No nudes is good news at G.P. North High School

By Liz Ferszt
Staff Writer

Eighteen-year-old Dan Granger said Monday that he did not place a nude photo of himself in the Grosse Pointe North High School Yearbook. "No, I did not, and I have no further comment," he said.

of Granger as a young child, but rather, it was sexually explicit.

North Principal Dr. Caryn Wells said Monday that she is "not in denial that we have a problem," but that the school has produced "an excellent product in the publication of the yearbook, with exemplary staff and student assistants."

In explanation of how a nude student photo could have found its way into the student yearbook, Wells responded, "we're still investigating." According to Wells, when the yearbook was first released last week, and the offensive photo was discovered and brought to her attention, she immediately recalled the several yearbooks already in circulation.

"Every student complied with the recall," Wells said. The yearbooks were then all "corrected," by the staff physically purging the page of the nude photo with scissors, and then replacing the flip side page (which had a legitimate, paid ad or feature) with a photocopy minus the nude photo.

"We repaired the books as best we could without sending them back to the printers," said Wells. Thus what students received was a taped-together version. Evidently, no "bootleg" copies exist.

In response to the allegation that Granger was to be punished by not being allowed to give the class valedictorian speech at commencement exercises on Wednesday, Wells said

Jay Ricci of Grosse Pointe Farms placed fourth and second in the two Dodge Neon Charity Challenge races held prior to the ITT Automotive Detroit Grand Prix on Belle Isle last weekend. Ricci, assistant sales manager for MotorQuest Dodge in Dearborn, has a test drive this summer with the Ross Motor Sports racing team. If he passes the test, he will be one step closer to realizing his ambition of becoming a driver of Indy race cars.

Neon racers let losers eat cake

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Handicapped by an inverse starting grid that put the fastest qualifiers near the back of the pack, Grosse Pointe Farms resident Jay Ricci placed fourth in the Dodge Neon Charity Challenge car race on Belle Isle last Saturday.

Starting in the number 12 spot, Ricci's advance through the field was accomplished after only two laps of the 30-minute race. He finished behind three professional drivers, including Carl Galeana of Northville, who duplicated his win of last year.

Ricci and fellow Farms resident Stephen Freitas took part in the Chrysler-sponsored charity event, which raised $215,000 for the Detroit Police Athletic League.

The event was one of many warm-up races prior to Sunday's headlining ITT Automotive Detroit Grand Prix won by Alex Zanardi.

Freitas, a senior partner with Anderson Consulting, finished 10th after starting in 12th.

In another Neon race Sunday that included another convoluted starting lineup, Ricci raced from the pole and came in second.

"I came off turn one slow and Jeff (Stevens, the race winner), catapulted past me on the front straight," said Ricci. But, like Roger Maris' single season home run record, Ricci's accomplishment should be noted with an asterisk. The race ran only three laps under green due to crashes.

Freitas started seventh and finished fourth in Sunday's abbreviated contest.

Although Ricci wants to be a professional race car driver, Freitas will stick with his day job after hitting the tire wall while entering a turn from the fastest part of the track.

He wasn't hurt.

Ricci, assistant sales manager for MotorQuest Dodge in Dearborn, and Freitas joined civic leaders, business executives and members of the local media in the charity race that Freitas called, "a fun event that involves a lot of competitive people."

Sounding like a passage from Rimski-Korsakov's "Flight of the Bumble Bees" gone mad, a flock of 23 street-legal Neons, painted in the bold style of their namesake, got off to a clean start, swarmed through a pair of quick right-left turns and took off down the main straight toward turn three at speeds topping 115 m.p.h.

"Going into turn three at the end of the front straight was incredible," said Ricci. He said he reached 120 m.p.h. He averaged more than 65 m.p.h. on his way to the checkered flag.

The race cars were "stock

Wilberding wins lone seat on school board

By Liz Ferszt
Staff Writer

Beth Konrad Wilberding won the vacant seat on the Grosse Pointe School Board, as announced Monday night at the school district offices. The final vote was 1,767 votes for Wilberding, and 1,133 votes for Ted Cwiek.

Wilberding said Monday night that although she triumphed in the school board race, she had some regret over Cwiek's loss: "I feel bad that Ted lost; he was a good candidate and a perfect gentleman. I have enjoyed getting to know him and his family."

Wilberding added that she hoped he would run again: "I wish him every bit of the best."

In speaking on the campaign, she said, "You don't do this sort of thing alone; I need to thank all my volunteers, and especially my family members."

Cwiek indicated that he was not entirely disappointed in the results. He was generally congratulated by other school board members present at the results announcement on Monday night, including treasurer Jack Ryan and secretary Joan Dindoffer.

In an informal sampling of results from Precinct C (Brownell Middle School) taken on Monday morning, voters were three to zero for Cwiek, including Grosse Pointe Farms resident Tom McCleary, father of two grown children who graduated through Grosse Pointe schools; he felt Cwiek was the "best qualified and would bring a better balance in his attitude toward education and funding."

A mother of three, who wished not to give her name, also voted for Cwiek because she "agreed more with his (Cwiek's) philosophy than Beth's (Wilberding)." Another anonymous voter, a mother of four grown sons, also voted for Cwiek because she saw him as "better qualified."

"I felt Beth Conrad had darted around in too many jobs." The woman also stated that the school board "needs some attention."

Beth Moran and Barbara

Gehlert, volunteer workers for the Conrad-Wilberding campaign, said they supported Wilberding because they "believed in her philosophy of education." When asked to expound, Moran added that Wilberding is an "advocate of Sue Klein (Grosse Pointe schools superintendent)."

The district public information officer Kathleen Roberts said Monday that Klein is a "consensus builder" in that approximately two years ago when the school board was "seriously split," Klein worked to "mend fences" and to calm the "rather stormy Board of Education."

The low voter turn-out was itself part of the school board election story.

By 11:30 a.m., only 125 people had voted at the City of Grosse Pointe Farms precinct C at Brownell Middle School; there are 8,897 registered voters on the books. By poll closing at 8 p.m. the Farms/Precinct C had approximately 14 percent turn-out. "This [election] would have a lower turn-out than one with a money issue," said Grace Sawicki, precinct chairperson. Poll workers agreed, saying the show of voters was "light for the whole Farms."

Ironically, Cwiek himself has voted in less than half of school elections on record since late 1994, and has voted in half of all elections held during the same period, according to Grosse Pointe Woods voter registration documents.

According to Grosse Pointe Park voting records, Wilberding has voted in less than half of school elections since 1990, but slightly more than half of all elections during the same period.

The method of voting, a modified form of paper ballot by AccuVote, included the routine filling out of the "application to vote" short form, followed by the voter receiving the ballot and cover-apparatus to ink in one vote; the ballot was then deposited into the "black box" which electronically tallied the

Airport Study Committee not worried about Pro Air

By Jim Stickfo. J
Staff Writer

After hearing about the possibility of General Motors and Chrysler establishing a business relationship with Pro Air, which flies out of City Airport in Detroit, Detroit City Airport Study Committee spokesman Dale Krajniak said there's nothing to indicate trouble for the Pointes.

"We have always maintained that the airport is a viable entity in its present state," said

Krajniak. "The current runway configuration can probably handle the bulk of commercial and private plane service needed in the area. We aren't against the airport, we're against expanding the airport and runway configurations so that increased air traffic consisting of large jets fly over the Pointes."

Krajniak said that Pro Air is flying at a capacity of only about 33 percent. That hardly justifies spending $100 million to expand City Airport, he said. He added that Detroit subsidizes airport operations to the tune of $1 million a year. Before the airport is expanded, shouldn't it at least run in the black?

"Spending $100 million won't solve the problem of a lack of demand for services," Krajniak said. "The demand for services is less now than it was in 1987 when Southwest flew out of the airport. So we know the airport can handle greater jet traffic with its current configuration. They stopped using the facility because it wasn't profitable," he said.

Flint's Bishop Airport is already becoming a regional hub for air traffic, Krajniak said. With increased traffic at that airport and with population in the area around the airport increasing, it makes more sense to invest money there.

"Traffic, according to the Michigan Department of Transportation, at Flint Bishop during the first four months of this year increased 63 percent as compared with the same period last year," said Krajniak.

"If there's going to be money spent on airports other than Metro, it makes sense to spend the money on the airports that have greatly increased traffic. General aviation declined 34 percent at City between 1987 and 1994."

Krajniak also said that many of the places that Chrysler and General Motors employees might wish to fly to can be reached by Pro Air using the current runway configuration. City can't be turned into another Metro Airport. The Airport Study Committee maintains that the public can be best served by concentrating on improving what City Airport currently does, not by trying to make it something it was never meant to be.

Poupard principal Jay Flowers retires after 36 years with district

By Stephanie Ziegler
Special Writer

Despite the rain and cold, summer was in full bloom on June 5 as the students and staff of Poupard Elementary School bid farewell to principal Jay Flowers.

The theme of the day was "Flower Power." Hallways were decorated with paper flowers, and students and staff wore flowered clothing, often topped off with big flowered hats.

At a farewell assembly, each class presented a gift to Flowers. The first-graders recited a poem about the special things their principal does, and second-graders made a video about all the things they would forget when he was gone, such as the correct way to walk up stairs and proper procedure for fire drills.

Since Flowers has such big shoes to fill, third-graders made an instruction book for the new principal of Poupard, and took turns describing the things that make Flowers great.

"He talks to us, and visits classrooms to make sure that teachers are teaching and students are learning," said one third-grader.

"His punishments are always fair," added a classmate.

Fourth-graders spelled out phrases that described the principal, such as "Number One."

The fifth-graders sang a song about how much they would miss their principal.

"I knew it would be hard to leave," said Flowers. "I will miss interacting with the children more than anything."

Flowers began his education career in Utica in 1962, went on to Kalamazoo, and eventually made his way to Grosse Pointe, where he worked at Maire, Richard, Defer and Poupard.

"I'm looking forward to traveling and visiting family," said Flowers. He and his wife Judy have four sons and six grandchildren. Two sons live in Grosse Pointe, one lives in Manhattan, and one in Alaska.

The kindergarten presented Flowers with a specially painted flower pot. At the end of the ceremony, each class put a flower in the pot, in the hopes that their principal would remember the students each time he looked at a flower.

Flowers gave a speech at the end of the assembly, telling his charges how much he enjoyed watching them grow. "All I want to say as I leave is thank you, thank you very much."

Drip, drip, drip in the Woods

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Since last September the Grosse Pointe Woods city administration has been working with the family of injured Red Wings masseur Sergei Mnatsakanov to work out a payment plan for the family's $5,500 water bill.

The unusually high bills were first noticed by the city's water meter reader, who saw the family's water consumption jump dramatically during last July and August. Realizing something was wrong, officials sent out an estimated water bill based on past water-use rates.

The city then had a new water meter installed in case the large bill was the result of mechanical error. When the new meter registered the same high water use, a public works employee inspected the house for leaks, said city administrator Peter Thomas.

What he found, Thomas said, were three toilets that weren't working properly. Two of them wouldn't shut off after being flushed and would run at a very high flow rate.

Once the problem was determined not to be the fault of city equipment, Woods comptroller Cliff Maison sat down with the Mnatsakanov family and attorney to work out a payment schedule.

"This is all standard procedure," said Thomas. "We've done this with other citizens in the past. What people have to remember is that the Woods pay the City of Detroit for every drop of water used by residents. The city also pays had to be paid for. Any unpaid bills end up being paid for by the taxpayers. But we want to work with residents to help them with their problems."

Neon

Neons like you'd buy from a dealership. We only add safety features, like roll cages, fire extinguishers and kill switches to quickly shut off the engine in case of emergencies," said Jason Quinn, a product technician employed by SpeedWorks Event Services of Troy to get the Neons race-ready. He said the cars were equipped with a two-liter, dual overhead cam, four-cylinder engine rated at 160 horsepower.

Ricci said he moved through the pack by being "more aggressive than the people in front of me. They held back and I just forced them out of the way."

Because the identically prepared cars were capable of the same top speed, Ricci made up time by going fast around turns.

Freitas race wasn't so fortunate. During an early lap he entered the third turn on the outside of two other cars. "There wasn't any road left," he explained. Something had to give, and he smacked the tire barrier.

Although a veteran of numerous sailboat races as skipper of his 30-foot sloop Patriot, including 26 Port Huron to Mackinac races, Freitas said he had "never been in a race car before in my life." The jostling that goes on at the start of a sailboat race "has no connection with" navigating a race car, he said.

"The only training I've had is driving on the Lodge freeway," he said.

Prior to Sunday's race, however, Freitas said he was advised by a member of the pit crew, "Remember, bumpin' racin'."

When asked to participate in this year's race, he verified his life insurance coverage and sought permission from his wife and 3-year-old son, he said.

His connection with the Neon Challenge came through his job with Anderson Consulting. "I've been working with Chrysler for a number of years and I took the opportunity to become involved in this charity event for PAL, which is what this event is all about," he said.

On the other hand, Ricci wants to drive Indy cars. "I love racing," he said.

His racing luck began when his father, Joe Ricci, won a free course at the famous Bob Bondurant school of high performance driving in Phoenix, a common jumping-off point for big-name American drivers like Rick Mears and Al Unser Jr., and where movie stars Paul Newman and James Garner trained for the big screen in "Winning" and "Grand Prix." Joe Ricci gave the prize to his son, who said he was hooked on motor racing from the start.

He took further training at Sebring Raceway in Florida and at Graton Raceway near Grand Rapids, Mich.

Ricci must have done his homework because he subsequently dominated the 1997 Raft Rookie Formula Mazda Series. He won "eight or nine races," he said, on his way to the series championship.

He plans to move up to open-wheel racing in the Barber Dodge series, then to Indy Lights, the development series for Indy drivers. Robbie Buhl, of Grosse Pointe, who drives for Team Menard in the Indy Racing League, is a former Indy Lights racer. So are Paul Tracy and Greg Moore, who sat on the pole for this year's Detroit Grand Prix, but finished fifth.

If things continue going well for Ricci, it's off to the 240 m.p.h. world of Indy cars.

His next big break comes this summer when he has a test drive with the Roas Motor Sports racing team at the Mid-Ohio sports car course, the home track of retiring Indy star Bobby Rahal.

Park resident finds the joy of opera

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

When Grosse Pointe Park resident David Odenbach, 51, was growing up in Rochester, N.Y., opera was not foremost in his mind.

"I had just finished my hitch in the Army. I was stationed at White Sands, where they tested missiles," Odenbach said. "I grew up in Rochester, which is where I met my wife on a blind date."

After marrying Patricia, they moved down to Miami, where he attended the University of Florida Miami. He earned his bachelor's degree in psychology.

"After school I didn't know what I wanted to do," Odenbach said. "It was 1973 and I ended up with a job with the United Fund, Dade County, which has since become United Way. Every city has a United Way. This has resulted in my taking quite an odyssey."

While there is a national United Way office, each city's United Way is independent, Odenbach said. Job listings from the various local offices are posted at national headquarters, but each local is responsible for its own hiring.

After Miami, Odenbach worked for a number of different United Way groups in Cleveland; Peoria, Ill., and Detroit, as well as working in the national headquarters.

"After Miami we went to Cleveland," Odenbach said. "We loved it there. We lived in Shaker Heights, which is a great community. From there I went to work at the New York office of United Way as the campaign director. That's the biggest office in the country."

After New York, he took a job at Peoria, where he headed the United Way there. While in Peoria, Odenbach attended the

POINTER OF INTEREST

University of Illinois, where he received his MBA.

In 1992, a scandal hit the United Way national office. Several officials were found to be acting in an unethical way. Because the group depends on donations at the local level, the locals were very angry said Odenbach.

"I had the chance to serve on the national United Way governance committee," Odenbach said. "It was our job to set new priorities and establish new rules to prevent the kinds of problems we had before. One of the first things we did was to re-establish the proper lines of authorities, rules and ethics. We had to get the locals' trust back and show them we were responsible. That took a couple of years."

This led to Odenbach's becoming Mid-America regional director. He said it was his job to go to local boards and help them understand changes made in the national in light of the scandal.

About two years ago, Odenbach landed in Detroit and moved to the Park. He manages the annual torch drive and said that Detroit has a long tradition of supporting the United Way.

"It was back in 1948 when the first torch drive was held," said Odenbach. "Going back through our records, we found an article from a 1948 Life magazine. It was the first combined campaign. Prior to 1948 various charitable groups like the March of Dimes, the YMCA or the American Heart Association would go to the auto plants every two weeks to seek donations. That got real awkward and Walter Reuther and Henry Ford said something had to be done."

The result was the first combined torch drive, Odenbach said.

The fundraising goal for 1948 was $8 million to be distributed to a variety of different organizations. They raised over $9 million. Since then, the United Way has raised over $1.7 billion in metro Detroit over the past 50 years. This year's goal is to raise $70 million.

Odenbach was never an opera fan growing up. He first became interested in opera back in Peoria.

"I was studying for my MBA and I would listen to the Met on the radio," Odenbach said. "There was a man who lived on my street who was director of the local opera group. He said that his group was looking for extras and asked if I would be interested."

Odenbach said sure and then proceeded to see how a show is put on. What impressed him the most was the logistics involved in the venture. There are singers, extras, musicians, stage hands who all have to work together with precision to put on a show. Not to mention the front office work involved in selling tickets, raising money and promoting a show.

"I run a big campaign myself," said Odenbach. "So I can appreciate the work involved. I found it all very interesting. Being an extra is a lot of work. While you don't sing, you have to know your marks and 'now your cues'."

In the opera "Rigoletto," Odenbach played one of the kidnappers.

He remembers having to scale a wall. But he also got to kill someone on stage, so it wasn't all bad. He performed in two operas in Peoria — "Otello" and "Aida."

When the family came to Detroit, the Michigan Opera Theater had just reopened the Detroit Opera House. Odenbach called up and said that he had experience as an extra on the vain hope that he would somehow get on stage with Luciano Pavarotti.

"That didn't happen but they did send me a schedule of practices for other shows," said Odenbach. "Being an extra for a big company like Detroit's takes 30 to 50 hours of rehearsal. For a show like Aida, there might be 100 extras. You might be chosen as an extra because you fit the costume brought in from San Francisco."

Part of the fun of being in a show, said Odenbach, is meeting people from different walks of life. Since everyone's an extra, they're all in the same boat whether the person next to you is a doctor or an automotive worker.

Upcoming operas coming to Detroit include "Madame Butterfly" and "Turandot" by Puccini. Odenbach believes they'll probably need a lot of extras.

"Putting on an opera is a huge project," said Odenbach. "It's fascinating watching everything come together."

Starr hints at evidence for impeachment

The Lewinsky case, which had almost slid into oblivion in recent weeks, has suddenly emerged into the limelight again as the defendant hires a new brace of lawyers whose pictures grace Page 1 of the New York Times.

In fact, the Lewinsky case seems to us to be the weakest of all the investigations that Kenneth Starr has begun of President Clinton.

Yet Starr last week hinted again that he is preparing material to offer to Congress that would enable the Republican majority to bring impeachment charges against Clinton.

That indicates the Lewinsky affair could eventually cost the president his office. He is accused by special prosecutor Starr of having had a sexual affair with Lewinsky, and then sought to have her cover it up under oath.

If true, Clinton's efforts would amount to suborning perjury, which is what Starr continues to try to prove. His latest attempt to ratchet up the pressure on Lewinsky was seeking her fingerprints and handwriting samples.

Starr, who apparently is responsible to nobody in the administration, last week sought to persuade the U.S. Supreme Court to require the Clinton administration to permit testimony of several individuals.

However, the Supreme Court delivered a swift rebuff to Starr's efforts to cut short the ordinary appellate route to the high court.

Instead, the high court said in two unanimous orders that it would not grant expedited hearings, or any hearings at all at this stage, on two of Starr's requests.

The scope of the attorney-client privilege the White House claimed for its lawyers, or the "protective function privilege" the White House sought for Secret Service agents.

In a way, however, it was ludicrous for Starr to request speedy action by the high court. After all, he has been investigating various charges against the president for more than four years.

While Starr has obtained the conviction of a former governor of Arkansas as well as assorted other people in the original investigation into Whitewater, he still appears to be gunning for the president, and unsuccessfully to date.

It is true that Starr served both the Reagan and Bush administrations in high Justice Department posts, and joined in at least one private action against the Clinton administration before he took his current office.

Those facts hardly make him the non-partisan special prosecutor his friends claim that he has been.

In the New York Times, he was quoted about the possibility of filing an impeachment report with Congress, adding that the Supreme Court's early rejection of Clinton's attempt to invoke the protection of the attorney-client privilege would aid that "vital goal."

As a result of Starr's efforts, it probably is true that, regardless of what finally happens to his case, Clinton will go down in history as at least our most bedeviled president.

Anti-casino drive still alive

The campaign against casinos in Detroit apparently is still alive.

After once admitting they were unable to obtain enough signatures to get the issue on the ballot, the people opposed to casinos took a deep breath, and decided to go ahead with their campaign anyway.

They were buoyed by a public opinion poll that found that 43 percent of those questioned said they were against casinos, and 49 percent said they were in favor, with the remaining 7 percent saying they didn't know.

The cause of casinos has always been a controversial one in Detroit and Michigan. It was approved by a 51-49 percent statewide vote in November 1996, and was defeated three times in Detroit before being approved in a fourth test at the polls.

Two reasons are usually given for the final approval that was won in the statewide vote.

One was the start-up of casino gambling in our neighboring city of Windsor which supposedly is attracting millions of dollars from Michiganders every week.

But we suspect a whispering campaign out in the state really accounted for the victory. It was especially effective in the conservative areas which normally would be expected to vote against gambling.

So what happened to change their minds?

It was the story that if casino gambling went over well in Detroit, out-state residents would not have to pay such high taxes to help Detroit.

That view, however, is not held by many foes of casino gambling because they believe the financial benefits of casino gambling will be more than offset by the social costs.

Those include the increased costs of law enforcement, higher welfare costs, more gambling addiction, and various other social costs that cannot be measured in money.

As a result of the closeness of the pro-and-con poll, however, we can expect a last-minute deluge of advertising and commercials supporting the casino gambling ventures.

Surprisingly, however, the anti-casino gambling forces have themselves put together a last-minute series of full-page ads in the Detroit dailies that states the case against gambling.

So it really looks as if this battle is not over until the election decides it in August.

Letters

Personal attack

To the Editor:

I write in response to a letter to the editor in the May 28 edition of the Grosse Pointe News ("At the root of the tree house flap") of personal attack levied upon me by a local physician regarding comments I had made in a previous letter pertaining to the decision of the Grosse Pointe Park City Council to deny the petition of some Park children to maintain a tree house in their back yard.

This local physician (whose name I have omitted because my purpose in writing — unlike his — is not to embarrass non-public figures by spreading their name throughout the news) through his rambling bombast proved the underlying thesis of my original letter; those who opposed children playing happily in their tree house were more concerned with aesthetics than how youngsters in their neighborhood are growing up.

The stakes here are very high, far higher than the obvious bickering between a triangle of neighbors that was the proximate cause for government interference in this matter to begin with.

Nowhere in the critical and caustic diatribe launched by the local physician do we find reference to the importance of raising children like our generations were raised — in a world of imagination, outdoor activities and seemingly endless summer playtime.

It would seem that this local heeler, like Mr. Clark, the Park council member he blindly defends, places greater importance on how beautifully symmetric and lovely to the eye our back yard accoutrements are than for the environment in which our little ones are being raised. Shame on them!

Regarding the local physician's charge that I was not present at the council meeting in question, I would rejoice by indicating that I was most familiar with the character of the staff writer who authored the front-page Grosse Pointe News story some weeks ago. Jim Stickleford is an old U.D. Jesuit High acquaintance. I have every confidence in the accuracy of Stickleford's reporting. In any case, one does not have to place one's hand in a beehive to know there are bees to be found therein.

I will leave it to the likes of the local physician and the minor local political personalities that he defended, to launch personal attacks. I take pleasure at being attacked in a personal manner if the end result permits all of us to keep our eyes on the real issue; what kind of environment are our children being raised in? Are we satisfied with the crime rates and the drug use in our schools? Are our city fathers in touch with our local communities, problems? These are important questions — far more important than the triangular dispute between the local physician and his neighbors.

Again, only the children have lost. Whatever happened to the sacred Hippocratic maxim "first do no harm?"

John A. Maksym

Nichols gets life for bombing

Mixed reactions were reported, especially in the Thumb area, when Michigan native Terry Nichols was sentenced to life imprisonment for his role in the Oklahoma City bombing.

Nichols' mother, Joyce Wilt, in a comment to the Detroit Free Press, said: "It's too bad they've got to put an innocent man in prison and corrupt all of our lives."

"All we are, all Terry is, is a scapegoat," she added. "We have hope, but we know it's going to take time. All of this will continue, and we're going to continue to support Terry because we know he is innocent."

Nichols' older brother, James, told the Free Press that the sentencing is "just a formality, a procedure." And then he added:

"There's appeals in the 10th District. And there's appeals to the Supreme Court. This is just one little step."

But the opinions of those who lost relatives or friends in the explosion, whether from Michigan or somewhere else, showed little sympathy for either Nichols or for Timothy McVeigh, the bomber convicted earlier and sentenced to life imprisonment.

In sentencing Nichols, U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch said the bombing plot was more than an act of violence against the workers in the federal building that was bombed.

Instead, "It is a crime against the Constitution of the United States," the judge declared.

With the sentencing of the principals in the case, we hope that leaders of militia groups in Michigan and elsewhere will maintain a new vigilance against admitting people who talk wildly of attacking federal or public officials at any level.

McNamara 'insults' Pointes

A Grosse Pointer who attended the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce get-together at Mackinac Island last week took exception to part of Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara's talk.

And, in fact, so do we.

In a discussion of the transportation problems of Detroit and Wayne County, McNamara told the audience that the only reason Grosse Pointers supported SMART, the suburban bus line, was "so that their maids could get to work."

Our informant said he was "insulted" by such a remark from the county executive, who is running for re-election this year.

It is, of course, an old joke that Detroiters and other non-Pointers have been making at the Pointes' expense for years. But we still don't like it when it comes from a county official.

McNamara would have known better if he had taken part in SMART's campaign for continued support two years ago. If he had paid attention, he would know that many people other than maids come out to the Pointes via SMART. Many Pointers use the line to get to work downtown, visit doctors' or dentists' offices, or even to go shopping downtown.

Perhaps he will learn something if he pays attention to what is said in this year's campaign to renew the millage in the August primary.

We had thought McNamara was supporting the SMART renewal, but he now may be supporting Detroit's idea that only a unification of the SMART and D-Dot line run by Detroit can provide the needed service.

We also disagree with that idea.

Ain't it grand

Editor's note: The author, Mark Barrows, died July 13, 1997. In his memory, the Grosse Pointe News had a flowering pear tree planted at Grosse Pointe Park's Windmill Pointe Park and dedicated it Friday, June 5. Following is an appropriate column written by Mr. Barrows before his death.

I don't know much about photosynthesis, but I know what I like: leaves and trees. I like to see the green mid-spring leaves burst their buds overnight and stretch toward the sun.

I like the way the leaves filter and tint the sunlight and turn dark-side light-side, dark-side light-side in the breeze. I like to run my fingers along their edges and veins and slick faces. I like dappled shade and the sound of wind-gust-driven swooshing sky sweeps.

There are still some places in the Pointes where oak, maple, ash, elm, et al. touch fingers 30 feet up over the street. Dozens of different greens can be seen in that canopy. I like the individual shapes of the leaves and the forms they collectively create. From the lake, looking north up the shoreline, this area looks almost like a forest.

But most of all, I like to look up on a May day and see all that promising greenery. The British poet A.E. Houseman wrote:

"When green buds hang in the elm like dust

And sprinkle the lime like rain,

Forth I wander, forth I must, And drink of life again."

The biologists explain all this with such terms as post dormancy, chlorophyll and carbohydrates, soil temperature, photo periods, carbon dioxide, abscisic acid and gibberellin content.

Researchers look down into their eyepieces, peer, probe, ponder and then figure out how everything works. I like to think they also walk outside at lunch time, look up at the new spring growth and think, "ain't it grand!"

Scientific ignorance isn't bliss, but neither is life shorn of imponderables. Before the learned focused their high-powered lenses and began to dissect life down to the atom and beyond, there were some colorful interpretations of natural phenomena. Knowledge separates us from superstition, but hopefully not from spiritual contemplation.

A few years ago a California biology professor, an established authority on chemical evolutionary theory, was disciplined by his university for suggesting to students that life has an "intelligent design" behind it.

What's wrong with seeing soul along with the cells and molecules? There is grandeur to the science of green growing things that rivals the beauty of their countenance, and impugns theories of randomness.

Trees are common and yet so uncommonly impressive. They are the oldest and most massive living things on the planet except, of course, for the U.S. national debt and the Whitewater investigation.

They have been sacred symbols and objects of admiration since the first time a human stood next to a tree on a prehistoric May day, looked up, saw the new leaves and tried to figure out what was going on. (This is more or less what I do every spring.)

There is an enormous oak in the back yard of the house where I grew up in Detroit. Last time I drove by, it looked rather peaked but still alive. It was huge in 1950 when we moved there and I played in its shade and raked up its droppings.

Oaks can live 200 or 300 years. I like to think that tree was a strong sapling when William Hull surrendered to the British at Detroit during the War of 1812, and the forests stretched from Monroe to Mackinac. I wish it well.

Trees are excellent role models. To paraphrase the song, "they know when to hold 'em and when to unfold 'em." They usually have good posture. They put down deep, wide-ranging roots for nourishment and to maintain a solid foundation against tempests

In February you think they are dead, in October they look like Van Gogh's palette. Trees spew oxygen into the air, soak up carbon dioxide, rescue cats from dogs, shade and shield, bear fruit, prevent errant downhill skiers from wreaking havoc among their more capable companions, arrest soil erosion, take in boarders, grow in Brooklyn and inspire poetry and platitudes.

Some trees around here serve as memorials, with inscribed bronze plaques at their base. What a splendid way to honor a loved one! Across the hemispheres, across the ages, from Italy to Indonesia, people have planted trees to celebrate life. Trees symbolize and express qualities we long to see in ourselves and others. They show us strength, staying power and resiliency in times of trouble, patience, promise, renewal, growth, beauty and lofty aspirations. They encourage us to look up.

The tiny little neutrino

It is hard to believe in a particle that is so small and so fast that it can pass through a thickness of a light-year of lead, some six trillion miles, without hitting anything. That fact is more illustration of our knowledge that all stuff made of atoms, everything, is mostly space. But the atoms are banging around, their movements taking up space, so things appear solid, even dense.

The neutrino was postulated 68 years ago by that famous Italian physicist, Enrico Fermi, who was one of the fathers of atomic energy and a contributor to the development of the first atomic bomb. Various findings suggested the existence of such a particle, which unlike the proton or electron, had no charge, and was very small, maybe even having no mass.

The neutrino was discovered when physicists wanted to know more about cosmic radiation, which comes from the fusion reaction which keeps the sun burning hot, continuously. Somehow, the fusion of hydrogen atoms to form helium in the sun sends out cosmic rays which can penetrate anything. It was Enrico Fermi who named the as yet undiscovered particle, "neutrino," which simply meant in Italian, "little neutral one."

It was little and neutral and there seemed to be no way of proving its existence one way or the other. But astrophysicists are not easily daunted. One way to produce neutrinos is to employ a particle accelerator which produces intense beams of neutrinos. This requires massive amounts of money and electricity, and they were not learning much.

So a bunch of physicists got the bright idea that since neutrinos come from outer space and penetrate the entire earth, leaving no evidence of their travel, that they should construct large underground pools of pure water. These pools are in total darkness and as large as a cathedral. There are about a dozen now, all around the world, as we speak.

They anticipated that it would be a matter of time before a neutrino would hit something, but they had to be able to detect it. And the dark, sunken pool was the way to do it. They postulated that if a neutrino collided with a water molecule, made up of oxygen and hydrogen, it would break it up and produce a tiny light. The walls of the dark pool were full of sensitive light-detectors, so if any tiny flash of light were to take place in this total darkness, it had to be evidence of a neutrino. Interesting.

Years ago I was reading about these neutrino detectors, some built into mountains, as in the Japanese Alps, and some deep in the ice of Antarctica. There are hundreds of physicists interested in neutrinos and they keep in touch with each other, waiting for some tiny light. Well, it just happened in Japan, in Takayama, and the story made the front page of the New York Times (Friday, June 5). In a historic, landmark meeting of American and Japanese scientists, they announced that they had found the existence of mass in a notoriously elusive subatomic particle called the neutrino.

They insist the neutrino must have some mass because there was evidence of its changing form after collision in the dark water. And if it can change form, then it must have mass, and so the cosmologists have to go back to their drawing boards to figure a universe with zillions of neutrinos, all of which have mass or weight. The universe is heavier than they thought. Now maybe the total gravitational pull of all the neutrinos is enough to prevent the universe from expanding forever. So now some are thinking that in a few quadrillion eons the universe will be collapsing upon itself.

My common sense tells me the astrophysicists are not studying the neutrino as simply 'science for science' sake. What is at stake are new sources of energy, as we will eventually run out of fossil fuels. I wonder if there was ever a time that humans learned of an impending problem and sought to remedy it years in advance of any catastrophe. In this case, scientists are working intensely to know whatever there is to know about the natural world, which includes the massive, maybe infinite universe, and ever tiny particles, which are the basis of it.

Unlike the atom bomb or hydrogen bomb, which are very destructive, and the neutron bomb, which is almost science fiction, there can't be a neutrino bomb, because its particles pass through everything without causing damage. Perhaps we should call one, if ever made, the peace-bomb. Hopefully harnessing the power of the neutrino would give our descendants abundant, clean and cheap energy.

Maintaining an upbeat tone, that great writer, John Updike, wrote a poem about the neutrino:

"Neutrinos, they are very small,

They have no charge and have no mass

And do not interact at all. The earth is just a silly ball.

To them, through which they simply pass

Like dust mites down a drafty hall."

Which leaves nothing else to say.

Attorney gets into the act

The sign in his office window on Kercheval in the Park says, "Honest Lawyer," and now attorney Frank McCarroll has a new title to put up next to his shingle: "Pretty Heroic Guy."

Seems that Frank was in the hallway of the county courthouse in Pittsburgh a week or so ago, waiting for the start of a shooting trial, when a man sentenced in another case decided to break away from a deputy and fling himself over a second-floor balcony railing.

As the deputy and an intern grappled with the man, dangling 20 to 25 feet over the hard marble floor below, ex-paratrooper McCarroll noted that the would-be suicide appeared to be winning.

"The deputy who grabbed him was starting to shake," McCarroll was quoted as saying to a Pittsburgh Herald-Standard reporter. "He was losing his grip."

By now the man was halfway over the edge, kicking at the deputy holding him by the leg shackles and "doing everything he could to go over."

So our Park attorney climbed over the railing and inched along the narrow ledge to pry the man's fingers from the lower edge of the balcony.

With everyone tugging, the man was finally pulled back to safety.

Frank credits the intern with saving the day by grabbing the man's chains as he dived over the rail. "A second later, and there would have been blood all over," he said.

(Thanks to the Little Blue Book's Lorie Johnson for tipping FYI to the story.)

The pheasants are revolting!

It's no cock and bull story. The man on the other end of the line swore, attested and affirmed that what he saw last week was true.

"I was near the corner of Maumee and Lakeland when I saw a young girl jogging down the street," he said. "She was being followed by what I thought at first was a dog." When he got closer he realized that instead, it was "a beautiful cock pheasant."

The big bird was chasing the girl, who appeared to be 17 or 18.

"She ran across Maumee, and it followed her across the street," he said. "Then she ran back, and it followed her back — it wasn't giving up."

Finally the girl reached a house surrounded by an iron picket fence with two women in the yard and the pheasant hesitated, then stalked away.

"I've never seen a pheasant act so aggressive," he says. "Maybe she got too close, or maybe she had on some kind of pheasant perfume that attracted it."

"If it was her perfume, hunters would pay $1,000 a bottle for it."

FYI's informant requests that his name be kept out of this and, considering the story, it's understandable. The pheasant might go after all the witnesses next.

Hatching a new approach

What that Pointe pheasant lacked in diplomacy and tact, these birds make up for: The Park's Joe Trueman observed a new breed of Canada geese the week before last and he still can't get over it.

Joe, working as a docent at the Dossin Museum on Belle Isle, says Michigan Humane Society volunteers were out that week as part of a program to reduce the goose population on the island.

"They were taking the eggs from nesting geese and replacing them with artificial eggs so they wouldn't hatch," says Joe. This usually caused a flap among the nesting geese, who weren't too keen on having their eggs tampered with, he says.

"There was one pair of geese that was different," says Joe. "When the workers went to take the eggs from their nest, the female called to the papa goose and he came flying over — but instead of attacking, they both just looked up at the people, as if they were pleading with their eyes."

Joe says the geese were acting more like dogs or cats, begging.

It must have gotten to the Humane Society volunteers: "Pretty soon they put the real eggs back and left to go work on the other side of the island," Joe says.

The final result? "They've got seven goslings now," says Joe.

The Pitter-Patter of little parties

Last year there was a mariachi band, this year it was pop tunes by keyboardist Mark Madison with John Rutherford on brass and Callaghan's Bob Codish on guitar and harmonica.

Otherwise, the venue was the same: A great outdoor bash last Wednesday at the Phil Patters Garden Center, Vernor and Aiter, to celebrate another year of the Grosse Pointe Park Business & Professional Association.

New Volkswagen Beetle lives up to its hype

We have never driven a new car for evaluation that drew the kind of enthusiastic attention that the '98 Volkswagen Beetle received everywhere from all ages.

Little kids waved and laughed. Members of the gray-haired set (which includes me) were eager to inspect and talk about the car. Boomers driving BMWs and Porsches gave us "thumbs up" signs.

In gasoline stations and restaurant parking lots, strangers came over to check out the odd-looking little car and, often, to talk longingly about a Beetle they had owned when they were young. Others cle.

From there, we took it through the myriad small towns in Ohio, shunning the turnpike, and accidentally into Cleveland. We gave up and got on to the turnpike, drove past Pittsburgh, exited at Breezewood and wound up a rather long day of driving in Hagerstown, Md., none the worse for wear. No stiff back, no discomfort.

The next day, it was an affluent suburb north of Baltimore to visit friends, then finally across the Chesapeake Bay bridge to our ultimate destination of Chincoteague Island. Everywhere it drew smiles and shouts of approval. I think part of the car's wide appeal is that those who loved the earlier Volkswagen Beetles fondly are reminded of that popular car and those who didn't are attracted by its odd, off-the-wall art-deco streamliner look.

The car was variously described as "cute," "sweet," "lovable," "huggable," "cool," etc. But backing up this emotional response to the car's styling is the fact that it is an exceptional car.

Based on the Volkswagen Golf, the Beetle blends that solid car's many virtues, excellent design and high quality with a goofy look that is just right — not quite ugly, not quite foolish, a little weird, very fresh and, in an odd way, very 21st Century.

We parked the car next to a Ferrari in the parking lot of a shopping mall in Salisbury, Md. When we came out, there was, as always, a group of people admiring it. No one paid any attention to the Ferrari.

So if you want to impress people, forget about the Rolls-Royce or Lamborghini, get yourself a VW Beetle. But you'll have to get in line. The 1998 allotment for this country is already sold and waiting lists are the rule at virtually all dealerships.

The Beetles are built in Volkswagen's plant in Puebla, Mexico. Volkswagen figured the car's greatest appeal would be in the United States. But reaction to the car in Europe was so positive that the company now plans to build Beetles at a plant in Europe also.

The new Beetle has a solid base upon which to build. The first Beetle, designed in the early '30s by Ferdinand Porsche, was in production longer than any other car in history, far surpassing Ford's Model T. In fact, it is still in production in Mexico. More than 20 million of the old Beetles have been sold worldwide and almost five million in the United States alone.

The first thing you notice upon sitting in the new Beetle is that there is more headroom than you are used to and that the seats are uncommonly comfortable. Interior finish exudes a feeling of quality, up-to-date technology and design.

Surfaces are bright metal and textured plastics in tasteful, conservative colors. The sills of the front door windows are steel painted to match the exterior, an interesting touch that doesn't always work, but it does in the Beetle.

Start the car and it is a very different experience than the earlier Beetle. The engine is quiet. It is water-cooled and is in front, driving the front wheels. The car looks radical, but in fact is not. It is a Golf with a fun body.

The biggest difference is in its ride and handling, which are extraordinarily good. It corners and holds the road more like a Porsche than an early Beetle. The ride is controlled, but not harsh. Its 16 well equipped (unlike the previous Beetle). In fact, it is better and more attractive than most cars, at any price. At night, the gauges are well lit and easy to read, illuminated with neon blue light with red accents.

This new Beetle shows what an auto manufacturer can do to enhance safety without gimmicks and without running the price up to burdensome levels. It does not automatically lock your doors, but it does provide side air bags in addition to the usual front air bags. This is unusual for cars of any price, let alone under too young to know anything about the original Beetle except what their parents told them were fascinated with it.

It drew enthusiastic thumbs up driving through the affluent suburbs of Chicago and just as enthusiastic shouts of approval driving through the South Side of Chicago.

We drove the new bright blue Beetle from Grosse Pointe to Chicago, then to Goshen, Ind., in the heart of the Bible Belt. People used to seeing polished Amish horse-drawn carts on their streets were astonished at this vehi-

It may not look like it could, but the Beetle is normal enough that it can go through an automatic car wash without hurting itself or the car wash.

inch wheels undoubtedly help and also improve its looks.

Performance is better than average for its class. Engine is a 115-horsepower two-liter four-cylinder unit which consistently delivered over 32 miles per gallon, better than the EPA's ratings of 23 city/29 highway.

The Beetle runs for hours at interstate speeds without breathing hard. Our test vehicle had the standard five-speed manual gearbox. As one expects from Volkswagen, the gearbox is exceptionally precise, smooth and user-friendly.

The instrument panel is $20,000.

The Beetle also scored well in the federal government's crash tests. Unfortunately, anti-lock brakes are not standard (but they're a bargain option at $300). This may be a response to consumer resistance to ABS caused by baseless reports of safety problems.

Base price of the new Beetle is $15,700. Our test vehicle was equipped with an optional sport package (alloy wheels, upscale tires and fog lamps) adding $410; convenience package (cruise control and power windows), adding $470;

Other options available are four-speed automatic transmission, $875; partial leather trim, $700, and power glass sunroof, $690.

So the new Beetle isn't as cheap and entry-level as the original Beetle. But it doesn't feel or act like it either. It is one of the most pleasant vehicles we have driven in years. It feels like it is built to last.

Aside from its excellent performance and great comfort, the new Beetle is fun. It makes people smile.

VW took a chance in responding to what seemed to be a longing for the old Beetle among visitors to the North American International Auto Show a couple of years ago in

Pack nutritious snacks for the road

If you're taking a long car trip this summer, don't leave the "pit stops" to chance.

"A few minutes of planning can help even out the peaks and valleys of highway hunger," said Dianne Lucas, a representative of TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly).

Here are tasty, healthy tidbits to take along for the ride.

Breads — Bagels, breadsticks, unsweetened cereals, low-fat muffins.

Beverages — Flavored seltzers, individual fruit juice boxes, iced tea.

Fruits — Bananas, apples, oranges, seedless grapes.

Dried fruits — Apricots, raisins and dates.

Veggies — baby carrots, sliced celery or green pepper sticks, round cucumber slices.

Learning about tasty, nutritious snack choices is just one of many things TOPS members do to improve their eating habits. To find out about TOPS chapters in your area, call Barb LaMontagne at (313) 724-0603 or toll-free at (800) 932-8677. TOPS website is <http://www.tops.org>.

reaction to a concept car (which this production car looks very much like).

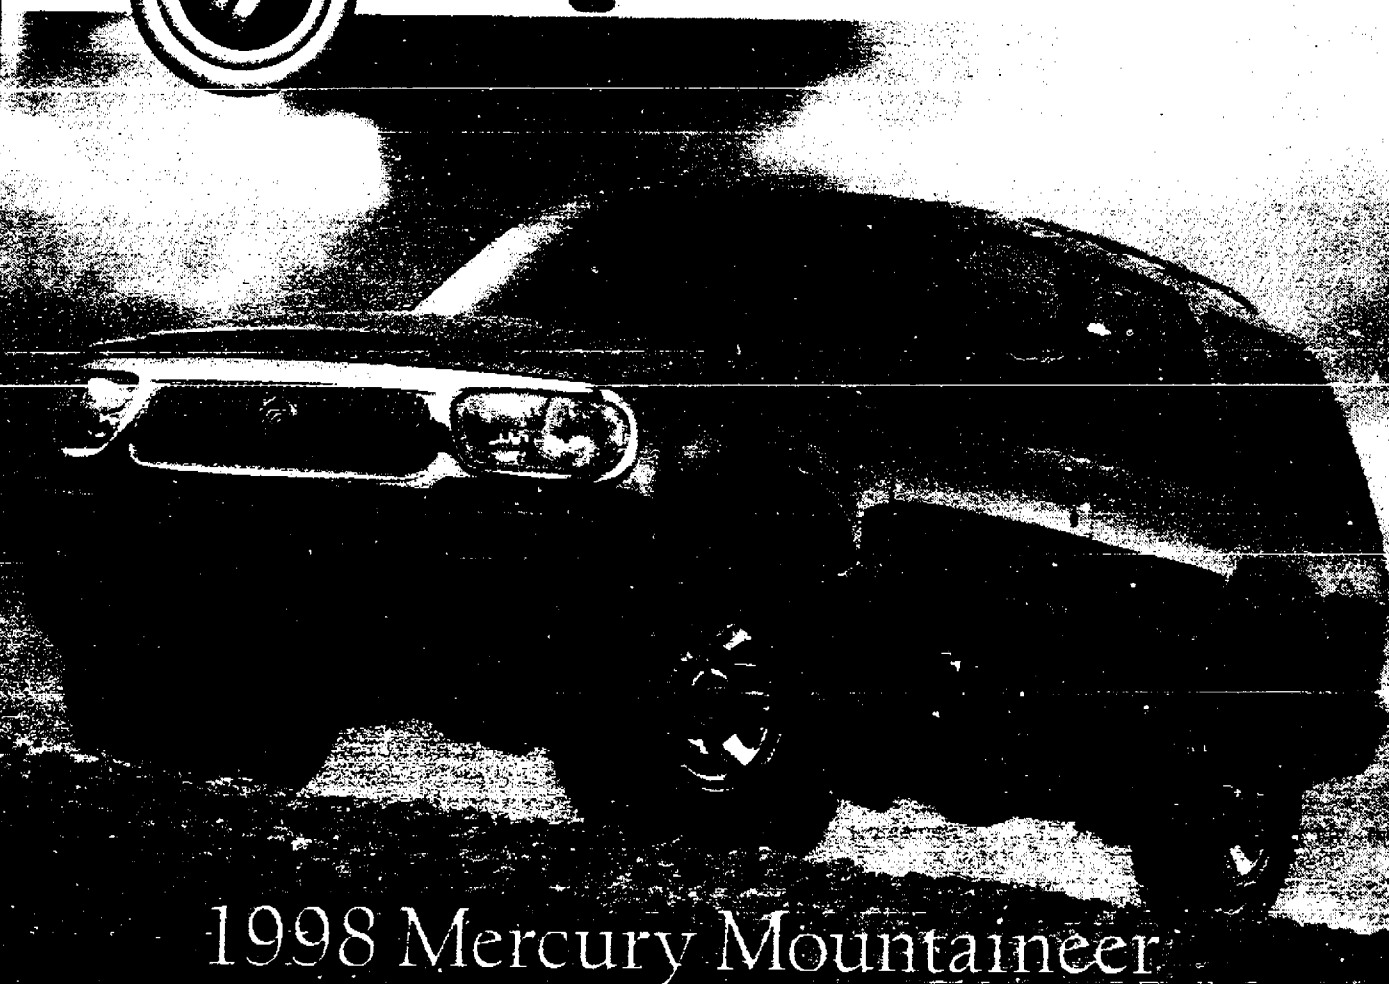

In an age when Detroit drops cars like the Buick Reatta and Pontiac Fiero and tosses out good old names like Impala, it might be smart to pay attention to the reaction to the new Beetle. We like to have fun.

Vipers and Corvettes are nice, but the Beetle is a car for everyman. Some of Chrysler's concept cars hint at a similar attempt to make cars good, safe and fun, but the Neon got toned down too much and became just another compact car.

One of the reasons imports made inroads into the market here in the first place was that they were fun. The Beetle shows that automobiles do not have to be serious, overblown and pompous. It may force Detroit to have more fun.

The new Beetle at a shopping mall in Salisbury, Md., spends an unusual moment stopped without fans clustering around it.

Kathleen Cullen Sullivan

A funeral Mass was celebrated on Friday, June 5, in St. Clare of Montefalco Catholic Church in Grosse Pointe Park for Park resident Kathleen Cullen Sullivan, who died in the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center in St. Clair Shores on Sunday, May 31, 1998.

Mrs. Sullivan, 96, was born in Detroit and attended Detroit Teacher's College from 1920-1922. For a while in the 1920s, she was an auditorium teacher for the Detroit public school system, putting on pageants on safety and health issues.

An active member of the community, Mrs. Sullivan was a member of the Detroit Yacht Club, the Bon Secours Guild and the St. John Hospital Auxiliary. She also invested wisely in real estate and took a great interest in recording the history of her family, which extends back to the French side of the Napoleonic Wars.

Mrs. Sullivan is survived by her two sons, Dr. Thomas Sullivan and Tim Sullivan, D.D.S.; eight grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren. She was predeceased by her husband, Michael R. Sullivan, D.D.S.

Interment is at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery in Southfield. Funeral arrangements were handled by the Chas. Verheyden Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Park.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Capuchin Soup Kitchen, 1760 Mount Elliott, Detroit, Mich., 48207.

Eleanor Judge Lyczynski

A memorial service was held in Etk's Lodge No. 34 in St. Clair Shores on Sunday, June 7, for former Grosse Pointe Farms resident Eleanor Judge Lyczynski, who died on Friday, May 22, 1998, in St. John Hospital in Detroit.

Mrs. Lyczynski, 81, was born and grew up in the Farms. She is survived by her husband, Leonard Lyczynski; a son, Timothy Judge; two sisters, Mary Mollen and Irene Demorest; and a brother, Al Marsack. Funeral arrangements were handled by the Buehler Funeral Home of Roseville.

Chester Norton

A funeral service was held on Saturday, June 6, in the Robison-Bahmiller Funeral Home in Saline for former Grosse Pointe Farms resident Chester Norton, who died in the Saline Community Hospital on Thursday, June 4, 1998.

Mr. Norton, 83, was born in Marshall, Ill., and worked as a tool and die maker at Chrysler's Mound Road engine plant. He served in the U.S. Navy.

Mr. Norton is survived by his wife, Barbara Griffin; a son, David; two sisters, Mary Rayburn and Bessie Walker; a brother, Jesse; and three grandchildren. He was predeceased by a son, Donnie LeRoy Norton.

Interment is at White Chapel Memorial Cemetery in Troy.

Katherine B. Larwin

Grosse Pointe Park resident Katherine B. Larwin died in the home of her daughter in Roosevelt Park on Sunday, June 7, 1998.

Mrs. Larwin, 94, was a homemaker and a member of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church. She is survived by a daughter, Carol Park; three grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren. She was predeceased by her husband, Richard.

Interment is at Roseland Park Mausoleum. Funeral arrangements were handled by the Clock Funeral Home of Muskegon. Memorial contributions may be made to the charity of the donor's choice.

James A. Alogdelis

A funeral service will be held in the Assumption Greek Orthodox Church in St. Clair Shores at 11 a.m. on Thursday, June 11, for Grosse Pointe Woods resident James A. Alogdelis who died on Saturday, June 6, 1998.

Mr. Alogdelis, 81, was born in Akron, Ohio, and did his undergraduate studies at Kent State University. He did post-graduate work at Stanford and received his master's degree and Ph.D. from Columbia.

A veteran of both World War II and the Korean War, Mr. Alogdelis served in the U.S. Navy, earning the rank of Lieutenant Commander. He was a school teacher and principal at the Harding Elementary School in Ferndale and was a teacher at Poupard and Parcels in the Grosse Pointe school system.

An active member of the community, Mr. Alogdelis served on the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council for many years and was on the church council and was Sunday school principal at Assumption Church. He was also a member of the Grosse Pointe Senior Men's Club and enjoyed reading, sculpting and playing golf.

Mr. Alogdelis is survived by his wife of 51 years, Mary; and three sisters, Karsant, Stella Chavox and Penny Van Doros.

Interment is at Forest Lawn Cemetery in Detroit. Funeral arrangements were handled by the A.H. Peters Funeral Home in Grosse Pointe Woods.

South seniors win Mothers' Club scholarships

The Grosse Pointe South High School Mothers' Club Scholarship Committee is pleased to announce that 40 graduating seniors were honored at the Mothers' Club Scholarship Awards presentation at Grosse Pointe South High School on May 11.

The students received more than $20,000 in scholarship funds from the Mothers' Club and nearly $26,000 from community organizations and memorial funds whose scholarships are administered by the Mother's Club.

Twenty-two students received Mothers' Club Scholarships: Matthew Barry, Rachel Blair, Kathryn Bossler, Dionne Carloni, Sarah Chopp, Julie Huvaere, James Jahnke, Matthew Keating, Valbona Kokoshi, Joshua McAninch, Jennifer McCall, Anna Olson, Maya Rhodes, Jennie Vietzke, Jeremiah Staes, Jennifer Stephens, Gianna Truba, Julie VanCamp, Noel Rozny, Amanda Watkins, and Allison Worrell. In addition, the Mothers' Club funded the Delta Kappa Gamma Scholarship awarded to Michelle McLay.

Eighteen students received community or memorial scholarships.

Among the honorees were Nicole Potenga, Alpha Delta Kappa Scholarship; Damian Manire, Grosse Pointe South

Grosse Pointe South High School seniors excelled academically, and won numerous scholarships from the school's Mothers' Club and from various community organizations.

High School Alumni Association Scholarship; Meredith Blair, Grosse Pointe Woman's Club Achievement Award; and Aimee Topacio, the Alice Kelly McKee Scholarship. James Thomas received the first Remax in the Pointes Scholarship.

Receiving Booster Club Scholarships were Megan McGahey, the Stephanie Prychitko Scholarship; and Patrick Reynolds, the Chuck Hollosy Scholarship. Receiving scholarships from the Grosse Pointe Rotary Club were Kristin Abel, Marissa Beer, James Feagin, and Michael Manousakakis. Christopher Schulte and Janel Zuidema received Grosse Pointe Rotary Sunrise Club Scholarships.

The following students received scholarships honoring the memory of three former South students. Sarah Kraft and Kenneth Mazer-Schmidt received the Jeffrey R. Halso Memorial Scholarships. Mary Sullivan was awarded the Bradford J. Koenig Memorial Scholarship. The Eric J. Rentenbach Scholarship Awards were presented to Aimee Constantine and Brian Steele.

"The Mothers' Club is honored and delighted to be able to play a role in helping these fine young people achieve their dreams for the future," said Kate Callas, Mothers' Club vice president for scholarship.

In addition to raising funds for scholarships, the Mothers' Club earmarks fundraising dollars for preservation and enhancement of South's 70-year-old building, and provides funding for a wide variety of educational enrichment experiences which touch every student at South.

North student awarded statewide scholarship

An educational foundation recently awarded a $1,000 scholarship to Jeanine F. Chan of Grosse Pointe, the daughter of Stephen and May Jean Chan.

The educational group — the Michigan Educational Employees Mutual Insurance Co. (MEEMIC) — recognizes top high school students in Michigan whose parents are in the field of education. May Jean Chan is a mathematics teacher in the Grosse Pointe Public School System.

Chan was one of 16 recipients in Michigan. There were nearly 900 applicants statewide this year.

Jeanine Chan was the class treasurer at Grosse Pointe

North High School. She was an 11-year member of the Girl Scouts, and was accepted to the Governor's Honor Guard for three years. She was a member of the National Honor Society, the international club and the forensics team.

Chan was also active in many activities at the church she attends, particularly the church's youth group. She was a member of the Alpha Mu Theta math honors club and co-chaired the spirit committee for the homecoming planning committee. Jeanine will attend the University of Michigan in the fall; she plans to study engineering.

The MEEMIC Foundation for the Future of Education

tion is to support Michigan's education community and their families in the furtherance of their education.

Library board to meet June 15

A public meeting of the board of trustees of the Grosse Pointe Public Library will take place on Monday, June 15 at 7 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club, 17150 Waterloo, in the City of Grosse Pointe, Michigan 48230.

All members of the public are invited to attend.

Any member of the public who may be in need of special assistance or accommodation at such meeting because of a disability may contact the library at the following address and telephone number: Vickie Bloom, director of libraries, Grosse Pointe Public Libraries Central Branch, 10 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe, Mich. 48236, or (313) 343-2325.

Minutes of this and any open meeting of the board are available for public review at the Central Branch of the library.

Ferry Elementary smiles

Third graders at Ferry Elementary School wore big smiles recently as they displayed their research projects on topics that ranged from manatees and snakes, to foot size and Walt Disney World.

Students had been researching their projects since September, and "a great deal of information was learned by all," said teacher Jane Ellis.

Grosse Pointe Academy student Kelsey Marie Serra paints a picture for her grandmother, Millie Isopi, during the recent Grandparents and Special Friends Day held at the school. Students in Early School through fifth grade hosted grandparents, aunts, uncles and special friends with breakfast, vocal and instrumental concerts and homeroom activities.

June 20 sidewalk sale will include used library books

The Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library will hold a used book sale on Saturday, June 20, during the Hill Association's Sidewalk Sale.

Books will be sold on the terrace of Central Library, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In lieu of a Friends Preview, members may show their 1998 Friends membership stickers to receive two free paperbacks or one hard cover book.

Memberships may be purchased at the door.

Field day

With the Grosse Pointe school year coming to a close, physical education teachers at the elementary and middle schools are busy running field days. Shown here are scenes from Mercer Middle School's annual all-school field day, including a tug of war and a wheelbarrow race.

Neighborhood Club offers Summer Tot Camp

The Neighborhood Club will offer a Tot Camp for ages 3 and 4. (Children must be age 3 by Dec. 1) The camp will feature a special theme each week and will include arts and crafts, games, and storytelling. A total of eight sessions are offered during the summer months, beginning the week of June 15. The last sessions are offered during the summer months, beginning the week of June 15. The last session will be held the week of Aug. 3.

Each session consists of two or three days a week camps from 9 a.m. until noon. Children may attend Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, or Tuesdays and Thursdays. The Monday-Wednesday-Friday sessions are $45, or $40 each when signing up for three or more sessions. The cost for Tuesday-Thursday sessions is $30, or $25 each when registering for three or more sessions. Nonmembers have the option to pay an additional fee of $14 per session, or purchase a Neighborhood Club membership for $28.

Registrations are accepted in person or by mail to the Neighborhood Club at 17150 Waterloo, Grosse Pointe, 48230. Registrations are also accepted by fax to (313) 885-2418 when paying by Visa or MasterCard. Camp size is limited. For more information, call (313) 885-4600.

North, South students to be engineering interns at Ford

Two Grosse Pointe high school seniors, Jeanine Chan of North and Kevin Fisher of South have been awarded summer internships as a part of the Ford High School Science and Technology Program.

To compete for awards, participants must attend at least four weekend seminars at the Ford Scientific Research Laboratory in Dearborn and write a 2,500 word research paper on an appropriate scientific or technical subject.

Jeanine Chan, daughter of Stephen and May Jean Chan wrote her paper on Collision Avoidance Systems and has been assigned to work in Material Science Research at the Scientific Research Labs.

Kevin Fisher, son of Noel and Jackie Fisher of the City of Grosse Pointe did his research on Fuel Cell technology and will work in Special Vehicle Engineering at the Ford Dearborn Technical Center in Allen Park.

Both students plan to attend the University of Michigan School of Engineering in the fall.

How to shoot patterns and design

Patterns and designs are encountered so often in our daily lives, they can play an important part in our photography. They can make order out of chaos and lend harmony to a seemingly meaningless design.

How exciting it is as a photographer to draw attention to the often unnoticed wealth of detail in the worlds of patterns and designs around us.

Around your home is a good place to begin. Patterns in brickwork, a design in the floor tile or shadows on the steps all have photographic potential.

Don't forget your car. A design in the grille or a detail of ornamentation may reward you with an impact-filled shot.

Architecture, both new and old, offers a multitude of pattern and design possibilities. Look closely at buildings, even some under construction, and you'll see numerous and exciting photographic design opportunities.

Photography

By Monte Nagler

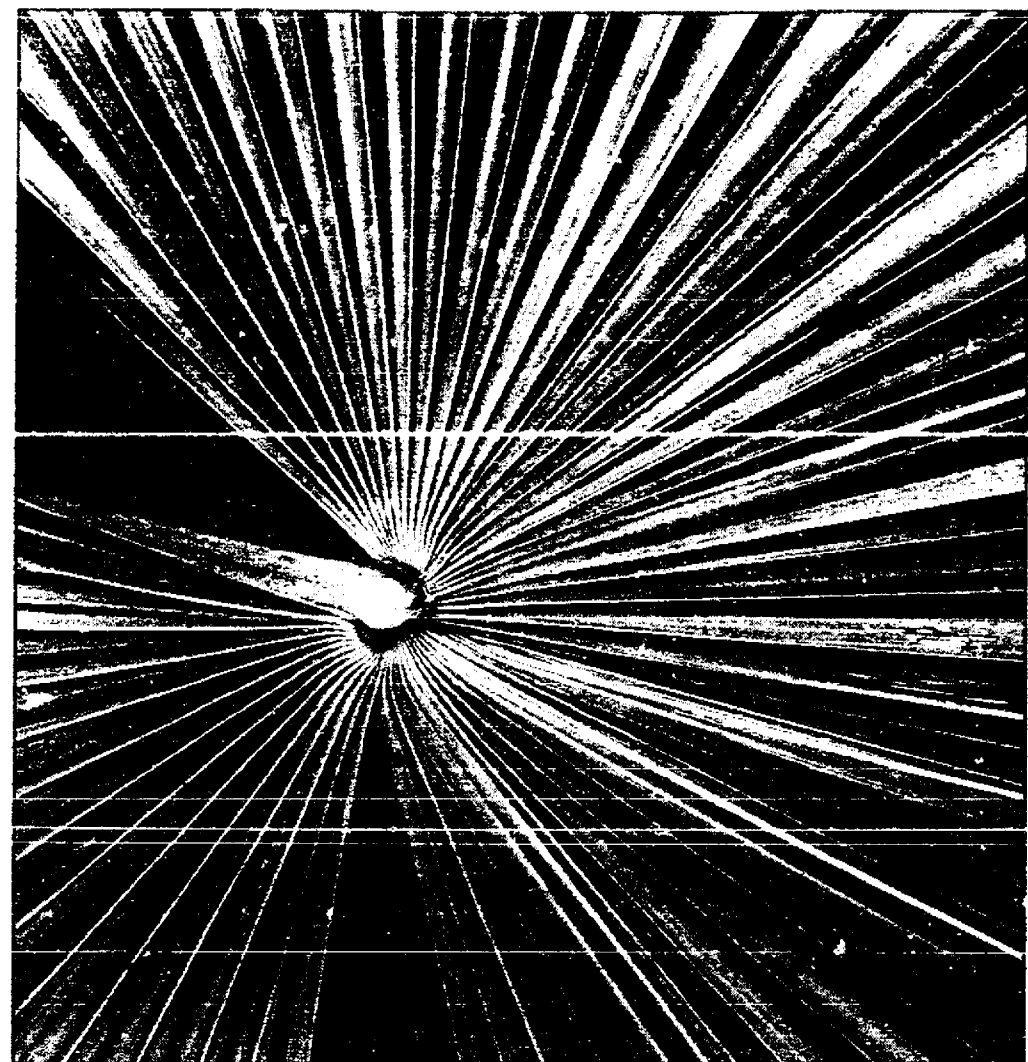

Be sure to look for pattern in nature. Windswept sand, a close-up of a shell or an intricate inspection of an individual leaf will all produce meaningful pictures.

Always have your photographic vision turned on. A recent trip to Naples, Fla., enabled me to make the photograph shown here. Not the whole palm plant but a close-up of a single "fan" resulted in this dramatic pattern of nature.

One of the best ways to see pattern and design is to use a viewing mask. A "window" cut from a piece of cardboard will do just fine. Your viewing mask will isolate pattern and design from distracting surroundings. You'll find yourself zooming in on meaningful subjects you never knew were there.

Remember, the aim of creative photography is to make a visual interpretation of something that moves you, not just to record an image. With pattern and design, you can do just that!

Nature provides an abundance of pattern and design for your camera as shown in Monte Nagler's detail of a palm leaf. Often all it takes is moving in close.

Trouble in North

A private security guard reported to Woods public safety officers that between 10:45 p.m. Sunday, June 7 and 1:45 a.m. Monday, June 8, several trees around North High School were covered with toilet paper. "Do not cross" yellow tape and toilet paper was also stretched across the North entrance and obscenities were sprayed on the front and back of the school.

Police spoke with witnesses who saw a dark Ford Probe parked by a nearby street. Officers believe the car was used to transport the vandals to the school.

Purloined airbag

A 1997 Ford parked in front of a house in the 1800 block of Bournemouth was broken into between late Wednesday night and the morning of Thursday, June 4.

When police inspected the vehicle, they discovered the steering wheel had been torn off and the driver's airbag missing.

There was no sign of forced entry into the vehicle.

Attempted garage B&E

A resident of a home in the 1800 block of Newcastle reported to police that someone attempted to break into his garage on the evening of Wednesday, June 3.

An inspection of the crime scene revealed that the back door to the garage was damaged in an unsuccessful attempt to jimmy the lock. Nothing was stolen.

Park B&E

A home in the 1400 block of Kensington was broken into on Friday, June 5, between 8:30 a.m. and 12:15 p.m.

The thief gained entry into the house by throwing a rock through the side door and climbing through the hole in the glass. A VCR and a bag of scuba gear were found missing.

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

Police are looking for a man about 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing about 170 pounds and clean shaven who was seen near the scene of the crime.

— Jim Stuckford

Rough driving

A 41-year-old man from the City of Grosse Pointe should have zigged, zagged or done something other than what he did after running a red light while trying to enter east bound Lakeshore from Vernier in Grosse Pointe Shores on Wednesday, June 3 at 2 a.m. He bashed his 1998 4-door Jaguar through the gates at George Osius Park on Lakeshore and damaged the steel rod fence, a pine tree and shrubbery, not to mention the Jag. Police charged the man with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

Bad to worse

A 39-year-old cab driver from Detroit was arrested for obstructing police after running away from and scuffling with Farms police on Sunday, June 7, at 9:53 a.m.

The incident began in the 300 block of Beaupre where the driver was threatening a Farms resident with a knife regarding an alleged $200 debt. Police arrived and secured the weapon. The suspect refused to be searched and bolted from the scene.

He was caught in the 300 block of Ridgmont and put up such a fight that police had to spray him with pepper gas before they could subdue and handcuff him.

He said he was out on parole. Now he's out on $200 bond awaiting trial.

Drunken driver gets young start

An 18-year-old Harper Woods man was arrested for drunken driving on north bound Moross near Ridge on Saturday, June 6, at 1:10 a.m.

The man attracted the attention by speeding 58 m.p.h. in an 35 m.p.h. zone. He failed various field sobriety tests, blew a preliminary breath test of .12 and was taken to the Farms police station. He posted $500 bond and was released after police destroyed his driver's license.

Mug muggings

During the night of Friday, June 5, a ceramic mug was thrown through the rear window of a vehicle parked on Grosse Pointe Boulevard near Meadow Lane in Grosse Pointe Farms.

That same night, a mug was tossed through the front window of a residence in the 100 block of Lewiston, causing $100 damage.

Stolen golf cart

On Monday, June 8, at 4:53 a.m., a groundskeeper employed by the Country Club of Detroit witnessed someone driving one of the club's $4,000 Carry-all Golf Carts up a driveway on Moross. The driver jumped from the cart and continued on foot toward Mack.

Upon investigation, it was discovered that up to four of the club's carts were taken.

Ceramic lawn figures damaged

Two residents of Stephens in the Farms were victims of malicious destruction of property on Sunday, June 7, at 11:30 p.m.

In the 100 block, a $700 cement figurine and two cement water basins were toppled. In the 200 block, 30-feet of Malibu lawn lights were damaged and a cement lawn ornament was moved to a neighbor's property, causing $100 damage.

Markets seem tired; will this be a long summer?

Except for last Friday, June 5, the markets seem tired. After the DJI hit 9,300 in early May, the market has been backing and filling, approaching 8,700 late last week.

But on Friday, June 5, the DJI surged 167 points to close at 9,037, the second-best point gain this year. Volume was moderate at 556 million shares traded. (Remember when 100 million was a record day?)

That one-day rally started after the government released May employment data, which showed good job growth and no change in the 4.3 percent unemployment rate.

Many Wall Street traders feel the market will continue trading around the 9,000 level all summer, with some see-saw action now and then.

Cash is still pouring into mutual funds, both from here and from abroad.

No one seems to want to sell much, and be left out looking back in.

Most diversified mutual fund portfolios are under-represented in the S&P 500 Index stocks, and thus are trailing the S&P 500 performance by about five points so far this year. The market needs a big shot of profit increases to start another momentum upsurge. But second quarter profits reports are still about five weeks out.

Don't hold your breath too long, many companies will be happy to report the same earnings as last year.

The mega-mergers continue to surprise everyone pleasantly. Who'd-a-thought American Home Products would wed Monsanto Chemical?

What a bonanza for sign makers and business card printers!

Did you notice that Warren Buffett's Berkshire Hathaway (BRKA on NYSE) stock closed last Friday at a new high of $76,600 per share?

With a market cap of $94 billion, Berkshire is now the 15th largest company, ahead of Philip Morris (MO, about 38-5/8).

With 85 percent of mutual funds trailing the S&P 500 performance in 1998, we should have all bought BRKA last year!

Mathematics, continued

Last week, we followed the development of mathematics in the late 17th and early 18th centuries.

We saw the beginnings of market research, statistical inference, mortality tables, annuities, life, fire and casualty insurance, and the concept that the value of an item was not merely the cost of its parts, but also its utility to the buyer. Jacob Bernoulli (Swiss, 1654-1705), the uncle of Daniel (about whom LTS wrote last week), attempted to determine when the art of thinking — which is objective analysis — ends, and the art of conjecture begins.

Let's talk...STOCKS

Thus, he refined the concept of "estimating the whole from the parts," first espoused by John Graunt in 1662.

Jacob's theorem for calculating the probabilities "a posteriori" (from observations) led to the discovery of the "Law of Large Numbers."

Nicolaus Bernoulli (Swiss, 1695-1726), another of Jacob's nephews, took a given number of observations, and calculated the probability that they would fall within specific boundaries.

Assuming the ratio of male to female births to be 18:17, Nicolaus calculated that out of 14,000 births, the number of males would fall between 7,363 and 7,037.

Abraham de Moivre (French, 1667-1754) published "The Doctrine of Chances" in 1718, in which he stated "The risk of losing any sum is the product of the sum itself multiplied by the probability of the loss."

De Moivre determined, drawing on both calculus and Pascal's Triangle (now known as the binomial theorem) that any set of random drawings would distribute themselves around their average value. Displayed graphically, this showed a normal curve, called the "bell curve."

The shape of the bell curve enabled de Moivre to calculate a statistical measure of the dispersion around the "mean," or center point, now known as "standard deviation."

He further found in a normal distribution, approximately 68 percent of the observations would fall within one standard deviation, and 95 percent would fall within two standard deviations of the mean.

Sometime or other, you and LTS were probably graded, in our school classes, on this bell curve, rather than the teacher grading us on an absolute basis.

Some of us still remember the demise of the Literary Digest magazine in early 1937. This competitor of Time magazine spent a fortune polling a straw vote before the 1936 presidential election. Ten million ballots were mailed to names selected from phone books and state auto registration files.

Their poll showed 59 percent for Landon (Republican), but the election actually gave 61 percent to FDR (Democrat).

The deadly flaw was in the sample used.

Near the end of the Great Depression, many voters had neither a phone nor car, and thus were not polled.

Francis Galton (English, 1822-1911) spent his life researching how talent persists through generations of certain families, which he called "eugenics."

Galton calculated that in London, 1866-69, eminence occurred in English people past middle age as one in every 4,000 to 5,000 people.

He further found that only 36 percent of the sons of eminent persons were themselves eminent, as were only 9 percent of their grandsons.

Galton described this phenomenon, which he called "reversion," as "the tendency of the ideal mean filial type to depart from the parental type, reverting to what may roughly, and perhaps fairly, be described as the average ancestral type."

"Reversion to the mean" motivates almost every variety of risk-taking and forecasting. It is the root of many homilies, like "from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves in three generations," "what goes up must come down" and "pride goeth before the fall."

Isn't "reversion to the mean" the credo of contrarian investors when they say a certain stock is "under-valued" or "over-valued?"

And now LTS leaves Peter L. Bernstein's "Against the Gods: the Remarkable Story of Risk."

The central idea that distinguishes modern times from the distant past is that risk has been brought under control, especially in the investment area.

Futures, puts, calls, arbitrage, derivatives, program selling, short sales, hedge funds... it goes on and on. And it all started with mathematics!

"Against the Gods" was published in 1996 by John Wiley & Sons Inc., New York ($27.95).

Chylinski at odds with Woods council

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

It's a matter of perspective. For freshman Grosse Pointe Woods councilmember Patty Kukula-Chylinski, who ran on a platform of fixing the city's sewer system, it's a matter of acting in a timely fashion to do what can be done to reduce the chances of the sewer system backing up into people's homes.

To other council members, it's a matter of doing things in their proper order and not acting prematurely.

This difference of opinion became evident at the June 1

Woods council meeting. Kukula-Chylinski made a motion to discuss, at the June 22 Committee of the Whole meeting, an ordinance requiring new non-residential construction in the city to include special retention basins.

Her motion was not seconded by any other councilmembers, so it was not voted on.

This dismayed Kukula-Chylinski, who wondered why no one supported her motion.

"I'm concerned about the council not taking action," said Kukula-Chylinski. "This should be easy to do. By having businesses and schools and churches build retention basins it reduces the chances of sewer backups. The city engineer recommended last September that we adopt this type of ordinance. What's the holdup?"

Mayor Robert Novitke was a bit surprised by Kukula-Chylinski's proposal. The council had talked about non-residential retention basins for the past several months.

In fact, the city engineer has been ordered to come up with the engineering specifications needed for just such an ordinance.

The next step will be for city attorney George Catlin to take these engineering specifications and translate them into legal standards that can be written into an ordinance that meets all legal standards.

"We haven't heard from Mr. Catlin yet," said Novitke. "What's the point about talking about a proposed ordinance when there's no ordinance language before the council to talk about."

Kukula-Chylinski strongly believes that the council must start looking forward to five or 10 years down the line. Those wishing to build in the city need definite building guidelines so they won't have to guess what the council will allow.

Currently city engineers are working with representatives from Farmer Jack and Star of the Sea to build underground retention basins, said Kukula-Chylinski. They are working with the city but they are not required to under current city rules.

Having an ordinance on the books means "the city doesn't have to depend on the goodwill of builders to get underground systems in."

Councilwoman Vicki Granger, who serves on the city council's construction committee and was on the planning commission, said that the city has procedures in place to consider a new ordinance affecting construction. Once the construction committee reviews the proposal, it will be sent to the council for consideration.

Granger noted that aside from Star of the Sea and Farmer Jack, there are no non-residential projects before the council.

So if it takes a little bit of time to follow the procedures and safeguards established by the council to consider ordinances that affect the way things are done in the city, then it takes a little time, he said.

Casino construction conference to be held June 17

The Construction Association of Michigan (CAM) will host an all-day conference on Wednesday, June 17, for contractors, subcontractors and suppliers interested in participating in building the Detroit casinos. The conference will be held at Cobo Center in Detroit.

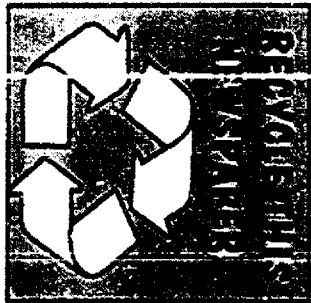

Representations will be made by representatives from Detroit Entertainment LLC, MGM Grand Detroit LLC, Greentown Casino, LLC, the Michigan Gaming Control Board, the State of Michigan, City of Detroit Law Department, Detroit City Council Research and Analysis, Evers, Trebilcock, Davis and Foster P.C., and Dickinson, Wright, P.L.L.C. An invitation has also been extended to Mayor Archer and other distinguished guests.

Topics will include construction opportunities, specialized needs of the gaming industry, regulatory requirements, hiring and work force guidelines for contractors and suppliers, and details about the licensing application process. The conference, entitled "Construction and the Detroit Casinos," will be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Cobo Center in Detroit. The registration fee is $125 a person. The fee includes all conference materials, breakfast and lunch. Space is limited and registration will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis.

To register, call (248) 972-1133, or visit the web site at www.micgamgaming.com/CAM.html. Major credit cards are accepted.

The Construction Association of Michigan is a trade association of over 3,600 commercial contracting, subcontracting and supply firms. It is the oldest and largest regional construction association in North America.

Repairing the damage of low voltage yard lights friendly; it doesn't open up to replace the fuse. We have found a way to access the fuse and replace it but it still isn't inexpensive. Moral of this part of the story is dig carefully when in the area of the wire. Also never touch the wires together to check for a spark. Purchase an inexpensive voltmeter, (about $14.98) for home diagnostics. Only a tester that goes down to 24 volts will check the transformer. Or bring the transformer and any other parts to our store in St. Clair Shores, and we will test and instruct you in the repair from there.

The next most common failure is the photocell. It is a small black box mounted in the post just below the light. It senses light and turns the fixture on and off. Covering it with a piece of tape to test during the day should work fine. Be patient, some have a delay of a minute before turning on. If it still won't light, bypassing the photocell is the next test if the transformer is OK. This will require some assistance to prevent causing other damage, such as blowing out the transformer. Ouch!

Some photocells have two wires and others have three, but if you simply remove the photocell and connect the wires in the lamp pole directly to the light it should light. Remember never touch the two feed wires in the pole together.

Don't be afraid to give us a call before or during your attempt at repairing this light. We don't want to see you waste money on needless parts any more than you do.

Send your questions to Mr. Hardware c/o Gilbert's Pro Hardware at 21820 Harper, St. Clair Shores 48080, call (810) 776-9532, or e-mail blair@mrhardware.com

Is home ownership for you?

If you have thought about owning a home, but aren't sure you can afford it or are confused by all the financing options, this workshop is for you.

"Home Ownership" — a two-part series — will be held on Mondays, June 15 and 22 at the Verkuilen Building, assembly room B, 21885 Dunham Road, Clinton Township, from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

This workshop will be conducted by Michigan State University Extension-Macomb. The mysteries of buying a home — from qualifying for a mortgage to the closing process — will be explained.

The workshop is free, but registration is a must. To register, call MSU extension at (810) 459-6430.

Visit your local swimming pool dealer and the jargon he'll use to describe options for preventing algae and bacterial growth will sound like "Star Trek." Simple words like chlorine are giving way to high-tech terminology including ionization, ozonation, safe shocks and minerals.

Did we say minerals as in nature, as in millions of years ago? Like so many innovations these days, the solution to today's problems lie in the past, or should we say the ancient past. You could almost call it a fable:

Act I
Long, long ago there were lakes, river streams and ponds that were pure, clear and clean. Then came man who created pools — artificial bodies of water to refresh and recreate. The pools Calling all young adults who are looking for summer work with distinction. Do you like working outdoors? Do you admire nature? How about learning more about the guardians of nature — trees? If you have an interest in the field of arboriculture, the care of trees and other woody plants, this is your chance to jump on the wagon to pursue your career in this field. A lot of tree care companies look for part-time help in summer because this is their busiest time of the year. Jobs include grounds person, technician and climber. A summer job with a tree service firm could help you get specific knowledge in this field and lead to an enriching career.

"One of the great things about a summer job in tree care is that a person with a willingness and ability to work hard can find a good job and even advance," says Peter Gerstenberger, director of safety and education for the National Arborist Association. "Furthermore, the tree care professional can make use of people with a wide range of aptitudes, as long as they possess the proper attitude."

Gerstenberger, who started his career in arboriculture with a summer job, goes on to say, "I don't think that one will find many other entry-level positions that are as rewarding or as interesting as working with trees. We encourage students and parents who are looking for summer work for their children to call the NAA. You will receive a list of established companies in your area which might be able to offer temporary or even permanent full-time jobs."

Work with nature this summer and pursue a career

Further information on jobs in the tree care industry, available training programs and schools and colleges with arboriculture programs can be obtained for free by calling the NAA office at (800) 733-2622 or by sending an e-mail to nas@natlarb.com. Visit the NAA web site at www.natlarb.com and locate your local NAA member company.

Act II
"Ah, hah," the inventive man said. "I'll create a chemical that will destroy the bacteria, and then I'll have fun again." So, he did. And for decades he laughed, and splashed and frolicked with his children, pets and neighbors. Yes, no matter how many times intruders invaded his pool, his chemicals would destroy the bacteria.

But lo, he was finding that it was becoming too much work to dispense the chemicals by hand. This was supposed to be fun.

Today's reality
Anyone who owns a pool will tell you that ownership isn't all fun and games. Algae and bacteria are two dreaded words pool owners don't want to hear. "Any products that can either eliminate or reduce the two are going to get my attention real fast," says Robert Hardwick, a pool owner living near Sanibel Island. Hardwick uses his "cave man" method of pool sanitation, a method of pool sanitation, really he is open to a more natural method of pool sanitation, really one that either uses little or no chemicals.

'Cave man' pool care latest trend for pool owners

"This has been a growing request among consumers," notes Joe King, president of Minneapolis-based King Technologies Inc., a leading manufacturer of a new pool sanitizer which uses minerals to purify the water. "They are clearly telling us, 'Give us a product that uses fewer chemicals and relies more on nature.'"

King's product, PROG, exposes pool water to a patented form of minerals. PROG is sold at major swimming pool dealerships nearby.

Coupon Corner

TIP OF THE WEEK: I have a friend who is, as they used to say, a confirmed bachelor. Years ago, he asked me to teach him how to cook and I did. Now, I'm proud to say, my "student" is a whiz in the kitchen and we exchange recipes on a regular basis.

However, that doesn't mean he knew how to shop. He was one who would go to the grocery store every day for whatever he needed. As I've told you before, doing that will easily run into a daily expenditure of $30 and more. And, although he lives alone, he admitted that's at least what he was spending.

I knew he wouldn't do it for himself, so I began clipping coupons for him, based on what I know he uses. He then promised me he would try shopping on a weekly basis and use coupons.

Over the weekend, I received a happy and excited phone call from him. He had gone to the supermarket for his first weekly foray. Not only did he spend only $100, but he saved over $13 in coupons as well. He was grateful in the extreme. In fact, he sounded as if he'd just discovered the cure for the common cold! It was comical, but gratifying.

If you're still doing your shopping on a daily basis, haphazardly, please try the once-a-week routine. You won't be sorry and your wallet will thank you!

A PRESCRIPTION FOR BOAT RESTORATION

Furniture Medic's Gayle Roudabush had to engage in a complete interior restoration of his 46-foot Alaskan wooden motorboat, the Classy Lady. He put the Furniture Medic product line to the test, and he's found the results to be exceptional.

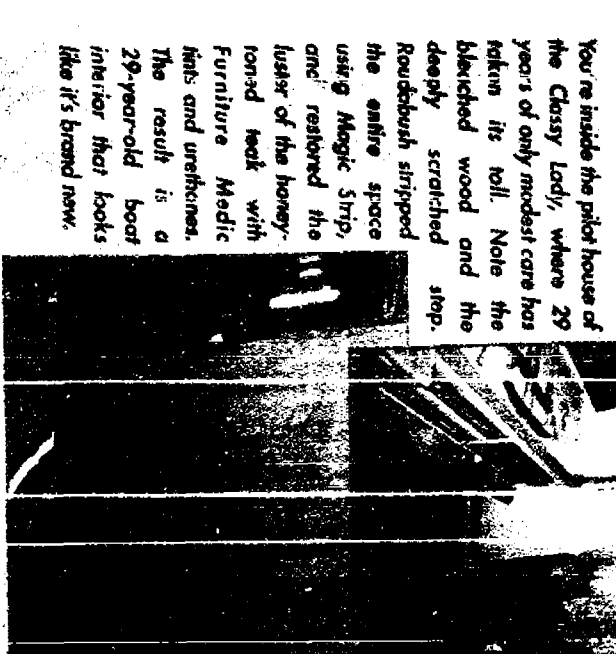

Roudabush applied Furniture Medic's products to the non-caustic, odor-free stripping agent, which removed all traces of varnish from the weathered teakwood.

Next, Roudabush applied all varnishes and copied the water-based urethane in three coats. The varnish was applied correctly, to bring out the natural richness of the wood. Since the urethane dries in about 30 minutes, several coats were applied in one day. In less than a week, the Classy Lady was on her way back to her original glory.

Myer's Boat Works in Fair Haven, Michigan is a manufacturer of custom wood boats, and was founded in 1914. Larry Myer is the third generation owner. He watched Roudabush work his way through the Classy Lady's interior. Myer became so interested in the Furniture Medic process that he experimented with a bit of the product himself, and now uses it regularly in new boat construction.

"Furniture Medic has improved our service," said Myer. "We have drastically reduced the time it takes to complete interior finish work. In addition, there are strictly no residual odors to contend with. In the past, our customers' varnishes, left odors which permeated the boat, the pillows and the liners. No one liked the full cleanup including varnish odors. Furniture Medic products are great for us and great for our customers."

Roudabush was able to restore the beauty to these interior cabin walls where a stove originally sat. The body was scratched and sun-damaged with faded varnish prior to restoration. Now, it's difficult to detect any evidence of damage. The products were applied without odor, and the cabin finish is comparable to any you'd find on an expensive new boat.

You're inside the pilot house of the Classy Lady, where 29 years of only modest care has taken its toll. Note the bleached wood and the deeply scratched strip Roudabush stripped the entire space using Magic Strip, and restored the luster of the honey-toned teak with Furniture Medic finishes and urethanes. The result is a 29-year-old boat interior that looks like it's brand new.

LET'S FACE IT. If you've got furniture, then you've got nicks, stains and gouges as well. You can't avoid them, and sometimes they're nasty. Accidental spills of abrasive household cleaners can eat away lacquered finishes in a nanosecond. Table legs can suffer more dents and cracks than your car. When the damage gets critical, it's time for some expert care.

IS YOUR FURNITURE IN DISTRESS? SCHEDULE A HOUSE CALL WITH THE FURNITURE MEDIC

DID YOU KNOW THAT THE EXPERTS MAKE HOUSE CALLS?

PRECISION CARE AND A PRACTICAL CURE

Instead of sending your furniture out, Furniture Medic's bring their repair expertise directly to your home or business. Reinhardt and Roudabush use company formulated products and a patented restoration process to return damaged furniture back to "like new" condition. Where there was once a burn, chemical spill, crack or break, a Furniture Medic repair leaves you with only the memory. Their Precision Repair techniques make it hard to find any trace of the original damage.

Furniture Medic's patented water-based urethanes and lacquers are not only environmentally friendly, but are virtually odor-free as well. This is what makes on-site repair work possible. Where conventional petroleum-based products require extensive ventilation and drying time, Furniture Medic formulas dry in minutes. There are no residual odors.

Before Furniture Medic Len Reinhardt took care of this cocktail table, it was in critical condition. The dramatic improvement is a testimony to the effectiveness of the Furniture Medic method and materials.

Since Furniture Medic works on-site, you're only without the use of your furniture for a day or two (instead of weeks). On-site repair means you can go about your business with minimal disruption. If you're a business owner, this is especially critical. And think of the advantages of on-site repair work where the color and finish must match a twin or coordinating piece. On-site work guarantees accuracy, so there's no guesswork involved.

Piano finishes can be restored to almost new condition with a visit from Len or Gayle. Best of all the work is done on-site.

For restoration pro, acts both large and small in Wayne county, call Len Reinhardt for an estimate at (313) 884-1007

JUST PLACE A CALL TO...

Furniture Medic's Len Reinhardt (in Wayne county) or Gayle Roudabush (in Oakland and Macomb county) for the cure. Furniture Medic, L.P. is a franchise company with over 500 independently licensed businesses worldwide. As Furniture Medic's, Reinhardt and Roudabush specialize in the on-site repair and restoration of furniture, wood paneling, and interiors of wooden boats (Reinhardt does minor repairs on smaller watercraft, and Roudabush specializes in major restoration of larger vessels). Their clients are both residential and commercial. Many products are water-based and safe for the environment.

This is not your typical furniture repair company. Conventional techniques usually involve the use of caustic stripping agents, stains and noxious finishes. You often have to send your furniture off to some distant workshop for at least a month. The final color and finish on the repaired piece may not match its original look. In the end, you've paid a lot of money without getting what you asked for.

GAYLE ROUDABUSH... is the Furniture Medic for Oakland and Macomb county where he performs residential and commercial work. His specialty is boat restoration, which takes him to all corners of the Metro region. In 1997, Gayle restored the tables, chairs, a bar and paneled walls at Detroit's Renaissance Club. He is nearly completed with the restoration of the Classy Lady. 'Art on the Pointe' offers art, food, entertainment

By Margaret K. Fitzgerald
Special Writer

Now that summer's here, there are countless ways to spend your weekends. You could file away your winter wardrobe, or maybe weed the garden. But wouldn't you rather be outdoors, surrounded by delectable food, excellent entertainment and fine art?

Art on the Pointe is this weekend, June 13-14, and the 15th annual art fair is better than ever before.

Stroll beneath the canopy of trees and across the lush lawns of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, where this juried art fair and family fun festival has attracted thousands of people in past years.

Its hallmarks include a diverse collection of art from more than 150 artists across the United States and Canada, excellent food, professional entertainment for all ages, a new Saturday night "Lobster Bash" and a children's craft tent.

The artists who participate have works for sale in a wide range of mediums including paintings, etchings, stained glass, pottery, photography, sculpture, dried flower arrangements, fiber art and jewelry.

Children can create their own masterpieces in the craft tent operated by Arts and Scraps.

There will be continuous entertainment in the Special Events tent. On Saturday, June 13, families can enjoy performances by Ronnie Cee, magician Gordon Russ, and the uniquely entertaining Spoonman.

On Sunday, June 14, see Russ perform again, in tandem with Marc Thomas and Max the Moose. From 3:30 to 4:30 on Sunday, Art on the Pointe festivities will conclude with "Harpbeat," a family musical program.

Plan on a night of delectable dining and dancing at the Lobster Bash to be held on Saturday night at 7 p.m. In addition to the lobster dinner, refreshments and music, there will also be silent and live auctions, including various works of the artists, a jukebox and a children's fire engine party. A limited number of Lobster Bash tickets are available and reservations are required in advance.

Art on the Pointe is one of Metropolitan Detroit's most popular fine arts shows. It is organized and sponsored by the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center (ALNEGC) and St. John Health System. Since 1964, the Assistance League has been a critical source of support for the Northeast Guidance Center.

Assistance League volunteers have donated more than $2 million over the years to the Guidance Center's health programs. Their fundraising efforts have enabled the Guidance Center to continue to reach out to approximately 5,000 adults and children each year in Detroit's eastside communities, as well as in the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods. The Northeast Guidance Center is a nonprofit community behavioral health facility (established in 1963 under a slightly different name). It provides a treatment service continuum for families, high-risk children and mentally ill adults.

With 14 programs designed to address a wide range of problems including anxiety disorder, chronic mental illness, depression, substance abuse and attention deficit disorder, the Guidance Center is the sole resource of its kind in its service area. The center's mission is to maximize independence for these individuals in their own homes and communities through a variety of treatment programs. Funding for the Northeast Guidance Center comes from public and private sources.

Proceeds from Art on the Pointe will directly benefit the Guidance Center. In addition, a portion of this year's proceeds will go toward the creation of a new Child and Family Services Center, slated to open in the fall of 1998.

Art on the Pointe will be held at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House, 1100 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Shores on Saturday, June 13, and Sunday, June 14. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days.

Admission to Art on the Pointe is $3 for adults; children under the age of 10 are admitted free.

Parking will be available directly across from the Ford House, and costs $2. In case of inclement weather, shuttle service will also be available from the Chapoton Pump Station lot, at Jefferson and Nine Mile.

To purchase Lobster Bash tickets, call (313) 824-5699.

A watercolor created by Bette Prudden of Grosse Pointe Woods is the 1998 official Art on the Pointe art. It will be featured on a variety of merchandise available at the festival. Art on the Pointe is an annual weekend summer event, held on the grounds of the historic Edsel & Eleanor Ford House. Proceeds benefit the Northeast Guidance Center.

Pasta salad could be either an entree or a side dish

A delicious, super-easy, cool summer dish — Chilled Noodle Salad — was given to me by Alice Quail of Grosse Pointe Woods. You may recognize her name because I featured Alice's dessert recipe several weeks ago.

It appears that the "Dessert Queen" is quite versatile in the kitchen and you're sure to enjoy these tasty Oriental noodles.

The first thing that attracted me to the recipe was its simplicity. All of the ingredients were found at the grocery store and preparation time was minimal, after the pasta was cooked.

Chilled Sesame Noodle Salad

1/4 cup dark soy sauce
1/4 cup sesame oil
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons chili oil
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
1 lb vermicelli pasta
2 scallions (chopped)
1/2 lb snow peas (blanched)
1/2 cup sesame seeds (toasted)

Begin by cooking the vermicelli noodles (vermicelli is Italian for "little worms"). Rinse with cold water, drain and set aside. You may toss the noodles with 1 or 2 teaspoons of olive or vegetable oil to keep them from sticking together.

By Annie Rouleau-Scheriff

To blanch the snow peas, drop them into a pot of boiling water for only a minute or two — just until the peas turn bright green. Then quickly submerge them in cold running water to stop the cooking process (just as you did with the pasta).

I suggest using a toaster oven for toasting the sesame seeds. Spread the seeds on a piece of foil and place in a low (200-degree) oven. Watch them closely. This is the only tricky part of this recipe as you can't take your eyes off those seeds while they're in the oven or they'll burn. Toast the seeds to a golden brown and set aside.

(You can find sesame seeds at the grocery store, but you may want to check a bulk food store or try Raphael's spice store at the Eastern Market.)

Combine the soy sauce, chili oil, sesame oil, balsamic vinegar and sugar. Mix well (preferably with a whisk) and toss with the noodles. Chill the noodles and top with the scallions, peas and sesame seeds before serving. Half a cup of finely chopped sweet red pepper will add nice color to your presentation.

To turn this side dish into an entree, toss the noodles with cooked chicken pieces or cooked shrimp. To serve leftover noodles, re-toss with a little soy sauce and balsamic vinegar to give them a "just made" taste.

The next time you're asked to bring a pasta salad to a party, surprise them with this Oriental fare.

Thanks, Alice, for another great recipe.

Mr. and Mrs. Brian
Robert Olson

Ricci-Olson

Julie Elizabeth Ricci, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Ricci of Grosse Pointe Woods, married Brian Robert Olson, son of Robert and Sharon Olson of Midland, on Aug. 9, 1997, at the Grosse Pointe Academy Chapel.

The Rev. Ralph Brown officiated at the 10:30 a.m. ceremony, which was followed by a reception at Barrister Gardens.

The bride wore an ivory silk princess-style gown that featured a bodice and short sleeves of Alençon lace. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a band of lace from her mother's wedding gown and she carried a bouquet of white silk roses.

The maid of honor was Laurie C. Fraser. Bridesmaids were the bride's sisters, U.S. Navy Ensign Roberta T. Ricci and Patricia Ricci.

Attendants wore emerald green floor-length dresses and carried bouquets of mixed garden flowers in shades of hot pink, deep purple and white. The best man was Joe Grueber of Seattle.

Groomsmen were Mark Avitable of Winston-Salem, N.C., and Michael Dix of Madison, Wis. Ushers were John Olson of Midland and the bride's brother, Steve Ricci of Grosse Pointe Woods.

The soloist was Paul Graney, the bride's grandfather.

The bride earned a bachelor of science degree in biological science from Lyman Briggs School of Michigan State University. She works at Trident Tech in Charleston, S.C.

The groom earned a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering from Michigan State University. He is a nuclear engineer with Westinghouse in Charleston.

The couple honeymooned in northern Michigan. They live in Charleston.

Yancey-Brookes

Catherine Anne Yancey of Apex, N.C., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rockett Yancey Sr., formerly of the City of Grosse Pointe, married Kevin Andrew Brookes, son of Joan Ewell Brookes of Virginia Beach, Va., and Walter Wilson Brookes of Wilmington, N.C., on May 30, 1998, at University United Methodist Church in Chapel Hill, N.C.

The Rev. William H. Gattis officiated at the 6:30 p.m. ceremony, which was followed by a reception at The Carolina Inn.

Mrs. Kevin Andrew
Brookes

The bride wore a white silk duchess satin gown that featured a halter neckline, a deep cut-out back and a chapel-length train. Her two-tiered cathedral-length veil of white tulle was trimmed with silk cording and held in place by a white satin headpiece. She carried a loose nosegay of roses, lilies-of-the-valley and stephanotis.

The maid of honor was Laura Hamilton Jeffs of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Bridesmaids were Diana Whitford Brock of Chapel Hill, N.C.; Erin Elizabeth Buchanan of Wrightsville Beach, N.C.; Traci Aileen Caroway of Asheville, N.C.; Kelly Bishop Kutschinski of Gainesville, Fla.; Ann Brooke Skeen of Elon College, N.C.; Kimberly Brookes Sniffen of Virginia Beach, Va.; Katherine Laymen Thompson of Dallas; and McCall Robertson Yancey of Nashville, Tenn.

Flowergirls were Hanna Richters French and Sara Kathryn French of Biloxi, Miss.

Bridesmaids wore black crepe sleeveless floor-length gowns and carried loose nosegays of roses.

The groom's father, Walter Wilson Brookes of Wilmington, was the best man.

Groomsmen were Arthur Swain Beard of Raleigh, N.C., and Stephen Alan Boyer of St. Apex, N.C.

The couple honeymooned in Grand Cayman. They live in Apex, N.C.

Thomas, Virgin Islands; Harrison Jennings Ewell of Chapel Hill; Gregory Frank Harris of Virginia Beach, Va.; Michael Lewis Morris of McLean, Va.; Douglas Carl Reichert of Wilmington, N.C.; Matthew James Valerio of Virginia Beach; and John Rockett Yancey Jr. of Nashville.

The organist was Timothy Baker; trumpeter was Paul Neebe; and soloist was Clark Harvey.

The bride graduated from the University of North Carolina with a bachelor of arts degree in English. She is the manager of account coordinators and an account manager with JWG Associates Inc. in Cary, N.C.

The groom graduated from Radford University with a bachelor of business administration degree in business management. He is a mortgage loan originator with Centura Bank in Sanford, N.C.

Engagements

Sparrow-Magoncelli

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Sparrow III of the City of Grosse Pointe have announced the engagement of their daughter, Amy Winslow Sparrow, to Antonio Louis Magoncelli, son of Mr. and Mrs. Giovanni Magoncelli of San Francisco. An August wedding is planned.

Antonio Louis Magoncelli and Amy Winslow Sparrow

Sparrow graduated from the University of Michigan and earned a master's degree from Middlebury College. She teaches French at the Town School of Boys in San Francisco.

Magoncelli earned a degree in electrical engineering from San Francisco State University. He is employed by Lockheed-Martin, working in aerospace research on NASA projects.

David Scott Gualtieri and Wendy Lee Glenn

Gualtieri. A July wedding is planned.

Glenn graduated from Miami University with a bachelor of science degree in finance, and from the University of Michigan with a master's degree in business administration. She is a management consultant with Deloitte & Touche Consulting in Chicago.

Gualtieri earned a bachelor of arts degree in English from the University of Michigan; a J.D. degree from DePaul University College of Law; and a L.L.M. degree from Harvard Law School. He is an environmental attorney with Mayer, Brown & Platt in Chicago.

11th annual 'Eyes on Classic Design' is June 21

The 11th annual "Eyes on Classic Design" will be held from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Father's Day, Sunday, June 21, on the grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House. More than 270 vehicles will be on display.

Proceeds from the event will go to the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology, a non-profit organization that provides support for and enhances the independence of people who are visually impaired and blind; develops career opportunities for people in the field of ophthalmic technician; and teaches people how to preserve vision and prevent eye diseases. The DIO is located at 15415 E. Jefferson in Grosse Pointe Park.

"Eyes on Classic Design" is an internationally known automotive design exhibition that recognizes and rewards the visual expression of automotive design — past, present and future.

Highlights of the event will include a retrospective of the great American pickup truck, a display of vehicles produced at Ford Motor Co. while George Walker was design chief, a special exhibit on the evolution of the Corvette (from 1953 to 1997) and more.

Cars will be judged in categories that include race cars, luxury cars, sports cars, pre- and post-war cars, motorcycles, street rods, commercial cars and muscle cars.

In addition to the cars on display, original artwork by automotive designers will be for sale and students from several design schools will exhibit their work.

Tickets are $12 in advance; $15 at the gate. Children 12 and under, accompanied by an adult, are free.

Also part of the event are three additional opportunities:

• "Eve of the Eyes" is an informal reception on Friday, June 19 — a preview of the exhibition held at the UT Automotive Idea Center in Dearborn. Tickets are $25.

• "Vision Honored" is an automotive designers' awards banquet, held on Saturday, June 20, at LDM Technologies Design Center. Tickets are $200.

• "Private Eyes" is a Sunday morning brunch on the day of the exhibition on the lake side of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House. Tickets are $95.

For more information about "Eyes on Classic Design" or related activities, call the DIO at (313) 824-3337.

Pointer honored: The 16th annual "For Women Only" 5K Run/Fitness Walk will be held on Sunday, June 14, at Huron High School in Ann Arbor. Proceeds will benefit the Breast Cancer Fund, a national organization committed to conquering breast cancer through research, education and patient support. All proceeds from the race will go to local projects.

Each year the "For Women Only" event honors a local woman who has significantly contributed to the sport of running.

This year's honoree is Jeanne Bocci of Grosse Pointe Park. Bocci has been a health teacher with the Grosse Pointe public schools since 1974.

She began running and race walking competitively 10 years earlier. She was third in the world championships in the 10,000-meter race walk in Sweden in 1977. In 1984, she qualified for the Olympic trials in the 10,000-meter race walk. She has completed six Boston marathons and many Free Press marathons (she was second in 1976). She also holds several state walking records and two world records in race walking.

This weekend's 3.1-mile event is open to all women fitness walkers and all runners — all ages. For more information, call (734) 665-4347 or (734) 930-9813.

Volunteer council officers: The Volunteer Council of Detroit Symphony

Orchestra Hall has elected its officers for 1998-2000. Ann Lawson of Grosse Pointe Farms was elected to the board of directors and Gloria Clark of Grosse Pointe Shores was elected to the nominating committee.

The council has about 600 members and its purpose is to promote and support the artistic excellence of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, to ensure the restoration and preservation of Orchestra Hall and to encourage community involvement through fundraising, education and audience development activities.

Red Cross breakfast:

Red Cross Friends supports the southeastern Michigan chapter of the American Red Cross through fundraising projects. The Friends will hold a breakfast and panel discussion, "Vision: Detroit 2000 — The New City," from 7:45 to 10 a.m. Thursday, June 25, at the Detroit Athletic Club, 241 Madison in Detroit.

Moderator will be WDIV-TV's Devin Scillian; panelists will be Denise Hiltch Lites, Nettie Seabrooks, Chief Isaiah McKinnon, Susan T. Mosey and Lawrence Marantette.

Grosse Pointers on the committee for the event include Patricia Young, Linda Hutton, Gloria Clark, Ann Garberding, Mado Lie and Judith Langenbach.

Tickets are $25. Call (313) 833-2632.

CHRONOMAT

At a time when instruments unerringly cope with Mach 1 flight data, continued improvements to the mechanical chronograph simply underscore that there's more to time than technology. A movement's intricate beauty or a hand-polished case's lustrous gleam do put technological progress in a broader perspective. Like the Concord, the world's first but surely not last supersonic transport, CHRONOMATS draw time and space ever closer with aesthetic excellence as well as outstanding technical performance.

Red Wings over Alter Road

"Angel at Play," a wood sculpture by the Rev. Bohdan Kosicki, a priest/artist, is ready to be mounted on the tower of the St. Ambrose Community Playhouse in Detroit.

Looking at the new angel are St. Ambrose Academy students Darius Merriweather (in front) and Marvin Inkton (behind the fence).

The red-winged angel, which is depicted with a hockey stick and ice skates, has been autographed by Detroit Red Wings team captain Steve Yzerman.

The angel sculpture is the last in a series of four commissioned by the parish for the community-built playscape. The three other angels designed by Kosicki and mounted last year show angels playing baseball, football and basketball.

Same partner. Treat her with care. She's a master at bidding difficult hands. She's holding C. Five clubs is lead directing and the double of five spades is for penalties. If she held A which is a mammoth two suiter she would have either bid five clubs (slam try) over your four heart call or gone to six hearts post haste. If she held B, what could east be holding that would allow him to originally double (take out) and next bid four spades which shows a very good hand (17+ H.C.P.)?

How to help son?

Jeff and Debra Jay
Special Writers
Dear Jeff & Debra:

Our 28-year-old son has a serious problem with alcohol and crack cocaine. He was in treatment for alcohol problems when he was 22 years old, but he didn't follow through afterward. He was determined he could do it on his own, and for about a year and a half, "Joe" did just fine.

Then he started with an occasional beer. He reassured us that he could handle it, saying a beer never hurt anyone. At first, we had to admit that he was right. He'd come over for dinner and have one or two beers. No problems.

Slowly, things began to change. He started drinking more often and sometimes I could tell he was intoxicated. We would expect Joe for dinner, and he'd never show up. When we asked what happened, he'd get defensive and angry.

The problems continued to grow. Joe lost his job, pawned everything he owned and, finally, stole from us.

His friends told us he was using crack. We told him if he didn't go to treatment, we'd press charges against him. He agreed to treatment. We were elated. We thought our biggest problem was over. Boy were we wrong.

We had been paying Joe's insurance premium so he would always have health coverage. The brochure from the insurance company said Joe had a 45-day inpatient treatment benefit every year for alcohol and drug treatment. But after we admitted Joe into an inpatient clinic, he was discharged a few days later and sent to an outpatient clinic. We were told that the managed care company determined that there was no longer a medical necessity for inpatient treatment.

We don't think it's fair that our son is back on the streets. He is not at all stable, and we know he'll be back to drugs in no time. We are terrified that we've lost him for good now — that he might die or end up in prison.

With the right kind of help, we know our son could be an upstanding, contributing member of society. But we are not wealthy people and do not have the money to pay for his inpatient treatment. What are we supposed to do?

— Defeated and Discouraged Mother

Dear Defeated:

Unfortunately, in this era of managed care, accessing long-term treatment for chemical dependency is less and less possible. While our political leaders lament over the drug problem in this country, the health care industry is eliminating most inpatient treatment options for addicted persons. This means that if our children, spouses or parents develop a problem with alcohol or other drugs, long-term treatment isn't a likely option unless we can afford to pay for it ourselves.

While we do not withhold medical treatment from cigarette smokers who develop cancer or heart disease, we treat addiction as a criminal issue rather than a health issue.

We can reliably predict that 10 to 15 percent of people who choose to drink will become alcoholic, and — in a culture that encourages and glamorizes alcohol use — we have a responsibility to help the people who get sick.

Other mood-altering drugs, whether illegal or prescribed, may not be as socially acceptable as alcohol, but the resulting addiction must be treated.

The best advice we can give is that you contact your congressmen and your senator about the upcoming treatment parity legislation. If passed, it will prohibit limits on treatment for chemical dependency if there are no limits on other medical services. The bill will not require that treatment be offered as part of a health care coverage plan and will include an exception for businesses with fewer than 50 employees.

Encourage your son to continue his outpatient treatment and ask his counselors about an affordable halfway house where your son can work and live. In addition, urge your son to attend AA or NA — it is our guess that your son needs to go to a couple of meetings a day to give him extra support.

Tell him that you expect him to comply with all treatment recommendations as part of your agreement not to press charges against him. At this early stage, it may be difficult for him to initiate a program of recovery and stay sober without a great deal of support and structure in his life.

St. John uses 'beating heart' procedure for bypass surgery

William Aleo, 81, of Detroit, had a history of heart failure and renal problems. He learned that he needed coronary bypass surgery to save his life.

Even though he was considered a high-risk patient, he came through his bypass surgery remarkably well, thanks to a new procedure now being used by doctors at St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

The procedure, known as off-pump coronary artery bypass, or OPCAB, is yielding excellent results and allowing patients to recover more quickly because it is done without the use of the heart-lung machine. That's a real breakthrough for high-risk, elderly patients like Aleo, who might not survive a traditional bypass due to other medical conditions.

Recently, doctors have been using minimally invasive surgery without using the heart-lung machine for patients needing repair of one blood vessel. According to Dr. Ali Kafi, chief of cardiovascular surgery at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, the OPCAB procedure is now being used to repair all of the vessels in the heart.

"A conventional bypass can be hard on the organs," explains Kafi. "A patient who has borderline kidney function, for example, might be 'tipped over' into renal shutdown if the heart-lung machine is used during bypass surgery. Other complications, such as stroke, heart arrhythmia and excess accumulation of fluid in the lungs, also can result when the machine is used."

Conventional bypass surgery uses the heart-lung machine as a substitute for the patient's normal functions so the heart can be emptied of blood and stopped during surgery. With beating heart surgery, however, surgeons bypass clogged arteries without stopping or even slowing down the heart. Instead, a retractor is used to stabilize the area that is being repaired.

Admittedly, such a procedure is technically more challenging. But the outcome can be much better for the patient. Potential advantages include a reduced risk of stroke, less bleeding, less damage to blood cells, fewer neurological problems, and a faster recovery.

"This is probably the most important progress we have made recently to help cardiac patients," Kafi said. "We are seeing much better outcomes and reduced hospital stays because patients aren't experiencing the complications they have in the past when the heart-lung machine was used."

Kafi doesn't expect to use the beating heart procedure on younger patients (under the age of 60) because their recovery generally isn't hindered by the use of the machine.

He has, however, had one patient in his mid-60s request the surgery — not because of medical complications, but just because he preferred not to be on the machine.

Volunteers will test new treatment for ALS

Neurologists and pulmonologists at The Detroit Medical Center and Wayne State University are now conducting a study to determine the effectiveness of a procedure that could delay the onset of deadly breathing problems suffered by those with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), often called "Lou Gehrig's disease."

The study, the first of its kind, involves treating ALS patients with a noninvasive procedure known as noninvasive positive pressure ventilation (NIPPV) before they show symptoms of breathing difficulties. NIPPV involves the use of a mask to provide ventilation to patients. The goal of the study is to determine whether the treatment will have short- and/or long-term benefits.

Dr. Richard Lewis, neurologist, is the co-director of the DMC-WSU Neuromuscular Clinic and is leading the study.

"The mask would be worn at night, during sleep, and is similar to the mask worn for sleep apnea. It will assist the breathing effort," Lewis said. "We anticipate that the use of this mask at night will improve day-time energy, slow the late decline of respiratory strength and prolong life."

"NIPPV has previously been shown to be effective in treating ALS patients who already have difficulty breathing, but never before has this procedure been studied as an early intervention for the disease," said DMC and WSU pulmonologist Dr. Loufi Aboussouan.

ALS is a progressive and ultimately fatal neuromuscular disease that usually strikes people between the ages of 40 and 70. There is no cure and its cause is unknown. It is characterized by a degeneration of the motor cells in the spinal cord and brain. An estimated 5,000 people in the United States are newly diagnosed with ALS each year. Death is usually a result of respiratory failure or respiratory complications. The average remaining life expectancy of an ALS patient with breathing problems is 2 to 4 years.

Anyone interested in taking part in this study should call (313) 577-1245.

Class is for engaged couples

Michigan law requires couples applying for a marriage license to be counseled about sexually-transmitted diseases and AIDS.

William Beaumont Hospital offers a Premarital AIDS Education class that meets state public health department requirements for those applying for a marriage license.

The one-hour class will be held at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, June 18, in Beaumont's Administration Building, 3601

W. 13 Mile in Royal Oak.

The cost is $20 a person; $30 a couple. Preregistration is required. Call (800) 633-7377. Upon completion of the class, participants receive a certificate signed by a Beaumont physician that is valid for 60 days. Participants must bring photo identifications to the class.

Irish Coffee Bar & Grill
Dark Irish bar serves burgcaramelized onion petals on a bed of fettuccini. Entrées come with a choice of two sides; I enjoyed cauliflower with a nutty, tomatoey sauce along side a bulging Idaho.

The Cove's spare ribs ($9.95/half slab, $14.95/full) are a treat. The meat is tender and dry, slathered in a sticky, prickly sauce. Though ribs are not available, my tie survived the ribs, only to take a drip from the sautéed lake perch ($14.95), which came swimming in lemon butter.

Lake perch is a Cove specialty. I prefer mine deep-fried, and Robinson accommodates ($13.95), going easy on the breading to let you taste the light, sweet fish fillets — a whole plate full. Broiled perch ($13.95) is also available for those counting the fat grams, but if you're going to broil fish, let it be whitefish ($10.95).

Lunch at the Cove is Mack Avenue merchants, east side regulars, and an occasional teacher from Maire Elementary School popping by for quick in-an-out burgers and salads. The dining room fairly bustles, but never feels rushed. The popular Cove Melt — a bacon-Swiss patty melt grilled on rye — is filling enough to slow down your afternoon ($5.75/sandwich, $7/deluxe, with fries and slaw). Its grilled onions are a treat, but they make the sandwich a bit hard to hold. Instead, wrap your hands around a Cove Island

Along with the new name comes a new dinner menu, shifting the emphasis from seafood to pastas, salads and rotating daily specials — pasta on Tuesday, ribs on Wednesday, perch on Thursday. The food is all hot and hearty, and veteran chef Robin Robinson uses plenty of real butter in specialties like the Seafood Fettuccini ($14.95) — which is scallops, shrimp, crab, fish and homemade pasta in a heavy cream sauce. Or try the luscious Chicken Vidalia ($11.50) — glazed chicken tenders with honey-sweet

The Cove restaurant

By David C. Bloom
Special Writer

The grinning pirate plaque in the vestibule is the first clue. Once inside, the framed schooners, lake maps, and lighthouses and the tastefully mounted ship's figurehead in one corner confirms that the Cove is working from a nautical theme. But this is no surf-and-turf oyster bar for the captain and mizzen-mast set; the Cove is a cozy, homey lunch treat and dinner retreat.

The shoebox bar/restaurant on the Detroit side of Mack just east of Cadieux is keeping a higher profile these days. A name change from "Pirate's Cove" to just "The Cove" is the latest in a series of incremental updates by the 17-year-old restaurant's new owners, Dave Colton and Kim Twar-Colton, who bought out Patrick Dougherty (of Patrick's, at Kelly and Moross) last year.

Along with the new name comes a new dinner menu, shifting the emphasis from seafood to pastas, salads and rotating daily specials — pasta on Tuesday, ribs on Wednesday, perch on Thursday. The food is all hot and hearty, and veteran chef Robin Robinson uses plenty of real butter in specialties like the Seafood Fettuccini ($14.95) — which is scallops, shrimp, crab, fish and homemade pasta in a heavy cream sauce. Or try the luscious Chicken Vidalia ($11.50) — glazed chicken tenders with honey-sweet

Some south-of-the-border specialties, like nopalitos (cactus scrambled with egg and cheese) chicken in mole (cocoa) sauce, and shrimp in a Mexican garlic sauce. Children's menu available.

Ottevaere starts pro baseball career with Texas farm club

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Derek Ottevaere knew something was up when he arrived home Tuesday night after having dinner with his girl friend. He was greeted by his father, Don, who was wearing a Texas Rangers cap.

"He looked pretty excited, so I knew something was going on," said Ottevaere, who realized a dream — that often looked like it would never become reality — when the Rangers picked him in the 14th round of the Major League Baseball Draft.

"I never expected to go that soon so I didn't see any reason to sit by the phone. I thought if I'd get drafted at all it would be on the second day."

Ottevaere recently completed his junior year at Western Michigan with an outstanding baseball season that resulted in his being chosen to the All Mid-American Conference squad, quickly signed with the Rangers and reported earlier this week to the team's Rookie League squad in Pulaaki, Va.

The Rangers didn't have to worry about any prolonged contract negotiations with Ottevaere.

"After all I've been through, I'm just happy to have the opportunity to play professionally," he said. "The opportunity means more to me than any money I'm going to get. I'm getting the chance to prove myself. If I make it, then I can be more aggressive in terms of money."

Ottevaere is a good lesson in perseverance. He's endured more than most of this year's draft class.

When he was a junior at Grosse Pointe North, Ottevaere's season was cut short by a dislocated hip he suffered while running out an infield grounder.

At first, Ottevaere thought he'd never play baseball again. It wasn't a pretty sight to see his leg jutting out at an awkward angle. Worst of all, he couldn't move his leg.

But once he found out the injury wasn't as devastating as he first imagined, he began the grueling task of rehabilitating so he'd be ready for his senior year at North.

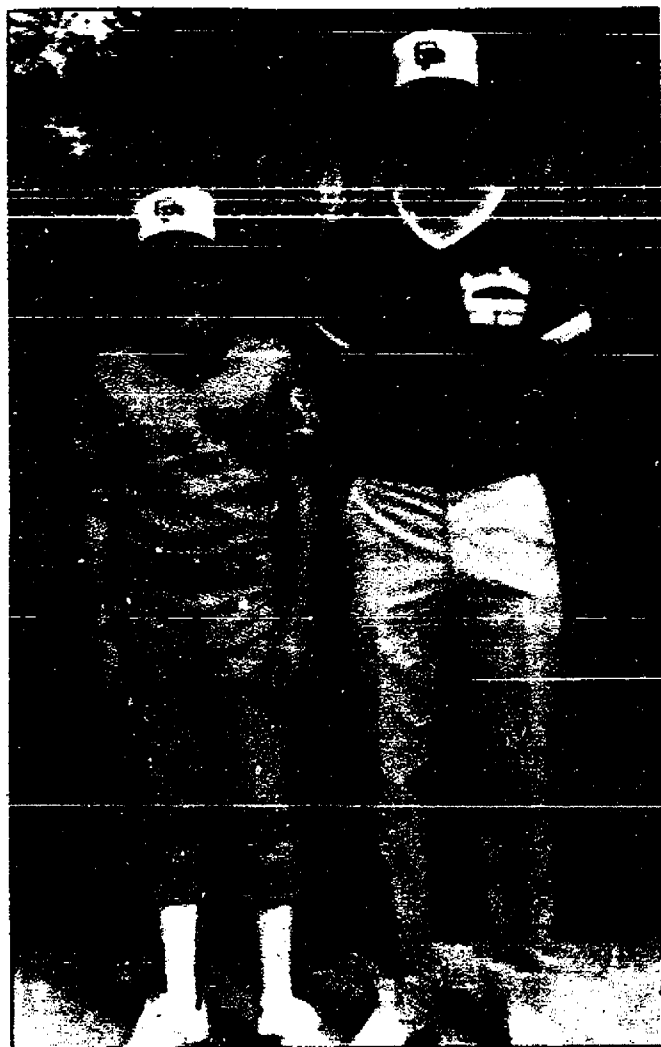

He came back even stronger than when he left and had a year most players can't even imagine. Ottevaere batted .546 with 53 RBI and 51 runs scored and he left North with a career batting average of .521.

"He came back bigger, better, faster and stronger. It's really a tribute to his hard work and dedication," said North coach Frank Sumner after Ottevaere capped his high school career with a berth on the All State Dream Team selected by the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association.

Ottevaere earned a scholarship to Western Michigan and played sparingly as a freshman.

See OTTEVAERE, page 3C

It was a reunion of former Grosse Pointe North teammates when Western Michigan's Derek Ottevaere, right, and Detroit Mercy's Joe Maceri got together before a game earlier this season.

Switch back to hockey pays off for Schervish

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

When Chuck Schervish decided to go back to playing hockey last fall after two years away from the sport, he was the third-string goalie for the University of Michigan-Dearborn club team.

By the time the season ended, the former Grosse Pointe North soccer and hockey standout was an All-American who had helped his squad win the Central States College Hockey League playoff championship.

"I missed hockey. That's one of the reasons I came back home," said Schervish, who played two seasons as a soccer goalie for Denison University.

Schervish had to shake off some rust when he first laced on the skates last fall.

"It was real awkward at first," he said. "But after a couple of practices, it all started coming back to me again. At the end of the year, I was playing as well as I've ever played."

Schervish and former Redford Catholic Central netminder Jason Hubenschmidt shared the goaltending at Michigan-Dearborn and gave the school one of the best tandems in the country.

"A lot of teams have one outstanding goalie, but their backups are pretty poor," Schervish said. "I don't think there are many teams who have two goalies as good as we do."

Schervish was an excellent goalie in high school, but it wasn't reflected in his won-lost record. He faced an average of 35 shots-per-game while playing for the Norsemen.

"Now I'm seeing about 30 shots a game and we're playing 20-minute periods, compared to 15 in high school," Schervish said. "My defense here is a little better than I had at North."

Even though it got frustrating at times, Schervish has no regrets about playing high school hockey instead of hooking up with some junior team like many of the better players do.

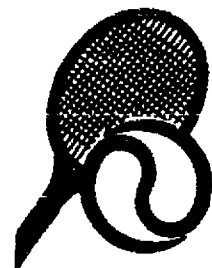

"I think it's more fun playing

Grosse Pointe North's Nicole Schmitt gets ready to make contact with a pitch during the Norsemen's regional softball game with Fraser last weekend.

Knights win baseball regional title

University Liggett School baseball coach Walter Butzu had nothing but good things to say about senior pitcher Jeff Mehr's performance last Saturday.

ULS wins in quarterfinals

University Liggett School's baseball team advanced to the state Division III semifinals with a 10-4 quarterfinal victory over Monroe St. Mary Tuesday. The Knights will play their semifinal game Friday at 2 p.m. at Bailey Park in Battle Creek. The Division III championship game is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday.

Jeff Mehr, Butzu said after the Knights won the Division III regional championship at Lake Fenton with a 20-17 victory over Richmond.

"He won both games. The first he won on strength and skill. The second he won on pure heart. He was cramping up on the way home, but he seized leadership of this team and wouldn't let go. He is everything a captain ought to be."

Butzu wasn't nearly as pleased with the umpiring in the tournament.

"The strike zone was infinitesimal and there were times when the catcher's glove would not move and yet no strike was called," Butzu said.

"This was not skewed in favor of either team, but was certainly putting the game in the hands of the umpires instead of the boys. We outlasted Richmond 21-11. We hit two home runs, a triple, a double and 17 singles. Richmond only mustered three doubles and eight singles but took us to the wire. The reason? Walks and errors. Teams will make errors when they are back on their heels. We had an umpire who was fairly determined to make kids swing for a strike to be granted and that hurt us quite a bit because we're a team that relies on the strikeout."

Butzu was hoping that the regional games wouldn't have an adverse effect on his team's chances in the quarterfinals.

"Division III schools usually don't have more than one or two dominant pitchers. We have to play Tuesday and attempt to bring kids back on only two days' rest, which is enough when they haven't thrown 100-plus pitches. If we run into an opponent who had an umpire with a pitcher's zone, we will be at a distinct disadvantage. Even after the game and a full night's sleep, I'm still livid about the officiating. It's not a case of sour grapes because we won."

ULS jumped on Richmond early, scoring seven runs in the first inning on two walks, six singles and a double, but in the bottom of the frame the Blue Devils scored five runs on only one hit to cut the Knights' lead to 7-5.

Clark Durant led off the ULS second with a home run to trigger a seven-run inning that also featured Justin Young's grand slam. The home runs were among six Knights hits in the inning.

Richmond scored four runs in the bottom of the third to slice ULS' lead to 14-9 before Jay Minger relieved starter C.R. Moultry to end the uprising. Moultry singled home Minger, who had singled, for a ULS run in the fourth, but the Blue Devils answered with two in the bottom of the frame to cut the margin to 15-11.

The Knights failed to score against Richmond's top pitcher in the fifth and sixth innings, but according to state rules that limit a pitcher to 10 innings, he had to be removed because he had pitched a complete game in the Blue Devils' semifinal victory over Lake Fenton.

Mehr relieved Minger in the bottom of the fifth as Richmond cut the Knights' lead to 15-14 and the Blue Devils tied the game in the sixth.

ULS regained the lead with five runs in the top of the seventh, featuring two walks, a hit batter, three singles and Moultry's double.

Richmond had one last gasp against a tiring Mehr, who yielded singles to the first two batters in the seventh. He then posted a strikeout. Both runners moved into scoring position on an error and scored on another single. A walk brought the tying run to the plate, but Mehr fanned the next Blue Devils' batter and got the final out on a bouncer to the mound.

The Knights' bats were booming in the first game, too, as they overpowered Burton Bendle 19-6.

Moultry gave ULS a 1-0 lead in the top of the first with an RBI single, but the Tigers tied the game in the bottom of the inning.

It remained 1-1 until ULS erupted for seven runs in the fourth. Moultry led off with a single, but the next two batters were retired. Jack Elsey and Ryan Schafer then drew walks to load the bases and Scott Simpson followed with a single. The Knights then got a single by Young, a double by Minger, a single by Durant and a Moultry double before the inning ended.

Mehr's triple and a sacrifice fly by Elsey boosted ULS' lead to 9-1 in the fifth.

In an attempt to save Mehr for the second game, Butzu replaced him with Minger and then Young, but both struggled and he went back to the starter after Bendle cut the lead to 9-5. Mehr fanned the final two batters to end the threat.

ULS added three more runs in the sixth, featuring Elsey's single that cleared the bases with the help of an error. Mehr

North's season ends with loss to Fraser

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

The old "third-time jinx" caught up with Grosse Pointe North's softball team last weekend.

The Norsemen, who had beaten Macomb Area Conference Blue Division rival Fraser twice during the league season, suffered a 7-2 loss to the Ramblers in a Division I regional semifinal game at Grosse Pointe South.

"It's tough to beat a good team three times in a row," said North coach Bill Taylor.

"We were prepared. I think we were better prepared for Fraser than we were for (Grosse Pointe) South last week. We just didn't win today."

The Norsemen's downfall came in two areas. North couldn't hit when there were runners in scoring position and the usually solid defense made six errors.

"We didn't get the key hits," Taylor said. "We left a lot of runners on base. And we weren't as steady in the field as we usually are. But we had a great season. We won as a team and we lost as a team."

North stranded 11 runners, including seven in scoring position.

The Norsemen scored their first run in the third when Lindsay Hawkins singled with one out and scored on Meg Guillaumin's double. Erin Kelly then walked, but Fraser pitcher Nicole Fraser struck out the next two batters.

North loaded the bases with no outs in the fifth on a walk to Erin Drouillard and singles by Hawkins and Guillaumin, but the Norsemen got only one run — on a wild pitch — as Fraser struck out the next three batters.

North loaded the bases again in the sixth with one out on walks to Nicole Schmitt, Jessica Westbrook and Drouillard, but Kelly Nilson relieved Fraser and retired Hawkins and Guillaumin on infield popups.

Fraser allowed five hits and struck out nine in 5 1/3 innings. Nilson gave up one hit and fanned two as she recorded the save. Nilson had started the previous two Fraser-North games.

"Fraser doesn't throw quite as hard as Nilson, so we were a little ahead on our swings," Taylor said. "Then when they brought Nilson in, our timing was off again."

The Ramblers scored in the first inning on Dana Ciraulo's RBI double, then added a run in the second on Amber Brunn's run-scoring double.

Fraser scored three unearned runs in the fourth, two coming on Ciraulo's single. The Ramblers got their final two runs in the sixth. One scored on a double by Lauren Sharer and the other came in on Ciraulo's third hit of the game.

Guillaumin collected three hits for North, which finished with a 23-7 overall record.

Fraser lost 5-4 in eight innings in the championship game to Regina, which upset third-ranked Royal Oak Kimball 6-2 in the other semifinal at South.

The Pointe Girls Soccer Association Mustangs '88 won both the winter and spring indoor soccer sessions in the under-11 division at Total Soccer. The Mustangs posted a 7-1 record in the winter and followed with an 8-0 season. In front, from left, are trainer Leslie Boisvenu, Hillary Inger, Stephanie Martin, Allie Trost, Jae March and Elizabeth Baxter. In back, from left, are Alexandria Fortune, Elizabeth Galea, Meghan Potthoff, Alexandra Ford, Page Louisell, Kristen Jost, Elizabeth Kossak and coach Jim Potthoff.

was helped by a double play in the bottom of the inning as he faced the minimum three batters.

The Knights clinched the victory with seven runs in the top of the seventh, featuring singles by Minger, Moultry, Elsey and Schaefer.

Bendle scored a run in the seventh, but Mehr finished with 13 strikeouts and allowed one earned run.

"Justin Young, Clark Durant and C.R. Moultry are simply not making outs," Butzu said. "This trio combined for 20 hits, including seven extra-base hits, and 21 runs batted in in the regional."

ULS tuned up for the regional with an 8-7 non-league victory over Southfield Christian.

The Knights used five pitchers who combined for 10 strikeouts.

Southfield scored twice in the first inning, but Young got one back with a leadoff homer and ULS scored two more runs on singles by Minger, Durant and Moultry and a sacrifice fly by Anthony Legree.

The Eagles scored twice in the second to regain the lead, but the Knights tied the game in the bottom of the third. Durant walked, stole second, took third on Moultry's sacrifice and scored on a groundout by Legree.

ULS jumped ahead 7-4 in the fourth on Simpson's double that scored Elsey and C.T. Thurber and an RBI groundout by Minger.

The Knights scored their final run in the fifth on a single by Moultry and Mehr's double. It turned out to be the winning run when Southfield Christian scored three runs in the top of the sixth.

"We're hitting the Rawlings right off the baseball," Butzu said. "We are pitching well, too, especially Mehr. He is capable of putting this team on his back and carrying us to Battle Creek and maybe even back home with a state championship. We must, however, shore up our enigmatic defense. We simply cannot continue to make our pitchers throw four- and five-out innings."

An emotional ending for Blue Devils' baseball team

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Dan Griesbaum knew it would be an emotional moment when Grosse Pointe South's baseball season finally ended.

He just didn't want it to end quite so soon.

"I'm sorry to see it end. I knew it would be emotional when it was over, but I wish it would have ended next weekend," the Blue Devils' coach said after South dropped a 12-6 decision to De La Salle in the Division I regional championship game hosted by the Blue Devils.

"I'm going to miss the 10 seniors because they've been so tremendous for the program for the last four years. But I'm going to miss the parents, too. They've been so supportive over the years. This was really a special group."

South, which beat Chippewa Valley 12-3 in the regional semifinal, finished with a 26-9 overall record.

"This was the first team to go 12-0 in the league and the 26 wins are the second highest total in school history. Three of these seniors were on the final four team as sophomores and they've won two league and two district championships."

If it hadn't been for one disastrous inning, the Blue Devils might still be alive in the state tournament, but De La Salle used an eight-run third inning to break open a close contest.

The big hit was a three-run homer by designated hitter Brian Pelgus, while Mike Sokol's two-run single capped the inning.

"I wish we could have thrown that inning out," Griesbaum said. "Everything that could go wrong, did."

Sokol also had an RBI double when the Pilots scored twice in the first inning. De La Salle also had a two-run second.

Relievers Ted Swarthout and Pat Howe blanked the Pilots on one hit after Sokol's single, but by then the damage had been done.

South scored in each of the first two innings. Charlie Braun led off the game with a double and came around to score on groundouts by Chris McGratty and Dan Griesbaum. Matt Barry had an RBI single in the second. Jason Mangol walked, took third on Brian Hodgman's single and scored on Paul Yeskey's groundout.

The Blue Devils didn't go down without a fight. They scored three runs in the seventh on Hodgman's bases-loaded two-out double, but winning pitcher Jon Kowalski got out of the jam with a groundout.

Kowalski scattered six hits and allowed three earned runs. He walked five and didn't record a strikeout.

"We scored six runs," coach Griesbaum said. "Nobody's really held us down. We came into the regional batting .356 as a team and we batted .384 in the league."

Once again, walks were South's downfall. De La Salle had seven walks and a hit batter, with four of them scoring.

South didn't waste any time jumping on Chippewa Valley in the opener as the Blue Devils scored nine runs in the first three innings.

Griesbaum had three hits, including a leadoff homer in the third, to lead South's offensive attack, while Hodgman had a homer and double.

The Blue Devils scored three times in the first inning. Braun walked, stole second and scored on McGratty's single. Griesbaum singled and stole second and he and McGratty scored on Yeskey's double.

Barry singled, stole second and scored on Braun's double in the second.

Griesbaum's homer triggered South's five-run third inning. Mangol followed with a single and came home on Hodgman's homer. Walks to Yeskey and Barry around a single by Karl Freimuth loaded the bases. Matt Vandeweghe walked to force in another run and Freimuth scored on Braun's groundout.

Barry singled and eventually scored on a throwing error in the fifth.

South scored its final two runs in the seventh. Braun and McGratty each singled with one out and moved up on Griesbaum's fly ball. Braun scored on a wild pitch when Mangol struck out and McGratty came home on a delayed steal.

Braun, McGratty, Freimuth and Barry also had two hits apiece for South.

Howe pitched the first four innings and allowed three hits and one run to record the victory. He struck out five.

Swarthout pitched two innings and didn't allow an earned run, while Rich Mayk pitched a scoreless seventh.

South had six all-league selections and nine Blue Devils made the all-district team.

All-league players from South were Braun, Hodgman, Freimuth, Swarthout, McGratty and Griesbaum.

Joining those six on the all-district squad were Barry, Mangol and Howe.

was helped by a double play in the bottom of the inning as he faced the minimum three batters.

Southfield scored twice in the first inning, but Young got one back with a leadoff homer and ULS scored two more runs on singles by Minger, Durant and Moultry and a sacrifice fly by Anthony Legree.

The Eagles scored twice in the second to regain the lead, but the Knights tied the game in the bottom of the third. Durant walked, stole second, took third on Moultry's sacrifice and scored on a groundout by Legree.

The Pointe Girls Soccer Association Mustangs '88 under-10 team moved up a class for indoor soccer and won both the winter and spring sessions at Total Soccer.

The Mustangs were 7-1 in under-11 during the winter season, then improved to 8-0 for the spring session.

Grosse Pointe, which was coached by Jim Potthoff and trained by Leslie Boisvenu, played teams from Warren, St. Clair Shores, Utica, Fraser, Sterling Heights and Troy. The Mustangs outscored their opponents by an average of six goals per game.

Goalkeepers Hillary Inger and Meghan Potthoff were outstanding and had excellent support from defenders Alexandra Ford and Kristen Jost. Midfielders Jenny Bohannon, Elizabeth Kossak and Allie Trost did a fine job of controlling the tempo and marking the opposing strikers.

The Mustangs' offense was spearheaded by the play of forwards Elizabeth Baxter, Alexandria Fortune and Page Louisell and midfielders Elizabeth Galea, Jae March and Stephanie Martin, who also contributed defensively.

Farms-City Little League highlights

CLASS AAA

Rockies 15, Cubs 13
The Rockies needed a five-run seventh inning because the Cubs scored three times in the bottom of the frame. Brett Alderman had a double and single, Jamie Handley and Andrew Miller each had two singles and Jimmy Colombo hit a double for the Rockies. James Hutchinson, James Perry and Andrew Johnson had strong defensive games. Frankie DeLauro led the Cubs attack with three hits, two walks and four runs scored. David Murray hit a double and a single for the Cubs, while Graham Rabbitt, David DeBoer and Aaron Hynds each had two hits. Blake MacEachern, David Howard and Evan Chadick played well defensively.

CLASS AA

Giants 9, Red Sox 3
Matt Peleman and Stephen Harnadek combined for 10 strikeouts and Jon Jacobi had two hits for the Giants.

Giants 5, Cardinals 4
The Giants won despite being held without a hit. The use of sacrifices in bases-loaded situations, produced their runs.

Giants 7, Braves 4
Phil Cachowski had two hits, including a bases-loaded triple in the first inning, to lead the Giants.

CLASS A

Denver 21, Toledo 7
Michael Hemovich and Chris Stephens led the offensive attack for Denver, which broke the game open with a seven-run third inning. Toledo was paced by the hitting of Mike Cunningham and David Clem and the defensive play of James Stano.

ULS girls finish fourth in Metro Conference track and field meet

Most valuable runner Bisi Alli highlighted University Liggett School's fourth-place finish at the Metro Conference girls track meet with her best performance of the season.

Alli won the 200-meter dash in 27.2 and she finished fourth in the 100 in 13.2.

Sherma Brown, who was fifth in the 100 (13.5) teamed with Alli, Tara Terry and Christina Oney to win the 400 relay.

"Oney was inserted in the relay when Keli Bonner couldn't finish the 100 dash (because of an injury)," said coach David Boynton.

"Alli blew out of the blocks and gave us a good seven-yard lead. Their handoffs were flawless and needed to be. Oney was anchoring for the first time and was up against a 12.5 sprinter. It was an exciting race. We had identical times, but we got the nod for first."

Oney was third in the 100 hurdles (17.7) and fourth in the 300 hurdles (52.4).

Allison Ricci, the Knights' most improved runner, won the 1,600 run and came from behind to place second in the 3,200. Her best time of 5:46.6 in the 1,600 places her on ULS' top 10 list.

"We had a great season," Boynton said. "We placed girls in every event on our all-time top 10 list and broke three school records."

Ottevaere

man. The next year he began the season as one of the Broncos' starting outfielders, but began feeling some pain in his shoulder.

Eventually, it became so painful he had it checked out by a doctor. What he was told then was almost as much of a jolt as the dislocated hip.

"The doctor told me the ligaments and tendons in my shoulder had elasticized," Ottevaere said. "They were so stretched out that no matter what I did, there would be pain because the bones were rubbing together."

The only answer was surgery. And even that was no guarantee that Ottevaere would be able to play baseball again.

"They took all the tendons in my shoulder and pulled them back together," he said. "Then they tacked them to the bone."

"All I could think of was 'now it's really over.' I couldn't even pick up a baseball for almost a year. It hurt to watch baseball games on TV. I loved baseball so much and now I couldn't play."

Ottevaere helped out with the coaching at Grosse Pointe North and enjoyed it, but it wasn't the same as playing.

"I liked working with kids, but something was missing," he said.

Last summer, Ottevaere played on a summer league team and was able to swing a bat and play first base. He still wasn't able to throw well, but he received some encouragement when Western Michigan coach Fred Decker saw one of his games.

"He came to see me and told me what he expected from me this year," Ottevaere said. "That meant a lot to know I was still in their plans. When I went back to school, I started a high intensity rehab program."

"I'd go to rehab at 6:30 every day. I did a lot of exercises and lifting. It was tough. Sometimes I wondered, 'why am I doing this?' but now I know it was all worth it. I can feel my arm getting stronger all the time. It'll never be back to where it was, but I can throw enough to play first base."

And with a bat as potent as Ottevaere's, a team will find a way to get him into the lineup.

He completed his career at Western with a .346 batting average, 12 home runs and 48 RBI. In addition to leading the Broncos in those categories, he topped the squad in hits (66) and slugging percentage (.607).

His 12 homers were one short of the school record set by Matt Mieske, who's now playing for the Chicago Cubs.

"I guess I was making up for lost time — the hits I didn't get last year," he said with a smile.

One of his biggest thrills at Western was hitting two home runs to help beat Central Michigan during the Broncos' spring trip this year.

Ottevaere hasn't forgotten the folks who helped him get a chance to play professionally.

"I've had great coaches ever since I started playing baseball," he said. "People like Bob Rini, Joe Spada, Frank Sumner, Mike Kras, Tim Brandon, Ted Thompson. Al Bojakowski, Sandy Peters, Hal Watts and my coaches at Western, Fred Decker, Rich Morales and Scott Demetral. Dave Bergman helped with the signing process and told me what to expect when I report to my minor league team."

"I couldn't have done it without the encouragement of my parents, either. I was down at times, but they always told me not to give up."

Now he's looking forward to a pro career — but he has a few reservations, too.

"I'm excited — and a little nervous," Ottevaere said. "It's not like college where you're guaranteed four years — if you don't produce, they'll find somebody else."

But the Rangers won't find anyone more dedicated than Derek Ottevaere. If perseverance and desire pay off, he'll be wearing a major league uniform one of these days.

Nowak leads ULS to third-place finish

University Liggett School's boys track team finished its season with a strong third-place showing at the Metro Conference meet.

Senior captain Matt Nowak won the 1,600- and 3,200-meter runs and anchored the third-place 3,200 relay, which was clocked in 8:44.3.

The 400 relay team of Jon Kish, Karthiek Narala, Kyle Denham and Brian Bruenton scored an upset victory.

"Narala is our alternate in the 400 relay," said coach Philip Langford. "We were fourth-ranked in the conference going in and thought we had a shot at second. All of our handoffs were flawless so by the time (anchor) Bruenton got the stick we had at least seven yards. We needed the cushion since the Metro 100 meter champion — Moss of Cranbrook — was hot on Bruenton's heels."

ULS used a rabbit in the 3,200 run to help Nowak get the victory in 10:26.4.

"It was hot — 90 degrees — so coach Langford didn't want me to go out fast," Nowak said.

"He had Shaka (Bahadu) go into the lead knowing that Latimer of Westland would follow since Shaka dualed him in cross country."

Bahadu and Latimer burned the first lap in 1:09, then finished the mile in 5:08 with Nowak still trailing.

"I pulled up to Latimer on lap six and as I passed, Shaka hit the brakes and Latimer ran into him," Nowak said. "I took off hard and ended up running even splits — 5:13 on the miles and almost 78 seconds each lap."

Kish was third in the long jump (19-foot-2 1/2) and Narala, who was named most improved on the squad, threw the discus 116-11 to take fourth on ULS' top 10 list.

Nowak won his fourth straight most valuable award in track and field, which is the first time it has been done in any sport in the 99-year history of boys athletics at ULS.

He finished his career on the top 10 list in three events — fourth in the 800 run (2:03.6), third in the 1,600 (4:34.2) and fourth in the 3,200 (10:26).

Goalie

high school," he said. "Besides, it doesn't take up your whole life."

Schervish was named to the Michigan High School Hockey Coaches Association All-State team as a senior and many rival coaches praised his play after he had kept the Norsemen close with his acrobatic saves.

Schervish has been a goalie ever since he first started playing hockey at the age of 6.

"I've played out (of the goal) once in a while, but I like playing goal the best. I like the pressure," he said.

That's why he can sympathize with the Red Wings' Chris Osgood, who always seems to be under fire from the media in spite of an impressive record.

"Here's a guy whose goals-against average is around two and he's saving 93 percent of the shots he faces and people still get on his case," Schervish said.

A goaltender usually gets some verbal abuse heaped on him when he's playing on the road. That doesn't faze Schervish either.

"We had a weekend series at Penn State this year and in the first game the other goalie started and gave up five goals," Schervish said. "Then I came in for the third period and gave up five more. The crowd was really giving it to us. I played the next night and beat them. It was fun to hear how quiet the crowd got."

"There's a lot of luck involved in playing goal. Some nights the pucks hit you and other nights they don't."

Schervish enjoys the crowds on the road.

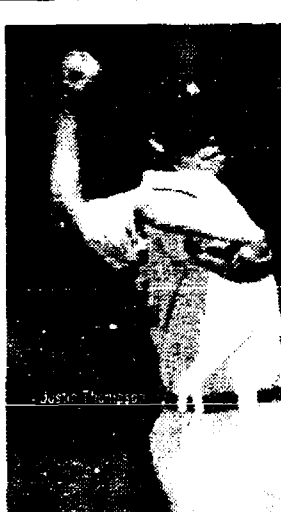

"It's fun to go to Penn State, Iowa State or Ohio. They pack their rinks. We don't have very big home crowds because it's a commuter college," he said.

When Schervish was growing up he admired Patrick Roy, but his style is similar to Boston goalie Byron Dafoe, who had a breakthrough season with the Bruins this year.

Schervish still has three years of eligibility remaining at Michigan-Dearborn, where he's studying management and finance. Then he'll see whether he wants to pursue a pro career.

"It's tough," Schervish said. "But there are a lot of minor league teams around and maybe I'll try out for one of them."

A guy like (Washington's) Olaf Kolzig gives guys like me some hope. He bounced around the minor leagues for several years and now he's one of the best goalies in the game."
