Harmless red dye used to trace what is believed to be an old rainwater outflow pipe seeps into Lake St. Clair between Moross and Provencal in Grosse Pointe Farms, above. West winds blow the discharge upstream toward the Shores.

In the shallow water of Lake St. Clair, Bob Wright, left, locates an outflow pipe from which bluffs of harmless red dye is gurgling into the waters north of the Grosse Pointe Farms pier.

Dye discharge raises 'red' alarm

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

In what emergency officials were relieved to learn was a harmless incident, a large quantity of bright red dye was released into Lake St. Clair earlier this week, prompting alerts to local and federal authorities.

While the head of an emergency response team weighed the environmental cost of delaying a $50,000 containment action, the then-unknown and almost luminescent agent belched in regular bursts from the lake bed.

West winds pushed the spill upstream, delaying finding the source of what turned out to be a leak of sewer dye used to trace the path of rainwater from a house undergoing expansion on Lakeshore between Moross and Provencal in Grosse Pointe Farms.

"To me, this is sewer dye," said Bob Wright, in an eyeball estimate. Wright was on the scene as an emergency team leader from the Inland Waters company of Detroit.

Because the nature of the substance was unconfirmed, Wright said, "We can't wait around (while it spreads)."

The substance continued flowing upstream toward the Shores as Wright ticked off the telltale signs of harmful pollutants.

"There's no sheen on the water, so it's not petroleum based," he said. "There's no odor of pesticide."

Wright was in telephone contact with headquarters as officers from the Farms and Shores considered options listed under hazardous-material guidelines. Two members of the United States Coast Guard station in Detroit drove up.

Wright considered deploying retention material to stop the spread of the then-unidentified substance. The effort would have involved erecting a cofferdam around the discharge area and excavating contaminated

Neighborhood Club eyes skating facility in Harper Woods

The Neighborhood Club, and Center Ice Management are proposing a skating facility in Harper Woods with two NHL-size rinks.

The proposed rinks would meet demands for ice time in the Pointes and Harper Woods as defined in the joint Harper Woods Grosse Pointe Futuring Report issued in 1994.

At its June 7 meeting, the Harper Woods City Council received a presentation from John Bruce, executive director of the Neighborhood Club, and Terry Seyler, president of Center Ice Management Inc., regarding the construction and operation of a multi-use activity center proposed to be constructed in Salter Park.

Salter Park is located on Harper (the south service drive off I-94), north of Moross, immediately adjacent to Bishop Gallagher High School.

According to a media release, the proposed activities center would be privately owned and operated as a nonprofit subsidiary of the Neighborhood Club. It is expected to be financially self-sufficient and able to pay all operating and debt service costs from operating revenues without burden to the taxpayers of the community.

As presented, the facility would be built around two NHL-size ice rinks. The state-of-the-art facility would include a fitness center and multi-use athletic space that might be used for gymnastics, aerobic exercise, volleyball, dance or a myriad of other activities. In addition, the facility would provide a venue for senior luncheons, social activities, a teen club and summer camp programs.

The primary activities of such a facility would be ice hockey and figure skating. Two or more high school varsity teams could play within the rinks. Among the potential tenants could be Grosse Pointe, South High School men's and women's varsity hockey teams, which currently play at City Sports Center in downtown Detroit; Grosse Pointe North High School men's team, which skates at St. Clair Shores, and North's women's team, now skating at Great Lakes Ice Arena in Fraser; the Notre Dame High School's men's team and the Regina High School's women's team, both of which skate at Great Lakes.

Hopefully, the new facility would enable Harper Woods High School to develop a hockey program.

Student suspended for downloading bomb-making info

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

Bomb-making instructions believed to have been downloaded from the Internet by a student at Grosse Pointe South High School were turned over to local police last week.

The 16-year-old male student and resident of Grosse Pointe Park has been put on a five-day temporary suspension and his computer privileges rescinded, according to school officials.

On Wednesday, June 2, at 3:30 p.m., a teacher reportedly saw the boy discard nine pages of a 10-page recipe for bombs, grenades and sabotage techniques that he downloaded from a non-South student's web site. The boy had skipped class and hopped on a computer in the school library.

A teacher retrieved the documents and upon learning they were instructions on how to make "tennis ball bombs" and "detailed instructions" on "ways to vandalize the school," forwarded the documents to school administrators who in turn called police.

South teachers are reportedly wary of the student, whose biography would be incomplete without mention of his alcohol violations and current probation for breaking and entering in Macomb County.

Police will follow-up the incident, including advising the suspect's parents and school officials.

"It's frightening that some people can have access to bomb-making information," said Farms Detective Mike McCarthy. "It's always important for school officials and parents to monitor their children's computer usage because this information is readily available."

In the days before the Columbine massacre, school officials would probably have just called the boy to the office and issued a warning. No more.

"The times have changed and rules have changed," said Russell P. Luttinen, assistant principal for student services.

Hill Days are here again!

In anticipation of this year's "Hill Days" festivities, Friday and Saturday, June 18 and 19, the Michigan Humane Society will again have an information booth as well as retail items for sale in front of Johnstone and Johnstone Realty on Kercheval. A featured item at the booth will be the limited edition "Even Tough Guys Can Take a Couple of Licks" T-shirts featuring Red Wing Thomas Holstrom. Raffle tickets will also be available for the MHS 1999 raffle of a 1965 Mustang convertible.

County to take accident ruling to Supreme Court

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

After having its motion for a rehearing in the case of Ivory L. Herron, turned down by the state's court of appeals, the Wayne County prosecutor's office has vowed to take the case to the Michigan Supreme Court. Herron is the man who killed local teacher Christina Comito while he was driving drunk in October 1995.

He was charged with second degree murder, but was convicted of negligent homicide. The jury was unable to reach a decision on the second degree murder charge, so the judge ordered a mistrial on that count.

Herron was retried and eventually convicted of the lesser charge of manslaughter. But court of appeals judges Helene N. White, Donald E. Holbrook Jr. and John W. Fitzgerald ruled that the second trial amounted to double jeopardy. The result was that the second conviction was thrown out and that Herron could be released because he has served the time in prison associated with the first conviction.

Augustas Hutting of the county prosecutor's office vowed to appeal the decision and immediately filed a motion for a rehearing. On Tuesday, May 25, the court of appeals denied the motion for the rehearing.

Hutting said that his office had 21 days to file for leave to take the case to the state supreme court, which is exactly what his office did.

"We think our chances of being granted a leave by the state supreme court are good," said Hutting. "This is an issue of importance — whether or not we can charge a suspect the way we did and whether a jury can convict someone of those charges."

Hutting expects to hear if the state supreme court will hear the case within the next 60 to 90 days. If the court agrees to hear the case, it could take up to a year before they issue a ruling.

In the meantime, Herron is still in prison. The court declined to order his release pending the completion of the appeals process, said Hutting.

This case began on the afternoon of Oct. 17, 1995. Herron, after drinking and ingesting the illegal drug PCP drove a rented truck into the car of Christina Comito, who was driving on Vernier in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Comito, 25, lived in St. Clair Shores and was teaching in Harper Woods at the time of the accident. Her GMC Jimmy was crushed and rescue workers removed her body from the vehicle using cutting and prying tools.

Herron's license was suspended at the time of the accident and he was driving a rented truck. He has remained behind bars ever since.

Hutting said that the case of People vs. Price explicitly states that "the defendant's convictions and sentences for both involuntary manslaughter and OUI causing death do not violate the double jeopardy clauses of the Michigan and United States constitutions."

"The statutes aimed at prohibiting conduct affecting distinct societal norms and the penalty provisions of the statutes evidence a legislative intent to authorize punishment for both offenses."

Boaters flock to Kerby Cove between the Grosse Pointe Farms Pier Park and Crescent Sail Yacht Club. A boat owner is asking the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for approval to moor his boat offshore for seven months of the year. Approval could establish a precedent leading to other boaters seeking the same right.

Offshore mooring request could jam Lake St. Clair

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

A boat owner is seeking federal approval to moor his private boat year-round in Lake St. Clair approximately 500 feet off the coast of Grosse Pointe Farms.

A favorable ruling could establish a precedent for the proliferation of boats along the Grosse Pointe waterfront.

"I would speculate that if we authorize one person to do it, others might as well," said Michelle Thrift, a project manager with the United States Army Corps of Engineers regulatory functions branch.

Thrift's concern was echoed by the applicant, Terry Stuck of the City of Grosse Pointe.

"The one thing that will probably have to be considered is if (1) get the permit, will another group of people want the same consideration? You might have a raft of boats you could walk on from here to Canada," said Stuck.

"By the same token," he continued, "that's a refutable argument because you must have the riparian right approval," which he said he has received from the Crescent Sail Yacht Club.

Riparian rights refer to the right of long-time lakeside deed owner to have access to the lake.

Farms officials were blindsided by the proposal. Rich Solak, the Farms city manager, has assigned the city attorney to determine the plan's ramifications and see what, if anything, can be done about it.

Ron Kneiser, a Farms councilman and an attorney, said, "The Farms has no jurisdiction in the matter, but we will file an objection."

Stuck is a member of Crescent. He decided upon the mooring option after learning he didn't have a slip for 1999. "Crescent is full," he said.

Stuck has proposed a seasonal mooring rig to which his boat would tie up a short distance downstream from Crescent. He plans to access the boat from the club by jitting.

Although pleasure craft routinely anchor in Kerby Cove between the Farms Pier Park and Crescent, they have done so temporarily, until now, usually for recreational purposes on summer afternoons.

Stuck would moor his "personal watercraft 24 hours per day annually from April 1 through Nov. 1 of each year," according to the Corps of Engineers.

"They do it all the time out east and in Grand Traverse Bay, my home town," said Stuck. "That gave me the idea when I learned I didn't have a slip for 1999 at Crescent."

"He can do whatever he wants as long as he doesn't obstruct navigation" and meets nighttime lighting requirements, said Dieter Meier, operations chief petty officer at the Coast Guard station in St. Clair Shores.

"Anybody can propose to do whatever they want," said Thrift. "The Corps has to evaluate the request based on the 21 public interest factors."

According to Thrift, those factors include esthetics, general environmental concerns, shoreline erosion and accretion and "in general, the needs and welfare of the people."

Thrift said, "Anybody is welcome to comment" on Stuck's proposal. The comment period runs until July 1. "We will interpret a lack of response as meaning that there is no objection to the permit application."

Comments should be filed with Walter A. Gauthier, Chief, Permit Evaluation Section B, Regulatory Branch, Construction-Operations Division, Detroit District, Corps of Engineers, Box 1027, Detroit, Michigan 48231. All responses must refer to file number 99-010-042-0.

Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods, ranging in ages 4 years old through high school, currently purchase ice time from City Sports, Grosse Pointe Community Rink and McCann Rink at University Liggett School.

The proposed facility would also address the critical lack of opportunity for figure skating within the community. The long-standing Grosse Pointe Figure Skating Club currently has limited ice time which restricts its program to a small, basic-skills class. Skaters who want to progress beyond these introductory classes have to transfer to programs at St. Clair Shores, Great Lakes Sports Center in Fraser or the Detroit Skating Club in Bloomfield. A full program would expand the basic skills classes, add over 20 hours a week for free-style sessions, lessons and, perhaps, add the opportunity to participate on precision skating teams.

In addition to organized hockey and skating, the facility could provide 20 hours a week for open skating accessible to the general public. In addition to prime weekend sessions for families and individuals, special hours would be allocated to mom and tot skating lessons, senior skating sessions and soil from the lake bottom.

In the meantime, officials were trying to contact workers from the house on Lakeshore to see if anyone had been testing the pipes with dye.

Confident the problem was dye, Wright lowered himself into the foot-deep water.

"Here it is," he said, having found the outflow pipe.

At about that time, workers confirmed they had released dye in the home's downspouts last weekend and Tuesday morning, June 8.

Wright said the dye will degrade upon exposure to ultraviolet light in about five or six days.

Upon receiving technical data on the dye from the contractors, Farms police said it was nontoxic and nonflammable.

Shane Reeside, the Farms assistant city manager, said city officials will investigate the incident to determine if there is any discharge into the lake.

A member of the Coast Guard said authorities don't require notification from contractors using harmless sewer dyes, but Farms police said a heads-up by the workers would have avoided a lot of unnecessary trouble.

sessions to home-schoolers.

Proposed for the facility would be the two ice surfaces, a fitness center, a large multipurpose athletic space, meeting rooms, hospitality facilities, a pro shop, offices for the center and the Harper Woods Recreation Department.

While the fitness center would be critical to the varsity and travel hockey teams, it would be marketed to parents of skaters and hockey players who will be spending a lot of time within the center as well as the general public.

To accommodate parents whose children are skating three to 15 hours a week, the facility would also feature extensive food service and hospitality facilities. To keep siblings of skaters occupied, the facility will have a tots play area and electronic games. Dining and catering facilities are also planned.

The effort by the Neighborhood Club and the City of Harper Woods is in response to the recommendation of the joint Harper Woods Grosse Pointe Futuring Project whose report was issued in 1994.

The Neighborhood Club is the primary host and sponsor of much of the extra-curricular athletic programming available to the residents of the Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods community. The Neighborhood Club has long been aware of the severe shortage of facilities and opportunities for recreation, especially for children.

The Futuring Project documented this need and identified the small populations of our communities and the lack of coordination among the various Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods communities as an obstacle to the provision of programs beneficial to all of the communities' residents.

Among its recommendations, the report encourages the communities to share operating costs through cooperative ventures between government, private and nonprofit bodies utilizing user fees and perhaps enhanced financial support from the local communities to facilitate capital funding.

Because of the cost and shortage of vacant land within the community, finding a site has hampered any efforts by the Neighborhood Club to initiate this process. Upon agreement by the Harper Woods City Council to make the Salter Park site available, the Neighborhood Club in cooperation with the City of Harper Woods can begin the planning process.

A first step will be a feasibility study to determine the demand for various activities and to project anticipate revenue and expense. As a self-supporting non-profit venture, the facility will need to pay not only for the operating costs, but for all debt service associated with building the facility.

Once such study is complete, the Neighborhood Club can make a decision as to whether or not to proceed, how the project would be financed and when the facility might open.

Park woman dances her way from Egypt to the Pointes

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

She's been known by many names...Mahassen, Aspasia and Shahzada. She has lived a life most people only dream of, wearing glamorous costumes, dramatic makeup and traveling to exotic locations for a living.

For 13 years Shelley Brantley, 41, of Grosse Pointe Park, worked as a professional belly dancer. Although her career has taken her as far as Egypt and Morocco, she's now passing on her talent and knowledge to students as a belly dance instructor at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Center.

"I think it's an art," said Brantley. "It's been around before ballet. It's the mother of all dancing."

Brantley started taking belly dance lessons as a teenager with her mother, Peggy, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Center.

"My mother was a Spanish dancer, but she had surgery and needed to get back in shape," said Brantley. "I always liked dancing and acting while I was growing up, but there was a side of me that was really shy. My mother had to talk me into lessons."

Inhibitions faded quickly. After three months she was asked to dance at a farewell party at the former Cedar's club for her teacher who was moving back to the Middle East.

"When I danced the first time, I was rather shy. My face was pink," said Brantley. "After the drummer called me out for a solo the second time, I knew I found my niche."

It was at that party that the Cedars co-owner and former Farms resident Tony Risk offered her a job at the restaurant.

At that time, Brantley had to turn down the job offer. Her mother said she was too young. But while her classmates at Grosse Pointe South High School were earning pocket change babysitting and waitressing, Brantley worked one night a week dancing at weddings and parties.

After she graduated from South in 1975, she took Risk up on his job offer and performed at the Cedars for three shows six nights a week.

POINTER OF INTEREST

"He was like a grandfather to me," said Brantley. "He believed in me and took me under his wing. He believed in me as a performer and told me I was really focused for an 18-year-old."

Her mother acted as her manager throughout her career. She'd help her book shows, make costumes, and travel with her to different clubs.

"One of the highlights of my career was getting the key to the city of Scranton, Pa.," said Brantley. "I was there to dance at the opening of a new restaurant."

In January 1982 Brantley was invited to perform in a club in Cairo, Egypt.

"In Egypt I worked with a 22-piece orchestra," said Brantley. "You only did one show a night. It's considered the home of belly dancing, especially in Cairo."

After that first trip, Brantley had traveled several times a year along with her mother to perform in Egypt, Morocco and Canada.

However in 1989, Brantley cut her career short when her mother died of hepatitis.

"When my mother got sick in '88, she had to get a liver transplant," said Brantley. "She died before she could get it."

"I tried to get back into dancing, but I couldn't put my heart into it. At 31, I had taken my dancing as far as I could. I wanted to see if there was something else."

It wasn't until 1992 she found a new focus in her life as a nail technician at Jacobson's soon after she received her manicurist license.

"That was a real blessing," said Brantley. "It was a real low point in my life for me and I was very lonely. My mother and I had always shopped there. I like the feeling at Jacobson's. It has a very caring atmosphere and it gives me a chance to be creative."

In September 1998, Brantley became one of the first Michigan residents to receive an esthetician license. She has now included facials and make-up work to her responsibilities at Jacobson's.

Her interests in nails and make-up is a natural extension of her interest in belly dancing. "I always did my own make-up when I was dancing," said Brantley.

In 1997 a dance instructor suggested that Brantley check in with the Grosse Pointe War Memorial Center, which was looking for an instructor to teach their belly dance classes. Since then she has been teaching three classes a week. In July, she'll be adding a new four-week class for girls ages 9 to 12.

Students in her class range from 16 to 60, with most of her students in their 20s and 30s.

"It's a great form of exercise and it's a complete work-out," said Brantley. "The slow steps sculpt the body and the fast steps help you lose weight."

Even though it's been 10 years since Brantley has danced professionally, she has kept her interest alive in belly dancing through practicing on her own, working on choreography, designing and making costumes, as well as teaching.

"My mother and I used to make all my own costumes," said Brantley. "We used to do all the hand beading since it was very expensive. I still like to draw and create and I make a lot of costumes for my students, although it's not a business for me."

Brantley leads a relatively quiet and private off-stage life with her father, Ralph.

"He's always been supportive," said Brantley. "I've always been nervous performing in front of him. He loves that I'm teaching at the War Memorial. He knows it's an art."

Brantley is also working on her college degree. She has been attending classes at Macomb County Community College over the years and is thinking about going into teaching.

"Now that I've been teaching, I've found that I'm a good communicator. My students have told me I'm a good teacher and that I'm very non-judgmental."

Park Fourth of July parade returns

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Patriotic parade lovers rejoice! The Grosse Pointe Park Fourth of July Parade is back.

The parade had been canceled in 1997 and 1998, said Park parks and recreation director Terry Solomon, because of construction.

"Over the past couple of years, the streets had been dug up for the sewer separation project," Solomon said. "There was also construction at Patterson Park, so we decided to cancel the parade. But the project is complete, so the parade is back on."

The parade will follow the traditional route, Solomon said. The adult portion starts at Kercheval and Maryland. They start gathering at 9 a.m. on Sunday, July 4. The parade starts at 10 a.m. The parade travels down Kercheval and turns on Balfour and heads past Jefferson to Essex, where Trombly School is located.

At Trombly, the adult portion of the parade will merge with the children's portion, Solomon said. While the children wait for the adults to march by, there will be judges looking at how the kids decorate their bikes as well as other activities.

Once everyone is together, the parade will proceed down Essex to Patterson Park, said Solomon. There will be Fourth of July ceremonies, which are expected to be completed by about 12:30 p.m.

Once the parade is over, residents can start their holiday picnics, said Solomon. The parade conveniently ends in a park, so participants can go directly from the parade to their picnics without having to leave the park.

"We are currently looking for businesses to participate in the parade," said Solomon. "Currently we have signed up local Boy Scout and Girl Scout groups to march, as well as other youth groups. There will be plenty of antique cars too."

"If you can't be in the parade we urge you to get out and watch the parade. Now that the construction is completed, we're ready. Park residents love the parade and we love putting it on. It's a real small-town activity that brings us all together."

Woods readies for fireworks celebration on the Fourth

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Over 200 years ago founding father John Adams said that the Fourth of July would be celebrated with fireworks. He was right; just ask the folks in Grosse Pointe Woods.

The Grosse Pointe Woods Fireworks Committee's Fourth of July fireworks celebration is scheduled to be held on Sunday, June 27, at dusk, said committee member Eric Steiner. The rain date is Monday, June 28.

"The show will be held at the Parcels field, at Mack and Vernier," Steiner said. "We have the cooperation of the Lochmoor Club, the Grosse Pointe School System, as well as help from local businesses. National Coney Island will be on hand to sell food and for the first time there will be ice cream and pretzel vendors. Families can bring food, but no open flames will be allowed on the field."

Steiner said that popular radio personality Mark "Doc" Andrews will act as the MC. He is on of Dick Purtan's people. The Teen Angels, a local band known for its classic rock 'n' roll repertoire will be on hand to play some tunes, beginning at 8 p.m.

The cost of the show, said

Steiner, is $35,000. Right now the committee is seeking sponsors willing to donate $1,800.

"Each sponsor gets a banner put up outside the Parcels field 10 days before the show," said Steiner. "We've had a number of businesses willing to donate, but our list is not complete at this time. It takes two days to set up the fireworks on Lochmoor property. These days they use computers to set the timing for the show."

Steiner also said that the other Pointes and Harper Woods will be lending a hand by providing some of their police officers and officers from their police auxiliary.

Is Kosovo war ending? Serbs balk at terms

Is the 72-day NATO air war against Kosovo finally coming to an end? It looks as if it will, if the Serbian parliament and Gen. Slobodan Milosevic live up to their part of the international peace plan.

Unfortunately, the Serbs and Yugoslav military officials over the weekend balked at agreement of terms for a Serbian withdrawal from Kosovo.

"Our job has been to translate the political agreement into a workable military reality on the ground," said Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Jackson, commander of NATO's Kosovo peacekeeping force.

But, he added, the "Yugoslav delegation presented a proposal that would not guarantee the safe return of all the refugees, or the full withdrawal of Yugoslav forces."

While there was speculation in Kosovo that the allied forces would give the Serbs more time to withdraw, the allies were reportedly insistent that the rest of the original terms agreed to by both sides be respected.

But the Serbs demanded that the United Nations Security Council first approve the peacekeeping force before NATO troops enter Kosovo.

The allies have agreed that there will be changes in words and phrases to make the points clear, but if those changes don't satisfy the Serbs, NATO forces will continue their air war.

NATO insists that Milosevic agree to withdraw all Yugoslav forces from Kosovo and allow nearly a million ethnic Albanian refugees to return to what is left of their homes.

The sudden Serbian acceptance of terms last week came as a surprise to Western military and political leaders.

However, Serbian resistance grew after their leaders had read through all the provisions of the peace pact.

In fact, Milosevic agreed to all the NATO demands only after envoys from Russia, Finland and other European nations made it clear to him he had received the best offer he was going to get.

In accepting the offer, Milosevic agreed to withdraw all Yugoslav military and police forces from Kosovo within seven days and allow 500,000 foreign troops under a United Nations flag to police the province.

Weekend Serbian resistance to agreed-upon items in the peace plan confirmed allied suspicions about the Serbs' willingness to accept the peace plan as presented to them.

However, the allies promptly announced they would resume their heavy bombing in Kosovo and elsewhere in Yugoslavia because of the Serbian refusal to accept agreed-upon terms.

That means the NATO forces will carry out its commitment to "demilitarize" the rebels, Steven Erlander, the New York Times correspondent reported from Belgrade.

Meanwhile, the first representatives of the NATO forces began showing up in Kosovo, and the first of almost a million Kosovo residents returned under protection to what is left of their homes.

But is the war really over? As we write, we don't know, and neither do many of the correspondents on the ground in Kosovo.

In our view, the Serbs and Milosevic often have been difficult to deal with in the past, and now are simply playing their old game of delay with the allies in the hopes that something good will emerge for their point of view.

Charters need accountability

As it so often does on school issues, The Detroit News has supported Gov. John Engler's call for lifting the limit on the number of charter schools in Michigan above 150.

A House committee considering the issue has already proposed lifting the limit to 225 starting in the year 2000, instead of the governor's request for no limitation.

Fortunately, the Detroit Free Press promptly published a column by State Rep. Rose Bogardus and Bobby Crim, former House speaker, which served as a rebuttal to the House proposal and the governor's request.

The rebuttal piece's strongest argument is that there is "no evidence that charter schools are properly accountable to the public for their tax dollars."

Under the original charter school law, oversight of such schools is left to the authorizing bodies for the charter schools. In Michigan, Central Michigan University has authorized the majority of the more than 130 charter schools now in operation.

The rebuttal contends that the state auditor general's office has provided evidence of flaws in such oversight, but, unfortunately, does not spell out what the flaws were.

In addition, Bogardus and Crim point out that, "many charter schools are being run by large management companies" that are allowed to "keep up to 10 percent of the per-pupil allotment for administrative costs."

"Those tax dollars should be subjected to thorough examination," which means, the authors conclude, that "increasing the number of charter schools without fixing the problem is not good public policy."

Among other criticisms of charter schools cited by Bogardus and Crim are failures to provide services to special education students, offering only K-6 grade programs because they cost less than high school programs, and failing to provide extracurricular activities or transportation that most traditional public schools provide.

Charter schools are an experiment in education reform, Bogardus and Crim remind us.

They argue that "as with any experiment, before we give charter schools free rein for expansion, the schools first must be willing to establish basic accountability standards to ensure educational success and taxpayer confidence."

We think Bogardus and Crim make good arguments for requiring accountability in the charter schools before considering whether the number of such schools should be expanded in Michigan.

Ward to run for prosecutor

The news that John O'Hair will not seek re-election in the 2000 vote would be a blow to Wayne County voters if it weren't for the fact his top deputy, George Ward, will seek to succeed O'Hair.

In talks with Ward, O'Hair has pointed out he has more than 1 1/2 years remaining on his term and does not intend to be diverted from the business of his office with talk about his successor.

But O'Hair indicated that if Ward formally announces for the office, O'Hair would be "pleased and comforted" to see Ward as the next prosecutor and "to tell this to whomever might ask."

Ward, in turn, said that the most noteworthy thing he had observed about prosecutor O'Hair is the care he gives to the selection of staff.

Maintenance of this quality is one of Ward's principal goals. "We must do it as competently as lawyers in the best law firms represent their clients," Ward said.

"I also share his (O'Hair's) belief that we might fight crime on two fronts: It is as much a part of our job to help families and communities to develop consciences and character in our youth — hence our involvement with schools, faith, communities and civic coalitions — as it is, after the fact, to arrest, prosecute and sentence. I am very proud to be associated with this office."

Ward also pointed out that he wants to be a full-fledged participant in discussing important public policies.

He recalled that he has often lamented about "how the failure of our corrections system to insist on the constructive use of time in prison and jail, or while on parole, does more to enable crime than to deter it."

"Prison and parole experiences which confirm and reinforce the way of life which lead to crime in the first place, rather than to train offenders in the way of life and discipline that will be expected of them when they return to a free society, make no sense at all."

Ward added that he expected to release his positions on these issues after the vacation season and reminded readers that his previously published op-ed pieces and bar journal articles offer a good preview.

Engler's new school board tie

Gov. John Engler will continue to have a strong influence on the Detroit reform school board with the appointment of his state treasurer, Mark Murray, to succeed Art Ellis, his state education department chief.

In the law setting up the reform board, Ellis or his designee was to be a member of the seven-member board for a five-year term.

Ellis had served on the board since it assumed control in April, but said he was weary of the long drive from his home in Mount Pleasant to Detroit.

Ellis told the Detroit Free Press that he was "quite confident" that Detroit will be a different school system quickly.

"But," he added, "it will take longer than anybody really wants to change the test scores."

Was the state education department chief already dismayed by the problems facing the reform school board? It could be.

Opposes cancer treatment center

To the Editor:
I have been a resident of Grosse Pointe for 37 years, 25 in the Farms, and for the past three, residing on Lewiston. The issue is Bon Secours Cottage Hospitals proposed cancer treatment center.

This proposal, regional in nature, would offer an array of cancer treatment protocols, not only to the community, but to southeastern Michigan and to the state at large.

I have several concerns, mostly reservations with this proposal. First, the leakage and leaching of radioactive rays into the environment, which by the hospital's own admission, through their expert's opinion, cannot be prevented.

Secondly, correlative to this problem, is the issue of the scope of treatments. There must be proper collection and disposal of all radioactive waste which are necessary in cancer treatment.

Thirdly, with the increased traffic to and from the hospital, what effect will this have on an already over-taxed parking situation on the Hill? Also, what negative effect will the community have to burden, due to our increased exposure?

Lastly, for myself and my neighbors, due to the proximity of our properties to the hospital, the effect upon our property values would be a large issue, according to one prominent real estate broker on the Hill. This would be an infringement on our property rights without any compensation. This is a proposed expansion, by a private institution to offer new services for profit. Profit for the hospital, but at what expense to all of us within the community?

One can only judge from the past, and in the past three years, I have reported to the hospital several issues involving maintenance, health hazards and inconsiderate "unneighborly" activity, but, to date, the hospital has not alleviated any of these concerns. Therefore, my expectations for them to handle any larger problems is rather dismal.

The potentially catastrophic effect upon the health and welfare of the community at large, and in particular to those of us with property contiguous to the hospital are at issue.

Therefore, I would urge all parties with similar concerns to attend the Grosse Pointe Farms City Council meeting on Monday, June 21, at 7:30 p.m. This proposal is too far reaching and broad, with the possibility of disastrous consequences, therefore, I urge the council, the community and fellow residents to defeat this proposal.

Parentetically, Bon Secours Cottage has scheduled a presentation for Thursday, June 10, at 6:30 p.m. at Cottage Hospital conference rooms one through four.

Right on

To the Editor:
I read with interest the front-page story in the June 3 issue of the Grosse Pointe News, "Richner votes for unifying, easing CCW law," as I did another recent front-page report, "Water snakes found along lake," in the May 13 issue of the Grosse Pointe News, about the presence of water snakes in Lake St. Clair. The snake story highlighted a superb response on the part of the Grosse Pointe Shores Police Department in stemming a perceived water snake infestation on the shores of the lake, due to receding water. Shores residents are indeed fortunate.

With respect to Grosse Pointe Farms Public Safety Director Robert Ferber's insinuation that my state Representative, Andrew Richner, is somehow out-of-touch with the local law enforcement community's view on CCW, I believe it is Ferber who is actually out-of-touch.

There is no question that Ferber's department is top-of-the-line.

What I find pathetic, however, is Ferber's seeming compulsion to march in lock-step to the tune of the Wayne County Democratic Party establishment on this issue.

In reality, until substantive police protection can be extended to all honest citizens of Wayne County, then the current CCW system will remain a sham and a scandal crying for reform.

However Rep. Richner arrived at his decision and whatever he does in the future in this regard is his business. The fact is, he did the right thing by voting to reform the CCW situation in Michigan.

Given the lopsided bipartisan majority of 55 Republicans and 30 Democrats in a legislative body of 110 representatives voting in favor of uniform standards, it seems to me that Rep. Richner is really onto something.

Kindness — sometimes misplaced but never forgotten

The 8-year-old boy was playing at a friend's house when, for no particular reason, he started singing.

"You have a very nice voice," Mrs. Housefeld said to the little boy from across the street. "You sing wonderfully."

The boy felt terrific, and sang with even more spirit.

Criticism, on the other hand, one word of it, can blow out the last flicker of the flame.

Sometimes kindness comes in unusual ways. I grew up in a neighborhood of pre-World War II bungalows on Swain Court, in Milwaukee. It was a street where you knew everybody.

I remember when I was about 4 years old I would run to the corner of Swain Court and Ohio streets. It was only 50 feet of so from the house, but for a 4-year-old it was big adventure.

On the corner, I would sit and wait eagerly for the old man with three thumbs. He would come down the street, walking slowly from the street-car stop. Wearing a blue work shirt spotted with dirt, he'd be carrying his black metal lunch pail, looking like he'd had a hard day at the factory.

The closer he got, the more excited I would get. I would shout, "Mister! Mister! Please, mister, show me, show me." No matter how tired the old man might be, he would stop, smile, stoop down and show me his right hand.

There they were! I'd stare in amazement at two thumbs on one hand. One thumb looked normal, except out of the side of it grew another thumb. It was incredible, and to a curious 4-year-old boy, it was like seeing the seventh wonder of the world.

"How'd you do that? How'd you do that?" I would ask.

He would smile and say, "A gift from God, my little friend. A gift to make your day exciting."

I felt unbelievably wonderful.

He would ask me about my day. He cared about it, about me. We would talk for a few minutes, and he'd be on his way.

What a wonderful old man. What a wonderful gift his kindness was.

Starting today, and each day from now on, I promise to take a moment and remember the old man with three thumbs and his kindness. I promise to make an extra special effort to think a little less about me and my needs, and take time to give some kindness away.

Funny how sometimes kindness and those warm memories get misplaced — but never forgotten.

Oh, one more thing. Today, more than 40 years later, that singing boy still remembers the warm, loving feeling he had when he was told he sang well. I still think I can't sing very well at all, but I sure remember Mrs. Housefeld's kindness.

Narcissism — healthy or pathologic

One of the many issues that has surfaced in the aftermath of the high school shootings is the concept of narcissism, or self-love.

Healthy narcissism is a basic building block of the normal, stable and adaptive personality, but pathological narcissism is a psychiatric diagnosis which bears further examination. There is considerable evidence that the perpetrators of the school shootings were victims of pathological narcissism.

Pathological narcissism is an excess of self-love, fueled by an excess of self-hate. Self-hate comes about from a pathological early development, which includes violation, trauma and neglect.

A famous British psychoanalyst, John Bowlby, discovered early in his clinical experience, that delinquent children invariably had interruptions in the maternal bond. They were not well taken care of by their parents. Often there were no stable parent figures as the children ended up in numerous foster homes.

They lacked a certain love bond, which is the prerequisite of a decent, law-abiding person. Relatively speaking, they have no feeling for other people as a result of not being bonded to another. They can love only themselves and have no feeling for others.

This lack of feeling for others is the key to understanding the school shootings. Commentators, including myself, have mentioned the external causative factors, such as media violence and the ready availability of firearms.

In previous columns, I have stressed the important factors of early child development and the social changes that have spawned a lack of respect for authority and the law, and the new child-rearing philosophies that have led to some children being overly indulged and inadequately guided and controlled.

When a person with pathological narcissism kills another, we often call it a "senseless" murder, but the sense is that the murder is intensely gratifying to the perpetrator. It gives him a transient feeling of power, which is a defense against feelings of inadequacy and vulnerability. The person feels assailed and diminished by the world, and wants to fight back and show his strength and power by acting out his murderous rage.

For a long time I have considered the reality of "murderous rage" and have come to certain conclusions after a lifetime of study. We all get angry sometimes, but most of us control it, or even vent a little by slamming a door. Some of us may even entertain violent fantasies of the Walter Mitty type or enjoy "shoot-em-up" action movies. But there are those who cannot constrain themselves to fantasy, but erect elaborate fantasies of destruction and then actually act them out in real life.

That is why we worry about violent video games. They are fantasies of murderous destructiveness, and for most kids, they are a safe outlet for hostile aggression. But for some, the games are like gasoline to a fire. They fire up the feelings and fantasies and spur action. Teenagers with pathological narcissism have no constraints to acting out their fantasies in the real world, because they have come to have no feelings for others.

One way in which pathological narcissism develops is by lack of parental bonding, but another way is manic-depression, or bipolar disease. This condition is more common than we might think.

In this condition, due to a neurochemical imbalance, emotions are felt to the extreme. Depression is suicidal and aggression is murderous. They may be very irritable and temperamental — every slight is a major disaster. Inwardly, they feel sick, different, fragile, and want to cover these up. So they withdraw to protect themselves, some harboring dreams of revenge. In effect, they lose contact with reality at crucial moments and become a menace to society.

It would be good for this condition to be detected early and appropriate treatment given. Psychotherapy is often very beneficial to teenagers, as they are in a major process of change and so are changeable.

Developing a positive bond with a therapist is a developmental necessity, when the original bond is full of conflict, ambivalence and negativity. And often a psychiatrist can detect the early signs of manic-depression and is in a position to modulate the excesses of emotion by appropriate medication.

It is sad that the state hospital system has been dismantled and standards of care reduced to the point where destructive behavior can hardly ever be prevented. One can only hope that the powers-that-be will heed the need for a more encompassing state mental health system, one that is enabled by a proactive citizenry to deal with the problems of young people before they get out of hand.

A great rabbi, Maimonides, gave this great legacy to Western Civilization:

"If I am not for myself, who will be for me? If I am only for myself, what am I? If not now, when?"

It is important to love yourself, protect and nurture yourself, in other words, to take good care of yourself, your loved ones, and to make contributions to others. But if you are only for yourself, and maybe your blood relatives, what are you? Selfish, primitive. And if we are not to solve the problem of violence now, then when?

Dr. Bloom is clinical associate professor, Department of Psychiatry, WSU School of Medicine. He practices in Grosse Pointe Park and is a member of the American Academy of Psychoanalysis. Wind blows in some more good

"I read your story about the people going to help the tornado victims in Oklahoma," the lady with the German accent told FYI over the phone.

She was just calling to make sure the group, led by Christ Church rector Ed Putnam's daughter Bethany, was strictly on the up and up, she said.

FYI said the item in the May 20 column was true and he could vouch for them.

"I can't go and help — I'm 92," she said. "But I can send a check."

She was too shy to give her name: FYI thought she said she lived in the Woods.

Sunday, the incident came up in a conversation with the Rev. Dr. Putnam at the Christ Church Antique Show. "She sent $500," he said.

Bethany assures FYI it's all on its way for Oklahoma tornado relief.

Haircut brings the house down

Pointe faces spotted in the sellout crowd before the final performance of "Samson and Delilah" Saturday at the Detroit Opera House: Village Toy Company's Jack and Nancy Renick, Christ Church singer Elena Beck, Tappan Realty's Yucel Mikiel and South High art teacher Jack Sommers.

— And at the intermission, there was artist Erica Chappuis in her trademark buzz cut with husband Laurence, who was sporting Samson-length hair.

Are men with long hair sexier, FYI asked Erica, whose paintings often deal with a subject stronger than mere romance.

"Yes," she said, offering the information that she had just completed a painting of Samson and Delilah.

In Saturday's performance, the fatal barbering occurred off-stage and out of sight — was the painting any more revealing?

It was yes again: "Actually, I show them multitasking," said Erica.

End of story

Even with that big bookstore up the street, it was still a surprise: After 13 years on Kercheval at Notre Dame, the closing of Waldenbooks last Saturday, without any warning.

Customers wandering up to the door looked stunned as they realized there was nothing inside. Nothing but boxed books waiting to be loaded on a big truck in back, and a little sign that said they were closed but still invited old friends inside for a last goodbye.

People's reactions? "Mainly, they're shocked," said store manager Michelle Vanden

Brooks, who is now looking for another position, hopefully in books.

"The customers were the best part of the job," she said. "I want to thank them for all their years of loyalty."

Back in the 80's the site in the present McCourt Building was McCourt's shoes: Guess what's coming next?

"I've heard it may be another shoe store," said Michelle.

Resentful of weapons bill

To the Editor:

I am saddened and angry that 70 representatives in the House of Representatives passed legislation on a concealed weapons bill. Our state representative, Andrew Richner, was one of those legislators supporting this insane policy.

This bill requires the Secretary of State to issue a permit to any applicant without a record of crime or mental illness. The sponsor of this bill is Sen. David Jaye who once dropped his gun on the floor of the House of Representatives during a caucus.

If this bill is passed, it could put up to 300,000 concealed weapons in the hands of people who may be disgruntled motorists, jilted lovers or enraged employees. People would have the right to carry guns into churches, schools and sporting events.

I am proud the Grosse Pointe Woods Council unanimously passed a resolution to urge our legislators to not loosen the gun laws. I hope our residents will help our legislators decide not to support this irresponsible legislation.

Misses schools

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Grosse Pointe School System for what they do for all the children of Grosse Pointe. You truly don't realize the gifts they give you until you don't have them anymore. The people of Grosse Pointe take for granted the quality of education their children are getting. I just wanted to take a moment to remind everyone what their children have.

We moved from Grosse Pointe three months ago. We looked very hard to find a school system that would complement the education our children were receiving. We chose what we determined to be our best option.

My children are currently in a school that has no formal music program (vocal or instrumental), art or gym, the "extras" we take for granted in Grosse Pointe. They have no playground equipment. Not just the wonderful play structures that each school PTO worked so hard to provide for their school, but no balls, jump-ropes, hopscotch boards or four-square courts. They don't even have a field to play on — only a gravel area between the nine portables that house many of the classes.

There are very few computers in the school, and those have limited software. They just received their science materials for the year, so they can start teaching science units. There is no hot lunch program.

My children attend a Catholic school, which by local standards is supposed to be a step up on the public schools. My son is in third grade, my daughter in sixth. They are working in fifth- and eighth-grade math texts, respectively. Their teachers have tried to supplement their learning, but with class sizes larger than what we have in Grosse Pointe, they can only do so much.

The reason I was prompted to write this letter was that today, one of my children's teachers was sharing with me a statement she said to her husband: "Of all the children in my classroom, the one who is excelling the most is one that is not even a product of our school system." She asked me what the schools in Grosse Pointe do differently than here. I have been contemplating that ever since. What seemed the ordinary, everyday things in Grosse Pointe, I now recognize as so much more. The whole system is to be commended. From the administration, to the teachers, to the families.

I believe that when people are doing something right, you should acknowledge it. I urge everyone to take a moment to look and see the positive things happening in Grosse Pointe Schools.

I am thankful that we will, in time, be returning to Grosse Pointe.

Is it ready yet? No!!!

What a glorious Memorial Day weekend we experienced! We did all the usual family stuff, including picnics, barbecues and the planting of flower beds. The garage sale in the village was fun as always, and we constantly bump into old friends there. The wondrous weather cooperated, except for a smattering of raindrops that drove the memorial service at the war memorial into the auditorium. Despite the forecast, the Fries were overflowing with spectators and participants — all wanting to be a part of this special day of observance and reverence. Seeing Old Glory at half staff never fails to raise a giant lump in our throats. As the honor roll names were read, one could almost hear the silent prayers, "Please God, no more! Stop the madness in Kosovo, the costs are too high."

On Sunday, the grandchildren arrived to stay with me for a few hours while their parents played golf. I had purchased a large inflatable swimming pool and we planned to pump it up and douse our bodies in same. Poor babies, they arrived in their bathing suits, and with various water toys, prepared for the christening of the pool.

This THING was 6 feet long, 10 feet wide and 2 feet high! I thought I had the problem under control because I had bought a mini-compressor. I soon learned that the compressor has an extremely short cord, and the pool had to be positioned right next to the car in order to reach the lighter that supplied the power. After figuring out that the car had to be running in order to start the compressor, I exited the car and nearly poked a hole in the pool with the edge of the door. Naturally the children were chiming, "Is it ready yet?"

Several attempts to attach the valve from the pump to the one in the pool were unsuccessful. I pulled down the locking mechanism and it still popped out. By this time, the perspiration was flowing down my forehead and into my sunglasses as I struggled to connect the two valves. No go. We could have put the pool in the car, but there was no way to get it home after it was blown up. I finally sat down and held the things together. After what seemed to be hours, but in fact was 45 minutes, there was barely a small pocket of air visible.

Having succumbed to the pleas of the grandchildren, and as frustrated as they were by my incompetence, I discovered and filled an old sturdy plastic pool. It was quite a picture — two toddlers and one large golden retriever sharing a wet space, five feet in diameter. The hours droned on and finally I decided we had enough air in the new pool to fill it. It took two adults to carry the pool from the driveway to the terrace. Cushioned mats were put under it to protect it from the jagged edges of the flagstones, and two hoses were positioned at each end of the pool for the fill-up.

As the pool started to fill, it listed starboard, and water cascaded out onto the lawn — by the gallon. The pool was too heavy to move, so we all crawled to the other side to stem the flow. It continued. Its sustenance appeared to flow from the seams, and soon the pool's size had been reduced by half. I noticed that seeds were beginning to float from the trees onto the water's surface, and the grass from tiny feet was sticking to the bottom of my lovely new toy. For a moment I was tempted to call the Lake St. Clair clean-up crew. Those people are great!

Just as I was about to admit defeat, the parents returned from the golf course to scoop up their precious cargo. I was saved, as they headed to a REAL POOL. Bless you Grosse Pointe parks. I have one week to make the THING operable before they return.

Flower felony

A Grosse Pointe Woods resident who lives in the 1700 block of Oxford reported that between 11 p.m. Wednesday, June 2 and 6 a.m. Thursday, June 3, someone stole two hanging plants from the east side of the house. Each plant was worth about $100.

Crack and cars

A Grosse Pointe Woods patrol officer noticed a 1987 Buick speeding on Mack at about 11:45 p.m. on Tuesday, June 1. When the officer pulled the vehicle over, a routine check revealed that the car had been reported stolen in Detroit. Police took the driver and the two passengers into custody. A check of their background turned up several warrants issued by Detroit police. Officers also found pipes and what appeared to be several rocks of "crack" cocaine. The suspects were released to the custody of Detroit police.

Moped mauled

A student at Grosse Pointe North High School reported that sometime during the day of Tuesday, June 1, someone took his unlocked moped for a ride. Unfortunately the felon also crashed the vehicle causing much damage to it. Police talked with several witnesses who were able to give a description of the suspect. The investigation continues.

Vandal caught

A 24-year-old Roseville man was arrested by Grosse Pointe Woods public safety officers after he apparently kicked out several outdoor lights of a restaurant in the 20700 block of Mack at about 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday, June 1.

The incident began after the suspect asked the owner of the restaurant for a pen. The owner declined to give the stranger a pen and the suspect stomped out of the restaurant cursing the owner. The suspect then mounted a moped and proceeded to kick over four outdoor lights.

Unfortunately for the suspect two Woods public safety officers were in the restaurant and after a brief chase were able to place the suspect into custody.

The suspect was already on probation for aggravated assault in Warren and was released on personal bond pending his arraignment in Grosse Pointe Woods municipal court on a variety of traffic and criminal charges.

Woods mugging

A St. Clair Shores resident reported to police that at about 8 p.m. on Monday, May 31, as she was going to her car in a restaurant parking lot in the 20700 block in Mack, a man, about 6-feet, 3-inches tall, approached her and told her to hand over her purse and she would not get hurt.

The victim gave the suspect her purse. He was last seen getting into a burgundy car and heading north down the nearby alley. The suspect had brown hair.

Water vandal

A resident of the 900 block of Anita reported that at about 4 a.m. on Monday, May 31, someone rang the doorbell. When the homeowner came downstairs, she found a big puddle of water.

Apparently the vandal had taken a garden hose and stuck it through the front door mail slot and turned the water on. By the time the homeowner came downstairs the water had been turned off, but not before leaving a wet mess inside the house.

Glasses gone

Two suspects entered an optometry shop in the 15400 block of Jefferson in Grosse Pointe Park at about 9:25 a.m. on Tuesday, June 1. They were seen around a display of eyeglass frames. When an employee checked the display after the suspects left, 10 frames worth a total of $1,500 were missing.

The suspects, a man and a woman, were both on the small side. The man was described as standing about 5 feet, 5 inches tall. The woman was about 5 feet, 2 inches tall and was missing the upper teeth on the left side.

Bike thief is caught in Park

Grosse Pointe Park police observed a suspicious interaction between an 11-year-old girl and another youth at about 8 p.m. on Tuesday, June 1. But the officers were too far away to determine exactly what happened. Only after the girl began screaming and ran away did officers investigate.

It turns out that the suspect had confronted the girl and demanded that she give him her bike. The victim started screaming and the officers who witnessed this followed the suspect into the Village in the City of Grosse Pointe, where he was arrested.

The suspect, a Detroit juvenile, was turned over to county juvenile authorities.

Stolen cars

Grosse Pointe Park police received two stolen car reports last week. The first incident took place on Saturday, May 29, between 7 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. A 1996 Plymouth Breeze was stolen from a parking lot in the 15300 block of Mack. The car was later recovered in Detroit. The airbag was missing and the steering column was damaged.

The second incident took place on Saturday, June 5, at about 11 p.m. A 1995 Jeep Grand Cherokee was parked in the street of the 1400 block of Kensington. The vehicle was last seen in a nearby driveway. The ignition had been punched but for some reason the vehicle was abandoned.

— Jim Stickford

Kids frightened

On Wednesday, June 2, at 9:01 a.m., the principal of Maire Elementary School notified police that a strange man had yelled profanities at some of the school's safety boys.

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

An adult crossing guard shooed the suspect away. Police from the City of Grosse Pointe said the suspect has been seen in the area and will be monitored in the future.

Foul reaction

A 16-year-old boy from Grosse Pointe Woods exposed himself to numerous people near the tennis courts at Elworthy Field on Saturday, June 5, at 9:42 a.m.

Police from the City of Grosse Pointe said the suspect was playing on a baseball diamond and took exception to an errant tennis ball hit onto the field of play.

Forever embers

On Sunday, May 30, at 11:31 a.m., firefighters from Grosse Pointe Farms arrived at a house in the 100 block of Kerby to discover the homeowner trying to extinguish a fire in his garage.

After the officers put out the fire, the homeowner explained that he had placed discarded coals from a holiday barbecue in a plastic container which he then put in a trash can that was surrounded by newspapers, trash and household garbage.

Kid drinks and drives in GPC

Police charged an 17-year-old mail youth from Grosse Pointe Park with drunken driving and malicious destruction of property for his actions at 12:26 a.m. on Sunday, June 6, in the City of Grosse Pointe.

The youth was found driving a black 1997 Dodge Dakota pickup truck across lawns on Lakeland south of East Jefferson. His blood alcohol content was .176 percent.

Huff and puff

A 15-year-old youth from Grosse Pointe Farms was seen by employees of a store on the Hill stuffing a pack of Camel cigarettes down his shirt before running out of the establishment without paying.

Two employees chased the teenager before apprehending him near Kercheval and McKinley. The cigarettes had been ditched in an alley.

Police turned the youth over to his father. The store will enforce its policy of prosecuting all shoplifters.

Burning car

Grosse Pointe Farms firefighters extinguished a burning 1985 Pontiac Trans Am parked in the 18200 block of Mack at 9:48 a.m. on Friday, June 4.

Officers found heavy black smoke and flames coming from the rear of the vehicle, owned by a 37-year-old woman from St. Clair Shores.

Officers said they heard a "loud eruption and observed flames coming from the gasoline fill spout."

Lakeland thefts

A man living in the 400 block of Lakeland reported to police from the City of Grosse Pointe that during the afternoon of Friday, June 4, someone stole his maroon 1992 Honda Civic four-door. The thief also entered the unlocked back door of his house and stole a purse from the kitchen counter.

Police suspect the thief was casing the neighborhood looking in windows for an easy mark. Two days earlier a few houses down the block, a resident reported the theft of two hedge trimmers and an electric power washer from his garage.

Many warrants

A man with seven outstanding traffic warrants was pulled over in the City of Grosse Pointe for driving on East Jefferson near St. Clair without headlights at 9:39 p.m. on Friday, June 4.

Open garage

On Thursday, June 3, at 8:15 a.m., a resident of the City of Grosse Pointe reported the overnight theft of a bicycle from her garage in the 500 block of Washington.

In a similar incident an hour later, a resident of the 400 block of Washington reported the theft of a cellular telephone, five compact discs and a $1 bill from his car parked in an open garage. Another vehicle appeared to have been searched but nothing was reported missing.

Two caught

A traffic stop on southbound Lakeshore near Webber in Grosse Pointe Shores last week resolved the whereabouts of two men wanted on a total of five outstanding warrants.

On Thursday, June 3, at 10:34 p.m., police stopped a speeding gray 1991 Chevrolet Lumina driven by a 37-year-old man from Detroit whose rap sheet listed three warrants from 36th District Court in Detroit, including weapons possession. He was turned over to Detroit police later that evening.

His passenger, a 25-year-old man, was wanted for violating probation in his home town of St. Clair Shores and contempt of court in Bloomfield Hills. He was picked up by St. Clair Shores police.

Bad moves

A 23-year-old man from Melvindale ran a red light from Vernier to Lakeshore and made an illegal turn back to Vernier before police from Grosse Pointe Shores pulled him over at 10:25 p.m. on Wednesday, June 2.

The man claimed he knew nothing of his four driving suspensions from Detroit and Warren before police took him to the station. He was released after posting $100 bond and given a court date.

Drinking in van

On southbound Lakeshore near Briarwood, police from Grosse Pointe Shores pulled over a 40-year-old man from Harper Woods on Wednesday, June 2, at 8:46 p.m.

The correct administering of all drugs is crucial

Drugs can cure, but drugs also kill — and we're not talking about illegal drugs. Prescription drugs can do much to cure illnesses but must be taken properly or they can lose their effectiveness — or even be a danger.

For example, a patient taking anticonvulsants who consumes alcohol lessens the ability of the drug to stop convulsions. Those on anticoagulants who drink, can increase the ability of these drugs to stop blood clotting. Antidepressants mixed with alcohol can cause an additional reduction in one's nervous system function.

A patient needs to know about the timing of dosages. "One tablet, three times a day" is not enough. Does that mean morning, noon and night or some other time? Does "One tablet, every six hours" mean you have to set the alarm and get up during the night to keep on schedule? Do you take medicines before meals or after eating? If it is before, how long before? Should you take medicines on an empty or full stomach? Should you avoid fruit juices? Many drugs interact with fruit juices.

When asking your doctor these questions, also find out what the medicine will do. Is it a cure for what ails you, or is its purpose to ease pain or lower fever? Some drugs make you drowsy or interfere with your ability to drive.

Ask about side effects. Almost all drugs have some. Usually the side effects are mild: A minor rash, or slight headache. Sometimes though, they are extreme, such as diarrhea, weakness, interference with sight or hearing. If you have a problem, call the doctor immediately.

Varying reactions to drugs make a good argument against using a drug prescribed for someone else. The argument that they had the same symptoms as you and the drug worked for them, is a bad one. A drug that works for one will not necessarily be effective for another.

This precaution is especially true for older patients because as they get older, they eliminate drugs from their bodies less effectively. Drugs accumulate in larger quantities and remain much longer than in younger patients.

Also, older people are more sensitive to certain drugs. All medication should be taken on an individual basis.

Patients should be honest with their physicians. If you are taking over-the-counter drugs, let the doctor know because it may be incompatible with the prescription the doctor has given. Patients should give clear and concise reports on symptoms.

Some people play 20 questions with their doctors, answering questions but never volunteering information. Others hold back because they are not comfortable discussing certain problems. Doctors can help, but only if you provide the information they need to treat you.

If you are reluctant to ask the doctor a drug-related question, you have another option. Ask your pharmacist. Good pharmacists keep medical profiles on their customers. This enables them to ascertain whether the new drug will interact with other medication being taken. The pharmacist will also brief you on the side effects and other aspects of the drug. It is believed that the average person takes too many drugs. If the drugs are absolutely necessary to maintain health, that's one thing. Beyond that, people — especially older people — should be thoroughly informed before taking any drugs.

HEAT reminds drivers to keep an eye on cars as weather heats up

Car theft heats up during the warmer summer weather

Summer's heat is on the way — as the temperature rises, so does the statewide auto-theft rates. According to available statistics, when the weather warms up, the overall crime increases, including auto-theft and carjacking.

Help Eliminate Auto-Thefts (HEAT), a statewide auto-theft prevention program, which operates a confidential toll-free tip reward line, (800) 242-HEAT, reminds drivers, don't make it easy for thieves to get away with your vehicle.

Resist the urge to leave your windows down and the doors unlocked when your car is unattended and follow some common sense safety tips during this summer season.

"When it begins to warm up, motorists often like to leave their windows down and doors unlocked leaving all their defenses down as well in preventing auto-theft," says Sue Allen, HEAT program administrator. "But what drivers don't anticipate, even if leaving their vehicles for a short period of time, they are removing almost all the challenges of car theft — essentially accelerating the process for the thief to get away with their vehicle," says Allen.

"Don't be fooled by the lazy days of summer," says Jerry Basch, AAA manager of community safety services. "Windows rolled down, sun-roofs left open and choosing to park in your driveway instead of the garage are all warm weather tendencies which attract car thieves and carjackers."

Don't make yourself a target for car theft — observe the following simple safety tips:

- When parking your car on a lot that requires you to leave your keys with the attendant, leave only your ignition key.

- When your vehicle is parked in your garage or driveway, never leave the keys in the ignition. Many thefts occur in residential areas.

- Always keep your garage door locked.

- Lock your insurance certificates and other papers in the glove compartment. Identification papers can be used to commit other crimes.

- Many vehicles are stolen for parts or for resale. Once a vehicle has been stripped, it may never be recovered.

- Your vehicle may be stolen and used by a thief to perpetrate more serious crimes such as holdups.

- And remember, if threatened by a carjacker with a gun or other weapon, give up the car, don't argue. A life is more important than any car.

Tipsters that call the HEAT tip-line are rewarded up to $1,000 if their tip leads to the arrest and prosecution of a suspected car thief, and up to $10,000 is rewarded if the tip results in the arrest and binding over for trial of suspected theft ring members and/or chop shop operators. HEAT also rewards $2,000 for information leading to the issuance of a warrant for a carjacking suspect.

The auto-theft prevention program offers rewards to citizens with reliable information regarding auto-theft, auto-theft related insurance fraud and carjacking.

HEAT contends that by encouraging and rewarding citizen involvement, Michigan citizens play a role in their own safety and work together with law enforcement to prevent carjackings and auto-thefts.

HEAT's hotline is monitored by the Michigan State Police and funded by Michigan auto insurance companies. Since 1985, HEAT has awarded more than $1.9 million to tip callers. During that period, the HEAT tip-line has received 5,775 calls leading to the arrest of 2,180 suspects and has recovered 2,676 vehicles estimated at $29.9 million.

St. John Senior Community celebrates Older Americans Month

St. John Senior Community celebrated Nursing Home Week (May 9-15) and Older Americans Month by hosting two major events — Senior Olympics for residents of nursing homes and a free pancake breakfast for the community.

At the Senior Olympics, residents from St. John Senior Community and Bon Secours Nursing Care Center competed in games tailored to their abilities, including kick ball, putt-putt golf, ball toss and races. All competitors received ribbons. Lunch was served at St. John Senior Community.

A pancake breakfast, on May 15, drew seniors from the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods, St. Clair Shores and other communities. Guests received a complimentary breakfast, toured the center, and met with residents and pets, Bogey and Bandit. A selection of residents' watercolors was also on display.

"We were pleased to welcome seniors from area communities. It gave them the opportunity to interact with residents and take an inside look at our center. Guests toured resident rooms, the library, chapel, gift shop and other areas where residents gather," said Kathy Dunbar, chief operating officer and vice president of St. John Senior Community.

Members of Cub Scout Troop 74 and Girl Scout Troop 2911, of Grosse Pointe, also attended the breakfast to help carry trays and assist in other ways.

A subsidiary of St. John

Health System, St. John Senior Community offers care that provides for the needs of residents, all under one roof.

Levels of care range from independent living and assisted living to skilled nursing care.

Ben Cavanagh, of Boy Scout Pack 74, chatted with Edith and Carl Cook of Harper Woods at a pancake breakfast held at St. John Senior Community.

Grosse Pointe students host French exchange students

By Bonnie Caprara
Staff Writer

Twenty-eight students from the Wurtz L'Ecole in Paris are spending three weeks with students and their families in the Pointes as part of an American-French cultural exchange program.

The French and 18 fifth-grade Pointe students are part of a cultural exchange program sponsored by the Association of French American Classes based in Chicago. Each group of students live with host families and go on cultural field trips for three weeks at a time.

"The intent of the program is an exchange of cultures and to find out what it's like to live in another country," said Kerby principal Debbie Hubbell, who traveled with the Pointe fifth graders who traveled to Paris in May.

The Pointe students from several schools in the district met for a language/immersion class once a week since October to prepare for the trip. Neither the Pointe nor the French students were fluent in each other's languages, but at least knew key words and phrases. The French students spoke through an interpreter for this story.

During their visit here, the French students visited the Detroit FBI office, Pewabic Pottery, Selfridge Air Force Base and went on a Diamond Jack's riverboat ride.

The Pointe students visited the Louvre, the O'rsay, a medieval castle and the French Senate, where they were treated to a reception hosted by the president of the senate.

The students have been amazed with the differences between the two cultures.

"Everything here is so big!" said French student Aubin Hubet. "Everyone has a big house. Everything is big...glasses of orange juice, tables..."

The Pointe students stayed with families who lived in apartments.

"It surprised me that everything was a lot smaller," said Kerby fifth-grader Brett Torgler. "In France I could brush my teeth going to the bathroom."

The French students were particularly impressed with the open fields and playgrounds here.

"There are more green fields here than there are in Paris," said French student Sarah Duclent.

"They don't trust kids. That's why there aren't as many playgrounds. Everyone watches the kids," said French student Pierre-Igor Dassie.

Kerby principal, Debbie Hubbell, who accompanied the Pointe students to France, said, "When we first got to Paris, the people were appalled when our children went running on the grass to play. In Paris, grass is more valued. We learned very quickly."

The students also commented on the differences in not just where kids play, but how they play.

"The relationships between French kids is a lot more physical," said Ferry fifth-grader Christine Cullen. "The boys play sports and the girls play jump rope."

"There was a big fight one day because the French guys weren't used to the girls playing soccer," said Brett.

"Here, the kids play in the street together," said Pierre-Igor. "In France we stay home with a babysitter. There aren't a lot of things to do."

The children also noticed big differences in schools and teachers.

"In France it's a longer school day. It goes until 4:30," said Christine. "There's a lot more discussion and less hands-on work. We have a lot more homework."

"You have more homework to do. You have a lot to do after school," said Pierre-Igor of his Pointe counterparts.

"The teachers are teachers here," said Christine. "Teachers in France are more like family members; it's a deeper relationship."

Sarah backed Christine up by saying, "The students and teachers have to share more emotional things."

The children commented on the differences in the way people get around.

"What I really noticed is how much they walk and ride bikes," said Kerby fifth-grader Emily Hill. "We drive more."

Hubbell noted that many host families were opting out on a scheduled trip to Niagara Falls since the French students were not used to traveling long distances in a car.

"Our cars are bigger. It's scary for them," said Hubbell. "The French kids can go for days without being in a car."

Of course, the highlight for some of the French students was going to see the new Star Wars movie, which doesn't come to France until September.

When the French students were asked if they had seen the movie, Aubin replied in clear English without the help of an interpreter, "Oh yes!"

questions to ask...

...when considering middle schools for your child.

will my child have the opportunity to participate in interscholastic athletics?

what about community service programs?

ULS middle schoolers have a choice of more than 15 interscholastic sports in which to participate on a voluntary basis — competing with public, parochial and independent schools throughout the area. ULS athletic facilities include three gyms, 25-acres of playing fields, two tennis complexes, two swimming pools and a state-of-the-art indoor ice arena, opening in November 1999. Students also participate in a variety of community service projects during the school year — giving of their time and talent to groups and individuals less fortunate.

will my child be offered a well-rounded program?

Our students enjoy an eight-period day — encompassing foreign language study (including Latin); an English curriculum combining traditional grammar studies with strong writing and literature programs; a comprehensive physical education curriculum; and a sophisticated arts program (including visual arts, movement, drama, chorale and orchestra).

will my child be prepared
and beyond?

We stress skill acquisition at the middle school — skills in written and oral communication, in problem solving and computation, in research, discussion and collaboration — as preparation for the challenges that lie ahead. A ULS middle school education includes support of the school's values of respect, responsibility, trustworthiness and compassion. Clearly stated expectations of behavior and an emphasis on character go hand in hand with academic excellence.

class size?

The middle school campus facilities are excellent — with well-equipped labs, computer centers with fiber-optic backbones and an extensive library system. Our classes average 16 students — offering a lively learning environment. Our faculty combines the latest in educational research and learning techniques to the traditional classroom experience, while our adviser and class dean structure lends support to the social and academic growth of young adolescents.

North student receives scholarship

Grosse Pointe North High School senior Liisa Bergmann has been awarded a 1999 Alumni Distinguished Scholarship by Michigan State University.

Liisa is one of 12 students nationwide to receive the scholarship. This year, more than 1,200 high school seniors nationwide competed for this award.

"I am extremely pleased to welcome these exceptional students to Michigan State University," said MSU president Peter McPherson. "They join a distinguished group of academically talented and accomplished students and alumni. We are proud to recognize them for their talents and achievements."

Liisa is the daughter of Dietrich and Phyllis Bergmann of Grosse Pointe Woods. She plans to major in English at MSU with chemistry and the social sciences as additional academic interests. Her high school activities included varsity swim team, art, photography, tutoring and participation in the National Honor Society.

"I chose MSU because of the ADS scholarship I was given and the academic freedom I desired," said Liisa. "For me, I like the ROIAL (Residential Options in Arts and Letters) program in the College of Arts and Letters. When I visited there I just fit in. I like the idea of a smaller community within a larger community."

Alumni distinguished scholars participate in programs in the Honors College at MSU in addition to the academic work in their major.

The stipend, which is renewable over nine semesters, covers tuition, room and board, books and other academic expenses, plus $1,000. Total value of the scholarship for an in-state student is approximately $45,000 over the term of the award.

Students are selected by a committee of faculty and administrators who select the recipients based on results of the scholarship examination, high school programs and achievements, other standardized test scores and interviews of the finalists.

Planetarium director named astronomy fellow

Grosse Pointe North High School astronomy teacher and planetarium director Ardis Maciolek has been selected to be a Cassini-Huygens educator fellow with Challenger Center for Space Science Education. Maciolek joins 20 other educators who will train other area teachers concerning the Cassini-Huygens mission.

The major responsibilities of a Cassini-Huygens educator fellow is to motivate and train other educators about the Cassini-Huygens mission using a workshop presentation and classroom activities supplied by Challenger Center.

Initial training for the fellows took place in late April at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif. They received an intensive training workshop on the Cassini-Huygens mission and the science and educational aspects necessary to effectively present the topics they will later teach in their workshops.

"What impressed me about the JPL training was getting to know the staff and the other fellows. They are energetic, creative and enthusiastic people who will be a delight to work with. The great variety in our backgrounds and jobs will help to develop and to evolve ideas," said Maciolek.

Cassini is a follow-up mission to the brief reconnaissance of Saturn performed by the Pioneer 11 spacecraft in 1979 and the Voyager 1 and 2 encounters of 1980 and 1981.

Those highly successful flybys produced volumes of information, discoveries and questions about Saturn, its environs and its family of rings and moons. Those encounters, along with recent key findings from the Hubble space telescope and ground-based observatories, continue to entice scientists who view the Saturnian system as a one-stop treasure trove with countless clues to the history of planetary and solar system evolution.

The seven-year Cassini-Huygens mission started Oct. 15, 1997 with the launch of the Cassini spacecraft. Among the scientific targets of the mission are the planet Saturn; its rings; one of its moons, Titan; and the magnificent bubble that surrounds them. The mission will also include sending the Huygens probe to the surface of Titan.

For more information about the Challenger Center for Space Science Education and its programs, visit www.challenger.org. For more information about the Cassini-Huygens mission, visit the NASA website at www.nasa.gov.

Woods council again votes to delay decision on Brys project

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

In a 4-3 vote, the majority of the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council voted to table a variance request by Dr. Matthew Fontana that would allow the development of a larger-than-allowed by law office building at the corner of Mack and Brys.

Fontana first came before the council in April with a variety of variance requests concerning setbacks and parking. His plans met with strong opposition from homeowners who live near the proposed office building.

These residents expressed a number of concerns over how the proposed building would increase traffic at an intersection that already is too busy. Brys leads to the old Eight Mile entrance to I-94.

Residents also objected to Fontana's proposal to tear down the house, which he owns, immediately abutting the Mack lot where the office building would be constructed. This now empty lot would be used to provide the parking needed for the office building.

The neighbors said that putting an office building on Mack is one thing. Extending the parking into residential areas would be too much of an imposition on homeowners.

The council tabled voting on Fontana's requests to give him and his representatives time to meet with neighbors so that some sort of compromise might be worked out.

At Monday's meeting Fontana, through his attorney Ralph Kliber presented a new plan, which requires only two variances instead of the four originally proposed by Fontana.

Kliber asked the council for variances for the front and side setbacks. City zoning ordinances require a 10-foot side yard setback. Fontana's plan has room for only six feet. The codes also call for a 25-foot front yard setback. Fontana was asking for a 10 foot setback. He originally asked for eight feet.

Attorney Charles Berschback spoke for his clients Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sullivan, who have strongly opposed several of Dr. Fontana's plans to develop his property, all of which required variances from the city council.

Berschback said that a temporary restraining order has been issued by judge Daphne Curtis of Wayne County Circuit Court forbidding the development of the property on the grounds that Fontana's plan violates a restrictive covenant.

The order prevents Fontana from building on the property until this question of the covenant restriction is settled in court. Berschback does not expect that the case will be heard until sometime in 2000.

City attorney George Catlin said that the lawsuit is a private matter dealing with deed restrictions, which do not fall under the jurisdiction of the council.

Berschback also pointed out that Fontana's new plan still calls for access to the proposed parking lot via Brys and not Mack. That was one of the strongest points of contention between Fontana and the area residents.

He urged the council to reject Fontana's plans and pointed out that the lot is buildable, but Fontana has repeatedly chosen plans that require variances from the council. If Fontana came up with a plan that would follow city zoning codes, then there would be no need of hearings and he could proceed with no opposition from anyone.

Several neighborhood residents got up and voiced their agreement with Berschback. They also wondered why the council kept making it necessary for them to appear at meetings, instead of just voting and getting the whole thing over with. They said they didn't oppose development of the property and they realized it was inevitable, but if the land is developed, let it be developed according to city zoning standards.

Councilman Al Dickinson said that when he was hopeful that when he voted to table the question in April that Fontana would meet with neighbors and develop a plan that all could live with.

He said that the new plan still calls for cars to access the proposed parking lot via Brys and not Mack, which is something he felt strongly about.

Councilman Thomas Fahrner said that he liked the new plan and that cars leave offices at 5 or 6 p.m., so most neighbors would not be inconvenienced by car lights or traffic.

He also said that Fontana's plan would have the doctor pay for construction of the alley, which is currently grass. Without the variances, the city would have to pay $30,000 to build an alley if Fontana decided to put in an office building.

Councilwoman Patty Kukula-Chylinski said that she was glad to have the chance to weigh in and that the issue was emotional. She said that the council was partly at fault for the confusion because there was no master plan for them to follow or to act as a guide for developers.

She said that in the past the council has turned down plans similar to Fontana's, so fairness required the council to do the same in this case.

Councilman Eric Steiner said he agreed with Chylinski and he also had concerns over the litigation.

Councilwoman Vicki Granger said that the proposed building was just too big for the lot and that something like this required a nice greenbelt to separate the business from the residential.

Chylinski made a motion to table the variance request to give Fontana time to sit down his area residents and work out a new plan that all could live with.

She later said that she also doesn't want the city to have to foot the $30,000 cost of building an alley, especially when the developer has shown a willingness to pay the expense himself.

She also said that the house

Fontana is proposing to demolish should stay up.

In the end, the Chylinski's motion received the support of Eric Steiner, Thomas Fahrner and Joe Dansbury. It was opposed by Vicki Granger, Mayor Robert Novitke and Al Dickinson. The motion did not include a timetable for being reconsidered. So it, in effect, was tabled indefinitely.

Dickinson said that tabling the motion was a mistake. Everyone made their positions clear and the best solution is for Fontana to come up with a plan that needs no variances. This would put an end to the debate and the property could be developed to the benefit of all.

Summer vacations are a bargain in Michigan

Summer vacation costs this year in Michigan will be less than in 34 other states, and only one of the eight Great Lakes states offers a less expensive travel experience than Michigan, according to the American Automobile Association (AAA).

The auto club's annual survey of summer rates for lodging and meals for a family of two adults and two children found the national average daily vacation cost up 1 percent from 1998 at $213 per day. In Michigan, the survey found a half-percent decrease to $195 per day.

According to the survey, a family of four traveling in Michigan will spend an average of $98 per day for meals and $97 for lodging.

Michigan's average ranks

35th among the 50 states for 1999, a 15-place improvement over 1998 when it was in the 20th position.

Among the eight states bordering the Great Lakes, only Indiana has a lower cost average at $190 per day. Wisconsin's average is the same as Michigan's, $195.

Hawaii continues to be the most expensive vacation destination, with an average of $419. North Dakota is still the least expensive state to visit, with a daily average of only $158 for meals and lodging.

Among Great Lakes states, New York is the most expensive. Summer travelers there can expect to pay an average of $278 per day. Averages for other Great Lakes states are Illinois $225, Pennsylvania $216, Ohio $200 and Minnesota $200.

The survey cost estimates are based on meal prices and room rates for restaurants and lodging accommodations listed in AAA's TourBook guides.

In addition to the cost of meals and lodging, AAA National recommends that vacationers traveling by car should budget $5.50 per 100 miles for gasoline.

That's based on the current national average of $1.15 per gallon for self-serve regular and a fuel-economy estimate of 21 miles per gallon.

The auto club suggests these ideas for saving money on vacation:

- Book accommodations in advance to ensure availability and selection. A professional travel agent can help find the best situations.

- Pack lunches to eat on the road, or eat your big meal at lunchtime to take advantage of lower menu prices.

- Checking out your vehicle to make sure it's in top condition and traveling at a steady pace can help keep fuel costs down.

- Look for discounts, such as those offered to AAA members in the auto club's "Show Your Card & Save" program.

These can reduce costs at hotels/motels, restaurants and attractions by as much as 10 percent or more.

Horse Liniment Eases Arthritis Pain

OCALA, FL. -- An ingredient derived from hot peppers that decreases inflammation in racehorses' legs, is now recognized as safe and effective for human use. The ingredient has been formulated into a product called ARTH-Rx and comes in a strength designed for humans. Researchers are excited and say the formula can relieve arthritis pain for millions.

Developed by the Phillips Gulf Corporation, ARTH-Rx is a breakthrough in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, tendonitis, backache and more.

Although the mechanism by which ARTH-Rx works to relieve pain is not totally clear, scientists suggest that pain is relieved because ARTH-Rx intercepts the messenger substance that sends pain signals to the brain.

ARTH-Rx is available in a convenient roll-on applicator without a prescription. According to a spokesperson for the company, due to the overwhelming demand for ARTH-Rx, supplies are sometimes limited. ARTH-Rx can also be ordered by calling 1-800-729-8446, 1999 PGC.

Eyes on Design goes 'topless' for Father's Day

The "Great American Convertible" will be the feature of this year's Eyes on Design show, an event which has become a Father's Day classic and an automotive makers, a Chevrolet Corvette, Ford Mustang and Chrysler Sebring, were on display along with Chrysler Phaeton and Buick Cielo concept cars.

The show is to support efforts by the Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology in research to help people with impaired vision.

The event was started 12 years ago by the vice presidents of design from Chrysler Corp., Ford Motor Co. and General Motors with a display in the parking lot of the Grosse Pointe Academy. It was called Eyes on the Classics and it proved popular enough to be repeated the next year.

It quickly outgrew the Academy's parking lot and moved to the Edsel and Eleanor Ford estate and through the years the design chiefs at the Detroit auto makers have built the event into a world-class exposition of automotive design. Its name was changed to Eyes on Classic Design to emphasize its focus on design, then this year became Eyes on Design.

"This has grown to be an event to celebrate the passion and art of the products created by designers in all industries," said John Herlitz, 1999 honorary design chairman and senior vice president of product design at DaimlerChrysler. "We've helped create a unique design-oriented show that also helps support the DIO and its mission."

Highlighting the emphasis on design is this year's addition of fashion and furniture design to more broadly cover the design profession. "We will show how design in furniture and clothing relates to automotive design, how the elements style influence design of these products which are affected by fashion," Herlitz said.

Dr. Philip C. Hessburg, president and founder of Detroit Institute of Ophthalmology, announced two initiatives, "The Eye and the Auto" and "The Eye and the Chip," programs which will be funded in part by proceeds from the show.

"By creating the initiatives, we have elected to study problems directly related to the visually impaired and we are trying to determine if we can restore some people to a more independent life," Hessburg said.

The Eye and the Auto funding will support research into the relationship of the eye and its common maladies and the safe operation of motor vehicles. The research will seek to determine how collision warning systems, limited licenses telescopic systems or night driving systems might help people with failing vision maintain their independence.

"We won't support research that duplicates the efforts automakers are already making in terms of safety," Hessburg said. "We are more interested in how we can compensate for visual problems or, for that matter, ascertaining whether some vision or eye problems make any real difference in a person's ability to operate motorized vehicles more so than we are on the angle of the windshield or glare off the dashboard."

The Eye and the Chip project will support research aimed at restoring lost vision by inserting a small microchip on the retina, or in the eyes or the brain.

Also on display for the Eyes on Design preview was the Buick Cielo concept car. The Cielo is an open-air four-door sedan with a retractable hardtop that rides roof rails into the trunk. Inside, voice-activated controls can be customized to each individual driver.

On display outside the Automotive Hall of Fame at the Eyes on Design preview was this Chrysler Phaeton concept car. The four-door hardtop convertible features 22-inch tire/wheels, a Viper-like rear suspension and a 5.4-liter 48-valve V-12 aluminum engine.

lation of a chip near the retina may restore vision," Hessburg said. "Perhaps a camera on glasses or in a contact lens will transmit a signal to a chip, activating a signal of some sort to send to the visual cortex. When this initiative is successful some who now live in darkness may be able to see light, or forms, hopefully allowing visual cues to mobility and some independence." Funding for the research grants comes from such fundraiser events as the Eyes on Design show.

Friends of Vision is a volunteer organization which coordinates one of the largest systems of support groups for the blind and visually impaired adults in the United States. It also raises funds for DIO by hosting the Visions to Remember Antiques Show in February.

As a fundraiser at the Eyes on Design show, Friends of Vision is raffling a 1999 candy apple red Chrysler Sebring convertible. Sandi Jorgensen, president of the Friends of Vision, said only 620 tickets are being sold at $100 each. "DaimlerChrysler Corp. donated the vehicle and all the money we raise will go directly to our programs to support the visually impaired in metro Detroit," she said. The winner will be announced at the June 20 show.

Older/Wiser Driver forum to be held

AAA Michigan will sponsor a program on how to keep driving safely regardless of your age at an Older/Wiser Driver forum at the auto club's Grosse Pointe Woods branch on Monday, June 14, at 2:30 p.m.

"Driving issues pertinent to the maturing driver, such as visual acuity, physical limitations, and things that can be done to offset these limitations, will be addressed," says Sue MacDonald, AAA Michigan branch manager.

Older drivers are more at risk of having a collision than any other age group, with the exception of drivers 25 and under. Repeat fender-benders, getting honked at constantly, and getting lost on familiar routes are signs of deteriorating drivers.

According to research, people's eyes at age 60 need three times as much light as they did when they were 20. Their peripheral visions, their pupils' ability to contract, and depth perception have decreased.

Traveling in well-lit areas and carpooling at night are ways to accommodate this, as well as using the mirrors more to compensate for the peripheral vision.

Next to alcohol, prescribed medications are responsible for many crashes. People taking medication should discuss side-effects with their doctor. Within the first few days of taking a new medication, people should avoid driving because their bodies need a chance to adjust to it.

These are just some of the problems older drivers face on the road. AAA Michigan's Older/Wiser Driver forum seeks to acknowledge and accommodate these problems. If interested in attending this free 90-minute seminar, call (313) 343-6000 for further information.

When possible, corrections will be printed on the page on which errors occurred. If there is an error of fact in any story, call the newsroom at (313) 882-0294.

Kayaking with Moosejaw — it's a local group

By Emily Meier
Special Writer

It's a beautiful spring afternoon at Patterson Park. If one had to guess at the temperature he/she would say mid-70s. A breeze blows across the lake and a group of life jacket-clad people stand at the shoreline picking out the boats they want to try next. Some have already paddled out onto the water, laughing and calling to each other as they enjoy the feel of nothing more than a smooth layer of fiberglass between them and the lake.

It's demonstration day and Joe Holbert, organizer and manager of Moosejaw sporting goods store in the City of Grosse Pointe, has brought boats from the store for anyone interested in kayaking to try. Kayaks, all different shapes, sizes, colors and styles, are put to use introducing some to the sport for the first time and reminding others why they fell in love with it before.

According to the Outdoor Recreation Coalition of America, kayaking is the fastest-growing participatory sport in the country. In the past decade the number of kayakers has doubled to 1.3 million. And when Moosejaw opened its doors last November, Holbert made sure Moosejaw was prepared.

Armed with a store full of boats and gear, Holbert took to the water as soon as the weather started to hint at becoming nice. "I started taking a few friends and customers who were interested in trying out boats, and from there it just took off," he explained. "The first Sunday in May we had 26 people come to try out boats."

Holbert, a Grosse Pointe Park resident, uses Patterson Park as his access to the lake, and now takes out interested customers every other Sunday. He trailers eight to 10 kayaks from the store to the park. Although Holbert is not a certified kayaker, he counts himself lucky to have been in the company of many who are. He recommends that people interested in the sport look into learning opportunities. "Any class you can take, I say do it," he said.

Both the Red Cross and the American Canoe Association offer general instructional courses for kayakers. But those who are a bit more serious might want to make the hike out to Great River Outfitters in Waterford, where group and private lessons are offered as well as opportunities for certification with the British Canoe Union (BCU), a prestigious organization.

All Great River Outfitters instructors are ranked and certified with the BCU. The BCU first ranks kayakers on ability, awarding one to five stars. Its certification program consists of study, experience and tests after which, a kayaker is given a coach level ranking from one to five. It's a rigorous program and as Kelly Blades, a three-star kayaker and coach, level two, explains, "Just to give you an idea of the level of ability consider this: There are no coach five's in the entire United States."

Great River Outfitters is the first store to bring the BCU teachings to the United States. Throughout the summer they offer opportunities to learn from not only their instructors, but also from visiting guest instructors from Great Britain, all of whom are coach five, the best there is.

Like Moosejaw, Great River Outfitters has a fleet of demo boats people can try. Both Blades and Holbert recommend trying a lot of different boats before making a purchase. They also agree that for beginners a smaller boat, 14- to 15-foot, is a good bet. "They're easier to handle both in and out of the water," said Holbert.

It is also important to consider where your interests lie. There are kayaks made for puttering around and there are kayaks made for long sea-going journeys. Moosejaw has the boat for each of these kayaking styles and all sorts of variations in between.

"I recommend people try to get a boat that will grow with them and their experience," explains Holbert. "We try to fit you with a boat that will be the most versatile for your situation, taking into consideration where and how you plan to use the kayak."

It is with this goal in mind that Holbert continues to expand Moosejaw's demonstration days. Besides every other Sunday, Holbert has also started bringing representatives from individual kayak companies together during the week. This allows customers to try out boats as well as talk to the representatives personally.

This past spring, a representative from Necky was present along with Ken Hugelier, a Grosse Pointe who makes and sells his own kayaks. Made of fiberglass and wood, West Greenland style, Hugelier's boats are intended for the novice to experienced paddler. He admits he paddles almost all year-round and is pleased to see so many people becoming interested in the sport.

Holbert, too, is glad to see there is so much interest in kayaking here in Grosse Pointe. "I was kind of expecting this among the maritime Grosse Pointers," said Holbert. "Like them, I take any chance I get to go out on the water."

Holbert smiles as a young boy points to one of the boats and asks if he can try it. "Sure," says Holbert who then helps him into the boat and gives some advice on paddling technique. He gives the boy a gentle push to get the boy going. The youngster doesn't even glance over his shoulder before he's off to join the others. "It's a very forgiving sport," explains Holbert. "It's a sport you can take to whatever level you want and unlike other sports you're not in it to compete with others. It's a really peaceful, serene, easy-going activity and that surprises a lot of people."

"It's the best way to see the lake, river and city," says one kayaker who has brought his own boat.

Holbert leans over to explain to a new kayaker the difference between canoes and kayaks. He explains about the center of gravity being lower in a kayak and how that makes a kayak less likely to capsize in rougher weather. He talks about hull shape, pointing out the kayak's oblong-shape and curved bottom. He then answers the question of price: "I can get you in a boat, with paddle, personal flotation device and spray skirt for $600 to $650."

Kayaks range from $300 to $3,000. But price doesn't necessarily coincide with quality, as many have learned first hand thanks to Moosejaw's demo day and great staff.

Holbert looks out over the

water. The lake is now peppered with kayakers, all different ages, ability levels and in all different kinds of boats. The twinkle in his eye suggests there is more to these demo days than just sales. He hands a paddle to a woman in one of the longer kayaks, and then gives the boat a push so she can join the others. He is waist deep in the still-cool water, watching them, as he extends his arms.

"Stay on the Right Track to 9 Mile and Mack"

Stocks meandered last week; Internet continues to fall

Last week, the DJI even ignored the Yugoslavian Parliament's approval of the proposed peace settlement.

Traders were eying the jobs report last Friday and watching interest rates climb.

Freddie Mac, the quasi-federal mortgage banker, reported June 3 that 30-year fixed-rate residential mortgages rose to 7.41 percent vs. 7.23 percent a week earlier.

The low yield last year was about 6.50 percent.

On the Treasury bond front, the 30-year bellwether bond continued to trade down in price to the 90 level, to yield around 5.95 percent. Note that this was the bond issued last February at par.

Internet stocks have been subjected to substantial profit-taking, with prices off sharply from their April highs.

But the real action has been from "day traders," who trade with E-brokers on the Internet.

The term "day trader" means a stock trader who both purchases and sells the same stock within the same day, often looking for fractional profits, like 1/4 or 1/2 point per round trip transaction.

Their cardinal rule: Never be "long" or "short" a position overnight!

Attn: E-mailers

Did you recently receive an unsolicited two-page e-mail from an unknown source?

The letter purportedly describes a proposed House Bill 602P, sponsored by the U.S. Postal Service (USPS).

The bill, if it became law, would permit the USPS to charge e-mail users an "alternate postage fee" — a 5-cent surcharge on every e-mail delivery. The fee would be billed by the sender's Internet service provider, which would then monthly bill the e-mail sender.

The e-mail received by LTS encourages the reader to "send this e-mail to all Americans on your list and tell your friends and relatives to write their congressman and say 'No' to Bill 602P."

Being investigative by nature, LTS contacted the Michigan office of congresswoman Lynn Rivers, D-Ann Arbor.

The spokesperson at that office reported that Bill 602P was a complete "hoax," and offered to mail the USPS press release denying any involvement of any kind. End of story.

On second thought, instead of having a negative attitude toward the USPS, LTS dreamed up the following positive "spin":

Why doesn't the USPS start-up a new, separate mail service just for letters not over 2 ounces?

No, not another "Priority Mail" at $3.30 for minimum weight.

How about a new service that could deliver "local" mail (up to 50 miles from posting) overnight and coast to coast in two days?

How much would you pay for such service? Is $1 per letter the right number? That's too much for utility bills. And bank statements returning checks would weigh too much.

But some businesses could find a way to pay for next day delivery, which would speed collection of their receivables.

Credit card companies would amend their rules and charge your account for the additional fee.

Let's call the new mail delivery system "The Private Mail," and use distinctive envelopes and special stamps, not usable for regular mail.

This would fill a niche between Express Mail and Priority Mail (too expensive for normal personal usage) and the so-called First Class Mail, now relegated to junk mail and catalogs.

All in favor, say "aye!"

As a matter of full disclosure, LTS uses e-mail to deliver this article to the Grosse Pointe News every week before our press deadline.

Sorry, one can't trust the First Class Mail any more — in sunshine, rain or storm.

Commencement

Is it the end, or is it the beginning?

The end of May and the beginning of June make up graduation time.

A time of family get-togethers, parties and renewing old friendships and acquaintances. "Don't you remember me? We were in fifth grade together."

It should be a time of reflection, of looking back.

But, more important, it should be a time of looking ahead, for planning ahead.

For the graduates, it is the end of one level of organized learning, although many will go on to higher levels of learning. But the pursuit of knowledge never stops.

Most students have experienced summer or part-time jobs.

After graduation and the assumption of the first real-time position, that young person shifts gears from being a parental and personal liability — a series of personal expenditures — to becoming an asset, having a personal income source for the first time.

Graduation is also a time for gift-giving. And what better gift than shares of appreciated stock, that continue to give possible cash dividend increases over time and probable price appreciation over the years?

LTS' tax adviser says: A husband and wife (filing a joint IRS tax return) can gift $10,000 each, or a total of $20,000, to as many persons as they wish each year, without incurring any gift taxes.

The $20,000 market value joint gift limit applies, even if all the stock was owned by only one spouse.

Don't sell the shares yourself, and make the gift the cash proceeds, because the capital gains on the shares sold at a profit, and the resultant capital gains taxes, will be yours!

Instead, gift the actual shares of stock, not cash.

Then you won't incur any

capital gains taxes because the donor's (your) cost is transferred to the donees (the recipients) and becomes their cost.

During the 1980s, many of us purchased shares of stock of the then local banks: National Bank of Detroit, Detroit Bank & Trust Co., Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit, Security Bank & Trust Co. and many others. Most of these local banks have either merged or changed their name.

Recently, LTS was invited to review an investor's portfolio, which contained several former local bank stocks.

When comparing the investor's original cost to current market values, you should always use aggregates, not per share prices.

That will automatically adjust for the numerous stock dividends and stock splits that have occurred regularly over the years.

What truly amazed LTS was the fact that these bank stocks had costs in pennies per share, as compared to today's market prices in dollars per share.

Adjusted costs per share of 3 cents, 9 cents, even 15 cents! What better way to celebrate a graduation than to make a gift of appreciated stock?

It's easy. Just call your stock broker. You can talk it through on the phone in minutes.

Then you'll feel better for steering the graduate into early investments.

And you know what they say: "It's better to give than receive!"

G.P. Woods glass shop owner takes on AAA

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

A local businessman is fighting the state's largest insurance company over what he said are unfair trade practices.

Bill Farrah, president of IXL Glass in Grosse Pointe Woods, has joined nearly 50 independently owned glass repair shops from around the state in suing AAA Michigan.

According to the plaintiffs, a recent program touted by AAA to heighten consumer choice instead funnels work away from independent glass shops toward Harmon Auto Glass, headquartered in Minnesota.

The suit seeks damages in excess of $25,000 and an end to the AAA Michigan-Harmon relationship.

"The customer is being guided like a thread through the eye of a needle to Harmon," said Farrah, who is also president of the 100-member Glass Choice Association of independent glass installers. "As a result, I've seen my AAA referrals drop at least 80 percent since April."

At between $160 to $200 dollars per customer, the lost revenue is putting a crack in his profits. Farrah said auto glass repairs normally comprise 12 to 14 percent of his annual sales.

Nancy Cain, spokeswoman for AAA, said the insurance company receives nearly 65,000 windshield claims annually. Farrah doubled the figure to include total claims for all kinds of auto glass.

If the charges are true, AAA and Harmon are violating the Michigan Consumer Protection Act and Uniform Trade Secrets Acts, according to the plaintiffs' attorney Jay Schwartz.

"If this keeps up," said Farrah, "the independents will be out of business and the consumer will lose."

"I respectfully disagree," said Cain. "The program is in the best interests of our members. It's the latest of many innovative programs that have helped us reduce insurance premiums 5 percent since August."

"My rates haven't gone down," answered Farrah.

Back to the lawsuit, the accusations were denied by both defendants.

Cain said Harmon was contracted in April to operate a toll-free customer service center to process glass claims.

"The operators give out the names of conveniently located glass repair shops on a rotating basis," said Cain in a statement echoed by Michaela Diercks, Harmon's vice president of marketing.

Citing the suit, Diercks said she was unable to elaborate. "We haven't seen the lawsuit," she said, "and can't comment on it."

Yet both representatives said glass shops in AAA members' home towns have an equal chance to receive a referral.

In what the defendants said was a coincidence, calls by the Grosse Pointe News to the AAA-sponsored, Harmon-operated customer service center resulted consistently in referrals to Harmon repair shops.

The unsolicited recommendations included an upbeat tag line that a Harmon repair truck can "come right to your home."

"That's not surprising," said Farrah. "The Harmon store in Grosse Pointe is really a mobile operation that rents space in a car wash. They don't have a 'store' in the sense people normally expect."

A News follow-up call to the AAA call center (Harmon) confirmed that IXL was authorized to make repairs covered by AAA.

In the test, referrals to independent repair shops occurred only when the News' caller asked for a repair shop in a city known not to contain a Harmon outlet. No promotional statements by Harmon operators attended referrals to non-Harmon stores.

"We can document more than 100 steering incidents," said Farrah.

Describing a situation that brought to the plaintiffs' minds an image of a fox guarding the hen house, Farrah said the AAA-Harmon deal "is like making a customer call Steak & Ale for dinner reservations at Win Schuler's."

Farrah's "not mad at AAA, just Harmon," he said. "But because AAA contracted with Harmon, we have to sue both companies. Consumers should know they can go wherever they want to go to get their auto glass repaired."

Farrah said he and his colleagues warned AAA last winter something bad would come of the Harmon connection.

AAA's actions have coalesced the independent store owners to action.

"The owners used to be fragmented," said Farrah, "but no longer. They're in a fight for their lives."

Selecting the right retirement plan for your business

Investing in retirement plans offers small-business owners a great opportunity to save taxes and build retirement wealth.

That's because contributions to a qualified retirement plan are deductible from current income, and the income generated by investments in a retirement plan accumulates tax-free until withdrawn.

Despite these benefits, small businesses can still face challenges in determining which is the best plan for them.

The Michigan Association of CPAs offers the following overview to help business owners better understand their options.

Simple IRAs

To encourage small-business owners to provide retirement benefits for their workers, the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 created the SIMPLE (Savings Incentive Match Plan for Employees) IRA, a retirement plan without the complex nondiscrimination rules and reporting requirements of other retirement plans.

SIMPLE IRAs are generally available to businesses with 100 or fewer employees.

These employees must have received at least $5,000 in compensation from the employer in the previous year. Eligible employees are those who can reasonably be expected to earn at least $5,000 for the current year and who received at least $5,000 in compensation during any two preceding years.

SIMPLE IRAs are funded through a combination of employer and employee contributions.

For 1999, employees can contribute up to $6,000 of net earnings. The business owner must either match each employee's contribution (up to three percent of the employee's wages) or make a flat contribution equal to two percent of each eligible employee's pay (regardless of whether or not the employee contributes to the plan).

Once the money is in the plan, the SIMPLE IRA works much like a traditional IRA.

401(k) plans

401(k) plans are popular retirement programs, but they are generally more complicated and expensive to administer than other plans.

A typical 401(k) plan allows employees to contribute a pre-tax portion of their earnings. Participants can decide each year whether and how much they want to contribute (within tax code limits).

For 1999, the maximum that can be contributed to a 401(k) is the lesser of 25 percent of earnings or $10,000.

Employers may offer matching contributions. Employers who offer 401(k) plans must meet stringent nondiscrimination rules requiring that a sufficient percentage of non-highly-compensated workers participate in the plan.

Simplified pensions

In a SEP plan, the employer makes deductible contributions to IRAs set up by employees.

Employees do not contribute to a SEP, but employers who make contributions for themselves must make contributions to all employees who meet age and years-of-service tests.

The maximum contribution is 15 percent of compensation (up to $160,000), or $30,000, whichever is less. Contribution levels are flexible and can be adjusted (within plan limits) each year as long as there is no discrimination among the way employees' plans are funded.

There are no annual reporting requirements as there are for Keoghs and some other qualified retirement plans, making SEPs relatively easy to set up and administer.

Keogh plans

With a Keogh plan, a sole proprietor, partner or limited liability company member can set aside as much as 25 percent of eligible income, or $30,000, whichever is less, on a tax-deferred basis.

When you establish a Keogh plan for yourself, all eligible employees must be included in the plan on a nondiscriminatory basis.

There are two types of Keogh plans:

- A money purchase plan that requires a mandatory contribution level each year regardless of whether the business shows a profit and
- A profit sharing plan in which contribution levels may change each year.

Because Keoghs allow larger annual contributions, they are popular with high-earning business owners.

Making the right choice

In determining which retirement plan is the best for you and your business, it is important that you clearly identify your objectives and carefully consider a number of factors.

- The cost to cover employees. If you have few or no employees, you can base your decision primarily on which plan will be most beneficial to you. On the other hand, businesses with a large number of employees must consider the costs involved in covering employees and determine the extent to which tax advantages offset these costs.
- The level of complexity. You also need to consider the complexity of the plan and the reporting requirements. Simple IRAs and SEPs are easier to set up and maintain than Keoghs and 401(k)s.

• When you expect to retire. The closer you are to retirement, the greater the need to select the retirement plan option that will allow you to contribute as much as possible.

• Contribution requirements. If your business has good and bad years, you might want to steer clear of plans, such as the SIMPLE IRA and the Keogh Money Purchase Plan, that require annual contributions.

Selecting the right retirement plan can have far-reaching and long-lasting effects on your retirement and your business.

A CPA can help select the best plan for your needs.

Financial Focus

Regardless of what security we select, it should meet our goals.

One of the basic tenets of investing is that it should not be done on impulse. Know what you want before you buy.

Then, determine if your selection will do for you what you want — in short, if it will meet your needs.

If, for example, you want your investment to give you income, then you must expect your choice to provide suitable dividends (stocks or equity investments provide dividends) or interest (bonds or debt securities produce interest) to meet your needs.

In addition, you must be reasonably convinced that this income will be paid to you regularly and on time.

Whether you receive this income will depend on the ability of that particular corporation to meet its obligations.

It is also generally true that the higher your yield or return, the more risk you assume.

A U.S. government-guaranteed bond probably will not provide as much income as an unsecured note of a small corporation.

On the other hand, the government bond will afford you more safety. So if you're aiming for maximum income on your investment, chances are you're going to have to sacrifice a bit of safety.

To put it another way, "There's no such thing as a free lunch."

If, on the other hand, income is secondary and you're after capital appreciation, then you probably should invest in securities you believe you may sell for more than you paid for them.

One thing you can be certain of, however, is that no stock or bond can simultaneously offer you minimum risk, attractive income and tremendous growth potential.

If a security features one of these attributes, the others will be secondary or practically nonexistent.

At certain times, however, it may be possible to obtain securities that potentially offer some modest combination of these features over a period of time.

G.P. Children's Theater celebrates its 45th year

By Maureen Moore
Special Writer

As it celebrates its 45th anniversary this year, Grosse Pointe Children's Theater can point to a history of career starts comparable to a Los Angeles or New York stage.

Recognized by the state of Michigan as the oldest community-based children's theater in the state featuring youths as performers, surnames such as Herman, Crim, Gaidica, Scillian, Parcels, Waldmeir and Marshall helped to form a legacy not easily matched.

Grosse Pointe Children's Theater's founder and director Sally Reynolds is enormously proud of the heritage her vision began. The local theater has launched countless professional careers in numerous performance sectors and disciplines. She considers past and present performers as family.

"In the hearts of children is born the fate of men and nations," Reynolds said. "This is our motto, from King Midas and the Golden Touch. This means that what one learns as a child reflects later in life," she said.

"My goal from the start was — and continues to be — to use the talents God gave me to bring joy and happiness to others through theater. All of our members have tried to 'spread a little love from God above' all for His honor and glory."

Reynolds said she was born to multi-talented parents who loved music and theater. Her performance roots were planted early.

"My mother was the finest pianist I ever heard, and my dad could make the violin sing," she said. "He also had the most beautiful Irish tenor voice that sent a shiver up my spine. He and my mother would sing and harmonize and my brother and I would join in, singing old favorites."

When Reynolds was 4, her Aunt Margaret played an angel in a production at Bonstelle Theatre. An indelible imprint was made on the awe-struck youngster. Her efforts raised sufficient funds to save downtown Detroit's historic Mariner's Church from being demolished.

While working on her master's degree in Children's Theater at Wayne State University, she taught drama at University Liggett School.

"It was a real challenge, but I loved every moment of it," Reynolds said.

After her son was born, "thoughts of a community children's theater in Grosse Pointe kept rolling through my mind. I knew what I wanted, and I just needed someone in authority to lend a listening ear and heart to the great need for such a children's theater and all the wonderful things that could happen both for the children on stage and those in the audience."

Mapping out a plan to find a home for their stage meant hours of phone calls and footwork. The endeavor paid off. Reynolds' concept of Grosse Pointe Children's Theater was initially accepted by The Neighborhood Club, the Grosse Pointe Board of Education, and the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

"After presenting my concept, plans, hopes and dreams for the community, and after being received with a most enthusiastic welcome by the War Memorial's board of directors, I decided to make it our home," she said.

"The rest is history."

"One of the high notes of our time at the War Memorial was presenting 'The Wizard of Oz' to benefit Father Patrick Peyton's Family Theater of Hollywood," Reynolds said. "Our guest of honor was Jack Haley, the original Tin Man character from MGM's movie classic."

"When Haley gave a standing ovation to the Tin Man in our production, I thought my student was going to pass out from shock," she said.

In 1986 the Windsor's Hiram Walker Canadian Club 'Break A Leg' Award was presented to Reynolds for "outstanding coordination of the theatrical production of 'Oliver' at the War Memorial Fries Auditorium."

The Canadian Club Break A Leg award recognizes professionals for outstanding contributions to children's theater nationwide and for dedication to the arts. An industry-wide achievement, each time this award is given, The Actor's Fund, the oldest theatrical charity in the world, receives a sizable monetary contribution from the Canadian Club.

Prestigious recipients before 1986 include Anthony Quinn, Eddie Albert, Colleen Dewhurst, Frances Sternhagen, Mickey Rooney, Ann Miller, Tommy Tune, Gene Barry, Mark Hamill, Christine Ebersole, Mary Martin and Carol Channing.

"Sally has been a great teacher," said Janet Weingarten. Weingarten's daughter, Jennifer, has performed with the Children's Theater. "She puts in a tremendous amount of time with her students. It was Sally who sparked Jennifer's interest in acting. She's been her best teacher."

Participating in GPCT was Jennifer's first experience with acting. Now a freshman at Grosse Pointe North High School, Jennifer has performed in several of Reynolds' productions, most recently in

"The Wizard of Oz."

Other notable performances included the character of Mrs. Sowerberry in "Oliver," and in a student-written, student-directed production of "Mass Hysteria," at Grosse Pointe North. These experiences have solidified Jennifer's plan to produce and direct her own productions on the Grosse Pointe stage.

"Jennifer has been to Interlochen for three years, and performs in New York at a theatrical camp called Stage Door Manor," Janet Weingarten said.

Last year Jennifer choreographed and played the lead role in Parcels Middle School's production of "Annie." "As a teenager my wife, Diane, was involved with the Grosse Pointe Children's Theater, under the direction of Sally Reynolds," said Charlie Rinderknecht of Grosse Pointe Woods. "Every now and then, over the last few years, we would run into Sally and come back to work on or in her productions."

Both professional actors active in dinner and community theater, "Acting is how we met," he said. In 1997 the couple played adult roles in Reynolds' adaptation of "Annie," and last year the couple performed the adult leads in GPCT's "Cheaper By the Dozen."

"When we're not playing the leads out front," Rinderknecht said, "Diane works behind the scenes as the stage manager and I build sets. Our kids also act in the theater."

"Our family is now second generation Grosse Pointe Children's Theater."

Annie Reinholz, a junior at Grosse Pointe South High School, is a new member of the GPCT. Last Christmas she appeared as Rosamund in "Sleeping Beauty," and last month she was Glinda, the good witch in "The Wizard of Oz."

"Sally has been very flexible with Annie's school and extra-curricular schedule," said Jane Reinholz, Annie's mother. "Annie also loves sports. My greatest joy is that she has been able to have some exposure to the arts and still maintain her extra-curricular activities."

"Sally finds a way to blend it all in. She understands there are other things kids have interests in, too. Sally has incredible patience. She has been an unbelievably positive influence on the kids and the community."

She's meticulous about each performance, Jane Reinholz said. "Reynolds and the GPCT have made the kids feel so good when it's time to take the stage. They're proud of themselves and how hard they've worked."

"Sally obviously has a great love for what she's doing. It takes a lot of energy. I'm glad my daughter has been part of this theater."

Reynolds said the GPCT does not limit itself to providing entertainment solely to residents of the Grosse Pointe community. Members have given their time and talent to charitable causes in numerous communities.

In recent months scenes from "The Wizard of Oz" were performed for homeless people during a stay at St. Paul's Church. Last December "Sleeping Beauty" was enacted before a group of senior citizens at St. Joseph's Home for the Aged.

GPCT is currently planning a Summer Drama Workshop for both beginning and advanced students from July 6 through July 17 at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe

"From then on, my aunt started taking me to shows. I loved them, and loved to be a part of the audience. One of my favorites was 'Around the World in Eighty Days.' Jessie Bonstelle was a real star maker," Reynolds said. "I patterned my Children's Theater after hers."

Reynolds took singing and dance classes, drama lessons, and performed on the local stage in productions such as "The Broadway Capital Children's Hour" and Teletots. It wasn't until her college years, however, that Reynolds submerged herself in the arts.

After earning a bachelor of arts degree from Michigan State University she directed local actors and actresses in productions for Detroit-area charitable causes. Their

Last year, more than 50,000 guests visited gardens listed in the Open Days directory.

Grosse Pointe gardens that will be open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, June 13, are:

- The Day garden, 3 Woodland Place.
- The Oetting garden, 5 Island Avenue.
- The Jagger garden, 1 Donovan Place.

BRIDGE BY WOODY BOYD

Humility is a virtue: all preach, few practice and yet everyone is content to hear.

— John Selden

Janice Horne Wright, the benevolent and much-respected widow of the unforgettable Charlie, has been a delightful denizen of our community's doings since their return following the '41 war. Charles wasn't a veteran, but his life with the F.B.I. in those times was just as nerve-racking. Jan and he met in Florida where they were married and his family and friends were thrilled when they returned with Jan's daughter Adena to the beautiful shores of Lake St. Clair.

Three exemplary children came with time. Young Charlie, who was dubbed "Little Much Talk" in our Indian Guide years, lovely Louise and Janice, who completed the family planning. But Charlie's law practice, with the prestigious Dickinson, Wright firm kept him at work for a lifetime of 10-hour days. Under those circumstances Jan had more of the fussin', fixin' and frettin' to manage than many of her contemporaries. With more love in her heart than a humongous valentine, she kept this flag-waving American family functional, focused and fused.

Saturday evening was often bridge night for the Wrights as Charlie had a spiced high interest. All of us remember with love and kindness those moments when Charles felt it necessary to express his sentiments, especially if a hand took a turn for the worse. Jan, on the other hand, was the quiet one whose adventure in learning was kept to herself, but it was obvious she was becoming a student of the game. Her favorite partner, Mary Helen Wood, has long championed Jan's ability. I was especially impressed with her comprehension of the modern game. Obviously she was well-read and that translated into wonderful table presence and quite well-developed technique. With this kind of skill on our side how could we lose? We didn't, with a 63.5 percent finish.

Note Jan's technique on the following. She brushed aside the gift created by the opponents' lead. I'm positive she recognized the entry danger it could create by prematurely winning in her hand before the spade suit was established.

I had cautioned Jan that with a bad hand and 4-5 in the red suits that I would probably open one heart allowing me the convenient rebid of two diamonds as I was a stickler about reverses being some kind of 17 HCP. Even though 15 HCP, one no trump is a poor opener with cards heavily weighted to hearts and diamonds. Jan's two no trump was shy as with less I might have passed. An opening bid opposite an opener should play in game and never leave that decision in question.

Gifts are received on birthdays and Christmas, not in March at the bridge table. She won Dummy's heart king and played the spade 10 to West's queen. At trick 3, West led his diamond jack, but Jan was in charge, winning Dummy's king and another spade. West could duck, but Declarer had 10 winners - 3 spades, 4 hearts, 2 diamonds and 1 club. Note what happens at trick 1 if she plays Dummy's 10, East's jack and her ace. It deprives her hand of a much-needed entry to spades once they are established. You say not so. Try this inspired defense by West. He wins his spade queen and leads his club king (Deschappelles Coup) and Declarer loses that much-needed entry before spades are established.

For those of you who enjoy bridge on dry land, let's try it by sea. Sixteen have already signed on for the Grosse Pointe News, Travel with Goren 7-Day Caribbean Cruise, leaving Ft. Lauderdale at 5 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 23. Call toll free (800) 233-0680. Peggy, Polly or Tom have the most fun sailing details you've ever been told about.

The Pastor's Corner

You can make a difference

By the Rev. Barton Beebe
First English Lutheran Church

Does reading the newspaper headlines or listening to the television news reports ever depress you? Does the pain and tragedy in the world ever seem so overwhelming to you that you feel immobilized?

If you ever do feel such things, you are not alone. But you do not have to stay depressed or immobilized.

On Sunday, May 16, over 170 people participated in the 20th annual Grosse Pointe/Harper Woods Community CROP Walk. They voluntarily walked 10 kilometers one afternoon because others in the world have to walk more than that each day to search for the resources to meet the most basic of life's needs.

Through the efforts of these people and those who supported them, almost $22,000 was raised to assist hungry people in the world.

Despite the continued effort of many, hunger is still a reality in the world. Every day, 34,000 children in the world under the age of 5 die from hunger and preventable diseases. There are 800 million people in the world who are too poor to adequately feed themselves. One in four persons in the world lacks access to safe drinking water. In the United States, more than one child in four is hungry or at risk of hunger.

Such statistics are overwhelming. The numbers would be even greater if not for the efforts of people working against hunger and its causes.

Funds raised through the Grosse Pointe/Harper Woods Community CROP Walk do make a difference. The percentage of the population that is hungry today is less than the percentage of hungry people 20 years ago.

Of the almost $22,000 raised last month, 25 percent will be used to fund local agencies working against hunger in the Detroit area. The other 75 percent will be distributed to programs in more than 70 countries by Church World Service, a ministry of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States.

Like other religious agencies, CWS makes the most of each contribution. For instance, a gift of $10 can buy 50 baby chicks for a family in Bosnia. A gift of $20 can give 330 treatments of oral rehydration therapy to children suffering from dehydration. A gift of $100 can provide 500 tree seedlings to grow in Africa.

For up-to-date news about how CWS gifts are making a difference, call the CWS hotline: (800) 297-1516, Ext. 111, or visit the web site: <http://www.nccusa.org/cws>.

This year's CROP Walk is over, but the fight against hunger continues. Donations to CWS or other denominational hunger appeals can be made any time at most Christian congregations in our community. Or if you wish, contact me directly at (313) 884-5040. I'll be happy to discuss with you how you can make a difference.

Test may provide doctors more rapid identification of bacterial meningitis

Doctors at St. John Hospital and Medical Center are researching a rapid method for identifying bacterial meningitis that one day could save many lives.

Called the polymerase chain reaction (PCR) assay, the test takes just three hours instead of the 24-48 hours usually required for the standard diagnostic test known as culture isolation of bacteria.

Because bacterial meningitis can be fatal, early diagnosis and treatment are crucial.

"The earlier meningitis is identified and treated, the greater the chance of complete recovery," said Dr. Louis Saravolatz, principal investigator of the study and section chief of internal medicine at St. John Hospital. "The test also identifies which antibiotic will be most effective in treating the disease. That's important because one-third of all meningitis strains are resistant to penicillin, which used to be our first-line treatment."

According to Saravolatz, bacteria samples are collected using either a lumbar puncture or drainage from a cerebrospinal fluid shunt. Simply stated, the test is performed by placing the bacteria in a centrifuge, where they are broken apart to release the double strand of DNA. After adding an enzyme and a copy of the bacterial DNA, the bacteria's DNA is identified so that the appropriate treatment can begin.

In a limited test, Saravolatz and his team have achieved a 100 percent success rate in ruling out the presence of the bacteria causing meningitis in patients. Their success rate in confirming the presence of bacteria is 65 percent, a figure that is due to false positives. It is also the team's intention to investigate ways in the future to prevent or significantly reduce the number of false positives.

In spite of his team's promising findings, Saravolatz cautions that this research is in the very earliest stages and that many more experiments will be necessary. In the meantime, Saravolatz and fellow researchers Odette Manzor, Dr. Nancy VanderVelde and Dr. Deepthi Majithia will present their findings at a fall meeting of the American Society of Microbiology in San Francisco.

Although anyone can contract meningitis, children under the age of 5, teenagers, young adults and the elderly are generally at greater risk.

Symptoms include headache, stiff neck, sensitivity to bright light, confusion, fever, vomiting and other flu-like symptoms. The bacteria are spread through coughing or close contact like kissing. They are not spread by casual contact.

How to motivate a 15-year-old to get help

Special Writers

Dear Jeff and Debra:

I have a 15-year-old son who has a drug problem. He smokes marijuana daily, uses hallucinogens and who knows what else. His grades are failing, and he is impossible to control. When we try to enforce rules, he tells his father and me that he'll leave home if we try to control him. Sometimes he stays out all night without a phone call or an explanation. Every time the phone rings, I jump out of my skin thinking it's the police.

We don't give him any money, but he still manages to buy drugs. We are afraid that he may be dealing drugs or stealing to support his habit. We'd like to get him into counseling, but we know he'll never agree. We never imagined we'd be facing such a nightmare. What do you suggest we do?

— Lost Parents

Dear Lost:

Your son needs an intensive drug treatment program that specializes in working with adolescents. As parents, you can court order your son into treatment. We suggest that you contact the courts to find out what steps you must take in order to get a court order. Then contact an adolescent treatment center to make arrangements for your son's admission to the program.

Once you've taken care of these initial steps, sit down with your son and ask him to accept treatment for his drug problem. If he says no, let him know that you are prepared to court order him into treatment if he does not go on his own. Explain that he will face legal ramifications if he does not follow the court order. If your son tries to run, be prepared to have the court order in place and notify the police to pick him up.

When you talk to your son, use a loving, but firm approach. Do not engage in anger, blame or judgment. Do not react to your son when he attempts to shift the focus off himself by blaming you or other people. Stay calm and redirect the focus to his need to accept treatment. Let him know that the court order will be a consequence of not making a healthy choice.

Make a commitment to get involved in the recovery process. Attend the family program while your son is in treatment. Become a member of Alanon or Families Anonymous and attend regularly. Working with your son and his counselor in treatment, discuss appropriate ways to deal with relapse, should that occur.

An important, but frequently overlooked step, is examining your own use of alcohol or other mood-altering drugs. If you drink daily or use alcohol as a way to cope with problems and stress, or if you almost always drink during social activities, you are sending unhealthy messages to your child. Finding healthy ways to cope with problems and participating in sober activities will make you a good role model for your child. We suggest that all activities involving children be alcohol free.

It may be helpful to know that Brighton Hospital has an inpatient adolescent center that is secured. In other words, once admitted, the child cannot walk away from the facility. This is significant when dealing with a teenager who is not motivated to accept help. Also, Hazelden Foundation conducted a 25-year study on the success rates of people who went to treatment on their own vs. people who were court ordered into treatment. They found that the success rates are the same for both groups.

Jeff Jay is director of Program Development for Brighton Hospital and the president of the McGovern Family Foundation in Washington, D.C. Debra Erickson Jay is an interventionist and the managing director of "Take Charge! America." Take Charge is available at all Grosse Pointe churches and public libraries. Send questions to Jeff Jay, c/o Brighton Hospital, Dept. GP, 12851 East Grand River, Brighton, MI 48116; (810) 227-1211. or go to the website www.takecharge.net. Historical Society plans 'Upscale Sale' fundraiser

The Grosse Pointe Historical Society will hold an "Upscale Sale" from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, June 26, at its headquarters in the Provencal-Weir House, 376 Kercheval in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Admission to the sale is free. All funds raised will be used for the continuing operation of the Grosse Pointe Historical Society.

A preview sale from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Friday, June 25 will offer guests an opportunity to purchase items the day before the main event. Preview sale admission is $20 and refreshments will be served.

The society needs more donated items to sell, including antiques, collectibles, china, glassware, jewelry, books, pictures, toys, furniture and miscellaneous items. It cannot accept donations of computers or clothes.

"Our last Upscale Sale three years ago was a phenomenal success," said Chip Berschback, president of the society. "We're bringing it back by popular demand. We want everyone to check their attics and basements and consider donating items. They don't have to be antiques or collectibles, just things you think might be of interest to someone else.

"The purpose of the society, which was founded in 1945, is to preserve and promote the history of Grosse Pointe. This is a simple and easy way to assist the society in its ongoing efforts to provide community awareness of the rich history of the Grosse Pointes," Berschback said.

Items for the sale may be dropped off at the resource center at 381 Kercheval on Mondays and Wednesdays between 3 and 5 p.m. For more information, call Patti Schollenberger at (313) 331-0066.

"By Word of MOUTH"

Dr. Kevin Prush, D.D.S.

Let's talk about fluoride. You know about fluoride. It's the tasty stuff your dentist and hygienist recommends after a teeth-cleaning or when it has been determined that you have a high cavity rate. Do you understand how fluoride works? Have you ever asked?

Now, in my opinion, fluoride is amazing. Fluoride is a solution which "soaks" into the enamel or root surface and prevents decay. It is beneficial to your teeth as a child, teenager, adult or senior citizen! In other words, I believe fluoride treatments at your dental office should be a lifetime experience for a patient. All of our teeth have grooves and pits on the surface. Additionally, on a microscopic level, our tooth enamel has pores.

When we receive a fluoride treatment, the fluoride ions soak into these pores and tissues and are bacteriostatic, meaning it is hard for bacteria to survive in its presence.

As we age, if our gums recede, our root surfaces expose themselves to the mouth. Fluoride will penetrate the porous root surface and prevent decay. Root surfaces are somewhat soft and susceptible to decay. Dental office fluoride treatments can only help, not hurt. For the patient who is receiving radiation treatment for cancer and has reduced salivary flow as a side effect, fluoride is critical!

Do fluoride treatments at your dental office replace the need for fluoridated water? No. Fluoride in your drinking water is important and beneficial for the bones in your body. Thus, you can see that fluoride is multi-purpose.

Knights 'trust the schedule' and win another state tennis title

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Regular-season records don't mean a whole lot to University Liggett School's tennis teams.

It's what happens at the end of the season that really counts and that usually means the Knights are at the head of their class.

That was the case again last weekend as ULS won the state Division IV boys tennis championship, giving coach Bob Wood his 25th championship in 34 years at the school.

Although the Knights were ranked No. 1 in Division IV all season, they weren't the dominant force they have been some years while playing one of the most grueling schedules in the state.

"We weren't as competitive as we would have liked to be — some years we've beaten the state champions in the higher divisions — but when I talked to the team before the state meet I told them, 'trust the schedule,'" Wood said.

Few teams in the state play as tough a schedule as ULS does and certainly none in Division IV.

"I told the team, 'you've just gone through an AP (advanced placement) course in high school tennis and now you're going to take the equivalent of an eighth grade exam,'" Wood said. "I don't mean that as any disrespect to the teams we play at the state meet, but we do play stronger teams during the season."

Wood admitted that the tough schedule got frustrating at times this season, but he kept impressing on his players that it was going to prepare them for another state championship.

And that's exactly the way it turned out.

ULS finished with 31 points to 22 for runner-up Almont.

The Knights won four individual championships, reached the finals in two other flights and advanced to the semifinals in the other flight.

ULS won second, third and fourth singles championships up losing the second set 1-6. Palleggar and DiLoreto then trailed 0-2 in the final set before coming back to win 6-4.

"It wasn't only the five points they got for winning the flight that was so important, but the unbelievable support from the players and their families over the years," Wood said. "They've hadn't won their first match.

Palleggar and DiLoreto drew Scott Vallee and Austin Weisenbeck and the No. 3 team of Jose Carrion and Sean Griffin reached the finals before losing, while No. 1 singles player Aaron Shumaker advanced to the semifinals before bowing out.

Wood credited the long-time success of the program to a lot of things.

"We've had great talent and unbelievable support from the players and their families over the years," Wood said. "They've they wouldn't have received any points for the bye. If they'd picked up zero points for us, it would have put a lot more pressure on everyone else. Instead, their comeback provided a positive focus and everybody was able to go about their business in a very professional manner."

ULS' first doubles team of Weisenbeck and the No. 3 team of Jose Carrion and Sean Griffin reached the finals before losing, while No. 1 singles player Aaron Shumaker advanced to the semifinals before bowing out.

Wood credited the long-time success of the program to a lot of things.

"We've had great talent and unbelievable support from the players and their families over the years," Wood said. "They've bought into our program even though it has meant traveling all over the state and playing in a tournament nearly every weekend. For two months we go six days a week.

"This also wouldn't have been possible without my co-coach, Chuck Wright, who I think is the best high school tennis coach in the state of Michigan, and my wife, Kathy, who went on our Florida trip and has done a lot for the program."

At the state meet, Wright handled the singles competition and Wood stayed with the doubles teams because they were at different sites.

"We communicated by cell phone, not only to let each other know how the team was

North girls win state lacrosse crown with comeback victories

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Grosse Pointe North's girls lacrosse team picked the perfect time to become the "Comeback Kids."

And that's why they're celebrating a state championship today.

"These last two games were the first time in two years we've come back from a deficit to win," said coach Bill Seaman after the Norsemen defeated Troy 9-6 in the Class B championship game.

North reached the final with a 13-9 victory over Ann Arbor in the state semifinals.

In a way, the state tournament was a microcosm of the Norsemen's season.

"We were 5-5 and the girls won their last eight games,"

Seaman said. "This is a pretty resilient bunch."

Seaman said the team's first wakeup call came in the form of a couple of lopsided defeats to Class A opponents.

"After we lost badly to a couple of good teams, I think the girls realized what they had to do to get better," said Seaman, who has been the team's coach since the squad was organized a year ago.

"They had to improve their passing, catching and playing defense, among other things. And they went to work and did it."

In the championship game, Troy held 2-0 and 4-2 leads before North came back to pull into a 4-4 halftime tie.

Troy twice took one-goal leads in the second half before

North scored the last four goals of the game.

Katie Marten, who led the Norsemen with 33 goals, scored her team's first and last tally of the championship game.

"That was a fitting way to do it," Seaman said.

Amanda Hampton, who was the tournament's most valuable player, also tallied twice for North, while Erin Carrier, Erica Volltrauer, Katherine Cwiek, Michelle Koo and Ginger Hubbell added a goal apiece.

Carrie Matteson played another outstanding game in goal, while she had excellent support from the defensive corps of Mariko Bird, Koo,

The Grosse Pointe Soccer Association under-8 Dragons took first place in their division at the 17th annual Warren Youth League Spring Tournament. U-9 Dragons close in on title

The Grosse Pointe Soccer Association girls under-9 travel team is closing in on the Michigan Youth Soccer League U-9 championship.

The Dragons were 8-0-1 in league play with three games remaining and had an overall record of 33-6-2.

Grosse Pointe's latest victory was a 5-0 win over USL United. The Dragons started slowly in the windy, rainy and cold conditions but got goals from Olivia Stander and Allison Everett in the final 10 minutes of the first half.

Everett scored on a rebound after the United goalie was unable to control Shauna Davisson's shot.

In the second half, forwards Anna Basse, Davisson, Laura Favier, Lauren Nixon and Shelby Sharples outthrust United and controlled play for most of the half. Stander scored two goals in the second half and Sara McPharlin added one to complete the Dragons' scoring.

Basse, Davisson, Kelly DeFauw, Nixon and Kaitlin Graves collected assists, while Graves, Nixon and Katharine Zurek combined in goal for the Dragons' fourth shutout of the season.

Earlier, the Dragons blanked the Vardar Soccer Club 3-0.

Stander scored the only goal of the first half after taking a nice pass from Everett. In the second half, Jackie Farber scored on a direct kick from 20 yards out.

Late in the second half, Vardar was called for a foul in the penalty box area and Everett converted the penalty kick, but it was disallowed because both teams had moved into the box before the kick. The Dragons were awarded a re-kick and Everett connected again with a perfectly-placed shot to the right of the goalie.

Vardar increased its offensive pressure during the last 10 minutes of the game and had several scoring chances but the Dragons' defensive trio of DeFauw, McPharlin and Zurek turned away the chances.

Vardar was awarded a penalty kick during the last five minutes but Graves stopped the attempt and the Dragons had their third shutout.

The Dragons edged the GPSA Mustangs 2-1, despite playing with only 11 players because of a season-ending injury to Kali Bills and the absence of Sharples.

The game was scoreless until Stander and Farber made perfect crossing passes to Graves, who beat the Mustangs' goalie with a hard shot to the far post from her right forward position. The play of defenders DeFauw, McPharlin and Zurek kept the Mustangs off the board until they scored early in the second half on a high, hard shot that beat Nixon.

The Mustangs' goal seemed to energize the Dragons, who had several scoring chances the rest of the second half. With 10 minutes remaining, Stander played a long ball on the right flank to Graves, who ran it down and blasted it into the net for the winning goal.

Nixon played the entire game in goal and made several excellent saves.

The Dragons had another 2-1 victory against the North Macomb Thundercats.

Grosse Pointe dominated the first half through the ball control of Davisson, Stander, Farber and Everett. Farber broke the scoreless tie at the 15-minute mark with a hard shot from 20 yards out that sailed over the goalie's head. Favier got the assist with a perfect crossing pass.

The second half was similar to the first with the Dragons controlling play but unable to score until Stander took a long ball from Zurek and outran two defenders to make it 2-0.

The Thundercats increased their physical play and controlled play during the last 10 minutes, eventually scoring with about five minutes left.

DeFauw, McPharlin and Zurek had excellent defensive games, while Nixon and Graves each made several fine saves.

The Dragons chalked up their fourth league win with an 8-0 victory over the GPSA White Dragons — a team made up of U-8 and some U-9 players.

The White Dragons played well in the first half, but in the second half the Dragons' experience and patience paid off. Basse, DeFauw and Farber each scored twice, while Everett and Graves added one apiece.

Farber's first goal came on a penalty kick. DeFauw and Graves each earned two assists, while Davisson, Farber and Favier had one apiece.

Favier, McPharlin, Nixon, Sharples and Zurek combined for the shutout.

UNDER-11

The Dragons U-11 travel team extended its unbeaten streak to 19 games and improved its first-place record to 7-0 with a 2-1 victory over West Bloomfield.

The team played well in poor weather conditions and Caitlin Bennett and Margi Scholtes shared player of the game honors.

Bennett scored both Grosse Pointe goals, the second on a penalty kick with about five minutes remaining in the game. Her first goal came from just inside the 18-yard line after assists from Heather Lockhart and Scholtes.

Scholtes did an outstanding job in goal in the second half, making several excellent saves in a driving rain. Jenna Benko came back from an injury to play her customary fine game at midfield.

Amanda Koelzer and Jessica Poletis were co-defenders of the game, while Lindsay Ruthven and Katie Uppliger also played solid games.

Anna Alschbach, who leads the Dragons in scoring, and Scholtes scored the goals, while Jillian Kronner, Ali Morawski and Lockhart collected assists.

Morawski applied heavy pressure from her center striker position in the first half. She moved to goalkeeper for the second half and made the play of the game with a diving punch out to end a North Macomb scoring threat.

Starting goalie Laura Danforth blanked Genesee in the first half. The Dragons lead their division in goals-against average and in scoring.

Midfielders Marilyn Beardslee, Genna Hall and Lockhart played well and Bennett had a strong game.

Emily Schleicher played well at defense but the Dragons missed the defensive play of Becky Biske, who was ill.

GPSA U-8 Dragons win Warren tournament championship

A 9-0 victory over the Warren Wild Eagles gave the Grosse Pointe Soccer Association under-8 Dragons the championship in the Warren Youth League Spring Tournament.

The team, which consisted of eight girls and six boys, won all three of its games in the tournament, outscoring the opposition 19-2.

The Dragons opened with a 6-1 victory over the Livonia Blazers, then beat the Warren Wings 4-1 before meeting the Wild Eagles in the championship game.

Goal scorers were Meryl Etheridge, Austen Brooks,

Rory Deane, Pierson Fowler, Olivia Stander, Gina Valgoi and Daniel Zukas. All of the goal scorers picked up assists along with Whitney Baubie, Jeff Graves, Chloe Kirchner, Lisa Martin, Ellen Muniga, Hannah Orlicki and Alex Stanczyk.

Stanczyk and Graves shared the goalkeeping and did an excellent job. Stanczyk made one particularly outstanding stop on a breakaway attempt.

Stander, Brooks and Zukas did a fine job setting up the offense, while Valgoi, Deane, Fowler, Kirchner and Orlicki played excellent transitional games. Baubie, Martin and Muniga were forces on defense. Fowler was the team's primary sweeper and did an exceptional job of clearing the ball out of the box.

The Dragons received many compliments on their passing and teamwork. Stander and Brooks each had several "text-book" far-post shots and Deane and Brooks scored several outstanding goals.

The squad was coached by Mike McIlroy with help from Larry Graves, Jeff Stander, Lee Brooks, Dan Deane, Deb Wright, Sue Stanczyk and John Fowler.

South soccer team stuns Troy to move into state semifinal round

Grosse Pointe South's 4-0 loss to Troy in the final regular-season game was no indicator of things to come when the two teams met last Friday in the Division I regional championship game at Utica.

The Blue Devils reversed the outcome, beating the Colts 3-0 to advance to the semifinal round of the state tournament where they met third-ranked Rochester Adams.

It was the first regional championship for the South girls team.

The earlier meeting helped South because the Blue Devils were prepared for Troy's physical style and the South players refused to be intimidated by the sixth-ranked Colts.

At the 3:06 mark, Hannah Wenzel took a pass from Howson and blasted it past a stunned Colts' goalie from 35 yards out.

The Blue Devils continued to dominate while Troy substituted freely in hopes of slowing down the South attack. By the 10-minute mark of the first half, the game settled down with Troy mounting one offensive foray after another.

South's defense came up with its best performance of the year. Two defenders converged on every Troy player that had the ball, whether she was on the inside or the outside.

Her 16 saves earned praise from Troy's coach, who said Ridgway played "phenomenally."

The highlight of the first half was a Troy shot that hit the crossbar and dropped straight down, only to be snagged by Ridgway before it went into the net.

The second half continued in similar fashion with Troy becoming increasingly frustrated as the game went on. The Colts accumulated 21 fouls, including two yellow cards for unsportsmanlike conduct.

With 10 minutes remaining in regulation, Troy pulled its goalie for an extra attacker in a desperate attempt to score.

The strategy backfired with 4:49 remaining when Kyle Barrett passed to Megan Shapiro, who beat the Colts' player who was retreating toward the goal.

Earlier, South got past the regional semifinal for the first time, beating Chippewa Valley 2-0.

The Blue Devils had won three previous district titles, only to lose in the first game of the regional.

South had beaten Chippewa Valley twice during the regular season, but the Blue Devils remembered last year's regional semifinal when they were upset by Ford II, a team they had also defeated twice during the league season.

important first goal at the 16:30 mark of the first period, completing an attack that was started by D'Hondt.

The Big Reds were unable to concentrate defensively on any individual South player as eight Blue Devils were involved in the team's 17 first-half shots. They came from Courtney Lytle and Wenzel from outside the 18-yard line, Megan Shapiro and Julie Berschback from the corners and Howson, Howe, Dold and D'Hondt from in front.

Chippewa Valley's goalkeeper suffered a knee injury at 11:32 of the first half, which gave both teams a rest, but South continued to win almost every free ball and the Blue Devils had their best display of headers this season.

Defensively, the South trio of Christina Bakalis, Barrett and Meghan Robson made it difficult for the Big Reds to cross midfield and held them to two shots in the first half.

Less than 12 minutes into the second half, Howe scored on a hard shot after a crossing pass from Howson.

Mumaw and Molly Wimsatt joined the defensive corps in the second half as Chippewa was held to five shots for the game and Ridgway earned her eighth shutout of the season.

Diana Mager and Elizabeth Moran returned to action for the first time in the tournament, while Molly Weaver and Lena Skandson also played well in reserve roles.

doing, but also to talk about different strategies," Wood said. "That gave us a huge advantage over teams that have only one coach."

Even though ULS didn't reach all of its annual goals, the Knights were successful on two-thirds of them.

"Our goals are the same every year," Wood said. "We want to win our dual meets with Cranbrook, Country Day, Grosse Pointe South and Grosse Pointe North, win the regional and the state championship. Some years we achieve all of them and other years some of them. This year we didn't beat Country Day or South, but I guess if you look at it as if we got four of the six — that's batting .667 and that's pretty good."

Knights' winningest season ends with loss

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

University Liggett School's girls soccer team picked the wrong time to beat Detroit Country Day.

The Knights won the regular season meeting 1-0, but in a rematch in the Division III state regional tournament, the Yellowjackets came away with a 3-1 victory.

The defeat was the first of the year for ULS, which finished 17-1-1.

"Looking back, it probably would have been to our advantage to have lost a close game when we played them earlier," said ULS coach David Backhurst.

"After we beat them, they were fixated on us. They were gunning for us because we were the only Division III team to beat them this year. They have four losses and three of them were to Division I or II teams."

The Knights came out strong and had some good scoring chances early in the game, but Country Day got the important first goal only 13 minutes into the first half.

"That took some of the wind out of our sails," Backhurst said. "The first goal is always important, but especially against a team like Country Day."

Although the first half was fairly evenly played, the Yellowjackets made it 2-0 with 14 minutes remaining before halftime.

Backhurst gave an impassioned halftime speech in hopes of getting his team to rally in the second half.

"I implored them to get up and get back into the game," the coach said. "I told them how important the next goal was. Then when Country Day scored its third goal 9:22 into the second half, our kids really felt the heat."

Backhurst felt that Country Day's depth was a factor in the game.

"We only had two substitutes and both of them were nursing injuries," he said. "Our starters had to play pretty much the whole way on a hot, humid day, while they were able to bring six or seven players off the bench."

In the second half, Backhurst tried to get more punch into the lineup so he moved sweeper Katie Danaher to midfield and brought midfielder Lauren Ealba to the forward line.

It eventually paid off, but it turned out to be too little, too late. Ealba took a pass from Danaher and fired one of her hard shots that beat the Yellowjackets' goalie with about 10 minutes left. It was Ealba's 36th goal of the season, extending her own team record.

"It was a good year," Backhurst said. "It's always disappointing to lose, but we set records this year for most wins and fewest losses."

"They finished the regular season ranked first in Division III and I don't think there's anybody that's going to beat them. I'll be surprised if they don't win the state championship."

Backhurst is already looking forward to next season.

"We'll lose only one player to graduation," he said. "That's goalie Ronita Roy and we have an excellent goalie in the Middle School to replace her. There are also several other good eighth graders who will be coming in."

Erika Schmidt, Bobbie Kumar, Brenna Elsey, Cwiek, Tracy Rinaldi and Meredith Angell.

"Although 13 of our 28 players are seniors, Cwiek and Hampton are only sophomores so we have two of our top three scorers coming back next year," Seaman said.

"And it also helps that Matteson, who has done a great job in goal, is only a junior."

In the game against Ann Arbor, which is a combined team of Huron and Greenhills players, North fell behind 3-0 early but again pulled into a 4-4 halftime tie.

The Norsemen dominated the second half, but Seaman downplayed his halftime speech.

"All I told them was to stop making fouls and we'd do better," he said. "That's all we did differently."

Hampton led the way with five goals, while Marten had three and Cwiek scored a pair. Single goals came from Carrier, Donna Demerre and Bird.

Seaman admitted that the realization of winning a state championship hasn't quite hit him yet.

"One of the parents asked me how come I didn't look excited," Seaman said. "I told her, 'it's probably because I'm still in shock.'"

"This has been a lot of fun. We're probably the third-best girls lacrosse team in Grosse Pointe. South and University Liggett both have a lot more experience than we do, but we do pretty well in our division. When we started last year, we had only two girls who had ever played lacrosse before. They've made a lot of progress since then."

South tennis team takes third in state; No. 1 doubles wins flight

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

It isn't easy to win a state championship in Division I boys tennis.

Grosse Pointe South found that out last weekend when the Blue Devils finished third behind defending champion Brother Rice and surprising Midland Dow.

"Some years you go to the state finals knowing you have a chance to win and if you don't it's a disappointment," said South coach Tom Berschback. "It's almost easier to go in knowing that you don't have a chance to win."

Everything has to click perfectly in order to win a state championship. There can't be any upsets in the early rounds.

"We had a couple of early upsets and that's what hurt us," Berschback said. "Preston Gaspar lost to an unseeded player in the first round and Tony Tocco lost to an unseeded player — who was undefeated — in the quarterfinals."

Gaspar dropped a 6-3, 6-3 decision to Redford Catholic Central's Mike Findling in the first round. Tocco, after beating Catholic Central's Jeff Fleszar in his first match at No. 2 singles, lost 2-6, 6-0, 6-4 to Matt Garner of East Kentwood.

The highlight of the tournament for South was the play of the Blue Devils' No. 1 doubles team of John Berschback and Richard Marsh.

They won the flight championship with a 6-2, 2-6, 6-3 victory over Brother Rice's team of Justin Smith and Sean Cafemeyer, completing an undefeated season.

"They lost only three sets all year," said coach Berschback. "It's been so much fun to watch them, especially being John's uncle."

In four years of playing No. 1 doubles for South, John Berschback has a 90-3 record. He brought high school doubles play to a new level.

"Larry Nyekirk, the coach at Traverse City, didn't have anybody left when John and Richard played in the finals, but he stayed around to watch their match," Tom Berschback said. "He said he wanted to watch John play one more time. He said he's never seen a high school doubles player that good."

Freshman Blake Willmarth advanced to the finals in third singles before losing 3-6, 6-0, 6-3 to Mark Gorski of Brother Rice.

Willmarth won his first two matches in straight sets, then had a tough 6-4, 5-7, 6-3 win over Brett McLeod of Rochester Adams in the semifinals.

"That was a 2 1/2 hour match and Blake had only half an hour to rest before playing for the championship in 90-degree weather," coach Berschback said. "It was just too much, but he had a great year."

South's No. 3 doubles team of Chip Getz and Evan Roarty-Collins advanced to the championship match before losing to Brother Rice.

"They played extremely well," Tom Berschback said. "They did so much better than last year, but Brother Rice has an outstanding team."

South's No. 2 doubles team of Scott Dansbury and Brian Gorski advanced to the semifinals before losing 6-2, 6-4 to Brother Rice's Jeff Carrico and Chris Brede. Dansbury and Gorski won their first two matches in straight sets over teams from East Kentwood and Ann Arbor Huron.

"It's great to have such a good team that you're disappointed with third place in the state," coach Berschback said.

"I'm not disappointed with my players. They did a great job, but they're disappointed in themselves. We had a great year."

North seeks volleyball coach

Grosse Pointe North is seeking applicants for the position of head varsity volleyball coach.

Applications may be obtained at North or by calling athletic director Tom Gauerke at (313) 343-2214.

The deadline for applications is Friday, June 11.

Knights are second in Metro tournament

Harper Woods was mountain University Liggett School's baseball team was unable to climb during the Metro Conference season.

"They beat us in a close game early in the year and they drubbed us in the (conference) tournament final," said Knights coach Walter Butzu.

"They batted over .400 as a team in conference play while we struggled to eclipse .290."

Harper Woods rolled to an 18-8 victory in the conference championship game. A.J. Stachecki went 2-for-2 for ULS, while C.R. Moultry had a double and three RBIs.

ULS advanced to the championship game with a 6-3 victory over Cranbrook Kingswood. Jay Minger drove in three runs with a pair of triples, while Moultry pitched four innings and struck out seven for his sixth win against conference opponents.

"We definitely wanted a second chance to play Harper Woods so the Cranbrook game loomed large for us," Butzu said. "I thought that the way we played against Cranbrook would help propel us to victory in the Harper Woods game but we could not overcome a nine-run third inning (by the Pioneers)."

The Knights began conference tournament play with a 10-8 victory over Lutheran Northwest.

Minger went 4-for-4 with a triple but ULS allowed seven unearned runs.

"We had to rally from behind as we had too many defensive lapses once again," Butzu said. "C.R. picked up another win in relief of Minger, but both pitchers pitched well."

"Minger has been stinging the ball lately and since he is our leadoff man, that has picked up the entire offense."

ULS tuned up for the conference tournament with a non-league game against Detroit Country Day, but it was a disappointing 16-6 loss for the Knights.

"We wanted to play a tough team to prepare for the Metro tournament but our team defense did not allow us to keep it close," Butzu said. "Early in the year bounces seemed to go our way. Lately we've struggled to get a break."

Anthony Legree led ULS with three hits, including a pair of doubles, while Ryan Schafer had two doubles. Minger had two RBIs for the Knights.

ULS second in district

Senior pitcher Nicole Young saved the best for last as she led University Liggett School's softball team to the championship game of the Class C district at Center Line St. Clement.

Young struck out 11 and allowed only two hits as the Knights beat Lutheran East 5-1 in the district semifinal.

Young got outstanding defensive support from second baseman Suzanne McGoe, who made five putouts, and from freshman right fielder Tracey Greene, who went far to her left to make a diving catch of a line drive by Julie Riske, leading off the seventh inning.

Young and East's Tracey Marshall were hooked up in a pitchers' duel going into the fourth inning. The only hit off Marshall until then was a single by Courtney Wudcoski in the first inning.

Wudcoski singled to start the fourth, but was erased on a fielder's choice by Holly Morrison. Morrison eventually scored the game's first run on a single by freshman catcher Maggie Dillon.

East came back with a run in the bottom of the fourth on a single, a walk and two ground-outs.

ULS broke the tie in the fifth. Erin Galvin singled with two outs and Young and Wudcoski followed with triples to give the Knights a 3-1 lead.

Michelle Schwark doubled to start the sixth inning and scored on McGoe's single. ULS added its final run in the seventh. Galvin doubled and scored on Morrison's single.

The Knights lost the championship game 14-1 to a strong St. Clement squad and finished the season 12-8 with runner-up finishes in both the Metro Conference and the district.

On October 6, 1998, Christine Cicotte voted to retain another law firm to act as an investigator, resulting in further cost to the district.

JUSTIFICATION OF CONDUCT IN OFFICE BY CHRISTINE CICOTTE

On September 14, 1998 I, Christine Cicotte voted to place the superintendent on leave, to investigate the possible misuse of school funds. I also voted to hire an acting administrator, with money already in the budget, and to hire a new, not additional law firm and an individual to investigate the board's concerns. This investigator found that the superintendent took approximately $25,000, which she was not entitled to. I then voted to fire her for that. If someone broke into my home and took something that they were not entitled to, I would expect the police to investigate and take the proper action also. I took an oath to protect and serve this district. What the superintendent did was wrong. She misused school funds. She violated her own contract. I did my job. I held her accountable, and I stand by my decision.

SPECIAL RECALL ELECTION SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF HARPER WOODS JUNE 14, 1999

REASONS FOR DEMANDING THE RECALL OF RONALD H. GREVE

Shall Ronald H. Greve be recalled from the office of Board Member for the Harper Woods Board of Education for the following reason(s): On September 14, 1998, at a special meeting of the Harper Woods Board of Education, Ronald H. Greve voted to place the district's superintendent on administrative leave indefinitely, with pay. Ronald H. Greve voted to hire an acting superintendent at an additional cost to the district of $395 per day. Ronald H. Greve then voted to hire an additional law firm to represent the district. On October 6, 1998, Ronald H. Greve voted to retain another law firm to act as an investigator, resulting in further cost to the district.

JUSTIFICATION OF CONDUCT IN OFFICE BY RONALD H. GREVE

I had information suggesting that the Superintendent was cheating on her mileage expenses. I also believed she was spreading false information designed to stir up controversy and divert attention from her own poor job performance. An independent investigator found that the Superintendent had paid herself more than $25,000 that she was not entitled to receive. The Board fired the Superintendent for dishonesty. I believe I was only doing my duty in suspending the Superintendent. An independent investigator proved that I was right to be concerned. How can we teach our children to be honest and truthful, if we look the other way when a high paid administrator with a gold plated employment contract is dishonest?

REASONS FOR DEMANDING THE RECALL OF AMY HOUGHTALIN

Shall Amy Houghtalin be recalled from the office of Board Member for the Harper Woods Board of Education for the following reason(s): On September 14, 1998, at a special meeting of the Harper Woods Board of Education, Amy Houghtalin voted to place the district's superintendent on administrative leave indefinitely, with pay. Amy Houghtalin voted to hire an acting superintendent at an additional cost to the district of $395 per day. Amy Houghtalin then voted to hire an additional law firm to represent the district. On October 6, 1998, Amy Houghtalin voted to retain another law firm to act as an investigator, resulting in further cost to the district.

JUSTIFICATION OF CONDUCT IN OFFICE BY AMY HOUGHTALIN

The voters elected me to make decisions in the best interest of our children's education and to safeguard district funds. I acted cautiously when Dr. Tucker's integrity was questioned and it was suspected that she might be receiving inappropriate reimbursements. I voted to replace the existing school district legal counsel with an attorney who has an impeccable and stellar reputation statewide. I followed this attorney's advice in the delicate area of employment law to protect the district from legitimate litigation, as well as to be fair as possible to Dr. Tucker. This advice included engaging an independent investigator to examine the facts and determine the truth. I believe my actions were justified when the investigation revealed that the trusted administrator of school assets paid herself $25,000 she was not entitled to receive. The leadership of this school district, including myself, must be held to the highest standards of accountability. Education involves not only the lessons taught inside classrooms, but the way community members live the ideals of citizenship. To condone the actions of a school leader who failed to live up to the same standard she held others to would shatter our children's education.

REASONS FOR DEMANDING THE RECALL OF NANCY WRUBEL

Shall Nancy Wrubel be recalled from the office of Board Member for the Harper Woods Board of Education for the following reason(s): On September 14, 1998, at a special meeting of the Harper Woods Board of Education, Nancy Wrubel voted to place the district's superintendent on administrative leave indefinitely, with pay. On October 6, 1998, Nancy Wrubel voted to retain another law firm to act as an investigator, resulting in further cost to the district.

JUSTIFICATION OF CONDUCT IN OFFICE BY NANCY WRUBEL

As a board member, I have done my best to uphold all school district contracts. The investigators report proves that Dr. Tucker has violated her contract by taking money that she was not entitled to. Some residents feel that she should be entitled to exceed the guidelines of her contract or customary amounts. If some of these residents feel that Dr. Tucker should be allotted more money than her contract provides for, then I believe that they should write her a personal check and stop abusing this board and district funds. I cannot make these allowances just for one person. Is it accountability that you are supporting? Or is it accountability that you are avoiding? Holding Dr. Tucker accountable for her inappropriate vacation pay and mileage reimbursements is exactly what this board did!

Patience pays off for Norsemen in district comeback victory

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

A lot of major league baseball players could have learned a thing or two from Grosse Pointe North last weekend.

The Norsemen showed excellent patience at the plate in the seventh inning of their Class A district semifinal game against crosstown rival Grosse Pointe South and it paid off in a comeback from behind 11-10 victory.

That turned out to be the championship game of the district because North went on to crush Detroit Southeastern 21-0 in the final.

"We were trailing 10-7 and we had our seventh, eighth and ninth hitters coming up," said North coach Frank Sumner. "I was just hoping we could get two of the three on base for the top of the order we had a shot. I told them to be patient and take a strike and not go up trying to hit a three-run homer with nobody on base. They know the strike zone and they did a good job."

The first batter grounded out, but Brian Vandenberghe drew a walk and pinch hitter Michael Kasiborski singled. Richmond Inger drew a walk on a 3-2 pitch to load the bases. Jason Gallagher followed with an RBI single to cut the Blue Devils' lead to 10-8. A walk to Scott Koerber forced in another run and Phil Kozlowski followed with a double to drive in the tying and winning runs.

South had taken the lead with a six-run rally in the top of the seventh.

Andrew Hendrie led off with a home run, but the next two Blue Devils went out. A pair of North errors kept the inning alive and leadoff batter Rob Starrs followed with a two-run double to tie the game at 7-7.

Jeff Nelson, who earlier hit a pair of doubles, homered to put South ahead 9-7. Michael Lane replaced Koerber and Dan Griesbaum greeted him with a long home run. Lane fanned the next batter, but by then South had a 10-7 lead.

"I just tried to settle them down when we came into the dugout after the inning," Sumner said. "They weren't down mentally because we had come back earlier in the game. They felt they were capable of doing it again. I just wanted them to go up to the plate and be patient."

For South coach Dan Griesbaum, it was a devastating defeat.

"It was a case of going from extreme emotions — elation from coming back after having two outs and two strikes on the batter to losing like we did was a great disappointment," he said. "I don't know when I've ever felt so low after a game, but I'm really proud of my team."

The Blue Devils played without shortstop and All-State candidate Charlie Braun, who suffered a broken and dislocated finger a week earlier.

South took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on a double by Nelson, a walk to Griesbaum and Al Guastello's RBI single.

North tied the game in the bottom of the second when Pete Paterek doubled, took third on a groundout and scored on an error. Gallagher's leadoff homer in the third gave the Norsemen a 2-1 lead but South overcame that with a three-run fourth inning. The Blue Devils loaded the bases when Adam Hess singled, Rich Mayk beat out a bunt and Kevin Messacar was hit by a pitch. A throwing error after a pop up allowed one run to score and the other two came in on Nelson's second double.

North regained the lead with three runs in the fifth. Inger was hit by a pitch to lead off the inning. One out later, Koerber and Kozlowski delivered singles to make it 4-3. Two straight errors and a fielder's choice produced two more runs.

The Norsemen increased their lead to 7-4 when Inger singled, Gallagher was hit by a pitch and Koerber and Kozlowski followed with RBI singles.

South was by far the toughest test of the day for North as the Norsemen collected 23 hits in the rout of Southeastern.

"After the South game, it looked like batting practice," Sumner said. "We just wanted to keep our heads in the game and get the job done. Everybody played and everybody got hits."

Lane, who won the South game in relief, went the distance against Southeastern. He allowed one hit and struck out 13.

Inger hit a three-run homer in the first inning to get the Norsemen rolling and Kozlowski also homered.

North takes a 29-7 record into its first regional game Saturday at 10 a.m. at North against University of Detroit Jesuit.

"They have one very good pitcher and I'm sure we'll see him," Sumner said.

South, which beat Lakeview 11-6 and tied Warren-Mott 5-5 in a pair of non-league games last week, finished 15-16-1 for its first losing season since 1989.

"It was disappointing in a lot of ways, but I'm really going to miss the 10 seniors on the team," coach Griesbaum said. "I've been really close to the group from last year and this year because my son has played with and against them since Little League."

In the Lakeview game, Mike Kaselitz led the attack with three hits, including a triple, and three RBIs. Nelson had two hits and two RBIs and Griesbaum had two hits and drove in a run.

South scored six runs in the fifth inning, featuring a two-run single by Andrew Vlasak and an RBI single by Starrs.

Dan Battjes picked up the win in relief. Trevor Szymanski and Vlasak also pitched well for the Blue Devils.

Against Mott, South scored twice in the ninth to tie the game. Mike Alvin's RBI single made it 5-4 and Griesbaum singled to drive in the tying run.

Starrs started the rally with a double and Mayk singled before Alvin's hit.

Nelson had two hits, including a double, for the Blue Devils.

Hess started and pitched five strong innings, allowing two hits and no runs. He walked two and struck out three.

"I'd like to thank our Dugout Club and especially Tony Braun, who is retiring as president, for all the hard work they've done to improve our program," coach Griesbaum said.

"And I'd like to thank my assistant coaches, Steve Merriman and Bill Mogk on the varsity, JV coaches Mark Orr and John Hackett and freshman coaches Matt Wysocki and Dave Vlasak."

North vaulter places 8th in state meet

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

An eighth-place finish by Chris Hubbell in the pole vault highlighted Grosse Pointe North's efforts in last weekend's Class A state boys track meet.

Hubbell's 13-foot-6 performance equaled his career-best in the event.

"He did a super job," said coach Pat Wilson. "He was really focused. There were only four vaulters who went higher than Chris. It was a long, hot day. The vaulting lasted about six hours."

Earlier, North finished fifth in the Macomb Area Conference White Division meet.

The Norsemen's top performances came in the 110-meter high hurdles where Steve Zygmuntowicz was third (15.6) and Glenn Hawk finished fourth (16.6).

"Each of them dropped about half a second off their personal records," Wilson said.

North had third-place finishes from two of its relay teams. The 800 relay team of Devin McKenzie, Randy Faust, Jeff Roulo and Chris Fici was third and, in one of the most exciting races of the meet, the 1,600 relay team of Hawk, Zygmuntowicz, Faust and Will Sumner was also third.

"On every handoff we were second with guys right behind us," Wilson said. "Will ran a great anchor leg and held off all but one team. There were only tenths of seconds separating the top five teams."

Matt Mikula finished fourth in the 1,600 run, while sophomore Pat Kenny was fifth in the 3,200 run.

"Pat ran a nice race and he outkicked somebody at the end," Wilson said.

North also had sixth-place finishes from Zygmuntowicz in the 300 hurdles and Mark Chastain in the 800 run.

North blanks South in district

By Chuck Klonke

Melissa Drouillard pitched Grosse Pointe North's softball team to the Class A state semifinals a few years ago.

Now Drouillard, who went on to college stardom at Eastern Michigan University, is trying to help her prep alma mater to another long state tournament run.

"Melissa pitched to us last week and it helped because Kim (Grosse Pointe South pitcher Kim Allemon) throws hard and is a good pitcher," said North coach Bill Taylor after his team's 4-0 district semifinal win over the Blue Devils. "We have a lot of respect for her."

The Norsemen have an outstanding pitcher of their own in senior righthander Julie Mack, but she relies more on pinpoint control than on speed.

"Julie pitched another great game today," Taylor said. "She makes people hit the ball and we played outstanding defense behind her. Both teams played well defensively."

It was a typical North-South battle — close and intense.

"The girls all know each other — a lot of them play on the same summer team — but both teams really want to win when they play each other," Taylor said. "There's a lot of respect on both sides."

North scored all of its runs in the fifth inning. Jessica Westbrook led off with an infield single. One out later, Erin DiMaggio got a bunt single. The next batter struck out but during the at bat, the two runners advanced on a wild pitch.

Lindsay Hawkins hit a bouncer to the mound. Allemon threw to the plate, but Westbrook beat the throw. Meg Guillaumin then reached third on an outfield error with two runs scoring and Guillaumin tallied the final run on a wild pitch.

South threatened in the top of the seventh. Dinah Zebot reached base on an error and Katie Van Lith singled with one out but Mack got the next two batters on infield grounders.

after a single by Kathryn Ball.

Mack finished with a four-hitter. She didn't struck out anyone, but she didn't allow any walks, either.

Allemon pitched a five-hitter and allowed only one earned run. She fanned five and didn't allow a walk.

North won the district championship on a forfeit when Detroit Kettering, which drew a first-round bye, had only eight players show up for the game.

"We figured the North-South game was the district championship, but this was even easier than I expected," Taylor said after the forfeit win.

North hosts the regional Saturday and the Norsemen play Detroit Mumford, the winner of the University of Detroit Jesuit district, at noon. The championship game is scheduled for 2 p.m.

That will probably create a matchup with Regina, ranked No. 1 in the state for most of the season.

"They're an outstanding team," Taylor said.

Grosse Pointe North's softball team and coaches Bill Taylor and Tim Van Eckoute celebrate their Class A district championship. The Norsemen beat Grosse Pointe South 4-0 in the district semifinal, then accepted a forfeit win against Detroit Kettering in the championship game when the Pioneers failed to field a complete team.

Softball camp starts June 22 in St. Clair Shores

One of the three Midwest All-Star Softball camps will be held at Kyte Monroe Park in St. Clair Shores later this month.

The camp is designed to provide girls of all ages an opportunity to learn and develop the basic fundamentals of fast-pitch softball.

The St. Clair Shores camp will be held from June 22 through 25.

A hitting camp, which emphasizes the offensive aspect of the game, will be held from 9 to 11 a.m. each day. It includes instruction in hitting, bunting and base running.

A pitching camp, which develops and refines pitching techniques, will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. The major emphasis is in types of pitches and location.

Instructions are Gary Bryce, head softball coach at Wayne State since 1981, and Pat Kent, who has been Bryce's assistant at the school for the last 16 years.

The cost is $50 per camp. Campers must bring a mitt and clothes suitable for playing softball.

Composting in your personal back yard

Q. I am interested in doing my own composting, but I don't know where to begin. How would I set up a small compost pile for my garden and yard plantings? Cindy H.

A. Producing your own compost can be as simple as making a pile behind the shed. You can also build or buy compost bins to keep the compost in, which is a little more orderly looking and uses less space. Either way you can eliminate a lot of yard waste and create some beneficial soil to use in your garden.

Wire bins, plastic boxes and wood structures are some types of ready-made bins available, and through some of the gardening books there are many other types that you can build. It can be as simple as securing four pallets together to make walls and filling the inside with the materials to create your compost.

Garden Centers and bookstores offer books available on gardening, composting and soils. Adding compost to your soil is the easiest way to improve the soil structure by permitting better circulation of water and air in the soil. Other organic soil amendments you can add to improve the soil are sawdust, manure, sewer sludge (Milorganite), peat moss, pine needles and cocoa shell hulls. Organic matter attracts and holds on to nutrients in the soil, reducing the leaching of these nutrients. A healthy, organic rich, soil contains millions of microscopic organisms, which break down matter into nutrients that the plants can absorb.

The best ratio of material going into your piles is equal parts of leaves, twigs and fine woody matter to green matter such as grass clippings, weeds and soft stemmed plants. A layer of finished compost or a mixture of composted manure should be added next. A pile 3 feet high will produce enough heat to speed up the decaying process of the compost pile. Smaller piles will also work too, only they will take longer. Turning the pile by rotating the soil inside the pile with that on the surface will speed up the time it takes to create rich compost. Compost starters are available from your local garden center to give your pile a kick-start.

Using compost in your flower and garden beds will definitely improve your soil, and give you better results. Avoid using plant materials treated with persistent pesticides in your compost piles. Vegetable waste from the kitchen is fine, but avoid meats and fats, since these items will attract pests. A proper compost pile does not smell bad and is well worth the effort.

Home Tips

PICK IT OFF — I have always enjoyed Home Tips whenever I run across them. One of my favorite tricks is using an ice pick to remove labels from bottles and cans for recycling. It also helps in saving recipes, UPC symbols for rebates, offers, etc. Rita B., Lewisburg, Tenn.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ice picks can be dangerous since they can slip off the can or bottle and into your hand. If you choose to use this method, please do so with extreme caution. The best way to remove such labels is by soaking in hot water. You can also purchase a commercial liquid which does the job quite nicely and is inexpensive. Check out your local supermarket in the cleaning agents aisle.

MORE ON NO WASTE — For the woman who wrote in on NO WASTE for hand lotion by emptying lotion bottles into another one with a funnel: Well, when my lotion doesn't come out of the pump anymore, I just cut three-fourths of the bottle off and use the lotion that way. I just make a cover from a small piece of foil and

Hot water delivers too-cold showers

Q. Mr. Hardware, our hot water seems to run out prematurely. It starts out very hot but then gets lukewarm in a little while. The temperature dial on the tank is set on hot and the water flow is good. We drained some water out of the valve at the bottom of the tank which yielded quite a bit of rusty water before it ran clear. Still we have very short showers. Do we need a new tank? Cold shower Joe, Harper Woods.

A. Joe, the problem with your tank sounds like a broken dip tube. It is a long plastic tube (usually white) inside the hot water tank. It connects to the cold water side of your water heater and it directs the cold water to the bottom of the tank, close to the heat and below the existing hot water.

Dip tubes are in the news a lot lately, due to the amount of faulty ones installed in hot water tanks in the early '90s. What happens is they break off and lay in the bottom of the tank. Then, when cold water enters the tank it mixes immediately with the hot, hence the lukewarm water for five to 10 minutes.

To repair the dip tube can be easy, or it can be a catastrophe. What needs to be done is shut off the water, shut off the gas, and drain some of the water out of the tank. Then, remove the cold water supply from the top of the tank. There is almost always a union that allows for the pipe to be unscrewed without trying to rotate the whole tank. Whew, what a job that would be. Remove the pipe nipple from the tank and remove any remnants of plastic in the hole. Then install a new dip tube and reassemble the plumbing. Sounds easy? It can be if you have the tools and the luck that nothing will go wrong.

What could go wrong you ask?

Ask
Mr.
Hardware

By Blair Gilbert

- The pipe nipple at the top of the tank could crush or break off flush at the top of the tank when you try to remove it.

- The union could leak and not reseal after reassembly.

- The plumbing above could start to leak.

- The dip tube in the bottom of the tank could be one of the defective ones, and disperse small pieces of plastic throughout the plumbing system. Even though you have hot water, the plastic can clog aerators, ruin faucet cartridges and cause toilets to run.

The problems above aren't to prevent you from doing this repair, only alert you to some of the difficulties that may arise. Dip tubes are replaced every day and problems arise and they are handled. For most people, this job is best left to a plumber, they will take any of these problems with ease.

The following are options to keep in mind if you are considering changing your own dip tube:

- Is your tank 10 years old or older? You could be at the end of your tank's life if you have a standard "Plain Jane" tank.

- Are you very experienced at plumbing repairs?

- Are you one of those customers with a "defective" dip tube and qualify for a free company repair from the manufacturer?

Home Tips-

put it on top (to keep the lotion from getting hard). It sure beats emptying the bottles and saves time. From a Gal in Minnesota.

RECYCLE TIP — Why not really recycle the plastic tubes newspapers are delivered in? Give them back to the carriers. Our paper says, "Help reduce operating costs for your carrier; place two to four weeks' worth of bags in an obvious place for your carrier to pick up and reuse." Jill T., Laurel, Md.

IN THE KITCHEN — To remove the skin from a chicken or a piece of chicken, grasp the skin with a paper towel and pull. No slipping! Patty R., Salem, Ore.

CUT IT OUT — Getting the empty toilet paper tube off a spring-loaded mechanism is almost impossible if you have arthritic hands like mine, but a pair of scissors works like a charm. Just slice the tube lengthwise and lift off, clearing the way for an easy replacement. Kate W., Dallas.

NICE AND NEAT — Gathering, straightening and tying newspapers for recycling can be accomplished in a gradual, neat and less cumbersome way.

Provide a rectangular plastic laundry basket to fit the dimensions of your newspapers lying flat.

Next, cut two lengths of twine approximately 1 3/4 yards for a 1-bushel basket or calculate for your particular basket.

Then, evenly crisscross the twine in the middle interior bottom of the basket. Draw this twine toward the inside top of the four sides of the basket and allow the overlaps to hang outside.

Now, fill your basket with newspapers as you finish reading them. Separately, tie and knot each length of twine to easily, neatly and orderly bundle them for their destination. Renee L., Youngstown, Ohio.

COFFEE FILTERS — Before using new paper coffee filters, try the following: Using both hands, turn each substack of filters inside out, then reshape inside bottom slightly with thumbs. This puffed-up stack makes it easier to remove them one at a time. Lillian W., Sun City West, Ariz.

Create an entertaining splash in your yard

If you want to provide an essential element for the birds and be able to enjoy more types of birds in your yard than you have in the past — just add water!

In the same way that water is an essential element to humans, birds need a fresh, clean source of water for drinking year round. Water for bathing purposes helps birds keep their plumage in good condition — free from dirt and parasites. When a birds' feathers are kept clean, the interlocking webs called barbules will "style" together more efficiently. This will insulate the bird from cooler night temperatures.

One of the best benefits of adding a water source to your yard is the added number of species that water will attract. Your feeders are restricted to the seed and suet eaters, but a bird-bath has broader appeal. Robins enjoy vigorous bathing, making themselves at home in the middle of the bath and splashing out most of the water. Goldfinches like to bathe in a group. During the spring and fall migrations, you may find many warblers will visit your water source.

Water can be offered in many ways. Birdbaths constructed from concrete, plastic, resin, ceramic and metal can be mounted on pedestals, placed on the ground, hung from trees or attached to decks. Lighter weight plastic is easy to clean and handle and is also fairly durable. Concrete baths are extremely durable, but make sure that you can handle the weight of the bath when cleaning. Most bowls are separate from the pedestals so that they can be tipped for ease of cleaning. Concrete birdbaths are now available in smaller sizes. While a painted concrete bath is easier to maintain because the paint retards algae growth, remember that the paint will eventually need to be touched up. Household latex paint is appropriate for this purpose.

Concrete and ceramic are not recommended for year round use.

If you choose not to use your concrete birdbath in the winter and do not move it into the garage for storage, covering it with plastic is recommended. To keep your bird-bath and the water in good condition, daily cleaning is recommended. This may seem like a chore but the daily maintenance pays for itself in the long run. Make it part of your morning to tip out the water from the bath, give the bath a quick brushing with a brush devoted exclusively to that job, rinse the bowl and refill with fresh water. You can use an old milk jug to carry enough water for the rinse and refill if your hose is inconvenient. If your birdbath does have algae growth, clean it with a solution of one part bleach to nine parts of water. Rinse extremely well after this type of cleaning as the bleach is harmful to your birds.

Unfortunately, there is no miracle solution that can be added to the birdbath that will keep it

Jefferson and Washington - proud Colonial gardeners

In 1811, Thomas Jefferson wrote to his friend, the portrait artist Charles Wilson Peale, "I have often thought that if heaven had given me a choice of my position and calling, it should have been on a rich spot of earth, well watered and near a good market for the productions of the garden. No occupation is so delightful to me as the culture of the earth, and no culture comparable to that of the garden. Such a variety of subjects some one always coming to perfection, the failure of one thing repaired by the success of another, and instead of one harvest, a continual one throughout the year. Under a total want of demand except for our family table. I am still devoted to the garden. But though I am an old man, I am but a young gardener."

Jefferson first visited the Colonial capital of Virginia in 1760 to attend the College of William and Mary and his close association with the town continued until the capital was moved to Richmond in 1780. He greatly admired the beauty of Williamsburg's gardens and the interest in horticulture that he developed there was later to be expressed in the gardens at Monticello. His love of growing things never waned, and he kept a garden diary for many years, noting what seeds he gathered in his travels, and what plants he observed wherever he went.

Today, more than two centuries after Jefferson's sojourn in Williamsburg, the gardens there continue to be one of the great joys of the town. More than 100 gardens and broad greens fill 90 of the 175 acres of the historic area, and in all seasons, and all kind of weather, make the town a delight. The long vistas of the avenues are enhanced by the broad greens, open spaces that are so important today in urban planning and renewal programs for our crowded cities.

At Williamsburg today, visitors delight in the gardens, many of them not realizing the research that has gone into making them authentic to the late 18th century, and are therefore not part of the gardens in Williamsburg.

Some of them are dahlias, which arrived in Virginia in 1802, and forsythia, in 1833. Magnolias, now almost a trademark of the southern states, did not arrive there until 1820, with the star magnolia not appearing until 1862. Portulaca came to Virginia in 1827 and wisteria in 1830. Holly was not around in Virginia until the mid-19th century, almost 100 years after Jefferson's visit to Williamsburg.

All the houses in 18th century Williamsburg had herb gardens to supply culinary uses, medicinal remedies, cosmetic lotions, scents and dyes. The flower gardens, enclosed by fences that were required by law to surround each property, provided blooms to scent the house and add charm to the rooms, for the making of potpourris and sachets, and which make Williamsburg a garden city.

Colonial herb gardens, many of them laid out in the form of a wheel with a center sundial, contained an enormous assortment of useful plants. Among them were chives, dill, tarragon, lavender, mints, lemon balm, catnip, sweet basil, parsley, rosemary, sage, cost of a new tank if any major problems arise.

Tip No. 1: draining water out of a tank at least yearly does save costs by removing the rust at the bottom of the tank. The rust actually insulates the burner heat from the water so this is cheap maintenance.

Tip No. 2: if after draining some water out of a hot water tank the drain valve still drips, simply get a hose cap and seal the valve that way. It is simple to remove in order to drain water out at a later date, and is much easier than trying to remove or repair the drain valve that could be clogged with rust.

Pet Care

Pet travel tips

- Purchase a travel carrier several weeks in advance, and gradually acclimate your pet to using it before the trip begins.
- Be certain to purchase a container that complies with the International Air Transport Association and USDA regulations when traveling by air. Make airline reservations early, since some airlines allow only one on-board pet per flight.
- Bring along a note from your veterinarian, signed within 10 days of your trip, stating that your pet is in good health and up-to-date on immunizations.
- Don't leave your pet in a locked car, even with the windows open. The temperature inside a car can reach up to 160 degrees on hot days.

- Provide plenty of water for your pet and stop often for breaks. A good rule of thumb is a combined drink of water and walk every two hours.

- Keep your pet on a consistent, nutritious diet of premium food while on the road. If your pet is prone to motion sickness, feed smaller amounts of food one or two hours before you travel. Ask your vet about using motion-sickness medicine, such as Dramamine.

Just as the Colonists who first came to these shores brought with them their household belongings, their kitchen utensils, their tools and books, so too many of them packed in their baggage seeds, bulbs and even cuttings of their favorite plants. It is to be expected that fruit trees and kitchen garden produce would have been thought of immediately, but ornaments were not forgotten, and before long they too were growing side-by-side with native plants brought into cultivation in Colonial gardens.

Plants are living things, responsive to their environment, and to the care they receive, so that individual plants may appear different under different conditions. To further complicate the matter, nearly all garden plants have been repeatedly selected, crossed and hybridized since Colonial times. But there are many letters, diaries, invoices and orders and other writings describing the plants in Colonial gardens, and to the horticulturists familiar with the writings of the great botanists of past centuries, authenticity in a Colonial garden is reasonably easy to attain.

A very good source of information about Colonial gardens is the writings of George Washington. Whenever his services to his country or to his community permitted, Washington took great pleasure in developing the agricultural possibilities of Mount Vernon and in beautifying the grounds.

One of the earliest horticulturists here was John Clayton who came to Virginia in 1705. He spent a great deal of time collecting and documenting, as well as growing, plants. Not much is known about his personal life, although his writings are important.

The Williamsburg surgeon, Dr. John Galt, found him "witty in conversation." The Indians liked him because he listened and learned from them. Thomas Jefferson respected him for his enlarging of the botanical catalog of known plants. He had a wide correspondence with botanists all over the world, and he wrote one of the first complete botanical manuals of the new world.

For the Birds

clean and not be harmful to birds. A birdbath brush with plastic handle and bristles is preferred. Bacteria can grow on wooden handles which also have a tendency to split. Hang the brush up in an old onion bag so that it can air dry. Remember to wash your hands thoroughly when you are done.

When placing your birdbath, consider the fact that a birdbath placed low to the ground or on the ground offers water in a place where it naturally occurs. A birdbath hung from the trees offers protection from cats. Keep in mind that the birds need to feel safe from predators when bathing. Since wet feathers make flying difficult, the birdbath should be located close to shrubs or trees. Birds will use those plantings as a place to preen and dry once they have completed their bathing. Locating the birdbath in the shade slows down the algae growth and keeps the water cool.

Studies have shown that the sound of water is clearly an attraction to birds. A commercial mister or dripper will add this feature. The mister or dripper do not have to be running continuously. In fact, birds will get used to your timing if you elect to turn it on once or twice a day at certain times. Customer testimonial tells me that there have been "waiting lines" of birds who are used to when "their" mister or dripper will be activated. There are also commercial timers that can be set to do this work for you.

One of the newest inventions on the market is a leaf mister. The fine spray that wets leaves gives shy birds a place to bathe. Orioles and warblers have been known to rub against leaves as a fashion of bathing. Flying through the mist is the hummingbirds preferred way to bathe.

Like watching children in the sprinkler, watching the birds as they enjoy the water that you provide is good, clean entertainment!

Q. I still have a single-shot cap gun that my uncle gave me when I was 9 or 10 years old. Now I'm 60. The gun is heavy metal, dark silver in color. The word "Zip" and a red star in a circle are just above the metal handle. Can you tell me when the gun was made, what it's made of and what it's worth?

A. Your cap gun is cast iron. It was made around 1935 by the Hubley Manufacturing Co. of Lancaster, Pa. Hubley was founded in 1894.

The company made cast-iron toys of all kinds, including fire engines, circus trains, cars and cap guns. Hubley stopped making toys during World War II. If your cap gun works, it would sell for about $50.

Q. My lamp looks like a woman in a flowing robe. She is surrounded by vines and flowers. There is a light bulb in the center of each flower. The lamp is about 24 inches high. When were figure lamps popular?

A. Your lamp is in a very popular art nouveau style. The earliest examples were made in France in the 1890s. They were soon sold in many stores in America.

The Frankelite Co. of Cleveland is still in business. They offered several such women lamps in a 1910 catalog. Most of them were made of a bronze-coated white metal.

TIP: If you clean brass-plated hardware too well and remove some of the plating, try this first-aid suggestion. Get gold or brass wax at a craft shop. Rub a little on the bad spot. Then seal with clear lacquer. Don't use brass-colored spray paint.

- The TEC grill cooks with the lid open, so hot air doesn't dry out your food.
- Their intense 1,600 degree heat sears your food, locking in precious juices.

Try this quick-fix for those sagging lobes

Q. Dear Jewelry Lady, I've always loved big clunky earrings (I have long hair and it goes great with my look), but as the years have gone by, these earrings have weighed down my ears and they don't look so good with heavy earrings anymore. They sag and look all stretched out. Is there anything I can do about this — short of plastic surgery? Long lobes.

A. Dear Long lobes, good news! There is now a product on the market that addresses this very problem. It's called the Lobe Wonder, and it's a self-adhesive patch you place on the backside of your earlobe. When you put your earrings on, the Lobe Wonder holds most of the weight so that there is little or no drag on your poor, sagging earlobes. This is also a great product for anyone who wants to prevent this problem. So far, they are not available in stores, but you may order them by calling (877) 777-7EAR. If these people can come up with something as simple for sagging chins, they'll make a fortune!

Q. Dear Jewelry Lady, in the past you've said to limit commercial jewelry cleaner to diamond, ruby and sapphire jewelry. Would you please explain why it might damage garnets, aquamarines or tourmalines? I know these are less hard than diamond and corundum, but it doesn't seem that this would affect how a cleaner works. Why do physical properties of gems influence the cleaning fluid chosen? Ms. Clean.

The Jewelry Lady

A. Dear Ms. Clean, garnets, aquamarines and tourmalines would all be safe in commercial jewelry cleaners, although it might be better to dip and brush, rather than to soak these gems, just to err on the side of caution. The Jewelry Lady didn't want to allow too broad an allowance for which gems are safe to use with a harsh cleaner. (It's better to be safe than sorry!) For example, it would be a disaster to use commercial jewelry cleaner for pearl, amber, shell cameos or other organic gems. Your best bet is to check the label of the jewelry cleaner carefully or ask your jeweler for specific instructions on how to clean a particular gemstone or mounting.

Fashion forecast for fall

Those-in-the-know have been busy forming the rules for the upcoming fall season. Designs intended to take us into the next millennium include warm and fuzzy earth tones on utilitarian clothing crafted of comfortable fabrics that will look as good in the office as they do in the coffee house on the weekend.

Jewelry is predicted to be designed of Art Deco elements, nature motifs and southwestern turquoise-set designs. Jewelry is expected to be as comfortable as the clothing — and versatile as well, with convertible pieces that offer two looks for the price of one. It sounds great.

The Jewelry Lady is available to answer all your questions about gems and jewels. You may contact her at rodgers@mich.com or fax (248) 582-9223.

A window dwells in two worlds

Imagine the life of a window - or rather the two lives of a window. Like Walter Mitty, a window lives in two worlds. Its inner life is relatively uneventful; here, it enjoys the tranquility of a warm living room or kitchen.

The outer life of a window is another story. There, the window is at the mercy of ice and snow, broiling sun, dirt and grime, pollution, and so on.

A window has to accommodate both worlds, and that's why vinyl is the wise choice for window frames. Vinyl is both tough and tender. It can take whatever Nature throws at it; yet it can be molded to hold a delicate pane of glass. Vinyl insulates well, and has a smooth easy to clean surface.

In recent years, vinyl's performance in both worlds has only gotten better. Improved additives, new polymer blends and advanced engineering design have led to:

- Greater resistance to sunlight, which means longer life.

- Stronger vinyls, which means trouble-free performance.

- Easier installation, which means cost savings.

- Better insulating properties, which means energy savings.

These and other advances have made it possible for vinyl to offer the best for both of the worlds of a window.

Vinyl windows repel contaminants, much like a no-stick frying pan, shedding dirt and grime before it builds up. Cleaning is easier than ever, inside and outside.

There are choices enough for decorating needs, interior and exterior. With vinyl windows, you can let your imagination roam with color options and patterns including wood grain. What's more, vinyl windows can be made with multi-chambers to accommodate the temperature drop that occurs in passing from the outside world to the inside world without placing undue stress on the window-frame. They are energy-wise and dimensionally stable, serving as a good interface between the indoors and outdoors.

When purchasing replacement windows, through a local contractor or at a nearby lumberyard, look for a dependable vinyl window. CARE-FREE Windows is the country's largest producer of vinyl windows, and their wide selection probably includes the right choice for your home. The big blue and orange CARE-FREE Windows label is easy to identify.

They also offer a free brochure that tells all about vinyl windows. Send a stamped, self-addressed, business sized, envelope to CARE-FREE Windows, P.O. Box 61, Charlotte Mich. 48813.

PUT NUMBER 1 TO WORK FOR YOU.

Do you know what you're breathing?

Ahh, summertime. Trees have leaves, grass is growing and millions of allergy sufferers are watching the pollen counts climb. Fortunately, high pollen counts don't always have to mean a high sneeze factor, according to Sean McCarthy, spokesman for Space-Gard high efficiency air cleaners, manufactured by Research Products Corp.

Summer can yield problems for allergy sufferers.

A pollen count is the average number of pollen grains per cubic meter of air, according to the National Allergy Bureau. To put it in ordinary terms, a pollen count of 500 means the air in a 10- by 12-foot bedroom could contain 13,500 grains of pollen, estimated McCarthy.

Medical experts generally say that pollen counts under 10 or so are of little concern to most allergy sufferers, McCarthy explained. But when the level climbs toward the hundreds and thousands almost all allergy sufferers will start sneezing.

McCarthy suggested five simple steps to keep pollen out of your indoor air:

1. Keep windows closed to shut pollen out of the home. Use an air conditioner to stay comfortable.

2. Avoid scheduling outdoor activities such as jogging or walking the dog during the morning hours. Pollen counts are highest between 5 and 10 a.m.

3. Use a high efficiency media air cleaner to remove pollen that gets into the home. A high efficiency air cleaner such as Space-Gard can trap up to 99 percent of pollen that passes through a home's central cooling system.

4. Run your heating and cooling system fan continuously to keep pollen-laden air moving through the high efficiency air cleaner.

5. Shower before going to bed to keep pollen out of your face while you sleep.

For more information about how a high efficiency air cleaner can help you reduce your indoor pollen count, visit the Research Products Corp. website at www.Space-Gard.com, or call the Consumer Information Department of Research Products Corp. at (800) 545-2219. Ask for the free booklet "Air Cleaners for Allergy Relief."
