G.P. Jacobson's to expand store hours year-round

Citing industry-wide retail trends and making Jacobson's more responsive to its customers, the store in Grosse Pointe will expand its hours of operation starting Sept. 2. New store hours, which are now uniform throughout the chain, are from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Sunday store hours will remain the same.

"The customer likes consistency," said Fred Marx, spokesman for the department store. "Longer hours are plus for customers and more attractive to them."

'The customer likes consistency. Longer hours are a plus for customers and more attractive to them.'

Several factors figured into the decision to expand the store's operating hours. Marx cited families with dual incomes who need evening shopping hours and the fact that Jacobson's did not have uniform store hours throughout the chain.

"This is a customer-friendly decision," he said, adding that changing dynamics in the retail industry also played a role in the move.

The additional hours will also create opportunities for people interested in part-time work, Marx said.

Scottish games

City of Grosse Pointe resident Donald MacDonal Thurber will be an honored guest at the St. Andrew's Society of Detroit's 148th Highland Games to be held Saturday, Aug. 2. Seated next to him is Grosse Pointe Farms resident Florence Michie Stahl, the Society's first woman member and first woman president. Each is wearing clothing of their particular clan. His is Clanranald; hers are Buchanan and Forbes.

The event is open to the public, and people of all ages; you need not be of Scottish descent. It will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Greenmead at Eight Mile and Newburgh Roads in Livonia. Tickets at the gate are $8. Parking and using shuttle buses at Schoolcraft College is encouraged.

Gates open at 9 a.m. At noon, the opening ceremonies kick off. At 5 p.m., the closing ceremonies begin. During the day, the event boasts several hundred kilt-clad bagpipers, dancers, and amateur and professional athletes competing in traditional Scottish games that involve incredible strength. There will also be crafts, goods, food and drink of Scotland.

New this year will be a herding demonstration where border collies will show off their skills at corralling animals. Highland cows will be on display. There will also be a number of other activities for children, including games and storytelling.

Farms hopeful beach to open soon

Recent water testing by the beach has been closed due to high counts of E-coli bacteria since the July 4 weekend.

Wayne County health officials have Grosse Pointe Farms parks closed several beaches on Lake St. Clair this summer, most Huhn encouraged that the beach will reopen fairly soon.

Park assesses storm damage to city trees

By Jim Stickford

Staff Writer

Grosse Pointe Park city forester Brian Colter completed his count of the number of trees that were lost in the July 2 windstorm that knocked out power in the city for two days. And the final figures are in and the news isn't all that good.

"The Park lost 196 street trees located on city easements between the street and curb," said Colter. "I estimate an additional 200 trees owned by private residents were also lost. The 196 city-owned trees equal about 3 percent of the 8,000 trees in the Park."

But, said Colter, that number is deceiving because so many of the trees blown down in the storm were large trees. He estimates that 80 percent of the trees had trunks with a diameter of 10 inches or greater. Some of the largest trees blown down had diameters exceeding 35 inches.

Of the trees lost by the city, 46 percent were maples, said Colter, and 35 percent were American elms. Another 8 percent of the trees were ash, and locust accounted for 3 percent and London plane trees 2 percent. The remaining variety of trees lost included pear, horse chestnut, sycamore, Siberian elm, mulberry and spruce.

"What is ironic about this storm is that the winds blew down the healthy elm trees," Colter said. "We've been fighting Dutch elm disease in the Park for several years. But because the healthy elms had more leaves, which acted as a windcatcher or a sail, the wind was able to topple them. Trees with Dutch elm had fewer leaves, so the wind didn't affect them as much."

Because so many of the trees lost were large with a lot of foliage, said Colter, the city lost a lot more tree cover than the 3 percent figure would first suggest.

The next step for the city forestry department, said Colter, is to begin formulating a plan to replace the city trees that have been lost. He said that he is looking at funds available from programs offered by the U.S. Forestry Service and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources as a way to pay for tree replacement.

Colter must also determine what kinds of trees to purchase and when to plant them. A diverse selection of trees prevents a single disease such as Dutch elm disease from devastating the city's tree population. He also said that the Grosse Pointe Park Foundation might hold a fundraiser to purchase replacement trees.

The best time to plant trees is in the spring and fall, where they are dormant. Some trees are better planted in the spring and some in the fall.

"By the end of next spring, I expect that we will have replaced every city tree blown down in the storm," said Colter. "The trees we will purchase as replacements will be the largest possible for the locations we plant them in."

For example, said Colter, it will be impossible to plant large trees at sites where there is a utility pole.

Also, because the equipment that grinds down tree stumps can go only so deep into the ground, a replacement tree planted within two years of the original tree's removal must be at least six feet away from the original tree's location, Colter said.

"The fallen tree's root system is still there," said Colter. "It takes about two or three years for the underground roots that have not been removed to decompose enough to allow another tree to be planted at the old location. That's for trees that left stumps. In this storm, we had a number of trees that were uprooted when they were blown over, so it will be possible to plant trees there. But for trees that left stumps in the ground — no."

Address changes in the mail in the City

By John Lundberg
Staff Writer

Residents on Cranford Lane in Grosse Pointe City should expect new return address numbers on this year's Christmas cards after the city council approved a request to change the five-number addresses to two numerals.

Fox Creek Post Office customer advocate Linda Butler said once the City provides the office with the address changes and residents on the block submit change-of-address forms, the post office will set the process in motion immediately. The Fox Creek station services residents in the Park and the City.

notably Metro Beach at 16 Mile. Beaches in St. Clair Shores have also been affected by the bacteria stain.

"It's been frustrating," Huhn said. "People have been pretty understanding about it."

The Farms has taken past measures to discourage seagulls from gathering near the beach. Experts have said that excrement from the birds can contribute to the bacteria strain found in the water.

"The best thing is for people not to feed the birds," Huhn said. "We have also tried noise-makers like those used at City Airport (but) we've had no luck."

With the recent trend of improved test results, Huhn hopes the beach will reopen by August.

Negotiations continue as Shores looks to expand drug testing

By John Lundberg
Staff Writer

Officials from Grosse Pointe Shores are looking to expand the city's drug testing policy to include random testing of all employees from the Shores department of public works.

As it now stands, state law mandates that all city employees with a Commercial Driver's License (CDL) be subjected to random testing. The policy the Shores is currently negotiating with the DPW union would encompass the entire department.

"The purpose of the policy is to ensure a drug-free workplace," said Ralph Houghton, Shores city attorney. "We are looking to develop a drug policy to test all of (our employees in the DPW)."

If implemented, the policy would be the broadest of any drug testing policy in the Grosse Pointes. All of the Pointes have pre-employment drug testing, but this will extend beyond those standards. Houghton hopes the union will see the policy as an important measure to guard against drug abuse and use on the job.

"I suspect they will be receptive to the program," Houghton said.

Union officials did not return

phone calls by press time.

A potential road block for such a policy are the rights to privacy guaranteed in the Fourth Amendment. Houghton said such a policy will only serve as further protection for the Shores, its residents and employees.

There was no specific drug-related incident that prompted the Shores to negotiate the new policy, Houghton said. If enacted, personnel would only be tested if an employee displayed physical signs of substance abuse.

"We do not have a drug problem in Grosse Pointe Shores," Houghton said.

Park sewer construction to continue into the fall

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The sewer separation project that began last year in Grosse Pointe Park is right on schedule, which means that residents who have had their streets torn up can expect a return to normal in the next few months.

Park city manager Dale Krajniak said that all the work should be completed in the summer of 1998 and much of the construction should be finished by the end of the year.

"In the last 10 months Ricman Construction has dug deep tunnels on Fairfax, from Pemberton to Balfour, and from Balfour to Jefferson," said Krajniak. "Deep tunnels go down deep into the ground and pipes are put in. This is different from the open-cut method that is being used in other parts of the city. Open cut trenches only go about 4 feet deep."

Ricman is also digging deep tunnels on Whittier, from Jefferson to Essex, said Krajniak. This pipe system will lead directly to the Patterson Park lift station that will discharge storm water into Lake St. Clair.

Pamar Construction is digging the open-cut trenches.

This type of pipe system is designed to collect rainwater from catch basins, then direct the water to the deep tunnel pipes, which move it to Patterson Park.

The system is analogous to a road system, with highways being the deep trenches and surface streets being the open cut trenches. Just as surfaces feed onto highways, open cut trenches feed into deep cut trenches.

"Construction of the pipe system is completed in the southwest quadrant of the city," Krajniak said. "This area includes Korte, Barrington, Essex, Avondale, Lakepointe, Middlesex and portions of Windmill Pointe Drive."

Once the pipes are in place, said Krajniak, a layer of asphalt is put down. That layer is allowed to settle for a period of time, in this case several weeks, then a second layer is placed on top of the first one.

The southwest part of the city has had the first layer of asphalt laid over its pipes, said Krajniak. Now all that remains is the installation of the second layer, which he expects to happen in the late summer.

Pamar, said Krajniak, has also finished work on separation of the storm and sanitary sewers along the 1300 blocks of Nottingham, Balfour, Berkshire, Buckingham and Devonshire. All that remains is finishing the asphalt work.

The company is currently working on St. Paul, between Whittier and Harvard. After that, construction will begin on the 1100 block of Harvard, Yorkshire, Bishop and Grayton and should begin in the next two or three weeks, Krajniak said.

This work should be completed by the end of the year, said Krajniak. Pamar must wait until the spring of 1998 before proceeding along the 900 blocks of Trombley, Balfour, Bedford and other streets south of Jefferson.

"Detroit Edison will, in the next couple of weeks, begin installing a power line along the north side of Jefferson from Maryland to Three Mile," said Krajniak. "This line will provide power to the lift station at Patterson Park."

So while it looks like not a lot of progress has been made, said Krajniak, residents in many of the affected areas should see their streets return to normal, beginning in the next few weeks and months.

Bank holdups have Farms police searching for clues

By John Lundberg
Staff Writer

The search continues for a man police believe committed two bank robberies last week within 24 hours. The first holdup occurred July 24 at the National Bank of Detroit at Moross and Mack; the second happened the next morning at the NBD branch at Vernier and Harper in Harper Woods.

According to police, the man walked into both banks and gave a note to the teller demanding cash. The note also contained a threat if the teller didn't comply. No weapon was seen in either holdup although harm was implied in each note.

"No one else in the bank was aware of what was happening," said Farms detective Mike McCarthy.

Bank security cameras have produced clear pictures of the man wanted in the holdups. The FBI has been called in to assist with the case and will also publish the photos through the Detroit Clearinghouse Association. The association offers rewards up to $2,500 for information that leads to an arrest in bank robberies.

Police said both tellers activated security alarms during the course of the robberies. NBD officials declined to say if tellers are instructed to submit tellers are instructed to submit to such demands when confronted with holdup notes.

The FBI and the Farms and Harper Woods police are looking for the above suspect in a bank security photo. The man is wanted for the robbery of the NBD Bank branches at Moross and Mack and at Vernier and Harper.

The man is described as a 5 feet 7 inch white male. He is heavyset and has dark hair and an unshaven face. He has eyeglasses and was wearing a polo shirt and dark pants. A reward is available to anyone who provides the FBI with information that leads to an arrest. The FBI can be reached anytime at (313) 965-2323.

The Park is proceeding with its sanitary and storm sewer separation project, digging huge catch basins above, which will then be connected to storm drains and the storm water will be eventually pumped into the lake, eliminating combined sanitary/storm water overflows into the Fox Creek.

Big plans brewing in the Woods

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Woods planning commission hearing on Tuesday, July 22, was a busy one for commissioners as they voted to recommend two plans to the city council involving the University Liggett School and the A.H. Peters Funeral Home.

University Liggett School business manager David Boring went before the Woods planning commission and asked for site plan approval of a project that would result in the demolition of the old prekindergarten building and the construction of a new parking lot.

ULS spokesman Duffy Ross said that the building, located in the northeast corner of the campus near Cook and Chalfonte, was built in 1954 and has been unoccupied since 1992. Since then the building has been used for storage of summer day camp equipment.

The plan calls for the demolition of the building, said Ross. Then the school will expand the parking lot next to the building, creating an additional 30 parking spaces.

In a letter to the planning commission, Boring stated that this action would "simplify vehicular circulation patterns and minimize existing conflicts with other vehicles and pedestrians."

Boring further stated that the school would be willing to place "decorative fencing" on Chalfonte Avenue and Cook Road, incorporating a sign at the northwest corner of Cook and Chalfonte.

In a memorandum to the planning commission, public safety director Jack Patterson wrote that the new lot "should pose no additional hazards and/or hardships to the site itself, or to the surrounding" properties. He added that the traffic patterns into and out of the lot would be via ULS property rather than by Chalfonte or Cook. This would actually reduce congestion on the two streets, he stated.

The commission voted unanimously to recommend that the city council, acting as the planning commission board of appeals, approve the site plan. The school requested no variances, and needed only to demonstrate that the plan met all city zoning ordinances.

Ross said that the school expects to go before the city council in August so that the building can be demolished before school starts.

The commission also held a hearing on a request by David Peters of the A.H. Peters Funeral Home at the corner of Mack and Vernier for variances that would allow the construction of an 11-car parking lot on a parcel located at 1927 Anita.

This parcel of land abuts the alley behind the stores on Mack between Vernier and Anita. Woods building inspector Melissa Spranger said that the lot is zoned R-1, which limits construction to single family dwellings. A little-known clause in the zoning ordinance also allows the construction of paved parking lots on any R-1 zoned property, providing the lot abuts an alley, which this property does.

Peters needed the variance because in order to build the lot, the alley would have to allow two-way traffic. City ordinances, said Spranger, require two-way alleys to be at least 25 feet wide, and the alley between Anita and Vernier is only 20 feet wide.

Peters told the planning commission and members of the public at the meeting that he owned the house on the lot, but did not intend to tear it down. Rather, he wanted to restore it for rental, or even sale. The 11 parking spaces would be between the alley and the side of the house.

This seemed to relieve the concerns of many people who attended and who had expressed fears that the house on the lot would be demolished and the entire parcel paved over.

Peters said that he owned the buildings on Mack in which five businesses, including a pet shop, a photography studio, an ice cream parlor and a restaurant, were operating. The businesses have proved to be successful, and the 11 additional parking spaces would do much to relieve parking problems.

Several people in the audience expressed frustrations over the level of traffic on Anita, and asked if this lot would contribute to the problem. Spranger said that she did not think so, because those leaving the proposed lot could only turn right on Anita toward Mack. Much of the traffic on that street, she said, comes from Harper, which is in Harper Woods.

The commission voted 7-0 to recommend that the council, acting as the zoning board of appeals, approve Peters' variance request. Under the city charter, the planning commission is required to hold a public hearing on any variance requests.

The city council then, acting as the zoning board of appeals, holds its own hearing and can vote to accept the commission's recommendation. It can also reject the recommendation or make modifications to the variance request. Peters said he expects to go before the council in August.

Park man to be in full kilt at Highland Games

By Amy Andreou Miller
Special Writer

Grosse Pointe Park resident Larry Donaldson is proud of his Scottish heritage.

His grandmother was born in Glasgow although Donaldson was born in the United States. Donaldson has fond memories of his grandmother, after she moved to America, taking him when he was a youngster to the Scottish highland games (then hosted on Boblo Island) in the late 1940s and early 1950s.

Now Donaldson, 58, will be busy this Saturday, Aug. 2, as he serves as chairman of the 148th Annual Highland Games hosted by the St. Andrew's Society of Detroit. He will be working side-by-side with many other Grosse Pointers of Scottish heritage.

An official member of the Society since 1994, Donaldson will oversee many other dedicated St. Andrew's Society volunteers who host and work the event — the oldest highland games in North America. (See related photo and caption of front page for more information on the event.)

The planning for this year's highland games began just hours after last year's event concluded.

It's a lot of work for a fundraising event that nets about $10,000 or less. But it delights thousands of people, both of Scottish descent and non-Scottish descent. How could it not do so with its visually stimulating and awesome sight of several hundred kilt-clad dancers, bagpipers, and amateur and professional athletes competing in traditional games requiring unusual strength?

The event also teaches a very important lesson that is at the heart of the St. Andrew's Society, and one Donaldson said he very much believes.

That being: "To him much is given, much is expected."

Donaldson said, "I really believe that anyone successful in their life has got to give back their energy, talents and/or money."

The purpose of the benevolent St. Andrew's society, which was created in 1849, was to form an organization of people with the same heritage who took care of each other in a time of need, explained Donaldson, a member of the MacDonald clan.

"Although times have changed since the Society was first formed, we still do take care of each other in various ways," he said.

The society offers annual scholarships to Alma College (the mascot is the fightin' Scots); provides financial and in-kind donations to Mother Waddles and other charities around the Metropolitan Detroit area; and provided funds for families of the victims of the Pan Am 103 airplane crash that occurred when a plane was in route from London to Locherbie, Scotland, 10 years ago, and when a man went on a shooting rampage among elementary school children in Dunblane, Scotland a couple of years ago.

They even helped the 65 residents on the Scottish Eigg Island and purchased the island from a German businessman earlier this year, effectively ending its modern day serf system.

Donaldson hypothesized that the spirit instilled in Scottish people to be generous and extend a civil, helping hand to one another may have something to do with Scotland's geography. As part of the Isle of Great Britain, it is somewhat isolated, so people looked out for one another, he said. But even more so, the topography of Scotland is very rugged and unforgiving — all the more reason for hearty people who are fortunate to be successful to look out for others.

Even though he and many others running the highland games were not born in Scotland to live amid that rugged landscape, he said they internalize that feeling nevertheless.

And Donaldson carries it into his professional life and personal life activities that are not associated with the St. Andrew's Society.

As a 28-year veteran lawyer, 18 of which have been as a

POINTER OF INTEREST

shareholder with Plunkett & Cooney, P.C., he has enjoyed great success within certain areas of law: representing lawyers and accountants throughout the country who have been sued for malpractice, as well as handling cases in premises and liquor liability. To get to that position, he excelled in school, earning both undergraduate and master's degrees in business from University of Michigan, and a law degree cum laude from Detroit College of Law.

Yet, this tough lawyer — who has spoken before various state and national level law associations and groups — insists on civility. Colleagues say that Donaldson is a tiger in the courtroom, but outside he is very gracious, organized and cooperative with opposing attorneys.

Donaldson said he doesn't believe it is necessary for lawyers to serve each other with endless motions — legal documents filed with the court during the discovery process preceding a trial.

"Some law firms are known for creating endless paper trails. There is no reason they cannot call another attorney and agree between the two of them to change a deposition date, for example. The problem is that there are attorneys who cannot separate in their minds their battle on behalf of their client from their interactions with the opposing attorney," Donaldson emphasized.

He also said he thinks every lawyer can make time to perform some legal work and advice free of charge. "People need to find ways they can give back to other people and society, in general," he said.

In his personal life, Donaldson is a devoted member of Peace Evangelical Lutheran Church in Detroit, serving as Deacon, and as a past president of the congregation. He plays in its handbell choir, and he sings baritone in the church's choir.

In June of 1996, his church's choir joined a half-dozen similar church choirs from Michigan and Ohio for a 12-day tour of Germany.

The purpose of the trip was discipleship — something that at times can feel easily accomplishable, but yet is really a tall order to fill, he said.

While most of their concerts were planned, a few times while sightseeing, the talented group of singers spontaneously broke into song, creating unforgettable moments.

"People were touring a cathedral (in Germany) at the same time as our group was sightseeing at the cathedral. We broke into 'Dear Christians One and All Rejoice,' and everyone was crying when we finished. We were crying. Every venture on that trip was more wonderful than the last," Donaldson said.

On the trip with Donaldson was his wife Ursula, who was born in Esslingen, Germany. He said it has become a family joke with his wife, and their only child, Carrie, that Donaldson is charmed with the "halo effect."

"We joke that I must have a halo around me because I am fortunate enough to have so many wonderful opportunities and experiences to reach out to other people, and people praise me for it. But actually, my wife is a far more giving and loving person than me. She just happens to be more in the background at our church."

All the more, then, Donaldson feels compelled to reach out to others. Sometimes he said it is easier to do than other times. All his church activities, particularly spreading discipleship through singing, he said are uplifting, and "decompressing from life's everyday stresses."

Another "decompressing activity" he said that plays a large role in his life is sailing. It is something Donaldson has done since he was a teenager.

Since sailing is a big love of Donaldson, he points out that it seems all too appropriate that his Scottish heritage even "infiltrates" his favorite avocation. The motto "Per mare per terras" that is a part of his MacDonald's Scottish clan insignia translates to "By sea by land."

Two weeks ago, he participated in his 23rd Bayview Mackinac Race. He was aboard a 35-foot Santana entitled

"Kukla" and owned by John Sheoris of Grosse Pointe Woods.

His position in the crew? "Anywhere they need me," he said, adding that he usually serves as watch captain and helmsman.

And added unusual element for him is that his daughter Carrie competes against him, crewing on Grosse Pointe Park resident Gordon Morlan's boat, Avatar.

"We wish each other the best, help each other pack, transport equipment, share some of Carrie's famous cookies (chocolate chip with a miniature Reese's Peanut Butter Cup sunk in the middle) and then try to beat each other to the finish line," he said.

"She's the greatest kid parents could ask for," he beamed, rattling off her positive personal qualities beyond her aplomb at sailing.

Park, Farms seek funds to replace trees

Both Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe Farms are seeking local, state and federal help — which both obviously need — to replace the many trees each of the communities lost in the July 2 storm and to meet their cleanup costs.

In the Park, city forester Brian Colter told Jim Stickford of the Grosse Pointe News staff that the Park lost 196 trees located on city easements between the street and the curb.

But Colter estimated that an additional 200 trees were lost by private residents. The number of city-owned trees lost equals about 3 percent of the 8,000 trees in the Park.

Colter is looking at funds available from the U.S. Forestry Service as well as the Michigan Department of Natural Resources to help pay for the tree replacements.

Both communities also are considering fund-raisers by their foundations, with the Grosse Pointe Farms Foundation having already appealed to residents by letter for contributions to help replace the loss.

The Park and the Farms, the two Pointe municipalities hit hardest by the storm, have been informed they are entitled to federal reimbursement of 75 percent of the cost of their storm cleanup work.

In addition, the state of Michigan through its Transportation Department will pay 12.5 percent of the remainder of the cities' documented losses.

The total amount of the municipal losses must be reported by Aug. 29 which gives both cities time to complete their cleanup work and figure out their costs.

The federal assistance becomes available because the Grosse Pointes are included in the Wayne County disaster area designated by President Clinton at Gov. John Engler's request.

Individual homeowners who do not have insurance also are entitled to aid, while those with insurance that does not cover all losses can seek tax relief from both state and federal governments.

The Farms' greatest losses were in Pier

Park where 65 trees were damaged sufficiently to require their removal. The Farms Foundation already has begun a campaign to raise $250,000 for tree restoration.

The Farms expects to recoup much of the value of the park pavilion that was destroyed from the city's insurance of about $35,000 on the structure, but city officials are still considering their plans for the park restoration.

With respect to trees, the Farms is planning to buy and plant mature replacements as well as some fencing and related landscape work not covered by insurance.

Unfortunately, as we all know, even the mature replacements will not always be as attractive as those aging maples and elms and lesser numbers of ash, locust and London plane trees that were lost July 2.

The entire Pointe community already has responded to the immediate need of people and families. Now Pointe residents have the opportunity to contribute again, this time to help restore Grosse Pointe as a community of lovely trees.

Clinton supports a means test

President Clinton, showing a little backbone for a change, has now told Congress that he will personally defend any member of Congress who votes for a means test in the new Medicare appropriation bill.

The proposal still faces tough opposition, especially in the House which rejected the means test proposal, and from some Senate leaders who also object to an increase in the monthly fees paid by upscale Medicare recipients.

In fact, the New York Times Monday said that these two issues, plus another contentious one, the proposed $5 a visit charge for home visits, had been tabled at least for the moment.

In a mild surprise, the U.S. Senate last week had backed the means test in voting to increase Medicare premiums for affluent elderly people at the same time it hiked the age of Medicare eligibility from 65 to 67.

At first, the president took exception to both proposals as well as another to establish co-payments for home health services, but he came around to a better informed position on both measures just last week.

Michigan's two senators cast offsetting votes on the two proposals in preliminary votes. Carl Levin voted to increase premiums paid by recipients and against the increase in Medicaid eligibility age, while Spencer Abraham voted to raise the eligibility age but against increased premiums paid by recipients.

Under the Senate proposal, the Medicare monthly premium, now $43.80, would quadruple for single beneficiaries with annual incomes of more than $100,000 and for couples with annual incomes of $125,000.

However, individuals with incomes of less than $50,000 a year and couples under $75,000 a year would not be affected. For people with incomes between those cited here and in the paragraph above, premiums would rise with their incomes.

The age extension eventually would affect only people who now are 58 or younger. Those 58 today must be 65 plus two months before being admitted to Medicare. The coverage would advance gradually until 2027 when everyone would have to be 67 before earning eligibility.

True, business and industry leaders have legitimate fears that if the Medicare eligibility age is increased, their companies may have to cover employees with their own health plans for two more years, or until retirees reach 67.

However, these two proposals would provide an excellent start on the difficult task of controlling Medicare costs. So we hope that fears of business will be satisfied on the age extension, that the House will finally approve both amendments and that President Clinton will sign the measure that includes them.

Tocqueville 1831 tour retraced

C-SPAN, the cable channel, last Wednesday began in Detroit a brief review of the famed Alexis de Tocqueville's tour of Michigan during its Washington Journal morning show.

It was part of the network's nine-month

A Van Gogh?

This could be the beginning of a murder mystery or perhaps a novel about an international art theft ring. But we are not starting a story about either of those subjects.

Instead, this story started when Newsweek picked up an item from London's The Art Newspaper that cited the Detroit Institute of Arts as one of four U.S. institutions housing "questionable" Van Gogh paintings.

However, Newsweek failed to check with the DIA to see what it had done with the painting.

But The Detroit News' Joy Hakanson Colby, the paper's art critic, did check and found that the painting, "Still Life With Carnations," was willed to the DIA in 1990 as a work by Vincent Van Gogh, but never displayed as such by the DIA.

Instead, the DIA curators, suspicious about the authenticity of the unsigned still life attributed to Van Gogh, had sent the painting to experts at the Van Gogh Museum in Amsterdam. Its verdict: definitely not by Van Gogh.

Are there untold stories about other Van Gogh paintings, too? There probably are, but don't expect to find them in Newsweek.

miniseries to trace the route of the French aristocrat who later described Detroit as "a fine American village," which in 1831 apparently had only about 3,000 souls.

The Frenchman and a friend had come to the United States to study its prisons, but they did much more. They visited 55 cities in 18 states and saw the country from canoe, steamboat, stagecoach, horseback and on foot.

Nine months later, Tocqueville wrote his "Democracy in America" which covered government, national character, class, religion, money and even race.

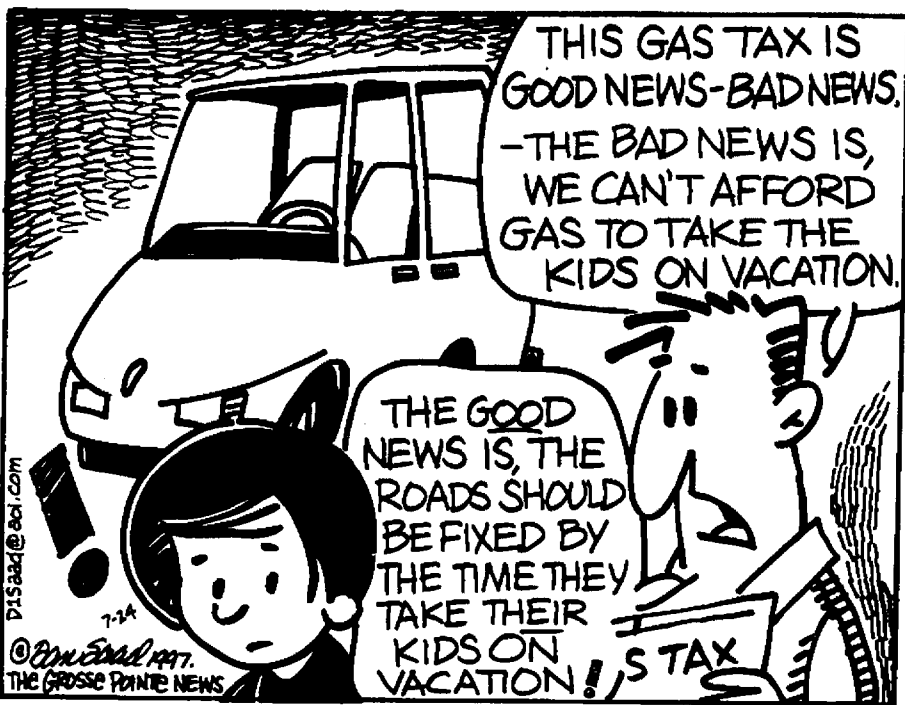

No doubt it was the fact C-SPAN came to Detroit on the date, July 23, that was the 30th anniversary of the Detroit 1967 riot that persuaded C-SPAN to concentrate its stop at the Detroit Institute of Arts on what the French explorer had said about race relations.

The following excerpt illustrates what Tocqueville wrote about race in the United States:

"Once one admits that whites and emancipated Negroes face each other like two foreign people on the same soil . . . there are only two possibilities for the future: The Negroes and the whites must either mingle completely or they must part."

This was a good week to arouse patriotism from epics in history because the revival of the Tocqueville tour in the Detroit area came just a day after the famed "old Ironsides," the USS Constitution, made a brief cruise out of its Boston base to celebrate its 200th anniversary.

Both Tocqueville and "old Ironsides" left strong impressions on the Americans of their time, and those impressions still reverberate down through history.

A liberal visionary on the court

The late President Eisenhower, according to a Washington story, appointed William J. Brennan Jr. to the Supreme Court of the United States chiefly because of the strong recommendation given to Brennan by the then GOP governor of New Jersey.

Whether that story is true or not, Eisenhower often expressed concern over time because Brennan did offer the court a liberal vision that was often embraced by the chief justice, the late Earl Warren, and the court majority.

Yet Brennan, more than any other justice of our times, did express his concerns for the rights of the common man during his 34 years of service on the bench.

And, despite the fact he never served as chief justice, the court in those days often reflected Brennan's views. He wrote 1,350 opinions during his court years.

Linda Greenhouse, the veteran New York Times reporter who covers the Supreme Court, said in her obituary of the justice that he "embodied the liberal vision of the Constitution as an engine of social and political change."

True, with conservatives now in the majority, Greenhouse reminded her readers that some of Brennan's opinions have been modified and even overturned in recent years.

She cited as the most recent example one that occurred last month when the court overturned a 1985 Brennan decision that had barred public school teachers from giving special remedial classes on the premises of parochial schools.

News people also will remember Brennan's First Amendment ruling in the New York Times v. Sullivan case in 1964 which, a Times editorial said, had "reconfigured the law of libel to give 'breathing space' for free expression and the robust debate of public issues."

But he also felt and expressed the view that the Constitution was a living document and its unique feature was the "adaptability of its great principles to cope with current problems and needs."

It was significant that even the conservatives now on the bench joined in the encomiums that were heaped on the justice when his death was reported. After all, he was their friend, too, as he sought to be for all Americans.

Expression of gratitude

To the Editor:

We wish to express our sincere gratitude to the many individuals and businesses in our community who contributed to the successful 1997 Summer Garden Tour.

Our special thanks to the O'Berski, Rasmussen, DeSeranno, Dewey, Morris, Finger and Oliver families for graciously sharing their outstanding and imaginative gardens. These gardens persevered through the obstacles and difficulties of the recent storm.

The backbone of this successful event was the many volunteers who brought the Trial Garden and Grace Adams Harrison Garden for Children to viewing perfection, and the many hostesses and cashiers in the gardens.

Our sincere thank you to Grosse Pointe Park officials for their cooperation and attention to our parking and construction concerns.

We wish to thank J.W. Cole Jewelry, Moehring-Woods Flowers and A. H. Peters Funeral Home for their generous donations, and Cavanaugh's Office Supplies, Grosse Pointe Florists, Moehring-Woods Flowers and Wild Birds Unlimited for their enthusiastic cooperation in selling tour tickets at their places of business.

We especially want to thank the Grosse Pointe News for their thorough coverage of the gardens.

We appreciate the generous services provided to our community by all of these parties. Their contributions and efforts will help the Grosse Pointe Garden Center to promote beautification, education, horticulture and conservation programs.

Filling the empty spaces

Summer storms blow in with little warning and magnificent fury. As they swirl in the skies overhead, their punishing rain, wind and electric jolts force all lesser things to their knees.

Sometimes the tempest cleanses, leaving everything in its path sparkling and renewed, felling the old, the ill and the weak, making way for new growth.

Other times, its power overwhelms, mercilessly rearranging the landscape, taking down even the strongest, most resilient in its path. The survivors are left to wonder how they will ever restore order.

What's lost cannot be replaced. An ancient elm that has shaded a street for generations is swept away. Left behind is a gaping hole of sky. Where there once was sunlight filtered through a leafy ceiling, creating speckled patterns on the lawn below, there now is unrelenting, brutal heat and light. Shelter is traded for exposure.

The same way storms blow through our lives and take people and objects and ideas with them, so does death take from us those things we treasure and come to rely upon.

Much in the same way we are forced to adjust to the loss of a formidable shade tree, its familiar shape, color and shelter yanked from our view, we also are forced to adjust to the permanent absence of people in our lives.

I Say

Shirley A. McShane

It's the little things, the unexpected empty spaces sometimes that cut deeper than the overall loss.

The chair at the head of the table at Thanksgiving dinner, always where the head of the family sat, now stands unoccupied.

The scattered objects on the kitchen counter at the end of the day: a source of annoyance as long as the perpetrator is around. (Every day the same question: Why can't he put that stuff away?)

But when he is gone, that space forever will remain clean and we will mourn the absence of the scattered coins, the billfold, the crumpled receipts. We will curse ourselves for such pettiness.

Then there are the interesting parties on the periphery, the grocers, the clerks, the mail carriers, the colleagues, who predictably offer feedback on the lives and labors of those around them, who reliably wave a hand in greeting.

These things, these people and their basic acts of good nature are rarely noticed or appreciated until their absence is noted like a stinging slap across the face.

Eventually our eyes adjust to the new view, the empty spaces around us. We remain hopeful that something or someone will eventually achieve the status of filling those spaces. But they cannot replace and we will never forget.

Scottish Games pointe west

The annual summer Scottish Highland Games may have moved from the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House across town to Historic Greenmead in Livonia, but Pointers who loved 'em here may find even more to like there.

"We've got 10 more acres and all of our plans are really coming together," says St. Andrew's Society President Flo Stahl, of the Farms. "For the first time in a long while, we'll have the shelties (Shetland sheepdogs) herding sheep, and the long-haired Highland coos (cows)."

And there'll still be lots of Pointe haggis munchers at the new venue this Saturday: Honored Guest will be Donald MacDonald Thurber, of the Park, and among local volunteers are Jackie and Dan Beck, Joey Dixon, Larry Donaldson, Peg Dunlop, James Gillis, Mary and Sterling Graham, John Park, Mary Jane and Bob Starnes and Paula and Dick Sutherland.

"It's a lovely location," says Flo, who points out the new spot for North America's oldest games is just a 30-minute drive away. Just follow the sound of bagpipes out 696.

Wrong signal? You're history! A bit of the old Pointes turned up at last Saturday's Bumpers for Babies classic car show at Hutzel Hospital: The 1926 Dodge Brothers Touring Car of the Park's Barry Cogan was once owned by Anna Thompson Dodge.

"It came out of Rose Terrace," says Barry, who's owned the 4-cylinder set of Roaring '20s wheels for three years. "It's a real Grosse Pointe car."

The odometer reads 2,062 miles. "I don't know how many times it's turned over," Barry admits, "but I drive the car out Lakeshore all the time, and lots of other places."

FYI noted the absence of turn signal lights on the fenders, which raised the one little problem Barry has with his historic horseless carriage. "I have to use my hands," he says. "It's almost a lost art. When I stick my arm out the side for a left turn, people behind me think I'm waving for them to go around me."

Grandma gets a good paddling

Helen Garvey, a great-grandmother of 84 years, just had to tell FYI about the great time she had a few Saturdays ago.

It just so happens that Helen's son, Paul, of the Park, built an Indian-style canoe back in '93. "I had admired it in his workshop many times, while it was under construction, but never thought I'd get to ride in it," says Helen.

"July 19 was a super-perfect summer day and Paul took me in his canoe down the Manistee River," Helen says. "I loved it."

The last time she was in a canoe? "It was on Fox Creek, about 1922," she says.

Why Pointers really rated

Sign of past times from the first issue of "School Days," the G.P. school employees' newsletter launched this June. Back in the '30s, it says, students at (then) Grosse Pointe High were rated not only academically but also in the following "personality" areas:

- Good manners
- Kindliness
- Cheerfulness
- Respect for the rights of others
- Control of temper
- Resourcefulness
- Fair play
- Initiative
- Self-reliance

- Honesty
- Keeps promises
- Avoidance of quarreling and emotional outbursts
- Reliability
- Teamwork
- Neatness
- Cleanliness
- Posture
- Moderation in dress
- Takes pride in group achievement
- Supports (that which is) right
- Fosters the right kind of school spirit
- Steady application to work
- On time to classes
- Responds quickly to requests
- Perseverance
- Alert and ready
- Considerate of others
- Friendly
- Mixes well
- Willingness to follow directions
- Obedience
- Helpfulness
- Intelligent "followership"
- Study hall habits
- Club participation

The stray male dog reported in the downtown paper as found at the Ambassador Bridge the night of the July 2 storm must have impressed the U.S. Customs agent who took him home:

Senior Inspector Katie Horst, of Romulus, described the pooch as, "a Grosse Pointe Farms, thoroughbred, feed-me-out-of-a-china-plate, narrow-nosed collie."

If you have an FYI tip or ever got an "A" in Helpfulness, call Ken Eatherly at (313) 822-4091.

Shall two-step for peace of mind?

By Victor Bloom, MD
Psychiatrist/psychoanalyst

I never thought of ballroom dancing as therapeutic. But then, I wasn't thinking about it. Ballroom dancing just seemed like a recreational outlet for those so inclined and, for most of us, it is fun to watch.

We are not attracted to it because of fears of clumsiness or impatience with the time it would take to learn to do it really well. Arthur Murray used to have ballroom dance schools and they were all over America with popularity that waxed and waned over time.

Similarly, we look at Gene Kelly and Fred Astaire and wish we could dance like that, but mostly we don't, and don't even try. And therefore, we miss out.

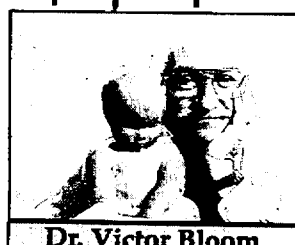

I never realized that fact so acutely as when I viewed the new Japanese film, "Shall We Dance?" It explained in the beginning of the film that Japanese culture leaves most Japanese inhibited and shy. It is not in their culture to express emotions in public or to move in such a way as to attract attention to themselves.

But Western ways have been invading Japanese culture more and more and there are signs that the average Japanese is opening up and getting more emotional, more dramatic, more creative in how they live their lives. In "karaoke," they have learned to love to sing in public, and now there is widespread interest in ballroom dancing, Western style.

Yes, the fox trot and waltz, the quick-step and mambo. They learn them all and get very good at it. Just like they got good at making cameras and transistor radios, automobiles and fax machines. There is a built-in cultural tradition of doing things to perfection.

In the case of ballroom dancing, perfection does not necessarily mean just technical perfection. In the world of dance, once you have learned the steps, you have to allow yourself to "let go" and move with a certain abandon, a certain flair, that is unique to each individual. When you move with the music and with your partner, and in rhythm with your own inner emotions, there is a certain freedom that is exhilarating and fulfilling.

The movie starts out with a hard-working accountant, who passes up the opportunity to get drunk after work. Day after day he takes the commuter to the train station and bicycles to his home in the suburbs, the cost of which has indentured him to "the company" for the rest of his life. He comes home late at night and leaves for work early in the morning. His wife and daughter hardly ever see him. That is his life, a perpetual grind; he is on a treadmill to oblivion.

On his way home on the train, he sees a dance studio and a beautiful woman looking sadly out of the window. On impulse, he signs up for dance lessons, along with two other beginners, one big and fat, the other thin and short. They are awkward and tumble at first. They are tremendously embarrassed and self-conscious.

But the dance teachers are upbeat and optimistic and, more important, skilled and experienced. They love to dance and that love is contagious. After a while, the men begin to learn the steps and how to move to music and how to lead their partners. And it is enjoyable and fun. Still, what they are doing is a little off-beat and they keep it a secret, so as not to be the butt of teasing and joking at work.

Eventually, their dancing is the vehicle to emotional release and a source of pleasure otherwise unknown to them. Their sexual impulses must be channeled and controlled, even as the body contact is stimulating. The wife suspects an affair, but this is not the case. The daughter is happy that her father seems to be happier, more full of life, rather than depressed.

As the plot unfolds, I could see that in Japan, there are other ways for people to get in touch with themselves and become freer emotionally. Psychoanalysis is not popular in Japan; "stress-management" is mainly in after-work drunken orgies, in which underlings can chew out bosses, and the next day it is all forgiven.

Drunkness is the great leveler, but for those people, the company is the family and is all-embracing, all-controlling, all-demanding. Many hard-working Japanese people are looking for outlets outside the company.

They find them in karaoke and ballroom dancing, where these creative outlets are taken very seriously. They take singing lessons and they take dancing lessons, and get very good at what they do, albeit on an amateur level. And if the people in this film are any example, the singing and dancing are therapeutic in the best definition of the word.

In the struggle to overcome inhibitions and self-consciousness, there is a deepening of self-knowledge, a self-revelation and an introspection which is akin to the best of our psychotherapies. Deep and meaningful friendships are formed.

And if the "therapy" works, the person becomes more mature, more insightful, more together, more happy. It is a wonderful revelation to this psychoanalyst to see that the equivalent of our dynamic therapies exists in many cultures, and that the benefits of insight and personal development are pursued here and there around the globe.

It is a wonderful thing when the pursuit of happiness and the pursuit of perfection leads to the fulfillment of our potential as unique human beings.

Dr. Bloom is in the private practice of psychiatry and psychoanalysis in Grosse Pointe Park. He is clinical associate professor of Psychiatry at Wayne State University School of Medicine, a Life Fellow of the American Psychiatric Association and a member of the American Academy of Psychoanalysis.

Food donations being accepted

In an effort to assist those who lost everything in the July 2 storm, Grosse Pointe Farms officials have set up a food, toiletry and paper product depository at city hall and the police department.

Residents interested in helping victims of the storm in Highland Park and Hamtramck can drop off nonperishable food items at both locations.

City hall is located at 90 Kerby and is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily. The police department, located next to city hall, is open 24 hours a day.

Red Barons booklets

To the Editor:

Regarding your article about the future of the Red Barons, you referred to the previous

Red Barons program booklets as "nothing more than a sheet of paper with names and numbers of the players."

It appears that Mr. Klonke took this information directly from Mr. Masinick.

Everything's coming up Rosie!

After losing our dog of 16 years, we decided that if and when we were ever inclined to be owned by another dog, we wanted a tired, not too bright, buddy dog, already trained. We agreed that we were no longer interested in suffering through the poo-and-chew stages of puppyhood.

The perfect solution would be a rent-a-dog. Be careful what you wish for...

Up front, I will admit that I am madly in love. She is 3 years old, has long, wavy red hair and four legs, which are rarely planted on the ground. She has lived the first 10 months of her life in mystery, ending up in a shelter for abused golden retrievers. That is where our daughter and her husband found her, adopted her and brought her to their townhouse in California two years ago.

The young couple have recently been transferred back to this area and we suggested it might make the move easier for them if we took the dog for the summer. We were concerned about flying the already skiddish pet more than once, and it was agreed that she would come to visit us when they did early in the summer and remain until their return in September.

As is native to the breed, she looks at you with enormous brown eyes spilling over with love and apology. She seems to be saying "I'm sorry, did I do something wrong? Have I offended you?" Unless you have just arrived home or re-entered a room, then it's "Golly gee whiz and zowie, too, I haven't been abandoned. Love me, please stroke my head or touch me, I need contact."

Her back yard in California is tiny and she has found her haven here. She has turned into a hunter, until recently not actively involved, but leaps at birds and squirrels in trees, rolls in the grass and plays catch with herself, tossing the ball into the air and chasing after it.

She is the ideal guest, making no demands and requiring a minimum of care. We are the ones who feel guilty when we leave her and find it hard to believe that her kidneys are like a camel's.

One day I nearly came unglued as I spotted her sprawled upside down in the grass, head twisted to one side, absolutely motionless. I called her and received no response. Apparently she was in another world and her parents later informed me that she turns out when she takes her sunbath. Idiosyncrasies? A few.

She requires a unique diet of potato/duck meal, difficult to locate, but we did. She likes to dig (BIG holes), but we liked to dig too as kids. Our front yard looks great and who cares about the desecration in the back for one summer? We'll seed in the fall. When she comes in after a romp in the mud, she sits right down and raises her paws to be wiped with her towel. As I am writing this, her enormous red nose keeps bumping my hands away from the keyboard. She hasn't had a hug, pat or kiss in five minutes and this is unacceptable.

Her favorite pastime is to hide in the "woods" (shrubby perimeter of the yard), playing tiger. Unfortunately, I removed her collar on one of the hot days and she shot out the door and caught a robin, her first and we hope last foray at being a hunter in suburbia. The noise of her tags now alerts her potential prey.

If I had to search for one complaint, it would be that it is difficult to entertain guests who aren't animal lovers, because Rosie wants to be the center of attention and likes to give sloppy kisses to all newcomers. Those who will get down on the floor with her are special favorites. However, if asked, she will leave the room with reluctance and entertain herself with a chew toy until permitted to rejoin us.

This Loft Lady is going on vacation for a couple of weeks, and Rosie will be shared with her other grandparents and will leave a big empty spot in my heart for a brief period. I have been advised not to take her with me, as she would be constantly bringing me gifts from the woods and the lakes — after she had rolled in them, of course. However, I shall return and reclaim my new best friend.

I wonder if our children have heard that old saying about possession being nine-tenths of the law? Time will tell. For now, everything's coming up Rosie, our yard, our spirits, our pulse rates and our contentment quotient. You bet.

— Offering from the loft

Here's the reality:

For the past five years, the Red Barons produced actual booklets (8.5 x 5.5 inches). They were free of charge to all players and game attendees. They were produced economically and the advertising support paid for the production.

The booklets were, by the decision of the board, not intended to be another fund raising effort.

The booklets included:

— A glossy cover, names, numbers, ages and weights of all players.

— Names and ages of all cheerleaders.

— A listing of head coaches (with phone numbers) and assistant coaches.

— A listing of all board members (with phone numbers) and their responsibilities.

— Game schedules and a "Message from the President."

In our 1994 booklet, we dedicated a full page to the memory of "Our friend, our photographer and one of the founding fathers of the Red Barons, Dick Cooper."

For the children

To the Editor:

Your July 24 article about Mr. Masinick's new plans for the Red Barons football league fails to mention one of the most important considerations: the children involved in the program.

What does all of his plans have to do with and for the kids? Also, having gone through the Grosse Pointe communities' baseball and soccer programs, I consider no organized youth sporting program a "baby-sitting service."

Daniel R. Hughes
Grosse Pointe Farms

Parental responsibilities

To the Editor:

I am not a Red Barons parent, but as a parent who has had two children participate in a variety of sports, both recreational and competitive, I think that I speak for most parents when I say that I was unaware of the fact that I (according to Mr. Masinick), have been utilizing such programs as a baby-sitting service.

The countless drives to practices and games, (sandwiched between school, homework, appointments and personal obligations), not to mention the endless hours sitting in the cold, heat, rain and snow as I watched them perform, were merely my way of passing off my parental responsibilities.

Having known parents who have had children participate in the Red Barons program, I am certain that they have been no less involved, encouraging or supportive of their children.

Finally, as publicity director of the Pointe Girls Soccer Association, I have always read with interest the publicity generated by our local youth sports organizations.

I find it disappointing that in the publicity release by Mr. Masinick, he found it necessary to disparage how the program was run in the past and the fine efforts by previous board members, (many of whom I have known and admired), in his attempt to promote his program.

Positive changes should be able to stand on their own merits.

Linda Farmer

Good work

To the Editor:

Our compliments and thanks to city workers in Grosse Pointe Park for responding so quickly and helpfully to the big storm on July 2.

First, police did a great job directing traffic around fallen trees and live electrical wires. And then city officials showed skill in bringing in extra help in clearing streets and removing downed trees — worrying about the cost later.

City workers and additional hired crews seem to move quickly in clearing the debris. Our thanks.

Also, your paper did a splendid job in providing readers plenty of pictures and in-depth stories on damage which many of us sent on to relatives and friends in other communities. Good work.

Not hypocrites

To the Editor:

Last week a letter written by Chapman Cunningham was printed in the Grosse Pointe News (July 24 edition) that accused the Kasiborski family of "hypocrisy."

Mr. Cunningham correctly stated that the Kasiborskis strongly supported the construction of lights for athletic contests at Grosse Pointe North High School.

His statement that the Kasiborski family argued against Services for Older Citizens (SOC) lease, while also correct, was misleading. It was my father, Chester Kasiborski Sr., who spoke at the school board meeting against the lease for SOC.

He is hardly anti-senior citizen as he is about to turn 80, while I personally took no action on the issue.

Even if I had argued against the SOC lease, I would not consider that hypocrisy. I believe that school properties should be used to their fullest capacity for school programs. It was that belief that caused my father and I to vigorously oppose the closing of Barnes as an elementary school in the past, and why we both support its reopening as a school.

Mr. Cunningham should have his eyesight checked if he truly confused me with my father.

Pro Air story questioned

To the Editor:

Four of our family members flew on the new Pro Air service last week to Baltimore for a long weekend in the Washington area. Incidentally, there were 89 people on the Sunday return flight! We thought the service was great, convenient and priced right for the time being, anyway. I had used Southwest in the past to Chicago as well.

With that background, I find Richard Mertz's comments interesting, illogical, and your coverage of the issue pretty weak. (July 24 edition, "Shores official leading charge against Pro Air.")

Mertz is quoted as saying ...

"100 flights a day, seven days a week to break even ..." Interesting, your reporter did not ask for support for those numbers. That comment alone is ridiculous. The free enterprise system will determine what level of profitability this market will support.

"... Wasted a beautiful General aviation asset." — general aviation continues uninterrupted as far as I know. The passenger terminal is already there. McNichols is already closed, this Pro Air service requires no additional infrastructure expense that I am aware of — and certainly none that will come out of Grosse Pointe Shores pockets! Objections to this project in your article are poorly disguised — this is an issue of "Not in my backyard," nothing more.

I hope the service is successful for Detroit, for the Grosse Pointes and for Pro Air.

Even warm-weather crops can get too hot during the summer

When temperatures soar, even the crops that like warm weather can suffer from too much heat.

"Tomatoes, peppers, cucurbits and beans often drop their blossoms without setting fruit when daytime temperatures are above 90 degrees Fahrenheit and nights are warm," observes Sandra Richards, home horticulturist at Macomb County MSU Extension office. "About all you can do is wait — plants will set fruit again when the heat wave subsides."

Hot weather is even harder on crops such as spinach and lettuce, which grow best in cool weather. Hot weather causes them to bolt (produce seed stalks), and the leaves develop a bitter flavor.

A common practice is to pull up old plants and either replant salad crops for a fall harvest or replace them with short-season warm-weather crops such as snap beans, summer squash or cucumbers, Richards says.

If hot weather strikes just after you've set new transplants into the garden, they'll probably require extra watering to survive.

Shading them for a few days may also be advised, along with mulching to conserve soil moisture.

Other plants at risk during a heat wave are houseplants and others growing outdoors in containers, especially those in porous clay pots.

Plants in containers have limited ability to take up moisture with their roots to replace water lost through the foliage, and soil in pots may dry out quickly on warm, windy days.

As a result, plants in containers may need daily or even more frequent watering in hot weather, Richards notes.

Sinking pots into the soil and/or placing container-grown plants where they'll be shaded in late afternoon can help keep them cooler and slow their loss of moisture.

The same hot weather that stresses plants can spur population explosions in common garden insects such as aphids and mites, Richards notes.

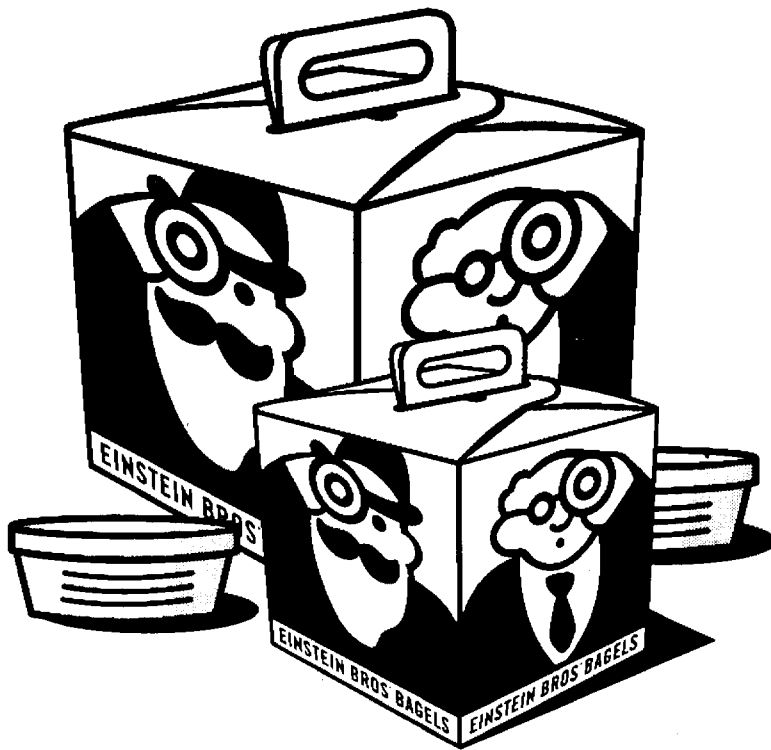

It can also make garden pesticides less effective, so it's a good idea to check crops frequently to catch any infestations while they're small and relatively easy to control.

Gardeners aren't immune to heat stress, Richards points out.

When temperatures are high, it's a good idea to tend to gardening chores early in the day, when temperatures are coolest; take frequent breaks; and drink plenty of water to keep yourself from wilting.

Home invasion

A resident of the 19900 block of West Doyle Place in Grosse Pointe Woods returned home on Sunday, July 27, after a few days out of town and discovered his side door unlocked. The resident remembered locking the door before leaving.

When he entered his home he discovered that it had been broken into.

Police were called and a search of the home revealed that a personal computer, among other items, had been stolen.

The search further revealed that the thief or thieves apparently gained entry by breaking a window pane by the front door.

Police continue to investigate.

Sign larceny

A local building contractor reported to Grosse Pointe Woods police that a sign advertising his services was stolen from the lawn of a home in the 1100 block of Brys that he was repairing sometime between the night of Friday, July 25, and the morning of Saturday, July 26.

The contractor said it was the third time that this had happened.

The victim suffered two similar Friday night thefts on different streets in the Woods in June and April.

Smashed, but nothing to grab

A resident of the 21500 block of Van K Drive in Grosse Pointe Woods reported to police that the driver's side window of his 1997 Chevrolet was smashed sometime between 2:15 a.m. and 11:45 a.m. on Thursday, July 24. He reported hearing a noise at about 2:35 a.m.

The only things missing from the car were three canvas cash deposit bags from a local bank. Alas, for the thief, all three bags were empty.

Fire destroys van

Grosse Pointe Woods firefighters were called to a home in the 2200 block of Hampton

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

at about 5:38 p.m. Wednesday, July 23, to put out a van fire.

When they arrived, the van was completely engulfed in flames, and heat from the fire was melting siding on nearby homes.

Firefighters were finally able to extinguish the blaze, but the van was completely gutted. An investigation revealed that the fire started when the van owner used an acetylene torch to attempt to loosen a stuck nut.

This apparently caused a nearby seat in the van to catch fire, and the blaze quickly spread despite efforts to put it out with a fire extinguisher.

No one was injured in the fire, but a nearby fence as well as nearby houses suffered minor damage from the heat and flames.

Unarmed theft

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers investigated the unarmed mugging of a woman outside a liquor store at the corner of Kercheval and Wayburn on Sunday, July 27, at about 7:10 p.m.

According to the victim, she was leaving the store when she noticed that two of the four men that were hanging out in front of the store when she had entered it were walking west.

That's when the fourth man grabbed her purse. They struggled, and he was finally able to get the purse when the strap broke.

The suspect ran away from the scene toward Alter Road. The victim lost her credit cards, checkbook and $10 in cash.

Police continue to investigate and believe the four men are known to hang around the 2200 block of Philip in Detroit.

Spiritual driver

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers were on patrol in the area of Mack and Kensington when they noticed a speeding car.

After stopping the vehicle, officers asked the driver for her name and her driver's license and car registration.

The driver gave officers a false name, locked the doors and refused to cooperate in any way.

The driver was arrested and later identified by a name other than the one she originally gave police. When asked about the discrepancy she told police that she did not mean to mislead them, but rather she gave police her spiritual name the first time she was asked by police.

Her case has been sent before the Park city attorney. The suspect could be charged with providing police with a false name, resisting arrest and speeding.

Bikers busted

Grosse Pointe Park public safety officers arrested two bike thieves at about 2:30 p.m. on Wednesday, July 23.

The incident began when a resident reported to police that two males had just taken two bikes from a home in the 800 block of Barrington. The caller told police that the thieves were riding south.

Several squad cars in the area responded and detectives saw two men riding bikes in the area of Alter and Korte who matched the description of the thieves.

The bicyclists were stopped and it was determined that these were the men who had taken the bicycles from Barrington. One suspect, a juvenile, was remanded to the custody of Wayne County juvenile court.

The other suspect was charged and pled guilty to larceny of property worth under $100 in Grosse Pointe Park municipal court and was sentenced to 90 days in jail.

Taking cover

Grosse Pointe City police are investigating the theft of two T-Top roof panels stolen from a vehicle July 21.

According to reports, the victim reported the panels stolen from a 1994 Pontiac Firebird in the 800 block of Notre Dame.

The approximate value of the items is $800.

There are no suspects in custody.

Bikes stolen

Grosse Pointe City police are investigating two girls' bikes reported stolen July 25.

According to reports, the victim's mother reported the bikes taken from the playground of Mair Elementary School while the children were playing.

The bikes' serial numbers were entered into LEIN. There are no suspects in custody.

Caught holding

Grosse Pointe Shores police arrested two Grosse Pointe Woods residents and one person from the Shores July 22 for possessing stolen property.

According to police, the suspects were pulled over in their car and several stolen decorative street signs were found in the vehicle.

The value of the signs is over $1,000.

The suspects were arraigned in Municipal Court and charged with larceny. They were released on $100 bond.

Hubcap heist

Grosse Pointe Farms police are investigating the theft of two wheel covers reported stolen July 21.

According to reports, the victim reported the theft after returning to his car parked in the Republic Bank parking lot on Mack. The car is a 1990 Buick Century.

No suspects are in custody.

Rental car stolen

Grosse Pointe Farms police are investigating a reported rental car theft July 23 after the renter failed to return the car as agreed upon in the rental contract.

According to reports, the suspect signed a one-month rental agreement with Thrifty Car Rental on Mack and failed to return the car. Under the contract, the vehicle was rented from June 11 through July 11. The company sent a notice to the suspect after the contract expired but received no reply.

The car is a 1997 Green Dodge Intrepid. There are no suspects in custody.

Summer heist of snowblower

Grosse Pointe Farms police are investigating a snowblower reported stolen from a garage on Moran July 26.

According to reports, the victim said the garage door was open at the time of the theft.

The Toro snowblower is valued at $350.

Residents hit by armed robber

Grosse Pointe Farms police are investigating an armed robbery of two residents early July 28 in their driveway on Lothrop.

According to reports, the victims were unpacking their car after returning from Metro Airport.

When they approached the side door they were met by two youths who pulled out semi-automatic pistols and demanded their money.

Both victims surrendered their wallets which combined carried about $150 and credit cards. Police found the stolen wallets later that day in Grosse Pointe City.

The wife of one of the victims witnessed the robbery and summoned police. The suspects escaped on foot and a yard-to-yard search with the help of Park and City police came up negative.

Both suspects are described as black males, about 17 years old. One is 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 170 pounds. He has a shaved head and was wearing a blue shirt with dark pants.

The other suspect is 5 feet 9 inches tall with a thin build. He has short hair and was wearing a gray shirt and dark shorts.

Both victims said they were not followed from the airport. There were no other witnesses. There are no suspects in custody.

Caregiving demands can be lessened with proper support

It's a fact of life that sometimes blessings bring problems. The timeworn saying, "Be careful what you wish for you might get it," is worth heeding.

It is human nature, for example, to wish to live a long life, free of debilitating diseases. Yet sometimes while the will and the mind are strong, the body begins to weaken and it is necessary to depend on others.

It is commonly believed that most people go to a nursing home at that point. But the truth is that 80 percent are taken care of by family members. Nearly 7 million people are caregivers to elderly relatives and friends who can no longer fend for themselves.

The majority of these caregivers are women who are most likely to be taking care of a disabled spouse, parent or parent-in-law. Most caregivers are between the ages 35 to 60, but 10 percent are 75 or older.

Caregivers are often referred to as "hidden patients," for studies have found that the physical and emotional demands of the job can often take a toll on the caregiver's own health.

The patient with chronic illness or pain may have bouts of depression or a disease like Alzheimer's may cause personality changes. Patients with these disorders may be unable to recognize familiar faces and become unappreciative, unreasonable and angry. Such behavior is the fault of the disease. Nevertheless, it is hard to sustain care that is unrewarded.

Prime Time

By Marian Trainor

Many caregivers are elderly themselves and have their own health problems which may take a back seat to the demands of caregiving. The emotional strain may be even more difficult. Overburdened caregivers may become isolated from friends and even from family.

Shocking but true, some elderly people who can't care for themselves have been left in hospital emergency rooms by family or friends exhausted by the pressure of caregiving. Such action is called "granny dumping."

It isn't that people are necessarily callous. Many caregivers are overwhelmed. The fact that they can't continue doesn't mean they don't care for the person. It may mean they have reached the point where they can't go on.

"They get no help from immediate members of the family who have no idea how much care the patient requires. Research has shown that the rate of depression among caregivers is double that of the general population. A working caregiver may have to give up a job to meet the needs of the ill person. This loss of income may be compounded by added expenses.

But there are measures that can be taken to lessen the burden without abandoning an elderly, sick relative. Try to maintain social contact and use community resources. Learn as much as possible about the patient's condition, symptoms, rehabilitation, the likelihood of improvement and the prognosis. This way you can set realistic goals of what to expect from the disabled person and from yourself.

Help for caregivers is available through several national and local organizations which can provide information about disabling conditions, support groups and community resources.

A good place to start is the National Institute on Aging Public Information Office, Federal Building Room 612, Bethesda, MD 20892, or by calling (410) 496-1752.

You and Your Car

DAMPENING QUALITY

The term "shock absorber" may not be an apt one for the so-called suspension component. In fact, it is the springs that actually absorb the road shock transmitted through the tire, wheel hub and spring mount. However, it is the function of the more accurately named damper to control the spring's oscillations. Once they are damped, the tire is able to stay in contact with the road surface under most conditions, resulting in a more comfortable ride, precise handling, efficient braking, and smooth acceleration. When the damper wears out, the spring oscillates at will, taking the tire with it. Periodic replacement of the dampers (shock absorbers) alleviates a bouncy ride, poor handling, and skittish tire behavior.

You'll know right away if one of your shocks has lost its spring-your car will give you a distinctly bumpy ride, usually to one side, once a shock is gone. ## Young drivers crash more than other motorists

Younger drivers are more than three times as likely to be involved in a traffic accident compared to motorists aged 65 to 74, according to statistics recently released by the Michigan State Police and compiled by the Michigan Association of Insurance Companies (MAIC).

The information also indicates that young-driver crashes tend to be more deadly.

"About 17 percent of drivers aged 16 to 24 are involved in a traffic accident each year," according to Leanne Snay, executive director of MAIC. "By comparison, only 5 percent of 65 to 74-year-olds are involved in a roadway crash annually."

Snay also noted that 16 to 24-year-old drivers have a greater involvement in fatal accidents than other age groups.

"Younger motorists continue to have more accidents and more costly accidents," Snay says. "That's the reason they pay more for car insurance. The higher price is a reflection of higher insurance pay out."

A younger person who is the principal driver of a motor vehicle typically pays 40 to 200 percent more for coverage than older drivers, according to the MAIC official. This surcharge is reduced as the driver grows older.

Premium surcharges are generally much lower for young drivers who use the family car only on an occasional basis. These typically range from 20 percent for 24-year-olds to 80 percent for 16-year-olds, but vary from one insurance company to another.

The insurance spokesperson offered the following suggestions for controlling the cost of auto insurance:

- Drive carefully. Most traffic tickets and at-fault accidents will automatically increase your rates.

- Car pool when possible. Rates are partially determined by the amount and type of driving you do.

- Select your car carefully. Cost, repairability and performance characteristics are determining factors in the premium you pay.

- Coordinate Personal Injury Protection (PIP) coverage if you have other accident and health insurance which covers injuries sustained in an automobile accident.

- Choose higher deductibles on Collision and Comprehensive coverage. Consider a more economical type of collision insurance, but make sure you understand when you are covered and when you are not.

- If you have an older car, consider dropping both collision and comprehensive coverage.

- Ask about special discounts. Most companies offer rate discounts to policyholders who, for example, insure two or more vehicles with the same company.

MAIC is a non-profit public information organization which sponsors a number of consumer information and education programs, including driver safety presentations in Michigan high schools.

The lower school at the Grosse Pointe Academy called a time out from their studies and enjoyed a field day, an annual event held at the end of the school year. The third-graders pictured challenged their peers to a tug-of-war.

SCHOOL NEWS

Accolades

Dan Lienert of Grosse Pointe Woods and an honors graduate of the University of Detroit Jesuit High School, along with his father Paul Lienert, were among 17 U-D Jesuit students and coaches who flew to Baltimore to attend the recent National Catholic Forensic League grand tournament.

At this event, Dan competed in the semi-final round and placed third nationally in the category of the Lincoln-Douglas debates. Dan fought his way up, after being seeded fifth in the nation.

The tournament brings together more than 3,000 students annually to compete for national honors. This was the highest honor won by any student in this category from the Detroit Catholic Forensic League in its history.

Dan was the captain of the U-D Cub forensic team, which broke a Detroit Catholic Forensic League record by winning its sixth straight unprecedented, first-place sweepstakes championship.

In the four years that Dan attended U-D, he participated in the Lincoln-Douglas debate program. He was the first freshman to attend the National Catholic Forensic League grand tournament as part of team Michigan in the category of the Lincoln-Douglas debates in that league's history.

Sajdak grew up in Yonkers, N.Y.; professed vows as a Marist in 1963; earned his S.T.L. (Licentiate in Sacred Theology) from Gregorian Pontifical University in Rome; and was ordained a priest in 1971. He was on the Marist Seminary staff in Cambridge, Mass.; served as parochial vicar at Holy Name Parish in Detroit; and for the last 10 years has been professor of philosophy at Madonna University in Livonia.

Former principal Richard M. Kuhn resigned after serving for three years. He will continue on staff as a full-time counselor. Sajdak will work closely with the Rev. Normand Martin, Rector, the Marist and lay faculty, and the board of trustees to continue improvements to the educational programs and the school's facilities.

Prior to accepting his new position, Sajdak taught at Notre Dame as a seminarian and as a priest, as well as serving on the school's board of trustees.

"The board members, teachers and parents that I have spoken with are delighted that Father Sajdak readily accepted my request that he become the next principal of Notre Dame High School," said Marist Provincial, the Rev. Joseph Hindleang.

Oldsmobile, Ferrari take bows at 19th Concours d'Elegance

Salutes to Oldsmobile, the first American auto marque to reach its centennial year, and Ferrari, celebrating its 50th year in production, will highlight the 19th annual Concours d'Elegance on Sunday, Aug. 3, at Meadow Brook Hall at Oakland University in Rochester.

Ferrari is considered by many as the ultimate sports car, a perennial road racing champion and the most expensive production car available in the United States. Prices for the exotic Italian sportster start at $127,000 for an "entry-level" V-8 and run up over $400,000 for the top-of-the-line V-12.

By contrast, Oldsmobile is pure middle-America. The Lansing-based auto maker has long been a popular family car with a lineup that includes something for everyone and it has also been an innovator for General Motors.

The Meadow Brook Concours is generally regarded as one of the very top classic car shows in the world, ranking with similar events in Pebble Beach, Calif., and Paris. It will take place Sunday, Aug. 3, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Honorary chairman of this year's Concours is Jacques

Nasser, president of Ford Motor Co. Automotive Operations and chairman of Ford of Europe. Del DeRees, retired from advanced vehicles concepts development at Chrysler Corp., is chairman.

To mark Ferrari's 50th anniversary, the Concours invited more than 70 of the most significant Ferraris in the world for a rare showing of this marque. Special guests will include Sergio Pininfarina, legendary Ferrari coach builder, and Phil Hill, Grand Prix race driver for Ferrari and the first American to win the World Driving championship.

Present will be the oldest known Ferrari still in existence, a 1947 166 Spyder Corsa No. 002C. This rare vehicle appears on this year's Meadow Brook Hall Concours d'Elegance poster, painted by Dennis Hoyt, of Sheridan, Ore.

Also slated to appear is David Letterman's 1951 212 Ferrari Inter Ghia Coupe, and six Ferraris from Bob Smith Coachworks, Gainesville, Tex., including the legendary 250 Sport Ferrari Vignale Coupe No. 156 ET and the 1956 250 Tour de France Competizione Berlinetta Ferrari No. 0557GT that won the Tour de France in 1956.

Oldsmobile is the oldest American marque still in production and the first to reach 100 years. To honor that achievement and the enormous contribution of that make to development of the American automobile, the Concours invited a range of Oldsmobiles from 1903 through 1969 for an exhibit of the "Great Oldsmobile" era.

Six of only eight surviving Oldsmobile Limiteds, giant masterpieces built from 1910 through 1912, will be included in the exhibit. These huge examples of early automotive art are powered by 706-cubic-inch engines and ride on 43-inch tires.

The Oldsmobile exhibit will represent many of the numerous firsts for that nameplate. Ransom E. Olds was born in 1864 in Geneva, Ohio, and at an early age showed an aptitude for engines. He was not a part-time inventor, as many of the early auto pioneers were, but worked at his father's business in Lansing, a machine shop and producer of stationary engines.

Olds built his first car, a steamer, in 1886 and he built a number of steam cars in the years before he switched to gasoline engines for his production vehicles. Olds was not the first American car maker to go into commercial production, that honor belonged to Charles and Frank Duryea in 1896. But Olds followed soon after and his marque survives.

The Olds Motor Vehicle Co. was organized in Lansing Aug. 21, 1897, and built its first automobile that year. It was a four-passenger car with an internal-combustion engine and performed well. It is now on display at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

Oldsmobile became the first company to produce cars in Detroit in 1900 in a plant near the Belle Isle bridge. That plant burned down and forced Olds to concentrate efforts on the only car to survive the fire, a small curved-dash Oldsmobile. The Curved-Dash Olds, the "Merry Oldsmobile" of musical fame, became the Among historic Ferraris at the Concours will be this 1951 Berlinetta Coupe 340 America Vignale No. 0082A.

Among historic cars to be displayed at the Concours is this 1951 Packard Pan American convertible produced as a show car for the New York Auto Show. It will be presented in a ceremony at the Concours to the Detroit Historical Museum.

The first modern front-wheel-drive car to be built after World War II was this 1966 Oldsmobile Toronado.

first mass-produced car in America.

Among Olds' early associates who went on to fame in the auto industry were Roy Chapin, who later co-founded Hudson Motor Car Co.; John Maxwell, who built a car with his name and whose company became the basis for Chrysler Corp.; Henry Leland, whose machine shop supplied components to Olds and who created the Cadillac and Lincoln cars; and John and Horace Dodge, who also supplied components to Olds, later became instrumental in Ford Motor Co. and started their own Dodge Brothers firm which became part of Chrysler Corp.

After becoming one of the original auto producing divisions of General Motors in 1908, the Oldsmobile gained a reputation as a cutting-edge vehicle over the years.

In 1939, Oldsmobile offered Hydra-matic drive as an option, the first true automatic transmission that really worked. It cost $57.

In 1948, Oldsmobile shared GM's new high-compression V-8 with Cadillac.

But it was Oldsmobile's marketing of the new engine in 1949 as the Rocket 88 that captured the public's imagination.

In 1962, Oldsmobile introduced the "Jetfire" engine, the first production powerplant to use a turbocharger.

The Toronado was introduced as a 1966 model, the first modern front-wheel-drive car built in America.

In 1971, Olds introduced its Custom Cruiser station wagon, the first wagon with a disappearing tailgate and rear window.

Also scheduled for display at the Concours will be a special exhibit of Ford concept cars and Ford Motor Co. "Chiefs of State" cars, including Lincolns built for the White House and a custom LeBaron-bodied Lincoln created for the visit to North America of the King and Queen of England in 1939.

A 1951 Packard Pan American convertible originally produced as a show car for the 1952 New York Auto Show will be featured.

This car will be presented to the Detroit Historical Museum by former Detroit J.B. Moran, now of Palm Beach, Fla.

Also to be displayed is a 1952 Packard Panther Daytona convertible prototype, one of only four built for Packard. It is owned by the Mitchell Museum of Owosso, Mich.

A 1952 Aston Martin DB2, owned by Chrysler Corp. Vice Chairman Bob Lutz, will be displayed. Lutz bought the car in Europe and upon checking the serial numbers he discovered it was the same car that was once owned by his father.

A rare 1932 Stutz DV-12 Boat-tail Speedster, owned by Pennsylvania collector Ray Bowersox, will be shown, as will a 1902 Mercedes, the oldest known Mercedes in existence, and a rare and elegant 1932 Maybach Zeppelin convertible sedan.

Two nameplates not widely known will be represented at the Concours.

Two exotic and very stylish Bizzarrinis are scheduled to be shown.

Bizzarrini is an Italian car built from 1965-69, powered by a Chevrolet V-8 engine.

Two Tractas, a French marque manufactured 1926-34, are also slated to appear.

One Tracta is a 1929 Type

A, one of only two built, that was raced at LeMans in 1929 and 1930.

The other is a 1930 Type E, one of only two known to exist. The other is in a museum in Paris.

Ferrari is also the featured marque at the Ford Meadow Brook Historic Race at Waterford Hills Raceway.

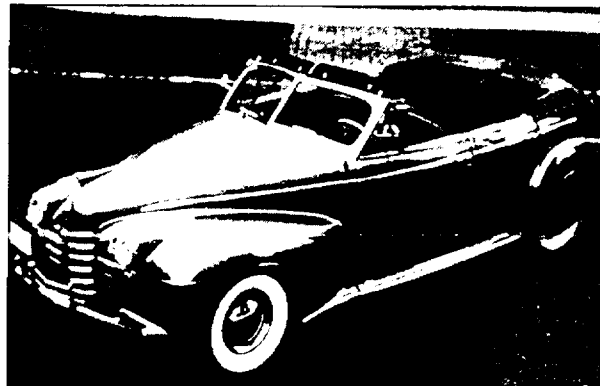

Clarkston, Friday, Aug. 1 through Sunday, Aug. 3.

Friday is a practice day and admission is free. Admission is $10 Saturday and Sunday.

Admission to the Sunday Concours d'Elegance is $20 for adults and $10 for teenagers 13-17.

Children 12 and under are free.

This 1940 Oldsmobile 90 four-door convertible sedan was one of the first cars to have an optional Hydra-matic transmission. The option cost $57.

The Pirates Cove restaurant, a favorite eatery for Grosse Pointers for 15 years, has changed owners. The new proprietors are David Colton and his wife Kim Tower-Colton, who intend to keep the place much the same as it is.

"We'll be updating the decor and giving the spot a bit of a facelift," David said. "But other than those modifications, our clientele will find the restaurant virtually unchanged."

The Coltons have retained chef Robin Robinson and the rest of the staff to ensure a

MAIC advises victims needing July 2 storm emergency insurance assistance

Three weeks after thunderstorms and tornadoes thrashed five counties in southeastern Michigan, claims are still streaming into insurance companies, and the carriers have stepped up operations in an effort to respond to the thousands of claims resulting from the storms.

"Insurance carriers are using a number of different ways to address those claims promptly and efficiently," said Leanne Snay, executive director of the Michigan Association of Insurance Carriers.

Some insurance companies have set up special toll-free telephone numbers and have established special offices near the damaged sites so that the insured have quick access to them. Insurance companies which have a large number of claims in the damaged areas have brought in dozens of additional adjusters to resolve claims.

The Internet is also being used to assist adjusters and policyholders with claim information by allowing quicker access to information about the nature of claims reported, how to report a claim and protecting property from further damage.

If your property was damaged by the storm, the insurance industry representative suggests the following steps be taken:

- Protect your home from further damage by boarding up broken windows and openings in the roof and walls.
- Keep all receipts, including those from staying in a hotel if your house is uninhabitable.

- Make sure you use reputable companies for all repairs.

- Take photographs and conduct a room-by-room inventory, giving complete descriptions of the damaged property.

- Use flashlights, not candles, which could start a fire.

The companies that have set up special toll-free numbers are: AAA Michigan — (800) AAA-MICH; Allstate Insurance — (800) 54-STORM; Citizens Insurance Company of America — (800) 477-6125; Michigan Basic Property Insurance Association — (800) 336-3124; and State Farm Mutual Insurance — (800) 732-5246.

Film maker gains fame with DEAD IS DEAD movies

By Ann L. Fouty
Staff writer

It was a hot and muggy night. There was no breeze to cool a dead body. It was an oppressive night.

So the "four" of us sat on the couch to discuss an oppressive subject: death.

The four of us included: dark-haired, dark-eyed movies. "People like to get scared. I like to help them get scared. My films might be gross, but not disgusting."

What better way to get scared than to make a movie about death?

Now in production is a remake of the first video of his "Dead is Dead" trilogy. It is marketed direct-to-video and a combination of names from a weight-loss pill and a headache remedy. It also has a name which is believable, one thing he said he wanted for his make-believe chemical.

He also wanted to tell a story with few words, to have his viewers think as a result of the actors' facial expressions and actions in which some-having their souls transported back in time to another person. The modern person would feel everything felt by the person in history.

Part 3 of "Dead is Dead" sees the hero of all three films, Eric Shepherd, played by Stanley, pour both the good Doxital and the bad down the drain.

The drain has a leak, thus allowing the substances to drip onto a dead plant. It comes alive.

The roots grow into the sewer, eventually coming up through a manhole, grabbing a mechanic and dragging him to his death in the sewer.

In this remake of "Dead is Dead," Eric is looking for his twin brother who allegedly died in a fire. A Eric Shepherd, played by Mike Stanley of St. Clair Shores, cautiously enters an empty basement in search of clues to the whereabouts of his brother. Stanley is the author, director and star of the latest "Dead is Dead" horror films.

Jennifer, Mike with his close-cropped beard, me, and... a bloody, no-nose, no-ears, skinless head.

Actually only three of us were talking; the head, with bad teeth, didn't make a sound, except for teeth clicking when film director Mike Stanley moved the movie prop's jaw.

"I've just always been interested in monsters," said the 34-year-old maker of horror runs 70-75 minutes. In the "Dead is Dead" series, dead is not necessarily dead.

With the chemical Doxital, severed limbs can be regrown and the newly dead (those dead not more than 24 hours) can be brought back to life. A bad batch of the stuff was also brewed up during the first film.

Doxital is a name Stanley came up with while watching television some years ago. It is thing unusual was found, realizing its power and being greedy about it. Enter Doxital.

In part 1, the chemical was found to revive the dead and repair the main character's partially dismembered body. Eric Shepherd, the victim, was attacked and partially dismembered by a once-human creature and user of Doxital and in the 1991 film.

Part 2, "The Incarnation," saw those who drank Doxital letter and video are left for him at a church. This prompts a search for the brother leading to various locations in St. Clair Shores, New Baltimore and Memphis, Tenn., and an encounter with a young boy named Josh Koch.

Using public areas (Memorial Park and cemeteries), a relative's home, (his in-laws' basement) Stanley cuts down on overhead. He sets a budget of $5,000 for his films.

"He's very talented," said his wife of less than a year, Jennifer.

Stanley handed over his first "Dead is Dead" film to a professional marketing man and was disappointed in what followed. The film was changed without Stanley's consent and he didn't receive all the money made from the film.

Now the Roseville native handles all marketing himself.

He also gave up his royalties to that first film, reworked it to his satisfaction, releasing it as a special collectors' edition, director's cut.

It takes a year from the time Stanley begins a film to when it hits the market. In between filming the long horror films, Stanley has filmed short, 30-minute horror films. The latest one was called "Yesterday's Child."

"Dead is Dead" is available to rent at Thomas Video in Royal Oak and it's listed for sale in horror magazines like Fangoria and Independent Video and Film Threat Video Guide.

Due to his reputation, Fangoria will advertise his productions even before the final production is complete, Stanley said.

He is getting national recognition in the horror film world because John Russo, co-author of "Night of the Living Dead," hired Stanley to work on the 25th anniversary of the film "Zombie Jamboree."

Working in film began early for Stanley, at the age of 13. A shy child, he made his first film, "The Unknown," with a Super 8 movie camera.

Once students found out about his interest in films, Stanley had new-found respect from his peers.

At age 19, Stanley graduated from a six-week public access television course where he learned the basics of cable television. Upon certification, he created his own 30-minute show called "Tales From Beyond." He produced this for seven years in Macomb County.

Sold-out Great Gatsby Gala adds afterglow tickets

Due to the overwhelming interest in Grosse Pointe's Great Gatsby Gala on Saturday, Aug. 2, a new ticket category has been created. Afterglow tickets will be sold at the door beginning at 9:30 p.m. on the night of the event, weather permitting, according to Suzy Berschback of the War Memorial.

Afterglow tickets are $32.50 and include dancing under the stars by the lake to the music of the Hotel Savarine Society Orchestra.

The Great Gatsby Gala is a benefit for the preservation programs of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and the Grosse Pointe Historical Society's newly restored Provencal-Weir House, which was built around 1823.

The gala (which has been sold out for weeks) will be held at the historic Grosse Pointe War Memorial (formerly the Alger House, built in 1910).

The evening will include dinner, antique car displays, croquet and lawn bowling, the Casali Charleston Troupe, and music by the Red Garter Band and the Hotel Savarine Society Orchestra.

Black tie or 1920s attire are optional. There will be Great Gatsby fashion and Charleston dance contests, with prizes provided by DuMouchelle Art Galleries.

The master of ceremonies will be Channel 7 weatherman Jerry Hodak. Honorary chairmen of the event are Grosse Pointers Mr. and Mrs. Ronald C. Lamparter and Mr. and Mrs. H. Hudson Mead.

Conserve the conservatory: The Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory on Belle Isle was built in 1904. Three years ago, a hail storm broke expensive glass panes, which still have not been replaced.

Because of the damage, wild animals and birds have easy access to the plants inside and many historic plants are in danger of frostbite during the winter months.

The 1997 Summer Soiree, a benefit for the preservation and restoration of the facility, will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 2. Tickets are $50 and include dinner, desserts, tours of the conservatory and entertainment by the Silver Strings Dulcimer Society.

The Pastor's Corner

It's not easy staying green

By the Rev. Timothy Holzerland
Christ the King Lutheran Church

When I drive down our streets, I admire the beauty of many of the lawns and gardens of the area. I know from my own lawn, that the beauty of any landscape does not just happen. It takes much hard work. When the beauty of a landscape is destroyed by storms or neglected by humans, it saddens me.

Our life with Jesus Christ can be likened to tending a garden. It involves many hours of hard work, but over time, we will enjoy many hours of beauty. Following are some gardening metaphors to describe what I mean. First, let's start with the hard work.

Weed — No matter how hard we try to avoid them, the weeds of negative thoughts, hurtful words and careless actions can still pop up in life. Before they get out of hand, we must acknowledge them and pull them out of our lives.

Prune — In order for a Christian life to fully blossom, we must be pruned by our Heavenly Father through the experiences and lessons of life. Pruning is painful, but necessary for our growth.

Water — Plants need water throughout the growing season. In the same way, we must continue to pray throughout our lives. We must maintain a personal devotional time with Jesus Christ, so that our souls will be quenched with a stronger faith.

Fertilize — Plants need food to grow in order to be strong and ward off disease. Worship each week enables us to grow in faith and protects us against the schemes of the devil.

If, even with all this hard work, we can't make our plants grow, we wait to see what will happen to them. In our lives with Christ, we can't make our faith grow, we wait for the Holy Spirit to work in our lives.

But as the Spirit moves and works within you, watch for the buds of forgiveness and hope begin to grow within you. This will soon open into a blossom of care and concern for those who are in need, and result in the joy of serving those who need your help.

Enjoy the beauty of peace and trust in God, which will be with you long after the snow begins to fly this coming winter.

is $10 a child. The program will feature stories, crafts, music, games and more. For more information, call (313) 884-3075 or (313) 881-6670.

How to help someone who seems suicidal

"The recent news that suicide is on the rise among school-age children is alarming and disturbing," said Joanne Lindensmith, program director of Common Ground. "However, no matter what a person's age, we strive to prevent suicide with timely intervention and access to professional help."

Common Ground's 24-hour telephone crisis intervention information and referral service assists over 20,000 troubled individuals who call each year, many of whom are contemplating suicide.

Here are some warning signs from the American Association of Suicidology:

A person may be suicidal if he or she:

- Talks about committing suicide
- Has trouble eating or sleeping
- Experiences drastic changes in behavior
- Withdraws from friends and/or social activities
- Loses interest in hobbies, work, school
- Prepares for death by making out a will and final arrangements
- Gives away prized possessions
- Has attempted suicide before
- Takes unnecessary risks
- Has had recent severe losses
- Is preoccupied with death and dying
- Loses interest in personal appearance
- Increases use of alcohol or drugs

How to help:

- Be direct. Talk openly and matter-of-factly about suicide.
- Be willing to listen. Allow expression of feelings and accept them.
- Be non-judgmental. Don't get into moral debates about suicide.
- Don't lecture on the value of life.
- Get involved. Be available.

Show interest and support.

- Don't dare the person to do it.
- Don't act shocked.
- Don't let yourself be sworn to silence. Seek support.
- Offer hope that alternatives are available but don't give glib reassurance.
- Take action. Remove means of committing suicide, such as guns or pills.
- Get help from people or agencies specializing in crisis intervention and suicide prevention.

In addition to Common Ground's telephone crisis intervention service, it offers victim assistance programs, community education programs like "Watch Me Grow" and "Peer Relationships," focusing on empowering school-age children with skills to interact positively with others, promoting the growth of healthy self-esteem and coping skills. Emergency psychiatric services, provided in cooperation with Sinai Health System, are available 24 hours a day for adults, children and adolescents. There is also a legal clinic and partnership in the Oakland County Crisis Response Organization.

In 1971, students, parents and community leaders who were concerned about the rise in drug use by suburban teens founded Common Ground in Birmingham. The organization depends on its volunteers to keep it going. People interested in volunteering are invited to attend an orientation on the first Wednesday evening of every month in Pontiac. For information, call (810) 456-8150.

The crisis line is (810) 456-0909 or (800) 231-1127.

True or false?

By Dr. Vicki L. Seltzer
President, The American College of Obstetricians, Gynecologists

Accurate information about women's health is much easier to obtain today than it was in the past. Not so many years ago, certain women's health issues — from menstruation to menopause — were deemed improper for discussion in a public forum or the popular media, and were often neglected as topics for medical research.

In such a vacuum of information, it's no wonder that certain myths about women's health arose. Many of them still linger with us today. Here are some worth debunking:

- Myth No. 1: Heart disease is a man's problem.
This misconception, still held by many, is profoundly dangerous. Before menopause, women suffer heart disease less often than men, but the condition strikes post-menopausal women just as often as it does men. Heart disease is the No. 1 killer of women — about 10 times as many women die of heart disease as die from breast cancer. Ask your doctor about the diet and exercise habits that can protect your heart.
- Myth No. 2: Exercise is less important for women than men.
The days when women were expected to refrain from the exertions of exercise are over. Now we know that exercise is critical for women. It can reduce the risks of heart disease and osteoporosis and provides benefits such as promoting weight loss and enhancing mood. Your doctor can help you find the exercise program that's right for you.

Myth No. 3: It's all in your head.
When women's health care seemed shrouded in secrecy, this admonition was more common. Menstrual cramps, hot flashes, pelvic pain, postpartum depression and other women's health concerns were sometimes written off as imagined. Now we know that dismissing symptoms out of fear that they are imaginary can be unhealthy. Trust your own observations, and raise any concerns with your doctor.

Myth No. 4: Menopause is the beginning of the end.
This belief dates to a time when life spans were shorter and women's lives were measured by their ability to bear children. Today, with a life expectancy of about 80 years, a woman can expect to live almost 40 percent of her life after menopause. This can be a time of increased productivity, self-confidence and enjoyment for many women. The unpleasant side effects that some menopausal women experience can often be controlled through diet, exercise, hormone replacement therapy or (if needed) medication. Don't let old beliefs hamper the full enjoyment of these years.

Finally, don't be afraid to ask your doctor questions if you have concerns. Dialogue helps all of us separate fact from fiction in women's health.

The check, presented during a recent meeting at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, represents the auxiliary's annual donation to the hospital. It is the result of many fundraising efforts by the organization's more than 1,000 members, who help serve the physical, emotional and spiritual needs of the community. Another gift of $10,000 was given to the Sisters of St. Joseph of Nazareth, Michigan — the charitable organization sponsoring SJH&MC.

Dental care is important during pregnancy

By Dr. Vicki L. Seltzer
President, American College of Obstetricians, Gynecologists

If you are pregnant, the physical changes you are experiencing may overshadow concerns you have about your teeth. Yet pregnancy itself can make you more vulnerable to certain dental problems, and good dental care is important as you await your baby.

During pregnancy, changes in hormonal levels can cause the gums to become swollen and tender, a condition called gingivitis. Although gingivitis itself is not serious, it can lead to advanced gum disease, called periodontitis, involving the bones that secure the teeth. Symptoms of this disease include discoloration of the gums, gum recession, and loosening of the teeth.

Other physical changes of pregnancy can also increase a woman's dental risks. Pregnant women may be more likely to eat frequent small meals, or to indulge in cravings for sugary snacks, increasing their chances for cavities.

Ideally, you should schedule an appointment with your dentist before becoming pregnant, and have any necessary repair work done then. You should have at least one checkup and cleaning during pregnancy.

Cleaning is important to remove plaque, the build-up on teeth that increases the risk of serious gum disease. When you see your dentist, be sure to tell him or her that you are pregnant. Your dentist may recommend several cleanings, depending on the condition of your teeth.

If you have a dental problem during pregnancy, see your dentist right away. Postponing necessary dental work can cause problems, especially if teeth or gums get infected. Local anesthesia and properly performed dental x-rays do not pose a risk during pregnancy. However, it is probably best to put off any optional treatments until after your baby is born. Talk over your plans for dental work not only with your dentist, but also with the doctor providing your prenatal care.

Good oral hygiene is also essential during pregnancy. Brush your teeth with a fluoride toothpaste at least twice daily, preferably after each meal. Floss daily. Replace your toothbrush when it gets worn, about every three months.

Avoid sugary foods as between-meal snacks, since sugars cause the bacteria in plaque to produce acids that harm tooth enamel. When possible, brush your teeth after snacking. Eat the foods good for you and your baby, such as dairy foods for calcium and green, leafy vegetables for folic acid and minerals.

Camp experience is for grieving children

Hospices of Henry Ford Health System, in collaboration with Community Hospice and Home Care Services, will offer support to children on their journey through grief with specialized group sessions, art and structured play activities. There is a $20 registration fee.

American Heart Association

Getting the lead out should be top priority where young children live, play

It could be in your water, your paint, even your baby's crib. It's the No. 1 environmental health threat to children and it is 100 percent preventable.

Lead. It is a poison that affects young children, slowing their growth and development. "Awareness is the key to keeping your children safe," said Dr. Kanta Bhambhani, director of the lead clinic at The Detroit Medical Center's Children's Hospital of Michigan. "The only way to tell if your child has lead poisoning is to have his or her blood checked regularly."

Unfortunately for many Detroit kids, lead poisoning goes undetected. "In most cases, lead poisoning is symptomless," explains Bhambhani. "Many problems like learning disabilities and developmental delays do not show up until a child reaches school age."

- Danger zones
So how do you know if you have lead in or around your home? Look for these warning signs:
- Peeling or chipping paint inside and outside the home, especially around window sills, woodwork, walls, stairs, railings and porches.
  - Water and soil.
  - Painted toys.
  - Dishes and pottery.
  - Old cribs, playpens or chairs.
  - Fireplace ashes.

- Cleaning up
Any house or apartment built before 1978 may contain lead-based paint. Most homes built before 1960 contain lead-based paint. When paint is broken, sanded, or scraped it breaks into tiny pieces that your child may swallow or inhale. Even small repairs and renovations can create enough lead dust and chips to harm your child. Be sure to take the appropriate safety measures before doing any repairs or renovations.
- Before you disturb a surface with lead-based paint, have the area tested.
  - Have the repairs done by a professional who has been trained to protect you and your family.
  - If you must do repairs and renovations yourself:

- Remove all children and pregnant women until all the work is completed and the area is properly cleaned.
- Cover exposed areas, use plastic coverings to seal off entrances and ducts and to protect furniture, carpets and floors. Dispose of the plastic carefully.
- Keep dust to a minimum by wetting surfaces before you work on them. Always clean up dust chips with wet mops or rags. Avoid sweeping or vacuuming the work area.

- Safeguarding your family
- Keep your child away from lead sources.
  - Wipe down floors and window sills frequently.
  - Cover peeling paint with duct tape or contact paper.
  - Have your child's blood tested once a year starting at 7 months until 7 years.
  - Wash your child's hands frequently, especially after playing and before eating.
  - Let cold water run from the tap for at least 30 seconds before drinking and cooking.
  - Do not use hot tap water for cooking.
  - Set up a regular eating schedule with three balanced meals every day.
  - Give your child foods that are high in iron and calcium.
  - Be alert for chipping and flaking paint.
  - Use safe interior paints on toys, walls and furniture.
  - Store food in glass, plastic or stainless steel containers, not in open cans.
  - Have your tap water tested.

For more information on lead and lead poisoning, contact Children's Hospital of Michigan Poison Control Center at (313) 745-5711.

Reference book showcases writers doing their jobs

"Booknotes: America's Finest Authors on Reading, Writing, and the Power of Ideas."

By Brian Lamb
Time Books, 122 pages

Apptly enough, there is a distinctive quote which opens the pages of "Booknotes." It is by former Prime Minister Shimon Peres of Israel whose C-Span interview was televised from Independence Hall in Philadelphia on July 4, 1996. Upon receiving the Liberty Medal, Peres spoke thus: "I know there are good books and bad books. It can be fiction or nonfiction. It can be philosophy. It can be history. Really, when it comes to books, it is its value, its depth. You make an acquaintance with a book as you do with a person. After 10 or 15 pages, you know with whom you have to deal. When you have a good book, you really have something of importance. Books are as important as friends and maybe more so. Because all of us are living in very limited circles, books enable us to run away from them."

As the founding CEO of C-Span, Brian Lamb is the popular host of its entertaining weekly program. Being a resident of Arlington, Va., he is conveniently located near the center of political activity in Washington, D.C. Since the program's inception on April 1989, he has had over 400 guests, all of them non-fiction writers, and he is still going strong.

Biblio File

By Elizabeth P. Walker

This book is divided into three sections: Storytellers, Reporters, and Public Figures. Included within is a complete list of all C-Span Booknotes from 1989 to the present, a helpful index, plus two sections of colored photographs taken by Lamb of his author-interviewees. This is an interesting reference book full of glimpses of writers hard at work.

"Booknotes" opens with David McCullough who wrote that splendid biography, "Truman: A Life and Times," and ends with Margaret Thatcher, the former British prime minister, who discussed the first volume of her memoirs, "The Downing Street Years." In between is a colorful gamut of political writers, historians and journalists, whose books inform us in so many ways, and in other ways, perhaps to infuriate and exasperate us. However, whether or not we disagree or agree with their opinions and conclusions, we are compelled to force open our minds to allow some fresh ideas to aerate and to take root within us, all to our own betterment.

Shelby Foote, the great Civil War historian, came to C-Span to converse about his "The American Presidency: An Intellectual History." He remarks to Lamb that "I don't allow anybody around while I'm writing. My wife manages to live with me, and my son and our dog, but I like to be let alone when I'm working. I see these Hollywood movies where the man gets up in the middle of the night and dashes off a few thousand words, and his little wife comes in to make sure he's comfortable and everything. That's all foolishness. It would never be anything like that. In fact, I'm privately convinced that most of the bad writing the world's ever seen has been done under the influence of what's called inspiration."

The author of "Citizens: A Chronicle of the French Revolution," Simon Schama talks about his fourth book, a best seller. He obviously has a sense of humor. "I like writing at home with my dog, Morgan, who sort of slept under my computer. When the Revolution was too much, I used to reach for his hopeless, silky hair. So it was very calming. I have to say it was a wonderfully seductive effect. P. should have a credit in the preface."

In 1993, Joseph Ellis was a guest to talk about his book, "Passionate Sage," a memoir of our second president, John Adams. According to Professor Ellis: "John Adams read a lot. Even in his old age when his eyes were so bad, he had people read to him — and, you know, we think of Jefferson as a great reader, and he was. He was a great reader, and the Jefferson library was the foundation for the Library of Congress. Adams is perhaps the only member of the Revolutionary generation who was better read than Jefferson, and that's not just a special plea here. Jefferson himself said that."

Nicholas Basbanes who wrote "A Gentle Madness: Bibliophiles, Bibliomanes and the Eternal Passion for Books," began his interview: "I coined the title myself, actually. It was a description made of Isaiah Thomas, a great nineteenth-century American bibliophile and collector. When he died, his grandson, Benjamin Franklin Thomas, said, 'Grandfather was afflicted from the earliest age with the gentlest of infirmities. He was a bibliomaniac.' When I saw that description of him, I said, 'There's my title.'"

The present head of the Library of Congress, Dr. James Billington, was interviewed when his book, "Russia Transformed: Breakthrough to Hope," came out. He told Lamb that "My father was an insurance broker. But he really was a teacher of people. He went into the insurance business and never got to complete his education, but he did complete his education, as he said in later years — when they asked him for his biography, he always said — he went to Leary's University because it was this used bookstore. I guess that's why I'm Librarian of Congress, because my father kept bringing back used books from Leary's bookstore in Philadelphia."

When "The Fifties" appeared, its author, David Halberstam, talked about his work. He admitted, at the conclusion of the program: "It's a wonderfully privileged life, you know, being a book writer. I'm about to be 60 on my next birthday, and I go out and I write books. I live a good life, and I can have both my private life and my professional life in a way that an anchorman on television or a superstar television reporter can't. There's a wonderful level of privacy and a wonderful level of engagement in the society. I have the best of both worlds."

Another reporter, George Will, strikes a particularly responsive chord within me. During his interview of his book, "Restoration: Congress, Term Limits and the Recovery of Deliberative Democracy," Will confesses to something which is also my weakness and pleasure: "By the way, among the things that are getting better in America are bookstores. There's a chain — I don't mind giving them a big plug — called Borders, and I now go into cities, and if I'm going to have some time, I look up where there's a Borders. You go there, you find people who love books, and you find all this serendipity happening. People go into bookstores, and it's the great bastion of impulse buying, and they go in, they may not know they ever wanted to read a very fat book about the Brooklyn Bridge, for example, but they say, 'Oh, what's there to know about building a bridge?' And that's how these books take on a wonderful life of their own that will outlive all of us. No civilization had anything like what we have now."

A political reporter, Howell Raines, talks about his memoir, "Fly Fishing Through the Midlife Crisis." Surprisingly enough, his "greatest influence, probably, on my writing in my mature years is Yeats, the poetry of Yeats. I'm not a poet, but you can learn from the study of Yeats's poetry. If you're interested. The language is very powerful. I keep the collected Yeats poems on the table in my office, and I try to read one a day — or, by now, reread. But the magic of that language is very powerful, and so that's been a great influence on me."

Even today, Richard Nixon continues to surprise us. The ex-president visited Booknotes early in 1992 to discuss his book, "America's Challenge in a One-Superpower World." At the conclusion, Nixon wistfully remarked: "If I had to choose another profession, I would want to be a sportscaster. I think that would be the greatest job in the world. I like sports. I think I would do it pretty well because I like to watch how they play and those young people, how they meet the test and so forth. I'd just love to be a sportscaster."

In town in 1996 to discuss his "Memoirs," Russia's ex-Communist party chief Mikhail Gorbachev reveals: "Reading is really our great hobby and, because of this, we (my wife and I) have an enormous library. We have been buying books all our life. We have in our library a lot of fiction, a lot of books about history and philosophy, because Mrs. Gorbachev has a Ph.D. in philosophy, a lot of material of a reference kind. So my library is a great help to me. It helps me out in difficult situations. We have the Encyclopaedia Britannica and we use it because our daughter speaks English and Mrs. Gorbachev can read a little English, so we use that as a source."

Two caveats: Most of the writers here are noted public figures, not literary. Also, many of them are assisted by "ghost writers" which, to me, dims a bit of their luster.

'Air Force One' offers viewers an exciting ride

By D.J. Honstain
Special Writer

★★★ (out of four)

Following the disappointing "Devil's Own," Harrison Ford comes back strong with "Air Force One," an action-packed "Die Hard at 30,000 Feet" from the director of "In the Line of Fire."

AT THE MOVIES

By D.J.
Honstain

After a hard-nosed speech against terrorists at the Kremlin, president James Marshall's (Ford) plane is promptly hijacked by scruffy Russian radicals posing as a news crew. Fifty passengers including high-ranking officials, the president's wife and his 12-year-old daughter are taken hostage.

In return for the hostages' safe release, the terrorists want their imprisoned Russian neo-nationalist leader Gen. Radek (Jurgen Prochnow) released from his Russian jail cell, certainly risking a whole new cold war and costing thousands of lives.

But in the takeover they fail to capture Marshall, who seems to have deployed in the escape capsule. Marshall has hidden and now must find a way to ground the plane while saving the hostages. This sets up a nice cat-and-mouse game between the president, a decorated soldier, and the hijackers. They think it's a renegade secret service agent, not the commander-in-chief.

The hijackers are led by Ivan Korshunov (Gary Oldman.) And he's none too pleased with the way Mother Russia is headed. He's more than peeved at all this new capitalism and wants nothing more than to reunite the Soviets under Communism once again.

Oldman plays yet another bad guy. But at least with Korshunov, the meaning for his madness is fleshed out. And he and Ford get some good, tense scenes together, one soldier trying to outdo the other.

On the ground, a team has assembled to help Marshall, including the vice president (a nicely cast Glenn Close), and the secretary of state (Dean Cain), who are at odds on whether Marshall can make decisions in such a heightened state. He's been able to contact them with the hijackers' latest worst enemy: the cellular phone.

In spite of the cookie-cutter plot, first-time screenwriter Andrew W. Marlow peppers the script with keen one-liners and some deeper ideas, too, like honor, sacrifice and allegiance, that raises this above most action thrillers of its kind.

But it doesn't go far enough. There are two things wrong with AFI (skip the rest of the paragraph if you don't want a sketchy knowledge of the ending). After much bloodshed and loss of life, the survivors fly off into the horizon.

Credits.

1. The film needs a final scene — possibly a press conference where an acknowledgment and condolences go out to the people who gave their lives for the president and the families who lost them. This wouldn't have to be a downer ending, it would add legitimacy to the film.

2. After all the talk about not giving in to terrorists, Marshall gives in. Yes, it's when a member of his family is threatened. He's human, but so are all hostages' families. I guess that hard-nosed speech only applied to everyone else.

But why get so picky? This is an action picture. Ford is back in form as a grass roots Jack Ryan type (his character in "Clear and Present Danger" and "Patriot Games"), a nonsense, do-the-right-thing kind of prez.

He pulls off playing the president as common man. (He has taped the Notre Dame/Michigan game, for instance, and he struggles to not know the outcome) and a directed man of the people.

Director Wolfgang Petersen betters his last effort, "In the Line of Fire," and directs the action with a great pacing up to its final showdown. Petersen, who also directed the stunning "Das Boot" (about a German sub crew) knows how to create tension in cramped quarters.

The casting of Close as the vice president is the real gem. The role for a man would have been hard to pull off. She brings a sensitivity to the role that never diminishes her strength. If the academy looks past the action movie tag, Close could receive her sixth Oscar nomination.

The only person wasted is recent Oscar nominee William H. Macy ("Fargo"). In a small role, he doesn't have much to do but wait in the background until he's needed.

"Air Force One" ultimately is a fun ride. A great hero; nearly equal villains; a good cast; and most importantly, action and thrills keep you planted firmly on the edge of your seat.

Stratford's 'Little Women' is showcase for family values

By Alex Suczek
Special Writer

Heartwarming and wholesome are unfamiliar qualities in much contemporary entertainment. But reaching back into mid-19th century America, the Stratford Festival and author Marisha Chamberlain are providing a demonstration of family values that fits that description and has inspired and guided generations, especially the mothers and daughters.

When Louisa May Alcott was asked to write a book about real girls for girls, the result was "Little Women" and since 1868 it has never ceased to do the job. Chamberlain's stage adaptation is an overdue conversion from book to stage.

Never mind that it reflects conventions of 140 years ago. The sentiments ring true.

The four sisters, Jo, Meg, Amy and Beth, adore their mother and glow with that love as they make sacrifices to give her Christmas presents. They also depend on her and derive their strength from her in crisis. As Marmee, the mother, Dixie Seattle conveys the sense of strength and makes it easy to believe that she possesses more strength than she feigns more strength than she possesses for her daughters' sake.

Kristina Nicoll, as the tomboyish and self-reliant Jo, is charmingly vulnerable to the attentions of Craig Erikson's handsome Laurie, the boy next door. It is easy to sympathize with her difficulty in choosing between him and her plans for a career and independence. Even in 1868, Alcott was pressing the issue of freedom for women to nurture their talents and fulfill their aspirations beyond marriage, home and family.

But the warmth and humor, and sometimes bitterness, of family life is the central theme. It comes up in Jo's relationship with her little sister, Beth, played with uncanny, pesky realism by Claire Julien. A little sister not allowed to join her older sibling on a date who would vindictively burn Jo's first completed manuscript is as believable today as ever. And Jo's fury, followed by forgiveness, comes across like a homily.

Director Marti Maraden, in staging a story that she also read as a child, has rendered a show with loving sensitivity. Even while it is openly sentimental, it also has a true-to-life suspense over their father's illness, family finances and whether or not Jo will accept Laurie's proposal.

It sets an example of a family meeting its crises with mutual support, civility and commitment. And it provides female role models offering hope of unlimited aspirations for growing young women of today, no less than the book has done for 140 years.

There could be no temptation to set this story in any other than its rightful time and place. The 19th century home decor and clothing set a stage that lends conviction to the ideas about family life that are just as much issues today. A stage set of a cutaway house to open the parlor and the garret studio of budding author, Jo, allows the story to move freely. There is a family Christmas play in which Beth, without any sense of guilt, forgets her lines. There is a drawing together over the tragic death of one of the sisters. Jo enjoys a growing friendship with a young suitor in her studio.

Like "Alice Through the Looking Glass," and other shows in earlier years, "Little Women" is an admirable offering by Stratford to provide occasion for young audiences to discover the reward and fulfillment of a good theatre experience. While this play is more specialized in audience appeal, it is also a beautifully produced and performed show worth any thoughtful viewer's attention.

"Little Women" will be presented in repertory at the Avon Theater through Nov. 8. For tickets and accommodations call (800) 567-1600.

1. 1 Club... This 19 HCP beauty is too strong to bid 1 No Trump. You intend to jump in No Trump on your next call unless partner responds 3 Clubs (9-11 HCP limit raise), and then 1 would temporize with a forcing bid of only 3 Diamonds.

2. 1 Spade... Showing at least five cards in that suit.

3. 1 No Trump... 16 HCP and it qualifies for that bid. Don't open one Club. You're in a horrible fix for a rebid. One No Trump on your next call shows 12 to a bad 15 HCP and two No Trump promises a very good 18 or 19 HCP.

4. 2 Clubs... Game forcing excellent 22 HCP. Over partner's two Diamonds waiting, you bid two No Trump (22-24 HCP flat), describing your hand perfectly.

5. 1 Spade... Equal length five card majors highest ranking suit first.

6. 2 No Trump... Flat 21 HCP Perfect call for these 13 cards. Don't dream of bidding two Clubs, game forcing, with six potential losers.

7. 1 Club... This 18 HCP hand (1 point for 4 Aces) is too strong for a 1 No Trump opening. You intend to jump in No Trump at your next turn. (Similar to No.1)

8. 1 Diamond... I don't support the questionable strategy of bidding two card minors.

9. 1 Heart... This beautiful two suiter doesn't qualify for a game forcing. Two Club opener. On your next bid, jump shift in diamonds to show 19+ HCP. Your void should be downgraded until you find a suit fit, or the opponents bid Clubs.

10. 2 Hearts... In first or second seat. One heart in the third seat and the rule of 15 tells you to pass in fourth, but some experts would bid.

This is fun. Let's try two more.

11. ♠ 9 8 7 ♥ - - - ♦ A K Q 8 7 5 4 2 ♣ Q 10

12. ♠ K 8 3 2 ♥ A ♦ Q 8 5 3 ♣ K 10 6 4

11. How do you like your preempts? Not vulnerable in the first three seats, five Diamonds. Vulnerable against not so I'd be satisfied with four Diamonds.

12. Oh! If only you played maxi/mini Roman two Diamonds which shows a shape of 4-4-4-1 and 11-15 or 16-21 HCP which is determined by the partnership in subsequent rebids. One Diamond allows for you to make convenient second bid.

Scoring: 11-12 right: Go to the head of the class; 9-10: You're becoming a competent bidder; 8 or less: You have some work to do, and soon.

Sailing has always been a way of life for Amy Gmeiner

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Amy Gmeiner can't remember when sailing wasn't a major part of her life.

"I first started sailing when I was 6 months old and my parents (Patty and Doug Gmeiner) put me in a drawer on the boat so I wouldn't fall out," said

Amy, who is believed to be the only female skipper of an all-male crew to sail in the Bacardi Bayview Mackinac Race.

"I can't imagine my life without sailing. My whole life revolves around it. It let my dad and I have a special friendship."

Doug Gmeiner died three years ago, but he left his share of the family sailboat — Apache — to Amy.

Although Apache is still docked ("Our goal is to get it in the water by Labor Day," Amy said with a laugh), Amy skippered the Saturn, which is owned by Wally Tsuha, in last weekend's race to Mackinac Island.

"Wally is a business associate of my mother, and he had never sailed a Mackinac race before," Gmeiner said. "When he said he was interested, my mom gave him my phone number. He called and asked me to put a crew together."

Amy was disappointed that she was too young to sail with the rest of the family in the 1986 race when her grandfather's boat sailed in its 50th Mackinac event.

So when she got the opportunity to sail in this year's race with several of her cousins on the crew, Gmeiner jumped at the chance.

"The crew just clicked perfectly together," she said. "We were like clockwork. They were like my big brothers."

One of the first people Amy called when she arrived on the island was her grandfather, Toot Gmeiner.

"I told him I owed it all to him," she said. "He's the glue that kept us all together."

That's also when Amy found out that she was unique among female skippers.

"My Grandma Ruth told me that she thought I was the only female skipper of an all-male crew," Gmeiner said. "That's the first time it dawned on me that that might be the case."

Crew members were Ron and Stephen Gmeiner and Rudy VandenBroeck — Amy's cousins — Bob Krefski, Ron Hoffman and Bob Lenhard, all of Grosse Pointe. Tsuha and a naval architecture student at 4:51 p.m. Monday, well ahead of much of the fleet of 280 boats.

Gmeiner enjoys the camaraderie of racing as much as the competition. "I was brought up to love to race and I want to win as much as anyone, but the camaraderie and teamwork make sailing special," she said.

Huron to Mackinac race. She also sailed once in the Chicago to Mackinac event.

"I enjoy the Port Huron race much more," she said. "It's hard to say why, but I think the Chicago race is more competitive. There's more camaraderie among the sailors in the Port Huron race."

"But the only time I sailed in the Chicago race we had a great southwest wind. We had the spinnakers up all the way — it was a great ride — but I still enjoy the other race more."

Gmeiner got her first taste of steering the boat two years ago when she was a member of Momentum's crew.

"I love skippering," she said. "I sail more by feel than anything else."

Gmeiner was one of five Grosse Pointe South students who helped organize the school's sailing club in 1992.

By that time, she was a sailing veteran. She started in 1985 as a member of the junior sailing team at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club and was part of that group until 1989.

She finished third in the prestigious Leiter Cup event — a national junior sailing competition — in 1989.

In 1992, Amy became an assistant sailing coach at the Detroit Yacht Club and for the next four years was head sailing coach and program director at the club.

In addition to her sailing, Gmeiner is completing her degree in public relations at the University of Michigan-Dearborn and working 35 hours a week.

"I'm busy, but I always find time to sail," she said.

Gmeiner has a couple of dreams she would like to see become reality.

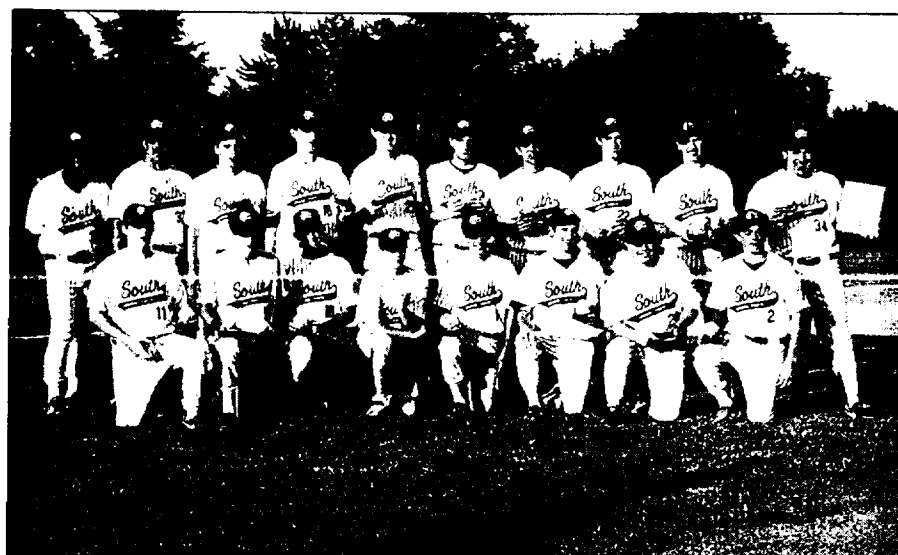

"I'd like to be part of an America's Cup team and I'd like to be an Old Goat," she said.

Neither goal is unrealistic. Old Goats are sailors who have participated in at least 25 Port Huron to Mackinac races. Her grandfather, father and uncle (Skip Gmeiner) are all members of the Old Goats and Amy needs only 19 more races to become one of the few women in the select club.

Gmeiner's chances of earning a spot on an America's Cup boat improved when former Grosse Pointe Dawn Riley announced she would have her own challenger — American True.

"She's my former sailing coach and aside from my dad, she's been my mentor," Gmeiner said. "I'd take any job there is on the boat to sail in the America's Cup."

Grosse Pointer Merritt Palm and Riley were members of the all-female crew that competed for the last

FCP Ruth team battles back to win district championship

Grosse Pointe South, the Grosse Pointe Farms-City-Park Babe Ruth All-Star team, took the hard route to the District 2 championship.

Last year's 14-year-old state champions lost their first game, but battled back to win five straight, including a 13-3 victory over Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores in the championship game.

"That is the first time I can remember that happening," said former Farms-City-Park Babe Ruth League president John Hoben.

The offensive attack in the title game was led by Adam Novak, Al Guastello, Mike Bissig, Mike Alvin and Jason Coffman. Ryan Schaefer and Rob Starrs also scored key runs. Guastello, Pat Ryan and Zack Beer handled the pitching.

After opening the tournament with a 5-0 loss to L'Anse Creuse Central, South started its championship drive with an 18-8 victory over Clinton Valley.

Novak, Guastello and Bissig led the hitting attack, while Chris Cotzias pitched a strong game. Matt Hindelang, Phil Griesback and Joe Sullivan scored key runs.

South beat L'Anse Creuse North 13-1 behind the hitting of Guastello, Alvin, Cotzias and Novak. South lost its top catcher, Andrew Delmege, who re-injured his back while stealing third base.

South avenged its loss to L'Anse Creuse Central with a 10-5 victory behind the pitching of Cotzias and the hitting of Starrs, Novak, Guastello and Beer. Tony Gatiloff and

The Grosse Pointe Redbirds won the West Division championship in the Mickey Mantle Division of the Macomb Amateur Baseball Federation. The Redbirds posted a 17-3 regular-season record. ## Redbirds finish third in district tournament

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

A pair of late-inning defeats at the AABC district tournament ended an outstanding season for the Grosse Pointe Redbirds 15-16-year-old baseball team.

"I'm really elated about our season," said coach Dan Griesbaum, who along with Tony Braun, guided the team to a 28-8 overall record.

"We played some tough competition and it will only help to make the kids better. We played 36 games in the summer and along with the high school seasons, that's between 65 and 75 games."

The Redbirds finished third in the AABC district at Plymouth Salem.

They began tournament play with an 11-1 victory over the Detroit Ravens. Jason Mangol went the first six innings and allowed two hits and no walks, while striking out seven to pick up the victory. Rich Mayk pitched the last inning.

Scott Gallagher collected three hits and drove in a run, Charlie Braun had two hits and an RBI and Colin Morawski also had two hits.

Grosse Pointe dropped a 9-3 decision to the Madison Heights Black Sox, who scored seven runs in the sixth inning to overcome a 3-2 lead by the Redbirds.

"Greg McClane, who we picked up from Fraser for the tournament, pitched a strong game, striking out nine," Griesbaum said. "He lost both games, but really deserved better."

The Black Sox took the lead on a three-run homer in the sixth.

Kevin Messacar led the Redbirds with three hits, including a double, and he drove in a run. Matt Barry went 2-for-2.

The Redbirds bounced back with a 7-6 victory over the Michigan Bulls.

"That was a very good team," Griesbaum said of the Bulls. "It's an elite team from the North Farmington area."

The Redbirds led 4-0, but the Bulls tied the game with a grand slam in the bottom of the third. After Grosse Pointe scored a run in the fifth on Dan Griesbaum's solo homer to regain the lead, the Bulls came back with two runs in the sixth to lead 6-5.

The Redbirds won the game with two runs in the top of the seventh. Jeff Nelson and Griesbaum tied the score with back-to-back doubles. Griesbaum — who went 3-for-3 — moved to third on a passed ball and scored on Mangol's sacrifice fly.

Nelson also made the fielding play of the game when he grabbed a line drive by the Bulls' leadoff batter in the seventh.

"It was a great catch," coach Griesbaum said. "And it was big because the next batter singled."

Mayk scattered 10 hits and didn't walk a batter in posting the victory.

"He allowed only three earned runs," coach Griesbaum said. "Rich isn't very big, but he has more bulldog in him than kids twice his size."

Mike Getz had two hits, Mangol also had a double and finished with two RBI and Morawski hit a sacrifice fly.

Griesbaum's two-run homer in the bottom of the sixth snapped a 1-1 tie and lifted the Redbirds to a 5-1 victory over the Port Huron White Sox.

Nelson led off with a walk and Griesbaum hit a 375-foot drive over the center field fence. The Redbirds added two more runs in the sixth when Morawski reached base on an error and scored on a triple by Barry, who came home on Getz' single.

Braun gave the Redbirds their other run with a solo homer in the third.

Mangol went the distance, allowing two hits and no walks while striking out eight.

The Redbirds' tournament run ended with an 11-4 loss to the South Farmington Blues.

Grosse Pointe was leading 3-2 going into the bottom of the sixth, but a two-run homer gave the Blues a 4-3 lead. South Farmington broke the game open with seven runs in the top of the seventh.

Morawski had two doubles and drove in two runs for the Redbirds. Nelson also had two hits.

The Redbirds posted some impressive batting averages during the season, led by Griesbaum's .495 mark that included 52 RBI.

"Twenty-nine of Dan's 54 hits were for extra bases," said his father and coach.

Braun hit .447 and drove in 28 runs from his leadoff position, while turning in some excellent defensive play throughout the year.

Other batting leaders were Mangol, .406 with 35 RBI; Berry, .407 with 33 RBI; Morawski, .368; Nelson, .338; Scott Gallagher, .324; and Messacar, .297.

The pitching leader was Mangol, who was 10-1 with a 1.67 ERA. He allowed only 29 walks while striking out 50 in 63 innings.

Mayk also had a fine season on the mound, posting a 5-2 record with a 2.61 ERA. He walked only 10 in 48 2/3 innings.

Spring Squirt champs

The Grosse Pointe Hockey Association Squirt AA Bulldogs won their spring season playoff championship with a 3-0 victory over the Royal Oak Eagles. The Bulldogs, playing in a very competitive spring league with two district champions and the Little Caesars regular-season champion, tied the USA Panthers for first place during the regular season with an 8-1-1 record. In their first playoff game, the Bulldogs beat the Lakeland Hawks 3-2, outshooting the Hawks 17-5. Members of the Bulldogs squad are Adam Abraham, Tony Alfonsi, Collin Brown, Cameron Burt, Drew Davis, Jack Day, Kyle Dodson, Chris Fox, Jamie Gorman, Stefan Harris, Chris Kenney, Derek Mayoros, Sammy Sherer, Rob Small, Andrew Tignone and Jordan Ziehlke. ## All-Stars have local grid flavor

There's going to be a Grosse Pointe flavor to this year's Michigan High School East-West All-Star Football Game Saturday at Michigan State's Spartan Stadium.

Grosse Pointe North coach Frank Sumner is head coach of the East squad and Sumner's long-time assistant, Nick Thompson, is also a member of Sumner's East staff.

Leonard Harris, who rushed for more yards than any player in the state last season in leading the Norsemen to the state Class A semifinals, is one of the running backs on the East team.

David Jennings, an offensive guard from Grosse Pointe South who will play for Hillsdale this fall, is also on the East squad.

The East team is chosen from players whose schools are located in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Monroe, St. Clair, Lapeer, Sanilac, Huron and Tuscola counties.

Kickoff is slated for 1:35 p.m. The game will be televised on PASS at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Splashing with a star

Several Grosse Pointe youngsters enjoyed a dip in the Lochmoor Club swimming pool with Darren McCarty, one of the stars of the Red Wings' Stanley Cup championship. McCarty was at the club for the Men's Invitational Golf Outing as a guest of Grosse Pointe John Matouk. "The kids loved having him there and Darren enjoys kids," Matouk said.

Champs — Sharks nip swim rival

Hindelang, who shared the catching for the rest of the tournament, each scored important runs.

South reached the championship game with a forfeit victory over Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores. With South leading 10-1 after 5 1/2 innings, there was a brief rain delay but Woods-Shores chose not to continue the contest.

Guastello, who was pitching a three-hitter, hit a grand slam in the first inning. Novak and Bissig also paced the hitting attack.

Grosse Pointe South is managed by Bill Adlhoeh. His coaches are Dennis Clow and league president Dick Swarthout.

Matthew Lane, Dan Minturn, Catherine Coury and Ralph Zade each won two events to help the Grosse Pointe Shores Sharks edge the Grosse Pointe City Norbs 256-250 in a Lakefront Swimming Association meet.

Lane took firsts in the 8 and under freestyle and backstroke. Minturn had firsts in the 10 and under backstroke and butterfly. Coury posted wins in the 10 and under backstroke and breaststroke and Zade had wins in the 12 and under backstroke and butterfly.

Other freestyle winners were Lara Zade, 8 and under; and Anne Kopf and Devin Porter, 10 and under.

Also winning backstroke events were Sarah Cullen, 8 and under; Charlie Cooper, 10 and under; Richard Li, 12 and under; and John Fodell, 14 and under.

Taking firsts in butterfly races were John Sattler and Kendal Walker, 8 and under; and Hobie Schleicher, 14 and under.

The Sharks also had wins from the 12 and under boys relay team of Ralph Zade, Eric Schleicher, Li and Porter and the boys 57-year freestyle relay team of Aruna Fonseka, Fodell, Hobie Schleicher and Chadd Bender.

District 6 champs are strong from start to tourney's finish

The Grosse Pointe Farms-City All-Stars started out strong in the District 6 Little League tournament, but they finished even stronger.

GPFC scored 11 runs in its final at bat to beat Harper Woods 12-1 in the championship game of the tournament, which was played at the Art Getz fields in Grosse Pointe Park.

"It may look like we saved our best for last, but our kids played very well throughout the tournament," said Farms-City manager Tom Andrew. "We had a couple of close calls, but when the games were on the line, our players really came through."

The Farms-City All-Stars were 4-0 in the tournament, also posting victories over Grosse Pointe Park and Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores American and National.

The Farms-City squad, which was made up of many of the same players who won last year's 10-year-old district tournament, is 8-0 in district competition the last two years.

Ben Jenzen picked up the victory in the title game as he allowed two hits and struck out eight. Jenzen, Lucas Coffman, Nick Andrew, Brian Gatiliff and P.J. Janutol each had two hits in GPFC's 11-run third inning. Janutol's three-run homer capped the outburst.

Farms-City opened the tournament in similar fashion, using Jenzen's grand slam to close out a 15-2 victory over Woods-Shores National. Pitchers Brian Russell and Jenzen held Woods-Shores National to two hits — doubles by Michael Lovasco and Michael Wayland.

Farms-City jumped ahead with two runs in the first inning on singles by Andrew, Gatiliff, Jenzen and Russell. It added seven runs in the third, featuring a triple and single by Nick Andrew, a double by Jenzen and RBI singles by Peter Hrtanek and Gatiliff.

It wasn't as easy in Farms-City's other two victories as it had to score runs in its last at bats to post a 9-8 win over Woods-Shores American and a 6-5 victory over Grosse Pointe Park.

Farms-City jumped out to a 6-0 lead after two innings against Woods-Shores American and held an 8-2 advantage after three, but Woods-Shores American kept fighting back.

GPFC scored four runs in a first inning that was highlighted by Andrew's double and singles by Gatiliff, Janutol and Tom Sawicki. Gatiliff's single produced two runs in the second, while singles by Coffman and Andrew and a double by Jenzen were the key hits in a two-run third.

Woods-Shores American got singles by Sean Patterson and Nick Frazitta to score two runs in the third, while a single by Chris Calandro and a triple by Evan Case helped produce three runs in the fourth. W-S American tied the score with three runs in the fifth on only one hit, a two-run single by Adam Kosmas.

It remained tied until the bottom of the sixth when Russell reached first on an error, stole second and moved to third on a wild pitch to set up Sawicki's game-winning single through a drawn-in infield.

In the Grosse Pointe Park game, Farms-City again took the lead in the first inning — something it did in all four tournament games — on Janutol's RBI single. Park tied the score in the third on Kris Steis' double, but Coffman walked and eventually scored in the third to give Farms-City a 2-1 advantage.

The Park All-Stars then took a lead — the only time in the tournament GPFC trailed — by scoring two runs as Charlie Mackinnon walked and Johnny Leverenz doubled to set up a two-run double by Max Schmidt.

The lead was short-lived as Andrew singled home Danny Reinhard to tie the game at 3-3 in the bottom of the fourth.

Farms-City took a 5-3 lead in the fifth when Janutol led off with a homer and Matt Michels scored on Coffman's single.

The Park All-Stars fought back with two runs in their final at bat. Steis and Ken Francis singled and both scored on Brian Pawlczyk's double.

Having the last at bat again proved advantageous for GPFC when Gatiliff led off with a double, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored the winning run on Janutol's single.

Other players who contributed to the Farms-City team's success were Michael Dunaway, Nick Leonard, Mike Mullinger and Anthony DeLaura.

Joining Tom Andrew on the coaching staff were John Dunaway, Bob Hrtanek, Craig Janutol and Doug Jenzen.

Transforming a kitchen into a truly great room

Today's kitchen is increasingly the epicenter of family life — to the extent that decorators are declaring it the "great room" of the '90s.

There is nothing new about the kitchen being the hub of the home. According to Teri Seidman and Sherry Suib Cohen, authors of "Decorating for Comfort" (Villard Books), "In the 18th century, the kitchen really bore the name 'great room' because it was the place where everything happened. In fact it was literally a great room in terms of size, usually the largest chamber in the house."

In 19th century America, servants took over the kitchen. The kitchen and the servants were sequestered from the life of the home. World War I signaled yet another change — the servants walked out and family and friends reclaimed the kitchen as their territory.

Seidman and Cohen point out they have never left. "Why should they? The new great room is the place that nourishes us, the room to which we gravitate for coffee, gossip and gathering. When we all come together again at the end of the day, working men and women, snack-hungry kids and an extended family of colleagues and friends are pulled to the control center of the home."

Despite their importance as a control center, which far overshadows the role as simply a place to cook, many American kitchens are not particularly comfortable, attractive or efficient.

According to the National Association of Homebuilders, one of the primary motivating forces for the purchase of a new home is the familial longing for a beautiful, better and bigger kitchen.

Of course, relocation is not always the answer — renovation is often more practical and satisfying. Hunter Douglas, the nation's leading manufacturer of custom window treatments, suggests the following tips to transform an ordinary kitchen into a truly great room:

- If the kitchen feels more like a closet, give it a sense of openness by removing the wall that separates it from the rest of the house and replace it with a partial-height ledge, 6 inches taller than the kitchen's counters. The partition will screen the cooktop surfaces and provide additional, always-needed counter space.

- Another way to open-up a small kitchen is to let the sun shine in with the addition of windows and/or skylights. To cover these windows, there are many alternative treatments that won't clutter up the space with swags, puddles and ribbons. Blinds and shades are easy to maintain and provide superior light control and energy efficiency, protecting against the sun's harmful UV rays.

- Aluminum mini-blinds and vinyl and aluminum vertical blinds have insulating qualities and are impervious to grease, spillage and dirt. A simple wipe with a moistened cloth and a mild all-purpose cleaner removes any damage. Hunter Douglas offers an updated version of the traditional roller shade which raises and lowers with a clutch-operated mechanism and is available in classic moire and jacquard patterns as well as the most contemporary screen-like fabrics.

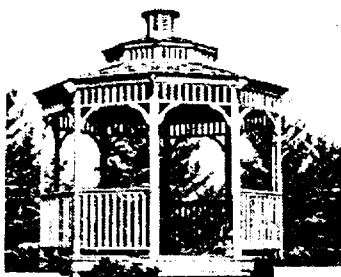

Many window treatments offer easy maintenance, energy efficiency and design versatility.

WORD WISE

Technical terms can be confusing to people who do not work in a profession, and Realtors use terms that may be confusing to buyers and sellers.

If you find yourself glazing over when your Realtor starts talking about escrow, clear title, easements, encroachments, contingencies, financing, appraisals and the closing process, don't hesitate to ask for a translation. Buying or selling a home is a major step, and professional Realtors are totally committed to helping you understand the process thoroughly so that you can make informed decisions. The simple transaction of trading the sellers' house for the buyers' money has become complicated by several hundred years of custom, common law, as well as state and local government requirements. Consumer demands have resulted in requirements that communication be as clear and understandable as possible. Realtors work to create an atmosphere in which you feel comfortable to ask questions. If there is something that is not clear to you, the only stupid question is the one that isn't asked.

Laura resides and works in Grosse Pointe as a top Realtor for Coldwell Banker Schweitzer covering the Grosse Pointes, St. Clair Shores and Harper Woods.

The art of topiary continues to grace our gardens

Garden Shed

By Ellen Probert Williamson

Topiary is as popular today as it was in ancient Rome. The only difference is in the subject matter of the sculpture and the power tools that achieve it.

Topiary, as the dictionary defines it, is "the art of training, cutting and trimming trees or shrubs into odd or ornamental shapes."

Sometimes the shapes include airplanes and cars or Disney characters instead of pyramids and chariots and gladiators. Power clippers and saws do the sculpturing a lot faster than the painstaking hand-clipping of antiquity.

The gardens and flowers of Rome were much extolled. In the first century A.D. Martial described the city as being rich in the "beauty of spring and the charm of fragrant flora." There were public parks and gardens for the enjoyment of the general populace as well as the many gardens of the private estates that were designed to be, in a sense, extensions of the house. The art of topiary, which was developed by imperial Rome, had a revival in the gardens of medieval Europe.

There were small fruit trees in medieval gardens and small clipped evergreens such as yew or box, which were clipped in tiers, or geometric shapes. Many paintings of the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries show these garden ornaments. Stone benches in the garden were often "upholstered" with turf or provided with "footstools" of small, clipped bushes.

By the 15th century topiary work was considered a necessity in Italian gardens. A popular idea was to create one's own signature, or at least initials, with shaped box or yew, or to have a colonnade of marble and lattice work ornamented with stone urns containing small topiary trees of varied shapes.

The city palace of Cosimo the Elder was noted during the early Renaissance as a center of learning, and its gardens were famous for the formal courtyard leading to the elaborate topiary gardens.

Boxwood was clipped into the shapes of elephants, dogs, cats, stags and ships in full sail. With pieces of antique sculpture of people here and there the garden had a feeling of animation.

By the 17th century, gardens with lawns, mazes, avenues of trees, and much fancy topiary were very fashionable. It is quite mindboggling to imagine the army of gardeners it took with the topiary and hedges to clip, gravelled paths to rake, weeding to keep up with, flowers to transplant, orange trees to set out, trellises and fences to paint and the constant watering to do without the technology that makes gardening on a large scale easily possible today.

In 16th century England, no garden was complete without topiary, or "antike work." The favorite shrub for this was yew, which grew slowly, lived long and could easily be cut into whimsical shapes. Sometimes there were "swift-running greyhounds" or "men armed in the field, ready to give battle." Sometimes the garden was "furnished" with topiary chairs and tables.

Topiary became a craze in England in the early 18th century. In The Spectator of June 25, 1712, Joseph Addison wrote, "Our British gardeners instead of honoring nature, love to deviate from it as much as possible. Our trees rise in cones, globes and pyramids. We see the marks of the scissors upon every plant and bush."

But perhaps satire is more subtle. Alexander Pope, with tongue in cheek, published in the Guardian a laughable "catalogue of greens to be disposed of by an eminent town gardener." Following are some examples:

— "Adam and Eve in yew. Adam a little shattered by the fall of the tree of knowledge in the great storm. Eve and the serpent flourishing."

— St. George in Box, his arm not long enough, but will be in condition to stick the dragon by next March.

— A juniper bear in blossom.

— A quickset hog, shot up to be a porcupine, by being forgot a week in rainy weather.

— Queen Elizabeth in myrtle, somewhat overgrown.

— A green dragon with a tail of ground ivy."

Today, topiary is almost completely confined to public parks and gardens. Perhaps it's because they are the ones with a staff of

Smart electrical appliance safety tips

Kitchen appliances can be dangerous no matter how well-designed they are, according to Cheryl Krysiak of the Michigan State University Extension Service.

Always consult the manufacturer's booklet for information on use, care, cleaning and maintenance before using an electric appliance for the first time.

Keep the instruction booklet, guarantee and warranty where you can find them when you need them.

The manufacturer's booklet will explain if the appliance can be totally or partially immersed in water. If water is trapped in an appliance it can act as a conductor and increase the risk of shock to the user the next time the appliance is plugged in.

Never touch electrical equipment if your hands are wet or you are standing on a damp surface.

Major appliances should be grounded using a three-hole grounded outlet. Always use the cord that is supplied with the appliance. Store the cord in a dry, safe place. Do not store electrical cords in a drawer with knives or other sharp objects.

Disconnect the cord from the wall outlet before disconnecting it from the appliance. Hold the plug when unplugging the appliance — do not yank on the cord to remove the plug from the socket.

It is best to keep appliances unplugged when they are not in use to avoid dangers from fire, electrical shock or injury from moving parts.

If you think your appliance is not working properly for any reason, stop using it and have it checked immediately by a service center authorized by the manufacturer.

If used correctly, electrical appliances can make our lives easier and more comfortable. Remember to treat all appliances with respect and follow the manufacturer's guidelines for their use.

Great Room

Another treatment that offers superior energy efficiency, easy maintenance and design versatility is Duette honeycomb shades from Hunter Douglas. These fabric shades have specialty hardware that allows them to work on skylights and other unusual windows.

Keep the decor simple, but unified. The biggest challenge is often unifying the decor in the kitchen area and the adjacent breakfast nook/family room. Windows present a particular problem. The breakfast nook/family room may have a sliding glass door that calls for a vertically-oriented treatment, while the kitchen area may have smaller windows and require a treatment that can be raised out of the way of soapy splashes from the sink.

Mix standard cabinetry with freestanding kitchen furniture to add warmth and comfort to a kitchen area, say Seidman and Cohen. They suggest using a pine hutch or oak or teak bookcases for food or dish storage, and an old farm table as a center island.

Tile is a powerful design element that can transform a kitchen. It adds colorful and easily cleaned accents to walls, backsplashes and countertops. Used in varying thicknesses, tile can also lend warm textures.

Explore the world of wood to complement the freshening effects of tile and/or paint. Recently introduced wood laminate flooring is as easy to care for as vinyl and as durable as tile.

Beat the heat with a few assists

After suffering the hot, humid weather of late June, you've decided to "do something" to stay cool. Purchasing an air conditioner is not the only solution. Air conditioners need help if they are going to work well, according to Cheryl Krysiak of the Michigan State Extension Service.

Always keep shades/drapes/blinds closed to keep the sun and heat out of the house. In the evening and at night, when it is generally cooler, open windows and doors and use fans to bring the cooler air into the house. In the morning, when the heat starts to build, close the windows and doors and close all the shades/drapes/blinds. Use floor fans or ceiling fans to keep the cooler air inside your house circulating. Moving air "feels" cooler.

Do not run heat-producing appliances during the day. Run the dryer, dish washer, stove, oven and other appliances in the evening or early morning. Do not take long, hot showers or baths, this will only add to the heat and humidity in the house.

Install vents or exhaust fans in all bathrooms and kitchens. If you remove heat from these areas they will not contribute to the overall heating of your house.

There are many types of electrical fans that can help you stay cool.

Whole-house fan

- Brings in cooler air from outside (through windows and doors) and pushes the warmer air into the attic.

- Reduces the use of air conditioners and thus can cut cooling costs.

- Pulls cooler air from the closest windows/doors. Close windows that are closest to the fan to be sure it draws cooler air from the most distant rooms of the house.

Window fan

- Can pull/push cooler air into the house

- If used to pull cooler air into one room, will cool that one room effectively.

- If used to pull air from several rooms, it will cool the most distant rooms the best. The room containing the fan will be the warmest.

Ceiling fan

- Keeps air moving and rooms "feel" cooler.

- Can reduce the cost of air conditioning.

- Can be used in the winter to push warm air down from the ceiling and help cut heating costs.

Floor fan

- Can be used to make air conditioning more effective as moving air "feels" cooler.

- Can push cooler air around corners or into hard-to-cool areas.

Furnace fan

- If your furnace is in the basement, this fan can bring cooler air into all the rooms.

- Not all furnace fans can be operated without using the heating function.

If you decide to buy an air conditioner, make sure you buy a unit that will work best in your home:

- Be sure to get the correct size air conditioner. If it is too big or too small, it will not work well and will cost more to run.

- Get the best EER (energy efficiency rating) you can afford. It will cost less to run.

- Install your air conditioner away from direct sunlight.

- Install it where the noise will not bother your family or the neighbors.

- Be sure to replace both the inside and the outside part at the same time if you are replacing a central air conditioner. They are built to work together and you will not get good results if you mix and match old and new parts.

- Clean window air conditioners monthly if used often.

- Coils inside and out.
- Filter (replace if needed).
- Fan.
- Drain tubes.

- Clean central air conditioners.

- Keep weeds and grass away from the outside unit.

- Change filters regularly.
- Clean coils, grills and fan annually.

Your air conditioner and fans will work most efficiently if you keep as much hot, humid air outside your house as possible.

Home Heart is is where the Heart is

Eleven helpless little children have been rescued from abodes of wretchedness and now exhibit more pleasing evidence of care and discipline," quotes the June 8, 1837, Annual Report of the Children's Home of Detroit, and today the home already has sheltered and helped over 10,000 children.

"The strictest attention is paid to the moral and religious cultivation of the children, and their improvement in knowledge is far beyond what might have been expected. The number will be increased with the augmentation of means at our disposal." The loving-care continues at a home we frequently drive past.

It began shortly after a frightful cholera epidemic in mid-May of 1836. A handful of civic-minded women met at the Presbyterian Church on Woodward Avenue in Detroit to launch what is now called the Children's Home of Detroit (CHD) at 900 Cook Road in Grosse Pointe Woods.

This gallant band of women founded the Ladies' Orphan Association of Detroit. Led by Mrs. John Farmer and Mrs. Charles Stuart, they set forth to care for the homeless and destitute waifs who survived the epidemic.

Under a generous offer of Mr. Cullen Brown, a "rent free" home on St. Antoine Street housed the first group of children of The Ladies' Orphan Association. This was followed by others who offered help to house the children: Messrs. Hastings, Kercheval, Newberry, Porter, Welles, Bates, Cole, and the Honorable Farnsworth. For a new building, the George Hunt property was offered.

"Our First Hundred Years," a historical account of the CHD, describes the new structure: "A building of brick, 42 feet square with a high basement story, two other main stories. Also, a commodious attic, with the addition of two wings, whenever the means of the society will admit."

With subscriptions from generous friends, at the cost of $5,647, the home was completed in January 1840 and housed 15 orphans. The Annual Report of 1871 states that during the years from 1836 to 1871 more than 1,100 children had been cared for.

Over the past 161 years many generous hearts and hands have made donations, volunteered time and promoted everything from fairs to bake sales and quilt raffles to raise money for the home. One family in particular, the fourth generation of the Kanter family, trustee Margie Garbarino, continues to assist the Children's Home.

In December 1869 the report says, "An unusual amount of pleasure was in store for the children during the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kanter, Christmas week, invited them to their house where all good things were provided, besides a well laden Christmas tree. This, with their regular home festivities, made them almost wild with joy." This first "special" Christmas party soon developed into an eagerly anticipated annual event.

To meet the demands of "growing pains" the home underwent many changes, including its name, locations and policies. A dress code was adopted as stated in the 1837 Annual Report. The girls were to be dressed in "uniforms of blue calico frocks and white caps, with gingham bonnets for common and light Shaker bonnets for Sundays, and the boys in jackets and trousers of brown fustian."

The CHD, a non-profit organization, has been in service at this location since 1950. It sits on 15 acres on Cook Road. Here, children are enrolled in the Open and Respite Program: The Residential Program through counseling and guidance, education and recreation provides them with the opportunity to overcome their emotional pain and relieve the traumas they have experienced.

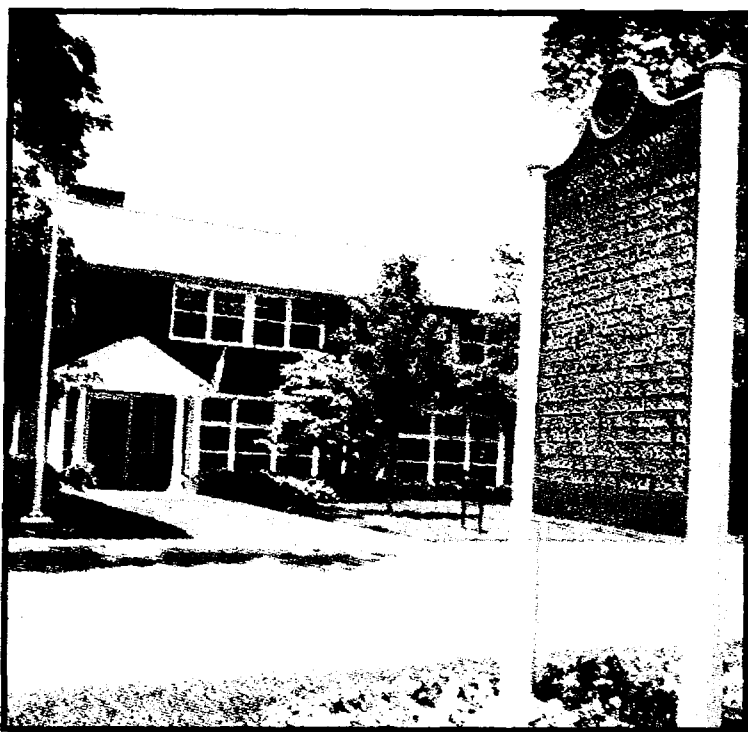

Healing is a cooperative effort. With encouragement from their parents or guardians who participate in their therapy, the children learn to function as family members as well as in the community. Children are placed here voluntarily and the average stay is eight to 12 months.

Their facility in Warren focuses on a more vulnerable child. Here they conduct a Secure Program. At both locations the children are all carefully diagnosed, monitored and receive treatment based on their individual needs. During their stay they are embraced with a "homey" atmosphere, functioning as a family unit.

"We try to give the children the best family environment we can," says Mike Horwitz, of Grosse Pointe Farms, executive director of CHD.

One of the alumnae, Jim Long of WJR Radio, now on the board of trustees, remembers his nine-year stay at CHD, then located at 988 E. Jefferson. "It was like a family for him," quotes Horwitz. "In fact to keep in touch with his 'family,' he initiated an alumni association two years ago."

Despite all the trials and tribulations, the "never say die" spirit of the Ladies' Orphan Association is alive and well. Our sincere appreciation to the staff and children for sharing their day with us and making us feel so comfortable in their home... away from home.

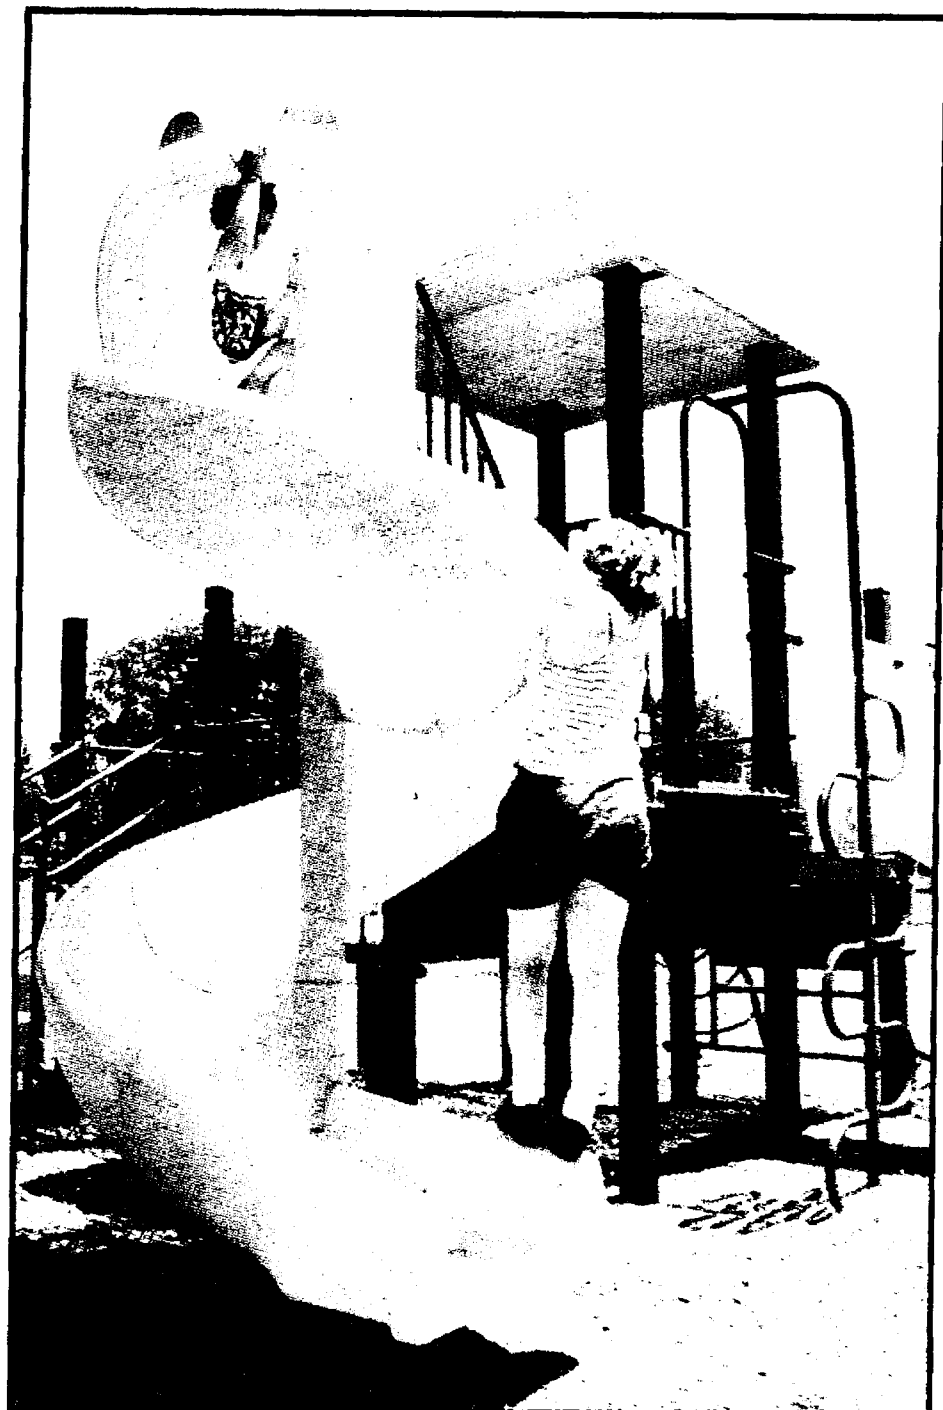

A multi-disciplinary staff of masters-level therapists, certified crisis intervention specialists, registered nurses, pediatric, psychological and psychiatric consultants, teachers and child care workers are ready to help 24 hours a day. Here the children enjoy a chat with their child care worker. Each "family," consists of 10 to 12 children who live in one of the six cottages on campus. Girls range in age from 6 to 18. And in the boys' cottages, boys age 6 to 13.

The kitchen is buzzing with help as Deborah Liedel, the director of community relations, goes over the menu for today's "outside" luncheon. "We encourage the community to visit us." As a community service, their conference room is open to the public and available for your use, including the option of enjoying a light lunch or bringing your own. Liedel can be reached at (313) 885-3510 for further information regarding the Children's Home.

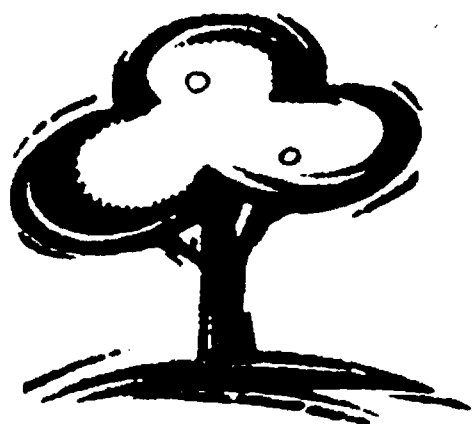

Mike Horwitz encourages one of the boys to select a stuffed animal from one of the hundreds that were just delivered by the Community Services Committee of the Grosse Pointe Board of Realtors.

The children take pride in their homes. They are encouraged to participate in household chores as well as join in recreational activities and maintaining the flower gardens.

Apple scab disfigures backyard trees

Spotted leaves on you crabapple, you say?

"Spotted leaves and early leaf and fruit drop are typical symptoms of apple scab," says Sandra Goeddeke-Richards, home horticulturist at MSU Macomb Extension.

"Though apple scab rarely kills trees outright, it can weaken them to the point that they will not produce a crop."

Apple scab is caused by a fungus. The first symptoms of scab are faint, olive-green spots on the leaf surface. As infected tissue ages, the spots become covered with a greenish black, velvety growth. Severe infection is commonly followed by leaf drop.

On the fruits, scab spots vary from light green to dark brown to black. Heavily infected fruits become misshapen, frequently crack open and may drop from the tree prematurely.

"Scab-resistant cultivars of both apple and crabapple trees are available for home gardeners," reports Richards. "It's worth making the effort to look for these cultivars and to use them in new plantings."

So how do you control it?

"Start spraying when the bud tips turn green in the spring and continue to spray weekly until two weeks after the blossom petals have fallen," advises Richards. "Then cut back to spraying weekly until two weeks after the blossom petals have fallen."

After that, cut back spraying to every 10 to 14 days until 15 to 30 days before harvest, depending on the fungicide used.

For specific chemical recommendations and more information, contact the Macomb County MSU Extension office at (810) 469-6440 or call the MSU garden-er hotline, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, between 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at (810) 469-5063. The extension office has a bulletin on apple scab on crabapples that is free for the asking.

Home Tips

CLOTH DIAPERS — My daughter had already informed me that she would be using disposable diapers, so I was wondering what she would use for the ever-useful and necessary burp cloth.

I purchased an inexpensive package of cloth diapers. I washed, dried, folded and pressed them, then used embroidery floss (or baby yarn) to trim each one.

These colorful cloths have proven to be useful for burp pads, lap pads and bibs. Bea L., Seneca Falls, N.Y.

One day while bathing, I saw the robe fall to the floor. Had I slipped or needed some sort of assistance, no one could have opened that door.

I also noticed the hinges to remove the door are on the inside of the bathroom. I've since found another place to put my robe, but I would not have thought of this hazard had I not seen my robe fall. I hope others will heed this advice. Rita P., Santa Paula, Calif.

BATHROOM DOOR — If most bathrooms are like ours, they have a hook on the back of the bathroom door to hang a robe.

Try a large container for instant shade and color

Looking for a colorful focal point for your deck or patio? Or maybe a cool escape from the afternoon sun? Try a tree or large shrub in base, allowing about 1/4-inch between the boards for drainage.

You also may want to drill several 1-inch holes for additional and plumb, then reinforce the corners with three 2.5 inch rust-proof screws per joint. The screws may be countersunk and plugged for a more finished appearance. For easy mobility, install heavy-duty casters on the base.

Before painting, line the interior with plastic sheeting. (A large plastic yard bag works nicely.)

Punch holes in the bottom for drainage. Finish the planter's exterior with stain, paint or a water-repellent finish.

For a free list of do-it-yourself projects and home ideas, write Western Wood Products Association, Dept. B2, 522 SW Fifth Avenue, Suite 400, Portland, OR 97204.

This plant container requires no special skills or tools to build.

an oversized container and see how it transforms your outdoor space.

This handsome planter, 22-inches square, is big enough to hold an 8-to-10-foot tree.

The plant container, which requires no special skills or tools to build, is made from standard-size western lumber. For durability, use lumber that has been pressure-treated for ground contact, or use a decay-resistant species such as western red cedar.

For the base you will need four lengths of 2x4, 17.5 inches long, and five lengths of 1x4, 19 inches long. Butt each 2x4 over the next at one end to form a 19-inch square. (The 2x4s are joined on edge.) Glue and nail each joint with two 12d galvanized nails, predrilled to prevent splitting.

Space the 1x4s evenly across the top of the 2x4s to form the drainage. The base can be covered with a rust-proof screen to prevent dirt from washing out.

For the sides and upper frame, you will need 20 lengths of 2x4, 20-inches long; 16 lengths of 1x1, 20-inches long; and four lengths of 1x4, 18.25 inches long.

Mark all four sides of the base 1.5 inches from the bottom edge. Using glue and 8d galvanized nails, attach the eight corner 2x4s to the base so the lower edges are even with the mark. Lap and glue the 2x4s at the corners as shown.

Glue and nail the 1x4 upper frame to the inside of the corner 2x4s about 2 inches from the top. Butt the upper frame at the corners as shown. Glue and nail the remaining 2x4s in place, alternating them with the 1x1 spacers. Nail to the upper frame from the inside to conceal the nail holes.

Make sure the sides are square people to clip, trim and keep up with the constantly growing shrubs and trees which combat their efforts to keep the topiary figures at their best.

However, a new form of topiary has become popular, perhaps because it is so manageable and within the reach of anyone with a pair of shears.

This is a wire form (molded from chicken wire) set in an ornamental pot. The pot and the wire form are filled with sphagnum moss and planted with ivy or myrtle. Soon the plants fill the mold and presto you have a topiary rabbit, cat, heart or whatever. Just keep it watered and with a minimum of clipping your topiary ornament will dress up your patio or front porch as well as the life-size elephant which adorns the public park.

When you list your property with a Realtor, you may think that it is now up to the Realtor to get the house sold. It is true that the Realtor does take on the primary responsibility for selling the house. Don't, however, overlook your vital role in the selling process. There are duties that only the Realtor can address and other important tasks that can only be accomplished by you, the owner. Here are the rightful duties of each party:

THE REALTOR

Of course, the Realtor knows the market and must assist you in learning the present value of your property. This is done by presenting you with a Competitive Market Analysis which is a composite view of recent sales and the asking prices of competing houses in your area that are now for sale.

Your Realtor will also provide valuable marketing expertise, including submission of your property statistics into the local multiple listing service, advertising in newspapers, open houses, and arranging for showings to qualified buyers. Assistance and advice are also provided when an offer is submitted, as well as all details of the closing.

THE HOMEOWNER

You, the homeowner, must agree to price the property so that buyers will be encouraged to see the house. You must keep the home in ready-to-show condition and make it available to buyers when they want to see it. Although you know more about your house than any Realtor, you should allow the Realtor to conduct the showing and remain available for questions. If you are going to be gone often, give the Realtor a key to the house so that valuable showing opportunities will not be lost. And finally, let the Realtor use a sign in your yard. Calls received from signs are often good sources for motivated buyers.
