City, Park make plans to replace trees

By John Lundberg
Staff Writer

The City of Grosse Pointe is not expecting any trees from a local reforestation alliance organized to assist communities devastated by the July 2 storm, according to Brian Vick, City administrative assistant.

"We are involved with discussions (with the alliance)," he said. "We want to help out those that were (most affected)."

The alliance was established shortly after the storm to help reforest areas that lost thousands of trees in the storm's wake. Vick said the city was approached by Wayne County and the Michigan State University Extension, which organized the alliance. Over 5,000 trees were lost in the storm.

"We are currently sharing ideas with other communities," Vick said. He added that primary funding sources for the reforestation are state and federal grants and private funds.

To replace City trees lost in the storm, the City has filed for grants available through the state and the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The City has also established a private fund through the City's foundation to solicit funds exclusively for trees lost in Neff park.

Grosse Pointe Park forester Brian Colter said he expects up to $10,000 worth of trees from the alliance. He said private donations have been sent in to the alliance earmarked for use

Pointer killed in auto accident

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Calling it a tragic accident, Grosse Pointe Woods director of public safety Jack Patterson released some details on the traffic death of well-known Grosse Pointer Arthur Kuehnel.

According to Patterson, Kuehnel was attempting to cross from the north side of Vernier to the south side near the entrance of North High School at about 8 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 12, when he was struck by a full-sized sedan driven by an 85-year-old man.

"Based on what we have, I will reserve comment on some of the details of the accident until the investigation is complete and the Wayne County prosecutor's office has returned its report," Patterson said.

According to the police report, Kuehnel was crossing Vernier on the east side of the traffic light, which is not a designated crosswalk. This would have put him between the traffic and the traffic light at North's entrance.

The traffic light at the North entrance is a delayed-signal light. When the signal for eastbound traffic turns red, the signal for westbound traffic remains green for an additional 10 seconds.

This allows cars to turn into the North parking lot and prevents traffic from backing up and blocking the Morningside and Vernier intersection, said Woods traffic officer Joe Cardosi.

When a person crosses Vernier, eastbound cars can be stopped at the traffic signal while westbound traffic still has a green light, which is why crossing at the designated crosswalk is vitally important.

According to a detective bureau spokesman, the westbound traffic light was green when Kuehnel was crossing the street.

Because the accident resulted in the death of a pedestrian, Patterson said, the Woods must submit the results of the investigation to the county prosecutor's office. This is standard procedure in cases like this, and does not mean that charges will be filed, he said.

Patterson said the driver was very distraught and that Kuehnel was wearing dark clothing. Because the North-South football game was taking place, Woods public safety officers were able to get to the scene of the accident within a minute.

"The officer at the scene was able to protect the site and tried to help the victim," Patterson said. "The medical technicians placed the victim on advanced life support and he was taken to the St. John trauma center, where he was listed in critical condition."

Local recycling group is ready to declare victory and disband

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Like the Lone Ranger, the board of directors of Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling has cleaned up the town and is ready to ride into the sunset after a job well-done.

Fran Schonenberg, chairman of the board, said that the group has done what it set out to do — make recycling in Grosse Pointe an everyday fact of life. With that in mind, the board of directors will present a resolution to disband to the rank and file at the Sept. 25 meeting.

If the request is approved, it will be the end of an era for Grosse Pointe. Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling was formed in the 1980s to bring recycling to the Pointes, Schonenberg said. She had been a strong advocate of recycling since the 1970s, but the time wasn't right until recently.

People may remember the recycling events held in the Grosse Pointe South parking lots in the late 1980s, Schonenberg said. They were a great success and encouraged the group to lobby for permanent recycling.

The South events proved so popular, Grosse Pointe Park maintained a permanent recycling location at an empty service station on Jefferson, Schonenberg said.

In 1990, she said, the five Pointes and Harper Woods were considering some sort of regular recycling pickups. Grosse Pointe Woods, a few months ahead of the other five cities, instituted its own recycling program.

The next step, Schonenberg said, was to get household haz-

Pause for a cause

The first fundraiser of the year for KOCOTS (Kids' Organization for Coalition on Temporary Shelter) was a car wash at a Grosse Pointe Woods business last weekend. Student volunteers, coordinated by city of Grosse Pointe resident Libby Wayman, along with Dayna Sautoro, Christine Ritok and Amanda Drozer, conduct a number of fundraising events throughout the year and donate their time to the shelter. The students collected $680 by day's end. Funds go toward the purchase of food that will be served to homeless persons seeking shelter through COTS.

Basement floods stir controversy in Woods

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

While the flooded basements may have been cleaned up, the controversy remains. Several Woods residents whose basements were flooded during a heavy storm on Aug. 20 were at the Sept. 8 Woods council meeting to find out what happened and what the city was going to do about it.

Patricia Kukula-Chylinski, a candidate for city council, was one of about 80 residents who had their basements flooded on Aug. 20. She wanted to know why the city administration didn't do more to help people once the flooding had occurred. She said that residents were not notified of the sanitary dangers of sewer backups and that when the city had a special trash pickup on Saturday, Aug. 23, no one was aware of it.

While she credited the city for having people visit those who called in, she said many people who had flooded basements did not call in. What was being done to help them?

"Even now, residents are throwing out items, and no one has issued any warnings about the sanitary dangers of the trash," said Kukula-Chylinski. "I saw a kid picking up a stuffed animal that was thrown away. That's not safe."

Floods

Mayor Robert Novitke said the city's efforts have been aimed at determining what caused the flood. Evidence so far indicates that it was simply a matter of too much rain falling in too short a period of time.

One thing city workers were able to determine, said Novitke, was that about two-thirds of the residents who had floods did not have their rain downspouts disconnected from the city's sewer system. Several years ago the city passed an ordinance requiring residents to disconnect their downspouts from the sewer system.

The water, instead of entering the system directly, would then flow into the system through street catch basins or would be absorbed by the ground. When the ordinance was passed, Novitke said, a provision was included that allowed residents to get an exemption. Kukula-Chylinski, like two-thirds of those who called in to report flooding, has an exemption.

"I don't know what that two-thirds figure means," Novitke said. "But it makes you think. One thing the council will have to consider is if we have made it too easy to get an exemption."

Kukula-Chylinski said that she wants to know if the council will include businesses and schools and churches in disconnects. The current ordinance applies to residential buildings. Novitke said that is something that will have to be considered.

"I have called for a special committee-of-the-whole on Monday, Sept. 29," Novitke said. "We will have the final report of the city engineer. It will detail what happened on Aug. 20, and hopefully tell us if there is anything that we can do to prevent future flooding. But bottom line, our system was built to handle 10-year storms.

"That means that the best it can do is handle storms so severe they only happen every 10 years. The Aug. 20 storm was a 25- to 100-year storm. Those are very rare. There isn't a city in the country that builds a system around a 100 year storm. It's not fiscally responsible."

ardous material pickups. This was important because while the group has always pursued recycling as a goal, the idea has always been to remove as much material from the waste stream as possible."We have always believed that by making recycling pay, it would be accepted," Schonenberg said. "Part of our job has been education. By educating the public to only put in their recycling bins what can be recycled, we reduced the cost of picking up the materials, making recycling economically attractive."

The board of directors considered disbanding five years ago, Schonenberg said, but the rank and file felt that the recycling efforts undertaken by the Pointes were in a delicate position. Since that time, the public has come to accept recycling. Not only that, people have come to expect it. Schonenberg said she is confident that recycling in the Pointes will continue even without Grosse Pointe Citizens for Recycling.

"This has been an incredible experience for me," she said. "To be at the right place at the right time with the right people. We've been able to accomplish everything we've set out to do."

Schonenberg is quick to give credit to the city governments of the Pointes and Harper Woods as well. The vision of the group and the hard work of people like Ed Haug and Deva Ludwig and board of director members Ron McGarvey, Steve Trowbridge, Marlene Harle and Anne Burke, would be nothing without the work of local government officials making recycling possible. Since recycling started in the Pointes, Schonenberg said she was delighted to see that they have added hazardous waste pickup service. It is now a part of the contract with Tringali Sanitation, the company that does the pickups.

The final vote on whether or not to accept the board of director's recommendation for dissolution will take place at the Sept. 25 meeting, which will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church.

Accident

Patterson said that Kuehnel was not responsive to emergency personnel at the accident site and died from his injuries at about 6:45 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 14.

"Arthur was as well-known as anyone in the community," Patterson said. "He was involved in many different groups and organizations, from the Clown Corps to Little League."

Grosse Pointe Woods mayor Robert Novitke said at Monday night's council meeting, that Kuehnel was involved in the community, and would be missed by everyone who knew him.

Councilman Eric Steiner called for a moment of silence at the beginning of the meeting in honor of the man known to all simply as "Arthur.."

Park hosts perennial exchange Sept. 20

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

As signs of autumn are springing out all over, gardeners in Grosse Pointe Park might want to check out the Park Beautification Commission's fourth annual fall perennial exchange on Saturday, Sept. 20.

Bonnie Delsener of the Park Beautification Commission said that this year's exchange will be a little different. In addition to the traditional exchanging of plants by interested gardeners, there will be master gardeners on hand to answer questions.

"In past years we've had nurseries there," said Delsener. "In the future, we hope to have lecturerers who will make presentations to the public. We are trying different things."

The exchange will be held in Windmill Pointe Park and begins at 9 a.m. and runs until noon. While the event is being sponsored by the Park Beautification Commission and being held in a municipal park, it is open to everyone, not just Park residents, said Delsener.

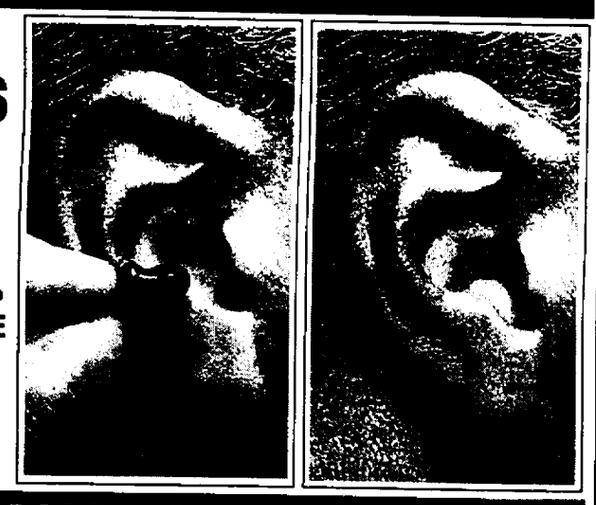

Experts on hand will include Sherri Werely an Mill Anthony, proprietors of Gardeners Artists, local perennial landscaping business. Also, Delsener said, a representative from Michigan State University's extension program.

"MSU runs a variety of courses through county governments," said Delsener. "Grosse Pointers can take classes on gardening through the Wayne and Macomb extension programs. The course runs for 14 weeks. Each week covers a different topic. At the end of the course, after passing a test, you receive the designation of master gardener. People can learn about the courses and about signing up for them."

Gardening, said Delsener, has become very popular over the past several years. If statistics are to be believed, it is America's No. 1 hobby. The perennial exchange allows Grosse Pointe's gardeners to meet and exchange a variety of flowers and bulbs. It's a pleasant way to meet people and learn more about gardening.

School taxes mirror rates for 1995-96

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Gone are the days when the school board wrestled with decisions such as whether to raise property taxes 9 percent or 7 percent — or 2 percent for that matter.

School finance reform brought about in 1994, when Michigan voters passed Proposal A which increased the sales tax and lowered property taxes, limits the local school district's ability to control and generate operating revenue.

The School Aid Act adopted by the Legislature guarantees each school district a basic level of funding per-pupil provided the district levies a local property tax at a millage rate set by the Legislature. The basic level of funding per-pupil is known as the foundation allowance.

With that in mind, the Grosse Pointe school board on Sept. 8 set its tax rate for the 1997-98 fiscal year, with adjustments made based on the taxable value of homes — which increased this year by 3.1 percent. The sale of a home or building an addition onto a home increases the taxable value of property. The overall rate is set by the state and school districts are limited to that amount. Individual property taxes are subject to fluctuations.

There are minimal changes in the tax structure from the last fiscal year, said Chris Fenton, assistant superintendent for business and support services. In total the rate reflects about a 1.3 percent increase for non-homestead property owners and no increase for homestead property owners.

Last year, homestead owners paid 6.8303 mills for general operating purposes and 1.3255 mills for technology upgrades. This year, homestead owners will pay 6.6229 for operations and 1.2853 for technology.

The overall rate of 8.1553 is the same as that levied in the 1995-96 school year, Fenton said.

Overall, all properties are taxed at 6 mills. Non-homestead property owners (those with commercial properties and second homes) are taxed an additional 18 mills, moving non-homestead taxes to 24 mills.

Grosse Pointe and a handful of other districts around the state were allowed to seek voter-approved "hold harmless" or "gap" millages to maintain pre-reform spending levels.

In 1995, Grosse Pointe schools asked voters to approve two separate proposals: 6.8303 mills for five years on homestead properties; and 1.3255 mills for five years on homestead properties for the technology program.

As recently as 1992 the school board, in a divided vote, approved a 7.9 percent tax increase (lower than the 9 percent recommended by the superintendent). At the time the total tax levy was 32.8422 mills on all properties and included 31.0165 mills for the general fund; 1.3 for the public library (which is no longer supported by the school system); and .5257 for debt. (The district does not have a separate debt retirement and is paying off $350,000 in energy improvement bonds out of the general fund, Fenton said).

The district's maximum voter-approved millage rate was 36.9 mills. Before that, tax rates had increased on an average of 6 percent, Fenton said at the time.

Mum sale

It's mum sale time again at University Liggett School. Sponsored by the junior class — officers this year are from left, Raquel Castaneda, Danielle Wright, president Joel Parrott and Jacqlyn Schneider — the sale offers a variety of beautiful, high quality outdoor garden mums. Sale dates are Friday and Saturday, Sept. 19 and 20, at the McCann Ice Rink at the Cook Road campus, 1045 Cook, Grosse Pointe Woods. Hours are from 3 to 6 p.m. Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Mums, available in red, white, yellow, bronze and pink, are $9 pre-ordered and $10 the day of the sale. All flowers must be picked up by 1 p.m. Saturday. Call (313) 884-4444 for more information.

Attention Shores residents: Library board has vacancy

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Once again the Grosse Pointe Library board finds itself short a trustee.

This time, it's Richard David, the representative trustee for the village of Grosse Pointe Shores, who had served one year of a four-year term.

David tendered his resignation effective Sept. 1 due to family obligations which required him to move out of the library district area, said board president John Bruce.

The district has set a deadline of Tuesday, Sept. 30, for receiving applications. So far, Bruce said, they haven't received any.

"We're still getting the word out; we have no applications returned but we have had people express interest," he said.

The library's 1994 inaugural board, after it separated from the Grosse Pointe Public School System, was appointed by a school board sub-committee. When their terms expired, three trustees opted to retire and the process began of replacing trustees by appointment rather than election.

In that situation, the outgoing trustees participated in the search and selection process and had ample time to find replacements, Bruce said.

Last year, Harper Woods trustee Steve Matthews resigned his post on the library board when he was elected to the Grosse Pointe school board. In that case too, although it was shorter notice, the board was able to fill the position in a speedy fashion, with David.

"We appreciate what he (David) brought to the board. He was an outstanding member of the board. He had a background in accounting, which is always great, and expertise in all kinds of high-profile organizations and a sense of public relations. He was a dynamic man who contributed a lot to the board. We will miss him," Bruce said.

Meanwhile, the library board, which next meets at 7 pm. Monday, Sept. 20, in the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo, will operate short a trustee. Bruce anticipates the vacancy will be filled by the October meeting.

When the district library was established in 1994 (ending a more-than-70-year relationship with the school system), it was decided by the organizing parties (the Grosse Pointe school district, the five Pointe municipalities and the City of Harper Woods) that the seven-member board would be appointed, with one trustee for each municipality and one at-large member.

The process of replacing trustees involves advertising and accepting applications which then are given to a nominating committee composed of the vacating trustee, the library board president and the mayor of the city represented by the board seat. A candidate recommendation is then submitted to the Grosse Pointe school board for appointment. The position has a term ending June 30, 2000.

Applications are due Sept. 30. Call library administration at (313) 343-2325.

Jefferson repaving reviewed at G.P. City council meeting

City of Grosse Pointe officials are "sitting on the end of the edge of their chairs" in anticipation of Wayne County responses to several questions about the time schedule for repaving of Jefferson. Currently, the City is on a time schedule for repaving until the fiscal year 1999-2000.

"The people that we need answers from are on vacation," said Chris Bremer, assistant city manager. "The council has a real concern that (the city) has a place on the list."

The Grosse Pointe Park city council last week rejected a cost-sharing proposal from the county to repave Jefferson by 1998. That plan involved the Park and the county splitting the cost of repaving the road. Park officials' chief objections to the plan was that because Jefferson is a county road, it should be maintained by Wayne County.

"We share the same concerns as those in the Park," Bremer said. "There is (also) a concern about (our) tax dollars in Wayne County's hands."

The City looked into different factors involved in the repaving such as engineering and time constraints, Bremer said. But answers are on hold until primary personnel are back at the county level to answer questions.

New smoking ordinance to be discussed

Officials from the City are considering a new smoking ordinance to retain more local control over teens that violate smoking laws. The council had a study session last week for the benefit of public safety officers and personnel of the district court. No formal action was taken by the council and the ordinance is merely in the threshold stages.

Bremer said because Wayne County does not hold juvenile smoking violators as a top priority, city officials have expressed interest in handling such cases.

Bremer added that although the ordinance is not one of any real urgency, the council will follow up on the issue at the next regular meeting scheduled for Oct. 20.

Information still sketchy after FBI raid of Farms home

By John Lundberg
Staff Writer

It won't be until some time in the future before the public will know the contents of the evidence seized in last week's search of the Grosse Pointe Farms home of Harry Bowman, national president of the Outlaws Motorcycle Club. The raid was conducted by the Detroit office of the FBI, with the assistance of the Drug Enforcement Agency and the Farms police.

The club's Detroit headquarter's was also searched.

"We are not allowed to disclose what was in the search warrant or the evidence that was seized," said Dawn Moritz, special agent for the FBI. "The decision to unseal the (related contents) is made by the U.S. Attorney's Office."

Farms police were present during the raid of Bowman's home on Mt. Vernon, said Lt. Mark Brecht. He added that the case remains very sensitive.

"This is the FBI's show," Brecht said. "(We were there) to take any steps we could to prevent a Ruby Ridge situation."

Moritz said the club is an international/national organization that has a "common membership." According to reports, members of the group in other states are under indictment in cases ranging from homicide to extortion and drugs.

Moritz added that it is common for the agency to ask for assistance from the local police when conducting such a raid.

AAA Michigan establishes road construction hotline

AAA Michigan has established a new toll-free hotline (800) 411-4823 — where Michigan motorists can access the latest information on construction projects along heavily traveled traffic arteries.

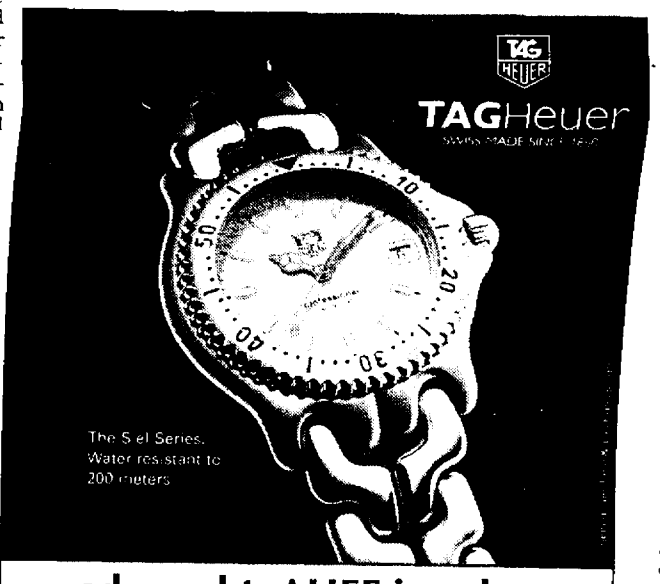

The service was launched in cooperation with the Michigan Department of Transportation.

"This is designed to inform travelers of construction slowdown sites or detours they along major routes across the Great Lakes State," says Jeff Gaydos, AAA Michigan Corporate Communications manager.

AAA Michigan first established the hotline in spring to draw attention to poor road conditions in Michigan. "This is a natural progression," Gaydos says. "We believe it will help motorists traveling in Michigan avoid traffic problems."

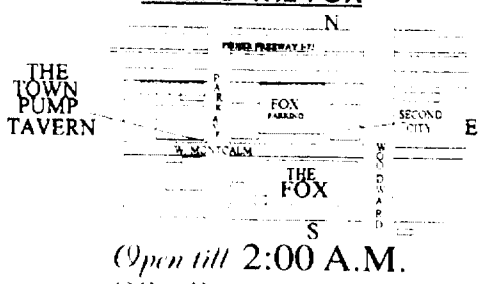

The report will be updated several times weekly.

Art and photography lives through this Farms woman

By John Lundberg
Staff Writer

The clock is set on 10 seconds and the race begins. Rosemary Bay has no room for error when performing the delicate image transfer of a photograph negative before the film dyes migrate from the negative to the positive. The process allows Bay to transfer ordinary images into imaginative expressions of the picture to a number of chosen surfaces. No two are exactly alike.

"Time is of the essence (in the process)," she says.

Mission accomplished, Bay adds another extraordinary piece to her extensive portfolio, which includes paintings, masks formed from metals and assorted antiques.

Bay and husband George Bay's house in Grosse Pointe Farms is a living testament to their love of art. Inside, the walls are covered by pictures ranging from Japanese prints to modern paintings. No one piece of furniture is the same, but there is an eclectic synergy that vibrates throughout.

The garden in back boasts of butterfly host plants like the milkweed and the fennel that attract monarchs and swallow tails. Strolling through the garden, you will also encounter a Japanese bonsai plant and a fully-matured Japanese maple.

"It helps one appreciate your surrounding relationship with nature," she says. "Nature is entertainment that is free to everyone. It is very fulfilling. I can't conceive of living without it or enjoying seeing it."

Bay's passion for art began early. A Farms resident since 1969, she attended the University of Michigan and received her BFA from the Cranbrook Academy where she studied pottery, metalsmithing and weaving. But the artistic fruit doesn't fall far from the family tree. Her father was an art professor and many relatives worked in the field.

"I came from a very gifted family," she says. "They instilled a love of art in me. Growing up, family entertainment (consisted of) spending a weekend at the Detroit Institute of Arts or strolling the grounds at Cranbrook."

After graduating from Cranbrook, Bay continued her study of metalsmithing in Germany. She was well at home because of her German heritage and knowledge of the language. Once back from the Continent, she taught at the Dayton Institute of Arts where she met George. They settled in the Farms and Bay continued teaching at the Grosse Pointe Academy.

POINTER OF INTEREST

For the last decade, Bay's interest has been photography. Her passion began after joining the Grosse Pointe Camera Club and has resulted in winning a number of awards in juried invitationals and competitions.

"Working with close-up photography has opened up a new world to me," she says.

Bay's current work is in emulsion and image transfers. The processes allow her to manipulate images from photographs to express her artistic freedom. She will have an exhibition of her work in an open reception at the Scarab Club in Detroit beginning Saturday, Oct. 4. The exhibit will run throughout the month and many of the displays will be available for purchase. The Scarab Club is located at 217 Farnsworth, directly behind the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Her photography has taken Bay to study the metamorphosis of butterflies that mature in her garden. She currently has a cocoon of a monarch in a glass case inside of her home that she will photograph throughout the maturation process. Her work has drawn some notoriety from her neighbors.

"I'm known as the neighborhood bug lady," she says, laughing.

The Bays have two children, Charlie and Andrea, who live out of state. They are expecting their first grandchild shortly and both children carry on the family's artistic heritage in some way. George is president of Scrimshaw Carvings in Grosse Pointe Farms.

"Both Charlie and Andrea are marvelous photographers," she says. "Andrea, an executive chef, (also) shows her artistic impression in food."

There is not one period in art history that influences Bay's work. To her, all forms are interwoven, resulting in a holistic tapestry that she expresses in her art. In addition to many exhibitions, she belongs to a local herb society and the international Questers Inc. By constantly exposing herself to other forms of art, her passion keeps revitalizing itself.

"I am not a verbal person," she says. "I'm much better off expressing myself through my art work."

A self portrait of Rosemary Bay in an emulsion transfer photography technique reveals its expressive possibilities.

For more information about the exhibit, call the Scarab Club at (313) 831-1250.

AAA Michigan Web work honored

AAA Michigan is among the top 100 Internet and intranet sites in the nation, according to WebMaster magazine. Award-winning sites are featured in the magazine's special August edition, the WebMaster 50/50 issue.

The WebMaster 50/50 awards program recognizes innovative Internet and intranet development efforts. The award is given to 50 Internet and 50 intranet sites that use the Internet to meet overall business objectives.

Nearly 900 WebMaster site visitors filled out an electronic ballot at the WebMaster site (www.web-master.com) to nominate a Web environment, a single site or a single application.

WebMaster editors judged each nomination based on the following criteria: which organizations use the Web to open new markets, expand existing ones, manage information and/or maintain cost-effective interactions.

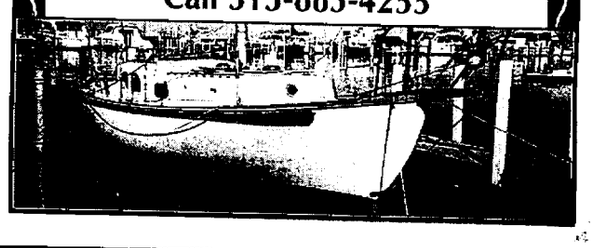

"We are delighted to be recognized by the industry for our site," says Rick Semack, strategic planning consultant for AAA Michigan. "We believe we can put technology to work for our members."

According to WebMaster magazine Publisher and Editor in Chief Lew McCreary, "These award winners anticipate and adapt to the flow of the mercurial Web, trying not just to go with it but managing to stay out in front."

"We are working toward being able to offer our members every service they can receive in our branches on our Web site," says Semack. "Over the next two months, we will be adding even more new features, including direct access to TourBook information and online maps and routings."

Silent majority finds voice on school music

The "silent majority" who has favored the changes in the Grosse Pointe school system's music program finally found its voice in support of the program at last week's school board meeting.

As reported in last week's issue by Grosse Pointe News staff writer Shirley McShane, the pro-music group, who unofficially called themselves the "silent majority," was in effect answering the critics who earlier had sounded off against changes made in the secondary music program.

The "silent majority" also complimented the new superintendent, Suzanne Klein, the school board and the instrumental music committee for their contributions to the recommendations made in the new program.

Opinion

We not only agree with the "silent majority" in its praise for the superintendent and the music committee, but we compliment its members for being willing to express their viewpoints at a public board meeting.

Too often, in such controversies, those in the "silent majority" avoid getting involved in public discussions with their critics. They obviously felt it was time to speak out — and did.

In evaluating Klein's work on the music program, all of us should also remember that the controversy over Ralph Miller and his music assignments really began during the reign of the previous superintendent.

In fact, the reassignment of the controversial music teacher had been proposed even before Klein had taken over her duties as superintendent.

In addition, two other people involved in that controversy had ended their participation in it. The South principal had left and the term of the president of the teachers union had expired.

So Klein really "inherited" the controversy, but has not ducked her responsibility to try to find sensible solutions to it. Instead, she made sound judgments in putting some of the recommendations into practice this fall and delaying others that need more time for consideration.

In her comments last week, Klein also explained that changes made were in the areas of staffing and scheduling, and not in curriculum, which had been studied, updated by the district's curriculum committee, and approved by the school board in the spring of 1996.

In justifying their positions, both members of the board minority made the point that they had been elected by the voters. Of course, they had, or they wouldn't be sitting with the board.

But sometimes both seem to forget that the public has elected the majority and rebuffed critics in the last two school elections. That puts a special burden on the critics, in our opinion, to bolster their differences by citing information that supports what they say.

Now that backers of the majority as well as the critics have had their separate nights of talk at and with the school board, we hope that the issue of music program changes will finally subside.

In addition, we hope that the critics will await the results of the shifts and changes made and proposed before renewing the kind of verbal bombardment that had earlier been launched at the board and the superintendent.

In fact, they might even like what they see and hear.

Charter schools low on MEAP

Results of a Detroit Free Press study of the records of Michigan charter schools on the Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) tests confirm former GOP state Rep. William R. Bryant's decision to limit the number of such schools.

The Free Press study showed that, compared with public schools, 17 percent fewer charter school fifth-graders had passing scores on MEAP tests in science and writing administered last winter.

In addition, among eighth-graders, the gap between public schools and charter school scores was about 12 percent,

After Gov. John Engler and other GOP leaders last year called for the removal of any limit on the number of charter schools to be supported by the state, Bryant, then the House Education Committee chair, expanded the first cap of 100 to 150.

But he refused to remove the cap or increase it to a larger number.

His reasoning was that the charter schools had not proved their value in their first year and ought to be subjected to critical assessment before the Legislature considered removing the limit.

The current number of charter schools in operation is 101, according to Sharon Wise, a member of the state Board of Education.

Charter schools, it is true, have been in existence no more than two years, and some had been running less than a year when their students first took MEAP tests.

While charter schools cannot be judged to be poorer than the public schools on the basis of these first scores, they obviously are not yet making the improvement their enthusiastic backers had claimed in advance.

Perhaps it was not just happenstance that Wise, a GOP state board member, issued a statement last week that attacks the majority Democrats for playing politics with charter schools.

That is a silly charge when, in fact, the governor himself earlier this year had attempted to take over the power of the state board or transfer it to the head of the state Department of Education, who is appointed by the governor.

If that isn't playing politics with education in general, we don't know what is.

But Wise goes on to contend that Democrats on the board are guilty of "brazen political chicanery" by raising the issue of the "accountability" of the charter schools.

In fact, we, too, have raised that question because charter schools are run by school boards first appointed by the chartering bodies, with future vacancies being filled by appointment by the remaining appointed board members.

Lacking elective board members, how are such schools accountable to the public, and not just to Lansing? Wise writes that they "should be held accountable for their performance as well as for their adherence to the laws that govern them."

Yet just how is this done? Wise doesn't say, except to agree that their students should take the MEAP tests.

So far, charter school scores on the MEAP tests hardly distinguish the charter schools or even indicate that more should be permitted in Michigan.

What's behind GOP hearings

Whether or not Vice President Al Gore is ever found to be culpable, three facts should be remembered about the congressional inquiries into charges that the Democratic National Committee may have illegally diverted hard money into soft money spending in the 1996 campaign.

The first fact is that the Republicans, who control both houses of Congress, are using the campaign finance hearings in an attempt to spoil the vice-president's name and reputation because he is the leading Democratic candidate for president in the year 2000.

As a result, the hearings have heard little of the GOP wrongdoing in campaign funding. However, the Senate committee did hear the former GOP national party chairman and others testify that the GOP was not quite as clean as a hound's tooth in its 1996 fund raising.

The second fact is that nobody has ever been prosecuted under the law that Gore supposedly has violated. In fact, in banning money raising from federal buildings, the law originally was intended to prevent department heads from forcing their employees to contribute to the party in power.

The third fact is, as the New York Times reported, in the last election cycle, the GOP National Committee raised $193 million in hard money, the highly regulated direct contributions to candidates, while the Democrats raised $108 million, or just over half as much as the GOP.

Hard money is the description of funds contributed directly to elective candidates, while soft money, contributed to political parties, is supposedly used only for state and local party-building efforts, such as get-out-the-vote drives.

But over the years, the New York Times reports, the parties have increasingly used soft money donations "to influence campaigns for federal office." Soft money has often been used, for instance, to hire campaign workers who do more for a particular candidate than for the party he or she represents.

Those facts also help explain why most Republicans oppose any new legislation to control campaign spending, and resort, instead, to charges that the Democrats broke even the existing campaign laws And thus, they contend, we don't need any new laws.

But here are two questions no one seems to have answered:

Did all that hard money raised by the Republicans go directly to candidates or was part of it used as soft money?

And did no GOP senators or representatives use their federal office building phones to call contributors and thus violate the law, as Gore supposedly did?

The purpose of these comments is to remind readers that both parties play the money game, and both ought to figure out ways to stop it.

North students commended

To the Editor:

Caught up in the excitement of the game against South High School the other night, I heard the sounds of sirens in the vicinity of Vernier Road.

The next day I learned that a special member of our community, Arthur "the clown", a long-time proud fan of the students who grew up in Grosse Pointe Woods and who now attend Grosse Pointe North High School, a man who was one of North's most loyal fans, had been struck and killed by a car during the game.

In view of this tragedy, I want to congratulate all of you for your good sportsmanship during this "big game" between North an South High Schools. As a parent of a football player and a fan of this team, I am proud of you all for rising above the stupid vandalism that confronted you on the morning of the traditional event that used to be a community celebration regardless of which school won.

I was especially proud of the North cheerleaders, pep band and football team who patiently tolerated the "very vocal" large group of South students who chose to sit directly in front of the North cheerleading squad rather than in front of their own South cheerleaders, and cheered "against" our cheerleaders and pep band throughout the game.

The North cheerleaders showed composure and positive leadership when two South cheerleaders rudely strolled directly in front of them, disrupting a cheer the North cheerleaders had just begun.

Grosse Pointe North students are a "class act." Your positive behavior was a good example to the younger fans in the crowd who were cheering for Grosse Pointe North. You showed that respect for others is more important than a football game.

Rosalind McHale
Grosse Pointe Woods

Thanks

To the Editor:

On behalf of the North High administration I would like to thank the 60 volunteers from North and South and the South High administrators who joined our regular staff of 20 administrators, gate and security personnel for helping to make the first North/South Varsity Football game "under the lights" a huge success. Over 4,100 were in attendance, the largest crowd for a North High athletic contest in our school's history.

Both teams should be congratulated for playing an outstanding game, and the fans should be commended for the positive support they gave their team and for the excellent sportsmanship demonstrated by all.

Again, special thanks to those who volunteered their help; we could not have done it without you.

Skateboarders unfairly blamed?

To the Editor:

I believe you are hooked on a stereotype that skateboarders are destructive, delinquent, and just out there to be rebellious and bug people. Well that may be the case with some skaters, but most are out there just to have fun without grinding on benches or picking on elementary school kids. It has come to the point where we can't skateboard on the street or on the sidewalk without getting dirty looks or being stopped by police.

Have you ever seen a Rollerblader or a bicycle rider pulled over for riding in the street? Of course not, because they don't have an unfair and untrue stereotype.

Once, I was pulled over by a policeman. He told me to "Go away and stop bugging people."

I responded politely by asking, "Then where can I go?"

"Go home, take up a hobby," he said.

They are telling us all the places we can't go, but they don't tell us where we can go. My recommendation to the Grosse Pointes is to build a skatepark. A skatepark would probably reduce unwanted skaters by about 90 percent, but I'm just a skateboarder, what do I know?

Age has privileges

Women of, uh .... um .... a certain vintage ... can finally put aside some of the things they used to worry about. Men too, I suppose.

Women are better worriers, however. We worry about our children, our spouses or significant others, our parents, our friends, neighbors, acquaintances, homeless people, homeless animals, famous people, sick people, endangered species, dead people, old people, the Royal Family, ourselves.

We worry about our homes, our possessions, our jobs, our clothes, our social interactions, our money.

We also worry a lot about feelings — our children's, our spouses', our parents', our friends' and our own.

I don't like to admit it, but women worry about how we look. We fret and fuss about our weight, our clothes, our skin, our nails, our flabs and sags and cellulite and crow's feet.

And hair. Especially our hair.

If I added up all the time I spent sitting under a hair dryer, it would total about 15 years. So far, my hair has never, ever, ever lived up to my expectations.

When I was in college (in prehistoric times, before curling irons were invented) women styled their hair by soaking it with water, rolling it up on large cylinders studded with prickly brushes.

The rolling-up took 10 minutes or so. Then we had to wait for the hair to dry. Drying took hours, unless you owned a hair dryer.

My sorority house had a coin-operated hair dryer that featured a huge egg-shaped salon-style adjustable hood attached to the back of a vinyl armchair. You dropped a quarter in the slot to get 60 minutes of drying time.

In the three years I lived in the sorority house, the hair dryer never cooled down. It chugged along 24 hours a day, seven days a week, every week of the school year.

We devised sign-up sheets to parcel out the drying time. Those of us who had thick, straight hair had to reserve more time and had to make plans several days in advance. The sign-up system was nearly as complicated as making restaurant reservations for brunch on Mother's Day.

I don't worry about my hair any more. It still doesn't look right. But I don't think its worth all the attention I used to give it.

I also no longer worry about getting tan; about whether I'm dressed appropriately; about how clean my house is; about whether I should spend a few frivolous extra dollars for fresh flowers or fancy shoes or a gift for someone I love.

I don't care that my dog sheds.

I don't care if a friend forgets to return a book that I loaned to him or her.

If the dishes languish in the sink after dinner — perhaps as long as 24 hours after dinner — I don't worry that someone will call me a terrible housekeeper.

If I'm dressed inappropriately, I hold my chin high and make the best of it.

But hair. Well . . .

I've gone to the same hairdresser for nearly 30 years. My friend Diane has been through thick and thin, so to speak. She has weathered more than a quarter of a century of changes in cutting, perming, curling, setting, highlighting, striping, streaking, coloring, touching up, toning down, trimming and covering gray.

She has been through whimsical experiments with pageboys, flips, bubbles, French twists, bangs, pixies, a selection of wiglets and falls, ponytails, Dorothy Hammel-styles and dozens of different brands of perms, rinses, highlighters, colors, cremes and conditioners.

She still has an optimistic point of view and a nice sense of humor.

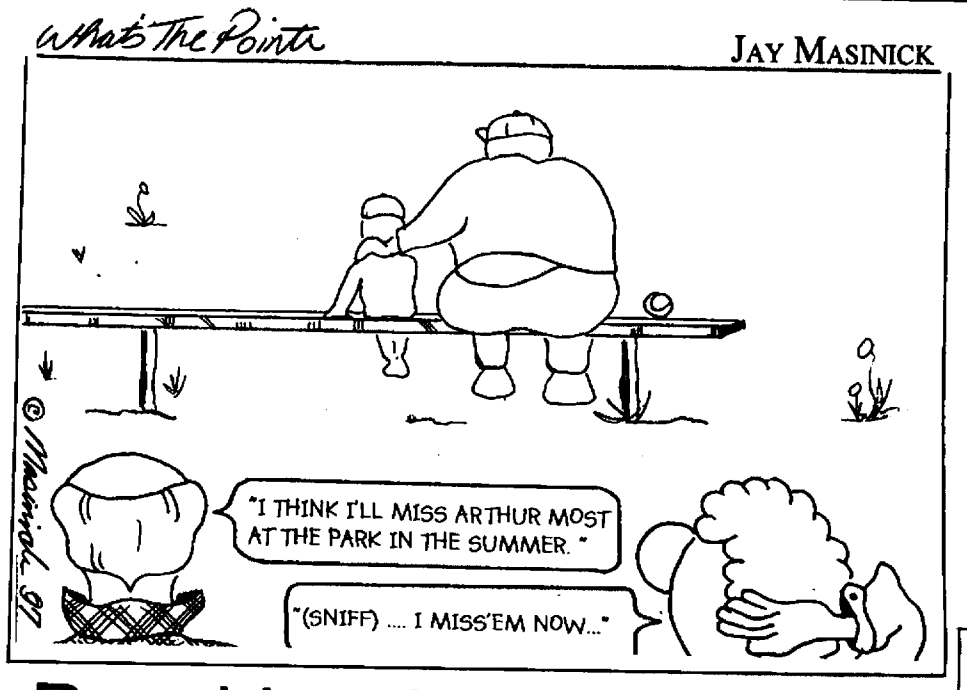

When I show her a picture of a great haircut or hairstyle I'd like to try, she points to a mug with one of those pithy sayings stenciled on its side.

It says: "I'm a beautician, not a magician."

Repairing the Silk Road

By Andrew C. Richner
State Representative

If you've driven your car at all this summer, no doubt you have been delayed by a myriad of orange cones, "lane ends" signs and road construction crews working feverishly to fix our roads. While warm weather always means an increase in road work, the level of activity this year is even greater than in years past. This is because the state Legislature and Gov. John Engler responded to public demand to provide a real solution for Michigan's imperiled infrastructure by passing earlier this summer a series of transportation reforms and increased road funding measures known as "Build Michigan II."

Last week I toured with Gov. Engler one very important road construction site at the intersection of Interstate 75 and the Ambassador Bridge. The $2 million project, which will be completed later this year, will result in improved traffic flow and access between the Ambassador Bridge and I-75, I-94 and I-96.

This project provides a critical link in our transportation network. The Ambassador Bridge is the busiest international border crossing in the United States, accounting for 25 percent of all trade between the United States and Canada.

Grosse Pointe resident Mickey Blashfield, spokesman for the Ambassador Bridge company, believes that our trading potential with Canada and Mexico would be developed even further if the federal government designates the I-94 corridor as a "NAFTA Superhighway." This designation would entitle truck traffic between Canada, the United States and Mexico to move across borders quickly and efficiently by allowing customs agents to monitor electronically the contents of the trucks.

A coalition of governmental officials, business leaders and others promoting I-94 for the NAFTA Superhighway designation is competing with a similar coalition touting I-69 as the beneficiary of the federal funds to pay for the upgraded technology and other improvements. Those of us supporting the I-94 route, which connects to Mexico via I-35, believe we should have the inside track as the route would essentially require no new highway construction while the I-69 route would entail a multi-billion dollar investment to construct new freeways from Indianapolis to Mexico.

In addition to the Ambassador Bridge project, Grosse Pointe, Harper Woods and east-side residents will be the direct beneficiaries of a $2.3 million project to repave and repair Eight Mile and Vernier to be completed next year. This amounts to the largest state road investment in our community since Vernier was widened to eight lanes in 1968. I was able to obtain the commitment from the governor's office for this project in connection with passage of the Build Michigan II package of bills.

The governor and many of us in the state Legislature consider the repair and rebuilding of our state road system as vital to our state's economy. The I-94 corridor, including major connectors such as Eight Mile and Vernier, links jobs, businesses and people to the major trade route running through the heartland of North America — it is our Silk Road of the 21st Century.

Like the silk and spice traders of centuries past, our continued economic progress depends on the strength of our commercial transportation system.

We are committed to do what we can to maintain and improve Michigan's roads.

Princess Di unfairly criticized

To the Editor:

Dr. Bloom's article on Princess Diana (9/4/97) provides a compelling argument . . . against psychology. How dare anyone assume to understand and judge the feelings and motivations of other humans.

Princess Diana's death was not a media event, but a world event. I have never known the world to be so united in grief over any one person.

It is unfair to use words like "wild, irresponsible, defiant, rebellious, out of control" to describe Princess Diana. She was a human being with a wide range of qualities and problems.

Princess Diana's "behavior was not becoming of a good woman"? What do you find objectionable? That she transcended all class, social, ethnic and racial boundaries and reached out to everyone in love and kindness? That she worked tirelessly for charities, visited war-torn countries to promote peace and fearlessly loved the children of the world? That she touched the untouchable, loved the unlovable, looked death, fear, poverty and despair in the face and gave people hope?

I feel very comfortable assuming that Princess Diana did not want to die and leave her boys motherless. She was in an accident. She did not cause the accident. She did not "self-destruct."

"She tried to be a good mother, but a good mother is not an absent mother," Bloom says. In today's world, people divorce and share custody. Diana couldn't spend every day with her boys both because of her charity work and because of the time they spent with their father. She loved those boys fiercely.

Diana managed to give others the gift that she herself so needed to be given — unconditional love. If she felt unworthy, it is not because she was unworthy, but because she was human.

Facts speak for themselves

To the Editor:

I read, with interest, your editorial on Oakland County ("Oakland now cool to casinos," Sept. 11) that was based on a recent Detroit Free Press editorial column by Heath Meriwether.

It appears the intent of the editorial was to give a backhanded slap to Detroit and Wayne County. That is certainly your editorial prerogative.

However, you could have better served your readers if you had done a more thorough analysis of the region's economic development landscape.

In doing so, you would have discovered several interesting items, including:

- As reported in last Wednesday's Detroit Free Press, Wayne County has the region's hottest industrial markets (located around Metro Airport and along M-14).
- Wayne County also boasts the region's hottest office market (along the I-275 corridor).
- As of May, Grosse Pointe Woods had one of the lowest unemployment rates in the region (0.8 percent).
- Real estate values in some Detroit neighborhoods (including East English Village) have nearly doubled in the last year.
- Canton Township and Brownstown Township are among the region's leaders in new housing starts.
- Wayne County is home to the corporate headquarters of the two largest corporations in the world — General Motors and the Ford Motor Co.
- Wayne County has more jobs (707,000 with an annual payroll of $22 billion) than any other county in Michigan.

The facts speak for themselves.

Wayne County and its 43 communities have created a business-friendly environment that invites economic investment and expansion.

Cause of backup

To the Editor:

Soon after the heavy rainstorm on Wednesday, Aug. 20, I requested a special meeting be called by the mayor of Grosse Pointe Woods, director of public works and city manager with the Grosse Pointe Woods residents affected by the storm.

The city manager and mayor felt this issue should be discussed at a committee of the whole meeting once a report from the public works division is completed.

On Monday, Sept. 8, I addressed the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council meeting to inquire about the date for the committee of the whole meeting and to address my concerns about the residential sewer backup problems following the Aug. 20 rain. About 20 residents were also in attendance because of this problem. In our household, we experienced 6 to 8 inches of backup.

First, I believe we need to have a full understanding of the cause of the backup and to know what can realistically be done to prevent this from ever happening again.

Second, I believe the city was not attentive in informing residents and sanitation workers of the health dangers, special cleaning techniques or the special storm garbage pickup arranged for Saturday, Aug. 23.

At the council meeting the mayor announced the committee of the whole would meet to discuss the sewer backup problem on Monday, Sept. 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the council chamber. I'm hoping all Grosse Pointe Woods residents who are interested in the cause of the backup and who have suggestions for prevention will attend.

Apparently, 81 homeowners have contacted the city about the problem so far.

Practice of phone 'slamming' catches consumers unaware

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Let the buyer beware. That's the warning being given to telephone consumers by officials at Ameritech.

The practice of slamming, or switching the long distance service of a consumer without the consumer's knowledge, is becoming a big problem, said Ameritech Community Relations manager Jon Peterson.

"Despite effort to deter slamming and punish the slammers, it remains the number one consumer complaint at the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and the Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC)," said Peterson. "The FCC has received 12,000 slamming complaints in the first half of this year. There were 16,000 complaints in all of 1996."

Peterson said that the FCC intends to tighten the rules against slamming, but in the meantime, consumers can do some things to protect themselves. The most important thing they can do is to not sign anything dealing with telephone service without reading it carefully.

Often, said Peterson, consumers will receive letters stating that they have won a contest and the prize is a sum of money, $5 or the like. The cashing of the check is taken as a sign that the consumer wants to switch long-distance providers.

There are now many small long-distance providers that charge more than the large carriers, like AT&T or Sprint, Peterson said. Sometimes people are contacted over the telephone by "boiler room" operators, who can trick people into giving some sort of verbal approval.

Peterson urges anyone who is contacted over the telephone to ask for something in writing or to say that they are not interested in switching services.

"What slamming is, is anti-consumer," said Peterson. "People have the right to have the service they want. Unscrupulous people switching services is something people shouldn't have to endure."

Some other things people can do to protect themselves is to check their phone bills every month to make sure that there aren't any strange or new charges. They can also ask for slamming protection from Ameritech by calling (800) SLAM920.

The service is free.

If you have been slammed, Peterson said that you should call the local telephone company to have service switched back.

The consumer should also call the company that did the slamming and ask for written proof that the consumer authorized a switch. The consumer should also say that he will only pay the charges that his regular carrier would have imposed. If the carrier will not drop charges, the consumer should call the FCC at (888) 225-5322.

The consumer should then call her regular carrier and say she was slammed, and ask to be reconnected, said Peterson. She should not be charged for the reconnect.

State approves plan to repair Eight Mile near the Eastland Mall

State Rep. Andrew Richner announced that the Michigan Department of Transportation has approved an extensive preservation project to fix a 1.3-mile stretch of 8 Mile/Vernier, from Kelly Road to I-94.

"This is the most substantial road construction our east-side communities have seen in 30 years," Richner said. "Vernier Road is in desperate need of an overhaul immediately. Thanks to the increased transportation funding approved by the governor and the Legislature this summer, relief is on the way."

During legislative deliberations in July, Richner sought assurances that the road needs of the Grosse Pointe, Harper Woods and east-side communities would be addressed.

State transportation officials said the impending project is of historical significance.

"Through the strong support of Rep. Richner and other legislative leaders for Gov. Engler's comprehensive Build Michigan II transportation package, this resurfacing will be one of the most extensive preservation projects ever conducted in the Harper Woods/Grosse Pointe communities by the state," said MDOT spokesman Gary Naeyaert. "It is as significant an improvement as was the widening and resurfacing of M-102 back in 1968."

Eight Mile and Vernier would not have been eligible for improvements until 1999 without passage of the transportation funding package.

As a result of Richner's and the Legislature's work, a comprehensive overhaul will be completed next fall.

"Vernier is the main access for Eastland Mall, which is a regional economic engine accounting for more than 3,000 jobs in Harper Woods," said Harper Woods Mayor Frank Palazzolo. "No significant resurfacing of Vernier has been done since 1968, and the road's poor condition detours mall traffic."

The Department of Transportation will oversee contracting for the job next June, and expects the $2.3 million project to be completed and reopened by Oct. 15, 1998.

"The department's proposal to spend $2.3 million on 1.3 miles of road demonstrates an extraordinary commitment to meet our transportation needs," Richner said. "This investment in our community will mean safer, smoother roads for our motorists, residents and businesses."

AAA study shows reduction in auto air pollution in Detroit area

During the past 26 years, emissions of air pollutants in the Metro Detroit area from automobiles and light trucks have been sharply reduced. According to a study released in Washington, and supported by AAA Michigan, more than 75 percent of the most harmful pollutants now come from stationary sources such as factories, electric power plants and dry cleaners, as well as heavy trucks, boats and lawn mowers.

The study, which reviewed data on emissions of volatile organic compounds (VOC) and oxides of nitrogen (NOx) for 24 metropolitan areas in the United States, concluded that autos and light trucks now account for only 24 percent of VOC emissions and 16 percent of NOx emissions in the seven-county Metro Detroit area.

In 1970, the numbers were 51 percent and 24 percent respectively. These reductions were achieved despite a 57 percent increase in the number of miles traveled in the area by cars and light trucks, the study estimates.

Stationary sources of pollution now account for 64 percent of NOx and 55 percent of VOC in the Detroit area's air, according to AAA's study. Muskegon County showed similar results.

"This study provides further evidence that restrictions on motorists likely to result from tougher air-quality standards the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is seeking to impose are unwise and unnecessary," says Larry Givens, AAA Michigan's vice president for corporate relations. "The study shows that cars and light trucks are not the major source of air pollution in the Detroit and Muskegon regions.

"AAA Michigan strongly supports the goals of the Clean Air Act. We applaud the successful effort auto manufacturers have made to reduce pollution from vehicles. We believe motorists are doing more than their share to achieve clean-air goals by paying as much as $2,000 per car for pollution-control equipment.

"We contend there is no justification for EPA to enforce new standards that will cost motorists even more money and require onerous restrictions of their freedom to drive," Givens says.

Projecting ahead to 2005, the study concludes VOC emissions from cars and trucks will be reduced by another four percentage points and NOx emissions by another one percentage point as older vehicles are retired and replaced by newer vehicles with improved pollution-control systems.

AAA Michigan is on record as being opposed to new air-quality standards for ozone and particulate matter that EPA has announced.

The Auto Club contends EPA's proposals could result in new regulations affecting the Metro Detroit area and other regions of Michigan that would require annual tailpipe emissions testing, mandatory car pooling for employees of large companies, substantially increased parking fees and other severely restrictive measures.

An editorial that will appear in the September issue of the club's magazine, Michigan Living, urges AAA Michigan's 1.7 million members to contact their representatives in Congress in support of HR 1984, a bill in the House of Representatives that would postpone EPA's new standards for four years while the scientific basis for those standards is reviewed.

Michigan Congressmen John Dingell of Dearborn and Fred Upton of St. Joseph are among the leaders of the effort to pass HR 1984. They and other supporters of the bill contend the proposed standards are based on flawed scientific studies.

The new standards, they say, will not produce the public-health benefits EPA claims, but will have a severe impact on the American public in enormous costs and forced lifestyle changes that would be required to meet the standards

Longevity can be ultimate goal when help is obtained

By Marian Trainor

Longevity can be the ultimate goal if certain healthy measures are taken. A perfectly honest person will admit that longevity is the ultimate goal in life. In spite of the trials and tribulations which are part of living, there are not many who would willingly volunteer to forego the experience of their statistically allotted years of 75 to 80 and now stretching into the century range.

Desirable as those later years are, they come with a price tag. One price is the gradual slowing down of the body and its reluctance to obey the impulses that the alert mind will it to carry out.

How many times have you heard your friends, neighbors and yourself say, "I may be old in years but inside I'm still 21."

So be it. It is that spirit that refuses to let the body dictate activities and interests that keep the image of "forever young" alive.

However, it is not that easy. We just can't say "forget you" to the body. "I will not let you make me into a dispirited, broken-down shell. I'm going to live my life as long as I have life."

The only way to win the war of mind and spirit over the gradual physical limitations that come with age is to employ the same tactics brought to bear by diplomats and arbitrators. Forestall with compromise.

For instance, the 20-year-old inside thinks it would be fun to disco until 2 a.m. The 65-year-old body says, "enough already." Turn it off at midnight and stick to what you were brought up on — the foxtrot or possibly a little rock and roll.

A happy medium has been reached. You've proved that you can still dance up a storm and the body goes home pleasantly exhilarated but not exhausted.

Another thought: That demanding body will not tolerate neglect. Putting off physicals, disregarding warning signals and ignoring definite problems will result in a breakdown of that body with the possible result that the youthful spirit will flicker and die. When that happens, added years cease to be a blessing and become a burden.

One of the reasons that people, both old and young, shy away from doctors until they are really ill is a fear that they will hear something they would rather not know, which is too bad because almost every ailment associated with the aging process can be helped.

Take arthritis for instance. The very word evokes a specter of fear and pain.

People think of getting old, being unable to get around and of becoming dependent upon others.

More so than any other disease, the term arthritis carries with it a sense of hopelessness and futility.

But the very opposite should be true. According to "The Arthritis Helpbook" by Kate Loring and James F. Fries (Addison-Weley) all arthritics can be helped.

Dr. Long developed the Arthritis Self Management Patient Education Project at the Stanford Arthritis Clinic. They contend that arthritis is not just a single disease, that there are more than 100 kinds of arthritis which have something to do with one or more joints of the body.

The word arthritis means "inflammation of the joint." The term comes from the Greek words "arth" meaning joint and "itis" meaning inflammation. But in many kinds of arthritis the joint is not inflamed. A better description might be "problems of the joints."

While there are 100 types of arthritis, there are only two major types — rheumatoid and osteoarthritis.

Rheumatoid arthritis is more than just arthritis. Some doctors term it rheumatoid disease because of the body aching and fatigue that accompany rheumatoid arthritis.

Osteoarthritis, degenerative joint disease, is the kind of arthritis that everybody gets. It is practically a universal problem, increasing with age. Osteoarthritis is a much less severe form of arthritis than rheumatoid arthritis.

There are three kinds of osteoarthritis. The first and mildest cause knobby enlargement of the finger joints. The other joints of the fingers may be involved. This kind of arthritis usually causes little difficulty.

The second form of osteoarthritis involves the spine. Bony growths (spurs) appear on the spine in the neck region or in the lower back. The third form of osteoarthritis involves the weight-bearing joints.

Prognosis is excellent for all forms of osteoarthritis. The good news is that osteoarthritis will not necessarily become worse with age.

One of the most important things you can do to help arthritis is to exercise. Exercise leads to increased strength and flexibility in the muscles and ligaments that surround the joints.

In addition, research has shown that exercise helps to maintain or increase the strength of bone.

"The Arthritis Helpbook" has an excellent chapter outlining the benefits, principles and types of exercise and what should be avoided.

Included are specific exercises for particular areas together with pen-and-ink diagrams that show exactly how to do the exercise to obtain the most benefit.

Enlightening and helpful as this book is, it is not a substitute for professional care nor is it a treat-yourself manual. It is meant to enlarge upon and to enlighten those with arthritis on the professional guidance that should be provided by their doctors.

To this end, it contains advice on how to communicate with the doctor of your choice. Three points are stressed:

- Come prepared — Make a list of what you want to know.
- Ask questions — How many aspirins? What kind of exercise?
- Discuss your problems — I would like to lose weight, but I just can't.

Be a CAD: Come prepared; ask questions; discuss problems.

Immunizations available for area seniors

The Wayne County Health Department and Services for Older Citizens (SOC) will sponsor two immunization clinics for senior residents from the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

Flu shots, mammograms and pneumonia shots (on a limited basis) will be offered at both clinics.

The clinics will be held at the Barnes Community Education building on Friday, Oct. 3, and on Thursday, Nov. 6.

Seniors who are interested in receiving any of these services must make an appointment by calling SOC at (313) 882-9600 between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. on weekdays.

Both clinics will serve residents who are at least 65 years old and younger residents with chronic health problems.

The Macomb County Health Department will offer flu and pneumonia vaccinations beginning on Oct. 1.

The area office is located at 25401 Harper in St. Clair Shores. The clinic will open from 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. on a first-come basis.

For additional information, call the clinic at (810) 466-6800.

Seniors who live in Detroit can receive their flu shots free of charge at walk-in clinics sponsored by the Detroit Health Department.

All clinics are held from 12:30 - 3 p.m. Area clinics include:

- St. Jude Parish, 15865 E. Seven Mile near Kelly on Friday, Oct. 3.
- Mt. Zion Lutheran Church, 13560 E. McNichols near Gratiot on Tuesday, Oct. 7.
- UAW Dave Miller Building, 8731 E. Jefferson near van Dyke on Thursday, Oct. 23.

Senior Citizens of the Year honored

Gov. John Engler commended Sister Elizabeth O'Donnell on her recent selection as one of Michigan's Senior Citizens of the Year. O'Donnell and three other residents were honored at the State Fair's Senior Citizens Day in Detroit on August 25.

"Sister Betty is an authentic Michigan hero. Her selfless efforts on behalf of the elderly have made her a community service role model for the rest of the state," Engler said.

O'Donnell, of Detroit, has volunteered at the St. Rose Senior Center in Detroit since 1984. Despite wearing braces on her legs and using a walker, she still contributes her services in many ways.

She conducts a weekly Bible study, delivers Focus Hope food boxes to seniors in their homes, writes and edits a quarterly newsletter, writes grant applications to secure funding for the center's programs, and organizes and coordinates the Retired Senior Volunteer Program.

O'Donnell also hosts monthly parties for two adult foster care homes and drives seniors to the grocery store or the doctor's office. She is a member of Caring Together, a coalition of senior center services, and a past member of the advisory board for the Detroit Area Agency on Aging.

The other recipients of the Senior Citizen of the Year award are Henry Shaft of Saginaw, Margaret Streng of Alma and James Amos Sr. of Gobles.

SOC has seminar on managed care plans

The Grosse Pointe Department of Community Education will join Services for Older Citizens (SOC) to sponsor a seminar to provide consumer education about available options for Medicare managed care plans.

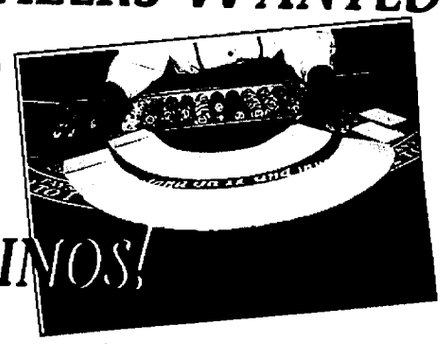

The Medicare managed care seminar will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. in Room 110, Wednesday, Sept. 24, at Barnes School, 20090 Morningside in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Joyce Hunt, moderator, is the Medicare consumer advocate from the Area Agency on Aging 1-B. Guest Medicare managed care speakers will include representatives from Blue Cross, HAP, M-Care and Select Care. Literature will be available, including a guide, "Points to Ponder."

SOC is a non-profit organization dedicated to helping older citizens maintain their lives with independence and dignity. SOC, an advocate for the senior community of Harper Woods and the five Grosse Pointes, invites seniors, people planning for retirement, children responsible for senior parents or guardians and others to attend.

Reservations are recommended, but not required. Call (313) 882-9781.

This is the school house that St. Paul kids helped build

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

A frizzy, blond-haired "Cabbage Patch Baby" doll. A rainbow of felt-tipped pens and crayons. Pencils, papers and scissors.

These and many other items are everyday objects for children in Grosse Pointe and most parts of the United States.

But to the children of the village of Santamba in Senegal, West Africa, they are sources of great fascination, not only for their esthetically pleasing qualities, but for their practical value. Simply put, toys and school supplies are in great shortage in a town that doesn't have electricity and until recently didn't have a sturdy school building.

Thanks to the ongoing efforts of students, teachers, parents and alumni of St. Paul Catholic School in Grosse Pointe Farms, not only are the children of Santamba receiving school supplies and toys, they now have a permanent school building in which to learn.

St. Paul school alumna and Grosse Pointe South High School graduate Maura Brazill, a Peace Corps volunteer who has spent the last three years in Senegal, has been corresponding with St. Paul children since 1995 about her experiences. She has about 20 student "pen pals."

Maura, who is a graduate of the master's program in international business at George Mason University in Virginia, was sent by the Peace Corps to work with women in Santamba to improve their economic status by helping them disseminate new strains of rice, said her mother, Elizabeth Brazill, who is assistant principal at St. Paul school.

The men of Santamba grow the cash crops and the women cultivate crops to feed their families. Before Maura introduced the new rice strains, the village women did not participate. With the new strains, the women not only are involved, they are able to produce much larger crops.

This year Maura will supervise 52 first-year volunteers and continue to work with the people in the village.

Helping the village build a new school was not part of her mission, Elizabeth said. That came about by accident.

During one of her visits home to Grosse Pointe and to St. Paul, the topic of the school came up, said second-grade teacher Jean Huggett (who had Maura as a student).

When the school community learned that the Santamba children were being educated in a mud-brick, straw-roof building, without windows, that succumbed to the elements during the rainy season and continuously had to be rebuilt, the idea grew to raise money to help them build a sturdier school.

Each fall the sixth grade organizes a festival that celebrates and demonstrates what they have been learning in their history and social studies classes.

In 1996 the students organized a Roman Forum. Last year they staged a trip back in time to ancient Mesopotamia. The events are fun and include food, games and activities. Most importantly, in the last two years they have raised nearly $3,000 to send to Senegal for the construction of a new school, Elizabeth said.

Maura returned to West Africa earlier this month to complete her volunteer duties with the Peace Corps and see the completion of the school building. While in Grosse Pointe, she met with students and shared pictures of the progress of the project — the visible evidence of the fundraising and planning.

Pictures of Senegal are pasted up all over the main hallway at St. Paul school. The concrete brick and corrugated tin building features two classrooms — with windows — for the 40 children who attend. Pupils range in age from five to 12; classes are taught in French.

St. Paul students also have sent new crayons, colored chalk, magic markers and pencils, to the delight of the Senegal children. Elizabeth noted that the donation of new pencils was well-received. There weren't enough supplies to go around and the children often ran back and forth between classrooms, borrowing from older siblings.

One little girl received a Cabbage Patch doll with blue eyes and a blond tuft of hair, Elizabeth said. Maura wrote a letter and sent pictures of the girl with her doll, which she carries in a cloth sack on her back, mimicking the village women with their infants.

While St. Paul raised the funds to build the school and the Peace Corps used the money to purchase and deliver supplies, Elizabeth pointed out that the project truly was carried out by the villagers.

Everyone in the community has helped to put it together, she said.

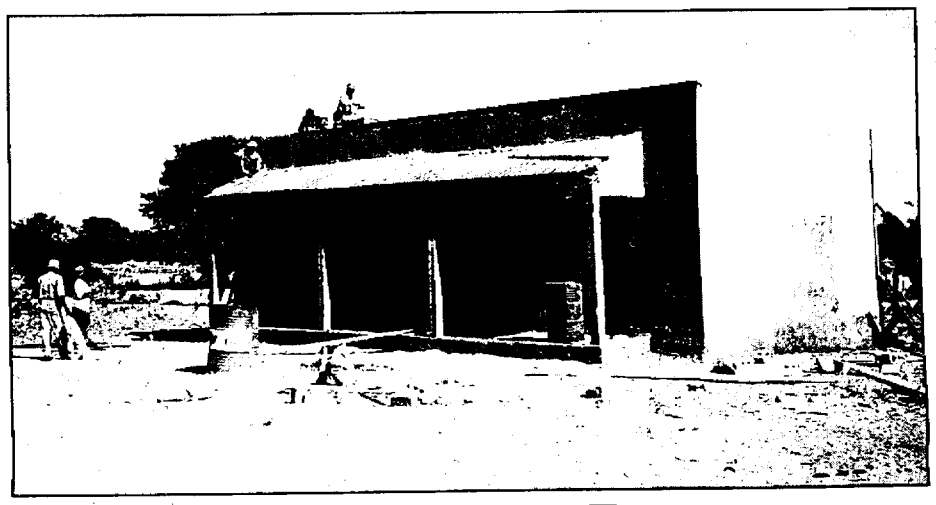

"The villagers designed the school, with help from the village mason, who oversaw the project," she said. "The children ran back and forth for supplies, the women brought buckets of water from the well and the men built it. When it's all done the children want to paint a big American flag on the side of the building."

Students at St. Paul remain highly interested in the project, Huggett said. Corresponding with Maura has been incorporated into the curriculum through letter-writing, participating in local as well as global service and the study of religion, geography and social studies.

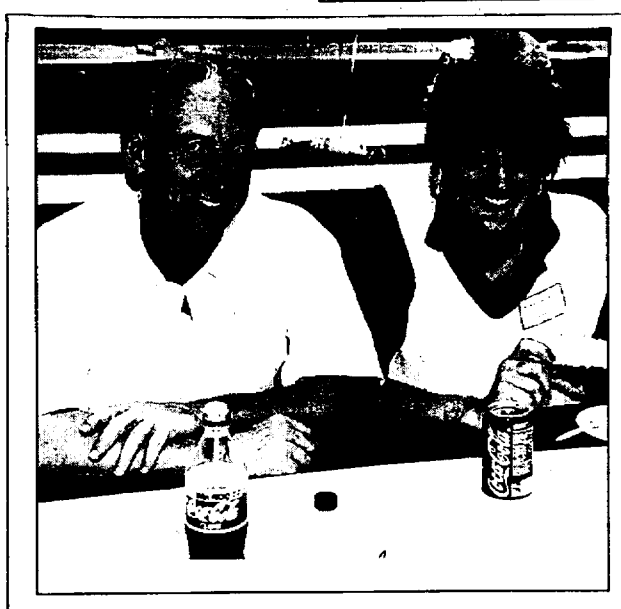

"This will be ongoing," Huggett said. "It has been a great experience for the students, the family and the school."

A little corn

Their son, Nick, began his freshman year at the Harper Woods high school. Each year the school hosts the event to welcome new parents and encourage fellowship.

Macomb College offers class for adults in transition

A series of "Transition to Triumph" classes for adults preparing to reenter the workforce will be held at Macomb Community College's Center Campus Nov. 3 through Dec. 15.

The six-week series addresses such topics as self-confidence, communication skills, navigating transitions, acknowledging change, redefining roles and expanding employment skills.

The classes also help adults in transition reestablish educational, career and financial goals.

The cost for the series is $135 for Macomb County residents and $210 for non-residents. Scholarships are available for those who qualify.

An intake session for those interested in the program will be held on Thursday, Oct. 9, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Center Campus, Garfield at Hall Road, Clinton Township. The series of classes begins Nov. 3 and will meet on Mondays and Wednesdays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. through Dec. 15.

For more information, call the College's Parent/Displaced Homemaker program at (810) 445-7003.

And the finalists are . . .

The principals of Grosse Pointe North and South high schools have announced the National Merit semifinalists in the 1998 Merit Scholarship competition.

They are among 15,000 academically talented high school seniors who now have the opportunity to continue in the competition for approximately 7,400 Merit Scholarships, worth $28 million, that will be offered in the spring. To be considered for Merit Scholarship, semifinalists must advance to the finalist level by maintaining an outstanding academic record throughout high school, be endorsed and recommended by their high school principal and submit SAT I scores that confirm qualifying test performance.

Honored from South were: Christine Norris, U.S. history; James Garlough, European history; David Rayburn, American government; Ann Eatherly, economics; Karl Geisler and Ranae Ikerd, biology; Francis Martin, chemistry; Thomas Schultz, computer science; Carl Justice, calculus; Mark Davids, physics; DeEtte Horan, psychology; Ellen Bowen and David Cleveland, music theory; Linda Banovetz, Sandra Moisides, John Shanle, English language; Peggy Ptasznik, English literature; Marjorie Sobczak, French language and literature; James Wilder, Latin; Dianna Minadeo, Spanish language and literature; and Lisa Brundige, German.

Meetings

The Grosse Pointe Public School System is forming its 1997-98 Gifted/Talented Advisory Committee, which meets monthly and explores news related to gifted programming. Anyone interested in serving on the committee should call Cynthia Doherty, coordinating psychologist for the program, at (313) 343-2069 no later than Tuesday, Sept. 23.

Education includes parental involvement

A child's success or failure in school often depends on the parents, particularly the extent of their involvement in their child's education, says National Education Association (NEA) president Bob Chase. It's important for parents to become active partners with teachers to help their children learn. That partnership plays a role in the classroom and at home, he said. It is a key to ensuring that all children start school ready to learn, whether it be kindergarten or college.

Research shows that when parents take an active interest in their child's education, the child does better in school. Higher grades, improved attendance and better behavior are among the positive results.

There are many ways parents can be involved in helping their child succeed in school. Here are a few:

- Read to your younger child. Get them to comment and ask questions.
- When your child first learns to read, let him read to you; listen attentively and be sure to praise his efforts.
- Have a discussion with your child about the books she reads — whatever her reading level.

Richard C. Hudson

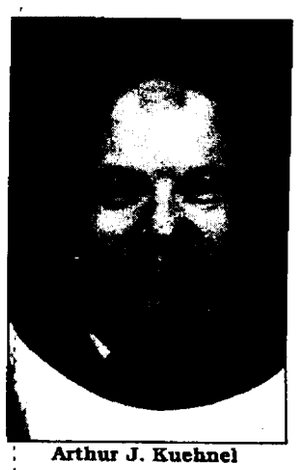

A funeral service was held on Sunday, Aug. 31, in Wildwood, Fla., for former Grosse Pointe Farms resident Richard C. Hudson, who died in Wildwood on Thursday, Aug. 28, 1997.

Mr. Hudson, 83, was born in Pittsburgh and graduated from Tufts University. He was employed for 33 years by Albert Kahn and Associates, and at the time of his retirement in 1978 was their chief estimator.

Mr. Hudson served in the U.S. Army during World War II. An active member of the community, Mr. Hudson served on the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council in the 1960s and the 1970s. He was also president of the Grosse Pointe Little League, was a member of the Michigan Engineer Society and Grosse Pointe Congregational Church, and was an avid golfer as well.

Mr. Hudson is survived by his wife, Marjorie; a daughter, Sandra W. Cracchiolo; a son, Richard; a sister, Carolyn Shearer; a brother, George Hudson; and four grandchildren.

Interment is at the Florida National Cemetery.

Arthur J. Kuehnel

Arthur J. Kuehnel

A memorial service will be held on Saturday, Sept. 20, in Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church at 10:30 a.m. for former Grosse Pointe Woods resident Arthur J. Kuehnel, who died on Sunday, Sept. 14, from injuries sustained in an automobile accident on Friday, Sept. 12. Visitation will be held in the church on Thursday, Sept. 18, from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Mr. Kuehnel, 48, was an active member of the community. He was a member of Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church where he served as a kirkwarden for many years. He also was involved with the Warren Jaycees, the Eastside Republican Club and the Republican Party of Michigan. He was to be presented with the state coat of arms by the state Republican party the weekend of his death.

He was also known for his tireless promotion of the Grosse Pointe Clown Corps, of which he was a founding member. Mr. Kuehnel participated in many local parades and events. He was also a member of Grosse Pointe Theatre, Grosse Pointe Children's Theater, and was known to many as the "Mayor of Mack Avenue."

Mr. Kuehnel was involved in all aspects of government, especially the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council and the Woods public safety department. He served as Santa Claus at both Bon Secours and St. John Hospital and was involved in the Grosse Pointe Woods-Shores Little League. He was involved in many fundraising efforts for local groups, especially those that benefited children. He worked for many years for the Harold Ray Lucas Co., and in later years for the Grosse Pointe Park department of public works.

Mr. Kuehnel is survived by his mother, Kathryn; two sisters, Susan L. Waters and Nancy J. Ingram; and a niece, Katie Sanderson. He was predeceased by his father, Walter J. Kuehnel.

Memorial contributions may be made to Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church, 19950 Mack, Grosse Pointe Woods, Mich., 48236. A scholarship fund has been set up in his name by the Harper Woods Civic Foundation. Donations may be made in care of John Szymanski, 20580 Williamsburg Court, Harper Woods, Mich., 48225.

Lawrence D. Jones

A funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. in the Clyne Funeral Home in Eastpointe for former Grosse Pointe Woods resident Lawrence D. Jones, who died in Harper Hospital in Detroit on Monday, Sept. 15, 1997.

Mr. Jones, 55, was born in East Detroit and worked in the insurance industry for over 30 years. He was also a member of the Detroit Athletic Club.

Mr. Jones is survived by his wife, M.C. "Cass" Jones; a daughter, Katherine; a son, Michael; three sisters, Marjorie Krampits, Darlene Sass and Sharon Preus; and two brothers, Paul and Richard.

Lois Hearne McMahon

A memorial service was held in the Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church on Tuesday, Aug. 12, for Grosse Pointe Woods resident Lois Hearne McMahon, who died on Friday, Aug. 8, 1997, due to complications from lymphnoma.

Mrs. McMahon, 71, was a graduate of the Liggett School, as well as Vassar College — class of 1946. She received her master's degree in social work from the University of Michigan in 1948, completing her residency in psychiatric social work at Detroit

Lois McMahon

Receiving Hospital.

She was a career social worker who was employed by the Department of Social Services, the American Red Cross and the South Lake School system of St. Clair Shores.

Mrs. McMahon also maintained a private practice as an individual and marriage counselor and was active until shortly before her death. She was also an active member of the community and belonged to the Academy of Certified Social Workers and the Tau Beta Society where she managed the Tau Beta Camp for Underprivileged Children and ran a special program for children with diabetes.

Mrs. McMahon is survived by two daughters, Martha McMahon Farr and Laura McMahon Lynch.

Funeral arrangements were handled by the A.H. Peters Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Ethel Marie Murphy Perkin

A memorial service was held on Monday, Sept. 15, in Grosse Pointe Memorial Church for City of Grosse Pointe resident Ethel Marie Murphy Perkin, who died in Kailua, Hawaii, on Sunday, Sept. 7, 1997.

Mrs. Perkin, 81, was a graduate of Wayne University and was a teacher in the Detroit Public School System. She was an active member of the community and belonged to the Michigan Humane Society, the Detroit Institute of Arts Founders' Society, the Lochmoor Club, the Colony Club and the Grosse Pointe Women's Symphony Association.

Mrs. Perkin is survived by two daughters, Linda Perkin Zarday and Sandra Perkin Van Brunt; a son, John Francis Perkin; and three grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Michigan Humane Society.

Robert F. Lane

A memorial Mass will be celebrated on Saturday, Sept. 20, at 10:30 a.m. in St. Mary's Catholic Church in Greektown for former City of Grosse Pointe resident Robert F. Lane who died in his home in Hilton Head, S.C. on Monday, Aug. 4, 1997.

Mr. Lane, 76, was born in Detroit and was a graduate of the University of Detroit High School. He attended the University of Detroit before serving in the U.S. Army during World War II.

After a long career in the labor relations and human resources departments of Chrysler Corp. and Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn, he retired to Hilton Head in 1989.

Mr. Lane is survived by his wife of 45 years, Patricia Steffen Lane; a daughter, Patrica; four sons, Robert, Kevin, Timothy and Matthew; a sister, Loretta Wider; and five grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to the St. Vincent De Paul Society of Detroit or to the American Cancer Society.

What's behind door No. 1?

A 1994 Mercedes Benz was stolen from a garage in the 700 block of Lochmoor in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The incident took place between 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 14 and 8 a.m. Monday, Sept. 15.

Entry to the garage was gained via the garage door opener, which was left in the glove compartment of an unlocked four by four vehicle left in the driveway. Police believe the thief used the ignition key left in the Mercedes to start the vehicle and drive away.

Bomb threat groundless

Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers received a bomb threat at about 7:20 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 12. The caller, who police said sounded like a man trying to sound like a woman, said that a bomb was placed in the North High School bleachers and would explode at 8:30 p.m.

School officials were notified and the bleachers were carefully searched. No bomb was found and the North-South game was played.

Party broken up

Police received reports of a loud party at a home in the 1100 block of Hampton at about 10:10 p.m. Friday, Sept. 12.

When officers arrived at the scene, they noticed a number of youths flee to the back yard, leaving a plastic cup of beer. Police contacted the youth who lived at the house.

He admitted that his parents were in New York and he was serving alcoholic beverages to underage drinkers.

The party was ordered broken up. Several youths decided to walk home when they were told by police that they would have to take a breath test.

Laptop larceny

A laptop computer was taken from an unlocked desk drawer at Parcells Middle School. The computer was the property of the special education department and was last seen at 3 p.m. Monday, Sept. 8.

The desk drawer and the door to the room were unlocked.

Tacoma combines car-like qualities with pickup truck

Autos

By Richard Wright

A quick walk around the 1997 Toyota Tacoma Xtracab pickup truck sends you all the right messages. The styling cues are trendy; everything is up to date, the proportions are classic.

Now, I am not a real pickup truck person, so I probably like this truck for some wrong reasons.

I don't like to have a dog sitting next to me on the seat, so I like the Xtracab, which gives me room behind the seats to stash a dog if I happen to be transporting one (and I often am) or my briefcase or a bookbag if I am commuting in the truck (which I often am).

I have no urge to carry a rifle, since if I spot rabbits, which seem to be more plentiful than usual in the Pointes this summer, I have no desire to shoot them, which I am sure is quite illegal anyway. (There is a town in Texas which has an ordinance which prohibits shooting a rabbit from a trolley. I'm sure that is illegal here too, if we had trolleys.)

I like the Tacoma because it is very car-like, it is fun to drive and I can use it almost the same way I would use my car. I don't much like the price, however, which ranges from $14,828 for the two-wheel-drive Xtracab with four-cylinder base engine and five-speed gearbox to $22,938 for the four-wheel-drive SR5 V-6 Xtracab with five-speed or $23,838 with automatic.

If you are going to use the pickup truck like a car, you will want it closer to that higher price. That's why I say I am not really a pickup truck person. I use it like a car.

Toyota's sixth-generation compact pickup debuted as a 1995-1/2 model and that's when it got an actual name, Tacoma. This suggests the rugged outdoors, as well as strength and adventure. I guess it wouldn't make much sense to call it the Grosse Pointe or the Harbor Springs. I've never been to Tacoma, but it sounds like the great outdoors.

A choice of three engines is available and the pickup rides on a new chassis. Two-wheel-drive Tacomas get a 2.4-liter four-cylinder base engine, rated 142 horsepower, while Tacoma 4x4s get a 150-horsepower, 2.7-liter four.

If you like your pickup to blaze a bit, consider the optional dual-overhead-cam, 24-valve V-6 that whips out 190 horses and 220 pound-feet of torque. With this V-6, borrowed from the bigger T100 pickup, the compact Tacoma can tow up to 5,000 pounds and whip most sport trucks from the stoplight.

Toyota opted for aggressive styling, inside and out. Regular and extended Xtracab bodies are available in either two- or four-wheel drive. A deep-sculpted grille/hood/fender structure imparts a sporty personality to the truck to attract customers who select their 4x4s on the basis of how they look, not how much manure they can haul.

Tacomas have front coil springs instead of the former torsion bars, but 4x4s feature longer suspension travel than before to improve ride and handling, on or off road. Track width has been increased for a more stable ride.

Rack-and-pinion steering replaces the old recirculating-ball setup, resulting in better feel and response. Manual-shift trucks feature reverse-gear synchronization, to reduce gear noise when you want to back up.

A locking rear-wheel differential is now available on all 4WD models. Bucket seats can be had on any Xtracab Tacoma this year, not just the SR5. Two-wheel drive models have new headlamps and a new grille that make the vehicle look more like the T100.

Four-wheel anti-lock braking is an option. All Tacomas contain an airbag for the driver.

In top-of-the-line SR5 Xtracab pickups, a single switch provides easy, pushbutton engagement of four-wheel-drive. By redesigning and lowering the floor by 1.6 inches, Toyota makes its 4x4s easier to enter.

Tacomas are built at the New United Motors Manufacturing Inc. plant in Fremont, Calif., jointly operated by Toyota and General Motors. The all-American (well, almost all) Tacoma was also designed in California.

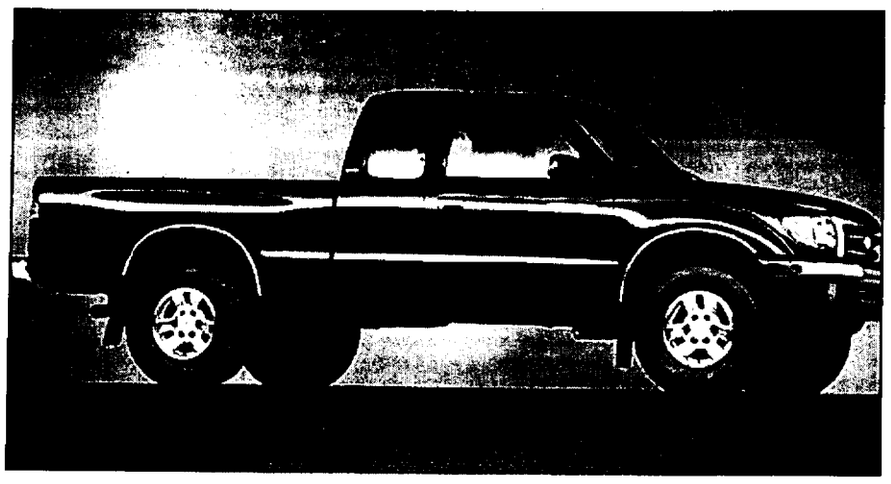

Options include cruise control, air conditioning, a sliding rear window, tilt steering wheel, and moonroof.

Tacoma carries a basic three year/36,000-mile warranty, with five-year/60,000-mile on the drivetrain and five years on rust with unlimited mileage.

EPA fuel efficiency rating with manual transmission is 18 miles per gallon city, 22 highway.

Toyota has a tendency to rise to the top of every market segment it is in, in terms of value and quality. The quality of the Tacoma is hard to gainsay, but a lower price would make it a stronger value. Similar models of Ford Ranger, Chevrolet S-10 and Dodge Dakota run a couple thousand less.

On the other hand, Toyota does not usually compromise much on quality, and quality costs money.

The Toyota Tacoma compact pickup truck with Xtracab looks, and is, good.

Southeast Michigan city views offer special color trips

Fall color in southeast Michigan's cities? You betcha, says AAA Michigan.

"Some of the best views of Michigan's annual color show happen in the parks, drives, lakes and nature centers within a few minutes of most Michiganians, within their own metro areas," says AAA Travel Agency director Bill Best.

"Most parks offer picnicking, nature trails or drives, and some have nature programs and naturalist-led hikes to let you enjoy fall colors up close," Best says.

Here are just a few ideas from AAA to get you started on your fall color trip in southeast Michigan:

• Belle Isle, the 985-acre gem in the middle of the Detroit River, is a perfect spot to catch some late-season viewing come late September and October. About 75 percent of the island is covered by hardwoods, with swamp white, pin oak and silver maple with dogwood berries the predominant species, says Belle Isle Nature Center naturalist Suzanne Campbell.

There are about eight miles of roads on the island, with top speed of 20 mph in most areas, including a 5.2 mile drive circling the perimeter, with plenty of views of trees surrounding sights like the Belle Isle Aquarium and Whitcomb Conservatory.

Some of the roads comb the island's densely wooded interior, where, if you're lucky, you'll catch a glimpse of some of the 120 or so European fallow deer who call the woods home. At the Nature Center, three miles of paved biking trails near the athletic complex offer more opportunities to view fall finery, and there are seasonal programs as well. Call (313) 852-4056 for information on possible fall naturalist programs. It's open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday - Sunday.

• Providing a 16-mile continuous stretch of gold, red and yellows, the Middle Rouge Parkway, nicknamed Hines Park after the Edward N. Hines Drive that winds through it, delights commuters and picnickers with the brilliant colors of oaks, maples and other trees along it and the meandering Middle Rouge River between Northville and Dearborn.

View the season's color debut during "Saturdays and Sundays in the Park," from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Only bicycles and other non-motorized vehicles are allowed until Sept. 28. Numerous mini-parks offer picnicking and playground fun for kids along the way.

• The new Crosswinds Marsh on Haggerty Road, west of I-275 in Sumpter Township near the Wayne-Monroe County border, filled in for farming in the 1800s, was reclaimed and offers six miles of nature trails through forested wetlands of cottonwood, red and silver maple and ash. There will be naturalist-led walks, and entry is free. Through at least mid-October, paddle a canoe ($10 for two hours) on a two-mile marked trail through the marsh. Fall color should be peaking in mid-to-late-October there, says Carol Clements, Wayne County Parks naturalist.

She also recommends Westland's Holiday Nature Preserve. Its trails and bridges are being redone, but visitors still can walk the preserve from dawn to dusk on their own. Call Wayne County Parks at (313) 261-1990 for information.

• Still in the Detroit metro area and near the communities of Brighton and Milford, Kensington Metropark is one of the region's best. Kensington is one of 13 Metroparks ringing the region.

An eight-mile hike and bike trail winds around the main lake, with flora marked along the way. Best drives are Route 2 through the park's hardwoods, and Route 3, offering great color overlooks into the lake valley's maple, oak, hickory and ash. Depending on the weather, usually mid-October is best for the color watch, says park naturalist Mike Broughton. The park nature center and picnic areas are open year-round. Call (248) 685-1561. For information on other Metroparks, call (800) 47-PARKS.

• Near Northville, Maybury State Park was the state's first urban state park, says park manager Anna Sylvester. The 945-acre facility is 70 percent beech and sugar maple, which often makes for brilliant fall colors.

There are six miles of dirt hiking trails and four miles of paved bike trails.

"That's where colors are nicest. We also have 11 miles of horseback riding trails. Guided rides are $18 an hour on weekends, $14 on weekdays. There often are naturalist-led hikes," Sylvester says.

One three-fourth mile trail is self-guided. Pamphlets direct walkers to trees and plants along the way. At the turn-of-the-century farm, the Oct. 12 harvest festival from noon to 4 p.m. will have hands-on farming opportunities, all when the colors should be their finest. Maybury is on Eight Mile Road west of Beck, near Northville in Oakland County. For more park information, call (248) 349-8390.

There are scores more fall viewing opportunities in or near the state's urban centers. Just look and see.

UNLESS YOU ADD IN THE VALUE OF A MAN'S SELF-RESPECT.

It may be just a name tag to some, but for many others who know the indignity that comes with being unemployed, it's a badge of courage. A symbol of accomplishment. And the mark of independence.

Every year in southeast Michigan there are thousands of people who need employment and training services to get them back into the work force. And with your help, they'll make it.

The United Way supports 54 agencies in the tri-county area like Goodwill Industries, Detroit Urban League and Jewish Vocational Service that provide services that help build self-confidence, empowerment and independence through job skill evaluation, training, and job placement programs.

Last year, you helped fund those agencies with $3.1 million. This year, the need is even greater. And for every dollar donated, 90 cents goes directly to people in need. So you can be sure your money is hard at work, and so are the people you help.

Here are some 'highs' for Michigan fall color tours

Want to get high on fall color in Michigan? A number of sites in both the upper and lower peninsulas provide leaf peepers with panoramic perspectives. To help get above it all, AAA Michigan recommends the following high spots on this year's fall color tour:

Upper Peninsula

— Lake of the Clouds Scenic Overlook. This escarpment high above the lake at the western terminus of SR 107 offers an excellent view of the surrounding Porcupine Mountains in the western U.P.

— Quincy Lookout-Historic Monument. Located in Hancock on the Keweenaw Peninsula, north on US 41. Provides fine views of the Keweenaw Waterway and sister city Houghton.

Northwest Lower Peninsula

— Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore. Southwest of Glen Arbor, the seven-mile-long Pierce Stocking Scenic Drive provides access to the high dunes and views from the Lake Michigan bluffs.

— US-31 through Benzonia and Beulah provides a breathtaking view of Crystal Lake and surrounding hills.

— M-37 north from Traverse City rides the high ridge of Old Mission Peninsula, with two or three wineries offering free tasting and fall color viewing. Several Leelanau County wineries on nearby Leelanau Peninsula also offer excellent vineyard views.

— Manistee River/Hodenpyl Dam Pond. Just over one mile south of Mesick on M-37 is a scenic turnout with an expansive view of the Manistee River at Hodenpyl Dam Pond.

West Lower Peninsula

— Pere Jacques Marquette Monument. Looming over Ludington, this huge illuminated cross overlooks the harbor and marks the spot where Pere Jacques' Marquette is thought to have died in 1675.

East Lower Peninsula

— Lumbermen's Monument. About 20 minutes west of downtown Oscoda on River Road, Lumbermen's Monument is an elevating experience, overlooking the Au Sable River near the eastern shore of the lower peninsula.

Southwest Lower Peninsula

— Warren Dunes State Park. Hang gliders are a familiar sight south of Bridgman at nearby Sawyer on the state's southwest shore. Tower Hill provides a 240-foot vertical drop and scenic view.

Southeast Lower Peninsula

— Irish Hills Towers. One mile west of US 12 and SR 124, Irish Hills Towers provide panoramic views of northern Lenawee County. At the base of the towers is an 18-hole miniature golf course.

Nominations please

To nominate your favorite fall color "high," write: Public Relations, AAA Michigan, 1 Auto Club Drive, Dearborn, MI 48126, or e-mail us at: pr@aaamich.com. Be sure to provide an accurate description of the nominated location. Results will be made public in time for 1998's fall color tour.

Some tips for hauling trailers

Hauling a boat or travel trailer on Michigan's roads can go off "without a hitch" if you remember the "dos and don'ts" of packing and handling that extra load, and performing some routine maintenance before hitting the road, suggests AAA Michigan.

"If you've not towed a boat, house trailer, camper or a flat trailer with a dirt bike in a while, it takes some adjustments on the driver's part," stated Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan's community safety services manager.

"It also requires owners of towing vehicles to prepare them properly for the extra strain on everything from drive train to tires," Basch added.

Check your owner's manual for specifics on how much your vehicle can tow.

Not doing so can result in serious damage to your car's transmission and could even void your warranty.

Heavier loads also may require upgraded tires on the towing vehicle to avoid overheating and blowouts.

Be sure your trailer hitch matches the load. There are three classes of hitches:

- Class I — generally capable of pulling up to 2,000 pounds.
- Class II — for up to 3,500 pound loads.
- Class III — for loads up to 10,000 pounds.

Frame hitches distribute trailer weight more evenly, as opposed to bumper hitches. Larger trailers may require "helper bars" to help stop swaying, which can have dangerous consequences in heavy traffic, Basch says.

Michigan law requires use of safety chains to link the trailer and towing vehicle in case the hitch breaks.

When packing your vehicle, remember not to exceed its total capacity, usually equal to the weight of the vehicle, passengers and luggage. Remember that state law requires clear vision to the sides and rear.

Before hitting the highway to that campsite or fishing port, even experienced drivers should refresh their maneuvering ability at low speeds in an empty parking lot.

Nearing cornerstone laying stage

This artist's rendering shows the beautiful new St. James Lutheran Church to be built on McMillan between Kercheval and Ridge in Grosse Pointe Farms. The congregation, which organized in 1940, has been meeting for the last 6-and-1/2-years in the Punch and Judy Theater. A special cornerstone laying service is scheduled for Sept. 21 with the Rev. George E. Kurz presiding. The building will be constructed in a colonial style, patterned after New England churches.

Unloading a cool concept

The Park's Bob and Ann Bradley thought their son, Robb's, idea was a winner: If moving into their house on Three Mile (about 25 years ago) called for a housewarming, then moving out needed a "house cooling."

And since they were relocating to a smaller place, what better time than a combination goodbye party and wedding anniversary bash to unload many of the little extras accumulated in 40 years of marriage?

"Our three kids helped by (finally) taking the things they left here when they went to college," says Bob, a retired South High American and World Lit teacher.

That left over 1,800 books belonging to Bob and his wife, who was with the Lake Shore Public Schools for many years.

Solution: They chose about 600 favorite volumes to keep (including those given by friends) and asked everyone who attended their open house last month to take at least three of the remaining books away.

"The party was a success," says Ann. "Between everyone who came, and the AAUW that got the rest, we gave away 1,200 books. It was a very nice way to celebrate an anniversary without having people bring things."

The art of winning

Pointe artists almost swept the show Friday at the "Wayne County — The Artists Among Us" juried exhibition of original works sponsored by the Wayne County Council for the Arts, the Grosse Pointe Arts Council and Ambleside Gallery.

Of the 38 pieces chosen for display in the gallery, 24 were by local contributors, including M.S. Allardice, K. Dawn Baker, Michael Derbyshire, Mary Ewald, Carol Hennessey, Bunny Homan, Dorothea Krieg, Carol LaChiusa, Deborah Maiale, Nancy Prophit, Bette Prudden, Eleanor Radcliffe, Leo Salvaggio, Virginia Sendelbach and Lori Zurvalec.

Krieg won Best of Show, Prophit won the Award of Merit and Derbyshire and Hennessey won Honorable Mention.

■ An epidemic of brick-tossing has been spreading through the Pointes and unfortunately has become the latest form of deviltry and malicious mischief. Several homeowners, including one on Middlesex in the Park, have reported seeing small groups of teens tossing bricks through living room windows and then fleeing in what appears to be a Packard. A Detroit resident, who parked her car overnight on McKinley Road, also reported damage to her car window.

■ A lot of planning has been going on recently concerning the prospective development of the Murray Sales property at Lincoln and Jefferson as a public library and memorial to Grosse Pointe service men and women in World War II. The property has been conveyed to the Grosse Pointe school board by its owner, subject to his life tenure at his residence. A committee has been studying the property for the past year and has retained an architect to prepare preliminary plans.

The trial also increased traffic on neighboring streets.

Most mutual funds topping S&P 500 since June 30

By Joseph Mengden

The worm has turned. Whereas the S&P 500 Index easily beat out most equity mutual funds during the past several years — and topped 95 percent of them during the first 6 months of this year — the current situation is 180 degrees opposite! Today the small cap (capitalization) companies in the Russell 2000 Index are running circles around the Blue Chips in the S&P 500 Index.

It's like the Index fund's popularity made their underlying stocks top heavy. As investors poured cash into the index funds ($1 billion a month into Vanguard's main index fund), these funds had to invest that cash into the S&P 500 Index stocks in the same proportion as each stock's capitalization bore to the aggregate capitalization of the Index.

On June 30 last, the top 20 stocks of the 500 totaled 30 percent of the Index's value, with heavy concentrations in the larger stocks, such as: COCA-COLA (KO); GENERAL ELECTRIC (GE); PHILIP MORRIS (MO); MICROSOFT (MSFT); INTEL (INTL); etc. Little wonder that the Blue Chips became overpriced, based on Price/Earnings Ratio, Price/Book Ratio, Price/Sales Ratio, and other statistical comparisons.

The big multinational companies are having profit margin problems due to currency fluctuations and cannot continue their earnings growth patterns of the recent past. Meanwhile, small stocks are in the spotlight. Because it's difficult to buy many of the small stocks in size on NASDAQ, many institutional traders are buying futures contracts and derivatives tied to the Russell 2000. But that cash eventually has to go directly into the underlying stocks, and it doesn't take much buying power to move up the price of these "relatively thin" stocks. As the stock prices increase, so does the Russell 2000 Index. The total market capitalization of the 2000 stocks in the Russell 2000 is only $800 million vs. $7 trillion for the S&P 500!

The stock market last week was a bumpy road, downward sloping. The DJI last Friday (Sept 12) closed at 7,742.97, off 79 points for the week. But investors continued to pour cash into equity mutual funds, with $2.9 billion deposited in the week ended Wednesday, Sept.10.

Institutional investors appear to be withdrawing funds from big cap stocks and nibbling on the small caps. Since mid-year, the Russell 2000 is up 11 percent vs a 5.5 percent gain in S&P 500.

OTHER OPINIONS

Have you gone to a party lately and noticed that the small talk drifted into stocks? Immediately, the conversation lights up! "I can't figure out why stocks trade so high?"

..."6 percent is a living wage, but stocks don't pay that much any more!"..."It hasn't been the same since computers took over that program, something about, trading."..."I don't like paying taxes, so I switched to Municipal Bonds."..."It's too complicated for me, so I let my bank's Trust Department manage my money for me"...etc., etc., etc.

If you think the people you know are confused about the market, so are the pros.

Let's talk...STOCKS

Not necessarily scared, but at least discombobulated! Here in the Detroit Metro area, there exists the Ex-Dividend Club, formerly called the Financial Geriatrics Club. The members are all retired, or almost retired, from the investment business. In their other life, most were stock brokers, portfolio managers, brokerage partners, bond traders, bank trust officers, bond lawyers,...you name it!

The Club meets for lunch every month at a different member's golf, country or yacht club in the area. That way the north-enders can't complain about the long drive to Grosse Pointe "to lunch on the lake' every month. Each summer (July 3 this year), we have a "stock picking contest," with the prizes awarded at the gala Christmas party in December at the Detroit Athletic Club. To make it simple, contestants list their price estimates of the December, 1997 close for 5 market categories: (1) the DJI; (2) the yield on the 30-year Treasury bond; (3) the stock close of COMERICA BANK (CMA); (4) the close for GENERAL MOTORS (GM); and the close for K-MART KM).

The 33 members, with an average age of 79+, have over 1,000 years experience on and off Griswold Street, so this contest should be a cake-walt especially as regards the local stocks! This year 20 members submitted the required wager (where else would the prize money come from?) and tally sheets. You'd think these erudite veterans of so many stock battles would be of a near like mind? Not so, these scarred analysts are still free spirits! Here are the high-low spreads of their wagers:

12-5-97 Estimate Security	High	Low	Close 9-12-97
Dow Jones Index	8,975	6,6667,742
30-year Treasury (pot)	6.12	7.016.63
Comerica Bank	82.75	64.2575.38
General Motors	72.38	52.2566.50
K-Mart	16.00	9.2514.63

HOW TO SPEND AN INHERITANCE!

Here's a topic about the Prodigal Son, and others closer to home. You can probably see that LTS is leading up to Estate Planning, Wills and Bequests, which will be broken up into many segments, so that we don't get bogged down in legalese. Years ago, we picked up these one-liners somewhere, with thanks:

7 STEPS TO HANDLING AN INHERITANCE.

1) Consider your personal tax situation; 2) Deposit the check immediately into an interest-bearing account; 3) Decide how much you will spend on your personal self (a new Dodge Viper?); 4) Pay off all non-deductible debt (credit cards charge up to 16.5 percent, or more); 5) Set aside a reserve of 3 months' expenses; 6) Make the maximum tax-deductible contribution to your IRA, 401(k) or Keogh plan; 7) Large inheritances of $500,000 up deserve an experienced estate planning attorney.

Burglaries in Michigan continue to decline in 1996

As a result of greater public awareness and involvement by neighborhood watch groups, burglaries in Michigan have declined for the fifth consecutive year.

Last year, burglaries dropped 2.8 percent compared to 1995. In 1996, there were just over 79,000 burglary offenses reported. In 1995, that figure was well over 80,000.

The 1996 percentage increase/decrease in burglary offenses for some of the more populous Michigan counties were: Wayne, 1.9 percent decrease; Kent, 4.7 percent increase; Washtenaw, 16.6 percent decrease; Genesee, 2.1 percent increase; Jackson, 4.3 percent decrease; Kalamazoo, 31 percent decrease; Saginaw, 5 percent decrease; and Ingham, 2.3 percent decrease.

"Through the cooperative effort of law enforcement and community leaders, we have been able to (make) a significant impact on crime," said Leanne Snay, executive director of the Michigan Association of Insurance Companies (MAIC). "We need to continue to work together to raise the public's awareness about the importance of reporting theft."

Snay said many burglars simply gain entry through unlocked doors and windows. Often, locks are easily overcome with simple tools such as the edge of a plastic credit card.

There are some common-sense precautions residents can take to deter burglars. The following are some suggestions:

- Equip doors with dead-bolt locks, and put a slide bolt on sliding glass doors and make sure all windows are locked.
- Use automatic timers to turn lights on and off in the living room and bedrooms when you are not at home.
- Engrave an identification number in items, such as televisions, VCRs and stereos.
- Store cash, expensive jewelry and other valuables in a safe or bank safety deposit box.

"Onc of the most effective deterrents against burglary has been the formation of neighborhood watch groups, often organized with the aid of local police," Snay said. "Less formal programs can also be effective if cooperation is enlisted among neighbors. Nearby residents should be requested to watch for any

Riley

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Wallace Riley was recently awarded the State Bar of Michigan's top award, the Robert P. Hudson Ward, for lifetime achievement in the legal profession. The presentation will be made Sept. 19 at the 62nd annual State bar conference in Detroit.

Riley is the founder and chief executive officer of Riley and Roumell. P.C. in Detroit and is former president of both the American Bar Association and State Bar of Michigan.

Riley received his law degree from the University of Michigan and his graduate law degree from George Washington University.

Riley

Awards were not reserved to just Wallace in the Riley household. Michigan Supreme Court justice Dorothy Comstock Riley was named one of seven "Champions of Justice" by the State Bar in 1997. They were recognized at a luncheon at Cobo Conference/Exhibition Center Sept. 17.

Riley has served her profession for 47 years. She has spent her life knocking down barriers to women in the legal profession. She was inducted into the Michigan Women's Hall of Fame in 1991.

She received her law degree from Wayne State University.

GETTING INTO A FIX

An owner of an older car that needs repair may be faced with the decision to fix the car and keep it or sell it and buy another. Sentiment aside, anyone faced with a repair bill that approaches the cost of buying another car would likely buy another one. If the repair cost is much less, many find it a good idea to keep a car they are generally happy with. What about the owner who is faced with a moderate repair bill and still desires a new car? Should the car be repaired before purchasing a new one? Usually, it pays to make the repair before selling because the car will command a higher price and appeal to more prospective buyers if it is in good overall condition.

Speaking with the folks who deal with cars day in and day out can often offer you a perspective on such decisions about whether to make a given repair or not. At RINKE TOYOTA, we know hoe to take car care worries off you hands. We earned our reputation for service excellence the hard way — one customer at a time. Visit us at 25420 Van Dyke. Aunt/niece team discovers second chances at Carnegie Institute

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Andrea Lucido and Kristine Piana have more in common than careers in the health care industry.

Both grew up in Grosse Pointe. Piana (who is Lucido's aunt) is the daughter of a physician. Lucido is the granddaughter of a physician. Having a doctor in the family meant both women heard interesting stories as children about patients and medical situations. Both visited area hospitals where their relatives worked. Neither were turned off by the gritty reality of medicine. In fact, each decided at a young age to pursue careers in nursing .

Andrea Lucido

Lucido, a 1991 graduate of Grosse Pointe North High School and Grosse Pointe Woods resident, initially went away to college to study nursing but soon realized the amount of schooling she had ahead of her. She wondered if wouldn't be better to get a taste of the profession first before committing any further.

She enrolled in a one-year program at the Carnegie Institute in Troy, a private school of allied health technology celebrating its 50th year. She became a certified medical assistant and then received further training to become an electroneurodiagnostic technician. Today she is employed by Med Share Inc. and is now the osteoporosis program manager.

"I thought I would do this first, get my feet wet, and see if I liked it before going into all those years of school," she explained. "It's been great so far. I know I'll go back to school eventually to finish my degree."

Piana, who is now a Harper Woods resident, said the same words when she left college with three years of nursing training behind her — that she thought she'd get right back to school to finish her degree. She married and started a family. When her youngest daughter entered junior high, she began thinking about the impending "empty nest" and what she'd do to fill her days.

She wanted to go back to school but knew she'd need more than one year to complete her program. She also admitted she had reservations about going back to school in her early 40s.

"I thought I'd be the 'mom' in the class," she said. "As it turned out, there were women older than me in the program."

Daunted by the prospect of being placed at the end of a long college program waiting list and having to complete more than the last year of school, she decided to attend Carnegie.

Kristine Piana

She completed the one-year intensive program in 1991 and until this year, worked at Grosse Pointe area medical practices until she was invited to teach at Carnegie.

Another reason Piana chose the intensive Carnegie Program was that the CMA program puts workers in direct contact with patients, which is what she wanted to do most. They are the medical support team behind the physicians and can take blood pressure, give injections, take X-rays, as well as perform front office duties and lab work.

Carnegie was founded in 1947 in Detroit, when it was granted a license from the Michigan Department of Education to provide a source for training allied health personnel. It was the first school of its kind to achieve state recognition and the first school in the country to offer a regularly scheduled instructional program for training medical assistants.

In 1968 it achieved institutional accreditation from the Accrediting Commission of the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools. In 1974 it received program accreditation from the American Medical Association/Committee on Allied Health Education and Accreditation.

The facility located at 500 Stephenson Highway in Troy. It is a network of administrative offices, classrooms and hands-on training rooms with real medical equipment.

In less than two years, students can train for jobs as medical assistants, office management, computerized medical billing, medical secretary, word processing, medical records transcription, electroneurodiagnostic technician, cardiovascular technology, peripheral vascular Doppler, along with workshops and seminars.

Piana, along with Carnegie administrators, have noted that while the school draws students of all ages from all backgrounds and even more men are enrolling, it isn't well-known by eastsiders. It offers a viable alternative to "empty nesters" like Piana, who need or want to get back into the workforce or for "career changers" who will need to take classes in the evening.

More and more physicians are using medical assistants today, Carnegie administrators said, because they are more cost effective and well-rounded in job duties. To find out more about allied health technology careers, call Carnegie Institute at (248) 589-1078.

Deadline nearing for AAA nonalcoholic drink contest

There's still time for Michigan residents to win $500 or a weekend getaway by entering a nonalcoholic drink recipe in AAA Michigan's 16th annual Zero-Proof Mix-Off contest. Entry deadline is Tuesday, Sept. 22.

"Salute to Sports" is the theme this year. Think about drinks with names like "Home Plate Hummer" or "Stanley's Cup."

The contest is part of the Auto Club's "First A Friend, Then A Host" program to focus attention on the problem of drinking and driving during the holidays.

Send entries to Zero-Proof Mix-Off, AAA Michigan Public Relations, 1 Auto Club Drive, Dearborn, 48126. Name, address, daytime telephone number, drink name, ingredients and mixing instructions should be included.

Fifteen finalists will be selected to mix drinks at one of three regional contests. First-place winners at each of the regional contests in Traverse City (Oct. 7), Lansing (Oct. 8) and Detroit (Oct. 9) will receive $500. Second-place winners will receive a weekend getaway for two at a Michigan resort. Other finalists will receive an American Express gift cheque for $50.

unusual activity around your home while it is unoccupied."

The group also advises that consumers check with their home insurance policies to make sure coverage is adequate. Generally, only limited protection is provided for certain types of personal property which is especially susceptible to loss such as jewelry and furs. For an additional premium, property owners can purchase a policy endorsement that insures specific items to full value. Also, homeowners and renters should check with their insurance company representative to determine if their company offers rate discounts for security and safety devises.

SEQUENCE

Car chassis have traditionally been built on a "floor pan" design. Can a platform that incorporates a continuous rigid, ladder-type frame improve ride and handling characteristics? Can this help us reach a high level of performance?

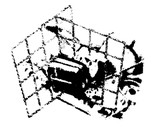

You'd expect a race car to be graded on a curve. Well, if race cars inspired us to modify a double-wishbone suspension, can you handle it?

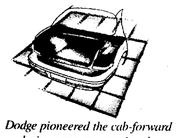

Do you have to choose between the convenience of an automatic transmission and the performance of manual shifting? Or can an available AutoStick™ transaxle shift an automatic a little more toward fun?

Take something as simple as an engine mount – a combination of steel and rubber that holds the engine to the frame rail. Can we mount a good argument that a device filled with liquid could minimize engine vibration and help make things quieter?

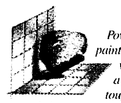

These are the questions.

Dodge pioneered the cab-forward design concept – moving the wheels out to the corners and sliding the passenger compartment forward. Can cab-forward roominess create more room even in the trunk?

A Stratus ES has an available 2.5L, 24-valve V-6. Can lightweight aluminum cylinder heads enhance performance?

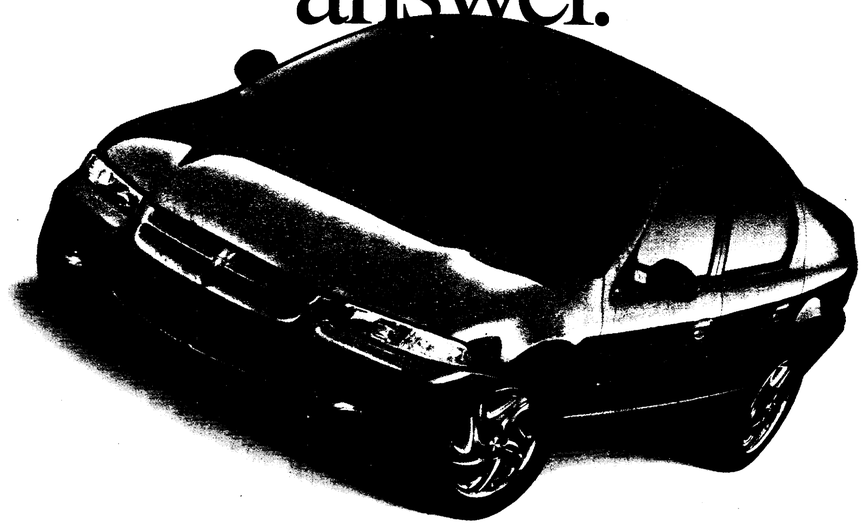

Powder-coat paint technology will give you a paint finish tough enough to help protect a car's shiny overcoat from flying gravel. When it comes to what you'll expect down the road, do we have things pretty well covered?

Dodge Stratus is $14,375 for starters, $18,345 impressively equipped.† Now, if we told you that "impressively equipped" includes AutoStick transmission, anti-lock brakes and a 2.5L V-6, would you be surprised?

†MSRPs after $1,000 cash back exclude tax.
Always use seat belts.

Walking is good for heart and Heart Association

4.2 Mile walking event on Sept. 28

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

As a community, Grosse Pointers, for the most part, aren't afraid of making long-term investments. And that's just what the Grosse Pointe chapter of the American Heart Association wants to do — have the youth of the Pointes make a long-term investment in heart health.

To that end, the chapter is sponsoring a special heart walk on Sunday, Sept. 28. The walk begins at 1 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. It is 4.2 miles long, and will take participants down Lakeshore to Provencal to Kercheval to Fisher Road, and back to the War Memorial.

Money raised in the walk will go to a variety of Heart Association programs, said walk spokesperson Sally Owen. The majority of it will stay in the Pointes and fund local programs.

"The Grosse Pointe chapter is different," said Owen. "We are the only chapter around that has a junior council, which is made up of local high school students who are juniors and seniors. The chapter sponsors a number of local events like the 'jump for hearts' jump rope fundraiser, which raises money for our grade school education program, as well as the 'hoops for hearts' fundraiser."

The grade school education program is special, said Owen, because of the special heart power kits. They are modular in nature and come in four parts, and are geared for grade school students.

"The kits come with a stethoscope," said Barbara Denler of the War Memorial, which is co-sponsoring the heart walk. "The kids can listen to their hearts. The idea behind the program is to inform children about the importance of a healthy heart without turning them off by being too preachy or too academic."

Dr. Lavell Courtney, an emergency room doctor at Bon Secours who is co-chair of the walk, said that the idea of educating kids today about having a healthy heart is a long-term investment.

"When you're 15, you want to eat whatever you want, and smoke," said Lavell.

"Most 15-year-olds don't suffer the negative consequences of that kind of behavior. It's when they get to be 35 or 40, that years of a bad diet, no exercise and smoking catch up with them," he said.

But, Courtney said, trying to change your diet, quit smoking or develop an exercise regimen is a lot harder when you're 35 than when you're 15.

"I try to emphasize the positive aspects of a healthy lifestyle," said Courtney.

"When you start lecturing people or preaching to them, you can see them shut you out. Let's be fair, no one likes that. But if you can educate people in a positive way, instead of a negative way, you can reach them. Telling a teenager to avoid hamburgers and fries for their heart doesn't work. Telling them that eating a balanced diet that includes a few burgers is much more effective."

Courtney pointed out that this generation of youths is the heaviest ever.

With home-video games and VCRs, personal computers, cable television and other distractions and entertainments that didn't exist even a generation ago, they eat more and exercise less than any generation of children before them.

"The dividends of education won't be seen now, they'll be seen in 10 or 20 years, when we see fewer incidences of heart disease," Courtney said.

"The stereotype of a heart-attack victim being overstressed in his 50s is no longer true. I have one patient who was 35 years old when he had his first heart attack, and the problem wasn't congenital. He was overweight, didn't exercise and really loved red meat."

Owen said she hoped the walk in Grosse Pointe will be the first of many put on by the heart association. She could not give enough credit to the people who have given their time and efforts to make the event possible.

They include Mary Black, Randell Cain, Jeff Cothran, Dr. Courtney, Barbara Denler, Janice Hertel, Ronald Laskowski, Pat Sikora, Jamie Spriet, Vicki Tobis, Jerry Valente and Robert Ferber.

The committee hopes to raise $32,000 this year, and expects about 1,000 participants.

Anyone interested in learning more about the walk should telephone Owens at

With a maze of details to work out, the planning committee of the Grosse Pointe American Heart Association Heart Walk recently got together at the War Memorial to finalize plans for the Sept. 28 walk, which will raise money for the group's local education programs.

Present, l-r, were Dr. Lavell Courtney, Barbara Denler, Sally Owen, Randy Cain, Jeff Cothran, Ken Welch and Jerry Valente.

Pointer Bridge Club

The Pointer Bridge Club will meet Thursday, Sept. 18, at 11 a.m. at the War Memorial.

Women's Connection

The Women's Connection of Grosse Pointe is kicking off its new year of activities with a topic its members consider of great interest to many people — healthy skin.

Today with the many irritants and pollutants in the air, and the emphasis on healthy looking skin, it is sometimes difficult to put our best face forward. Come to the Women's Connection meeting at a private club in Grosse Pointe on Thursday evening, Sept. 25, and hear Lisa Manz-Dulac explain techniques for looking your best with the most attractive skin possible.

Manz-Dulac is affiliated with Eastside Dermatology on Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe. She graduated sixth in a class of 154 from SUNY Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse, N.Y. She received her graduate training in Internal Medicine at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center, Worcester, Mass. Manz-Dulac was also a dermatology resident at Henry Ford Hospital.

Women's Connection of Grosse Pointe is a women's support and networking group composed of both professional women and homemakers. Any person interested is welcome to attend.

For information or reservations, call Nancy Neat at (313) 882-1855 at home or at work at (810) 777-0888. Reservation deadline is Monday, Sept. 22.

Camera Club

The Grosse Pointe Camera Club will meet on Tuesday, Sept. 23, at 7 p.m. in room C-11 at Brownell Middle School, located at 260 Chalfonte in Grosse Pointe Farms. The meeting will include a monochrome and color print competition, and a pictorial and nature slide competition. Visitors are welcome. For more information, call (313) 824-9064 or (313) 822-7080.

Trowel and Error

Members of the Grosse Pointe Trowel and Error Garden Club are to meet at the Grosse Pointe Woods City Hall on Thursday, Sept. 25 at 9:30 a.m. Members will proceed to the Detroit Zoo for a tour of the area with particular interest to the Butterfly Garden -- the summer theme of the Grosse Pointe Trial Gardens at the War Memorial. Hostess for the afternoon will be Shirley Goolsby.

Singles

Selective singles social and travel club is a group of business and professionals ages 45 and up. Members and nonmembers are welcome to join them the fourth Friday of each month.

The next meeting is Sept. 26 at Bravo's, 29047 Utica Road at 12 Mile in Roseville. Cocktails, conversation and dinner at 6:30 p.m.

For reservations, call Ramona at (313) 884-2986, or Bob at (810) 777-6508.

ChAAD

The group, Children and Adults with Attention Deficit Disorders of Eastern Wayne and Macomb Counties, will meet Oct. 14 at South Lake High School in the second floor resource room.

The resource room is in the middle of the corridor on the second floor. The school is located at 21900 East 9 Mile, between Harper and Mack in St. Clair Shores. The door opens at 7 p.m.; the meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. The school's parking lot is on the west end of the school; enter doors just past the auditorium.

There is a $5 donation for all non-ChADD members. Educators are admitted free to all meetings. The particular focus of the meeting will include talk about one's favorite books on ADD and related issues.

Members will talk about what's out there, what's good and why. Attendees are encouraged to bring one of his or her favorite books related to ADD, or just come and enjoy the critiques.

General support group discussions focus on various topics of interest or concern according to need — schools, medication, behavior management, organizational systems, sibling and family issues, impact of ADD on adults, etc.

When special activities or topics are planned at the meetings, there will still be an opportunity to share with other members.

For more information, call (810) 447-2845. Or visit ChADD's website: http://www.chadd.org/

Fine Arts Society

At the 93rd annual meeting of the Fine Arts Society four shows were selected for the year: the Rainmakers, Squabbles, the Supporting Cast and a Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum. Special Gold Awards were presented to Curl Tutag and Arme Volkens, both of Grosse Pointe Farms, for 50 years of service.

Special outstanding achievement awards were given Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Shrader of Grosse Pointe Park, citing Marianne and Steve for continuous work as officer, producer, director and key leadership work over more than 20 years. An annual picnic was held last week at Dr. and Mrs. Frank Vandeventer's home in Grosse Pointe Farms, followed by a special reception for new members, board members and officers at the home of new president Paul Gracey of Grosse Pointe Farms.

New officers of the Fine Arts Society have been elected for the 1997-98 season. President is Paul Gracey, First VP is Yolanda Turner and Second VP is Sally Vandeventer. Recording secretary is Sharon Conti, Lee Peters is the corresponding secretary, and Liz Aikens is treasurer. Other directors are Jack Petz, Bill Rohloff and Geno Pirrami.

AAUW to hold book sale Sept. 24-27

The book sale is almost here! The Grosse Pointe Branch of the American Association of University Women is holding its 35th annual used book sale Wednesday, Sept. 24, through Saturday, Sept. 27 at the Grosse Pointe Woods Community Center, at 20025 Mack Plaza, between Moross and Vernier. Sale hours are 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. except Saturday, when the sale ends at 3 p.m.

Although books purchased at the sale are always bargains, the AAUW has a three-tiered price schedule, offering even better deals. For example, the last day (Saturday) the selection is the lowest, but so are the prices; for just $4, a person can purchase as many books they can stuff in a paper bag. From Wednesday through Friday, the prices get progressively lower.

Ann Schumacher, chairman of this year's sale, said book donations have been exceptionally good this year. There are many current hardcover fiction books priced at just $2. "That's a great bargain when you consider their original price as over $20.

Also at the sale you will find non-fiction, how-to books, cookbooks, biographies, dictionaries, mysteries, classics, sport, travel and many children's books. Something for everyone.

Carolyn Sullivan, in charge of marking, said the assortment of books is excellent this year. "We don't count the books," said Sullivan, "but there must be more than 50,000 on sale."

Dozens of AAUW volunteers have worked all summer to prepare for the sale. Some have collected books from the barrels in Farmer Jack and Damman, others have sorted and priced the books, discarding any that are too worn or musty. All volunteers will be busy Tuesday before the sale, filling the tables full of books at the Woods Community Center.

Proceeds from the sale are used by the AAUW for scholarships for local women and national and international education grants.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Michael Smolen

Havern-Smolen

Kristen Elizabeth Havern, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Havern of Grosse Pointe Park, married Jeffrey Michael Smolen, son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Smolen of Baden, Penn. on June 21, 1997 at Holy Family Church in Detroit.

The Revs. Albert Sandor and Larry Howek officiated at the 4 p.m. ceremony. A reception followed at the Detroit Yacht Club.

The bride wore a white, summer satin, short-sleeve gown with a fitted bodice accented with a pearl band at the waist and box pleats. She wore a cathedral-length veil in the church, and a shorter veil at the reception; both were outlined in satin. She carried a bouquet of white and pink roses, stephanotis and ivy.

The matron of honor was the bride's friend, Jennifer McCoy from Framingham, Mass.

Bridesmaids were Dr. Kathy Smolen of Chicago, the groom's cousin; and the bride's friends Alicia Astrich of San Francisco, Stephanie Bierlein of Beverly Hills, Calif., Tracy Szustak of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, Julie Byrne of Minneapolis, Minn., and Cathy Johnston of the City of Grosse Pointe.

Bridal attendants wore pink crepe tea-length dresses with soutache decorative trim. They carried pink and white roses, carnations and stephanotis.

The best man was the groom's brother Steven Smolen of Baden, Pa.

The groomsmen were Brian Havern, Darren Havern and Todd Havern, the bride's brothers, who live in the City of Grosse Pointe; and the groom's friends, Joey McGuigan of Baden, Penn., Michael Wechsler of Hollywood, Calif., and Brian Freeman of Manhatten.

The bride's mother wore a light pink, ankle-length dress that had pearl trim on the cuffs, with a matching jacket that also had pearl trim.

The groom's mother wore a cream-colored crepe dress with beading.

Both mothers each carried three long-stem pink roses.

The bride earned a marketing and journalism degree from Syracuse University. She is the Lincoln-Mercury marketing coordinator for Ford Motor Co.

The groom earned an international relations degree from Syracuse University. He is a credit manager for Norwest Financial.

The couple took a Scandinavian cruise starting in Copenhagen, Denmark.

The couple lives in Mt. Laurel, N.J.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Philip Rightmire

Dalby-Rightmire

Sabra Elizabeth Dalby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Ken Dalby of Grosse Pointe Farms, married Eric Philip Rightmire, son of Dr. and Mrs. George Philip Rightmire of Vestal, N.Y., on June 28 at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church in Grosse Pointe Farms.

The Rev. Dr. V. Bruce Rigdon officiated at the 5 p.m. ceremon; a reception followed at the Country Club of Detroit.

The bride wore a slender floor-length sheath dress of ivory peau de soie with a scooped neckline and fitted bodice. The skirt and sleeves of the gown were embroidered with lace in a floral and leaf design, and had a detachable chapel-length train of peau de soie, gathered below a triple bow. Her veil of imported silk illusion was held in place by a pearled headband. She carried a bouquet of white roses.

The matron of honor was the bride's sister, Jill Dalby Ellison of Wynnewood, Pa.

Bridesmaids were Anyika Nia Allen, Emily Ann Davidow, Brigid Alexandra Kelly, all of New York City; Ana Ponzi Dalby of Grosse Pointe Farms, the bride's sister-in-law; Anna Marcia Rightmire of Boston, the groom's sister; Meghan Brady Hishmeh of Denver; Shana Martin Huntington of San Francisco, Cassandra Constance Pascarella of Charlotteville, Va., and Terrell Ferris Semple of Chicago.

Catherine Blair Ellison and Alexandra Dagmar Dalby, nieces of the bride were flower girls. Ring bearer was Zachary David Ellison, the bride's nephew.

Bridesmaids wore waltz-length dresses of ivory and fuchsia dupioni silk with halter necklines and shirred cummerbund waists. They carried individually styled bouquets of fuchsia peonies and roses.

Best man was Reagan Michael Frawley of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Groomsmen were Brian Kenneth Dalby of Grosse Pointe Farms, the bride's brother; David James Ellison of Wynnewood, Pa., brother-in-law of the bride; and the groom's friends Gurpreet Singh Chopra of Signal Mountain, Tenn., Robert Elijah Jordan IV of Cambridge, Mass., Emil George Michael of Palo Alto, Calif., Keith William Radick of Arlington, Mass., Craig Alan Rubrecht of Charlotte, N.C., Matthew Justin Von Bencke of Seattle, and David Leopold Weiden of Palo Alto, Calif.

The bride's mother wore a celadon brocade suit with a double breasted jacket.

The groom's mother wore a pale pink two-piece ensemble.

Scripture readers were the bride's father, Ronald Ken Dalby and the groom's father, Dr. George Philip Rightmire.

The organist was Robert Moncrief. Prelude music provided by the string quartet, La Corda Ensemble. Richard P. Clark of Tucson was the soloist.

The bride graduated with honors from Wellesley College with a bachelor of arts degree in classical civilization and Latin. She is pursuing a master's degree with a concentration in American Literature in the department of liberal studies at New York University. She is a member of the Sigma Gamma Association.

The groom is an honors graduate of Harvard College with a bachelor of arts degree in biology. He is attending medical school at the State University of New York. The couple resides at Head of the Harbour in St. James, N.Y.

When the pain won't quit

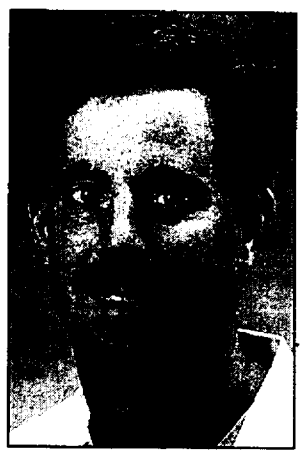

Pain management centers get to the root of pain

By James Jordan, D.O.

Persons living with chronic pain can now find relief at pain management centers where specially trained professionals treat pain ranging from headaches and back pain to leg cramps.

These centers are staffed by physicians and various specialty departments that offer treatment options, including medication, physical therapy, occupational therapy, psychotherapy, nerve blocks, epidural (the space surrounding the spinal column) steroid injections and spiritual support.

The key to treatment of chronic pain is to determine its origin. Someone may come to us after having back pain for two months, and after discussion we may learn that they're undergoing a divorce or some other personal problem.

James Jordan, D.O.

Personal or social stresses can be a major cause of pain. If that's the case, a patient seeking care at the Center may be referred to a psychologist where they can work through their personal issues. The pain often resolves after psychotherapy.

Chronic pain can be blamed for untold lost productivity and work hours, divorce, substance abuse, and, in some cases, suicide. Back pain alone affects more than 23 million people in the United States, with 13 million partially or totally disabled.

Until recently, management of chronic pain has been overseen by primary care physicians or by surgeons. Unfortunately, some types of pain aren't relieved by surgery or medication. As a result, some frustrated patients with unresolved pain begin doctor shopping in search of relief. And the cost of their care skyrockets as expensive tests and X-rays are duplicated.

Medical studies show that multidisciplinary pain centers often are the patients' last resort. Most have pain for an average of seven years, more than half have failed surgery, only a third are working, and about half are depressed. Referral to a pain center cannot only save money, but it also can get the patient on tract to reducing or at least learning to live with their pain.

Physicians treating patients with chronic pain can go through the steps of anti-inflammatory and pain medications before referring a patient to us. But once they no longer are comfortable treating unresolved pain, they should refer their patient to a pain management center.

Multidisciplinary pain treatment also is cost effective. According to a recent report in the journal, Pain Management, about 17 percent of patients treated at a pain management center required surgery within one to two years, compared to 47 percent of persons treated only with conventional therapy.

And the multidisciplinary approach to treating low back pain is up to 40 percent more successful than medical or surgical treatment in getting people back to work.

Once a patient is referred to our pain center, we obtain their medical records and any lab or X-ray studies from their referring physician. After careful review of the records, the patient is scheduled to meet with me and a physical therapist. We then tailor a treatment plan to meet the patient's needs. Treatment goals are realistic and center around resuming work or home responsibilities, restoring the ability to enjoy recreational activities and using health care appropriately.

I tell patients that in a fairy tale land we could relieve 100 percent of their pain. But, in reality, we try to get their pain to a manageable level. The goal is to make the duration of increased pain shorter and the episode less intense.

Dr. Jordan is supervising physician of the Bon Secours Pain Management Center, which opened in June. A physician referral is required for consultation at the Center. For information or referrals, call (313) 343-1650.

Former Miss America to address St. John Auxiliary on Sept. 30

Former Miss America Kay Lani-Rae Rafko-Wilson

Kay Lani-Rae Rafko-Wilson, Miss America 1988 from Monroe, Mich. will be the guest speaker at the annual fall meeting of the Fontbonne Auxiliary of St. John Hospital and Medical Center on Sept. 30 at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club. She will speak on "The importance of motherhood, charity and women in our country."

The evening includes a social hour at 5:30 p.m., sit-down dinner at 6 p.m., a general meeting at 7:30 p.m., and the speaker at 8 p.m. The public is invited to this event. Tickets cost $25. A cash bar will be available. To make reservations, or for more information, call the Fontbonne Auxiliary at (313) 343-7584.

Learn about prostate cancer

The Barbara Ann Karmanos Cancer Institute will sponsor a series of free prostate education and testing programs during the fall.

Men over 40 years of age who do not have a history of prostate cancer, and who have not had a prostate specific antigen (PSA) test or digital rectal exam within the last year, are eligible to participate in the free program.

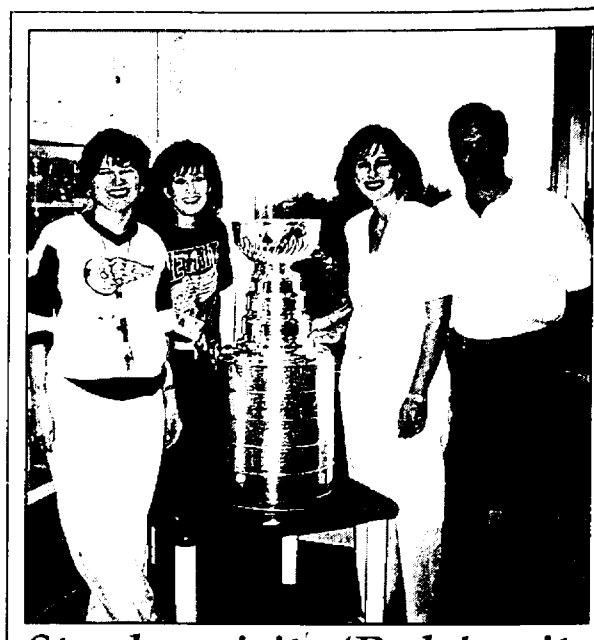

The American Cancer Society recommends annual prostate specific antigen (PSA) testing and digital rectal examination, beginning at age 50, for all men who have at least a 10-year life expectancy, and for younger men at higher risk for the disease.

The test locations, date, and time are as follows:

- Friday, Sept. 19 at the Karmanos Cancer Institute Wertz Center, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The center is located at 4100 John R in Detroit.
- Saturday, Sept. 27 at Huron Valley-Sinai Hospital, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The hospital is located at One William Carls Drive.
- Saturday, Nov. 8 at the DMC Health Care Centers, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. The centers are located at 22341 W. Eight Mile Road in Detroit.

Screenings will also be offered at the Veteran's Administration Hospital-Detroit and North Oakland Medical Center, Pontiac. Men who have participated in the screening program before should return to the site of their last test; their records will be found there.

More than 300,000 American men will be diagnosed with prostate cancer in 1997; it is the most-commonly diagnosed form of the disease. Prostate cancer is highly curable when diagnosed in its earliest stages. For information on any of these programs, call 1-800-KARMANOS.

Your Skin

Teens and Acne. Unfair as it may seem, most teens will experience acne to some extent.

Teen acne usually clears itself after several years without treatment. If left untreated, however, there is a risk that acne can result in lifelong scars.

For teenagers, rising hormones cause the sebaceous glands of the skin to grow, increasing the potential for plugged pores and resultant acne pimples. Also, while acne is not caused by food, if you find that certain foods cause your acne to worsen, avoid them.

There are many treatments available to help control teen acne. To learn which treatments are best for your condition, contact your dermatologist, or call us at Eastside Dermatology, Dr. Lisa A. Manz-Dulac and Associates (313) 884-3380.

It takes more than a 401k to ensure your retirement.

Invest in good health, and secure your independence, too.

If you're a woman approaching 45, you're probably thinking about mid-life changes. Taking preventive measures now will help ensure your health and independence later.

fact MENOPAUSE causes your body to lose natural estrogen, increasing your risk for heart disease, osteoporosis and breast cancer, after menopause.

fact HEART DISEASE is the No. 1 killer of American women. To reduce your risk of heart attack, improve your diet, begin a regular exercise program, and discuss hormone replacement with your physician.

fact OSTEOPOROSIS, diminished bone density, affects more than 20 million aging women, weakening the skeleton. Spontaneous fractures may occur. A bone density test is now available at Bon Secours.

fact BREAST CANCER affects 1 in every 8 women. More than 90% of these women survive if cancer is detected early. Take three important steps toward breast health: monthly breast self-exam; annual physical; and mammography, if recommended by your physician.

Sept. 22 program: Chance to learn about panic disorders

On Sept. 22, at Barnes School on Morningside in Grosse Pointe Woods, Thomas B. Uhde, M.D. will review the diagnosis, course, and treatment of panic disorder — a condition characterized by awake and sleep panic attacks.

The program is a part of Grosse Pointe's Community Education, and is co-sponsorsed with the Alliance for the Mentally Ill.

Sleep panic attacks and other fearful arousals, (e.g., nightmares, night terrors, sleep paralysis, nocturnal seizures) will be discussed.

The community education charge is $5, of which half will go to brain research through NARSAD Research.

Call (313) 343-2528 for more information.

The Alliance for the Mentally Ill meets most Mondays at 7:30 p.m. at the Henry Ford Continuing Care Center, 19840 Harper in Harper Woods.

Further information on AMI can be obtained by calling Margaret at (313) 884-9005.

Postmenopausal women sought for bone loss research

Postmenopausal women are invited to participate in a research study to evaluate the effect of several lower doses of estrogen and progesterone on minimizing bone loss, lowering cholesterol, and relieving menopausal symptoms (i.e. hot flashes, insomnia, etc.)

Participating women can expect to receive $1,000 at the end of the two-year study.

Individuals must be healthy, have a uterus and have not had a period for at least one year but not more than four years.

Call Nancy Angel, RNC, at the Detroit Medical Center's Hutzel-Warren facility at (810) 558-1133 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. or leave a message anytime.

The Pastor's Corner

How many Commandments?

by Pastor Ronald Schmidt
Faith Lutheran Church, Detroit, Mich.

In the Old Testament book of Exodus Chapter 20 and in Deuteronomy Chapter 5, God gives Moses a list of commandments which have not only governed the conduct of Israel from Old Testament times but all of Christendom for 2000 years. They are known as the Ten Commandments.

However not every religious group numbers them the same way. For example, for Roman Catholics and Lutherans, "You shall not commit adultery" is the 6th Commandment. But for the U.S. most other Protestants and Eastern Orthodox Christians it is Commandment number 7. Likewise, "You shall not steal" could be commandment number 7 or number 8 depending on the way they are numbered.

The Bible does not tell us how they should be numbered. Therefore the News and various Christian traditions have come up with their own numbering systems. It is even possible that you could come up with 11 or 12 commandments but the tradition has come down to us that there are 10. The Jews have one numbering system, the Catholics and Lutherans have another, and the rest of Protestantism and Eastern Orthodoxy have still a third.

For the Jews, the first commandment is "I am the Lord your God who brought you out of the house of bondage." This is actually a statement rather than a commandment. For this reason, the Jewish people call them the 10 statements rather than the Ten Commandments. What is the first commandment for the Jews is regarded as an introductory statement by Christians. For them the first commandment is "You shall have no other gods before me."

At this point the Lutherans and Catholics include the prohibition of "graven images" as part of the first commandment. "You shall not make for yourselves any graven images." For the Orthodox and other Protestants this is the second commandment and from there on the numbering changes.

Those who have combined the first two commandments into one have to find one more commandment. The Lutherans do this by breaking down the part against coveting into two: "You shall not covet your neighbor's house" as number nine and "You shall not covet your neighbor's wife nor his manservant, or his maidservant, nor his cattle nor anything that is your neighbors," as the 10th, according to Exodus 20.

The Roman Catholics take the commandments according to Deuteronomy 5. In this case, commandment number nine would be, "You shall not covet your neighbor's wife." Number 10 is "You shall not desire your neighbor's goods" meaning house, field, cattle "or anything that is your neighbors."

In conclusion, the commandment "You shall not kill," which is either number 5 or number 6 depending upon whom you ask, should be translated, "You shall not murder."

Preparing for the Sept. 19 and 20 rummage sale have been many parishioners of St. Paul Lutheran Church. Included among the volunteers are nancy Gurmi, Arlene Nagel, Judy Christianson, Carolyn Seholfield and Ilene Brown. The church members have been collecting items all year in preparation for the rummage sale, which helps them raise money for their Christian outreach programs.

St. Paul Lutheran to host rummage sale Sept. 19-20

St. Paul Lutheran Church will hold their Annual Rummage and "Fine Things" Sale on Friday, Sept. 19 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Reduced prices on Saturday, Sept. 20, with furniture and household items 1/2 price, clothing and books sold for $4 a bag. Antiques and fine things from the boutique are also marked down Saturday.

The church is located at Chalfonte and Lothrop in Grosse Pointe Farms. Early shoppers can enjoy coffee and doughnuts before the doors open at 9 a.m.

The boutique features better furniture, quality clothing, antiques, and new items. Come and browse in a basement filled with items at reasonable prices. Funds raised support Outreach Projects in the Metropolitan area, worldwide ministry and hunger programs.

Chairpersons are Marie Zeller and Pam Jankiewicz of the items with the Boutique chaired by Sandy Brown. Items for sale have been collected for months and all goods are priced to sell.

For more information, call the church at (313) 881-6670.

Grace Community Church leaders washed cars for free

When leaders of Grace Community Church considered a way to serve their Eastside Detroit community, they landed on a unique idea.

Instead of putting their teens to work, why not leaders, themselves, rolling up their sleeves for a car wash? But not a usual "fund raiser," but a totally free car wash!

Pastors Kevin Butcher, Jamie Rasmussen, other staff and others liked the idea. On Saturday, Sept. 6, dozens of neighborhood friends brought their dirty cars to the Grace parking lot at Moross Road and I-94/Harper.

Butcher said, "As a community organization, we thought it would be one way to demonstrate that we're here for people more than just one hour or two a week." The pastor added that "having a heart for hands-on ministry requires participation rather than delegation. The leaders thought it important for us, as a team, to get out and serve. After all, that's just what Jesus did."

Other Grace projects to serve the community have included Backyard Bible Clubs, Prison Fellowship's Angel Tree, the Christ homeless program, and partnership with the local House of Jesus organization.

Memorial Church hosts Sept. 21 event

On Sunday, Sept. 21, Grosse Pointe Memorial Church will celebrate the renovation of its entire building with numerous activities to which the public is invited.

The activities will start with 9 and 11 a.m. worship services that will include special features heralding the renovating work that has been in progress for more than one year at the church located at 16 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms.

At 4:15 p.m., a bagpiper will play for the gathering of the people for the 4:30 p.m. special dedication service, which will take place in the Sanctuary, followed by a steak barbecue on the church grounds. Ticket prices are $7 for adults; $1.50 for children. The event will have three seating times for the barbecue dinner — 5:30 p.m., 6:15 p.m., and 7 p.m. Call the church at (313) 882-5330 to purchase tickets.

A "moonwalk" for children will be held on the church's property.

At 5:30 p.m., a carillon recital will be presented by Phyllis Webb, head carillonist for the church.

At 6:15 p.m., Robert Moncrief, director of music ministries for the church, and various members of the church's musical groups will present a "Music of Celebration" program of organ and voice in the Sanctuary.

Also availabe will be tours of the building, a special art exhibit, and a display of pictures and memorabilia from the church archives. Ellen Probert Williamson and Leslie A. Sanders, longtime church members, assisted with researching and providing historical background and renovation information.

Sanders will be one of the people providing tours of the historic church. He said he has enjoyed the hours he has spent going through and organizing the many photos showing the 100-plus year history of the church and the people who have worshiped and attended events there. One of his favorites is an aerial photo of the church that also shows the former Rose Terrace mansion.

The church was founded in 1865 as the Grosse Pointe Protestant Evangelical Church, the first Protestant church in the Grosse Pointes. It remained non-denominational until 1920, when it became affiliated with the national Presbyterian church. The original church building was a white frame structure which stood at the corner of Kerby and Lakeshore and was used from 1867 to 1894. At that time, a new church was built on the present site and was commonly known around the Pointes as "The Little Ivy Covered Church."

As membership grew in the 1920s, the need for a larger facility was recognized. The present English Gothic-style Sanctuary and original Church House, dedicated in 1927, were given by John and Truman Newberry as memorials to their parents, John Stoughton and Helen Handy Newberry. The stained glass windows and many other artifacts and furnishings were also given as memorials, and the name was changed to Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. This building housed a gymnasium in which many basketball games and other athletic events were held. During the 1920s first-run movies were shown on a weekly basis, since no local movie theaters had been built at that time. A small reading room, supplied the donated books, provided the nucleus of the present Grosse Pointe Public Library system.

The Carillon Tower originally housed eight cast bells, to which 39 were added in 1952. Grosse Pointe Memorial officials have invited carillonist from around the world to present free concerts for the public on Tuesday summer evenings.

In 1962, a large addition was completed which housed Barbour Memorial Chapel at the church (the old movie projection room still exists behind the wood paneling) and Fellowship Hall, which were converted from the former gymnasium, and the Fitt Library, named in honor of Harriet and Frank Fitt, who served as senior pastor from 1931 to 1958 and Pastor Emeritus until his death.

The building is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and marked by a plaque on the church lawn.

The renovations just completed include extensive work in the church Sanctuary to replicate the paintings of eight angels on the chancel walls which were painted by Byron Rogers, a Detroit artist. Due to lack of detailed photographs of the original eight angels, the new ones have been created in the Arts and Crafts style of William Morris by Evergreen Studios of New York City. Members of the Grosse Pointe community and beyond are encouraged to view this new, exquisite angelic display on the sanctuary's walls.

The chancel floor has been extended forward eight feet creating more room for various activities, including the children's annual pageant, such as the one about Noah's Ark this past Spring which involved about 200 children in animal costumes.

Other renovations near or on the chancel include making the pastors' pulpit movable and the baptismal font has been raised to the chancel level. Structural changes, including installation of a new, more conveniently located elevator are among the changes to meet ADA requirements.

The ceiling and walls have again been coated to improve the acoustics. Christoph Linde — the designer and voicer of the 66 rank Klais pipe organ installed in the church's rear gallery in 1989 — has returned from Bonn, Germany to revoice the instrument for the improved acoustics.

The two-story organ chamber in front of the Chancel was converted to a Sacristy (a room to prepare the Communion elements) at the second floor level and a Bell Choir Room at the third floor level.

People entering the building from the lakeside parking lot, shared with the Grosse Pointe Club, will notice a handsome new entryway leading to a spacious reception lobby where the kitchen was formerly located.

The new kitchen was installed and has been the facilities used to prepare the weekly Men's ecumenical breakfast that is open to the community.

A new suite of Christian Education offices allows those staff members to be together after being in offices on different floors of the building. All Christian Education classrooms, including those occupied by The Foundation for Exceptional Children and the Memorial Co-operative Nursery, have been improved.

In addition to Moncrief, the church's dedication ceremonies and activities have been planned by Dr. V. Bruce Rigdon, the church's pastor; R. Michael Foley, Gordon Mikoski and Nancy Mikoski, the church's associate pastors; Carol B. Marks, director of pastoral ministries; George N. Stultz, church administrator and construction coordinator; Jim and Mary Garlough, chairpersons and members of the congregation, and numerous volunteers.

Take in a show; fall season full of artistic gems

State of the Arts

By Alex Suczek

As we enter the fall season, the arts scene is almost an embarrasment of riches. The Detroit Symphony Orchestra program has resumed with its best conductors, soloists and a new CD release. The mega exhibit of The Splendors of Ancient Egypt continues at the Detroit Institute of Arts. The Michigan Opera Theatre will soon present Aida with a young but already proven great soprano. And two knock-out productions that opened late at Stratford are going strong through October at the theater festival.

In the season's first symphony concert at Orchestra Hall last Thursday, guest conductor Jerzy Semkow was challenged to match tempi and style of piano prodigy Helen Huang. The 14-year-old displayed aggressive pacing and thoughtful phrasing in Mozart's sublime Piano Concerto No. 21 at a level of sophistication that belied her youth. She did not merge entirely with Semkow's more metrical, classical approach. Yet while her tastefully innovative treatment did not always agree with Semkow's traditional style, they provided a satisfying performance.

In a distinctly different conductor/pianist combination starting tomorrow (Friday) evening, Music Director Neeme Jarvi and one of the world's most eminent soloists, Murray Perahia, will offer the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor. In this case, we expect a real meeting of artistic minds and a performance that is stimulating, original and consistent. The concert opens with Overture to Julius Caesar by Jarvi's Estonian compatriot Rudolf Tobias and closes with Nielsen's Symphony No. 5. It will be repeated Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Call 833-3700 for tickets.

The DSO is also resuming its output of CDs with the release this week of a new collection of Jarvi's much loved and popular encores. This set includes the encore surprises in which he pours new wine from old bottles, giving untraditional, yet highly effective new treatments of familiar old numbers. His tempo variations in Strauss' Pizzicato Polka, for example, brought down the house at the end of a concert last year. It does it again on this disc. Moreover, this and other selections reveal vividly the superb rapport between conductor and orchestra as the musicians follow his unpredictable but inspired flights of fancy. On sale already at Orchesta Hall, this new CD is now being distributed to area record stores and is another guaranteed hit.

Meanwhile, the DIA's splendid exhibit of ancient Egyptian art and artifacts will continue through the end of the year and rightly so. It is worth more than one visit to take in and reflect on the achievements of this majestic, early civilization. The tape recorded tour guide is worth taking for one item alone. It is a poem of desperation written by a pharaoh during troubled times. The poem is as touching and convincing today as it must have been when written 3,000 years ago. Hearing it as you stand before a panel of heiroglyphics or a decorated mummy case is an experience not to miss.

The museum offers a lavish array of enriching presentations related to the exhibit as well. There are workshops where you can learn to write heiroglyphics or make a copy of an Egyptian mask. There are lectures on Egyptian life and art, and their influence on recent art and architecture, plus gallery talks and demonstrations. For a schedule, inquire at the exhibit or call the museum at 833-7900.

Opera is thriving this season. MOT opens Saturday, Oct. 20 with soprano Camellia Johnson singing the role of Aida. She appeared here in the same role with huge success two seasons ago soon after winning rave reviews for her Detroit recital debut with Pro Musica at the DIA.

MOT continues with a schedule of The Magic Flute in October, Manon next April and Elixir of Love and Porgy and Bess in May. For tickets and information, call (313) 874-7464.

There is new action in the Stratford Festival theatre program as well. Two plays that opened only recently are among this season's finest performances. Oedipus Rex, the great classic Greek tragedy by Sophocles adapted by W.B. Yeats, is a revival of one of the original productions that opened the Festival in 1953. The staging and designs are based on the 1953 versions by the great Tyrone Guthrie and Tanya Moiseiwitsch. Several members of this cast and production staff took part in that historic production.

Turning in magnetic performances in Peter Shaffer's Equus are Nicolas Van Burek as the disturbed boy Alan Strang and Brian Bedford as Martin Dysart.

This treatment at the Festival Theater is spectular. The masks are starkly dramatic and have been improved so that they do not impede the actors' voices.

Most exciting is an opening pantomime based on the tradition of the ancient Greek Satyr play. It presents the background story of the play in a hilariously funny, modern styled pantomime so crammed with symbolic allusions that it keeps you on the edge of your seat and almost afraid to laugh because you might miss something.

Running in parallel at the Avon Theater is Equus, Peter Shaffer's provocative study of modern psychiatry with Brian Bedford shining as director and star of the show.

Shaffer's use of some theatrical conventions borrowed from Sophocles make Equus an interesting companion piece for Oedipus, though the play stands on its own as a probing look at modern man's conflicts between his practical and spiritual needs.

The play has acquired a certain notoriety for its scenes of nudity, which usually generate gasps of surprise from some in the audience.

In our experience, a man behind us was heard to say to his companion, "Hey, wake up. You gotta see this!"

Two performances especially stand out as virtuoso achievements on the Stratford stages: Benedict Campbell as Oedipus and Nicolas van Burek as the disturbed youth in Equus.

Both deliver brilliant portrayals of their anquished process of self discovery.

Oedipus runs through Oct. 11 and Equus through Nov. 9.

World-reknown spiritual leader to host lecture, workshops Sept. 24-25

Malidoma Somé

Several area residents have helped make possible the sponsorship of two special workshops to be held Sept. 24 and 25 at The Fisher Mansion's Bhaktivedanta Cultural Center, located at 383 Lenox Ave., just off East Jefferson in Detroit.

The workshops will be entitled "Home and Prosperity Rituals" Manifesting a Spiritual Base for Abundance."

The workshops are sponsored by Looking Glass Traditions.

World reknown Malidoma Patrice Somé, teacher and healer, will lead the workshops.

Somé was born in Upper Volta (now Burkina Faso), West Africa. Initiated in the ancestral traditions of his tribe, he is a medicine man and diviner. Malidoma holds three master's degrees, as well as two doctoral degrees from the Sorbonne and Brandeis, and for three years taught literature at the University of Michigan. A popular speaker, he discusses tribal customs, spiritual beliefs, the world of the ancestors, and the life-giving process of initiation. He is also the author of Ritual: Power, Healing and Community.

The workshops will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on both Sept. 24 and 25. The fee for the workshop is $175. The fee includes not only the workshops, but two lunch meals, and light snacks.

Somé also will provide a special lecture entitled "Modernity and Mental Illness" on Thursday, Sept. 25 at 7 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, located at 32 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms. The fee for this lecture is $15.

Somé said that modernity has brought us to a lifestyle where many of us are caught between two worlds, that of the machine world and that of doing what spirit tells us to do. Many of us are caught in jobs that we don't want, financial situations we can't handle, and in constant pain and anger. The imposition that modernity has placed on us has made us slaves to a system void of spirit as opposed to free spirits filled with purpose and supported by community.

As described by people familiar with Somé's teachings, the focus of the two-day workshop will be on ritual practice that will lead to prosperity and abundance, a sense of home (community) and purpose. Somé will show us how to incorporate into our lives daily rituals that will enable us to set our spirit free in the midst of modernity. He will teach us how ritual heightens our receptivity to the flow of abundance in our homes, among our families, and community in the midst of our work, and all our relationships.

Bring to the two-day workshop, a journal, a drum (or other rhythmic instrument), and one or more ritual objects (something that has special meaning to you), and a personal cup for your favorite tea.

Jewish center to offer educational, cultural opportunities to public

The organized Jewish community of metropolitan Detroit has created a new central information source for those who are interested in Judaism and interfaith issues. This source — called the Interfaith Connection — will provide educational and cultural opportunities for interfaith couples, their children and parents.

According to Kathleen Wilson-Fink, the chairperson of the Implementation Committee of the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Detroit, "The Interfaith Connection harnesses the talent and resources available in the area to create accessible, non-threatening, high-quality programs that meet the needs of the community's interfaith families."

Current offering include: Stepping stones — a series of 25 classes, conducted in a warm and friendly environment, that provides an introduction to Jewish culture and traditions for school-aged children and families. Ther is no tuition for this program that meets weekly, beginning Sept. 21. First step — eight, fun-filled, interactive sessions in which interfaith couples and their pre-school children come together to explore Jewish rituals and themes. First step sessions begin Sept. 24. The program is free. Mini-experiences — discussion group-type gatherings conducted by an experienced social worker. The series includes a look at issues surrounding interfaith dating and marriage, and grandparenting children born to an interfaith couple.

The Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Detroit, the Agency for Jewish Education and Jewish Family Services are the organizations currently providing programming under the Interfaith Connection banner.

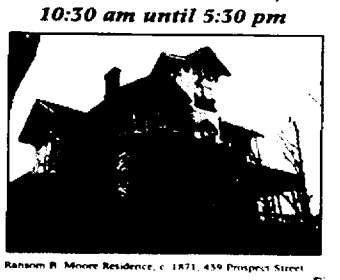

Information about these and other programs is available from the Interfaith Connection at 21550 W. 12 Mile in Southfield, Mich. The toll-free number is 1-800-397-4876.

Christian preschool offered

Looking for a warm, imaginative and nurturing program for you and your preschooler to participate in this fall? Then Sunny Days is the Co-op for you! Still accepting fall enrollment for three- and four-year-old children for the 1997-98 school year. Sunny Days is an inter-denominational Christian program that meets from 9 - 11:30 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The program incorporates group involvement activities along with individual praise and recognition. A Co-op program allows parents to see their child in a social setting, meeting friends, and to become active participants in their children's school experience. A couple of violinists' CDs that are worth checking out

By John Guinn

Any violin devotee is aware of Itzhak Perlman. Some fiddle fanciers might also recognize Detroit native Michelle Makarski. Few, at present, would be familiar with Hilary Hahn. Here are thoughts about these fiddlers three, gleaned from evidence on recent compact discs.

OFF THE RECORD

By John Guinn

Hilary Hahn
Bach: Partitas Nos. 2 & 3; Sonata No. 3 (Sony Classical)
Rating: ★★★★ (out of 4)

The American violinist Hilary Hahn is only 17 years old, but she plays with an artistic insight far beyond her comparatively tender years.

This debut CD, devoted to three stalwarts of the solo violin repertory, will be released October 21. It reveals an astonishing technical prowess and a disarmingly mature artistry, along with a refreshing individuality that enhances Bach's music.

Hahn's tone quality is rich and ripe, with none of the tiresome earmarks of the so-called authenticity movement. She is able to maintain a steady rhythmic pulse while expanding and contracting the tempo, and she fits her dynamic shifts into the natural rise and fall of the overlaid melodic lines, which she separates with unusual clarity.

I was especially interested to hear what she would do with the famous Chaconne that concludes the Second Partita. One of the great showpieces of the violin literature, in inept hands it can come across as a series of mechanical harmonic progressions.

Hahn plays it with the insights of one long familiar with its special charms, and with a technique more than equal to its thorny demands.

How Hahn is able to display such mature artistry is a mystery. That she does so, though, cannot be denied. It will be fascinating to watch her career develop.

Michelle Makarski
"Caione" - Music of Biber, Hartke, Reger, Rochberg and Bach (ECM New Series)
Rating: ★★★

Michelle Makarski's generous 73-minute CD contains music for solo violin arranged with a definite purpose.

It moves from the Baroque ingenuity of Biber's Passacaglia through the alluring sonic landscape of contemporary American composer Stephen Hartke's "Caione" (the Celtic word for the dirges keened by Ireland's professional mourners) to the polyphonic thickets of Max Reger and the atonal eruptions of George Rochberg (another contemporary American), ending with the noble counterpoint of the acknowledged master of the Baroque, Johann Sebastian Bach.

The logic to Makarski's sequence of pieces becomes more apparent as her recital progresses. But while uniquely arranged music might be impressive, the real value of the CD must be found in Makarski's playing.

Except for the Biber and Bach selections, her playing is alluring on both technical and artistic grounds. She injects each of the 11 variations chosen from Rochberg's "Caprice Variations" with a distinctive musical personality, and even manages to make Reger's ponderous polyphony momentarily attractive.

Unfortunately, she has decided to limit both Biber and Bach to the restraints of that so-called authenticity movement that calls for a tone quality robbed of nearly all its vibrato, so her playing sounds more like a history lecture than a musical performance. Would she had let both pieces speak to us in contemporary accents, which reveal so much more of the music's marvelous content.

Itzhak Perlman
Cinema Serenade; Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, John Williams conducting (Sony Classical)
Rating: ★★

Despite the uneven efforts he's evidenced over the past few years, Itzhak Perlman is still considered one of the greats by most fiddle followers.

The disarmingly beautiful tone quality he brings to music drawn from 13 film scores on this 53-minute CD leaves no doubt about the quality of his artistry.

You have to wonder, though, about the wisdom of lavishing that tone quality on such undistinguished music. Most film music works best when experienced within the context of the film itself. There are exceptions — Leonard Bernstein's score for "On the Waterfront," for instance — which is strong enough to work in the concert hall.

But the selections on this CD (which include music from such popular films as "Il Postino", "Scent of a Woman" and "Schindler's List") tend to degenerate into syrupy background fodder, despite Perlman's clearly committed performances.

Most were either composed or arranged by John Williams, who conducts the fine Pittsburgh ensemble here.

The few selections capable of moving from background to center stage, like Michel Legrand's "I Will Wait for You" from "The Umbrellas of Cherbourg," are worthy of Perlman's talents.

Most, though, are prime examples of what it means to throw pearls before swine.

A Musical Jubilee

Jef Fisk of the City of Grosse Pointe, Mike Edick of Grosse Pointe Woods, John Diebel of Grosse Pointe Park, Nick Dara and Ruth Ellen Mayhall, both of Grosse Pointe Farms, will perform in Grosse Pointe Theatre's 50th Anniversary Gala, "A Musical Jubilee." The show is a retrospective of Grosse Pointe Theatre's musical theater tradition, to be held Sept. 26 and 27 in the Fries Auditorium of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore Road in Grosse Pointe Farms. The evening begins with a 7:30 p.m. reception in the auditorium lobby, followed by a glittering performance of Broadway favorites at 8 p.m. After the show, a champagne/dessert reception will be held in the Crystal Ballroom, Grosse Pointe Theatre members will be available to give backstage tours. Admission is $25. Call (313) 881-4004 for tickets.

Mozart Society presents concert Sept. 28

The Pro Mozart Society of Greater Detroit will present its 38th annual concert on Sunday, Sept. 28, at 3 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, located at 32 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms.

For 38 years, under the sponsorship of the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria, the Society has been promoting the great music of the 18th and 19th Centuries with special emphasis on works sprung from Mozart's genius.

This year's concert features a piano trio, duets for soprano and mezzo, and selections sung by a Russian children's choir. Performing artists are: Earnestine Nimmons, soprano; Elsie Inselman, mezzo-soprano; Lawrence LaGore, pianist and members of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra; Marguerite Deslippe-Dene, violin; James VanValkenburg, viola; Mario DiFiore, cello; and Stephen Molina, double bass. Also participating is the Intergenerational Children's Choir under the direction of Larissa Matusova. Artistic Director is Marguerite Chajes.

General admission is $10; students and seniors are $6. Tickets are available in advance by calling (313) 885-0744, or at the door at the time of the concert.

Contributions to the society are tax deductible. Patrons ($100 or more) receive four concert tickets; sponsors ($50) receive two tickets; donors ($25) receive one ticket. The audience is invited to meet the performing artists at the afterglow immediately following the concert.

ULS' Wood in national prep coaching Hall of Fame

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Bob Wood gets a little embarrassed when someone calls him a legend.

But there aren't many words that better describe the long-time University Liggett School coach and athletic director, who has contributed so much to high school tennis and prep sports in general.

And he's one of only two Michigan coaches — Lofton Greene of River Rouge basketball fame is the other — to be inducted into the National High School Athletic Coaches Association Hall of Fame.

That happened this summer in Sioux Falls, S.D., when Wood, who was nominated by the Michigan High School Coaches Association, was honored at the NHSACA annual convention.

Wood remembered getting the call from Jack Johnson, the head of the board of directors for the Michigan chapter.

"My exact words were 'are you kidding?'" Wood said. "I was obviously shocked and honored."

It has all been a labor of love for Wood, whose association with ULS goes back to when he was in the school's 3-year-old pre-school. That's 48 years, including the last 33 as a member of the faculty.

"My father, who died almost three years ago, told me once that it doesn't matter how much money you make as long as you enjoy getting up and going to work every morning. If you do that, you'll be a happy man. That's the way I feel about my job," said Wood.

That's probably one of the reasons he does it so well.

In 32 years at ULS, Wood's boys tennis teams have won 24 state championships and were runners-up in the state seven times. A string of 13 straight championships from 1972-1984 set a national record, although it has since been broken. The only time the Knights didn't finish 1-2 was in 1971 when Wood had to suspend his top seven players for the rest of the season after they broke team rules midway through the year.

His girls teams at ULS have also been successful, winning seven state titles in eight years. In 1990, his girls team became the first squad in Michigan high school sports history to jump two classes (from Class C to Class A) and win a state championship.

Wood's boys teams have an overall record of 323-178 in dual meets and have won 49 invitational championships and 26 regional titles. Wood always strives to get the toughest competition possible for his teams.

"I don't care about our won-lost record during the regular season," he said. "If I'd wanted to, we could have been undefeated for 30 years, but it wouldn't have been fair to the kids in the program who are here to be better tennis players. We want to win the state tournament and that's what we prepare for by playing as many ranked teams as we can."

A successful program like the one Wood has put together at ULS doesn't happen by accident. And it takes more than one person to make it work.

"There are so many reasons for my success here," Wood said. "The only way a coach can receive an honor like this is to be around a long time, have outstanding talent and incredible support from the school and the support and commitment of the players and their parents."

Wood has had all kinds of teams and players at ULS but usually the end result is the

Tennis champs

The Lochmoor Women's 3.5 United States Tennis Association team has had a remarkable string of success. The squad has been undefeated in its division the last three years. This year it won the district championship at Franklin Racquet Club against a field of 61 teams. Lochmoor then advanced to the state finals in Okemos, where it lost a close match to the championship team from Kalamazoo. South ends runner-up streak with victory in own tourney

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe South's tennis team got away from the runner-up rut it had been in all season when it took first place in last week's Grosse Pointe South Quad.

And a talk from co-captains Leslie Harrell, Anne Morris and Jennifer Mansfield helped spur the Blue Devils to the victory.

"They had a meeting with the team and everybody came out fired up," said coach Mark Sobieralski. "I overheard some of it and I was pumped. We have great senior leadership this year."

South, which won every flight from third singles through fourth doubles, had 19 points to 13 for runner-up Detroit Country Day. Farmington Hills Mercy had nine points and Flint Carman-Ainsworth seven.

Anna Hume won third singles and Alicia Siefer took first in fourth singles.

"Fourth singles was a tough flight," Sobieralski said. "Alicia had some tough matches and she played well."

The Blue Devils lost only one set in double during the entire tournament.

Lauren Pankhurst and Morris swept through their No. 1 doubles matches, while Mansfield and Kirstin Brand won a tough three-setter in their first match, but swept the next two.

Caroline Cavanaugh and Brody Dawson in No. 3 doubles and Lindsay Yates and Eileen Pulis in No. 4 doubles breezed past all their opponents.

Until last weekend, second place had been first rate for Grosse Pointe South's girls tennis team this season.

"We finished second in each of them," said Sobieralski. "They've all had some strong teams in them."

South was ranked fourth in Division I last week after its four second-place finishes and a split in its two dual meets.

The Blue Devils finished second behind Ann Arbor Huron — ranked third in Division I — in the Flint Carman-Ainsworth Invitational.

South got individual championships from freshmen Cavanaugh and Dawson in No. 3 doubles and from Yates and Katie Reagan in No. 4 doubles.

Defending state Class A champion Port Huron Northern won the next two tournaments South competed in. The Huskies won the Troy Invitational and then finished first in their own tournament.

"Northern might even be stronger this year than last year," Sobieralski said. "They swept all the flights, but we were runners-up in all the doubles."

South's doubles teams were Lauren Pankhurst and Morris at No. 1, Siefer and Brand at No. 2, Cavanaugh and Dawson at No. 3 and Yates and Reagan at No. 4.

South tied with Okemos for second place at the Port Huron Northern Invitational. The Blue Devils were second in five flights, including No. 2 singles with Meryl Pankhurst and No. 4 singles with Mansfield. South's second through fourth doubles teams Siefer and Brand, Cavanaugh and Dawson and Yates and Pulis — also took second place.

The Blue Devils' other runner-up finish came in the University Liggett School tournament where they finished behind East Grand Rapids.

A victory by the No. 1 doubles team of Lauren Pankhurst and Morris prevented an East Grand Rapids sweep of the finals.

South beat Port Huron 5-3 in its first Macomb Area Conference Red Division match. Winners for the Blue Devils were Siefer, 6-1, 6-1 at No. 3 singles; Lauren Pankhurst and Morris, 6-2, 6-1 at No. 1 doubles; Mansfield and Brand, 6-1, 6-2 at No. 2 doubles; Cavanaugh and Dawson, 6-2, 6-3 at No. 3 doubles; and Pulis and Reagan, 6-7, 6-3, 6-2 at No. 4 doubles.

"Leslie Harrell has also been playing well at No. 1 singles, even though she's been facing everybody's top player," Sobieralski said. "And freshman Anna Hume lost a tough three-setter against Port Huron. She's been playing well at singles, too."

South lost 8-0 to Port Huron Northern in a dual meet this week, but Sobieralski wasn't unhappy with the outcome.

"I'm not disappointed because we played well," he said. "We've made progress since the last time we faced them. Our one and two doubles teams each took them to three sets and Northern's No. 1 and No. 2 doubles are undefeated."

Mansfield and Brand won their first set 6-4, but dropped the next two 6-2 and 6-3.

"The third set was tied 3-3 and there were 12 deuces," Sobieralski said. "And it first doubles, the first set was a 10-8 tie-breaker."

ULS netters keep improving

University Liggett School's girls tennis team might not have a winning record in dual meets this year but nobody at the school is worried.

"We play such a tough schedule," said coach Chuck Wright. "We beat the two teams in our division by 8-0 scores.

"We're improving a lot. If we keep playing as hard as we are, with our tough schedule we'll get better and better."

Last week, the Knights beat Ann Arbor Greenhills 8-0 but lost to powerful teams from Cranbrook 6-2 and Marian 8-0.

That evened ULS' dual meet record at 2-2.

Julie Megler, Kendall Wrigley, Marite Schulte-Trux and Molly Marco won easily in singles against Greenhills. None of them lost more than two games.

In No. 1 doubles, Stephanie Roehl and Allison Ricci came from behind in the second set to win 6-4, 7-5. The No. 2 doubles team of Amy Silverston and Melissa Berger won 6-1, 6-1, while Alaina Powell and Christina Oney won easily at No. 3 doubles and Sheena and Sejal Parikh also had an easy win at No. 4 doubles.

The Cranbrook match was moved indoors because of rain and the matches were shortened to eight-game pro sets.

"We competed hard but could only manage victories at one and four doubles," Wright said.

Roehl and Ricci won 8-2, while the Parikh sisters won by the same score. Berger and Silverston lost an 8-7 tie-breaker.

The only close match against Marian was at No. 3 doubles where Powell and Oney lost 7-6, 4-6, 6-2 in a very well-played match.

Wood

same — a state championship or a near miss.

"As a coach you want to feel you've been a part of winning some of those championships, especially the years when we've won by just a few points, but there have been some push-button teams. All I had to do was make sure the courts were unlocked and that nobody cut their hand opening a can of balls."

One of the characteristics of Wood's teams are the number of players who become good tennis players without spending all of their waking hours practicing the sport.

"We've had some nationally-ranked players, but we've also been able to attract a lot of good athletes who aren't tennis players," Wood said. "We've won a lot because 60 or 70 percent of our players are two or three-sport athletes. If they've gone to the free-throw line in overtime or been in other pressure situations in their athletic careers, they'll come through when the score's 4-all in the third set of a tennis match. We've had years when seven of our top 10 players have played a sport all three seasons."

Wood started taking his boys teams to Florida during spring break when he first took over as coach and he said that is another factor in the school's tennis success.

"They're up at 6:15 a.m. every day and they're on the courts from 7 to 10 a.m. and from 4 to 6 p.m. each day," Wood said. "But more important than getting ready for the season is that they learn to respect and appreciate one another. We develop the family atmosphere.

"A lot of the boys take heat from some of their classmates from getting up at 6:15 every day when they could be sleeping in and for spending five hours a day on the tennis courts. Our players give up their spring break to make the University Liggett tennis program successful."

Wood is like a proud father when he talks about the new tennis complex at ULS, and rightfully so. It would be hard to find a better facility in the state, whether it's in high school or college.

Wood has always been a sports fan. He was a water boy for the Lions during their glory days in the 1950s.

"I worshipped the ground Bobby Layne, Lou Creekmur, Gil Mains and others walked on," Wood said. "I've always loved all sports but especially college and high school sports. The three things I watch on TV are sports, CNN news and 60 Minutes.

"Somebody was talking about one of the episodes of Seinfeld the other day and I hadn't even heard of the program, much less watched it."

He decided to become a coach when he was a sophomore at Elizabethtown College in Pennsylvania.

"I loved sports and I enjoyed working with kids so I decided to go into physical education so I could have my cake and eat it, too," Wood said.

"One of the great things about high school athletics is that you get a chance to work with so many kids. Each year you have about 25 percent new kids as the seniors graduate and the freshmen come in. And every 3 1/2 months the sports change."

After graduation, Wood coached four years at the Harrisburg Academy in Pennsylvania, then had the opportunity to return to ULS. He jumped at the chance.

"I have a great respect for University Liggett School," he said. "For 15 years it educated and nurtured me. And for the last 32, I've tried to do the same for the thousands of kids I've taught here."

And here's something else to add to the Wood legacy at ULS.

In 1933, Gordon Wood — Bob's father — won a singles championship at University School and was part of the team that won the first of 31 state tennis titles for the school.

In 1958 — 25 years later — Bob Wood and George Haggarty won a state doubles championship at ULS.

Exactly 25 years later — in 1983 — Bob Wood's son, Rob, and George Haggarty Jr. teamed up to win a state doubles title for the Knights.

"And my daughter, Kim, has a three-year old son who'll be a freshman in the year 2008," Bob Wood said with a smile. "He's going to have big-time pressure on him."

North boys split pair of MAC meets

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North's boys cross country team split its two Macomb Area Conference dual meets last week, despite the absence of No. 1 runner Chris Hirt, who was injured.

"Matt Mikula ran a nice race and was second overall," said coach Pat Wilson after the Norsemen beat L'Anse Creuse 23-34 and lost 25-30 to Anchor Bay.

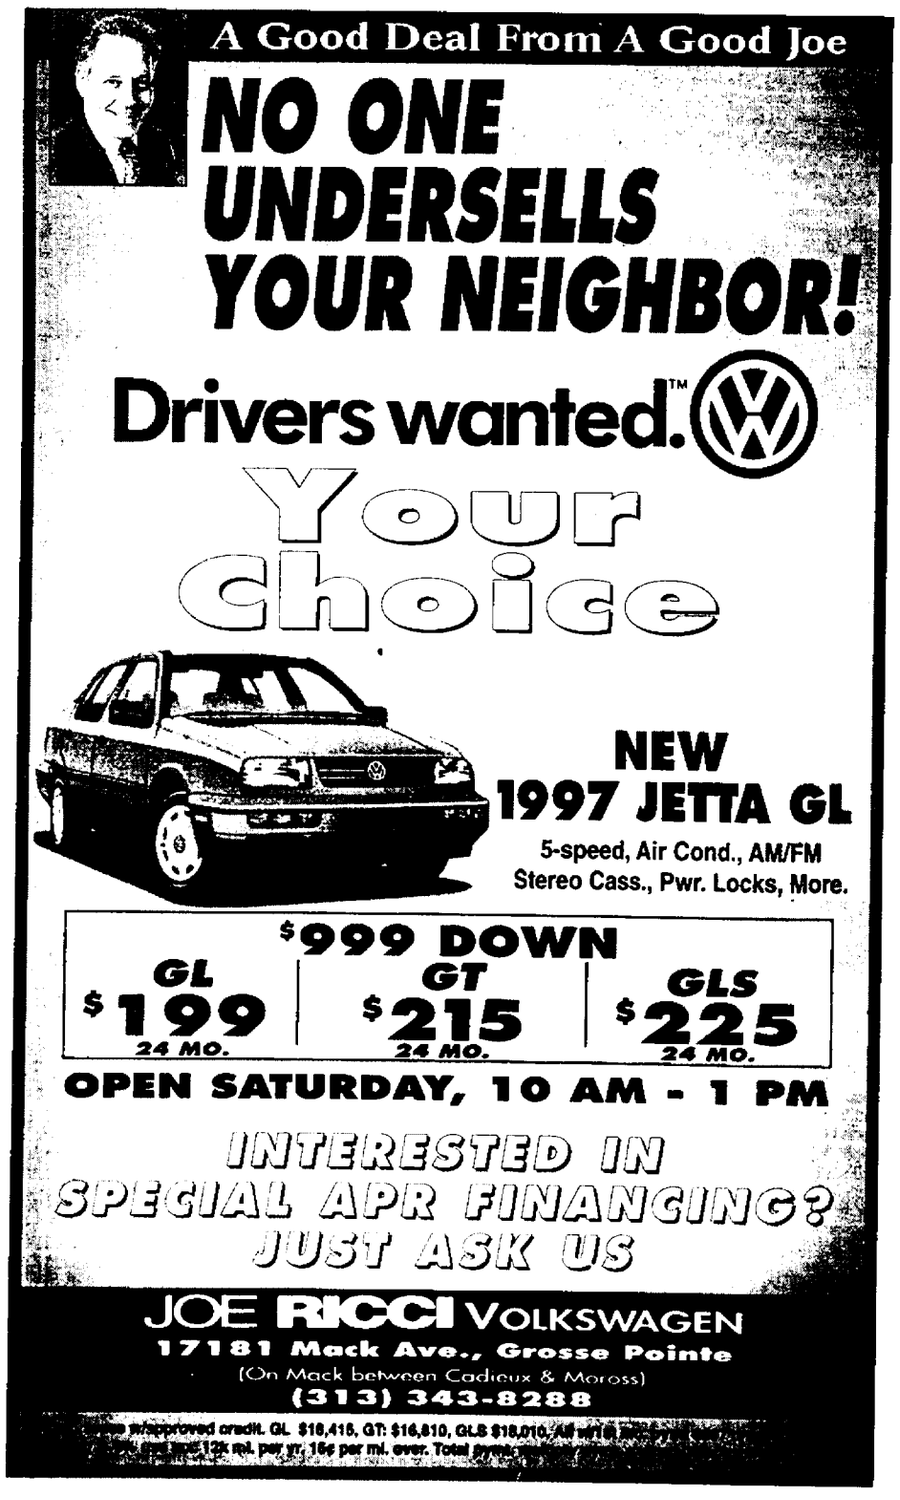

"It was a rainy day and the hill (on North's home course) was sloppy."

Mark Chasteen, Billy Farmer and Ted Huebner also turned in solid efforts for the Norsemen.

"Huebner is our senior captain and he's starting to come around," Wilson said. "He's going to keep getting better."

Farmer was one of four North runners to post personal bests in the double dual meet. The others were Drew DeWitt, Matt Atkinson and Jason Rozyki.

North, South don't have time to dwell on classic crosstown grid showdown

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

The winner of the annual football game between Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South usually has 10 months to enjoy it.

This year North, which beat the Blue Devils 21-14 in a well-played contest before a capacity crowd of more than 4,100 under the lights at the Norsemen's home field, had only two days to savor the Macomb Area Conference Blue Division victory.

Then it was back to work Monday to prepare for Friday's game at L'Anse Creuse North.

"It was a great win but now we have to turn our attention to L'Anse Creuse North," said coach Frank Sumbera. "We're going to watch the film of the South game once and that's it. I already spent all day (Sunday) watching L'Anse Creuse North films."

While the Norsemen have to put the victory out of their minds, South has to do the same with the defeat.

It was an emotional setback because the Blue Devils played well, but they have a tough opponent Friday night when they host Fraser.

"We had a practice Saturday and the kids seemed to have put Friday's game behind them," said South coach Mike McLeod. "You never know until you play the next game, but I think they'll be fine.

"They knew they played a good game against a good football team. It's a game that will be good for our confidence."

Friday's game between North and South was one of the best in the series.

"There was a lot of hitting on both sides," McLeod said after the game. "Both teams are going to be sore."

The game turned early in the fourth quarter when North linebacker Jerry Cardani intercepted a pass and returned it 28 yards to the South 23.

Six plays later, quarterback Brian Kasiborski scored from the three on a quarterback sneak and Gene Baratta added the last of his three extra points.

"That was a huge play because the momentum was on South's side," Sumbera said. "They had scored on a long drive to tie the game, then they stopped us three and out and they were driving again."

Cardani's interception was the result of something North's coaches noticed in the first half.

"South had two options on their wheel route — one to the sideline and the other to the inside," Sumbera said. "We had the outside covered pretty well, but the inside route looked open and we told our kids to be alert to it. When they went inside, Cardani was there."

South had the ball two more times — the second coming on Matt Moran's second interception of the game — but the Blue Devils failed to get a first down against North's defense.

On South's final play, Ryan Stevenson and Peter Pone combined for a seven-yard sack of quarterback Mike Kaselitz.

"They had just gone into the game because we wanted fresh legs for the pass rush," Sumbera said.

South opened the scoring early in the second quarter on a five-yard run up the middle by Josh Lorence and Andrew Hendrie kicked the first of his two extra points.

On the first play of the 67-yard drive, Kaselitz hit Pat Howe for a 41-yard gain to the North 16. After a pair of losses on running plays, Kaselitz passed 18 yards to Eric Dunlap and Lorence scored on the next play.

North came right back and marched 69 yards in four plays to tie the game. The big gainer was a 51-yard run by Nick Aubrey.

Paul Valencia gained 11 yards on the next play and Aubrey capped the drive with a seven-yard run.

The Norsemen stopped South on its next series of downs and took over on their own 46. Aubrey picked up 19 yards on the first play of the drive and Valencia got the final seven yards to give North a 14-7 advantage with 2:13 left in the first half.

South moved from its own 29 to the North 30 late in the half, but the drive stalled when Jeff Hermann made an interception in the end zone.

The Blue Devils scored the tying touchdown on a four-yard pass from Kaselitz to Dunlap with 1:19 left in the third quarter.

It capped a 15-play, 77-yard drive that consumed nearly 6 1/2 minutes. Key plays were passes of 20, 17 and 17 yards from Kaselitz to Dunlap. Dunlap caught eight passes for 102 yards.

North got another strong performance from the offensive line.

"We got a lot of yards behind Stevenson, Cardani and our center John Trupiano," Sumbera said. "Trupiano had to block No. 51 (South's 6-foot-3, 300-pound James Feagin)."

Sumbera was also pleased with the performance of the defense.

"They were all very active," he said. "We had a lot of different people in on the tackles. Mike Schornak, who missed the opener with an injury, did a nice job."

Chad Cooper made 11 tackles, one more than Cardani. Gary Bordato and Rick Pesta each had nine and Schornak made seven stops.

"We knew it would be a tough game and South would be fired up," Sumbera said. "That's the best team he (McLeod) has had at South."

There were several fine performances by the Blue Devils.

"Matt Van Deweghe and Dave Bilbrey had outstanding games, Moran does a great job in the secondary," McLeod said.

"We played much better in the second half. We got a good rush from Adam Maloof and Marty Harms. Pat Howe played a good defensive game, too. He came up on our safety coverage and made a ton of tackles. And Ben Burns had a good second half."

McLeod also praised his special teams.

"I think we won that part of the game," he said. "Aubrey wasn't able to get away on returns like he usually does."

Mustangs '85 are second

The Pointe Girls Soccer Association Mustangs '85 travel team finished second in the under-13 division at the Troy Soccer City Classic Tournament.

The Mustangs played well but dropped the championship game 2-0 to United Magic.

Meghan Brennan played well in goal throughout the tournament as Grosse Pointe posted a 4-1-1 record.

Laura Fisher scored the only goal of the game as the Mustangs opened the tournament with a 1-0 victory over London, Ontario.

Beth Sanders and Mandi Marsh were outstanding on offense, while Beth Mumaw and Hillary Miller were the top defensive players.

The Mustangs then blanked the Troy Her-Ricanes 2-0 on goals by Marsh and Betsy D'Arcy. Fisher and Suzanne McGoey collected assists.

Nina Carlisi had a good offensive game, while Molly Zeller and Stephanie Rose were standouts on defense.

Sanders had the Mustangs' only goal in a 1-1 tie with United Magic. Amanda Marinello and McGoey were the top offensive players, while Miller and Alex Marshall sparked the defense.

Grosse Pointe advanced to the semifinals with a 3-0 victory over the Bloomfield Burners. Sanders had a goal and an assist. McGoey and Marsh also scored, while Fisher had an assist.

Mikula was the only Norseman to earn a medal in the Algonac Muskrat Invitational, but he wasn't the only one to turn in a strong performance.

"Scott Serilla, a sophomore, was our No. 2 runner and he beat his previous best time by 40-plus seconds," Wilson said.

Huebner, Chasteen and Brad Hobart were the next three North runners to cross the finish line.

"We had good first races by three of our freshmen — Woody Floyd, Pat Kenny and John Lucido," Wilson said.

Posting personal bests along with Serilla were Atkinson, Jim Bogen and Jim Kelly.

"If the group continues to improve, we'll be a pretty solid team," the coach said. "They're all pretty equal so they'll make a nice pack."

Knights tend to business against Metro Conference football foe

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Gary Hills doesn't know if it's his University Ligget School football team's businesslike approach or its lack of experience in winning road games, but the bus ride home from Lutheran Westland last Saturday afternoon was a subdued one.

"I could talk to my coaches without raising my voice," Hills said after the Knights improved their record to 2-0 in the Metro Conference with a 40-8 thumping of the Warriors.

"If you didn't know the score, I don't think you'd know if we won or lost. But these are uncharted waters for these kids. Nobody knows how long it's been since they won three games in a row or won twice on the road in one season."

If it's a businesslike approach to the game, Hills isn't concerned.

"It's tough to get up to a fever pitch emotionally for more than three or four games a year, so you have to win the others by just tending to business," Hills said. "That's what we did against Westland."

And it started early.

On the second play from scrimmage, the Knights got an 82-yard touchdown pass from A.J. Stachecki to Brian Bruenton.

"A.J. checked off at the line," Hills said. "He noticed the defensive back was playing 10 yards off Brian so he made a quick pass to him and Brian just outran everybody."

ULS scored again in the first quarter on a 54-yard run off tackle by Kevin Espy. John Riddle added the first of his four extra points.

The Knights got two more touchdowns in the second quarter.

Espy took a 34-yard screen pass from Stachecki to the Westland four. On the next play,the senior tailback took the ball into the end zone.

ULS made it 26-0 with about 50 seconds left in the first half on a 48-yard pass from Stachecki to Espy. He was put in the clear on a good block by Bruenton.

The touchdown was something of an accident.

"It was a fourth-down play," Hills said. "Instead of risking a mistake on a punt, I decided to run a play and if we didn't make it we'd turn the ball over at midfield instead of deep in our territory. We tried a back pass and Kevin took it all the way."

ULS scored in the third quarter on an eight-yard pass from Stachecki to Bruenton. Westland scored on a 40-yard pass play in the fourth quarter.

The Knights closed out the scoring on a 16-yard run by fullback Jason Cooper.

"He looked like Earl Campbell," Hills said, comparing Cooper to the former Heisman Trophy winner. "He put a move on a couple of tacklers and dragged two or three kids into the end zone with him."

Espy carried 13 times for 132 yards and had two receptions for 49 yards. Cooper had 48 yards on eight carries.

Stachecki completed six of eight passes for 139 yards and three touchdowns. Three of the completions were to Bruenton for 103 yards.

Hills praised the offensive line play of Jason Capen, C.R. Moultry, Billy Tringale, Anthony Legree and Renard Morey-Greer.

"The guards (Legree and Morey-Greer) made some great trap blocks," Hills said.

The defense also had an outstanding game.

"We held them to 20 yards rushing and 46 passing and 40 of those passing yards came on that one play," Hills said. "We had 10 stops for losses and four quarterback sacks. It was a classic defensive effort. Everybody played well."

Morey-Greer made 12 tackles from his linebacker position, while defensive tackle Shaun Dillon had four tackles and a sack.

Defensive end Kyle Denham had two outstanding plays on punt coverage. The other linebackers — Jim Wood, Jeff Mehr and Justin Macksoud — had strong games, along with defensive backs Scott Simpson, Ryan Lewis and Riddle.

"John is more than just a kicker," Hills said. "He's turning into a good football player."

ULS will play one of its most important games in a long time Friday when the Knights host Lutheran North.

Both teams have won their first two Metro Conference games.

"This is one of those games we don't have to worry about getting the kids up for," Hills said.

ULS does well in state final rematch

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

University Liggett School's soccer team suffered its first loss at the Alpena Tournament last weekend, but it wasn't a defeat that has coach David Backhurst worried.

"I'm not too disappointed," Backhurst said after the Knights lost to Elk Rapids 2-0 in the semifinal round of the tournament.

The game was a rematch of last year's Class C-D state championship contest which was won by ULS.

"They only lost one senior from last year's team and we lost several seniors," Backhurst said. "Last year we lost 4-0 to them early in the season. This was a good benchmark to see how we stand right now.

"Right now, Elk Rapids is the best team in the state in Division IV."

ULS came back to beat Alpena 3-0 in the consolation game.

Elk Rapids scored both of its goals in the first half. The Elks opened the scoring with about 25 minutes left in the first half when they scored on a penalty kick after ULS was called for a handball in the penalty area.

About 10 minutes later, Elk Rapids capitalized on a rare defensive mistake by the Knights and made it 2-0.

"We thought there was going to be an offside call and stopped playing," Backhurst said. "The call wasn't made and they got a goal.

"I wondered how we'd respond to being down 2-0 at the half, but I thought we played a strong second half. Elk Rapids didn't have any good chances the rest of the way."

ULS got a surprise opponent in the consolation game when it met Alpena, which lost its semifinal game to Linden in overtime.

"We expected Alpena to win and they were probably the better team," Backhurst said. "Once again, I didn't know how we'd respond after losing, but we came out flying in Saturday's game."

The contest was only three minutes when ULS opened the scoring. Brad Cenko took a shot that the goalkeeper couldn't handle despite a diving attempt. The rebound came to Mark Gotfredson, who scored.

ULS outplayed the Wildcats the rest of the first half, but the Knights didn't score again until Gotfredson was pulled down inside the 18-yard line about 15 minutes into the second half.

Cenko took the penalty kick and scored on a shot off the goalie's hands.

"It was like a major luxury for us to be ahead by two goals," Backhurst said with a laugh.

And the Knights made it 3-0 with 11 minutes left when Nima Bararsani scored from a goalmouth scramble. Gotfredson picked up the assist.

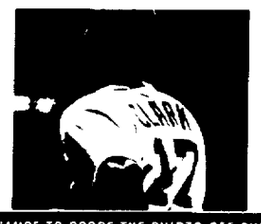

ULS outshot Alpena 24-11 as it improved to 4-1-1 overall.

"We felt it was a very successful tournament," Backhurst said. "Since Elk Rapids beat Linden 6-0 in the championship game, we feel we were the second-best team there."

Earlier, ULS and Ann Arbor Greenhills played a scoreless tie in a non-league game.

"Once again our defense showed its true colors," Backhurst said. "Dan Ferrin was outstanding in goal and Jonathon Kish, Matt Nowak, Mace McDonald and Eli Binns-Cooley did a great job on defense."

ULS has allowed only two goals in six games and the Knights have posted six shutouts.

Grosse Pointe South's Dinah Zebot is guarded closely by a Detroit Country Day player during the Blue Devils' opening girls basketball game.

Justice prevails for South hoops squad

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Justice finally prevailed for Grosse Pointe South's girls basketball team.

Two years ago the Blue Devils lost a triple-overtime game to Detroit Dominican. Last year, South rallied from a 17-point halftime deficit, but still lost by four points.

This year it was a different story. Thanks to the late-game heroics of sophomore Beth Howson and senior Caitlin Shapiro, the Blue Devils beat the Ravens 52-51 in overtime.

"This was especially sweet because we've had such tough games with them the last three years — and this is probably the swan song for their school," said South coach Peggy Van Eckoute.

Dominican was scheduled to close after last school year but was kept open through the efforts of several parents.

Dominican broke a 19-19 halftime deadlock by scoring the first eight points of the second half. The Ravens never trailed again until Howson hit the game-winning 15-foot jump shot as time expired in overtime.

"We could have died twice tonight, but the kids really wanted to win," Van Eckoute said.

And the South players believed that they could beat the Ravens.

"In our last timeout, Caitlin said 'we can do it,'" Van Eckoute said.

That took some confidence because there was one second remaining in overtime when Shapiro took the ball out of bounds at midcourt. She passed to Howson, who quickly turned and hit the winning basket.

"Caitlin knew who the two shooters were and when she saw the first one covered, she found the second," Van Eckoute said. "And Beth did a great job of turning around and shooting as soon as she got the ball."

Shapiro also hit one of the most important baskets of the game when she made a three-pointer with 10.4 seconds left to cut Dominican's lead to 51-50.

And she did an excellent job on defense against Dominican's Miss Basketball candidate, Raina Goodlow. Goodlow, who recently announced she'll attend Michigan on a basketball scholarship, led all scorers with 16 points, but had very few easy baskets.

"We knew we had to play tough defense against 11 (point guard Letisha Martin) and 32 (Goodlow)," Van Eckoute said. "But we knew we had a good opportunity to beat them after watching them play (Grosse Pointe) North on Tuesday."

"We knew where their shots were coming from," added co-coach Jan Stephan.

The final minute of regulation was filled with excitement.

Dominican led 43-37 with exactly a minute remaining after a jump shot by Goodlow.

But Meghan McGahey brought South within four on a putback and Howson hit a short jumper with 11 seconds to go to make it 43-41.

South fouled Martin and she missed the free throw. Shapiro then tied up a Raven player on the rebound and the Blue Devils got the ball back with 6.3 seconds to go.

Scarlett O'Keefe fed Howson for a layup and she was fouled. Dominican called a timeout to make her think about the free throws, but Howson, who missed the second half of last season with a broken ankle, stepped to the line and calmly sank both shots.

Martin took a shot from just inside midcourt as time expired but the ball hit the rim and bounced away.

Goodlow and Martin hit the first two baskets in overtime to give Dominican a four-point lead. Then the teams traded baskets until Howson's game winner.

Howson led a balanced South scoring attack with 12 points. O'Keefe and McGahey added 10 apiece and Shapiro scored nine.

Melissa Brown had eight assists, while Shapiro added four assists and four steals. McGahey pulled down nine rebounds for South, one more than Dinah Zebot.

South lost its non-league opener at Detroit Country Day 61-36, but the Blue Devils gave a better effort than the final score might indicate.

"We weren't disappointed with the way we played," Van Eckoute said. "We played well defensively and worked the offense like we wanted."

McGahey led South with eight points and Zebot and Sarah Kraft added seven apiece.

"I just wish we could always play with the fire and enthusiasm we had against Country Day and Dominican," Stephan said.

"Maybe this year we will. We have so much competition for playing time and so many good players, that if someone isn't playing well, someone else is ready to step in."

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North's girls cross country team get a constant reminder of their ultimate goal for the season every time they look at the showcase at the school.

"I put a picture of the Michigan Speedway in the showcase," said coach Scott Cooper. "It's just something to motivate them and remind them of their goal for the season."

That goal is to qualify as a team for the state cross country meet which is held at the race course in the Irish Hills near Jackson.

And so far, the Norsemen seem to be on the way to reaching that goal.

Last week, they won their first two Macomb Area Conference White Division meets, beating L'Anse Creuse 20-39 and downing Anchor Bay 20-43.

Erin Lenahan led the way as usual for North and finished third overall.

She was followed across the finish line by teammates Andrea Veryser, Julie Mielke, Tracy Secord and Emily Borushko.

Cooper was especially happy with the efforts of Veryser and Mielke.

"We tried to convince Andrea that she could run with Erin and she stayed with her for most of the way," Cooper said. "We're trying to convince more of the girls that they can stay with Erin.

"And Julie looks like she's gaining confidence after struggling a little bit earlier."

Cooper was also pleased with the way his team ran as a group.

"The top five were within 52 seconds of each other and two through five were only seven seconds apart," he said.

"I've been real impressed with the girls. They're almost all running one or two minutes faster than last year."

South wins twice

After its successful start in the invitational season — a first-place at Algonac — Grosse Pointe South's girls cross country team has also begun the dual meet season in fine fashion.

South defeated Ford II 21-38 and Warren-Mott 15-48 in a Macomb Area Conference double dual meet at Dodge Park in Sterling Heights.

Ford, which finished 10th in the state last year, is one of three huge hurdles the Blue Devils have to overcome to win the MAC Red Division championship.

The next one was Tuesday when South met defending state Class A champion Stevenson.

Jonnie Vasse again led from start to finish with a season-best time of 19:17.

The only other runner to break 20 minutes was South sophomore Beth Auty, who covered the five-kilometer course in 19:58.

Blue Devils teammates Heidi Crowley, Kristin Ritter and Sara Crowe took fifth through seventh place, respectively, in the 91-runner field.

Rounding out South's top 10 were Erica Hill, ninth; Kristin Nickel, 12th; Elizabeth Osburn, 13th; Erin Smialek, 16th; and Christina Fiedler, 24th.

Excellent performances also came from Marie Maurer, Martha Snyder, Kim Maniaci, Kate Finkenstaedt and Katy Day.

Double-duty runner shines for Blue Devils

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

It's a shame Justin Bosley can't devote all his time to cross country.

"He's an outstanding rower with Olympic aspirations and he uses cross country as cross training," said Grosse Pointe South coach Tom Wise. "But he's developed into an excellent runner."

Bosley ran away from the competition in the junior varsity race at last weekend's De La Salle Invitational.

"He asked me to pull him out of the varsity race because he thought he'd be too tired to run his best," Wise said. "I probably should have left him in the varsity because he would have been our third runner.

"He's 6-3 and 185 pounds and is much stronger than when he came out two years ago. Unfortunately, he has regattas on the weekends of the league and regional meets, but he'll be with us if we qualify for the state."

Even without Bosley, South took fifth place overall in the meet on the tough course at Stony Creek Metropark.

Andrew Petersen was seventh in 17:50 and Parker Roth finished 16. Both earned medals.

South took six medals in the junior varsity race. Following Bosley acros the line were teammates Garrett Heffner, third; Ben Visger, 12th; Nick Carter, 13th; Bill Crawford, 14th; and Ed Keogh, 15th.

"It was Carter's first race ever," Wise said.

South started the week with a pair of Macomb Area Conference Red Division victories.

The Blue Devils beat Warren-Mott 20-43 and downed Ford II 24-34.

Petersen led the way, followed by Jeff Pilley, Roth, Brian Steele, Fred Pope, Mike Alvin, Bosley and Patrick Ryan.

Steele had an outstanding race, according to Wise.

Two freshmen — Nick Galac and Matt Nickel — also had good runs in the double dual meet.

Up-tempo style suits Knights just fine

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

When Plan A doesn't work, it's time to try Plan B.

That's what new coach John Bandos has done with the University Liggett School girls basketball team.

"We're not a very big team — most of the girls are 5-4 or 5-5 — so we're going to have to scratch and claw for our points," he said.

"We can't count on getting the scoring from a half-court offense so we've gone to an up-tempo game this year. So far it's been working pretty well."

The Knights have split their two Metro Conference games.

In the latest, they came from behind in the fourth quarter to beat Lutheran Westland 39-34.

ULS outscored the Warriors 13-2 in the final quarter as Westland had all sorts of trouble hitting its free throws.

The Warriors made only one of 13 attempts from the line while they were trying to put the game away.

"We were able to foul them and when they missed the free throws we capitalized on it," Bandos said.

Karah Knope led ULS with 11 points and she made six of eight free throws.

Keli Bonner added eight points and Victoria Hills pulled down seven rebounds.

ULS opened the league season with a 48-36 loss to Cranbrook Kingswood.

"This was a game where we had trouble from the line," Bandos said. "We made only five of 21 free throws. Those 16 points were the difference."

Once again, ULS made a strong fourth-quarter comeback, outscoring the Cranes 23-14, but this time it wasn't enough to make up the 34-13 deficit after three quarters.

"That was the first game where we've had an all-out press for four quarters, but it didn't seem to affect us at all," Bandos said.

Knope led the Knights with 16 points and Holly Morrison added seven, including a pair of three-point baskets.

Erica Brammer triggered the fourth-quarter comeback with three steals.

Hills collected 11 rebounds and five points.

ULS opened the season with a pair of non-league losses.

South Lake beat the Knights 40-26, but it was a six-point game after three quarters.

"They use a 2-2-1 trap press and that gave us some problems," Bandos said. "We had 24 turnovers."

Bonner led ULS with eight points. Meki Bracken grabbed four rebounds.

The Knights followed that with a 51-33 loss to Academy of Sacred Heart.

Knope had 17 points and Hills scored five. ULS had another fourth-quarter comeback that fell short.

"Third quarters have been our downfall," Bandos said. "In our last three games we've scored three, two and one point in the third quarter. I don't know if they lose concentration or what. Last game, we didn't even leave the court at halftime. I thought maybe if they looked at it during the intermission it would help, but it didn't."

To co-sign a loan or not?

A close friend or relative asks you to co-sign a loan for their new car, boat, or mortgage. Should you agree to co-sign the loan? Only if you are ready to take over the payments, says Cheryl Krysiak of the Michigan State University Extension Service.

If you co-sign a loan you have a legal commitment to repay that loan if your friend or relative cannot.

Studies show that 75 percent of co-signers are asked to repay the loans. Before you agree to accept responsibility, consider the following questions:

- Can you really afford to repay the loan?
- What are the chances that you'll be asked to repay the loan?
- How much money can you lose?
- Are you and your family willing to lower your standard of living to pay off someone else's loan?

If you agree to co-sign a loan read the fine print in the contract to see if you will have to pay fees and late charges, as well as court costs and attorney fees, in addition to the loan payment itself if the borrower defaults.

Also ask the lender to notify you immediately if the borrower misses a payment.

Get copies of all documents involved in the transaction and get all agreements in writing. A written agreement between you and your close friend or relative may reduce your potential loss. Ask for security and a repayment plan in case of default. Such an agreement may encourage the borrower to meet his or her loan obligations, rather than lose their furniture, car, or house.

Basement remodeling workshop

Grosse Pointe Community Education in cooperation with Oakland Builders Institute will offer a 9-hour Basement Remodeling Workshop on Mondays and Wednesday, Sept. 22 - 29, from 6:30 - 9:30 p.m.

The workshop will be held at Barnes school, 20090 Morningside, Grosse Pointe Woods.

The seminar costs $75, and includes a planning manual. The textbook is $10.

Preregistration with payment is required by Thursday, Sept. 18, to Grosse Pointe Community Education. For more information, call (313) 343-2178.

Tips on preparing your heating units for fall and winter

An annual safety and energy check should be performed on all heating units over 10 years old. Many companies offer fall specials, such as ours, which costs $66.50.

It is good to have the furnace checked to ensure that belts, filters and thermostats are all in good condition. The primary function of a proper furnace check is to ensure the safety of your family. A thorough furnace safety and energy check is necessary to confirm that the heat exchanger — or firepot, as it is also referred to — is not leaking the products of combustion into your home.

Cracks or holes in a heat exchanger will allow the products of combustion to pass into the duct work and be distributed throughout the building.

Boilers with leaking seals can leak carbon monoxide. Under normal circumstances, boilers can be repaired. These conditions can be extremely dangerous and should be remedied immediately.

Should your furnace show signs of leakage during the inspection, ask the technician to show you the cracks or holes. If they can't show you the cracks, ask for a second opinion from that company, another company or from your gas utility.

If a bad heat exchanger is definitely confirmed, you have several options. Simply doing nothing is not an option. The heat exchanger or the furnace must be replaced — no matter how small the hole or crack is. Furnace heat exchanger warranties range from 1 year to a lifetime. Most are in the 10-20 year range. If yours is under 10 years old the heat exchanger is most likely still covered under the warranty. In this case your only expense would be a labor charge. If the heat exchanger is out of warranty the best and most "bang for the buck" solution is to replace the entire furnace.

During the safety check we also check the operation of the safety controls which prevent fire explosions and damage to the furnace and adjust the burners to assure their operating efficiency. The technician will also clean out and turn on the humidifier, check the belt and filter and replace them if necessary. He will also check on the water heater thermocouple, burners and venting.

Fall is also a good time to have your ducts cleaned and sanitized. This will help to relieve breathing and dust problems within your home. The latest technology uses a H.E.P.A. filtering system, not the old-fashioned bag trucks, which will be discussed in a future article. For more information, call Flame Furnace Co., (810) 582-1700.

Join National Arbor Day Foundation during September and receive 10 free trees

Ten free trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during September.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit Foundation's "Trees for America" campaign.

The 10 trees are the American redbud, white pine, sugar maple, white flowering dogwood, pin oak, red maple, birch, silver maple, red oak and Colorado blue spruce.

"These trees were selected to provide benefits every season of the year: lovely spring flowers, cool summer shade, spectacular autumn colors, winter berries and nesting sites for songbirds," says John Rosenow, the foundation's president.

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between Oct. 1 and Dec. 10, with enclosed planting instructions. The 6 to 12-inch trees are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to the Foundation's colorful bimonthly publication, "Arbor Day," a membership card and "The Tree Book."

To become a member of the foundation and to receive the free trees, send a $10 membership contribution to Ten Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, NE 68410, by Sept. 30.

Eliminating the pesky mole

One of the real banes of landscape care for professional and homeowner alike is the lowly mole. For such a little animal, it gets more than its share of attention because of the great amount of damage one can do to a lawn. Unfortunately, control measures are limited and marginally effective.

At some point in the hazy past, someone determined that moles eat grubs. Which is a true statement. However, moles eat a lot more than just grubs. Yet, today it seems that whenever someone sees a mole burrowing through their lawn, they immediately want to reach for a grub control insecticide. This is not a good thing.

While most homeowners certainly do not want to see grubs infest their lawn, making the leap from moles to grubs is a mistake. This is because the insecticides that are used to control grubs will also kill many other insects found in the soil beneath a stand of turfgrass.

In addition, earthworms and other microbial organisms are also reduced with the use of insecticides. These organisms all play a very important and beneficial role in maintaining the health of a lawn and landscape.

When insecticides are applied improperly or incorrectly, problem pests may actually increase in activity-causing more damage to the landscape than had the bug control not been applied at all. And the moles will still be there, tunneling through the lawn.

"Nobody likes to see moles causing damage to a lawn," says Larry Wright, president of the Metropolitan Detroit Landscape Association (MDLA), "but making an ill-advised application of a grub control insecticide is not going to help anything."

Before an application of an insecticide is made, it is critical that an insect problem be diagnosed correctly. If moles are the problem, then use a "mole-icide," not an insecticide. When moles are detected in a lawn, trapping or the use of repellents are the best method of removing the underground pest.

The MDLA serves the professional lawn and landscape construction and maintenance industry in and around the metropolitan Detroit area. For more information, call (248) 646-4992, or at www.landscape.org: "A Beautiful Landscape Starts Here."

Antiques

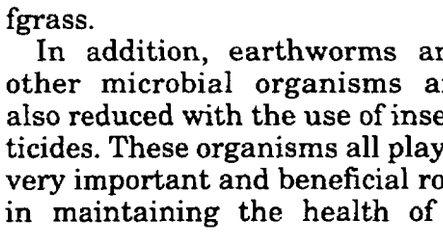

Q. Why is it called "costume jewelry?"

A. It is said that the name came from a rehearsal of the Ziegfeld Follies. Flo Ziegfeld used jewelry designed by William Hobe, who made realistic jewelry for use in the movies.

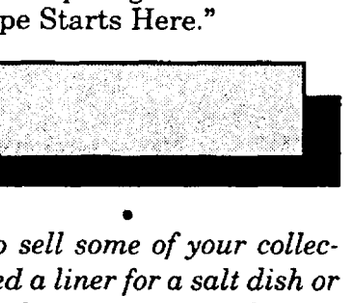

At one dress rehearsal, the costumes were ready but the jewelry was missing. "Where is the jewelry for my costumes?" Ziegfeld asked, and the term soon became "costume jewelry."

Home Tips

GOT A MATCH? — When buying dining-room drapes, I buy an additional pair to re-cover the seats of my dining-room chairs. No more fabric hunting for the seat cushions and I have a perfect match! Belinda M., Batesville, Ark.

EASY FIND — I've solved the problem in our home of the lost remote control.

It was usually kept on the arm of an easy chair. It was forever falling to the floor and getting placed somewhere else.

I took a headband, the kind that is plastic inside, put some double-sided sticky fabric tape on the band and on the back of the remote and put this over the arm of the chair.

Now it stays! Linda K., New Braunfels, Texas

Calories, Kitchens, Colors and You

Color speaks without saying a word

By Virginia Carr
Special Writer

Do blue M&M's make you drowsy? Need a little perking up? Try a red or yellow. Are you battling the bulge? Color can be your ally. All those that have had your colors "done" raise your hand. You know that wearing certain colors can enhance our appearance, but did you know the power of color goes beyond beautiful. Certain hues can actually help reduce stress, lift your spirits or even help you loose weight.

Is color so powerful that it can control us? Yes and many times we don't even know it. Colors affect us both physically and mentally on a daily basis. Like music, color affects emotions deep inside us. Some colors can take us back to the past, while others color our dreams for the future. Believe it or not this can all be achieved by turning to the science of color.

According to the late Carlton Wagner, founder of the Chicago Wagner Institute For Color Research in 1972, "Response to color is both inherited and learned and varies according to such factors as sex, age, education, ethnic and cultural backgrounds. Past experiences affect our likes and dislikes in color as do our peer groups, the climate in which we live and regional attitudes."

Color is hot! It's the "in" thing to know about, whether redecorating or deciding on what to wear. The Wagner Institute For Color Research consults with several industries about to marketing their products from packaging detergents to home building products. To name a few, the auto industry, paint manufacturers, and hotel chains select colors that sell!

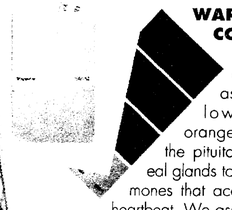

Research shows that 60 percent of every purchase we make is predicated by color. Just stop and think about it for a moment.

Scientists at the University of Amsterdam found that many people think that a particular color pill has a particular effect. Anton de Craen studied several color palettes for pills. By face value the study showed that red, yellow and orange colored medications were perceived as stimulants. The blue and green products worked better to trigger a tranquilizing effect. A blue placebo seemed to make medical students drowsier than a pink sugar pill. And blue sleeping pills beat out the orange ones for a better nights rest.

A recent article in Forbes magazine concurs with these findings. In fact, some drug companies take this research into account when manufacturing their products. "In the Netherlands, sedatives are more often green, blue and purple," the article said, "while antidepressants are usually hues of red. But in the United States, top-selling antidepressant, Prozac, is miscolored a soporific green and the tranquilizer Xanax, which comes appropriately in blissed-out blue, is also sold in perky pink."

WARM COLORS

Bright hot colors, such as reds, yellows and oranges stimulate the pituitary and pineal glands to secrete hormones that accelerate our heartbeat. We associate them with the sun and things that are hot.

Believe it or not, red can elevate blood pressure, increase respiration and raise body temperature. In a recent British study, arthritis patients reported feeling fewer aches after spending time in a red room. Generally, warm colors can lift our spirits. So if you are feeling "blue," try wearing something red.

COOL COLORS

Cool colors, on the other hand, such as blue, green and purple can reduce stress and anxiety.

"Blue triggers the brain to release hormones that relax the body," says Sid Kirchheimer, author of "The Doctors' Book Of Home Remedies."

Studies show that blue walls can help calm hyperactive children. By nature we associate blue with a calm sunny sky. Just reading this green type can slow down your heart rate. So when decorating, to create a relaxing atmosphere or cool down a room facing south or west, try using cool colors.

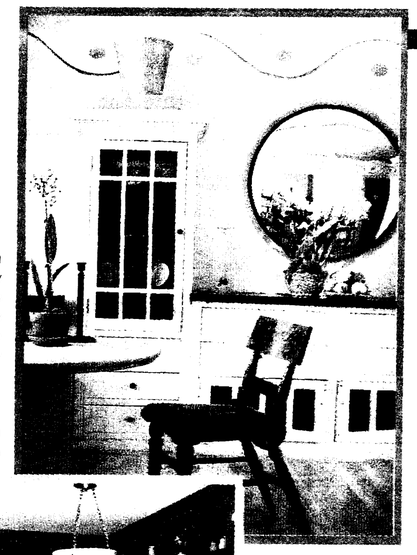

For warmer looking decor, select any of the warm hues. Rooms facing north without much light would do well in warm colors.

COLOR AND FOOD

Color can also be an indicator of nutrition in fruits and vegetables. Brian Morgan, Ph.D., at the Institute of Human Nutrition at Columbia University says, "In general, deeper colors mean higher nutrition. For example, pink grapefruit contains 30 times as much vitamin A as white grapefruit. Romaine lettuce has far more calcium, iron, and vitamins A and C than paler iceberg lettuce. And brown bread or rice is more nutritious than white, containing more thiamine."

Not only is color significant in regard to nutrition but also in its presentation when served. This reminds me of a story about Alfred Hitchcock. We all know about his achievements for directing films, but did you know he was quite a practical joker? The story is that he and his wife planned a fabulous dinner party with a twist on color for a few close friends.

As the guests arrived they were seated in the dining room to await a delicious meal. It was presented beautifully except for one thing — everything on each plate had been tinted blue: the fish, the potatoes, the vegetables and even the bread and wine. Needless to say, visually it was not at all appealing.

CALORIES AND KITCHENS

Except for blueberries, blue is not a color we associate with fresh food. Which brings up another point — kitchen colors and calories. The rules of visual space and color remain the same for every room. Light colors expand while dark ones decrease space visually. Contrasting dark cabinets against a light wall also distracts and makes a room look smaller. As far as color is concerned, warm colors could increase your appetite.

If you are watching your weight and would like to use something that has no side effects, try color. It costs nothing. Since blue has a tranquilizing effect on us, try using it in decorating your eating space. It may relax you enough to eat slower and probably eat less.

Start with blue placemats or a tablecloth and dishes. Then exchange the white light bulbs in your kitchen fixture to blue ones. And if you are plagued by snacking or if you easily succumb to raiding the refrigerator at midnight, also change that bulb to a blue one. If all of this sounds a little ridiculous and think it can't work, try tinting your pasta or mashed potatoes with blue food coloring and serve it to your family. Then let us know what happened. Smile!

Tune into color. It speaks without saying a word. It is powerful and tricky. Make it work for you instead of work you over.

We are looking for people that have collections of "stuff." Send us a picture of your treasures or contact us, we'd like you to be a part of our story on collections.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"SELLERS PAY FOR RESULTS!"

When you buy many goods or services, you usually pay without always getting the desired results. Sometimes you may even go back to the company in order to have your money refunded for unsatisfactory service.

This is usually not the case when hiring a Realtor to market your property. Most Realtors are paid only when you have received results that are acceptable to you. They receive a percentage of the eventual sale price that is paid by the buyer. If an offer is not submitted with a price and terms that are suitable to you, the Realtor receives no compensation. Although Realtors are not paid until a sale is made, they do take on various expenses:

ADVERTISING
Depending upon the type of property and media options available, Realtors will assume the responsibility for promoting your house to the buying public. This can be done in various ways. One of the most common vehicles is advertising in the appropriate newspaper. Other tools include for sale signs, open house signs and descriptive flyers which are distributed at open houses.

MULTIPLE-LISTING SERVICES
Most Realtors subscribe to multiple listing organizations. These groups allow members to share information about a listing with all other member firms. Originally done by printing photos and mailing them to each member company, this information is now provided by computers that transmit over telephone lines.

OTHER EXPENSES
The greatest expense is the amount of personal time and effort dedicated to the sale of a certain property. Work is begun prior to the first face-to-face meeting between owner and Realtor. It continues on through the marketing period, negotiation of sale, and attention to many details after the acceptance of the offer and eventual closing.

Fall Home Improvement Guide

Grosse Pointe News & Connection

SEPTEMBER 18, 1997

Choose garden windows, bays or bows to expand your options – and your space

When today's homeowners add up all the things that windows can add to their homes, a growing number of them are finding that they want not only light, style and value, but they want something more — more space.

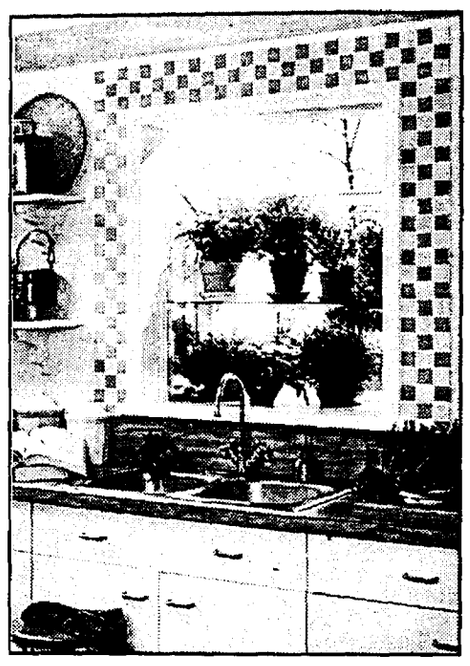

Garden, bay and bow windows do it all. They add light with a panorama of glass that lets the sun play in a home from different angles throughout the day. They add style by creating architectural interest outside and bringing outdoor beauty inside. Then, they give more space by extending the room — making it look and feel bigger, because it is bigger. Best of all, vinyl garden, bay and bow windows deliver value by creating expansiveness without the expensiveness of a major remodeling project.

Much of the credit for making garden windows, bays and bows affordable for more homes goes to the advances in materials and engineering that make today's vinyl windows so easy to maintain and so energy-efficient. Every one of CertainTeed Corporation's extensive line of garden, bay and bow windows, for example, uses rugged, fusion-welded vinyl construction and precision hardware to ensure years of trouble-free performance — without scraping, puttying or painting — and their good looks stay fresh with just soap and water.

These windows also feature honeycomb frames and sashes that insulate with built-in air spaces, head and seat boards that are insulated with a foam core, and operating sashes that seal with double weather stripping to help save money on heating and cooling year-round. In fact, with the addition of CertainTeed's proprietary Thermaflect® Low "E" high-performance glazing system, they offer one of the highest insulation values of any double-pane system available today. Thermaflect is standard in the company's garden windows.

When you choose a CertainTeed garden window, you can bring the lush, green beauty of your favorite plants into your home year-round. Plants love moisture, but ordinary window materials, like wood and metal, don't. CertainTeed's reinforced vinyl frame and optional tempered-glass shelving system deliver years of maintenance-free performance without rotting, corroding, flaking or chipping.

Plants like fresh air, but they don't like insects. So, CertainTeed's garden windows have casementlike side panels that open for ventilation, plus screens to keep marauding bugs out.

Because Thermaflect doesn't block beneficial blue and red radiation the way tinted glass does, your plants stay cooler in summer and warmer in winter. In fact, they will enjoy ideal growing conditions in every season, as CertainTeed garden windows meet all AAMA standards for air, water and structural strength and deliver a greenhouse rating of GH-R-50.

Whatever your style of home, whatever your decor, there's a garden window, bay or bow that will be a perfect complement. CertainTeed garden windows are available in a wide range of stock sizes, while CertainTeed bay and bow windows can be custom made in an almost infinite variety of configurations. All are available in a choice of white or natural-tan frames with insulated, birchwood head and seat boards that can be stained or painted to match your decor.

So, if you're looking for ways to expand your home, start by expanding your imagination. Chances are you'll find something that adds just the right combination of light, beauty, value and space to your home.

For more information, call 1-800-782-8777, or visit CertainTeed's World Wide Web site at http://www.certainteed.com.

Edible decorations make a home beautiful

Regardless of whether you spent thousands of dollars decorating your house or scoured warehouses and garage sales for great bargains, the decorations that you use can make your living space into a "home."

Do you need a change of scenery? Looking for a way to enhance a room in your house without changing the entire look of the room? According to Mary Emmerling, author of "Mary Emmerling's Quick Decorating" (Potter), "Even when a room has been carefully furnished, it can lack a certain ease and charm, or somehow look unfinished."

Sprucing up your house doesn't mean spending a lot of money. "Quick decorating doesn't mean buying more — it means looking at what you already own with fresh eyes and putting it to new use," says Emmerling.

Some of the most original items to use when decorating are things that you see every day and probably never thought of placing around the house in an interesting display. Rather than placing flowers around the house, try placing fruits and vegetables. They make wonderful centerpieces throughout the entire home. Colorful, inexpensive and easy to find, perhaps the best thing is that they are edible.

The following tips, courtesy of Emmerling, will help you create exotic, beautiful decorations that look wonderful around your home. Best of all, they come right from the grocery or fruit and vegetable stand.

• Abundance is essential — When arranging items like fruits and vegetables, seeing them in quantity is what makes the display unusual. While one serpentine squash, for example, can be interesting, most of the time, a bowlful of squash will make a more eye-catching display.

• Color is key — No matter what you choose, let your eyes be your guide at the fruit or vegetable stand or supermarket shelf.

• Keep it fresh — There is a reason why fruits and vegetables are called perishables. Produce that needs to be refrigerated, like peppers and asparagus, will look fine for an afternoon until they are served, but otherwise should be kept chilled. Be on the lookout for any produce that looks soft or discolored.

• Choose the right container — Find a bowl or basket that will set off the natural beauty of the display.

Homeowners can now bring colorful floral, architectural and specialty designs to their front entries with the new Stained Glass Collection from Cole Sewell Storm Doors.

The patterns — 16 in all — include those with made-to-order address numbers. Some have "lifestyle" designs, like wildlife depictions. These styles include a mallard, eagle, trout, wood duck and cardinal.

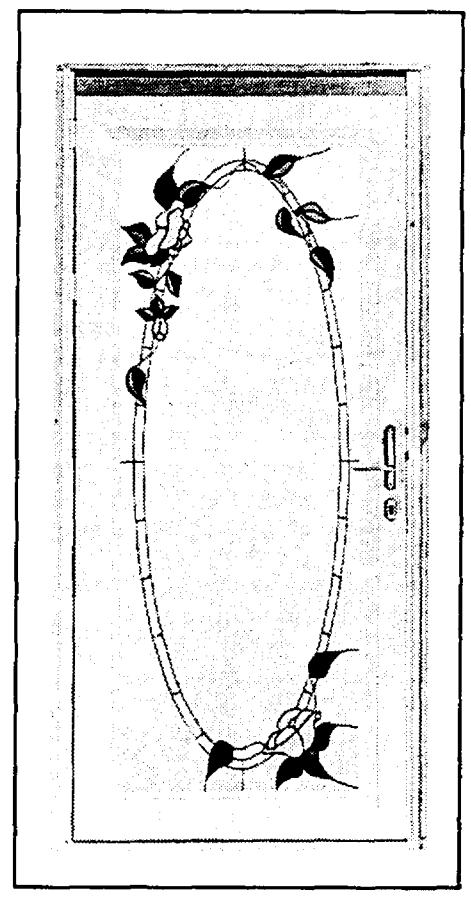

The panels can be used year-round or interchangeably with conventional glass panels. The vivid colors are permanently bonded to the glass and will not run, fade, crack or chip.

The stained glass adds a colorful accent to the exterior of the home and also beautifully frames the landscape when looking through the storm door to the outside.

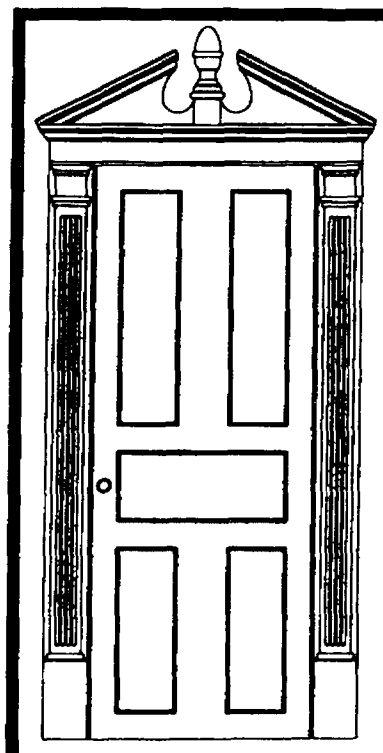

These stained glass panels are sold as part of Cole Sewell's innovative "Select" system, which allows homeowners to choose from five door styles, five colors, six handles and more than 20 glass designs to create their own custom storm door. They can mix and match these components as they wish.

The Stained Glass Collection is available only for fullview door styles. Complete, ready-to-install storm doors, including a stained glass design, range in price from $350 to $425.

Decorative inlays add luxury to a room At a reasonable price

A foyer floor welcomes guests with a sunburst medallion in an array of multihued hardwoods. A branch with leaves the colors of fall foliage dresses up the floor of a kitchen, drawing the eye to the center of the room. An intricate walnut border frames the oak floor in a grand dining room.

These are but a few of the design possibilities with an inlaid hardwood floor. According to the Hardwood Manufacturers Association (HMA), a national trade group, this luxurious home accoutrement is becoming more affordable thanks to advances in technology.

Once the domain of the hammer and chisel, inlaid floors now can be designed with computers, and the wood pieces cut with lasers. The result is an affordable custom feature that combines a work of art with the practicality, durability and beauty of a solid hardwood floor.

"I think it makes a room look a lot more expensive, with very little extra expense," says Mary Beth Hughes, ASID, an interior designer from Wheeling, W.Va., whose clients choose inlaid solid hardwood floors because they remind them of the grand houses of a century ago. "Many of the old homes had beautifully inlaid floors, and it kind of recalls people's memories of those houses."

Thomas D. Osborn, an inlaid floor designer/installer in Holyoke, Mass., says decorative inlays are becoming more popular because they are a unique way to reinforce a design theme.

"A good inlaid floor really adds to the room and makes the entire space work," says Osborn, who creates his original designs from such hardwoods as ash, maple, red and white oak, and birch.

An inlay will fall into one of three categories:

• a field, in which the inlay is the entire floor and serves as the dominant feature of the room. One of Osborn's projects was a giant compass that dominated a hallway in a seaside home.

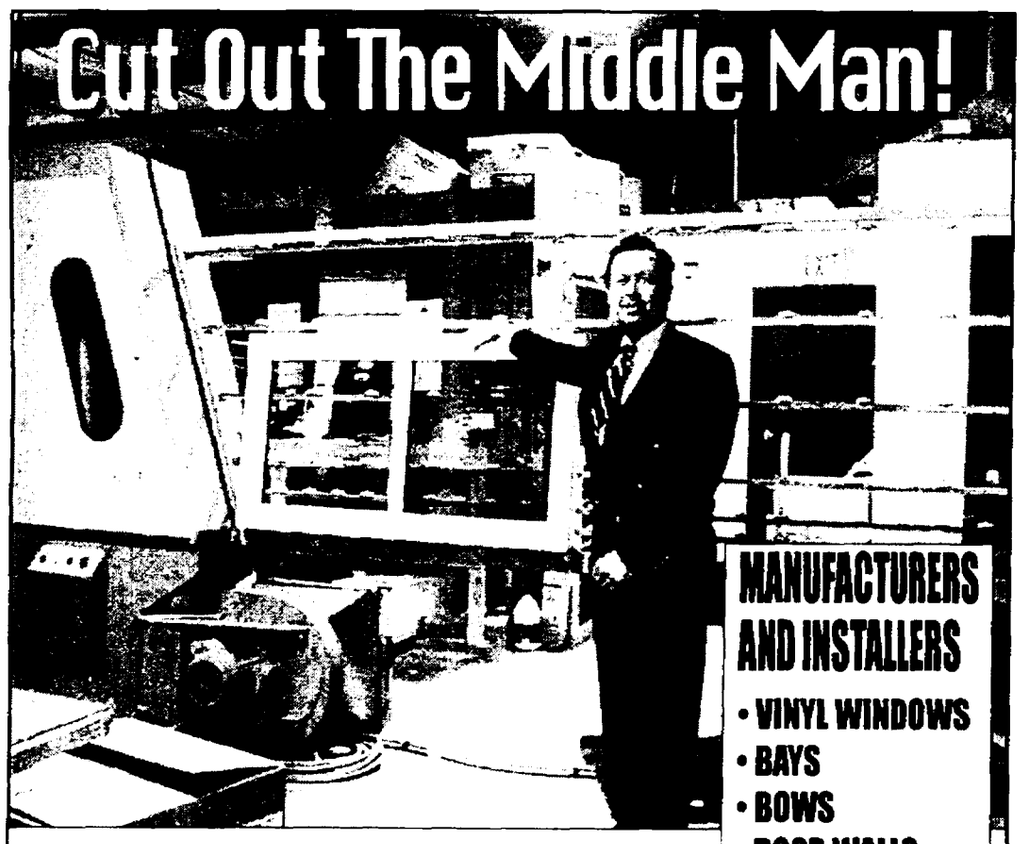

• a border, which outlines a floor.

• a set piece, which is an inset design covering a smaller area than a field. A set piece might be used for a dramatic effect in an area like an entryway.

And, the results often can surpass expectations.

"A completed inlaid floor can be a lot more powerful and a lot more dramatic than people are used to imagining," says Osborn.

Free information on selecting and caring for solid hardwood floors is available from the Hardwood Manufacturers Association, 400 Penn Center Blvd., Suite 530, Department 597, Pittsburgh, PA 15235; 1-800-373-WOOD. Or, visit the Hardwood Information Center on the World Wide Web at http://www.hardwood.org.

Tips for safe great-tasting water

So, you think your drinking water is generally safe straight from the tap, but you want the best-tasting drinking water you can have. If you're like nearly one-third of consumers, you've already taken action and purchased some form of at-home water-treatment device, whether it's a tabletop pitcher or a fully plumbed-in system, according to a survey conducted by the Water Quality Association (WQA).

"If you change the filters faithfully and have your water-treatment-system dealer routinely maintain your system, everything should run smoothly," says Dick Elliott, president of EcoWater Systems, the world's largest manufacturer of residential water-treatment systems. "But, if you're like many busy people, it may be low on your list of priorities."

Following are some simple steps you can take to keep your drinking-water supply safe and great-tasting.

• No news is not necessarily good news when it comes to your drinking water. Don't assume your water is the best it can be just because you haven't heard otherwise. Check with your local health department or have it tested by a certified water specialist to determine the quality.

• Don't try to put a square peg into a round hole. Make sure you use the proper replacement filter for your treatment system. There are many filters that remove different contaminants. Save the box from the original filter, or mark the filter model number on the filter housing, so you know what to buy when it's time to replace it.

• As obvious as it sounds, remember to replace the filter. Filters have a defined life span and usually need to be replaced after several months or so many gallons. Some come with month and date stickers to affix to the unit, telling you when to replace them. Others have built-in devices to indicate when it's time for replacement. Either way, there's no time like the present. Buy several filters at one time, so you have them when you need them.

• Make sure your system grows with you. Re-evaluate your situation every few years to determine if you have new contaminants to combat or other factors to consider. For example, when it was just you in the house, a pour-through carafe was fine. Now, with a spouse, a toddler and a baby on the way, a plumbed-in system makes more sense.

• Last but not least, read the manual. Easier said than done? Maybe, but it's the best way to ensure that your equipment provides continuous, long-lasting service. If you have an installed water-treatment system, have your dealer provide ongoing maintenance to prevent problems and ensure safe, great-tasting water for years to come.

Warming home-decor touches for fall

As fall approaches, thoughts turn inward. You begin to think of feathering your nest for cozy evenings by the fire after an invigorating day of raking leaves or a long walk along a country road flanked by crimson- and burnt-orange-leaved trees. You embrace images of simple living in a charming, welcoming home.

There are many affordable ways to add warmth and charm to your home, according to Melanie Wood, vice president of design for flooring manufacturer Mannington and president of the Color Marketing Group. Several cans of paint, a few yards of fabric or a simple rearrangement of furniture can quickly transform a home into a new, more comfortable place to love. Even small touches, like rearranging personal collections of teapots or wall sconces, or bringing out the rich-colored table linens or cleverly placed baskets of fall leaves and berries, can add a look of warmth and conviviality to a room or dining table.

Warming up your home for the cooler months can be as easy as creating a one-of-a-kind decorative plate and pottery collection in a surprise setting, like the bathroom. Checkered or plaid pillows are particularly warm and inviting, as is this soft, nearly carpetlike Botanical resilient flooring pattern from the Mannington Impressions Collection.

Take a fresh look at your furniture arrangements, advises Wood. It often helps to actually clear the room of furniture and put pieces and accessories back in different ways to create a whole new feeling. You may want to concentrate on several conversation areas, rather than just one. Use a bookshelf, some artwork, or an imaginative arrangement of hung and standing photographs as a main focus for a comfortable seating area.

A warm color on the walls often can set the stage for creating coziness for the winter months ahead. Soft, warm butter or gold tones lend a glow that provides the perfect backdrop for a few favorite things arranged in a new and exciting manner. You even can be adventurous and sponge one or more walls with a combination of several shades. Consider a combination of the butter yellow and a soft, yellow-green or pale terra cotta. The effect can be very dramatic and give a room an instant look of age and significance.

Think about replacing outdated or worn flooring. The Mannington Impressions Collection patterned, inlaid, sheet-vinyl designs have a soft, almost carpetlike appearance that instantly warms up a room. This is an especially good choice for kitchens, baths and family rooms, where other flooring surfaces, like tile, can look and feel cold, especially during the fall and winter months.

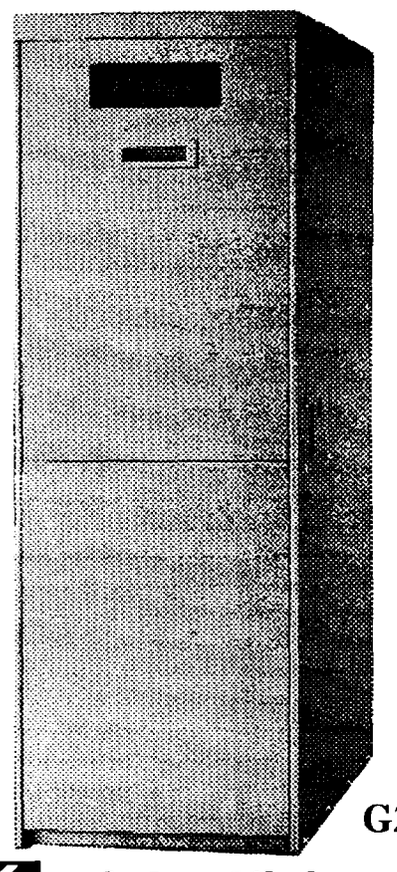

Unexpected arrangements and accessory groupings are always a good idea for the months you spend indoors, repeatedly taking in and enjoying your surroundings. Ideas include: pine branches, old bird's nests, dried flowers, and various sized and textured spheres on bookshelves or as part of an arrangement on a carved step stool; scattered leaves on stacked books in woven baskets; a fun garden statue or relief plaque cleverly placed; jars of summer fruit innovatively arranged on a kitchen shelf or counter; a new, funky lampshade; or a change of drapery brackets. Folk art, decorative plates and hand-painted pottery all become one-of-a-kind collections when arranged on a wall or shelf. Children's artwork and family photographs, which are always unique, add warmth and character to a room if framed and matted nicely and grouped together.

It is also at this time of year that you think of sprucing up your surroundings for the holidays ahead. Add seasonal touches, like a tall glass vase full of pine cones or holly twigs. Put out more candles, or change candle colors to the warmer reds, berries, golds and forest greens. Tie festive velvet or metallic ribbons around candleholders, vases and even interior statuary.

Consider perking up the overall look with a few yards of fabric draped at the windows and covering toss cushions on the chairs and sofas. Plaids and checks are particularly warm and inviting for the cooler months. Old tablecloths, tea towels and handkerchiefs also make interesting window treatments and pillow covers — loaded with charm and nostalgia. Transform the bedroom by changing bed linens with richer, thicker bedspreads and pillow shams.

Your home is now ready for quiet afternoons of reading in a cozy corner, romantic evenings by the fireplace, and a season of family gatherings and celebration.

Heating prices up? Burn pellets!

Prices for fossil fuels (oil, natural gas and propane) used for home heating took a considerable leap last winter, according to the U.S. Department of Energy.

In December 1996, propane prices hit an all-time high with a 43-percent-per-gallon increase from the same month in 1995. Natural-gas prices jumped 14 percent in the closing months of 1996, and the cost of heating oil rose 10 cents to 15 cents per gallon over the previous year.

According to the U.S. Federal Government, the 1996-97 cost increases were due to higher-than-anticipated crude-oil prices — a result of increased demands from other countries.

What can homeowners do to keep warm — without going bankrupt?

Burn wood pellets!

Today, there are nearly 500,000 pellet stoves and fireplace inserts heating homes throughout the United States and Canada. These units may look like free-standing woodstoves and fireplace inserts — and the flame from a wood-pellet fire looks virtually the same as a traditional wood fire — but they light with a touch of a button and deliver clean, economical heat.

Wood-pellet fuel produces virtually no smoke emissions. In fact, pellet stoves and inserts burn so clean that they are exempt in most areas where air quality is regulated.

Wood pellets are nature's most renewable energy resource. They are a nonfossil fuel made of compressed sawdust — a manufacturing byproduct that might otherwise go into landfills.

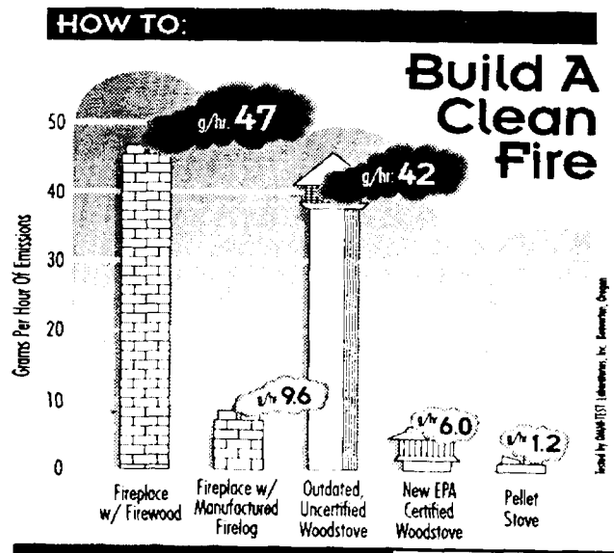

Wood pellets from 80 mills in the United States and Canada are readily available at fireplace and stove shops, home-improvement centers, and building-product and feed stores throughout North America. An entire winter's supply can be purchased in the late summer or early fall, allowing homeowners to "lock in" heating costs for the entire season, instead of paying an exorbitant cost to heat their home during the peak of winter. Early purchases of pellet fuel, in fact, result in even greater cost savings.

More good news is that an entire winter's supply of wood fuel pellets occupies much less space than a comparable amount of cordwood.

Pellets produce very little ash when burned, which means there is only a small amount of residue to clean out of the stove or insert. Further, the ash pan on many pellet stoves only needs to be emptied once or twice per year. With a pellet stove or fireplace insert, there is virtually no creosote formation — the major cause of chimney fires.

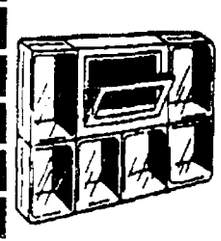

A product of modern technology ("high-tech heat"), storing and using pellets eliminates the insect-ridden woodpiles, the mess around the hearth, and the daunting task of splitting and hauling firewood.

For a free brochure on pellet fuel and pellet stoves, "Pellet Heat: The Clean, Convenient Way To Warm Your Home," call the Pellet Fuels Institute, 1-888-287-3167. Or, visit your local fireplace or stove shop.

BUILD A CLEAN FIRE PELLET-STYLE: Pellet stoves emit an average of 1.2 particulate grams per hour — well below the nationwide EPA limit of 7.5 grams for emissions.

A quick fix

Wallpaper borders give eye-catching results

With fall home-improvement time here and the holiday season just around the corner, this is a perfect time to give your home a makeover. In just a few hours, you can apply a wallpaper border to any room in your home, achieving eye-catching results that will get noticed.

Giving your home a makeover can be easy. Sherwin-Williams offers a variety of borders that can add style and flair to any room.

Borders add style and flair. Use them to brighten up the powder room, add direction to the hallway or accent your living room. The possibilities are endless. Sherwin-Williams offers a variety of border styles and color schemes to suit any taste. Expressing yourself has never been so easy.

Be creative! Borders have moved beyond adorning the ceiling level. Use them to draw attention to a fireplace, frame a mirror or trim window shades for a coordinated look. Let the wallpaper borders fuel your creativity.

Everything you need to begin your project can be found in a Sherwin-Williams store. Depending on the kind of border you choose, you may need to purchase primers, seam rollers and adhesives.

Mystified with measuring? Wavering between Waverly patterns? Call 1-800-4-SHERWIN, and let the Sherwin-Williams Wallpaper Orders & Answers system do the rest of the work. The professionals you'll talk to understand design questions, can calculate how much wallcovering you'll need and place the order for you, right over the phone.

Tips for Unsure Do-It-Yourselfers

For every person who enjoys making repairs around the house, there is another person who can barely tell the difference between a wrench and a screwdriver. For those who dread making home repairs, even the simplest tasks, like hanging a frame on the wall, can be difficult. One of the toughest choices that not-so-talented do-it-yourselfers must make is whether to use nails or screws when making repairs.

According to "Shelves and Cabinets" (Time Life), nails are the most common fasteners. They are quick, easy and inexpensive. When reinforced with glue, nails offer adequate strength for cabinets and shelving units.

Common nails and finishing nails are the only ones that are needed for most shelf and cabinet construction. Common nails have large heads and work well in areas where they will not be seen. With their smaller heads, finishing nails can be countersunk and concealed and work best on exterior parts.

Although they cost more, screws have better holding power than nails. They take more time to install, but should be used when extra strength is needed. Screws also work well holding together a structure that you may wish to disassemble in the future.

Congratulations to Robert L. Stewart, Michigan's 1997 Photographer of the Year, from the shop where he has his framing done.

Bob has now won this prize twice. The state obviously knows his talents.

And so do we. Come view the wonderful work of this St. Clair Shores resident, including the award-winners above, at The Great Frame Up of Grosse Pointe during the entire month of September. It will be well worth the visit, not only because it's a visual treat, but because if you purchase any of his signed photos, you can then have it framed here and save 20% off the frame of your choice.*

Fall is the time to winterize your deck

Did the summer months take a toll on your deck? Is the wood looking gray and dingy or stained with mildew? If so, now is the time to clean, restore and renew the wood, and apply a water-repellent finish to protect it from moisture damage during the cold, wet winter months.

With a little elbow grease and the help of a commercial deck-cleaning product, like Wolman Deck and Siding Brightener, you easily can restore the wood's original honey-tone appearance and prepare the surface for a new coat of water repellent, preservative or stain. Wolman Deck and Siding Brightener is an economical powder concentrate that mixes with water and is sprayed, mopped or brushed on the wood. After letting the solution sit wet on the wood for three minutes to five minutes, brush the surface with a stiff brush or broom, then rinse with water through a garden hose or pressure washer.

The brightener will lift, loosen and remove ground-in dirt and sun-damaged wood fibers on the surface. It also removes stains from mildew. The product comes in two formulas — one for pressure-treated wood, the other for cedar and redwood. The cedar/redwood formula also removes black tannin stains. Both formulas are safe to use around grass, most plants and shrubs since they don't contain acid or chlorine bleach.

For stubborn stains from algae and moss, you may need to spot-scrub with a bleach-and-water solution prior to applying the deck cleaner. Don't use chlorine bleach or a chlorine bleach-based cleaner on the whole deck though, as chlorine bleach can interfere with the adhesion and long-term performance of subsequently applied finishes, making the wood more prone to moisture damage and leading to quicker fading or "graying out." Chlorine bleach also leaves wood with an artificial "lightened" appearance.

For removing worn or unwanted finishes, Wolman makes a new product, called DeckStripTM, which removes old sealers, varnishes, paints, stains and finishes without the need for prior sanding. This product is unique in that it works on both oil-based and latex coatings, whereas other stripping solutions are designed specifically for one or the other. It also clings to vertical surfaces, making it easy to strip railings and spindles, as well as decorative fences.

To maintain and protect your newly cleaned or stripped deck, apply a water-repellent finish, like Wolman RainCoat or F&P Wood Finish & Preservative, to prevent the wood from splitting, warping and splintering. These products are guaranteed to protect wood decks from moisture damage for a minimum of two years. The finish also should contain mildewcides to prevent mildew growth. Finishes designed for wood are best, as most all-purpose sealers designed to go on a variety of surfaces — like wood and concrete — do not contain mildewcides.

Other things you can do to prevent damage during the harsh winter months include placing planters on risers or wheels, instead of directly on the deck, to prevent stains, putting rubber protectors on the bottom of metal furniture to prevent rust spots and scratches, and making sure gutters drain properly so water doesn't flow directly onto the deck.

These products can be found at hardware stores, home centers, and paint and decorating outlets. For further information about deck maintenance, Wolman offers a special Deck Care Hotline, open seven days a week. Call the experts at (800) 556-7737.

Wood lover's dilemma: when to choose laminate, vinyl or wood flooring

Whether it's whitewashed, natural pine, honey-toned, walnut or mahogany-colored, wood is a great look for cabinets, bookcases, end tables, coffee tables and especially floors. Today, with the proliferation of real and faux patterned wood flooring choices, consumers have even more opportunities to choose the right warm wood look for their homes.

According to Stuart Beattie, flooring manufacturer Mannington's vice president of styling and design, the company offers wood flooring looks from its wood floors division, its resilient floors division and now its new laminate floors division. This means that if you love the look of wood in all its wonderful variations, you can have it in any room of the house, from kitchen and living room to bath and recreation room.

Beattie says having various flooring surfaces that offer complementary wood looks is a real design coup that consumers should use to their advantage. Wood floors are beautiful in any room of the home, but certain areas require very specific needs for performance and maintenance.

For instance, have you always wanted the casually rustic country decor of your home to extend to all rooms, but feared that the wood floors you love in your hallways, den and living room would be the floors you agonize and sweat over if they were in your kitchen and family room? Or, do you have trouble duplicating the elegantly traditional look of your formal dining area for your kitchen and everyday eating area? Does the look of ceramic in bathrooms feel too cold and out of sync with the rest of your home's decor, but wood seems unthinkable for the bathroom?

If natural wood is the look you've always wanted, but not the practical product for your needs, you now have other options that are every bit as beautiful and fashionable.

Laminate flooring is a great choice in areas where a high-style flooring surface that's durable enough to allow for ultimate livability is needed and when cost is an important factor (laminate flooring is typically less expensive than real wood). Laminate is also an ideal alternative in regional areas where weather extremes might mean unpredictable expansion and contraction of real wood. Faux wood vinyl patterns, which are also hard to tell from the real thing, are a good choice in areas where moisture and comfort underfoot are primary concerns.

The newest kid on the block, laminate flooring is already being perfected for the American marketplace by companies like Mannington — with the longer plank lengths Americans prefer and wood designs and colors fine-tuned to favor Americans' tastes for warmer, redder tones, rather than the yellow, cool tones Europeans find so appealing. You may even be able to find the same wood design and color for all three surfaces, if a totally harmonious visual field is desired. And, you can mix wood species and colors to match or contrast cabinetry and furnishings for additional design interest.

Is it wood, laminate or vinyl flooring? These days, homeowners have a great selection of real and faux wood looks to choose from to meet their home-fashion and lifestyle needs. One option is the beautiful look of Natural Oak from Mannington Laminate Floors, a flooring easily dressed up for practical elegance.

"To end up with the right flooring for the right application, give each room in your home the endurance test," suggests Beattie. What primary activities, planned (eating, cooking, bathing, family games, studying, television watching or computer using) and occasionally surprise (spills, dropped objects, etc.), take place? Is traffic heavy or light, two-footed or four-pawed? What is your family's lifestyle — sedate, moderately active or rambunctious? Most importantly, how long do you want to spend taking care of your floor, and how long do want your flooring to look great?

Once you know the answers to these questions, you'll have a better idea of the flooring type — laminate, vinyl or wood — you should be considering for each room. If you still have questions, a flooring specialty retailer should be able to help direct you to the right choice, or you can visit the Mannington Web site at http://www.mannington.com.

If wood is the look you love, now there's no reason to forgo it. In all its guises, it's a natural home-decor winner.

Add the beauty of cedar without the maintenace

Homeowners always have had a "love-hate" relationship with cedar siding. They love cedar's beauty with its eye-catching texture and classic, rich tones that make an exceptionally warm and inviting design statement. However, cedar is a notoriously demanding material, requiring almost constant maintenance over the years, including staining, sealing and frequent resealing.

You can add the appeal of cedar siding to your home without all of the work that goes with it. Alcoa's Lake Forest® Premier virtually eliminates the maintenance commonly associated with cedar.

Now, there's a way to break this "love-hate" cycle with a siding that combines the beauty of cedar with none of the maintenance. Alcoa's Lake Forest® Premier vinyl siding is earning rave reviews from architects, builders and homeowners for its deep, wood-grain design that replicates the look of cedar — in a material that will never require painting, staining or sealing.

A premium vinyl-siding product, Alcoa's Lake Forest® Premier is finished with a multilayer graining and shading process. It is then protected with Kynar 500® fluoropolymer, a clear resin coating and protector that resists ultraviolet exposure, corrosive chemicals and environmental contaminants. Warranted to a last a lifetime without cracking, splitting, rotting or swelling, this vinyl siding eliminates the maintenance commonly associated with cedar. What's more, the rich colors are backed by a 25-year fade-protection warranty.

Despite its industrial strength and maintenance-free durability, this vinyl siding offers a beauty and richness that rivals the most expensive cedar. It is available in eight designer colors: Glacier Blue, Woodland Green, Mountain Gold, River Wheat, Timber Stone, Aspen Grey, Sierra Clay and the newest addition, American Walnut. Three distinct profiles offer enhanced design flexibility — a traditional 4-inch profile, a double 5-inch profile for contemporary homes and a double 4 1/2-inch Dutch lap. Accessories include matching corner posts, soffits and coordinated trim colors, as well as a complete line of accents, including shutters, window mantels and door surrounds.

Fireplace installation is easy with a vent-free gas system

If you have resisted adding a fireplace to your home because of the potential cost and attendant construction mess, you might want to consider a vent-free gas fireplace system.

Vent-free gas fireplaces, which include a firebox, set of gas logs and appropriate controls, are the fastest-growing segment of the fireplace industry. There are a number of reasons for their popularity, but ease of installation is often at the top of the list, according to Jack Fahey, vice president of sales and marketing for Temco Fireplace Products, a pioneer in vent-free technology.

"Vent-free gas fireplaces come in a broad range of sizes and styles, they provide very efficient supplemental heating, and they represent good value," he says. "But, the primary reason homeowners like them is because they can be installed in almost any room of the home without the cost or construction mess associated with adding a masonry fireplace." In fact, there are so many options and installation is so easy that the hardest part may be deciding which one to purchase and where to put it, he adds.

Since no venting is required, a vent-free fireplace can be installed on virtually any interior wall in a room, not taking away from valuable window views and light, a negative often associated with traditional vented fireplaces, which require exterior walls for installation, according to Fahey. A see-through or peninsula model can be installed as a divider between rooms, he adds. Fahey recommends doing a little homework before finalizing a decision on placement.

"In some rooms, the ideal location will be obvious; in others, placement might require more study," he says. To aid in the decision-making process, Fahey suggests using tracing paper to lay out a number of floor plans and placement options. Take a look at furniture arrangement and traffic flow in and out of the room to determine how the addition of a fireplace will impact the daily use of the space.

Once you've chosen the location, the next step is to determine the style, model size and input rating. Since all of the heat generated by a vent-free fireplace stays in the room, rather than going up the chimney as in a wood-burning fireplace with an open flue, an oversized unit quickly will overheat the space in the immediate vicinity of the fireplace. By contrast, a unit that's too small may not provide adequate heat. Fahey suggests asking your local dealer to help you select the best model and the right input rating for maximum enjoyment.

Once your fireplace is delivered, installation is easy. First, measure the wall to assure the fireplace will be positioned properly, relative to corners, doorways and windows, depending upon the layout. Next, build the frame. Position the firebox, the unit that houses the gas log set and grate, in place, and rough in the gas line through the facility provided in the side of the firebox.

Fahey cautions that the installation of the gas line and the connection of the gas log assembly must be completed by a qualified gas-appliance installer. In many areas, these technicians must be licensed. The local dealer, a local building official, the gas utility or your LP gas supplier can be of assistance.

The next step is to complete the wall around the fireplace by putting up the wallboard and the decorative surround around the fireplace opening. Any noncombustible material can be used to overlap the seam between the wallboard and the face of the fireplace. However, if the firebox has louvers, do not cover them with any facing or finishing material. A hearth extension is not required for a vent-free gas fireplace, but it may add a desirable decorative touch. If you plan to install a mantel, make sure the clearance between the mantel and the fireplace opening is in accordance with the instructions provided with the vent-free gas fireplace.

The final step is the installation and start-up of the gas log assembly. During this step, the installer will test the system to assure that it is free of leaks and that the gas pressure is adequate when the logs are at the highest setting and other gas appliances on the system are in operation.

Give the kitchen some island style

For centuries, a big table was the center of kitchen activity. Baking, food preparation, meals, homework and family meetings all took place at the kitchen table.

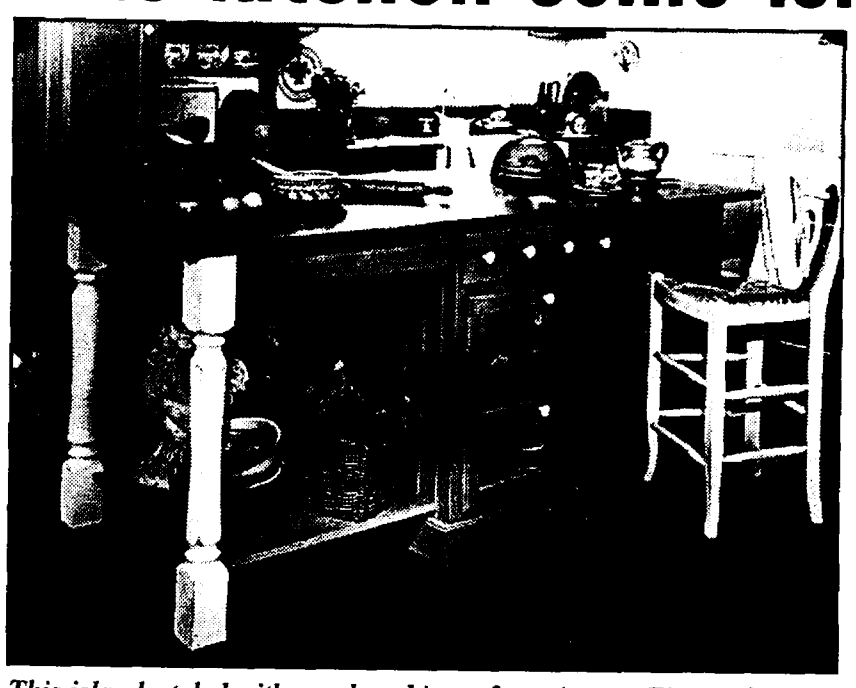

Kitchens have changed, but the need for a versatile work center remains constant. In today's kitchens, more often than not, the work center and gathering place is an island. The National Kitchen & Bath Association reports that now more than half of all kitchen projects include islands.

An island can be a stylish focal point for the room, says David Johnston, senior brand manager for Amera Fine Cabinetry at Merillat Industries, the nation's largest manufacturer of cabinets for the home.

The wide variety of cabinet options available today makes it possible to create an island to suit nearly every decorating taste and almost any set of functional requirements, according to Johnston.

He suggests designs for three islands, each with a differing functional emphasis and widely differing looks — classic country, popular arts and crafts, and sophisticated contemporary.

An increasingly popular choice for country kitchens is the so-called "unfitted" look, with freestanding work areas of unmatched, furniturelike pieces that appear to have been collected by succeeding generations of cooks.

This island, styled with maple cabinets from Amera Fine Cabinetry by Merillat, resembles an old-fashioned workbench. Note the variety of storage options.

"Even if you don't want a totally unfitted kitchen, you can suggest one with an island that looks like an old-fashioned workbench," Johnston says.

The island consists of maple cabinets and components finished in a blue stain that complements other natural-finish cabinets in the room. It has storage space accessible from both sides and is outfitted with a sturdy wood countertop that functions as an all-purpose work surface.

One end of the island looks like a table, with a pair of decorative, turned-wood legs supporting the countertop. Below it, a shelf displays large serving pieces and collectibles.

The remainder of the island consists of glass-front cabinets, a row of small "spice drawer" organizers and a double-door cabinet to meet a variety of storage needs and provide visual interest. V-groove paneling faces the ends of the island for an old-fashioned look. An electrical outlet in one wall of the island is a convenient power source for small electrical appliances.

The renewed interest in arts-and-crafts styling provides the inspiration for Johnston's second example, a 36-inch-tall island that combines work space and an eating area. The "work" side is equipped with drawers and cabinets with roll-out trays for storage. The "eating" side of the island is defined by an overhang that provides clearance for 24-inch-high stools.

Johnston specifies oak cabinets in a warm honey-colored finish with frame-and-panel doors and a ceramic-tile countertop in earthy tones. Oak trim pieces are used to create characteristic arts-and-crafts detailing, including frame-and-panel columns and distinctive horizontal banding along the base of the island.

Johnston's third example is a sophisticated contemporary island that functions as a cooking area. He chooses cabinets with simple slab doors and gently rounded corners in a deep, rich cherry. A six-burner cooktop is centered in a functional stainless-steel countertop, while the cabinets below conceal cooking utensils, pots and pans.

Although this island has no glass doors or trim detail, it has a lightness derived from being set on a pedestal smaller than the island itself, giving the illusion that it "floats" above the floor.

More information on cabinet styling options is available by requesting the Amera Fine Cabinetry catalog from Merillat Industries. Call 1-800-575-8763, Ext. 6087.

Vent-free gas fireplaces are available for use with either natural gas or propane. If the fireplace is being added to an existing propane system, it may be necessary to update the system with a two-stage regulator. It also may be necessary to increase the size of the propane tank. A minimum 120-gallon tank is recommended. The size of the existing gas lines also should be checked to assure the gas main can handle the additional load.

There are a variety of vent-free models available, depending upon the location in the home and the decorating and heating needs, notes Fahey. Temco's American Dream collection includes front-opening fireplaces with flush or louvered faces, see-through and peninsula models, and freestanding units. In addition to built-in installations, prefinished or unfinished prefabricated cabinet enclosures are also available. Freestanding models, in several colors, need no enclosure for the fastest and easiest installation. All American Dream vent-free products are design-certified by the American Gas Association Laboratories.

Make improvements before winter arrives

Whether aesthetic appeal, home repair or weatherproofing is the motive, fall is a great time for home renovating and refurbishing. The intense summer heat has died down, and the cool breezes signaling the forthcoming winter winds are in the air. Is your home in pristine condition and ready for such seasonal attributes as hazardous weather conditions and the holidays?

Some jobs may require a sizable investment of time and money, as well as electrical or carpentry skills. Others will require minimal effort and resources. Whichever is the case, giving immediate attention where it's needed will enhance and improve the condition of your home, preserving it for a lifetime of memories.

Home-improvement projects can assume any number of forms, from installing a new kitchen sink to putting up new window screens to adding a whole new room to the house. Energy-conscious homeowners know that installing insulation in certain areas can help reduce heating bills this winter, as well as decrease air pollutants.

Fall is also the season to check the condition of the roof and gutters, perhaps dry-wall the garage or basement for a clean work space this winter, install storm doors, or remodel unfinished attic space.

Home improvements are also a great way to get the whole family involved. When was the last time you gathered the entire "clan" and assigned a thorough cleaning of the house? With the holidays ahead, assigning once-a-week housecleaning chores to the children will get things in tiptop shape for grandma and grandpa's visit.

While the family is packing up summer clothes for storage and bringing out fall and winter wear, closets can be reorganized and straightened up for maximum storage efficiency and ease of use. So, ask everyone to invest some additional time to get the most out of the living space.

No matter what you undertake this fall, be sure to evaluate whether or not fix-it projects are within your capabilities as a do-it-yourselfer. If trying a particularly complicated job, remember that two heads are better than one: Go to a local hardware store or home center to get helpful advice and information. If you're hiring a contractor, make sure you explain exact specifications, get references on the person you hire and get everything in writing.

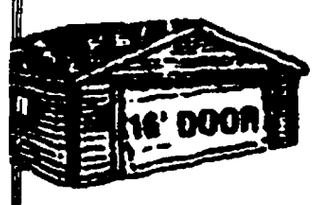

Now, on your mark, get set, get busy!
