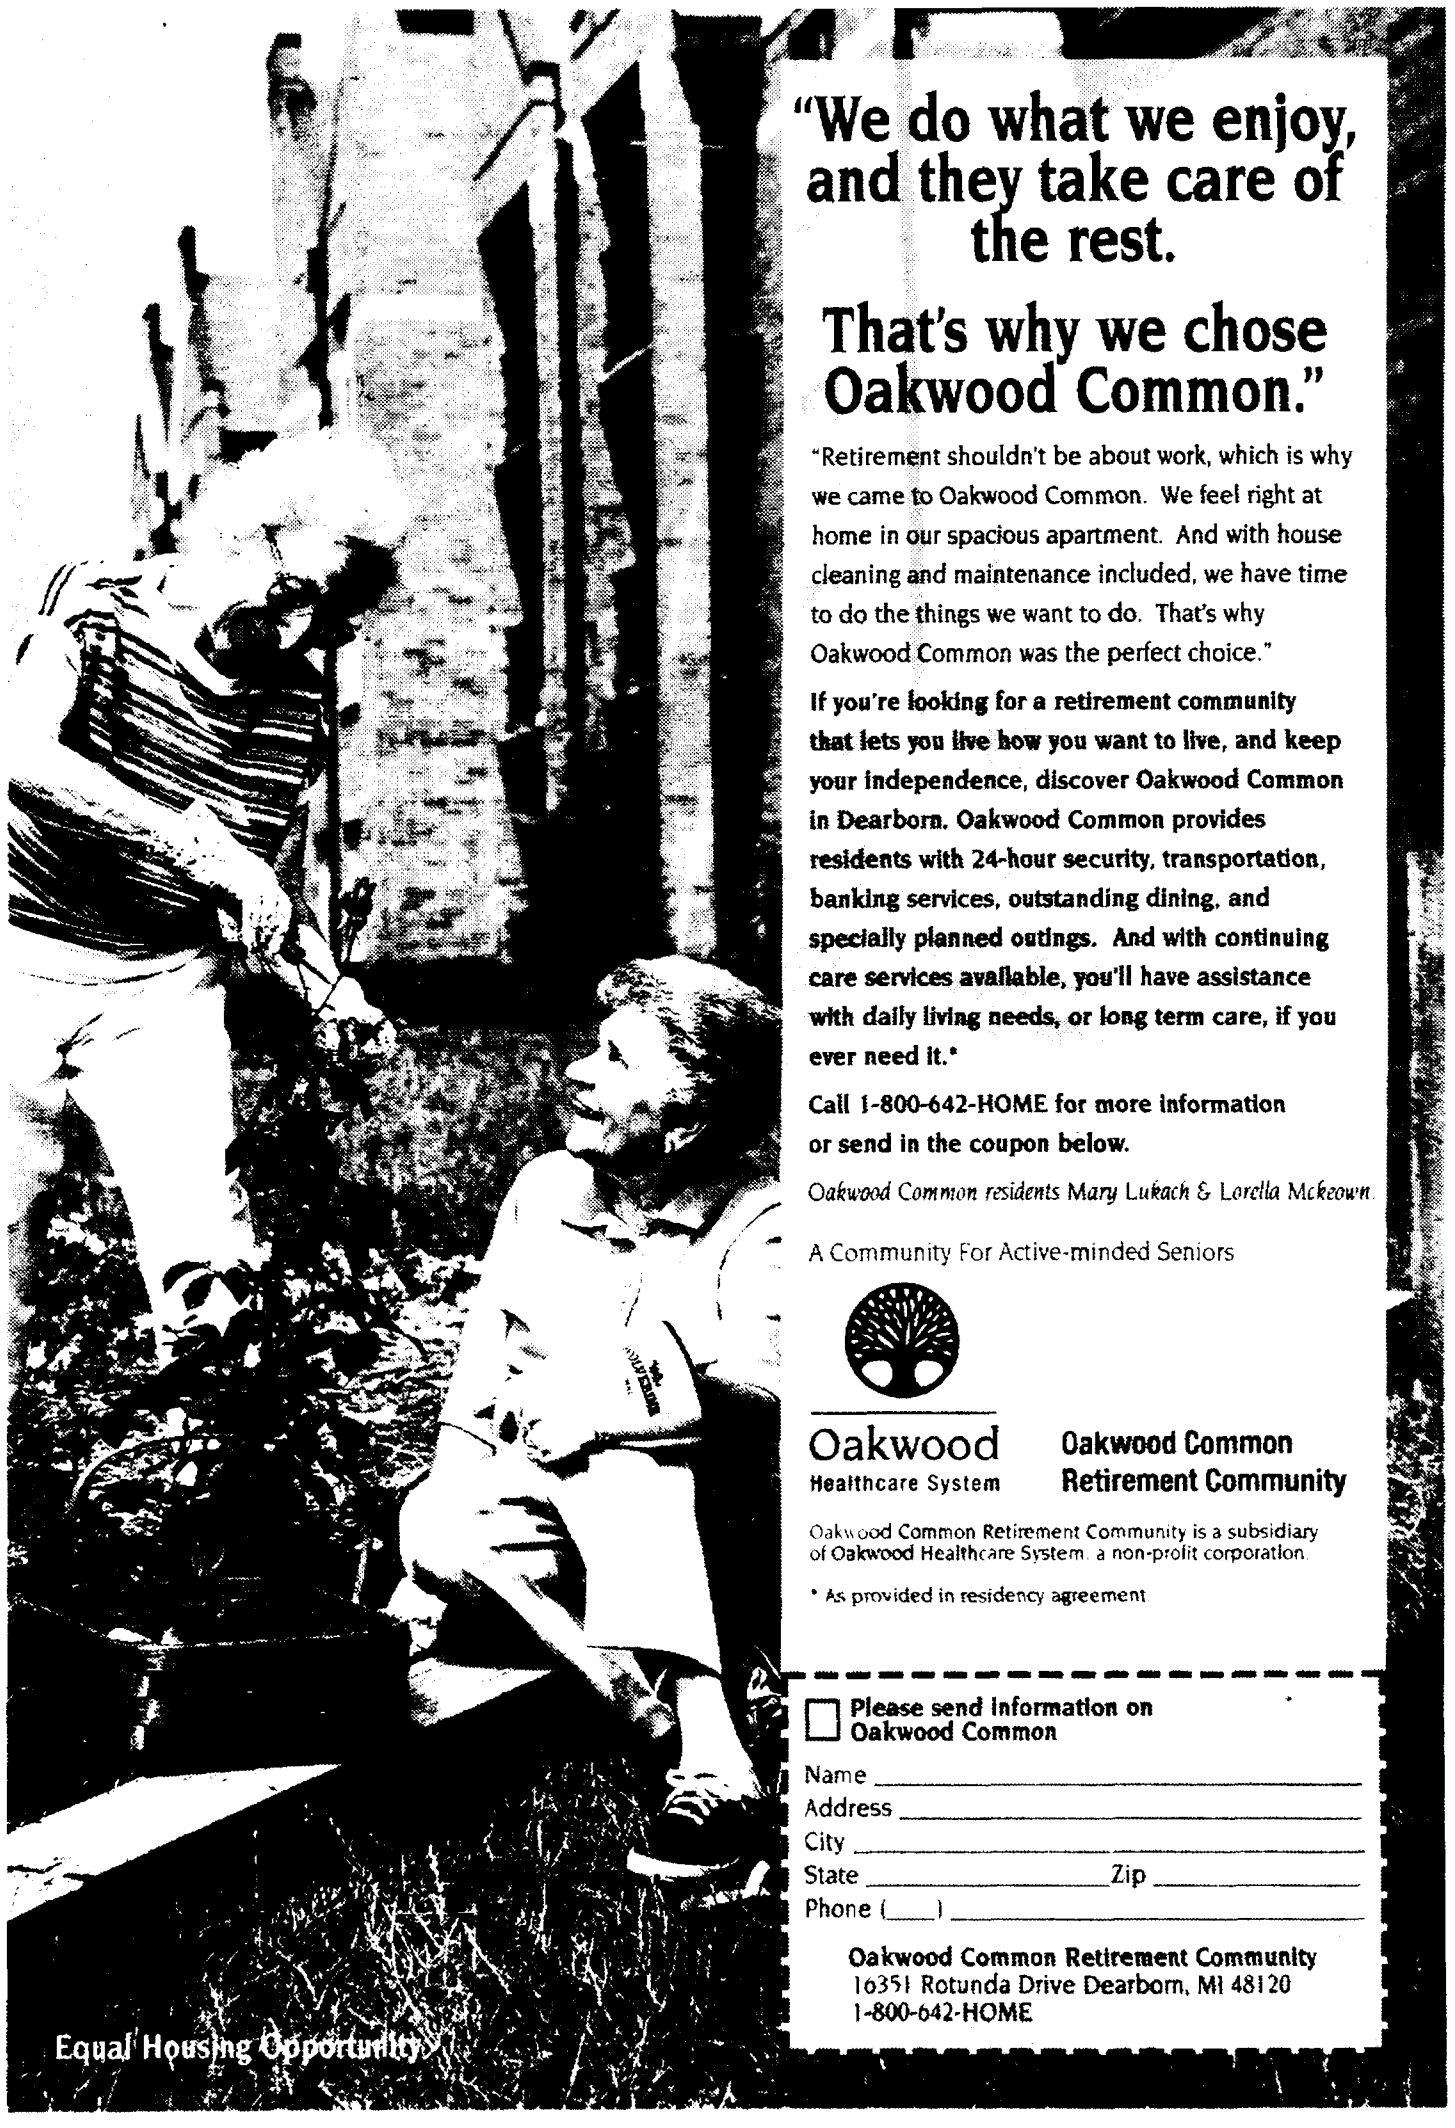

To prevent mildew problems in the future:

- Control causes of dampness. Make sure drainage is adequate around basement walls. Consider waterproofing concrete and other masonry walls above ground. Spread a layer of moisture barrier material (plastic) over soil in a crawl space.
- Remove moisture with good ventilation. Drier outside air will absorb excess moisture when brought into the house. Use an electric fan to circulate air. Air conditioners and dehumidifiers can help control humidity. Do not operate dehumidifiers below 65 degrees Fahrenheit as frost may form on the coils and damage them.
- Turn the furnace on in a damp, musty building. Open doors and windows to let moist air out.
- Keep closets, basements, bathrooms and other areas as clean as possible. Some surfaces may require regular care with detergent suds, special cleaners or disinfectants such as chlorine bleach.
- Store home furnishings only when they are clean and dry. Dirt on surfaces can cause mildew on fabrics.
- Use water-repellent sprays, mildew inhibitors, fungicides and chemicals to absorb moisture and help keep fabrics and surfaces moisture and mold-free.

More information may be found in the MSU Extension brochure E-2109, "Moisture Problems in the Home," available from the Macomb County MSU Extension Service office for $1.50.

WHAT TO DO WHEN YOU FIND YOURSELF...

Home Alone

The kids are grown and have moved away. Family dinners for six have become quiet meals for one or two. The mountain of laundry in the laundry room no longer hides the floor. Now that the nest is empty, you are freer to do as you please.

Now what does an empty-nester do? "Downsize," advises Alex M. Lucido, broker/owner of Lucido & Associates, 19455 Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods. There are a number of advantages to moving to a smaller home, although not all may be well known to the typical person considering such a move.

The most striking economic benefit is the Once-in-a-Lifetime Exclusion (IRS provision 1706) which recognizes the tax-exempt status of up to $125,000 in gains made from the sale of a house. The provision is available on a one-time basis only, to those 55 and over.

For homeowners who are weary of the demands of maintaining a large home, such a tax break is only the first in a number of benefits worth considering. Although the real estate market is tight, bungalows and ranches are more readily available than larger dwellings. So, the advantages of living in these affordably priced homes, and more suitably sized are significant.

Smaller homes require less upkeep than their larger counterparts. You've spent the last 40 years slaving away at a job which enabled you to afford a larger home but limited the amount of time you had to enjoy it; now is the time to reorganize your priorities.

With a smaller home, you can bet on more modest expenses for things like lawn service, snow removal, utilities, and taxes. And the time per day needed to maintain and care for your home, inside and out, won't eat up precious 'play time.'

"The physical and economical upkeep of a large home is tremendous," says Lucido. "A two- or three-bedroom brick bungalow or ranch is a manageable alternative, one that still offers independence for those who choose it. Security is a key issue for down-sizers as well, since smaller homes are less likely targets for theft.

Income properties are another possibility. Their appeal lies in the financial comfort of seeing income generated on the asset you've just purchased. The flats are often spacious. Lucido's firm even assists in finding a suitable tenant to help with the maintenance and care of the property . In exchange, there is a reduced rental fee - a setup which benefits owner and tenant alike. There is something reassuring about a friendly neighbor. Not only the one next door, but just up the steps, who is there to help when needed.

Condominiums, though scarce in Grosse Pointe, are more available in Macomb County. These are often state-of-the-art residences which are popular alternatives to ranches and bungalows. For those who wish to be free of home maintenance responsibilities, condos are a good option. The water views and lakefront access are unbeatable, and they still provide the space necessary for visiting grandchildren.

Searching for the perfect smaller space need not be traumatic or exhausting. A small firm like Lucido & Associates offers all the perks of a bigger firm. They can provide you with multiple listing services, local board affiliations, advertising and Internet links. In addition, and most of all, there is a degree of dedication and of personal commitment, which is invaluable in today's impersonal world.

"I live here, my office is here, I was born and raised here," notes Lucido. "I am dedicated to seeing these east side communities prosper."

Alex M. Lucido is a licensed realtor with over 15 years of experience. If you are considering a move, let Lucido & Associates, (313) 882-1010, show you how they can coordinate the details and expedite your move. Their commitment to personal service can simplify your life.

Does the thought of a retirement community create visions of a quiet milk toast environment? Perhaps living tucked away from the rest of the world, well think again! Today's retirement community is vital, vibrant and connected. The administrators of these communities have taken great care and pains to create settings which appeal to seniors looking for a new niche. Owned and operated by Oakwood Healthcare System, it is designed to complement the lifestyles of today's active retirees. It was created to accommodate their residents' with varying degrees of independence. Oakwood offers three types of residence options.

Close to shopping, churches, cultural events and entertainment, Oakwood promises the finest in healthcare. And the fact that Oakwood is a life-care community is a reassuring bonus.

Independent Living apartments come in a variety of sizes and layouts. All offer private patios or balconies, fully equipped kitchens, washers and dryers, and indoor storage. Bonnie Roy, an Oakwood Common marketing representative, is enthusiastic about the quality and level of service available.

"We offer housekeeping and linen service weekly, as well as interior maintenance. Scheduled courtesy transportation is always available, which comes in handy when we go off on one of our many day trips. Our residents are welcome to bring in their own cars, if they like, but the courtesy transportation is always at your fingertips."

Assisted Living apartments are available for people who require a greater level of attention due to physical or mental limitations. In these private apartments, mementos and favorite furnishings are still welcome since they contribute to a familiar, more home-like setting. Staff support is flexible, with services like nutrition monitoring, personal care, and medical assistance. If needed, housekeeping services are also available.

Residents can live as independently as anywhere else if they choose, and are part of a closely-knit community where neighbors reach out quickly to make newcomers feel at home. The minimum age for entrance is 60, though few members join this young. Ironically, most new residents regret not making the move sooner. Roy elaborates on this.

"A couple who recently joined the community had spent one Sunday entertaining a visiting couple for the day. Subsequently, the gentleman called me to report that their friends were so impressed that they wanted me to send them a brochure

Visitors are always welcome. With summer just around the corner, many of Oakwood's members will be attending museum exhibitions, taking in the opera, and strolling along one of the many on-campus nature trails. This Mother's Day promises to be especially busy - the annual resident's-only Saturday tea and Sunday brunch are perennial favorites.

We spend our whole working lives planning for the perfect retirement. As obligations diminish, we have more time to explore new opportunities. Oakwood Common is an attractive option, a secure and sumptuous way of life.

Oakwood Common Retirement Community is dedicated to its mission to positively impact the senior community. Please call (313) 441-3100 or 1-800-642-HOME to request a brochure or arrange a tour. Oakwood can make your dreams come true.

Home improvements top tax refund 'to do' list

The average tax refund in 1995 was $1,143 per person, according to the IRS. The anticipation of getting that refund check in the mail has a lot of homeowners fantasizing about their dream home.

But today's homeowner is more interested in using that refund for remodeling their current home than saving for a down payment on a new home. During the last 20 years, the typical single-family home grew in size by 20 percent, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

"This is a very busy time of year for us and other companies that provide home improvement products," says Patrick Bushey of Pella Window and Door Co., the local representative of Pella Windows and Doors. "We have many customers examining options for using their tax refund to buy products that improve the comfort and value of their homes."

Home improvement projects, particularly high-performance replacement windows, can add value to the home in two ways, said Bushey. First, improvements enhance the home's energy efficiency and reduce heating and cooling bills. Second, the renovations can positively impact a home's resale value.

A popular home improvement trend at tax time is remodeling to achieve the open feel found in many newer homes. That often means adding a bay window to the family room or kitchen, Bushey observes.

High-performance replacement windows can add value to your home, as well as easy maintenance.

"A bay window can really update a room, opening it up to natural light and making it appear larger," Bushey says. "Many homeowners are opting for some unique features, such as mini-blinds or fabric shades between the panes of glass. The blinds provide an easy way to control the amount of sunlight coming through the bay window, plus the blind is positioned out of the way of dust and damage."

Residential lots for sale in Grosse Pointe Park

By Margaret K. Fitzgerald

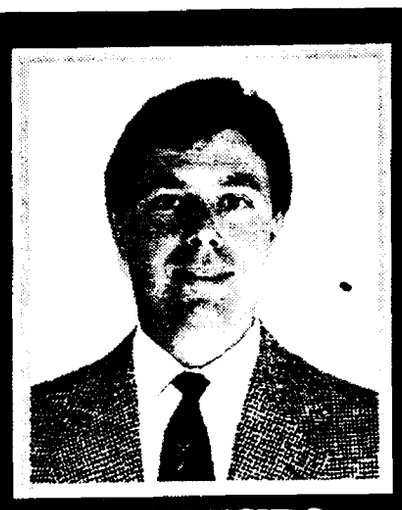

Empty-nesters searching for the ultimate building opportunity need look no further. In a joint venture with the Blake Co., R.G. Edgar and Associates is offering a number of residential lots for sale (lot prices begin at $210,000) on the former Lydia Morrison estate, between Bishop Road and Ellair Place in Grosse Pointe Park.

As the exclusive builder for the project, the Blake Co. will create homes of distinctive architectural detail, in traditional or French country design.

A variety of lot sizes are available, some overlooking Lake St. Clair. For buyers, this is a prime opportunity to collaborate on a beautifully designed home tailored to their specific needs.

For more information, contact the offices of R.G. Edgar and Associates at (313) 886-6010.

QUESTION: We have lived in our house for over 25 years. We're considering moving and we'd like to stay in this area. What do we look for in our next home?

There are different answers for different people. Some of the factors to consider...

- Tax Consequences
- Children/Grandchildren visiting
- One floor living vs. two floor living
- Maintenance/living expenses reduced

Antiques

Birdhouses and hanging feeders were made of gray and sandstone-colored clays.

One line of vases and planters was made to resemble tree trunks. Another line featured realistic frogs in sizes from a few inches to a foot long.

Garden figures were popular. Weller made gnomes, animals and birds in the 1930s and 1940s. Bulge-eyed dogs, happy ducks, drunken ducks and banjo frogs were available. You could get a table shaped like a toadstool, a strawberry jar or a sundial.

The most unusual garden pottery was the line of sprinklers. A 1930s ad mentioned a frog sprinkler that threw the water 16 feet. The sprinklers were made from figures that had been drilled so the metal sprinkler head and hose connection could be inserted.

Many of the garden pieces were not marked and are still unrecognized by some collectors. The jardinieres sell for hundreds of dollars; the gnomes are bringing more than $1,000. Some sprinklers fetch more than $5,000.

Q. My yellow-and-red tall pitcher is made of crackle glass. How old is it?

A. Crackle glass was originally made by the Venetians in the 16th century. Most of what we find today dates from the 1800s or later.

Crackle glass was popular during the 1920s and 1930s, when several different dinnerware patterns were made. The United States Glass Co. made a craquel pattern in 1924.

•

Q. My mother left me her necklace with beads of carved peach pits. They're carved into Buddha shapes. No two are alike. Is it valuable?

A. Carving peach pits was a popular pastime in America as late as the 1930s.

Very fine peach-pit carving was originally done in the Orient, where entire scenes were shaped into the pit.

Q. I purchased a piece of furniture at a flea market. The dealer called it a "Queen Anne sideboard." It's a sideboard with drawers and a long, low mirror attached to the back. Could it be real Queen Anne?

A. When Queen Anne was alive, a "sideboard" was the term used for a serving table without drawers. After Queen Anne's death in the late 1700s, drawers were added to sideboards.

The mirror is a good clue to the age of your reproduction. Mirrors were scarce in the 1700s.

Queen Anne-style furniture was first made in the early 1800s. It is characterized by cabrioles, graceful curves and the use of walnut and decorative veneer. You probably own a Queen Anne-style piece made about 1915.

Q. I started collecting the Flags of All Nations trading cards from Sweet Caporal cigars. Recently, I found one advertising Jack Rose cigars. Any ideas?

A. The American Tobacco Co. sold its products under many different names. The company used the same cards as premiums for more than one cigarette, cigar or chew. The circa 1895 Flags of All Nations series can be found with Sweet Caporal, Jack Rose, Scrap Iron Scrap, Derby Little Cigars and Hustler Little Cigars on the back.

Q. I found a Junior G-Man badge made of shiny metal. Does it have any value?

A. Junior G-Man badges are Post premiums from the Melvin Purvis FBI radio show in 1936 and 1937. Purvis was a real-life FBI hero. His radio shows were stories "drawn from the files of the FBI." Junior G-Man Corps premiums were offered in 1936 and included a Girls' Division badge. Premiums from 1937 were for the Law and Order Patrol.

The 1997 Old Farmer's Almanac Homeowner's Companion

Is the caulk around your bathtub shriveled, chipped or downright disgusting? Has grandma's old rocking chair been in the refinishing process for nine months? Is the leaky faucet in the bathroom keeping you awake at night?

The words remodel, repair, refinish and repaint evoke images in homes everywhere of sore thumbs, headaches, empty wallets and stressed-out spouses. Regardless of whether you live in a new rambler or a 205-year-old colonial, The 1997 Old Farmer's Almanac HomeOwner's Companion is here to help.

The third annual HomeOwner's Companion is constructed of informative articles, cautionary tales, and useful tips, and is available for $3.99 at newsstands, supermarkets and home-improvement stores everywhere.

HomeOwner's Companion editor Georgia Orcutt describes the publication as an essential how-to reference guide designed for homeowners and buyers of all ages and lifestyles. "Our 1997 edition is solidly built with articles to help readers remodel, fix, clean and improve where they live. We offer 10 quick cleaning tips to spruce up your house, advice from a master plumber, and answers to things you may have always wondered about wood. We try to save people money by advising them about projects they should not undertake."

If your list of home-improvement projects is growing long, don't be afraid to admit that you might not be able to do it all yourself. Some projects require more work and skill than you may expect, so hiring an expert would be the wisest choice to make.

The HomeOwner's Companion suggests that you leave projects such as sanding floors, repainting brick, removing glued-down linoleum and installing stone tile to specially trained professionals.

Have you ever polished your floor with club soda to make it sparkle, or rubbed your stainless steel sink with olive oil to remove streaks? If not, be sure to tear out the perforated "Guide to Cleaning, Polishing and Freshening Your Home" that is found in every HomeOwner's Companion.

This resource chart is packed with hints on bathroom and kitchen cleaning, and it has recipes for a variety of mix-them-yourself concoctions for clearing clogged drains, removing rust and eliminating stains and streaks on windows and glass.

For those interested in remodeling the yard around their house, the HomeOwner's Companion offers some handy horticultural advice, including "Six Little-Known Gardening Secrets."

Two insider bits of information are "Don't try to grow watermelon if you live in the north" and "Never try to remove all the rocks from your garden." Other articles illustrate how to grow a three-season perennial garden and methods of breaking new ground for starting a garden where one hasn't existed before.

Finally, regarding that green, moldy caulk surrounding your tub or shower stall...as horrible as it sounds, you need to remove the old caulk and completely clean the joint before applying a new seal. Or, if that's out of the question, you could repaint the bathroom to match the fungal jungle green or rust-stain rose color of the mold. Whichever you prefer!

Home Tips

AWAY WITH ANTS — In California, we have ant problems throughout the year. We use our vacuum cleaner with the hose attachment to pick them up.

The fine dust inside the machine will suffocate these pests. Make sure you have dust in the bag, in case you have installed a new paper bag.

If using it around the sink, take care not to pick up water unless you are using a wet/dry vacuum. Try to locate where they are entering the house and either spray ant poison or plug the entry point with caulking.

One of our problems was, the ants would go up the exterior wall into the attic and then come down inside the walls and enter the room at the plug-ins. I sealed these areas with expanding foam spray. A little of this material goes a long way. Larry C., Rowland Heights, Calif.

OLD BEDSPREAD — We changed the paint and draperies in one of our bedrooms, which made the queen-size spread obsolete.

I put the two wrong sides of the quilted cotton spread in a vertical fold, right sides up on top and bottom. After stitching around all four sides (top stitching), I have an ideal coverlet for a daybed or single bed.

WEDDING GIFT — I have a tip for a wedding or shower gift that's always a big hit.

Buy a three-ring cookbook or a file box with blank recipe cards in it. Before the big event, distribute the blank cards or pages to relatives and friends of the couple. Ask them to write their favorite recipe on the card and be sure they sign it.

Reassemble the book or box with the recipes and you have a unique and memorable gift that the newlyweds will enjoy forever. Chris L., Washington, Ill.

SPRING HOME & GARDEN
Grosse Pointe News
& CONNECTION

Beautify your yard with an easy-to-build pond

If you really enjoy being in your yard and would like to give it that extra dimension to make it even more enjoyable, as well as the envy of the neighborhood, here's a great suggestion — put in your own garden pond! Too much trouble? Don't know how to do it? Through new technology, all these worries are needless.

Installing your own garden pond is simple, maintaining it is easy, and best of all, your pond will provide years of trouble-free enjoyment.

Ponds Around the World

European gardens, particularly in Great Britain, southern France, northern Italy, Holland and Germany, almost always feature a pond.

Several years ago, Tetra introduced a flexible EPDM Fish-Safe Liner. This liner allows homeowners to free-form a yard pond efficiently and easily, in whatever shape is best suited for the terrain or the homeowner's needs.

This liner can withstand the warmest summers and the coldest winters and is available in sizes big enough to create ponds almost 100 feet in diameter.

Through Tetra/Secondnature, a full line of products and complete information on constructing a pond are now available.

How do you construct a garden pond? Start by selecting a location on your property where the ground is fairly even, although, because of the flexibility of the liner, some leveling can be achieved when digging your pond. The pond should be placed where it will get approximately six hours of sunlight per day.

While you can place your pond anywhere, it is not recommended to place it directly under trees, since falling leaves can foul the water and tree roots will make digging difficult.

Using a heavy garden hose or a rope, free-form your pond design to conform to your landscaping scheme.

When constructing your pond, dig both a shallow area and a deep area. Fish will feed on insects in the shallow area, and it is the ideal place for potted plants, like lilies.

The deep area will provide security for your fish and protect them from birds and small animals. Depending on your climate, the deep area of your pond should be anywhere from 18 to 40 inches, and the shallow area from 4 to 12 inches.

After digging out your pond location, line the ground with sand, carpet padding or ideally with an underliner. This will protect the liner against sharp, protruding objects like roots and rocks.

To create that professional look, build a rock border around your pond, allowing the rocks to overlap the edge of the pond by 1 or 2 inches. You can landscape back around the pond and even build a patio, if desired.

Easy Maintenance

Maintaining your pond is very easy. Tetra has an economical, permanent pond filter and air pump, as well as a full line of water chemicals and foods, to ensure that your fish will prosper. If you want to add the grace and beauty of a waterfall or fountain to your pond, Tetra even offers a powerful and reliable water pump. Tetra's external filter allows complete maintenance without ever going in the pond.

What kind of fish should you put in your pond? The hardiest are large common or Comet goldfish. Depending on the size of your pond, these hardy fish will grow rapidly and can withstand the worst climates. As long as the water in your pond does not freeze to the lowest depths, these fish can survive the cruelest winters.

You also can select the most prized pond fish — beautiful and exotic Koi. These are increasingly available throughout the United States, and although not quite as hardy as the common goldfish, they are treasured pond fish that have the potential to live for decades.

What should you do in the winter? Nothing! After the first frost, remove your filter and leave your pond alone until the onset of spring (as soon as the water temperature reaches 50 F).

Never feed your fish during the winter, as their metabolism directly relates to the water temperature, and when it drops below 50 F, the fish will not eat. In the spring, reinstall your filter and begin feeding your fish. A Tetra Koi pond thermometer will provide you with the proper guidance in feeding your fish according to temperature.

Your yard pond will provide years of enjoyment and truly make you the envy of your neighborhood.

For further information, contact Tetra/Secondnature, 3001 Commerce St., Blacksburg, VA 24060-6671; 1-800-526-0650.

New wood replacement windows offer authentic look and maximum energy efficiency

Homeowners looking to update their wood windows with authentically designed replacement windows offering maximum energy efficiency will find the new Precision Fit® Architect Series® Replacement Window from Pella Corp. just the answer.

The new wood replacement window is engineered to meet the growing demands of the double-hung replacement-window market for products that provide the classic look of true divided light combined with ease of installation and aesthetic appeal.

"These windows are the ideal solution for homeowners who want to im-prove their energy efficiency while preserving a distinctive style," says Randy Iles, Pella Corp. senior vice president of marketing and sales. "These new windows allow homeowners to update their homes without losing any of the original charm."

In this new design, both interior and exterior wood grilles are permanently bonded to a single unit of InsulShield™ insulating glass. The exclusive, nonglare polymeric spacer provides better thermal performance for the replacement window. This glass technology can lower heating and cooling bills by as much as 24 percent and block up to 74 percent of the sun's rays that cause fading.*

This window is shipped fully assembled with frame, sash, hardware and options. They are designed to fit inside standard 31/4-inch sash pockets, with height and width built to order on the quarter inch. Sizes range from 371/4 inches to 771/4 inches in height and 203/4 inches to 443/4 inches in width, covering the size spectrum of older double-hung windows.

Because of its unique in-frame design, installation can be completed quickly and easily, usually within an hour, without damaging original woodwork.

Unlike a typical replacement window with reduced glass area, the Pella Precision Fit window frame has a narrow profile for maximum exposed glass area. And, like all Pella windows, the Precision Fit Architect Series Replacement Window features a wood interior that can be painted or stained to match the existing trim and a center-pivot sash for easy interior cleaning. Aluminum half-screen, metal locking mechanism and sash lift are standard.

For more information on wood replacement or literature on making window and door decisions, call 1-800-847-3552, visit your local Pella Window Store® or look up Pella Corp. on the World Wide Web at http://www.pella.com.

Technology, Features Pricing season's hottest mowers

If your old mower just can't cut it anymore, then now is the time to consider buying a new lawn tractor or walk-behind mower. Three things to look for in your new mower are: the latest technology, timesaving performance features and value pricing. The hottest products have all three.

Technology

The most innovative lawn tractor feature available this spring is toolless deck leveling. This feature is found only on new Murray® WideBody™ Lawn Tractors. The Exclusive Quick-Level System™ allows you to level your cutting deck accurately in less than one minute. Standard cutting decks can require as much as an hour to level and extra tools.

"Over a period of time, cutting decks can become unlevel. Even a difference in tire pressure can cause your deck to produce an uneven cut. Murray's Quick-Level System makes deck leveling simple — without tools. Just park your tractor on a flat surface, like a driveway, and in less than one minute, you'll be cutting your lawn. Murray makes it simple to keep a smooth cut week after week, year after year," explains Steve Richman, Murray vice president of sales and marketing.

On walk-behind mowers, the most innovative technology is the integrated mulch plug and integrated discharge chute found on products like Murray 20-Inch Rear Baggers. The E-Z Seal™ Integrated Mulch Plug and E-Z Retract Discharge Wing eliminate extra parts and tools needed for conversion between rear bagging, side discharging and mulching, thus saving time and simplifying mowing.

Features

The key to choosing a mower is finding the product with features that best suit your needs. Following are a few features that you will find especially useful.

The tractor frame is the foundation for superior performance and long-lasting durability. Look for a tractor with a rugged, trucklike frame. The Twin-Beam Power Frame™, used on the new Murray WideBody for example, utilizes two solid-steel rails that resist flexing and metal fatigue. All-Steel Construction™, also used on the Murray WideBody, gives lawn tractors precision and strength, unlike plastic, which is used extensively on many tractors. Hoods, grills, frames and bodies should be made of 100-percent U.S. manufactured steel.

"This premium frame technology is usually found only on very expensive machines, like John Deere and Cub Cadet," says Richman. "Murray recognizes the need for added strength for long-lasting durability."

To meet your needs for comfort and ergonomics, look for a lawn tractor with conveniently located controls that are easy to use and understand. Murray, for example, designed the new WideBody environment around the operator.

Also, request a Lumbar Support Seat that will firmly position the operator for a comfortable, fatigue-free ride and step-through design for more legroom and easier access to the tractor. A wide wheelbase and low center of gravity will create a stable ride with excellent visibility and control over the machine. Pedal Touch™ AutomaticDrive™ and Dual Response™ Steering will deliver precise control for easy maneuverability, even for first-time users. All of these features are found on new Murray WideBody Lawn Tractors.

On walk-behind mowers, look for a Sealed Vac Edge for improved airflow that suspends grass clippings for superior mulching. This feature, as well as the RazorTip™ Air-Flow Blade, which aids mulching and bagging by increasing airflow, is found on Murray 20-Inch Rear Baggers.

Pricing

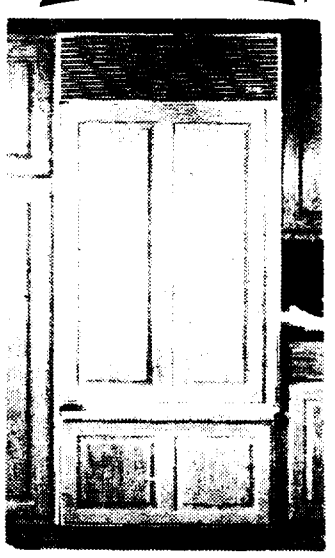

Don't be fooled by a high price. You can get a well-built mower with all of the features available on the expensive models for significantly less.

For example, the new Murray WideBody Lawn Tractors range in price from $793 to $1,499, compared to the competition's $950 to $1,750 prices. The Murray 20-Inch Rear Bagger Walk Behinds are also a great value at just $179 to $317. Both product lines are available nationwide at retail outlets. All are powered by Briggs & Stratton®, America's No. 1 maker of small engines, and protected by Pennzoil®, America's No. 1 choice in motor oils.

Don't miss the new Murray Web site, featuring Murray WideBody Lawn Tractors, at http://www.murrayinc.com. For more information, call 1-800-251-8007, or write to Murray Inc., 219 Franklin Road, Brentwood, TN 37027.

If you're looking to make your neighbors green with envy by growing a healthy, hearty lawn, take note. There's an easy, inexpensive way to reduce disease, thatch and the amount of water and fertilizer your lawn requires. It's called "top-dressing," and it's a lot easier than it sounds.

"Dress up" your lawn with peat moss. Spring, summer or fall, top-dress your lawn with Canadian sphagnum peat moss and reduce disease, thatch and the amount of water and fertilizer your lawn requires. Simply spread a 1/4- to 1/2-inch layer of peat over your entire lawn with a leaf rake.

Gardening expert Gerry Hood says to top-dress a lawn, simply spread a 1/4- to 1/2-inch layer of peat moss over the entire lawn with a leaf rake once every year or two. Do it anytime from early spring to late fall. Peat moss will gradually condition the soil and save water by absorbing and holding moisture. The lawn will also require less fertilizer because peat moss reduces leaching of nutrients and releases them slowly over time.

"Peat moss helps condition the soil so that in dry weather, the lawn holds moisture better," Hood says. "If your lawn is sparse, mix in seed with the peat moss when you're top-dressing, and spread it with a rake."

To get the maximum benefits of peat moss, aerate your lawn first. Aeration removes plugs of soil from the lawn, loosening compacted areas and promoting deeper grass root growth. You can rent a power aerator or hire a local lawn care specialist to aerate for you.

For a free brochure on top-dressing and other lawn care tips, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope with 32 cents postage to Canadian Sphagnum Peat Moss Association, Dept. TD1, "How-To Lawn Care" Brochure, Box 385102, Minneapolis, MN 55438.

Keep your lawn and garden weed-free

Weeds. A recent survey calls them the No. 1 gardening headache, and is it any wonder? Drive by any suburban yard and you'll see neighbor upon neighbor hunched over their lawns and gardens, working feverishly to eradicate every single dandelion.

Weeding doesn't have to be a dreaded, backbreaking chore. "There are simple solutions to make pulling weeds quicker and easier," says gardening expert Gerry Hood.

According to Hood, the top trick to keep your lawn and garden weed-free is to add plenty of Canadian sphagnum peat moss to the soil in order to loosen the soil, resulting in easier weed pulling. Simply work 2 inches of peat into the top 6 inches of soil before planting.

"The bottom line is that you need healthy soil," says Hood. "Healthy soil is like an immune system. It keeps all the plants stronger so they're better able to crowd out weeds."

For a free brochure on weed prevention and other gardening tips, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope with 52 cents postage to Canadian Sphagnum Peat Moss Association, Dept. WD1, Box 385102, Minneapolis, MN 55438.

If you've ever done repair work at home, chances are you've worked with adhesives. Like most do-it-yourselfers, there were probably times when things didn't work out on the first try, either because you didn't prepare the surfaces properly or the wrong product was used.

"Surface preparation is key to projects where you'll be bonding one material to another," according to Michael Running, president of Running Remodeling, Silver Spring, Md. "A dirty or greasy surface can cause even the best product to fail."

Equally important is selecting the right product for a particular bonding project, according to Robert Juran, marketing manager, Macco, Cleveland, a leading manufacturer of construction adhesives, caulks and sealants. "To meet various bonding needs, we formulated project-specific Liquid Nails® products," says Juran. "Each product features unique properties that are best-suited for a particular application. To assist consumers in selecting the best product for the job, Liquid Nails' user-friendly packaging clearly explains project-specific applications lessening the chance for misuse."

According to Juran, each product's name clearly defines its use, such as Liquid Nails for Wood, Parquet & Plank Floors.

With the appropriate adhesive and the following preparation and application tips, you'll be assured of success when working on these common do-it-yourself projects.

• Replacing loose ceramic tile — Using a water-based, dual-purpose adhesive is ideal for permanently bonding any kind of ceramic tile. First, remove loose tile and use a chisel to chip away old glue from its underside. Make sure the wall or floor is clean, but you need not remove all the glue. Using a trowel or stick, butter the tile and wall with the adhesive. Press the tile in place then re-grout. Macco's VOC compliant water resistant Liquid Nails for Ceramic Wall & Floor Tile is perfect for bonding ceramic, mosaic, slate and quarry tiles. Or for smaller repair projects, you can use Liquid Nails Multi-Purpose Adhesive Caulk which bonds and seals equally well.

• Repairing a laminate countertop — Over time, water can damage laminate countertops and cause the edges to lift and separate. To repair, Running suggests a simple application of contact cement. All surfaces being bonded should be cleaned of any dust or loose, dried adhesives. With a brush, apply a liberal, even coat of contact cement to both surfaces being bonded. For small areas, you can apply the contact cement with a syringe. For better application, use a utility knife to open the area more. After both surfaces have dried slightly (per product labeling), clamp the countertop, using a block of wood on top and bottom to prevent damaging the laminate. Leave the blocks on for 24 hours, or longer in hot, humid conditions. According to Juran, Latex Liquid Nails Contact Cement is ideal for laminate countertops and bonds instantly.

• Building a deck — Because pressure treated lumber tends to dry out, a deck's mitered corners may eventually separate. To help prevent this — and prevent the deck from squeaking when walking on it — apply adhesive to joists before nailing. This double protection allows the planks to withstand the elements longer.

Ensure that all surfaces are clean and free of excess water. Apply a 1/4-inch bead of adhesive to joists. Predrill nail holes to prevent splitting of wood and nail planks at every other joist. Liquid Nails Adhesive for Subfloors & Decks is a specially formulated weatherproof grade adhesive which can penetrate wet, frozen and treated lumber.

For more tips on project-specific adhesives or information about any Liquid Nails product, visit your local building materials retailer, mass merchant or call Macco at (800) 634-0015; or for instant information, visit the Liquid Nails Web site located at http://www.liquidnails.com.

Remove stains from your wood deck

A beautiful wood deck is a focal point for warm-weather entertainment. To get your deck looking its best for the summer, you'll need to clean off the dirt and remove any stains or mildew that formed over the fall and winter months. For older decks with deteriorating finishes, you may even consider stripping the wood and starting over with a new finish. Here are a few tips to remove stains, discoloration, and old, unwanted clear or colored finishes, courtesy of Wolman Wood Care Products, manufacturer of exterior wood cleaners, brighteners, water repellents and preservatives:

WITH THE HELP of a commercial deck-cleaning product, like Wolman Deck & Siding Brightener, you can remove ugly mildew stains and ground-in dirt, restoring the original honey-tone look of the wood. Remove old, deteriorating clear or colored finishes with DeckStrip Stain & Finish Remover.

• Dirt, mildew stains, gray wood — Clean the surface with a commercial deck cleaner, like Wolman Deck & Siding Brightener. This product is an economical powder concentrate, available in formulas for pressure-treated wood and cedar or redwood. Mix the concentrate with water, and apply with a garden sprayer, brush, mop or roller. Wait three to five minutes, then brush the surface with a stiff brush or broom, and rinse with water through a garden hose (you also can use a pressure washer, but be careful, as water sprayed at high pressure can gouge the deck surface). This cleaner doesn't contain acid or chlorine bleach. Instead of artificially lightening the wood, it restores the original honey-tone look. And, it's safe to use around grass, plants and shrubs.

• Wax (from candles, including the citronella type) — Place a rag saturated with mineral spirits on the dried wax. The rag will absorb the wax (do not let the rag dry out). Follow this and any other type of spot-cleaning with an application of Wolman Deck & Siding Brightener to ensure uniformity before applying a new coat of water repellent, finish or preservative.

• Barbecue stains (including grease, sauce and fats) — Clean with strong household detergent or water-rinsable automotive degreaser or carburetor cleaner. Do not apply these removers when the surface is exposed to direct sun — use only when shaded.

• Tannin stains — The cedar/redwood formulation of Wolman Deck

Attention: Mike Courtight

This letter is to let you know how pleased we both were with the job John's Lumber did for us. The Peachtree doors are beautiful and the installer did an extremely professional job. In fact he cleaned up so well you would never know he was there except that we now have a beautiful new front door, doorwall and a kitchen window.

The job was so well done that we will have John's Lumber help us plan our new kitchen. I do not always feel comfortable letting workmen in my house without me being there but I would not hesitate after this installation job.

Please feel free to use us as a reference.

How central air conditioning works

Central air conditioning is becoming an integral part of the American homeowner's lifestyle. Yet, how many homeowners or prospective owners of central air conditioners know how the system works?

According to a study by the Trane Home Comfort Institute, a consumer information service on heating and cooling, not that many. To help you understand how this integral part of your home operates, the Institute offers this simplified explanation:

A central air conditioning system essentially consists of two halves: the coil, which extracts unwanted heat and humidity from your home, and the condenser, which discharges the unwanted heat to the outdoors.

Most residential air conditioners are split systems, meaning that the coil is located indoors and the condenser, outdoors. In a split system, two copper tubes called refrigerant lines connect the indoor coil and the outdoor condenser. These lines are filled with a chemical refrigerant that travels in a closed loop between the coil and the condenser.

The loop begins as the liquid refrigerant passes through the coil, which is a network of tubes located on top of the furnace. As the refrigerant travels through the coil, it changes from a liquid to a vapor, absorbing heat from the air passing around the coil. The furnace blower distributes the cooled air through ducts to the interior of the house.

Meanwhile, the vaporized refrigerant moves through the loop to a compressor in the outdoor unit. The compressor compacts the vapor and then moves the hot refrigerant gas under pressure through the condenser, which is a network of tubes exposed to outdoor air.

As the refrigerant travels through these tubes, it cools and turns back into a liquid. The heat released during the condensation process is dispersed into the outdoor air by a fan. The refrigerant then flows through the loop from the condenser back to the coil inside the house, and the cycle begins again.

The compressor is considered "the heart of the system" because it is the pump that circulates the refrigerant through the loop. Because of its importance, experts at the Trane Home Comfort Institute recommend that you look carefully at the compressor's reputation and warranty when selecting a system.

They also say your new central air conditioning system should operate for a long time. So, compare the reliability and durability features of the equipment you select to get the most from your money.

Window boxes add charm and style to a home

If you enjoy growing flowers in your yard, why not plant them even closer to home? Easy to create and maintain, window boxes provide beauty and enjoyment with every glance out the window, and it's as easy as 1, 2, 3.

1. Set the Stage

Many home or garden centers sell ready-made traditional window boxes of wood, plastic, copper or terra cotta. To allow for easy maintenance, place the box on a simple shelf or use brackets mounted to the house. You also can create customized window gardens that complement the style of your home by thinking beyond boxes; try pots or hand-painted cans.

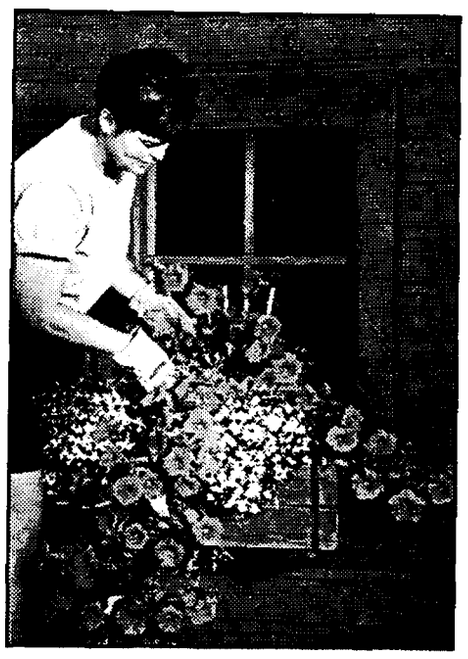

2. A Thirsty Reputation

It's true; in dry areas with direct sunlight, window boxes can require a lot of watering. To reduce this effect, use a top-quality Canadian sphagnum peat-based potting mix. Peat-based mixes help retain moisture and provide a healthy place for your plants to grow. Window boxes must be fed as well. Mix a granular fertilizer into the soil when preparing the containers or use a water-soluble fertilizer every few weeks throughout the season.

3. Pick the Plants

Fill the box with your planting mix, and dig planting holes. Try to keep them about 1 foot apart. Then, pour a little water into the hole, add the plant (toward the center line of the box), and cover with more mix. Add a little more water. For those who love fresh ingredients, consider planting an herb garden. Regardless, be sure to consider the sunlight in each window area and choose plants accordingly.

Your friends and neighbors will admire your window boxes and won't believe how simple it was to make your garden a part of your home.

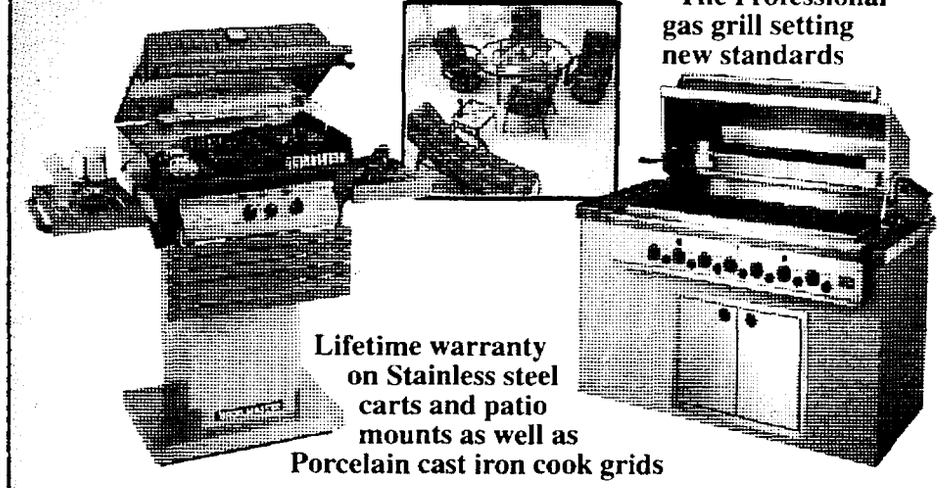

For a free brochure on successful lawn and garden projects, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope with 32 cents postage to Canadian Sphagnum Peat Moss Association, Dept. WB1, "Yardening" Brochure, Box 385102, Minneapolis, MN 55438.

Let the "Doctor" cure your landscaping ills

Tired of walking up the same dull path to the front door? Does the sight of obtrusive utility boxes and an ugly foundation make you cringe? With some careful planning, you can give your grounds, however large or small, a complete make-over. For beautiful results, make "Landscape Doctor" (Chapters Publishing), by Sara Jane von Trapp, your guide to curing the landscaping ills.

For more than 15 years, von Trapp has made planting her life. As a professional landscaper and co-owner of a tree nursery, she draws on her personal experiences to provide real-life examples that anyone can relate to. Easy-to-understand instructions combine with hundreds of lavish, full-color, step-by-step illustrations to provide solutions that can be followed by any do-it-yourselfer, no matter how inexperienced. Topics discussed include improving an unattractive or impractical front entry, building a fence for privacy or safety, dealing with a perpetually wet area, and constructing walkways and patios that will last a lifetime.

Every yard has its problems — from flat suburban lots to sweeping lakeshore and mountainside estates. Von Trapp has learned over time that, regardless of style, space and budget, many of these problems are the same. So, no matter who you are or where you live, you can be the envy of your block with a little help from the "Landscape Doctor."

ADVICE FROM THE "DOCTOR"

• If you have plenty of space in your yard, but very little privacy, consider growing a living fence. Not only will trees or shrubs give you more privacy, but they also can buffer wind, muffle noise and provide shade. Before purchasing seedlings, learn about their growth potential. They won't always stay so little, and if they grow too big, they actually may detract from the beauty of your home.

• If you have a small amount of foundation showing, build a low retaining wall about 5 feet from the house. Fill it in with soil to cover the excess concrete, and plant at this new level. Bricks and 6-inch timbers work well as a retaining edge, and they are readily available. Granite cobblestones also can work for a small amount of soil.

• If you have too many steps, build a multilevel system. A multitude of stairs presents a great opportunity for an intriguing design, and the right layout can even reduce the fatigue of climbing. The key is to break up flights of stairs with frequent landings.

• If you have unwanted grass-filled gaps between the stones or bricks in your walkway, you should ensure a proper fit. The proper edging can do this. Black PVC, which is installed below the surface and is virtually invisible once the walkway is complete, is the least obtrusive edging for brick or concrete pavers. For bluestone or slate walkways, the best edging choice is aluminum. Granite, another alternative, is an aesthetic choice.

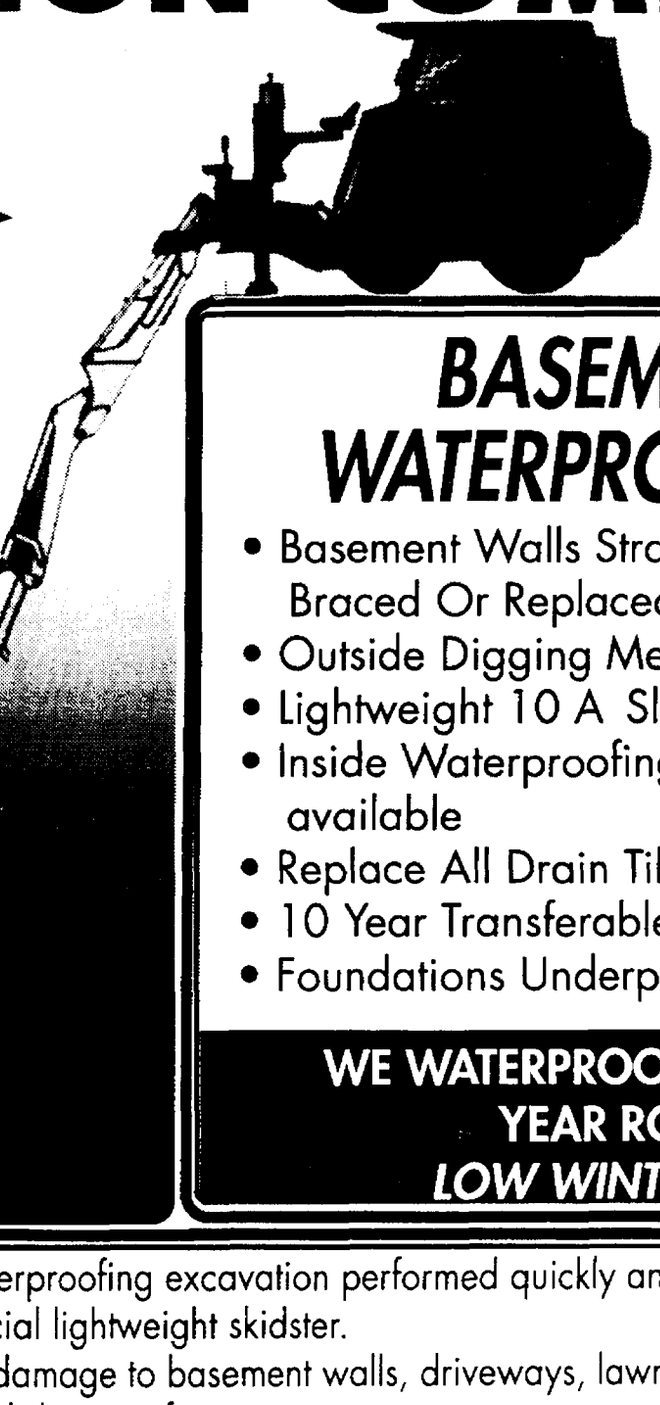

• If you have a shady yard and a sparse lawn, improve the soil. Since a shady environment doesn't offer optimal growing conditions for grass, a good option is to augment the soil with compost. The organic materials in the compost will enhance the soil and help plants and grass grow.

Another option, although more complex, is to plant a shade garden. While you must consider texture, color, balance and composition when designing this garden, you can give it an informal air, simulating nature's "imperfect" growth.

• If your entryway looks unkempt and overplanted, pruning or removing the overgrown shrubs is one of the quickest and least expensive ways to rehabilitate it. When a planting bed gets overgrown, you again should prune and remove some plants. Keep those that look the best and have the most potential for rejuvenation.

Cooking fresh garden vegetables is a "snap"

The spring and summer gardening seasons are here. Year-round gardeners, as well as those who limit their gardening to the warmer months, will be able to enjoy one of the country's favorite pastimes in beautiful weather.

"Fresh From the Garden" (Potter), by Perla Meyers, combines gardening with another one of the country's favorite pastimes — cooking. Meyers offers more than 200 delicious, easy-to-prepare recipes made with two dozen popular garden vegetables that are divided among the spring, summer, fall and winter growing seasons.

Also included is storage, gardening and harvesting advice for each of the vegetables, from common garden vegetables like carrots, tomatoes and peas to the more unique like parsnips, rutabagas and Belgian endive.

Peas are a popular and tasty spring garden vegetable. Following is Meyers' advice on proper storage, gardening and harvesting of peas, as well as a recipe for a delicious sugar snap pea salad.

According to Meyers, the reason the peas people buy from a grocer "so seldom taste fresh is that the sugar they contain turns to starch within hours of picking." Since peas demand little care in the garden, it makes sense for people to grow their own peas to enjoy this vegetable at its best.

Storage — Fresh peas, snow peas and snap peas can be stored in a plastic bag in the refrigerator for 3 to 4 days. Shell the peas just before cooking.

Gardening — There are many varieties of peas to choose from. Meyers usually makes a few separate plantings at two- to three-week intervals starting in very early spring. Peas cannot tolerate hot temperatures, so plan for the last spring sowing to mature before temperatures average above 75 F.

"Before sowing," says Meyers, "fertilize the soil and add a granular inoculant of nitrogen-fixing bacteria, which enables roots of peas and other legumes to convert nitrogen from the air into useful plant nutrient." Chicken-wire cages or garden netting provide support for tall-growing varieties.

Harvesting — Pick pods just before cooking time to obtain the sweetest peas. The safest way to harvest is to hold the pod stem in one hand and the pod itself in the other hand — and break. Yanking or twisting with one hand may uproot the plant.

DRESSING
Serves 6

Snap peas are becoming increasingly available, but they are still at their very best when picked fresh from the garden or at the farm stand. Steamed snap peas make a lovely, simple salad when tossed in tangy lemon dressing and served as a cool side dish to grilled, poached or pan-seared salmon.

- Salt
- 1 1/2 pounds sugar snap peas, strings removed
- Juice of 1 large lemon
- 6 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 2 teaspoons granulated sugar
- 4 tablespoons finely minced scallions
- Freshly ground white pepper

1. Bring salted water to a boil in a vegetable steamer. Add the peas and steam, covered, for 5 minutes or until crisp-tender. Run under cold water to stop further cooking and drain on paper towels. Place in a serving bowl and set aside.

2. In a small jar, combine the lemon juice, oil, mustard, and sugar. Cover tightly and shake until the mixture is smooth and well blended. Add the scallions, season with salt and pepper, and pour the dressing over the peas. Cover and chill for at least 2 hours before serving.

Variation: You may turn this salad into a luncheon dish by simply adding 1/4 cup finely diced Gruyère cheese and 1/4 cup finely diced smoked ham. Serve lightly chilled on leaves of mixed garden greens accompanied by a crusty loaf of French bread.

Soil Solutions

Healthy soil is the foundation for healthy, beautiful plants. "Remember," says Snodsmith, "the key to success is taking a 50-cent plant and putting it in a $5 hole — and soon you'll have a $10 plant!"

3 An abundant supply of nitrogen results in dark-green foliage and active vegetative growth — good, crisp lettuce leaves or a heavy carpet of grass.

3 For colorful flowers, phosphorus is the ticket to promote good seed germination, healthy seedlings and general plant vigor.

3 Potash helps in the formation and transportation of carbohydrates within plants. That results in plants with stiff stalks and healthy, disease-resistant growth.

Give your kitchen a new look by repainting the cabinets

You want to give your kitchen a face lift, but you don't want to spend an exorbitant amount of money on new cabinets. Here's a solution: Try painting them. According to experts at Wm. Zinsser & Co., a leading manufacturer of paint primer-sealers, changing the look of your cabinets is not as difficult as you might think. The secret is to use proper surface-preparation products and techniques.

Finish paints will not stick to most kitchen cabinet surface materials, like finished wood, Formica® or plastic laminate, without the aid of a tough, durable, adhesion-promoting primer. The primer will bond to these hard-to-stick-to surfaces, forming a sound base for the topcoat. Zinsser makes one such primer that's ideal for repainting kitchen cabinets. It's called B-I-N, and it's unique in that it is a shellac-based product. The shellac has tenacious adhesion to glossy-painted or polyurethaned surfaces, Formica, plastic, metal and glass. Best of all, no prior sanding or deglossing agents are required.

The shellac resin in B-I-N also will seal porous surfaces, like new wood, and seal off the knots in knotty pine so they don't bleed through and ruin the finish paint. The primer is white-pigmented to block out dark stains and colors, and it dries to a smooth, full, even film, making the topcoat look like a "factory finish." It dries rapidly — to the touch in just 15 minutes, ready for the topcoat in an hour. And, it cures fully in just a few hours, providing a tough, abrasion-resistant film that resists blocking (painted surfaces sticking together).

Before painting your cabinets, it's important to clean any contaminants from the surface, like wax, grease and kitchen spatter. Zinsser recommends the following pre-priming steps:

- Remove all doors, drawers, handles and hardware.
- Clean all surfaces with a clean rag saturated with mineral spirits (paint thinner) to remove any surface contamination. You may need a second rub or wash if there is heavy buildup (rinse the rag between applications).
- Next, wash the surface with a 50-50 solution of household ammonia and water. Allow the clean surface to dry for approximately 30 minutes.
- Apply one coat of B-I-N Primer-Sealer with a brush or pad, and let dry for an hour. If high-humidity conditions are present, allow longer to make sure the primer has dried thoroughly before applying a topcoat.
- Follow the primer with two coats of finish paint. Alkyd finishes are preferred, as they give a harder finish than water-base paints and are more stain-resistant, washable and durable.

B-I-N Primer-Sealer can be found at hardware stores, home centers, and paint and decorating outlets. For the names of local dealers, or for more information about priming, call Zinsser at (908) 469-4367, or write to 173 Belmont Drive, Somerset, NJ 08875.

Tulips Give a Yard an Elegant Touch

Each spring, you look forward to seeing the vibrant hues of the tulips you planted last fall. From golden yellow to deep purple, tulips are one of the only flowers to command such a wide range of the rainbow. These beauties can add elegance to landscapes from as early as February to as late as June. All it takes is the right conditions and some attentiveness.

Planting tulips is a fairly simple process, but it's the surrounding elements that can affect the length of their life. These six tips from "The Old Farmer's Almanac Gardener's Companion" (Yankee) can help keep your tulips in bloom.

1. Plant your tulip bulbs as soon as you get them. The bulbs' home is in the ground; put them where they feel comfortable.

2. Take precaution to keep pesky rodents away from your budding babes. Even though your tulip bulbs are snug under the earth, it doesn't mean they are out of harm's way. If mice and moles have been a problem, put thorny leaves like holly in the planting holes. Crushed gravel and kitty litter are also recommended by some gardeners. For those who need to take stronger measures against these rodents, planting bulbs in a wire cage may be the best solution.

3. Tulips are suckers for dry soil. Conditions like wet soil promote fungus and disease, which can rot bulbs. Tulips need to be surrounded by earth that is dry or soil that is not continually damp.

4. Dig deep. Tulips should be planted deep — at least 8 inches deep — measuring from the base of the bulb. Remember, it's important to dig even deeper than this suggested depth to loosen the soil and allow for greater drainage.

5. Water the bulbs directly after planting. Tulips are fickle flora. While bulbs despise continually wet conditions, they need water to start growing.

6. When you plant them, feed them. This goes for perennial tulips. Bulbs are resilient; they have a storage system containing all their necessary nutrients for one year. Feeding them in the fall promotes growth for the upcoming year. Gardeners recommend time-release bulb food, compost or organic material.

Removing Stains

• Rust spots — The cedar/redwood formula also will remove rust stains. Or, use a 5-percent solution of oxalic acid in water applied directly to the stain (you might need two applications). Rinse the area well afterward.

• Leaf stains — Spot-scrub with a 1-1 solution of household bleach and water.

• Green stains from algae and moss — Although these stains are difficult to remove and almost always reappear because of the algae root structure formed in the wood, they can be "controlled" by scrubbing with a bleach-and-water solution (4 parts bleach to 1 part water).

• Sap (from knots and surrounding trees) — Scrape excess material from wood using a putty knife or steel wool, and wipe with turpentine.

• Worn or unwanted stains and finishes — Wolman makes a new product, called DeckStrip, that removes old sealers, varnishes, paints, stains and finishes. This product is unique in that it clings to vertical surfaces like railings and fences, and works on both oil-base and latex coatings, whereas other stripping solutions are designed specifically for one or the other. This universality is great, as many deck owners don't know what type of finish is on their deck, especially if the deck was installed by a previous homeowner.

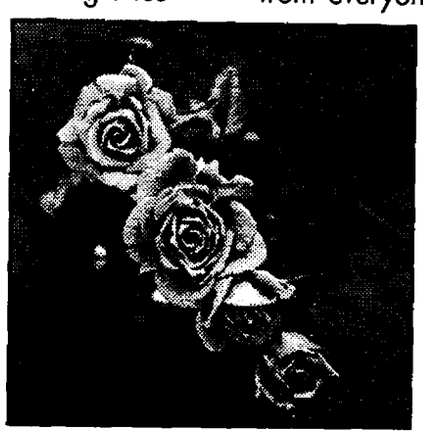

To maintain the beauty of your newly cleaned or stripped deck, apply a water-repellent finish containing mildewcides to prevent mildew growth. Finishes designed for wood are best, as most all-purpose sealers designed to go on a variety of surfaces — like wood and concrete — do not contain mildewcides.

Other things you can do include the following: Place planters on risers or wheels, instead of directly on the deck, to prevent stains; put rubber protectors on the bottom of metal furniture to prevent rust spots and scratches; place mats under grills to protect from spills and grease; make sure gutters drain properly so water doesn't flow directly on to the deck.

Wolman Wood Care Products are sold in hardware stores, home centers, and paint and decorating outlets across the country. For further information on exterior wood care, Wolman offers a special Deck Care Hotline, open around the clock, seven days a week. Call the experts at (800) 556-7737.

Perfume for your garden

A new miniature rose named as a tribute to rosarians in Seattle, Seattle Scentsation™ is available to home gardeners everywhere this spring. And is it fabulous! With fragrance that will provide aroma therapy every time you enter the garden, it is also very easy to grow.

This new miniature rose variety is a deep mauve pink with yellow at the base and on the reverse of the petals. It has outstanding exhibition form, with the petals unfurling in perfect symmetry from a tall, pointed bud. Like other varieties of miniature roses, Seattle ScentsationTM requires very little in the way of care. Planted in a sunny part of the garden, it will put on a spectacular show of lovely fragrant flowers from early spring to late fall. All it needs is a little fertilizer once in a while.

The plant grows to about 30 inches and is clothed in dark green, disease-resistant foliage. Whether you plant it in a bed with other mini roses, in the perennial border, or in the landscape, you'll find that its frothy pink display will command attention from everyone who visits your garden.

This is the most recent variety in Nor'East Miniature Roses' new line of intensely fragrant roses. Along with its predecessor, Scentsational™, a lovely light mauve, Seattle ScentsationTM is a plant your garden can't do without. Easy to grow and easy to love, both varieties will be the best performers in your garden.

Spring checkup for your home

By Gene and Katie Hamilton

With winter but a memory, now is the ideal time to take a quick walk around your house and look for clues about how well it survived. To get the best picture of its condition, plan your inspection just after it's rained when you can spot telltale drip marks, cracked paint and missing caulk — all signs of needed repair work.

Try this preventive or holistic approach, because a house is like an orchestra — it's a finely tuned system of components that work and fit together. Notice how the siding and windows team up to seal out the weather. If a new paint job is needed, remember that the work involves more than just paint — most of the time is spent scraping and repairing. It's a time-consuming job.

To avoid the chronic job of painting forever, consider replacing siding and windows with vinyl, a popular alternative from Owens Corning that's a maintenance-free and energy-conserving solution. Its Transitions® Series vinyl siding offers the beauty of wood without the upkeep, and its LuminessTM vinyl windows are easy to clean and easy to live with, because they won't rot, rust, blister or corrode.

A recent Remodeling magazine survey reports that, after a year, the average $5,211 siding replacement has a 68-percent return on the investment. On an average $5,488 window replacement, you get a 69-percent payback, plus the benefit of a reduced energy bill. Ideally, both jobs are done at the same time, but if that's not in the budget, do the siding one year and windows the next to spread out the investment.

Use this checklist to see that all the systems of your house are in good working order:

• Check the roof for broken or curled shingles, and have them replaced; if they're curled, you may need more attic ventilation. Owens Corning has a roofing system that can help with both of these areas.

• Caulk any gaps at roof seams, at flashing, and around the chimney and vent stack.

• Spot-check the chimney, and replace or repoint any crumbling mortar.

• Clean out gutters so rainwater flows freely, and place splash blocks at the base of downspouts to carry water away from the foundation. Repair any that are loose or leaking.

• Use a good-quality acrylic latex caulk and spray-in-place polyurethane foam to fill gaps between siding and windows, doors, masonry or wherever two different materials join together.

• Check steps and walkways for safety, and make any repairs that are needed.

• Repair warped deck boards or those with loose or missing nails.

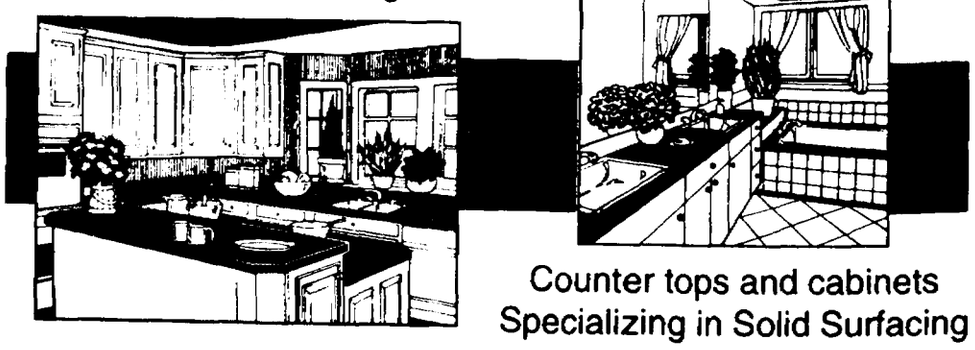

• Remove storm panes for doors and windows, and replace with screens.

• Remove vent covers on air conditioners, and open vents in the crawl space.

• Turn on the outdoor water spigot.

To learn more about thinking of your house as a system, Owens Corning has a new brochure on System Thinking for the HomeTM, which may be useful. Call 1-800-GET-PINK for a free copy.

Greenhouse gardening is stress relief

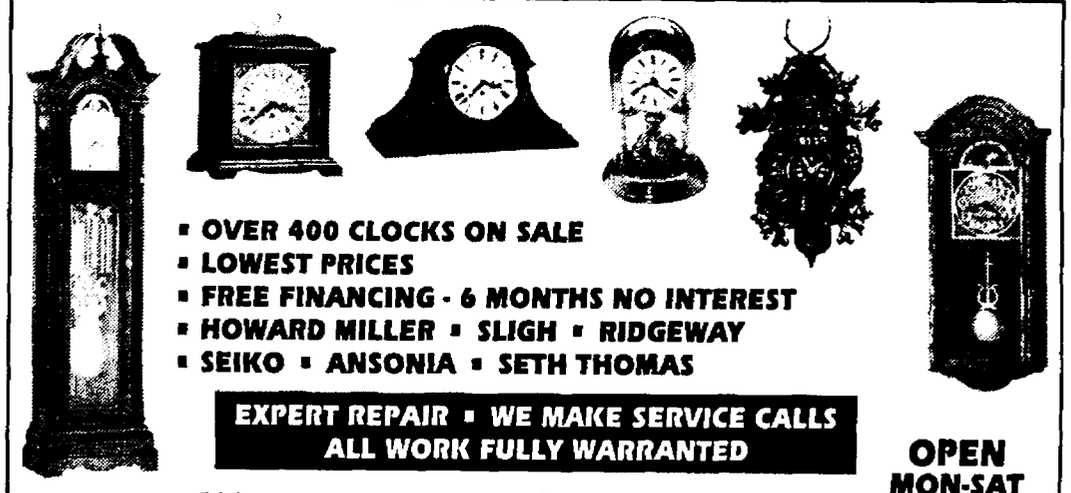

Do you long for fresh vegetables and herbs in December or for fragrant flowers blossoming in February? If so, a small greenhouse may answer your need for a longer growing season.

A greenhouse can provide a growth-enhancing environment for your plants and vegetables, as well as a relaxing refuge for you to enjoy after a hectic day. Owning a small greenhouse is easier and more affordable than you may think, and the benefits far outweigh the costs.

Gene Tubbs, marketing associate for GardenStyles, the U.S. subsidiary of Juliana greenhouses, says that greenhouse gardening is quickly becoming a popular hobby, particularly now that greenhouses are more accessible for the home gardener. "Many people find working in a greenhouse to be very therapeutic, whether they're starting seeds, watering or just enjoying the greenery of the surrounding plants," Tubbs says. Spending time in the greenhouse is an excellent way to wind down and relieve stress, particularly during the cold months of winter.

There are many greenhouse options available for the home gardener, with a variety of sizes and prices to choose from. GardenStyles has 21 hobby greenhouse models available and is sure to have a greenhouse that will fit all of your growing needs. A free brochure on the company's full line of greenhouses is available by calling 1-800-203-6409.
